Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For my second introduction it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you Mr. Munir Qazzaz, office manager in my constituency office. Previously Munir worked as a university professor and VP of community outreach at a university before immigrating to Canada. Munir has travelled up to Edmonton today to attend the winter 2014 constituency employee seminar and to be introduced in the House for the very first time. Joining him today is his wife, Hadeel, who's a community impact planner with the United Way of Calgary, who previously worked in international development for 15 years before coming to Canada. They are both seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Let us go to the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Jeneroux: All right. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to stand here today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Miss Grace Gong. Miss Grace Gong is a fourth-year human ecology student at the University of Alberta. I had the privilege of going and talking to her class. She says that she's not sure what she wants to do after her degree, but we're here to convince her to become an MLA. Please rise.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mr. Joseph Schow, whose birthday is today. Joe Schow played basketball with my son Spenser. He played at the Canadian collegiate level, at the Canadian basketball level, and in the international scene. Mr. Schow is fluent in writing and speaking Russian. He is a political science scholar. Joe, could you please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Chestermere-Rocky View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to the House two different introductions. The first is Dr. Donna Wilson, a renowned nurse-professor at the University of Alberta, a stellar candidate for us in the last by-election. She challenged the current Health minister and continues to challenge him in his place on health improvements.

The second introduction is Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop, no strangers to this Legislature. They've been here every year, Mr. Speaker, for 10 years, calling on this government, at their own expense, to institute basic constitutional rights for farm workers in this province. They initiated the trust fund for the most recent fatality in the Raymond area, Charles Stauffer. I would ask all three of them now to stand and have the warm welcome of the Legislature.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and to all members of this Assembly a valuable member of our Wildrose team, and I would ask her to stand as I do so. We have Cadence Bergman and her mother, Cathy, with us today. Cadence is a wonderful person to be around. She represents both myself and the Member for Calgary-Shaw. We often ask her which one is most high maintenance, and as a testament to her character, knowing full well it's the Member for Calgary-Shaw, she never says anything to hurt his feelings. I would like to welcome them today. It's good to have you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this House a good friend, a community volunteer from Lethbridge, Ms Shilpa Stocker. Ms Stocker has been instrumental in helping us put together the Team Lethbridge event, that's happening again this spring for the third time, where a number of organizations from Lethbridge come up here and meet with the government and talk about the good things happening and some of the wonderful opportunities that present themselves in southern Alberta. I'd ask Shilpa to please stand up and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, I understand your guests are not here yet, so let us move on.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: We have two minutes each. Let us start with Lesser Slave Lake, followed by Strathmore-Brooks.

Publication Ban on Deaths of Children in Care

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our history of Indian residential schools and the '60s scoop has traumatized aboriginal children and families for generations. This government has seen the impacts of this history in many forms. As an example, the number of aboriginal children in care is significantly higher than any other culture. A mantra I have and will continue to utter is that we need to do better to help families in need. I have heard from so many parents that their children were taken into care, and they don't understand why.

Thank you to the Ministry of Human Services for implementing several approaches that put communication and collaboration with families first. Thanks also for giving significantly more attention to maintaining a child's connection to their own culture and their religious or spiritual beliefs.

Unfortunately, some children and youth, tragically, pass away while they're receiving child intervention services, and, Mr. Speaker, it's very sad. Parents have expressed to me that they have felt victimized by the past publication ban that was in place because it didn't allow them to talk about their children who died. I have personally witnessed the heartbreak families have had to endure as they felt they had to remain quiet when their children died in care. Some of these children were taken for reasons unexplained. I see how that really could place a horrible onus on families.

It makes my heart soar to see this government making efforts to respect families in their grieving. Mr. Speaker, I know the system is not perfect yet, but I am grateful for the changes made by the Ministry of Human Services to amend the publication ban so that the name and photograph of a deceased child may be published. I recognize that families who do not wish to have their child's name and photograph published may apply to the court for a ban.

I'm seeing a renewed focus on making sure families have the choice to speak publicly about their child or to seek privacy through a publication ban. The changes to the publication ban give control and choice back to the many aboriginal families who have been impacted and are still grappling with their losses. To me, this shows this government is committed to making sure that we bring dignity to families who are grieving the loss of a child.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by Calgary-Hawkwood.

Official Opposition Energy Policy

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to talk about the Wildrose energy policy and our commitment to defend and promote our energy sector. We believe at our core, just as Albertans do, that with the bounty of natural resources we've been blessed with, we have a duty to develop our energy in the most responsible and most environmentally sustainable way we can.

While you may not hear it nightly in the news, our industry is doing some fantastic and truly amazing work on environmental progress. Through Canada's Oil Sands Innovation Alliance our oil sands are now sharing 777 technologies, that cost more than $950 million to develop, to accelerate the pace of environmental improvement in Alberta's unconventional deposits.

The Wildrose believes in working with industry to implement bold, practical strategies to improve the quality of our air, water, and land, increase regulatory efficiencies, and grow markets for our products world-wide. Our moving Alberta forward policy this summer called to reduce tailings ponds. We believe government should act on this commitment by utilizing the tech fund and creating real incentives for those who do so. We believe government should tap into that wealth of knowledge along with other innovative, market-driven research companies and promote this research and development.

The Wildrose recognizes the importance of market access and the importance of getting our product to customers. Our leader this spring discussed our plan to create a natural resource right-of-way for future pipelines and other commercial activities. But while this is one of many ideas, we stand behind the current plans, including Keystone, Northern Gateway, and the Energy East pipelines. Our policy is positive, bold, and innovative. It will help Alberta secure a dynamic and prosperous economy for generations to come, and I am proud to stand behind it.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, it's 1:50 p.m. We'll start. Please be reminded: 35 seconds maximum for the question and 35 seconds maximum for the answer.

Let us begin with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Resource Revenue Projections

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I asked the Finance minister about the fiscal update in light of Alberta's changing oil prices. He told this Assembly that he was sticking by the numbers in the fiscal update and that he fully expects to deliver the phony surplus that he promised. Setting aside the fact that the surplus isn't actually a surplus – they're taking out over $2 billion more in debt – is the Finance minister really telling us that oil prices in the 60s are going to have no impact on the projections from last week's fiscal update?

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board.

Mr. Campbell: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said yesterday, we don't budget oil on a daily basis. Prices are down right now, but we're quite confident that at the end of this fiscal year we'll be running a surplus. Stay tuned.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday the Finance minister's fiscal update pegged oil at a $75 average between now and April. Two days later the Premier issued a revision, saying that oil will be between $65 and $75 a barrel for the rest of the fiscal year – note, Finance minister, that that does not mean a $75 average – yet yesterday the Finance minister said that $75 was a prudent number to budget on. To the Finance minister: why is he building his fiscal outlook on an oil price that the Premier has already said is wrong?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that the Premier never said that the oil price was wrong. At the time I gave the second-quarter update, oil was at $75. When the Premier gave his speech on Friday, it was down to $65. As the Premier has said and I've said, predicting oil is a mug's game. I'll leave that to the opposition.

Ms Smith: Quite a change in 48 hours, Mr. Speaker.

Now, I know that this government is no stranger to wasting a few hundred million here and a billion dollars there, but a $5 difference in the average oil price over a year has a $1 billion discrepancy and impact on this government's revenues. The discrepancy between the Premier and the Finance minister could be as high as $500 million for the remainder of this year. The Premier has said that the Finance minister's revenue projections are wrong. When will the Finance minister be doing a prudent fiscal update to correct his phony fiscal update from last Wednesday?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I said, we gave the second-quarter update. Those are the numbers that we had for the second quarter. I've been very clear that we're going to make sure that we reduce our spending. We're going to be very fiscally responsible with every dollar we have from taxpayers, and we'll continue to make sure that this government runs in the black from an operating viewpoint.

The Speaker: Second main set of questions.

Health Facilities

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the stories of crumbling health facilities in Alberta continue to roll in: ant colonies in the walls in Sundre, frozen and ruptured water lines in Cardston, falling chunks of concrete in the surgical department in Brooks, and on and on it goes. This is Alberta. We are the wealthiest province in Canada, and this government can't even keep our hospitals from falling apart. This is the PC record of misplaced priorities and politicized health care spending. To the Health minister: what does he say for this sorry legacy?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, first of all, our hospitals have an outstanding record of maintaining the highest quality of health in this country. Accreditation: we are the top in this country. Mortality in Alberta hospitals is among the lowest of all 10 provinces. We deliver outstanding service. We'll continue to do that, whether it's in rural or urban.

Thank you.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, I think the Health minister should be reading the newspapers lately.

This government has proven time and again that it's excellent at putting out press releases and cutting ribbons. When it comes to getting headlines, there's no one better, but when it comes to getting results, there's no one worse. Our wait times keep getting longer, and our hospitals, once the ribbons are cut, are understaffed, neglected, and fall into disrepair. To the Health minister: does he need to be reminded that it's not only his job to make sure that we have hospitals but to make sure that they actually function as well?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, this government is committed to making sure our hospitals are maintained properly and operate properly. Since 2009 we've spent $283 million on operating maintenance. We've spent about $220 million over the next three-year period on capital maintenance. We have a substantial budget. We work with all the hospitals to try to make sure we deliver the best quality health care in this country, and I think it's proven time and time again when you talk to the citizens of this wonderful province.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, I think I know the problem. There are no commemorative plaques for fixing a broken pipe. You don't get a front-page local newspaper story for repairing a cracked floor, and new boilers don't come with ribbon cuttings. Maybe that's the real problem here. There is no incentive on that side to actually do any of these things because there's no political reward for them. So let's try to fix that. Would the Health minister please tell us how he would like to be recognized for doing routine hospital maintenance so that this work actually gets done?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I thank the member for her question. You know, this government is committed to making sure people have access to the ongoing support of our health care system. We don't need to have plaques in order to get recognition. We get it daily from our citizens when we deliver the kind of health care they expect day in and day out. We have the best in this country. We'll stand behind that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Health Facility Infrastructure

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That leads me into this question. Today Public Accounts heard from Alberta Health professionals on the deteriorating state of core health infrastructure, and the warnings should not be ignored. The president of the AMA has said that deteriorating hospitals are really killing the system while the president-elect told the committee that "access is foundational to safety, and access is dependent on infrastructure, so therefore infrastructure drives safety." Minister, if infrastructure drives safety and you've ignored the infrastructure, it means you're ignoring the safety needs of patients and staff, and quite frankly that is unacceptable.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, our Alberta hospitals are outstanding in the care they give to Albertans. Patient safety is number one. Our record with infections is probably with some of the best in this country. We will continue to have the most accredited hospitals. Also, you know, on issues like mortality rate and infection rate we are some of the best in this country. We will continue to deliver services at an outstanding level.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, we're not talking about the incredible health care professionals; we're talking about the lack of infrastructure.

Minister, the head of the College and Association of Registered Nurses of Alberta described rural Alberta hospitals as crumbling. There are reports of insect infestation, ceilings caving in, failing elevators, and leaks that have gone ignored for nine months. The doctors, the nurses, and patients are telling you this is a problem. We have been telling you that for years. So let's do this, Minister: ignore us as the opposition, but let's listen to the doctors and the nurses.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I have been out in rural Alberta and throughout many of the urban cities, talked to doctors. Yes, there's some frustration. I've not heard that story, but we'll let that story stay over there.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, once again, Mr. Speaker, I'll provide the story through a FOIP.

This government, your government, has done review after review after review. In fact, there are now three different lists of the repair work that needs to be done in hospitals. One is kept by Alberta Infrastructure, one is kept by Alberta Health Services, and the third party is inspectors contracted by the government. Now, we have three different lists and three different estimates ranging up to a billion dollars, and I can see why you're overwhelmed. So I'm going to make a suggestion to you, Minister: pick a list, prioritize the project, make it public, and get it done.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we have allowed Alberta Health Services to do the delivery of those repairs. We're spending $225 million now. We've spent an additional $283 million since 2008. The repairs in our hospitals are moving ahead, maybe not as quick as everybody would like, but it's a big province. We need to make sure we prioritize things, and that's done through Alberta Health Services in co-operation with Alberta Infrastructure.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the nurses, doctors, and the health staff of this province are the best in the country, and they're operating under very difficult circumstances. Not too long ago our new Health minister was outraged as the mayor of Edmonton about the city's infrastructure challenges and potholes. He criticized the PC government for cutting funding and not keeping its commitments. Nonetheless, he forged ahead. As mayor he oversaw a budget of about $2 billion. Now as Health minister he's got an $18 billion budget, which is nine times greater. To the Health minister: why are you not outraged and using every means possible to fix Alberta's crumbling health infrastructure?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, this government is committed, as I've said before, to spending a tremendous amount of money to ensure this infrastructure works. We're going through a budgetary process. We'll discuss and look at what we can do. We'll make sure that we can do as much as possible. It is a problem that we understand, and we'll make sure that we move ahead finding solutions.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, it's not a problem; it's a crisis. According to an Edmonton Journal story Alberta's broken hospitals are as follows. Sturgeon hospital in St. Albert: the roof is leaking into the nursery of newborn children. Rockyview in Calgary: water leaks and moisture is causing noncompliance with infection control standards. Lamont hospital: lower air quality and ventilation. Lloydminster hospital: lead, X-ray, and radioactive contamination. Not to mention the millions of dollars needed to fix the litany of problems at the Foothills, Royal Alex, Misericordia, and other hospitals. To the Health minister. You were upset about potholes. How do you think Albertans feel about having to suffer to get care under these conditions?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I think that the hon. member is confused between fixing a pothole and making sure people get proper health care. This province continues to give proper health care, outstanding care, the best in this country. Talk to people in this province. They're getting that care. They all say the same thing, that they really understand the importance of this system, how well we do in delivering the health care through our doctors and nurses.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, I think this minister is confused. He's outraged over potholes, but he's not outraged over the state of our health facilities.

Mr. Speaker, I know the Health minister knows a thing or two about big development projects. It's important to buy bulk, set a budget, and get shovels into the ground as soon as possible to get the best value. I know he would not propose fixing a large complex by renovating one balcony or one unit at a time, but that's exactly what he's trying to sell to Albertans about our deferred maintenance crisis. Will the Health minister use the $1 billion in federal health transfers to make a massive investment into fixing our broken health care infrastructure? If not, why not?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we will invest as is necessary in our health care system. If you look throughout this province, we've built unending numbers of hospitals, fixed unending numbers of hospitals, built unending numbers of long-term care and continuing care facilities. This government is committed to making sure Albertans are treated properly, with respect, and making sure they get the kind of care they expect.

Health Facility Infrastructure in Edmonton

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, yet an unending amount still needs to be done. Today the NDP released documents from AHS outlining the current state of health care infrastructure around Edmonton. They used three categories, the worst of which is the red zone, which means the problems are severe enough to negatively impact operations and/or elevate risk so that immediate action is required. In the Edmonton area five emergency rooms are in the red zone as are surgical facilities at the Mis, the Alex, and part of the U of A. To the Minister of Health: how could your government let this happen?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, in co-operation with Alberta Health Services we've been looking at how to do different things in our emergency care facilities. We're working with the Royal Alex, University of Alberta to put in transition beds and trying find more innovative ways to ensure that our citizens who go into emergency will be taken care of. This is an issue. We appreciate that, and we're working through it as we see the issues arise.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the section on surgical facilities describes significant capacity pressures at the Alex, which cause an "inability to meet the demand for service in a timely and efficient manner" in cancer surgery and the ophthalmology clinic. To be clear, this means that patient care is compromised by infrastructure neglect. To the minister. This happened on your government's watch. What do you have to say to those Albertans who aren't receiving the care they deserve because of your government's failure?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, this government is making every effort to ensure that people who are in need of surgery get that surgery. For those who are prioritized within the system quickly, we make every effort to ensure that they do it safely, effectively, and with great speed.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the report also says that the relatively new northeast Edmonton health clinic was designed to see 25,000 ER patients and instead is seeing over 50,000, causing many, many problems. To the Health minister. This problem didn't arise yesterday; it's the product of decades of neglect. Why won't your government come clean with Albertans and take responsibility for its long-standing and repeated failure to ensure that all Albertans have access to appropriate health care?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the hon. member's question. You know, this province and this city are growing exponentially, and a lot of people are moving to the northeast end of the city of Edmonton, so it is a challenge. We realize that. We have great doctors, great support systems up there, and we'll continue to support them. The reality is that as our province is growing so much, we need to invest. We are investing, and we'll continue to do that, but it can't be done overnight.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by Edmonton-Riverview.

Health Facility Infrastructure Capital Planning

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today's second release of the damning Edmonton Journal report is exposing how years of PC political manipulation in infrastructure has resulted in crumbling hospital facilities across the province. Yesterday the Infrastructure minister said, "Guess who makes the decisions on those projects. It's Alberta Health Services." However, this report explicitly states that the government regularly ignores AHS funding recommendations. Last year only 1 out of 10 recommended projects was granted funding. Which story is true, Mr. Minister? Why aren't you being straightforward?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, I'm glad members of this Assembly are finally paying attention to an issue that the Premier actually has outlined in the Speech from the Throne as being something that he deems to be a priority. It will be something that we have a measured and a precise plan for to address the infrastructure backlog in our province. I would ask the members to support our upcoming budget to make sure that happens.

Mr. Stier: Mr. Speaker, we're facing over a billion dollars in deferred maintenance, and this government is failing to publish and stick to its priorities. Considering the Journal report shows that two-thirds of Alberta hospitals are at least 30 years old and needing major maintenance upgrades and given that this government's priorities change dramatically from one year to the next, can the minister enlighten us as to what specific priorities will be brought forward next year, or will he continue to shift projects with no predictable justification?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, this province has one of the most robust capital plans in the country, so the members opposite are more than welcome to take a look at the capital plan, to have a look at which projects are on there. With respect to maintenance funding, this is where they're getting a bit confused. Maintenance funding decisions are made by Alberta Health Services to address the most imminent needs they see for patients.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Yeah. Mr. Speaker, well, the news just gets worse in today's second installment of the Journal investigation, which details issues such as insect infestations, burst pipes, and corroded sewer lines. To the minister again: since this report explicitly states that you've allowed maintenance issues to surpass your government's ability to keep up with them and given you've shown no sign of curbing the disturbing political trends that got us in this mess in the first place, what is your precise strategy in these tough economic times to address deferred infrastructure maintenance in Alberta's hospitals?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, we've got roughly 100 hospitals in the province of Alberta. That's a very significant number. At present we have about 265 different maintenance projects that are going on in every corner of this province: in Bassano, in Medicine Hat, in Pincher Creek, in Raymond, in the Crowsnest Pass. We have projects going on across this province, 265 maintenance projects, to ensure that Albertans are safe and looked after.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by Calgary-Shaw. Edmonton-Riverview. [interjections]

Fraser Institute Report on Economic Freedom

Mr. Young: I'm glad I could build the anticipation. Wait for it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Fraser Institute released its report on economic freedom in North America today. Can the Minister of Finance detail for the House what this report concludes about Alberta's economic freedom beyond an index number of 8.2? What does this mean to Albertans in terms of where we need to go?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is pretty riveting stuff, and I hope the opposition listens. The report was very clear that Alberta ranks number one for economic freedom in Canada. Also, Alberta has the second-smallest government on a per capita basis in Canada, and overall we're the lowest taxed jurisdiction. Combine that with the highest wage earners: Alberta has a significant competitive advantage over other jurisdictions. [interjections]

Mr. Young: Also to the President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance: given that this report shows other jurisdictions like Saskatchewan are making notable gains on economic freedom, what measures is this government taking to ensure that Alberta continues to pursue economic growth and not rest on the status quo? [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. members, let's just give the floor to whoever has it, and we'll get through this together.

The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Campbell: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our economy continues to grow at a high rate. As a matter of fact, our GDP is still forecast to expand by 3.8 per cent for 2014, which is outpacing the national average. Our government has been clear that we will not introduce a sales tax and that we will maintain our low tax advantage. On Thursday I'm meeting with chief economists from across the country to get their insights into Alberta's economy as we work towards Budget 2015-16. But let me be very clear that we will be very prudent and very responsible with our fiscal decisions moving forward.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Young: Thank you. Can the Minister of Energy tell us how this economic freedom measure translates into something more tangible, like getting pipelines built and more to markets and keeping our economy competitive?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Market access is indeed important to us. Yesterday our Premier was in Vancouver talking to the Vancouver Board of Trade. Today he met with Premier Couillard in Quebec, tomorrow with Premier Wynne. On Thursday he meets with Governor Christie. We've got Rob Merrifield working in Washington, in Ottawa, Jay Hill working in west. We've got Ron Hoffman working overseas. [interjections] I can assure this House that we have the highest per capita number of people working on pipeline access in this country.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd like some order, and I'm sure other members would here as well. So, please, enough is enough already, okay?

Let's move on.

School Modular Construction Prioritization

Mr. Wilson: Time for some real questions, Mr. Speaker. I am blessed to represent a constituency that is full of great people. They are selfless and understand the growth pressures that this province is under. They expect people to play by the rules, and integrity is a guiding principle. This is why when a school in the Minister of Education's constituency was allotted modular classrooms before MidSun school in my constituency was, despite MidSun being higher on the CBE priority list, many legitimate questions were raised. The CBE uses publicly available, objective criteria to determine need. Minister, what criteria do you use?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, in the past two years we've approved more than 230 modulars province-wide. When we add in the emergent units that were announced in the past couple of months, the number is over 300, allowing us to accommodate more than 7,500 children. The Calgary board of education's requests for modulars have been received as have other school board jurisdictions' across the province. We respond to those, taking a close look at what criteria we believe to be in the best interests of moving education forward in each one of those schools.

Mr. Wilson: The front bench is making us proud today, Mr. Speaker.

Given this minister was asked the same question by the Leader of the Official Opposition on November 19 and she was told in response that he had received some letters and that he was responding to what parents are saying are priorities for their children, what does the minister have to say to the parents and families of MidSun and the five other schools who penned letter after letter asking for new modulars for their kids?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, we take very seriously every request which comes to us from school boards. When parents make their requests known to us, we respond to those, looking at them very carefully, seeing what criteria should be considered when we make decisions about where the modulars are going to go each year. We've done that this year. We'll continue to do that in the years to come.

Mr. Wilson: Minister, why won't you just stand in this House and admit that what you did was wrong? Let me put it in plain language so the minister understands, Mr. Speaker. MidSun and five other schools were higher on the CBE's priority list based on objective criteria, yet you chose funding for the modulars in your constituency first. To the Minister of Education: Will MidSun and these schools have their modulars before William Reid, and if not, why not?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, modulars are looked at in a variety of ways across the province. The schools which have been approved here in Calgary had the highest utilization rates of any of the schools that were being considered. We're going to continue to ensure that we are responding to modular requests in as timely a manner as we can, taking into consideration the most important criterion, which is: what can we do to improve education for children in all of our schools?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Seniors' Housing Placements

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Families often move relatives from one continuing care facility to another so that they may be closer to their relatives. This can be an emotional and trying time for the family involved. However, this process becomes even more difficult than is necessary because of a lack of clarity surrounding the policy for transferring seniors from one facility to another. My first question is to the Minister of Health. My constituents in Sherwood Park want to know why this government will not consider a family's second, third, or even fourth choice for a continuing care facility if the first choice is not available?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the hon. member for the question. Actually, we do that. I'm happy to clarify that. AHS does try to place each patient in a facility that the patient or family chooses, but I want to be clear that we need every bed in the hospitals. AHS needs to work with families to move patients in facilities as close as possible but not always their first choice. You know, 23,000 people a day are living in supportive housing or long-term care as well as another 25,000 per day in continuing care. We're really very busy, busy, and we will do all we can.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms Olesen: Thank you. To the same minister: given that there is so much confusion surrounding this policy, what is being done to bring clarity to families with loved ones in continuing care who wish to bring their relatives closer to home?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I've said, AHS spends the time necessary to meet with and talk to the patients' families and explain to them the issues and what we can do for them. They also assign a case manager to continue to work with the patients and their families to move them closer to home if that's what they want. It's also important to qualify that there's no hundred-kilometre rule – that does not exist – or any distance. AHS just works to deliver the best health care possible and the best service anybody can have.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Olesen: Thank you. To the Minister of Seniors: given that nonsubsidized seniors' housing is much easier to get into but unaffordable for the majority of seniors, what commitments can you make to my constituents of Sherwood Park to assure them that their parents and grandparents will be able to find affordable housing in close proximity to their families?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the member for being such a strong advocate for seniors in her constituency. [interjections] I can see that the Official Opposition agrees with me on that point.

Our premier has this government committed to helping provide seniors with a variety of housing options, strategies, and programs close to home, Mr. Speaker, including affordable housing, because we know that there's no one size fits all. So to do this, we need to work with our municipal counterparts, our developers, our faith-based groups, and our housing management bodies and empower them with the tools that they need. Through the commitment of this Premier and the investments and announcements that you've seen recently, we are working on just that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

CNRL Environmental Performance

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Over the last five years Canadian Natural Resources Limited, CNRL, has had 978 releases in Alberta. These are releases which polluted our air, water, or land, from brackish water to fracking fluid, to ammonia, to crude oil. So far this week CNRL's Red Earth Creek operation has spilled 60,000 litres of crude oil, and in April they spilled 70,000 litres of oil and water northwest of Slave Lake. To the minister of the environment: why does this government continue to allow CNRL to operate in Alberta? They are the single worst polluter in all of Alberta by a long shot.

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, the premise of that question is unfathomable. CNRL provides a whole heck of a lot of economic activity and jobs for Albertans, pays a whole heck of a lot of royalties and income tax to the province so that we can deliver core services like education and health care, that the citizens of Alberta demand.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thanks very much, Mr. Minister.

Now, given that CNRL has had 978 releases but hundreds more violations for not reporting, failure to disclose, failure to test, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera, how many financial penalties have been assessed to this company?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, it is very important that as we work with industry to make sure that we have the economic activity in this province that Albertans are very proud of, we also balance that with environmental protection. We have our integrated resource management system in place, which we are working on implementing. A big part of that is the Alberta Energy Regulator, who is the independent, arm's-length body that assesses and enforces the regulations that we have in place, which are some of the strongest around the world.

Ms Blakeman: No. No, that is just not true.

Back to the same minister: how long is this government willing to allow CNRL to write off the cost of any penalties or fines, the cost of pollution in other words, as tax deductible against their profits?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, we're always striving in this province to improve our environmental performance. You know, there are some businesses and some companies that need to do a better job, and we will challenge them to do so. We will work with our researchers, our innovators in this province, and our postsecondary institutions to make sure that we continue to push the envelope on environmental performance, and we do. We must do better. Albertans expect it. Our customers expect it.

Postsecondary Education Funding

Mr. Bilous: Mr. Speaker, Alberta's postsecondary institutions have suffered from drastic cuts because of this PC government for years. During his leadership campaign the current Premier promised to restore the funding cuts to Alberta's postsecondary institutions. Now the minister of advanced education seems to be backtracking on this promise. Will he tell us why he's telling Alberta students to expect cuts when the Premier promised to restore funding?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What I can tell you is that no final budget decisions have been made. What I can further tell you is that Alberta invests in our postsecondary students. Our latest numbers show that Alberta has the third-highest expenditures for full-time students in the country. Campus Alberta is a priority for our government. We invest $2.1 billion in base operating grants across Campus Alberta. The Premier has made it clear that we are committed to sound, conservative fiscal principles, and that's exactly what we're going to deliver.

The Speaker: Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure if that was a yes or a no.

Given that the former Premier promised to increase funding to postsecondary but instead cut $147 million and given that the current Premier promised to restore the remaining $64.5 million, to the same minister, and I'll put this very simply for you: is your PC government going to keep this promise, and if not, why not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What I can tell you is that no final decisions have been made on the budget. I have been directed by our Premier to come up with a plan for long-term, stable, and predictable funding, and that is exactly what we're going to deliver. I can also tell you that we're going to be working with our institutions to deliver one of the best postsecondary educations in Canada, and that's what we're going to deliver.

Mr. Bilous: Mr. Speaker, given that Alberta is the fastest growing province with the greatest need for doctors, teachers, and professionals and given that this PC government continuously undercuts the funding needed to train those doctors, nurses, and professionals, to the same minister: don't you understand that investing in Alberta's postsecondary education is key to maintaining Alberta's prosperity?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What I can tell you, as I said earlier, is that we do invest in our system. We invested $2.1 billion across our postsecondary system. We also provide access to postsecondary students. We provide $234 million in grants, scholarships, and bursaries across our system. We also created a loan system that provides $408 million in access to our postsecondary students. We believe in our postsecondary system, and we're investing in it.

Calgary Regional Partnership

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, the Calgary Regional Partnership claims to be a voluntary organization committed to facilitating regional co-operation. However, this organization is now pressuring the provincial government to legislatively force communities like Airdrie and Rocky View to submit to the CRP growth plan, essentially stripping communities like Airdrie of their local autonomy on issues, including housing density and economic development. To the minister: will the government agree to not legislatively force Airdrie or any other community to join or remain in the CRP against its wishes?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's a good question. We really believe that we need to have regional planning throughout the province, in Calgary as well as in the greater Calgary area, but we also believe in municipal autonomy. We agree with regional planning but managed locally, and we support municipalities to work together. We do that both financially and with other tools so that they can continue to grow together.

Mr. Anderson: Well, that brings up an interesting point. Minister, there have also been reports that CRP members are threatening communities like Airdrie that their water and waste-water agreements will not be respected or renewed if they don't agree to join and remain with the CRP. In my view, this is extortion. It's un-Albertan, and frankly I find it very disturbing. Will this government commit to protecting the citizens of Airdrie and those in other communities so that under no circumstances will a municipality's decision to leave the CRP have any effect on their access to water or waste-water treatment?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said, we certainly respect Airdrie's mayor, Mayor Brown, and other mayors and municipalities in the area and their municipal autonomy. We support them as they do their regional partnerships and intermunicipal co-operation. We do that in lots of different ways, and we do it, certainly, with $48.5 million in Alberta community partnerships. Many of the communities in the Calgary regional area have been part of the partnership and part of the Calgary metropolitan plan, and we work with them where they can provide services together.

Mr. Anderson: We need more clarity on that. It should be a voluntary organization, Minister.

Minister, there are also very credible reports that many CRP senior staff and executives are making outrageously high salaries and benefits and that they are attempting to stifle disclosure of these salaries by forcing elected members of the CRP to sign confidentiality agreements. Will the minister agree to ensure that the salaries and benefits of CRP management are publicly disclosed so that we can all make informed decisions in this House on whether this is an organization that's worth continued funding or whether it's a growing layer of unnecessary bureaucracy?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We supply $3.5 million to the Calgary Regional Partnership. They are doing good work. If you look at the Calgary metropolitan plan, they've come together in all of those regions, and they have done good work with that. We do, as I say for the third time, support municipal autonomy as well, but we want them to be able to work and plan together. They've come up with a great metropolitan plan. We will continue to work with them and communities in the greater Calgary region.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Feeder Association Loan Guarantee Program

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For 77 years the feeder association loan guarantee program has helped cattle feeders purchase calves. Through the program the Feeder Associations provides financing to the feeders, and the government provides the loan guarantees to the Feeder Associations. My question is to the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Back on November 19 I raised the issue of an increase in government loan guarantees so that cattle feeders could access more cattle. Can you tell me: has there been any progress on this file?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the member for the question. As you know, this question has been asked of me several times in the past weeks. This is a very important program, as I've indicated. I haven't changed my position in terms of extending or expanding the guarantee. I have also, in answering the question, though, said that there are other options, and we're continually looking at options. We have pointed out to the Feeder Associations that there is an existing program with AFSC, and it's called the specific loan guarantee program. We've invited them to talk to AFSC about that program.

Mr. Donovan: To the same minister: why can we not just increase the cap?

Mr. Olson: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of good reasons for not increasing the cap, and one is that it expands our liability. This is a guarantee, which gives the potential for some great losses. Now, it's been a very, very successful program. I will acknowledge that. However, I would suggest that we need to be more strategic in terms of expanding programs like this. We're doing a lot of policy work in this area right now, but in the meantime this is an existing program. It's also more commercial, and I would suggest that at a time of a very buoyant industry they should be involved in commercial deals.

Mr. Donovan: My final question is to the same minister. When can we expect something to be implemented here for a long-term solution for agricultural producers?

Mr. Olson: Well, Mr. Speaker, the immediate concern is what's going to happen today because we're in the middle of the fall calf run. This is something that needs to happen quite quickly, and the AFSC is available. They can take applications even today. It's an existing program, as I say. In terms of longer term, we continue to do work on that. I would just suggest that the member stay tuned.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Lyme Disease

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In our spring session I asked a question to the past Health minister on Lyme disease, where I addressed the chronic lack of support Alberta Health Services provides to Albertans with this serious disease. Now, with seemingly no progress on the file I am hoping that with a new Health minister there might be some real progress. Again, Lyme disease is a tick-borne disease and when left untreated has serious long-term health effects. Is this minister aware of this problem, and what is he going to do to ensure Albertans have access to testing and treatment?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, in 2014 six Albertans were diagnosed with Lyme disease, and there were 41 cases in the last four years. All cases required travelling out of the province to areas where the bacteria is known to circulate. There is an issue with the test. There are two tests, one that gives a positive/negative and one that can be more reliable. I think that we should look at the second one, which will give people far more comfort. As we move forward, I think it's important to do the proper testing.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll look forward to those results.

Given that many of my constituents and Albertans have had first-hand experience with this disease and dealing with AHS, two things have become evident. Doctors in Alberta are either not trained in detecting this condition or are outright refusing to test for Lyme disease, forcing Albertans to pay out of pocket and travel out of country for costly treatments with no possibility of reimbursement. Does the minister acknowledge that this is happening, and what progress has been made on this file since my last question?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, Lyme disease can be effectively and completely treated with antibiotics if the disease is caught in the early stages, and that's why the testing is so important. Alberta recommends that physicians consult with an infectious disease specialist if they're available – I hope they are, and I'm sure they are – to determine the best treatment options for an individual. We encourage consultation.

Mr. Rowe: This is not a laughing matter, minister. It's far, far from that.

Given that in Ontario and other governments, both federally and provincially, are already developing broad-based strategies to deal with this problem, to the new Health minister: when can we expect this government to follow suit and develop a provincial-wide strategy?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we will take every step we can in order to look at what we can do to ensure that those who have Lyme disease are taken care of. We can't promise a provincial-wide strategy, especially in light of that there's not that many cases. What we can do, though, is encourage that when people are tested, they are tested with the test that is the most effective.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Employment Services for Persons with Disabilities

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every year about 100,000 people move to Alberta to find work because we are leading the country in job creation. However, certain groups of Albertans are not benefiting and are facing huge challenges in finding work. This includes a good number of my constituents in Edmonton-Mill Woods, who have disabilities and want to work, but they cannot find any jobs. They are among many Albertans who have a disability and are struggling to find employment. My question to the Associate Minister of Services for Persons with Disabilities: the government claims to support all Albertans to live fulfilling lives, but exactly what is your ministry doing to support those individuals who cannot otherwise participate in a level market?

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Services for Persons with Disabilities.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government is committed to supporting all Albertans with disabilities to live fulfilling and meaningful lives. We firmly believe that if you're willing to work and you're able to work, you must have the opportunity to work. People with disabilities have a range of skills, and they are the best and the most loyal employees you will ever find. There are many, many employers right across our province who recognize that, and they're hiring people with disabilities on their strengths because they're contributing to their bottom line.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister again. My constituents of Edmonton-Mill Woods with disabilities who are looking for jobs are running into a barrier in finding employment. Why is your ministry not helping those Albertans to overcome those hurdles, Mr. Minister?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There are a lot of misconceptions out there when you're hiring people with disabilities. As I alluded to in my previous answer, they're the most loyal and the best employees you'll ever find. We're working on that through various different channels. We have an employer advisory council, both a private-sector and a public-sector advisory council to create awareness, to talk to various employers. Of course, there are many, many employers who are currently working on that to hire people, and of course we're leading by example by hiring 20 internship positions in Human Services.

The Speaker: Hon. member, second supplemental.

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituents in Edmonton-Mill Woods have concerns about the lack of workplace support for people with disabilities. Will the associate minister admit that the current investments are simply not enough?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There are a number of different initiatives that we're taking as a government to reduce that gap or to bridge that gap. We launched back in May an employment-first innovation fund, which is to look at different ways to include people with disabilities. Of course, there are programs called DRES, disability-related employment supports, which are out there. But we can always do more to employ people. We can always do more to create awareness because, as I said earlier, they are the best people, the best employees, and the business cases are out there to prove that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Southern Alberta Highway Construction and Repair

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Winter driving conditions can be very hazardous, as we've recently seen, between Edmonton and Innisfail. Plowing and sanding crews for all the highways, county roads, and within our cities and towns have been working long hours as have tow truck operators and police personnel. Sadly, some have been injured.

Some situations are accidents waiting to happen, like highway 36 south of Taber – and I'll be tabling these pictures – where the road is actually breaking away and sliding off into the coulee and reservoir. Will the Minister of Transportation please tell us when this often-patched section will receive a safe, permanent repair instead of more Band-Aids?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the member for the question. You know, we have areas of this province where there's slumping on riverbanks all over the place. Unfortunately, I haven't been able to stop Mother Nature before. This is one of those areas where there's going to be slumping.

Last year we added an additional lane on highway 36 at this location, but, you know, there still seem to be issues with the pavement. We'll be working to rectify that situation, and we'll continue to monitor it because I know it'll never go away. We'll always have to monitor it and make repairs as necessary.

The Speaker: Thank you.
First supplemental.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you. I promise to keep reminding you.

Given that this provincial government continues trying to balance its budget through disrespect and disregard for local levels as a government by downloading responsibilities for bridges and secondary highways onto counties and MDs, will the Minister of Transportation please tell us when the funding required to do this job properly will be forthcoming?

Mr. Drysdale: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the section that we're talking about – you know, we recently repaved that section and subsequently transferred it to the municipality in exchange for a gravel road, that the hon. member mentioned. Alberta Transportation does have plans to pave this road once the budget allows us to do that.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that last year the province rerouted secondary highway 845 south over a busy town of Raymond gravel road to connect directly with highway 52, will the minister please tell us when the promise to upgrade and pave will occur as well as the status of the work scheduled on highway 505?

Mr. Drysdale: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I said, that section that he mentioned, we do plan to pave it, but, as we know, the price of oil – we have budget restrictions.

You know, as far as 505, I know how important that is to agricultural producers to be able to move their crops to market in the fall and to get their work done in the spring. But I'm pleased to tell this House that this portion of 505 is being currently designed, and it's expected to be tendered this spring for construction in '15-16.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The time for Oral Question Period has expired.

We'll move back to Members' Statements, two minutes each, starting with Calgary-Hawkwood, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Aging in Place Fair in Calgary

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rose several times in the House advocating for seniors' needs, in particular the aging-in-place initiative, which strives to meet the needs of seniors as they remain within or near their familiar community. On October 4, 2014, my constituency held an event called Aging in Place: A Family Affair. It showcased medical and social services such as in-home X-ray, snow shovelling, lawn cutting, assisted shopping, and so forth. It also provided the opportunity for seniors to speak about their desire for special housing needs such as independent living, assisted living, and long-term care.

Clearly, Mr. Speaker, a continuum of services, from soft services to infrastructure support, is what seniors need. The fair attracted over 800 people, including 40 agencies, who provided a resource fair. It was such a great success as a result of collaboration among community residents, community associations, senior-serving agencies, and different orders of government, provincial and municipal. It reminded us as an order of government that when we work together collaboratively, magic happens. By facilitating public engagement, we helped bring the community together and created a sense of ownership and pride, when local solutions were created meeting people's needs.

Mr. Speaker, the work has just begun, and we have a long way to go. With the new Ministry of Seniors being created under the Premier's new management, I look forward to working closely with hon. minister to make sure our next year's aging-in-place fair is another success.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by Calgary-Varsity.

Gay-straight Alliances in Schools

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday Albertans witnessed a parliamentary low point demonstrated by the PCs, when they used procedural trickery to stifle the introduction of Bill 202 in this House, not, frankly, that there is much to debate because gay-straight alliances save lives. Full stop. Now, that fact doesn't seem to mean much to the members opposite, who have chosen to scuttle a bill that enshrines students' rights to form GSAs in favour of a bill that pits students against their schools and their school boards.

So for their benefit I'm going to share again the message we received from a student who tried to set up a GSA and couldn't. That student told us, "After a friend tried to start a GSA in my school and was shut down by our school board, I vowed to start one myself, but after having a conversation with the school board trustee, I learned that it just wasn't going to be possible. I was in my final year of high school, and exams were coming up, so it seemed like an impossible fight that I just wasn't able to raise."

Mr. Speaker, it seemed like an impossible fight. That's what this student says. This is exactly the situation that Bill 10 will make the rule, not the exception, and it's not only the students who are fighting this fight. Yesterday I heard from a teacher who told me about a student who had been engaging in self-harm as they were in the process of coming out. In support of that student the teacher offered to lead the formation of a GSA at the school. Within hours she was informed that parents wanted her fired. Her principal told her that her board's position was that GSAs were exclusionary and therefore prohibited at the school.

Mr. Speaker, the board was wrong. GSAs are a voluntary opportunity for youth to come together in a welcoming, inclusive space free from prejudice and discrimination. They are in many ways a lifeboat for some of our most at-risk children, a lifeboat that this PC government is denying to the students who need it most. Is this your government . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Let us move on to Calgary-Varsity, followed by Calgary-Fish Creek.

2014 Grey Cup Champions

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Why, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This Sunday the Calgary Stampeders won the 102nd Grey Cup in Vancouver. I certainly don't want to compromise the decorum of our Legislature, but for many Albertans this is something to stand up and yahoo about.

Calgary deserved this Grey Cup. Coach Hufnagel's boys started strong against the Hamilton Ticats, and our quarterback Bo Levi Mitchell gave Calgary an early lead. But the game turned into a nail-biter, Mr. Speaker. A 45-yard Hamilton touchdown closed the gap to 17 to 7 at halftime. There were so many plays that could have taken the game to a different outcome, including a late touchdown by the Tiger-Cats that was called back because of a penalty. Fans had to try and remember to breathe.

Mr. Speaker, I'm the mother of three sons. Besides having a place in heaven, in this life I have a basement full of sports equipment: hockey pads, basketball shoes, and much-beloved football equipment. The experience of standing alongside my sons and husband and the other 52,056 fans at B.C. Place this past Sunday afternoon, cheering for our team in the Grey Cup, was an experience beyond my wildest dreams.

The home of the Stampeders, McMahon Stadium, is situated in the Calgary-Varsity constituency. Yes, Vancouver's B.C. Place, retractable roof and all, dwarfs our stadium, but out of that little stadium in Calgary has emerged a team triumphant, the 2014 Grey Cup winners.

Mr. Speaker, Canadians' willingness to endure winter storms and travel delays, trekking from football cities across our great country, to come together every year to watch the CFL Grey Cup is undisputed evidence of our hardiness as a people and of our oneness as a nation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Member for Calgary-Varsity did seek special permission to wear the Calgary hat. I granted it, as I have done on a couple of other occasions. I will watch this carefully as we go forward. Each situation requires its own deliberation. That deliberation has been made. Thank you for allowing it to happen.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Aleena Sadownyk

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to rise and give an update on a story on little Aleena Sadownyk from St. Albert. As many members in this House know, she suffers from MPS, a rare enzyme deficiency disease. After facing roadblocks from Alberta Health and the Alberta rare disease program to receive funding for a successful treatment program, Aleena's case was championed by the work of the Isaac Foundation and Andrew McFadyen. The public rallied behind Aleena and her family, and Alberta Health finally made the decision that should have been made earlier.

She's doing great these days. She has more energy than before, she and her dad can finally dance together, and she's now attending preschool. Mr. Speaker, she's bright, and she's happy. Her life stands as an example to everyone in the House about why it is critical that we stand up for the sick, the vulnerable, those who are living without a voice in our society. It's a reminder that we owe it to all Albertans to make sure that their health care system is there for them when rare diseases strike and extremely expensive treatments are their only hope.

In July a new treatment for MPS IV, the same disease family Aleena suffers from, was approved by Health Canada. There are about six Albertans that need immediate access to this therapy to help prevent the devastating symptoms that come with the disease, symptoms that can't be reversed once they appear in individuals. Alberta could take up to a year reviewing treatment for this disease, a year of costly delays for those six vulnerable Albertans suffering from this terrible disease. Other provinces have approved the funding. Let's not forget about little Aleena. We can and must do better as a province in making sure that we are not denying life-saving services to those in need.

I'm going to finish this member's statement as I did a year ago. Dance, little one, dance.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts I am pleased to table five copies of the committee's report on its 2013 activities and would like to express my gratitude for the wonderful work of all members of this Assembly who are on that committee.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to give oral notice – and I present the appropriate number of copies – that at the appropriate time I will be rising on a point of privilege concerning the fact that I believe that by briefing Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect Our Children, to the members of the media without providing a similar briefing to members of the opposition beforehand, the government has breached the rights of the members of the House, obstructed the performance of our duties, and has thereby committed a contempt.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, did you have a notice as well?

Mr. Hehr: Well, I had a petition.

The Speaker: I'm sorry.

Could we have consent, then, to revert to Presenting Petitions?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: I have two sets of petitions, one with thousands of signatures on stating: we the undersigned residents of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to consider a financial increase of monthly core benefits to the barriers to full employment and medical benefits with Alberta Works.

I also have a petition here, again with thousands of signatures on, primarily from many of the victims who were caught in the flood and were having serious problems with their DRP claims:

we the undersigned residents of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to re-evaluate the disaster recovery program and how it has affected Alberta since its introduction following the flood of 2013 to ensure flood victims are compensated for their losses.

I have the requisite number of copies here.

The Speaker: If there are no other Notices of Motions, let's move on.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I have a number of tablings. I'll go through them quickly, Mr. Speaker. The first is a copy of a news article concerning the Education minister and his request for information from schools on how many different diversity, GSA, and antibullying clubs they have.

The second is a blog by David Climenhaga entitled Balancing Rights? Just What Rights Are Being Balanced Here? The Prentice Government's Bill 10 Is a Disgrace.

The third tabling is written by Graham Thomson from the Edmonton Journal, entitled Muddling the Middle Ground.

Next one is by daveberta.ca, which is Dave Cournoyer writing a political blog: What If Politicians Could Stop School Kids from Starting Clubs?

A second one again from Mr. Thomson: Tories Weaken Stronger Effort from Liberals on Gay-straight Alliances.

An editorial: Liberals' Bill on Gay-straight Alliances Was Better.

Then one from Breackenridge: Prentice Has Made Debate Over Gay-straight Clubs Even More Divisive.

Finally, quite a lengthy and powerful letter from Kimberley Bewick to the hon. Heather Klimchuk, who is her MLA, outlining why GSAs are so important and how much someone could be bullied and worse as a sexual minority student.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, and we have 30 more after this, so let's be brief, please.

Mr. Hehr: No. I'm good.

The Speaker: You're done. Thank you.

Let's move on. Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today with two tablings. The first one is the requisite number of copies of a letter that I received from Tracy McKinnon, the chairperson of the Fort McMurray Catholic school division, with their position on Bill 202, where she outlines her concerns that the Education Act would be amended in a manner that takes away the parents' rights and makes the Education minister of the day the interpreter of decisions made under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Alberta Human Rights Act as they apply to school boards. It is the belief of the Fort McMurray Catholic school division that parents are the first and primary educators of their children.

My second tabling is the requisite number of copies of a document from Alberta Education entitled Creating Welcoming, Caring, Respectful and Safe Learning Environments: Gay-straight Alliances in Schools. It was published in November of 2013, and it supports, encourages, and promotes the use of gay-straight alliances in Alberta schools.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Before we proceed forward, the hon. Government House Leader, presumably under 7(7).

Mr. Denis: Yes. I was going to ask for unanimous consent to waive rule 7(7). I hope I get it today.

[Unanimous consent denied]

The Speaker: An objection has been raised, so we'll do as many as we can right now. Let's move on to Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: For what?

The Speaker: I have you down for three tablings.

Ms Notley: Okay. I don't believe I have three, but I do have one. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of the document from which I quoted in my question today. So there we go.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you. Is that all of them?

Ms Notley: No. I guess I do have one more. I'd also like to table the appropriate number of copies of an e-mail written by Faron Smordin in support of Bill 202. In this e-mail Faron writes, "If discrimination is not acceptable on grounds of sexual orientation, not allowing these types of clubs in certain schools would be discriminatory and would be violating the very change Premier Prentice is calling for."

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, real quickly. I've got three tablings here that I've been waiting for a while to do. The first is a tabling from Emma Clowes, who is a constituent of mine, asking the Education minister to take a look at adult school crossing guards for elementary schools. There is some very good information here. I was hoping that the minister could take a look at that.

The second one is from Deb Hutton, in my constituency again, talking about the need for concise legislation to protect homeowners from inadequate representation by boards and management companies in order to protect their investments and their homes. She's got some ideas there. I will forward it to the Service Alberta minister to take a look at it.

Finally, the third one is from Tanya Fix, who is worried about a monopoly that a company called Enform holds over safety and training for hydrogen sulfide. She feels that that should be open to many different safety companies to perform and not just Enform, which has been given that responsibility by the relevant agency.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, I understand you have five tablings.

Ms Fenske: Just one.

The Speaker: Just one today. Okay.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a tabling of an electricity bill that I referred to yesterday in my speech on Bill 201.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings here today. The appropriate number of copies of a letter to the editor written by Sean Graham and published in Fort McMurray Today, putting out important statistics on GSAs, including that sexual minority students are seven times more likely to attempt suicide.

The second tabling I have is a letter written by Leah Ward of Edmonton. She reiterates what I think this government should already know, which is that the presence of successful GSAs in schools is known to contribute to positive outcomes for youth and to reduce negative outcomes such as violence and bullying.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, I have a tabling for the Clerk on the statistics I referred to earlier on antibullying clubs, diversity clubs, and gay-straight alliances in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings with the requisite number of copies. The first are the photos that I referred to in my questions on highway 36.

The second and third are with reference to a situation in Taber, Alberta, with some of the concerned people there regarding the care that their senior citizens are receiving, including some e-mails and communications with Judith Jensen, whose father has been suffering in that facility.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, it's 3 o'clock almost or thereabouts. Before we stop this section, I'm pleased to table five copies of a letter received in my office today from the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, dated December 2, 2014, requesting early consideration for Bill 201 to proceed to Committee of the Whole. I'll table that with you now.

Let's move on to the point of privilege.

Privilege

Obstructing a Member in Performance of Duty

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, please proceed.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 15(2) yesterday afternoon I provided written notice to the Speaker of my intention to raise a point of privilege here today. Everyone should have a copy. In fact, the particular breach of privilege that I am raising today feels like a bit of déjà vu on this issue of media receiving technical briefings ahead of the opposition members and staff. We saw this happen on a number of occasions before. Yesterday, on December 1, at about 3:30 p.m. an exclusive technical briefing for the media on Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect Our Children, began. At 4:30 a public press conference was held. Then finally at 5:15 opposition staff and MLAs were briefed on this bill.

This is the first opportunity to raise this matter as per section 115 in Beauchesne, and we became aware of the media briefing shortly after it began yesterday at 3:30 p.m. Shortly thereafter we began to understand the nature of the information provided in the briefing such as that media were provided with a vastly better understanding of the bill well before the opposition did. This is when we learned that our privileges as members of this Assembly and, indeed, the privileges of the Assembly as a whole, in my mind, were in fact breached.

As you know, "privilege is the sum of the peculiar rights . . . without which they could not discharge their functions and which exceed those possessed by other bodies or individuals." That's also from the Beauchesne text, page 11, and Erskine May as well on page 75. In this case the abilities of the members of the opposition to conduct their duties were obstructed, and therefore important democratic functions of the Assembly, I believe, were impaired. The government had given oral notice of the bill on Thursday, November 27, and it was on the Order Paper yesterday morning, yet the opposition parties had not yet had an opportunity to be briefed on or to even view the bill.

I believe that the government has committed a contempt of the Assembly by providing information about the government bill to members of the media prior to the bill's introduction in the House and without offering opposition members a similar opportunity.

Ms Notley: It was the same time.

Mr. Eggen: Same time. Okay. Yes, right. Thank you. The same time.

Erskine May on page 251 describes contempt.

Generally speaking, any act or omission which obstructs or impedes either House of Parliament in the performance of its functions, or which obstructs or impedes any Member or officer of such House in the discharge of his duty, or which has a tendency, directly or indirectly, to produce such results, may be treated as a contempt even though there is no precedent of the offence.

Mr. Speaker, a similar case of privilege was raised a number of years ago in this Legislature on a ruling from March 5, 2003, page 304 of the Hansard of that year. The Speaker found that a government briefing provided to the media concerning a bill "when the bill was on the notice but before it was introduced constitutes a prima facie case of privilege as it offends the dignity and the authority of this Assembly." There is, of course, a slight distinction between these cases in that at this time Bill 10 had been introduced before the media briefing but only a very short time before.

Ms Notley: Three or four minutes.

Mr. Eggen: Three or four minutes, in fact. There you go.

However, the 2003 case is both persuasive and instructive nonetheless. In the debates and in the Speaker's ruling an important element in the Speaker's finding that members had been obstructed in the performance of their duties was that details of the bill, technical information, and the comprehensive understanding of the bill were provided to the media before we got it. The detailed nature of the information allowed the media to have a better understanding of the bill well before the members of the opposition. This in and of itself offends the dignity and the authority of the Assembly. However, it also frustrates the ability of opposition members to analyze a bill and comment on it in the media.

This mode of obstruction of the performance of members' duties is particularly relevant here because the media received a comprehensive technical briefing at 3:30 p.m., nearly two full hours before the opposition members were briefed. In this manner the media was provided with vastly more comprehensive information about the bill and were able to have a superior understanding of the bill well in advance of the opposition members. Accordingly, members of the opposition were unable to provide timely and accurate analysis at the subsequent press conference.

I would also note that on March 22, 2011, in a ruling from Speaker Milliken in the federal House of Commons, page 9113 of that Hansard, he said:

The member . . . is certainly not misguided in his expectation that members of the House, individually and collectively, must receive from the government particular types of information required for the fulfillment of their parliamentary duties before it is shared elsewhere.

Furthermore, on March 19, 2001, Peter Milliken, Speaker of the federal House of Commons, also said:

To deny to members information concerning business that is about to come before the House, while at the same time providing such information to media that will likely be questioning members about that business, is a situation that the Chair cannot condone.

These findings further clarify that a member's duties are obstructed when they are provided with necessary information after other parties or if they are provided with sustainably less information than other parties. The Assembly should be the place where public debate about legislation begins, not at a press conference mere minutes after the opposition has seen the bill.

So I am arguing out of fairness to all members of the House. Our privilege of being the first to see the details of legislation that is brought before this House must be maintained. That wasn't the case with Bill 10, Mr. Speaker, so I urge you to find that the events of yesterday constitute a prima facie case of privilege.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again, please excuse my voice. I am still a bit under the weather today.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder has claimed that the government has breached the rights of members of the House by not providing opposition MLAs a briefing on Bill 10 similar to what was provided to members of the media. Despite the chirps from the leader of the fourth party there, Mr. Speaker, I agree with very little of what the Member for Edmonton-Calder has had to say. I can however assure the hon. member that we did in fact provide a briefing to all staff from opposition parties approximately an hour and a half after the briefing with the media.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I wish to remind this House that briefings provided by the government to the opposition are not in fact compelled by any standing order in this Assembly, nor does the House of Commons Procedure and Practice or Beauchesne say anywhere that this is a requirement. We happily provide these briefings as a courtesy, as the leader of the opposition has pointed out to me – maybe it's polite – so that members from the opposition will have opportunities to ask questions of government officials.

Mr. Speaker, we on the government side even responded to feedback provided by the opposition House leaders, where they asked that briefings take place in the afternoon whenever possible and that they occur after the introduction of the bill. In fact, this is what happened yesterday. We made sure that the briefing with both the media and the opposition took place after Bill 10 was introduced in the House, therefore ensuring that members had the opportunity to attend the briefing with the copy of the bill in hand and the rights of the Assembly protected. [interjection] Now, I am going to continue on despite the leader of the fourth party chirping away.

The opposition was notified in the morning that a briefing would be provided that afternoon in the Carillon Room. It was originally scheduled for 5 p.m., but it was moved to 5:15 p.m. to accommodate the requests from the Member for Edmonton-Centre, which we were happy to do. We began at 5:20 p.m. when the member advised us to begin without her. Officials from Justice and Education went through the bill and took questions until there were no more. Far be it from me just to talk about something that happened when I wasn't there, but the following staff members from the opposition caucuses were present: Bill Bewick and Kim MacDougall from the Wildrose, Scott Fenwick and Kevin Tam from the Alberta Liberals, and Gwen Feeny from the Alberta New Democrats.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to provide clarification for the House and for the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. However, given all the information provided, specifically the fact that there is no standing order or reference in any of the documents that we use to govern this Assembly that prohibits the actions of yesterday, I would ask you to find that there was no prima facie case of privilege and dismiss this matter summarily.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Mr. Anderson: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'll be very brief. I think that the point of the point of privilege is that, you know, the opposition should be able to see the bill and have a good look at it and have a briefing on it before the media gets a briefing on it. I think that's good practice. I would suggest that that be done going forward. This opposition party, I want to make it clear, has never said that we have any problem with morning briefings. Obviously, we'd prefer to see the finished product prior to getting a briefing, but I just want to make it clear that we're early risers here, got a lot of farmers in this caucus, so it's not a big problem to have those morning briefings.

Whether it's a point of privilege, well, I'll leave that to you to decide. I just think it is good practice in the future to make sure that the opposition parties are briefed before the media on these bills or at least get a chance to see it and have an understanding with the minister about what's in there so that we can respond in a coherent manner, which is tough at the best of times, as you well know. So maybe help us out with that, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity. I just want to clarify a few things and speak to this point of privilege that has been raised. Indeed, the briefings are not part of our standing orders. They are part of a House leaders' agreement, an unofficial House leaders' agreement at that. The intent was to make sure that bills were not hitting the floor before opposition parties knew anything about them. We did start out some time ago with these briefings being offered. It has, some would say, degraded – others would say "have moved" – to quite a rigid point. My colleague from the Official Opposition has said that they don't care if there are morning briefings. Other opposition parties have said that they care very much and please don't hold them in the morning. But I just want to point out that at no point did I or anyone else that I'm aware of say that the briefing needs to be after the bill has been introduced.

We had a very strange period of time in the last session where there were panicked phone calls that we had to come to briefings, like, in the next hour because the bill was going to be introduced and they had to get it in before. I was in a meeting where it was said: "Well, this doesn't have to be. Let's accommodate each other. This is not hard-and-fast stuff." Clearly, the hon. House leader of the Official Opposition prefers to see the bill first, but none of this was meant to be hard and fast. Frankly, we don't really want it brought on the floor by the Government House Leader as: we said so. We didn't. We've tried to be accommodating.

I think the real point of this, Mr. Speaker, is that they're meant to be equal briefings. It is small and perhaps nasty of the government to give the media a much larger, more in-depth, more complex, more detailed briefing than they are offering to the opposition, and that indeed is what happened yesterday, I'm sure intentionally, so that the opposition would find themselves in a media scrum without the same information that the media had and, therefore, would be caught out and made to look foolish. I'm sure that was what was going on there, and it doesn't need to. None of this needs to be happening, and I wish it didn't, but unfortunately that is what happens.

You know, there are 60 people elected over there. They don't need to bully people over here. They don't need to stomp on them. They don't need to take extra measures and go out of their way to try and make us look bad. It's just not necessary. But, you know, that's what happened yesterday.

So that's what I think is underpinning my hon. colleague from Edmonton-Calder in bringing this point of privilege forward. It's that these briefings, official or unofficial, are meant to be equal briefings, not to give additional information to one group, which can then try to make the other group look foolish or less informed somehow. In that point I very much agree that what's been going on here is contemptuous of good working relationships in the House.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, we've heard from one speaker from each party. Customarily I would wait for a day or so to review all the comments, but they were, thankfully, quite brief, and I was able to track them as they went along. So I'm going to deal with this matter right now.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder did provide notice to me through a letter that was received in my office yesterday at 3:42 p.m., so we've had ample time from that perspective, and the prerequisites of notice under Standing Order 15(2) have been met.

Now, the hon. member claims in his notice and in his argument today, as we've just heard, that he feels his rights as a member have been interfered with because the government provided a briefing to the media on Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, but did not provide a similar briefing at the same time to members of the opposition, or words to that effect. Now, I'll just put aside for a moment the assertions and comments made by the Government House Leader that such a briefing was available to the opposition as part of the briefing that was given to the media and that that, in turn, was done after the bill had already been introduced. We'll leave that aside for the moment.

I would note that there is no specific right to have the government brief members on the content of a bill. Certainly, there have been instances in this Assembly where briefings were provided on a bill when the bill was on notice on the Order Paper but had not yet been introduced in the Assembly. In such circumstances a prima facie question of privilege was found by former Speaker Kowalski on March 5, 2003, at page 304 of Alberta Hansard for that day.

In this case we have been advised today that the briefing to which the ND House leader objects occurred after the bill had been introduced in this Assembly. At that time the bill was public and had been provided to all members, obviously, in this Assembly.

Now, a similar purported question of privilege about access to a media briefing was raised by the former leader of the ND opposition on April 27, 2009. At page 824 of Alberta Hansard for that day former Speaker Kowalski said the following:

Allowing or not allowing a member to attend a media briefing does not constitute an impediment or obstruction to the member performing his or her parliamentary duties, which presumably is the category of privilege that the leader of the third party relies on.

I would also note that the current leader of the ND opposition raised a similar purported question of privilege on May 28, 2012, concerning a briefing on what was then Bill 1. In ruling that there was not a prima facie question of privilege, I stated on May 29, 2012, at page 59 of Alberta Hansard for that day the following:

"There has been no specific evidence to suggest that any member was actually impeded in the performance of his or her parliamentary duties."

In this case today the briefing about which the member complains occurred after Bill 10 was introduced in the Assembly. That's the key thing to remember, the word "after." In fact, there is no right for a member to receive a government briefing on a bill, but having said that, I do not want to discourage such a practice because we all know how much it contributes to the ebb and flow of the House and to the overall understanding of a bill coming onto the floor.

Now, even if the briefing was in any way, quote, proceeding in parliament, unquote, I cannot see how members were obstructed in performing their duties. Accordingly, I don't find there to be any contempt nor a prima facie question of privilege, and as stated in Standing Order 15(7), there will be no further proceedings on this matter.

However, I would encourage government members and others who have bills to be introduced to read Hansard for the comments that were made by Airdrie, Edmonton-Centre, and Edmonton-Calder, because I do find value in some of those comments, for your help and assistance. That being the case, this matter is now concluded, and we'll move on.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 10

An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise in the Assembly today to move Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children.

Before I discuss the details of this piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to speak a little bit about why I decided to introduce and carry it on behalf of the government. Members of this Assembly know me. My constituents know me. They know me and my record as a passionate defender of the rights of LGBTQ citizens in this province. I have fought for the LGBTQ community since well before I was elected to this Assembly, and I have been proud to carry on that fight as an MLA.

Mr. Speaker, if I may speak on his behalf briefly, I can also say that our Premier has carried that fight proudly and passionately for his entire career. He stood in favour of same-sex marriage as a federal Conservative, both in opposition and in government, in the House of Commons. That debate of nearly a decade ago was extremely heated, and our Premier's stand at that time was not necessarily as widely shared as it is today, but it was the right thing to do. I am very proud to have a Premier of Alberta with such a long and credible record defending LGBTQ rights.

I have seen the good and the bad in debates that affect LGBTQ citizens. I have seen prejudice and even outright hatred, and sometimes that made me wonder if progress on these issues could ever be made. But, Mr. Speaker, I've also seen tolerance and understanding, and that inspired me to keep fighting, knowing that it could make a difference. I've learned that if we want to make progress, sometimes we have to take yes for an answer.

Allow me to explain that. In the last session of this Legislature an opposition motion, Motion 503, went down in defeat. Had it passed, it would have mandated school boards to accept any and all attempts by students to establish gay-straight alliances in schools. Now, I voted for Motion 503. I spoke strongly in favour of it. I wish that it could have passed, but it didn't, Mr. Speaker. The result of that failed motion was that the status quo with respect to the rules on gay-straight alliances remained intact.

Now in a fresh legislative session this Assembly received a similar attempt from the opposition, this time in the form of a bill rather than a motion, Bill 202. There are differences, though. Bill 202 asked us not only to support gay-straight alliances in the same way as Motion 503 but also to repeal section 11.1 of the Alberta Human Rights Act, which speaks to specific rights of parents to withdraw children from their schools when certain subject matters are discussed. However well intentioned, Mr. Speaker, I believe that Bill 202 was unlikely to have passed in this Assembly either. The result: once again the status quo with respect to gay-straight alliances.

Mr. Speaker, I am not satisfied with the status quo. Members of the opposition might be. They might honestly believe that this is an all-or-nothing question. It is possible that they might also be quite happy to hold a no vote over the heads of their opponents in the next election and accuse them of intolerance or worse. I would have supported Bill 202 just as I supported Motion 503, but in the absence of their success, I choose to support progress instead of the status quo. I choose to support Bill 10.

This bill is the product of thoughtful, respectful, and thorough debate within the government caucus, the type of open and honest debate that makes me proud to be a member of the PC Party of Alberta. I heard views expressed on all sides of this issue, as did the Premier, and with those views taken into account, the government came back with a balanced and measured piece of legislation. This bill does several things. First and foremost for me, it makes important progress on the rights of the LGBTQ community. I believe this bill represents a significant step forward.

Let me discuss what the bill does on the subject of gay-straight alliances. As I said before – and I'll say it again – I support gay-straight alliances. They are proven as a means to protect kids, to deter and prevent bullying, and to promote inclusiveness. I share the goal of many Albertans to have zero roadblocks facing any students who wish to form a gay-straight alliance in their schools. Indeed, across the province schools and school boards have shown a remarkable commitment to ensuring that such requests are honoured. The Minister of Education informed this House yesterday that the number of gay-straight alliances in Alberta has grown to 94, and, anecdotally, I hear from stakeholders in the LGBTQ community as well as those within the school system that establishing gay-straight alliances is generally seamless and is well supported by teachers, by administrators, by parents, and by others.

What Bill 10 does is to create a clear mechanism for those rare cases where students may run into roadblocks at their schools to have an appeal process with the school boards. They did not have that before. If a school said no, that was it. Our bill creates a process that is more accessible and democratic. School boards are elected bodies, and if they were to keep a roadblock like that in place, they would be answerable to the people who put them in place.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 10 also makes progress on LGBTQ issues more broadly. In Bill 10 we are enshrining and protecting sexual orientation in the Alberta Bill of Rights. That is an important step. It sends a signal to the public and to governments now and in the future that the rights of the LGBTQ community are fundamental in our policy-making.

Further, Bill 10 makes a change to the language that applies to parental rights in their children's education; specifically, Bill 10 repeals section 11.1 of the Alberta Human Rights Act and moves those provisions to the School Act and, eventually, to the Education Act. This makes our parental rights regime consistent with other jurisdictions. In doing so, Bill 10 also removes the words "sexual orientation" from the provision.

So what does that mean in a practical sense? Well, it means that parents will continue to receive notice when planned classroom discussions are to involve a number of sensitive areas and be given the option of withdrawing children, with no academic penalty. These include religion, patriotic exercises, and human sexuality. However, sexual orientation is no longer on that list. This has been a major irritant for the LGBTQ community, the idea that discussion in classrooms around gender identity or about rights for the LGBTQ community in Canada, for example, should be something that we need to warn parents about. We are removing that irritant.

There is a consensus that parents should still have notice with respect to religious instruction or patriotic exercises and indeed with respect to human sexuality, but if instructors wish to discuss broader concepts of sexual orientation separate and apart from discussions of human sexuality, we are signalling that those should not be a part of those provisions. It is because we value parental rights so highly that in addition to maintaining these provisions in the School Act and the Education Act, our government is also cementing parental rights in the Alberta Bill of Rights.

Mr. Speaker, I do not come to the Legislature today to tell you, my colleagues, or my constituents that this has been an easy position for me to arrive at. I have worked tirelessly on these issues, as have others in this Chamber. When it comes to gay-straight alliances in Alberta schools, I remain of the same view as when I cast a vote in favour of Motion 503. As legislators we are judged by our constituents on our records, on what we say, on how we vote, and on whether the former is consistent with the latter. I understand that when I supported Motion 503, it was not the same as what's presented here in Bill 10, but I also understand that an all-or-nothing approach to this issue has resulted not in all but in nothing. I wasn't going to be satisfied with "nothing" again.

There will surely be much spirited debate on this bill in the hours ahead. This is to be expected. The issues at stake are emotional. I haven't set my emotions aside either, Mr. Speaker, but I hope that our debate can remain civilized and that it can remain at the standards that our constituents expect of us.

I urge all members to join me in supporting Bill 10. It reinforces the rights that parents have with respect to making choices about their children's education. It maintains the autonomy of school boards, which are elected and answerable to constituents at the ballot box should they take an approach that doesn't match their constituents' expectations. Most importantly, Bill 10 takes steps to protect our kids and advances the rights of the LGBTQ community.

I look forward to passing this bill, Mr. Speaker, and putting real progress in place. Thank you.

3:30

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, I believe there's an understanding between the Official Opposition Wildrose and the Alberta Liberal Party for the House leader for the Liberals to speak next. I don't need any notes at this point. We'll just recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre to go ahead.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to acknowledge the support of my colleagues in the Wildrose and thank them for allowing me to take their position as first responder to this bill. It is the kind of courtesy that I've come to expect from them, and I appreciate that.

Well, Mr. Speaker, gee, I finally get to get up and talk about a bill, not mine, unfortunately, but the government's. So here we are. My question is: will kids be safer tomorrow when this bill passes than they were yesterday? There's nothing in this bill that says that that's going to be the case, and I'm really, really disappointed that that is what this bill is.

We have the additional issue on top of us of the clock ticking. As I'm sure everyone in the House knows but they may not know outside of the House, the Government House Leader, before the bill was even introduced, called closure on every single section of this bill. So we have two hours to debate in second, two hours to debate in Committee of the Whole, and two hours to debate in third. That will be the sum total of the debate on this bill, which is really interesting when you consider that a number of times the colleagues opposite have made much in the media and other places in saying that there's been so much debate on this issue, they're sick of it. They're sick of all the debate on this. And then others have said that we should have continued debate on this. In fact, Mr. Speaker, we're about 15 minutes into the debate that we've actually managed to have in the Assembly, which is the debate that counts.

I find it really . . .

An Hon. Member: Troubling.

Ms Blakeman: . . . troubling, yes, but just bloody typical at this point of government to try and restrict the debate. That's just become their modus operandi. They can't bring us good bills, so they bring us bad ones, and then they make us debate them as fast as possible. Then I expect that everyone is going to get out of Dodge – I'm just doing a little bit of extrasensory perception here – I'm betting, Thursday. There's a hot foot. I can feel it. Hotfooting it out of town.

We have had very little debate on this issue, in fact, Mr. Speaker. There are a couple of questions that I want to go over or a couple of observations that I have. For starters, we keep hearing about the need for balance, and I find that really curious when you're talking about human rights. What is it about kids at high risk of committing suicide who want a peer support group? Who is balancing this? What do they need to be balanced for? Why can't they just have a peer support group, help each other, and move on in their lives in the way that it's been studied and proven to actually work?

I always hear about this balance, and that's sort of become a little cue to me. When the government starts talking about balance – not the Official Opposition, mind you. They're talking about a different thing. But, certainly, when the government starts to talk about balance, I think: "Oh, yeah. They don't like this bill, and they don't know what to do with it. They can't quite admit that they're deeply divided, so they'll call it balance and move on."

You see, I don't think this balances at-risk kids with anything. Can they go and get a GSA today? No, not according to this bill. They're absolutely no further ahead today or tomorrow than they were yesterday. This bill does not help them with that. Can they force or mandate or insist or ask a policy to include – or wait. What I was trying to do in my bill was make sure that they could not be excluded. Can any of those things come to pass with this bill? No. They can ask a teacher or principal if they could have a peer support, and if the teacher or principal says no, that's it. Now, I don't expect you're going to have many eight-year-olds, but I don't know many 11-, 12-, 13-, 14-, 15-year-olds that have the wherewithal or even the knowledge to go: "Okay. Now, I'm going to go to the school board." Maybe they can get their parents to help.

The definitions that have been left in Bill 10 about the parameters that the school board makes these decisions on are pretty thorough, Mr. Speaker, and they can just say no for all the reasons. Especially those in the Catholic schools and in the private schools, they can just say no. No, that's not what they believe; that's not what this Catholic school is about. No. And that's the end of it. So are these kids any further ahead, these at-risk kids who, by the way, have no voice and have had no voice in this discussion? All these adults yammering on about their lives, but the kids themselves are not in here. They've had no voice, and it affects them so intimately.

So they go to the school board, and the school board says no. Then what? Well, this government, god bless them, is going to let these kids crack open the piggy bank or raid their university fund and go to court against their school board. Really, Mr. Speaker, how likely is that? Truly, not very likely. There are a few kids out there, a few really determined parents that might take it on, but these are long battles. The Delwin Vriend case took five or six years to get to the Supreme Court and stupendous amounts of money. Stupendous amounts of money.

I think the government telling these kids that that's okay, that they've got, air quotes here, legal recourse and they can take the school board to court – they're being sold a pig in a poke. It's pretty far-fetched, really far-fetched that they're going to be able to do that and be successful. Are they going to be able to get their GSA if they're at a school that doesn't want them to have it? No. Are we further ahead? No. I don't know what the government is talking about here, but they're not going to get any further ahead.

Further than that, there's even more confusion, if that is possible. I don't know of a government that can create more confusion out of pretty simple things than these guys, but they've managed to do it.

Dr. Swann: They're trying to placate certain people.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah, they're trying to placate certain people.

They have removed section 11.1 from the Alberta Human Rights Act. I wonder if they would have done it if I hadn't brought Bill 202 forward. Somehow I think not. But they have removed it, and then they put it into section 58. Now, what's interesting is that I stripped off "sexual orientation" and "sexuality" quite on purpose, quite deliberately, first of all, because what is sexuality if it isn't sexual health education?

Now, according to the media briefing – this information was not extended to us in the briefing that the opposition members got – the government will consider gender identity under sexuality, under that title, under section 50 of the School Act and section 58 of the Education Act. There's also a possibility – the question wasn't answered by the member, so maybe she can get up and answer it now – that it might also consider sexual orientation. Excuse me? So we've just cut it out of one place, moved the whole kit and caboodle over here, and now we allow that we're going to use that same term as a way of denying it to people again.

Can sexual orientation be discriminated against? Yes, of course. If they're going to put it under sexuality, absolutely. Can they deny gender identity to kids? You bet. Absolutely, if they're going to classify it under sexuality. That's the question that we have for the government. What exactly is under sexuality? Give us the definition, please, because the way it is now in the briefing that was given to the media, gender identity was definitely under it. When they asked, "Is sexual orientation under it?" that question wasn't answered. Let's have that question answered because if it is, we've got exactly the same thing in a different act with the same result. Kids with gender identity issues and kids with sexual orientation issues will not be allowed to do this.

One of the things that I was really concerned about in all of this, Mr. Speaker, was this whole debate/no debate idea, so I am going to circulate now a hoist amendment, which I will pass on. People say: why on earth would you be doing a hoist amendment, Laurie? Well, because I like parliamentary process. And parliamentary process says: well, why would you be hoisting a bill? Well, because it's not ready, because it hasn't had the kind of consultation and debate that it should have. So you essentially say: okay; let's bring this back at some point in the future, and then we'll be able to consider this with better resources in front of us, better consultation, a better written bill, perhaps. That's what I'm suggesting with this.

I am moving that second reading of Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following: "Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, be not now read a second time but that it be read a second time this day six months hence." That is duly approved and has been sent to the table.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, and I thank you for reading it into Hansard. I think everybody knows what the essence of a hoist amendment is. Let's get it circulated as quickly as we can, and with your unanimous consent, hon. members, we'll just let the hon. member carry on. Shall we do that? Yes? Okay.

Hon. member, why don't you just carry on, then, as the amendment is being distributed.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. So are kids safer now? No. Can kids get GSAs under this bill any better than they could yesterday or the day before? No, they can't. We're dealing here with a paramountcy of rights, which is – oh, I'm sorry; I didn't send the signed one. Sorry. There's the signed one.

It appears to be a paramountcy of rights, but in fact we don't have a paramountcy of rights in our Charter, in our Human Rights Act. The Alberta Bill of Rights is a piece of paper two pages long with four sections in it, and most of the sections repeat themselves. It has absolutely no compliance mechanisms in it, it has absolutely no enforcement mechanisms in it, and it has no penalty mechanisms in it. So when they say that that is going to protect sexual orientation in Alberta, it's nothing. There is nothing in that bill that would protect them. Nothing. It's a piece of paper that says nice things except for one thing in there. It is not useful in protecting anyone with issues of sexual orientation. None of it. So I don't know why they puff up this Bill of Rights. Nobody ever heard of it before yesterday, and it's not going to help them at all. It's not protecting them at all. It has no compliance, no enforcement, no penalties. If it is violated, what would they do? They'd run after you with a piece of paper going: don't do that. Oh my, that will scare people, for sure. No, there's no help out of the Alberta Bill of Rights, none whatsoever.

We've also got a situation, and I was certainly the recipient of it. I am happy to share my telephone log and the many, many e-mails that I got from parents that were staggeringly ill informed and thought that GSAs were in schools to perform various sexual acts on children, to train them for pedophiles. It's just a staggering, shocking, appalling lack of information, and that was being perpetuated across this province. That's what they thought GSAs were, and that's why they campaigned so hard with my colleagues opposite to get them stopped. When I tried to read my bill to them, no, they didn't want to hear it. They didn't want to hear that sexual orientation and gender identity is genetic and there's nothing folks can do about it.

That's why kids need peer support groups, so they can figure out how to deal with this. But no. We had influence from a group of people that (a) didn't want to read the bill and (b) insisted on perpetuating – I don't even know how to describe it. I've never read anything like that. It was disturbing, frankly, that people could be that far wrong on what was trying to be done here.

I didn't start out with Bill 202 to do big things. I started out to do a couple of small things that were very meaningful to people: make sure that you could no longer discriminate against people based on sexual orientation, particularly not in the school system, that kids would be able to access GSAs as part of all the other antibullying measures that were being offered and, specifically, that they wouldn't be excluded from the antibullying measures that were being offered, which is what's happening now in the Catholic schools. They just won't offer it. They just include it in "all": oh, those kids under "all," they're all taken care of. Well, if that was true, we wouldn't have kids out there trying to get GSAs established in their school. They would feel they had been taken care of.

No kid sets himself out on that path and makes himself a public spectacle because it's already there for them. It's not already there. They are not looking after them in antibullying clubs and diversity clubs. They're not. And for a child that is questioning sexual orientation to go into a diversity club and say, "Well, I'm here because I heard this is where I could talk to people about sexual orientation," and then find out that is not what that club is for – it's for racial antidiscrimination or disabled antidiscrimination – that kid just outed themselves in the school. For that, they're going to at least get beat up in the parking lot if not much, much, much worse.

It was a small thing I was trying to do, but it had an immense effect on people's lives, and I'm really upset to see what's happened with it. I'm upset to see the amount of foul thinking that is out there about a group of people that moves among us in our society. Extending a human right to one person or group of people does not take rights away from someone else. It doesn't.

And I appreciate that parents want to supervise the teaching of their children or want to have input into it – I appreciate that – but in the end run if your children don't get sexual health education, who is paying for their sexually transmitted infection when they're an adult and wandering around with it? All of us are. We all take responsibility for that. That's why we all take responsibility for education. We understand that a well-educated youth improves us all, gives us all a better society, and it's all of our responsibility to pay for that.

I don't have kids, and I happily pay my school taxes. I believe in that public payment of school education. I think it's an important part of Canada and of Alberta. I never agree with people that phone and say: well, I'm a senior, and I shouldn't have to pay school property tax anymore. Yes, you do because you want people to be well educated so that when you're in a nursing home, the person looking after you has had a good education. That is the way I explain it back, and usually they'll admit that, yes, indeed, they do want someone that is well educated. So that is why we all join in education, but I think there also has to be a base point of what everyone is educated in.

I will not accept that it is okay in any way, shape, or form, under any euphemisms, under any clause, you know – and in this case it's hidden away in a parental opt-out section, section 58, which is what Bill 10 is presuming to do, to hide it away again under that subheading of sexuality, to hide away sexual orientation and make it okay to discriminate again. Not okay. Not okay. I never want to see that happen. I won't discriminate against seniors or the disabled or farmers. I don't care. I'm put on this Earth to make sure that I treat people with respect and dignity. I happily disagree with my colleagues beside me – and they will tell you that I do that – but I still respect them. I still honour the fact that they feel passionately about that.

So are we protecting people from being discriminated against on the basis of sexual orientation under Bill 10? No. Are we protecting children who are at risk? No. Are we protecting children that are asking for GSAs to be available, to be accommodated for them? No. They can go to court to fight it. They can raid their university fund and take the school board to court in order to try to get a peer support group in their school. This is the length that this government wants to put children at? Seriously? Like, in no other cause would we do that. Even in equal rights they don't do that to kids. Even in the States, where they have the ERA, that requires that they fund girls' sports in exactly the same way as they fund boys' sports, they didn't make one little girl that wanted to play hockey go and take the school board to court in order to play on the hockey team. The whole team worked at it. But that is what our government is anticipating here, sending a kid off to try to battle the school board and then battle the courts in order to get a peer support group.

That is just not right, Mr. Speaker. It's just not Albertan. It's just not. We are good people. We believe in co-operation. We believe in honouring each other's opinions. We don't believe in subjecting children – or please tell me we don't – to some unbelievable hoops to jump through because we can't just come out and say: "Yes, you will get a peer support group. We will accommodate you. If we can't do it in our little tiny one-room schoolhouse in Somewhereville Alberta, we will accommodate you at the school next door, and we'll make sure that you're looked after there." It's about accommodation. That's what it was about. It wasn't about making anybody do things, but it was about making sure that kids had access to this in a real, meaningful, possible way. Have we got possible now? No, we don't.

I've talked a little bit about, you know, being bullied as a kid. We talk about that a lot in this House, and we've all talked about how important it is to assist kids not to be bullied. Boy, I'll tell you that I had a real taste of it yesterday in this House, and it was no fun, and I wouldn't recommend it to anyone, but I'm tougher than those kids, and you shouldn't be letting those kids be subject to that. You shouldn't be letting those kids be bullied.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'll just make a couple of points of clarity here. We have before us a hoist amendment, and it will be referred to as amendment H1. The nature of this is to simply move that the bill be not now read a second time but be postponed for a certain period of time. I believe it's six months.

So all members who wish to may speak at this time, not all at once but one at a time, for up to 15 minutes, and 29(2)(a) will be available immediately after the next speaker, which in this case will be Airdrie. The order will be Wildrose, followed by the NDP, followed by the independent. Then we'll go back to government, a Liberal member, a Wildrose member, an NDP member and follow that sequence for as long as we have speakers. I believe that is in keeping with the spirit of how debate here should proceed.

That having been said, please remember that at the end of the speakers list the question will automatically be put on the vote at second. If it succeeds, you know what happens then; it gets effected. If it fails, then, of course, the question is immediately put for second reading.

That being said, let us move on with the hon. Member for Airdrie for his comments.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is tough. This is tough stuff. It's not always fun to debate these things, but some debates are tough, you know, and we need to have them, and we need to have them in a respectful manner.

This has been somewhat of a frustrating experience, I think, for a lot of members in this House, and I think maybe there's a little bit more empathy over on the other side now for having words thrown around and accusations thrown around about your tolerance and about your acceptance of other people because you take a position on an issue, whether that be free speech or whether that be protecting parental rights or religious freedoms, and trying to balance that with protecting kids and protecting students who are from the LGBTQ community.

Sometimes it just happens in this political forum that you get your intentions or your motives questioned, and all of a sudden words like "intolerant" and "bigot" and so forth are bandied about. It is pretty painful to hear those things, especially when that has nothing to do with who you are as people and who we are as people in this Legislature.

That said, I would like to commend the Member for Edmonton-Centre for bringing her bill forward. She's obviously very passionate about it, clearly, and with good reason, but I believe in this debate she's managed to be passionate about these issues without stereotyping other people who disagree with her views on certain aspects of it as being bigoted or intolerant and so forth. Sometimes there's a line there, and sometimes we walk and straddle that line as we discuss these things, but I think she needs to be commended for straddling that very difficult line of being respectful.

Balance is tough. I know that the member just said that she doesn't like the word "balance," but for me it is a bit of a balancing act because it's genuine. We have all of these different competing – they seem like they’re competing interests on the surface in that, you know, the rights of equality are obviously something we feel very passionate about. That includes that no one will be discriminated against based on any identifiable characteristic, very much including – we can go through the big list in section 15 of our Charter of Rights and Freedoms – race, religion, colour, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera, and sexual orientation. So you have that equality right that you’re balancing.

You also have the right of religious freedom. It’s a difficult one because a lot of folks and a lots of parents and faith-based educators who start schools or have run our Catholic schools for many years, et cetera, want to have a fully immersive experience where their doctrine and their beliefs and their culture is felt throughout their entire educational experience. They feel very much that their freedom of religion is dependent upon that consistency of culture, of spiritual and religious background, and so forth. That means everything to them. I mean, you know if you’ve talked to them that it means so much to them as individuals about who they are, and it needs to be respected.

Of course, the protection of children. Who here doesn’t think we shouldn’t do everything we can to protect children who are being bullied? Of course, that includes very much our LGBTQ youth, who, frankly, over the last decade or so have become, I would say, one of the major targeted groups of bullying. I think that we have to recognize that. I think we do recognize that. Certainly, the introducer of Bill 10 talked about that. It’s a very serious issue.

Of course, there’s the autonomy of local school boards – that’s an important principle – and parental rights. You know, many of us in here have children and have been blessed with that. I’ll tell you that it’s an overwhelming experience, of course, being a parent in a lot of situations. You want to talk to your kids about these very difficult subjects that perhaps your parents maybe didn’t talk to you too much about growing up, and then all of sudden you’ve got to figure out how you’re going to communicate these things to a little 10-year-old, who’s wide eyed and completely innocent about a whole bunch of things. That’s a tough thing to do, but you try to as parents come together and figure out the best way, and you talk through it. It’s a tough thing to do, and it’s challenging. So we’re trying to balance all these rights.

The Wildrose proposed several amendments that we thought would take Bill 202 and, in our view, better balance those rights, that I just mentioned. We were looking very much forward to the debate. You know, I would have liked to have debated that bill. I think that it would have been worth debate. Certainly, we would have brought amendments, and we could have debated those amendments, and the government could have also brought amendments. But that’s not where we’re at right now. You know, we’re here now. We have a bill in front of us, and we’re going to have to vote on it.

One thing that I want to make very clear is that although the concepts and the principles I’m talking about right now are shared by the Wildrose, we’re very lucky in our caucus that we do have free votes. We’ve always had free votes, and we’re looking forward to voting freely on this bill. I know that there will be people in our caucus that vote against and people that vote for. I myself will be voting for Bill 10 for several reasons.

First of all, I want to commend the addition of “sexual orientation” to the Alberta Bill of Rights. I think that was read in by the Supreme Court of Canada a long time ago, but symbols matter. It’s not good enough that it’s just there in the ether having been read in; it’s good to actually put it down to paper. I think that that’s important.

I also think another piece that I feel that I support in the bill is the addition of parental rights to the Alberta Bill of Rights. I want to frankly commend this Premier and members from all parties that might agree with that for doing that.

Parents do have rights, and we have seen through a very sad portion of our Canadian history what happens when parental rights to decide with regard to their children’s education and cultural upbringing and so forth are interfered with by the state in the name of progress. Of course, one of the worst, darkest hours of our history was the residential school debacle – “debacle” is not even the right word – tragedy, awfulness, whatever adjective you want to use. That, to me, is an example of why we have to be very, very, very careful to always protect the rights of parents with regard to making informed decisions about their kids. That needs to be respected, and I want to commend the Premier for including those rights in the Alberta Bill of Rights. Hopefully, they will stay there for, certainly, the rest of my lifetime and, hopefully, beyond. So thank you to him for that.

The notification requirement. It was previously, obviously, in the Alberta Human Rights Act. It’s now being moved to the Education Act. The notification requirement for parents would be that when religion or human sexuality is explicitly taught, parents will be informed and will have the option to opt their child out. I really feel very strongly that this is an important piece of this piece of legislation if this part is respected. You know, people want to say: “Oh, because you want parents to be informed of this, therefore that just means you don’t want to talk about these issues. You don’t want to talk about equality. You don’t want to talk about sexual health. You don’t want to talk about these things.”

I have four boys. One just went through his first sex education class at school. I got the note and everything and was informed and left him in, obviously, to go through the sexual education class that was there. I knew what was going to be taught. I was able to sit down with him prior to and after, and I was able to have a sensitive and really healthy discussion with my child about all the questions that surround human sexuality that he was learning about on that day. I’ve got to tell you how absolutely critical it is for me as a parent to be able to have that conversation and to be part of the conversation. I know that little guy better than anybody else other than Anita, my wife. I mean, why shouldn’t I as a parent have the right, frankly, and why shouldn’t I have the responsibility, when we’re talking about something like religious belief and human sexuality, with regard to my child? Of course I should be involved in that conversation.

I think that to say that that is in any way a sign of intolerance is – I just can’t equate the two. I think that we have a responsibility. If parents, frankly, are more involved with their kids in discussing those topics and knowing what is being taught to their children and then making sure that the sensitivities of their individual child are addressed, I think that actually leads to better outcomes. It leads to better sexual health and better, more balanced children, frankly, than just having a stranger speak about those things, not necessarily a stranger but someone who, clearly, is less familiar with them.

So I really appreciate that that notification requirement is going to stay in there, and I don’t think we should say that human sexuality means one thing and doesn’t mean another thing. For me, it means that for anything that pertains to sexuality and the sexuality of my child, I just want to be a part of that discussion. If it’s going to happen in school, I want to know about it, and I want to make sure that I’m a part of the conversation with my child. I think that that’s a responsibility of parents.

Finally, I want to talk about GSAs. I don't know of anyone in here that doesn't support the formation of gay-straight alliances when they are requested by students. You know, I went to public school myself. I know that gay-straight alliances have had a very good effect in public schools and, actually, in a few faith-based schools where they've been introduced in some circumstances.

I would note two things. First of all, again, each different faith – we have a lot of different schools in my current riding and my old riding. The Khalsa school is a great Sikh school just on the northeast side of Calgary. We have different Christian schools and so forth. The schools take very seriously that they want to keep a certain culture, a certain framework, and they want to have everything, you know, their entire experience, immersed in their religious culture. That's what they want. It's not that they don't support antibullying clubs or diversity clubs or GSAs or anything like that. They just want to make sure that language and perspectives that they have are a part of that discussion. I don't in any way think that these faith-based schools are doing this because they're in some way bigoted against these students or want them to be hurt. I just don't believe that. I just believe they want to do it in a culturally sensitive manner that makes sense for their individual school. In some cases that might mean doing it a little differently than I would do it or most of the members in this Assembly would do it with regard to allowing a GSA. I think that does need to be respected.

I would note, too, that the Wildrose would like to bring an amendment to Bill 10. It's specifically regarding when a student requests a GSA, that if the answer does end up being no – and we would hope in most cases it wouldn't be – in cases where for some reason the answer is no, we believe as the Wildrose caucus there should be a requirement for the school to work with the individual student on a very specific antibullying and support strategy that meets the individual needs of that individual student or students who requested the GSA in the school.

I think that the current government's resolution to that is good. I don't think it's a poor resolution, but I don't think it gives enough protection and enough resources to those students who feel bullied in those schools in those circumstances. I credit them for working on that balance, and I think they're really striving for it in an honest and sincere way, but I think that we could increase support for those students by making it a requirement that the school work with them on their specific needs, whatever that may mean. Each individual circumstance would be different.

I will be supporting Bill 10, and thank you for the debate, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I would remind you that we are speaking on the hoist amendment.

The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise to formally engage in this debate today in the Legislature. Let me begin by saying that I will be voting in favour of this hoist because we cannot support this piece of legislation as it is currently constructed.

I want to begin by acknowledging the fact that this legislation does remove 11.1 from the human rights code, and that is a good thing because I've always characterized 11.1 as a scar on an otherwise beautiful document. It's a scar that existed only in the province of Alberta. It was a scar that was inflicted upon an otherwise beautiful document by this PC government in 2009. I am pleased that that particular scar is being corrected through this bill. Nonetheless, unfortunately, the other components of this bill are premised on assumptions that are so deeply troubling to me that I'm still not able to support it, and those are the things that I want to talk about.

First of all, of course, there's this issue of parental right to be notified on education with respect to human sexuality. Let me just put it very clearly on the record. I have no difficulty with that. I think parents should be part of a conversation about human sexuality, and they should know when their kids are being taught those issues at school. I agree with the kind of scenario that the Member for Airdrie outlined in that regard.

That's not the issue here, though. We're not talking about issues of human sexuality. We are talking about the ability to openly and with pride protect the rights of students who are members of the LGBTQ community or who are themselves part of a family where, say, both parents are same-sex or transgendered or another member of a sexual minority group. That's who we are talking about protecting. So that's a different issue.

This bill, if you look at the history, was very clearly devised, delivered, distributed, promoted in an effort to negate discussion and to protect this government and the Official Opposition from having to vote on Bill 202. It is a very intentional attempt to muddy the waters as much as possible and avoid a clear understanding of what people's positions were with respect to Bill 202.

I've been very pleased to see the commentary that has occurred within the public since because most people see that for what it is. They understand that at its heart this bill does nothing to protect the rights of sexual minority students to promote and begin a GSA in their schools. In fact, what this does is that it simply protects the status quo with respect to the rights of students to seek out a GSA as a means of protecting themselves and their rights in their school setting.

To be clear, GSAs do exist in other jurisdictions which have faith-based schools as part of their tradition. They exist both in Ontario and Manitoba, and it happened, frankly, without the sky falling. Frankly, were there enough courage in this Assembly, it could happen here.

This government continuously talks about balancing – balancing – the rights between parents and LGBTQ students. I am going to talk about how offensive that notion is in just a moment, but I just want to speak for a moment as a parent because everyone keeps talking about parental rights. Well, I too am a parent, Madam Speaker, and I have to tell you that I am deeply offended that another parent believes that they have a right to tell me what after-school, extracurricular activities my kids can be part of. And be very clear: that's what's happening here. No one is telling any single solitary parent in this province that their children have to go to a GSA after school. No one is telling a parent that, and that is not what Bill 202 would have done. What's happening here is that this government, probably with the support of the Official Opposition, is telling me that my kids cannot go to a GSA if they choose to if their school board will not allow them to do it.

So just to be very clear, parental rights are at issue here, but it's my parental rights that are at issue because it's the ability to go that is being limited. It is not the ability to not go which is being limited. Let us be very clear that that so-called balance is disingenuous at best when it is being discussed here.

Now, let's talk as well about the notion of balancing human rights and balancing one of those protected grounds under section 15 of our Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Well, I've said this before, and I'm going to say it again. If a parent came to me and said that their rights were being prohibited or somehow limited because my kid wanted to start an antiracism class or an antiracism club after school and if this government stood up for that parent's rights to say that my kid cannot start an antiracism club after school, people in this province, probably even the majority of folks over on that side, would lose their heads, and they should, because we all get that racism is bad.

I hate to break it to you, folks, but racism is not the only prohibited ground of discrimination under section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Sexual orientation is also a prohibited ground under section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Let us be very clear. That Canadian Charter does not – it does not – say: “Racism is something that should not ever happen. We also kind of really hope that if it's not inconvenient for you, you should also try not to be homophobic either.” That's not the way the Charter reads. The Charter reads that both rights deserve equal protection, yet implicit in this government's bill is a prioritization, a hierarchy of which rights they believe are more important than others. I'm talking just in terms of those enumerated grounds upon which all Canadians deserve protection, which are listed in section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. So inherent in that, then, is that issue.

I find it incredibly troubling that probably the majority of people in this Legislature don't understand that people and children and families and communities in this province deserve as much protection from homophobia as they do from racism. It is very clear to me that that understanding is not commonly understood, embraced, or accepted across the aisle. It's that fundamental presumption which drives the decision of this government to talk about balancing the rights of parents, to tell me that my kids cannot participate in a GSA in a publicly funded school should the school board decide that they're opposed to it. That is what is fundamentally wrong with this bill, and that is why under no circumstances can I support it.

Let's just talk a little bit about some of the other disingenuous arguments that we've seen float across the aisle from people defending this piece of legislation. Well, the sponsor of the bill has talked publicly several times today about how she will do everything she can to promote GSAs in as many parts of the province as she possibly can. So my specific question to her is – I don't know what her financial situation is like, if she has been talking perhaps with the Minister of Justice – has she planned for that roughly $25,000 that each judicial review application will cost?

Mr. Eggen: Or more.

Ms Notley: Is the plan to pay that $25,000 or more on behalf of each marginalized kid who is told that he or she and their friends cannot start a club, a voluntary club, after school that would help kids that are systemically bullied as a result of outdated and undeveloped understandings of what true equality consists of? When those kids are bullied by that, they need to be able to reach into their back pocket and bust out with a $25,000 bill to pay for a lawyer to do a judicial review application, and people over there call that a solution.

I mean, it's interesting. You know, we often talk about the Premier and his relationship with the banking industry. But if he, honest to God, thinks a $25,000 bill is a solution for the majority of kids who are going to come up against the inability to develop clubs that will provide them support and protection from bullying, then it is clearly an indication that he's desperately out of touch with the economic circumstances of the vast majority of people who live in the province over which he has a governance relationship or governance authority. I don't know. Maybe CIBC, maybe Enbridge can pull 25,000 bucks out of their back pocket to run a judicial review application, but I'm pretty sure most Albertans cannot. So to suggest that that is a solution is disingenuous, Madam Speaker, incredibly disingenuous.

We've talked about how this might perhaps be an issue with respect to, you know, some issues around faith. But I would suggest to you, Madam Speaker, that that's not the case. It's absolutely not the case. Again, these GSAs would be voluntary. No one is imposing them on anybody. The EPSB allows for every child within the Edmonton public school board who wants to start a GSA to start a GSA, and that's why the vast majority of GSAs in Alberta resides in the Edmonton public school board.

Interestingly, the Edmonton public school board uses its public dollars to also fund several destination faith-based schools. That exists within the EPSB, yet we've not heard a peep about how that somehow has undermined the rights of those who participate and attend those schools because, in my view, it doesn't. A voluntary support group adjacent to a faith-based education: they're not mutually exclusive, Madam Speaker. Frankly, I think that it's the people who suggest that they are who are the ones that are sowing divisiveness. Those are the ones that are sowing unnecessary debate. Those are the ones who are sowing a fight where none exists. I think that if it can happen in EPSB, frankly, it should be able to happen anywhere else.

There's a lot of talk about school board rights. School board rights. Now, I find that very entertaining, Madam Speaker, because school boards, just to be clear, are institutions, and when we're talking about the fundamental, Charter-protected rights of human beings, you know, it's a little bit ironic that a minister who was prepared to overlook school board rights when it came to funding priorities is prepared to now hold them up as a means of undermining the Charter-protected rights of kids and their families.

You know, I just want to mention that there was a vote at one point by the School Boards Association, back in 2012, around a policy that would have supported, among other things, GSAs. At that point one of the people amongst those school boards who voted against that policy was quoted as saying that, quote, if children with a gay tendency appear a certain way, we know that we have to be vigilant to make sure they are not discriminated against. End quote. But when asked if those students should try to be less identifiable, the same school board representative said, quote, I think that for their own benefit it would be helpful. End quote. That's a good example of the concerns that are expressed by some representatives of the school boards against adopting a policy that would have been adopted had we voted in favour of Bill 202.

Those are the rights and the opinions that these folks over there are committed to supporting and protecting. I would say to you, Madam Speaker, that that caucus over there is profoundly, deeply, and probably irreparably out of touch with the values of the vast majority of Albertans in choosing to represent those notions. These are fundamental rights. They can be accommodated. They can be accommodated with an inclusive, welcoming, voluntary approach. That is something that Bill 10 prohibits. It is something that facilitates an ongoing ban on GSAs where people who have the attitudes I just described choose to do it, and that's why we can't support it.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Once again, we are speaking to the hoist amendment. We have 29(2)(a). The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: No, thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Okay. Anyone on 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre on the hoist amendment.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm going to support the hoist amendment as I would support the bill itself, as I would support Bill 202, that the member would have brought forward.

For me, as I hear everyone's arguments, what's disturbing particularly – the emotions that some people have displayed and demonstrated are reminiscent of what I grew up with. If I take out LGBTQ and just substitute black or African-American or African-Canadian, I'm reliving the 1960s. I've seen this in the civil rights movement. I didn't understand it till I got much older, but the arguments have never changed. They're the same arguments; they're just repeating themselves. It's just another class of people that we're dealing with.

I understand what is happening here. I listened to the Premier when he brought his bill forward. Has anyone in this Assembly used the LGBTQ community for political purposes? I believe that there's a lot of guilt in this room. But the fact is that what we're trying to do is legislate ethical behaviour, moral grounds. We're trying to legislate against discrimination, and we've not figured it out yet as a society. We're still working on this.

I understand the whole issue of parental rights. I know the imperative of – I'm hearing what particularly these young children are going through, particularly the suicide rate and what these GSAs do to help prevent the suicide rate. I do not believe there is any common ground between parental rights and discrimination. It is already in the Charter, as has been mentioned.

I've been watching the media as I've been listening to the debate, and I think something that is extremely hurtful – I watched the Member for Calgary-North West get attacked in the Twittersphere and all the social media, and I've seen other people get attacked for what side of the debate they take on this, the kind of emotions that are rising up, the hatred, the vitriolic anger. Yet everybody in here is trying to in one degree or another express their concern or their opinion on how they stand against discrimination.

But nobody has really brought up the elephant in the room, which is the Catholic church and the Catholic school boards. The issue that we're dealing with here, when you actually break it out, is that we're dealing with a religious belief system – it's not just the Catholics, but they are the dominant force here with the school boards – that believes that somehow you choose to be gay. I don't know why anyone would choose to be gay. I'm sorry, but the fact is: would I choose a lifestyle given the opportunity to be totally discriminated against all the time? God forbid that I choose to be gay and First Nations. Why would you make that choice? You wouldn't make that choice.

If I had to make a choice, I'd choose a life of leisure. I get a better choice at that sometimes. Maybe I'd choose to be a young person in this Legislature's nice life of leisure. But the fact is that I don't get to make certain choices, and people who are gay and in the community of LGBTQ – that's not a choice. I can't believe that's a choice, for the life of me. I've talked it over with some of my colleagues in the room. Back when I was a child, we didn't even have any of these support systems, but we knew that some kids in schools were different, learned later in life that, okay, they were gay. Didn't know it then, but they were bullied, they were harassed, and that's fundamentally wrong. It's illegal in our country today.

Here we are trying to bring legislation forward to improve or to at least change what is happening, to protect. How do we deal with this when you have religious belief systems that contradict that? But what's interesting is that they don't contradict the discrimination part, because if you talk to the people in charge of these school boards and if you talk to, you know, the bishops and the cardinals, they will tell you that they do not discriminate. So what are we faced with? We're faced with trying to bring legislation which is nothing more than trying to educate. The battle with discrimination is the battle against ignorance. It will never leave us as a society. It is a constant battle, and it's only winnable through education, constant education.

If you watch TV today and watch what's happened down in the United States in the community of Ferguson and the issue of dealing with African-Americans, I can show you a litany of legislation, and I can show you a litany of racism. We're dealing with that today with the gay community. We're going to try to legislate. There are claims here: the bill does nothing; I don't agree with it. It does something. It's debatable, and we're educating the public. I mean, that's one step. But it does just take a small step.

Had we mandated gay-straight alliances, I understand why that mandate would have come, but I also understand the fear and the ignorance around the arguments that it's going to promote sex or that it's going to promote a gay lifestyle. I don't know how you'd promote a gay lifestyle, to be perfectly honest. Someone's got to teach that to me someday. It's nonsensical. But it is the ignorance that we deal with in society.

How we get beyond that: the first thing that we have to do is take the emotions out of the debate, and we have to stop attacking each other in the debate and start dealing with this logically and pragmatically and understand that what we're trying to do here is not infringe on any parental rights, but what we're trying to do here is lower the suicide rate and to stop bullying. I will support any legislation that makes an attempt to lower the suicide rate among young adults, that would help stop bullying among young adults. That is a good thing, and if it just gives an inch in that travel of a journey of a mile or two miles, I'll take the inch, and then I'll want the next inch. But we've got a long way to go.

[The Speaker in the chair]

I will tell you that in this society today it's interesting that a lot of adults my age and older are all upset about this issue, but when I ask young people under 30 years old, under 25 years old they don't even know why we're discussing it. It is an issue that they have accepted for most of them.

But the issue of bullying has never left our society. If it's not the LGBTQ or First Nations or any other minority group or even dealing with women, we still see the bigotry, the racism, the ignorance, and no law can beat that. You can make it illegal, but you are talking about a behavioural change. To pass legislation, to pass rules and regulations to help get that societal, behavioural change forward, I'm all for it. To put this off six months so we can debate it further: I would support that.

If this bill goes forward, I will vote on the bill. When it goes forward, I will support it. If the other bill comes forward, I will support that. I will challenge any organization to end discrimination, and I will continue to challenge organizations to end discrimination for any reason.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one wishing to take that opportunity, let me move on and see if there is a member wishing to speak here. Why don't we proceed with Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Not surprisingly, I will be supporting the hoist amendment, and I will be urging all members of this Assembly to, in fact, vote against the bill. If you look at what we have here, we've introduced a bill that, in my view, does not protect children in the way they should be protected today. In my view, this Legislature has a paramount responsibility to ensure that our youth have opportunities to succeed, have opportunities in our education system, and have the opportunities to live a life where they're able to express themselves, where they're able to get the supports they need, where they're able to live those lives free from bullying.

What we have here today is that in the main we had a bill, Bill 202, that would allow for all kids in this province, regardless of whether they went to public school, Catholic school, or private school, to establish a GSA should they want one and to not have administrators or school boards get in the way of that peer support forming. These are known as gay-straight alliances, and the research has shown in numerous studies – one from the University of British Columbia, one from Egale Canada, and others – that these clubs are proven to work. They reduce suicides, suicidal thoughts, and bullying in these schools.

Let's be clear. This is a real problem. Our LGBTQ youth are suffering from suicidal thoughts at far greater rates than people who are not or not perceived to be of that community. They are committing suicide at far greater rates, sometimes at rates four times as high as other youth members compared to them, and gay-straight alliances make that reduction in those tendencies and those suicides happen. The evidence is clear. When we see that evidence out there and we see impediments to how we can better support children in our school system, we should do that, and we have not done so here today. In my view, frankly, we should be ashamed that we have not taken that opportunity to go forward on that.

I remember when I put forward Motion 503 in the spring, that would have mandated gay-straight alliances in all schools where kids want them, there was much passionate debate, and in my view the person who put it most succinctly was the Member for Calgary-Northwest, when she said:

We know that all schools in the province may not want a gay-straight alliance, but that need isn't a board's to determine; it's a student's to determine. This is not a question of religious rights, and it's not a question of sexuality as much as it is a question of the right to free speech and free assembly.

I believe that was true then, and I believe it is now, that we should have done everything possible to allow gay-straight alliances to occur.

What we have now in this government's bill, that is trying to, I guess, avoid this contentious issue in this province of trying to be supportive of our LGBTQ community, is that it keeps the status quo. We know that. Nothing will change for kids at various schools in this province in their efforts to start a gay-straight alliance. That is what we should have been doing. That should have been the paramount point of what we are trying here. We know that right now in this province school administrators will first say no; school boards will then say no. Where is the child left?

That's the interesting part of this bill. The government is actually parading around, celebrating this supposed solution to this conundrum here today and here in this bill, and was doing so yesterday in the press. Their solution to this problem that they know is out there, that kids in many school systems, mostly Catholic and private schools, do not have the ability to form a gay-straight alliance, is: well, if your administrator says no, you can appeal it to the school board. Well, the student then goes off and appeals it to the school board, and if they say no, well, my goodness, you can appeal it to judicial review.

Well, say that a child does happen to get the funds together or gets parental support or maybe some pro bono legal help. Well, they trot off to a legal review, which we all know will look at this in the narrow confines of what school boards are set up to do and will see whether they're in the scope of their authority in the way they're acting. It may send them back, saying: "Nope. The school boards are acting as they should. They are given the authority under the School Act to act in this way, so you can't find fault with a judicial review."

Then the process for this child who wants a gay-straight alliance in his school is to trot off to Queen's Bench and to try and get this heard before a justice at that level and fight his or her or their battle at this stage. Does this seem like a solution to you, Mr. Speaker? It seems to me like an exercise in the ridiculous.

It's absurd to actually present this as an option for kids and families to try to pursue in the name of some sort of process set-up that they can follow. This is redundant, it's ridiculous, and really to offer it as a solution to Alberta's kids is, frankly, beyond the pale. This really stinks, in my view, Mr. Speaker. We keep on going down this path, this exercise in absurdity, when all these kids really want to do is set up a gay-straight alliance, and that has not been changed here today.

There are some other aspects that we have to consider here. Under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Alberta Human Rights Act no one is allowed to be discriminated against on the basis of many things – race, religion, country of origin – and one of those is sexual orientation. That has been enshrined in our Constitution. It has been enshrined in our Alberta Human Rights Act and the like. So, these principles are laid out there. Once we accept that those principles are the law, which I think we all agree we would unless someone here can tell me otherwise, then we have to understand that, frankly, school systems' or their boards' or their administrators' opinion on sexuality or sexual orientation – it doesn't matter. They cannot hold an opinion on that fact. They can merely recognize that: look, this is not a grounds we can discriminate against kids on, so we can't do that. Okay? That's fair. That's clear. That should be a given amongst all members of this House and, frankly, all school trustees and administrators throughout the system.

So when you accept that, they can only have one option, I think, that they should look at. It's the option of what helps build healthy lives for kids. The evidence is clear that that, again, is gay-straight alliances. Once we accept that, knowing that there are school boards and school systems out there that, despite the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Alberta Human Rights Act being the law of the land, despite that their opinion on human sexuality is nugatory at best, still won't allow this gay-straight alliance to be formed, which we've established saves lives and reduces bullying not only for LGBTQ kids but for the entire school, and they still won't implement a GSA – well, my goodness; this government had an obligation to act and to right an injustice that is out there facing our children, and this government failed miserably today in that effect.

Really, to throw out the bogeyman of parental rights, which is now going to be enshrined in the Bill of Rights, and sexual orientation is now going to be in the Bill of Rights: well, big whoop. We all know here that that doesn't mean a tinker's darn. We have a Charter of Rights and Freedoms and we have an Alberta Human Rights Act that proceed this Bill of Rights. It's window dressing at best, and it does not change the fact that we failed to make kids' lives better today. We are forcing them to jump through endless hoops and not be able to get what they want, a peer support group.

Whose rights are you really trampling on? Parental rights – you're basically choosing some version of parental rights, those who do not want GSAs, against those parents who may want a GSA. I think there are many out there who do. It was just brought up by the leader of the fourth party that she would like a GSA at her school, and her kids don't have access. So you're picking and choosing whose parental rights you're going to support, and you're really trampling on kids' rights. No one is forcing anyone to go to a gay-straight alliance. No one is saying: you will go there Monday, Wednesday, and Friday after school, and you will discuss these issues with your peers. No one is forcing anyone to do so, okay? So whose rights are you really infringing on? What complete and utter crap, Mr. Speaker. It's just simply garbage. It's a nonsensical argument that this government has trotted out, okay?

Let's talk about this. You know, much was made here about diversity clubs and things of that nature that may or may not be going on in various systems throughout the schools in Alberta. Let's think about that for a second, Mr. Speaker. You have a student who is LGBTQ. They are going through a difficult time. Discussing human sexuality is difficult for adults, much less children, and they're looking for a safe place to go discuss this issue. They get to this diversity club that's out there. What does the diversity club talk about? Well, we talk about all things diversity. We talk about racial diversity, we talk about country of origin diversity, we talk about inequality, and I'm not certain what. They probably have a multitude of issues at their diversity club.

But how safe do you think that young student who is going through this difficult time feels showing up at this club where he is not sure what, in fact, is on the agenda or who is going to be there or whether it's safe to discuss these issues. In my view, they're not. To think that this is a safe place and to trot it out like it's some sort of option for our LGBTQ students, in my view, is disingenuous. They need a gay-straight alliance with supportive peers that are mature enough, thoughtful enough, and understanding enough to give them the support they need. This government failed in that respect today, and frankly that is a disappointment.

I thought Bill 202, that was brought forward by the Member for Edmonton-Centre, would have actually finally allowed this government to turn the corner on all of it.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

With no one wishing to take that up, let us, then, move on to the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. You have up to 90 minutes should you wish to use it.

Ms Smith: I won't use 90 minutes, Mr. Speaker. [some applause] I know: a sigh of relief from the room.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Member for Edmonton-Centre for bringing forward Bill 202, which I was prepared to support. I think it's very unfortunate that we didn't get an opportunity to be able to debate that bill because of a procedural manoeuvre, which I think doesn't respect the rights of all of the members in this Chamber to be able to bring forward private members' business.

I think that you can well imagine the discussions that took place in our caucus over the last week or two as we were debating this bill. I think that the Member for Airdrie helped to come to a reasonable compromise that balanced all of the rights that are under consideration here: the rights of LGBTQ students to feel safe and accepted, equality rights, the rights of parents as well as the rights of school boards, in particular religious school boards and faith-based schools, to be able to ensure that everybody's rights are protected.

I was looking forward to that debate. I was looking forward to those amendments. I've talked to the Member for Edmonton-Centre. I know that she didn't support all of them, but I think that we gave an honest effort to try to preserve the essential elements of what it is she was trying to do while still respecting that we needed to come to a conclusion on how we could better protect parental rights and religious freedom.

The three main ways in which we would have approached that would be to have removed "sexual orientation" from clause 11.1 supporting that, affirming as well that home-school families and faith-based educators would not be forced to teach something that was contrary to their beliefs. Again, I think it would have been a reasonable amendment. Importantly, if a faith-based school or a Catholic board said no to a GSA, they would have to provide some kind of counselling or support to the student in question. To me, that's absolutely essential to any bill that I can support, and it's the reason why I'll be voting against Bill 10. I don't think it preserves what the original intention of the Member for Edmonton-Centre was attempting to do.

There have been some comments made about Catholic schools and Catholic school boards. I had the great privilege of going back and forth between Catholic schools and public schools when I was in the education system. It was of great value to me, and I think I characterize the Catholic concerns a little bit differently than the Member for Calgary-Buffer. I think that the Pope himself – and I like this Pope – is having the same debate and discussion within his own hierarchy about how to be able to welcome members from the LGBTQ community and still be able to live within the tenets of the Catholic faith. I'm watching that with great interest, having been very close to the Catholic teachings over the course of my life. But I think we do have to respect that it is up to the Catholic school board and the Catholic schools to be able to find that balance of how to be able to reconcile those, and we can't dictate to them.

As for Bill 10, there are some things that I do support about Bill 10. Putting sexual orientation into the Bill of Rights: again, this has already been determined by the courts. It's already in our Alberta Human Rights Act. Having it in the Bill of Rights makes sense. Parental rights also being enshrined in the Bill of Rights: an excellent move for the reasons that the Member for Airdrie had said. We have a great stain on our history as a province and a country with the residential school system and the violation of parents' rights, where the state felt that they knew better than parents. I think that we make a grave error in not recognizing how important parental rights are in determining the education for a child.

Moving this section to the School Act I'm supportive of as well, but where I don't support the bill is in the treatment of the issue of a student asking for a GSA club. I agree with the members for Calgary-Buffer and Edmonton-Centre that it doesn't do anything to advance where children find themselves today, and I'll give a few stories to illustrate why I prefer the approach taken in Bill 202 as opposed to the approach taken in Bill 10.

First of all, going to Stony Plain a few nights ago, I met Rachel, a transgendered woman who actually supported the approach that we were taking by modifying Bill 202 with the amendments that we had proposed. She felt that that actually did get the right balance and would have satisfied her concerns. So I thought that that was important to know, that not every member of the LGBTQ community thinks everything has to be dealt with in exactly the same way. I think that there are members of every community who believe that this balance is important.

Secondly, of course, the Foothills school division, which overlaps the area that I represent, already have two gay-straight alliances in their schools, one in Okotoks and one in Turner Valley, so we've seen already in the community that I represent that this is something that our school boards have taken a proactive approach on, and I'm grateful for that.

The third story is that I had a constituent who called me because her transgendered son had wanted to start up a gay-straight alliance in the school that he was in, in Claresholm, and was told no. And that was just it. It was no. It was not: no, but here is what we can do instead. It was not: no, but here is another school that you can go to. The answer was just no, and that has stayed with me for a year. I've been wondering what happened to that child in being shut down by the adults in that school when he was clearly trying to reach out to find a support group. The fact that there was no answer for him – and his mother was calling me to see what I could do. I contacted Kris Wells, who teaches at the University of Alberta in the sexual minorities area, to get some advice from him. It was the first time that I came into contact with him and the group and the work that he's trying to do.

I've since been able to visit GSA clubs and talk to the kids who benefit from them, and it's moved me greatly, which is part of the reason why I support the approach that was being taken by the Member for Edmonton-Centre. One of the issues that I think is important for us to understand – and I mean this as no offence. I'm trying to speak in a way that's accepting of everybody's diverse viewpoints in here, and I know that everybody does have strong passions about it. In speaking with a Catholic school trustee at the ASBA breakfast a little while ago as they were trying to grapple with how to deal with this issue of how to accommodate gay students within a Catholic environment, they did a series of round-tables with students at high schools. I think that the adults were looking at this as just an issue of bullying, so they wanted to understand the bullying aspect of it. What the kids told them was: "We're accepted by our peers. It's the adults who don't accept us."

That, I think, is why we have to really understand: at what point does a mature youth have the ability to make their own decisions about their sexuality that don't involve their parents? At the age of 12 a child, if they've got a split home, can choose to live with mom or dad. We recognize that a child as young as 12 can choose which parent they want to live with. At age 14 they can choose to have sex as long as it's with somebody who's within a close age to them and not somebody who's in a position of authority over them. At age 16 they can become emancipated from their parents and make entire education decisions on their own. There is with these children somewhere in the age of sexual maturity, somewhere above the age of 14, when they're in high school, where they really have the ability and right to be able to make their own decisions about the kind of support that they feel they need to feel accepted.

That, to me, is what GSA clubs are about. The children that I met with who were at these GSA clubs: most of their parents didn't know that they were out yet. Most of them knew that if their parents knew, there would be some consequences to that. One individual I spoke with said that two lesbian girls had come out at her school and had been kicked out of the school. Another young boy told me that he came out to his parents, and his dad rejected him.

[Disturbance outside the gallery]

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'm just going to pause for a moment while we get a door closed up there. Sergeants, if you could close that door, please. We can hear some interruptions coming from there.

Sorry to interrupt you, hon. member. Please proceed.

Ms Smith: Another young woman was beaten by her father.

While I respect that we need to find a balance with parental rights and with religious freedom, I think we need to also respect that in the case of these mature youths this really is a case of life or death for some of them. We really do have a number of youths who have nowhere else to go if they're not accepted by their community, not accepted in their home environment.

It's a very confusing time to go through puberty at the best of times. These kinds of clubs are providing an opportunity for these students not just to feel safe from bullying, which is important, not just to be able to provide an avenue to be able to educate their peers but also to make sure that they can deal with the confusing thoughts that come along with what it is that they're dealing with, which is compounded by everything that kids this age are going through.

Now, these students who are going through this, who are already facing these extreme emotions: in some cases these kids are cutting themselves, they're attempting suicide, and in some cases they are actually succeeding in committing suicide. To take these kids and say that the solution when their teacher says no is to go before a school board and try to argue their case or go before a lawyer and a court and try to get a judicial decision for them to be able to set up one of these clubs: that's not reasonable, Mr. Speaker. That's not the balance that we were looking for in this bill. I think that Bill 202 found that correct balance.

I'm very hopeful that when the members are considering this bill and considering potential amendments to it – unfortunately, we don't have a lot of time to bring amendments to it – they will bring forward and support an amendment that doesn't give a school board the right to just say no when a child comes before them, will support an amendment that will create an opportunity for these kids to have some other avenue to be able to feel supported, to feel accepted, and to deal with the issues that they're dealing with.

I'm afraid that Bill 10 falls well short – well short – of what the Member for Edmonton-Centre was trying to accomplish, and I would hope that if it cannot be properly amended to be able to accommodate that, that it would be voted down so that we could go back to debating the bill that I think creates that better balance and ensures that LGBTQ students do feel accepted and don't end up on the path that so many have gone down so far.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

I don't see anyone rising for 29(2)(a), so let us move on to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and speak to this bill. I'm going to cover a variety of topics, and I'm probably going to run out of time because there's much more that I have to say than in the short time that I'm allotted.

I want to just back up before I talk about Bill 10 and talk about the reason that Bill 10 came into existence. You know, I think many Albertans see it for what it really is, an attempt to torpedo Bill 202, which was a bill put forward that actually would ensure that children in schools who wanted to form GSAs could not be blocked. I've yet to hear a reasonable argument on how an extracurricular club infringes on parental rights or infringes on another student's rights. I think the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona put it quite well when she said that when a parent can stop a group of students from forming one of these clubs, then it's infringing on her right as a parent for her child to have access to this type of club.

I'm going to go through a lot of the reasons why the Alberta NDP are such strong advocates of this bill and why it was so disheartening, the actions that were displayed here yesterday, from what seemed to be an unending stream of points of privilege to eat the clock to the fact that when a vote was passed – it was unanimously passed in this House, Mr. Speaker, yet members from the other side decided to force a standing vote, therefore eating another 10 minutes into the time and, essentially, shutting down any discussion that was going to happen on Bill 202. Honestly, I can say that that was the most undemocratic action I've ever seen in this House, not only in my time as a member but as a person who has lived for 39 years in this province.

I want to bring up a variety of points here. Again, I'm not quite sure how a gay-straight alliance, because it's voluntary and it's student driven, is somehow infringing on the rights of others, whether it's parental rights or student rights. My mind has gone through numerous clubs that students start up in a school. If a school board tried to block an antiracist club or a club supporting students in any other way, there would be outrage, and that board's decision would be overturned very quickly. Yet for some reason when we talk about the rights of students regarding sexual orientation and gender identity, those rights are not equal to other rights. I don't understand it. I think it's wrong, Mr. Speaker.

The other part – and I am going to be all over the map, and I apologize for that. The fact that Bill 10 supposedly brings forward rights in incremental steps is quite absurd, Mr. Speaker. When you look at any rights that have been won in the history of this world, they have never been done incrementally. You know, I think of the examples of Rosa Parks or Dr. Martin Luther King. They didn't win rights incrementally or partially or that some people could or that a half a person could or an inch of the way. When women earned the right to vote in this country, it wasn't only a handful of women; it was women. It was all or nothing.

If we are wanting to get to the root of this bill, which is what I want to talk about – I mean, this isn't about parental rights. This isn't about religious views. We're talking about introducing a piece of legislation which will protect our students, which will protect our youth. We're talking about antibullying. Despite the fact that we can talk about different clubs that exist, there are none that are as effective at dealing with bullying and discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity than GSAs. There is proof from around the world that GSAs work.

What frustrates me is the fact that you're now setting up a system where if a GSA is blocked by a school, the student can take this to the school board, which I find kind of ironic. Would they come back and say: "Did you change your mind?" "No." "Okay. Now I've got to take you to court or a judicial review." We're telling our young people that if you want this, you've got to jump through these hoops, you've got to expend money and time in order to try to take a board to court to prove that they're wrong and it's your inalienable right. It just seems so ridiculous, Mr. Speaker. It's unbelievable, and I think Albertans are flabbergasted at that part of Bill 10, which is ridiculous, quite honestly.

I want to talk a little bit because I feel like I need to educate some of the members in this House as far as the reasons for GSAs and their value. So let me just tell you, starting off in 2011, that a report by a Canadian advocacy group called Egale found 21 per cent of LGBTQ students reported being physically harassed or assaulted because of their sexual orientation, and more than half reported having been verbally harassed. Almost half of gay, lesbian, bisexual students and 75 per cent of transgendered students have experienced verbal harassment about their sexual orientation or gender expression at school. Studies show that LGBTQ teens experience greater levels of violence and more negative health outcomes than their heterosexual peers. Twenty-four per cent of harassed students report lower grades; 27 per cent report higher absentee rates; 55 per cent report greater depression; 35 per cent are more likely to make plans to commit suicide.

Those numbers, to me, are staggering. When you have a tool or a club that decreases those numbers and provides for a safe and inclusive space, it seems like a no-brainer to me, Mr. Speaker, that we as provincial representatives and Legislatures would do everything in our power to ensure students are safe in our schools. I mean, this is what it comes down to. It's not these other arguments that have been set up. I would argue that the Premier himself has pitted and created this dichotomy, this imaginary argument of one side versus another, when what we're talking about is an extracurricular school club that gives students the tools to feel safe in their schools, to feel supported. They work toward combating bullying and discrimination.

I don't understand it, Mr. Speaker. I've had students write letters and send e-mails asking me to try to explain the rationale of Bill 10 and why this government torpedoed Bill 202, and I can't. I don't think members on the other side either can provide a rational explanation of how an extracurricular club that's voluntary infringes on the rights of other students, when they're nowhere near that club if they don't want to participate in it.

I do want to point out a couple of things which may come as a surprise, Mr. Speaker. I was thrilled to learn that there are other jurisdictions in this great country of ours that have GSAs which exist in both public and Catholic schools. That may come as a shock to some. But, hey, believe me, it's true. Ontario and Manitoba both have legislation that mandates that all students in all public and separate Catholic school boards are allowed to form GSAs if they want to. For some reason for the folks in Ontario this doesn't contravene or contradict their religious beliefs.

You know, there's a part of me that feels as a – I want to mention in this Assembly that I myself am a Catholic, Mr. Speaker. I see no conflict between students starting GSAs in Catholic schools or rural schools or any school. This isn't even about singling out one or another. This is about all schools. If students have the desire to form a GSA, they should be allowed.

I do want to commend some of the work that many folks have done moving this forward. You know, I will give kudos, first and foremost, to the Member for Edmonton-Centre for bringing this up and even her predecessor. Last year we had a great debate on Motion 503 from the Member for Calgary-Buffalo. I do want to congratulate and thank the members of this House who were in favour of Bill 202 and opposed to this toothless bill that's just really meant to sidetrack the conversation and, well, quite clearly, just to take out any strength or ability or protection that would have been given to students.

Also and especially I want to thank the students of this province who have the courage and have had the courage to step forward in spite of adversity and challenges and the potential of public shaming to voice their beliefs and to fight for something that is, I believe, so important when we talk about protecting the rights of our children, the rights of our students, and the fundamental human rights that all Canadians deserve to enjoy.

I will mention – and I am going to try to keep this fairly short. I know there are other speakers that want to get up. Due to the fact that the government in their move to make this Assembly more democratic invoked closure . . . [interjection] Well, there is a two-hour limit on this current bill, is there not, Mr. Speaker?

An Hon. Member: Not yet.

Mr. Bilous: Okay. It has not been invoked yet. All right. Then I withdraw that last comment. Fair enough. I got my back up there a little pre-emptively. I'm sorry, government members. However, I won't be surprised if it crops up at some point between now and third reading.

Anyway, Mr. Speaker, I think the point of this is that the whole thrust behind the bill – and I know that there are some gestures in this bill as far as removing section 11.1 that the government has made, which we were opposed to when it was first introduced. I appreciate that gesture. But, really, this comes down to: what tools are we giving to students to ensure that they are protected in our schools? Bill 10 I cannot support because it does not protect the very students that it claims to protect. Therefore, I support the hoist motion put forward, that this bill needs to not get read for six months hence. Let's bring forward legislation that truly respects and protects the identities of all students in this province.

I'll tell you one last thing, Mr. Speaker. I've never liked the word "tolerant" or "tolerance". To me that's putting up with something that you don't like, like tolerating a dirty car or tolerating, you know, something that you don't appreciate. The point is that we don't tolerate one another. We don't hold our nose and put up with them. If we want to truly respect diversity and inclusiveness, then we need to celebrate our differences in who we are and not white wash them.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. I don't see anyone rising under 29(2)(a).

Are there any other speakers? I see Calgary-Mountain View, and then after that, I have the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark on the list. That's all I have for the moment.

Hon. member, please proceed.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. An honour and a privilege I do take seriously to stand and speak to Bill 10 and the specific amendment to hoist the bill as a result of some of the, I guess, lack of confidence that one has developed over the last 24 hours in not only the legislative process, as it's been diverted and subverted by this government, but also on the basis that I think the Member for Calgary-Northwest, who proposed Bill 10, herself believes that there needs to be a lot more discussion, a lot more understanding, not only in the public but in this Legislature, about what we mean by human rights, what we mean by gender and sexual orientation and sexual education. She herself indicated that there is a lot of confusion and a lot ambiguity about what it is we're about here.

I will revert briefly to the Premier's throne speech, in which he repeatedly said and has said in the press: this government is under new management. That was a profound comment to me, that he believes that all we need is new management rather than leadership. What this province needs is new leadership – a vision, values, a commitment to a longer term, sustainable province – which includes real honouring of human rights, a government that not only talks about human rights but demonstrates it in their actions and in their process here in the Legislature and in their actions outside this Legislature, a government that actually lives their commitment to putting children first. There's an interesting phrase we hear repeatedly, and here again it comes into question because we're not putting children first. We're not even putting human rights first. We're putting some authority first.

There's some confusion here about what human rights are and what we need to do to protect those human rights. It's not unlike what we've seen over the last hundred years across the planet, where voting rights and legitimacy of ethnic communities and women's rights and First Nations' rights gradually, step-by-step, got included in our legislation.

Here we are at another impasse because there is a resistance among certain groups to honour sexual orientation as a human right: oh, yes, we'll put it in somewhere, and potentially we'll honour it, but there has to be balance. What is this balance that we're looking for? Is there protection or isn't there? We're looking for leadership, and we're not seeing it. In fact, we saw the subversion yesterday of a legitimate bill, 202, that tried to ensure that all of us would not have to deal with decisions around this because the decision was made in our Charter of Rights.

Sitting in the gallery today is the Farmworkers Union, who has for 10 years asked for the same basic human right, and this government continues to deny it because it's optional. All other working groups get occupational health and safety, guaranteed compensation if they get injured, labour code standards, even child labour standards, but not the farm workers because this government is really confused about human rights. How is it that this government can look at itself in the mirror every day, can speak to its constituents as standing up for human rights, being pillars of democracy, and continue to do this, to say that human rights are optional? "Some human rights we will honour and defend; other human rights we will decide on balance. How will this affect our bottom line if we honour this commitment to human rights? How will this affect our voters if we impose a gay-straight alliance on schools?"

Why are we considering political impact when we're talking about human rights? This is the 21st century. It's unbelievable that we are dealing with this in such a contentious way and honouring some opinions over the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Bill 202 enabled all schools to have some kind of a group, whether they call it gay-straight or some other name, to honour our commitment to children first: their safety, their health, their well-being, their empowerment, their freedom to speak, their freedom to assemble. Does this government even realize that they're limiting their freedom to assemble?

They are limiting farm workers' ability to assemble. Is that an option? It appears to be an option. This government has legislated against farm workers' freedom to assemble. They cannot by law form a union. This is 19th-century stuff. I'm glad the Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour is here because this is his bailiwick. I know he stands for human rights. I've seen him on the streets of Calgary. We've stood together on some important issues of human rights, and I look forward to his leadership, not management but leadership, on the issue of farm worker rights in this province and to setting a new tone, setting a new, I would say, image for Alberta that we're not foot-draggers, that we're not being dragged into the 21st century, that we are actually trying to lead in a responsible and inspiring way and that our children will be inspired by what we do.

We know that there is a pinnacle here called the Charter, and it has to do with human rights and dignity, the democratic process, the right to assemble, the right to free speech, and our commitment to try to create safe, caring communities, especially for our young people with gender identity issues and with sexual orientation confusion, who desperately need to feel respected, feel some openness, especially among this adult community. If we don't set the tone for this, who's going to do it? We lead with these decisions, and we're dragging our feet in this instance. Teachers and school boards are looking for leadership.

Yes, there will be some resistance. There always is resistance to change, especially around human rights and human dignity, even free speech and, obviously, even freedom of assembly. Young people are basically saying: "What's the problem here, folks? Why are we giving the jurisdiction, the decision-making power, to an elected body of people when this is a fundamental of Canadian society, a Charter right?"

Who is threatened by honouring our commitment to human rights? Who is threatened? If they're threatened, maybe there's a good reason for that, and we need to challenge the fact that some people are threatened by the freedom of young people to gather and talk about sexuality, sexual orientation, and gender ambiguity. This government is inventing a conflict because they're pandering to a political base. Very disappointing.

You know what is the right thing to do. This province is looking for the kind of bold, courageous leadership that the Member for Edmonton-Centre was trying to bring about here. Would you say the same about a group that wanted to start a Christian organization in the school? "Oh, we would leave that up to the discretion of the school board." Or if we want to start a multicultural group? "Oh, we'll leave that up to the discretion of a school board." No. There's something very sensitive and very special about sexuality, and we're still struggling with 1930s, 1940s attitudes in some areas of the province.

They're actually looking for the kind of leadership that this government could give to allow there to be no ambiguity, that it's going to be challenged if you try and block people from associating, if you try and block people, especially young people, from talking about their confusion and their sensitivities and the dangers around gender ambiguity or gender identification and sexuality. We're looking for leadership. I know this government wants to be effective leaders. I know they do. That's why they got elected. Here's an opportunity in this amendment to lift this for six months, to compromise on their desire to always win the vote, to win the bill.

Consider putting children first. Consider making human rights the pre-eminent decision in this. Consider hoisting this bill to allow for the dust to settle, the emotion to settle, and for debates and discussions to go on all across the province, and allow that to come to the fore in six months' time. Let's then have the fulsome debate and, potentially, the changes that we all want. Not new management but new leadership.

This is an example of something that looks like a 1940s decision, and you have an opportunity to show 2014 leadership. Where other provinces are today, we could jump right into that leadership role. We want an inclusive society. We say that we are committed to open accountability, inclusiveness, tolerance. I say that we want empowered youth who feel confident in themselves regardless of their sexual orientation, regardless of certain voices in the back of their head and certain voices in their community that say: "You're not good enough. You're weird. You're a faggot. You're whatever, and we're not going to accept you." This is a time for real leadership to say: "Hey, everybody, this is something we stand for. Children first. Human rights, top of the agenda. We're not going to compromise on this – sorry – even though some of you and some particular religions will be uncomfortable with it. We are not going to set the bar there. We're going to set the bar up here. You're going to come there, and we're going to have debates and discussions, but we're going to get there and not in the 22nd century but in the 21st century."

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one, let us move on to the next speaker. I would go to the Official Opposition in the rotation.

If not, let us move on to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Caldor.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to certainly support this hoist motion. I think that it's probably the best idea. We saw a lot of very heightened emotions yesterday, and I think we've seen quite a lot of poor decision-making on a leadership level in regard to how this PC government has handled this situation.

I think it's very important, when you do have a very large, changing, pluralistic society and you have a considerable majority, that you exercise that majority with caution because if you do in fact revert to old sort of muscle memory of how you always had governed and behaved as a ruling party, then sometimes that is inappropriate. We have a very sensitive situation here, a very symbolic situation, where we're not just talking about gay-straight alliances. We're talking about the capacity for a majority government to govern for everybody.

On that very large level I thought we saw a categorical failure here yesterday, Mr. Speaker. I'm speaking as constructively as possible on this, too, because I know what the reality is here in this province. You know, I wasn't born yesterday. I know that we have a situation where there is a very strong Conservative, virtually a one-party state that has existed and has exerted its control over this province for many, many decades. We're not going to change that wholesale overnight, but we certainly do need to and can change the way by which that very large power is exerted over all of the citizens here in this province. We're not just fighting for gay-straight alliances here. We're fighting for the capacity of people to make reasonable assertions that are in the best interests of both mental health and societal health and reflect the values that are changing rapidly in our province without having to be heavy handed and mean spirited.

You know, Mr. Speaker, as you were as well, I was a teacher for more than 20 years, and I look at this as a very succinct teaching moment. [interjection] Oh, yeah. I taught for 20 years. Absolutely. I always look for teaching moments. I still consider myself to be a teacher.

It's not just about having a legal space for someone to form a gay-straight alliance in a school or about a school board or a place where maybe they are opposing that at some administrative level, but this is also a way to teach every single person who pays attention to this issue about equality and social justice and the capacity to accommodate differences in our society.

So you say, “Well, you know, we changed 11.1 in this act, and we made adjustments here,” and that’s all good. I mean, I’m not opposed to the evolutionary process of reform as well. But just as strongly the undercurrent message here, the subtext of a message that was presented here, was: we will use and employ legal power and just raw political power to compromise the clarity of our commitment to gay-straight alliances so that some school boards can continue, either tacitly or explicitly, to exclude gay-straight alliances from the schools in the jurisdictions which they are responsible for. Business as usual, basically, right? I just really find that a little bit – not just offensive, but I think, as I said before, it’s missing that opportunity to have that teaching moment.

Other people will look at that as well and say: “Well, you know, the government pushed and shoved them. The PC government will always come down on the conservative, right-wing side of things, so we can always pull strings to make sure that we get what we want if you are of that persuasion.” Again, that’s not really good democracy. It’s just people thinking that they have a government in their back pocket, that the right-wing side of the equation can be tilted at any time: “We can make the deal. We can make it happen like we want it to be.” That’s not fair.

I would say that Bill 10 reflects the values and the desires of quite a small minority, actually, here in the province of Alberta, not even explicitly in terms of gay-straight alliances but explicitly in terms of a live-and-let-live attitude and a sort of a libertarian idea that people can mind their own business and that the government has no business in regard to being discriminatory towards one’s sexuality and other things like that. In 2014 that is a predominant majority sentiment in societies such as ours. Again, Bill 10, sort of hastily cobbled together more for political reasons than actual practical reasons, is out of step with how the vast majority of Albertans feel and the attitudes that they share with themselves and with their families.

Yeah, of course people can have their own religious views on things, and they can have their own societal and cultural views on things, but you don’t have discriminatory views on things and think that we can actually enshrine those in law. I think that’s a message we should be sending out of this Legislature, Mr. Speaker, and that’s not really explicitly what we’re doing here.

We know that on a sociological level, on a school-wide level in terms of a teaching level these sort of peer support groups are very, very important, and we’ve learned over a long period of time that peer support and student-initiated ways of teaching things and helping each other are the most effective teaching tools of all. When I heard the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on the radio yesterday – time flies when you’re having fun, so to speak – and she used the words “peer support” over and over again, I thought that was so incredibly appropriate in looking at this from a pedagogical standpoint and from a teaching moment, right? I know for a fact that student-initiated direction in these things is just so much more powerful than anything that a teacher could come up with.

I mean, I could come up with a social justice club or something like that, and I’ve done it before in teaching in the past. But, you know, was it student initiated? Well, it became that after a while, but it started out with me, right? I was treading against the water and paddling upstream, and it wasn’t effective. But if the kids come up with something like a social justice club or democratic elections for student council and stuff like that, it takes off like wildfire, and it becomes a much wider teaching opportunity, right?

So with student-led GSAs, I mean, it’s not like we’re mandating. I know that this has been another subtext, which is so wrong on this whole debate, you know, that we’re going to make a law forcing people to have gay-straight alliances in schools. Well, I don’t think so. If the students want to organize one, then, yeah, they can do so, right? They can do so, and we will protect them to allow them to do so, and there’s nothing wrong with that.

I mean, a choice that somebody makes – I heard it earlier this afternoon – to have a gay-straight alliance in a school doesn’t affect other people, nor should they stick their noses into that, quite frankly. Right? I mean, if there are some teachers that don’t like it or if there are some administrators that don’t like it or a school board or whatever, well, too bad. I mean, it’s not as though you have a GSA that is otherwise imposing their will on the school. You have a peer support network in a club that people can choose to join or not join. There’s nothing sort of subversive about that. In fact, it’s very progressive. You know, it’s reflecting a cultural phenomenon that we’re seeing in schools over the last number of years.

Like I said, really, I haven’t been teaching full-time now for a decade, since I’ve been a legislator and so forth, but it’s happened during that time frame. When I left teaching full-time, GSAs weren’t around, and now they are, I think, as the minister tabled today, in at least 94 schools around the province and growing fast. Most of those are in places where the school board has given that space to encourage GSAs. If they don’t, then people are scared. I mean, it’s authority, and people exert their authority through the school board tacitly or explicitly, and you won’t see GSAs in a place where a school board says no. I mean, it’s just not going to happen.

It’s not like kids are equipped with legal advice and lawyers in their back pocket. That’s a phenomenon that is very rare and very expensive, too. For someone to actually challenge a school board to allow a GSA would be at least $25,000 to $35,000, I would say, to mount a legal challenge. I mean, that’s a pretty rarified world. Whoever came up with that idea, the Premier perhaps, lives in – I don’t know. To think you can have legal counsel at your beck and call and $30,000 to go for a legal challenge. I mean, that’s what we do here in the Legislature, make those laws so that you don’t have to have this mixed-up, convoluted sort of legal conflict on a basic human right.

Mr. Speaker, that’s my feeling on this. Certainly, you know, we talked a lot already about the sociological benefits of these GSAs. It’s very interesting how it’s been tracked. I’ve been really quite amazed at how successful it’s been in schools and how much more widespread it could be if we allowed that space to continue here through the Legislature.

Based on that, I certainly support this hoist for now. You know, I don’t judge people on a single issue. I judge them on an accumulation of their actions at the time. Certainly, I know that there are some good people over on this side that would like to see us do the right thing. I’m surprised, very happily surprised, to see the public’s reaction to this. It’s not just a reaction on gay-straight alliances. It’s a reaction, like I said at the outset of my comments, on the capacity of a large-majority Conservative government to exert fair and equitable legislation that doesn’t discriminate and appear heavy handed towards minorities. That’s part of why I was so upset yesterday, and I still kind of am today.

I also know that there are lots of good people over on the other side that will concur with that idea and will vote appropriately, I’m sure. I mean, this is not a threat, right? I know that I can smell some threatening language over there. That’s not the way we should conduct ourselves, I don’t think. You know, I often think of that Shakespearean line about thou “doth protest too much,” when I hear someone over there speaking very, very loudly, louder than you need to considering we’re miked here, about how much they really love this political thing that's going on here when, in fact, I know that they must be feeling very, very conflicted considering how this has all come out in the wash.

With those comments, Mr. Speaker, I certainly encourage everyone to support the hoist. Thank you very much.

5:40

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. I see no one rising. Anyone from this side or that side?

Then the next speaker on the list I have is the hon. leader of the Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to support the hoist motion on Bill 10. I can't believe that we're actually having to have these discussions in 2014 in what is the best place, the best province in the best country in the world. You know, I just want to talk to you about the history of our country. In 1906 my grandfather came to this country at the age of 17. In 1908 the government, or the law, said that people of Indian origin couldn't come to this country anymore. They brought in the Continuous Passage Act. You had to come from your country of origin directly to this country, and only one ship made that journey, a government ship, and they changed the journey.

In 1914, Mr. Speaker, my great-grandmother's brother was on a ship called Komagata Maru. They challenged Canadian exclusionary laws, discriminatory laws directly aimed at one class of individuals. The ship was turned back, and it was not a warm reception when they got back home.

Mr. Speaker, in 1917 women were finally allowed the right to vote, and I believe that it was about 1929 when they were considered real persons. People from other countries didn't get a chance to vote until after the world wars, and First Nations, the people on whose land we reside, didn't get the chance to vote until the '60s.

Mr. Speaker, I remember coming to this country in 1972. Many of us who are from other countries, who are visibly different or talk differently, know what discrimination is like. The first week was one black eye, and the next week was another black eye, and you learned how to defend yourself. Frankly, I asked my parents as a child: why did you bring me to this country just to get beaten up every week? It was very scary having to go to school, finding a different way, and trying to sneak back home so you wouldn't get beaten up. Well, I sort of got toughened.

You know, I grew up in a war-torn country postpartition. I was already a tough kid, and after about 10 fights I learned how to defend myself and get back up. Then the rest of the time, Mr. Speaker, I spent my time at the playgrounds, standing in front of the kid that was queer, the kid that was gay, the kid that was fat, the girl whom people teased, because bullies would pick on these poor children in the playground, and I happened to be one of the tough kids. I didn't like fighting, but I had no trouble standing in front of somebody who needed some protection and defence in the playground from elementary to my high school days.

I'll tell you, Mr. Speaker, that as an inner-city emergency room doctor I've seen countless children – the health care staff will tell you – countless young people. Mental health rates right now are going through the roof: the suicide attempts, the despair, the overdoses. More than 60,000 children are suffering from mental health issues, and there's a big stigma attached to it. I'll tell you that we've seen countless people from the LGBTQ community, young children who've slashed their wrists, who've overdosed because they were outcast from their families and their communities because they considered this a shameful thing.

Mr. Speaker, for these children their only recourse if their family doesn't accept the way they're born is their peer group, which is usually at school. It's usually your teachers, your parents, or your peer group, which is your social circle. So at school you form peer groups. You know, it could be the chess group, it could be the sports group, it could be the geek group or a certain religion or – hey – it could be a certain culture. These children want the ability to talk about their issues, that are unique to them, and these are very unique issues.

When you're a teenager, sexual identity – it's a very confusing time. Well, I remember that it was a tough time with, you know, my own sexuality. I think we all struggle with those kinds of things and hormones when you're a teenager to begin with. But imagine if you're from the LGBTQ community and with every other stress that you have in life, stresses of your family struggling to pay the bills, of poverty and single parents, imagine that you add this on top of that.

The hon. member from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, her Bill 502 was really about protecting our children, giving them the freedom . . .

Ms Blakeman: Bill 202.

Dr. Sherman: Bill 202. Sorry. I stand corrected.

Giving these children the freedom of the right to create their own little social support group in the school where and when they felt that they needed it, that's all it was about.

Now, the reason we have to hoist this bill is because the Premier, with all due respect, is wrong. I don't think he's suffered the type of discrimination these children and many others have suffered, and that's why he's wrong. He doesn't get what these kids go through.

Mr. Speaker, imagine this. Young people want to assemble. Bill 10 is asking these same young people to go to the very people – the parents, the community, and the school boards – that they're actually fearful of, that they feel ostracized by, to ask them: will you allow us to assemble? Bill 10 not only asks them to do that to the very people they don't want to tell they're a lesbian or gay or bisexual, to adults who are going to drag them off to get a medical fix because there's something wrong with them, allegedly, according to some people – these children are born this way.

They are actually telling these children: "No. If the school board doesn't work for you and you've outed yourself in your community and now you're really alone, go to the court system. Go get a lawyer." The Premier may be a very wealthy lawyer who made a few million dollars a year working for a bank, but you tell me which young student is going to have the money, the family support, the community support to raise that kind of money to go to the court system to get the ability to just hang out with their friends and have their own group. This is a grassroots, student-led issue.

Mr. Speaker, my son just made a film for the city of Edmonton. It's called Through My Eyes. The City of Edmonton Youth Council under the mayor's guidance wants the issues of First Nations and homelessness, especially youth homelessness, to end. I'm so proud of my son and the young people that he made this film with. You know, there were packed houses at the university theatre just a week or two ago. I didn't even know this, but of the hundreds of youth that are homeless, 50 per cent are actually from the LGBTQ community – 50 per cent – and the majority of the youths that are homeless are also from the First Nations community and low-income families.

Fifty per cent of all homeless youth – they've got no houses to stay in – these children said that they don't want to live on the north end of the river because they're fearful they're going to lose their lives on the north end of the river. They already have been kicked out of their community and their families, and they're living on the streets south of the river. They're not living near Whyte Ave to have a good time. They want a home, they want a family, they want to be accepted, and they want dignity, human dignity.

Mr. Speaker, what we're really talking about is human rights, human rights of our children, young people. What makes us a great country is what happened in 1993, the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, which guarantees us inalienable rights to walk freely in this country, to have freedom of speech, freedom to assemble – and these freedoms also come with responsibility – without being discriminated against and treated horribly. The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms lays out the protections all Canadians have from discrimination based on religion and sex, which the Supreme Court has extended to sexual orientation.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta Liberals want to protect the rights of all minorities, but the Premier is intent on playing one minority group against another by shifting focus off the Charter and onto the Alberta Bill of Rights. The guiding principles of this country are under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. So I wonder what it is about the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms that the Premier and his PC government will not support.

Mr. Speaker, I know that the Premier likes to talk about his record on human rights. The Premier's record is no different than all other conservatives, dragging your feet until you're forced by the Supreme Court of this country to recognize what every other province has accepted years ago.

Recently references to the Charter and Education Act were removed, between drafting Bill 2 and Bill 3, in favour of the common beliefs and values of Albertans. The Premier has been out of the province and in Ontario for quite a while. So perhaps he may have a unique perspective and can tell us, but I also wonder: how, exactly, are the beliefs and values of other Canadians different from those of Albertans?

Mr. Speaker, school boards that don't want to allow gay-straight alliances essentially want students to conform to their systems rather than having to accommodate them. Bill 202 would have provided safe and inclusive schools that respect diversity, all diversity, and the Premier's plan only maintains the status quo, which gives the boards a veto and forces our children to go to the court system. The fact is that LGBTQ students have a constitutional right to be free from this sort of discrimination. That's the fact. So, again, I wonder why the Premier wants vulnerable teenagers to have to go get expensive lawyers and out themselves to the very community they feel that they are not welcome to and accepted by.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has come a long way. We have, and I ask that members in the government – please. You have the majority of the votes. We don't on this side, in the progressive parties. You have the majority of the votes. We've come so far.

You know, I remember coming to this province in 1984. I became a Christian, and I was at a Baptist camp in Caroline, Alberta. Those were the days the KKK were burning crosses in Alberta, and there were hate rallies in this province. I was there, just a few miles away from Eckville and, oh, gosh, some other town out near Eckville, where some folks were denying the Holocaust, very discriminatory stuff.

Also, Mr. Speaker, in 1994 a teacher who was homosexual was doing his job, and he was fired. He was fired for being a human being, for being himself. It went to the Supreme Court of the land, and the Supreme Court of the land said that sexual orientation is under the protections of this country. The last I checked, Alberta is in the country of Canada. We operate under the supreme law of the land of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has had some bad times and dark times in our history when it comes to human rights and protecting the rights of minorities. The whole point of democracy, my dear friends on the government side, is that it's the duty of the majority to protect the minority, and that's the greatness of democracy. In other parts of the world the majority stamp on the minority, and that's what makes Canada the greatest country in which to live.

Mr. Speaker, we have one, just one, little hurdle to go. We're so close. This is the best province in the best country in the world, but I think we are capable of so much more. I believe if we actually allow our young people from the LGBTQ community to have their gay-straight alliances and if we move section 11.1 into the Education Act, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre had originally suggested, we can get on to the business of what we really need to do, which is provide Albertans the services they need, protect our economy, balance the books, and put money in the bank.

Really, we have to improve Alberta's reputation on human rights. This is about the safety of our children. If we as a civilized society are not going to protect the human rights of young, vulnerable children, many who end up homeless on the streets, whose suicide attempt rates and suicide rates and depression rates are higher than the norm, then what are the values that we stand upon as a people and as a province?

Mr. Speaker, it seems as though new management is doing the same old thing. Their concern is more for political expediency versus doing the right thing. I urge the members on the government side. You have the majority of the numbers until the next election. I ask you to please, please do the right thing. There are many of you. I don't believe there's one homophobic member in this Legislature. I believe we are all united in protecting human rights. We just have to enshrine them in legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, I would like to make a motion that any bells that we have at this point but also for the rest of the evening after the break be shortened to one minute.

The Speaker: Hon. members, my interpretation of what the Government House Leader has just said is that the time between the original summoning of the bells and the second summoning be curtailed or brought down to one minute. Is that the intention, hon. Government House Leader?

Mr. Denis: Actually, I'll correct myself: just until adjournment at 6 p.m., Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. Government House Leader. I was talking while you were talking, so could you just tell me what it is that you have in mind for this motion?

Mr. Denis: Please accept my apologies, Mr. Speaker. I'm sorry. I'd like to rise and ask for unanimous consent of the Chamber that if there are any standing bells prior to the break, they be at a one-minute interval and not 10.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: So there will be a one-minute interval between the ringing of the two bells.

Now, under 29(2)(a) is there anyone else here?

Seeing none, are there any other speakers to the hoist amendment, known as H1?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment H1 lost]

The Speaker: We will immediately put the question on second reading.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for second reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:57 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: Good evening. Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 7 Chartered Professional Accountants Act

[Adjourned debate December 1: Mr. McIver]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. I'll be brief now because I introduced and adjourned it at the last sitting. Ever so briefly, this is the bringing together of the CGAs, the CMAs, and the CAs, three separate organizations, into one. It's part of making sure that Alberta's accountants have job mobility, that we can attract the best and the brightest. This change has been contemplated and brought here in consultation and co-operation with the three accounting bodies and with their, I would say, unvarnished support in letters tabled in this House yesterday.

I hope that everybody, all my worthy and honourable colleagues, will choose to support this bill.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's with pleasure that I stand to support this bill. After consulting with CAs in my riding and throughout the province as well as members of the association, it seems to me that it's a good example of what happens when we listen to the stakeholders and engage them and act on their recommendations and suggestions. So it's with full support that I give this my blessing.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any other members who wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm sorry. I think we're geographically the furthest away from each other, and I blend into the wall a little bit here. But I just wanted to very quickly express my support and the New Democrats' support for this bill as well. It certainly seems to be a logical and, probably, reasonable evolution of not just this legislation but the profession of accountants as well. I've heard unanimity of support for this from the outreach that we did. Fair play. That's the way we should do it. Certainly, the New Democrats will support this bill.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Standing Order 29(2)(a). Are there any comments or questions?
Seeing none, are there any other members who wish to speak to Bill 7, the Chartered Professional Accountants Act? The hon. Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

An Hon. Member: It's got a pretty good chance to pass. Don't mess this up.

Mr. Dorward: I know.

I stand in support of Bill 7, the Chartered Professional Accountants Act, brought forward by the Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour and MLA for Calgary-Hays. I'd like to thank the two previous ministers who worked on this file, the MLA for Edmonton-Castle Downs and the MLA for Calgary-Klein. As well, Madam Speaker, I'd like to thank the hard-working public servants in the departments of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour and Justice and other departments.

Madam Speaker, the professional accountants of Alberta are presently governed by the Regulated Accounting Profession Act, likely the most advanced legislation in any province in Canada. The participants – the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta, of which I'm proud to be a member; the Certified Management Accountants of Alberta, of which I'm proud to be a member; and the Certified General Accountants' Association of Alberta – are on the same page with this legislation. Imagine getting three boards and three groups of professionals, staff, committees, et cetera, on the same page.

This task was performed by the unification agency, led by Mr. John Carpenter, FCGA, CEO of the agency. I'd like to thank Mr. Carpenter, his staff, and the board of the agency, led by Greg Draper, CGA; Ruth McHugh, FCMA; and, recently, Curtis Palichuk, FCA. Madam Speaker, Mr. Carpenter will be retiring December 31. I'd like to thank him for his work. It's anticipated that Rachel Miller, FCA, presently the CEO of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta, will take over as CEO of CPA Alberta.

Madam Speaker, accountants are a regulated profession in the province of Alberta. As such, they're responsible for protection of the public interest, protection of the profession, ethical and professional conduct, licensing, levels of competency, education, standard setting, continuing professional development, discipline, regulation, advocacy, practice review, and scope of practice, to name a few.

Madam Speaker, this bill sets forth the framework for a pathway for the professions to come together. There are aspects of the responsibilities of the accounting profession that must still be met and will continue, in fact, for some time. I'm confident that that will happen, that accountants in Alberta will continue to move forward to be leaders in the accounting profession in Canada.

I'll be supporting this bill, Madam Speaker, and highly encourage all of my colleagues to do the same. Thanks very much.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour to close the debate.

Mr. McIver: I'd just like to say thank you to my hon. colleagues, the members of the three accounting bodies that have asked to become one, and, of course, the tremendous staff at Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour, that tried to work collaboratively with all the different accountants across Alberta.

I invite all of my hon. colleagues to support what I think is a collaborative effort that is intended to make things better.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 7 read a second time]

Bill 8 Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014

[Adjourned debate December 1: Ms Kennedy-Glans]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's an honour to rise again in support of the Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014. As we discussed last night, this piece of legislation is very heavy because it amends so many pieces of legislation: the Court of Queen's Bench Act, the Estate Administration Act, the Family Law Act, the Limitations Act, the Notaries and Commissioners Act, the Oaths of Office Act, the Perpetuities Act, the Provincial Court Act, the Wills and Succession Act, and housekeeping matters with a few other acts.

I very much appreciate the support of all the colleagues in this room who have become pseudo-lawyers in an attempt to understand all the amendments to this legislation. I appreciate the support of lawyers and judges across Alberta. Making lawyers and judges happy across Alberta is our goal, and I am so grateful for your support in that work. So back to you, colleagues.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members who wish to speak on Bill 8, Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'll keep my comments fairly short here. We understand that the purpose of this bill is general housekeeping in regard to language used in legislation, to make necessary clarifications or coming-into-force dates. We're in support of that because of the modernization of our legislation. We also support changes which address unintended problems or confusion caused by past legislation, and we want to ensure that we have the best quality legislation in this House.

The concern is that some of the changes introduced in the legislation are more substantial than housekeeping, which, again, tends to be the pattern that this government has followed. We'd like to focus on the Court of Queen's Bench Act and the Provincial Court Act as the proposed amendments do nothing to address the serious issue of access to justice in Alberta. We're concerned about access to justice and legal aid in two different regards, one, because this PC government has constantly underfunded legal aid; and, secondly, because many of the most vulnerable Albertans don't qualify for legal aid.

As an example, Madam Speaker, an Albertan working a full-time job, making minimum wage is not eligible for legal aid because they make too much money. An Albertan receiving assured income for the severely handicapped, or AISH, is not eligible for legal aid. When it comes to access to justice, legal aid is extremely important, and unfortunately, there are too many people that simply don't qualify for legal aid and to therefore get representation in our justice system.

This legislation and the fact that many Albertans can't access legal aid is not only having an impact on those who can't afford representation, but it's having an impact as well on the court system, Madam Speaker. Again, I can go through – I'll save the specifics, but there are many examples where this PC government has chosen not to adequately fund legal aid.

We've been advocates for better access to justice. You know, the announcement by the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General in the fall of a one-time transfer to legal aid is not sufficient. There has been a major shortfall in funding, and we're predicting a need for about $8 million a year because legal aid will have a deficit of $15 million by 2016-2017, and they're going to have to either cut their services, reduce their services, or cut jobs. As a result, we're going to have more Albertans unable to access legal aid, Madam Speaker.

I'm just trying to move through some of my notes here, Madam Speaker. You know, in the Speech from the Throne this government made commitments to use taxpayers' dollars wisely and to achieve the best possible outcomes for money spent. Now, the government could have done this had they improved access to justice in Bill 8 and increased funding to legal aid.

Countless studies in countless jurisdictions consistently show the benefits and the savings that result in investment in legal aid. I'll give you a couple of examples, Madam Speaker. In the United States a 2007 study on Nebraska estimated the total benefit of legal aid at $13.5 million whereas the cost was only $3.4 million. Benefits included benefits awarded to litigants, benefits in cost saving to improve the quality of life, tax savings, and increased economic opportunity. In Texas for every dollar spent on legal aid there was $7.42 in annual gains to the economy; a $3.56 gain in output, or gross product; and a $2.20 increase in personal income. And there are examples from Australia, from the U.K., and from New York as well that outline the benefits to investing in legal aid.

So it's very clear. Studies show time and time again that when we increase investment in legal aid, there is a net benefit not just for the recipients but for all Albertans. Madam Speaker, we support the modernization of legislation and understand the need for housekeeping legislation done through bills such as this one, but we want the best quality of legislation for Albertans. Again, we have concerns with the fact that the issue of legal aid is not being addressed.

Therefore, we will support Bill 8 reluctantly and, again, would very much like to see improvements to legal aid. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, I've been asked to request unanimous consent to revert to introductions.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Madam Speaker. We have amongst us the 152nd Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, who parade at Headway School in my area. I was proud just now to meet them and have a selfie taken as well as a formal picture. I wonder if they could all stand with their leaders, please, and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014 (continued)

The Acting Speaker: Reverting back to second reading of Bill 8, Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014, are there any other members who wish to speak on Bill 8 in second reading? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: I'll be quick. Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's a pleasure to speak to Bill 8. It's a great honour. Most of Bill 8 is housekeeping amendments. The main changes are in regard to the Family Law Act although much of Bill 8 is to make Alberta legislation consistent with the most recent versions of the Alberta Rules of Court, which were updated in the last five years.

At first glance, Madam Speaker, Bill 8 looks to be procedural in nature, with the proposed amendments to the Court of Queen's Bench Act, the Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, the Estate Administration Act, the Limitations Act, the Notaries and Commissioners Act, the Oaths of Office Act, the Perpetuities Act, the Provincial Court Act, and the Wills and Succession Act. Over half of the bill is supposed to relate to the Alberta Rules of Court and making the laws consistent with it. For example, Bill 8 proposes changing the use of the words from "with leave" to "with the permission."

As referenced earlier, the main changes in Bill 8 are within the Family Law Act, Madam Speaker. The government bills this as an access to justice initiative, and this involves four changes related to the child support recalculation program, keeping in mind, however, that this is different but related to the maintenance enforcement program, which is akin to a collection agency. The child support recalculation program assists parents with child support orders to comply with their legal obligation to regularly adjust their child support to reflect changes in income without going to court.

The government states that these amendments to the Family Law Act will increase program efficiency. This is akin to a diversion program so that fewer cases are heard by Alberta judges. In the case of adjusting child support orders to reflect income changes, this does help further the idea of reducing the burden on our courts, Madam Speaker.

Most of Bill 8 is housekeeping amendments. The main changes are in regard to the Family Law Act although much of the bill is to make legislation consistent with the Alberta Rules of Court. These are some of the housekeeping amendments this bill is trying to do, Madam Speaker. It's just a housekeeping bill. I think it will help to take the load off the courts and maybe will help speed things up.

With those comments, I'll be supporting the bill, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a). Any questions or comments?

Seeing none, are there any members who wish to speak in second reading on Bill 8?

Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker: The question has been called.

I would ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to close debate.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and thank you to my colleagues for your support on this bill. I'd also like to thank all the lawyers and judges in Alberta who contributed to improving these pieces of legislation: the Canadian Bar Association, the Law Society of Alberta, the Law Reform Institute here in Alberta, and the Chief Justice of the Provincial Court.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 8 read a second time]

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Statutes Amendment Act, 2014 (No. 2)

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and move third reading of Bill 6, the Statutes Amendment Act, 2014 (No.2).

As stated earlier, this bill includes amendments to a number of acts that are the responsibility of three different government ministries. Those ministries are Agriculture and Rural Development; Municipal Affairs; Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour. The affected legislation includes the Safety Codes Act, the Workers' Compensation Act, the Farm Implement Act, the Farm Implement Dealerships Act, and the Dairy Industry Omnibus Act, 2002. These amendments will bring greater clarity, streamline processes, and ensure that the acts are aligned with other legislation to enable greater consistency and effectiveness in providing services to Albertans.

In closing, Bill 6 incorporates a number of changes that will ensure legislation is working as efficiently and effectively as possible. I'd like to thank all members who have contributed, and I encourage them to join me in supporting this bill.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other members who wish to speak in third reading on Bill 6? Oh, yes. There you go, blending in again, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. Sorry.

Mr. Eggen: It's okay. It's fine. Certainly, we don't ignore each other on the street, so we certainly don't ignore each other here either.

I just once again wanted to express that we spoke on this at great length at a different stage of this debate. Certainly, most of the sections of this bill are entirely innocuous and quite useful, right? It's just that, put together with that WCB provision, you know, that makes it impossible for us to vote for this.

Once again, if I could just put it on the record that any version of an omnibus bill really is not welcome here in this Legislature. We should refrain from doing so. If we want to make miscellaneous statutes legislation, then we can get together and agree on that and make things move a lot faster and more expeditiously.

That's all I have to say. Thanks.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on third reading of Bill 6?

Seeing none, would the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development please close debate.

Mr. Olson: I'd like to call the question, please, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The question has been called.

[Motion carried; Bill 6 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Given that we've made excellent progress, I move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 7:52 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, let us pray. May we give thanks for the bounty of our province, including our land, our resources, our friends and neighbours, and all those whom we serve. Let us also pledge ourselves to act as good stewards on behalf of Albertans. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much. Edmonton-Mill Creek is an interesting place. Many great people come from your constituency, Mr. Speaker, but one that shines out to me is my wife, Breanna, who is sitting in your gallery today. She is a graduate of J.H. Picard high school in Edmonton as well as NAIT. In addition to her career pursuits, she is currently pursuing a master's degree at Royal Roads University. I had the privilege of meeting her about four years ago in Calgary. She's obviously here to see the proceedings today. I want to say thank you very much to her for putting up with the long hours of this job and thank her for being such an amazing person.

The Speaker: Thank you, and welcome.

Let us move on to school groups, starting with Edmonton-Manning, followed by Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure to introduce to you and through you 53 students from Edmonton Christian school northeast, located in my constituency of Edmonton-Manning. They are accompanied by their teachers, Miss Elaine Junk and Mr. Greg Gurnett, teaching associate Geri Kingma, and five parent helpers. These young and bright students are the future leaders of our province and country. They are seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask all my guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Young: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's truly an honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you 37 visitors from Crestwood elementary-junior high school. I had a chance to meet with these students earlier today, and they asked some really tough questions. They are joined today by teacher Trina Ludwig and parents Erin Nelson and Alexia Tsigozis. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to all members 38 visitors from Westbrook elementary school, an exceptional school in Edmonton. They are seated in both the public and private galleries. I know that this particular group of students is going to be listening very carefully today to what they hear in question period, and I know my colleagues in the House will not disappoint them. I'd ask them all to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there any other school groups?

If not, let's move on to other important guests, starting with Edmonton-South West, followed by Medicine Hat.

Mr. Jeneroux: Great. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I continue to be impressed with the number of students who have decided to visit me – I mean us – here. Today I have in attendance two ladies from the University of Alberta. I'm very pleased to introduce Tristen Runzer and Melissa Nilsson. I ask them to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat, followed by Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure, as always, to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Navneet Khinda and Beverly Eastham. Navneet and Beverly are no strangers to my fellow members, and they are here today to represent over 100,000 postsecondary students and ensure that there is stable, predictable, and sustainable funding for all Alberta's postsecondary institutions. I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition, followed by Calgary-Hawkwood.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Mr. Sukhdev Aujla and Patricia MacGarvie. Mr. Aujla was a practising High Court lawyer turned corrections officer in Canada, and he served the Alberta Solicitor General's branch for 31 years. He's a successful businessman and a community leader. He's here to get a taste of what it's like to work in the Legislature as he prepares his run to serve in the Parliament of Canada as a federal Liberal candidate for Edmonton-Manning. Patricia is Mr. Aujla's campaign manager as well as a current riding president for Edmonton-Manning. I'd like to thank Sukhdev and Patricia for their service to our province and ask them to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood, followed by Drumheller-Stettler.

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of our Assembly my fabulous constituency assistant, Maria Somers. She is sitting in the members' gallery. I'd ask her to stand as I introduce her. She's been with me since day one, when I became an MLA. One phrase we go back and forth with all the time is that when I say to her, "Maria, when we have a slower time, we'll do this," she says: "Jason, I don't believe you anymore. Since I joined you, there's never been a slow time." So that goes to show how hard she works with us. I ask my colleagues in this House to help me give her a round of applause and the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly my wonderful constituency assistant, Laura McDonald, who serves the people in and around the town of Hanna. Without her I would be lost. Could she please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour again to introduce Mr. Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop, who have come here at their own expense as the Farmworkers Union, demonstrating and challenging the lack of political will to extend constitutional rights to the people who feed us and consistent with law professor Jennifer Koshan, who cites several Charter violations in Alberta: freedom to associate, security of person, and equality before the law. I'll ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by Calgary-East.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Legislature a good friend of mine who's visiting the Legislature for the first time, Ms Diane Edison. While Diane originally hails from Newfoundland, she decided to make the trek out and make the second-largest city of Newfoundland, Fort McMurray, her home. She is the community affairs and public relations manager right now for the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Conklin. She is seated in the visitors' gallery, and I'd ask that she rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three visitors, three good friends, all the way from Lebanon. We have Dr. Abdallah Al Tassi, Dr. Khaled Smaili, Dr. Jihad Hamdan, and a dear friend of mine from the great city of Calgary, Mr. Akram Idriss. The three fine doctors have visited five Canadian cities: London, Ontario; Windsor, Winnipeg, Calgary, and Edmonton. They are here promoting their charitable work. They are in the gallery, and I see they have risen. I would like to ask all members to give them the traditional warm welcome.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: We have two minutes each for these. Let us begin with the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care System

Ms Smith: Since this session started, we've talked a lot about the problems in our health care system. We've talked at length about hospital maintenance and infrastructure spending, about long-term nursing care beds and chronic disease management. Albertans are deeply dissatisfied with how this government has handled health care. It is Albertans' top issue, and it is an issue that this government gets its worst ratings on. Health care is the largest part of our provincial budget, and given that "belt-tightening" is the Premier's new favourite word, getting health care right is essential.

Everything we've talked about for the last three weeks can be traced to the fact that this government is centred on a hospital-based model of health care. Hospitals are critically important – no one denies that – but the more health care we can provide out of our hospitals, the better the system will run, and by better I mean better health outcomes for patients and better efficiencies for taxpayers. Mr. Speaker, this government needs to understand that getting seniors into real long-term care nursing beds and out of acute-care beds will make our hospitals better. This government needs to understand that moving chronic disease management out of hospitals and into primary care networks, with family doctors, pharmacists, and other professionals working together, will make our hospitals better.

I was dismayed to read that the Health minister thinks that Alberta Health Services should own improving the chronic disease management system. The Auditor General rightly notes that improving chronic disease management should be in the Health ministry because the key players – family doctors and the teams of professionals who can help those afflicted with chronic diseases – are not paid for by AHS.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes when I listen to this government, it sounds like they want to make AHS a parallel Health ministry, one they can repudiate when they need to for political reasons or pressure into decisions when it's politically expedient. This government will never make improvements in the health system unless and until it figures out where the Health ministry begins and where AHS begins and ends. This model we currently have doesn't work, and the government does not have any willingness to admit it.

Government Effectiveness

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, the following phrases have been in far too many media reports this week: lack of transparency, subject to manipulation, crumbling, leaky, mouldy, unreliable. Most of these were references to the critical condition of Alberta's hospitals, but they could just as easily be referencing the current state of this PC government.

According to a recent poll Albertans continue to rank health care as their top priority. At the same time they acknowledge that this PC government is not that good at providing, administering, or supporting health care services. But why would they be? The critical condition of Alberta's hospital infrastructure bears a striking resemblance to this PC government. The government, whether the new management, the old new management, or the old old management, continues to play politics with the needs and well-being of the people it was elected to represent, just as it plays politics with school modulars and hospital infrastructure funding. This four-decade-old PC government dynasty has reached the same critical milestone as two-thirds of Alberta's hospitals, clearly past their best-before date.

In the construction business professionals operate on the assumption that even with regular maintenance buildings will need a major overhaul or sometimes outright replacement right around the 40-year mark. It's at 40 years that the risk of breakdown gets higher and higher and maintenance costs rise out of control. Mr. Speaker, does this sound familiar?

For more than 40 years this province has been ruled by one PC government or another. Today's PC government is one of the most secretive in the country. Its broken promises and outright neglect of the things that matter most to Albertans are so extensive that this government's foundation is crumbling. This province has seen five Premiers in nine years, with each one's term shorter than the last. Albertans can no longer rely on this government, just as they are increasingly skeptical that their hospitals are safe and sound.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West, followed by Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Child Care and Schools

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Coming from the new and growing constituency of Edmonton-South West, I speak every day with young families, parents with small children, and people new to the workforce. As a parent of two young girls myself, their concerns and aspirations resonate with me.

With young children you constantly worry about the schools they go to, the communities they play and socialize in, the care they receive from professionals, and, most importantly, their well-being. It can be difficult when schools and child care services are in high demand and short supply, as is the case now in Edmonton-South West. To an extent it's also the case across the province, Mr. Speaker.

Edmonton-South West is a perfect microcosm of the situation in Alberta with its growing population and increasing demand for schools and supports for families raising children. Innovation counts the most at times like these, and I'm happy to say that my daughters' school serves as a great model for how we might tackle this issue. Their school also houses a daycare program, run by the YMCA, meaning they do not have to change locations at the end of the school day. They also have a health clinic on-site, which does wonders to ease the strain on a parent. Besides this, it is also a great, innovative way of applying multiple-use facilities. It'd be great if we could apply this model more broadly. We could help parents like myself as well as our budgets.

Like I said, Mr. Speaker, my constituency of Edmonton-South West is a perfect test case for this type of system, and it works remarkably well. As our communities grow and continue to attract new families, we're going to have to find new ways of fulfilling their needs and the needs of their children. This means more schools and more child care supports. Preferably, we can do this in innovative and efficient ways, which will also strengthen our communities as a result. Our children should be front and centre in every decision we make here. Let us never forget that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, followed by Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Charity at Christmas

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Christmas season has started, and for many of us it is a time for our families to come together, exchange presents, and eat lots of great food. However, for some Albertans Christmastime is a time of depression, loss of family, and crisis. There are many Albertans who rely on the help of others, including shelters and food banks, to make it through the winter. I would like to say thank you to each and every one of them for all of the individuals and the organizations who help those in need in our province, and they do it with a smile.

Inn from the Cold is a great example of this kind of charitable work. They provide emergency shelter, support, and programs to homeless children, their families, and others in need. They have a goal of building healthy, stable families and ending homelessness. Inn from the Cold is the only shelter program in Alberta that houses families. At over 60 locations their kindness provides a hot dinner, fellowship, breakfast, a bag lunch, and a safe place to stay. Let's not forget the great work of our Alberta food banks. They are kind and compassionate and help those who are hungry by either providing a meal or a care package with a week's worth or more of food.

We can all take a look at our communities and see how we can make a personal difference to someone. This past weekend 21 of us got together and made 36 baskets of hope for the central Alberta women's shelter. These baskets will bring a moment of joy to women fleeing domestic violence and will show them that we support their courage. We all have a special role to play in sharing our kindness and ensuring that those less fortunate than us have a positive experience during what can be a very depressing time of year.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage everyone this holiday season to spend some time with their families but to go and serve dinner at the drop-in, donate a toy, or just give someone a hug. Let's all stop and reflect at this time of year. It's not all about politics; sometimes it's mostly just about people.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky, followed by Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

International Day of Persons with Disabilities

Mr. McDonald: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to join the millions of people around the world who are recognizing the International Day of Persons with Disabilities. This annual event is a great opportunity to highlight and learn how Albertans with disabilities contribute to our province. It's also an important time for increasing awareness and understanding of people with disabilities. Communities all over Alberta are holding events to celebrate the valuable contributions of Albertans with disabilities.

I'm also pleased that several Albertans are being recognized with awards today for their outstanding leadership in helping to increase opportunities for people with disabilities and to promote inclusive schools, workplaces, and communities.

Mr. Speaker, our province is one that not only promotes but embraces inclusion, so this is a day that we must also embrace. I wholeheartedly encourage all of the members of the Assembly to take a moment today to show your support for the thousands of people with disabilities living in our communities. Let's remember to make inclusion a part of everyday Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

1:50

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, you're reminded: 35 seconds maximum for the question and 35 seconds maximum for the answer.

Let us begin with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Hospital Infrastructure Evaluations

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, political manipulation between Alberta Health Services and the Health ministry officials is rampant. Recent reports make it clear that objective evaluations of hospital maintenance priorities are ignored and facility condition scores are routinely lowered for hospitals in government ridings in order to move them up the priority list. Does the Health minister understand that playing politics with hospitals threatens the lives and safety of Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What the member has said I categorically disagree with. But to make sure, what we will do is ensure that in any report where a consultant's view is disagreed with by Alberta Health or Alberta Infrastructure, the revised document with reasons for why the decision is disagreed with must be posted online. We'll start doing that tomorrow.

Ms Smith: Well, I look forward to that, Mr. Speaker, but freedom of information requests are pretty clear about the problems.

Everything about the process of evaluating hospitals is a mess. AHS brings in outside engineers and architects to evaluate hospitals but frequently rejects the reports. Even when reports are accepted, Alberta Infrastructure edits them before they're made public. The reports are used to create a facility condition index score that determines their priority, but then these are inexplicably changed up and down without new studies being done. Will the minister please explain how a hospital's priority can shift when no work has been done?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, once again a lot of what the member has said I completely disagree with. There are reasons for changes to reports. Some of them could be, for example, that a consultant could perhaps not get into some areas of a hospital during their review such as an operating room that is in use virtually all the time. In those cases Alberta Health Services provides additional information that then changes the report.

Now, what I am committing to is to ensure that that work is done collaboratively beforehand so that the document that goes out is something that everybody has seen . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Smith: Well, there is another explanation, Mr. Speaker, and that's the obvious one, political manipulation.

The government avoids publishing individual hospital condition scores. Instead, they aggregate scores and publish those numbers in their annual report. The latest report says that 75 per cent of Alberta's health infrastructure is in good shape. That percentage appears to be among the best the ministry has had for a while, but as the Edmonton Journal noted: "That isn't because the government has done a lot of repair work. It just changed the way it adds things up." Will the minister admit that manipulating the data on hospital maintenance does not fix the problems?

Mr. Bhullar: Well, Mr. Speaker, if we're on the subject of manipulation, I think there's a lot going on over there.

Regardless, the fact remains that when you're taking in the condition of a building, Mr. Speaker, you must take into account things like the size of the building. Why? Because you need to be able to determine the replacement cost of the building. It just makes sense. The replacement cost of a building is something you must take into consideration when looking at the amount of maintenance that is required for that specific facility.

The Speaker: Second main set of questions. The hon. leader.

Health System Concerns

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, when it comes to managing health care, the new management is the same as the old management, and that's no surprise because they are, after all, the same managers. The Infrastructure minister keeps telling us that AHS decides which projects get funded. We're pretty sure that's not true. Reports show that last year only one of 10 AHS-recommended projects was actually funded by this government. Either the reports are wrong, or the Infrastructure minister misspoke. Which is it?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, as I've said before, when it comes to the maintenance projects of health facilities, those are decisions that Alberta Health Services makes. They must account to us, they must report to us, and we must work collaboratively on them, but the prioritization of the maintenance and repair projects is something that Alberta Health Services does.

Ms Smith: It still doesn't explain why they only approved one of the 10 recommended priorities from AHS.

This government, though, also can't manage chronic diseases. The Auditor General recently pointed out that six-year-old recommendations on how to improve chronic care management have not been acted upon. Public Accounts heard about this issue yesterday. All the experts agree that there can be savings and quality-of-life improvements if we just had some leadership. To the Health minister: what will this government do to improve chronic disease management?

The Speaker: The hon. minister of the environment.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm wearing a slightly different hat today. The Auditor General rightly pointed out that chronic disease management is best managed through primary care and family physicians, with referral to these specialists as needed. That's the responsibility of AHS, and it's an essential part of the picture but not the whole thing. You know, our government supports PCNs as a medical home for each patient to focus on managing these chronic diseases.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the experts all agree that the key to chronic disease management is a robust, easy-to-access, integrated electronic medical records system. We don't have that. The Member for Edmonton-Riverview summed up the situation the best. He said that the government spent $300 million . . . and really got nothing more than electronic isolated file systems . . . We went down this road without any kind of data exchange standards . . . it [just] blows my mind.

Well, it blows my mind, too. How does the Health minister justify wasting $300 million dollars?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, as the Auditor General indicated, strong medical health records and information records are critical for chronic disease management. I know that in conversations with the Health minister this is a focus for him, and he's going to move on those recommendations by the Auditor General.

The Speaker: Third, and final, main set of questions.

PDD Supports Intensity Scale

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, today is the International Day of Persons with Disabilities. We celebrate individuals with physical and mental disabilities and the many organizations that make their lives better. To the Minister of Human Services. The supports intensity scale is used to assess what supports people need who have disabilities. The problem is that it's humiliating. The questions they must answer during the interview are intrusive, insensitive, and degrading. Why is the supports intensity scale still in use?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government is focused on ensuring that all Albertans have the best quality of life. The supports intensity scale is one of the tools which is used to assess what supports an individual needs to be successful. In terms of some uncomfortable questions this summer we toured the province. We had conversations with Albertans, we had conversations with people who are receiving these services, we had conversations with service providers, and we are doing everything we can to accommodate them without losing the integrity of the tool.

Ms Smith: Actually, Mr. Speaker, it's the only tool they use.

Just to remind the minister, here are some of the questions individuals are asked in their SIS interview. What assistance would you need to have a romantic relationship up to and including an intimate one like other regular people? If you were a regular 28-year-old woman who wanted to take a course, would you need help? Did you ever expose yourself inappropriately? Do you steal? Mr. Speaker, these questions are demeaning and discriminatory. Can't this government assess the needs of Albertans with disabilities without comparing them to regular people?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is wrong. That is not the only tool which is used. That's one of the tools which is used to assess. The natural supports for the individuals play a role. The needs, the goals, and aspirations of the individual play a role. Of course, this is an internationally renowned tool, which is used in 13 different countries. For the first time, probably, in the history of the province people are getting consistent services right across the province.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, in last year's budget this government slashed $42 million from PDD. The cuts threatened programs that bring developmentally disabled Albertans out of their homes and into their communities to socialize and volunteer. That is equal to about one-tenth of what they've wasted to build the sky palace and new MLA offices in the federal building. This government's record on supporting individuals with disabilities is dismal. On this International Day of Persons with Disabilities as a goodwill gesture will the minister finally abandon the demeaning supports intensity scale?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government is absolutely committed to making sure that every single Albertan enjoys the best quality of life. Using an internationally renowned tool to assess the needs of the individuals – their needs, their goals, their aspirations – and support them to lead successful and meaningful lives: that's what this government is committed to.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

2:00 Child Death Investigation Process

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The resignation in frustration of Dr. Lionel Dibden as chair of the council for quality assurance is disturbing. The council reviews problems in the child intervention services, especially since the death review last year. He cites a lack of commitment to thorough and transparent internal investigations of all serious injuries and deaths in care to enable real improvements in Human Services. This highlights the ongoing dysfunction in Human Services one year after the minister committed to a full review and fixing the secrecy and shame around children suffering and dying in government custody. To the minister: why is this expert council not free to address child health and safety concerns, and why don't you follow its advice?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, the safety and well-being of children remains a priority for this government. I would like to thank Dr. Dibden for his service and all of his work over these last couple of years. I expect the council to work collaboratively with each other, with ministry staff to solve these problems. I know that Dr. Dibden has expressed concerns. I have as well. When I did meet with the council, I asked exactly what some of the priorities were. We had a great discussion. Today I'm going to be tabling letters I sent to the council outlining the clear expectations of priorities moving forward.

Dr. Swann: Decades of cover-up, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Sauvageau, the former Chief Medical Examiner, recently criticized the Justice department for interfering in death investigations, a shocking allegation that the Justice minister never denied. Dr. Sauvageau has since been let go; also disturbing. Interfering in death investigations in any other jurisdiction would cause outrage and demands for a full investigation, but not in Alberta. To the Human Services minister: what have you done to address the concerns of Dr. Sauvageau about Justice ministry interference in child death investigations?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With respect to this member I reject the premise of this question. It is correct that Dr. Sauvageau's contract was not renewed. I looked in our department, I've had many meetings, and I've yet to find any information that would even warrant an investigation about any interference by my department.

Dr. Swann: Well, that leads me to the next question, then, Mr. Speaker. Can you table the results of your investigations around the allegations of Dr. Sauvageau, and if not, why not?

Mr. Denis: I again reject the premise of that hon. member's question, Mr. Speaker. As I've indicated before, we have not seen anything that would actually lead towards an investigation, that would need an investigation. There has been no investigation, and no investigation is warranted.

Ms Notley: Yesterday we learned about the dire straits of Edmonton's health infrastructure through reluctantly released FOIP documents. Today we learned that information the government does voluntarily release is misleading and disconnected from real infrastructure priorities. Albertans deserve the truth about their health infrastructure, so today I asked the Auditor General to review and report on how these decisions are being made and how they can be made better. To the Premier: will he join me in this request, and if not, why not?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I've said before, I have made a commitment that every single report on our health facilities that is completed needs to be made publicly available. If there are any changes to that report on account of Alberta Health Services or Alberta Infrastructure, the reasoning for those changes, the reasoning for any changes in the rating of a facility must be provided and made publicly available, and we're going to start doing that as soon as tomorrow.

Ms Notley: It's a little late, 40 years overdue.

This government has clearly been playing politics with the health of Albertans by manipulating objective records of need. When it comes to the Ministry of Infrastructure's overall rating system, the information published appears to have a very distant relationship with the truth. To the Premier: after decades of neglect and now in the face of this misinformation why should Albertans trust you to build a snow fort let alone something as important as our hospitals?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, I think I need to remind the member that I am only 34 years of age.

You know what? The fact remains, Mr. Speaker, that of all capital spending in this country it's the Alberta government that is investing the most amount of capital to build the infrastructure we need in this province: the schools, the hospitals, the roads. We're investing to make sure Albertans have the best quality of life today and for years to come.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, of 18 rural hospitals that had their status arbitrarily changed in order to increase their priority, 14 are in ridings held by PC MLAs, and four are in ridings that PCs lost by less than a thousand votes. It seems that when it comes to infrastructure needs, the government is willing to either dial it up or dial it down to suit the political purpose of the day. To the Premier: don't you think Albertans deserve to have their health care needs put ahead of the government's own political objectives, and if so, why not just start doing that?

Mr. Bhullar: Once again, Mr. Speaker, I absolutely disagree with the premise of that question. You know, it's very simple and very easy for members of the opposition to read articles in the newspaper and then quote them in question period, but I would ask them to bring forward facts. I, on the other hand, am willing to make every one of those reports public so the public can know why anything was changed, so the public will understand why ratings were changed. On a go-forward basis we will ensure that any report that has disagreement in it is made public.

The Speaker: Thank you.

From this point onward please curtail or preferably eliminate any preambles so that more members can be recognized for their questions. Let's see how this works.

Alberta Land Stewardship Act

Mr. Barnes: Earlier this session I questioned the minister of environment on Bill 36 and how it diminishes the rights and property values of Albertans. He said that Bill 36 is a fair piece of legislation and will not be repealed. This despite the fact that Bill 36 blocks a landowner's rights to access the court when the government runs roughshod. To the minister. Let's take this one important step at a time. Will you repeal section 13(1) of Bill 36, that prevents landowners from having access to the courts, and if not, why not?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, the regional plans that are developed under the Alberta Land Stewardship Act do not change or alter property rights or freehold mineral rights in Alberta. The Alberta Land Stewardship Act contains a clear statement that government must respect the property rights of individuals, and it continues to have in place the existing rights to compensation under the Water Act, the Public Lands Act, and the Mines and Minerals Act.

Mr. Barnes: It clearly says: no access to the courts.

Given that the environment minister clearly stated, "We will not repeal Bill 36," and considering that he believes that Bill 1 is a saving grace for this government on property rights, will the minister now be brave enough to steal more policies from the Wildrose by admitting the faults of Bill 36 and repeal section 15(3)(b), which prevents a claim being exercised by an Albertan, and if not, why not?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, Alberta is committed to responsible development of energy, and part of that is the land-use framework that was put in place by legislation that was passed by this Legislature a few years ago. We're committed to that legislation. I would suggest, if the member has any examples of individuals that have lost their property rights through this piece of legislation, bringing them forward to my office.

Mr. Barnes: Seventeen Wildrose MLAs are why we don't have any examples of that.

Given that the most controversial and devious section of Bill 36 is 17(4), which outlines, "If there is a conflict or inconsistency between [the Land Stewardship] Act and any other enactment, this Act prevails," essentially giving Bill 36 the ability to trump all other acts and extinguish property rights, will the minister do the right thing by property owners and repeal section 17(4), and if not, why not?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, I thought that was a puffball for a second. We won't go into the math there.

Again, this government is committed to being responsible developers of our energy and natural resource stewards. This province is growing. There are competing demands on our landscape for residential, growing communities, oil and gas development, forestry, agriculture, and we needed this piece of legislation to go in and provide some thoughtful planning about how we manage that because the landscape in this province isn't growing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by Calgary-Fish Creek.

Elk Population

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Elk herds are increasingly becoming a nuisance, as my colleague from Cypress-Medicine Hat articulated earlier. However, I believe it's all over Alberta and affects all Alberta farmers, east, west, south, and north. Environment and Sustainable Resource Development has determined that no elk are to be killed even though the population has reached levels that are impacting farmers' livelihoods. To the Minister of ESRD: what methods and studies are being used to determine what a manageable and sustainable population would be for the elk herds?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, what we do in our department is determine how many elk there are and start to look at the growth rates and mortality rates of the population. We do aerial surveys that help us do that as well, and models are created to look at the growth of that. Then the department makes decisions around what is a sustainable number and what is needed to be put in place to ensure that that number stays at that level. We understand that there are some problems. I've asked my department to go away and look and come back to me with a plan to deal with this issue.

Ms Calahasen: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: given that we have imported elk to the north and we can't obviously seem to put a plan in place to address this issue, what initiatives are under way to revise how hunting licences can be issued to farmers to cull the herds?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My department has decided at this point in time, as we continue to do work on what a sustainable population of elk looks like in this particular area, to increase the number of licences for hunting. I've asked my department to go and look at what a longer term plan is and if there are any additional strategies that might be needed, but the point is to try to get to what that number is and get a plan out there and monitor that plan over a number of years. In 2013 there were 41,331 elk licences sold in Alberta, and if you want a licence, you can go to mywildalberta.com to get one.

The Speaker: Thank you.
Final supplemental.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister for that. I love the fact we have a strategy, and I would like to ask of the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: if ESRD can't seem to cull the herd, as we would like to see happen, what can your department do to help the farmers in addressing this issue?

The Speaker: The hon. minister responsible for Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the member for the question. There is actually a program in place, and it is funded jointly by the federal government and our government. It's called the wildlife damage compensation program, and it's administered by Agriculture Financial Services Corporation, and it's one that has no cost other than a $25 fee per section. That's just an appraisal fee. There is no administrative cost or premium to pay. So that program is in operation. Some might argue that it should cover more things, but that's something that we continually monitor.

The Speaker: Thank you.
The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by Calgary-Lougheed.

Hospital Safety Issues

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday AHS finally released details of the major infrastructure concerns at hospitals in and around Edmonton: at the Mis, frequent sewage leaks in the OR and failing electrical centres, putting patients at risk; at the Stollery, significant safety, infection prevention, and privacy issues in the ICU; at the Glenrose, significant safety risks for children with mental health issues. To the Minister of Infrastructure: how can you say that the safety of patients and staff is not at risk when AHS says that it's clearly happening?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta government and AHS obviously put the safety and well-being of patients first and foremost. Alberta has a very large number of hospitals, nearly a hundred, and, yes, some of those hospitals are aging. At the same time Alberta has a very rapidly growing population, and the need for new infrastructure has been very, very robust. As a result, we have to make very strong investments in capital, and that's what we're doing on this side of the Assembly, and I hope the members opposite will support our capital budget.

Mrs. Forsyth: Minister, these aren't new problems. Come on.

Given that the Alberta Hospital, a mental health facility, says that a lack of alarms creates higher levels of risk for staff and visitors and that patient crowding and buildings without sprinklers create significant safety issues, again, Minister, can you please tell me how you don't think patient and staff safety is not at risk when your own AHS says that it is?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, once again, we have made a very strong commitment to ensuring that the province of Alberta catches up on deferred maintenance. Our Premier has been very clear about that. He's been saying that long before media articles. He's been saying that long before members opposite decided to pick up the paper and talk about this issue. So it's something he's committed to. It's something we've committed to, and we will ensure that we're investing in capital, that we're investing in infrastructure to make sure Albertans have the best services at their disposal.

Mrs. Forsyth: Minister, we've been asking these questions since 2010. Ask the Minister of Mice about that.

Given that these AHS documents show this government and this minister were not forthcoming with Albertans about the significant risk to patient safety at Edmonton area hospitals, will the minister now admit that the same patient safety concerns are prevalent in hospitals in Wainwright, St. Paul, Bonnyville, Brooks, Sundre, and Calgary? And we can go on and on.

Mr. Bhullar: It's interesting to hear, Mr. Speaker, that the 17 – oh, I'm sorry – 14 people have been discussing these issues for some time because they are also the individuals that often object to our raising money for capital spending. When we, in fact, believe that we need to invest very heavily in capital, they are the same individuals that say no in many, many cases. They think that we're building too much infrastructure when it comes to schools and that some of our schools, in fact, are not needed. We're very clear when it comes to our infrastructure spending. We're growing – Alberta is robust – and we're going to continue to invest in infrastructure.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by Calgary-McCall.

Southwest Calgary Ring Road

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It has taken some time, but great progress has been made on the Calgary ring road. The project is and will continue to be vital to the livelihood and quality of life of an untold number of Calgarians and Albertans. It will lessen congestion on many of the arterial roads of the interior city and make transportation safer for everyone. To the Minister of Transportation. It's fantastic that we finally have an agreement on the Calgary southwest ring road, but the current stumbling block is the approval of the federal government. What can you tell my constituents and all Albertans about when the official federal approval will occur and we can finally get this road built?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, we're committed to completing the Calgary ring road. It's part of the infrastructure needed to move goods and people safely across this province, and our growing economy and population depend on it. We expect the federal government will transfer the lands from the Tsuu T'ina Nation to the government of Alberta in 2015. At that time we'll proceed with the project pending Treasury Board approval.

Mr. Rodney: To the same minister. This project has great potential for every community connected to it, but many of my constituents are concerned about whether or not they will actually have easy access onto the southwest ring road. Can you assure them that they will have access to the east and west from the south end of 24th Street S.W. as well as access to the north from 130th Avenue S.W.?

Mr. Drysdale: Well, we want to ensure the safety of drivers and passengers on all Alberta roads, and the interchange at 130th Avenue would be too close to another interchange to provide safe access. The Anderson Road interchange will provide all directional access to this ring road. For safety reasons access to the ring road from 24th Street cannot be provided. Instead, we'll include a full interchange at 167th Avenue that does not impact the safety and operation of the ring road. At this time local residents can use both 167th Avenue and James McKevitt Road to access the ring road.

Mr. Rodney: Finally, to the same minister. At the recent open houses on this subject in Calgary constituents raised questions regarding noise in their neighbourhoods and construction of a second bridge right over Fish Creek park. What can you tell constituents that will address these serious concerns of theirs?

Mr. Drysdale: Well, we know that operating a highway in an urban setting may impact residents who live nearby, and we're committed to addressing these concerns. That's why we held nine information sessions this fall, and these sessions were well attended with between 100 and 300 attendants at each session. When it comes to noise concerns, Mr. Speaker, we're currently modelling the predicted noise that the ring road will generate as part of our planning project. The project will conform to provincial noise policy guidelines. To ensure the safety of users of the ring road, a second bridge will be built over Fish Creek that will carry four lanes.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Let's move on to Calgary-McCall, followed by Edmonton-Calder.

2:20 Infrastructure Project Prioritization

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know this PC government often makes decisions based on politics and not what is best for Albertans. We saw a clear example of this in the last couple of days. Now a news report shows that the PCs cannot evaluate Alberta's health care infrastructure needs without political interference. To the Minister of Infrastructure: will you prove today that your government is not making political decisions by publishing a detailed and prioritized list of Alberta's infrastructure projects?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know that infrastructure is very important to both provincial and federal governments across this country. What I would say is that we have a public, open document that speaks about our capital plan. We're investing over $19 billion over three years on our capital plan.

An Hon. Member: How much?

Mr. Bhullar: Nineteen billion dollars, hon. member.

That's the most significant capital built in this country per capita, Mr. Speaker, and we're going to continue to make those investments.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Planning saves money, but decisions based on political whim lead to waste. When priorities change, goals are moved, and targets are missed, the costs go up. To the same minister: how much extra money is this political interference going to cost Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, the first part of the member's question actually makes sense. Planning does save money, and that's the reason why we've actually forwarded planning dollars for the 55 new schools and the 20 new school modernizations immediately. We've advanced the planning dollars now so that by next year's budget, when the capital dollars come around, the planning and design is done, and we're ready to start construction. That's the way I plan on approaching all of our infrastructure projects across the government of Alberta.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If this minister focused less on damage control and more on repairing the damage, maybe the Lougheed legacy would not be crumbling around him.

Finally, to the same minister: how is this minister going to fix this process to ensure that the right infrastructure is evaluated in the right way and receives the right amount of repair at the right time?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have a very planned and deliberate approach to catching up on deferred maintenance on various infrastructure projects. As I've said before, Alberta spends the most per capita on infrastructure projects of anybody in this country. We have a $19.2 billion capital plan as we speak, and of these projects we anticipate that over $2.6 billion from that is being spent on health infrastructure projects alone. Again, the most per capita in this country.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First this government blocks the Child and Youth Advocate from doing comprehensive, independent investigations whenever a child in care dies or is seriously injured. Now their own quality assurance council has been so frustrated that the chair has thrown up his hands in the air and resigned. To the Minister of Human Services: after you sandbagged Dr. Dibden so completely, will you now hand over investigations into all of the deaths of children in care to the Child and Youth Advocate?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to make it very clear that this government reviews every incident and every fatality in the child intervention system. We have numerous bodies reviewing these cases, including the medical examiner, the Child and Youth Advocate, the Fatality Review Board, in addition to our very own internal review of every incident. From my perspective, how many people do we need to review the reviewers? It's time to get past reviewing this again and get the job done.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, given that Dr. Dibden outlined fully transparent, comprehensive, and robust reforms yet this PC government has ignored the council's recommendation and he ended up resigning, to the same minister: how do you expect Albertans to place any trust in you and your ministry when you continue to block recommendations that could very well save children's lives?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Child and Youth Advocate and the recommendations put forward by a number of bodies that work with Human Services – of the 96 recommendations 55 have been completed, 12 are ongoing, 25 are in progress, and only four have not been implemented.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, given that we know that 18 children in care have died in the last eight months under this PC government's watch, to the same minister: how do you expect the public to believe that the resignation of a well-respected, high-profile chair of the council for quality assurance is anything less than another affirmation of your and this PC government's supreme and profound neglect?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Any time a child in care passes away, it's a very tragic moment for all of us. With the publication ban and the information that's being released every month now through the Human Services website, we are being open and transparent and accountable with Albertans. It's about working not in isolation but with the input from the council, child intervention practitioners, other experts, and, of course, aboriginal representatives to make sure that all community perspectives are reflected as we make continuous improvements.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Chronic Disease Management

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week I raised the question of chronic disease management to the Health minister. His answers, quite frankly, left much to be desired. The Auditor General's report was very clear in outlining that the government has no system in place that assesses chronic disease management needs, making it difficult to match its services with demand. To the Health minister: exactly what system will you put in place to determine the demand for chronic disease management services across our province?

The Speaker: The hon. minister responsible for the environment.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned in one of my previous answers, this government is committed to managing chronic diseases through what the Auditor General identified as one of the most effective tools, and that's through the primary care system. The PCN evolution work in the coming weeks and months includes enhanced services such as extended hours, same-day or next-day patient access, notifying patients of the PCN they belong to and the services which the PCN provides as well as improved continuity of patient care.

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, given that the Department of Health has not renewed the physician office system program to support the enhanced use of electronic medical records by physicians who currently have them and given that Mr. Monteith, chief delivery officer of the Ministry of Health, said last Tuesday at PAC that "system reform . . . will be difficult because physicians are independent contractors," under the leadership of this Premier and the government it has wasted hundreds of millions of dollars on these systems, and still a universal electronic medical records system has not been developed. When will it be done, Minister?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, as was rightfully identified, one of the biggest barriers to this is trying to work with our front-line health care providers, including the doctors. We will continue to work with them and encourage them and provide them the proper incentives and frameworks and platforms to continue to move forward with proper electronic health care records. Again, there is no excuse in this day and age not to utilize technology to the best of its ability to improve health care outcomes.

The Speaker: Hon. member, your final supplemental.

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister is right. There is no excuse for this government's lack of work on this file.

The Auditor General has also noted that the department does not currently have a structured approach or business model to deliver chronic disease management. Again to the minister: given that we spend more on chronic diseases than on the entire Department of Education, how is it possible that this government has no plan to effectively manage chronic diseases in the province?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, you know, the hon. member is right; being able to manage chronic diseases will certainly help us with trying to bring down the costs of health care expenditures in the province. The more that we can keep people healthy and out of the doctors' offices, out of the emergency rooms, out of the acute-care system and the long-term care system, the better it will be for Alberta taxpayers. That is certainly an objective that we have as a government, to manage those issues in a way that does so with the appropriate financial considerations.

AISH Client Benefits after Age 65

Mrs. Towle: Every day clients on assured income for the severely handicapped, or AISH, who turn 65 face a real challenge. That is because currently when AISH clients turn 65, they lose their medical benefits. This sends the client into crisis and increases the risk to the health and safety of the AISH client. I can tell you that it is astonishing to Albertans that a client on AISH who needed help at 64 would be cut off at age 65. To the Minister of Human Services: why are AISH clients losing their medical benefits when they turn 65?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I do want to thank the hon. member for her question, the opportunity to respond, and her advocacy on this issue. As of October 1 clients who are on AISH will receive about $20 more a month when they start receiving the Alberta seniors' benefit and the old age security and guaranteed income supplement. There's also the special-needs assistance program and the property tax deferral program. Again, we do help AISH clients transition, so it's important for me as minister to hear those, and I appreciate these concerns being brought up.

Mrs. Towle: Given that the prescriptions covered under the seniors' benefit program are significantly different, especially for mental health, and given that when AISH clients have their prescriptions cut off, they often end up in emergency or in our justice system, will the Minister of Human Services commit to ensuring that AISH clients turning 65 will not lose access to the prescriptions that they currently have today?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, we know that when AISH clients turn 65 – we work with them for approximately a year before they turn 65 – they do get dental and optical assistance through Alberta Health as well as ambulance coverage, but we also know that there are gaps. There are situations where we know there could be gaps there, so I look forward to working with her on this issue. I am concerned about this issue. At the end of the day we want to make sure they can live in a dignified manner and have the supports they need.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you for that, Minister. I also look forward to working with you to resolve this situation.

Given that clients on AISH also lose their access to their nonmedical supports, their caseworker, and sometimes even their housing, will the minister ensure that our most vulnerable Albertans will have access to all of the supports even though they turn 65?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I thank the member for her excellent and important question on this topic. I think it's important to clarify that AISH recipients are in unique circumstances and that moving or having to move is not necessarily a requirement at age 65. It depends on the individual's circumstances and the housing management body, assets that they may have. It's not a policy or requirement of this government. But we do have a number of other programs to help these folks as they age, including the special-needs assistance that was previously mentioned, low-income housing, special-needs housing, and others. I look forward to working with the member on any of the constituent concerns that she has on this issue.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Medicine Hat, followed by Edmonton-Manning.

Postsecondary Education Funding

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Time and time again Alberta's postsecondary students are asked to make sacrifices. Our postsecondary institutions and partners in innovation and creative sectors get promises of funding, only to be faced with unpredictable funding cuts. Times are good: cuts. Times are bad: cuts. Times are great and oil is at record high prices: cuts. Now with oil prices plummeting, students are concerned about what this means for them. Can the minister commit to students that they won't be asked to bear the brunt of this government's legacy of waste, mismanagement, and poor planning?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, it seems like the only that that's being cut is the popular support for the opposition party, which has plummeted 21 per cent in the last six months. There's a reason for that, and that is that people expect in this province that we are going to address issues and not simply promote negativity. Here's the issue that the minister of postsecondary education has been addressing: $2.1 billion being invested in base operating grants this year.

Mr. Pedersen: Mr. Speaker, obviously, this minister should just cut the hot air.

Given that the health of our postsecondary institutions is critical to the long-term economic prosperity of our province and given that they are teaching and training the leaders and citizens of tomorrow, can this government tell Albertans whether or not they are working with postsecondary institutions to ensure they have a sustainable and predictable funding model both now and in the years ahead?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to put some facts on the table for the members just so that they can be educated about our postsecondary system. Alberta invests in our students. [interjections] The latest numbers show that we have the third-highest expenditure for full-time students in the country. We invest $2.1 billion in base operating grants across the system. [interjections] We've made it clear, the Premier has in his priorities, that we will be committed to sound, conservative fiscal principles and that we'll be prudent and diligent in our planning for our postsecondary education system.

The Speaker: Hon. members, you know the rules. So do I. Please.

Mr. Pedersen: Mr. Speaker, given that the Council of Alberta University Students, the largest student-run organization in the province, representing over 100,000 students, is still waiting to hear from the government, will the minister commit to meet with these students before decisions on the budget are final?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Khan: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank the member for the question, and I want to thank him for bringing up CAUS. CAUS is a tremendous organization of student leaders. They do incredible work. I've spoken to the minister. I know that he values their input. I'll be happy to pass along that request, and I hope that at some time in the near future the minister will be able to have an opportunity to meet with the folks from CAUS.

Children and Youth with Disabilities

Mr. Sandhu: Mr. Speaker, any parent who has a child with a disability will know the struggles of supporting the child. The financial, physical, and emotional stress of caring for a child with a disability can be draining. My constituents in Edmonton-Manning who are parents to children with disabilities are very frustrated that government supports are simply not adequate. It is critical that persons with disabilities have the right supports to enjoy quality of life. My first question to the associate minister for persons with disabilities: why are our most vulnerable citizens, especially . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. associate minister to respond.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, our government is focused on ensuring that all Albertans have the best quality of life. Currently we have 11,000 children and families who are receiving a wide range of services through our family support for children with disabilities. In 2012 we conducted a survey, and 91 per cent of the parents said that they had a positive impact on the family and the child. We will continue to work with the families and their service providers to make sure their individual needs are met.

Thank you.

Mr. Sandhu: To the same associate minister. The government is supposed to be taking care of their most vulnerable youth to the greatest extent possible. Why aren't there services in place to support youth as they are about to start their adult lives?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Our government is focused on making sure that every youth in Alberta starts off on the right foot, and that absolutely includes youth with disabilities. There are service providers, and we're working with the families as early as the age of 16 so that the day they turn 18, there is a seamless service throughout their lifespan. We will continue working with them to make sure they get the best possible care that is needed.

Thank you.

Mr. Sandhu: My constituents have also told me that adult disability services fall short once the child turns 18 and is no longer eligible for the government funding. How can a person and their family plan for the future when they don't know what type of support they can expect?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to recognize International Day of Persons with Disabilities and, of course, talk about the PDD transformation. PDD transformation is about the individuals. It's about their needs, their goals, and their aspirations. As a government we will continue to make sure that their needs are met in a very consistent and timely manner.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park, followed by Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley.

Community Services in Schools

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We often speak about how school facilities can be used to meet the needs of a community, community centres, if you like, but there are serious shortcomings in how we make use of our valuable public spaces. A new school will be under construction in Ardrossan in my constituency soon, which is good news. The bad news is that there is a daycare and a preschool that rent space in the existing facility that may need to close because they have been denied space in the new facility. My question for the Education minister: how are school buildings actually going to be community centres if education dollars can be used for school space and only school space?

Mr. Dirks: I thank the member for a very good question, Mr. Speaker. The member raises a valid point with the reality that the current education system is focused on funding and delivery of schools and programs for kindergarten to grade 12 students. In respect to the Ardrossan situation I can commit to the hon. member that staff at my ministry will work with the school jurisdiction during the replacement school's design stage to review possible solutions to that issue.

Mr. Quest: I'll just go to my next supplemental, Mr. Speaker, which will be to the Minister of Human Services. We'll need thousands of new daycare spaces in the coming years in this province, yet in my community there's actually a risk of losing some of that space, which has been used successfully in the old school building. New school buildings are ideal places for preschools and daycares. What are you prepared to do as Minister of Human Services to ensure that these facilities are maximizing their value to Albertans, working with Education and Infrastructure? This is important, Minister.

The Speaker: The Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the last year, as I've said before, we licensed 4,700 new spaces across Alberta, about 100,000 spaces. We know that we license, monitor, and issue for child care programs. We also approve the family day homes and other areas as well. We know that we need to have the conversation of wraparound services and community supports and hubs. I'm a firm believer in that. I think that's a conversation that we will continue to have to ensure that families and children are supported.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would just ask the Minister of Infrastructure: are you prepared to work immediately with the Education minister and the Human Services minister to resolve this situation not just in Ardrossan but around Alberta? Our schools need to be more than just schools, Minister.

Mr. Bhullar: A great comment by the member, Mr. Speaker. Our schools in some communities are the only piece of public infrastructure in a new development. I've been saying this very much lately, that we need to ensure that the local communities, the school boards, the municipalities come together early, work on the planning and the design of these facilities early on, so that when we're ready to start construction, we don't have to miss a step and can ensure that the public gets full access to these public facilities.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the bell for Oral Question Period has sounded, meaning that it is over.

In 30 seconds from now we will resume with private members' statements, starting with Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: Let us resume, then. Private members' statements, two minutes. Let's go with Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, please.

AltaLink Sale

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Friday the Alberta Utilities Commission approved the sale of AltaLink to the fifth-largest public company in the world, U.S.-based Berkshire Hathaway. In its decision the commission said that concerns about foreign ownership of AltaLink were outside its jurisdiction; hence, it was not considered. I note the federal Competition Bureau did not consider any factors outside Canadian jurisdiction before it approved the sale. When questioned about this sale, the minister said: I'm sure the regulators will do their job to ensure no harm comes to Alberta consumers. It was confusing.

Sadly, the minister is only partially correct. AltaLink is a fully regulated monopoly in the province of Alberta. It is managed rather efficiently. In all likelihood, it will continue to be managed efficiently. The company AltaLink and its management are not the problem. They do not own electricity generation; hence, they have no conflict or interest in the price of electricity. Berkshire Hathaway, on the other hand, owns electric utility companies in more than seven western states. They own 300,000 kilometres of transmission lines, 28,000 megawatts of generation in the western United States. That's 10 times the transmission and twice the generation capacity of all of Alberta.

Now, with the purchase of AltaLink Berkshire Hathaway controls 80 per cent of the flow of electricity in Alberta. Unlike AltaLink, Berkshire Hathaway has a vested interest in the price of electricity. Now that they own both generation and transmission across an international boundary Berkshire Hathaway can take advantage of a regulatory black hole every day when Alberta imports and exports electricity. There are no rules or regulations to prohibit Berkshire Hathaway from adjusting the flow or supply of electricity in one jurisdiction, only to raise the price of electricity in another jurisdiction.

No one is watching this fox manage the henhouse. Can we as a Legislature put aside partisan politics and do something before Alberta ratepayers suffer?

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Bill 11

Savings Management Repeal Act

Mr. Campbell: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 11, the Savings Management Repeal Act.

Given its clear commitment to sound, conservative fiscal principles and our current fiscal position, the government will not continue with the initiatives set out in the Savings Management Act. The Savings Management Repeal Act will eliminate the Alberta future fund, the social innovation endowment account, and the agriculture and food innovation endowment account. The $200 million transfer from the heritage fund to the Alberta heritage scholarship fund, which was earmarked to support trade-focused education, will remain in the scholarship fund for that purpose.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 11 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, did you have a tabling?

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of tablings, the first being a tabling that I referenced in my introductions today of the farm workers who are here, Constitutional Arguments Concerning the Exclusion of Alberta Farm and Ranch Workers from Labour and Employment Legislation: Executive Summary, which highlights three violations of our Canadian Constitution: the freedom to associate, the security of persons, and equality at law.

The second tabling is a letter from the Premier to Darlene Dunlop in response to her request for a response to these constitutional violations and his willingness to look at those.

The third is a letter from one Philippa Thomas, a farm worker who was injured almost 10 years ago and suffered a very serious injury. She has been living without compensation for a decade, having spent tens of thousands of dollars, and is calling for the inclusion of farm worker rights, including compensation for all farm workers.

The fourth is a letter from Darlene Dunlop printed in the Prairie Post, identifying that her family in Frank, Alberta, has received a World War I memorial, a cannon flanked by two machine guns, in recognition that hers was the only family to lose all their sons in the First World War, family members that she feels fought for equal rights for all Albertans and these rights are now denied to paid farm workers in Alberta.

The fifth would be greetings from Eric Musekamp, greeting the Alberta Legislature and on behalf of the Charles Stauffer trust fund asking MLAs to consider making a donation after this farm worker was killed, leaving his family destitute. I've made a contribution, and I hope other MLAs will consider the Charles Stauffer trust fund. The details are here.

That's it, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Let us move on to Edmonton-Centre, followed by the Minister of Human Services.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of tablings here today. The first is from Marian McNair. I believe she is a constituent. She just wants to point out – and I'm glad that the Minister of Health is here – that she's 69 and still working, but she is one of the people who is prescribed a compounding type of medication. She used to be able to get her 300 pills for a $25 fee. Now, because of the limit on the compounding fee, she is having to go 10 times to get the same number of pills and is now paying $73.30 instead of $25 for those same 300 pills.

Second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a copy of the letter that I sent to the superintendents of all of Alberta's public and separate school boards asking for the same information that was being provided to the hon. Minister of Education.

I was a little puzzled by the tabling yesterday from the minister, which appeared to not contain source data. So, just to remind him, I'm going to table a couple of the originals that we got back from some of those school boards detailing the breakdown of antibullying clubs, diversity clubs, and GSAs. I'll give him copies of the one from the Peace Wapiti school division, Elk Island public, and Wetaskiwin just as a reminder that this is what the source information looked like and not something written as a letter after the fact.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be filing the appropriate number of copies of letters to the chair of the council for quality assurance and the chair of the implementation oversight committee outlining expectations and priorities.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I was wondering if I could request unanimous consent to revert briefly to question period for 20 minutes so that we could ask the Health minister some questions about hospital infrastructure.

The Speaker: Hon. member, let's deal with your tabling, shall we? Then, if there's a request to revert to something that is acceptable, we'll do that. But go on with your tabling, please.

Mr. Mason: I have no tabling.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, then.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of a motion currently in front of the City of Edmonton Youth Council. The motion resolves "that a letter be written on behalf of the . . . Youth Council to local MLAs, the Minister of Education and the Premier of Alberta stating public support for Bill 202." Unfortunately for them, the government has acted with great haste to ensure that the debate that they will be having this afternoon appears to be no longer in order. Nonetheless, it's important for members to know that the City of Edmonton Youth Council was planning on debating this today and likely will be supporting Bill 202.

The Speaker: Are there others? One from Calgary-Shaw, please.

Mr. Wilson: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the requisite number of copies of a news release from the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Alberta that I quoted from while debating an amendment from the ND caucus earlier this week.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Campbell, President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance, pursuant to the Conflicts of Interest Act, the Report of Selected Payments to the Members and Former Members of the Legislative Assembly and Persons Directly Associated with Members of the Legislative Assembly, year ended March 31, 2014; pursuant to the Gaming and Liquor Act the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission Charitable Gaming in Review 2013-2014; and pursuant to the Results-based Budgeting Act the Results-based Budgeting Report to Albertans dated December 2014.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Statements by the Speaker

Bills Containing Similar Provisions

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have no points of order, but I would like to take this moment to make a point of clarification and make a statement with respect to duplication of bills, specifically bills 10 and 202. I make this statement as a result of the need to do so.

First, as members are aware, Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, received second reading on Tuesday, December 2, 2014. This is a government bill, sponsored by the Member for Calgary-North West. On the Order Paper for consideration is Bill 202, the Safe and Inclusive Schools Statutes Amendment Act, 2014, sponsored by the Member for Edmonton-Centre. I've examined these two bills, and certainly they are not duplicates. Both bills would amend the Alberta Human Rights Act by repealing section 11.1. Both bills would amend the Education Act in various sections. The provisions are not identical but deal with the same issue of preventing discrimination or bullying.

In Bill 202 there are amendments to section 33 of the Education Act while Bill 10 adds a new division after section 35 of the Education Act. Also, there is the issue of parental consent in the Education Act, which is dealt with by amending section 58 in Bill 202 whereas Bill 10 adds new sections after section 58 on this subject. Bill 10 would also, as the title indicates, amend the Alberta Bill of Rights in addition to amending the School Act.

The principle that prevents the Assembly from debating both these bills is that a Parliament or Assembly should not debate the same issue twice in the same session. The nature of the rule and the rationale for it is nicely stated in Erskine May's Treatise on The Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament, 24th edition, at page 543, where it states:

There is no general rule or custom which restrains the presentation of two or more bills relating to the same subject, and containing similar provisions. But if a decision of the House has already been taken on one such bill, for example, if the bill has been given or refused a second reading, the other is not proceeded with if it contains substantially the same provisions.

On the same page it is stated that the Speaker has declined to propose the question for the second reading of a bill which would have had the same effect as a clause of a bill which had already received a second reading.

It is interesting to note that on page 544 of the same edition of Erskine May it is stated that the rule was laid down in what is now the United Kingdom House of Commons on June 1, 1610, as follows:

that "no bill of the same substance be brought in in the same session."

The decision by the Assembly at second reading is therefore crucial because it indicates that the Assembly has approved the bill in principle and causes the rule against considering the same issue to become operative. This point is also found in Beauchesne's paragraph 653 and has been relied upon by previous Speakers of this Alberta Legislative Assembly. I would refer members to Speakers' rulings of November 22, 2005, found at page 1789 of Alberta Hansard for that day, and also April 21, 1998, found at page 1558 of Alberta Hansard for that particular day, where bills containing provisions similar to those in bills that had received second reading were not proceeded with and came off the Order Paper.

In the matter before us today I find that the provisions in Bill 202 are identical in one section and cover the same ground as in another section in Bill 10. The subject matter in Bill 202 is subsumed in Bill 10 and would lead to a similar debate and having the Assembly revisit an issue about which it had already voted.

In conclusion, I find that based on the parliamentary authorities and the precedents of this Assembly concerning duplication of bills and the principles associated with considering the same issue twice in a session, Bill 202 will not be proceeded with and will come off the Order Paper.

In making this conclusion and this ruling, I make it with some regret, knowing that the effort that the Member for Edmonton-Centre put into her Bill 202 was very considerable and that the time and commitment she invested into preparing it and researching it was equally so. However, I want to point out that this ruling is very much dependent on the content of bills 10 and 202. Each case is obviously different, and I do not want to be seen as unduly limiting the opportunities for members to craft and debate their own private members' bills.

That concludes this particular statement.

Private Members' Public Bills

Now, with respect to another matter, that being the business for Monday afternoon, December 8, 2014, members may recall that yesterday I tabled a letter from the member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre requesting early consideration of his Bill 201, the Electric Utilities (Transparency in Billing) Amendment Act, 2014. That letter is recorded as Sessional Paper 105/2014. The issue of early consideration of private members' public bills has vexed me as your Speaker and two of my immediate predecessors.

In my ruling of November 18, 2013, at page 2864 of Alberta Hansard, I cited four rulings on the subject and how my immediate predecessors have repeatedly requested House leaders' attention to and review of the procedure for early consideration. In the absence of any agreement, however, which is where we still find ourselves today, we are obliged to continue following the protocol, where a member may request early consideration of his or her bill but only when the bill has passed the previous stage.

In this case Bill 201 received second reading on Monday, December 1, and the request for early consideration at committee stage was made the following day. A request for early consideration will not bump a bill where debate has been adjourned or the committee's work has not been completed or a bill that must, according to the rules, come up for consideration on a certain day. As there are no other private members' bills that are being debated nor are there any in committee, then, consistent with our practices, Bill 201 will be considered in Committee of the Whole as the first item of business on Monday afternoon, December 8, 2014, when private members' public bills are expected to be up for consideration. That concludes that particular statement.

I see the Member for Edmonton-Centre. Let me hear what you have, quickly please.

Point of Clarification

Ms Blakeman: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Under 13(2) I just wanted to double-check if the fact that my bill was not allowed to come up for debate affects the decision by the Speaker at all in this context.

The Speaker: Hon. member, may I invite you to please read what I just said in Hansard with respect to the ruling, which was carefully reviewed. I did not reference the specific point that you just referenced, but I see you've put it on the record, which is probably a good thing from your perspective. Thank you for doing that.

Let us move on, then.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 9

Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood-Park.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014. Alberta has a long history with condominiums. In fact, the first condominium development in Canada was built in Edmonton in 1967. Condominium legislation was first enacted in Alberta in 1969. The legislation has been updated a number of times since then as the condominium market and our province have grown. The Condominium Property Act provides the legislative framework for the creation and operation of any form of condominium, including residential and commercial. This act impacts anyone who develops, manages, owns, or resides in a condominium property. These amendments will ensure that the act is appropriately balanced and fair to all parties. It also enshrines a number of stakeholder recommendations and best practices from other jurisdictions.

I would like to take a few moments to set out some of the key amendments being proposed as part of this bill. First, the creation of a new tribunal to act as an alternative to the courts in disputes between parties. This proposal received considerable support during the consultation process. Stakeholders recognized that many types of disputes in condominiums can be addressed without the need for time-consuming and potentially expensive litigation. The new tribunal offers them such a forum. Further work will be undertaken to develop the necessary regulations to support this tribunal's operation. Once this work is completed, this new avenue for settling disputes will be a valuable alternative to the courts and will reflect a significant modernization of Alberta's legislation.

Second, a number of these amendments will also take steps to protect purchasers of new condominiums. Here are just a few examples of the ways in which this bill will do this. Developers will be required to disclose a broader range of information to potential purchasers to assist them in making a fully informed decision. Buyers will be protected from sudden increases in condo fees, also known as fee shock, by ensuring they receive realistic and credible budget estimates of future condo fees. A purchaser's right to cancel an agreement to purchase will remain until they have actually received all the information to which they are entitled. New provisions will be added to the act to ensure that condominium buyers are notified of any delays in occupancy or material changes to the purchase contract and have appropriate remedies available.

Alberta has a great number of developers committed to acting fairly and professionally. Indeed, many developers already comply with some of these amendments on a routine basis. Including these amendments in the act will help to ensure that anyone purchasing a condo in Alberta is treated fairly and can count on high standards of disclosure.

Third, these amendments will also enhance the regulation of condominium managers. Condominium managers are playing an increasingly important role in the administration of many developments. This diverse group of professionals deals with matters ranging from finances to property maintenance to negotiating contracts with suppliers to enforcing condominium rules and bylaws. These are important responsibilities, and it is essential that those performing them are appropriately informed, regulated, and well qualified.

These amendments will assign responsibility for governance of condominium managers to the Real Estate Council of Alberta, RECA. RECA is the independent governing authority that sets and enforces professional standards for property managers as well as realtors, mortgage brokers, and real estate appraisers. As an independent body that is experienced, fair, transparent, and accountable, RECA is ideally equipped to set appropriate standards of conduct and prescribe the necessary skills, education, and competencies needed for condo managers.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Other amendments will update this legislation to ensure that condo owners and boards can take full advantage of modern technology in the affairs of their business. For example, the act will authorize board meetings and voting to be done electronically, provided appropriate controls are in place to verify voter identity. It will also allow documents to be provided in an electronic form wherever possible.

Finally, amendments will update and improve the offences and enforcement sections of the act. The proposed amendments will reduce the overall number of offences, to focus more on especially unfair actions taken against purchasers and owners by a small number of developers. This will ensure that resources can be directed at eliminating behaviour that leaves condo owners in Alberta particularly vulnerable. However, let me be clear. Reducing the total number of offences will not compromise the protections offered by the act. In fact, a number of these amendments are specifically tailored to deter illegal conduct by potential offenders.

For example, we are expanding the role of Service Alberta's condominium director to issue compliance orders, levy administrative monetary penalties of up to $100,000, and, whenever necessary, commence court actions. Additionally, penalties for offences will be substantially increased to serve as a strong deterrent against inappropriate conduct. Where offences are carried on beyond a single occurrence, they will likewise be punished more seriously. I have no doubt our province's stakeholders will support these amendments and recognize that the enhanced sanctions are specifically aimed at the effective and efficient investigation and prosecution of the most serious misconduct.

Taken together, however, this bill represents a major modernization of Alberta's Condominium Property Act, reflects our commitment to protect Alberta condominium owners, and will help build stronger communities now and into the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'll recognize the next speaker, the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to this bill, both as an MLA and as the critic for Service Alberta. The issue of condominiums is quite important as it's ultimately about private property. Many young people get their first step on the property ladder through a condo. Many seniors also downsize from a single family home to a condo for the first time. Both groups of people find the market confusing and technical. I hope this bill will improve protection for consumers.

I do have a concern with how this bill has been handled. I feel this bill is being rushed through the House without proper consultation with stakeholders. This is a highly technical piece of legislation. It's 80 pages of detailed amendments to a very large piece of legislation. It can be quite confusing unless you happen to be a lawyer specializing in the condo market. This being the case, I think there should be enough time to consult with stakeholders to look through this bill and make sure it addresses the long-standing issues in this market. As we know, the Condo Property Act hasn't been significantly updated in 15 years. This is our once-in-a-decade chance to get things right. Rushing legislation through will lead to mistakes that will need to be fixed later.

I have to give credit to the ministry for its extensive consultation prior to the drafting of the legislation. They sought the input of a variety of people, including developers, owners, and the legal community. I do wish more consultation was done after the drafting of the bill. I wish more time was being taken to consult on the actual laws that are being passed. When you consult before and not after, people feel like the job is only half done. You've asked for their opinion in general, but when it comes to what the real substance is, what laws will actually be passed, they are not consulted.

Another concern I have is that Bill 9 in front of us is different from Bill 13, tabled in the spring. As I've said, we haven't had much time to go through the bill in detail. It was tabled on Monday afternoon, and I want to thank the minister for having the evening meeting and giving us the briefing notes at that time. But here we are. I did start going through and comparing the differences between the two bills, and I'm a little concerned that it appears that consumer protection has actually been weakened in this newer bill. Parts relating to the duties of a developer have been removed. It looks to a cynic that responsibility is being shifted from developers.

This shift from developers does concern buyers out there. We've seen a few examples of whole buildings, like in Fort McMurray and Leduc, being condemned, leaving owners with mortgages on properties they can't live in. We can all say, "buyer beware," but are you going to say that to a recent college grad buying his first property or to a widow looking to downsize because she can't take care of her home any longer? This is not idle speculation, Mr. Speaker.

Special assessments are also an issue. In a hot market like we have, contractors and developers cut corners. When that happens, they catch up with the owner, not the builder. We see this with special assessments where owners are on the hook for tens of thousands of dollars because stucco wasn't applied properly and now there's mould. Not many people have tens of thousands of dollars on command for a special assessment, especially when condo owners may have lower incomes. The lower cost of entry into the condo market is one of its primary appeals, but when condo fees spike or a loan is needed for a special assessment, this hurts precisely the people that we are supposed to be helping in the condo market.

This is something that the government has been aware of for years. Municipal Affairs partnered with the city of Calgary to look into issues with building envelopes. I have a quote from an ADM with Municipal Affairs in 2011: it's absolutely terrible and awful what people are going through; the unfortunate thing is that we don't have the tools as yet to provide them with the protection we're building. That was three years ago, Mr. Speaker.

I've served as critic for Municipal Affairs and now for Service Alberta. I know that there is some overlap as the building code and other issues are with Municipal Affairs. We all know how complicated the MGA is.

I'm not here to be only a critic. I think moving legal disputes out of the court system is a good idea. As I said, condo owners typically do have lower incomes, and they're at a disadvantage.

They can't afford massive legal battles with developers. They certainly can't afford to chase fly-by-night developers who close their corporation to avoid legal responsibility for their actions. Giving consumers an avenue outside the court system is a good step.

I also like that more information is being provided to purchasers. As I've said, the condo market is quite confusing for a lot of people. One area I'd like the government to address is disclosure by real estate agents. While that is under a different act, I hope that accountability and transparency can be broadened to protect consumers that work with a realtor in cases of resale.

One last area of concern I have is the amount of rule-making that will lie in regulation. I was elected to represent my constituents. The condo issue is one that I hear complaints about on a regular basis. Condos are increasingly popular. Condos represent more than half of new buildings in the province. This issue matters to me and my constituents. They want me to hear their voice here in the Legislature. Reading through this bill, it seems like I read the word "regulation" on every page.

Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, this bill is vital to many Albertans, and with such a vital piece of legislation, I think it should be given serious consideration. I think there are some positives in here, but I think we should be slowing it down to get it right and give everyone involved a voice.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With that, I move to adjourn debate.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills has moved to adjourn debate on Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: I'm going to call the Committee of the Whole to order. The Committee of the Whole has under consideration Bill 7, the Chartered Professional Accountants Act.

I recognize the first speaker to Bill 7.

Ms Blakeman: I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker, but we have what can be referred to as the Government House Leader's agreement, and on it, when we get into the Committee of the Whole, it's Bill 10 that's supposed to be the first one that's called up, and this is a different order.

The Chair: Clarification, hon. Government House Leader?

Mr. Denis: Thank you. I would ask for the member's indulgence, as we are preparing an amendment relating to Bill 10, if we could just proceed with Bill 7 for the interim.

Ms Notley: That's not what we agreed to.

Ms Blakeman: What is the point of having these agreements and the stuff sent out if the government is not going to agree to it and not going to stand behind it? [interjections] You get prepared for certain people here to speak here in a certain order, and . . .

The Chair: Hon. members, this is the type of thing that should be worked out prior to here. I mean, I've . . . [interjections] Please, hon. members, one at a time. Hon. Government House Leader, I'm going to give you one opportunity to respond.

Mr. Denis: I don't mean to be pugilistic. We can go to Bill 10 if they want to go to some speeches, but we're actually a little bit behind in preparing an amendment here, and that has changed matters that could not have been foreseen over the last couple of hours.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. If that courtesy had been extended to us earlier, we could have rearranged our schedules to have different people here to go in a different order. So nice to have the courtesy extended now that we're already here. If the member could manage to do it maybe an hour or two earlier, it would be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

Mr. Denis: Okay. Mr. Chair, this was the earliest that I could have done this. Again, not wanting to be pugilistic here. If this member wants to go to Bill 10, and she wants to speak, go right ahead, but we're not quite ready with our item. If you want to go with Bill 10 – I've said that three times now – you go right ahead.

The Chair: Okay. Hon. members, just so we can be productive: Bill 10.

Bill 10 An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Chair: The first speaker to Bill 10 is the hon. Member for Airdrie, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm happy to stand and begin debate with regard to Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children.

Mr. Chair, I did talk at some length yesterday about why I feel that Bill 10 does go toward building a balance of protecting equality, religious freedoms, parental rights, and, of course, very importantly, the protection of our LGBT youth and students in particular. My reasons were given yesterday for that, so I won't go over them again. I also did note, as did the Official Opposition leader in her comments, that there does seem to be a gap in the protections when a student asks to start an antibullying club, whether that be a GSA or a diversity club or any such club. There's a gap there, where if a school board says no to that request, then it really puts the student in, I would say, almost a nonsensical position where they would have to go to court. And, of course, financially that's just not possible in 99.9 per cent of cases.

What we are proposing on the Wildrose Official Opposition side is two amendments – we will be going over one shortly – that would address that issue. When working hand in hand together, we think that this will strengthen Bill 10 even further to the point where proper recourse will be given to students requesting a GSA whose requests, for whatever reasons, are denied but still addresses their specific needs. I am going to go over those amendments. In fact, I'll table the first amendment in that regard right now.

The Chair: We'll just pause for a moment, hon. members, while that amendment is being distributed. This is the first amendment, so we will call this one A1.

Mr. Anderson: The amendment would read as follows. I move that Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, be amended as follows: in section 2(4), in the proposed section 35(1), by striking out subsection (1) and substituting the following.

If a student requests a staff member employed by the board that operates the school attended by the student for support to establish or lead an activity or organization intended to promote a welcoming, caring, respectful and safe learning environment that respects diversity and fosters a sense of belonging and that staff member does not provide the requested support, that staff member must work collaboratively with the requesting student to provide a bona fide anti-bullying or other alternative support strategy that meets the needs of that student.

Then 1.1 says that

Both a decision by a staff member not to provide the requested support to establish or lead an activity or organization under subsection (1), notwithstanding any efforts to implement an alternative support strategy, and the proposed alternative support strategy, may be appealed to the board in accordance with section 42.

This is what we are asking to be read in. We're saying: strike the proposed subsection 1 and replace it with what I just read into the record. What this would do is that if for some reason a school board – let's say that it's a faith-based school board – does not want to grant a mandatory GSA, they want to pursue a different avenue, what it says is that if they reject it, if the staff member's school does not provide the requested support, that staff member must work collaboratively with the requesting student to provide a bona fide antibullying or alternative support strategy that meets the need of that student. That's the main change.

We feel that in 99 per cent of cases – I think it's pretty clear. I mean, if you look at the Catholic school board, for example, they already have an alternative antibullying strategy in place. Perhaps that is something that they could use to, obviously, deal with the student making the request to start a GSA. However, this kind of goes further. This says that yeah, you can have that, you can have that strategy, but you have to work specifically with the student who is experiencing the bullying, who is experiencing the isolation and wants to start that club. You have to work with that specific student on a specific strategy to deal with the bullying that they are facing, and that could mean an antibullying strategy. That could mean another support strategy. Obviously, there are many different strategies to deal with this, and often multiple strategies and supports are needed to help students who are being bullied.

That's what this does. It puts the onus on the school and says: look; if you're going to make the decision to not permit some sort of club that's being requested here, you have to work with that student collaboratively to take care of their specific needs and address their specific needs. I think this is a very important amendment. It will work hand in hand with the other Wildrose amendment, which will be coming along shortly here, which specifically says that if the student isn't happy with the support strategy given or promoted by the school after this is all done, what the student can then do is that after appealing to the board, they can appeal to, essentially, the Ministry of Education. There will be a three-member panel set up that will be able to look at the support strategy and say: "Okay. Is this support strategy bona fide? It is really addressing the issues of the student in question, or is it just some way of dismissing the student without having to do anything concrete?"

That will be the second amendment that we bring forward. I think that that's really important because right now the only recourse that a student has if they're told by a school that they can't start a GSA is to go to a judicial review, essentially. That's really not realistic, and it's not really fair to the student. If a student is being bullied, the school needs to deal with that. The school board needs to deal with that. If they deal with it, but they don't do it in a concrete manner that's actually helping the student, there should be a recourse for that student to go to an independent third party, the panel in the Ministry of Education, and ask for help and make his case in that regard. Of course, that would be at no cost to the student, so they would have that ability to do so.

I actually feel that this is a better and stronger suggestion than just making a GSA mandatory, and I'll tell you why. Bullying has many facets and many layers to it. I think it's important that – I mean, yeah, I guess if someone asks for a GSA and the GSA is provided, that could certainly help, but it could go a lot further than that. The help that that student needs probably goes a lot further than just needing a GSA. They probably need some sort of support strategy, some sort of strategy with teachers involved and so forth that can make sure that the bullying is put to an end. Just having a GSA alone probably isn't all that can be done for that student.

What this would do is create an expectation. It would essentially force the school. It is mandatory. It would force the school and create an expectation at the school that they have to deal with the bullying that is happening in their school and not just for LGBTQ students. Of course, that is the subject that we've been talking about a lot and absolutely has to be dealt with, but it would involve, for example, other issues, whether that be an issue of race, whether that be an issue with regard to gender issues, male-female, and so forth, all of that stuff. If a student feels that they are being bullied based on one of those prohibited grounds and they want to start a club or group and for some reason the school isn't willing to do that, they want to do a different strategy, they have to create a full support strategy to help that student. If that's still not good enough for the student because it's kind of a token gesture and it's not really helping the student with what they need to overcome the bullying that they're facing, then it creates that appeal process to the panel in the Ministry of Education.

What that panel could do is that it will hear both sides, et cetera, et cetera, and it will either be able to uphold it or provide recommendations to the board on how to properly deal with the situation. So if the boards can't get their act together – and in most cases I am sure that they will get their act together. In the vast majority of cases they will handle this well. In that 1 per cent of cases where a board just wants to sweep this type of thing under the rug and doesn't want to deal with it, these two amendments will clearly work towards making sure that that student is supported, is kept safe, and is protected in the school environment that their parents have chosen to place them in.

With that, I hope that the government will look at this as an opportunity to strengthen this bill. There may be other options available, but, honestly, I don't see any reason why we wouldn't at least put this in to strengthen the bill. The Liberal and the ND caucuses, I know, are against Bill 10, but I hope that at the very least in this amendment process they would think about supporting this amendment to at least strengthen Bill 10 even if they plan on voting against it on the final reading, third reading, because this will protect students better. It will provide for more students. It might not be what everybody wants, and it might not go far enough for some people, but I think it certainly strengthens the bill to better protect LGBTQ students while still supporting the concept of local school autonomy.

With that, I would ask that members on the government side and the opposition side think about this option and support it. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: I'll recognize next the member, from the third party, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. This is a remarkably sensitive, thoughtful, and common-sense approach to some of the issues that are facing us. I commend the member that's sponsoring it and the other members of his caucus that worked on this. This is recognizing that bullying is specific to a child usually and that it brings with it a number of other complications that need to be addressed. I really like the fact that whoever said no to a GSA is now required to continue to work with the students or the student to try and address their situation. I just think it's really nicely done, and I commend them for that.

An Hon. Member: However . . .

Ms Blakeman: Well, it is a nice piece of work. I really think it is, and I think it was very sensitive and was really trying to get at the heart of the matter.

The problem here is that it's building on a false premise. The false premise is what is in Bill 10; that is, it's okay to have cascading rights – that sounds kind of nice – stepped rights or tiered rights or sliding-down-the-slope rights. It's now being institutionalized through Bill 10 that it's okay to discriminate against a group of people. So we have a set of instructions from the government saying: "In the public school system we want you to do this, and we want you to say yes to GSAs. But in the Catholic and the private system: cut loose; do whatever you think you need to do. You're not required to support these students." That's where this would have been very nice because it would say: "Yes, you are. You can't just dump these kids and say: too bad, so sad." That's why I liked it.

I will never accept that it's okay to graduate rights. If you're going to extend those rights, if our public school system in Alberta is going to say, "Right; we recognize sexual minority youth, we recognize that they get bullied and that at this time they need a specific group to look after them and that that is called a gay-straight alliance," then we do it. But where on earth did we get to this point where we say, "Yes, we will prohibit that discrimination and accommodate it here but not here"? That is incredibly inappropriate. I can't accept that. I can't accept that we would excuse a group of people and say: "Okay. That's all right. You can go ahead and discriminate."

I have not heard from any Catholic parents. I've not heard from any Catholic students. I haven't heard from any Catholic – oh, no. Wait a minute. I think there was one teacher. Sorry. I've had a lot of letters. Let me say that there were two teachers, just to be safe, that had any problem with GSAs being provided in the Catholic or the separate systems or in the private system. Just try to put other words in there, and you start to understand how bad what Bill 10 is proposing is. You know, we're going to say: "Oh, you know, those kids that have a different colour: race is a factor; you can't discriminate at them in the public school system, but that's okay if you want to discriminate and refuse to give them support and peer support in this system." No.

We're all the same country. We are all Albertans. We have a public education system that we all pay for, and we agree to pay for it because we want all of our students to come out of it with a quality education and, frankly, equipped to be good citizens, and this is part of it. What does it say to someone that you're okay here, but you're not okay there? That in itself is a form of bullying.

I recognize that the member was trying to work against that division and was trying to set something up where kids wouldn't be just left or wouldn't be put in that position, but there is no question in my mind that right now the situation that's being envisioned by Bill 10 is to sanction discrimination in certain schools. On certain school property it's sanctioned; it's okay to go ahead and refuse to accommodate a gay-straight alliance. But in the public school system we expect you to do this. That's just wrong on so many levels. I have to say that with most of the people of faith that I work with here and that I know in my constituency or in my personal life, I just can't imagine them saying that it's okay to do this in one place, one location, one set of circumstances and not in another.

I really admire the delicacy with which this was done and the sensitivity. I think there was a real attempt there to address some very difficult situations, but I will not accept anything that is going to build on the inequity that is coming through in Bill 10.

Now, I've heard that the member sponsoring it has been quoted as saying: well, you know, we're going to get nothing, or we might be able to build on this incrementally. We had one caucus member from the government, the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, who said that he didn't believe in incremental rights, and he's bang on. Nor should we have tiered rights or staged rights or cascaded rights. If we are extending something to a group of people, we're extending it. We're not saying: well, you get it if you're in this location or with that faith, but you don't get it if you're over there. That's just not right. It's just not right.

I'm sorry that I can't support this amendment. It's a nice one, but I cannot support anything that is going to build on discrimination and especially institutionalized discrimination from the government, which is not the group of people you would expect to be discriminating.

I know there's been a lot of talk about balancing this – I'm putting air quotes around it – with parental rights, but I have to say again that it's a peer support club that meets on school property off school classroom time. I still don't see how that is an imposition on parental rights. It is not part of the curriculum. It is not part of instruction or exercises. No one has been able to explain to me how this is seen – I'm sorry; that's not correct, Mr. Chair. I have had people contact me and explain what they believe to be true, and I know that they believe it to be true. They're not just saying it to make me go crazy. They are saying it because they believe it. Frankly, what I've heard from them is so awful and so unexplainable in the context of a pretty simple thing, which is to allow a peer support group for a specific group of kids on school property to be given the resources to meet in a room and a staff supervisor or an outside supervisor to make sure, you know, that they're okay in the way that every student club has a staff supervisor assigned to it.

So a really nice amendment. I can't support it because it's based on the idea that it's okay to discriminate against the same group of people depending on what is the faith of the particular school system and what is the faith of the school location that they are in. Please explain to me how that is proper at all in this world, that we can discriminate against children. We are not talking about adults here. We are talking about children. We are talking about 10- and 11- and 12- and 13-year-olds and 15-year-olds and 16-year-olds. These are not people that we would expect to put through a series of tests or barriers as has been anticipated in Bill 10. Can you imagine saying to an 11-year old, “Well, I’m sorry, honey, but they won’t allow your kind to have a club, so you need to go and present in front of the school board?”

Some of you are school board trustees. You know what it’s like. This is not a simple thing. This is not a casual encounter. You’re standing in front of a group of people, an audience behind you, trying to plead your case. Can you imagine subjecting a child to that? Why would you do anything so cruel? You’re making them explain why they want to have a peer support group after school in their school. I don’t understand that thinking. I really don’t. I know that it means a great deal to folks, but I can’t understand how anybody can manage to divide it up and say: this person I recognize as deserving of support here but not deserving of support there. That is discrimination. That is the definition of discrimination, that you treat the same people differently. That is the definition of discrimination.

Okay. I’ll just try to put my hair out and sit down. Thank you very much for the opportunity.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Next the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I’m pleased to have an opportunity to stand and make some comments with respect to the amendment offered by the MLA for Airdrie. I regret to say that we will not be supporting this amendment, and I think it’s for one simple reason, that it violates the commitment that we think is essential in any legislation dealing with this matter of equality. It seems to be an attempt to build yet another workaround from full equality. That’s the basic principle that we’re working under and the basic litmus test.

At some point the government of Alberta and citizens of this province that have a different view than we do on this will have to come to terms with that. It’s not a matter of changing one’s religious views or persuasions. It’s not about, you know, changing people’s fundamental view of how the world should be, I guess would be a way to put it, but it does become important, I think, for more and more citizens that equality needs to be extended in this case. What this is, essentially, is saying that, yes, you have a right to participate in an effective and proven means of fighting bullying, but you can’t do it here, and you can’t do it with us even though you’re here and you’re with us in that school, so we’ll find you someplace else to go. It is essentially outsourcing antibullying activity in the school, and as such it falls far short of the equality provisions that we are committed to. It’s like saying: if you are of a different race and you’re being subjected to racism within your school, you can go across the street and talk about it there, but you can’t talk about it where it’s happening. That, in my estimation, falls very, very short of what we need to see.

I think there’s another point – and I know my colleague the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona referenced this last night – and it has to do with the question of parental rights. One of the columnists in the Edmonton Journal has recently written about some of the historical roots of that particular movement. But leaving that aside and talking about parents’ rights, it really says that one group of parents’ rights supersedes the rights of others. If some parents in a school feel that their rights are infringed upon by allowing a GSA in the school, then that also denies the children of other parents the same right to have the GSA.

So one group of parents’ rights then transcends the rights of others, and it’s called parental rights. I don’t accept that. I don’t accept that some parents can say, “We’re exercising our rights; there won’t be a GSA in this school,” and other parents, who have children that are being bullied in that school, are therefore denied an effective means of protecting their children from bullying, and it’s not allowed to them. Even if they want it and their children want it and they’re encouraging their children to take advantage of it, it’s not available for them in that school because one set of parents’ rights transcends the rights of others. That is not, in my view, parental rights. That is using parental rights as a smokescreen for discrimination. I think that that really fundamentally affects this.

Mr. Chairman, I wish that this debate had been framed a little differently. I wish that we had not been focusing on whether or not, you know, gay-straight alliances were appropriate. I think many people are focusing on the sexual orientation rather than on what, really, it’s about, which is the bullying.

Now, I don’t think any member of this House will stand up regardless of their religious or political views or social views and say that they think it’s okay for gay kids to be bullied. I don’t believe a single member of this House actually believes that or wants that, but the fact of the matter, at least from my perspective, is that that’s the result. That is the result. There will be kids in Catholic schools, in Christian schools, in Jewish schools, in Muslim schools, and in public schools who are gay, and they will inevitably be subject to or run the risk of being subject to bullying.

So it is, then, incumbent on all of us to ensure that those children are not bullied, that they can take whatever measures they need, whatever steps they need to protect themselves from bullying. I think we have to support that. I don’t think it’s a matter of our religious views or our social views. I think it’s a question of commitment to protecting kids from being bullied and letting kids do what they need to do to protect themselves from being bullied. If we could just all look at it through that lens, I think it might be considerably different for everyone.

Pope Francis said something that I thought was very profound when he became the Pope. He was talking about gay and lesbian people, and he said: who am I to judge? Who are we, indeed? Mr. Chairman, it’s important, from our perspective, that we maintain the principle that no child should be bullied, and if we don’t do everything possible to ensure that that doesn’t happen, then we are falling short on that principle. If we try to establish, as this amendment does, some sort of system of separate but equal, then we are falling short on the principle of equality, and that is, I think, unfortunately, what’s happening here. “Yes, we’ll let you fight bullying. We’ll let you get together with your peers and talk about it, have a support group, but not here and not with us. You’re with us for six hours a day in school, and you face what you face while you’re there, but if you want to deal with it, you have to go somewhere else, or you have to go to someone else, and we’ll help you find somebody. You know, we’re not going to do it, but there you go.”

I think that there’s no expectation that any school system will actively promote GSAs or try to encourage students to form one or join one, but if they want to form one and if they want to join one, then I don’t think we should do anything to discourage them. Certainly, asking them to go off-site or to work with someone else that’s not part of the school that they’re in is discriminatory and will certainly make them feel less than equal, so it will in fact not do enough to combat bullying in schools and may in fact further encourage the bullying of GLBTQ students.

Mr. Chairman, for those reasons, I don’t think that I can support – and I’m sure my caucus colleagues will be taking the same position to not support it – an amendment that does not promote the principle of equality. We have to get there. I’m sure we’ll get there sooner or later. I remember the debate about same-sex marriage and the battles that we had – and we had some of them right here in this Chamber – with a government that would not endorse full equality. I thought that the Supreme Court of Canada, in ruling on that, made a very wise decision in not requiring any religious organization or any religious person to change their personal views but ensuring that any loving couple in this country would be treated equally, and that's the point. They understood the importance of equality.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Just so the members know, the order of speaking that I've got will be as follows: the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure, or perhaps not, to speak to this matter which, obviously, is so divisive and touches so many sensitivities. I will do my best to not offend any of them yet try to get some of my points across. I personally am finding it rather peculiar to be the one speaking on this subject matter, being a practising Catholic myself, the father of two girls, both of them in the Catholic school system in two separate jurisdictions, one in high school in Edmonton, one in a younger grade in St. Albert, but also an educator, a teacher, a graduate of the University of Alberta from our Faculty of Education. So I almost have all bases covered on this particular subject matter.

Mr. Chairman, I have some very strong feelings, as you may have determined from my vote yesterday, which wasn't easy. As you know, voting in isolation is not an easy thing to do, but it was the right thing to do from my personal perspective, which doesn't make my perspective any better or superior to anybody else's. It is my perspective, and that's how I view how this particular dilemma that we have before us in the Chamber ought to be solved.

Mr. Chairman, there are a few tenets that we have to keep in mind. What we really are dealing with is a matter of human rights. I know, speaking with members in group settings and individually, that all of us in this Chamber agree that we want to provide our children with safe and nurturing environments in school. I believe most of us, if not all of us, in this Chamber agree that if children want a GSA, a gay-straight alliance, that helps them deal with the many challenges that a young person would be faced with if they belong to the GLBTQ community, in particular bullying by peers, we want them to have that support network. If we agree in that respect, there is nothing preventing us right here in this Chamber from actually making that happen. It's that easy. We can make that happen.

We know that even though all school boards, irrelevant whether they're Catholic or public or of other religious groups, provide nurturing, welcoming, inclusive environments, there is a difference, Mr. Chairman. There is a difference between providing a student with an inclusivity club, with an antibullying club, and providing a student with an actual GSA. You may say: "Well, Lukaszuk, you're being unreasonable here. You're splitting hairs. They're providing the student with the service that the student requires with the support. Why are you so hung up about the name?" Well, because in issues of human rights and inequality language is of the utmost importance.

Imagine this, and this is a hyperbole that I will draw. Imagine if you wanted to sign up your child in any school for lessons in a bilingual program in the German language – pick that language, for instance – and upon registering your child, the school administration says, "Well, we will be happy to enrol your child in our Austrian- or Swiss-language program." You say: "What are you talking about? It's German." "Yes, but we choose not to use that word. We call it Austrian." What's the difference? Same language, same grammar, same syntax. Your child will be learning exactly the same thing, yet there is a difference. You're not willing to acknowledge a certain group. If a child or friends of a child request a gay-straight alliance, that's exactly what they want.

Now, imagine the hypocrisy in telling the child: "We will take care of you, we will embrace you, we will provide you with an inclusive environment, but we will not mention that which is at the core of how you identify yourself and which is at the core of what causes you the issues that you are dealing with in the surroundings, with the lack of support and the bullying. We love you, we appreciate you, we will take care of you, but let's just not mention who you are. We will somehow accommodate you otherwise."

You know, Mr. Chairman, it was difficult to miss the fact that two days ago or yesterday, whenever it was that we had the vote, was the 50th anniversary of the Parks case, of an African-American woman who said: I will not be riding in the back of a bus anymore, and I've had it. She purposely sat in the front of the bus, and we know what the consequences were. She got arrested. Well, in the vein of this conversation, one would say to her: "Mrs. Parks, what is your problem? You're riding on the same bus. You're getting to the bus stop at the same time, the same bus driver. The back of the bus is just as safe as the front of the bus. Why are you splitting hairs?" Yet she insisted to be able to ride on the bus wherever she wanted to.

We know that the answer to that problem was to allow her to do so because in matters of human rights and equality the concept of different but equal does not apply. If it's true equality, you cannot provide different categories of groups based on which we cannot discriminate. If we find that so difficult to appreciate, imagine substituting the word "gay" with another category on the basis of which we cannot discriminate. Mr. Chairman, imagine if the category was black, and children in a school wanted to establish a black-white group, and imagine if a school board said: no, you can't have that; we will provide a multicultural club for you, but we will not be mentioning the word "black." Imagine what the outrage would be.

That is why, Mr. Chairman, I cannot vote in favour of any amendments that do not speak to the core of the problem. We have children who are in need. These are young, marginalized youth. We know what research shows, how many of these children end up when they lack support. Many of them lack the required support at home. They can't turn to their parents and ask for help. They can't turn to their teachers and ask for help. Maybe some of them could – I know that there are many great teachers out there that would help them out – but they are marginalized, and they won't.

Now they have a group of friends who want to help them out, and we as adults, as parents, as educators, but, most importantly, as legislators are telling them: "No, you can't have that. You can have something else just as good, but you can't have that because you are different, because you are somehow inferior, and you don't deserve to have the club that you're asking for." Any amendment that would require a different name or a different location – yes, you can have it, but across the street at the community hall or maybe in a collaborating public school across the street or in some kind of association or society downtown – is simply, Mr. Chair, not enough.

We have an opportunity here. This is one of those defining moments that come upon us every so often, where we can tell those who choose to bully any group of marginalized kids and send a message to the rest of the Canada and the rest of world that in this province no matter where you come from, no matter who you are, we will not in any way discriminate against you.

I fully agree with the Member for Edmonton-Centre that accommodating that group is in itself discrimination. We don't need to accommodate them. They're no different than you and me, Mr. Chair. They're asking for something that another student may ask for, and for some reason, just because they're gay, we're saying: "No, you can't have it. We have to name it something else. You're equal but separate."

I am very much, Mr. Chair, opposed to any incremental dispensation, as if we even have the right to dispense human rights. Those are innate rights. Those are rights that they already have. We simply have to acknowledge the fact that they already have them. I will not stand for some kind of an incremental dispensation of that. You know, today I was told: "Well, it just takes time. Just give them time. People are coming around to it, and it takes time." Well, it will take much more time if we don't show leadership right here in this Legislative Assembly. Our job is to lead by example and to show those who choose not to take leadership themselves, in their school boards or wherever it may be, that this province, this Ministry of Education will not allow for that to happen in our schools.

Also, Mr. Chair, as a parent, putting on my parent hat, I'm somewhat offended because what if I want to support my daughter in one of the schools, who perhaps may want to set up a GSA? You know, it's just too bad that one daughter that I have is still a little too young, but I can see her actually wanting to set up a GSA about four or five years from now. Why? Just because you're saying that she can't, because she's just that kind of a kid. If some school board was to tell my daughter that she can set up a baseball club and she can set up a badminton club and she can set up her Polish-Canadian club but she cannot set up a GSA, what happens to my parental rights? Those don't matter?

Mr. Chair, we have a chance to do some good work in this Assembly right now. I know that this is touching some of our most deeply held values, but at the end of the day there is no balancing act to be done. This is the fact: we have children among us who require help. These kids commit suicide. These kids are homeless. These kids can't go home and be embraced by their families in many cases. So we can put that on one side of the scale, or we can put the sensibilities of those who simply don't yet feel comfortable with it. How many children do we allow to die until the other side becomes more comfortable with this concept?

It's up to us to decide that in this Chamber, and I will not accept any amendments that simply do not allow our students to set up GSAs no matter where they are. Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I want to start off by saying that I'm actually honoured to follow the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

The Chair: If I may, hon. member, please.

Just to remind all members, we are talking about the amendment. I know this is a very intense subject matter, and I've probably allowed some latitude so far. But I suspect that we'll be talking about this bill for some time this afternoon and tonight, so if I could remind you at least for now – you will have another opportunity later – to the best of your ability to keep your comments to amendment A1.

Thank you.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Chair, just on that comment, I mean, you had an opportunity with four speakers before to remind them about the latitude.

I'm going to speak on the amendment that my colleague from Airdrie brought forward, but I think it's important to acknowledge my colleague for Edmonton-Castle Downs. I'm actually honoured to speak behind him. He and I go way back, have had a mutual respect for each other for a long time. While we've had words at times, we still have, which I think is important, a respect for each other. I think my respect has gone up a hundred per cent because I know how difficult it is for him to be in the position that he's in as a government member because, quite frankly, I've been there. I've been there, and I'm not there anymore, and it's a position that I don't envy.

I want to start off by saying that I want to make it perfectly clear that anybody who knows me in this Legislature knows that I've spent the last 22 years of my career in this Legislature fighting for the protection of children. That started way back in, I think, '93, when I introduced the PCHIP legislation, which is the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act, protecting kids from the dangers of exploitation and prostitution.

I advocated in this Assembly on numerous occasions on the issue of bullying. In fact, I brought forward a bullying bill in 2009 – it was a private member's bill – and it was to address the issue of bullying in schools, and it would have included the protection from bullying based on sexual orientation. The bill was focused on providing educators with tools to tackle bullying in school. Unfortunately, it died.

Why I'm going here at this particular time, Mr. Chair, is that I want to note something about some of the arguments on the bill, one of the reasons it was defeated, because it came from educators and administrators. At that time it came from the Calgary board of education, that sent this Assembly a letter that outlined why they did not support the bill. At that particular time, if I may, we were talking about bullying. We weren't talking about the protection of gay children; we were talking about bullying. The main reason that the Calgary board of education at that particular time didn't support the bill was, and I'm going to quote: the removal of the discretionary power also severely hampers the principal's ability to provide a safe and caring environment for its students and staff. Essentially, what that said was that the school board argued that the status quo – the status quo – was enough to provide safe spaces for students and schools. That was 2009.

So here we go, Mr. Chair. I'm going to fast-forward to 2014, and here we are once again debating how to best protect students from bullying and, specifically, how to provide LGBTQ students a safe place to learn. Now, what bothers me more than anything is the fact that I have not heard from one government member other than the mover, Calgary-North West. The discussion that we're having today truly is bothersome. We spent hours – hours – I think it was on Monday debating the private member's bill from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, and government member upon government member popped up and spoke about this. Not that it isn't an important bill, but I've been waiting and waiting and waiting for a government member to get up and speak.

I just want to touch briefly on an open letter that I received and that I know every person in the Assembly received, that was addressed to the Premier. It goes on and on – and I’m going to table this – but it talks about a young lady in Fort McMurray who had her picture taken with the Premier and who actually supported the members in Fort McMurray. The mom talks about how she sat down with her daughter and tried to explain Bill 10 to her. She tried to explain the process of an appeal to the school board for students who were denied the opportunity to form a GSA as she has helped to do. This young lady actually formed a GSA in Fort McMurray.

I asked her [the mother says] if she understood what that meant and she shook her head.

This is about the judicial review that’s addressed in Bill 10.

I asked her if she would know how to find legal counsel or begin an appeal to a school board and again she shook her head.

I asked her if doing these things would require the assistance of an adult, and she said yes, of course.

And she goes on and on and on, a very, very telling and compassionate and heartfelt letter.

I have spent 44 years in the gay world, and I have spent that because I have a very close family member who is gay. I’ve had drinks with him. I’ve danced with gay people. I had heartfelt talks with them 42 years ago. I’ve laughed with them, and I’ve cried with them. I remember having to sit down and explain to my children after they were born about what gay people did and trying to explain our very, very good friends that were gay. My younger son at the time said to me, “Mommy, is uncle gay? And I said: “Yeah. Do you have a problem with that?” He said: “Oh, no. Maybe you and I should sit down and talk because I think you’re feeling a little upset about it.” He was trying to educate me, Mr. Chair. That’s the problem that we’re facing. It’s the adults that have to be educated; it’s not the children.

I had a very, very heartfelt conversation with my former colleague from Innisfail-Sylvan Lake on Bill 202. We had a discussion when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre was talking about this particular bill. She explained to me about the fact that she had gone to her riding, and they had supported it. Then she went on to elaborate about the fact that she’d been at a waffle breakfast, and the young lady that was speaking at the waffle breakfast had talked about the fact that it wasn’t the kids that had to be educated; it was the adults. And here we are in the Assembly talking about something that we shouldn’t have to be talking about. The gay folks that I know – and there are many, and I’m sure that some of them are listening; in fact, I know for a fact a few of them are listening – have always told me that they just want to be treated equally. So if it’s okay for us to have a band club or, as the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs wanted, a German club, why is that different from having a gay club? I mean, why is it different? Why can’t they? Why can’t I have a German club or, for that matter, any club I want? If I want to establish a prayer club in the school, so be it. I think that’s the problem with what we have right now.

So while my colleagues from Edmonton-Centre and Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood don’t like the amendment, it’s a damned if you do and damned if you don’t situation. We’re trying to make an amendment, from my colleague from Airdrie, in regard to getting this bill through the process, and I understand that the government is. As my colleague from Airdrie mentioned, I am going to be presenting an amendment on an appeal process so that somehow we can provide protection for these kids.

My colleague from Highwood talked very passionately about all of the gay kids that she’s encountered over the last year and some of the very, very sad stories. I am now, on this little iPhone that we all carry around, getting e-mail after e-mail from not only constituents but people who’ve known me over the last 22 years about how they particularly feel about what we’re discussing and how it is important to stand up and talk about the importance of the protection of students.

I’m going to just try and get into them, 15 e-mails already. If I can, I’ll find some of the e-mails that I’ve gotten. Some of my colleagues, I can see, are CCed on this. It says:

I am writing to you as a member of the PC Party and an Albertan. Bill 10, that was introduced this week, has been personally embarrassing to me as a member of the party. Not only does this legislation appear to not have been well thought out; it appears to be more of a political document rather than one that reflects the spirit and intent of legislation when it applies to the rights of individuals, whether they are of the age of majority or not. As a youth I struggled with the very issue Bill 202 sought to address. While in its original form it was clearly not palatable to the MLAs of the party, a series of amendments could have sought to make compromise.

As a youth I could barely understand my own sexuality, particularly being raised in a Catholic family and a Catholic school system, yet Bill 10 would challenge those same youth to expose themselves publicly through a judicial system in order to form a club in situations where such actions are rejected by the school and/or the board of trustees. Adults can barely understand any judicial system. Adults can barely afford legal representation. How could a student possibly afford to navigate this same system? They cannot.

I seriously hope that Bill 10 is amended to remove and provide an appropriate process for the minority constituents it affects. Should Bill 10 proceed and receive assent in its current form, I will be a vocal and active opponent of its use, providing support to students who challenge it through the talents and resources available to me.

He says:

I look forward to seeing meaningful amendments of substance from the Justice minister.

He names him here.

I have never had to defend who I am as much as I have since moving to Alberta nearly nine years ago. Youth are our future, and they should be encouraged to shape the world around them. Leaders everywhere, including government, should support this value not disable it.

Then he goes on to say where he can be reached. He says:

I look forward to seeing some better results from this government when it comes to this issue. Today disappointment is the only thing on the scoreboard on this topic. Very sincerely.

And he signs his name.

Mr. Chair, I don’t think there’s anything more heartfelt or passionate than what this Assembly has to do, and they have to start listening to these vulnerable children. I think it’s important as legislators that we step back and we take a deep breath. There is no reason in hell that this bill has to pass right now, today, or tomorrow. What they can do, if the government is sincere, is that they can take some time, they can go back, and they can talk to people that this bill affects.

The Member for Calgary-North West said that she had talked to stakeholders. Well, I can tell you that the gay community that I’ve talked to in both Calgary and Edmonton don’t recall hearing from her. I want to put that on the table because if she has talked to people like Kristopher Wells, I’m okay with that, but there are other people besides Kristopher in the gay community, and I’d be pleased – pleased – to sit you down with many of them so that you can hear from them. I’m hoping that we can get more information on who you’ve talked to and the rationale behind this bill.

What I’m going to say is that I’m going to support the amendment from Airdrie. It’s a step. We’re going to be tabling another amendment in the House in regard to an appeal process, which I think may be a saving grace before we go the judiciary route. It's very successful under the department of children's services. It's easy to do. You go to the appeal panel, that's set up by the Minister of Education, and you put your case. We can have advocates before them. Then the appeal panel can make a decision that can go back to the school board on whether they, you know, confirm what the school board has said.

It's important, Mr. Chair, and I'm asking the government members to just reflect about what we're discussing here. Take a minute. If I'm getting e-mails as a Wildroser, the government members have to be getting e-mails. They have to be hearing from people across this province.

It's funny when you start hearing from the children in this province, anyone under the age of 18. They're reaching out, and I think we owe it to our children in this province.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Hon. members, I'm going to give you the speaking order as I have it, people that have indicated to speak next. I'm also going to ask the members in the Chamber if you could keep the side conversations down, please. It would be much appreciated.

Again, I'll remind all hon. members that we are speaking to amendment A1. There will be other opportunities to speak to the bill, but if you would confine your comments to A1, it might help us get through in just a little bit more order.

I will recognize the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House Sundre, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by Calgary-Shaw, followed by Battle River-Wainwright.

Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I fully appreciate what you're trying to do to keep the debate. Unfortunately, I think you're pushing against a tide, but I wish you well.

I want to comment on what each member said prior to me getting up. The members for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, Edmonton-Centre, Airdrie, Edmonton-Castle Downs, and Calgary-Fish Creek, each in their own way, articulated why they were either going to support or not support this amendment as they talked about discrimination and about rights.

Now, the issue for me is simply this. I agree with each and every one that spoke prior to me, but I'm going to look at this in a different context of how to frame this debate on this amendment. I said in my opening speech in second reading that I will support any bill that will help reduce the suicide rate in teenagers, and I will constantly work towards that. We're talking about discrimination and the GSAs. These bills – and when I say “these bills,” I'm referring to Bill 10 and to the bill that was just taken off the Order Paper, 202. What both intended to do was to legislate a process that had a proven record of reducing teenage suicides.

Discrimination is already illegal under our Charter. Discrimination against sexual orientation is illegal according to our Charter. So the rights exist, but clearly we absolutely know, everybody here, that discrimination still exists. So to cut to the chase, I'm going to support the amendment, and I'm going to support it not because it gets to where we need to go, but what I am absolutely in favour of is legislation that would legitimize the process that has been proven to reduce teenage suicides. To me, this is about life and death.

Granted, it is directed at the GBLTQ community. Granted, it is about discrimination, but the fact is that we know there's a segment of this group that has a high suicide rate. And we know that what these bills intended to do was to implement the processes, which are known as GSAs, that actually have a proven record of reducing suicides. With that, I cannot in good conscience cast a protest vote even if I could get an incremental step towards getting this past at some point in time where we absolutely contribute to the reduction of the suicide rate amongst teenagers, particularly these gay teenagers, that have such a difficult time dealing with discrimination.

So it's a double-edged sword. Is the bill getting there? Well, the arguments are out there, and I happen to agree with most of the arguments. I'm pretty much opposed to the bill. Is there such a thing as balancing between the rights of parents and discrimination, that is protected in the Charter? I do not believe that whatsoever. Discrimination is illegal, and we are still dealing with the fact that we're confronted with discrimination and how to reduce that, how to bring people in compliance with our Charter, and how in the end we can reduce teenage suicide rates. I will take every small step on that way to reducing teenage suicide rates.

To me, it's about life and death, and the benefits that have been proven by these GSA clubs are clearly something that if the government came up with something better, that was proven, I'm all for it. I would not hesitate. But we have a long way to go as a society because of just the way we're debating this amendment today, the way we are debating these bills today.

We're not there yet, and we do have a long way to come and a long way to go, but I will support every little inch. Even though I realize the government has all the votes – they will decide this amendment as they will decide all the amendments here – I will not vote against any amendment or bill that would get us partway there, one-tenth of the way there, and I will gladly support the bill that will get us all the way there. I will do whatever I can do to help reduce that teenage suicide rate, and I won't stop until we get there.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The next speaker, the Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. It is a true pleasure to rise and speak to this amendment and to the bill in general, that we are debating here today, Bill 10. You know, I want to thank the members for Edmonton-Centre, Edmonton-Castle Downs, and Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood for their thoughtful and very meaningful points that they've made here today. This is not an easy issue. It's not an easy issue for anyone. Unfortunately, it should be a very easy issue because, as has been said time and time again, this is about simple rights. This is about finding out what it means if you are an LGBTQ student who is struggling to get by, wants some support, feels your best place to get it is from your peers in your own school, in your own environment.

It's taken me a while to get here. I'll admit that this was an issue that I wasn't entirely familiar with even when Motion 503 first came, but this has haunted me ever since. It has been deep in my conscience that we missed an opportunity then, and I'm fearful, Mr. Chair, that we are going to miss an opportunity now.

I think that the Member for Edmonton-Centre put forward a very strong piece of legislation in Bill 202. It's, unfortunately, no longer on the Order Paper, and now what we're dealing with is very clearly a piece of legislation that was tossed together out of sheer panic, and we're now waiting on the government to toss together amendments that are being put together out of sheer panic. It's ludicrous that we're debating human rights legislation and it's being written on the fly. It is absolutely insane, but here we are.

Here is the philosophical problem that I have with an amendment like this. I recognize that in this Assembly the government is going to pass this bill, and we can either allow them to pass a total piece of crap . . .

An Hon. Member: Language.

Mr. Wilson: I will withdraw that.

. . . a total piece of rubbish, or we can try to at least do something. That is the philosophical question that I'm struggling with right now. Do we reject amendments based on the principles that have been laid out very clearly by other members in this Assembly today? And they're absolutely right. They're bang on. Rights are rights; it's that simple. Or do we reject it and allow this poorly written legislation to do undue harm to our kids? It's a tough, tough question, Mr. Chairman.

You know, I was proud to stand up and vote against this bill last night. It was the right thing to do. I probably will be voting against it in third reading as well because I don't believe that anything short of coming full circle, back to what the Member for Edmonton-Centre had originally posed in her legislation, will be good enough. That being said, when we look at the options, I'm not sure that I'm prepared to dig my heels in the sand and say that it's all or nothing because those who are prepared to only get what they need are inevitably going to get nothing. I think that it is a problem for me right now.

Do we support it? I think we need to. I think we need to have this amendment in place. I'm not sure what the government is going to bring forward, but right now the reality is that this amendment makes this bill better. It catches kids that this government is willingly allowing to fall through the cracks. I fully recognize that it's not everything that we want and that it's not a hundred per cent. You know, we're not there, but the alternative is just not good enough.

In this case, with this amendment, I thank the Member for Airdrie for coming up with this. I know that all members of our caucus and particularly the Member for Airdrie have spent a lot of time coming up with what he feels is a way of balancing many of the rights. We've often heard that as we debate this bill, balancing rights. There are a lot of rights that we're trying to balance, Mr. Chairman. We are trying to balance, you know, freedom of speech, freedom of expression, freedom of association, the right not to be discriminated against on the basis of sexual orientation.

That's another problem with this bill. As it's currently written, we're putting into the Alberta Bill of Rights that we will not discriminate based on sexual orientation, yet in the very same piece of legislation we are giving our school boards the authority to discriminate based on sexual orientation. I am very much disappointed in the way that the government has handled this, but we're here. The choices before us are simple. We can either help them see the light and try and give our kids a chance, who they've clearly turned their backs on at this point, or we can continue to fight and hope that in time they get it right. My gut is telling me right now that we need to do what we can to catch as many kids as possible, and I think that in that sense I will be supporting this amendment, and I thank the member for bringing it forward. I would encourage the government to do the same. I look forward to the continued debate on this amendment and on Bill 10.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Again, just a reminder to members to speak on the amendment as much as possible.

The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure for me to rise today to talk on the amendment. I voted in favour of second reading of this bill because most people in this Assembly know that Committee of the Whole is where you get to bring forward amendments. I've seen many bills that I didn't care for to begin with get corrected and carry on after that, and I was very curious to see what sort of amendments would come forward, which is why I supported it in second reading.

Personally, I didn't like the bill, Mr. Chairman, and was hoping for amendments because, frankly, I think it's absurd to ask students to go to court to fight for the right to set up a GSA. I also personally think it is abhorrent and ridiculous that we would ever suggest that our school boards would have the right to tell students whether or not they can set up a GSA.

I've read this amendment as proposed by the member. I really respect the member for bringing it forward, and I understand what he's trying to do, but in my mind, Mr. Chairman, this amendment still isn't good enough. I'm very curious about what sort of amendments are going to continue to come forward, but this doesn't go far enough.

School boards are created to enforce education policy, Mr. Chairman. That's what they're there to do. They deal with education. Gay-straight alliances haven't got a thing to do with education, not one single thing, so in my mind no school board should have the right to tell students that they're not allowed to set one up.

I can say this because I am Catholic. I converted to Catholicism because my wife is Portuguese; she's Catholic. We send our kids to a Catholic school, so I feel able to say this, Mr. Chairman. Some people have called and argued with me that Catholic school boards have a different right than public school boards in that they're faith based. But my understanding from all my studying of the Constitution is that that enables Catholic school boards to teach their faith within the schools – teach their faith within the schools – not enforce values on their students. I mean, to simply suggest that they have that ability – is it going to be now that students are going to get docked grades and not be allowed if their parents get divorced or split up or something? I mean, they don't have the right to enforce those values. They have the right and ability by our Constitution to teach faith but not to enforce it.

One of my kids is six, and my oldest is turning nine shortly after Christmas, Mr. Chairman, and I believe I teach them values. In fact, most of the parents who have called me rather upset with some of this have said, "I want the school board to be able to enforce our values." I said: "Great. What if the school board has different values than you and then you don't like it?" "Well, no. You're right. Parents should have the ultimate authority to teach kids their values." I said: "Great. Then you can't have it both ways. You can't say that the school board can enforce them as long as I agree with them but that they can't have the ability to enforce those values when I don't." And they all agreed that parents have the ultimate responsibility for that.

I've taught my boys that they need to be fair, that they need to be equitable, that they need to love, that every single person regardless of their disability or their race or their colour or their sexual orientation or the colour of their hair, what clothes they wear, is equal, and it doesn't matter whether you're Catholic or Muslim or Protestant or have no religious values at all. Everybody lives by those principles in their hearts, or they have bigger issues to deal with.

So if my boys, I was thinking, were in school – it doesn't matter if it's a public school or a Catholic school – and they saw friends that they have in junior high or high school that are gay and being picked on and they decided they wanted to set up a gay-straight alliance, I taught them the values of defending people and to stand up for people and to have everyone be treated with respect. There is no way I would accept a school board of any religious background or nonreligious background to dictate to my sons whether or not they're allowed to partner with gay students to set up a gay-straight alliance.

And, heaven forbid – I don't know – what if one of my sons needs a gay-straight alliance because they're being picked on or bullied? The school board is going to tell them what values they're going to be able to stand for, those kids that want to defend each other and protect each other? Ultimately, it doesn't matter what your religious faith is. Agree that everyone is equal before God or created equal, whether or not you believe in God. Dictating what we're going to allow our students to do when it is something that has absolutely nothing to do with education is absurd.

Now, I still believe we could probably come forward with amendments that can fix this. I hope we can. For me, this is about my sons. This is about what they are going to be allowed to do in the school to help defend people who are weak, who are picked on, who are bullied or are treated without respect, Mr. Chairman. That's what I taught them. I believe they can make those judgments and create the allegiances and the clubs and the friendships that they need to stand for those continued values. It doesn't need to be dictated by a school board, and it in no way infringes on the school board's ability to enforce educational policy, which is what they're elected to do.

This amendment, again, to the member, I really appreciate. I just don't think it goes far enough. I hope that we come up with an amendment that does, or I still won't be able to support this bill in third reading.

Thank you.

Ms Notley: Well, that was fun. I've got to say that I am pleased to be able to stand up after that. Let me just offer my rare congratulations to the Member for Battle River-Wainwright for a very passionate and extremely articulate defence of what is, I think, a growing number of people's position and his defence of the issue of parental rights.

As I say and as I've said before, I too am a parent, and I get deeply offended when I'm told what my kids can't do. It's one thing as a parent to say: "I want my kids to do this. I want my kids to have the opportunity to do this." It's quite another thing to be told that a different parent has a right to tell me what my kids cannot do. That's why I think this whole notion of parental rights, regardless of the insidious nature of its origin, at this point is logically fallible and doesn't make sense. The real rights here are the rights of parents to promote a certain set of values for their kids and to actively have those kids engage, not for another parent to tell me that my kids can't do that unless my kids are breaching the Charter of Rights and Freedoms by doing it.

Now, I want to say that that was an excellent defence of the general position I think those of us certainly in my caucus believe in. I also want to thank the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs as well for his comments. I found them very helpful when he talked about issues of identity and issues of language and how, you know, if for some arbitrary reason somebody said that you couldn't refer to a child's ethnic background as German, that would not make any sense because that's who they are and that's their identity. Why would you be told that you can learn whatever language you want, just don't call it what it is?

Ultimately, I think that's the problem with this amendment. It still allows for this notion where a school or a school board could essentially refuse to call something a gay-straight alliance, and it still allows a school or a school board to refuse to protect gay kids from bullying by using the strategy of saying: "You know what? I know it's really hard sometimes when you go out there and you get bullied, but know this, that you're special. You, like any other person in this school, are special. You're important, you're loved, you're smart, you're a good athlete, you're not a good athlete, but you're a great singer. Who knows? But you're my friend, and I care about you, and the fact that you're gay may actually have something to do with it, but either way it has something to do with it because it's a good thing, and I care about you." That's what is the most effective means of ensuring that a child who is bullied because of their sexual orientation can recover from the pain of being bullied. That's how kids recover from the pain of being bullied. Anybody who's ever been bullied – and probably some people in this building have been – knows that the fastest way to recover from being bullied is by finding friends who tell you that they like you and they value you for who you are. That's how you recover from being bullied. You don't ask for someone to be punished because they were bullied. You have other people tell you that you're a valued person and you're a valued human and you're loved and you're cared for and you're respected. That's how you overcome bullying, and that's what these clubs do.

This amendment would basically say that we're not going to let you have a club that will tell you that you are valuable and you are smart and you are creative and we love you for who you are, including the fact that you are gay; we're not going to let you have a club that does that. We will let you have a club that teaches everybody that being mean is bad, but we're not going to let you have a club that lets you talk about your own experience as a gay kid and what it makes you feel like when you're told that your experience of being gay is less than somebody else's experience of being part of the human race. That's why this amendment won't work, and that's why generic antibullying programs won't work.

Implicit in this is the acceptance that it's okay for people in power to say: we don't like the word "gay," and we don't like the word "alliance" associated with the word "straight." Implicit in this amendment and implicit in the bill is the belief that it's okay for someone else's parent to tell me that I can't say "gay" and "straight" and "alliance" to my kid on the school property. Implicit in this bill and this amendment is the idea that it's okay for either a school board or a school or a principal to say to a kid who's being bullied: "We don't like to use that word here. Can you dial it back a bit and be a little bit less who you are? Would that be okay with you? Could you just drop it down a notch and try to be a little less gay and don't talk to people about being gay?" It's like telling a child of colour: "Could you be a little less coloured? Could you be maybe a little more white?" I mean, that's what this implicitly says. That's what this bill implicitly says, and that's what this amendment implicitly says.

I know that the intention was good within a context sort of. I know it was. But the problem is that it still essentially restates what is fundamentally wrong about this bill and what is fundamentally wrong about any school that receives 1 cent of public dollars from this public body ever saying that you can't say the word "gay" in a school. It's like saying that you can't say the word "girl" in a school, you can't say the word "wheelchair" in a school, and you can't say the word "black" in a school. Would we ever accept that? No. So why would we accept any school, school board, principal, or someone else's parent saying that you can't say the word "gay" in a school? You just wouldn't do it. You guys need to understand that the construction of Bill 10 is fundamentally and foundationally flawed and is absolutely incapable of being repaired and that instead what needs to be put in place is the effective outcome that was suggested through Bill 202, which is a statement that no school board will ever say to their students, "You cannot talk about being gay," because that's wrong, full stop.

Now, I said this before, but I think it's really important to remember. The Edmonton public school board allows for gay-straight alliances where kids ask for them, and the Edmonton public school board also has faith-based schools and programs within it.

I want to make this very clear. I believe very strongly, myself having been raised in the Anglican Church, knowing many, many people who are Catholic and who are very engaged in their Catholic faith and knowing many people who are in other churches as well that the vast majority of them do not define their religion by the prohibition on saying the phrase "gay is okay". They don't. They really don't. You can learn about faith, you can learn about religious doctrine, you can learn about those things without negating the value and the respect and the equality deserved by all Albertans who happen to be members of sexual minorities.

This is not a complicated concept, my friends. It really isn't. It just can be done. In the same way that historically you may have been able to dig deep enough into some type of religious doctrine to find statements that suggested women are less than men, we wouldn't accept that now. We wouldn't accept that in our publicly funded schools now. So why would we accept this? We just shouldn't. The fact of the matter is that equality is equality is equality. Either we stand for it or we don't. We don't do it halfway for some rights and all the way for other rights. Either you're for equality or you're not for equality.

For that reason, we cannot support the amendment that was put forward by the Member for Airdrie. We continue to be deeply troubled by the assumptions inherent within Bill 10, and we will continue to fight against its passage. We will hope that eventually this Assembly will rethink its refusal to deliberate upon and ultimately accept the values which were reflected and promoted through Bill 202.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Are there others on the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the vote on amendment A1.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West. [interjections] No. That was on the amendment.

Back to the government, and then I'll come back to the opposition.

Ms Jansen: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'd like to propose an amendment to Bill 10. If we could distribute it right now.

The Chair: Hon. member, you may speak to amendment A2.

Ms Jansen: Thank you Mr. Chairman. I would like to propose an amendment in Committee of the Whole on Bill 10 that would further this government's commitment to a zero-tolerance attitude towards discrimination of any kind.

I think we can all agree that Alberta is a place where we want to see respect for all people of all backgrounds. That is something I feel very strongly about, as do my caucus colleagues. It's also a place where we put the utmost value on individual freedoms. That's why it's so important that we find the right balance. We have been listening very closely to the dialogue this week, and that is why I propose the following amendment.

Part A. Section 2(4) is amended by striking out the proposed section 35.1(3) and (4) and substituting the following:

- (3) A decision of the board under section 42 with respect to an appeal relating to subsection (1) is final.

We are removing the reference to the courts. It is still subject to judicial review, which is the same for any agency, board, or commission, but we realize that that is complex and confusing. Further,

- (4) If, in a decision referred to in subsection (3), the board decides that it will not support a student in establishing the organization described in subsections (1) and (2) as requested by the student, the Minister shall facilitate and support the establishment of the organization.

What we are saying very clearly, Mr. Chair, is that Alberta kids who want a GSA will get a GSA when they ask for one, and if they can't have it in their school, Alberta Education will help them get their GSA.

Part B. Section 2(5) is amended by striking out the proposed section 58.2(2) and (3) and substituting the following:

- (2) A decision of the board under section 42 with respect to an appeal relating to subsection (1) is final.

Part C. Section 3(5) is amended by striking out the proposed section 16.1(3) and (4) and substituting the following:

- (3) A decision of the board under section 123 with respect to an appeal relating to subsection (1) is final.
- (4) If, in a decision referred to in subsection (3), the board decides that it will not support a student in establishing the organization described in subsections (1) and (2) as requested by the student, the Minister shall facilitate and support the establishment of the organization.

This makes GSAs accessible to every child in a school in Alberta. We have a commitment to providing supports and services for GSAs in particular – we believe this strongly – to children if the board refuses. We respect a local board's autonomy. We know that our boards will do the right thing. On the rare occasion that they won't, the students will have the Ministry of Education behind them to set up their GSA in every instance where a GSA is refused.

Part D. Section 3(12) is amended by striking out the proposed section 50.2(2) and (3) and substituting the following:

- (3) A decision of the board under section 123 with respect to an appeal relating to subsection (1) is final.

Mr. Speaker, we have worked hard to balance the rights of schools, parents, school boards, and students. However, it has always been our objective to put the rights of the students first. We have listened to those concerns. We do not want our Alberta students to have to navigate a court system. They don't have to; they have us.

This amendment will clarify that in the event a student is denied setting up a club, the Minister of Education will facilitate and support the establishment of such a club. We will help Alberta kids get their GSAs. This government stands up for the rights of all students, and we are very proud to further our commitment to children with this amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Again, I'm trying to work through: Airdrie, Edmonton-Centre, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Anderson: I shall be brief. Again, I want to make sure that we try to keep a good tone in this House when we are talking about these amendments and have respect. I've got to say that I find this to be just – if you could please clarify. It's a little bit mystifying because we just talked about an amendment that apparently didn't go far enough, but now I'm reading this, and it says: "If, in a decision referred to in subsection (3)," so if a board refuses to establish a GSA or other group, diversity club, et cetera, then it says that "the Minister shall facilitate and support the establishment" of that group. Now, the problem is that there's a period at the end of that sentence, and what that would infer, then, is that it would have to be off-site. I guess I don't understand the purpose of it because I don't know if what the kids are looking for is an off-site GSA from the school. I don't understand that.

The purpose of the previous amendment was to make sure that the child who is requesting the GSA – if, for example, there was a faith-based school that said, "Can we do it a different way and call it something else?" or whatever, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera, whatever it is, they would have to work with that child on an actual support strategy for the bullying that the child was facing in the school, not push them to go outside the school somewhere.

I guess I'm just a little confused about it because I thought the point was to try to help with the bullying that the child was experiencing in the school. If the answer to starting a GSA is no, then why would the government of Alberta come in and start a GSA on nonschool property? I just don't get it. I don't understand it.

I just think that it would make a whole lot more sense if what we're trying – I think process is becoming a little bit more important here than outcome. The outcome is to protect the student who is being bullied in the school. Now, we might have a different view about how to best accomplish that, but certainly one would think it would be a better suggestion to have that school be responsible to ensure that there was an antibullying and support strategy for that specific student in their school and that that would be more important than just simply saying – the school can essentially say, "Sorry; no," to the GSA and then send them to the Ministry of Education, who starts a GSA outside of the school. I don't understand that.

This is a confusing amendment although, as I've said many times, I support many of the points in Bill 10, and I understand the balance with local autonomy that you're trying to achieve and, you know, the balance with religious liberties. These faith-based schools are trying to make sure that their curriculum and extracurricular activities are consistent and all that. I get that. I understand it. But I'm not understanding how we're addressing the bullying issue here with this amendment. So I don't think I can – well, I know I can't support it.

The Chair: Hon. Member for Calgary-North West, did you care to respond at this time, or did you want to wait till after successive speakers?

Ms Jansen: I'll wait until the speakers have spoken.

The Chair: Okay. The Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chair. I'm responding now to amendment A2, brought forward by the government. Two things are happening here. One, this amendment is institutionalizing segregation, that a certain group of children will be over here and another group of children will supposedly have their own GSA somewhere else. This is segregation. This is not an improvement on what we're trying to do. This is not moving forward. This is saying that if the kid is bullied in this school – sorry.

My second point – and I guess this is what's really making me angry – is that this is the government, the Minister of Education, backstopping discrimination in schools that say no. It is backstopping that discrimination by saying: okay; we won't make you do anything here; we'll go off somewhere else and segregate these children and take them somewhere else.

Mr. Mason: To be with their gay friends.

Ms Blakeman: To be with their gay friends, says my colleague from Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

That's segregation. Surely to God, we have passed that. Have we not in North America managed to move past that point? Have we not learned the lessons from apartheid? Have we not learned the lessons of the civil rights movement in the States? I mean, I was a baby then. I'm well into middle age now. Have we not learned these lessons? How is this helpful to a child, to be told: "No, our school won't address your request for a peer-support group for at-risk kids. We will send you to the Minister of Education, who is going to do something else for you."

You know, folks, why don't we just vote in support of GSAs? Everybody is dancing around it. I think that's what we need to do, and I think it's possible to do that here, today, now. That's what needs to happen. I think it's pretty clear to everybody that that's what's needed: peer support groups for at-risk children who are of a sexual minority or have gender identity questions. That's all we need to do. But to allow the Minister of Education to officially – officially – backstop discrimination by a school towards an identifiable group of people and treat them differently than they are treated in a different school is backstopping discrimination.

I believe that the Minister of Education is here to set the policy on the curriculum that our kids are taught, but there are a number of other things that get encompassed in that, and I just cannot believe – I'm like my colleague from Airdrie. We come down on different sides of things quite often, but I think we're in the same place on this one: are you kidding me? Seriously? This government just voted down an amendment where, with a bullied kid, it would have been required to deal with that child? The government just voted that down so that you could officially give your blessing to a school to be allowed to discriminate against a child?

You are good people. You came here to do good things. I know you did. Every one of us got elected here to do good things for people. Please do good things today. We can help a group of children. We can get out in front of them. We can actually do something in this Legislature that is far reaching, that has a tangible effect, a tangible, positive effect on children in this province. We can do that today.

But saying that it's okay for this school to discriminate because we're going to take the kid away somewhere, really identify them, really make them stick out, really discriminate against them, to take them somewhere else to, I hope, give them a gay-straight alliance, a peer support group – and the Minister of Education will foot the bill. I'm assuming there's money involved. Are they going to take their peers, too? How do you know who wants to join this group and who doesn't? Do you bus them all somewhere? They're all supposed to meet at the front door for the discriminated group? Show up at the front door at 4 o'clock and we'll bus you all somewhere else? This is not making sense anymore. You've tried so hard not to do this that you have come back around, and you're kind of kicking yourself in the butt, frankly, in trying to pretzel yourself around this issue.

Please, for these kids this is not curriculum. These are children. These are our children, our youth. Please do not allow this amendment to pass, where we would be institutionalizing – really institutionalizing – discrimination against our children. That's what this is. It's segregation. That's what it's saying: we're not going to treat all kids the same; we're not going to recognize that bullying is about pulling a kid out and saying, "you're weird and different, so I can pick on you and do things to you." Now you're making the Minister of Education the bully because he's the one that's going to pull that different group out.

I recognize that you are trying to do the right thing. I recognize that this was done with a good heart and that you are trying to solve some problems here, but it didn't solve the problem. It actually made it worse. You made the Minister of Education into a bully and allowed discrimination. Well, that's what it is, you know. A bully pulls somebody out and makes a big deal out of them. I know you're trying to do the right thing, so please do the right thing. Just allow these kids to have gay-straight alliances, their peer support groups, in their own school.

Please, don't make this any more complicated than it needs to be. I'm going to ask you to vote this down and allow another amendment on the floor that is going to give these kids their peer-support groups in their own schools, where they can go and be with their peers, not get bused somewhere or sent down the street or told to meet on Saturday mornings.

It needs to be in their own school where they can go at lunch and go: "This is what just happened to me. What am I supposed to do? Do you think this is wrong? I don't know. I want to talk to my friends about it." That's the point of a peer-support group, and that's what we were trying to accommodate. What we're trying to allow these kids to do is to help each other. Please allow them to do that. They're actually kind of better at it than we are. Right now I'm sure this is not the outcome that you expected, institutionalized discrimination and segregation for these kids. It's just not right. Please, we can do better than this. We can do better than this.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I wished that the Member for Calgary-North West had provided more information in her remarks about how this is going to work in practice, because, you know, without some context, it simply just doesn't make a lot of sense to me.

Now, this is a government, Mr. Chairman, that has no fear or trepidation about stepping on school boards when it suits them. They took away the right of school boards to set taxes and collect their own money. They fired school boards when they chose to. They take away the right of the school board to appoint their own superintendent without government approval. They trample on the rights of school boards all the time. Now all of a sudden they are very, very careful to protect the authority of school boards to disallow gay-straight alliances, and all of a sudden they're big, big champions of the rights of school boards.

Now they're going to get rid of the silliness about going to the courts. I mean, I thought that was hilarious. I had this image in my mind of kids pooling their allowances to go to the Supreme Court, you know, in order to challenge a school board's decision. That's gone, but now the board's decision is final except that, Mr. Chairman, now the minister is mandated to provide a GSA. So what, then, have we protected on the part of the school board?

There are two choices. The member didn't clarify this at all when she enthusiastically reversed her position for the third time, and we don't really know in practice how it's going to work. Is the minister going to be responsible for making sure that the kids can meet in the school as if they were any other club operating as an extracurricular club within the school, or is the minister going to find some other place for the kids to meet? That's a huge difference. If it's the latter, then it is exactly as the Member for Edmonton-Centre said. It's institutionalized apartheid of gay students. It is a separation, very much akin to the segregation policy that existed in the southern United States up until the mid-1960s, a separation, separate but equal. You can have your own water fountain, but don't use ours. That's what that is.

Now, if it's the other alternative – and that is that the minister will make sure that the students in the school can have their GSA as if they were any other extracurricular body – then what we're doing is just putting window dressing on the rights of school boards, because you're basically saying: "Well, you get to say no, and then the minister is going to come in and make sure that in practice your decision is irrelevant and has no bearing. You've lost control over what happens in your schools and whether or not the kids have the GSA, because the minister is going to do it."

So we don't know which it is. We don't know how this is going to work, and, quite frankly, Mr. Chairman, I don't think this is anything more than words. I don't think this is about making sure every kid has access to a gay-straight alliance. I think it's just about creating the impression of blowing some smoke so that either the school boards don't know that their rights have been taken away by the government, because the minister is going to assume those rights, or on the other hand they're just going to try and pretend that students have the same rights as everyone else and that they're actually equal, but actually they're not going to be equal. You know, it's an attempt to create the impression of two different things at the same time, and they can't both be right.

I think this amendment is not suitable, won't solve the problem, and I don't think that the people who've been so critical of the government in the last few days are not going to see through this. I think they are absolutely going to see through this and see it for exactly what it is, a desperate attempt to try and square a circle that can't be squared. You know, you have to do one or the other. Either you have to say, "You know what? Kids have a right to have a GSA in a school regardless of what a teacher, a principal, or a school board might say," or you've got to say, "They can't." We don't know what that is because the mover of the motion didn't tell us. I would hope that she would tell us. Sooner would be better.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to amendment A2?

Ms Jansen: Yes, Mr. Chairman. If you're looking for clarification, I'm happy to provide clarification on that. Nothing in this amendment stipulates that the GSA has to be off site. Nothing in the amendment stipulates that. I appreciate that you haven't had a lot of information, but to go to a place where you bring up terms like segregation is very unhelpful to this conversation.

You can see that our end goal here is very simple. We are trying to make sure every child in every school in this province has the opportunity to take part in a GSA. That's what this amendment does, and we certainly hope that you appreciate the spirit of this amendment and the fact that that is what we are looking to do.

Thank you.

The Chair: Hon. members, just briefly, before we get to the next speaker, might we revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Thank you for the indulgence of my colleagues here. I just want to take the opportunity. We have a couple of keen, interested parties who've joined us: the mayor from Sturgeon county, Mr. Tom Flynn, a long-time friend of many of ours and a hard worker for many Albertans; Ian McKay, the general manager from Sturgeon county; and Pat Tighe, one of the councillors from Sturgeon county. They've just had a meeting with the Minister of Transportation. I appreciate them taking the time.

Bill 10 An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children (continued)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. I think I just need a clarification, honestly, because then I will know how to vote and I think many of us will know how to vote on this. Does this amendment make gay-straight alliances mandatory in all schools across all boards in the schools themselves or not? If this amendment is passed, are gay-straight alliances now mandatory in every school, "in" being the keyword, or is that not what the amendment says and they can either be in or out of the school? Could it be either/or? Can we just get clarification on that?

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Chair. What we are saying here is that we are asking every school to be accommodating of a GSA where one is asked for, and we sincerely hope that in every school where a student asks for one, one will be provided. Where the school board says no, that student now does not have to go to the court. They come to the Alberta Ministry of Education, and we will provide that GSA for them, hopefully within the school environment, but if that is impossible, we will make sure they get the GSA regardless.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Okay. Well, you know, for just a minute I was sitting there with bated breath thinking: oh, my goodness, maybe we've actually achieved what was originally set out to be achieved by the Member for Edmonton-Centre. For just a second. Then she said: if possible, but if it's not possible, then it will be somewhere else. Notwithstanding how hard it was for you guys to hear the words "apartheid" and "segregation" and "water fountains" and "front, back of the bus," all that kind of stuff, unfortunately that gives meaning to that analysis. Either the GSA is in the school or it's not in the school. If the GSA is meeting across the street in the 7-Eleven parking lot, it is being treated differently than the other school clubs. The kids who have been bullied, who are desperately seeking support and remediation from that bullying, are being treated differently than kids in other school clubs.

We've been writing this pretty much throughout the afternoon. People are probably in the backroom there drafting as we speak. You know, I would love to see this government come in with a subamendment to their amendment adding the phrase: in the school the student attends. You know, frankly, if you could make a subamendment and add that phrase, I think we'd have victory. It would be a fabulous display of democracy doing what it's meant to do. As we kind of came up with that collaboratively and collectively on this floor, it would be great.

Without that, though, unfortunately, those four or five words that I just laid out are the very heart of the difference that we've been talking about over and over and over again here. You can't treat kids differently. You can't treat clubs differently. You can't institutionalize and/or show respect for a school that refuses to allow their students to use the word "gay" combined with "straight" and "alliance" in a club that exists at the school that is voluntary to attend outside of normal school hours and which is not part of the curriculum. A school board which prohibits that should not be encouraged, should not be protected by this legislation, and, quite frankly, Mr. Chair, should not receive public funding from this Legislature at all.

I will simply say that I am imploring the member opposite or any of the members opposite to bring forward a subamendment to add the phrase: at the school attended by the student who made the request. If that happens, then we're good to go. It's kind of a weird path to take. We would have gotten there with the Member for Edmonton-Centre's bill a lot faster, but we get to the same place if you add that phrase, and you will have my complete congratulations and support if we get to that place. But without that, we have a problem, and we have a very real problem.

As I said before, I talked about what's implicit in this legislation and the assumptions that are included in it, many of which are deeply troubling to me for a number of reasons that I think I've articulated several times already, so I'm not going to do that again. But I'm going to say that I'm looking for that subamendment from the government because that would fix the problem. I'd be interested to hear whether there is any willingness over there to consider such a subamendment.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there other speakers to amendment A2? The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I just wanted to finish up by reiterating that nothing in this amendment stipulates that this would be off site. We believe that within this amendment we are fulfilling our promise to respect school board autonomy and still provide the opportunity for students to have a gay-straight alliance. It would be called a gay-straight-alliance, and we want to make that perfectly clear.

You assume that we're taking kids away from their school. We are hopeful that schools will accommodate students every time a student asks for a GSA in this province. What's the endgame in all of this? We want to make sure that every student in this province has access to a gay-straight alliance. I believe we are doing that with this amendment, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: I don't understand why the government is trying to preserve a school's or a school board's autonomy when that autonomy is discriminatory. Why is this protection being offered to schools or to school boards? This is public education. We all share in that. It's a co-operative effort. As I was just saying to my colleague, they're in our communities. We don't send our kids to boarding schools somewhere else. The schools themselves are in our communities. They often are community hubs. They have other things in schools.

I am failing to understand why there is such a determination, a stubbornness by the government – I'm going to air quote this just so that we know what we're talking about – to respect school boards' autonomy. What I'm seeing here is the autonomy to discriminate, and I don't understand why the government is not choosing to say: "Schools will do this. It's not curriculum. It is a peer support group. It's an after-school or outside of school time activity." I don't understand why this government cannot say to schools: "You will do this. On this particular issue you will do it because that's who we are. We don't discriminate. We don't take kids aside."

I don't think schools should have the ability to say: you cannot have a GSA. Why? Why are we protecting this for schools and for school boards? Why is the government protecting the ability to discriminate amongst their children, amongst their pupils, and say: "Book club? Great. Math club? Great. Basketball team? Super. GSAs? No." What is behind this? Why are you doing this to protect a school board's or a school's autonomy to discriminate? That's what's happening. I know that's not what you want to do, but what you are now presenting is – you know, a kid is now going to have to go to the Minister of Education. Knock, knock, knock. "Dear Minister of Education, my school turned me down. They wouldn't do this. They discriminated against me. They won't allow me to create this after school club like how everybody else can have their after school club, peer support group. Now I need the ministry to do it or the minister to do it." I cannot imagine how the minister can go back to the school and say, "Well, you wouldn't hold it in this school, but I'm the minister, and I'm going to hold it in your school." What? You're going to rent a little piece of it? How can you possibly do that?

Why are we making this so hard? The point here is that at-risk kids can leave their classrooms and go to a place in their school where they can have an organized peer support group. Why are we trying so hard not to let that happen? That's what I don't understand. Please try and explain that to me. Maybe I can understand why you're doing this. I just don't see right now why you're making it so complicated, why you're allowing segregation, encouraging it even, and why kids can't just have a peer support gay-straight alliance in their school, easily accessible to them, without having to go outside and go to the ministry and beg them to intervene and put it on somewhere else. Please, this is easy. Please just let these kids have their GSA in their own schools.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Other speakers? The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

5:30

Mr. Mason: Thank you. Mr. Chair, the hon. Member for Calgary-North West talks about: we hope, we hope, we hope. You know, well, hope springs eternal. I've been here for 14 years, and I still keep hoping the government will do the right thing. I'm hopeful, but it doesn't happen. That's the problem with this amendment. It comes back to what I was saying, and that is that you either are going to overrule a school board and just pretend to let them make the decision, or you're going to accept the school board decision and continue to allow them the right to deny GSAs. Then you're going to take the kids somewhere else and connect them with kids that may or may not be from their school, not in the place where the bullying and the education are taking place.

That's not good enough. That's discrimination. That's not equality. That is treating them differently than other kids. So it's perpetuating the discrimination that we've been talking about. It is, in many ways, a segregation of those kids. When they come together to talk about the bullying, they are treated differently than other kids that come together to talk or do the things that are important to them. That is the difference. The amendment doesn't fix the problem. The amendment is nothing more than window dressing that leaves essentially the same situation as exists now and that existed with the original government bill, Bill 10, and that is to allow GBLTQ students to be discriminated against in the education system.

As I've mentioned before, this government has no qualms about taking rights away from school boards when it comes to taxation or firing school boards or taking away their rights to appoint their own superintendents – they'll trample on the rights of school boards whenever they want to and whenever it's convenient – but this one right, this one power of school boards that they're intent on protecting is the right to discriminate. Now, that is hardly – hardly – a commitment to, one, equality rights or, two, the autonomy and independence of school boards. Mr. Chairman, it's neither. This government should be ashamed of itself.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you. The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood is correct. Really, this is not something to be proud of.

The Member for Calgary-North West says that we're overreacting over the fact that GSAs would not be in the schools. She says: we hope they will be in the schools. Now, here's the thing. We often say: we hope people will pay their taxes. We don't typically write legislation which then says: if you decide not to pay your taxes, that decision rests with you, and there's no appeal from it. We don't do that. It is a profoundly disingenuous argument to say: we hope that they allow it to be on school property. Either they compel it to be on school property, or they understand that the same boards which are exercising a right, that they have given them, to discriminate against gay students and their friends, are now being supported through this bill. That's exactly what happens, that and nothing else. Everybody should understand that this is really just a smokescreen over anything else. We are crystallizing and clarifying the rights of school boards to say no and, within that "no," whether it's on the property.

Now, the next issue here. I just want to get into a little bit of the other part of the amendment because that, too, is problematic for me. It talks about facilitating and supporting a GSA. Now, I haven't written a lot of legislation, but if I want to legislate the government's obligation to put in a GSA if a kid asks for one, I don't say, "Facilitate and support"; I say: "Establish. The government shall establish." So I'm not quite sure why we have "facilitate and support" because I don't actually know what that means. Does that mean, like, you tweet about it: "Hey, sure hope you get your GSA. I'm sure supportive, there, girl. I hope you get it, you know?" Do you do some advertising to try and get people out to it? What do you do? What does that mean? It doesn't mean anything. The language is not good.

The other thing that's very clear to me because of the very clear confusion around where the GSA will take place is the question of: how many GSAs? Let's say I'm in a small Christian school on the very north end of Edmonton and I'm told that I can't have a GSA and the school says: nope, not going to happen, yada, yada, yada. So what happens? I call up the Minister of Education, who says: "Oh, you know, don't think too much about my background. I am here for you, and I'm going to make sure that you have access to a GSA." And then he says also: "We have a GSA. We're running it at a recently vacated retail outlet down in South Edmonton Common. That's where it is. Edmonton's GSA, for those of you who can't have one in school, is somewhere down in South Edmonton Common." I mean, we don't know. We don't know how many GSAs there will be.

We don't know if there will be a GSA in the surrounding parking lots of every school within which a student contacts their good friend the Minister of Education on the phone: you know, is it going to be around their school or not? We don't know. We don't know if it's just going to be one per city of Edmonton.

Ms Blakeman: I know. It'll be in a portable.

Ms Notley: Well, yes. Actually, when I laughed out loud and I distracted the Member for Edmonton-Centre from her comments, somebody on Twitter actually made the comment – it was really quite amusing – that now we understand what the portables were for. We can just have a traveling GSA portable around the city of Edmonton.

An Hon. Member: One for every school.

Ms Notley: Maybe one for every school. Maybe one for every three schools. Maybe one for half a starter school. I don't know. I mean, this is so unclear.

When you consider that what we're talking about is issues of equality and we are talking about ensuring that kids at a school can invite their peers to join a gay-straight alliance so that they can develop a network that will help them recover from the pain of being bullied – let us just be clear – calling up their good pal the Minister of Education and being told that there is a GSA every second Thursday halfway across the city is not going to be an answer. There is nothing in this legislation that tells us that that is not the answer that they will get. So it's just not good enough.

I'm just perplexed by this. I'm astounded because what we have now done is that we have very clearly in this piece of legislation crystallized the second-class nature of the equality rights enjoyed by members of sexual minorities in our education system.

Ms Blakeman: But they're not second-class. They are protected.

Ms Notley: This government would like us to not protect them.

GSAs are a natural extension of an equality right which should be equally applied to all minority groups in the province. By allowing certain groups to say that those GSAs can't be in the school where requested, we are treating them differently. That's all there is to this.

Now, I want to just go back because I did do a little bit of research. I keep talking about the EPSB example and why this ought not – I truly believe that if I were to poll every Albertan who considers themselves religious right now, the answer to the poll would be this: religion and equality and respect for people who are gay are not mutually exclusive. They are complementary. Faith and equality are compatible, and I believe that the majority of people who describe themselves and identify as religious would agree with that statement.

I did just do a little bit of work. In the EPSB, where they have essentially said that GSAs must happen in every school where they are requested, 3,800 kids are enrolled in faith-based programs. So if there are 3,800 kids and their families in Edmonton who are comfortable with their children receiving a faith-based education which happens to coincide with some students' rights in that school to request and have a GSA after school, how can this be so hard? Why can't we follow the example that the Edmonton public school board has set? Why can't we follow the example that the provinces of Manitoba and Ontario have set? Why does this have to be so hard?

I honestly believe that the vast majority of people don't see the problem here. I think that you folks are listening to the wrong people, and in so doing, you are unfortunately, as I say, crystallizing a second-class set of rights, and you are crystallizing a legislative statement that you think it's okay for there to be a second-class set of rights for certain minority groups in Alberta – and in particular we're referring to those who are members of sexual minorities – and that is unfortunate.

I propose to you ways to fix this. Just a few words would take this from an incredibly offensive piece of legislation to a victory for equality. About four or five words, that's all it would take. But I'm not hearing anybody come forward on the government side to put those words in, and it's very disappointing. So in the meantime we have to aggressively resist this piece of legislation and make it very clear that should it pass, you will have actually made this problem worse, I think, at the end of the day. It is not a victory for anybody. It's really quite a sad day for people who believe in genuine equality in our public institutions.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I feel compelled and need to stand up and let my opinion stay on this one. I want to begin by saying that I really appreciate our Premier allowing this one to be a free vote, and I really appreciate our government caucus trying very hard through an amendment to make the issue more amenable to what I think is the right direction to go. But despite all the effort put on the table, I still have very strong reservations to supporting this bill. I'll share with you wholeheartedly where I'm coming from.

The Chair: You're going to speak on the amendment, hon. member?

Mr. Luan: Yes. About the amendment.

The Chair: Thank you. Carry on.

Mr. Luan: The amendment as it stands now is in the right direction but not far enough. Where I have issues with it is that it won't name that the establishment of the organization will still be on the property of the school where it was rejected. I think that when we talk about the rights in this bill, the number one, overarching principle here is that we have to protect vulnerable children in the name of freedom from discrimination against their sexual orientation.

I heard our Premier talk and our ministers talk about this over and over. In Alberta, in our schools there's no room to have discrimination against the minority groups. In this case sexual orientation is the question on the table. When I heard that, I was all for it. But when we started looking at the details, particularly about this amendment, we started dancing around with that, and it's no longer a statement of no conditions. There are conditions attached to it: not in my church, not in my belief, not on my property. That's where I think things go wrong.

I speak about this from my heart as a social worker. I practised over 21 years. My profession over the years taught me that when we want a just society at a time when vulnerable populations are at risk – in this case it is the gay and lesbian students who are being discriminated against because of their sexual orientation. They are fighting with a system that fundamentally doesn't accept them. This is where, I think, in my heart, I really have to stand up. I respect our colleagues. I respect our Premier and the free vote and everything else. I respect our democracy, that we can have this very free discussion among us in this House. I want my opinion to stand in regard to this one, that I think is so fundamental. It's to the basics of what we believe.

This is no different than what I view as racial equality. I am Chinese, and that I am able to stand here today to talk about this is a result of hundreds of years of our forefathers who fought this injustice years ago. You all know this, that Chinese-Canadians a hundred years ago were not allowed to vote. They didn't belong here. They could work here, but they belonged elsewhere. What we're dealing with today gives me a picture in my head, reminding me of a scenario like this.

There was a time in Chinese-Canadian history when there were signs to say: "We allow you. We permit you to be part of us, but you have to comply with what our traditions are here." One of the traditions back years ago for those hard-labour Chinese was: "You belong in the laundromat. That's your community centre." When they'd go to an upscale restaurant, there were signs saying: "Chinese are not allowed here. Dogs are not allowed here."

One of the reasons this debate really hit my heart is that I feel compelled that we are at a time in history when we are discussing the issue of another at-risk, vulnerable population. Are we treating them equally? Are we welcoming them the way they are? My stand as of today is that we're not. We're imposing our value system onto what they are.

One of the examples I find is that when I read about and learn more about the gay and lesbian community, it's different than when I actually have people who are closely working with me share their story. I'm going to share with my colleagues a personal story. I have permission from a friend to share this in the spirit of contributing to the debate and helping others who are at risk.

This is a close friend who works as a professional. She married a loving husband who happened to be gay. Over the years they lived in China. The husband is a company executive. They have a daughter. They have a perfect family from the outside. Both are well-established professionals with good incomes. But the truth is that after years and years of struggle one day her husband said: honey, I want to die. She couldn't believe why. He said: "I can no longer pretend who I am. I'm trying to conform. I'm trying to be somebody that is not me. Yes, we have a lovely daughter. But I really don't have that desire."

You can imagine, it was like a bomb dropped into a very happy family. Nobody in the world knows why it happened. My friend went through a horrible time. At first, she was resentful. She couldn't understand. They went to counselling, all kinds of support. But at the end of the day she became his best friend, the biggest ally in supporting him. She said: "Honey, I don't want you to die. We will fight this together. We will find a way that we can have justice in here."

They could not stay where they were in China because the overall conditions were unacceptable to it. They researched the world, and guess what? Canada is one of the most open, welcoming places, and they decided to come over here. Over the years she helped him to explain to his family that this was not his fault. He was born like this. He tried for years to be somebody else, to the degree that he would rather die than continue to pretend he was somebody else.

I must say that when this story was shared with me, it was profound. I had years of social work experience. I had read stuff. I'd learned it in an indirect way. But it hit home so close to me through a close friend like that. I really believe that my knowledge about understanding this community was elevated to a much higher level.

One of the reasons I think I have to stand to strongly debate this, to share this is that I believe we need to do the right thing. History is moving forward on this. I highly urge my colleagues in this House to think about this. Would you rather be on the wrong side of history? In this case I urge that we need to go all the way to make sure there's no discrimination in our schools.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you.

Are there other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's my honour to rise and speak, as most can guess, in complete opposition to this amendment and to this bill in general. But I do want to take a moment and thank the hon. member for his words, for his story, for helping all members and Albertans have a sense of the damage that this amendment and this bill will do. I found your words very moving, hon. member, and I want to thank you for them.

I want to thank as well the other members that have been debating all afternoon in this House, those who have broken ranks and spoken and shared their words according to their conscience and to what they know to be right.

You know, for myself fighting for equality is one of the reasons that I first joined the Alberta NDP, the party that stands up for everyone and especially the little guy. I hope that there are members on the other side that are regretting ever bringing forward this bill, which effectively torpedoed Bill 202 from the Member for Edmonton-Centre, which would have actually given our kids the tools they need to be safe in our schools. That's, again, what this comes down to.

I encourage you to look at the conversations that are happening on Twitter as far as what is at the heart of this debate. It's about giving our kids and our students the tools that they need to create these safe spaces. When we talk about equality and social justice, we're talking about treating people equally and fairly. This amendment ships them off from the school to some undisclosed location to have a meeting in secrecy. I don't understand that, and I don't understand the premise of where this amendment is coming from.

The thrust behind this bill is, like I said, equality and dealing with discrimination. So I find it jaw-dropping that an amendment comes forward which essentially discriminates against kids by saying: "No. Your club isn't allowed to be at the school. You need to go somewhere else to have your meeting." We're talking about, again, an extracurricular club. We're talking about voluntary. We're talking about something that is initiated by students. I don't know if it was written with this intention, but as the hon. member that previously spoke said – I mean, he nailed it – the spirit of this amendment is really a NIMBY amendment. "Not in my backyard. I don't want it here. You can go do that somewhere else."

For that reason and many others, I obviously will be opposed to this amendment. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: I just want to maybe suggest – I mean, we only have five minutes left, and I'll certainly give the floor to the NDP opposition leader – that perhaps it would be a good idea before we move forward with this amendment and voting on this amendment to maybe talk about it a little bit more. Let the government caucus talk. Let the opposition parties talk. I think there has to be a decision made about what direction we're going here.

If the idea is to make GSAs mandatory, then there has to be a decision to make them mandatory. Period. If the decision is that we want to respect local autonomy but still want to find a way to help the student directly, concretely deal with the bullying that they are dealing with, then we have to make sure the amendments accomplish that. The problem with this amendment is that it doesn't do either. It doesn't make them mandatory, but it also doesn't do anything to help the student. All it does is say that they can have a meeting off somewhere and have a GSA. Well, a student can go into their house and start a GSA club. You know, this just doesn't do anything.

I think to avoid using certain folks as political footballs and so forth and given how divisive this conversation can be, it would be, I think, a good exercise to actually discuss exactly what the strategy is here, what we're actually trying to achieve, and then write a piece of legislation or a set of amendments that actually achieves that outcome because I just don't feel this does either. I think there's a willingness among, certainly, our party and I know among government members and I believe, clearly, with the Liberal and the ND opposition to at least discuss what our objective is here. Are we going to make these mandatory? If we are not going to make them mandatory, we have to address the bullying issue. It's got to be either. This amendment does neither.

Hopefully, we can have that discussion moving forward and actually come to a good piece of legislation. Thanks.

Ms Notley: Very quickly, just to be clear, what Bill 202 would have done was not to make GSAs mandatory. What they would have done is they would have allowed students who wanted them to set them up, and the people who wanted to join those students could have joined them, but no one who didn't want to be part of it would have had to be part of it. So that's the first thing.

The second thing is that I implore people over there – because I think people are really genuinely thinking about this – that if this amendment fails, we can come back after dinner and consider other amendments that might actually get us to a better place. If this amendment passes, we may be ruled out of order for finding better ways to fix this.

So I urge you to think seriously about whether it's possible for us to do the right thing tonight. Don't allow this amendment to pass in its current form.

Thank you.

The Chair: Other speakers? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. Young: Well, thank you very much. It's a privilege to speak on this topic. Every child has the right to be supported. One of the things I haven't heard is that every child also has the right to support other kids.

Mr. Chairman, I sat down at my kitchen table the other day, and I asked my daughters, 11 and nine: do you know what it means to be gay? They said: well, it's when two guys love each other. I said: well, what about girls? They said: oh, that would be a lesbian. It just matter of fact because they don't care. I had another conversation with my 11-year-old today – they are at a Catholic school – about whether there is anybody in their school that's gay, and she's, like: no, not that I know of. The reason I said I was asking is because some people get bullied because of that. It was really foreign to her because they just doesn't really care. But we care here. We seem to have this angst about putting this restriction here.

I go back to the Charter of Rights or whatever, and I hear about equality rights and equality of association, and those are the fundamental things. When I hear stories about kids who – I mean, even the most well-adjusted kid when they're in their teens or young teens is struggling with their own identity, and when you are struggling with other issues and don't have the support at home. . .

The Chair: I hesitate to interrupt you, hon. member, but it is 6 o'clock. The committee will stand adjourned until 7:30 tonight, at which time, when we return, I'll recognize you first to speak if you are so inclined.

[The committee adjourned at 6 p.m.]

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: Hon. members, I'll call the Committee of the Whole back to order. I'll give you a brief moment to settle in.

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

Bill 10

An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Chair: I believe the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview was speaking. I'll offer you the floor again, sir.

Mr. Young: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I support gay-straight alliances. I also feel that children in our schools should be accommodated wanting to have one. I've had many conversations with friends of mine, mentors. You know, in some of those conversations I would say that it's unfortunate that we need to have gay-straight alliances, but we do know that they work.

I would also express to friends of mine about how I'm indifferent about what your sexual orientation is. It doesn't matter to me. In the last little while I think I've changed my tone on that. I think it does matter. I do care if you're gay, straight, or whatever. I think we need to recognize the diversity and importance of everybody and value that and support every kid in our school. When we get to a point of not just being indifferent but celebrating our diversity, I think that's what we really want to achieve.

Speaking to this amendment, when I looked at Bill 10, I had some concerns about asking children who wanted to form a gay-straight alliance and were denied to go through the courts. I felt that was unreasonable. These are young kids who are looking for support. They may not have support at home, and they're looking for that support with their peers through a gay-straight alliance. This amendment recognizes that if a child is denied that right to have a gay-straight alliance, then the Ministry of Education will come out in support and close that gap. It's unfortunate if they are denied it because every kid should be supported, but if the school boards fail to do that, then the Ministry of Education will step in and do that. I think that's a move forward.

As I was speaking of before the break, Mr. Chairman, I also think we need to underscore the fact that this isn't just about kids looking for support. This is for all kids looking to provide support in a school setting, at the school. I'm willing to support the movement forward on Bill 10 with this amendment and want to recognize that the support we give for our kids, all kids: we're not going to solve that with legislation. I think it rests in a responsibility in all of us.

I want to actually thank the Member for Edmonton-Centre for bringing up this issue for me. In my family we've had the opportunity to speak to my young daughters about this issue. Like I said, I was indifferent about the issue. It didn't matter. But I think we need to care and proactively engage in the conversation that it's not okay to do any kind of bullying. I was actually surprised and taken aback when her response, from an 11-year-old girl, was that it doesn't matter; we don't care. I want to thank the member for bringing for that issue up.

Like I said, I support gay-straight alliances for all children, and I'm going to support this amendment because it does close that gap in the absence of them being afforded that right that I feel they should have.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. Member.

The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, followed by Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. The amendment is an improvement, but it's still based on the premise of "equal but separate," and I can't support that. The Charter doesn't support that. The fact is that – and we've been over this – the issue of discrimination is protected within the Charter. If students are going to be allowed to start clubs, it is the right of a parent to not allow their child to be a member of a club. That is not under attack here, but what we are dealing with is trying to create a process to work around what is a Charter right, which is: do we discriminate against students that are gay? Trying to create something separate but supposedly equal in my book is a cop-out. We need to face up to the fact that this is a Charter-protected right. What we're trying to do is create a process. And it's a proven process, these gay-straight alliances, where they have reduced discrimination and, more importantly, they have reduced teenage suicide. The data supports that.

So for this to be requested and implemented as an after school activity is something to me that every school board should not only invite, but they should never have the right to allow any type of discrimination based on something of this magnitude. There is so much misunderstanding on what this is about. I've gotten some hate e-mails that aren't even on base with what we're actually talking about here. The legislation that has been brought forward, as I stated earlier, was about creating through legislation a process so that these students could have gay-straight alliances.

There is not a member here that has stood up and said that they're for discrimination, and I know that. Nobody has said that. Everybody here is opposed to discrimination, but we're starting to split hairs on how to work around a very sensitive issue that nobody wants to face up to, which is that we're confronted with discrimination on a regular basis. Here it is, right here in this Legislature today as we debate this. All the process is is that students have a right to create these clubs, that they cannot be denied that right and treated differently just because they're gay.

As other members have brought up, if they were forming their baseball club, their hockey club, whatever other club – they have those clubs – they're not denied that. This is the same kind of right, and it doesn't infringe upon parental rights at all. It's not even part of the process. If a parent has an issue with a club that a child belongs to, that parent has the right to keep their child from joining any club. Unfortunately, in this type of situation I think a child that is being forced not to be in a gay-straight alliance club might be the child that probably needs to be there for some education, but that's another matter.

What we're confronted with today is the basic, fundamental right of these kids to establish an organization that does two things, in my view, two very important things: it cuts down on discrimination and it reduces teenage suicide. Those are two admirable points that I cannot oppose in any way, shape, or form, but I cannot – I cannot – support the bill or the amendment if it's going to create this separate but equal. It's ingrained in me. I come from a background that goes back to the civil rights era, that I'm quite familiar with, and I remember all the arguments. They haven't changed. All we now have done is changed it from dealing with black issues to issues of sexual orientation, and the arguments are the same. The fear and the ignorance are the same.

It's interesting because the kids, particularly people generally under 30 and under 25, don't even understand why we're debating this, many of them. It's just absolutely amazing.

So with that, Mr. Chair, as I look at this, I applaud the government for trying yet again. It's a good attempt, but it comes up short. Separate but equal is fundamentally wrong because separate but equal discriminates. We've seen it. It does not succeed. It is not a solution. These kids have a right, just as every kid has a right, to form these organizations. We cannot discriminate and say: "You can form that, but it may not be on the school property. We'll push you off the school property." That is fundamentally wrong, in my view. That's treating them differently than any other student, and I cannot abide by that.

I will vote against the amendment. I'd love the government to try yet again. Let's not go home till we get it right.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to go on the record with respect to the amendment. I also support gay-straight alliances and, for that matter, I support and I will continue to support any initiative which seeks to support the mental health and the mental well-being of every young person in this province. I think I can safely say that that's a sentiment that unites all of us in the House. Just in the way that it wasn't that long ago that many of us were afraid to talk about mental health and mental illness and many other issues that come into play, particularly with young people, we're fortunate to be standing here in a Legislature today debating a number of amendments that actually seek to defend and to support the rights of and the opportunities for these students.

That said, I think, Mr. Chair, this debate has not really focused fully on what this amendment seeks to achieve, and it is not a small thing. What the amendment does is that it takes a Constitutionally protected right, which is specific to Alberta in the Alberta Act, the protection of the rights of school boards and the autonomy of school boards, which is stronger in Alberta, I've been told, than in any other jurisdiction in the country, and it says that where school boards will not grant the opportunity for students to form gay-straight alliances, the government, the people as represented by the government, will step in and will assume that responsibility on behalf of the school board. That is no small thing.

That challenges many of the assumptions and the values that people hold dear with respect to the role of democratically elected school boards. It also affirms the belief, a belief that I share, that government has the responsibility to act always on behalf of the most vulnerable citizens in society. This is in no way to suggest that students who want to form gay-straight alliances are in any way weak or unable to fend for themselves. I think we've all seen, Mr. Chair, that they're quite capable of making a very loud statement on a very serious issue, and they're not looking for us to provide support to compensate for any inadequacies on their part. What they are simply looking for is for government and for this House to recognize the identity that they have claimed for themselves, to recognize that as full and equal in society, and to show that the government, in particular, as representatives of the people, as elected by the people, is willing to step in and take remedial action where other autonomous entities, in this case school boards, are not willing to take that action.

The second thing I want to say, Mr. Chair, is: all of that said, I'm going to support the amendment. One, because of, I think, the courageous stance it takes with respect to the role of government, reaffirming what I think the role of government is, one I think that most Albertans share. But I think how we get there actually matters as well. This amendment actually contemplates the importance that needs to be attached to how we get to dealing with a school board if after this discussion we're ever to see what I think is an unlikely situation, that a school board deny the opportunity for a gay-straight alliance. How we get there in terms of providing students that opportunity really matters.

I guess, Mr. Chair, it comes down to whether we want to support legislation and an amendment that invites an adversarial process that undoubtedly would take parties through the courts, would pit Albertans one against the other in terms of their values, legitimate values, which in specific instances can conflict. Do we want to merely pass a bill that facilitates an adversarial process and really doesn't work to support the students at hand, or do we want to provide an opportunity in legislation for the minister of the day to work collaboratively, as I think all of us would expect a minister of government to work, with a school board to not only change their action but to change their minds and to change their hearts if that's what it takes? That is what this amendment provides for.

In my view, narrowing the scope beyond the statement that government will intervene and will facilitate and support and ensure that students have access to GSAs when they are denied invites, in fact, more of the conflict and more distraction, quite frankly, from the interests of these students and from providing a supportive school environment and supporting and fostering a community that supports them and identifies them and recognizes them than we would like to have.

In summary, Mr. Chair, I support the bill, and I support the sentiments that are expressed in the bill and the values that are represented in the bill in the same way that everybody else does, but my point is that it matters how we get there. If we elect to be very prescriptive in terms of the legislation, we invite, I think, more of the conflict and debate and animosity that we have seen that has brought not just the cause of this community and made that cause so difficult but for many, many other vulnerable communities in our province as well.

Mr. Chair, what I say is: let's support the amendment. Let us have the Minister of Education and the government work as we would intend them to work to respect and to collaborate and to try to bring about a solution within a particular school community if an unlikely situation like this were to arise. But let's not invite more conflict and more adversity within the system by being prescriptive in terms of the amendments here and then sparking a whole other debate in other quarters that will do nothing but detract from the cause of these very students that we're here to support.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. I just wanted to share with the Legislature this evening that during the supper hour I went over to city hall, where the City of Edmonton Youth Council was debating gay-straight alliances and what the position should be of the Edmonton Youth Council. It was a very good debate, very engaging, with remarkable young people.

I was struck by the juxtaposition of debating this particular bill here in the way that we are, the way we've deviated from a very simple, straightforward issue that we should confront head-on, and how they were approaching it there as the Edmonton Youth Council at city hall. They were very collaborative, very supportive, looking for organic ways to solve the problem. Here we have people throwing on layer upon layer in a direct adversarial sort of context that serves to create amendments and, potentially, laws that will only cause more strife and confusion for the future. We, this generation, which is mostly considerably older, owe it to that generation that's debating at the Edmonton Youth Council today to make sure that we move along with the course of history and ensure that we have equality and social justice here in the province of Alberta that fits with the society which we are responsible to govern.

I ask each of you here today to step back at least 10 paces from the various versions of this legislation that we've seen over the last couple of weeks and look to see: how can we make this a more equal place and a more just place, not just for the next few months but for the next generation and past that as well? If we seek to divide and make different sets of equalities for different types of people, we can only hope to fail, and that's what we're doing here today. We're creating a situation where we're going to differentiate between different kinds of clubs according to what outcome it is based on.

People all want to talk about this as well. In case anybody didn't know, this is, like, the conversation point across this province here this evening and will continue on. Someone at city hall said: "Well, you know, what about the football club? What if it offends me and offends my sensibility to have a football club? Should it also be excluded, or should we have the school board give that capacity to exclude that club?" I thought: you know, how simple, again bringing back all of these sorts of convoluted arguments we had last evening and then over the week and put it back to some simple thing. If we make different rules and different laws for different people, different groups, then we can only seek to a take step backwards as a society.

Again, taking a bad bill and creating some convoluted version of it only seeks to dig us further into a hole, Mr. Chair. Certainly, we know that if we don't make leadership from the top here in this Legislature, then we'll only see more of the same. The reason you don't see gay-straight alliances in certain school boards is because the people in the top positions are quashing those people who would want to have a gay-straight alliance. The teachers and the students organizing these things know that they're not being supported by the school board. Who really wants to go up against that sort of confrontation?

This does not change that. You're creating some sort of rarified air by which the ministry will swoop in and create a GSA in a place where they voted to not have it, either from the school board or from the school or whomever else. I mean, what a load of utter nonsense, Mr. Chair. What an obtuse way to organize these things. Certainly, those of you who have been brave enough to speak out against this and not just, you know, come out of some whipped position that you hope to personally gain from: well, good for you. Right? That's all I can say.

Again, we need to lead from the top here. We need to make sure that we create the laws. After all, if we make a law that compels gay-straight alliance clubs – you know, if there's a choice and people want to make those happen in school boards, then we can make a law to do so. There's nothing stopping us from doing that. This idea that certain school boards or trustees might want to do it the other way around is completely an inversion of how laws are made here. We can make the law here, and they can follow it. It's as simple as that.

I'm seeing people tweeting in on this thing tonight from all over the province. I notice that Jon Cornish, a football player from Calgary, is urging us to do the right thing on this law to ensure that we have equality and social justice that extends to everybody everywhere all the time. Like I said before, the Edmonton Youth Council is voting on it here tonight. It's clear that we need to make sure that we keep in step with reality here in this Legislature and reflect the society that we are responsible to govern.

There are so many examples from around the world that if you create different laws for different people at different times, it only ends in ruin. I will follow very closely, from my own past, the events that took place in southern Africa as a result of trying to create different sets of laws and different sets of how people should behave. We all know that it all ends in the very worst circumstances possible, right? People think that we're exaggerating about this, but you make sure that you keep your smallest laws and your medium-sized laws and your biggest laws all focused on the same philosophical viewpoint, and that is that we create laws that are equal for all. If we make laws that somehow exclude certain gay-straight alliance clubs from having the same capacity to function right across this province if they choose to do so, then we, Mr. Chair, are not doing our jobs.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: I rise, actually, just to ask for unanimous consent of this Chamber, Mr. Chair, that all bells be shortened to a one-minute interval for this evening.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Chair: The Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Unfortunately, I cannot support this amendment to the bill because it's not trying to do what you're saying that it will do in body and spirit. It will create two sets of laws for people. We are here to correct past mistakes. We are here to make laws which treat all Albertans equally. By denying students to have GSAs in schools and giving the power to the minister – I don't know why we are doing it. If we will end up doing it anyway, why not just straightaway give the students the right to ask for GSAs in schools? And schools should be able to do it. I mean, there should be no qualms about that.

Yesterday I was shocked when we voted on the bill in second reading and 42 of my progressive colleagues there were voting yes for this. I came here in 1970, and I have experienced discrimination first-hand myself. I was not physically abused or whatever, but when I started going to my work, my foreman said: oh, you smell of garlic; stay away from me. That was so stressful for me, and I had to find a different job. I was afraid to go to work because all my co-workers were making fun of me. And that was small stuff. Being a member of the LGBTQ community: I can't even imagine what they will be going through. I was talking to somebody, a young man, and he didn't have any friends till he got to high school. Look, all those years he lost enjoyment of life.

What we are trying to do here – we are going backwards. Ontario did it in 2012. Manitoba did it in 2013. Why are we holding back? There was a simple solution with Bill 202. You know, sure, we can't bring Bill 202 back, but let's fix it with Bill 10. Let's do the right amendments and get it done. I'm seeing history repeating itself like with Bill 19, Bill 36, Bill 50. This government is under new management, a new Premier. Let's move forward. Let's not take a step backwards.

What are we creating here? Let's say that there was a Sikh club supposed to be going up in a school. Will we have the guts to refuse it? If there was a Pakistani club going up in a school, will we have the guts to refuse it? If there was a black club – pardon me – will we refuse it? Why are we separating LGBTQ students from those in a football club, a Sikh club, an East Indian club, you name it? If we can do it, why do they have to go through this red tape in order to have their GSA club in their school? It's like telling them: "No. You can't do anything. You can hold your meeting, but you have to go out of the house." I don't see how this amendment or bill will achieve what the government is trying to achieve.

I cannot support the amendment or the bill, period, because it's not going to do what the government says it will do. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I'll be brief, Mr. Chair, with just a couple of points that I wanted to make. It had looked to me, before we broke, like there was a possibility, a little bright light, that suggested that folks over there might have been coming around to the right conclusion, but it's now, clearly, obviously, not the case. I just want to speak to a couple of points that were made by members opposite.

First of all, the Member for Edmonton-Riverview began in a very positive way by talking about his support for GSAs and about his conversations with his kids and talking about how he wants to see GSAs in every school and then suggested that this amendment will secure GSAs in every school. But, to be clear, the reason we are so vehemently opposed to this amendment is that this will not secure GSAs in every school. It will not secure GSAs in any school. It might. We can cross our fingers and hope that maybe those school boards who are so vehemently opposed to using the words "gay-straight alliance" in describing their after school clubs will somehow relent and allow the Ministry of Education to organize a GSA on their property. But, quite honestly, more likely than not, the case is that that won't happen.

Recently the Minister of Education tabled the number of clubs across the province. Let us just be very clear. Notwithstanding that we asked for this information, he didn't bother to give us the information about where those clubs were. But we know that there were only about 96 gay-straight alliance clubs, and at least 65 of them are in the EPSB. Then he said that there are another 1,300 other-named clubs across the province. What that essentially says is that about 95 out of 1,400 clubs have been allowed to be called GSAs. That's one-fourteenth, Mr. Chair.

Why in heaven's name would you expect, if you don't tell them that if a child asks for a GSA, they have to be given a GSA, that they will be given a GSA? Clearly, the record is that they will not be given a GSA. This amendment will not change that, not one bit. There'll be a GSA somewhere outside of the school on different property, as I said, maybe in the parking lot at the 7-Eleven across the street but not in that school. They will be treated separately and differently, just like the segregation laws that preceded true equality during the civil rights movement.

Now, the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford tried to argue that what we need to do is to respect the rights of school boards. I just need to say – and it's been said before – that this government hasn't respected the rights of school boards when it came to their funding. It hasn't respected the rights of school boards when it's come to their governance. It hasn't respected the rights of school boards when it comes to the delivery of provincial achievement tests, and the list goes on and on and on. The fact of the matter is that if they can take away taxing authority from the school boards and that didn't violate these so-called special rights of these school boards, I find it very hard to imagine that asking them to honour the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms would somehow run awry of their rights.

Moreover, though, I was very troubled by the comments from the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, for whom I often have some amount of respect. But I have to say that this notion that if we push the idea of enforcing the obligation to treat these kids equally, that will promote divisiveness: my goodness, Mr. Chair, is the exact argument that was used 40 years ago to justify the separate-but-equal laws, which did not amount to true equality. This idea that we have to very gently and carefully and diplomatically suggest that these institutions within our society, which are legislated creatures of this Legislature, by the way, who receive public funding through this Legislature, by the way, that we have to carefully and diplomatically and politely negotiate with them the obligation to treat these kids the same as kids from other minority groups troubles me greatly.

To be clear, to be very, very clear, this amendment does not achieve any of the objectives that the crocodile-tear-filled statements that have been made since our break suggest it's setting out to achieve. I would love to have the Minister of Education actually get up and engage in this debate.

Mr. Dirks: Are you serious?

Ms Notley: I'm very serious, Mr. Minister.

He's asking if I'm serious about this suggestion. Let me be very clear, Minister, I am very serious. Telling kids that to have a gay-straight alliance club, they have to leave the property of their school . . .

An Hon. Member: Nobody is saying that.

Ms Notley: Yes, you are because you are absolutely refusing to insist that it can be provided on the school property. [interjections]

The Chair: Please. To the chair. To the chair, please. Thank you.

Ms Notley: If you don't make them do it on the school property, then you are allowing them to say that it won't be on the school property. Other speakers have acknowledged that that is what's happening in this. So don't try to say that that's not what's happening in this.

For the Minister of Education to suggest that somehow I'm wrong by saying that maintaining the legislative ability of school boards to tell students that they can have their GSA meeting off the property is somehow unreasonable and somehow doesn't reflect discrimination – well, then clearly this minister needs to take an in-service on what discrimination is. He doesn't get it, and he shouldn't be in that position. I'm not at all convinced that he's capable of fulfilling any of the obligations that this amendment would suggest that he must.

So you guys have made a decision. It looked for a moment like you were on the verge of making the right decision. Clearly you've been whipped back into making the wrong decision, and it's truly disappointing. I think the vast majority of Albertans are very, very disappointed in that as well and will be.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Well, what a difference a dinner break makes.

I understand that my colleagues opposite have made a decision, likely not the decision that I was hoping they were going to make. There are three things I want to say to you. One is that what's written on the amendment is not what you're all hoping is going to happen. It's just not written there. It says very clearly, "If, in a decision referred to in subsection (3), the board decides that it will not support a student in establishing the organization described." Those would be the gay-straight alliances. Why are you allowing school boards to make those decisions? You control Alberta education. This is not a part of curriculum. This is an after-class engagement. Why are you allowing different schools to treat the same students differently. If you are a sexual-minority kid over here in a public school, then you get a GSA. If you're a sexual-minority kid over here in another school, you don't. That's one.

I know that many of you really want this to be what you want it to be, but that's not what it says. It has to be written on the paper. You can't, you know, interpret this later. The judges interpret it later, and if we've done a bad job, they will interpret it in a way that – I guarantee you – you will not be happy with because they'll interpret what's written there. What is written here is not what you are fervently hoping it means, and I know that. I can feel it. I can feel how much you want this to work. It's just not there.

Two. I think when we were talking about how the Minister of Education, who is seeming particularly pleased – how nice to see a smile on his face. I think we were beginning to think in my terms, in urban terms, and we've been thinking about: "Well, that's okay. If a kid can't be accommodated here, then we can take him to central office in downtown Edmonton or downtown school board in Calgary. No big deal, right?" Except that we're not remembering the kids that are in Lacombe or Sundre or Claresholm or Fort Macleod or Wandering River or any number of other places in this wonderful province that are not going to be able to easily accommodate a group of kids somewhere else outside of their school building.

I know that you desperately want it to say that in these pages, but it doesn't say that in these pages. What I've heard from the sponsoring member is that it is hoped that the Minister of Education can work with the school board to somehow work something out, except this is the very same school board that said no. They said no using the autonomy you've granted them to say no, and they meant it. I am not sure what magical qualities you are imbued with, and you may well be. You're government. Perhaps you are imbued with magical qualities to go back to a school that you've given the autonomy to to say no and try to now convince them to say that, yes, they would allow a GSA in their school when they just said no. It's not written on the piece of paper.

This is going to be very difficult, to accommodate kids outside of urban areas. We're back into the same conversation where we have people saying: oh, this is so divisive, and it's so hostile. An hour and a half ago it didn't feel so divisive. It felt pretty much in the same place. [interjections] I am getting heckled, which is a lovely thing, Mr. Chair. But it's not going to change what's written on the piece of paper.

It's hard to be brave. It's hard to be brave. It's scary to be brave. But we're not here to be brave on behalf of ourselves; we're here to be brave on behalf of students. And I hope . . .

Ms DeLong: Then vote for it.

Ms Blakeman: I will be voting, Member for Calgary-Bow, but I won't be voting for this amendment because it's not doing what you believe it's going to do. It's just not written there. When the courts come to interpret it, if they do, they're not going to interpret it the way you're thinking.

I agree with – now, this has got to be a red-letter day – my colleague from Airdrie, that we've done nothing here. [interjections] I know. Look at him. I can't believe it. It's an amazing day. But he's absolutely right. We will end up coming out of this very long, intense, emotional session having accomplished none of the things we set out to do. We will not have mandated gay-straight alliances into schools so that every school provides them. Neither will we have made any specific ways of helping kids that find themselves left on the outside.

So I still ask you to be brave, to step out into a dangerous place and support these kids. This is no black mark against the Member for Calgary-North West. I am not saying anything bad about her. This was a difficult thing for her to do. She brought the amendment forward. You know, I'm glad that you're giving her good support. [interjections] Oh, I've touched a nerve. I can tell.

You need to vote against your colleague's amendment. I wish you would, and I wish you would be brave and step out. I encourage you to be brave and step out, even the member that sponsored it, on behalf of the kids in Alberta that really, really, really need this.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Khan: Mr. Chair, thank you for giving me the opportunity to speak to this very, very important issue. I want to say this loud and clear. I support GSAs. I support GSAs, and I will fight for the rights of gay and lesbian students in my community, and I will fight for the rights of gay and lesbian students across this province. I will resent and I will disagree vehemently with anybody in this building or outside of this building who suggests otherwise. That's why I support Bill 10, and that's why I support this amendment.

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank the opposition. I want to thank the opposition for pushing this issue. This is a crucial issue, an important issue. Mr. Chair, I'd also like to take this moment to actually acknowledge that I believe this is our parliamentary system working. In my two and a half years I don't know if I've seen the parliamentary system work better than this. I think we see the opposition pushing an issue, government responding to the issue, opposition coming back and pointing out when perhaps we haven't got it quite right, and the government responding. So I want to thank the opposition for helping us deal with this issue about gay and lesbian kids having to sue the school board. That didn't feel right for us, and you did a good job in getting us over that bridge. I want to thank the opposition for that.

But what I want to point out to the opposition is that this is about governance, this is about respecting rights, this about respecting rights for gay and lesbian kids, this is about respecting rights of freedom of religion, and this is about respecting parental rights. At the end of the day, this isn't about politics; this is about governance. This is an issue about governance, and Bill 10 is a bill that speaks to good governance.

Mr. Chair, I want to thank the Member for Calgary-North West. There's been a lot of talk about bravery today on the floor of the Assembly. I don't think there's a braver member of this Legislature. I want to talk about the difference between governance and politics. Bill 10 is governance. To suggest in any way, shape, or form that this government is trying to promote divisiveness, that this government is trying to promote the spectre of civil rights, the spectre of apartheid, that's crass politics, and that does not help this conversation. That does not help the promotion of GSAs.

Mr. Chair, I support GSAs, and every one of my colleagues in this House supports GSAs. This concept that we're trying to move GSAs outside of the school doesn't reflect the facts. We currently have 94 GSAs within Alberta schools today, and we have over 1,000 clubs that identify themselves as diversity clubs. Our objective is to have GSAs established in schools. Let's be very clear about that. Let's be very clear about that.

Mr. Chair, Bill 10 is a bill that enables; it's an enabling bill. All the time we hear from the opposition about the stick or honey, honey or the stick. This is a bill that encourages and fosters and will help promote GSAs across this province. The subtle difference between enforcement and enabling is that we are now in a position to not have to enforce, which would be divisive, which would create conflict, which would create strife in Alberta, which would create the spectre and possibilities of lawsuits in Alberta. We are enabling, and we are encouraging, and we are promoting GSAs. I promote GSAs.

The Chair: You're speaking to the amendment, amendment A2?

Mr. Khan: I am speaking to the amendment, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you.

Mr. Khan: This amendment, Mr. Chair, will help Bill 10 work for my community.

One of the things we're not talking about is how this amendment will put GSAs in the hands of the school boards. The school boards have elected trustees. They represent the will of the people. I know this will work in my community because I've spoken to my school board trustees. I've let the school board trustees know that GSAs will be an election issue come next election time for our school board trustees. I have three high schools in my community. These high schools compete vigorously for students. Those trustees compete vigorously for students. I know and my constituents know and the school board trustees know that if they do not promote GSAs, it will adversely affect their enrolments.

Mr. Chair, I have a 16-year-old son and a 13-year-old daughter. As many folks in here have stated before me, this is a nonissue for that generation. This is an absolute nonissue for that generation. They don't understand why we're talking about this. I've heard many people from the opposition, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain-House-Sundre, say that for people 35 and under this is a nonissue, and they don't understand why we're talking about it. I strongly agree.

Mr. Chair, I absolutely believe that if a school board is not going to support GSAs – let me rephrase that. I have those three high schools. If one of those high schools in my community does not support GSAs, if one of those high schools in my community is painted as an intolerant institution, 15-year-olds, 16-year-olds will not want to go to that school. I believe in the youth of Alberta, and I believe in Albertans. I believe that when it comes to an issue of electing school board trustees and we put the will into the hands of Albertans, they will elect school board trustees that promote GSAs. They will elect the school boards that they deserve.

Mr. Chair, I support GSAs. My colleagues support GSAs. My colleagues believe in Albertans. What I'm hearing from some of the opposition is that they don't believe in Albertans. They don't believe that Albertans will do the right thing and support GSAs. Mr. Chair, I believe in GSAs. Every one of my colleagues in this House believes in GSAs, and that's why I'm calling for the vote on this amendment.

Thank you very much.

8:20

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

An Hon. Member: Question.

The Chair: Hon. member, just for the benefit of the members of the committee, I heard you call for the vote, but under Standing Order 65(1)(a) members may speak more than once, so I can only call the vote after all that wish to speak have indicated so.

I will recognize the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'll try to keep my comments brief. I do want to mention that I'm not sure what was in the food that my colleagues from the other side ate, but it completely transformed, it seems, my colleagues on the other side.

You know, more seriously, I want to say that for the first time since I've been elected in this Legislature, I had a glimmer of hope from the words spoken by a few of the PC MLAs seeing how wrong this amendment is and their position to vote against it. I had a glimmer of hope that maybe through debate and discussion and through the stories that people told, their personal stories about how they had been discriminated against in one form or another, they couldn't support this bill. You know, words can't express my disappointment coming back after the dinner break to see how quickly those feelings had either subsided or changed or been whipped out of them.

You know, I find it rich when members stand up and say, "I support GSAs," but then their actions are the complete opposite, where you're not supporting students who want to have GSAs by allowing boards to block them at will for whatever reason. To me, this issue that we're debating is about equality of rights, and I don't know what parallel universe I've stepped into that this is a debate. I mean, again, just look at what Albertans are saying. It's a no-brainer. Why is this even being debated? If students want to form an after school club, let them.

I do want to just make a quick comment to the hon. Member for St. Albert. He said that he believes in the youth, and the youth are going to make changes, and he talked about the boards. Last time I checked, hon. member, 15- and 16-year-olds couldn't vote, so I'm not sure how they're going to change the boards in order to elect boards that are going to allow GSAs. That's a whole other issue.

What I do want to mention, Mr. Chair, something that maybe hon. members from this Legislature can learn from a group of young people, is that tonight the Edmonton Youth Council had a rigorous debate about this bill, and the vote was 14 to 1 against the bill. You've got young people in this province discussing this who know what they need and what their friends need in order to support all Alberta students, yet in this Legislature it's mystifying, really, how few members understand the implications of this amendment. I know others have eloquently spoken to it, but it's essentially a discrimination clause.

The fact of the matter is that if people stand up and say that you support GSAs, then actually support all students everywhere having the right to have GSAs, not allowing boards or parents or others to block them. I have yet to hear a coherent argument of how an after school, extracurricular club infringes on the rights of parents or other kids. I mean, kids' parents don't have to go to that club. The fact of the matter is that if we want to create a truly inclusive society, then everyone should be treated equally, and they're not. The reality is that we were for a moment and we are even right now at a very historic moment in time when we can bring Alberta into the 21st century, and we can truly effect change and ensure that students everywhere have equal rights.

You know, I've got to say, hon. members, that it's disappointing to come back and clearly see that the tone of the Legislature has changed and we seem to have gone backwards about 10 steps.

Dr. Swann: Dad, phone home.

Mr. Bilous: Well, daddy's got a long arm.

I'll urge members of the Assembly to vote against this amendment and against this bill. Let's get rid of it, and let's bring in legislation that truly empowers our youth and young people and treats them with the dignity, the respect, and equality that they deserve.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Chair. There's a saying: when you dig a hole, stop digging.

I rise to speak against the amendment to Bill 10 for a number of reasons. We have to examine how we got here in the first place. How we got here in the first place is that every Monday – you know, the government has a lot of bills they can propose. They control the agenda. Every Monday a private member from either the government or the opposition parties can bring forward a bill or an idea that we'd like to debate democratically. In this situation the hon. member for the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre brought forward a bill, an idea, something that would make this a better province and a better society, a more inclusive society. This was a private member's bill that was brought forward.

The governing party did all that it possibly could within its power to ensure that the private member's bill would not be brought before the Legislative Assembly to be debated. We had questions for returns. Gosh, they debated the questions for returns for hours. So we asked you to remove our questions for returns so we could bring the bill forward. They ran out the . . .

The Chair: Hon. member, on the amendment.

Dr. Sherman: I'm speaking to the amendment. I'm speaking on the amendment, Mr. Chair, but I have to give you the context of how we got here.

How we got here was that it was a private member's bill. They didn't want it heard. So we pulled our questions for returns. The bill was going to come up on Monday. The only way for the government to not have the bill heard was to introduce a similar bill and pass it through first and second readings – and you know the rules, Mr. Chair – which means that the hon. member's bill would fall off the Order Paper. That's what this is all about.

I call this weasel politics. Weasel politics is what this was. They're using every legislative tool that they have so a private member cannot bring forward an idea on the legislative floor because it's an opposition member. That's how Bill 10 even came in. In fact, they had to rush, and on the back of a napkin, God knows where in this province, scratch something forward that even they think was a bad thing. So they are amending their own bill, which was ill-conceived and flawed and made on the back of a napkin. Again, the amendment is something that they made on the back of a napkin. That's premise number one.

Premise number two. I thank the hon. Member for Calgary-North West for attempting to help dig her team out of a hole. That's what she's trying to do. She's trying to help them dig out of a hole. Mr. Chair, the whole point is that these young people who are lesbian, gay, queer, transgendered, or bisexual want to have their own peer support group in the schools because they don't feel like they have peer support groups, whether they're at home or in the churches or in the communities. It's their special club at school. The people who influence children are the parents, their peer group, the teachers, or their elders, other people in their communities.

The school is a special little place for young people, and we were all there. We have clubs, all sorts of clubs. Mr. Chair, where in this country, if you can't have your club, do you have to go to the board – you know, the stuffy old people that were elected by your parents – many of them who disagree with the practice of these young people and the way they're born? Where else do young people have to go to stuffy old people, democratically elected, to get their permission? Failing that, they have to go to some stuffy old minister on that side to get approval. God knows where.

Young 14-, 15-year-old kids: look, they want to go to school, and they want to study. They want to play. They want to play their sports. They want to hang out. They don't want to go meet board members and politicians to get special permission. All this bill does is put more obstacles in their place. These poor young kids are already struggling with their sexuality. They're already struggling with teenage years, my dear friends. Some of these might even be your kids or your neighbours' kids or your brothers' and sisters' kids or your cousins' kids. Do you seriously want them to go talk to a minister, to have the minister come down and say: hey, you school board, thou shall do this?

It's our duty as provincial legislators. The national legislators of this country brought in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. These are the rules that govern us as a country. It's our duty as provincial legislators to pass an inclusive law that makes it easier for these young people to associate together in a democratic and free country. We should make it easier for our school board trustees, not put them in a situation where suddenly they're stuck between, you know, some religious right-wing conservatives and some progressive people in their community. Suddenly they're caught in the middle. We don't need to have these problems with 62 different school boards and however many different school divisions.

Mr. Chair, I want to remind everybody that the reason we're talking about this is because the government's weasel politics would not allow this hon. member's bill onto the floor. They're digging holes, and this is getting even worse. They're putting barriers in front of our children that desperately need some help. Frankly, these kids are not going to step forward, and I doubt that they're going to come and talk to the school boards in rural Alberta and other parts of Alberta, let alone talk to the legislators. They certainly don't want that scrutiny. It's only going to make their problem worse.

Mr. Chair, I would ask the hon. members from the government side to reconsider. I believe that your intentions are good, but I also believe that you don't have the political courage to do the right thing. You're trying to do it, but I don't believe you have the courage.

Ms Blakeman: Prove him wrong.

Dr. Sherman: Hon. member, I hope they will prove me wrong.

Please prove me wrong and vote against this amendment. This is not an inclusive amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Very briefly, Mr. Chair. This whole debate began, ironically enough, with an act of bullying. It was the bullying that I've seen over and over again since I've come to this place, the bullying by the majority of opposition parties. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre was treated in a most deplorable fashion, not even allowed to speak to her bill, a bill that the Premier a few days ago had said publicly would be a free vote on the part of the Progressive Conservative caucus. He said that there would be a free vote on Bill 202. Well, I suppose he was right in a way, Mr. Chairman, because we were free of a vote on Bill 202 because of the obstructionist tactics of the Progressive Conservative majority in this House.

So we move on to the government bill, Bill 10, which is terribly flawed and has created quite a firestorm in the last few days, which is precisely why the hon. Member for Calgary-North West introduced the amendment today. Now, since the supper break, when we know the Tory caucus was meeting to discuss their response to this amendment and to this bill, it's become clear that people who were passionately speaking not only against the bill but against the amendment as well have now changed their tune. That's par for the course as well, Mr. Chairman. Almost everyone on the other side who has spoken since we've come back started out by saying: I support GSAs. You know, they repeat it over and over again. The Minister of Service Alberta must have said that about six times in his speech.

Mr. Chairman, the point is this: they don't get it. This is not about supporting GSAs. Ultimately, this is about supporting equality, and that includes the right of students who may be gay or have gay friends to form a club like any other kid in their school, which is being denied by the bill, which now gives the ultimate authority over that matter to the school board, no longer appealable to the courts, which was an absurd thing in the first place. So then the minister is supposed to come in and rescue them and save them. That's absurd. It's absolutely ridiculous that we would have to get to the point where students who want to start a club in a junior high or a high school have to appeal to a minister of the Crown in order to be able to do so.

The hon. Member for Calgary-North West, when she was pressed before supper, admitted that they would not be necessarily allowed to have their GSA meeting in their school. That gave rise to the basic criticism of the amendment, which still stands, that it is essentially segregation. It's a separate but equal approach: yes, you can have your club, but you have to go somewhere else to do it. You know, that is not equality. That is not treating LGBTQ students the same as every other student. That is discriminatory. It's separate, maybe not so equal. That, I think, Mr. Chairman, is and remains the fundamental problem with this amendment, as they're trying to fix a bill that was so badly flawed in the first place that it probably cannot be fixed.

I urge members to cut out the nonsense about supporting GSAs and support equality. That's what we expect of our MLAs, and that's what we're not getting with this bill or with this amendment.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Before I recognize the next speaker, may I just remind all members that while the rules of committee allow each member to speak one, two, three, four, five times, I would hope that when you speak – in this case we're dealing with amendment A2. If you would attempt to keep your comments to the amendment, I would really appreciate it.

Thank you.

Mr. Kang: I will be short. I will be brief. Mr. Chair, it's an honour to speak again to the amendment on the bill. We have been hearing from my colleagues from all sides of the House that they all support GSAs. The younger generation: they don't care. People under 35: they don't care. So why are we debating this? Why are we playing all these tactics here? You know, let's give it to the students who want GSAs in schools, and let's move on. Why are we here? Let's give them the right to form the GSAs so we can stop the bullying, we can stop the discrimination, we can stop these suicidal thoughts that the members of the LGBTQ community are having. Those students: let's help them out.

We haven't heard from the Minister of Education, his thoughts on this. It would be helpful if he stood up and shed some light on this, too, where he stands on this. That would be helpful.

Let's move on. Let's give it to them. Who are we to impose our will on the younger generation? We are saying, on the one hand, that they don't care, and then we are imposing our will on them. Why? Let's move on. Let's vote down this amendment. Let's vote down this bill, and we'll probably bring in Bill 202: simple, straightforward. Let's get it done.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I just wanted to stand – you know, we got a chance over the supper hour to also take a look at this amendment and discuss it as a caucus. I want to make it very clear why it is difficult for our caucus to support this amendment.

I want to start by saying that, in our view, certainly in my view, there's a lot in Bill 10 that the government got right. I agree very much with adding parental rights into the Bill of Rights. I think that was an excellent, excellent thing for the Premier to do. I agree with the Premier's decision and the government's decision to take the term "sexual orientation" out of the notification clause and replace it with just "religion" and "sexuality." I think that's more inclusive. It gets to the same subject matter anyway when we're talking about sex education and so forth. I think that was the right thing to do. I think that adding "sexual orientation" officially into the Bill of Rights was definitely again the right thing to do in Bill 10. I think that that was correct. All those things I believe the Premier and his government got right. I also really respect the fact that there was an attempt in Bill 10 to make it clear that we do respect the local autonomy of locally elected school boards. I think that is important.

Here's the issue that I have with the amendment and why it's so hard to support it. I think that if you're going to respect local autonomy, if you're going to say: look, we want to permit Catholic schools and other faith-based schools – and it's not just Christian private schools; there are other religious private schools and so forth. If we want to protect their local autonomy and allow them to create a program both with their curriculum and with their extracurricular activities in everything that is consistent with their views and their values and the culture of their faith – if you're going to do that, we still have to recognize that in some cases in those schools there are kids that are going to be bullied.

Kids can be bullied in any school, not just those schools. There are situations where they will be bullied, and particularly what we're talking about now is that it's LGBTQ students that will be bullied. We all agree with that reality, that it does happen. So we have to say: okay; if we're going to respect local autonomy, which is good, we also have to make sure that we're ensuring the protection of the students involved in the bullying. The problem I have with this amendment is that I just don't see how it accomplishes that. That's the difficulty I have with this part of the bill.

I think that we could sit down and do a much better job of crafting legislation that would actually protect local autonomy, allow our faith-based educators to teach their faith according to the dictates of their conscience and their religion and so forth, all of that, but still pass amendments that would ensure that the child, who in some circumstances is being bullied because they are LGBTQ youth, will have protection and will have a support strategy. That's why we very carefully as a caucus for days – it felt like years at times – constructed a set of amendments that would try to accomplish that.

That's why earlier today we proposed an amendment which specifically said that if a GSA application request is denied by a faith-based school, the school must work collaboratively with the requesting student to provide a bona fide antibullying or alternative support strategy that meets the needs of that student. That would ensure no matter what that if a student says, "You know, I'm being bullied, and I want to start a GSA; I need help," that if that is a problem for whatever reason for that faith-based school, the obligation is still on the school to say: okay; let's sit down and work collaboratively with the student to address the bullying situation head-on, to make sure that there's a support strategy, whatever that looks like. It could be a hundred different types of support strategy and so forth.

I don't think it's enough to just say: you know, the board says no. Then you go to the Education minister, and the Education minister says: "Okay. Well, I'll set up a GSA. If it has the school's approval, it will be on the school site. If it doesn't, it will be off the school site." Or whatever it looks like. I just don't think that's getting to the core problem, which is, really, protecting the kids that are involved in the bullying. That's what I think needs to be addressed.

We also brought a very clear amendment forward that proposed that if the school board was mandated to create this alternative strategy working collaboratively with the student and that if for some reason it still failed in that regard and didn't do a good enough job, then the student wouldn't have to go to a court application process to appeal that – because we all know that's impossible for a student to do – but they would be able to go to the Ministry of Education and appear before a panel, consisting of three people appointed by the minister, to review the decision of the board with respect to their decision not to allow the GSA. Then that board could either confirm the decision of the board or make recommendations back to the school board regarding steps that could be taken to adequately support and protect the students involved.

Those were the amendments that we brought forward because we thought that these amendments would, in our view, make Bill 10 a bill that we could wholeheartedly support. Certainly, the majority of us in our caucus could wholeheartedly support it. What's frustrating is that without these amendments it makes it very, very difficult to support the bill because the protection aspect is not being addressed. You know, at the end of the day if you strip everything out of this discussion, really, the most important part is the protection of the kids that are experiencing the bullying. If we're not taking care of that part, then it makes it very difficult to support the bill.

Now, I want to make it very clear that I don't believe for a second that not agreeing to the amendments that we proposed earlier or not agreeing with what I'm saying right now in any way is making the government members intolerant of LGBTQ students or youth. I don't buy that. That, to me, is not fair. It's not accurate. I know most of the folks over there just as I know most of the folks on the opposition side with the Libs and New Democrats, and I have yet to meet one that is an intolerant person and is in any way bigoted. I just haven't. That's not the reasoning. There's no doubt in my mind that that's not the reason for rejecting these amendments.

But the government does need to understand that without these amendments being put in, without these protections for LGBTQ students, it's going to make it very difficult for us in the Wildrose caucus, who have put a lot of time and effort into trying to find that balance that everyone is talking about. Then just to have that part rejected out of hand, it's very difficult for us to now go and support – well, certainly this amendment but to support the bill because it's not being addressed.

Again, I invite the government to please – there's no reason why we can't adjourn debate tonight and come together as a group and figure out a set of amendments that will actually accomplish what we're going for here, which is the protection of LGBTQ youth, while still respecting local autonomy. I think we can get there. I think, you know, the intent is there, but I just feel that the delivery mechanism here is not the right one.

You know, there's no point in being here until 3 in the morning debating clauses on this bill. We could put together an amendment here that works. But just ramming this one through doesn't work, Mr. Chair. We might not get this chance because the problem is that if we pass this amendment – and this also makes it difficult to support – then it takes away our ability to amend sections 2 and 3, which are the main parts of the bill with regard to dealing with the bullying problem around LGBTQ youth. We won't be able to bring any further amendments, so at that point I don't know what we're debating anymore.

Again, I just would ask the government to please reconsider. Let's put this on the table. Let's adjourn debate on it. [interjection] Maybe you don't agree with me, but I would like to adjourn debate on this bill and come together and find a solution that's actually going to protect our LGBTQ youth and students and all those other important issues and rights.

With that, I am going to move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate lost]

The Chair: We will continue with debate on amendment A2. No other speakers?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A2 carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 8:52 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

The Chair: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'd like to move that the committee rise and report progress.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration Bill 10. The committee reports progress on Bill 10. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? That is carried.

9:00 Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Time Allocation on Bill 10

12. Mr. Denis moved:
Be it resolved that when further consideration of Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, is resumed, not more than two hours shall be allotted to any further consideration of the bill in Committee of the Whole, at which time every question necessary for the disposal of the bill at this stage shall be put forthwith.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, this motion is debatable. The standing orders provide for five minutes from the Official Opposition.

The hon. Official Opposition House Leader.

Mr. Anderson: Really quick. Boilerplate opposition, it says. There you go. [interjections]

The Deputy Speaker: Please proceed, hon. Opposition House Leader.

Mr. Anderson: Sorry. They're really distracting me over there right now. I don't know what it is.

You know, I think, obviously, I would have preferred to do an adjournment here tonight so that we could all go home and talk about it. It's 9 o'clock. We could come back tomorrow, and we could debate it further and maybe have a better bill with regard to Bill 10, but I guess we're going to be invoking closure. Closure obviously isn't one of, I think, the best things to do in our parliamentary democracy, especially after just a couple of hours of debate. It is a reality that we have dealt with many, many, many times in opposition. I think that, obviously, we would like to see – again, I really wish we could adjourn debate and get a good bill done here, but the government has invoked closure. They've done it before. I'm sure they'll do it again.

With that, I'll pass it off to someone whose boilerplate arguments . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Nope. That's it. It's just five minutes to yourself, hon. Opposition House Leader.

Mr. Anderson: Oh, I understand that, but what I'm going to do, what I'm proposing – I am just saying that . . . [interjections] You want me to be more angry. I'm just kidding.

Obviously, I don't think we should do closure, Mr. Speaker. That's it. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader has moved Government Motion 12.

[Motion carried]

[The voice vote indicated that Government Motion 12 carried]

[Government Motion 12 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: I would want to bring a motion again for one-minute bells. Would this be the appropriate time to do so, Mr. Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: One-minute bells for committee. Again, for the annunciation of the House, if we move back into the House, another motion would be necessary at that time to change the time of the bells. So as we move into committee, I'll recognize you, and we'll have that motion immediately.

Mr. Denis: Thank you.

Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

The Chair: I'll call the Committee of the Whole to order, and I'll recognize the Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. At this time I would like to ask for unanimous consent of the House for all bells for the rest of evening in Committee of the Whole to have a one-minute interval.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Bill 10
An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Chair: With that, we're back to Bill 10, and I'll recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I would like to move on behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona an amendment to Bill 10. I will send to the table prepared copies for distribution.

The Chair: Hon. members, this will be amendment A3, and I have been advised by Parliamentary Counsel that this is in order, so, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, you may speak to amendment A3.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I will move that Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, be amended by striking out section 5.

Now, just to speak to that, it is on page 12 of the bill in case anyone is having difficulty because there's another section 5 earlier, on page 6, that we definitely are not moving. This section currently reads:

Coming into force

5 Section 3, except subsections (1), (8)(b) and (12), comes into force on March 1, 2015.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment deals with the application of this act to private schools. Section 5 allows certain sections of this act with regard to antibullying measures to come into force on the 1st of March, 2015, in private schools. Our amendment will require that private schools implement antibullying measures, including the one regarding GSAs, upon Royal Assent.

These schools receive government funding. In the 2013 budget funding for private full-day kindergarten was increased by more than the funding for public schools. Public schools receive no funding for kindergarten. Private school full-day kindergarten had their funding increased by 11.6 per cent.

Mr. Chairman, Albertans pay for these schools, and Albertans want to protect students in their schools, which include these private schools. As a result, we feel that these schools should not be exempt from antibullying legislation for any extended period of time. We think that the issue of dealing with bullying is simply too important to wait, so the exemption as it applies to private schools is removed by this amendment. We would respectfully suggest to all members opposite and on this side that as these schools are publicly funded, we have every right to expect that they will comply with antibullying legislation, the same as schools in the public system.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Speaking to the amendment, the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased to stand in support of this amendment. Once again we're dealing with some element of discrimination. I mean, how would we expect to be a Legislature without applying consistently our commitment to human rights, whether it's in a public school, a separate school, a private school? These are all in whole or in part funded by the public purse. They're all required to follow Alberta curriculum. They're all required to follow the basic Charter of Rights, the Constitutional rights that we've all endorsed as legislators. It makes no sense to exempt some aspect of the school system from these important values and principles. There's no place for separating out private schools, which are 70 per cent publicly funded. There's no way that this should not be accepted, and possibly we can find some kind of redemption for this Bill 10.

Thanks, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Are there others to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I rise to speak in favour of this amendment. You know, I find it interesting that now we're dealing with a different piece of the bill, yet it still seems to be the same conversation: whether we truly believe in equity and applying the same rules across the board.

This amendment really amends the bill to apply to private schools. Now, as the two former speakers have said, private schools receive a considerable amount of public funding. In fact, they receive 70 per cent of what public schools receive even though they are private. This amendment ensures that private schools are also, you know, obligated in regard to antibullying measures. I mean, at the end of the day, Mr. Chair, you know, there are, obviously, LGBTQ students everywhere, in all schools, so we want to ensure that these students are protected and that there is a level of – I mean, I want to take it beyond respect, to ensure that the private schools are not being exempted from antibullying legislation. Again, you know, the spirit of this amendment is to promote equality and to ensure that we don't have different rules or that one school can discriminate over a group of students. Again, students need to be protected, to have safe spaces no matter where they're going.

Many of the arguments that have been given this evening deal with human rights and the fact that protecting our students should span across all religions, races, genders, ages, and sexual orientations. We want to make sure that this important issue isn't overlooked. Again, the bill the way it's currently written, you could have some private schools wiggling out of their responsibility to ensure that students aren't bullied based on sexual orientation, perceived sexual orientation, or gender identity. So I will encourage all members of the Assembly to support this amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Speaking to the amendment, the hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: I've read this over. This is the first time I've seen the amendment, and I'm trying to quickly peruse through. I'm not quite seeing how this exempts private schools from these things. Maybe it's just that I need more time to cross-reference everything and figure it out, but I'm just reading it. I'm not seeing how that would exempt private schools from this bill. I mean, maybe I can get an explanation from the government side on that, but I'm not seeing it. So until I understand it, until our caucus understands it, I don't think that we are comfortable supporting it.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

The Chair: We are back to the bill. Are there any other speakers to the bill?

Mr. Mason: I have another amendment, Mr. Chairman, on behalf of my colleague the MLA for Edmonton-Strathcona, which I will provide to the table, including copies for all members.

Thank you.

The Chair: Hon. members, this will be amendment A4, and again this amendment is in order.

This has been moved by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, and you may speak to it, hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Well, I will move on behalf of my colleague the MLA for Edmonton-Strathcona that Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect Our Children, be amended in section 1(2) by striking out clause (a) and substituting the following:

(a) by striking out "or sex" and substituting " , sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression"; and I'll speak briefly to that.

The amendment seeks to go beyond the inclusion of sexual orientation in the Alberta Bill of Rights to also include gender identity and gender expression. There is a developing understanding of LGBTQ issues beyond traditional, narrow categories: gay, straight, and so on. It's increasingly clear and the research is increasingly showing that there's a whole continuum of individuals with a variety of orientations and identities relative to their gender or how they express their gender, and that is something that we are trying to capture here.

It's an opportunity, I think, for the government to show real leadership rather than continuing the horrific record of this government with regard to the rights of certain Albertans. It has also been proposed at the federal level. We think that this is an opportunity to show some real leadership to support the rights not only of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and queer Albertans but also for transgendered Albertans, Mr. Chairman, whose rights have not yet been recognized but would be should gender identity and gender expression be included.

Mr. Chairman, this is an attempt to be more inclusive, to not leave other people at the side of the road when we are trying to protect people's rights. It needs to go beyond, you know, the traditional definitions and make sure that all Albertans, regardless of their sexual identity, sexual orientation, or how they express their gender, are protected from discrimination. That is, again, what this is about. This is about protecting people from discrimination, which is the objective, of course, of the Alberta Bill of Rights.

We feel that we should be expanding this definition to become more inclusive. I would hope that all members will see the benefit of doing so and will support our amendment. Thank you.

The Chair: Speaking to the amendment, the hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Yes. I want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood for suggesting this. My department is currently looking into the issue of adding gender identity as prohibited grounds for discrimination in our Human Rights Act. I do think that this is something we should do, and we'll likely see some legislation in the near future in this respect. I should note that the Human Rights Commission already sees items of gender identity as being under the heading of sexual orientation, so this would just be clarifying the further intent to protect all Albertans from discrimination regardless of any of those enumerated characteristics in the Human Rights Act.

Where I'm not really clear, though, is on gender expression. I would have to do some more research because I have not heard that particular term. I definitely support the intent of the amendment from the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, but I would have to do some further research on gender expression.

On gender identity: I think you can look forward to that in the next session.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I will thank the Justice minister for engaging in discussion on this.

I will attempt to answer your question. Well, I'll start off by answering your question. I think this amendment is very important. Gender expression is how a person chooses to express themselves vis-à-vis their look, their clothes. It's how they choose to express their gender, which is different, and that's why it's drawn out and why we're pulling it out. Gender expression and gender identity are separate from LGBTQ. When we say the LGBTQ community, to make it truly inclusive, then we need to talk not just about sexual orientation, but it's also talking about gender, gender identity, gender expression.

I appreciate that the minister's department is working on this. I think this is a very significant yet small amendment that will make a difference to many Albertans, so I will encourage the minister to support this.

The Chair: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you. Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, thank you very much for your comments. I definitely agree with where you're going here, and I agree with your sentiment and your spirit. I'm pretty much there with respect to gender identity, but again I just would want to do some further research on the gender expression issue. You likely will see some amendments to our Human Rights Act, as I mentioned in my previous exchange, dealing with gender identity even though the Human Rights Commission does recognize that as de facto prohibited grounds of discrimination already.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the amendment?

Back to the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Yes, and I'll thank the minister for his comments. Again, I appreciate that the minister is talking about amending the Human Rights Act to include this, which I do think would be a very positive step forward. I am excited to hear that, and I look forward to it.

I just want to emphasize, you know, that while we're in the middle of discussing this bill, we do have an opportunity, until those amendments come forward in the future, to ensure that all students, all people regardless of how they identify are included. I think that, honestly, this would be a great first step forward. I know that folks from the LGBTQ community, the sexual minority community, would very much appreciate seeing a bold step forward in advance of an amendment to the Human Rights Act. This amendment, I feel, is reasonable but, again, as the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood said, an opportunity for us to show leadership, to take a real step forward, again acknowledging transgendered Albertans and specifically naming that community, whose rights have not yet been recognized.

You know, I think it's important to make this step. I have friends that are transgendered. I have friends that express themselves differently depending on the day, and I know that they have felt very, very silenced. When we look at not just pieces of legislation, but when we look at the Charter and we look at the documents that protect the rights of everyone, they do feel excluded that they are not named or listed in that. I think this is an opportunity to take a step forward.

I appreciate the minister wanting to further explore gender expression, but I think we have a real opportunity here, Mr. Chair, and I hope that the Minister of Justice will take advantage of this opportunity and seek to incorporate this amendment into Bill 10.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I also agree with the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview that by striking out "or sex" and substituting "sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression," that will make it broad. It will make it more inclusive. If the Justice minister is thinking about, you know, amending the Human Rights Act, I think this will be a step in the right direction. We won't have to come back to change the Bill of Rights if we do it now. I think we have the opportunity, and let's get it done.

I'll support this amendment because it will make it more broad and more inclusive. I think we have the opportunity. We should accept this amendment and fix this, you know, once and for all.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you.

Other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chair. This is an interesting amendment because by seeking to amend section 1(2) in Bill 10, which, for anybody following along at home, is amending the Alberta Bill of Rights – that's actually on the Queen's Printer website. You should go have a look at it. I actually did and downloaded it. Well, you know, sometimes you see things, and you ask yourself: what on earth is that?

In fact, the Alberta Bill of Rights is – there it is – two pages, four sections. Not much to it. According to the history that I read, it was an attempt by the province to establish its own Charter of Rights, and it was done in 1983, so just after the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms was brought into place. It's never actually used and rarely referred to, which is why so many people were saying: "What bill of rights? You mean the Alberta human rights code? What are you talking about, Alberta Bill of Rights?"

Nobody ever refers to it. There's a reason for that. There's nothing in the Alberta Bill of Rights that requires compliance, that says that you have to do this or that has an enforcement mechanism where they chase you down and say, you know, "Not only are you doing it, complying with it, but you must, and we're going to make you" or that has a penalty clause that says that if you don't do it, "Here's what you're going to pay; here's the fine" or whatever. Boy, I feel like I've already said this to you guys, and I apologize if I have. But, seriously, for anyone that doesn't want to comply with the Alberta Bill of Rights, so what? Nothing is going to happen to you. It doesn't matter. Nobody is going to check up on you. Nobody is going to chase you down. You're not going to get a fine or a penalty or anything. It's just a nice saying. It's a nice piece of paper that says some nice things.

I appreciate that my colleague for Edmonton-Strathcona is attempting to clearly define – because who doesn't love clarity, especially in legislation? – what we mean when the government is trying to add "sexual orientation" into this bill of rights. The odd bit of this is that the government is amending this through Bill 10 to add in "sexual orientation" under their first section.

1 It is hereby recognized and declared that in Alberta there exist without discrimination by reason of race, national origin, colour, religion or sex . . .

And, of course, in here they're going to add "sexual orientation."

. . . the following human rights and fundamental freedoms, namely . . .

And then it goes through:

- (a) the right of the individual to liberty, security of the person and enjoyment of property, and the right not to be deprived thereof except by due process of law;
- (b) . . . equality before the law and the protection of the law;
- (c) freedom of religion;
- (d) freedom of speech;
- (e) freedom of assembly and association.

That's as far as it goes in the little extra bill I've got.

The government has attempted to put "sexual orientation" into the first section, Recognition and Declaration of Rights and Freedoms, which amendment A3 – yes? – is attempting to clarify by exactly what we mean.

The Chair: Amendment A4, hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Oh. Sorry. A4.

See, the odd bit of this is that despite this piece of paper that has no compliance, enforcement, or penalty to it, the government has put "sexual orientation" in the top, under Recognition and Declaration of Rights and Freedoms, but then – this is not derogatory – in the bottom they're putting in at the end of section 1 under that same Recognition and Declaration of Rights and Freedoms "the right of parents to make informed decisions respecting the education of their children."

It's a really odd combo because there's nothing else in there that talks about any other specific function of government. You would think that once they've added in education, if they're going to start that list, then wouldn't there be the right to, you know, timely access to health care, reasonable access to advanced education, support for maintenance of infrastructure so that buildings don't fall down on our heads? There's a whole list of things. If you're going to open this up and start talking about different departments like Education and adding them in, then you could be adding in a whole bunch of stuff. So that one sits really uneasily with me.

It just doesn't make sense, and it looks like it was done to appease two different parties but not very well done. I think that in the end it doesn't really – well, to my mind, it doesn't appease people very well because it doesn't actually give them what they're looking for.

I'm perfectly willing to support what my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona is attempting to do here by adding into that beginning part that I've already read to you: without discrimination by reason of race, national origin, colour, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression. Very specific list there. Fine by me. You know, it helps people understand exactly what we're talking about. It's just that I wish that this was a more substantial bill of rights, that it actually meant something or did something or stood for something. But it seems to be this kind of dusty, forgotten piece of paper that has been dragged out to try and make it look like the government is including something that, in fact, it's not including.

I'm willing to support this amendment, but I still question the point of adding to the Bill of Rights seeing as it doesn't make any difference to what's actually happening.

Thanks very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Hon. members, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's an unexpected pleasure tonight to introduce three guests: first, Councillor Andrew Knack from Edmonton city council, who, as I understand it – I'm kind of, you know, freelancing here – is the adviser to the Edmonton Youth Council. Is that correct? Claire Edwards, who, many of you know, was a page here for a number of years, is the chairman of the Edmonton Youth Council.

Ms Blakeman: Chairwoman.

Mr. Mason: What did I say?

Ms Blakeman: You said "chairman."

Mr. Mason: Did I? Oh, my goodness. I'm terribly sorry. And tonight of all nights.

The Youth Council tonight passed a motion 14 to 1 opposing Bill 10, just so members might know.

Also, I'd like to introduce Richard Feehan, who is the NDP candidate in Edmonton-Rutherford in the next election. I'd invite all members to give them the very warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

Bill 10

An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children (continued)

The Chair: Are there other speakers on amendment A4? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Yes. Very briefly. I'm glad that this amendment has been brought forward. I think that the Member for Edmonton-Centre rightly identifies that the relevance of amending the Bill of Rights is sometimes questionable given its actual role as a legal document in the province. Nonetheless, that's what the government chose to do, so we thought it was an opportunity, therefore, to ensure that the list of prohibitive grounds for discrimination should be expanded upon to reflect changes that are occurring throughout the country. For instance, we know that the federal government is considering language like this as well. We are proposing, of course, to add gender identity and gender expression.

The two are not the same. Gender identity I think refers to the internal experience of the person in question and how that might ultimately govern their life whereas gender expression doesn't necessarily mean that you have an unexpected gender identity. At least this is my understanding. For instance, you know, we recently had a case not too long ago, I think last week or two weeks ago, where there was a euphemistically termed individual, a drag queen, who was refused service by a cab company. Just a day or two ago I think it was. That, for instance, is an example of gender expression, and one ought not be discriminated against as a result of one's gender expression, which may or may not be related to one's gender identity. That's why the language is framed the way it is, gender identity as well as gender expression.

By making this amendment, it would allow this Assembly to bring the language it uses in the Bill of Rights up to date, and it will allow them, heaven forbid, to get ahead of the curve, interestingly, in relation to this conversation that's going on with respect to human rights codes across the country. That is why we thought we would introduce the notion here today through this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support us in the proposal.

Thank you.

9:50

The Chair: Are there other speakers to amendment A4?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A4 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Hi, Mr. Chair. At the table you have an amendment from me, and if I could get that distributed now? I even managed to pass you the one that has the signature on it.

So, happy people, as I often say: some days I walk up that hill to try and do good, and some days I walk up that hill to try and have things go a little less badly. This is one of the little less badly parts. The amendment that I'm proposing to Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect Our Children – gee, that's an interesting title, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: This will be A5, hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. So my amendment is now A5.

You know, that's interesting. I just noticed on this title that it talks about the Bill of Rights, but that's actually a very small part of what this bill actually does amend.

Any of you that have been following along with me – and I'm sure you hang on every word – will know how important the specificity of language is to me. One of the things that I was warned about as I was preparing for Bill 202 was to be very careful with the word "sexuality," and I'm trying to help the government be very careful with the word "sexuality." So this section to be amended is 2(5), which is the section that starts out under Division 2, Bullying Awareness and Non-discrimination. For anybody following along, if you flip the page over so you're now on page 3, this is the parental opt-out section that's actually in the Education Act which, of course, is coming into effect in September 2015. The existing School Act is what is covering us right now, but I just thought to be clean I would just go straight to the Education Act.

So under section 58.1(1), this is where:

A board shall provide notice to a parent of a student where courses, programs of study or instructional materials, or instruction or exercises, include subject-matter that deals primarily and explicitly with religion or human sexuality.

That's what's in Bill 10, and that is changing the existing Education Act, which actually has religious and patriotic exercises.

Every time I've mentioned that, people have said: what is patriotic exercise? And I say: "Oh, well, that's when you used to salute the flag at school or sing O Canada. That's the patriotic exercise." When I was really young, you used to have to wear white gloves to do it. It was really a big deal. But that actually has been cut out. Anybody that's seriously following this, that section about being able to opt your kids out of patriotic exercises has disappeared in this amending bill brought forward by the Member for Calgary-North West. Any of you that really wanted to opt your kids out of class because of patriotic exercises, you just lost your right, so you might want to contact the Member for Calgary-North West if you somehow want that back in.

But, anyway, what they're dealing with now is an opt-out clause for religion or human sexuality. One of the things that's interesting about that is that there are more people that want their kids to be able to not be exposed to religion, and then there's people on the other side of this – and this is where you get balancing rights – that want their children to be in a faith-based school. It's always really interesting when I hear from people that don't want their kids to be in a class where there's going to be instruction about religion. They want to be able to opt them out.

Adding in "human sexuality" is a problem, and here's why. The government has wisely followed my lead and taken sexual orientation out, so you can no longer specifically opt your kids out of class because of sexual orientation. This always led to a really interesting conversation about: how do you actually teach kids sexual orientation? I've never had an answer to that. I don't think you can. That's a good reason to take it out.

But I had suggested that that section talk about sexual health education because I think that it is very helpful if you've got a professional talking to kids with age-appropriate material about sexual health education. You're talking about things like sexually transmitted diseases, you're talking about abstinence – good idea, folks – the concept of consent. I mean, there are a lot of different things that can be handled under that. Then, of course, they can go home and talk to their parents about the rest of what it means. We've heard a couple of my colleagues here tonight talk about that and how they dealt with it when their kids came home from that class.

What we need to be careful of here is that a number of the courts interpret sexuality as encompassing sexual orientation and gender identity, so after all this work that the government has gone to now to take sexual orientation out, they may have accidentally left it in. I just want to be really clear about this because this is the unforeseen consequences part, and I'm trying to stop you from stepping over that cliff.

The previous amendment was being very clear in spelling out "sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression." You're very clear about what they're talking about, and I'd almost prefer that that kind of thing would be in section 58 because then you would know what you were talking about. That blanket phrase "human sexuality," everybody thinks they know what it is, but everybody's got a different version in their head of what it is. Some people are thinking that it's the birds and the bees. Some people are thinking sexual orientation. Some people are thinking gender identity. Some people are thinking: I just don't want my kid to know this. There are lots of different interpretations of that, and I really think we put ourselves in a difficult position here. All that work to take sexual orientation out, and you may still have it there and not know it. I would like to be very clear that we're not including that, which is why I wanted it to read "sexual health education."

The other thing. A number of people here have already expressed: well, I don't see a difference between sexuality and sexual health education. Okay. Fine. Then let's call it sexual health education because then we do know what it's about. If you want to opt out, that's what you're opting your kid out of. I don't know how you opt your kid out of a class on sexuality. Like, what is that a class on? You're not supposed to be talking about worms and things like that, so what is it that you're opting your kids out of when that phrase is in there? It is unclear and unspecific, and that's the problem with the phrase.

What my amendment A5 is doing is striking out "human sexuality" and substituting "sexual health education." I think that's what we're really trying to get at there. That at least gives us a very specific and very easy to understand declaration or description of what you're talking about. I also take it out later where it's talking about if it's just a little bit of talk, subsection (3) on the next page.

This section does not apply to incidental or indirect references to religion, religious themes or human sexuality in a course, program of study, instruction or exercises or in the use of instructional materials.

So if it's a minor reference, the opt-out is not offered, and you also shouldn't have to be needing to give advance notice, which you do have to do here.

Oh, Mr. Chair. That's just such a pain. That's just so much extra work for those schools to have to give advanced notice to parents. I know that it's really important to some people, but yowza; it's not as though we gave them any more money in the schools to handle this. To me, it really makes it stick out, particularly when "sexual orientation" was still in it because it was like flashing, you know, those Las Vegas lights that go around. Chase lights, they're called. It was like those chase lights and the flashing lights that go, "Warning, warning; danger, danger; danger here; here be dragons," because this was such a terrible thing to be talking about with sexual orientation.

We have managed to get rid of that. Good. Thank you very much. But I think we need to be very clear what we're talking about when we talk about human sexuality, and I've already heard a number of definitions of what people on the other side think it is.

I do think that's very problematic. So let's be clear about it. Let's pass this amendment, and then we know exactly what we're talking about, sexual health education, and we don't allow it to stray into any other area that could be misinterpreted, particularly by the courts.

I know how fond you all are of judge-made law, so vote with me. Don't let those judges make law from this one. You can cut them off at the pass so easily just by voting for amendment A5.

Thank you very much.

Dr. Swann: I rise in support this amendment. Clarity of language is important, and this is a very difficult area for many of us with new terminology coming up almost every year. What this amendment does, I think, is simplify and provide a more inclusive description of what happens in a classroom around sexual health education, which I think is the intent of the bill, so that parents know exactly what they're saying yes or no to. We're not saying that parents shouldn't have a role in deciding some aspects of sex education and inclusion of their children in that activity. In fact, we think it's important for parents to know and be part of the conversation, as many people in the Legislature have already said over the hours of debates we've had. All this does is make more clear what it is they're saying yes or no to.

"Sexual health education" is an all-inclusive term. It's part of what we expect schools to do, and we want it to be done in a healthy and mature way. That adds a helpful term, I think. I don't know anybody that would not feel that was more clear than "human sexuality," which covers a whole gamut of activities and themes.

With respect to shifting from "religious themes or human sexuality" to just "religious themes," we've already talked about the sexual health aspects of it. We don't need to repeat it in subsection (3). So it's a given that that would be just a more economic use of the language. I won't belabour it. It's more clear language. It's more clear intent. It's more clear for parents, who need to know what it is we're doing.

I hope everyone here can support this friendly – very friendly – amendment.

The Chair: Are there other speakers?

Ms Notley: Well, I rise to speak in favour of this amendment. It is an effort to clarify something that has been the subject of much discussion because, of course, on one hand, we saw the government taking the issue of sexual orientation – I think it was sexual orientation. What did they take out of the notification? Anyway, they took the piece that included discussions of sexual orientation out of the notification language and put in "human sexuality," but as soon as they did that, many people started asking: well, what does human sexuality mean, and can human sexuality include sexual orientation?

Now, I actually think that as much as the Member for Edmonton-Centre wants to help this government avoid litigation on this bill, that the horse is kind of out of that barn already, and there's no putting it back in because I think that this legislation as a whole is going to do nothing but attract litigation because of its numerous discriminatory elements.

You know, as much as the Member for Edmonton-Centre is doing a kindness to the government to try and inject a little bit of clarity to this legislation, the fact of the matter is that the amendment that was just passed by this government in conjunction with the remainder of Bill 10 is going to take up a lot of court time, I'm thinking. A lot of court time. And it's unfortunate because, of course, the people that are going to have to finance that are probably those who are least able to afford it, but I suspect they still will because the legislation is so deeply flawed.

That being said, in the interest of trying to promote clarity where possible, I do agree with the sentiment that is included in the amendment put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Centre in the effort to limit the notification piece to education around sexual health education. I think that's reasonable. I think we all agree that parents should be notified of these things because parents want to have some control over when they have these conversations with their kids, and they want to know when it happens. That's entirely reasonable.

But, of course, the concern is, you know, that if you're Joe Average parent who wants to insist upon your rights or who believes you have the right to get notice when the teachers in your school begin talking about issues that might include sexual orientation or discussions about the human rights code or perhaps even a discussion about this legislative debacle that we've just been through – because I'm sure that lots of really thoughtful social studies teachers would love nothing better than to have their classes watch our debate and then discuss amongst each other what a disaster this is. It's certainly a learning experience for how not to govern. Nonetheless, all of that could well trigger one parent's decision to go after the teacher for not giving notification that students would be subjected to such legislative idiocy, and they might use this language in order to assert that right to be notified.

There's no question that by replacing "human sexuality" with the term "sexual health education," we are more inclined to limit parents' objections to those occasions where teachers might decide, for instance, to teach their kids about issues around human rights that include, of course, conversations around sexual orientation because, of course, sexual orientation is also part of human sexuality. As much as I do think that the government was intending to try to narrow the scope of the notification, I don't think they succeeded in doing that with the use of the term "human sexuality."

So I absolutely urge members to support the amendment put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Centre in this regard. I think it is one that is designed to provide clarity and precision to what I think was already the intent of the government with respect to this legislation. As I say, you know, you're going to be in front of the courts a lot with it anyway. Why not limit the number of things you're in court about? When it comes to this legislation, taxpayers are going to unfortunately be funding the government's defence of this legislation, which is actually also irritating to me from a taxpayer point of view. But, anyway, I digress. Nonetheless, let's limit the degree to which taxpayers have to fund the defence of this travesty of a legislative document.

Ms Blakeman: Unintended consequences of a lack of clarity.

Ms Notley: A lack of clarity that exists within this.

It's unfortunate that other parts were not, perhaps, as unclear as this because then at least it wouldn't be quite so offensive.

Nonetheless, that being said, I urge members to support this amendment. Thank you.

The Chair: The Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I rise to speak in favour of this amendment. Again, you know, we're trying to repair an extremely broken bill. I appreciate the Member for Edmonton-Centre's efforts and, well, not just the spirit of this amendment, but I appreciate this amendment itself.

First and foremost, as a former teacher I can tell you that teaching about sexual health education is very important, Mr. Chair. I think that what this amendment attempts to do by using language that is much more open and inclusive and that covers the full range of topics and subjects, not just human sexuality, is very important. That's what it's been called for the last hundred years or so, so it's nice to see some language that modernizes it, that is much more inclusive, whether we are talking about homosexuality, heterosexuality, gender identity, sexual orientation, and ensuring that our curriculum relates to all students regardless of who they are or where they come from.

I think that this amendment is positive. I have a few more comments that I am going to save to speak in general to Bill 10. I do think it's worth noting, Mr. Chair, and for the members opposite to note that Bill 10 is actually trending fifth in Canada on Twitter as we speak. I would encourage the members opposite to read some of the comments that not just Albertans but Canadians are making on Bill 10 and how this is a very dark day for people in Alberta. I actually plan to read some of the tweets out to members of the House so they can see exactly how hurtful this bill is.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, the Liberal opposition leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I rise to speak in support of the amendment put forward by the hon. member from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. It's been a very divisive, long, emotional debate for many of us. I want to thank the hon. member for wanting to make a little tweak that will make this a better bill. You know, again, I'll say that the government's intent is right, is good. Because of rushing through a bill – I believe we need to change the wording “human sexuality” to “sexual health education” because at the end of the day this is really simple. What we're talking about is the birds and the bees. It's about the birds and bees. Let's be clear, and let's call it what it is.

Mr. Chair, as a physician one of the reasons I think we should make it very clear and distinct is simply from a public health perspective. I've talked to a couple of religious leaders, and they don't really want to talk about the birds and the bees. It's interesting that there are a number of pregnant young women in this certain school. I talked to the religious leaders, and I said that I've talked to these young women. They are my patients. I said, “Are they all doing it?” They said, “Even the guys with the glasses are doing it in the stairwells.”

I think we as a society and as parents do have a role and duty to educate children and care for them and look after them. I just had two young adults who went through the school system, a son and a daughter. They are both in university now. I was thankful that the school system taught them about human sex education, and as a doctor I sort of have supplemented that a little bit as well.

Mr. Chair, these are the facts right now in Alberta based on data from the Health department a few years ago. Low-income young women in Alberta between the ages of 15 and 19 are having babies at 11 times the rate of high-income young women. So, really, we have babies having babies. We have a baby boom here, and we have a lot of young people. Children having children. I saw a 42-year-old great-grandmother in the emergency department one day. The grandmother was 28, and the mother was 14.

It's important not only for families and parents to have an open, honest conversation with their children about, you know, taking responsibility when it comes to the issues of having sex or not having it when you shouldn't be having it, but if you are having it, you should be responsible about it. So let's be more specific in the legislation. Call it what it is: the birds and the bees, human sexual health education.

I would ask the members of the government – you've won almost every battle against the opposition parties on this issue. I would impress upon you that this is something to help your bill now become just a little bit better and to prevent further unintended consequences. There's no need to leave this so open to interpretation, no need for things and unnecessary issues to get into the court system. Call it what it is.

If you would please support this amendment, we in the Liberal opposition will be very thankful and grateful for having had the opportunity to respectfully debate and convince you to support a minor change in what is now your legislation, that you're tabling.

Thank you so much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you.

Are there other speakers to amendment A5?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A5 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the bill. Speaking on the bill, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'll try to keep my comments brief, but I can tell you that there's a flurry of outrage.

Mr. Mason: You always say that.

Mr. Bilous: I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood for reminding me that I seem to always begin by saying that I'm going to keep my comments brief. My students used to say the same. They would actually sit down and get very comfortable when I'd say: this isn't going to take long.

Again, you know, you've got to love technology and Twitter because there are Albertans and Canadians that are engaged in a discussion across the country about Bill 10. There are some real Canadians and Albertans very angry, frustrated at what this bill is doing. One tweet:

My son about #bill10, “They're debating what?? I didn't think that was still a thing. Gay marriage is legal but kids can't meet?”

Another one actually was from a prominent CFL football player that was interviewed today, Mr. Jon Cornish, who was quite unhappy with Bill 10 and said:

I want my kids growing up in a world where it doesn't matter who you love.

Another tweet:

I saw a friend cry today watching the debates. I'm so angry at what that pain is. Equality is a right.

Next:

The message #bill10 sends to LGBTQ youth is that they don't matter and don't deserve safety. Fend for yourselves because #ableg doesn't care.

And:

The PCAA position, their comments and the Bill are living proof our kids need unencumbered access to GSA's.

Then:

Have any of the MLA's voting for #bill10 actually spoken to #lgbtq kids, they just might want to before deciding their fate.

Another tweet:

One of the saddest days in Alberta politics. This bill has done nothing to protect our kids!

And:

If the education minister won't speak for #LGBTQ kids now, how can he be trusted to represent them in bill 10?

Obviously, I can't use names in the House, but I think we know whom we're talking about. A few tweets came in.

All those "mayors brunches" seem a complete farce. Didn't stand up when most needed.

Another tweet:

#bill10 A very dark day for Alberta.

They're pouring in much faster than I can keep up.

So, Mr. Chair, I think that, you know, regardless of the amendments that members have tried to put forward this evening to amend this piece of legislation, the country is talking about a piece of legislation that is very divisive. It is a bill that separates and segregates and discriminates. It's not a bill that supports our youth, our students. It doesn't support GSAs. When I take a step back and think about all the hours that we've spent this evening debating whether or not kids should be allowed to form an extracurricular club at their school, it seems so ridiculous that we're even having this discussion, even more absurd that there's opposition to something that should be an inalienable right. It should not be denied to any youth.

I can tell you, Mr. Chair, about one of my biggest concerns. You know, earlier I heard comments from the service minister talking about how kids could always go to another school, then, and find one that maybe is supportive of GSAs. Well, here's the reality, Mr. Minister. There are – how many? – thousands of kids living in rural Alberta who do not have a choice, if they are denied a GSA in their school, to go to another school. This legislation that we're passing is having and will have an incredible impact on young people in this province. It is a sign that basically says: if you are LGBTQ or a sexual minority, you are not welcome here.

It is shameful, Mr. Chair. I can't express the disappointment that I'm feeling for the direction that we're going. You know, all parties in this House had the opportunity to do the right thing. You look at the frustration and shame last year when Motion 503 was voted down. This was an opportunity for political parties and for all members to get it right. I'm speaking directly about supporting the Member for Edmonton-Centre's private member's bill, Bill 202, which would have addressed this. It would have provided a solution that many young people are looking for.

In my last comment, Mr. Chair, I do want to mention the fact that GSAs are not exclusive, and it floors me that there are people out there that do not understand the purpose of these clubs, which we've tried to explain, and who they're for, which is everyone. That's why they're called a gay-straight alliance. They're not exclusive. They are inclusive. Everyone is welcome in these clubs.

So it is with a very heavy heart that I will take my seat and continue to urge members of this House to throw out this bill. Let's start from scratch and protect the rights of young people everywhere in this province.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the bill?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[The remaining clauses of Bill 10 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. At this point in time I would move that the committee rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 10. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? That is carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's been a long day for every member here. In accordance with that, I would like to move that this House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 10:27 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Hon. members, let us pray. May the joyful spirit that surrounds us today remain within our hearts all year long, and may our actions be guided by the messages of sharing and of giving to those in need. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by Little Bow.

Mr. Amery: Thank you. Today is indeed a very blessed day here at the Alberta Legislature. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the newly appointed bishop of the Lebanese Maronite church of Canada, Bishop Paul-Marwan Tabet, who is located in Montreal. Today he is visiting Edmonton. Also, we have Father Michel Kassas of the Lebanese Maronite church of Calgary. Accompanying them are Mrs. Kassas – I should put it this way; Mrs. Kassas is the mother of the Father – and five very active members of the church: Mrs. Hanan Samia, Mrs. Rola Abi Badra, Mrs. Najwa Machaalani, Mr. Francis Machaalani, and Mr. Tony Shallala. They're seated in your gallery, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by Leduc-Beaumont.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all the members of the Assembly my lovely wife, Serena. She's sitting up in your gallery. As we all know, everybody that's in this Assembly, you need your spouse and your loved ones to be part of what you do, and my wife has always been a rock. I thank her for all of her support. If she'd please rise now and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker and Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you. Mr. Speaker and hon. members, I'd like to take this opportunity to recognize a group of individuals in the galleries today who play a key role in the democratic process in the province of Alberta, the staff who work in our constituency offices. They often provide the first point of contact for our constituents and represent our offices and this Assembly. These special individuals are here today participating in the winter constituency employee seminar, which provides an opportunity for them to network with other LAO staff and obtain an overview of numerous programs and services available through the LAO. Each year the service and contributions of these individuals are celebrated with an employee recognition dinner, which the Speaker will be holding later this evening. Today approximately 65 office employees are with us from all corners of the province. They're in both galleries, and I'd ask that they all rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of members of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

Are there any school groups to be introduced today?

If not, we have a number of other important guests to introduce. We have 20 more introductions, so please keep your introductions as short as possible so that we can get all 20 in.

Let's start with the hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by the President of Treasury Board.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three of my constituents from Sherwood Park. They are seated in the public gallery. We have today with us Thomas Moore, Regine Moore, and Eric Inch. Mr. Moore visited me in my constituency office to raise awareness of the issues many vulnerable Albertans are facing with life leases. If we could have them rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. President of Treasury Board, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some very special guests. We will be meeting with renowned private-sector economists to discuss Alberta's economic forecast in advance of next year's budget. The perspectives these individuals bring to the table are invaluable to our budget planning process. Sitting in the gallery we have Craig Wright, senior vice-president and chief economist, RBC Financial Group; Rob Kavcic, vice-president and senior economist, BMO Capital Markets; Avery Shenfeld, managing director and chief economist, CIBC World Markets; Stéfane Marion, chief economist and strategist, National Bank Financial Markets; Mary Webb, senior economist, Scotiabank; Leslie Preston, economist, TD Economics; and Marie-Christine Bernard, associate director, provincial forecast, Conference Board of Canada. Along with them are members of my department: Katherine White, assistant deputy minister; Mark Parsons, acting chief economist; and Sarla Sharma, senior economist. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Saturday is the 25th anniversary of an event we call the Montreal massacre. A group of women came together and started to plan a memorial for that event, and I have brought them all together again today. We became lifelong friends and peer support for each other. I'd like you to please welcome to the Assembly Catherine Hedlin, Bonnie Thompson, Sonia Bitar – please rise – Carol Hutchings, Shelley Williams, Michelle Andrews, and Janet Pavlic. Thank you so much for all the help over the years and for being such stalwart warriors for women. Thank you.

I'm also really flattered, Mr. Speaker, to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very special young woman who is the official president of my fan club, and that is Ms Imogen Randall. Imogen, would you rise, please. She's done great work. Please welcome her. With Imogen is her mother, Kim Bewick, who works in my office as the caseworker and is a great social activist.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by the leader of the ND opposition.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to introduce to you and through you to all members of this august Chamber the Wildrose caucus constituency assistants. They are on the front lines of service and deal with the everyday problems of Albertans while providing them with solutions, and with the exception of those who work for the hon. leader and the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, they have to work very hard to make the rest of us look good. If they would please stand as I say their names and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly: Julie, Angela, Keith, Mandy, Melanie, Alex, Lynn, Terri, Brenda, Lana, Barbara, and Laura. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition, followed by the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly my guests Lori Sigurdson, David Von Haller, and Joey Shaughnessy. Lori is the senior manager at the Alberta College of Social Workers, vice-president of Public Interest Alberta, and the NDP candidate for Edmonton-Riverview in the next provincial election. David Von Haller and Joey Shaughnessy are both fourth-year bachelor of social work students at the University of Calgary. They are doing their field placements at the Alberta College of Social Workers, and Lori is their field supervisor. I would like to ask my guests to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, followed by the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly two outstanding young men, Colin Aitken and Scott Thomson. Colin I've had the pleasure for knowing for a few years. He's an outstanding young man from Devon and door-knocked with me in my last campaign. Colin will be attending Grant MacEwan University in January, studying history and political science. Scott has travelled from Scotland, where he is currently studying electrical and mechanical engineering at the University of the Highlands and Islands. Welcome, Scott, to Alberta. We'd love to bring you here as a temporary worker in Alberta. I ask both of you to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, followed by the leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a constituent of mine by the name of Joan Bishop. She's from the centre of my constituency, near Gwynne, and lives on a lovely acreage. She's been a home-schooler for many years, and she came by today to just watch the proceedings. She and her husband, Barry, have five kids and three grandkids. I've known Joan for a long time, and I know her to be a very committed parent and community volunteer. I believe she's in the public gallery. If she could rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition, followed by the minister of environment.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions. Firstly, I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Brian Gregg, Joanne David, and Mac Walker from the organization called Poor Vote Turnout. Poor Vote Turnout is on a quest in Edmonton to increase voter turnout by encouraging and assisting the poor population to vote in elections. I'd like to thank Brian, Joanne, and Mac for the work that they do and ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Leah Koska. Leah is a student at the University of Alberta, graduating this year from the department of human ecology. Leah is passionate about policy development; specifically, providing healthy and affordable nutrition to all Albertans. In fact, Leah's solutions will fix the health system, and I think she'd be a great MLA for Edmonton-Meadowlark in the future as she is my constituent. I'd like to ask Leah to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. minister of environment, followed by Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a good friend of mine, someone that I've gotten to know over a number of years and a constituent of Calgary-Klein, Mr. DJ Kelly. DJ is the community president of the Winston Heights-Mountview Community Association in my riding. He's a tireless volunteer in the community, takes a very keen interest in all of the affairs going on in the community, in our city, and in our province, and is very well known on Twitter. I know he's here in the public gallery. I'd like to have him rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by Calgary-Glenmore.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a journalist from Newcap News in my constituency of Bonnyville-Cold Lake, Frazer Snowdon, his first time at the Alberta Legislature. It's a testament to our great province that we have such a vocal and proud media. Mr. Snowdon is a valuable contributor to our community and a valuable voice of the people of Bonnyville-Cold Lake. He's seated in the visitors' gallery. I'd ask him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the Associate Minister of Persons with Disabilities.

Ms L. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions as well. It is my pleasure and honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a special visitor. Seated in the members' gallery, from Beaverlodge, is Rochelle Martian. I met Rochelle this summer as we worked together on the Premier's leadership campaign. Her energy and calmness were an asset to our group. I would like her to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker, is on behalf of my colleague the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster and myself. We'd like to introduce Linda Cerra. Linda is our legislative assistant, and I would observe that Linda keeps us going. She keeps her sense of humour as she works. They all work hard, but I bet Linda is one of the hardest working in the Assembly. Thank you, Linda, and thank you for having our back.

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Persons with Disabilities, followed by Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you on behalf of my colleague the Minister of Human Services and myself three new government of Alberta employees. They're here today to represent some of the actions our government is taking under Alberta's employment-first strategy. This strategy was put in place to improve employment for persons with disabilities, to help address current labour shortages, and to create more inclusive workplaces and communities. I'm proud to say that our government is leading by example, creating 20 paid internship positions for persons with disabilities. The members are here today. Please rise as I call out your names. Vivek Agnihotri will be working in human resources recruitment, Christina Amador is a research intern in disability services, and Kate Walker will be working as a case aid with AISH. Joining them also today is Gisela Kwok, director in charge of the employment-first internship program. Please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by Calgary-McCall.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a privilege for me to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly Ms Segen Tesfamichael, an outstanding constituent from Edmonton-Decore who is here this afternoon to observe democracy in action. Segen is in her final year of the human ecology program at the University of Alberta, Faculty of Agricultural, Life and Environmental Sciences. She's a born and raised Albertan who is a dedicated, ambitious, and highly motivated individual. Best wishes, Segen, in all of your future endeavours. I would now ask Segen to please rise and remain standing for the Assembly would like to provide to you this afternoon a traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by Banff-Cochrane.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly my right-hand man, jack of all trades, and, most importantly, my constituency manager. Mr. Robb Aishford has been working for the constituency of Calgary-McCall since May 2012, when I was able to steal him from our caucus, where he was formerly doing communications. Mr. Aishford is a proud University of Alberta political science graduate and, like most in this Chamber, an intense political news junkie, who day in and day out helps keep me on track and organized. Most importantly, he takes great care of my constituents in Calgary-McCall. I will now ask Mr. Robb Aishford to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, followed by Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. Casey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a woman with absolutely no interest in politics whatsoever. It truly is an honour to have her here today. She's actually stood by me through 17 years of political life, but she's also stood by me through 42 years of marriage. I'd ask my wife, Pennie, to rise and please accept . . . [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by Lesser Slave Lake.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly the legislative assistants that support our government members each and every day. We're all dependent on our legislative assistants to help us navigate our way through sessions such as this one. I know that I speak for all my caucus colleagues when I say thank you for all the hard work you've done and continue to do. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have three left. Bear with me as we complete these. The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by the Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education and by Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I have two introductions. It is an honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly an individual whom I had the pleasure of welcoming as a new staff member in 1998, when I was a minister without portfolio responsible for children's services. Throughout the years as I moved offices, she moved with me. This is rare. In all the years that she has been with me, I have not had the ability to introduce her because she's always been too darn busy. Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to introduce to you Ms Rhonda Checknita. I call her the historian of all legislative assistants, and I thank her for all the work and the honour of having her work for me. I'd ask that Rhonda rise and receive a big thanks from me and a traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The other, Mr. Speaker, an individual I never get to introduce as well, is number three of six sisters. That's my sister Louise. She comes from Red Deer, and I know she's here to do a number of things. I'd ask her to rise and receive the warm welcome as one of my little sisters.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education.

Mr. Scott: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you somebody who suffered with me for many, many years not only as my constituency assistant; she used to assist me in my law firm. That is Diane Edison. Please rise, Diane Edison, and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I inadvertently missed the opportunity to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly the two hardest working assistants because they have to make the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat look good, and that's nearly impossible: Kendra and Shelley, please.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're going to start Oral Question Period. Thank you for allowing me to delay it a bit to get all those introductions done.

Thirty-five seconds maximum for the question, 35 seconds maximum for the answer. Let us begin. The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Hospital Infrastructure Maintenance

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, Albertans are shaking their heads at all of the examples of how this government has mismanaged our health system. They've allowed our hospitals to crumble because of lack of maintenance. The condition of many hospitals is abysmal, and many of the ones in good condition aren't being properly utilized. We all know that the system for allocating infrastructure maintenance dollars is politicized and rife with manipulation. Will the Premier commit to fixing his government's record of neglect on this file?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we allocate money on the maintenance of hospitals. The decision is made by Alberta Health Services of allocating $70 million a year. That's done based upon their evaluation of what's needed. We don't interfere in that process at all.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the facts say otherwise. The files speak to chronic neglect of many of our hospitals. Problems with sewers, heating and ventilation systems, fire alarms, electrical systems, and water infiltration are common. But there are also problems that are shocking in that they didn't cause anyone's attention to perk up. The Lloydminster hospital may have a problem with radioactive contamination. Sundre has ant infestations. The Rockyview has issues with mould and moist drywall. These are issues that directly compromise patient safety. To the Health minister: how could it have gotten this bad?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, let's be very clear. Health safety is the number one issue for this government, Alberta Health Services, and Alberta Health. Our standards are some of the best in this country. Even though we have some challenges in some of our facilities, we do maintain some of the highest levels of cleanliness within any hospital in this country.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, hospitals are where you go to hopefully get better, but the information in the maintenance file suggests that this government has actually made many of our hospitals unsafe and unhealthy for both patients and front-line workers. All of this happened during a period when AHS paid for executives' country club memberships, authorized exorbitant expenses, and funded executive coaches and art consultants. Doesn't anyone over there know how to set priorities and look after the interests of Alberta patients?

Mr. Mandel: You know, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the leader's zeal, but the fact of the matter is that we make sure that Albertans are properly taken care of in the hospitals. We have very good care. Alberta Health Services has decreased the number of people in their upper management by a substantial number. They will continue to do that. They're committed to making sure that our system is the best, and we'll make sure that happens.

Ms Smith: They changed the names on the business cards, and the minister knows that.

Hospital Infrastructure Priorities

Ms Smith: The politicization of the funding of critical health infrastructure is disappointing, but it's not new. Almost two years ago we raised in question period the issue of the sewer system at the Wainwright hospital. We pointed out that all acute and long-term care spaces were at risk if sewers failed. Our documents make it crystal clear that this hospital was a top priority for AHS, but when the decision got to cabinet, the hospital was ignored. To the Infrastructure minister: why does this government insist on ignoring these top-level priorities from AHS?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, I've said this point before. Our capital plan is $19.2 billion, nearly $7 billion in capital spending in a capital year. The opposition, I'm glad, is now starting to get very interested in infrastructure spending because they are a party that has year after year after year asked us to reduce our infrastructure spending. On this side of the House we believe that the people's priority is to build and refurbish their infrastructure, and that's exactly what we're doing.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, we'd get better value for money if we'd spend it on priorities and not pet projects.

This isn't just a Wainwright issue. It affects patients across Alberta, who expect hospitals to be there for them when they need them. Stories of wheelchairs not fitting into bathrooms, leaky roofs and windows, failing water valves: these are the direct result of this government putting politics above priorities. Priority lists are ignored. There is no accountability for how money is spent, and the result is that projects with the greatest need languish in this broken system. Why won't the minister release an objective, public, prioritized infrastructure list and . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, speaking of prioritized infrastructure lists, the members opposite came out with a proposal to build a certain number of schools, yet not one single municipality was singled out to receive a school. [interjections] How would they make those decisions? I find it to be quite amusing. In addition, yesterday they spoke about facility condition index reports. [interjections]

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Let's have the final supplemental, with no interruptions if possible, please.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, we all know that releasing a prioritized, public infrastructure list means that politicians won't be able to go back home to their ridings and make big promises. Albertans care about fairness and objectivity. They want projects with the highest need to be taken care of first. The only way we will ever start to clean up the crisis facing our hospitals is to have predictable funding and a transparent priority list. Minister, I will ask again: why won't this government do the right thing and finally release a prioritized . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask the members opposite how and what projects they would cut to achieve a $1.7 billion cut in infrastructure funding. A $1.7 billion cut. On this side of the House we believe that infrastructure spending is incredibly important. We will invest where our communities are growing and where the greatest need is to make sure that Albertans are well served and looked after.

The Speaker: The hon. leader. Third and final main set of questions.

Child Protective Services

Ms Smith: Two weeks ago the independent Child and Youth Advocate released his annual report and slammed this government for its failure to respond to many of his recommendations. Yesterday we learned that Dr. Lionel Dibden resigned as chair of the council for quality assurance. This body of experts is tasked with working with the ministry and making recommendations to improve and strengthen the child intervention system. Dr. Dibden resigned after ministry officials rejected the council's recommendations. To the minister: why is her department dismissing all efforts at independent, objective scrutiny?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I indicated yesterday, I thanked Dr. Dibden for his services. I have had the opportunity to meet with the council twice as well, and he was not able to be at those meetings. I guess, at the end of the day, for this ministry it's about accountability. Accountability is expected from government, and I expect accountability from the quality council as well. I'm looking forward to them filing their report, which has not been filed for two and a half years.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Dibden is very well respected and was doing his best to fulfill the mandate this government gave to the council for quality assurance. The Human Services ministry seems to be at odds with the council's mandate. They also seem to be at odds with the Child and Youth Advocate. This minister has rejected the recommendations of the council. Apparently, she has set out new expectations for the council. To the minister: what are the new expectations, and what was wrong with the old expectations?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, I did file yesterday the two letters outlining the new expectations and direction. At the end of the day, with respect to the work that the Child and Youth Advocate does and the recommendations that have come forward, of the 96 recommendations they have brought forward, 55 are completed, 12 are ongoing, 25 are in progress. We've only not accepted four of those 96 recommendations. I think that says it all there.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's not what Dr. Dibden is saying.

This government has a very poor record when it comes to learning from the deaths of children in care. The fatal care series shocked Albertans. The government said that it would do better. They asked thoughtful outside experts to come in and help them fix a broken system. Now it appears the ministry doesn't want to follow outside recommendations. We all want to do right by these children. Will the minister release the reasons why she is not acting on the recommendations of the council for quality assurance and the Child and Youth Advocate?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The safety and well-being of children remains a huge priority for this government and this ministry. I want to make it clear that we review every incident and every fatality in the child intervention system. We also have numerous bodies assisting with that, including the medical examiner, the Child and Youth Advocate, and the Fatality Review Board, in addition to our own internal reviews as well.

Again, from my perspective, how many people do we need to review the reviewers? It's time to get past reviewing again and get on with the job at hand.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Health care has been in crisis for over a decade while this PC government has been playing politics with hospital funding, plain and simple. The Edmonton Journal found that hospital condition ratings were lowered in constituencies with PC MLAs in order to justify queue-jumping them onto the funding list while the majority of projects that AHS identified as priorities were not funded. The government can try and deny it, but the areas represented by the hon. members for Grande Prairie-Wapiti, West Yellowhead, and Whitecourt-Ste. Anne all got more money while others got less. Will the Minister of Health release the PC cabinet's health infrastructure priority list so that we can compare it to that from AHS . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we've built projects in Medicine Hat and across the province to make sure that all Albertans get the opportunity to have the kind of health care they desire. We evaluate through Alberta Health Services various projects. We make decisions. There is not an unlimited amount of money. We try to allocate that money in a way that we get the best value for it. There are projects that are being done. For example, in Calgary the south campus hospital is a phenomenal facility. We're looking at building a new cancer clinic in Calgary. You know, there is only so much money that we have. We try to allocate it effectively.

Dr. Sherman: There's only so much money to be had, and it's spent on pork-barrel politics.

So far this government has gotten a failing grade on their report card for openness, transparency, and accountability, not to mention their handling of Alberta's finances. The PC government is wasting money by prioritizing facilities with less need in PC ridings and letting others with higher need, like the Misericordia and Royal Alex in the city of Edmonton, that the former mayor was in charge of, fall into disrepair. To the Health minister: why is the government still ignoring AHS and its own department's recommendations for what can only be seen as partisan purposes?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the question. I've had an opportunity to visit both the Misericordia and Royal Alexandra hospitals. They both need work. There is a need for us to evaluate what we can do in those two hospitals to bring them up to a standard that would be commensurate with what we want to see in the province of Alberta. But, you know, there is not an unlimited amount of money. We're putting through some ideas on how we can help rebuild both facilities so that Edmonton can have the kind of facilities they need like we're doing across the province with every region all over this wonderful, phenomenal province.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the Royal Alexandra and the Misericordia serve not only the city of Edmonton but all of northern Alberta and central Alberta and surrounding regions of the whole province. I know this government doesn't appreciate the fine work done by the media and the opposition to uncover their misdeeds, but that doesn't explain why it didn't listen to Alberta's Auditor General, who recommended that this PC government clean up its act when it comes to how it maintains, evaluates, and funds infrastructure projects. To the Minister of Health again. Your government doesn't listen to your department. It doesn't listen to AHS. It ignores the Auditor General. So who really is calling the shots?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, to do with the Royal Alexandra hospital and the Misericordia hospital, we've said time and time again that we've invested almost $40 million in the Misericordia and about the same amount in the Royal Alexandra. We're doing everything we can to make sure hospitals are maintained in an effective way; $70 million a year is being spent. Large capital projects: over $2 billion. We're committed to making sure our province has the best health care. Walk into in any hospital in this province sometime; you'll see the best health care that exists anywhere in this country.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Gay-straight Alliances in Schools

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This PC government has never shied away from trampling on the autonomy of school boards. They took away their power to tax. They took away their power to appoint their own superintendents. They've even fired entire school boards when it's suited them. Now the only school board power this government is prepared to defend is the power to discriminate against gay students. To the Education minister, please. We'd really like to hear from you on this. Why is it government policy to protect school boards' ability to discriminate against LGBTQ students? Why?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, as a former school board chair I can tell you that I have no intention, no desire to discriminate against anybody. Nobody on this side of the House wants to do that. We are committed to ensuring that all students in all Alberta schools have a safe, caring, respectful environment for LGBTQ students, for students of other faiths, for any student who comes to an Alberta school. They are going to be assured that they have a quality, safe learning environment.

The Speaker: Thank you.
First supplemental.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is very difficult to accept the minister's statement that they don't want to discriminate against LGBTQ students when he has just tabled legislation that legalizes that very thing for school boards. Why, Mr. Minister, have you tabled legislation that allows school boards to discriminate if you are so committed to protecting people against discrimination?

The Speaker: Let's not get into debating the bill here, please. Keep it to government policy, government services, government programs.
Your answer, please.

Mr. Dirks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very encouraged that our school boards are deeply concerned about providing an environment where bullying is not tolerated, where all students have an opportunity to be respected and cared for. This side of the House: we declare that we support GSAs. We support any activity of a school board that is going to do anything it can to provide safe, caring, respectful environments for their students.

The Speaker: Final supplemental, hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this government has made the province of Alberta a laughingstock across Canada because of its knuckle-dragging policies and its refusal to embrace equality across the board. The Premier said that no rights are unqualified. Well, it's pretty clear that this government believes that the rights of gay students are certainly not unqualified because they are legalizing discrimination against them. Why are you doing that, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that this government listens to Albertans and responds to their priorities, and what Albertans want is to ensure that we have schools that are safe, caring, and respectful. There is no room for bullying. There is no room for intolerance. That's what we're committed to, and we'll sustain that every day our schools are open.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by Leduc-Beaumont.

High Prairie Health Services

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Doctors in High Prairie are speaking out after this government decided that their highly successful medical practice would not be welcome in the new High Prairie health complex, currently under construction and set to open in 2016. Instead, AHS will spend millions to open a competing government-run clinic in this new facility. To the minister: why won't you allow the existing, highly successful High Prairie medical clinic to lease space in the High Prairie hospital when it opens?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we've invited everybody who wants to participate in the new hospital to participate. We've encouraged people to come together. Sometimes politics in communities is just as difficult as politics within this building.

Mrs. Forsyth: There's no politics in this one, Minister.

Given that the minister has said that the future of primary health care in Alberta was dependent on expanding primary health care networks and given that these were in the process of forming a PCN specifically to expand chronic disease and mental health services, a process that's now in question: Minister, what are you doing?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we're increasing primary care networks. We're encouraging in any community for doctors to come together to offer the services that will help their communities. We believe that that's the foundation of our system, the doctors delivering service. We'll continue to do that, whether it's in High Prairie or in High Level or in Calgary.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Minister, for that answer. That is exactly what they're doing.

Given that these physicians running this existing clinic in High Prairie have over 70 years of combined experience serving this community and given that this existing clinic offers physicians, pharmacy, and dental care under one roof: Minister, will you please let them rent space?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we're not excluding anybody from doing anything in High Prairie. We are encouraging people to work together. Our zone people are working together to bring more doctors into High Prairie because we had a shortage of doctors and there is a competitive concern, but the fact of the matter is that we'll try to work to solve the problems. The reality is that High Prairie is a very, very significant community that supplies health services to a tremendous number of people, not just that community but a lot of First Nations' communities, and we need to make sure they get the kind of service they need and not through politics but through medicine.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont, followed by Livingstone-Macleod.

Highway 19 Twinning

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The twinning of highway 19 has been an issue of grave concern in my constituency for far too long. This project has been on and off the province's capital plans, and this is the second time that I've asked the minister for a definitive answer on this important project. To the Minister of Transportation: can the minister provide an update on his ministry's plans to finally twin highway 19?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member for the question. He always works hard for his constituents. I understand how important this is to local residents along highway 19 and to the future development of that area. My department has been working with local municipalities, residents, and the Edmonton International Airport to develop a plan to twin highway 19 that works for everyone. Discussion at this point is ongoing.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. Mr. Minister, you have mentioned working with the International Airport. What I'm wondering is if the plans that your department is working on will take into account the important third runway that the airport is planning.

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, my department is committed to coming up with a design that accommodates the planned runway while minimizing the impact on the surrounding area. We continue to work closely with the airport and other stakeholders to achieve this goal, and we're making good progress.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: can you give any assurances that my constituents will see some tangible signs of progress any time soon?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, again, I understand how important this project is not only to this member but to other members in this Assembly as well. My department is currently engaged in the capital planning and budget process for 2015 as are the rest of my cabinet colleagues. So we'll wait for the budget. But I can assure this member and his constituents that there is a lot of work going on today with the Edmonton International Airport in the purchase of land and design work by my department to move this project forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by Lethbridge-East.

Infrastructure Project Prioritization

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've seen queue-jumping in health care. We've seen queue-jumping in education. Now we're learning about queue-jumping in infrastructure thanks to the Edmonton Journal's ongoing report into this government's political manipulation. According to the report this government manipulates the facility condition index so they can ignore funding recommendations and promote political projects. To the Infrastructure minister. We've seen the negative effects of queue-jumping before. Why are you letting this happen again?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This member alleges that facility condition index reports are manipulated. I have in my hands the reasons why reports and results have been changed. For example, in 2013 – and I'll table this later this afternoon – a flood occurred due to a sprinkler failure, which damaged a significant portion of a building. As a result, the condition of the building had to change.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this report that I mentioned outlines multiple cases where facilities with a dire FCI, or facility condition index, rating are not granted funding and given that 23 projects, mostly in PC ridings, had their FCI ratings altered by this minister's department without explanation in order to receive funding, will the minister just admit queue-jumping, or facility roulette, is happening?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, I have in my hands the reason why the facility index reports were changed, and every single one of them – 34 reasons why the reports were changed. If these members are alleging that somehow in 2010 Alberta Health Services could predict what the outcome of the 2012 election was going to be, man, I'm going to give Alberta Health Services a lot of money to buy lottery tickets for me.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the minister promised to do things differently, but so far all we've seen is photo ops, queue-jumping, spending promises he cannot deliver on, appalling reports like today, and sod-turning on projects that haven't even been put out to tender. Given that the minister specializes in making political announcements, how does he really think he's going to end this culture of political manipulation in infrastructure?

Mr. Bhullar: I'll tell you what. I've been to places like Airdrie, where seven new schools are either completed or under way, where contracts have been tendered. If they don't want them, let me know. We've been to Brooks. New schools are open. Medicine Hat: new schools are open. I would like to know from that party opposite where they are going to cut projects to reduce $1.7 billion. That's $1.7 billion, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Long-term Care Facility Staffing

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many Albertans have become optimistic now that new long-term care beds are promised. However, I know from my 16 years as a geriatric specialist RN front-line worker that beds are only a part of the equation. Beds are just beds without the qualified staff to meet the existing and projected numbers of residents. To the Minister of Health: how do you plan to tackle the challenge of the increased number of properly qualified staff required for our existing long-term care facilities?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for the question. You know, Alberta Health Services realizes that it's an ever-growing industry, and we're planning in the future to look at what we can do, working with the minister of advanced education. Last year, the first half of 2014 – I should say this year – 145 new front-line care workers were provided for the continuing care staff. Ongoing recruitment measures are in place to staff facilities and home-care programs. You know something? AHS has offered education support to our staff. We're working as hard as we can. We realize that with the new 464 beds opening up and the new beds put forward by our minister, we're going to need more people.

The Speaker: Thank you.
First supplemental.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that current regulations state that each long-term care patient is to receive a minimum of 1.9 hours of care per day as a staffing standard, is this enough, and does it truly represent the unique personal needs of each resident that enable them to retain their dignity?

2:20

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member said it quite clearly: dignity. Dignity is the most important issue in dealing with continuing care individuals and those who are in our long-term care facilities. Currently there's a minimum standard of 1.9 hours, which is legislated, but the fact of the matter is that we mandate 3.6 hours. We also on top of that encourage providing rehabilitation, recreation therapists, bringing the minimum average to almost 4 paid hours per person. We are above the standard, and we'll continue to do that because the dignity of our people . . .

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Again to that same minister: how do we ensure that long-term care facilities are adequately staffed when staff call in sick and they are not replaced, which is known as working short, in a way that will not compromise the quality of care?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's very important that Alberta Health and Alberta Health Services have an oversight of care provided in long-term care facilities in Alberta. You know, ensuring both the right level of care and the right number of staff working each shift is vitally important. My ministry is working with AHS to improve audits of long-term care operators to verify that residents receive the right type of care. I know that the Minister of Infrastructure – there are new programs coming from the federal government, which is encouraging.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona. [interjections] Edmonton-Centre. [interjections] The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, third time.

Energy Development Hearing Participation

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this year I stated that the Responsible Energy Development Act severely curtails who gets to intervene for energy development hearings, where only those directly and adversely affected get to do so, which, for all intents and purposes, means that no coalition, no First Nations, no NGO will ever be able to present to a hearing on anything to do with cumulative effects on the environment. To the minister of the environment: how is it democratic, fair, or ethical for a government to keep concerns about cumulative effects out of approval hearings?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Energy Regulator is responsible for doing the hearings for approvals of energy projects, and it's important to remember that just because someone has an interest in a hearing doesn't mean that they're directly and adversely impacted by the project. It's up to the Alberta Energy Regulator to make that determination as to whether they have standing at the hearings. It's important that that independent, arm's-length body has the ability to do that.

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Minister, you need to practise your listening skills.

Let me try this again. Over the summer an environmental group got excluded from an energy regulator hearing on CNRL's resteaming application at the Cold Lake air weapons range, where bitumen continues to ooze, by the way, because of the directly and adversely affected rule. To the same minister: can he name a single environmental organization or First Nations band granted standing by the energy regulator?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, again, we have the Alberta Energy Regulator that is in place that makes that determination. It's very clear in the legislation that those that are granted status in these hearings have to be directly and adversely affected. It's an independent, third-party body, through the Alberta Energy Regulator, that makes that determination, not me as the minister.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that this government changed the regulations, the rules, the legislation that the energy regulator is operating under to narrow it to only those people that are directly and adversely affected – and, as a result, no First Nations group, no NGO, and no one except for those that live across the road are able to ask to appear at these hearings – no cumulative effects have been able to be discussed as part of these hearings. Why are you allowing that?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, the information that the hon. member provided, while heartfelt, I'm sure, is factually incorrect. First Nations are directly consulted through the aboriginal consultation office, and they are able to file statements of concern before the Alberta Energy Regulator's process. First Nations are completely and fully and meaningfully consulted in this province, and I wouldn't want Albertans to think that anything other was the case.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since this spring this government has resisted all of the NDP caucus efforts to have the children's advocate fully and transparently and independently investigate every child fatality. Now they're refusing internal comprehensive investigations, and they've lost a respected public official as a result. I'm asking the minister to ignore her rather insipid talking points and actually answer the question: what is your government afraid of?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, the good work that the office of the Child and Youth Advocate does as well as the oversight committee and the quality assurance council: it's important to note all the resources we have at base to support children and families and to make those investigations. I am more than happy to repeat that.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that the advocate has identified that the government's so-called accepted recommendations have actually been frequently and regularly ignored by this government, my question to the minister is simply this: when will you actually start implementing the recommendations of the children's advocate that he says you are habitually and repeatedly ignoring?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to give one really good example of a recommendation that was made that we are implementing, the child intervention practice framework, that all social workers and individuals on the front line do, working with continuous improvement, strength-based connections, family preservation, collaboration, critical thinking, and case analysis skills. That's an example of a recommendation that is ongoing and that we have certainly accepted.

Ms Notley: Well, given that the minister can only refer to one accepted recommendation out of the dozens and dozens and dozens that the children's advocate is concerned about and given that the advocate only investigates about a third of deaths at this point – that means that the majority of the 18 deaths which have occurred so far this year will go unexplained – to the minister: how can Albertans ever believe that your government cares about protecting kids over protecting itself?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I've said before, the safety and well-being of children remains a priority for this government and especially children who pass away under tragic circumstances. I know of the meetings that I've had with all of the individuals. We review every incident. We have an internal process that we put in place. Again, of the 96 recommendations that we have accepted, 55 are completed, 12 are ongoing, 25 are in progress. We have only not accepted four. I encourage the hon. member to take a look at the website for Human Services.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by Stony Plain.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Directive 074 is one example of how this government has failed to protect our industry by writing policy without consultation. The directive issued by the ERCB in 2009 set unrealistic targets for the reduction and reclamation of tailings ponds. As most everyone knows, the oil sands producers have failed to meet directive 074's overly ambitious targets. Despite this fact the government has allowed this failed directive to remain on the books. To the minister: what will this government do about tailings ponds?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much. The member asks a really good question. We're working right now, actually, with industry on a new directive that should be made public in the new year. What is very, very important is that we understand that having tailings ponds on our landscape does present significant environmental and financial risks to taxpayers, and we want to deal with it. Industry wants to deal with it. Directive 074 wasn't a complete failure. It has incited a number of investments in technology, which will be the answer to solving this problem, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, given that industry has stated that directive 074 is an example of setting a misguided, unachievable policy that sets everyone up for failure, industry and regulator, and given that there was supposed to be a report and revamped policy scheduled to be released this past summer, to the minister: where is it, what's in it, and why is it being delayed?

Mr. Fawcett: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government is under new management, and as a result there's been a whole lot of review of the new things that we're bringing forward. We wanted to sit down and make sure that we do have it right. Again, I want to say that directive 074 has incited a lot of the companies operating in the oil sands to do the right thing. In fact, I was just up at the Syncrude site, where I toured a $2 billion investment that Syncrude is about to commission that will start to reduce their tailings ponds being released out onto the landscape.

Mr. Hale: While we're on the energy policy, Mr. Speaker, given that the former environment minister was considering implementing a Liberalesque Bill 44 type carbon tax placed on industry, will the new minister clear the air and tell this House what plans he has to increase the carbon levy on industry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Right now, again, one of the things that we're doing under the new management and the leadership of our Premier is reviewing a promise to bring out a renewed climate change strategy. The member is right. At the end of this month, actually, the current regulation, the specified gas emitters regulation, expires, and we're going to have to make a decision on that. We haven't made any final decisions at this point in time, but we're having those conversations, that will be part of a larger package in order to meet our greenhouse gas emission targets.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain, followed by Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Drinking Water in Parkland County

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've learned that arsenic and manganese have been found in groundwater in Parkland county. This is a very disturbing discovery. There are many residents who use private wells for drinking water. My first question is to the hon. Minister of Health. Do people in Parkland county have safe drinking water?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can confirm that there have been private water wells tested in Parkland county with higher than recommended levels of arsenic and manganese. I can also confirm that these elements are naturally occurring and levels are not an immediate danger to health. Health risks associated with arsenic and manganese are long term, meaning many years, even decades, of exposure is needed for any health impact. The fact is that we do not know if all the private well owners in Parkland county have safe water, so today Alberta Health Services is beginning a campaign to inform well owners that they need to be inspected.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Excellent answer, Mr. Minister.

If water from these private wells is not safe, what are you going to do about it?

Mr. Mandel: Excellent. Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health Services will be holding open houses in the new year so that environmental public health officials can meet face to face with the private well owners to discuss test results and take any recommended action. This is why it is so important for private well owners to bring in samples for the testing, and it's free testing, as a matter of fact. As these wells are on private property, health officials cannot test without permission, and officials need to understand that we need to work with them. There are over 6,000 wells in the targeted area.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Lemke: Wow. Absolutely excellent answer again.

If there are 6,000 wells in this area, why are we only discovering this contamination now?

Mr. Mandel: Excellent question. This issue emerged with high results from a cluster of properties in northeast Parkland county. This alerted officials to the need for nearby testing and collaboration with hydrologists in finding the source. Now, we know the source is natural, but we don't know how the distribution of these elements happened. This is why we're casting a wider net, further in Parkland county and surrounding portions of Sturgeon and Leduc counties. When it comes to potential health impacts, it's better to know more than less.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, followed by Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Victims of Crime

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Justice minister and I have something in common. We both got married over the summer. Unfortunately, that is where the similarities end. He believes in putting the comfort of criminals before the rights of victims, so much so that we didn't even see a single mention of justice for the victims of crime in the throne speech. Not once. Did the Justice minister's soft-on-crime, hug-a-thug policies rub off on the Premier?

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, I got married October 11, which is actually in the fall, so there we go.

We continue to put victims first in Alberta Justice. That includes adding more police officers, but that also includes passing new legislation like amendments to the Victims of Crime Act, that we passed last year, that this member gave some good input on.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Saskiw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that staff in correctional services recently posted a blog about an art show, not just any art show but an art show created by convicted criminals, on public display using taxpayer dollars, when is this Minister of Justice going to realize that it's his job to put criminals behind bars and not paint pretty pictures with them?

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, my job is also to put victims first today, tomorrow, and every day, and that's what we'll continue to do.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this minister denied funding to the Be Brave Ranch, that helps child victims of sexual abuse, and that now he is unwilling to put the rights of victims before art classes for criminals, how on earth can Albertans trust this former Liberal staffer to keep our communities safe?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, this member continues to work as a criminal defence lawyer, and he talks about victims. Really? [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, followed by Drumheller-Stettler. [interjections] All right. All right. Enough.

Let's go. The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Home Care Services

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Seniors in this province want to age in their homes with safe and secure resources. They want to remain with their communities, their families, and their loved ones. The current hospital-centric model is not working. Seniors housed in acute-care beds are affecting all levels of emergency care and causing the burnout of our front-line professionals. To the Health minister: will this government rethink its current model and make home care a priority for Albertans?

Mr. Mandel: Thank you for that wonderful question. We agree that seniors want to age in their homes and communities and really close to their families and friends. That's why we're working hard to ensure Albertans have access to effective, quality health care when they need it, including home care. You know, Mr. Speaker, in the last three years we've increased home care by 26 per cent, to over half a billion dollars. The number of Albertans accessing home care has also increased to more than 112,000 Albertans. That's a substantial number, up 12 per cent over the previous year. We understand the critical role home care plays in supporting Albertans, and we really thank the member for the question.

Mrs. Towle: Given that studies show that keeping seniors in their homes, in their communities, and with their loved ones improves their quality of life and given that other countries like Germany have already seen a 40 per cent reduction in acute-care costs, will the Minister of Health commit to ensuring that Albertans have access to home care as their first option, not their last option?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I can commit to working to make sure that Albertans have access to the right care in the right place at the right time, including home care, and we will commit to working with the member to ensure that home care is an incredibly important part of our health care delivery system.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I appreciate that, but given that our seniors population will continue to grow, what can this government do today to ensure that the quality of the home care that seniors are receiving is the appropriate quality?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can tell the hon. member that I strongly support seniors remaining in their homes as long as possible if it's safe for them to be there and their care needs are being met. The primary consideration is the seniors' well-being and helping to provide the best, most appropriate accommodation and care on an individual basis. If it can be in their homes, that's where the priority should be. I am also a strong supporter of aging in communities. My ministry and this government are making significant investments in seniors' housing. This includes, as I said earlier, more than $500 million in home care.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by Calgary-North West.

Medevac Services

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the coming years we will see just how badly the province mishandled changes to the fixed-wing medevac system. Forcing an aircraft to land at the International Airport can mean the difference between life and death in that golden hour. I know the Health minister is very familiar with this file. Surely he must recognize concerns that all Albertans have about the delivery of timely emergency health care. Knowing the damage this has caused, can he tell Albertans what he will do to cut down on ballooning transfer times for fixed-wing medevac services?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government of Alberta has set up an excellent system at the International Airport to ensure that patients can move in and out in an expeditious way and get the kind of health care that they need. For those members who haven't been out, they should go take a look at what an outstanding facility it is and how it's improved the operations and care for Albertans.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Speaker. The people in my riding in the Consort and Oyen regions have a right to know why they now have to wait 30-plus minutes extra for fixed-wing transit after serious accidents. Given that there are still Health Quality Council recommendations that have not been implemented for these fixed-wing medevac emergencies, does the Health minister have a plan to implement them, and why?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, the safety and the expeditious way in which any Albertan can be moved from an accident to a place of safety is a priority with this government. If there are issues, we'd gladly look into it and report back to the hon. member.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Speaker. Given that I've heard numerous stories from families in my riding about how this poor medevac system has negatively impacted their lives, my constituents want to know: when can they expect positive changes to this critically dangerous situation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta makes every effort to ensure that every Albertan who has a challenge and needs to be moved by medevac has that opportunity. Not always can we have a plane at everybody's service. We do make every effort to ensure that access is available to people when it's needed. I can assure the member that we'll do all we can to ensure that people in his riding and every other riding have proper access to proper transportation.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West, followed by Chestermere-Rocky View.

Postsecondary Education Funding

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to voice the concerns of our postsecondary students, parents, and supporters of postsecondary education. They're concerned that the cost of this important level of education continues to increase. Now our government is considering allowing special tuition increases under a plan called market modification, that could drive the rates up by double-digit percentages in certain areas. My question is for the Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education. If we value postsecondary and understand its importance, why are we going around the tuition cap and considering these market modifier increases?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education.

Mr. Scott: Thank you very much. I'd like to commend the member for her efforts to support Albertans. Market modifiers are one tool that programs have to remain competitive throughout Alberta and with other jurisdictions. I'm considering 26 different applications that have been made from 10 different institutions. Consider this, Mr. Speaker: a University of Toronto law student pays $60,000 more for a law degree than a University of Alberta law student. That's exactly the kind of anomaly that makes it necessary for us to review these kinds of market modifiers. Our goal isn't to be the cheapest education; our goal is to deliver the best education.

Ms Jansen: Mr. Speaker, my next question is to the same minister. Like any parent, I'm worried about accessibility when tuition goes up. At the end of the day isn't that what market modifiers do, reduce accessibility?

Mr. Scott: Mr. Speaker, access is a priority for this government. I'm very proud of our record on access. We invest $234 million in student aid. That includes scholarships, bursaries, and grants. We also make available $408 million in student loans. Our students are extremely successful, and they have a very successful rate of paying back their student loans. Of the loans that were given this year, we can expect that 90 per cent will be paid back.

Ms Jansen: Mr. Speaker, again to the Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education: will government properly fund postsecondary education so that our students aren't stuck paying tuitions that price them out of the market to even attend colleges and universities in this province?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. As every member in this House knows, no final decisions on the budget have been made yet. But let me put some facts on the table with respect to tuition in Alberta. Despite a variety of cost pressures tuition in Alberta in 2014-2015 rose by a mere 1 per cent. That's the second-lowest increase in all of Canada. Alberta's average undergraduate tuition is below the national average. Furthermore, an undergraduate student pays approximately 25 per cent of the actual cost of their education. The majority of the costs are picked up by taxpayers. We support our students, and we support them toward success.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the time for question period has expired. In 30 seconds we will move on with the next important item of business.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Life Leases

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to express my concern with regard to life leases. Life leases are a housing agreement typically utilized by seniors. They purchase the exclusive right to occupy a unit in a development for life or for a fixed term. The owner benefits from having a guaranteed tenant for an extended period of time instead of the year-to-year nature of true rental units. The lessee benefits as life lease agreements are generally more affordable than both renting and owning a home. In theory these agreements seem to be beneficial to both the owner and the lessee.

However, life leases are a relatively new phenomenon in Alberta, and the rules surrounding them are vague or nonexistent. For example, life leases are not considered rental properties in Alberta, so the Residential Tenancies Act does not apply to them. Additionally, the Centre for Public Legal Education Alberta produced an extremely helpful booklet of information on life leases. However, within the booklet they note that a disadvantage of entering into a life lease agreement is that "life lease agreements are not typically well understood by lawyers because this type of leasing . . . is relatively new and . . . there is not a lot of legislation relating to this type of lease."

Furthermore, one of my constituents, Mr. Thomas Moore, whom I introduced earlier, has outlined his very unfortunate experience with this type of agreement. His experience included hidden fees; additional costs, which are not fully explained; and transferring of capital upgrades and enhancement costs onto lessees, which really doesn't make sense as life lessees do not own the property they reside in.

Bill 9 has gone a long way to helping condo owners, and I would encourage our government to take a long look at life leases to ensure that our seniors are not being taken advantage of.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Lethbridge-East.

Anniversary of l'École Polytechnique Shootings

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. Mr. Speaker, 25 years ago this Saturday, December 6, 1989, a man who hated women walked into the classrooms at l'École Polytechnique in Montreal, separated the men from the women on different sides of the room, and started shooting. He killed 14 women that day. He killed 14 women because he had not been accepted into the engineering school and believed it was the fault of feminists.

I am a feminist. I was 31 at the time and working for the Alberta Advisory Council on Women's Issues. This event shaped my life and the lives of many of my peers, especially women working in sectors assisting women. For the first time it was made clear to us that being a feminist, working in the areas of women's issues, or even being a student in a nontraditional school program was enough to get you killed. It terrified our parents, lovers, and friends. Stevie Cameron wrote a stunning piece in the Globe and Mail entitled Our Daughters, Ourselves. I recommend it.

Because none of these students or staff were activists, it makes me take my work even more seriously. This is why I am so fierce, why I get up after being knocked down over and over and over again and after I've been heckled and denied. It's because of the Montreal massacre. If I was going to get yelled at, injured, or shot, it would happen while I and my colleagues were building a Canada less likely to produce another man killing women – to make Canada stronger, more inclusive, tolerant, with women more secure in their capacity to earn money, have better access to advanced education and quality child care for their kids, to become the boss, to reduce the barriers that were systematic in the legal and justice systems, to eliminate abuse, poverty, inequality, or discrimination of any kind.

A year later I convened a committee of terrific women, who would produce for many years the annual event to commemorate the Montreal massacre, later made National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence against Women. These same women joined me today to mark this life-changing event.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Homelessness in Lethbridge

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Canada's communities wrestle with homeless problems and have seen various levels of success in eliminating homelessness. However, Lethbridge has achieved a jaw-dropping 85 per cent reduction in street homelessness and a 74 per cent reduction in overall homelessness since 2008, according to the Canadian Alliance to End Homelessness.

Lethbridge faces challenges: population growth, significant lack of affordable housing, and rising rental costs. Lethbridge's accomplishments reflect a committed community leadership, stakeholder collaboration, and support from all levels of government, specifically the province's 10-year plan to end homelessness and the associated resources.

The recent point-in-time count preliminary results show that Lethbridge had a decrease in homelessness in one year of 37 per cent. These are the biggest reductions in homelessness anywhere in Canada, again according to the Canadian Alliance to End Homelessness. Individuals counted this year as absolute or street homeless were only 11 people, which is an 85 per cent decrease from 2008.

In 2013-14 100 chronically homeless individuals were housed; 24 housing first clients reached graduation, which means that they participated in the housing first program for one year or more and achieved six consecutive months of being housed without eviction and reduced the complexity level of their care, a 90 per cent housing retention rate and only 10 per cent recidivism.

Lethbridge has developed creative, effective, unique partnerships with mainstream systems like child and family services, which support youth transitioning from care to adulthood.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by Lacombe-Ponoka.

Persons with Disabilities' Workforce Participation

Mr. Quadri: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every year about 100,000 people move to Alberta to find work opportunities because we are leading the country in job creation and economic prosperity. Despite this strong economic growth, we will be facing a labour shortage by 2023. Alberta continues to need access to skilled labour to meet the needs of our economic conditions. The Premier recently noted that Alberta is working on labour force strategies that respond to market demands and ensure that we have the workers we need.

Albertans with disabilities are underrepresented in the workforce and need the opportunity to show their skills. There are many who are willing to work but for various reasons face barriers that keep them out of the workforce. Helping them to find jobs aligns with our government's goals to make communities inclusive and welcoming to all Albertans. That's why I'm proud that Alberta's employment first strategy is creating opportunities for people with disabilities to find meaningful work and develop their skills. This also helps employers to gain access to a new pool of skilled workers who make valuable contributions.

I am proud that under this strategy our government is leading by example in hiring 20 new interns with disabilities. Some of these people are here today, introduced by the associate minister, and we welcome them all. I know they will be a valuable addition to our team here in government. They will be taking on various roles and professional positions across our government, and we are very thankful to have them.

The employment first innovation fund was also launched earlier this year to find new ideas and approaches to welcome more Albertans with disabilities into our workforce. Everyone benefits when we live in an inclusive society that embraces different skills and abilities. So, Mr. Speaker, I would encourage . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, I regret having to interrupt you, but the two minutes are up, and we must move on to the next speaker.

Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Ponoka School Playground

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to read portions of a letter sent to the Education minister by the mayor of Ponoka. He writes:

With the school upgrade project, an unfortunate consequence has arisen. A new playground for the younger children will need to be constructed and updated to meet today's standards and will need to be moved closer to one of the renovated schools . . .

Parents, rightfully, want their children to experience quality play time during the school day. Playtime encourages children to be more active, interact with each other and overall makes children healthier . . . We commend the parent group in our community for planning and attempting to raise the funds to provide for the new playground, but we question whose responsibility this really is. Rate payers in the Town of Ponoka already pay an education tax on their property which is collected by the municipality on behalf of the province. If our municipality were to become involved in funding the school playground project it would mean that property taxes would have to increase, and in fact, our property owners would in essence be paying a second education . . . tax through their property taxes.

I respectfully request answers to the following:

- What are the plans for the third school in the Town of Ponoka?
- How many more students can be accommodated by the two renovated schools?
- What are the Ministry's plans when the two schools are at capacity . . .
- What information and options are available related to funding school playground projects for school boards and/or parent groups . . .

Municipal governments are faced with replacing aging infrastructure and with providing services with increasingly limited revenues . . .

I would be glad to discuss these or any [other] issues with you at your convenience.

[Signed],

Rick Bonnett, Mayor

Mr. Speaker, all week we've heard about the politicization of hospitals and school infrastructure, and now we see the politicizing of the CFEP funding. It's disappointing. Albertans want this government to make fair and transparent funding decisions. They want the government to publish public-project priority lists. They don't want special treatment; they just want fair treatment. This government would do well to listen to Albertans.

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, did you catch my eye on 7(7)?

Mr. Denis: Yes, I did. I'd like to ask for unanimous consent to continue the Routine past 3 p.m., notwithstanding rule 7(7).

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Let's go on to Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Entrepreneurship and Small Business

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to call attention to Global Entrepreneurship Week, celebrated from November 17 to 24 in over 140 countries. It's a world-wide movement inspiring millions of young people to embrace innovation, imagination, and creativity through entrepreneurship.

Earlier this year the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor Alberta report confirmed that Alberta is one of the best places on Earth to be an entrepreneur. Entrepreneurs head the small businesses that are the lifeblood of Alberta's economy. Small businesses contribute over 25 per cent of Alberta's gross domestic product and make up 95 per cent of all the businesses in the province.

This government is not sitting still. This fall we released a new small-business strategy as well as streamlined the refreshed smallbusiness.alberta.ca. For government services information our new business advisers at the Business Link offer a one-stop shop for small businesses. This fresh approach offers easier access to information, help with regulatory matters, a stronger voice on policy issues, and support and guidance for Alberta's entrepreneurs.

I'm pleased to have led the engagement sessions with small-business owners and entrepreneurs in communities across the province last fall. What we heard first-hand as well as online helped shape Alberta's new strategy for small-business success. Successful entrepreneurs are the foundation for innovation, job creation, and economic diversification. Building a competitive province where our entrepreneurs and small businesses can thrive is a top priority.

This government is committed to working with all entrepreneurs, businesses, industry, and stakeholders to continue to reduce the regulatory burden for small businesses and make Alberta one of the most successful business climates in North America.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Bill 204

Traffic Safety (Distracted Driving Demerit) Amendment Act, 2014

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 204, the Traffic Safety (Distracted Driving Demerit) Amendment Act, 2014.

Bill 204 amends the Traffic Safety Act by making distracted driving punishable by a fine of $250 and three demerit points. Distracted driving is a dangerous and potentially deadly driving behaviour. Fines alone have not deterred distracted driving. Introducing demerits would provide much stronger punishment and be a greater deterrent to potential offenders. This would reduce road casualties by reducing instances of distracted driving. Bill 204 works to make roads safer for all Albertans, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you, sir.

[Motion carried; Bill 204 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder or someone on behalf of? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With your indulgence, I have the three from the Member for Edmonton-Calder and one myself, so I'll do all four.

The first tabling I have, Mr. Speaker: I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a motion passed last night by the Edmonton Youth Council in a vote of 14 to 1. The vote clearly affirms the council's opposition to Bill 10 in its current form and calls on "the provincial government to engage in meaningful consultation with LGBTQ and allied youth when it comes to matters relating to [GSAs] in Alberta's schools."

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the appropriate number of copies of a blog post written by a mother in Fort McMurray whose daughter helped start a GSA in her school. In her blog she articulates why Bill 10 essentially means that kids who "meet opposition to founding a GSA will simply not be able to overcome the challenges and the idea will slowly wither and die."

My third tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the appropriate number of copies of a letter written by Don Boras to the Premier on the topic of Bill 10. Don writes: "This bill does nothing for the needs of the students who need it the most, those in strictly controlled religious schools. It is not a compromise bill – it is an abrogation of their rights."

My fourth and final tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the appropriate number of copies of a definition of terms from the American Psychological Association, which serves to clear up any confusion for any member on gender identity and gender expression. Just to throw in here, gender expression: "way in which a person acts to communicate gender within a given culture." All the definitions are here.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Infrastructure, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling some documents. There are times when additional information is identified that could in fact impact the facility condition index on health facilities. I'm pleased to provide copies of the changes made in 2012 and 2013 and how it impacted the FCIs for these specific facilities. Further updates will be available on the Infrastructure website. This is something I endeavoured to do yesterday in question period and today in question period, and here it is.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm just going to capitalize on one of the tablings that my colleague from Edmonton-Calder has just done, in which he tabled the actual resolution. I have some news coverage here from that youth council. The City of Edmonton Youth Council met at the same time we were, in fact, on the same bill and came to a diametrically opposed conclusion, but it was a pretty exciting process for those kids to go through. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies describing what happened at the City of Edmonton Youth Council, where they voted strongly against the government's Bill 10.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others? The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to provide the requisite copies of a press release, dated October 27 of this year, which is entitled Exhibition of Inmates' Art Reveals "the Artist Inside" and where the ADM states very proudly, "Most importantly . . . it is the inmates that we need to thank."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. McIver, Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour, pursuant to the Government Organization Act the Alberta Association for Safety Partnerships radiation health authorized radiation health administrative organization annual report, September 3, 2013, to August 31, 2014, with attached financial statements for the year ended August 31, 2014; the Alberta College and Association of Chiropractors radiation health administrative organization annual report, year-end June 30, 2014, with attached financial statements dated June 30, 2014; Alberta Dental Association and College 2013 radiation health and safety program annual report, January 1, 2013, to December 31, 2013, with attached financial statements dated December 31, 2013; the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association radiation protection program 2013 annual report, November 1, 2012, to October 31, 2013, with attached independent auditor's report dated December 5, 2013; the College of Physicians & Surgeons of Alberta radiation health administrative organization annual report for the period January 1, 2013, to December 31, 2013; the University of Alberta authorized radiation health administrative organization annual report, 2013-2014; the University of Calgary radiation health administration organization annual report for the period April 1, 2013, to March 31, 2014, with attached financial statements for the year ended March 31, 2014.

The Speaker: Thank you.

There are no points of order, so we can move on.

Orders of the Day

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Ms Fenske moved, seconded by Mr. Ellis, that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows:

To His Honour the Honourable Colonel (Retired) Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

The Speaker: Are there any other speakers to the throne speech?

If not, then I would ask the hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville to close debate.

Ms Fenske: Thank you. I'd just close debate.

[Motion carried]

Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Address in Reply to Speech from the Throne

14. Mr. Denis moved on behalf of Mr. Prentice:
Be it resolved that the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne be engrossed and presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor by such members of the Assembly as are members of Executive Council.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

I want to say that that was a great speech, Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others?

Seeing none, hon. Government House Leader, on behalf of the hon. Premier would you like to close debate?

Mr. Denis: I would like to close debate on behalf of the Premier.

The Speaker: Thank you.

[Government Motion 14 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's about 3:07. I would like to move that the House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. on Monday.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 3:07 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Bill Status Report for the 28th Legislature - 3rd Session (2014)

Activity to December 04, 2014

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 1 to 199 are Government Bills. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills numbered with a "Pr" prefix are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If a Bill comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel, Alberta Justice, for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned chapter numbers until the conclusion of the Fall Sitings.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. At the beginning of this week of important work in and for our province we ask for renewed strength to help guide us in our duties as members of this Legislature. We ask for the continued protection of this Assembly and also of those whom we serve. Amen.

Today being Monday, let us join with Robert Clark as he leads us in the singing of our national anthem.

Thank you.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Thank you, everyone. Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, I'm honoured today to rise to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly the ambassador of the People's Republic of China, His Excellency Luo Zhaohui, who is seated in the Speaker's gallery. Accompanying the ambassador today are Mrs. Jiang Yili, the spouse of His Excellency, who is also a counsellor at the embassy in Ottawa; also, Mr. Yu Benlin, Mr. Zhao Wenfei, and Mr. Yang Tianwen, all from the embassy in Ottawa. Mr. Wang Xinping, consul general of the People's Republic of China in Calgary, is also in the gallery as is Ms Wang Lei and Mr. Wang Xuhong, also from the consulate general. This is the ambassador's first official visit to Alberta, and it is truly an honour for us in this Legislative Assembly to have him here today.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has a long and important relationship with China. China is, in fact, Alberta's second-largest export market, and our trading relationship with the People's Republic of China is valued at more than $3 billion. Looking to the future, I believe there is tremendous potential for greater collaboration between Alberta and China. I would now kindly ask Ambassador Luo and his delegation to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome to our visitors.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: We have some additional guests in the Speaker's gallery. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you very special guests from the Vaisakhi Nagar Kirtan Committee. All of my guests are seated in your gallery. They are Mr. Mehar Singh Gill, Mr. Gurcharan Singh Sangha, Mr. Avtar Singh Birk from Gurdwara Siri Guru Singh Sabha, Pal Singh Purewal and Dr. Bikkar Singh from Siri Guru Nanak Sikh Gurdwara. Mr. Zora Singh Grewal from Gurdwara Nanaksar and Mr. Surinder Singh Hoonjan from Gurdwara Millwoods were unable to attend today. With their great efforts the Sikh community was able to donate to Edmonton's Food Bank this holiday season. I will highlight their efforts during my member's statement. I would ask my guests to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you and welcome.

Let us proceed with other important guests. We have some school groups. Let's start with Grande Prairie-Smoky, followed by Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. McDonald: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of students from the Rosedale Christian school in my constituency of Grande Prairie-Smoky. They are in the members' gallery this afternoon with their teacher, Stephanie Dueck. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, leader of the Liberal opposition, followed by the Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the member from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of students that will be in the Legislature later during question period. They're from Right Track senior high school in the constituency of Edmonton-Centre, and they'll be accompanied by their teachers, Brian Gizzie and Ted Welsby. I would ask members to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations, followed by the Minister of Health.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the second consecutive week I get to introduce students and teachers from Forest Heights elementary school, one of my wife's alma maters. We have 23 visitors in the members' gallery, including two teachers, Mr. Waylon Chinski and Miss Alison Dahmer. I had a short visit with these students. They're in for the week, so I'll be visiting with them more on Wednesday. If the students could please stand and receive the welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, it's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 19 grade 6 students from Monsignor William Irwin Catholic elementary school in the amazing constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud who are seated in the public gallery. These students are here to view question period following their participation in the legislative school program earlier this year. Accompanying these students is their teacher, Mme Carol Dyck. I'd like them to please rise and accept the customary welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there other school groups? None.

Let's move on to other important guests, starting with Edmonton-Decore, followed by Edmonton-South West.

Mrs. Sarich: Mr. Speaker, it's my honour and privilege to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly two guests from the Ukrainian Canadian Congress Alberta Provincial Council, a highly esteemed organization celebrating 40 years of establishment in our great province. Through their tireless leadership and steadfast commitment this organization has established a rich and unique identity and contributions within the Ukrainian community and well beyond the borders of Alberta. I extend my sincere admiration and appreciation to all of those community leaders and volunteers from the past, present, and future, whose contributions will serve as a subtle reminder of the progress and success achieved throughout the intervening years.

My guests are seated in the members' gallery, Mr. Speaker, and I would kindly ask that they please rise and remain standing as I mention their names: Ms Olesia Luciwi-Andryjowycz, president, Ukrainian Canadian Congress Alberta Provincial Council; Ms Daria Luciwi, past president, Ukrainian Canadian Congress Alberta Provincial Council; and, with regret, Mrs. Slavka Shulakewych, provincial co-ordinator, Ukrainian Canadian Congress Alberta Provincial Council, who was unable to attend. Please join me in providing a very special traditional welcome. Congratulations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two guests seated in the members' gallery. These two ladies met with me this morning to introduce me to Generations of Hope, which is an Alberta charity that raises funds to assist couples in accessing assisted reproductive technologies to build their families. The goal of this charity is to put the hope of having children within reach of those struggling with infertility. Terri Abraham conceived both of her children through assisted reproductive technologies, and since the birth of her first son she's volunteered at Generations of Hope by running the very successful annual Images of Hope gala. Terri sat on the board for two years before becoming president in 2013. With Terri is Nicole Williams, who is no stranger to this building and a friend to many of us. They are meeting with MLAs this week to discuss funding for in vitro fertilization. I would now ask them both to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition, followed by Chestermere-Rocky View.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three sets of introductions today of guests who contribute not only to my constituency but to the province as a whole. My first guest, who I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly, is Carla Costuros. Carla is an Edmonton artist whose artwork, called Mary's Daughter, is currently displayed in the rotunda to mark the anniversary of the massacre at l'école Polytechnique. Mary's Daughter attempts to document the Montreal massacre with a history of women striving to achieve their potential. The Marys referred to are Mary Astell and Mary Wollstonecraft, two women's rights pioneers from the 17th and 18th centuries whose writing, sadly, 300 years later still retains currency as we mourn the loss of 14 bright young women who dared to enter a masculine profession. I'd ask Carla to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Your second introduction.

Ms Notley: Thank you. My second introduction. I'm pleased to introduce through you to all members of the Assembly my guests from the Strathcona Place Senior Centre. Jeff Allen is the former executive director of the Strathcona Place society, and I would like to thank him for 41 years of continuous service, leadership, and inspiration to community, the board, the members, and the membership of the seniors' centre. I'd also like to introduce to you and to the Assembly the incoming executive director of the Strathcona Place Senior Centre, Ms Linda Ensley. I would ask them now to both stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Your third and final introduction.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Finally, I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly three hard-working representatives of the 12th annual Ice on Whyte festival, being held in my constituency January 23 to February 1, 2015. Rob McDonald is the board president, Karen Tabor is the secretary-treasurer, and Wanda Bornn is the festival producer. I'm proud of the hard work the volunteers, board, and members and staff contribute to this exciting festival. I look forward to working with them to ensure that Ice on Whyte receives full support for this wonderful event. I would now like my guests to stand and receive, once again, the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. McAllister: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a good friend of mine and an absolutely crucial, vital member of the community of Chestermere. I'll ask him to rise while I tell you about him briefly. His name is Preston Pouteaux. He is a pastor at Lake Ridge community church. At Lake Ridge, like many other churches, their work does not begin and end on Sunday. They are all about community, and Preston backs this wholeheartedly. He is as involved as anybody in our wonderful town. He was actually raised in Saskatchewan, and when he was a young man, his father would take him to the Assembly there to watch politics. He's involved because, like the rest of us, he wants to make this wonderful province even better. If you ever need a partner in November, I suggest he'd be a good candidate. Colleagues, would you join me in welcoming Pastor Preston today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition, for the first of two introductions.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Helga Mathison and Andy Nicoli. In the late '70s Helga convinced the provincial government to fund home care for all Albertans in need of it, not just for those over 65. Today she's advising us to deliver more world-class, nonprofit, community-based home care as one solution for fixing health care. She's accompanied by her home-care worker, Andy Nicoli. Andy was born in Padova, Italy, and immigrated to Canada in 1952. He's 86 years old and Alberta's oldest home-care worker. I'd ask Helga and Andy to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, I also rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Nalina Kumar. Nalina is a meditation teacher who is passionate about preventative health and wellness for all Albertans. She volunteers her time to teach meditation at schools and in the community. In fact, she has even volunteered her time to teach Alberta's MLAs meditation so that we can have a calmer atmosphere in the Legislature. I would ask Nalina to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Violence against Women and Girls

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to remember the 14 young women whose lives ended in an act of violence 25 years ago at l'école Polytechnique de Montréal. These innocent women were gunned down for no reason other than their gender and the fact that they were pursuing an education and following their dreams. Extreme violence against women might seem like a problem from another place. It might seem like something that happens in less developed countries, or perhaps it seems like a problem of the past, something that happened long ago. But it remains a global problem that affects women where they live, work, learn, and even where they go on the Internet.

Violence against women and girls takes many different forms. It is not limited to any culture, country, or specific group of women. Aboriginal women are a particularly vulnerable population, and aboriginal women are at a significantly higher risk of violence and face violence at much higher rates than nonaboriginal women in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, we all know this violence must stop. Violence against women and girls has significant consequences. Children who witness violence against their mothers experience such a high level of stress that their brain development is delayed, and their future success is put in jeopardy.

We all have a role in helping to end violence in this province by supporting and building strong families and communities. The Alberta government supports violence prevention programs that focus on teaching people how to build healthy relationships throughout their lives. For example, through the family violence information line callers can access individuals who speak 170 languages, and we support women's emergency shelters and counselling services across the province to assist women facing violence and who need immediate assistance. These are important initiatives, but government alone cannot stop violence against women.

Violence and discrimination against women is a serious human rights issue as well. Everyone, not just the people in this Assembly, must recognize this issue as very real, still rampant despite the passing of 25 years. All Albertans, men and women, need to stand up and speak up in all forums to end violence against women. We must never ever forget.

The Speaker: The hon. deputy House leader for the Official Opposition.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also rise to commemorate the National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence against Women, which happened last Saturday. Established by the Parliament of Canada, this day marks the anniversaries of the murders of 14 young women at l'école Polytechnique de Montréal. Their deaths 25 years ago shocked a nation.

Since 1991 Canadians have worn white ribbons on that day to reflect upon the violence that women and girls face daily in this country. The white ribbon is a symbol of a commitment to action against misogyny and as a commitment to build a society that does not tolerate gender-based violence. Twenty-five years later and we still have much work to do.

Mr. Speaker, this is one of the most important issues of our time. Even today Canadian airmen are in harm's way fighting an enemy whose principal point of difference with us is how women and girls are treated. Here at home we've heard calls for a public inquiry into missing and murdered aboriginal women. Every year in Alberta thousands of women flee violence and seek the safety and support of our emergency shelter network.

The minister is correct when she suggests that government alone cannot be the solution and that all men and women, particularly men, have a greater role to play. I stand here today, Mr. Speaker, imploring the men across this province and this country who resort to violence against the women in their lives, whether that be their girlfriend, their wife, their sister, their mother, their daughter, to seek help and to stop. There is so much to be done to create a world where every girl can grow up and reach her full potential and can live a life free of violence.

In 1989 14 young women were killed simply because they were women. We must never forget that, and we must constantly strive for a society, a Canada, and a world where that can never happen again.

Thank you.

1:50

The Speaker: Hon. members, unanimous consent has been requested for the third party, the fourth party, and the independent member to participate briefly in this important exchange.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Let us begin with the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm grateful for the indulgence of the House to be able to add a few words of remembrance for the victims of l'école Polytechnique and its shootings. These 14 women were targeted because they were women. These murders shook us, but they also strengthened our resolve to work towards a more equal and just society in memory of those women and all women who are victims of active, direct violence.

But violence has another side: passive, indirect violence; sexual harassment in the workplace; the violence of poverty, which contributes to degrade women, especially single mothers, and force women into unsafe relationships and prostitution; and homelessness, creating high-risk situations for them and for their children.

Last year 17,000 women fleeing violence in Alberta, some with children, were turned away from shelters due to lack of space. It reflects a growing disconnect in a government that chooses to not bring in enough revenue to get ahead of Alberta's growing health and social problems by investing in prevention and early intervention.

What of the thousands of missing and murdered aboriginal women? We as the Legislature can do more to prevent these tragedies, but it will take significant new investment to reduce the vulnerability of aboriginal mothers, sisters, and daughters, improve access to culturally appropriate education, access to quality health services, to early childhood supports, and surely it's time, Mr.

Speaker, for a cold, hard look at how racism continues to haunt our society.

If this government is serious about learning from our tragic fatalities, we must establish independence of the Chief Medical Examiner's office from the Justice department. Ministerial denials of interference in the Chief Medical Examiner's office don't cut it, Mr. Speaker. The courageous challenge of Dr. Anny Sauvageau, resulting in her loss of a job, is yet another example of a failure of accountability in this government for full and transparent review of unnatural deaths.

Make no mistake, hon. members; there's much work to be done. Violence against women, both active violence and passive withholding of essential human needs, remains. It must be brought to light. It must be prevented and eliminated. It's our responsibility as legislators, men and women, to achieve this goal.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, question period will follow after the next two comments. Let us begin with the leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Saturday marked the 25th anniversary of the Polytechnique massacre. It's a day that is, sadly, etched in the memory of our nation, a day when 14 bright engineering students were killed because they were women.

Today, along with the NDP caucus, I remember those 14 women and the tragedy of their violent deaths. However, Mr. Speaker, today we also take the opportunity to commit once again to taking real action to end violence against women in this province.

The White Ribbon campaign, designed to remind all of the obligation to end violence against women and designed in particular to remind men of their obligation to end violence against women, is an important campaign. The late Jack Layton, former leader of Canada's NDP, was one of the cofounders of this campaign, and I am proud of that. But women in this province continue to face physical and sexual violence. In fact, as has been mentioned, the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters says that more than 17,000 women were turned away from shelters this year.

Today we also acknowledge the systemic violence towards indigenous women, 1,200 of whom have been killed or have gone missing over the past 30 years. The Alberta NDP believes that a full public inquiry into missing and murdered indigenous women is required to get to the bottom of this systemic violence that women from indigenous communities continue to face. I have called upon the Premier to join us in this call.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank the Assembly for taking the time to reflect on the anniversary of the Polytechnique massacre, and I'd like to call on all members of the Assembly to take today as an opportunity to commit, once again, to ending all violence against women.

Finally, I'd also like to encourage all members of the Assembly to take the opportunity to reflect on the occasion by viewing the work of Edmonton artist Carla Costuros. Her piece entitled Mary's Daughter is currently displayed in the rotunda to mark the anniversary of the massacre at l'école Polytechnique.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we've just heard from the hon. minister, today we remember the 14 young women viciously attacked and murdered on December 6, 1989.

Mr. Speaker, these women had a fundamental right to pursue their studies in a traditionally male-dominated field, and they were targeted for it. Because of this heinous act of violence, we will never know the brilliance they would have contributed to the field of engineering throughout their careers, nor could we expect their families to ever truly feel complete.

It is our human duty to never forget this act of violence towards women nor forget any other as this would mean that their passing was in vain. We still see far too many instances of this sort of violence today, not only abroad but here in Canada and Alberta. It is imperative that we take responsibility, that we speak up when we witness violence, that we make it clear beyond all doubt that these acts will not be tolerated on any scale so that one day we might end them for good.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, you're reminded: 35 seconds maximum for each question, 35 seconds maximum for each answer.

Let us begin with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Oil Price Forecasting

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, oil prices continue to fall, and it appears that not everyone is on the same page about what that means for Alberta. An example of that is the discrepancy between the Finance minister and the Premier about what oil projections are and what the Premier has said that they're going to be. The Finance minister has stuck to his guns, saying that oil would average $75 for the rest of the year. The Premier has said otherwise. Did the Premier misspeak when he told the Calgary Chamber of Commerce that he expects oil to range between $65 and $75?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for her question. Certainly, oil prices appear to be in the range of $65 to $75 per barrel. No one knows for certain because this is obviously an inexact science. Certainly, no Premier of Alberta or Prime Minister of Canada, for that matter, has control over international oil prices.

What these circumstances do demand on the part of the government of Alberta is to control what we can control, and that is our public finances, to be prudent, to be cautious, to be disciplined, and ensure that we have control on the expenditure side of the government, which this Minister of Finance is doing.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, they can't both be right. For the record I do think the Premier was right. At least, I hope he was because today oil dipped below $65. Morgan Stanley says that Brent could average $53 next year and dip as low as $43. Regardless, basic math says that if oil spends the rest of the year below $75, then it can't also average $75. Now you know why we're opposed to all that fuzzy math. Why is it that the Premier is letting the Finance minister build a fiscal outlook on an oil price that the Premier knows is wrong?

Mr. Prentice: Well, I thank the hon. member for her question. I can assure the House that the Finance minister is building both this budget and the next budget on sound, conservative fiscal principles and on the most realistic projections of oil prices which are possible, which at this point appear, by the reckoning of most commentators, to be in the range of $65 to $75 per barrel. This clearly has an implication on our province in terms of our finances. This province last year produced close to 2.6 million barrels of oil per day. We'll be cautious and disciplined as we move forward.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, it is this budget year that we're concerned about because this discrepancy between the Finance minister and the Premier is important, and it's significant. Every dollar drop in the average oil price results in about 200 million fewer dollars in the government's coffers over a year. A $5 difference has a billion-dollar impact. If the Premier's projections are right and the Finance minister's projections are wrong, they will be short by hundreds of millions of dollars this year. Will the Premier order the Finance minister to do a revised fiscal update using more realistic numbers?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, when I talked about $75 a barrel oil, that was the second-quarter update. We'll be coming out with a third-quarter update. Oil right now is at about $63.28, which is going to make things interesting for us over the next little while. As a government we're committed to bringing in sound, conservative fiscal principles, and we'll do everything we can to make sure that core services and Albertans are looked after.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm glad to see the Finance minister is watching those numbers as closely as we are.

Rural Health Facility Utilization

Ms Smith: Last week the Edmonton Journal highlighted how this government has failed to maintain and properly utilize Alberta's hospitals. While we don't agree with the reporter's conclusion to close rural hospitals, it is very clear that the government should use the extra capacity to take pressure off urban hospitals. For instance, my hometown of High River has an effective, full-service hospital, that performs about half of the hernia operations in the Calgary region. Why won't this government use our rural hospitals to make Alberta's health system work better?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, this government, this Premier in the initial stages set out to look at rural hospitals and what they can do and the contributions they can make by setting up a rural health strategy. That report is coming out. We'll look at that as it comes out in the next couple of weeks, and we will take some steps according to that.

Ms Smith: Well, Mr. Speaker, let me give you an example. Last year I visited a small-town hospital which uses one of its operating rooms for storage. Now, this hospital is just a 90-minute drive away from here. Surely Alberta Health Services could relocate elective procedures to small hospitals close to our big cities and use the new capacity in our big hospitals to make progress on wait times for more serious procedures. Alberta is missing its key wait time targets in nearly everything. Why won't the Health minister look at better using our rural hospitals to improve the system?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the question. We are looking at wait times. Wait times aren't as simple as using a hospital here or a hospital there. They're a matter of capacity, of dollars that we are able to invest in the system, and the time we need in order to implement those changes. We're looking at that now. We'll be coming out with some ideas on change in the next little while, which we hope will expedite some of the processes for some of the delayed surgeries.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, all this government wants to do is study. They never want to make decisions.

This government and AHS's centralizing bureaucracy constantly reject ideas which would improve the health system. Let me give you an example. An example of this failure to embrace an innovative proposal is from the Newell Foundation. This novel proposal is to build a life-lease facility in Bassano that would include innovative continuing care, long-term care nursing beds, and a small acute-care hospital. It's a very good idea. It's being offered to the government at virtually no cost. Why does the government constantly drag its feet on these kinds of health care innovations?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I really appreciate that question. I've had an opportunity to meet with the Newell Foundation and the Bassano community. We're moving forward with that. It's a great idea. We look forward to working with them to bring that to fruition.

The Speaker: Next question, hon. leader.

Ms Smith: A good answer for a change, Mr. Speaker. Thank you, Health minister.

Government Effectiveness

Ms Smith: The Premier has said that Albertans should judge his government on its progress, so let's ask some progress questions. On September 16 the Premier promised to sell Alberta's air fleet. Now, Albertans may think that we are out of the government aircraft business, but the planes have continued to fly senior members of the civil service around. Since the announcement there have been more than 40 flights. To the Premier: when can we expect the government air fleet to actually be sold, or has the Premier changed his mind about getting rid of it?

Mr. Prentice: I can assure the hon. member that the Premier has not changed his mind on that matter. This is a province under new management. We are listening to Albertans. We heard that Albertans do not want the government of Alberta operating an airline. I have never set foot on one of the government aircraft personally, Mr. Speaker, and our government ministers and political staff since September 15 have been flying commercial and driving as an alternative. I understand that there have been flights. The LG has used aircraft, and from time to time the shuttle service between Edmonton and Calgary has been used for officials.

Ms Smith: That wasn't a clear "We're selling the planes" answer, so maybe I'll have to ask that one again, Mr. Speaker.

Also during the by-election the Education minister announced on his campaign website that he was approving new modulars for William Reid school. Now, leaving aside the propriety of that announcement since it's being investigated by the Ethics Commissioner, the parents at William Reid would like to know the progress on that promise. During the floods the government showed it was able to build and install modulars at some school sites in less than three months. Can the Education minister tell us if William Reid school can expect to get their portables by February, and if not, why not?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, we certainly take seriously our responsibility to ensure that we have adequate capacity in our schools to respond to growing utilization. William Reid is one of those circumstances. I believe that the utilization rate there was well over a hundred per cent. We've made a commitment to provide modulars there and in other school jurisdictions as well, in the city of Calgary and across the province, and those will arrive in a timely way to ensure that all children will have adequate capacity to be educated in our schools.

Ms Smith: That doesn't sound like a yes either, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure when we're going to see those modulars installed.

Another progress question. On September 19 the Premier announced that Michener Centre would not be closed and that its residents could live out their lives there. What has not been made clear is if any of the 46 Michener residents who had been forced out would be allowed to return. We know that at least five of them have died since being forced out. We also know that for many of these residents Michener is the only home they've ever known. Can the Human Services minister tell us whether these Michener Centre residents will be allowed to return home, and if not, why not?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, just to encapsulate this exchange, Albertans will see what they've asked for, which is more portables, no airplanes owned by the government, and that the residents of Michener Centre who have left have been invited back and have been welcomed back. The minister can certainly provide the details of the exact numbers. I'm not current on the most recent numbers, but I do know that people who had left Michener have returned, have been welcomed back, and are satisfied with what this government has done to protect them.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Gay-straight Alliances in Schools

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms prohibits discrimination based on sexual orientation, plain and simple. Alberta Liberals want equal rights for all, but the PCs proposed a state-sanctioned segregation law which would have created different classes of citizens based solely on their sexual identity. In trying to defend this atrocity, the Premier simply said that rights are not absolute. To the Premier: what rights of school children does the Premier not support and want to limit?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've said previously in this House that there is no room for intolerance in our education system, that we support a safe, dignified learning environment, a learning environment that is respectful of all students. That is our aspiration. As I indicated last week, Bill 10 has been paused, and we will consult and hear from Albertans their views on this, and I stand by that decision. It's an important decision, and that's exactly how we intend to deal with this.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the Premier says that he wants to put the whole process on pause – and you heard him right here – while he takes more time to consult. Well, we can tell you that not accommodating all requests for GSAs is unacceptable to the LGBTQ community and many Albertans. Even the president of the Alberta Catholic School Trustees' Association says that their boards will follow the law the province ultimately brings forward.

To the Premier: will you now have the political courage to do the right thing and make GSAs a reality in every school where students request them?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, certainly, we will all follow the law, and we all intend to live up to the provisions of the Charter and the Alberta Constitution and fulfill the obligations that we all have to our children. In the days ahead there will be an important conversation with people in this province, and that will include people from the LGBTQ community, it will include people from the school boards which the hon. member has referred to, and it will include other Albertans who have a point of view on this matter.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the Conservative record is clear, dragging their feet until the courts force them to do the right thing. The fact is that LGBTQ students have a constitutional right to be free from the sort of discrimination that allows other students to form clubs but not them. Bill 202 would have automatically provided safe and inclusive schools to all students. The Premier said that Bill 202 was divisive, but how can he say that when he never even allowed it to come in the Legislature for debate? To the Premier: will you withdraw Bill 10 and allow Bill 202 to get the debate it rightly deserves right now in the Legislature?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, to reiterate, I heard in the clearest of terms from Albertans over the course of the last week that they wish to see further discussion. They wish to be heard with respect to the issues that are contained in Bill 202 or in Bill 10. That's precisely the reason that the bill was put on hold and why it's not been brought back to this Legislative Assembly. We stand by that decision. This is an important matter. We intend to get it right. We intend to hear from and listen to Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the Alberta ND opposition.

Women's Shelters

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every day hundreds of Alberta women gather the courage to flee the abusive situations they are facing at home: they pack a bag, they gather their children, and they seek refuge at an emergency shelter. But the latest data shows that in total these brave women were turned away 17,000 times because the shelters were full. To the Premier: what does this say about our province when on 17,000 occasions women fleeing these dangerous situations can find neither shelter nor support?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The goal is to ensure that women and children get the help they need when they it. We know that if shelters are full for the evening, the support that's provided for emergency accommodation in a hotel room and the wraparound workers that we have to support the families are absolutely critical. As well, emergency protection orders have to be issued. We know those are very important. Unfortunately, in the last eight months we've had to issue to 900 women protection orders for their situations.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, that doesn't answer my question at all, and I'm pretty sure that wasn't the Premier.

In the last few years rent in Alberta has skyrocketed while vacancy rates have dropped to 1 per cent in major cities. At the same time the number of women and children accepted into shelters has actually gone down because those few who do find refuge can't find anywhere else to go, so they stay longer. Again to the Premier: why is your government neglecting vulnerable Alberta families by failing to ensure that there is genuinely affordable housing available for those who so desperately need it?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the hon. member knows full well, we support the 30 women's emergency shelters as well as the second-stage shelters. We know that there is a need for affordable housing and for women and families to get into the homes quicker and not to stay in the shelters as long because that's a temporary solution. It goes back to the housing first solution, that we need to work on, and I look forward to working with the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters, just trying to figure out exactly the numbers we're working with so we can solve this problem together.

Ms. Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned that this does not appear to be a priority for the Premier. Now, his minister – his minister – has said that his government is finding a place for families who are turned away from emergency shelters by putting them in hotels. To the Premier: if this is a priority for you and you're prepared to answer it, do you truly believe that stuffing vulnerable families into a motel on the edge of town provides the necessary security and support that these women and these children need at such a fragile time in their lives?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, clearly, this is a matter of concern to all Albertans, it's a concern to the hon. member, and it's a concern, I would assume, to every single person in this House. We need to protect women and their vulnerable children in these circumstances. We all know that. We do, as the minister pointed at, support the network of women's shelters in this province. We are working with the Council of Women's Shelters to improve the situation, and it's why we support things such as the White Ribbon campaign and, the week before last, the Moosehide campaign. This clearly matters to the government. We are dealing with it. These are challenging circumstances, and we all need to do the best that we can.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, followed by Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Energy Policies

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are in a belt-tightening mode. Clearly, the drop in oil prices means that there will be some difficult budget decisions ahead. Given that resource-dependent countries such as Norway, Mexico, and several Middle Eastern countries routinely hedge their annual royalties as a way to manage market risk, why doesn't this government adopt a risk management policy to hedge and lock in some or all of our expected royalties?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, I thank the member for the question. Again, I hear a lot about Mexico; I hear a lot about Norway. I think it's important to understand that, you know, right now in today's economy there's no place you'd want to be other than Alberta. We're the only jurisdiction in Canada that can weather this storm. Moody's came out last week about our triple-A rating, saying that even if oil hits $60 a barrel, this jurisdiction will weather the storm. When I look at Norway, you know, it's a country; we're a province. I think that we'll be in good shape moving forward.

Mr. Anglin: I think you hedged your answer on that one.

Given that Alberta has deregulated its electricity market to pave the way for a free-trading market, why have regulatory costs rocketed from $13 million to $137 million annually since deregulation, and what is being done to control these out-of-control regulatory costs?

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you for the question. Mr. Speaker, I'd have to question the premise of that question. I think he's probably talking about the full regulatory system, not the regulation of the deregulated electrical generation market. The costs are open. The regulatory process is very clear. We're watching the costs all the time.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that Canada's risk-free rate of return is below 1 per cent, given that the two-year bond nominal yield is below 1 per cent and that the 10-year bond nominal yield is below 2 and a half per cent, why do Alberta's regulated utilities receive a guaranteed rate of return of 9 per cent, and what risk are they undertaking to deserve such a lucrative guaranteed rate of return?

Mr. Oberle: Actually, they don't, Mr. Speaker. The member is mistaken in that. The companies receive a rate of return dependent on how good they are at managing their business, and it's not guaranteed to be 9 per cent.

MLAs' Nominations as Federal Election Candidates

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, my questions are for the Minister of Justice, who is responsible for elections legislation in the province. Public service is a privilege, and we're all familiar with the old adage that a person cannot serve two masters. Can the minister explain what Alberta's policy is regarding members of this House standing as federal parliamentary candidates while continuing to hold provincial office?

The Speaker: Hon. minister, this is crossing over into another jurisdiction, but if you have an answer you'd like to give, let's hear it.

Mr. Denis: Yes, I can, Mr. Speaker. There's not a specific regulation in our elections laws, but there is a regulation under section 65 of the Canada Elections Act, which makes it clear that an MLA in a province is not eligible to be a candidate in a federal election. Just in common terms, what that would mean is that once a federal election is called and if a person here was signing off to become a candidate for whichever party in whichever district, what would happen is that that person would have to resign here under the federal law.

Dr. Brown: To the same minister: the former Member for Calgary-Foothills did the honourable thing and stepped aside when he got the nomination, but since the law does not require such a thing, are we relying on the individual ethics and judgment of individual members in the House?

The Speaker: Hon. member, we're treading into an area here that is really beyond the jurisdiction cited, in particular asking for legal opinions. That is also something that is dicing on the side of a dangerous precedent here. I'll allow one more answer here.

Mr. Denis: What I would indicate, Mr. Speaker, is that the former Member for Calgary-Foothills, a gentleman named Len Webber, became the federal candidate, and he resigned immediately. I think he did the honourable thing. There was a by-election called, and subsequent to that, we did receive a very good member from Calgary-Foothills to replace him.

The Speaker: Do you wish to try again, hon. member?

Dr. Brown: Would the minister consider bringing forth legislation to ensure that MLAs are working full-time for the interests of Albertans?

The Speaker: Briefly, hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I have no plans to change the legislation at this time, but I would encourage Albertans who are concerned about MLAs moonlighting for other political parties to maybe give them a call. Albertans are our bosses. They deserve our one hundred per cent, undivided attention every day.

The Speaker: I may choose to comment on this at another time.

Let us move on to Livingstone-Macleod, followed by Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Rural Hospitals

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, rural hospitals are a key component of the overall structure of smaller communities across Alberta. Not only do they ensure the health of these communities, but they also create jobs and inspiration for young people to lay down roots and live in our remote communities. To the Infrastructure minister: will your government's new approach to rural health care infrastructure mean that large areas will be dark and bare of local and regional health care and emergency services?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We had an intensive discussion last week, in this Chamber actually, about the facility condition index and the status of our rural hospitals in particular. We're committed to ensuring that our hospitals are in great shape. We have over $222 million committed in our current capital plan to catch up on the maintenance in our hospitals, and we'll continue to invest to ensure that they're safe and secure for Albertans.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Thank you. This government's front bench continues to provide no real answers on the plight of rural hospitals. Clearly, they have been well coached, but Albertans deserve to know what exactly is going on. Given that we've heard a lot of responses to questions about health care infrastructure particularly or platitudes and generalizations like, "This government is always looking after the health interests of Albertans," I'm going to give the Minister of Health a chance to be perfectly clear. Are you going to close rural hospitals? Yes or no, sir?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Rural Alberta is incredibly important to this government. One of the Premier's first steps was to create a rural health care strategy, which we're moving forward on. That will give us some direction on how we can better support our rural hospitals and our rural communities.

The Speaker: Final supplemental, hon. member.

Mr. Stier: Yes. Thank you. Well, Minister of Health, you wrote a column for the Edmonton Journal, published on December 6, that outlined this government's approach to health care infrastructure, but in it you only talked about large urban centres like Edmonton and Calgary. Once again to the Health minister: will you set the record straight by committing today to the support of rural hospitals and ensuring that these crucial rural facilities remain an integral part of the regional health care framework?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, this government is committed to every hospital in this province. We'll continue to work with every community to try to make sure they have the kind of health care within their community and around their community that they can be proud of. We'll continue to do that. This Premier has given us direction to do that. Maintenance is an important part of what we do. We'll continue with that approach.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, followed by Calgary-Buffalo.

Animal Disease Prevention and Surveillance

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Disease prevention and surveillance is just as important in animal health as it is in human health. Thanks to the co-operative efforts of producers, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency, Alberta Agriculture, and my veterinary colleagues our province is free of a number of diseases that cost millions to other jurisdictions. It is a proud record but one that requires constant vigilance. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: with the recent diagnosis of a highly pathogenic strain of avian influenza on poultry farms in B.C., can the minister assure Albertan poultry producers that specific measures are being taken to prevent this disease?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member for the question. Yes, I'm sure we've all seen on the news that there is an outbreak of avian influenza in the lower mainland of B.C. Five farms have been affected. They've all been quarantined by the CFIA. Our provincial veterinarian, Dr. Hauer, and his staff are monitoring this very closely. They do have an action plan in place. I should say that I've visited that centre several times when they've been just doing trial runs, and these are people that are very committed to their job and very ready.

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. Avian influenza is only one potentially devastating condition. Our hog industry currently faces the threat of porcine epidemic diarrhea, or PED. Given that this disease has been recently diagnosed in Ontario, Quebec, and Montana and that the virus has been detected in Alberta off-farm, are additional educational and biosecurity measures being taken to prevent this devastating disease from being established in Alberta, or are hog producers going to be left on their own to deal with the devastating consequences, like they were with the H1N1 outbreak of 2009?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The short answer to the question is that, yes, steps are being taken. I should mention that both in the case of the avian influenza and in the case of PED, which involves pigs, we're working very closely with industry. It's not that industry is sitting on the sidelines. They are fully engaged in this, and in this particular case it was an industry initiative, a random check, that found the PED bacteria in an office. It has not involved any animals in Alberta, but that just shows you the extent of the surveillance. We jumped right at it, and they've taken extended measures now.

Dr. Starke: Well, finally, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. Without question, the most economically devastating animal disease to affect our province in this century has been bovine spongiform encephalopathy, or BSE. A lot of work was done to reopen markets, but it took years of effort and lots of testing. Now the World Organisation for Animal Health currently lists Canada among countries with controlled BSE risk status. What, if anything, is your department doing to maintain that status or, better yet, to move us into the more favourable category of negligible risk like the U.S.A.?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is something that we are watching and working on very carefully. It is true that the BSE epidemic was devastating for our industry, but one of the things that evolved from it was enhanced traceability, a much greater awareness in terms of industry, governments, and the public. I would say that we're much better prepared now to deal with these types of situations. In 2015 we can apply to the World Organisation for Animal Health – the acronym is OIE – for a risk-free status, so we're hoping to do that then.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Faith-based and Private Schools

Mr. Hehr: Last week this government failed when it refused to allow gay-straight alliances in all schools where kids want them. Last spring the Heritage Christian academy and the Prairie Christian academy, both fully funded public schools, required students and staff to sign an agreement stating that they would not engage in homosexual behaviour. To date neither this government nor these schools have made public the wording of their new document that may try to regulate student and staff morality. To the Minister of Education: can the minister tell us whether or not students and staff at these schools are still required to sign this morality agreement?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, I can say that we expect that all school boards, all jurisdictions that are under the authority of this government will ensure that they are operating within the legal framework that is required by our Canadian Constitution and by the laws of this province.

Mr. Hehr: That doesn't sound like much of an answer.

Recently a private school, the Green Learning Foundation, went bankrupt. In an act that can only be described as complete and utter incompetence, this government forwarded money to this school when it was in financial disarray. As a result, families were left without money to be used for their kids' education. What has the minister done to rectify the situation, and what steps has he taken to ensure that this does not continue?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, this certainly was a stressful situation for the students and the families concerned, and we want to ensure, of course, that the students continue to have a good education wherever they will be. I understand this matter is in bankruptcy proceedings, and we will wait to determine what the outcomes of that will be.

Mr. Hehr: Well, that doesn't sound like too much.

The troubling fact is that 69 private schools have gone out of business in the last five years. While this government compels all public school boards in this province to make available their financial information by posting it online or on the ministry website, why aren't private schools required to do the same when they receive public money? Are parents not entitled to know this information?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, I understand that a number of private schools have closed. They normally close because enrolments drop, and they simply cannot sustain their particular operations. We ensure that all schools in the province, whether they are public or private, meet our financial disclosure obligations, that they go through the appropriate auditing processes, and that I and my officials are satisfied that public funds are being spent appropriately on the education of children.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by Chestermere-Rocky View.

Postsecondary Education Funding

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. While running to replace a Premier who had broken her promise to adequately fund postsecondary education, this Premier promised to restore all funding that was cut from our province's institutions. Despite these promises, his minister for advanced education has suggested that more cuts will be coming to our institutions rather than restoring the funding the Premier promised. To the Premier: will the Premier's promise to keep the promise that was broken again be broken, or will he keep his promise to keep the promise that was broken?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education.

Mr. Scott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to put some facts on the table. First of all, no budget decisions have been made yet. What I can tell you is that Alberta invests in our students. Our latest numbers show that Alberta has the third-highest expenditures per full-time student in all of Canada. Campus Alberta is very well funded. This year we invested $2.1 billion among our postsecondary institutions.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that this government's negligence has forced universities and colleges to turn to student fees as a financial alternative and given that recent proposals for market modifiers by several institutions will gouge students and place many professional careers out of reach of kids from families of modest means, to the minister of advanced education: will you assure potential students from working- and middle-class families that their futures will not be snatched away from them because of underfunding of postsecondary education by this government, and if not, why not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Let's put some facts on the table again for that member. Accessibility is a priority for our government, and I'm proud of our record. We invest $234 million in student aid supports. That includes scholarships, bursaries, and grants. In addition, we make $408 million available for student loans. Any Albertan who qualifies for a student loan gets a student loan. Our graduates are very successful, and they're successful at paying back their student loans. We expect that 90 per cent of student loans that are issued this year will be paid back.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the minister would like some facts, I want to ask him if he's aware that this province cancelled the remission program a number of years ago, leading to some of the highest student debt in the country and the lowest participation in postsecondary attendance of any province in Canada. Our postsecondary institutions are running big deficits. Given the importance of education to Albertans, can he look Albertans in the eye and tell them that his government will ensure that there are no further cuts to postsecondary education?

Mr. Scott: Mr. Speaker, what I can tell you is that there have been no budget decisions made at this time yet. We're still going through the process. What I can tell you is that we're going to continue investing in our postsecondary institutions. I can tell you that we're going to continue making sure that young people have access to their postsecondary institutions. We're going to continue investing so that our students get the best education.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky-View, followed by Lethbridge-West.

Education Curriculum

Mr. McAllister: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A few years ago the government launched a bold new initiative called Inspiring Education. The goal, as stated in the document, is to completely transform education. In other words, they want to change what kids learn, and they want to change how kids learn. While there are terrific initiatives under way at the local level, a lot of people find the government's new initiative – shall we say? – less than inspiring. To the minister. Your government is under new management. How will that affect what you do or don't do with Inspiring Education?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, Inspiring Education was the product of many months of hundreds, indeed thousands of conversations that took place across the province with Albertans regarding the future of their education system. There is much in that particular document that is indeed inspiring. It is a visionary, inspirational, and directional document that helps provide guidance for where we go in the future. Does that mean that education is going to go through a revolution? Of course not. We have a wonderful education system. We're going to continue to ensure that it's top-drawer for our students.

Mr. McAllister: Well, that clears things up.

In 2008 the government changed math textbooks in the province to line up with the new fad, discovery-based or inquiry-based learning. Not coincidentally, the publisher of this textbook, Math Makes Sense, also sits on the curriculum-development team with the province. That's a conflict of interest, Mr. Speaker. To the minister: will you provide another resource for math instruction to teachers that focuses on direct instruction and includes things such as standard algorithms so that we have a better balance for our students in the classroom?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, once upon a time in a former life I was a teacher and a school principal and a chair of a board of education in this province, and I understand that there are many ways to accomplish the goals of education. There are many pedagogies that work. Direct instruction is one. Inquiry education is another. If anybody thinks that there's only one best way to go about teaching, they're mistaken. So we will ensure that we have a curriculum – and I will sign off on that at some point in time – that is going to be the very best for our students going forward into the 21st century, focusing on basics and focusing on 21st century skills.

Mr. McAllister: I'm sure the minister's office smells of rich mahogany, too, but it doesn't answer the questions we're asking.

I'll give you another opportunity to prove you're under new management. Minister, I had to beg, plead, pretty much embarrass the former Education minister to meet with Dr. Nhung Tran-Davies, who represents tens of thousands of Alberta parents who have concerns with what's going on in the classroom. She is supported by a team of highly qualified expert mathematicians. Minister, will you agree to meet with Dr. Nhung Tran-Davies and her team, not your department officials but you personally, sir?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, I just indicated that we are committed to building and maintaining and strengthening an education system that will do the very best to provide our students with 21st century skills learning and also basics in literacy and in numeracy, the kinds of things that all of us would want our children to be successful at. In that process there are many people who are engaged in speaking to the curriculum-design process. We will continue that. Many voices will be heard, and we will have an excellent curriculum for the 21st century.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West, followed by Calgary-Shaw.

Workforce Supply

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the weekend we had the privilege of having our Premier down in southern Alberta to visit with many rural and urban constituents, and while I was there having a chance to hear from these folks, I heard one consistent theme. There is a great deal of concern about the temporary foreign worker program and the Alberta immigrant nominee program. We have people being sent home that are valued employees that are helping to keep rural and urban businesses alike going, and while they're doing that, we're losing employees. So I'm going to ask the Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour: what are you doing about this backlog in the nominee program?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a question that I've heard from the hon. member's constituents, too. The fact of the matter is that we have no backlog in Alberta. Alberta is limited by the federal government to a maximum of 5,500 certificates each calendar year for AINP, and as of last week we have issued all 5,500 of those certificates for this year. We have worked and will continue to work with the federal government to find long-term solutions to better respond to Alberta's labour demand.

The Speaker: First supplemental, hon. member.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As these workers are being sent home, we have businesses that are struggling to meet the needs. They're closing early, and they're reducing their hours. What is the ministry doing to support those businesses that are facing these challenges and having to reduce their hours of operation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member must be taking the same phone calls I am, once again. The government's priority always has been and still is that Albertans and Canadians get the jobs available first. We recognize the difficulties that some businesses are experiencing in finding permanent personnel for those permanent jobs. Our government has strategies in place to support employers in recruiting and retaining the workforce. We also support initiatives to help Albertans gain the skills and training they need to fill the available jobs. Despite these initiatives we expect to be 96,000 workers short by 2023.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've just heard the minister say that he's hoping to see Albertans fill these vacancies. So I'd ask the minister this question, then: what is he doing to make sure that these Albertans are trained and ready to go to work in these jobs and businesses?

Mr. McIver: Well, of course, Mr. Speaker, through my colleagues the ministers of Education and Advanced Education there are a lot of programs. We also work with the federal government on the Canada-Alberta job grant, which shares the responsibility for training people between the government and business, thereby involving business in doing this, too. It's a team effort. We also have to get involved. We also are working to help underrepresented groups participate more fully in the labour market through the First Nations training programs. We continue to work with employers and the industry associations on a constant basis, but it's a big job.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The social supports for women fleeing violence in this province are inadequate. According to recent reports over 17,000 women were turned away from emergency shelters last year. That's 2,000 more than the year before, and it's enough to fill Rexall Place. This is a troubling statistic made worse by the fact that these women are being turned away at a critical time, when they are most concerned about their own personal safety and the safety of their children. To the Minister of Human Services: why is your government denying support to thousands of vulnerable women every year?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd first like to thank the hon. member for his powerful statement on the 25th anniversary of l'école Polytechnique.

We know the work we have to do. As I indicated earlier, shelters are just one part of the equation. It's about increased supports to women in violence with front-line workers and first responders such as police. We work with them to help them with their immediate safety and needs, but again it's temporary, and we're looking at the housing first model as much as we can.

Mr. Wilson: Last year I raised the issue of unfunded capacity existing in our emergency shelters, and in response the province allocated funding for an additional 70 spaces in the system. Minister, is there additional capacity in our shelters today, over and above these 70 spaces, to do more if the funding was made available, and will you be advocating for that in your budget this year?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, we did allocate 70 more shelter beds last budget for a total of 710 beds. One of the other areas we allocated funds for was shelter enhancement, which was about $260,000 across Alberta for shelters to use funds for extra expenses. That's been very successful. With respect to maintenance there are some agencies that have funded that in Calgary. We know that it's important to have these available and to have the conversations with the shelters to meet their needs.

Mr. Wilson: The additional spaces are a start, Mr. Speaker. We all recognize that this is a multifaceted and complex problem with no simple solutions. When a woman makes the choice to seek help, which requires a huge leap of faith in our social system, and our collective response is to send them right back into the violence they are attempting to flee, we are failing them, Minister. This is not a new problem. What are you going to do about it?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Again, Mr. Speaker, as I've said previously, we know that women are reaching out for help, and that's contacting the family information line as well, which I said is available in 170 languages. I'm looking forward to working with the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters to ensure that we have a consistent way to collect data to see exactly how many women and children we're able to help. I know that sometimes women may contact a shelter by phone before they decide to leave a tragic situation. I can assure you that Human Services and this government are working very hard to support women and families.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by Edmonton-Riverview.

Edmonton River Valley Park System

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we all know, Edmonton is known for its parks and trails. My constituency of Edmonton-McClung contains many of these parks and trails as it is bordered by the North Saskatchewan River. In the First Session of this Legislature I proposed a motion for the government to continue its commitment to the creation of a world-class capital region river valley park by working with the city of Edmonton to connect all of the river valley parks into a single, continuous, and protected park. My question to the minister of the environment and sustainable resources: how . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Can you guess what his question was going to be?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, I can imagine because I've sat with this member and I know how very passionate he is about the river valley in Edmonton, so I want to thank him for his passion.

Mr. Speaker, the goal and the vision of the River Valley Alliance is to create North America's largest river valley park system for the enjoyment of all Albertans. I'm happy to say that to date a number of projects have been completed in support of the river valley park system, including the Fort Edmonton Footbridge, Voyager park in my constituency of Devon, and also in Fort Saskatchewan and many others. Funding is being utilized, and projects are . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member. First supplemental.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you to the minister for the compliment.

My supplementary question to the same minister: how have Albertans benefited from the river valley initiative since that time, and how have you improved access and connectivity in the river valley area?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The end result of this project is to create an almost 80-kilometre river valley park system for all Albertans to access and to use. Every time one of our partner communities completes a project, we get closer to our goal, and each completed individual project adds value and creates new opportunities: a vibrant stretch of trail connecting seven municipal communities along the river valley, complete with parks, trailheads, facilities, docks and boat launches, pedestrian bridges, and so much more.

Mr. Xiao: To the same minister: how will your department ensure our parks and trails in the river valley are preserved and sustained for future generations?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, Mr. Speaker, this project is about creating, protecting, and preserving a capital region river valley park system. Alberta Parks staff are working with our municipal partners to develop a conceptual plan for facility development and recreational opportunities within this system. With $50 million invested in this project by the province, we have a vested interest to continuing to work with our partners on the completion of this important and unique urban park system.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by Little Bow.

Service and Rescue Dogs

Mr. Young: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Not every business in Alberta is complying with the provincial legislation that protects the rights of individuals with disabilities who use service dogs. A recent survey shows that Alberta's cities treat service dogs and their owners poorly, turning them away from public places like restaurants and grocery stores even though their rights are protected. This includes many of my constituents. Laws and obligations are one thing, but ensuring compliance is another. All of my questions are to the Associate Minister of Persons with Disabilities. Minister, why aren't you standing up for disabled Albertans and their service dogs?

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. associate minister to respond.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We know how important it is for Albertans with disabilities to use dogs and have access. People with a qualified service dog and a team can go anywhere you and I can. Failing to do that, there is a fine of up to $3,000. We're working on a very aggressive public awareness campaign to make sure that all businesses are aware of this. Of course, if someone does not comply with this, it is a provincial law, and you can report it to the police.

Mr. Young: There are those who can't access service dogs that they need trained. There is a huge demand that is not being met and that impacts Albertans' ability to live a high-quality life with the supports they need. Why are you denying Albertans the right to live these high-quality lives, and what are you doing to support these service dogs?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government is committed to making sure that every Albertan has the best quality of life. In terms of the service dogs we absolutely know that it's important for the individual to have access with their service dogs. In terms of the shortage we're currently working on some regulatory changes so that owner-trained dogs can also be tested under ADI standards, without compromising public safety, to make sure that people can have access to service dogs and can enjoy their quality of life.

Mr. Young: Emergency search and rescue dogs and their handlers are invaluable in emergency disaster situations. Will the minister extend the provision of service dogs to emergency service and rescue dogs that are deployed to an emergency?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We're absolutely grateful for the service that both service dogs and rescue dogs provide, and I'm quite thankful for the hon. member's passion in terms of the search dogs and guide dogs. As the hon. member is aware, they go through rigorous training. Search and rescue dogs and guide and service dogs have different training to make sure that we're meeting the needs of Albertans. A law protects the rights of persons with disabilities, and of course it's about allowing access to individuals to go to public . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the bell sounding the end of question period has rung. Just before we have a 30-second pause here, could I have unanimous consent, should you wish to give it, to revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. A brief introduction.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly three individuals who have joined us to watch second reading of Bill 203. Seated in the members' gallery we have Mr. Paul Whittaker, the president and CEO of Alberta Forest Products. Many of you can remember Paul from his time as Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs. Seated with him is Mr. Brock Mulligan, director of communications with the AFPA. Brock was previously my CPC assistant and was a true asset to this government for five years. With them is Rory Koska, technical advisor with Wood Works! Alberta. I'd ask them all to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, in 30 seconds from now we will resume with the next order of our Routine.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Edmonton Food Bank Donation by Sikh Community

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to congratulate and thank the Vaisakhi Nagar Kirtan Committee and members of the Sikh community of Edmonton, who are also part of my riding of Edmonton-Manning, for their generous support to raise donations to donate to Edmonton's Food Bank this year.

Mr. Speaker, on the occasion of the annual celebration of the birth of Guru Nanak Dev Ji, the founder of Sikhism, the Vaisakhi Nagar Kirtan Committee contributed to Edmonton's Food Bank with $13,000 and 7,500 pounds of food as well as $40,000 to the University of Alberta. In addition, with combined and driving efforts the Punjabi Media Association and the Sikh community were also able to donate $65,000 and 4 tonnes of food.

One of the important teachings of Sikhism is sharing with those in need so that no one goes to bed hungry. Over the past three years the Sikh community in Edmonton has donated over $200,000 to Edmonton's Food Bank. The Nagar Kirtan Committee and the Punjabi Media Association have for many years now made great efforts to reach out to the community for donation appeals through radio, print media, and TV programs in order to help in the efforts to provide support where it is needed.

I praise and salute the efforts of the Vaisakhi Nagar Kirtan Committee, the Punjabi Media Association, and the Sikh community for their kind donations and for giving back to the community by helping those in need this holiday season. I encourage all of us and every Albertan to donate this holiday season. God bless Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by Leduc-Beaumont.

Official Opposition Policies

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If you believe in shorter wait times for hospital surgeries, you just might be a Wildroser. If you believe prioritized public lists for infrastructure construction would prevent politicized decisions and reduce waste, then you just might be a Wildroser. If you wish the government had been putting half its surpluses into the heritage savings trust fund, you just might be a Wildroser. If you believe the interest on what should be a $200 billion heritage savings trust fund would provide a nice cushion during times of lower royalty revenues, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think government, like baby diapers, should be changed regularly and for the same reasons, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think one of the three great lies is, "Hi, I'm from the government, and I'm here to help you," you just might be a Wildroser. See me later to find out what I think the other two lies are.

If you think paying 1 and one half billion dollars for a structure that was quoted at $500 million is unacceptable, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think that AHS would collapse if it weren't for the skill and dedication of front-line service providers, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think the best use of teachers in a classroom is teaching, not filling out a myriad of reports, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think cabinet voting itself a 35 per cent raise is unconscionable, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think public servants should receive pay and benefits similar to what the private sector can afford, you just might be a Wildroser. If you think $375 million for MLA offices is a waste of money, you probably already are a Wildroser. If you think golden parachutes and million dollar severance packages should be illegal, you just might be a Wildroser.

If you think governments that award all these things and do all the things I've just mentioned should be voted out of office, then you're definitely a Wildroser.

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, you've caught my attention.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to ask for unanimous consent of this Assembly to continue past 3 p.m., waiving rule 7(7).

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Let's move on. Leduc-Beaumont, followed by Calgary-East.

Leduc No. 1 Energy Discovery Centre

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. February 3, 1947, was a day that forever changed our province. That day oil was struck at Leduc No. 1, and Alberta went from a have-not agricultural province to an energy giant that became the economic driver of this country.

The story of oil is the story of Alberta, Mr. Speaker, and Leduc No. 1 Energy Discovery Centre, located on highway 60 in my constituency of Leduc-Beaumont, showcases this story and the importance of this industry to our daily lives. This world-class museum offers hands-on education in the science of oil and the history of Leduc No. 1 and the role it played in helping shape Alberta's identity. It offers a working oil rig, the world's largest drill bit, public tours, educational programs, interpretive displays, and archival information. It has hosted tourists and students from across Canada and around the world.

In true Alberta spirit it was developed and built through the hard work and dedication of volunteers. The Leduc No. 1 Energy Discovery Centre exists today as a not-for-profit museum owned and operated by the Leduc/Devon Oilfield Historical Society. However, Mr. Speaker, after 17 years the discovery centre is struggling. Its volunteers are aging and actually passing on, and its financial resources cannot keep up with rising operational costs. Myself and my colleague the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon have met with members of the society to offer what we can to help keep its doors open.

I would encourage all members to visit this fine testament to our province. I would love to see it become an official provincial museum. The financial support and increased profile would help keep its doors open for generations to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by Calgary-Cross.

Autism Spectrum Disorder

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Autism spectrum disorder is a complex condition that impacts brain development, leaving individuals with communication problems, difficulty with typical social interactions, and a tendency to repeat specific patterns of behaviour.

Families with an autistic child spend an immense amount of time and energy learning to understand and communicate with a child who does not respond in typical ways. Mr. Speaker, learning how to adapt as a parent of an autistic child can be incredibly difficult and can cause parents a great deal of hardship and self-doubt. Families can be greatly stressed by uncertainty about the future of their children. Determining what services are available to help can also cause great strain.

However, Mr. Speaker, there can also be great rewards for families with an autistic child when they have the proper support. The agencies that provide support for families dealing with autism in our province need more help and more direction from this government to help them overcome inefficiencies. Work can be done to optimize communication and to help organizations work together and streamline support services to ensure families get the best support on a timely basis.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that this government is committed to providing the best possible care. I'm also confident that we will continue to work diligently to overcome these obstacles and give Alberta families the proper support they deserve to meet the needs of their children.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Cross, followed by Calgary-Buffalo.

Volunteers

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, the strength of our province flows from its people, and leading the way are thousands of dedicated volunteers who've stepped up to make a real difference in their communities. Their efforts create excellent social and cultural programs and provide opportunities for Albertans to participate in recreation and sports activities that help to make every Alberta community a wonderful place to live, work, and visit.

Our volunteers also help to ensure that our citizens continue to enjoy a quality of life which is one of the best in the world, Mr. Speaker, and because an Albertan stepped up to volunteer, other Albertans were able to develop a talent or learn a new skill. Many new Albertans were made to feel at home here while others were able to find the help they needed to get through a crisis.

Mr. Speaker, International Volunteer Day was recognized around the world this past Friday, December 5. On that day we celebrated and recognized the enormous impact that these dedicated individuals have upon their communities, their province, and our nation.

The hon. Minister of Culture and Tourism presented the Stars of Alberta volunteer award to six incredible Albertans. Akshay Verma from Edmonton and Mitchell Mulhall from Fort McMurray were in the youth category. Jim Hole and Ingrid Pederson from Edmonton were in the adult category. For the senior category we honoured Donna Du Bois from Three Hills and Gail Wolfe from Cold Lake. There was a very special tribute to Tracy Stewart, who overcame personal challenges to volunteer over 20 years at Edmonton's Norwood extended care facility.

The outstanding contributions of these volunteer stars are an inspiration, Mr. Speaker, to all Albertans and remind each of us that we have the power to make a real difference in our communities.

I now ask that all members of the Assembly join me in thanking our incredible Alberta volunteers.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Mr. Hehr: It should be no surprise that once again this province is in difficulty as a result of the rise and fall of the price of oil. This has happened time and time again in this province – it's from good times to bad in the blink of an eye – yet this government prefers to play the role of the ostrich and bury its head in the sand instead of fixing our fiscal structure to bring in necessary revenue to fund core programs that families need. Two years ago it was the bitumen bubble, today it's $65 oil, and tomorrow it could be worse.

Yet it doesn't have to be like this. Alberta is the lowest tax jurisdiction by a country mile. If we adopted Saskatchewan's tax code, the second-lowest tax jurisdiction, we'd bring in roughly $12 billion more. Accordingly, there are solutions to this roller coaster ride that will provide predictable and sustainable funding. We need to strive not only for a strong economy but a strong society. In my view, we are not doing the best we can.

We need look no further than the Progressive Conservative platform from the last election to highlight where we are failing. Of the 50 schools promised, not one has been completed. We are 2,500 teachers short of where we were in terms of per capita numbers from five years ago. We are the last province without full-day kindergarten. Our 10-year plan to end homelessness has stalled, and 17,000 women fleeing violent situations cannot find room at a shelter. Albertans are languishing in hospitals instead of being in long-term care centres.

So what's the answer? Well, it seems that it's already been provided. In 2008 a blue-ribbon panel stated that we needed to raise revenue. Every Tory Finance minister who has left politics has stated that we have a revenue problem. Although we're under new management, it appears that we are still lacking the intestinal fortitude to raise revenue to ensure Alberta's future is as bright as its past. To be blunt, Mr. Speaker, anyone should be able to figure out what has happened. We have no PST, a flat tax, and the lowest corporate tax rates in the land. Accordingly, this government has options . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

That concludes members' statements.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Bill 2 Alberta Accountability Act

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to rise today to request leave to introduce first reading of Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act.

This legislation is part of a package that would help restore public trust, improve accountability, and end entitlements. Bill 2 will strengthen the conflict-of-interest guidelines for political staff, extend the cooling-off period for political staff and designated office holders, and clarify the distinction between the role of registered individual lobbyists and government consultants. Complementing the legislation will be two Treasury Board directives that will eliminate sole-source contracts except in exceptional circumstances and will restrict severance packages for political staff.

Mr. Speaker, with the Alberta Accountability Act we will hold the government to the highest possible standards of public service. The actions and behaviour of those privileged to work for the government must be guided by respect for Albertans and their tax dollars. These people are our bosses. We work for them, not the other way around. These accountability provisions are strong. Albertans deserve no less.

The Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 2 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by Calgary-Mountain View and Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings here today. First, is the appropriate number of copies of a postcard from a campaign on the Bill 9 condo act put forward by the Canadian Condominium Institute. The card reads: "I am concerned that Bill 9 has not had the needed public scrutiny that it requires." Undoubtedly the government will be receiving many of these postcards in the coming weeks.

My second tabling is in regard to a letter that was sent by a nurse to the Minister of Health. The letter is clearly illustrating the frustration that many front-line workers have about the serious state of our health care. She writes that the patients are not being looked after properly and that the workers are frustrated as well.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Calgary-Buffalo.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have five tablings in relation to Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, with each one concerned deeply about the fact that government is leaving too much to be written in regulations rather than properly debating and outlining options in the legislation itself. I table the full amendment recommendations of the north Alberta chapter of the Canadian Condominium Institute.

Also from the northern Alberta chapter: Band-aid Fix for Condominiums Not Enough and that the "new act lacks input from owners, relies heavily on undebated and yet to be developed regulations."

A third is from Mr. Brian Durkin, a lawyer who attests that to represent Albertans, we need to reconsider Bill 9 and not ram it through without the necessary discussions, consultations, and amendments.

From Dr. June Donaldson, an Alberta condo owner advocate, is the same message about pausing on Bill 9 and ensuring we do the right things in this critical issue for Albertans.

Finally, Mr. Robert Noce, an Edmonton lawyer specializing in condo law, is saying that amendments simply have not gone far enough and don't specify remedies for the problems. He wants to see this addressed before we pass this bill.

The final two tablings include an article by Annie McEwen, PhD public policy candidate at Carleton University, on child poverty.

Child poverty is not a mysterious unknown threat like terrorism; poverty is hiding in plain view and we all know its awful effects. It's up to all Canadians to listen to our children, to say something, because this is a threat we should all see.

And, obviously, act upon.

My final tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a publication in the Calgary Herald by James Wood titled Catholic School Leader Discounts Idea of Legal Battle on Gay-Straight Alliances.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings. The first is a letter from Sherry Miller to Hon. Heather Klimchuk. [interjections] Sherry is a lawyer in Calgary who is writing on behalf of the PDD community. In her view there needs to be more assessment done, and she outlines five very good principles that should be followed and that would add value to our current system, which she finds very onerous and very complex and not serving the interests of the PDD community.

My second tabling stems from my question where I noted that 69 private schools have gone out of business in the last five years. I provide that tabling to back up what I stated in question period.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. And you heard the response from the House when an hon. member was referred to by personal name, which is frowned upon here.

Let us move on to Strathmore-Brooks, followed by Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the required number of copies of a letter that I wish to table. It's from the Bassano parent council, and it's signed by Sandra Mitchell. In this letter they talk about the weighting of the diploma exams. They would like to see that decreased from 50 per cent to 30 per cent, and they have some examples of why they would like to see that done. I would like to table that for future reference for the Education minister if he so wishes to take this under advisement. I know that it's something that has been talked about in the province before, and I'm sure that it will continue to receive some comments.

Thank you.

3:10

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five copies of the news release from the Alberta Forest Products Association applauding Bill 203.

As well, I have five copies of an article published in the Edmonton Sun that discusses the benefits of Bill 203 in the urban setting.

I have five copies of a letter of support for Bill 203 from the mayor of Whitecourt.

Also, I have five copies of a news release from the Canadian Home Builders' Association endorsing the plan for six-storey residential structures as proposed in Bill 203.

Thank you, sir.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Mandel, the Minister of Health, pursuant to the Health Professions Act the Alberta College of Occupational Therapists 2013-14 annual report, the Alberta College of Optometrists 2013 annual report, and the College of Alberta Dental Assistants annual report 2013-14, June 1, 2013, to May 31, 2014.

On behalf of the hon. Minister Dirks, the Minister of Education, school jurisdictions audited financial statements for the year ended August 31, 2013, sections 1, 2, and 3.

The Speaker: Hon. members, there were no points of order today.

Orders of the Day

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 201 Electric Utilities (Transparency in Billing) Amendment Act, 2014

The Chair: I recognize the Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I will be brief in my comments in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Anglin: Point of order.

Mr. Hale: I see I have a friend in the back making comments again. That's okay. We'll just carry on.

I would like to propose an amendment to Bill 201, and I will wait while the amendment is passed around.

The Chair: Sure. Please. We will circulate that. A brief pause.
Hon. member, you may speak to amendment A1.

Mr. Hale: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Chair. When this bill was first proposed, I took some time and talked to a number of stakeholders in the electricity industry, and this suggestion comes from a few of them. They were in agreement that the name should be changed from "regulated rate option" because there was some confusion.

For the record I would like to read my amendment. It says:

Mr. Hale to move that Bill 201, Electricity Utilities (Transparency in Billing) Amendment Act, 2014, be amended in section 2, in the proposed section 149.1(2)(b), by striking out "variable market rate" and substituting "variable default rate".

Now, the reason it was suggested to change it to the "variable default rate" and not have it as the "variable market rate" is that they felt that there could be some confusion with the wholesale market. That is a market that is used by a number of different distributors and suppliers such as Spot Power.

Just to avoid any more confusion, you know, because in the title of this bill it's "Transparency in Billing," I felt that if we could put in the default instead of the market rate, it just makes sense. If you don't sign a contract, the price you pay is the default price. As I mentioned, the regulated rate is based over 120 days, and then there's the wholesale market flow-through rate. That is variable, and that's what they use, what the spot price uses. This just avoids any more confusion.

I would hope that the members would agree and all vote in favour of changing the name to the "variable default rate." Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you.

Other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Although I commend the member for bringing forward this amendment, it's too prescriptive, and it's an issue that I had discussed with the ministry to try to correct. I don't disagree with the attempt, but I'm not going to support the amendment. There will be another amendment that will follow that, hopefully, will correct to what the Department of Energy would like to see.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment?

Mr. Kang: I just want to clarify this. Will the consumer be paying the default rate, or will they be paying the variable rate?

Mr. Hale: What this amendment does is that the member is changing the name from regulated rate to "variable market rate." That's the rate you get when you don't sign a monthly fixed contract. If this bill passes, then you would get the regulated market rate. I'm saying: don't call it a variable market rate. Call it the variable default rate, because if you don't sign a contract, you get the default price, and that is variable, whether it's the variable market rate or the variable default rate, which I think is better. This doesn't come from me. This comes from industry, from the electricity industry. I've talked to a number of the stakeholders, and they feel that to better clarify, to avoid any type of miscommunication or, you know, any issues, to make it more transparent, they say: call it the variable default rate, and then the consumers know that if you don't have a fixed-price contract, you will default to that variable rate.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Sorry. I just need some clarification here, then. It's just a different way of saying the similar thing, which is to say that if someone doesn't have a contract, then they are just having their electricity rate reflected on the up-and-down monthly charge, right? It's not like we are pigeonholing people to compel them to have a contract, which I don't often ever advise my constituents to do. I don't want to be tying us down to something like that.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hale: Yeah. Hon. member, it doesn't pigeonhole anybody. It just clarifies that if you do not sign a fixed-price contract, if you don't sign a contract with whatever service provider for whatever rate they will guarantee you, you fall back on the variable default rate, or, as the bill states, the "variable market rate," which is not fixed. I just would like to change it to variable default because it makes a little bit more sense. I want to make sure that there is clarity in the market. There are wholesale market flow throughs. If we talk about the variable market rate and then the wholesale market, this is just a better way to determine, to distinguish that it is the default that you pay without a contract signed.

Mr. Kang: Just, you know, for further clarification, by striking out "variable market rate" and substituting "variable default rate," do you think, in your opinion, that consumers will benefit from this change? That's the clarification I want from you.

Mr. Hale: Yeah. That's exactly it. Some of the power players in the province have told me that they would like to see a variable default rate so that it's clear for the consumer.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the amendment?
Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill. The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I have an amendment that I'd like to introduce and move.

The Chair: Okay. If you would just pause for a moment, hon. member, we'll have that circulated.

Hon. members, we'll refer to this amendment as A2.

Hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, you may proceed.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I move that the bill be amended as follows. Section 2 is amended in the proposed section 149.1 (a) in subsection (1) by striking out "6 months" and substituting "8 months" and (b) by striking out subsection (2) and submitting the following:

- (2) The report of the Commission must include
 - (a) a proposed standardized bill for customers that identifies all electric energy and non-energy charges or credits, and
 - (b) proposed amendments to this Act and any related enactment, including the Regulated Rate Option Regulation (AR 262/2005), which must include the replacement of the term "regulated rate" with "variable market rate" or another term that the Commission determines accurately reflects the variable nature of the rate for electricity charged to customers under the regulated rate tariff.

And, finally, by striking out subsection (4) and substituting the following:

- (4) In this section, "customer" means an eligible customer who is not receiving electricity services from a retailer.

Mr. Chair, extending from six months to eight months was negotiated so the commission could take a little bit of extra time to look into this. The matter is actually quite complicated though it might seem simple to many legislators here. In the issue we just debated, industry did have some concerns on the prescriptive nature of what to call the other option, whether it be the variable market rate or the variable default rate. What I've done in this amendment is kept the language but allowed the commission to come up with another term that would satisfy the industry. What I found was that some industry members could not agree on what it should be called. It's going to take a little bit of consultation to come up with something that's acceptable to most and to reflect exactly what it should be called.

Now, I changed also "fixed and variable costs" in the bill to "energy and non-energy charges or credits" to better reflect what happens in the industry and to allow the commission time to figure out how it is going to standardize the bill.

Again, one of the things I did remove was the mandate of tabling the report. Unlike an investigative report, this is something that the ministry actually wants. It is something that the Market Surveillance Administrator already agrees on. There's a lot of confusion around the billing of utility bills to customers, and they're not able to make choices. What we've done is that we've simplified the bill a little bit, and we've identified exactly how the commission, the Alberta Utilities Commission, should proceed to try to standardize the billing so they can provide a standardized billing process so that customers can be better informed. That's the goal here, to give the commission the flexibility to better inform consumers.

That is the essence of this amendment, and I ask all members to support this. This is something that I have talked with industry and with the ministry and with the commission about on how to proceed, and this is something that the Market Surveillance Administrator would like to see come forward.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Speaking to the amendment, to amendment A2.

Mr. Kang: Mr. Chair, I just want to get a little clarification. Has the industry given any indication to the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre what that term will be called? Have they given you an indication what that will be called, the new term you're looking for? Will it confuse things, or will it be simple? What will that be?

The Chair: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Yeah. This goes to both amendments just brought forward and why we don't want to be too prescriptive. Right now it's called the regulated rate option, and I proposed "variable market rate." Industry is not necessarily in alignment, so I want to leave that up to the commission. It is their sole responsibility for clarity. I did not want this act to be so prescriptive that we could miss out on the possibility of clarity. The idea is to leave it open for the commission to consult and give it the best possible description so that consumers can make better choices.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there other speakers to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the bill? The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. I'm just bringing this on behalf of the Minister of Energy on Bill 201. The changes being requested on Bill 201 focus on making consumers' electricity bills easy to understand. Others include showing the details on bills for consumers currently on the regulated rate option and changing the name of the regulated rate option, also known as RRO, or the monthly rate of electricity.

The bill also asks for the Alberta Utilities Commission to be involved in the RRO name change and to submit a report proposing a revised electricity bill for RRO customers that identifies all charges and credits clearly.

Amendments being recommended on the bill: section (1), changing the timelines for the Alberta Utilities Commission to provide a report to eight months instead of the proposed six months. This change will give the commission . . .

The Chair: If I may, hon. minister, are you proposing an amendment, or are you just speaking to the amendment that was just dealt with?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Just speaking in general.

The Chair: Please carry on. Thank you.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair.

This change will give the commission time to complete their work, including consultations to see what customers need. We need to take into consideration the resources capacity of AUC given other demands. The AUC has various other proceedings under way, and we do not want resources taken away from the AUC's core business. Also, the AUC has a critical role in making timely decisions on the siting of power plants and major electricity and natural gas transmission facilities; regulation of investor-owned electric, natural gas, and water utilities; and adjudication on market and operational rules.

Replacing section (2) of the bill clarifies the standard components of a bill and allows the AUC to recommend a new name for the regulated rate option based on consumer feedback. The changes will allow for a bill that is clear and easy to understand and that will show all energy and nonenergy credits.

The RRO sounds like a rate protected by government. In reality, the RRO is a variable rate that changes every month. If the AUC is to provide a report with recommendations, then it would be consistent to have the AUC also propose a replacement name for the regulated rate option. The amendment clarifies that the AUC may propose a change to the name of the regulated rate option. The AUC will consult with stakeholders and consumers to come up with a name that explains the rate.

The new section (4) clarifies that the commission's report is to only apply to customers on the regulated rate option and not those who have chosen a competitive retailer. In the original wording of the bill it's not clear if standardized bills applied only to regulated-rate consumer bills or also to customers that choose a competitive retailer. The amendment clarified that standardized bills would only apply to regulated rate option customers' bills. Competitive retailers provide competitive prices, and AUC cannot impose the kind of bill private companies or retailers use for their services and customers.

In conclusion, Mr. Chair, a safe, reliable, cost-effective, environmentally responsible electricity system is a key priority, and I thank the member for his foresight and his support to improve electricity choices for Albertans across the province.

3:30

The Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.
Are there other speakers?

Hon. Members: Question.

The Chair: The question has been called.

[The remaining clauses of Bill 201 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

Hon. Deputy Government House Leader, did you wish to move that the committee rise and report?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Yes, I'd like to move that the committee rise and report Bill 201.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration Bill 201. The committee reports Bill 201 with some amendments. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I ask for unanimous consent to proceed to third reading of Bill 201.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 201 Electric Utilities (Transparency in Billing) Amendment Act, 2014

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, members of the Assembly. The Market Surveillance Administrator recently reported that information available to Albertans on the cost of electricity is inadequate, insufficient, unclear, and confusing. The report went on to say that lack of accurate information about the cost of residential electricity contracts makes it difficult for householders to choose the lowest cost energy provider. In its State of the Market 2014 report the MSA stated that it has the "view that the tools currently available... are inadequate to facilitate easy, accurate comparisons."

Electricity providers seldom disclose administration fee charges, which vary widely from utility to utility, and don't provide comparisons of the all-in cost of electricity generation, transmission, and distribution. The intent of this bill is to improve disclosure and transparency of the all-in costs included in the ancillary cost of a utility bill. This bill will help consumers to become better informed and better equipped to compare options in a very complicated market.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Are there other speakers on third reading of Bill 201?
Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 201 read a third time]

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading

Bill 203
Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures)
Amendment Act, 2014

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and congratulations to the mover of Bill 201. Good work.

It's an honour for me to rise today to speak to Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014. The purpose of Bill 203 is to enhance and amend the Safety Codes Act, accepting proposals provided in the 2015 edition of the national building code, sir. The proposals we speak to today relate to the height of wood structures. Bill 203 would amend the Safety Codes Act, under which the building code regulation is made, to allow buildings of wood construction to be built to a maximum of six storeys, or 18 metres. Our goal is to adopt in its entirety the code proposals for six-storey wood constructions as proposed in the 2015 edition of the national building code.

Mr. Speaker, this government believes that consumers should have access to a variety of choices when it comes to housing in Alberta, and I agree. Today we are facing many challenges as our population continues to increase. This means that infrastructure is a key priority to ensure that we are meeting the needs of Albertans now and into the future. Bill 203 will ensure a commitment to safe, sound, and affordable structure development and will contribute to the growth and prosperity of municipalities and communities across Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, I had a support letter from the mayor of Whitecourt. At this time I'd like to read it into the introduction.

Our community's history and heritage is entrenched in the forest industry, and the economic and social impact this industry has in our community is immense. Most notably, our community was recognized nationally for two years in a row as the "Forest Capital of Canada" for the strong commitment both the community and local industry have made to enhancing and sustaining the industry. Bill 203 will provide greater market opportunities for our local industry, further enhancing the economic viability of not only the Town of Whitecourt but also the Province of Alberta.

The Deputy Speaker: And you'll table that later, hon. member? Tomorrow?

Mr. VanderBurg: I tabled it earlier.

The Deputy Speaker: Oh, you did. Wonderful. Thank you.

Mr. VanderBurg: Bill 203 will ensure a commitment to safe, sound, and affordable structure development. Mr. Speaker, this bill will allow contractors and all approved parties of the construction project to utilize wood as building material as long as the building does not exceed six storeys, or 18 metres, in height and the materials used meet national and provincial engineering standards. The changes we are proposing today have been studied, tested, and approved across various professional disciplines, and Alberta can be certain that its safety is and always will be the most important priority in all the proposed code changes in our province.

By increasing the permissible height for the buildings made of wood, we give contractors more affordable options when undertaking low- to mid-rise building projects, increasing consumer confidence throughout Alberta. By aligning ourselves with the best industry practices, we ensure that the industry professionals are able to provide Albertans with the best options in affordable and safe housing.

Mr. Speaker, as some may already know, the city of Calgary announced in November that they would be accepting building permit applications for six-storey wood-frame buildings for already approved land-use zones. This decision came after two years of participating in engagement with industry and responding to the public review comments regarding the national building code. The goal of accepting six-storey standards is to provide more options to industry and communities to address the housing crunch that Calgary is experiencing while also considering the overall safety of its residents. This is an example of industry working together to push new initiatives in building standards, and I applaud them for their efforts. Calgary has also been adamant in taking advantage of the association of cost savings with wood construction. Up to 20 per cent is what's proposed.

I believe it's important that we move on this initiative and align Alberta building codes with current standards being used across Canada. Mr. Speaker, B.C. has adopted six-storey wood buildings since 2009, and Ontario will be accepting the same standards in 2015. Since 2009 B.C. has built over 50 six-storey wood buildings.

Mr. Speaker, earlier I tabled some documents of support. The Alberta Forest Products Association:

"This is great news for the [Alberta] forest industry and for Alberta's economy," said AFPA President and CEO Paul Whittaker. "Wooden midrise buildings are faster and more economical to construct, far less carbon intensive, and use a renewable, locally-sourced material. Using wood also supports a major part of Alberta's economy and provides jobs in communities throughout the province."

As well, the Canadian Home Builders' Association endorses building plans for six-storey residential structures.

Building with wood can reduce costs by 15 to 20 per cent, a significant savings at a time when the cost of buying a home is rising out of reach of young people and families [across Alberta]. This innovation can also help municipalities reach their targets for higher density by allowing more units to be constructed on sites that were previously limited to four storeys, said Jim Rivait, CEO of Canadian Home Builders' Association – Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I look forward to hearing from the rest of the hon. members from all sides of the House on the debate of Bill 203.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would like to offer my congratulations to the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre. As Winston Churchill famously said at one time, "He is the only . . . bull I know who carries his [own] china closet with him." But I appreciate the fact that he has been able to get this done and done swiftly. Congratulations.

Mr. Speaker, I'm happy today to rise and support Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014. This bill seeks to increase the maximum height for wood structures to six storeys from the current limit of four. There are a number of good reasons to support this bill. Wood construction is a cheaper alternative to other types of construction. Not only are the buildings less expensive to construct, but this would mean that more units can be constructed on the same site, further reducing costs. Estimates are that the cost of the building can be reduced by 15 to 20 per cent when wood construction is used. This can help builders to provide more affordable housing at a time when our province is struggling to meet the demands of our fast-growing populations, and this is great for both new neighbourhoods and for infill projects.

In Calgary we typically have a vacancy rate of around 1 per cent. This has put some extraordinary pressures on the city for a long time. Finding affordable, available housing is sometimes next to impossible. Earlier this year Calgary and Edmonton saw fixed-sample rental rates rise by up to 6 per cent, a reality that is hardest on our low-income residents and also keeps people from moving to Alberta. We simply need more space. On top of the benefit of increased housing this bill will also support Alberta's forestry industry, which provides renewable building materials.

This change to the Safety Codes Act follows similar changes by British Columbia and Ontario and is in line with the recommendations of the national building code of Canada for 2015.

I would like to recognize that there are some legitimate concerns about safety. I understand that there is a need for the installation of more automatic sprinklers in these structures and that water pressure to feed those systems must be adequate. This means that these buildings aren't appropriate for every community in the province, but given the presence of and use of appropriate safety standards, this is a good solution to a big problem that Alberta is facing.

I would like to thank the member for bringing this bill forward, and we will be supporting it. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I recognize the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I won't cite the same facts that have already been cited. I rise to support this bill for all the logical reasons that have already been given but mostly because I don't own just one chainsaw; I own three chainsaws. I support the forestry industry. I always have supported the forestry industry. It is a renewable resource, and it's one of our greatest economic drivers in this province right now. This legislation helps our own local industries. Not only that, it does address certain other needs with low-cost alternatives. There's a whole lot of things that are good about this bill. I will tell you that the industry and Alberta Forest Products Association support this bill because it supports them.

To the hon. member: thank you very much for introducing this. I will be supporting the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Edmonton-Calder, followed by Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise with some interest to speak about this bill. I must say that my first impression, before we did some research, was that there must have been a rule or a law that had prohibited this for a reason in the past, you know, and: what can we learn from that, and how have things changed so that a structure of six storeys made of wood is actually safe? My understanding is that there are six-storey structures made of wood already, but we have to go to a federal level to approve that height.

This bill seems to be changing that somehow. I won't repeat what many of the other speakers have said already, that there are some advantages to building with wood. Its durability is clear, its insulation capacity is clear, and it is more economical as well. There's a level of sort of a renewable aspect to wood, which is good as well. But, of course, my first instinct on this is probably, really, the reason why they in fact have not approved six-storey wood structures in the past, and that's the issue around fires.

I mean, anecdotally, I have seen a number of terrible condo fires and row housing fires that we've had here in the city of Edmonton over the last number of years, either with often large condo structures at sort of the last stages of their construction or even fires getting out of control in established buildings that have been inhabited. So I just have a real reservation about these sorts of structures unless we do something to change the way in which we provide sprinklers and safety equipment as well.

I know from the fire chief here in Edmonton, that I speak to on a fairly regular basis, that they have real concerns about modern construction and the capacity for a building to go up in flames, to be engulfed in flames. There's a standing sort of rule that you want a building to sustain, even when it is on fire, the capacity for people to get out for a number of minutes, maybe up to 20 minutes, so that lives can be saved. That's my main concern, but it seems as though my concern has been mitigated by a number of people that have said that they can sustain a safe structure at this height as long as adequate sprinkler systems and escape mechanisms and other rules are put into place about limitations on barbecues on decks and so forth.

I know that we had a terrible fire here in Edmonton not even two years ago where the fire started from flowerpot containers smouldering from cigarette butts and then burning down multistorey structures made of wood. So that's just my main concern.

I think it's not unfair to be obsessive about fire, and I think that is the main question that I put forward to the mover of this bill, to ensure that all of those precautions are met. Otherwise, I think it's actually an interesting bill, and it certainly would be something I could support if I knew that the level of safety was comparable or exceeded existing structures that we already approve here in the province of Alberta.

Thanks a lot.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the Minister of Energy.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise on Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014, brought forward by the Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne. There are two parts to the bill. The bill proposes increasing the demand for lumber to increase housing affordability. Since the member hails from the Whitecourt area, which has been named the forest capital of Canada for the last two years, it's likely that his motivations stem mostly from the former, but this is going to make housing affordable for young families, for new immigrants, and for newcomers to Alberta.

In Surrey the condos are built from wood. They are selling from $300 to $370 per square foot compared to concrete buildings which are selling from $425 to $450 per square foot. This is an innovative way to make housing more affordable for Albertans, Mr. Speaker, because wood is easier and cheaper to build with than concrete or steel. Homebuyers will have access to more housing options at a larger range of price points.

As the housing market is getting really, really tight and rent is getting very expensive, it's just getting to be way out of reach for most new families or one-income earners for the building that I live in. The regulations say that, you know, we should only be spending 30 per cent of our gross income on housing, but the rent has gone up so much, and some families are spending almost 40 to 50 per cent of their income on rent, Mr. Speaker.

Allowing six-storey wood construction will increase the demand for lumber and should help stimulate the province's economy and the province's forestry and construction industries, Mr. Speaker, which I think is badly needed in light of what is happening with oil prices. Other provinces are already doing this, and Canada's national building and fire codes will soon permit this as well starting in January 2015. In Alberta the city of Calgary already accepts building permit applications for six-storey, wood-frame buildings, and the province needs to catch up. With this bill, I think we will be catching up with other jurisdictions.

As a renewable and recyclable and environmentally sustainable building material, we should be encouraging the use of wood in more applications. This is going to make housing more affordable for young and new families, as I've said before, Mr. Speaker.

My concern is about the fires and the safety of firefighters, you know, in case the building is on fire. Those are the concerns that I have with wood-frame buildings, Mr. Speaker. If those concerns are somehow mitigated or addressed, that would be great. I hope there will be stricter fire regulations that those buildings will have to meet. I am concerned about the hallways, elevators, and staircases. How safe and fireproof will they be? As long as the firefighters are safe fighting those fires – you know, safety is paramount. As long as safety is met, I think that would be great. Overall, this is a good bill, and the Alberta Liberal caucus and I will be supporting this bill, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a real honour to rise and speak to this bill today. To express to you how I feel about the bill, I need to tell you a little bit about my relationship with wood and with forestry. I graduated school in 1975, and after a brief stint at the University of British Columbia, where I majored in significant rock concerts of the Pacific Northwest – my parents were proud – I left university, and I went to college to study forest technology. I did so for two reasons. One, my father was in the sawmill business, and I knew a little bit about the sawmill business at the time, but, secondly, I just simply loved wood. My father was always into woodworking, and I did it myself. I absolutely loved wood, and that was the start of a career.

So I went to college, the College of New Caledonia. I did a forest technologist program and did a speciality in forest resource harvesting technology, so harvesting systems, road and bridge construction, that kind of thing. It started a lifelong love of forestry, and I did a number of years with the B.C. Forest Service, mostly in the protection divisions, so I was a firefighter. That's where I met my wife. She was the first female forest fire helitack firefighter in B.C., and we worked together. I worked a number of years. In addition to fire, I worked on the mountain pine beetle program in British Columbia.

I came to a point in my career with the B.C. Forest Service where I didn't feel I was going to achieve what I wanted, so I left, and I went to university. I went to the University of New Brunswick for five years and completed a degree in forestry. I worked in forestry in New Brunswick and northern Quebec, did undergrad research work – I had an NSERC research scholarship as an undergrad – and I absolutely loved it. I met some just incredible people in the industry, in academia, just amazing. I've always loved it.

So I got my degree, and I left, and I was on my way back home and never made it. I actually stopped on the way home to B.C. to visit a project in Peace River, and I never made it past that, Mr. Speaker. I became a professional forester in Alberta, registered with the college, and I became a planner, forest management plans for Diashowa-Marubeni, the pulp mill in Peace River. Moving through other positions there, I wound up as their senior forestry adviser. Through all of that, I enforced the fact in my own mind – and I hope in a lot of other people's minds – that wood is an absolutely incredible material. It is a sustainable, renewable material, and it is absolutely beautiful. To this day I still love it.

If anybody in this Chamber has never had the opportunity to go to Calgary's Canada Olympic Park and have a look at Hockey Canada's facility there, do so. In there you'll find the world's longest curved glulam beams. They're just an absolute work of art, and they're made of wood. I should probably point out that glulam beams in that application perform better than steel does in roof girders. In a fire a steel beam, as soon as it gets hot, will fail. A wood beam will snap and crack, and it'll stay there for hours and hours. It performs better than steel, Mr. Speaker. It's an absolutely amazing material.

I am so proud to have spent my life in forestry, in a career that I was proud of and never regretted for a minute. I was proud to embark as well on a second career, Mr. Speaker, as an MLA. I'm very proud that I was elected to represent my constituents. But I've never forgotten my first profession, one that meant so much to me.

In my first profession as a forester I still have some requirements. As a registered forester you have to do certain things, and one is educate and inform the public because forestry in Canada is a public resource. In this second career that I love I've never forgotten that first obligation. I've obviously had the opportunity in my career here, serving briefly as the minister of SRD but always being involved in some natural resource policy position here, to be involved in forestry. Every once in a while, actually quite frequently, those two careers collide, and I get to talk about representing my constituents and talk about forestry, and those are great days, indeed. I've had significant opportunity to have input in natural resource policy.

Today is one of those days, Mr. Speaker, and I want to congratulate the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne and the forest industry as well for this bill that's before us today.

This is, unfortunately, new to us, Mr. Speaker. These buildings have been going up around the world, actually higher than six storeys. Unquestioned safety record.

I'm very, very proud to support this bill and, in fact, urge all my colleagues in this House to do the same. I would say: do it because it's safe, or do it because wood is an absolutely excellent insulator. It's one of the best natural insulators there is. Do it because wood is a truly sustainable, renewable product. Do it because the production of wood has a very low carbon footprint. It's a very environmentally responsible business. Do it because when you harvest wood and manufacture wood products, all of the residual material is used; nothing is wasted. Do it because the harvesting of wood leads to regeneration and the production of future habitat out there. That's our opportunity to ecologically manage our landscape going forward, the use of the forest industry on this landscape. It's very important. Mostly, do it because wood is beautiful. It's an incredible material. We should use more of it.

I thank the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne for the bill and for the opportunity to speak to it today.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there other speakers? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise today to speak to Bill 203, the Safety Codes Amendment Act, 2014, brought forward by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. Alberta is a province that is bountiful in its natural resources, and one of these resources, obviously, is our forests. Lumber is one of our most abundant renewable resources and has been a vital component for construction in this province.

As our urban areas expand, we look to build higher so that we can deal with the higher population densities, making cities and towns more sustainable. Wood is an abundant, renewable, local product that can reduce the cost of a building, conserving our more expensive materials like concrete. Unfortunately, current legislation restricts the construction of wood buildings to nine metres or three to four storeys. Bill 203 would amend building code regulation 117/2007, allowing wooden buildings to be built to a height of 18 metres or six storeys. This comes on the heels of recommendations by the national building code of Canada to raise the maximum building code to 18 metres. There's been a movement across the country to use wood in construction of mid-rise buildings. Initial skepticism has led to increased safety provisions included in Bill 203. The code proposes including mandatory provisions for standard life safety features, sprinkler systems and fire protection materials.

This legislation is not just about cheaper housing. It is about allowing the use of materials other than plastic, steel, glass, or concrete. If passed, Bill 203 will allow builders to use less of these materials on six-storey buildings in favour of wood. In doing so, we can conserve costly and limited-time materials like concrete and plastic for building large infrastructure. According to recent Alberta Treasury Board and Finance population projection figures Alberta's total population is projected to reach 6.2 million by 2041. This will put a significant burden on already tight housing markets in our province. Furthermore, it will make the cost of buying a house drastically increase. However, Bill 203 has the potential to alleviate some of these problem by making high-density housing cheaper and easier to build. This shift is expected to reduce the cost for people entering the housing market. Specifically, it is expected to lower the cost of construction by 15 to 20 per cent. This has a great potential value for building affordable housing across the province of Alberta.

It's also very beneficial for the forestry industry, whose work will likely make a huge difference in my constituency of Grande Prairie-Smoky. Mr. Speaker, I firmly believe that Bill 203 has the potential to positively affect our economy. As you may know, my constituency is heavily involved in the forestry sector. Grande Prairie-Smoky contains several lumber mills, including Canfor, Weyerhaeuser, Ainsworth, and Millar Western. For the people of my constituency the use of wood as a building material means one fundamental, and that's jobs. Having a chance to use more domestic products locally will benefit our forestry sector and create wonderful opportunities for the constituency and all of Alberta.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Allowing our forestry industry to grow will also help spur innovation in our province. The development of new technologies will make our province stronger internationally. This innovation can come from both the forestry and the construction industries. For example, in Grande Prairie there has been a recent advancement regarding a new saw head. In order to adhere to new safety standards, industry will need to create a different approach for the use of wood. Being able to develop solutions at home that also work abroad adds value to the entire lumber industry and will help to further highlight our industry.

Finally, I'd like to point out that Bill 203 would help make building materials in our province more sustainable. It will do so by using wood for construction. I'm sure it is quite an obvious point but nonetheless an important one that the renewable resource of wood has an abundant supply. Alberta is covered by about 38 million hectares of forest. As a result, we have access to a large supply of domestic lumber. This will allow the use of expensive materials for large construction projects that need them while using wood under six storeys. This will also conserve resources for smaller buildings.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 will help us utilize our resources more effectively and also make the work of ESRD much easier and even more valuable. Bill 203 offers Alberta a creative way to conserve nonrenewable building materials and access available local resources while creating jobs and keeping Alberta safe. For the people of Grande Prairie-Smoky this represents the potential for a significant boost in the use of local labour and resources.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank everyone for allowing me the time to speak today and supporting this bill. I commend the Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne for his bill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, please.

Mr. Casey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and participate in the discussion on Bill 203, Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, brought forward by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. I want to thank the hon. member for bringing this bill forward and for being a promoter of sustainable construction and building safety.

If passed, Bill 203 will amend the Safety Codes Act, which falls under the building code regulation. This amendment would increase Alberta's access to a comprehensive range of selection in building construction. The amendment would allow the use of wood in construction of buildings to a maximum height of six storeys or 18 metres. This bill would put into motion certain policies that were brought about in the 2015 edition of the national building code.

Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to see the hon. member advocating for Alberta to remain modern and current in terms of infrastructure for the province. Presently the Alberta building code states that all wood buildings have a height restriction of nine metres, which is approximately three to four storeys. That restriction dates back to 2006 when it appeared in the national building code, but the national building code has been modernized. As I stated previously, the newly released standards for 2015 propose a height of 18 metres, which doubles the previous standard. Other provinces have already followed in the federal government's footsteps. Provinces like British Columbia, Quebec, and Ontario have already made changes to their standards. Alberta, however, currently trails behind. It's time for Alberta to catch up with the other provinces. I support the hon. member for bringing this issue to the forefront.

Mr. Speaker, this is an important issue for my constituents of Banff-Cochrane. We live, especially in the Bow Valley, in an incredibly fragile and environmentally sensitive area. Allowing a reduced footprint, therefore higher density, will accommodate the growing housing needs in our community but, at the same time, reduce the footprint in an already fragile and stressed environment.

From a municipal perspective, Mr. Speaker, if public transit is ever to succeed in our major urban centres and our smaller urban centres, for that matter, we need to have the densities to allow that to happen. Six-storey structures that are affordable because of their wood construction are an absolute necessity if we're going to see public transit succeed and remove many of the vehicles from our roads.

Mr. Speaker, the Alberta government has demonstrated its commitment to principles of sustainable forest management and responsible stewardship. This has been done through development of rigorous legislation and policies: policies for protection, for conservation, and for the sustainable management of forests. Government foresters and biologists work alongside forest industry representatives to develop long-term plans that ensure that forest capital is maintained for future generations. I'm proud to say that Spray Lake Sawmills operates in our constituency of Banff-Cochrane, and they are a great example of forest stewardship and forward thinking. They are constantly moving ahead, exploring new methods to reduce the impact that forestry has on our landscape.

The forestry sector is an integral part of our provincial economy. It will continue to play an important role in the diversification of Alberta's economy and Alberta's prosperity. Bill 203 would build on this success. The Alberta forestry sector is a vital part of dozens of communities around the province, providing employment for some 13,000 people, about 400 of those in my constituency, Mr. Speaker. The forestry industry in Alberta creates billions of dollars each year for the provincial economy. Forest products produced in Alberta range from commodity lumber to market pulp, from animal bedding materials to a variety of engineered wood products. Companies in this sector also provide ecosystem services like land-use planning, reclamation, and carbon sequestration.

I'm very pleased to stand here today, Mr. Speaker, in support of Bill 203. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I did have an opportunity to talk with the Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne when this bill first came out, and I took a look at it. One of the things that concerned me about the bill was that it did not address the requirement for sprinkler systems in the building. I got a suitable answer back, I felt, that that would have to be another change in the Safety Codes Act and dealt with through Municipal Affairs, probably. So I'm happy with that response, and I'm pleased to support the bill.

Alberta should not be lagging behind others in increasing choices for builders, owners, and developers. Wood is a low-cost, green, renewable construction material which would support Alberta's forestry industry, and we all want to see that happen. The fact is that it's renewable like a crop you plant and harvest. It lowers construction costs probably 12 to 20 per cent, somewhere in there, over other materials, and can be erected more quickly than concrete or steel, saving time and money for developers. The initiative furthers the whole scope of providing affordable housing by increasing the density.

I had some concern regarding smaller communities and how they would respond to this. I think the smaller communities kind of fixed the problem themselves. Fire departments would have to have ladder trucks and so on. They'd have to have a sufficient water supply to supply a full sprinkler system. I think that kind of cures itself, so I'm not so concerned about that anymore.

It harmonizes the laws of Alberta with the laws of British Columbia as a member of the New West Partnership. As I've said before, it supports Alberta's forest products sector and provides construction material close to the source.

With that, I think all the other comments have been made, but I do support the bill and will be voting in favour of it. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mrs. Towle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise today to speak to Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014, brought forward by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. I commend the hon. member for his continued service and dedication to the bill that we speak of today. Bill 203 proposes to amend the building code regulations to allow wood constructions to a maximum of six storeys or 18 metres. The intent of the bill is to adopt code proposals for the allowable height of wood construction to six storeys as proposed in the 2015 edition of the national building code. This bill brought forward will ensure a commitment to safe, sound, and affordable infrastructure development in this province, much of which we've heard support for from many members in this House. These factors are important to the growth and prosperity of municipalities and communities across Alberta, and I'm proud to rise and support it today.

Many jurisdictions have already begun to implement the standards allowing for six-storey wood construction. The city of Calgary will be the first jurisdiction in Canada to accept the proposed changes to the 2015 building code standards, that suggest that six-storey wood construction is safe, sound, and an affordable building material. Sustainability is also an important aspect to using wood as a construction material, and I believe that by raising the allowable height for buildings constructed of wood, we are paving the way for affordable and sustainable infrastructure projects, which benefit all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, Ontario recently approved changes to the Ontario building code to allow for what they have called wood-frame construction for buildings up to six storeys. There have been two bills introduced in their Legislature supporting this initiative, with no luck in passing due to a prorogued government, but the Ontario government understands the benefits of raising the allowable height for wood-constructed infrastructure in their province. Height increases in Ontario have finally been approved and will be effective on January 1, 2015. These changes will bring the province to similar standards set in British Columbia as well as several jurisdictions in the United States and in the European Union.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 is simple. This is a housekeeping bill that will allow stakeholders to follow an updated Alberta building code that is technically in line with national standards. I believe that it is important to all of our industries that will be affected by these changes. The changes being proposed here today will offer designers new opportunities for innovation that will help municipalities meet urban densification plans and create more affordable housing options.

Mr. Speaker, that is the part of the bill that is most important to me. The cost and the time allocations that are currently in place do not allow for enough affordable housing, and there's clearly a crisis of affordable housing in this province. Just as we have, Ontario, B.C., and now Calgary have realized the benefits experienced by adopting the national proposed changes to the building code regulations. Executive director for Ontario Wood Works!, Marianne Berube, said that they are looking forward to the new mid-rise buildings that will be created as a result of the recent amendments. Natural Resources and Forestry minister Bill Mauro mentioned that one of his main goals in the January 2015 legislation is the jobs that will be created through the expanded use of a sustainable resource.

This simply shows that the benefits of adopting the proposal to increase the height for buildings made of wood construction can have benefits that spread across a range of different industries. Over the years experts in Ontario have been following the controversial height changes to wood-constructed buildings. Early last year a group of Ontario engineers and architects toured half a dozen new British Columbia condo developments where they have been pushing the limits of wood construction since the Wood First Act of '09. Steven Street of Wood Works! Ontario was among the group that travelled to B.C. By the end of that trip Mr. Street claimed that what B.C. had done was fantastic. They had been successful in building nice and affordable places to live.

Mr. Speaker, today we speak to the same initiative in Bill 203. By increasing the permissible height for buildings constructed of wood, we are impacting the industry in a positive way, allowing more affordable projects to be completed in a considerably shorter period of time. Further to Ontario experts travelling to B.C., it was realized that upwards of 170 wood building projects were being constructed at the time. Ontario was able to see first-hand that by removing the barriers to using materials other than plastic, steel, glass, and concrete, the industry was able to flourish in a way that benefited consumers, retailers, and users.

Tad Putyra, chief executive developer of Great Gulf homes' low-rise division in Ontario, stated that most importantly, six-storey wood construction can be as much as 20 per cent cheaper than traditional concrete and steel and far faster to build. This is going to make huge improvements in affordable housing initiatives. Mr. Putyra outlined that much of the materials can even be prefabricated and constructed on-site, which is a huge efficiency that affects the overall costs.

Mr. Speaker, wood construction has been very popular, very respected, and very successful for many years in other jurisdictions, not only in Canada but also across the globe. I believe that there is an increasing demand for affordable low-rise infrastructure in this province as our population continues to rise. Alberta's population growth is rising at a steady rate, and it is our responsibility to address the needs that result from this growth, including increased demands for jobs and affordable housing. Bill 203 will ensure that we are able to meet these demands while showing our continued support of industry professionals and experts that have been waiting for these changes for years. As we look at the proposed changes to the Safety Codes Act in this bill and consider the potential advantages that would be experienced in this province, as they have been in others, I see no reason that we do not move forward with this initiative.

As I have already mentioned, Alberta's population is increasing at a very rapid and consistent pace. It is, again, our responsibility to make sure that we have the appropriate infrastructure in place to meet the population demands that our province will soon be facing. I believe that Bill 203, brought forward by the hon. member, is steering us in the right direction. I will support this bill, and I would like to thank the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne for proposing the bill that will see benefits in industries and for everyday Albertans across this province for years to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by Edmonton-South West.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand up and actually support Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014. I just want to start off by saying that it's been a while in this House since I've seen legislation, private members' bills pass so quickly through the Legislature. We've seen Bill 202 pass very, very quickly, and now we're on to Bill 203. What's even more interesting to me is that we're finally starting to get some debate from the government members, which I think is nice to see, actually. I would like to see more of that if we could when we're talking about government bills. I think that's more important than anything when we're debating some of the government bills that are crossing this floor back and forth.

If we could take what we're seeing today and what we've seen in the past, other than Bill 201, what we saw in Bill 202 and Bill 203, government members standing up and speaking – maybe we'll hopefully see that tonight when we're dealing with Bill 9, the condominium act, and some of those. I know that there is some real concern outside of this Legislature from stakeholders on Bill 9. I know that our Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills is going to be providing several amendments on that particular bill. So I'm looking forward to seeing some good discussion tonight.

I have to say that the conversation I've heard so far on Bill 203 has been interesting. I loved the comments from the minister when he talked about his experience as a forest technologist I think was his word and his love for wood. I actually am reading a book right now called The Boys in the Boat, which talks about construction with wood and building a boat and their win in regard to the 1934 Olympics and the love for wood that the particular trainer had when these young fellows were paddling – I guess that's what it's called – and what wood can do and the type of wood.

Our Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne I've known for a long time and actually have a great deal of respect for him. When I was sitting as a member of the government, he was talking to me about the importance of forest technology and some of the forest companies that are in his area and the importance of the forest technology to this province. Obviously, the wood is what we're centred on in this bill about affordable infrastructure development and its conduciveness to the growth and prosperity of municipalities and communities across Alberta. Anyone who is involved in this Legislature knows the importance of bringing affordable housing into this province.

I am, honestly, the last person that should be standing up and talking about building anything because anything that has anything to do with building or technology I end up breaking. So I'm not the best person in the world to talk about making anything with wood, making anything with anything, quite frankly. My husband always says: whatever you do, don't let my wife touch anything to do with technology. I needed to get a photocopy of something, and I said to the young page, "You do not want me touching that because I will break it, honestly. So if you could just sort of show me through the process." Anybody who knows me as an MLA knows that everything I touch breaks.

I like the idea of what he's doing. One of the things that I hope the member will stand up and speak to, which I'm a little concerned about – and I'm sure he has the right answers – is fires. Wood burns very, very rapidly. I hope the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne is paying attention, that he will talk, stand up, and tell me about the safety of wood, because I'm concerned about fire. Anyone who has seen forest fires knows how quickly wood can burn. I'm sure he has the right answer, honestly. I can't imagine this particular individual would talk about wood construction and wood homes and what we're talking about – it's an increasing choice for builders, owners, developers. It's low cost; it's green; it's renewable construction. I haven't heard anybody talk to me about the safety factors yet. I may have missed that. I can imagine that some of the fire and safety industry people are not fully supportive of taller wood buildings, and I need to understand why they are not supportive of that. Is it because of fire? The six-storey wood construction requires more sprinklers, obviously, because it burns quicker. Concealed areas could be a problem.

I guess for me the process of allowing this bill to go forward is key. It makes a lot of sense to me. I understand that B.C. has had six-storey wood construction since 2009, so obviously the member can talk to us about how that's developed in B.C. Has there been any fire hazard? Are there some problems that B.C. has seen since they implemented this in 2009? I know – and it's been brought forward in the past – that Mr. Stanley, who's the general manager of planning development and assessment for Calgary, likes the idea.

I'm worried about the zero lot lines that we see going up, especially in Calgary, and how close a proximity we're seeing homes together. One sees the fires that we see going on now just with the construction that homes are currently built under. I guess for me that's my biggest concern. I'm sure that the member has the answers for me. I just haven't heard what those answers are, how you're going to prepare for that. We talk about – and I brought this up just earlier – the need for more automatic sprinklers. I guess that with forest products and wood products I really would like to hear what the member has to say when we're in second reading. Is he going to address the concerns of the fire and safety people? If I may, that's what I'd like to say. I like where he's going with this. I don't think anybody can say that we don't need affordable housing. If he would address the issues of fire, I'd be more than pleased to continue speaking in support of this.

Mr. Jeneroux: I'll be brief, Mr. Speaker, but I would like to rise today to speak to Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014, and I would like to thank the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne for bringing forward this bill. Bill 203 amends the Safety Codes Act, under which the building code regulation allows wood buildings to be built to a maximum of six storeys, 18 metres.

You can never talk enough about wood, Mr. Speaker. I'm sure the hon. member pined over the intent to adopt the code proposals for six-storey wood buildings as proposed by the national building code 2015.

Mr. Speaker, I believe strongly that Albertans should have choices when it comes to construction materials as long as the construction is safe. Wood was once tossed aside in favour of steel and concrete for mid- and high-rise buildings, but now new information is waking us up to the potential of wood construction once again.

Understanding the potential of wood products is simply about knowing the bare facts. There have been "tree-mendous" numbers of studies and reports, Mr. Speaker, showing that six-storey wood construction can be safe. Many of those reports have been issued in Canada. The Canadian Commission on Building and Fire Codes, CCBFC, has looked closely at the 2010 national building and fire codes of Canada; specifically, the restriction of wood buildings to four storeys in height.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, a joint task force was established in 2011 which would lead to the review of current requirements and make recommendations. The task group ensured that the matter was studied extensively. Four specific areas were examined: fire protection, emergency response, building and plumbing services, and structural and earthquake design. The task group concluded that the height and aerial limits for buildings constructed of combustible materials could safely be increased to six storeys.

Ontario and B.C. have chosen to allow six-storey framed construction, and I understand, Mr. Speaker, they have been very "poplar."

Bill 203 would allow Alberta to take advantage of this trend to the benefit of those who live, work, and build in this province. I would like to thank you for the opportunity to speak here today and would encourage all members to support this bill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Mr. Strankman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Following the dissertation from the member previous, it's going to be a knotty situation to come forward with my presentation. As a long-time agricultural producer I, too, recognize and appreciate the value of wood although where I live, in the diverse constituency of Drumheller-Stettler, poplar is not necessarily popular. It's not very tall, but willow and sagebrush, the lower growing vegetation, are.

I want to make mention of another previous member's comments regarding zero boundaries for some of this wood construction with certain height characteristics. I think that's important because in some generational societies we've seen where improperly protected wood structures can create a fire hazard. With our modern abilities for sprinkler systems and that sort of development and other modern features, there may be able to be safety presentations brought forward there. In something as significant as a six-storey wood structure that would certainly be significant.

Again, the facility of using wood is significant in that it is a renewable resource and is popular in this country and in this province. It also provides a substantive industry for the harvesting, regeneration, manufacture, and presentation of that product. I think it's an interactive source of sustenance for our society. I, too, am supportive of any innovative way that we can use regenerative products. I know that may not be a "poplar" word, but I'm trying to get it out.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for a chance to speak to this. It's an important subject for my constituents, for my constituency, and I'm pleased to have the chance to speak to that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park, followed probably by Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to add a few comments. It is a privilege to rise here today to join in the discussion on Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014, brought forward by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. I think it's important that we all spruce up our knowledge of the latest technologies with respect to the treatment of forest products and now the obvious safety of using those materials in wooden structures up to six storeys. Most of it has been said already. I think the arguments have been made.

I very much support this bill, and with that, I conclude my comments. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour. I'm not going to . . .

Mr. Eggen: Make a wood joke.

Mr. Anderson: I can't best – you know, I have no wood jokes. [interjections] No. There are too many ways that that could go wrong at this point, so I'm going to refrain from that.

I am going to stand and speak in favour of this bill. I do want to congratulate the hon. member, the hon. government whip, and say that he's done a fantastic job on this bill.

An Hon. Member: Agreed.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah. It's good that we've got agreement there.

This hon. member has, actually, a history with private members' bills. He seems to find those little gems that are just kind of things that were left out for a while that should have been done, kind of the holdouts. He finds them and gets them in through private members' bills or government legislation. This is another one.

This is a very good bill, and the reason is, in my view, that obviously we have an issue in this province. Although the economy probably will slow down a bit over the next couple of years, we will always be facing a challenge of affordable housing. That's always going to be an issue, and I think that some of the knee-jerk reaction to that sometimes when we face these issues is that, well, we have to bring in new subsidies or that we have to bring in rent controls or that we have to somehow interfere in the market in some way to look like we're doing something when, really, there are some very practical solutions that could be introduced that will lower costs for housing and let market forces allow for a lowering of costs with regard to affordable housing.

It's not just an example such as the one here. You know, I look at this issue in and around secondary suites and so forth, obviously a bit of a minefield. I know the former mayor of Edmonton would probably agree that it's a bit of a minefield with regard to secondary suites. At the end of the day, these are very simple solutions, with no cost to government to implement some of these common-sense solutions that will use market forces to lower the price of housing in a sustainable way and won't interfere in the market unduly, and I think that that's important.

As has been said here, I will say as well that one of the reasons why this is a good solution, why it will decrease the cost of construction, is, of course, that using wood lowers construction costs – the estimates vary – 12 to 20 per cent over other materials and can be put up more quickly than concrete or steel, which, of course, saves time for developers as well and, again, lowers the price of the housing. That is definitely something that I think we'll see immediate impact from going forward as, obviously, if it costs less to build something, it generally will cost less to purchase. So that is definitely a very good reason for passing this bill.

Obviously, there are some issues we're going to need to deal with. I'm assuming that this will be taken care of by other safety code regulations, but if not, they certainly should be updated. Wood is more flammable than other materials like, obviously, steel and so forth. There are different treatments that you can give wood that will minimize that risk: pressure treating and so forth, new technologies, chemicals – and there are others – things like that that make it less likely to burn. Also, of course, we already have many regulations that include sprinkler systems and so forth that should mitigate these risks.

So, yeah, I support this, hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. This is a good job. This is good work. This is quality work. Let's all give him a round of applause.

I will take my seat for the next 10 or 15 minutes, and hopefully I'd love to hear what other hon. members across the way feel about this bill. If you would, please stand. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and then Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will and I would. I'm not sure that that goes together.

It's an honour to rise today to speak to Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014, brought forward by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. I commend the hon. member for his continued dedication to the bill that I rise to speak to today.

Bill 203 proposes to amend the Safety Codes Act and the building code regulations to allow wood-constructed buildings to be built to a maximum of six storeys, or 18 metres. I would digress for a moment in that the city of Edmonton really believes this is a vitally important project. We need to find new and innovative ways to build housing in our city and across the province, so I really commend the member.

Mr. Speaker, the very intent of this bill is to adopt code proposals for increasing the allowable height of wood buildings to six storeys as outlined in the 2015 edition of the national building code. The bill being brought forward today will positively impact consumer confidence and satisfaction across the construction and housing industry here in our province and open up doors for all kinds of new housing ideas. Among the factors that will contribute to the increase in consumer satisfaction are the lower construction costs, which are vitally important, associated with wood buildings, not lesser quality but lower construction costs.

Wood Works! Alberta along with various other stakeholders operating in the industry has highlighted this as an important aspect of increasing the permissible height for wood-frame buildings. Mr. Speaker, Wood Works! Alberta is a joint program of the Alberta Forest Products Association and the Canadian Wood Council. Depending on the building design, industry experts continue to state that a 12 to 20 per cent saving is experienced when wood is utilized as a construction material. But even more than that, the time in which you can put a wood building up is substantially quicker, which saves even more.

Marco Civitarese, manager and chief building official with inspections and permit services in Calgary, continues to state the importance of updating Alberta's building code regulation for wood construction. Marco highlights that Bill 203 would save time and money, adding to consumer confidence and overall satisfaction. Mr. Speaker, by saving money on such projects, consumers and professionals are able to utilize high levels of cost savings, contributing to overall industry confidence and consumer satisfaction in Alberta. Experts confirm that when using wood as a construction material, much of it can be constructed directly on site, creating countless scenarios for high cost savings, and there are many places in Alberta right now where they're doing modular construction, that can even speed up this kind of construction by building things in a plant for six-storey buildings. The amendment we speak of today will ensure that more housing projects are completed on budget and on time.

This speaks to another positive aspect of wood as a construction material, that is outlined by experts, the facilitation of increasing urban populations. Our population totals are on the rise, with no signs of slowing. Good news. By enabling the construction of six-storey wood buildings, we are actively meeting the growing need for urban housing in this province. Mr. Speaker, this is very important to note because without affordable housing options we run amok with rising debt and we run amok of being able to attract people to our urban and rural environments. We have all been honest about this. I believe Bill 203 will have a lasting and positive impact on affordable housing across Alberta. Allowing for six-storey residential wood construction sets the stage for the construction community to offer lower cost housing for all Albertans.

Utilizing wood as a construction material also lessens our environmental impact and our overall carbon footprint. To measure this, experts focus on the overall life cycle of a building's materials, from extraction or harvest of raw materials through to manufacturing, transportation, installation, use, maintenance, disposal, and recycling. Mr. Speaker, studies consistently show that wood is far better for the environment than steel or concrete in terms of embodied energy, air and water pollution, and greenhouse gas emissions.

The forest industry has reduced waste by optimizing sawmill operations and by using wood chips and sawdust to produce paper and composite products. There are even ways to use waste for fuel for clean bioenergy. In North America wood producers are able to use 99 per cent of every tree that's harvested. That's 99 per cent of every tree that's harvested. These are astounding, positive, renewable factors that will increase the confidence of consumers. According to industry experts tree and forest products play a critical role in helping to tackle climate change and reduce greenhouse gases. In addition, using wood products that store carbon can minimize our carbon footprint over the long run. Mr. Speaker, this means that wood buildings require less energy to construct and operate over time, resulting in more cost savings for consumers.

In addition to the benefits of lower construction costs, lower carbon footprint, and the facilitation of increasing urban population is added support for Alberta's labour industry. Mr. Speaker, using wood supports people working in Alberta's forest industry. This industry is a major employer in 50 communities across the province and provides an important source of economic diversity for Alberta. Between 2011 and 2015 our forest industry will invest $1.5 billion into Alberta's economy. This translates into jobs in construction, distribution, and manufacturing and the timely creation of housing for Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, many notable jurisdictions have accepted the amendments we speak of today, and I look forward to passing a piece of legislation to provide Albertans with more of the services they need. Such provincial building standards and regulations coincide with national practices. It is time that we extend ourselves to meet best industry practices, following suit with provinces across Canada as well as our neighbours.

Calgary, especially, has been very creative in this. The city of Calgary will be adopting the six-storey standards contained in the 2015 national building code, effectively being the first jurisdiction in the country to do so. These adopted standards for six-storey building codes, since 2009, have brought tremendous feedback from industry professionals and very public support. Mr. Speaker, it is time that we embrace these same standards.

With that, I urge all my colleagues to support Bill 203 to help prepare Alberta for a lasting and prosperous economy. I'd like to thank the hon. member for sponsoring this initiative in Bill 203, and I look forward to hearing the remainder of this debate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

4:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, I believe.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today to speak to Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014, brought forward by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. I know the hon. member's intentions have always been in the best interests of Albertans, as we've heard here time and time again, and I commend him for his ongoing service and dedication to this province and his province's continued record of success. In this season, when we're trying to be naughty or nice, I guess it's all right to speak about knotty today just a little.

Bill 203 proposes to amend the building code regulation to allow wood-constructed buildings to be built to a maximum of six storeys or 18 metres. These construction projects will help build on the success of our thriving forestry industry, an industry that has provided so many people with a sustainable and rewarding place to work. Mr. Speaker, by working with our municipal partners as well as with the Ministry of Environment and Sustainable Resource Department, I believe that the needs of both our contractors and our forestry advocates will be approached in a balanced and a sensible manner.

Now, our government is and will always be humbled to serve the people of this great province, and this means being responsible stewards of our majestic forests while diversifying our markets at home and abroad. Mr. Speaker, the Alberta building code is modelled on the national building code of Canada, or the NBCC, and recently the NBCC proposed a number of changes to the building code standards. One of the proposed changes would be to allow for the construction of wood buildings exceeding nine metres, which is, of course, one of the main provisions included in Bill 203. It is anticipated that Calgary will be adopting this new standard.

As I stated earlier, there are a number of benefits to passing Bill 203. Firstly, it would mean not only expanding our forestry industry, but also we could promote a more efficient construction industry while reducing red tape. Mr. Speaker, Alberta's population is growing. We will see an approximate increase of 2.2 million people in just under three decades. This, of course, could pose a bit of an issue in terms of finding housing that will accommodate Alberta's projected growth. It's no secret why people come to our province. They come to take advantage of our strong economy and to pursue a comfortable life that is fuelled by hard work and prudent fiscal discipline. I believe that what is being proposed in Bill 203 would help with the increased demand for housing, and we must start addressing this potential issue just as soon as possible. Coming from many years of municipal experience, affordable housing has been a topic of conversation time and time again.

Of course, the one factor I want to stress is that of safety. The amendments that have been brought forward by Bill 203 have been thought out thoroughly. In 2012, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Commission on Building and Fire Codes, or the CCBFC, reviewed previous requirements that limited the height of wood buildings to no more than four storeys. A joint task force that included several CCBFC standing committees was established in 2011. They examined four areas: fire protection, emergency response, building and plumbing services, and structural earthquake design. The joint task force group later concluded that height and area limits for buildings constructed using combustible materials could safely be increased to six storeys. This decision did of course come with recommendations to either introduce new and/or modify various measures to ensure the safety of building residents.

Mr. Speaker, when you factor in all the proposed changes in Bill 203 and consider the potential socioeconomic advantages, it seems only natural that our government would support amendments to the Safety Codes Act. It is our responsibility to make sure that we have appropriate infrastructure in place to meet the population demands that our province will soon be facing. I believe that Bill 203 is taking our province in the right direction by addressing this issue.

I will proudly support this bill, and I encourage my hon. colleagues to do so as well. I thank the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne for proposing this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I believe that concludes the speaking list.

That being said, would the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne like to close debate at this time?

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank all the members of the Assembly for their outstanding support for Bill 203.

Bill 203 is a practical, Alberta solution to an issue that we're all facing, affordable housing and, in general, the better use of an Alberta product, a sustainable product that we all love and enjoy in our communities. Being raised in a community that's forest dependent, I think it's also fitting that I have this opportunity in the House to promote the use of wood in our province.

Mr. Speaker, I know it's getting close to 5 o'clock. Once again I want to thank all the members that supported this bill in second reading. We'll have a further discussion in Committee of the Whole, and I would ask that we call the question.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne has moved second reading of Bill 203, the Safety Codes (Sustainable Structures) Amendment Act, 2014.

[Motion carried; Bill 203 read a second time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder, in light of the time, if we should not just call it 5 o'clock and move on to private members' motions.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader has moved that we now call it 5 o'clock so that we can move on to the next area of business.

[Motion carried]

Motions Other than Government Motions

Child Care Policies

504. Mr. Jeneroux moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to review child care policies to ensure that accessible, high-quality, and affordable child care is available for all Albertans to allow for parents to re-enter the workforce, if they so choose, which will increase personal income tax contributions and address current and future skilled worker gaps in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and open debate on Motion 504. The history behind my decision to bring this motion before the House has its roots in my constituency of Edmonton-South West. Motion 504 takes its bearings from what I have been hearing in conversations with my constituents. The message that keeps coming back to me in the coffee shops, in my office, at community events is a consistent one. Young and new families are frequently hard-pressed to provide adequate child care while simultaneously earning a living for their household.

It's easy to understand why this is the case. Raising young children is a full-time job in its own right, and at the same time it can also be expensive, particularly when there are bills, rent, mortgages, and other costs of living to pay. As a consequence, many families feel a severe strain and are often forced to choose between larger incomes and caring for their children. This is not a comfortable position to be in, Mr. Speaker. The cost of living is substantial, and it's often the case that two incomes are necessary to sustain a family household.

While this government has been doing a great job of supporting families and children, I'm sure we can agree that there's always room for improvement. This is where Motion 504 can begin this conversation, Mr. Speaker. I and our Premier have met with a large number of parents who've been telling us that in this new generation Alberta, supports for child care services ought to be reviewed. All they ask is that we as a government explore our options regarding how we can continue to keep child care affordable and accessible in the years to come.

I know that I do not have to remind the hon. members of this House of the paramount importance of our younger generations, Mr. Speaker. That is readily apparent, but it is always healthy to review how we ensure their safekeeping and invest in their upbringing. After all, these are our future leaders, these are our future decision-makers, and these children are the future of our province. By partnering with families in order to ensure that they have the resources necessary to raise their children, we can also accomplish far more than we might initially expect.

It is a quite common scenario that a parent who might otherwise wish to be in the workforce is compelled to stay home to care for their young children. This could be for any number of reasons, whether because child care services are not readily accessible or because costs are prohibitive. The point is that these are able-bodied and enthusiastic adults who could be contributing to the province's economy if the situation were different. Mr. Speaker, I believe it is worth our while to investigate ways in which we can assist these parents in re-entering the workforce.

In a nutshell, Motion 504, if passed, would contribute to the dialogue of bolstering both dependable child care for working parents and Alberta's workforce. Consequently, this holds promise for increasing the earning potential of households while also expanding the province's income tax base.

Under the present situation the Ministry of Human Services provides financial assistance to eligible lower income families for purposes of child care. This assistance manifests in the form of licensed daycare and preschool programs, licensed family child care, approved family day homes, and approved early childhood development programs.

The maximum rates provided by the ministry vary according to the type of program being funded and the age of the child being provided care. The child must be 12 years of age or younger. The parent must be currently working, attending school, looking for work, or have special needs, and the parents or child must also be Canadian citizens or permanent residents of Alberta.

We also support children with disabilities through the inclusive child care program, and Human Services contributes to child care specifically for families with children with disabilities.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very good track record, and we can take pride in what we do to support child care services in Alberta, but there is a conversation to be had regarding: what else can we do, and what can we do better? Based on what I hear every day, whether it be at my girls' day care or in coffee shops or community events, this is a conversation families want us to have, and that alone makes it worth while. This is a conversation that Motion 504 is to begin. It doesn't end here, but we have to have the courage to assess what we're doing, how we're doing it, and what opportunities we have and owe to future generations.

I would seriously encourage all hon. members to support this motion. Let's build on our past successes, explore new avenues for quality child care, and assist parents who want to enter the workforce. Let's begin that conversation now.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and address Motion 504. I want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West for bringing it forward. Just for the sake of reading it into the record one more time, I will do just that. The motion says:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to review child care policies to ensure that accessible, high-quality, and affordable child care is available for all Albertans to allow for parents to re-enter the workforce, if they so choose, which will increase personal income tax contributions and address current and future skilled worker gaps in Alberta.

As I first saw this, Mr. Speaker, I couldn't help but think and reflect back on our former Premier, Premier Hancock. In his role as Government House Leader if he were to see that motion, he would tell us all that we should simply defeat it based on its length and the fact that you're asking multiple things to be done. It should be succinct. It should be concise. Nevertheless, I'm going to support it, and I'll tell you why.

I would like to thank the Member for Edmonton-South West for bringing it forward. It's an important issue. It affects the lives of many families in Alberta, and it's not a simple issue by any description. I just would like to talk a little bit about some of the challenges that families face and that we as policy-makers face while we look for ways to support the child care industry in Alberta.

One big part of the problem is simply having enough spaces. Around two-thirds of the child care centres in Calgary currently have a waiting list. We've heard stories of couples getting on waiting lists for a daycare space before they are even expecting. It's not only that we are short spaces, but the larger problem has to do with where they are located. Provincially I've heard that our utilization is around 80 per cent, which would mean that there are spaces out there, but these spaces aren't where parents need them.

A 2011 StatsCan study showed that the leading reason given by parents for the choice of daycare was location. This more than any other factor determines how a family decides on a child care arrangement. It's important to remember this when we think about whether there actually are child care options for families. If you had to drive over two hours to drop your child off before you went to work, is that a good choice for either the child or the family? Well, of course not. We need to remember that these realities drive many of the decisions that people make, whether they're going to work or stay at home.

A second major issue when it comes to child care is affordability, and I don't want to suggest that this government is not doing anything to make child care more affordable. There are some good programs operating right now. But child care is very expensive. A recent report from the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives looked at the picture of child care affordability across Canada, and while we are not the least affordable here in Alberta, the information is still worth noting. In Edmonton child care costs about 24 per cent of the average woman's income. In Calgary it's 26 per cent. So child care is a very significant expense for most families, and we need to put our energy and resources into getting the right balance.

There are many ideas out there for addressing the problem. Right now there are subsidies for families with incomes under $50,000. There are also programs to encourage providers to keep spaces open like the wage top-up program and the grants designed to attract more workers to the industry. For a few years there was an expansion grant given for operators creating a new spot, a program that recently ended. This review could examine the program in detail and help determine whether it should be continued. Sometimes there is work that can be done in partnership with municipalities to make it easier and more attractive for operators to open a daycare or an early childhood learning centre. Figuring out where the barriers are for creating spaces is key and helps address the overall shortage.

We have other related issues when it comes to providing good care for children while their parents are at work. Many child care operators in the province don't care for infants, and even finding spaces for toddlers can be a challenge. Finding a spot for a child with special needs can be an absolute nightmare. For example, families in Alberta with an autistic child can have a very hard time. They must juggle the therapy, the care, and the needs of the child with the child care during the day, which means caregivers who can accommodate those transportation needs and those special needs. On top of this, special-needs children can require complex strategies, and finding a caregiver who is the right fit can be very difficult.

I know of a family with an autistic child who had to transfer to three different day homes in as many months. One of the problems came up due to his transportation needs during the day. After finding one solution that seemed ideal, the next caregiver found that his socialization was more than her home was equipped to handle. This change was not good for the child and was very stressful for his parents.

I want to be clear that I'm not a fan of and do not support a universal system. We don't have to have a Quebec-style program. I don't think that that is the fiscally responsible way to go about solving this problem. I don't think that putting that level of resources into care for children is fair for families who decide to stay home with their children or to make other arrangements such as having a mother-in-law or others stay at home with the children.

We don't have to move forward to a universal system in order to acknowledge that our system needs work and/or improvement.

There are many different philosophies and ideas for how we can incentivize enough good-quality child care spaces in the neighbourhoods where they are needed. The answers are complex, making this a perfect issue for a motion like this one, which suggests starting with a review. We need Alberta-specific, up-to-date information about our system and a very clear, thorough examination of current and past policy.

I want to thank the member again for this motion and the chance to rise and support it in the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to speak today with respect to the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West's motion. This is a very, very important discussion, and I thank him for raising it here in the Chamber.

As you all know, Mr. Speaker, we are so blessed to live in a dynamic and rapidly growing province. We're welcoming people from across the country and around the world to join us as proud Albertans, and people are accepting that invitation, as we all know.

At the beginning of 2014 Alberta's population was estimated to be at nearly 4.1 million – so we can only imagine what it is now – up almost 22,000 people from October 2013. We know that Alberta continues to lead the provinces in population growth, and at just 5 per cent our unemployment rate remains the second lowest in the country.

For parents with young children who become new Albertans, they likely don't have the luxury of bringing their child care provider with them. If both parents work outside the home, child care is a primary need for which there is always demand. The Alberta government believes that parents should have a choice in daycare. During the last year licensed and approved child care spaces have increased by approximately 4,700 spaces, for a total of approximately 100,000 spaces across the province.

Mr. Speaker, the government does not create child care spaces. However, the subsidies this government provides create the opportunity for increased economic growth. Not only do these subsidies make it easier for parents to re-enter the workforce; the demand for child care creates a unique opportunity for new Albertans. They can even become child care providers themselves. They have the opportunity to be entrepreneurs and small-business owners.

My ministry offers a wealth of information on our website to help parents find child care and for potential providers to learn more about licensing and accreditation. Similar to other provinces, Alberta does not cap parent fees that are charged by child care operators. Operators set fees based on where their program is located, their operational costs, and the level of service their programs offer. Parents should be aware that while there are many child care providers out there, not all of them are licensed or accredited. Accredited child care providers have demonstrated standards of excellence that show they provide high-quality child care over and above licensing regulations for children from birth to 12 years of age.

Mr. Speaker, it's also our priority to help lower income families access quality child care instead of providing an across-the-board subsidy for all income levels. As mentioned by previous hon. members, families can earn up to $50,000 per year and still qualify for the maximum subsidy, and partial subsidies are available, depending on a family's income and the child's age. The subsidy is targeted to those who need it the most. In 2013, for example, families receiving the full subsidy paid an average of $268 per month.

Mr. Speaker, there are approximately 80,000 children enrolled in child care programs in our province. Of these children, 25,000 of them – close to 1 in 3 – receive a full or partial child care subsidy. Of those 25,000 children, more than 8 out of 10 receive a full subsidy. I believe the subsidy makes it possible for parents who either need to or want to work to re-enter the workforce.

In addition to the subsidy, Alberta has one of the lowest personal income tax rates in Canada, and we offer parents the family employment tax credit to help families with the cost of raising children. Again, Mr. Speaker, low-income Albertans also benefit from the provincial tax system with a low personal income tax rate and with the highest basic and spousal amounts in Canada. With the Alberta family employment tax credit a family of four can earn up to $47,670 before paying provincial income taxes. It's about families keeping more money in their own pockets.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, in response to the hon. member's motion today, that we are doing many things across government to support the growth of healthy families, but with more and more families moving here, this motion, this conversation, is absolutely critical. I encourage and look forward to more conversation on this matter.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, I have Edmonton-Calder, followed by Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, followed by Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Little Bow for the moment.

The hon. member.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, just to put it forward straightaway, the Alberta New Democrats do support this motion. We support families and advocate for our youngest Albertans.

It's interesting to note that Public Interest Alberta recently released a report showing the dire state of child care here in this province. It showed that we are facing a worsening crisis. Alberta ranked 6 out of 10 provinces in per capita spending on child care, and over the last six years the number of child care spaces has not even been close to keeping up with the number of children in Alberta under the age of six. The percentage of mothers in the workforce with preschool children who did not have access to child care increased 62 per cent. Subsidies are not keeping pace with the increased costs of child care as well. In sum, we have a problem.

While Alberta faces an increasingly severe crisis, other provinces are taking the lead on addressing the needs of Canadians when it comes to child care. On November 18 the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, for example, passed a motion to commit to working on a federal New Democrat proposal for a universal child care system for just $15 a day for all families that require it. In Manitoba this province provided a targeted subsidy to make child care more affordable for low-income families. In 2008 Manitoba had the lowest child care fees outside of Quebec and in 2007 reduced the nonsubsidized daily fee that was paid for parents from $2.40 to $2. In 2007 they increased the subsidy eligibility as well by 13 per cent, regulating the maximum fees to ensure affordability for middle-income families. The province of Quebec not only offers affordable child care, with $7.30 daycare for Quebecers with an income of less than $50,000, but also through regulation offers parents high-quality care for their children as well. This PC government is failing to deal with our child care crisis here in the province of Alberta, and that's why the motion put forward by the hon. member is very timely and very appropriate.

On November 20 when asked about child care and the need for more spaces and affordable options for Albertan families, this government responded by saying that 80,000 children are enrolled in child care programs and 25,000 children receive some sort of subsidy. When asked later that day about the crisis-level shortage of spaces for infants and special-needs children, this government responded by talking about the ability of parents to choose child care providers. It is clear that in this House this government has failed to answer our questions on child care. They have failed to make any real promises to this House about addressing the child care crisis which exists here in the province.

Finally, the promises that they have made, specifically during the election in which most members opposite were elected, seem to have been broken. In 2012 the Redford government made the following promises in regard to child care. She said that a re-elected PC government would continue to deliver new and increased funding to Alberta families to offset the cost increases and changes to the provincial child care subsidy program. This is a promise that the PC government broke. In 2013 the government of Alberta eliminated the quality enhancement grant to child care centres. In response, child care operators had to increase fees and/or cut programs.

The Public Interest Alberta report on early childhood education and care: despite increases in subsidies to child care, the difference between the average cost of child care for low-income families and subsidies offered by this government rose to $172 a month for infants and $180 a month for older children. This amounts to an increase of $115 a month for infants and $28 a month for older children.

Commitments to child care are just more PC broken promises. Unlike this government, which has shown time and time again that they put some other interests ahead of Alberta families, the Alberta New Democrats are committed to making real change and making life more affordable for Albertans. We support the creation of (a) more spaces, (b) more affordable child care, (c) more publicly funded spaces which offer quality daycare programs, (d) developing a plan to deal with children age six to 12 in addition to pre-school-aged children, (e) supporting the accreditation of facilities and the certification of child care workers, and (f) ensuring quality standards that are based on national and international best practices and regularly inspecting facilities.

Mr. Speaker, in sum, certainly this motion is a great opportunity to start to speak about these issues. We know that affordable child care, not just in different jurisdictions around this country but around the world, is a cornerstone to building a more equal and just society for all and a more stable economy, to creating more opportunities for people to work and to be independent, and to ultimately have quality places not just to mind our children but to help to educate them and to build a stronger future for everyone.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise and speak to Motion 504, affordable child care services, brought forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West. Child care in this province is critical for the growth and the success of Alberta. There are many small towns and villages that are within the constituency of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville. We've had this discussion with many of the mayors, how important it is to be able to have appropriate child care in order to attract people to their communities. By attracting people to the communities, that attracts business and generates a dynamic that is so important for rural Alberta.

Motion 504 is looking to review the government's child care policies in efforts to grow the province's workforce. I think some of the things that it must consider will be the flexibility of choice. It must also find the balance to be able to meet the Minister of Finance's obligation to balance the budget. I think the third thing that it needs to also consider is parental rights, that parents have the right to make their decisions as to what kinds of services they require for their children. All of that has to form part of a very valuable discussion, and we must as a government look to see what the gaps are in the services that we are providing already.

Motion 504 is looking to go forward and to review that discussion, but we already are doing some things, as the Minister of Human Services mentioned. Currently we assist lower income families with various services, including daycare; out of school care programs, including after school care programs; approved family day homes; an extended hours child care subsidy for parents working evenings and weekends; a kin child care funding program; and support for stay-at-home parents. Children, of course, must be 12 years of age or younger for these programs and cannot yet be attending grade 7. Families must have one or both parents working, attending school, actively looking for work, or with special needs. They must be a Canadian citizen or a permanent resident living in Alberta. Finally, families may apply for funding if they have their children enrolled in an approved early childhood development program or a licensed preschool.

If families meet these criteria, they can receive some level of funding from the Ministry of Human Services for the following: licensed daycare centres, licensed group family child care, approved family day homes, licensed out of school care centres, licensed preschools, and approved early childhood development programs. Mr. Speaker, these are just high-level examples of what the government already provides to hard-working parents.

Currently our government supports children with disabilities through the inclusive child care program, and Motion 504 could urge the government to build on these initiatives. Mr. Speaker, this program creates flexibility to meet the individual needs of children with special needs or disabilities within the child care settings. Support may include training for child care staff, consultation on programming or inclusion, resource and referral information, and funding for additional staff. The family support for children with disabilities, or FSCD, program is an important voluntary initiative run by our government to protect youth. The FSCD program works in partnership with families to provide supports and services based on each child's and family's individual needs. In addition, all services are available to eligible families of children with disabilities until the child turns 18 years of age.

In order to ensure an appropriate and high-quality impact of the program, families are required to complete an individualized family support plan, or an IFSP, as part of their assessment. I think our world lives on acronyms. The purpose of the IFSP is to assist families in determining goals for their child's development and participation in the home, school, and community. The FSCD representative works together with the family to complete that IFSP. The IFSP is used to record a family's goals and priorities for their child, strategies to meet these goals, individual responsibilities, and timelines.

Mr. Speaker, it is quite apparent that the Ministry of Human Services is already placing a high priority on assisting Alberta's parents in finding suitable child care. In addition, the Ministry of Human Services has also worked with Mount Royal University and Grant MacEwan University as community partners. This initiative will develop a curriculum for child care educators who work in centre-based child care and family day homes dealing with children aged zero to five years. The curriculum framework is based on a holistic view of child development. It will seek to encompass all areas of a child's growth and learning. It will build a common language across diverse delivery settings, focusing around the importance of play in early learning, emergent program planning, and responsive care.

Mr. Speaker, there are two phases to the project. The first is the development of a draft curriculum framework that is aligned with the content and values and approach of postsecondary training institutions as well as the early learning and child care sector at large. The second phase consists of piloting the curriculum framework and supports in selected early learning and child care sites across this province.

Motion 504 asks the government to review child care, which is an important issue for Albertans. Mr. Speaker, one of our government's initiatives is to build strong communities that are fostered by collaborative spirit. The programs that I've just listed provide these opportunities for parents to access child care. It allows all families the opportunity to do what is best for their children. The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West is to be commended for bringing forward this topic for consideration and discussion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Little Bow.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Motion 504, a review of child care. I, too, commend the member for raising this issue. It's certainly one that I hear a lot on in Calgary-Mountain View, where there are a lot of young families struggling to meet the ever-accelerating costs of living in the big city, where we have not managed to bring under control the spiral that comes with a boom-bust economy. Increasingly, even my own children are struggling with child care and the demands of modern lives.

We're looking for three things – affordability, quality, and accessibility – and we're not providing that for up to a third to almost half of the people who would utilize it if they had the opportunity and who, according to some of the studies, would be paying much more back to society than subsidized daycare would. The evidence from Quebec is that the income taxes gained from having more people employed would actually pay for the whole costs of subsidized child care.

I mean, it raises questions, again, about just how committed this government is to prevention. We see children falling through the cracks in terms of their early childhood development, their learning abilities, their emotional and behavioural challenges that are not identified because they're not in situations where people can actually identify and provide interventions. We're setting ourselves up for more and more costs and lost potential through our health care system, which shouldn't be approaching that at all if prevention was in place; for more and more supports needed in schools when they get into schools and haven't had the preparation in early childhood; and, certainly, some safety issues around especially single moms who don't quite have the supports they need and are trying to do both, work a little bit outside the home and somehow cope with the demands in the home.

At this point it would be a huge step if we would simply address the backlog of those who very seriously want to and can provide some aspect of the funding for their own child care, but at some point the idea would be a universal child care program.

First steps first, though, and I think the discussion here is an important one. Surely we can help reduce family stresses, mental illness, risk taking, family violence, and, obviously, poverty if we take seriously the commitment that we have said that we've made to the sustainable well-being of children and their educational opportunity and achievement. These are investments for our future, not expenses. Again, the ideological blindness over here with taxes that don't reflect a fairness and a revenue stream that can actually provide for some of these supports is shocking when it's been going on for so long and so many have said that we need more resources to do what's right for Albertans, to ensure that we invest and reduce the costs of all the breakdowns in families and communities that we see because they simply don't have enough supports.

The early childhood mapping project. Again, a funding cut there after five years of tremendous work identifying the developmental needs of children in those critical years under six and identifying what they need and identifying progress or lack of progress in that childhood population. That project was cut. It speaks of a government that's more interested in financial mean-spiritedness and holding onto an ideology of low, impossible taxes rather than one that is being generous and supportive and preventative in their approach to some of our most vulnerable. And I'm including the working poor and those just above, in the low- and middle-income brackets, that are struggling to meet their needs.

Surely 4,000 new spaces in child care is progress but not when you consider that we've got double that number in terms of needs. Let's deal with the reality, and that means not only getting people accessible child care and early childhood enrichment; it also means making sure that that is affordable.

So I welcome these opportunities to discuss but more than discuss to hopefully move to some policy actions and some investment, that are so critically needed in this province.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

5:30

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by Calgary-Hawkwood.

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today and speak on the motion that the Member for Edmonton-South West has brought forward. I think the key part is that "accessible, high-quality, and affordable child care is available for all Albertans." Child care is key to rural Alberta, a riding that I represent. Being a strong advocate for rural Alberta, I can tell you that that the key for rural Alberta is to make sure that we have all the same things that all of our urban friends have also. As the Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville stated before, one of the key things is to support this because it does support rural Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, child care facilities in Vulcan, for instance, are one I can relate to. During a difficult time in my life, when I was raising my two boys by myself, the Vulcan Daycare Society was there for me. It was key and crucial as a single parent to have a safe place for my kids to go, and I can tell you that they had great service there. If you want a good system, you have to sometimes step up, so I ended up being the president of that society for a little while. There are great people advocating there, and there are great people working there. The quality was second to none. It was a challenge sometimes on the affordability side for some people, that were obviously a little more challenged on income, to make the bills all work out.

One of the things there was making sure that we always had fundraisers and things like that. We did casinos. We did all kinds of things. I can tell you that the quality was always good there, and the accessibility was good. There was sometimes the challenge, though, of enough spaces for everybody.

I applaud the Member for Edmonton-South West for bringing this forward because I think, like with most things, the system is working well, but you always need to review it and keep on top of how things can change.

Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that I will be supporting this motion. I want to thank the member for bringing it forward, and I ask all the other members of this Assembly to also support it. I think it's something key and crucial to keeping Alberta in first place.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very honoured to rise today to support Motion 504, proposed by my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West. I want to point out that the motion seeks to review the practice. It didn't specifically say to increase or decrease the subsidy and so forth. I want to bring it back to why I'm so much in favour of that review.

As you know, lots of young families live in our province. Particularly, some of those live in Calgary-Hawkwood. We have lots of need for access to affordable child care in order to have parents who can get out to work and pay income taxes for us. In the meantime we are at a time when the oil price is going down to under $70, and we're in a very, very difficult time to choose and decide what programs to support and how to spend our money.

The motion from the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West is talking about seeking to review the best practice. I wanted to congratulate him for being thoughtful in proposing this motion. To me, when we have to live within our means and we have to come up with innovative solutions to meet the increased demand, that's something I always applaud a member for doing. That's something good not only for Calgary-Hawkwood but for the whole province of Alberta.

This motion brought us the conversation of: what are other people doing? I have two models here from different provinces that I'd like to share with the hon. colleagues in this House in the spirit of looking for the best practice. One of the models is done by Ontario. Ontario's child care subsidy helps eligible families pay for child care. The Ontario government, municipal governments, and First Nation communities share the cost of the program. In Ontario parents can qualify for the child care subsidy if their child is under 12 years old, is in a licensed child care program, or is a school-aged child enrolled in a recreation program.

The amount parents pay for their child care depends on the family's adjusted net income. There are grants and other supports available from the provincial and federal governments that can help families with the costs of raising children. The Ontario child benefit, abbreviated as OCB, is financial support where low-income families, whether they're working or not, may receive help to provide for their children. Depending on the family income, applicants can qualify for this program if they are the primary caregiver of a child under 18 or are residents of Ontario and have filed and had assessed their previous year's income tax return as have their spouse or common-law partner.

Motion 504 is urging the government to conduct a review, which may result in looking at the practices of other provinces. Ontario has additional funds for child care, and the Ontario child care supplement for working families is a tax-free monthly payment that helps families pay for the costs of raising children under seven years of age. With the introduction of Ontario's model in July 2008, payments were reduced in part by the OCB amount received. When the OCB benefit level reached $1,100 in July 2009, most two-parent families no longer needed the benefits anymore, so that was their cap level. This program helps families who are low- to mid-income single or two-parent families, who have one stay-at-home parent, or who have one or both studying or in training. Applicants apply for OCCS if they live in Ontario, receive a Canada child tax benefit, have children under the age of seven born prior to July 1, 2009, and have a proper income level that qualifies for this program.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as a fiscal conservative in Alberta, Ontario's practice may not be the most beneficial one for us to consider. However, it would not hurt to have a robust discussion of what we can do and come up with something that is made in Alberta. If Motion 504 was to be taken into consideration by this government, an important part of the review is to study other forms of government child care relationships and assess their strengths and weaknesses.

The second model that was available for comparison is Saskatchewan's. They have a program called the child care subsidy, or CCS. It is a monthly assistance program that helps Saskatchewan families meet the costs of licensed child care. CCS is provided directly to child care facilities to reduce the fees charged to eligible parents. CCS varies; the scale ranges from low-income to high-income assistance. To be eligible, individuals must have custody of a child or children under the age of 13, receive care in a licensed facility, be a Canadian citizen or permanent resident of Canada, be residents of Saskatchewan, and have a valid reason for care of the children. They list a whole bunch of reasons deemed as valid. For instance, employment or self-employment, attending educational training in an accredited institution, or looking for work has to be one of the reasons.

CCS amounts are determined using a calculation that takes into account gross family income, family size, the age of the child, the location of the child care facility, and actual fees charged. Families with income below the designated thresholds may qualify for maximum aid. A family with income above those thresholds may still qualify for a reduced amount. Families receiving income assistance through the Saskatchewan assistance program or a transitional employment allowance may be eligible for benefits sufficient to cover the entire fee. Maximum amounts are provided to a family with a monthly income below $1,640. This threshold is increased by $100 for each additional child under 18. For example, families with two children under 18 qualify for a maximum benefit of $1,740. Thresholds for families with more than three children are increased similarly without an upper limit.

So the question is: is the Saskatchewan model suited to us? Well, I have to say that I don't know, but what begs the question is the motion put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West, which is: given the fiscal constraint, given the rising need, given the best practices other provinces have, what is the made-in-Alberta solution for it?

I look forward to hearing the remainder of the debate on Motion 504. Hopefully, something creative can come as our solution. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

5:40

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West to close debate.

Mr. Jeneroux: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The goal of Motion 504 is to promote and continue the discussion on affordable child care services that are easily accessible for all Albertans. We've heard loud and clear that young families often face the difficult situation of caring for their young children while also needing to make a living and establish careers. By exploring new ways of supporting affordable child care, we could make great progress in strengthening families and nurturing future generations of Albertans. Besides this, through innovative means we could also continue to strengthen Alberta's workforce. The more Albertans we have employable, the stronger our economic outlook.

By passing Motion 504, we win a dual victory, Mr. Speaker. We affirm the importance of strong and cohesive families, and we will fortify the province's pool of employable working adults. Any support we can lend to families as they raise their children and advance their careers is worthy of our consideration. We have a great track record on this front. Let us see if we can improve further. Families are the backbone of this province, and when they prosper, we prosper.

As such, I encourage all hon. members to join me in supporting Motion 504, calling for the exploration of affordable child care supports. One gesture, one conversation can make a difference, and I believe we owe it to our children to try.

Thank you.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 504 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In consideration of the closure of that piece of business and in consideration of the time I move that we adjourn until 7:30 this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:43 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Monday, December 8, 2014

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 7 Chartered Professional Accountants Act

The Chair: I'm looking for the first speaker. The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Chair. One of my constituents, a chartered accountant, has asked if I would ask the hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour – and I believe that he has already sent you some information on this. He has some trepidation about fighting both a lawsuit and a chartered accountant tribunal hearing over the same subject. He asked if I'd bring an amendment to the legislation, and I believe the minister has received a copy of that. I didn't feel that this was the right course, but I did commit to asking about the process that would ensure that CA tribunals are fair, open, and transparent, with recourse to appeal. Would the minister care to comment on this?

The Chair: Other speakers? The Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Chair. On the matter regarding the constituent of the hon. member that asked for a change, I had my staff look at that, and we're of the opinion that the change, with all due respect to the constituent, is not advisable. The disciplinary hearings under the legislation and civil litigation are different. Disciplinary hearings under the regulatory bodies are designed to protect the public regarding such matters as incompetence, unprofessional conduct, that kind of stuff, while civil litigation generally deals with liability issues. I hope the hon. member will forgive me because this isn't a really technical explanation, but it's kind of like never the twain shall meet.

Under the previous legislation the matters of professional conduct and competence would be dealt with under the regulatory body, and liability issues would be dealt with through the courts. That would be the case before the legislative change, and it would still be the case after the legislative change. We are not of the opinion that we should amend the legislation.

I would be happy to have further discussion with you on that, but I had the folks in the department look at it, and that is the opinion that we have right now, sir.

The Chair: Thank you.

Are there other speakers? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: I will be brief, Mr. Chair. It's a great honour to speak to Bill 7, Chartered Professional Accountants Act, 2014. The purpose of the bill is to unify three professional accounting bodies in Alberta – the Certified General Accountants' Association of Alberta, the Certified Management Accountants of Alberta, and the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Alberta – as the Chartered Professional Accountants of Alberta. As more than 50 per cent of Canada's professional accountants are already using the CPA designation, the merger of three professional accounting bodies in Alberta will ensure that accounting professionals working in Alberta and other provinces are able to better transfer their skills and expertise across provincial boundaries. Furthermore, Alberta will be able to attract more qualified accounting professionals to work and live in Alberta. I think that because our economy has been growing by leaps and bounds, it will be helpful for the Alberta economy to attract more professional accountants. I know there are lots of reasons for the outcome of this bill. It's a good bill, so I'm going to be supporting the bill.

Thank you very much.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there other speakers?

Seeing none, we'll call the question.

[The clauses of Bill 7 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

Bill 8 Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It's an honour to rise to speak to Bill 8, the Justice Statutes Amendment Act. As we've discussed before, it's a long list of justice-related amendments to provincial legislation. I also wanted to comment briefly on the debate that we heard during second reading, particularly around legal aid.

Before I do that, I would like to propose two amendments to Bill 8, one that relates to the Limitations Act and one that relates to the Family Law Act. So I take this opportunity to update the Assembly on those changes, but I think we should probably get the amendments delivered, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Okay. Hon. member, if you would circulate those, we'll deal with them one at a time.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Actually, I think they're combined.

The Chair: They're combined, so it'll be one amendment, then. We'll call that A1, and we'll treat them as one amendment.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you.

The Chair: So we'll just pause for a moment while that's being circulated, and then I'll let you start speaking again. You may proceed, hon. member.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm going to sound a little bit like a lawyer, so my apologies beforehand. I'm going to read out the amendments first, and then I'll try to explain them. The bill is amended as follows.

In part A section 3 is amended (a) by striking out subsection (2); (b) by adding the following after subsection (3):

(3.1) The following is added after section 55.11:

Mandatory clauses
concerning recalculation

55.12 effective March 1, 2015, in making a child support order, the court shall include the mandatory clauses concerning recalculation that are required by the regulations under section 55.8(a.1).

And then (c) in subsection (6)(a) in the proposed section 55.8(a.1) by striking out “section 51.1” wherever it occurs and substituting “55.12.”

In part B section 4(2)(b) is amended by striking out the proposed section 3(1.1)(a) and substituting the following:

- (a) 2 years after
 - (i) the later of
 - (A) the date on which the claimant was served with a pleading by which a claim for an injury is brought against the claimant, and
 - (B) the date on which the claimant first knew, or in the circumstances ought to have known, that the defendant was liable in respect of the injury or would have been liable in respect of the injury if the defendant had been sued within the limitation period provided by subsection (1) by the person who suffered the injury, if the claimant had been served with a pleading described in paragraph (A), or
 - (ii) the date on which the claimant first had or in the circumstances ought to have had the knowledge described in [subsection] (i)(B), if the claimant has not been served with a pleading described in subclause (i)(A).

I feel like I’m back in law school, Mr. Chair.

So what do these amendments mean? We want to make sure that we are as clear as possible.

The Chair: Hon. member, you said “subsection” instead of “subclause” under (ii). Could you clarify your intent under (ii)?

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Subsection (ii): “the date on which the claimant first had or in the circumstances ought to have had the knowledge described in subclause (i)(B), if the claimant has not been served with a pleading described in subclause (i)(A).”

The Chair: Thank you. Please carry on.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you.

Let me start with the Limitation Act. The Limitation Act establishes limitation periods for bringing claims, and Bill 8 proposes amendments to the act to clarify, among other things, when the discovery limitation period begins for a claim for contribution under the Tort-feasors Act. So when a plaintiff brings an action, they don’t have to list all the possible defendants who may have been responsible for the injury. However, the current law allows a defendant to bring a claim against another person that they believe is also responsible for the same injury to the plaintiff. This proposed change clarifies how the limitation period runs when a defendant brings a claim against another person responsible for the same injury to the plaintiff, and these wording changes are intended to further clarify this change.

These clarifications were brought forward to us by the Law Society of Alberta, and the drafters of this amendment worked closely with the Law Society to ensure that every lawyer was satisfied with the new wording of this section.

Mr. Mason: That’s an accomplishment.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Indeed. Happy lawyers.

The Family Law Act is the next change. Under section 8 there are four proposed amendments to the Family Law Act that relate specifically to the child support recalculation program. This program helped separated and divorced parents update their court-ordered child support amounts to reflect changes in their income. It gives Albertans a low-cost and convenient way to ensure that their child support amounts are kept current without having to go to court. Since the recalculation program began in 2010, it has helped many Alberta families avoid having to go back to court, thus reducing pressure on parents and on our court system. While the program has been successful, there are opportunities to improve it to help more vulnerable Albertans and enhance client service and further increase access to justice, which we all care about.

The first of the amendments is a mandatory clause that will be required in all future child support orders to specifically indicate whether or not the support may be recalculated by the recalculation program. This requirement is aimed in large part at creating more awareness of the recalculation service so parents understand they have an option to update child support without having to go to court, and the intent is to have this requirement apply to all child support orders after March 1, 2015, including those granted under the Divorce Act.

However, as it presently stands, the mandatory clause amendment is in the general child support order division of the Family Law Act, which sets out a narrower definition of child support order that doesn’t cover those granted under the Divorce Act. So to address this minor oversight, the amendment that I just read proposes that the mandatory clause requirement be moved from the general support order division of the Family Law Act to the division that deals with the recalculation program. The recalculation program division includes a broader definition of child support order, which means that the mandatory clause would apply to child support orders under the Family Law Act and the Divorce Act.

That’s it for my comments on the amendments.

I just want to quickly comment on one of the items that was raised when we were doing second reading. It’s the Legal Aid Alberta funding, certainly something that has been discussed in this House. You know, we all recognize the importance of legal aid services as a means of ensuring that low-income, vulnerable Albertans receive the help they need in court proceedings. [A cellphone rang] Is it the Law Society phoning? No, I don’t think so.

As we understand, we must play our part to ensure that Legal Aid Alberta has the support it needs so that we ensure better access, and that’s why we provided that organization with an additional $5.5 million to address its budget shortfall for this year. This funding also allows them to raise financial eligibility guidelines so that more applicants, including individuals receiving AISH, have greater access to services.

That said, it’s also critical to focus on the long-term sustainability of the program. We believe that the demand for legal aid services will continue to grow just like everything else is growing in Alberta, and we are working with Legal Aid Alberta to assess their needs and the appropriate level of funding for 2015-16 and onward. Discussions will also focus on how we can ensure a predictable and long-term plan for the delivery of legal aid. At the same time, we are continuing to work with our federal partners to encourage them to fully participate in this jointly funded program.

Mr. Chair, the revised amendments to the Limitations Act and the Family Law Act bring them in line with their intended purpose, and I thank you for your consideration of those amendments.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm wondering if the Member for Calgary-Varsity can just help us understand, I guess, where the amendments came from, how they came to be. Considering that this is a relatively new piece of legislation, I'm just trying to understand the processes. Considering that I'm not a lawyer, I appreciate you trying to explain it but just want to make sure that what is happening is moving things in the right direction, as was the original intent of this.

Thank you.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: I'm actually very happy to answer that question. It's a very legitimate question. The Law Society and many other groups have been consulted for a long, long time on the amendments in this bill, and I think I referred to the work that had been done, the consultations. These changes came about just to make sure that we further clarified them. In particular, the change to the Limitations Act came about through discussions led by the Law Society.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Chair: We're back to the bill. Speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to just offer a few comments with regard to the bill. It is primarily just housekeeping of many of the justice statutes, and it certainly does bring the legislation in line with the current court rules and changes in legislation and changes "with leave of the Court" to "with the permission of the Court."

The Court of Queen's Bench Act and the Provincial Court Act ease the process for the reappointment of masters in chambers and judges respectively, and they transfer the responsibility for some appointments from the Lieutenant Governor in Council to the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

There are primarily housekeeping amendments to the Estate Administration Act and the Wills and Succession Act. As well, the Notaries and Commissioners Act and the Oaths of Office Act have small changes that amount to a clarification of who is meant by a lawyer. The fact that the member believes that all lawyers in the province are in accordance with this act is in itself a very fine piece of jurisprudence or whatever it is. I don't know what it is. It's just unusual.

There are more substantial amendments. The Limitations Act clarifies the limitation period for a third-party defendant.

The Perpetuities Act allows qualified environmental trusts to exist in perpetuity, which is not normally allowed. The qualified environmental trusts are a special kind of trust under the Income Tax Act of Canada that are maintained solely for the purpose of accumulating funds to finance future reclamation of a qualifying site such as an oil sands mine or a pipeline in Canada. In the spring these trusts were dealt with in Bill 7, and we cautiously supported that because they seemed like a good idea as they ensure that funds are set aside up front for remediation of pipelines and mining.

Finally, the Family Law Act has changed concerning the child support recalculation program, which allows a calculation of child support payments due to changes in income without having to go to court. That just makes good sense.

We are generally in support of the changes because they are a modernization of our legislation, and we support changes which address unintended consequences or confusion caused by other legislation. We want to ensure that we create the highest possible quality of legislation in our province.

We'd like to focus, though, a little bit on the Court of Queen's Bench Act and the Provincial Court Act as the proposed amendments don't do anything to address the serious issue of access in Alberta. We're concerned about access to justice and legal aid in two regards, and that is notwithstanding what the hon. member has just said about increased funding. One, there has been a consistent pattern of underfunding for legal aid. Many Albertans have been denied access to legal counsel as a result. Secondly, many of the most vulnerable Albertans do not qualify for legal aid. For example, Mr. Chairman, an Albertan working a full-time job and making minimum wage is not eligible for legal aid because they make too much money. An Albertan receiving assured income for the severely handicapped is not eligible for legal aid. I have to ask why that is, why we would not automatically just make sure that that access was available.

I think other members of our caucus have probably talked about the importance of legal aid. There is, I guess, a quote from Court of Queen's Bench Chief Justice Neil Wittmann, who said that there is certainly connectivity between the legal aid issue and self-representation that affects our whole system. It's a systemic problem and gives rise to more and more time being spent on cases where there is not legal representation for all parties.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to indicate that we have been strong advocates for better access and more equitable access to justice, and we have been critical of this government's failure when it comes to legal aid. The announcement by the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General in the fall of a one-time transfer to Legal Aid of $5.5 million is simply not sufficient. Legal Aid predicts that they need another $8 million a year and will have a deficit in the order of $15 million by 2016-17. They've had to reduce their services. They've cut the drop-in services. They cut 35 jobs in regional offices and 12 in Calgary. At the same time, there have been 33,000 more applications for legal aid services. As a result, there have been increasing obligations in Alberta courts for government-appointed lawyers for individuals denied legal aid.

I can go into that in a lot more detail, Mr. Chair, but I just want to make sure that we're on the record that the steps that have been taken with increased funding on a one-time basis are just not adequate and will not address the fundamental problem we have in this province with legal aid. I just want to indicate to the House that notwithstanding that and as this is primarily a housekeeping bill that does simplify and streamline a number of acts, we will be supporting this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there other speakers to the bill?

Mr. Kang: Mr. Chairman, we will be supporting Bill 8, too. It is mainly a housekeeping bill, so I think it will fix a lot more.

There were some issues raised about legal aid. You know, those concerns will always be there. This bill, with orders to reflect income changes, does help further the idea of reducing the burden on courts. This bill will take some pressure off the courts because with the recalculation of support the parent won't have to go back to the court again to get the support increased.

It's a good bill in all other senses, so we'll be supporting it. Thank you.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to the bill?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[The remaining clauses of Bill 8 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Chairman, I move at this point that we rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 7. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 8. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Does the Assembly concur in the report? Agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 9

Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014

[Adjourned debate December 3: Mr. Rowe]

The Deputy Speaker: I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to address the House on Bill 9, the second version of the Condominium Property Amendment Act, this one also 2014. We saw one of these in the spring. After many years of consultation, here we are again.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to be proposing an amendment at this point, that we refer this bill to the Standing Committee on Families and Communities. Before I get started, I will pass that along, and we'll go from there.

Mr. Wilson moved that the motion for second reading be amended to read that Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be not now read a second time but that the subject matter of the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Families and Communities in accordance with Standing Order 74.2.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, this is a referral amendment, so we will treat this as amendment R1.

I'll invite the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw to continue to speak to the amendment.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, this is another attempt to save this government from itself. Today they introduced Bill 2, which might as well have been titled that. But this is just another example of – they've tried. They've tried with this bill to get it right.

Mr. Dorward: So do you.

Mr. Wilson: As much as the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar may disagree with me, as he often does, one thing he can't disagree with is the government's history of ramming and rushing legislation through this House.

Let's run through a few of them, shall we? Bills 45 and 46: it was about a year ago last week, I think, we found ourselves here in this House, Mr. Speaker, and this government was adamant about passing these bills.

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Mr. Wilson: The relevance is that this government is incapable of writing legislation that stands the test of time and is actually usable in a way that we need it to be written and in a way that our stakeholders in this province need this bill to be written, Mr. Speaker.

8:00

As I try to make a case to this House for the amendment, which is to refer it, the reason we need to refer it is because, like many of the bills we've seen in this House, it is at this point in time insufficient.

If I may continue, Bill 45 and Bill 46, both of them, have not been . . .

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Mr. Wilson: You can challenge the relevance all you would like.

The Deputy Speaker: Through the chair, hon. member.

Mr. Wilson: I think I just laid out my case, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

Bills 9 and 10, earlier this spring, on pension reform: what happened with those? Nowhere to be seen. How about Bill 1 from earlier this spring? Well, that's now going to be repealed by Bill 11 in this session.

What we see is repeat after repeat performance of this government doing things the wrong way, consulting after they've written a bill or not even doing it at all. Let's look at Bill 10. It was just last week. You guys can't have that short of a memory. [interjection] Apparently they can.

Let's also think about the New Home Buyer Protection Act. This was a bill that was brought forward – I believe it was in the fall of 2012 that we first dealt with this bill, Mr. Speaker, and then this past spring we had, again, amending legislation for a bill that this government passed.

We have tried time and time again in the opposition to save this government from itself, and time and time and time again they walk straight into a wall or they do something, and the only time they realize that they've made a mistake is when the public uproar reaches a point where they have to retreat.

What I'm presenting here in the House right now, Mr. Speaker, is an amendment that would, hopefully, allow this government to hit the pause button, which is crazy in the sense that they've already been consulting for five years on this bill. It's their second crack at it, and they still haven't got it right. But that, in and of itself, should be reason enough to send this to committee, where it belongs. Get it right. It affects too many people, and we don't have the opportunity to come back and fix a mistake in a few months' time. Let's just do it right the first time.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

This is, again, on amendment R1. Are there other speakers? The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm listening to what the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw is saying. But when I'm thinking back to my constituency, back in 2004 in Fort McMurray we had a condominium complex that opened that had significant deficiencies that, through both board governance and issues with the developer, led to that entire complex – seven buildings – being deemed unlivable in 2011, which evicted over 300 residents, 168 units. What Bill 9 is doing is correcting a lot of the issues. It ties together not just condominium accountability, the governance of the boards, but it ties it in also with the New Home Buyer Protection Act and our Safety Codes Act, which is going to give protection to the buyers that we so desperately need.

Two years ago the Ministry of Service Alberta began a consultation process with Albertans that was overwhelming in its responses. In fact, it was so overwhelming that they had to extend the dates to allow for additional consultation. This is not a matter of us changing something that came up before. This bill was brought forward in the spring, earlier this year, and this government prorogued. As the hon. member knows, that means that it died on the Order Paper. We're simply bringing this bill back. There are no significant changes to this bill. This bill is important, Mr. Speaker. I have had constituents in the last month phoning me saying: "When is this bill coming to the table? When is it coming to the Legislature? It's important. We need this to happen. We need it now."

There is significant development. This province is growing at a rate of a hundred thousand residents per year. As we grow, particularly in our urban centres, we are going to more of a densification in our key areas where there's a lot more condominium living. Affordability is a factor and condominiums are part of that. Therefore, we need to have this protection in place as soon as possible for the residents of Alberta and those that are moving here to assist us with our economic development.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot support this amendment. My constituents need it. We need this bill to pass at its earliest convenience.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Speaking to the amendment, the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak in favour of this referral motion, and I would encourage my colleagues in this Chamber to support and vote the same. I will take a little bit different tack than my colleague did on this issue. Last night I attended an event hosted by the Canadian Condominium Institute. This event took place last night at the Chateau Louis and was attended by 200-plus people with approximately two days' notice to attend that meeting. Two hundred-plus people: the room was jam-packed. At this event they voted and almost unanimously rejected supporting Bill 9 in its current state.

I congratulated the government earlier this year on the near five years of consultation, but this government has fallen short on including real consumer protection and stricter building accountability measures. It is important for Albertans that we get this bill right and listen to the experts at the Canadian Condominium Institute.

Now, the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo mentioned a couple of instances in his riding regarding that Penhorwood condominium project. That was a total disaster. We have young families who've probably made their first investment which will be their biggest investment in their lives. Those people were given hours to vacate that property because it was so condemned. It was ready to fall down at a moment's notice. These people are still making mortgage payments on property they haven't lived in for two years. That's how serious this is.

Mr. Speaker, there are several key areas that the CCI is asking for amendments on, and I'd like to list them here in our House for the info of my colleagues: voting procedures and processes, financial reporting, convening of meeting to elect first board, contributions and accountability of problem owners, rules and regulations set by board of directors, bank account information. These are not minor aspects of the bill. These are significant, with long-lasting consequences.

That is why I urge all members to support this motion to refer Bill 9 back to committee for further review. This way we can ensure that the proposed legislation is sound and responsible. This bill is a large one. It's very complicated. It's taken lawyers hours and hours, days, to analyze and absorb the full impact of it. We in our party have six or seven amendments that we'll have to put on the floor if we don't refer this back to committee. It affects thousands and thousands of Albertans, including first-time buyers who have very, very little knowledge of the real estate market, of the condominium act, or anything else. They're just putting money down, and they take what's handed to them.

Seniors are also downsizing from single family homes that they've lived in for 40, 45 years. They're looking to get out of the maintenance and everything else. They're buying into this and finding out: uh-oh, what have I done? It is extremely important that we get this right the first time.

There's a company in Calgary, Alberta, and the acronym for their name is DIRT. Members, that stands for Doing It Right This Time. Let's do this right, now. Let's take it back to the committee, get it sorted out, hear from the stakeholders on the bill itself, not what was proposed.

I compliment the government on doing extensive consultant work before they drafted the bill. They should have taken that bill back to the people, back to the stakeholders, and asked them, "Did we get it right, or what do we need to change?" and then brought it to this House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Other speakers to the amendment? I'll go to the hon. Minister of Service Alberta, then the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

8:10

Mr. Khan: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and speak to this amendment. I'll put some good faith into the amendments coming from Calgary-Shaw. I trust that his heart is in the right place, but unfortunately I can't support this amendment.

As I think we all know and appreciate, Bill 10 speaks to condos, which we . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Bill 9, hon. member.

Mr. Khan: Bill 9. Sorry. Thank you.

We all know that 1 in 4 new builds in this province are condos, and that number is closer to 1 in 3 in the major metro areas. What Bill 9 is going to establish, Mr. Speaker, is a greater level of consumer protection. It's going to establish consistency for developers. It's also going to establish consistency and best practices for condo boards, which will create a much better ecosystem, if you will, for condos and for people who are buying condos.

As the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills suggests, we know that the people who are buying condos are quite often first-time buyers, and we want to provide them with those protections. We also know that there is a larger percentage of seniors who are moving into condos, and we want to be able to establish a comfort level and security and best practice for all Albertans when it comes to establishing condos.

Now, the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills mentioned a meeting that took place last night with a very good organization, CCI north. I want to thank the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills for attending. I also want to thank the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne for attending and taking exhaustive notes. My office has a copy of the amendments that were raised last night at the meeting, and I think the conversation was very constructive. We've reached out. We've spoken to the president of CCI north tonight, and we've let them know that we're going to address those amendments. As suggested by some of the conversation across the aisle, a great number of the details and specifics of Bill 9 will be sorted out in regulation. What we've told CCI and what we're telling all of our stakeholders is that they will continue to be involved in that stakeholder engagement as we build the regulations.

I just want to come back again to some of the comments made by opposition members about this bill and some of the criticism about stakeholder engagement. Again, I appreciate the comments from Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills in terms of our robust consultation when it has come to the condo act. You're right. The old laws are closing in on 20 years, and we need to establish some new laws. I want to thank our Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. He's absolutely correct when he says that Albertans need these protections now.

We know that the former Bill 13 was presented in the spring and made it all the way through first reading. Contrary to what some of the folks over there have suggested, the bill is substantially similar. I know that Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills knows that because he's a sharp critic, Mr. Speaker. He's taken a look at the law, and he knows. I've told him: this bill is substantially similar; you can start preparing your critique and your investigation of the bill by starting where we left off with Bill 13. It's interesting that the feedback that we received last night from the meeting didn't speak to any of the new elements that we've introduced. There are a couple of new wrinkles, but again it's substantially similar, virtually identical to the bill that we saw last spring in Bill 13.

Now, had we been able to, you know, maybe even work a day or two longer, we would have been able to pass Bill 13, and we'd be well on our way to working on those regulations and bringing this forward. We anticipate, Mr. Speaker, that through the Department of Service Alberta it may take a year or maybe even a little bit more to work through those regulations. I want this condo act to be established and be in place to provide confidence and assurance to Albertans when it comes to condo regulations.

What I'm afraid of, Mr. Speaker, is that if we push this back to the committee, we're going to be two years out before we see any substantive changes to our condo act. I don't think that that's what the opposition wants. I listen in question period on a daily basis about how they think our government doesn't move fast enough. They don't think our government is agile enough. They don't think our government is responsive enough for Albertans.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Khan: See? I think we've got agreement.

Unfortunately, what the Member for Calgary-Shaw is offering us in this amendment just doesn't get the results as quickly as we want to bring them to Albertans.

I also want to address this thought that perhaps there wasn't any consultation that happened over the summer. That's not true. I want to provide the members across the aisle with assurances that although we weren't able to get the bill through in the spring, we took the additional time to tighten it up a little bit, make some legalese changes to it, also make some minor improvements, but all the while continuing our consultations. If you'll indulge me, those consultations – and, again, I want to thank the hon. Member for Sherwood Park for working over the past 18 months and leading those consultations and continuing on those consultations over the summer.

Although we have some feedback from CCI north – as I've said, my office has spoken to them, and I will speak to them – what we do know is that this bill is substantially similar, and we didn't get that feedback from CCI north in the spring, which is interesting. We asked CCI north to continue on in the dialogue in the summer, and unfortunately they weren't able to participate with us. I'm sure there were some logistical reasons for that. But as the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills does say, CCI north has expressed some concerns, and there are some others who have.

If I may, we have the Association of Condominium Managers of Alberta, who we've done stakeholder engagement with. I'm going to read a list of those who we've done the stakeholder engagement with and are really wanting this bill to move forward. There's the Association of Condominium Managers of Alberta, the ADR Institute of Alberta, the Alberta Land Surveyors' Association, Alberta Real Estate Association, Building Owners and Managers Association, Canadian Condominium Institute of southern Alberta – that's CCI south – the Canadian Home Builders' Association, the Insurance Bureau of Canada, the Real Estate Council of Alberta. We have 4,000 submissions, Mr. Speaker, through our web portal in terms of providing feedback.

An Hon. Member: How many?

Mr. Khan: Four thousand, Mr. Speaker, and, through the chair, some of the largest volume of feedback that my office has received while I've been minister was when this session was prorogued. My office received countless e-mails from stakeholders saying: "Please don't let Bill 13 die. Please move fast. Please get this important legislation in front of the House." That's what we're doing with Bill 9, so I cannot support these amendments.

I want to thank everybody for their attention, and I again want to thank the hon. Member for Sherwood Park for her stalwart work on this bill. I want to thank the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo for his comments. [interjection] Calgary-McCall has been phenomenal on this issue as well.

And I do sincerely – and I mean this – look forward to some of the amendments from the opposition. I think if we can work together, I'm all for establishing Bill 9 as the condominium act that's going to satisfy and foster a successful ecosystem for consumers, for developers, for condo boards.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. If someone would like to ask the minister any questions, you can do that.

If not, I'll just recognize the next speaker, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will be supporting the amendment. I do think that it would be very useful at this stage to have some open public consultation. The minister has given a list of other organizations that have been consulted, but he didn't share with us the degree to which there was support for the bill as a whole or for specific aspects of the bill. It is a matter of concern that the northern Alberta chapter of the Canadian Condominium Institute is still very concerned. In fact, the meeting that occurred last night, which was attended by our MLA for Edmonton-Calder, expressed real concerns about the bill.

I think it's fair to say that the government has a ways to go before it sorts things out. Now, the government likes to sort things out in regulations rather than doing it up front and out in the open in terms of changes to the bill. We have seen lots of – I've heard that many times, actually, Mr. Speaker, where, you know, maybe you don't like the bill exactly the way it is: just vote for it, and we'll sort it all out once we do the regs, you know, and it'll all be okay. That may be the case sometimes, but it's certainly not always, and it's not an assurance that leaves me with enough comfort to be prepared to support this bill at this time.

Like our friends in the Wildrose, we have a number of amendments that we want to bring forward, but I think it would be better to do this out in the open and involve the opposition and have some real discussion about how we can improve this bill with the people that do that. I think there are some real issues, that there are some real deficiencies in this bill, Mr. Speaker. For example, the consumer protection measures in this bill are not strong enough, and I think they need to be strengthened. I'll speak more about that later. There is not enough accountability on the part of builders and developers of condominiums. That's what I think the core of the concerns are. It may be that some of those organizations representing builders, developers, and so on are satisfied with the bill, but that may not be for the right reasons. So I think it's important that we have some real, public accountability.

I know the government has consulted, but you know, when the government doesn't consult, it usually gets things wrong, and when the government does consult, it still sometimes doesn't get things right. I think that this may well be an example of that. So for that reason, Mr. Speaker, I will be supporting the amendment that has been put forward.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a).

I'll recognize the Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by Calgary-Bow.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's just a great honour to speak in favour of the amendment. I will be supporting this amendment as the minister claims that this bill was developed with input from a wide variety of stakeholders such as the Canadian Home Builders' Association, the Canadian Condominium Institute, the Alberta Real Estate Association, the Real Estate Council of Alberta, legal experts, and condo owners. In many key areas such as the creation of a framework for a dispute tribunal the bill simply grants the government regulation-making authority. That could have been much stronger. Some stakeholders are now saying that they were expecting much more from this legislation. This legislation doesn't go far enough. Sufficient time is needed for all affected parties to provide more input into this. If that can't be done in this session, then the bill should be carried over to spring 2015.

As the Condominium Property Act is amended every 15 years or so, it is important to get everything right in the latest amendments. Let's do it right the first time. With all the time that government spent consulting on this legislation, you would think they could have been much more specific in prescribing remedies to the problems. In many areas, however, we will have to wait for the regulations before we know exactly what is being proposed. In this new era, Mr. Speaker, where accountability is supposedly paramount, this degree of government by regulation is simply not acceptable. Remedies must be written into the law so that they can't be changed behind closed doors at the whim of the government.

Key stakeholders such as Anand Sharma of the Canadian Condominium Institute and eminent condo lawyer Robert Noce are now saying that Bill 9 is not prescriptive enough and that amendments are needed to fix those other deficiencies. If the government is intent on getting out of the current legislative session as quickly as possible, it should at least have the decency to delay this important bill until the spring, when it can be dealt with in a reasonable and unhurried fashion, Mr. Speaker.

This is what this amendment is trying to do, Mr. Speaker. Let's get it right, and let's refer it to committee as the amendment is trying to do.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, the Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to say that there were extensive consultations when it came to the condominium act. One of the things that I did as an MLA was that I made sure that condominiums in my constituency – I don't have as many as many people have, but I do have them in my constituency, and one of the things I did was to make sure that the people that were actually living in the condominiums had feedback on this bill. I continue to get feedback from them, and what they're saying is: "Please. Let's please just get this passed because we need it."

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Are there speakers to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question of amendment R1.

[Motion on amendment R1 lost]

The Deputy Speaker: We're back to the main bill. The Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour for me to stand on behalf of my colleague from Calgary-Mountain View. I move that the motion for second reading of Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following:

Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be not now read a second time because the Legislative Assembly believes that the bill delegates too much authority to the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations respecting the details of the legislation and, in many cases, does not prescribe specific remedies in the bill itself, and further input from the stakeholders is required to address the provisions lacking detail in the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, do you have that amendment with you? This is a hoist?

Mr. Kang: No, a reasoned amendment.

The Deputy Speaker: A reasoned amendment. All right. I stand corrected. This is a reasoned amendment. If you'd circulate that to the pages, hon. member.

For the record, hon. members, this will be amendment RA1.

You can speak to the amendment, hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think this amendment is self-explanatory. We believe that a piece of legislation of this magnitude should not be rammed through in the middle of the night during the dying days of this session. With all the time that the government spent consulting on this legislation, you would think that they could have been much more specific in prescribing remedies to the problems. In many areas, however, we are being told that we will have to wait for the regulations before we know exactly what is being proposed.

In this new era, where accountability is supposedly paramount, this degree of government by regulation is simply not acceptable. As I said before, remedies must be written into law so that they can't be changed behind closed doors, Mr. Speaker. As before, on record key stakeholders have pointed out that, you know, this government should at least have the decency to delay this important bill until the spring session, when it can be dealt with in a reasonable fashion and in an unhurried fashion. I think the government is trying to rush through this bill. It's a big bill, and I believe there are about 50 amendments. Because this bill is a very important bill and it will impact many Albertans, I think this Assembly owes it to them to get it right.

I'd like to ask all members to support this amendment, and I'm looking forward to the debate, Mr. Speaker. This is a big bill, and I think they should take time to review it and do it right.

Thank you.

8:30

The Deputy Speaker: Are there any speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Why not, Mr. Speaker? I really like this amendment. This is an amendment that I am going to photocopy and put in my files. This amendment could be used on almost any government bill because almost every government bill of any substance at all that we deal with always refers a whole bunch of really important stuff to the cabinet to decide behind closed doors – behind closed doors – if you can believe it.

Is that any way to govern a province? I don't think so. I think that we in fact should insist that this government put forward the substantive elements of its legislation in the legislation and not deal with it in regulations. That is becoming and has over my time here become an increasingly pervasive strategy on the part of the government and not one that I think is either democratic or open or in the interests of the public as a whole.

Mr. Speaker, for those reasons I will be supporting this amendment as well as photocopying it, and I'll just have a little thing on my computer where I can just replace the name and the bill number because I think we'll have use for this in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, I'll recognize the hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: Well, I just want to point out for procedural information for those in the House, Mr. Speaker, that generally, when you propose an amendment to a bill because the bill is being rammed through in the middle of the night during the dying days of the session, at least one of those three conditions should generally be true. In this case none of them are. In the case that you propose such an amendment when none of those three conditions are true, it has the flavour that it might have been photocopied from somewhere else, which the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood suggests is a good strategy. I suggest we defeat the amendment and move on.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Other speakers to the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment RA1 lost]

The Deputy Speaker: Back to the bill. Any other speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I was hoping that we could have an opportunity to deal with this in committee, but I think I'm prepared to deal, too, with the substantive elements of the bill. This is just a mildly revised version of the Redford government's proposed changes to the condominium act that were put forward in the spring of 2014.

This particular bill will make a number of changes, not all of them negative: broader consumer protection with more disclosure to buyers, including home warranty information, occupancy dates, and notice of changes to the purchase agreement; developers will have to deposit buyers' deposits with an authorized trustee, pay their fair share of condo fees for unsold units, and have a professional building assessment on buildings converted to condos. That's good, and that's important, I think. It will change board governance with explicit voting procedures, required notice of annual general meetings, owners' meetings to replace board members, and notice of insurance changes. It will delegate authority to the Real Estate Council of Alberta to regulate and set standards for condo managers. It will develop a clearer scope of government authority and stiffen penalties for offenses and create a framework for a dispute resolution tribunal as an alternative.

Mr. Speaker, in Alberta there are more than 8,000 condominium corporations in operation. Condominiums account for approximately 20 per cent of homes sold annually, and 1 in 3 homes sold in Edmonton and Calgary are condos. Because condominiums are such a big part of our province's housing market, it is important that we get it right the first time to ensure that condo owners are taken care of and protected, but despite nearly five years of consultation and two revisions of the legislation, the government continues to fall short on protecting condominium owners and addressing long-standing issues in the industry.

First, we're concerned about the lack of input from condo owners in the process. People who own condominium units need to have some say in the process and the laws that govern their arrangements. We've heard a lot from the government on the ways in which developers were consulted and the ways in which the proposed legislation has been improved to better accommodate them, but there has been little outreach to stakeholders in the owner community. The Canadian Condominium Institute northern Alberta chapter says that the province has ignored their calls for more complete consumer protection measures and strict builder/developer accountability.

As a result of this there remain many issues that this bill does not properly address, including clarity in matters of insurance, property manager accreditation and training, and document disclosure to owners. Because of the clear problems we're hearing about this bill and the utter lack of notice and complete consultation with all concerned stakeholders, we would like to see the legislation delayed. It's been pushed forward too fast, and not everyone has had their voice heard. Albertans, especially those who live in condominiums, deserve to have their voices heard when it comes to the laws and rules that govern something as fundamental as their homes. We understand the need to update the legislation, but again we want to make sure that we get it right the first time on behalf of the increasing number of people who do own condominiums.

One of the core reasons this bill needs to be given fuller consultation is that so many of the matters that impact condominium owners on a day-to-day basis are just not dealt with in the legislation. They'll be dealt with behind closed doors through regulation, and we don't think that's the appropriate way to deal with these important public issues. The processes surrounding changes that will impact people's homes should happen with the full light of legislative oversight so that as many people as possible can contribute to productive changes in the legislation.

There are a number of things that we'd like to draw the Assembly's attention to. First of all, property insurance: some of the most serious issues facing all condominium corporations in the province are issues related to property insurance. While certainly the condominium boards and owners and possibly the government can do nothing about the rising of premiums, the government could have and should have addressed other insurance issues in Bill 9, including: what property must the corporation insure, and what must the unit owners insure? Second, if a unit suffers damage because of an insured peril, who should actually be responsible for overseeing the work of restoring the inside of the unit, the corporation or the owner? And, three, who should be responsible for paying the deductible portion of an insured loss and under what circumstance?

Under Bill 9 developers are only required to provide as-built documents if they exist. It does not require them to produce them. The as-built documents are construction drawings produced upon completion of a project or particular job. They reflect all changes made in the specifications and working drawings during the construction process and show the exact dimensions, geometry, and location of all elements of the work completed under the contract. A finished building rarely corresponds exactly to the original plans in every detail. This normally happens because of unforeseeable on-site complications and variations from the original plans. Sometimes these things can create considerable difficulty, and it's important that they be produced in every instance.

So these are just a few examples, Mr. Speaker, of what we believe are important matters that have been omitted from the bill. It's clear that the consensus among the condominium owners does not exist with respect to this bill, and certainly the meeting last night attended by 250 people that object to this bill as it's presently formulated is a good indication for members opposite that it may not just be quite ready to go.

On that basis, Mr. Speaker, we'll be opposing the bill as it's currently written. We will have amendments at the committee stage, and if they're passed, we will be very pleased.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

8:40

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Are there other speakers to the bill?

I'll afford the Member for Sherwood Park the opportunity to close debate if you so decide.

Ms Olesen: I'll call the question and close debate.

The Deputy Speaker: All right, then. The hon. Member for Sherwood Park has moved second reading of Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014.

[Motion carried; Bill 9 read a second time]

Bill 11

Savings Management Repeal Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on behalf of the hon. President of Treasury Board to move second reading of Bill 11, Savings Management Repeal Act. As you may recall, the Savings Management Act came into force on April 1, 2014. The act established two innovation-related notional endowment accounts within the Alberta heritage savings trust fund: the social innovation endowment account and the agriculture and food innovation endowment account. The act also established the Alberta future fund as an account within the heritage fund. Lastly, the act permitted the transfer of $200 million from the heritage fund to the Alberta heritage scholarship fund to be earmarked for trade scholarships.

Over the past several months, Mr. Speaker, the government has taken some time to take stock of where we are as a province, where we would like to be, and what we need to get there. Our conclusion with respect to this bill is that there are higher priorities for income generated from our savings. This is well within the context of our commitment to sound, conservative fiscal principles and certainty within the context of our current fiscal condition and the substantial drop in oil prices we have seen since the summer.

Mr. Speaker, the Savings Management Repeal Act will eliminate the social innovation endowment account, the agricultural and food innovation endowment account, and the Alberta future fund. The $200 million allocated to the Alberta future fund will be retained in the unallocated portion of the heritage fund, and plans to allocate another $1.8 billion over the next nine years to the Alberta future fund will be cancelled. No money has been disbursed from the future fund. The money for the trade scholarships will remain in the Alberta heritage scholarship fund and will be used for that purpose.

Mr. Speaker, we certainly don't take repealing a bill lightly, and in doing so, we aren't saying that there is no merit in the objectives of the bill. We certainly have not stepped back from promoting a skilled workforce, and in that case I think an endowment approach is the right way to deliver trade scholarships on a sustainable basis, so we've left that alone. But the other three streams of activity are things that the government could fund through the normal budgeting process, provided the government concludes these are high priorities.

The reality is this. We are cancelling setting aside $2 billion in heritage fund assets for an Alberta future fund that many across the House opposed. We're cancelling a social innovation endowment, the object of which did not have a clear purpose in the minds of many Albertans and would have paid out $45 million per year. We're eliminating an agriculture and food endowment that would have paid out $9 million a year. Mr. Speaker, if we feel the objects of any of these endowment accounts are priorities, we can simply budget for them. We don't need endowments to do so. But we're still adding to our successful scholarship fund to create more trade scholarships to help expand Alberta's skilled workforce.

In short, repealing the act is the right thing to do, and now is the right time to do it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Minister.

The first speaker, the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and talk tonight about Bill 11, the Savings Management Repeal Act. No surprise that we're not going to borrow to save to spend. It didn't make any sense in the first place.

Three things I want to talk about: how we got here, where Alberta could have been from when Peter Lougheed started this fund in 1976, and then a different way to protect this asset for future generations, for future Albertans, in terms of better services, more services, less taxation, and better infrastructure.

How we got here. As the members for Calgary-Shaw and Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood have said, this government so consistently seems in a hurry, seems to want to do things behind closed doors in regulations and rules. With what I've seen in my short two and a half years, I'm going to suggest that you might as well because your consultation doesn't work very well either. I remember when the then Finance minister came to Medicine Hat on the government plane – thank goodness we no longer have those – and said things like: we went around the province last year doing our budget consultations, and it will be passed. Of course, this was just in March of 2014. Again, the Finance minister.

In public forums like the budget consultations and the Economic Summit last year many Albertans expressed support for using a portion of our savings for strategic, future-orientated investments. Bill 1, which we're now eliminating, the predecessor to the Bill 11 repeal act, reflects this desire by defining and implementing a renewed vision and purpose for a portion of our savings. I find this humorous and odd because everybody I talked to in Medicine Hat, even at the consultation, and everybody I talked to at the economic forum at the U of A said that it made zero sense to borrow money to save money and to spend money. It's no surprise that we're not coming up with notional funds or extra funds for social innovation, agriculture and food innovation, the Alberta future fund, and the expansion of the Alberta heritage scholarship fund when we're borrowing money like we are.

I want to talk about what could have been. Peter Lougheed started this fund with $17 billion in 1976. Surprise, surprise that today, all these years later, all that we have is the same $17 billion. Our government has pulled out $33 billion over that time – $33 billion – taking one asset, the royalties earned from our oil and gas industries, our hard-working Albertans that have added tremendous value to that asset, and it's gone. It's not there. It's been spent. Some studies have been done that show that if we'd have just left this interest to compound, if we'd have just left this interest to grow from the original $17 billion that Lougheed put in in 1976, we could have some side of $233 billion today. Last year's estimate was $210 billion. Good work at AIMCo and great markets over the year showed a 16 per cent return. That would have been a staggering $32 billion of interest and revenue generated on money that this government didn't save, on money that future generations don't have access to.

Why is it important? You might remember when I released my infrastructure report a short time ago. The Fraser Institute released a report called Alberta's $22-billion Lost Opportunity. Mark Milke from the Fraser Institute outlined how our Alberta government had increased spending 54 per cent more than population growth or inflation, more than this 80,000 or 90,000 or 100,000 people moving here every year, more than the 2, 3, or 4 per cent inflation we've gone through since 2005-2006, on operations and programs. Twenty-two billion dollars. I look at the $33 billion that was pulled out of the interest earned on the heritage trust fund. Okay. From 2005 to 2006 is not the same length of period that from 1976 to now is, but with a little bit of discipline, with some efficiencies, with priorities – priorities – how much better could we have made it for the next generation?

I do support the fact that this Bill 1, the Savings Management Act, should be repealed under Bill 11. Again, it doesn't make sense to borrow money – and I think our borrowings are up to $11 billion now – to save money. The old argument used to be that we have to borrow to spend because we can earn these higher returns. Well, in our heritage trust fund committee meeting two or three hours ago it was mentioned how the Canadian stock market, which is 8 per cent of our funds, is down 5 per cent in the last three months, and that probably doesn't count today's mayhem. So borrowing to save and to spend doesn't work for a household; it doesn't work for a government either.

One of the pros of repealing Bill 1, repealing the Savings Management Act, is that it does reduce some of this obscure accounting. We don't have to worry about notional funds and different funds of social innovation, agriculture and food innovation, the Alberta future fund, and ways to play that game. I am concerned, though, that it still allows this government to take out every bit of interest earned above the rate of inflation. We can be playing this game forever, stealing from future generations, not putting in the discipline needed to look for efficiencies, not putting in the discipline needed to look for private innovation.

But rather than just criticize, rather than just point out what could have been different, what should have been different, I want to talk about some ways to actually do something different. As the Auditor General said, you can't make a law for everything, so in the absence of laws you have to fall back on principles. What if we did not transfer any portion of the heritage trust fund, including our annual earnings, into the general revenues until the total annual earnings from the fund exceeded that of the average annual provincial revenues from oil and gas?

Mr. Wilson: What an idea.

Mr. Barnes: What an idea.

The approximately $11 billion or $12 billion we get from royalties: what if we left that money in there until the fund generated $11 billion or $12 billion? Would that go a long way to cushion oil dropping 40 per cent in a four- or five-week span? You've been the government for 44 years. You've certainly had the opportunity to do it.

What if we invested at least half of all the surpluses? First of all, what if we budgeted the price of oil, the price of natural gas conservatively? If we are a Conservative government, why don't we pick a conservative estimate to budget on, and then let's invest at least half of all the surpluses in the heritage fund until the total annual earnings from the fund exceed that of the average annual provincial revenues from oil and gas? So we'll direct some of the fund, again, to protect against these shocks. When we have a surplus, let's take 10 per cent of that surplus and give it to Alberta municipalities so they can build additional municipal infrastructure as well.

So a thought-out plan to conservatively estimate what revenues will be, a plan to save for future generations – I mean, with this great asset base we have of oil and gas, wouldn't it be great to leave the next generation at least some base of another asset that could add greatly to their future services, their public services, keep their taxes down, and create a better standard of living?

In summary, I too support the Savings Management Repeal Act. I'm surprised that the consultation was as ineffective as it was way back in March, but at least it's a step forward to having a more wholesome look.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I recognize the hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to respond and to speak on the bill and, in fact, respond to the last speaker. I think that for the benefit of those of you that are home, the last speaker was a fiscal conservative, a member of the Wildrose Party. It probably wasn't immediately evident if you were just listening to the speech.

He actually said in his speech that if we had this fund, we could provide more services, better services, and less taxes. That sounds like something the NDs would say except that at least the NDs know that you have to raise taxes in order to pay for whatever you're going to provide. It really expresses the view that your spending should expand to the level of funding available. I don't think that's the job of government at all.

He talked about the superfund and mentioned Norway. That's exactly the pickle that Norway got themselves into. Yes, they have the superfund. They also have a debt-to-GDP ratio approaching 50 per cent. Notice that Alberta doesn't have any debt at all. Okay? You've got to be careful what you wish for.

I don't think it's the job . . .

Mr. Barnes: Point of order.

Point of Order Clarification

The Deputy Speaker: Your citation, hon. member?

Mr. Barnes: Standing Order 23(h).

The Deputy Speaker: Okay. Would you speak to your point of order?

Mr. Barnes: I would. I do not recall mentioning Norway. I just think that as a fiscal conservative who's to say that in the future we couldn't save all the interest that this fund earned? Who's to say that we couldn't have lower taxation? Who's to say that we couldn't, you know, continue those principles? It's a point of clarification, and I appreciate the chance to clarify.

The Deputy Speaker: So you're just trying to clarify.

Hon. minister, to the point of order.

Mr. Oberle: I apologize unreservedly, Mr. Speaker. I thought he was referring to Norway with the fund. He's talking about something else, but he did refer to a large fund. I thought he was talking about Norway. I withdraw that.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay. So that point of order is dispensed with, hon. member. The minister has withdrawn his comment, and you were looking for clarification. I think we're good.

Mr. Barnes: Yes, we are. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you very much.

Hon. minister, you may continue with your comments.

Debate Continued

Mr. Oberle: Thank you. Then he talked about the $22 billion forgone. He forgot to mention the fact that the growth in our budget has been below population growth plus inflation rate for the last four or five years. You know, it's a double-sided argument.

The point is, I think, Mr. Speaker, that a fiscal conservative might look at this and say: "Well, you know what? It's not really the job of the government to hoard the taxpayers' money, to stuff it in our mattresses or our socks or anywhere else we might stuff it. The best place for that money is in people's pockets and out there in the economy."

I do agree that the heritage savings trust fund has to be built to a level. Let's leave it at that. If the member has some productive ways that he suggests that might happen, I suggest that he table those in committee, and we can examine them. Certainly, we're always open to suggestion. I would say that the topic of the bill before us is of course doing exactly that, trying at this stage to guarantee that that fund is not spent. All of us agree that there is some value in maintaining the fund at some level, and on that basis, Mr. Speaker, I would very strongly recommend that the whole House, regardless of our beliefs, vote to support the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Other speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I think . . .

The Deputy Speaker: My apologies, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available if you wish to . . .

Mr. Dorward: I wanted to 29(2)(a) him.

The Deputy Speaker: Well, no, then. Hon. member, it starts now. We'll start with the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, and if you'd like 29(2)(a) after that, there will be an opportunity. Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, you missed your chance, but you can 29(2)(a) me if you like.

Mr. Speaker, I'm excited to get up and speak after hearing some of the comments a bit earlier tonight with respect to this bill. Now, I'm going to say at the outset that we actually will be supporting this bill because this bill falls under the category of repealing stupid legislation.

We have seen the government's legislative record in the past number of years: Bill 19, Bill 36, Bill 50, bills 45 and 46, bills 9 and 10, all of which fall under the category of stupid legislation that needs to be repealed. Some of it has been. You know, bills 9, 10, this 10 – that's two 10s in a row – 28. We've seen plenty of examples. Now the government is repealing their former Bill 1. I think, Mr. Speaker, that it's unprecedented that the government's flagship piece of legislation should be repealed by the same Legislature that passed it in the first place. [interjection]

Well, you know, the hon. member talks about being under new management. I know that that's what they'd like us to believe, but there are exactly four guys that have changed, Mr. Speaker. Everybody else is exactly the same as they were under the old management. So it's not really new management. Picking up a couple of Wildrosers is not exactly the kind of thing that indicates a real change of direction for this government.

You know, we had a grave concern with the direction of the previous Bill 1 under the premiership of she who must not be named. It was like the government was reading stuff on Twitter: "Hey, that's a good idea. We're going to do that." All these new and innovative ideas were just stuff they were pulling off the Internet. Alabama did something, or Colorado did something: "You know, that sounds interesting. Let's make a new law." That's how it was.

Now, of course, we would hope that under the so-called new management this would be changed, but I think the recent events around Bill 10 show that the pattern is still in place. It's still a pattern. It's still happening. We felt that the social impact bonds idea was another fad from the States that some minister's assistant found while surfing the Internet, something that allows the government to privatize social problems and to in fact avoid responsibility for sound public programs that actually help people get out of poverty, which should be the objective of government programs. They added a profit motive to social services that I think most Albertans found very distasteful.

Since somebody, you know, actually quoted the Fraser Institute a little earlier, I think I can probably bring up the Parkland Institute. Ricardo Acuña of the Parkland Institute says that the reality, however, is that these social impact bond schemes will only serve to further pad the bank accounts of wealthy investors while turning the very concept of public services on its head and eliminating funding for a broad range of projects and activities. That's why we opposed it, and that's why we're happy to support this bill.

My mother always told me that it was really rude to say "I told you so," so I won't, but I do think that I do need to make some response to the Energy minister's comments with respect to that because I think he's partly right and, of course, partly wrong. He's certainly wrong about Norway. The debt-to-GDP ratio in Norway is more about 30 per cent. If you look at its net debt, which means, of course, including their fund, the net government debt as a percentage of GDP, according to the IMF, it's minus 165.5 per cent, which means that they have a massive – massive – asset benefit over whatever debt they may hold.

The fact of the matter is that Norway, because it charges people who are extracting its natural resources, that belong to the people of Norway just like the resources in this province belong to the people of Alberta – it charges a fair economic rent for those resources – is able to bring in considerably more money, particularly when the price of oil is high. Instead of spending that money on government programs and thus robbing from future generations, they have wisely and prudently invested it.

Now, what's been the result of this? The Minister of Energy wants to focus on some kind of debt-to-GDP bogeyman and misstated the actual situation. But for Norwegians the reality is that their standard of living has risen significantly, and the level and nature of government programs and funding for government programs has increased very substantially. Norway is now one of the richest countries in the world as a result of adopting a set of principles for the management of petroleum resources that were developed by Peter Lougheed, the first leader, the first Premier, of this Progressive Conservative dynasty.

If there's ever an indication that they've lost their way, it is this. Norway, having studied and adopted Peter Lougheed's principles for the development of the oil and gas industry, has moved to a place where they don't have to worry about drops in the price of oil like we do. They don't have to lay off nurses and teachers every time the price of oil goes down because they prudently invest. Their future generations don't have to worry about the current generation spending all of that nonrenewable resource revenue that belongs to all generations just on themselves, to fund their social programs. They can fund their social programs without having to steal from future generations.

It is a very important comparison, I think, that needs to be drawn. It cannot be dismissed just simply by saying: oh, gee, their debt-to-GDP ratio is too high. That doesn't make any sense at all. What's important is that they recognize that the resources, the oil and the gas in the North Sea, belong to the people, not to the oil and gas companies. They belong to the people. The oil and gas companies can provide a service by taking it out of the ground and refining it and getting it to market and selling it, but ultimately it does not belong to them, and they have to pay a premium to do that. They make good money doing that, but the bulk of the money, the bulk of the benefit, comes to the people who own the resource in Norway, unlike here.

Peter Lougheed had set a goal that 30 per cent of the total value of the natural resources should come to the people. Under Social Credit it was only 10 per cent. Guess what it is now. It's 9 per cent. So we're collecting less on the oil and gas resources that we as a people here in Alberta own than the Social Credit government was in the 1960s. Of course, now we're still in the situation where I guess about 30 per cent of our program spending is funded from nonrenewable royalty revenue, which is extremely volatile. That's why I say that we're stealing from future generations. We're using their resources to pay for our health care, and that's just not right.

That brings me to the second point. It's not a question, as the Energy minister says, that the NDP wants to raise taxes. One of the things that happened when natural gas royalties were so high in the early part of this century is that the government gave tax breaks to the people who needed them least. For example, they took the personal income tax and instituted a flat tax. They cut tax rates massively for the wealthiest in our society and, at the same time, brought in increases for middle-income earners.

When we say that we want to go back to progressive income tax, yes, we want everybody to pay their full share, and, yes, some people will certainly have a tax increase because they've been getting away with murder for years, but for the bulk of Albertans it actually would be neutral or even be a small decline in the taxes that they pay. That's just in the interest of fairness and equity.

In terms of corporate income tax a tax break was offered – and this is on profits of corporations. This is only on profitable corporations, on the money that they declare as a profit. The government has set a goal of reducing the corporate tax rate in Alberta from 15 and a half per cent down to 8 – in other words, cutting corporate tax almost in half – and they're pretty much along the way. They're down to about 10 per cent, Mr. Speaker. So there has been a substantial reduction in revenue, and it increases the dependency on royalty revenue to pay for programs.

Now, I think we can do better as a province, Mr. Speaker. When the price of oil goes down, we shouldn't have to be rushing for the emergency exits. We shouldn't have to be talking about cutting program spending, you know, laying off teachers and nurses, cutting all kinds of important programs, that were important the day before but suddenly are expendable because we're not managing our economy and our finances as a province properly. I think when the public as a whole realizes how unnecessary and stupid it is to cut your program spending based on the price of oil in a given month or in a given year, then this government has got some real answering that it's going to have to do to the people of Alberta for the squandering of our resources and for the mismanagement of the economy.

It's not good enough to say: "Oil prices are down, and all bets are off. We're going to break our campaign promises. We're going to cut program spending, cut health care, cut education." I don't think the public buys that anymore. Why didn't you fix this? Why didn't you fix it so that you were protected from changes in oil prices? Lord knows, we all know that the price of oil goes up and down. If the government doesn't know that by now, there's something really, really seriously wrong.

Mr. Speaker, we can do better as a province. I think Albertans need a government that actually thinks like an owner and puts the people in the province ahead of their insiders and their friends and their corporate donors. I think the province of Alberta needs a new government.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Under 29(2)(a), the hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just have a couple of questions for the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Keeping in mind that when we go to the Norway comparison, we're part of a federal system where this province transfers net payments out every year of $10 billion to $20 billion, approximately. Norway has amongst the highest corporate and personal income taxes in the world. They have a 1 per cent asset tax, so if your house is paid for and you've got some RRSPs – say you've got a million dollar net worth; you write a cheque to the government every year for $10,000. They have a 25 per cent sales tax, five times what we pay here in Alberta. My question is: which of these huge increases in taxes to corporations and especially to individuals, especially the 25 per cent sales tax, does the member suggest that we force on Albertans?

Mr. Mason: Well, none of the above, Mr. Speaker. What I suggest is that we set an appropriate royalty level, as set out by Peter Lougheed. Peter Lougheed didn't talk about a 25 per cent sales tax. He didn't talk about these massive taxes that the hon. member is talking about, and I'm not talking about them either. I'm talking about being sensible, acting like owners, and making sure that we get full value for the resources that we allow those companies to take out of the ground on our behalf, on behalf of the people of this province.

Now, the tax question is another matter. Certainly, the two tax cuts that were brought in under Ralph Klein at the time that natural gas prices were sky-high and we were bringing in $8 billion in natural gas royalties in a single year need to be reconsidered. Getting rid of the flat tax would be a really good start. That doesn't mean that you want to bring in a sales tax. We're opposed to a sales tax. You know, he's posing a false choice, Mr. Speaker. He's saying that you can't talk about what Norway does with its royalties and how it saves its money without adopting all of their other programs and all the other tax structures, and that's just absolutely not true. It's simply not true.

A sensible approach to our natural resources and the royalties that we can get from them and a sensible approach to savings is very important for this province, and the government can't just sort of say: you know, you can do what we're doing, or you can do something else that's completely alien. That's not how this debate is going to go, and I would encourage the hon. member to try and separate some of these issues. We may like some things about the American justice system, for example, but that doesn't mean we want to adopt their criminal justice system completely. We may like some things about the Americans' health care system, but that doesn't mean we're going to adopt everything about it. I think we can raise the intellectual level of the debate here a little bit and stop posing false choices.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

There's still some time left under 29(2)(a).

Hon. members, if I could ask you just to keep the side conversations down to a murmur, please. Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief. I will have a little historical overview about the heritage trust fund. On July 3, 2014, the former Finance minister Ted Morton claimed that the Alberta government took in $216 billion in nonrenewable resource revenue between 1977 and 2013, the 36-year period in which the Alberta heritage trust fund has existed. Of that less than 6 per cent has been saved. The heritage trust fund was established in 1976 with an initial $1.5 billion deposit from royalties and another $600 million from general revenues. Between 1976 and 1982 the province saved 30 per cent of the resource revenues, and the heritage trust fund grew to be $12 billion. During this initial period it was estimated that the fund could top $50 billion by the year 2000 if we had been saving that 30 per cent in the heritage trust fund.

However, by 1982 Alberta had already ratcheted down the percentage of resource revenue saved to 15 per cent, and by 1987 the province stopped making deposits entirely. Alberta did not make a single deposit to the heritage trust fund between 1987 and 2005. Through the nineties our yearly income from our initial investment was spent, and over that time Alberta lost $7 billion to inflation alone. The Fraser Institute noted on March 4, 2013, in a report that between 1977 and 2011 the heritage fund earned $31.3 billion on its assets, but the Alberta government withdrew $29.6 billion. The report also says that as of December 31, 2012, the heritage fund was valued at $16.4 billion, not much more than its $12.7 billion value in 1987, when the province stopped making deposits linked to resource revenues.

The Calgary Chamber of Commerce calculated in 2011 that had Alberta continued to save 30 per cent of resource revenues in the heritage trust fund, it would now be worth over $128 billion, Mr. Speaker. Had we been saving, by the year 2012 we could have been sitting on a nest egg with $128 billion. You know, I think the income from $128 billion alone could have generated enough income to keep us off the roller coaster ride of oil prices.

By contrast – here comes Norway again – Norway's oil fund's formal name is the government pension fund global. It was worth $840 billion as of the end 2013. It grew by $200 billion in 2013 alone, Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that the country only started saving resource revenues in 1996. Though use of the fund is limited to 4 per cent, the amount of money that figure represents is growing. The oil fund has quadrupled in size since 2005 and will grow by 15 per cent by the year 2020. That's the government estimate there.

So that's a little bit about the history of the heritage trust fund. Mr. Lougheed was the visionary leader who established the heritage trust fund, and Norway and Alaska permanent funds were established way after Mr. Lougheed established it. So they took a page out of his book, and look where they are now and where we are now.

In 2014 the Alberta Liberal caucus opposed the Savings Management Act when it was debated and passed. The Savings Management Act was very vague about who would be eligible to receive funding through the Alberta future fund and the two endowment accounts. This lack of clarity could lead to monies going to private companies who really shouldn't be funded through such means. In the case of the Alberta future fund there was also the potential that it could be used as a form of slush fund to reward loyal corporations or individuals.

Our caucus was also critical of the fact that social innovation endowment was at least already intended to pave the way for the use of social impact bonds in Alberta. Budget 2014 revealed that Alberta is on track to be $21.6 billion in debt by 2016-17. Arguably, the government should not be creating new endowment funds as long as it's in debt and that debt continues to grow.

These are the reasons, Mr. Speaker, that we are going to support this bill, because it's going to repeal all those endowment funds, which were created under the former Premier's flag. So I will be supporting the bill, but those were the concerns.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Yeah. Mr. Speaker, I just need to quickly provide a point of clarification. I said that we had no debt. We do, obviously of course, have debt. We have no net debt, Mr. Speaker. I looked it up. Norway's net debt right now, their actual debt, is $115 billion. Obviously, they've built their debt to a point where their operational budget can't service that debt, so they're faced with a choice of raising taxes to cover their debt. They have no other choice, which is why they have, as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona pointed out, the impressive levels of taxation they have given the fact that they actually are in the no net position. They can't service their debt from their operational budget.

So I've got to ask the hon. member a question. Given the conversation today – for example, the NDs talked about: let's not cut any postsecondary education spending. We've talked about all this, levels of service. Even the Wildrose tonight said that we could have more services, Mr. Speaker. So how would the hon. member think that we should fund ourselves going forward? Should we increase the level of taxation in order to greatly increase the heritage savings trust fund and still provide services to Albertans? He's talking about a very, very impressive increase in the level of taxation. Would he support that, Mr. Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think we are on record to have the progressive tax, and if we bring in the progressive tax, we should adopt Saskatchewan's fiscal model, and I think they are the second lowest tax jurisdiction in the country. I think that will fix lots of our problems.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any others under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood on 29(2)(a).

Mr. Mason: Thank you. It's Calgary-McCall, right?

The Deputy Speaker: Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Mason: I'd like to just provide a little comment for the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall and just to indicate with respect to the comments made by the Energy minister that in fact Norway has – I'm looking at the debt clock. Now, this is the most right-wing economic website you'll ever find. You know, it's got all kind of ads for how you can get rid of Obama and all kinds of stuff, and they have it for every country, but they have a disclaimer underneath it for Norway saying that the net assets of Norway exceed their debt – the government assets exceed the debt – so they're in a positive position. I just wonder what the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall thinks about that.

Mr. Kang: Well, I think that had we kept our taxes where they were – like you said, we'd adopted a flat tax and the corporate tax cut, right? – I think we could have been in a better fiscal position, too. As long as there's no net debt, I think anybody will be in a better fiscal situation. I think Norway is still better than us. I think we should bring in a progressive tax. I think we should be saving for our future generations. We shouldn't be spending these royalties as fast as they come out of the ground, and we shouldn't be robbing our future generations from the kind of living standards that we have. They deserve a better living standard than what we have today. We have to fix our fiscal regime to save some for the future generations.

With the way oil prices are, what if they are down to 30 bucks a barrel? What are we going to do? How are we going to have the predictable, sustainable funding for even our operating budget, for our hospitals, for our teachers, for the schools? How are we going to build new roads? How are we going to build new hospitals? If we don't save anything, the money has to come from somewhere. We have to raise the taxes, or we have to borrow. What options do we have? We're still the lowest tax jurisdiction in the country, and I think that there should be fair taxation system in place. We should all be paying our fair share, and we are talking about paying the fair share.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Other speakers on the bill? The Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to stand and rise and engage in this debate on Bill 11, Savings Management Repeal Act. I always do enjoy it, especially when the other side actually does stand up and engage. Normally, we're used to just the heckling.

Mr. Mason: Which is better than snoring.

Mr. Wilson: It's true. That is better than the snoring, Member.

Here we are, Bill 11, and the thing that I love the most about this government, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that they are so willing to change. It reminds me, again, of another Winston Churchill quote. "To improve is to change; to be perfect is to change often." Well, I tell you, these guys are certainly striving for perfection, falling quite short but striving for perfection. I think that if they understood my sarcasm at all, they may wish to stop pounding on their desks. I don't think it's the kind of change that they should be all that proud of. In fact, I would suggest that there is one member across the aisle who has the ability to look anyone in the eyes and say that they believe wholeheartedly and have stood on their convictions around Bill 11, and, Mr. Speaker, that is the Member for Calgary-Varsity. She did what was right. She saw this Bill 1 come across last spring, and she saw it for what it was. She left, and she sat as an independent.

An Hon. Member: Was that why?

Mr. Wilson: That was one of the reasons why.

Here's what we're talking about, Mr. Speaker. We now see a PC caucus that's going to stand and defend the brilliance that they have around bringing forward Bill 11, which is simply repealing Bill 1, that they all stood and supported vehemently in the spring. It's ludicrous. It's kind of a phenomenon to watch. You know, we saw it during the summer, when our new Premier ran against this government's record. He ran hard. He ran hard, and he's still running.

9:30

It seems to me that the talk around the heritage savings trust fund is an important one to have. The case that my hon. colleague from Cypress-Medicine Hat laid out here was a hypothetical scenario. I'll give you another example of a hypothetical scenario. Let's just say that, hypothetically, the previous Premier, Premier Redford, was never your leader. Think about all the hypothetical scenarios you've run in your head over the past number of years had that not happened. Well, here's the hypothetical scenario that we are running on the heritage savings trust fund. It's pretty simple if you follow along. Peter Lougheed started the investment in 1976. It was a great idea. Let's save some money that we're making off of our resource revenue.

I remember my parents, when I was younger, Mr. Speaker, telling me how much pride they had in the fact that they were saving money for future generations and using that fund to set up a province that was going to prosper long into the future. It was a brilliant vision. The problem is that this government, when times got tough, continued to skim the interest off of the fund, and year after year after year what we've seen is this fund not actually grow.

Now, there may be a case to be made that that money at the time was necessary to be used and spent, but that's not what we're talking about. We're talking about the hypothetical scenario that that original investment had just simply been left in the fund as, for example, a retirement fund. This government often likes to compare the massive levels of debt it's taking on to a home mortgage. Well, let's talk about this in, you know, terms that maybe they'll understand. Let's think about it as though it's an RRSP, where you put money in and you allow the magic of compound interest to do its work, and over almost 40 years, 38 years later, that fund from its original investment would now be worth roughly $200 billion. That is simple compound interest. It's the same thing that we base our retirement plans on, Mr. Speaker.

When we talk about that, we say: let's, hypothetically, understand that from 1976 to 2013 we've got roughly $200 billion. We know that last year Leo de Bever and AIMCo were able to get a 16 per cent return on our heritage savings trust fund. That's pretty good money, and it's not too difficult to do the math to figure out what the return on that is. As the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat said, in a hypothetical world if you had $200 billion and you received 16 per cent interest in one year, $32 billion. That's not bad.

Now, again, what we're trying to discuss here is how great it would be to have that cushion right now as a province. We know that oil and gas go up and down. We understand that. Everyone gets it. It's part of living in this province. We've seen it time and time and time again. What we don't necessarily understand, Mr. Speaker, is the importance of having a plan that ensures that when you're spending money and you're spending taxpayers' dollars, you're doing it in a responsible way.

The Minister of Energy earlier tonight suggested that for the last four or five years their budgets have been spending less than the rate of population plus inflation. Now, I do not have the numbers in front of me, Mr. Speaker. I would be interested to see that. I'm not sure if he's referring simply to operational spending or if he's referring to the overall budget, but we have had some very, very, very high budgets in this province over the last number of years.

If the hon. Minister of Energy, who was first elected in 2004, will recall, there was also a savings fund called the sustainability fund in place when he got here. Ten years later that's gone, and we're now $11 billion in debt. Now, I'm not saying that it's simply his fault. It's obviously not. I'm saying that there is a class of government here. They can call it "under new management" all they want, but at the end of the day these are the same people that had that money in their savings, and it's the same people who find themselves in debt.

When he goes and compares what other members in this House are suggesting around Norway, that they have $150 billion of debt and their operational revenues can't actually even service that debt cost, well, that's the exact argument that we give on an almost daily basis about why we shouldn't be going into debt in an irresponsible fashion, because the debt-servicing costs are upwards of what is going to be a billion dollars out of our pocket, out of our own tax dollars right here in this province, by 2016.

This province isn't going to stop growing any time, Mr. Speaker, so what does that mean? Does that mean that we're $20 billion in debt by 2016, and then it's going to be okay to be $40 billion in debt by 2020? And then it's: "We're going to keep growing. We need some more hospitals. We need more roads. We need more schools." We understand all of these things. I guess it'll be okay if we're $60 billion in debt by 2024. It's just like a mortgage, right?

What we're talking about here: I'm happy to engage further. The Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill is glaring at me. I think it's important to reflect on what we can do now. We know where we're at, Mr. Speaker. We know that the heritage savings trust fund is worth roughly as much today as it was in 1976. We have an opportunity. It's going to be tough. We recognize that with the price of oil, there are going to be some very tough decisions to make. And I fully respect that the toughest thing that a government has to do is to make decisions and, you know, decide how they're going to spend scarce resources and how they're going to allocate those dollars. That is not going to be an easy task. I do not envy them. But it's what they asked for. They went around and knocked on every door in this province and asked for this opportunity, as did we. The people chose them. We're okay with that. That is now their task. That is what they have to do.

At the end of the day what we would like to be able to do, Mr. Speaker, is to say to the government: "Now that we're back in this really tight time, let's recognize the error of our past, that under Premier Stelmach we started spending at rates that were much higher than population and inflation. Let's use that knowledge to now recognize that we have to get back to that." When we do and we get to the point where we can start running surpluses again, it's time to seriously start reinvesting in that heritage savings trust fund.

We over here have been talking about 50 per cent of surplus dollars going directly into that. That's a manageable plan. That's surplus dollars. Now, we're starting a little bit behind the eight ball here, but that's okay. We've got, hopefully, some time. All that we're saying in these benches over here, Mr. Speaker, is that we need to find an alternative way of offsetting our oil and gas revenues in this province, and the way that we believe we can do that is by building that fund so that the interest generated from it weans us off our reliance on oil and gas. It's that simple.

Bill 11 is a good step in that direction. We believe that it was a mistake to set up those slush funds in the first place. We're happy to see the government come around and see the light.

With that, I'll take my chair. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. I'll recognize the Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do want to make a comment, and that is about the argument that the Member for Calgary-Shaw has made, and the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood and the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, as to the fact that we could have had all these billions – $20 billion, $200 billion, or whatever it is – if we only had kept all of the interest in the heritage savings fund.

Well, that's a specious and a fallacious approach to financial management, and the reason is because, number one, this government has had programs which are without parallel in any province in the country. Take seniors' programs, for example. We have the best seniors' programs in the country. We have a health care system that's the envy of many places around the world. If you're going to have a stroke or a heart attack, I tell you, have it in Edmonton or Calgary because you're going to be better treated there than in almost any place in the world. We've got an education system that is fantastic and that performs consistently amongst the best in the world. We have infrastructure that we've built with the savings after inflation-proofing, that we've built with the interest in the heritage savings. We've got schools, and we've got hospitals. We've got roads, we've got bridges, and we've got infrastructure that we would not have been able to build if we had just plowed it into some savings account.

We've got low taxes. Let's talk about the low tax regime that we have here in the province of Alberta. We wouldn't have had that low tax regime if we just piled all that money away. No, we wouldn't have it. No. Because you know what? That subsidized the programs and the infrastructure that we have. And the low taxes: guess what low taxes have done? They have caused people, businesses to come to this province because of the Alberta advantage. [interjections] Sorry?

The Deputy Speaker: Through the chair, hon. member.

Dr. Brown: They've caused businesses to come to this province, they've caused people to come to this province in unparalleled numbers, greater than in any other province in the country and better than in any other regime in North America. In fact, last year it was over 100,000 people that came. They voted with their feet for what we do in the province of Alberta, and it's not to stick money in a sock or put it under the mattress but to use it for the benefit of Albertans.

The Deputy Speaker: The Member for Calgary-Shaw to respond.

Mr. Wilson: Well, I didn't quite get a question in there, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the feedback, and it's very difficult to disagree with the fact that what we have in Alberta is a fantastic province. There's no question. We have a lot of things to be proud of here. We do. It's not just simply because of the PC government, though. Some would argue that it's despite them.

I'll start with health care. We spend more per capita on our health care system than many of the other provinces across the country do, and we all know that our health care system, once you're in it, is fantastic. Absolutely. There's no question. We get some of the best front-line service you can get in this country. The hon. member is correct. The problem is the administration of our health care system. The costs in Alberta per capita are much higher than in other provinces, and it doesn't translate into better service as a whole.

We'll talk about the education system. Sure, we've got a good education system. Again, no question. Standards are slipping. We're not in a perfect scenario. Mr. Speaker, our PATs just came back, and our scores are declining.

We're talking also about seniors. [interjection] I love the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, and I would just ask, Mr. Speaker, just one time that he have the capacity to have the courage to stand in this House and talk about the convictions that he clearly doesn't actually have. You just sit there and you heckle and you heckle and you heckle.

Mr. Dorward: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, you have a citation for this point of order?

Mr. Dorward: Yes. It's Standing Order 23(h), "Makes allegations against another Member," that I sit here and heckle and heckle and heckle. I don't think I heckle, heckle, heckle.

Mr. Wilson: To respond to the point of order, Mr. Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: Yes, please.

Mr. Wilson: I believe that truth is the ultimate defence, and I don't believe that there's a single member in this House who would not agree that the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar has a bit of a habit of heckling from his chair. I'll allow you to make your ruling, but an allegation, Mr. Speaker, would be something that, according to the next citation under Standing Order 23, would probably also require it to be false.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, did you want to get in on this?

Hon. members, I think we seem to be looking for a clarification here, and I think the point has been sufficiently clarified between the two members.

If I don't hear otherwise, I'll invite the Member for Calgary-Shaw to continue for another 37 seconds under this 29(2)(a) if you so desire.

Debate Continued

Mr. Wilson: I will finish my 37 seconds. I appreciate the opportunity to address this House.

What I will say is that I agree with a lot of what the Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill has suggested. I agree that everyone in this House – it doesn't matter which party you're from or whether you're sitting as an independent in this House – wants to make this province the best it possibly can be. We just may have different ideas and different views about how it is that we're going to get there. But what you cannot question and what no member in this House should be able to question is the outcome that every one of us here is looking to achieve, and that outcome is the best possible Alberta that we can have.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Are there other speakers to the bill at this point?

Hon. Members: Question.

The Deputy Speaker: Seeing none, the question has been called.

I'll offer to someone on behalf of the Minister of Treasury Board to close debate.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Mr. Speaker, I move that we close debate, please.

[Motion carried; Bill 11 read a second time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour and the progress made tonight and the exhausting debate we've had to this point, I would like to move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 9:46 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Dear God and Holy Creator, help us to remember that as elected members of this Assembly, we are but servants gathered here to represent a diversity of people. May the common thoughts that unite us shine ever much brighter than those that divide us. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South, the legislative secretary of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly the delegation from the Eastern Cape Provincial Legislature: Ms Ndlangisa-Makaula, Mr. Sokujika, Mr. Lwane, Mr. Gqobana, Mr. Botha, Dr. Mbanga, Mr. Basson, and Mr. Langbooi. The delegation is visiting to learn more about our province's best practices in community planning, public service, and sustainability. Alberta is a province with strong international ties, and this includes our long-standing relationship with Eastern Cape and South Africa, Alberta's largest sub-Saharan trading partner. Like Alberta, South Africa is defined by diversity that includes a wide range of cultures and languages, and through our similarities there is a lot we can learn from each other. It is a great pleasure to welcome the delegation on their official visit to our province. We look forward to exchanging expertise and to the great achievements future collaboration will bring. The delegation is seated in your gallery, and I would now ask that our honoured guests please rise and receive the best wishes along with the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: We usually begin with school groups, so let's start with Edmonton-Calder and go on to the Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise and introduce six students and a teacher from Inner City High School in Edmonton-Calder. Inner City High School is on 101st Street and is a remarkable institution. I'm very happy to see the guests here today. I hope they can rise and receive the warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services, followed by Sherwood Park.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly some constituents from Edmonton-Glenora. I'd ask that they rise when I say their name, please: Ms Natasha Foran, Ms Linda Willis, Mrs. Cindy Paziuk, Mr. Kevin Inkster, Ms Margaret Ingibergsson, Ms Lisa Weber, Ms Brittney Ann Gray, Mrs. Beryl Keller, Ms Sonya Witzman, and Mr. Mark Woodhouse. Welcome. I'd ask all hon. members to welcome them to the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature a group of students from the constituency of Sherwood Park and New Horizons School. They're accompanied by their teacher, Phaidra Ruck. I had the pleasure of visiting with these students about a month ago, and we had our own version of question period. We had a great time. If we could all join in and show them the warm welcome of the Assembly. Thanks for being here.

The Speaker: Thank you to those hon. members for keeping their introductions relatively brief. Let's see if we can keep that trend going.

The Minister of Education, followed by Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Dirks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly three individuals visiting today from Let's Talk Science, an award-winning national charitable organization that designs and delivers learning programs and services to engage children, youth, and educators in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics. Founded in 1993, Let's Talk Science has engaged with more than 2.6 million children, youth, and educators across Canada. I met with this group earlier today, and we chatted about all of the amazing things the organization is doing for Albertan and Canadian students. We look forward to seeing them tonight, along with colleagues from the Legislature, at their reception. I'd like my guests, who are seated in the members' gallery, to please rise as I say their name: Dr. Bonnie Schmidt, president and founder; Sara Steers, director, external relations; and Michael Gingras, corporate account manager for Amgen Canada. Let's give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise to introduce to you and through to all members of the Assembly my guests, Anand Sharma and Gregory Clark. My guests are both members of the Canadian Condominium Institute northern Alberta chapter, or CCI. Anand has been elected as president of CCI north Alberta for three years in a row and is also a senior property manager for CS Management. Gregory Clark is a board member of CCI, since 2008, and is currently first vice-president. Both Anand and Gregory are here today to ask the government to put Bill 9 on hold until further consultation has taken place. CCI feels strongly that this bill falls short on protecting condominium owners. I would ask my guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly my three guests, who are all part of my Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood constituency team. Susan Petrina manages the office. She's an active member of the community and has called Highlands home for 10 years, during which, among many other things, she served two terms as president of the Highlands Community League. Claire Edwards is my caseworker.

She's a former Assembly page and a third-year honours political science student, who has actively engaged in many youth organizations, including serving as chair of the City of Edmonton Youth Council. Marissa Majek is our placement student from the Grant MacEwan University social work program. I would ask Susan, Claire, and Marissa to rise now and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, I understand that your guests are not here yet, so we will move on to Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two introductions. Firstly, I am delighted to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly two passionate members of ACCD, the Alberta Committee of Citizens with Disabilities. They are Bev Matthiessen and Jackie Beaton. ACCD happens to be in Edmonton-Meadowlark. There are many reasons that persons with disabilities run into problems while visiting their local physicians' offices, so Bev and Jackie have meticulously developed drawings for optimum space use in examination rooms, change rooms, and entrances to medical clinics in order to accommodate people with all kinds of disabilities. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, my second introduction is Helen McMenamin, a hard-working Albertan from southern Alberta. In fact, she almost became an MLA in one of the ridings in southern Alberta for the Liberals. I welcome Helen to the Legislative Assembly. Thank you, Helen.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. McDonald: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a board member from the Northern Alberta Development Council, Mr. Andre Harpe. He has been a board member since 2009. He's in our members' gallery today. I'll ask him to rise and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

1:40 Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have two minutes each for our statements. Let us begin with Lethbridge-West, followed by Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Antelope Hill Provincial Park

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the act of a great and generous Albertan. Gottlob Schmidt, a retired farmer near Hanna, gifted his homestead of 380 hectares to the people of Alberta. This is a most generous offer, and I am challenged to adequately express in words the appreciation of this wonderful and unselfish act. Mr. Schmidt donated his land to the people of Alberta for their use and enjoyment. The land is home to a healthy ecosystem that supports rare native grasslands and unique wildlife species. It is an unbroken landscape of majestic rolling hills and wetlands stretching across a portion of the east-central prairie region.

As per his wish the land, recently established as Antelope Hill provincial park, will be managed to support conservation, preservation, and low-impact recreation use such as hiking. Mr.

Speaker, hunting, off-highway vehicle use, and overnight camping will not be permitted within the park. It is the desire of Mr. Schmidt that the integrity of this land be maintained for future generations. Alberta will honour his request. The new park will open to Albertans after Schmidt has departed his homestead.

When the government announced the land donation last week, social media lit up with hundreds of messages of appreciation towards Mr. Schmidt. His donation has been called an incredible stand-up gesture; a legacy to our children, plants, and animals; and generous and forward thinking. Praise of Mr. Schmidt included heart of gold; a sweet, beautiful man; and inspiring. The thank you messages have been many, and it's evident Mr. Schmidt has touched the hearts of Albertans.

I can assure all Albertans that the province will be responsible stewards of his legacy contribution. This land donation not only advances Alberta's plan for parks by acquiring new lands for the purpose of conservation; it aligns directly with our government's mandate.

On behalf of our government I thank Mr. Gottlob Schmidt for his generous donation.

Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Mr. Barnes: Picture this: a trust fund that was on this very day at the $200 billion mark. You know, that was a real possibility for the Alberta heritage savings trust fund when the act was given royal assent in 1976. It's now 2014, and what do we have to show for the tremendous natural resources this province has developed? Just $17.4 billion, less than this fund was worth in the '70s. Albertans have been deprived of a trust that would ensure their prosperity if the price of oil dropped 40 per cent in just a few weeks. The resource revenues that were meant to grow this fund combined with annual compound interest on Alberta's capital were to be a lifeline for vital public services and future generations. This possible figure, $200 billion, was attainable with just the initial deposit and could now have been reached if interest on the fund was just left alone and allowed to accumulate.

However, what we have seen is a government so fiscally irresponsible that it's put all this interest in with general revenues and used this money as part of general spending. The impacts of this are huge. This government has created so much generational debt that multiple generations will be required to pay back this current administration's spending. Right now we are approximately $11 billion in debt. This will reach $19 billion by 2016-17, Mr. Speaker, more debt than savings. If unchecked, this will inevitably mean more taxes and reduced services, something this government has already discussed. Either way we are asking future generations to accept less. The current status of this fund showcases one of the greatest examples of wealth squandering in Canadian history.

The Wildrose has a plan that will take 50 per cent of all future surpluses and save this asset for Alberta's future, and we would not raid this account for operational spending. Mr. Speaker, we have a plan to rebuild this fund and deliver good government.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, followed by Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Great Kids Awards

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Leadership is essential to building our province, and when we consider leaders, we typically think of adults. However, we should also pay mind to Alberta's young people. Young Albertans deserve to be recognized for doing great things every day at home, at school, and in their communities, and that's why I'm pleased to remind Albertans that they still have a few hours to get their nominations in for the Great Kids awards. In May 2015 for the 15th year the province will present the Great Kids award to 16 children and youth for their outstanding determination, generosity, and compassion. Albertans between the ages of five and 18 can be nominated for selflessness, kindness, and courage.

For examples we need look no further than last year's recipients. One seven-year-old created a surprise package company, leaving surprise gifts on the doorsteps of those facing hardships. This included delivering homemade cards to three children who had lost their mother to breast cancer.

An eight-year-old recipient had more than 50 radiation treatments for eye cancer, and despite this she handed out lemonade to more than 2,000 volunteers during the flooding in southern Alberta.

The recipients and nominees are very well rounded, showing leadership in areas such as sports, volunteering, and the classroom. The awards are examples of how communities come together and celebrate the efforts of our young people. As a government we want to continue recognizing more young Albertans so we can share their inspiring stories.

Mr. Speaker, today I encourage all Albertans to nominate a child or youth for positively impacting our communities or the lives of Albertans. Albertans can find more information at www.greatkids.alberta.ca and nominate a young person. Now, the deadline is today, December 9, at midnight. For those of you who do best under deadline pressures, there's still time to get those nominations in, so please do it. Nominate a great kid today.

Rural Health Care

Dr. Starke: Mr. Speaker, in the past week there's been a lot of talk about hospitals in Alberta. Some are saying that we should close rural hospitals. Earlier this fall our Premier and Health minister asked me to examine rural health care along with an outstanding group of dedicated health care professionals and advocates, and our diagnosis was quite different.

Just like folks in cities, folks in rural Alberta get sick. They get hurt, they have babies, they contract infections, they get cancer, they suffer from mental illness, their organs fail, and at some point their earthly journey ends and they die. It's called being human. But shutting down facilities and forcing more rural Albertans to drive to big-city hospitals to access basic health services is not human. It's inhumane. And, no, our hospitals aren't as full as the ones in the big cities, but isn't the point to keep people healthy and out of the hospital? In my practice a pen full of sick feedlot calves or a kennel full of sick dogs had me asking: what am I doing wrong?

Rural Albertans have told us that their medical facilities have tremendous untapped potential and that they could take the strain off urban facilities. They're not talking about heart transplants or brain surgery. They understand that those have to be done at urban tertiary care centres. They're talking about everyday stuff and stuff that goes beyond the every day. They've told us about advanced orthopaedic rehabilitation that takes place in Daysland. They've told us about a clinic that's located in a repurposed space in a hospital, that has driven ER visits way down by stressing prevention. Where? In Vulcan. That's what they mean when they say: live long and prosper. Mr. Speaker, ambulance workers do patient rounds alongside the staff at a long-term care centre; they perform treatments and keep their skills sharp. It's all happening in Galahad, population 119.

Mr. Speaker, we know that rural health care faces challenges, but closing rural hospitals is not the answer. The ingenuity of rural caregivers and community leaders is.

The Speaker: Thank you.

We have time for one more. Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Travel Insurance

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The holiday season is fast approaching, and many Albertans will be travelling outside the province to visit family and friends in other countries or to simply get some much-needed hot weather and relaxation. We want Albertans to enjoy their holidays and not find themselves in a poor financial situation because of inadequate travel health insurance.

We've all heard stories of people who've travelled outside of Alberta and suddenly fallen ill. When these Albertans, who are accustomed to our universal health care system, try to access life-saving services, they suddenly learn that they must pay out of pocket to receive care, and these fees can be astronomical. The Alberta health care insurance plan may provide only partial reimbursement for some health care services provided outside of Canada. That is why it's important for all Albertans to not only get travel insurance but ensure that they understand exactly what services are covered.

Our priority is to provide Albertans with high-quality care inside our province, but we cannot cover all medical costs incurred outside the country. Before leaving the country, Albertans should make sure they understand what the Alberta health care insurance plan covers outside of Alberta and what it doesn't, purchase travel insurance and fully understand the coverage, and pack their personal health care card, travel insurance documents, and the emergency contact number for their travel insurance.

I encourage all Albertans to purchase travel medical insurance before they travel out of our country. We don't want Albertans to have their holiday ruined by having to pay out of pocket for unexpected health issues and very expensive medical services.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I hope everybody enjoys their holidays.

1:50

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: We are reminded that we each have 35 seconds. Let's start with the hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Long-term Care Beds

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the Health minister, the Seniors minister, and AHS were in front of the Public Accounts Committee today. Albertans know that seniors' care in Alberta is a mess, but what we heard today was truly eye-popping. In the face of all of the evidence that this province has a serious shortage of long-term care nursing beds, an AHS executive actually said that we have an overcapacity of long-term care nursing beds. Can anyone over there tell us how Alberta Health Services could get it so wrong?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I think the individual was referring to different parts of the province that might have a few too many beds. Long-term care beds can be used by anyone, so having too many long-term care beds is good because we can move people up and down in the service level. So I think it's a positive thing, even though I believe the question was a bit misunderstood.

Ms Smith: That's a very generous interpretation, Mr. Speaker.

It seems what is actually happening is that AHS is preparing to win the war on long-term care bed shortages by changing the definition and then declaring victory. AHS wants to declare that patients who require long-term nursing care beds don't actually need it and then move them into lower level, supportive living beds. This bureaucratic dodge will actually make the system worse. Will the Health minister commit to using actual medical need to evaluate who requires long-term nursing care?

Mr. Mandel: I thank the hon. member for the question. Obviously, there is a process under which we look at and review through professionals the calibre of care individuals need. In this government and in AHS that's the foundation. We'll make sure that people get the right kind of care in the right kind of facility, and we will continue to do that, Mr. Speaker.

Ms Smith: Oh, Mr. Speaker, if only that were so. Anyone with any common sense knows that if you move patients who need long-term care into supportive living care, they will just end up in our already overcrowded emergency wards and in our acute-care beds in our hospitals, ambulance times will suffer, patients will get lesser care, and since acute-care beds cost so much more than long-term care nursing beds, the taxpayer will be hurt, too. Will the minister commit to killing this bad idea right here, right now?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this year the Premier and I put forward a program of trying to create more long-term care beds for those people living in acute care. We'd now like to report that we have 160, one-third of the beds that we promised for this period of time, already open and operational. So we're quite pleased with that. At the same time, we will ensure that every Albertan who needs long-term care or who needs care will be in the right kind of facility they need to be in. We're passionate about that, just like I know the hon. member is.

The Speaker: Second main set of questions. The hon. leader.

Seniors' Advocate

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our health care system is continuing to let Alberta seniors down, but we will always fight to see that they get the services and the protection that they deserve. One of the ways we have suggested that the government could improve services for seniors is to have an independent Seniors' Advocate who would be able to access government and AHS files and stand up for seniors. Now, the old management didn't want an independent Seniors' Advocate, but will the new management show that they are different by creating a truly independent Seniors' Advocate?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, let me just say, firstly, that the matters that are being raised by the hon. member are important to the government, important to the minister who has spoken, and they're very important to me as the Premier. I've lived through these circumstances in my own life with my own parents for the last 15 years of my life. It is difficult for all Albertans.

I don't think the answer is more bureaucracy. I don't think the answer is that we have advocates. I think the answer is to get the job done. That's why we have a Seniors minister who can speak to the specifics. That's why we're focused on making sure that we have the continuing care beds that we need for the people who are important to us, our parents.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since we already have a Seniors' Advocate, we are just asking that they be allowed to do their job more effectively.

Here's what the Auditor General has said about the Seniors' Advocate. "The seniors advocate does not have a mandate to compel facilities or AHS to take action or provide detailed information related to concerns raised by residents." Mr. Speaker, if an advocate cannot advocate or shine the light on concerns, the office is essentially useless. Why won't the government create an actual, real, independent, and meaningful Seniors' Advocate that can shine the light on problems and help improve the system?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, we want a Seniors' Advocate that can be as efficient as possible, just like every department within government and every role within government. That's why it was established here this last year. If there are ways that we can look to make that more efficient and the Seniors' Advocate can serve seniors across the province and can serve Albertans, then we're open to looking at those. The primary role that that advocate plays now is one of navigation to help seniors and their families as they need to navigate the system and get questions answered.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, I will quote the minister on that, too, because this is exactly what the Auditor General said as well. He said that the role of the Seniors' Advocate is "primarily to educate residents and their families and help them navigate through the system." What we have here seems to be more of a seniors' tour guide than an advocate. If the system is broken and the government won't do anything to fix it, how does navigating through a broken system actually help our seniors?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I think that's hardly a fair characterization. We've got incredible people across this province and incredible providers from faith-based and nonprofits to even some of the privates that do incredible work with our seniors. To characterize the work that they're doing as broken is, I think, an incredible insult. We want to continue to try and do a better job of everything, but the Seniors' Advocate does have the authority to call for investigations and do a lot of very good work. If we can build on that, if we can make that more effective, we're more than game to do that, and we'll look to do that in the new year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Long-term and Continuing Care Standards

Mrs. Forsyth: A year and a half ago this government promised change for seniors in care. On March 5, 2013, the former Minister of Health announced that continuing care residents will receive a minimum of two baths a week effective immediately. The minister said: "It is an issue of dignity." This morning at Public Accounts we learned that this dignity is still being denied to Alberta seniors. Officials admitted that a number of seniors in care were still not even being offered two baths a week. Can the minister explain why a year and a half after the government promised seniors their dignity, they're still not getting it?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we indicated this morning, well over 80 per cent of the facilities are compliant with the two-baths option, and by the end of the year we will have 100 per cent compliance. Two baths a week is an option if appropriate.

We have to look at what is appropriate for the care. The only rule is: whatever is appropriate based on the care plan. The care plan as outlined by the Auditor General was the one that determines how we deal with the individual. So that's how we do it.

Mrs. Forsyth: Minister, we're talking about hundreds of seniors that still aren't getting baths. Come on, please.

Minister, this is about dignity. Your government is failing to enforce the standards that you yourself have set for the most vulnerable people in our province. A year and a half ago we were told that seniors could access two baths per week immediately, in fact. The Minister of Seniors at the time said: "I want to stress that two baths is a minimum." If a resident requires more, "they will receive more." It turns out that that's not actually happening. Minister, this is a broken promise. What are you going to do about it?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we've committed to ensuring that all of our individuals living in long-term care facilities will be properly taken care of. Whatever that requirement is, we'll make sure we do it. We care passionately about people. We'll continue to do that. Right now the policy is that those who need two baths a week will have two baths a week. We wish it had been done sooner, but it will be done by the end of this month. This is the 9th; that's 22 days.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, we're talking about a year and a half. These seniors have been waiting for baths. The new management has failed to follow through on a promise made to Alberta's most vulnerable. It failed to provide even the dignity and basic compassion of two baths a week to seniors in care. It's shameful. Albertans were promised better, and actually they deserve better.

The Department of Health began updating the continuing care health service standards three years ago, and the Auditor General says that it's still not complete. We have the old standards being ignored and the new standards in limbo. Minister, can you look Albertans in the eye and tell them that you've made progress?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, with the co-operation of the Seniors minister and with the support of the Premier we have made great strides in ensuring that our seniors community who are in the facilities that we either sponsor or own are taken care of incredibly well. They are unbelievably valuable to us. They are our parents, our cousins, our family members. We care deeply about them, and to insinuate that we wouldn't take care of them properly is not accurate.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

2:00

Government Accountability

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To usher in his so-called era of new management, the Premier promised a review of all agencies, boards, and commissions. The previous regimes promised the same thing. Premier Stelmach ordered a review of ABCs. Premier Redford had a results-based budgeting scheme. Yet after all these internal PC reviews, Albertans still aren't sure where all their money is going. Alberta Liberals have called for an independent audit to get to the bottom of this, but the PCs have refused. To the Premier. You promised that a performance report on Alberta's key financial institutions would be completed by now. Where is the report, what did it say, and what are the results?

Mr. Prentice: Well, as the hon. member is alluding to, I made it very clear, Mr. Speaker, as Premier that all of the agencies, boards, and commissions of the Alberta government would be put through a review. We began – the hon. member is quite correct – with the financial agencies of the government of Alberta, including agencies such as AIMCo, the board of directors of Alberta Treasury Branches, and others. I'm expecting the recommendations from the independent panel, that was appointed, within the next week or so. Those certainly will be made public, and we'll proceed on the basis of the advice that we're given.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the Premier said that he was forming a Premier's advisory committee on the civil service to make merit-based appointments that ensure that the right people are in the right jobs. That committee is co-chaired by one Mr. Ian Brodie, former chief of staff to Prime Minister Harper and former executive director of the Conservative Party. In his bio Mr. Brodie brags that he recommended candidates for more than 1,000 cabinet-appointed positions. Wow. Again to the Premier: how is hand-picking a clearly partisan individual to oversee appointments not the very opposite of ensuring that decisions will be made based on merit, unless your idea of the right person is a Tory insider?

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, that's quite a stretch. Mr. Brodie is a respected Albertan. He did a tour of duty as the chief of staff to the Prime Minister of Canada, acquitted himself with real distinction in the time that he was there. He co-chairs this particular advisory panel. I would point out that the other co-chair is Oryssia Lennie, who is one of the most respected civil servants in our province's history, someone who's been a deputy minister provincially, federally, well known and well respected for her integrity. These are the kinds of people whose advice we need if we're going to build a quality civil service.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, since the Premier and the Prime Minister are such close friends, I'd like to remind him that his former boss said that a public appointments commission was an important step towards a more open, honest, and accountable government for Canadians. Presumably, the Premier, who was then part of the inner cabinet circle, agreed. Actions speak louder than words. So far all we've seen out of this new-management Premier is one political appointment after another. To the Premier: will you please take real steps to prevent patronage by letting an independent commission manage the public appointments process in Alberta – yes or no – and if not, why not?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that the hon. member was working himself up to congratulate the government on the selection of two very distinguished Albertans to chair the public service advisory committee because these are capable people with lifetimes of experience around government. We are interested in renewal of the civil service, the professionalism of the civil service, a strong working relationship between the professional civil servants we have and people who are in elected office. This is where we will get the advice of excellent people. I thank the hon. member for his interest. I can't comment on matters of federal jurisdiction.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Ms. Notley: Mr. Speaker, call it a bitumen bubble or a price trough, it's all code for the same thing: another Tory budget full of broken promises. In 2011 Ed Stelmach's council for economic strategy warned that too much program spending was coming from royalty revenue. My question is to the Premier. You've had years to get off this royalty roller coaster so that public programs will be protected, not cut, so why should Albertans trust your government now when it has done nothing but fail consistently year after year after year?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've actually had about 90 days. I am working on it. I think it's fair to say that people world-wide have been surprised by the drop in energy prices. This is a significant issue for our province. It is a time for caution and discipline in our public expenditures. I spoke about this today to the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, assured Albertans that Albertans are tough and resilient. They expect in these circumstances that their government will be disciplined, conservative-minded. That's what we intend to bring to the public finances.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's only been 90 days if the whole caucus over there is suffering from collective amnesia.

Now, today the Premier's speech included at least five different ways of telling regular Albertans that they and their families will experience tough times through cuts as his government scrambles to fix its multidecade's record of mismanagement yet not one word about fair taxes for the most wealthy and the most privileged. To the Premier: why won't you deliver a similarly conservative and prudent message to your well-heeled friends and insiders and axe the flat tax?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm encouraged that the hon. member and the leader of that party is concerned about taxes and fiscal matters. This is progress. In terms of moving forward, we have the most competitive tax regime in the country. It's something that we're proud of. Many call it the Alberta advantage. It is a fair system of taxation. The flat tax in particular has many strong advocates. But I make the point that this is a competitive advantage which we have as a province. We're mindful of that. We're focused on discipline and being cautious and protecting that advantage.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker. It's not fair. Tax cuts brought in since 2001 have only benefited the wealthiest Albertans. Middle-income families pay more than in B.C. and Ontario while corporations and the most wealthy have the lowest taxes in the country. But when the price of oil drops, the government circles the wagons around tax holidays for their friends and insiders while cuts are made to services that middle- and lower income Albertans depend on. So to the Premier: why are you once again expecting average Albertans to pay the price for this PC government's failure to get off of the royalty roller coaster?

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, just to be clear in terms of the public record, Albertans enjoy a competitive tax advantage over any other jurisdiction in this country. It is true. It is true in terms of sales tax. It is true in terms of personal income tax. It is true in terms of gasoline tax. It is true, essentially, in terms of the health care situation. It's true across all of the levels of taxation that Albertans pay. So this is something that is part of the competitive advantage that we enjoy as a province. We face very serious fiscal circumstances – I've made that very clear – but abandoning the tax advantage that we have is not part of the solution.

The Speaker: Let us reduce our preambles to supplementaries or eliminate them completely, starting with Calgary-Shaw.

PDD Service Changes

Mr. Wilson: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week the minister of PDD said in this House:

PDD transformation is [all] about the individuals. It's about their needs, their goals, and their aspirations. As a government we will continue to make sure that their needs are met in a very consistent and timely manner.

It all sounds so nice. As a result of the PDD transformation, though, the new process to determine supports requires assist assessment, in-depth support planning by PDD, and meetings that can take months to arrange, resulting in delays during which vulnerable people are left with no supports. So can the minister clarify what he considers timely?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government is focused on ensuring that every Albertan enjoys the best quality of life. There are three factors when we're talking about funding. SIS, supports intensity scale, is an interview which is used for the support an individual needs to be successful. It's about their needs, about their goals. It's about their aspirations. The second thing that is used is geographical location, which is used when determining funding; and thirdly, the natural supports that individual has to be successful.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Wilson: Mr. Speaker, I'm not so sure the minister heard the question, so I'll make it very, very simple. What does your ministry consider to be a reasonable amount of time from when an individual contacts the PDD system asking for support and, assuming they qualify, starting to receive it?

2:10

The Speaker: The associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Once the individual contacts the department, once the assessment has been made, the services start almost fairly quickly. In the PDD system we serve more than 10,000 people, and there is a process which is used to determine the funding. When we look at the overall success rate, less than 5 per cent of the people ask for reassessment. Out of 10,000 people, which we're serving in PDD alone, about 450 people ask . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Wilson: We got our answer, Mr. Speaker. It's "almost fairly quickly."

The tragic death of Betty Anne Gagnon was an example of someone who was known to the PDD system but not receiving the supports that would have ensured that someone saw her and intervened on her behalf. Vulnerable Albertans are being left waiting for this government to act, and there does not seem to be any sense of urgency in ensuring that the needs of these individuals are being met. Minister, will you commit to setting timelines around determining support and hold your ministry accountable for meeting them?

Mr. Bhardwaj: Mr. Speaker, as we go through the process, there are absolute timelines in place to make sure that Albertans get the care they deserve, make sure that they are safe, and make sure that they are in a caring environment.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West, followed by Highwood.

Provincial Fiscal Position

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the price of oil continued to plummet last week, the Finance minister was meeting with chief economists from across Canada. I've got to say that I received a lot of calls from residents of Edmonton-South West on yesterday's drop to $63 oil. This morning it's continued to $62. To the Minister of Finance. This is looking and sounding a lot like the 2008-2009 financial crisis, plain and simple. Is your department expecting a repeat, and are we heading into a recession?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of Finance has indicated, we are going to make some tough decisions in regard to our upcoming budget, based on sound, conservative fiscal principles, as I've spoken about in this House. That work is under way right now, at this point in time, but no decisions have been made at this point relative to next year's budget. Our main priority is actually focusing on the current fiscal year and the reality of $63 oil, the WTI price that we witnessed yesterday. All ministers certainly have been advised that there will be no new spending for the rest of the year and that they must find savings within their budgets. This is conservative budgeting in practice.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Premier and the Finance minister have repeatedly spoken about the need for a disciplined approach to spending and given that we in Edmonton-South West need our schools, can the Premier outline any immediate measures that this government will take to restrain spending? I'm hoping that this doesn't affect the projects in my area.

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board.

Mr. Campbell: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's a great question, but I think it's important to understand that we do have some serious challenges ahead of us, with oil dropping as far as it has over the last 10 days. I can say to you that this government is looking towards making sure that we look after our operating expenses, and we're also going to make sure that we look after our capital expenses. I think it's important to understand that while oil revenues have dropped, the economy of this province is still growing, so we still have the challenges of people coming to this province. We'll have to find that balance between looking after our operating expenses and making sure that we build the schools that are needed moving forward.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Back to the Minister of Finance: given that you say that all of us across Alberta will need to be aware of this pending financial situation and the continued drop in oil, what action is the government and specifically your department taking immediately to be fiscally responsible?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the Premier said earlier, we have made sure that there will be no new spending. We have told all our departments that they have to find any monies within their existing budgets. We'll be moving forward with very prudent and very fiscally responsible prices for oil, coming out in next year's budget. In talking to chief economists on Thursday, they told us that oil is going to be between $70 and $75 for at least the next three years out. I think that all Albertans need to know that. We'll be making sure that we're very responsible with our operating expenses based on those numbers.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Highwood, followed by Little Bow.

EcoAg Initiatives Environmental Compliance

Ms Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Some years ago the government approved and partially funded a project in my riding by a company called EcoAg, that is supposed to turn agricultural waste into high-quality compost. The project appears to be a failure, and the firm has been repeatedly fined for excessive waste at their facility. This poses health risks to the livestock in surrounding areas, and it poses a massive risk to groundwater. The firm has been under compliance orders to ensure water protection, but neighbours report that things are not improving. Why has the government failed to protect the environment, especially our groundwater, on this spot?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you for the question. Mr. Speaker, the groundwater in this province is extremely important. That's why we do the mapping, and that's why we have strict regulations. All of that is important for this government. If there are instances where faults are happening with the environment, we will be there and will make sure that it is protected.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, EcoAg is years past the date they said that they would be operational. Waste continues to be trucked in, but very little is being processed. This needs to stop. The stored waste material either needs to be reclaimed properly, or the facility needs to get up and running to reduce the material on-site by having it properly processed in a biogas reactor. What is the minister going to do to fix this mess and protect our environment?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's very important that this situation is taken care of properly. We will be talking with the minister of environment when he gets back so that he can be made aware of it as well. If there are things that are not happening, to make sure that it's working properly, we'll look into it for the hon. member.

Ms Smith: I hope that's the case, Mr. Speaker, but this is not the first time this question has been asked.

EcoAg has been an environmental and economic wreck using taxpayers' money. Also, the government can claim to have done something about the environment, but what's really happening is that groundwater has been polluted, taxpayers' money has been wasted, and neighbouring properties have been devalued. Now, the Premier claims that he wants to protect property rights. Will the government compensate EcoAg's neighbours for their legal costs in fighting this boondoggle, that should have been addressed years ago?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I have said, we make sure in this province that in the south and in the north – and we'll continue with the rest of the province – we're doing groundwater mapping. It's very, very important for us to make sure that groundwater mapping is done. As I have said, when the minister is back, we'll have him look into this file.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Fusarium Head Blight

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This spring the hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock brought forward Bill 201, Fusarium head blight. It was sent to the committee and had some very valuable discussion this summer. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. What happened to the report, and when will it be tabled?

The Speaker: The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the member for the question. The hon. member is correct. The matter was referred to a standing committee. The bill died on the Order Paper, but in the meantime the standing committee did their report, they tabled their report this past summer, and it is actually available on the committee's website.

Mr. Donovan: To the same minister: given that the seed growers have already cleaned their seed for next year, when will this department come up with a timeline for seed growers to be able to keep the economic advantage in this province?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, this is an interesting issue because there are very strong feelings on both sides of this issue, depending upon what part of the province you go to. The committee itself recommended that we do not relax the zero-tolerance rule that we now have, but they also recommended that there be a further review. That review is happening. If you go to the north part of the province, there's a very strong feeling that we should not relax the rule, and if you go to the south of the province and you talk to our seed growers, they feel exactly the opposite. So it's a very delicate question.

Mr. Donovan: To the same minister: with best management practices already in place for seed growers to deal with the Fusarium – and we're already doing mandatory testing – when will this minister look at the tolerance level that the industry is asking for?

Mr. Olson: Well, first of all, it may not be entirely accurate to say that the industry is asking for it. I do also note that our service boards and our AAMD and C have also said that they prefer to leave it as the status quo, but this is damaging for our seed growing industry. We are looking for some resolution, and one of the things that has been recommended that we look at, which we are considering, with no decision having been made, is a regional approach. I am awaiting a report from my Fusarium Action Committee, and we can expect perhaps some further steps to be taken in the early new year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Edmonton-Calder.

Seniors' Care

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Health care continues from crisis to crisis, with worsening hospital overcapacity, unacceptable emergency room risks to both patients and staff, severe quality and access problems in long-term care, and inadequate community home care. Given that staff today in Public Accounts admitted that there is no process to evaluate home care, especially privately contracted home care, which is out of the purview of the Auditor

General, to the Health minister: how is it possible that in 2014 we have no idea what's happening to tens of millions of dollars in home care?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we do evaluate. We make sure that the services are delivered in an effective way. We have good, competent people doing it. We want to make sure that all people are taken care of. Home care is a bit more difficult than having a single facility like a long-term care facility, but we are making every effort to ensure that services are delivered properly and effectively.

Dr. Swann: So 2014 and no evaluation framework. Stunning.

Given the Parkland report From Bad to Worse on long-term care, showing that the return on investment for private long-term care residential is 9 per cent on average, higher than the stock exchange, and that for-profit facilities fell short in staffing levels compared to public services, when will you ensure that quality in staffing in private, for-profit long-term care meets the provincial standard?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we have standards, which everyone must meet. We inspect them. All year long we go out to facilities and ensure that the people are properly taken care of. It is a priority of this government to continue to do that, and we always put the patient and the resident first.

Dr. Swann: Again, in Public Accounts today, Mr. Speaker, it was revealed that there is still no process for reviewing long-term care patient care plans. When can we expect to see an appropriate evaluation of individual care plans in this province?

Mr. Mandel: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Auditor General in his report indicated that one thing we need to do better is to have more long-term care plans, and that's what we're trying to do. We're working with the Minister of Seniors to ensure that long-term care plans are put out for every individual. That will help us determine the kind of care they need. I would hope that we'll continue to do that, and I applaud the Minister of Seniors for making sure that happens.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This morning a senior government official actually told Public Accounts that we have too many long-term care beds in Alberta. Maybe he should say that over 1,000 Alberta families actually are waiting for long-term care beds for their loved ones or that 700 of those are waiting for an acute-care bed. To the Minister of Seniors: will you explain to those families how you have lowered the standards of care so that a shortage of long-term care beds has magically turned into a surplus?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, the question on long-term care is best directed to the Minister of Health, but I can elaborate on the discussions that happened this morning. I was in that room, and I recall the department official talking about an overcapacity in the province in general but recognizing there are shortages across the province, just like we have in education. We have an overcapacity of classrooms and schools and space, but we don't all have those in the right communities. So we have a real issue, that the Premier has identified, that we are addressing and we are investing in, and that's to make sure that we have space for our parents and our grandparents.

Mr. Eggen: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that just last month we heard about a woman who developed a fungus on her body after busy, overworked staff were not able to bathe her frequently enough and given that these stories have become all too familiar to Albertans as this PC government continues to downgrade every aspect of seniors' care, to the Minister of Seniors: why won't you commit to providing the level of care our seniors actually need, not based on attempts to penny-pinch but based on the inherent respect and dignity of Alberta's seniors?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I don't want to speak about individual cases, but in that individual case Alberta Health Services jumped on it right away. It was a problem; they dealt with the issue. Care for every one of our seniors in every one of our facilities, as I've indicated throughout today, is very important. Our parents, our grandparents are precious to all of us, and we will continue to do the best job possible in this province. We make sure that people get the best care, some of the highest level care in this country. We do more than other provinces as far as giving care in this province.

Mr. Eggen: Mr. Speaker, given that this PC government is determined to continue their smoke-and-mirrors exercise of downgrading care so that fewer seniors get the full nursing care that they require and given the fact that in Alberta today we have the second-lowest number of long-term care beds in the entire country, to the Minister of Seniors: do you honestly think that our health care system has too many long-term care beds and that it is acceptable to abandon and neglect seniors, who are being shuttled off to lower grade care at exponentially higher monthly rates at private facilities?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I think this government under this Premier has demonstrated very clearly that we have a priority on seniors. We believe that there is a need for more spaces and that there is a need for more long-term care, but there's also a need for more supportive living. One of the focuses of this government is to make sure that people can age in their community, the communities that they helped build with their families. By just building long-term care, by just having long-term care without the supportive living, without the dementia unit so people can age in place and beside their spouse in the same facility as their spouse, you're going to split up spouses, and you're going to send them to the next community. That's not a priority of this government. That might be what the opposition would like to see us do, but the Premier has mandated that we want to put an end to that.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by Lesser Slave Lake.

Energy Company Licensee Liability Rating Program

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year I raised the issue about the licensee liability rating program; namely, how this government drastically increased the amount required to be paid by each oil and gas company. The result was that many junior producers are being pushed into bankruptcy. Now with oil prices hitting a low of $63 a barrel, there are guaranteed to be some wells shut in, hopefully temporarily, which will increase their liabilities. To the Minister of Energy: can you assure this House that the AER will not repeat its actions and suddenly force large deposits to be paid?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member for the question. The licensee liability rating system was brought into effect to ensure that the Crown would not be responsible for the reclamation and abandonment costs of wells put in place by industry. I think the principle still exists today. We are aware that in this price environment that may put pressures on companies, and we're looking at it.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, the other companies are required to cover the costs of the abandoned wells' reclamation.

Given that the LLR was created to protect Albertans from the responsibility of the abandoned wells' reclamation and given that the program was created at a price of $95 a barrel and was still unmanageable for some, to the Minister of Energy: what options has the government explored to avert another disaster?

Mr. Oberle: Well, Mr. Speaker, I thought that's what I said, that the public is not responsible for the reclamation and abandonment costs, that the companies are. The cost of reclamation isn't dependent on the price of oil. It's dependent on the cost of reclamation and abandonment, and somebody has to pay for it. Now, the member knows very well that we have put a financial management regime in place that allows the companies to build their securities over time. The government of Alberta or the taxpayers of Alberta are not going to be responsible for industrial cleanup.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, given that through our and the affected companies' advocacy last year the AER created the LLR management plan, which implemented more realistic and manageable payment plans for junior producers, and given that junior producers employ many Albertans, will the minister pre-emptively look into this situation and ensure that the plan will responsibly balance each company's liability with their access to capital in these tough times?

Mr. Oberle: Well, now the member likes the program, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to hear that.

Yes, we are, in fact. I've been made aware by a couple of companies that they have issues. We talk to companies all the time. I told him in the first answer that we're looking at it right now.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by Cypress-Medicine Hat.

High Prairie Health Services

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The surrounding area of High Prairie suffers from a heavy chronic disease burden. In fact, it is the fourth highest in Alberta. Because of this, dedicated and specialized medical care is required for the well-being of the residents. To the Minister of Health. The idea of a community health and wellness clinic is being contemplated to fulfill the emergency health needs of the High Prairie residents. Does this clinic have the support of your ministry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me first say that we're thankful for the care all physicians and health care professionals provide to High Prairie residents. This clinic is good news for the community, and we support it. It was developed in collaboration with multiple stakeholders in High Prairie. The community health and wellness clinic's two physicians, who had previously indicated that High Prairie was not the top choice for their options, decided to come and begin to practise in High Prairie. The goal of the clinic is to provide a robust, interprofessional team, including physicians, nurses, dietary, exercise therapy, social workers, addiction and mental health . . .

2:30

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Calahasen: To the same minister – sorry you didn't get to finish – given the fact that 12 doctors have left High Prairie in the last five years, would the minister be willing to work with physicians on a different compensation model, other than a traditional fee for service, so that we can keep doctors in High Prairie and ensure our residents get quality of care?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We want a compensation model that works for both the communities and the physicians. That's an important balance. So we'd be happy to work with the physicians on whatever type of compensation model they'd be interested in. It's not always as easy as one would think. This could include development of an alternative relationship plan using compensation models such as salary, blend of salary and fee for service, or capitation. That's a fixed payment per capita.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Calahasen: To the same minister: regardless of what clinic a physician in High Prairie works in, will their patients be able to access the services at the wellness clinic?

Mr. Mandel: Yes.

Health Care Accessibility

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, I am a true supporter of local radio. I enjoy listening to the news of the day, call-in segments, and hearing about the lovely weather in southern Alberta. However, listening to the radio recently in Cypress-Medicine Hat has begun to trouble me. Many residents in southern Alberta are being enticed by advertisements from south of the border to use American hospitals for surgeries. The lengthy wait times faced in Alberta are driving people away. To the Minister of Health: are you concerned about Albertans going south?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, Albertans have an option to do what they want to do. We have a publicly funded public health care system that's outstanding. We'd encourage every Albertan to use our system. But this is a free country. They can do what they'd like to do.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If people are leaving this country to access health care, there is clearly something wrong.

The new Medicine Hat hospital will improve services in southeastern Alberta. I welcome the new facility. However, this government failed to add capacity so this new facility could help more people. To the minister: with 61,000 people in Medicine Hat and $250 million to $300 million being spent on this project, why didn't you add any new beds?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, the evaluation was done; the decision was made; over $200 million was spent. The hospital obviously needed upgrades, and we're glad we could support Medicine Hat and the residents of Medicine Hat. They're a vital community, very important to the province of Alberta. I hope the people of the region use that facility.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this government spends 44 per cent, or $19 billion, on health care annually and outcomes do not reflect the cost, what is your strategy to reduce wait times so Albertans don't have to go to Montana?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, wait times are a major priority for this government, and we're doing a variety of things: better access to home care, setting up better access through emergency departments, and our programs with an adjustment in acute-care beds to move them into long-term care. We're doing lots of things. This is a very, very fast-growing population, a hundred thousand new people every year. We're a province that's growing dramatically, and that puts tremendous pressure on the system. We continue to work to try to find solutions. It's not easy, but we will do it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Autism Spectrum Disorder

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a follow-up to my member's statement yesterday, autism spectrum disorder is a complex, lifelong developmental disability that affects a person's communications, social interactions, behaviours, and perceptions. Many families in Alberta are having a tough time caring for their autistic child because of the emotional and financial strain. I have received calls from constituents so stressed about what supports there are for their loved ones with autism. My question to the hon. Associate Minister of Persons with Disabilities: why are my constituents and others finding it so difficult to comb through the maze of . . .

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Our FSCD program has one of the best supports in the country when it comes to providing services for children with autism. Out of the 10,000 we serve in PDD, 35 per cent of them have autism. We're making every effort as a government. We're meeting their needs consistently and in a timely manner.

Thank you.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that individuals over 18 with ASD do not have many disability supports or programs available to them and they still need access to supports to assist them in various elements of their daily lives, what is the minister doing about that?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As individuals are transitioning out of FSCD to the PDD program, we're working on creating a seamless system. We're starting to have the conversation with families as early as at 16 years of age so that when they do turn 18, there's no gap in services. Generally the turnaround time from assessment to when they start getting the service delivery is within 35 days. Of course, in cases of emergency we can get services in place within 24 hours.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Some of my constituents have told me that they have loved ones with autism living on reserves; however, they don't get the services and supports they need. Why are people on reserves not getting the same supports that they deserve?

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. When it comes to providing services to the children, it does not matter whether you live on the reserve or you live off the reserve. You get the same consistent services. We will continue to work with the communities in the First Nations, making sure that they're getting timely access to the services, as they deserve, that they need.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Ambulance Service in Southern Alberta

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the southwest mayors and reeves meeting the Health minister attended in Lethbridge last month, the member for Calgary-South East mentioned getting ambulance services out from under medical control. This statement has worried quite a few people. In that regard, will the minister please explain what's happening or being contemplated with ambulance services?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was a pleasure to meet with all the reeves and mayors in southern Alberta. It was a great meeting.

First of all, I've had an opportunity to talk to many, many mayors in southern Alberta. Most of them are very pleased with their current ambulance service and their paramedic services, so we're not going to change anything that's going to impact them. What we have looked at are opportunities for transfer. Patient transfer between facilities is a big issue. We don't want to use the paramedics and their ambulances up while we need them, when we're just transferring. So that's the issue.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If any jurisdiction or administrative changes are being considered for rural ambulance service in the south zone, what process will be followed? Will the minister guarantee no changes will be made unilaterally but only after input and agreement from all parties?

Mr. Mandel: Well, I think that absolutely we're not going to change service without talking to the people who we support and who deliver the service and who are partners. So, yes, we'd be more than happy to ensure that we're not changing without working with the communities. I'm not contemplating any changes right now either.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Bikman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister confirm, then, that first responders will still be able to access medical advice and support when they're on the scene of an accident waiting for possibly lost, centrally dispatched paramedics and, second, that they will continue to receive the medical guidance and direction currently available to assist them in making possibly life-and-death decisions, including whether or not to transfer, without having to wait for paramedics and perhaps to save the life of the patient in the process?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know that everyone is concerned about situations of life and death. We're confident that those people who come to the scene, especially our paramedics, who are incredibly well trained, will make sure that the situation is properly taken care of and have the correct access to the groups they need access to. We know that it's a passion of every community around Alberta to make sure they have the best paramedic support, and we'll continue to do that. But the most important issue is making sure that care is delivered at the scene in a way that's most effective so that the individual is taken care of.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Influenza Immunization

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year more than 1,200 Albertans had the flu so severely that they had to be hospitalized, and 30 of them died. Thousands more suffered at home. To the Minister of Health: what is the government doing to protect Albertans from the flu?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Flu season has begun in Alberta, unfortunately, and we can expect the numbers to increase over the next month. There is still time to get your flu shot. I hope everybody in here has gotten their flu shot. This year we've ordered 2.1 million doses of the flu vaccine. That's enough to immunize about 45 per cent of Albertans. We'd love to have a much bigger number, but that's almost double what we did last year. It's true that reaching our target of 45 per cent would go a long way in helping us protect Albertans. We would prevent as many as 60 flu-related deaths and many more hospitalizations.

The Speaker: Thank you.

First supplemental.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A recent CDC report is suggesting that this year's influenza immunization does not fully protect us from all strains that are circulating. Should I and my family and other Albertans be concerned?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we are currently reviewing the CDC report to monitor the situation, but there is no cause for alarm. Each year the flu shot targets the strains that are expected to circulate in Canada based on information from the WHO about trends world-wide. This year's vaccine includes the strain that is causing the most cases of influenza so far this winter. It's an A strain. The vaccine also covers several other strains and the two main types of flu viruses, A and B. The vaccine varies each year. No one has a crystal ball to be exactly right for each year.

The Speaker: Thank you.
Final supplemental.

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, of course, the flu virus does strike many different Albertans, especially those in our vulnerable populations such as seniors. How is this government accommodating those who are struck by the flu?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As of last week we've had 145 Albertans admitted to hospital and, unfortunately, nine deaths due to flu, which is very disturbing.

The most important way to protect our most vulnerable citizens is to urge them to get immunized. The vaccine takes two weeks to be fully effective. Don't wait. Get your flu shot right away. As I mentioned, we've increased the number of doses of flu vaccine we ordered from last year. We've also improved our distribution. More than 970 pharmacies are participating, and we're making sure Albertans are aware of the risks from influenza. We also need to do more to raise immunization rates among health care workers.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the time for Oral Question Period has expired. Today we recognized 102 questions and responses. Well done.

In 30 seconds from now we will resume with private members' statements.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler.

Suffield Elk Herd

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My colleague from Cypress-Medicine Hat and I continue to have serious concerns about the effectiveness and knowledge of this government's herd management policies regarding the elk population that was introduced in the late 1990s to the Suffield military base. One of my constituents personally handed the Prime Minister a letter pleading with him to help force this PC government to deal with this unmanaged and self-inflicted wildlife problem.

This exploding elk herd population could lead to an economic disaster for provincial cattlemen. We have already seen the effects in our neighbouring state of Montana, where several thousand heads of cattle have been quarantined due to the brucellosis outbreak there amongst the livestock, contracted from elk in the nearby Yellowstone national park.

Elk in Yellowstone wander onto adjoining ranchland much like the elk here are wandering onto my constituent's ranchland from Canadian Forces Base Suffield, where they were introduced with no known population management plan. Still reeling from the effects of mad cow disease and now with the historical prices that ranchers are receiving for their livestock, it is imperative that the Minister of ESRD come up with a strong herd management plan. To quote my colleague for Cypress-Medicine Hat, we need to immediately get these numbers in check. It is imperative that we have more than a developing strategy. Farmers and ranchers are demanding a succinct action plan for immediate control of the population numbers of elk entering their property.

Mr. Speaker, in my constituency property rights are definitive. If your neighbour's cows are on your property, he is responsible. In this case ESRD's livestock is causing havoc. Therefore, ESRD needs to get their livestock immediately under control.

Tabling Returns and Reports

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of 55 postcards from a campaign on Bill 9 by the Canadian Condominium Institute. The card reads: "I am concerned that Bill 9 has not had the needed public scrutiny that it requires. I support the [CCI's] position that the passage of Bill 9 must be put on hold until it is improved."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I notice that my guest has arrived in the gallery.

I have three tablings. The first is the government announcement of the new review of agencies, boards, and commissions, that was supposed to have been tabled at this time, with the appropriate copies.

The second is a professional profile for Mr. Ian Brodie, research director at the School of Public Policy in Calgary, referred to earlier by the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Finally, from Ms Joyce Dowdall, who is concerned that Bill 9 has not had the needed public scrutiny that it requires and is supporting the Canadian Condominium Institute North Alberta's position that "the passage of Bill 9 must be put on hold until it is improved."

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others?

If not, hon. members, allow me to table five copies of a letter received in my office yesterday from the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne dated December 8, 2014, wherein he is requesting early consideration for his Bill 203 to proceed to Committee of the Whole.

Hon. members, I have no points of order, so I think we can move directly to Orders of the Day.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

Committee Referral for Mental Health Amendment Act, 2007

15. Mr. Denis moved:

Be it resolved that

1. The Mental Health Amendment Act, 2007, be referred to the Standing Committee on Families and Communities for the purpose of conducting a comprehensive review of the amendments to legislation made by that act;
2. The committee may, without leave of the Assembly, sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned or prorogued;
3. In accordance with section 54 of the Mental Health Act the committee must submit its report to the Assembly within one year after beginning its review, and that report is to include any amendments recommended by the committee.

The Speaker: Hon. members, this is a debatable motion. Are there others? The hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Mr. Pedersen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Time and time again we have heard stories of neglect and mismanagement on the part of this government when it comes to mental health. There are increased calls for mental health supports across the spectrum, whether it be in K to 12 education, in the postsecondary education system, for those who work as emergency first responders, for individuals battling addictions, and the general public who are simply trying to navigate day-to-day life. We have hard-working and passionate front-line workers that are doing their best with the resources that they are provided, and for that they should be commended. However, they are succeeding despite this government, not because of it.

The Standing Committee on Families and Communities, of which I am the deputy chair, consists of a controlling majority of PC MLAs. Despite voting and agreeing that mental health and addictions should be our specific goal with a comprehensive review of mental health service that started over two years ago, very little progress has been made and very few meetings have actually taken place on this issue as of late. Now with this additional review of legislation the important work of the committee will be delayed even further. While I have no doubt that the review of this legislation will be beneficial, I can't help but wonder why this government doesn't pay attention to mental health issues on a regular basis. This may well be a positive step forward, but there is still so much more work to be done.

Mr. Speaker, I hope this government will start to pay serious attention to mental health and that the review of this legislation is only the first step to working with front-line staff to improve mental health supports in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, shall we request unanimous consent to revert to introductions? Is that what I understood?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Well, thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to the House a friend and supporter, Helen McMenamin. If she would stand. She is a stalwart in the Liberal constituency of Lethbridge-East and has continued to work tirelessly for positive change in that area. I would ask the Legislature to give her a warm welcome.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

While we're on the subject of reversions, would you mind if we reverted briefly for one tabling.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Tabling Returns and Reports

(reversion)

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, why don't you proceed.

Mr. Strankman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm apologizing for my tardiness previously. I'd like to table the letter with the requisite copies that my constituent Jeff Lewandowski handed this summer directly to the Prime Minister regarding the explosion of elk on his property and that of the Suffield base, that I referred to in my member's statement.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Government Motions

Committee Referral for Mental Health

The Speaker: Are there any other speakers on Government Motion 15? The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: I will be brief, Mr. Speaker. I just want to join with the comments of the vice-chair of the family and community services committee. It's all fine. I'm sure that the reason that we are reviewing this act is because it's a provision in the act itself that requires us to. It's good that mental health in some fashion is coming before the committee. But I want to join with the concerns raised by my colleague that opposition members on that families and community services committee have been trying since 2012 to get the committee to do the job it had originally agreed to do, which is to do an expansive review of the quality of mental health services throughout the province.

We spent the first six months after that committee was established after the last election having a fulsome conversation with deputy ministers from a number of different ministries as well as getting expert and internal research provided to the committee which showed us very clearly and without qualification that there is a profound crisis in mental health care in this province and that this government is jaw-droppingly disorganized on the provision of that service and completely unaware of the level of service that they're even providing.

On one hand, we can talk about certain amendments to the Mental Health Act, but the bigger picture is that these folks over there have no idea how they're even providing mental health services at this point. We are, in fact, the only province in the country that can't actually draw a diagram of how we provide mental health services in this province because they don't know. Of course, all of this ties back to when these folks created AHS and eliminated the Alberta Mental Health Board. Ever since then it's been a complete disaster. Every day children in schools, their families, their parents, seniors, people in this province desperately need mental health services and don't secure those services because it is a piecemeal, fractured, disorganized, thoughtless approach to providing mental health care to a population, which, like the rest of the world, has 1 in 10 people at any given time suffering from a mental health illness.

Dr. Swann: Two in 10.

Ms Notley: My hon. colleague from Calgary-Mountain View tells me that it's 2 in 10.

It's a crisis. It's one that opposition members on the committee have been trying to deal with now for over two years. I certainly hope that in the course of deliberating on the specific amendments that are now being referred to this committee, we will be given the opportunity to continue the more expansive work which focuses on the urgent need faced by many, many Albertans and for this government to take responsibility on this very, very important issue.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Anybody on 29(2)(a)?

Are there any other speakers? Calgary-Mountain-View.

Dr. Swann: I'll just lend my support, Mr. Speaker. This is a long overdue assessment that's needed. On the face of it, it looks like we're diverting again after two years to another theme related, obviously, to mental health but not the comprehensive review that we had committed to two years ago. It looks like this government is ducking and diving. They don't really want to know how bad things are in the mental health system. We here, many of us at least, especially me as the Health critic, receive complaints, concerns, real desperate calls at times, especially from young people and their families because it takes up to three months for a child and a youth to get access to a psychiatrist in this province. There are many examples of people who have gone by the wayside and are getting inadequate care.

Again, Mr. Speaker, without understanding how the system can work more efficiently and a comprehensive review of leadership, lines of authority, clear guidance for those on the front lines in terms of how to make some of the changes that are needed to improve access and quality and the cost-effectiveness of our system, it's really troubling to hear from these folks and have nothing to offer them because we haven't done that comprehensive review. We haven't got the kind of leadership and organization at the top of mental health that we desperately need.

So while I support the need for this review at the committee, it's again with some really desperate concerns expressed by my constituents that we, I guess, have to remind the government that this is a key – key – priority in our health care system and that there is tremendous suffering due to the lack of organization, accountability, funding in some cases, staffing in others. Particularly, I'm feeling badly about our young people and their failure at the early stages, when we could have early intervention and real impact, that we're not getting to these young people soon enough.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one, is there anyone else who wishes to speak to Government Motion 15? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to speak to this motion. A few weeks ago I delivered a member's statement about mental health and the ideas and the concerns that came from my constituents in Calgary-Varsity.

I think it's quite misleading for the other parties in this House to suggest that people on this side of the House are ignoring the issues or don't care or don't care about fixing the system. I also think it's quite disingenuous to suggest that change is not happening. In my constituency alone, at the Alberta Children's hospital we're seeing incredible research on brain health, which ties directly to mental health supports for youth and children. We're also seeing amazing things happening at the University of Calgary in response to the Brentwood murders. Those are profound investments in mental health care by not just the university and researchers but by the community itself. We're also seeing the Chambers of Commerce lead mental health initiatives in the workplace in a very candid and honest way like we've never seen before. We're also seeing a lot of work on Alzheimer's and dementia care, and I for one have asked many questions in this House about that issue.

So as one MLA on this side of the House I have to counter the comments that have been laid before us and suggest that there are many people in this province who care about mental health, who believe we can do it better, who believe we are doing it better. I think the opportunity to share best practices and emerging best practices not just by this government but by all mental and brain health care providers is a really wonderful opportunity for all Albertans. What we've seen with other all-party committee meetings, some of which I participated in and many people have participated in: it's an excellent way to get ideas on the table and shared and accessible to all Albertans.

So I commend this recommendation.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, are there any other speakers to Government Motion 15?

If not, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 2 Alberta Accountability Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege today to rise to speak about Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act.

Bill 2 includes amendments to the Conflicts of Interest Act, the Public Service Act, and the Lobbyists Act, Mr. Speaker. The legislation is part of a package that will help restore public trust, improve accountability, and end entitlements. Bill 2 will strengthen the conflict-of-interest guidelines for political staff, extend the cooling-off period for political staff and designated office-holders, and clarify the distinction between the role of registered individual lobbyists and government consultants.

Mr. Speaker, complementing the legislation will be two Treasury Board directives that will eliminate sole-source contracts except in exceptional circumstances and restrict severance packages for political staff. With the Alberta Accountability Act we will hold this government and all subsequent governments to the highest possible standards of public service.

Mr. Speaker, as someone who grew up in another province, that was rocked by what may have been the worst provincial political scandal in Canadian history, I feel very strongly about the changes being made. Of course, I'm speaking about 14 MLAs, members of two different parties, that had fraud allegations against them. This scandal really shook many people in the province and the whole country, and it did help form my views of government and public service and accountability of elected officials.

I recall, Mr. Speaker, when I was finishing my first university degree, many of us were talking about where we'd like to be in our careers, and I said that I might want to be an MLA. It really shocked me what the response was from so many people. People thought that MLAs were dishonest. People thought: oh, they're all a bunch of crooks. It really hit me that when events like this occur, it doesn't matter what party you're from, what caucus you sit in, what Legislature you sit in, if you're part of the federal or a provincial parliament, when you were elected. The same thing holds true. It taints us all. When one individual member has an ethical consideration, it taints us all, and it doesn't matter where you come from or what your story is.

I will now provide some details about the bill, Mr. Speaker. The Conflicts of Interest Act governs the ethical standards of Members of the Legislative Assembly and those who work in the Premier's office and in ministers' offices except those in administrative positions. Currently MLAs are prohibited from participating in discussions or using confidential information which would further a private interest and from using their office to improperly influence others to their own personal benefit. Under Bill 2 this prohibition would be expressly extended to the Premier's and ministers' staff.

Another amendment is around postemployment restrictions, Mr. Speaker. Former ministers are currently subject to a 12-month cooling-off period. Under Bill 2 ministers, the Premier, and their staff will be banned from lobbying government for 12 months after leaving their post. As well, the cooling-off period for ministers' and the Premier's office staff would be extended from six months to 12 months.

Another significant change to the Conflicts of Interest Act is related to financial disclosure and reporting. The act currently requires MLAs to make financial disclosure to the Ethics Commissioner when they become an MLA and every year thereafter. Now, under Bill 2 this requirement would be extended to the Premier's and ministers' staff. As well, an administrative penalty would be imposed upon those who do not file their financial disclosure on time.

This new legislation also makes changes in gifts and travel permitted and the reporting thereof. Currently there is a general ban on accepting gifts or noncommercial travel in connection with an MLA's office. Now, again, Mr. Speaker, this does not apply to gifts around Christmas or for a person's birthday or for a person's wedding. These are gifts received as a result of a person holding that particular office. Now, there are certain exceptions such as gifts received as a matter of protocol. It's also worth noting that if a $200 gift is repeated multiple times throughout a given year, it may cease to be a protocol gift.

With Bill 2 more detail is provided about when an MLA may accept a gift in a protocol situation, and it includes additional reporting requirements about gifts. The exceptions allowing travel on noncommercial flights have also been revised. The new rules are similar to the federal model under the Federal Accountability Act. With Bill 2 public disclosure of all non-commercial travel is required within 30 days of when the travel occurred.

With Bill 2 there will also be amendments regarding the authority and operations of the Ethics Commissioner, and this includes expanding the authority to oversee financial disclosure, conflicts of interest, and postemployment restrictions for deputy ministers, senior officials, and the Premier's and ministers' staff; providing legislative authority to ensure members are reimbursed for the cost of transferring a mortgage, a line of credit, or other account from the Alberta Treasury Branches to another financial institution; providing authority to prescribe the form and manner of disclosure statements; providing authority to post public disclosure statements on the Ethics Commissioner's website; providing authority to approve alternative arrangements with safeguards for business investments; providing authority to approve investment arrangements with appropriate safeguards for publicly traded securities as an alternative to blind trusts; providing for greater investigative powers for the Ethics Commissioner such as the authority to call witnesses and compel production of documents; and providing authority for an ethics commissioner from another jurisdiction to investigate if the Alberta Ethics Commissioner has a conflict or for whatever reason is unable to act.

These amendments reflect input from both the Ethics Commissioner and the Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee, and I thank them for their help in this consultation.

I will now provide information about amendments proposed to the Lobbyists Act. The current legislation recognizes lobbying as a legitimate activity and that such activities are intended to be transparent. As such, lobbyists are required to register. The current act also prohibits a person or others associated with that person from lobbying and providing paid advice to government or a prescribed provincial official on the same subject matter at the same time. Under Bill 2 a person would be prohibited from lobbying and providing paid advice to government or a prescribed individual on any subject matter at the same time, Mr. Speaker.

If the legislation is passed, anyone who is currently lobbying and consulting at the same time would be required to choose which activity he or she will continue performing and to end the other activity within 60 days of the bill coming into force. Basically, Mr. Speaker, it's one or the other.

In addition, Bill 2 makes changes to the returns filed by lobbyists to capture the new prohibition as well as postemployment restrictions on lobbying, and this is being added, again, to the Conflicts of Interest Act and the Public Service Act.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the third piece of legislation that would be amended by Bill 2 is the Public Service Act. This act governs employment and conduct of provincial civil servants. Bill 2 adds a new part to this act that is parallel to many of the conflict-of-interest provisions applicable to MLAs.

This bill will impose rules on a new category of senior staff called designated office-holders. This category includes all deputy ministers, all senior civil servants, chief executive officers, and chairs of provincial agencies designated by cabinet. Designated office-holders would be subject to conflict-of-interest rules which prohibit participation in discussions or using confidential information to further a private interest, using confidential information to further a private interest, and using their office to improperly influence others for their own benefit. Designated office-holders who are public servants would also be restricted from holding publicly traded securities except in a blind trust or a similar investment arrangement. These provisions mirror what is imposed upon ministers. Bill 2 would also increase the cooling-off period for designated office-holders from six to 12 months. This, too, again, mirrors what ministers are subject to.

Mr. Speaker, exceptions to this rule will be permitted for civil servants to compete for another role within the public service or for a chair of one provincial board to be hired to chair another provincial board.

Designated office-holders would also be required to provide financial disclosure to the Ethics Commissioner similar to what is required for MLAs. There is also a new administrative penalty available to those who file their disclosure documents late. The Ethics Commissioner would be responsible for overseeing these new requirements and investigating and reporting on any potential breaches.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a few final points before I take my chair. It's important to note that these are significant changes to legislation, but at the same time it is not the end of the changes being made by government. Bill 2 is part of an accountability package that also includes changes regarding procurement and severance for political staff. Work will continue to be done on extending severance principles to provincial agencies in a way that recognizes both their independence and also their unique circumstances as the case may be. As these are policy directives, I will not speak further on them in this forum.

The proposed amendments and the policy directives will help us usher in a new era of accountability and, in fact, a new management as we continue to restore the public trust. We must never forget that public trust is not given to us; it is earned year to year from our day-to-day actions. This legislation is the result of consultation, with considerable input from Alberta's Ethics Commissioner. I would like to thank our Ethics Commissioner, Marguerite Trussler, a retired justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, for her input into this legislation.

With Bill 2 we're talking about a business approach to government that will ensure high ethical and accountability measures are in place.

Mr. Speaker, I am confident that I speak for all of my colleagues when I say that it is an honour and privilege to serve the people of Alberta, something that we can never take for granted. We are committed to making changes and proving to Albertans that their faith in us is deserved. We must endeavour to prove this every day of this job.

Thank you very much.

3:10

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and speak to Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act. Obviously, issues of accountability, transparency, and so forth have been hallmark issues over the last several years. They are certainly things that the Wildrose caucus has worked very hard on, trying to hold the government accountable for some of the mistakes that were made. Clearly, there's a lot of work to be done, as, frankly, the Premier has said many times in this House and also in the media, to restore that trust. This isn't something that's going to be done overnight. There was a lot of damage done to the perception of politicians and government in general over the last many years.

But you know what? It's never too late to do the right thing. It's never too late to change direction and move in the right direction. I hope that this bill is a first step, albeit, I would say, a relatively small one, towards repairing the damage and, hopefully, starting a new era of transparency and accountability. I really do hope that. You know, one of the legacies, I hope, that all of us want to leave here is that when we leave this Assembly, the perception of politics, politicians, the work we do here, the things that we do, and our reputations has been collectively raised. It doesn't just take one party or two parties or three parties; it takes all parties to do that. I hope that we can leave that legacy no matter how long we're in this building as MLAs.

Bill 2 is an interesting bill. I say that it is a step in the right direction, and it indeed is. It is a small step; there's no doubt about it. Much more needs to be done. Much more, I think, could have been done in this bill, but I do understand that the Premier has been there for 60 days – is it 60 days? – relatively close to that.

Mr. Hale: Give or take 10.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah, give or take 10 days.

Legislation like this and as complicated as this isn't written overnight, isn't written quickly. There are a lot of affected stakeholder groups and there is a lot of paperwork and lawyers and more lawyers to deal with. [interjection] I know. Those damn lawyers. It's unbelievable. I got out as quick as I could, as you remind me often, hon. member.

With regard to what this act does deal with – and I'm going to also talk a little bit about what it doesn't deal with, which I hope one day will be added to this Alberta Accountability Act at a point in the near future. I want to talk about what's in there. What is in there is that, obviously, there are sections that used to just refer to MLAs; for example, not using our office for personal gain, making disclosure statements, and declaring gifts, et cetera. Those rules that applied to MLAs before also now apply to staff in the Premier's and ministers' offices, a very, very, very good improvement.

The cooling-off period for everyone is 12 months for staff; it used to be six for staff. The cooling-off period is, of course, between when you work in a ministry and then go out into the private sector. You can't just turn around and lobby that ministry. There's a cooling-off period. For MLAs I believe that's 12 months. For political staff it was six. Now it's 12 months for everyone.

There is a small change with regard to accepting protocol gifts or the social obligation on gifts. Nonmonetary gifts cannot exceed $200. The total in tickets, invitations, conference costs cannot exceed $400 from the same source. Gifts under $100 also do not need to be disclosed. So there's a little bit of change there. They're all generally, I would say, positive.

Then, of course, there's the issue of flights. Members, MLAs, can accept rides on other people's noncommercial planes if it is "required for the performance of the Member's office." There are exceptional circumstances, but the member needs to get approval from the Ethics Commissioner. So all these things are good.

The Lobbyists Act. The previous act set a very low bar, forbidding a person to lobby on a specific subject matter if they were holding a contract to provide paid advice to the government on the same subject matter. This has now been changed and broadened to any subject matter so that the same well-connected folks can't be going into one minister's office to give paid advice and then going down the hall to lobby another minister on behalf of someone else. Again, that's a positive change.

In the Public Service Act there are some minor amendments strengthening some of the existing policies into legislation. The effect for the most part is to treat deputy ministers as well as selected CEOs and chairs of agencies, boards, and commissions of the province of Alberta as equivalent to politicians and political staff when it comes to conflict-of-interest and cooling-off provisions. Again, good improvements.

That, pretty much, is most of the subject matter of the bill. I don't have any issues with it. There are a few things. I know that in the Conflicts of Interest Act review some of the recommendations I don't think were put into this act, although some of them were. We'll be looking into possible amendments around those, but there are a lot that did get in here, so that's good to see.

With regard to the next two pieces, sole-source contracts and severance, those issues actually are not dealt with in this act, but they were announced at the same time as the act. Essentially what happened is that there were two directives, Treasury Board directives, I believe, that dealt with these. I would have really liked to see those in the act. It's good that these were passed by Treasury Board. It's a good policy to have, but essentially that's what this is. These are policies; they're not legislation. They can be changed very quickly with a wave of a magic wand, frankly. It can all be changed without having to come back into this House and go before the opposition and be held accountable for making those changes, so I'm very worried about that. I think that in the case of severance in particular those changes could have been put in this bill without much worry, without much problem, and I'm a little concerned that they weren't put in this act. They should have been.

The severance directive itself, with regard to political staff, is actually very strong, and I want to commend the minister for that. They've capped it so that it's three months of severance for anyone working less than one year, and if you're employed for a length of time longer than one year, the employee can receive three months of severance plus an additional one month for each additional year of employment up to a max of six months. That's a very strong severance cap. It's very good. It's reasonable. The point of severance has always been to help someone pay the bills between jobs. If something doesn't go right with a job, and things happen, whether it's – there are many different reasons that people lose their jobs in government, among political staff. But when it happens, we want to help those people, obviously, transition to a new job, and part of that is paying out a fair severance.

But what has happened over the years is that these severances have turned into winning lottery tickets. It's really been that bad. I mean, just look at – some of these severances have been in the millions of dollars, some in the half-million-dollar range, hundreds of thousands of dollars. These severances should not make one wealthy; these severances are to help transition to a new job. This directive, I believe, is fair. I wish it was in legislation. It should be part of this bill, but at least the policy is correct. Obviously, we'll hold the government accountable to following their policy.

One of the biggest omissions on the severance – and I don't know if this is on purpose or if, again, the government is looking at this; I think the Justice minister mentioned that they actually are looking at this right now – is that this severance directive needs to be applied across the government of Alberta. When we're talking about political staffers, we're talking about a couple of hundred people maybe, if that many, probably not that many, located in the ministers' offices, political offices. We're not even talking about their departments, just their political offices and the Premier's office, obviously. I don't think that applies to the Public Affairs Bureau. They're not considered political staff either.

So this is a problem. We have a possible – I don't want to say that it is a budget crisis right now, but it is certainly a possible budget crisis, a long-term budget crisis that we are going to need to deal with. Guys and gals, if we can't make such a very simple change to the way we do business in this House, how are we going to make bigger decisions and tougher decisions? This is not a tough decision. If you come to work at Alberta Health Services, if you come to work in a public institution of education, if you come to work in any capacity in those higher levels, senior executive levels, there is no reason why we shouldn't have a cap on severance similar to the one that's being introduced in that cabinet directive. It's the right thing to do. It will save money.

People don't understand. We're still FOIPing, trying to get the FOIP back on this, how much we're paying right now in severance benefits and pension benefits to former senior civil servants, former chairs or former executives of certain health regions, and so forth. We've cobbled together enough of these FOIPs that – the amounts are staggering, how much we're paying some of these guys still and will pay till the day that they pass on.

We're not talking about a few thousand bucks a month here; we're talking about tens of thousands of dollars a month to individuals, multiple individuals, and it is brutal that we've done this.

Now, probably no one here in the House, including on the government side, was – I don't want to say nobody, but most of the people sitting on the government side were not there when those ridiculous contracts were signed, and there's not really any way to get out of it at this point. The point is that if you put the severance in place, if you put the rules in place now – obviously, we can't go back and break contracts and so forth; that's not doable – we can at least on a go-forward make sure we don't make the same mistakes. That should be part of the bill. Please add it in an amendment act.

My understanding is that there is a review of expanding this to agencies, boards, and commissions. Certainly, Minister, AHS would be the most important one in that regard because that's where the more flagrant abuses have occurred in the past.

Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have? A couple of minutes? Mr. Speaker? Five, three . . .

The Speaker: Seven.

Mr. Anderson: . . . seven minutes. Okay. Well, I won't take that long.

Finally, sole-source contracts. Here's the issue with them. What this does, what the directive from Treasury Board – again, it should be in legislation, in my view, but so be it. The directive as it reads now lowers the trigger point for having to tender out a contract from government from $100,000 to $50,000 in the case of capital and down to $10,000 in the case of services. That's good. If there's an exception to that rule, if there needs to be a sole-source contract for exceptional circumstances, say, in an emergency, during a flood, et cetera, all that stuff, then the deputy minister has to sign off on that, and then, importantly – and this warms our research director's heart because we're going to have to do a lot less FOIPing, and that's good – it will be posted online during the following quarter. That is an excellent change.

There are rare circumstances when sole-source contracts should be granted, very rare circumstances. That has been abused like crazy, obviously, and we've exposed that multiple times. But just knowing that all sole-source contracts will be posted online within a quarter – I think that immediately you'll see a huge decrease in the number of sole-source contracts provided for that exceptional purpose or reason because the deputy minister will have to sign off on it. It'll go online. Everybody will be able to see it. So when there is an extreme circumstance and a sole-source contract is needed, I think you'll still see it, but it'll be legitimized whereas before it was kind of done behind closed doors, and no one knew about it until we started coming in and, essentially, FOIPing. It shouldn't come to that at all. I think that's a very good change, and I think that will naturally just cut down on the amount of sole-source contracts done in government.

I will say this. Whether this is in legislation or not, the more important question here is one that applies to the Premier and to the ministers sitting in the seats today. You can always have rules, but if you're not willing to abide by them and really pursue following them with everything that you have and count that towards yourself as part of your personal integrity, there's always a way around it. There's always a loophole. There always is. So whether this policy will be effective or not is really up to the Premier and his ministers.

I just hope that – you know, we've been promised so much, over the previous Premier's years and even before that, about how differently business was going to be done and how everything was going to be different now and how there will be more ethics and transparency and accountability. Every new Premier says that, but it clearly, specifically, especially with the last one, did not happen. In fact, it got to a point that was probably one of the worst parts of our political history in a lot of ways in that regard. I really hope that this new Premier, who's saying all the right things, will make sure that this directive is enforced and that there aren't any loopholes or that there isn't any abuse of any loopholes. We need to make sure, all in this Chamber, to hold him, ministers, and each other to account, to follow these rules, and to not make ridiculous exceptions for ourselves that further our political interests.

Again, I applaud the member for the bill. It's a good first step, Minister, but much, much more needs to be done. I would hope that in the next year or so there's an Alberta accountability amendment act that's brought forward where we can put this severance directive into legislation and expand it to government boards, agencies, and commissions and that we will also put the procurement directive in that law as well or in a separate law if it needs to be a separate bill. That's fine, too.

The Wildrose is ready to support this bill. We will be bringing forward some amendments to the effect of what we were talking about earlier, Mr. Speaker, but the intent of the bill and most of what's in here we support.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. leader of the Liberal opposition, followed by the leader of the ND opposition, and then we will ping-pong back and forth.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Alberta Liberals it's my pleasure to speak to Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act. A lot of this bill is pretty motherhood and apple pie, so the Alberta Liberals will be supporting this bill with amendments. You know, we call this the Everything That Alison Did Wrong bill.

An Hon. Member: It's not just Alison.

Dr. Sherman: And many other PCs.

Mr. Speaker, the government actually had to bring in a bill to hold itself accountable because of its own failures. This bill is largely a public relations exercise, in its current form intended to undo the legacy of the former Premier and the excesses and failings that occurred during her leadership.

In terms of financial impact for Alberta this bill really deals with just a fraction of Alberta's finances, 1 per cent. Mr. Speaker, we're dealing with – what? – $62, $63 oil. Maybe it's headed on the way down. We really have to look at full, broader accountability for the whole government in addition to the accountability mentioned in this bill. For instance, a couple of things are very absent in the bill. The Premier has made speeches, but the bill doesn't coincide with his speeches. A couple of things that are absent are capping severance payments and ending sole-source contracts. It's going to be done by way of Treasury Board directives, and it's not enshrined in the act. The Premier promised that these would be written into the act, and I'm surprised that with such a highly touted bill that's not in there. Liberals feel that that should be in there. I think many other members in this House feel that way as well as in the other opposition parties.

3:30

Mr. Speaker, the Premier is quickly developing a reputation for governing by regulation or Treasury Board directive, and that can be a problem sometimes, in fact many times, because that has been the problem with the current government, that got us into this mess in the first place. We've got to stop doing things behind closed doors. We need more public consultation. We need real accountability.

Something interesting that I found was that Bill 2 – there's Bill 1, Bill 2, Bill 3 – was actually one of the last bills introduced here before Santa comes. There's really minimum time to debate, minimum time for the public to give input and for folks to digest something that is actually a very important bill.

Mr. Speaker, here's what the Liberals would do differently to improve this bill, which I think is a good idea. I think it's a good idea. It's a good first step because accountability affects every elected member in the halls of democracy, that we're all very proud of, and we always support good ideas.

To make this a better idea, we believe it's important to end patronage. To end patronage, we would like to see an independent appointments commission enshrined into legislation. The only way to make sure that public appointments are based strictly on merit is to take them out of the governing party's hands and Treasury Board's and cabinet's hands and have an independent commission manage the recruitment and vetting process for prospective candidates.

Mr. Speaker, the Ontario Public Appointments Secretariat is a prime example of how the appointments process can be strengthened to ensure that only the most qualified men and women in our society, that have the highest personal and professional integrity, serve on public agencies, boards, and commissions and in other posts. I believe that a thing such as the independent appointments commission would go to greatly strengthening the Accountability Act.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have very high hopes for this Premier. Unfortunately, he started off with patronage appointments to some very key roles – and that's a problem – the appointments of Mr. Hill and Mr. Merrifield, very good people. Good people like that should go through a competitive process, a vigorous process. Who knows? They might have gotten the job anyway. But the process is the key to how we arrive at these decisions to put very important people in very important positions, where the future of our province and our society will be decided.

Mr. Speaker, let's not forget that the Prime Minister of the country and Mr. Prentice were in cabinet in 2006 federally when they supported the public appointments commission. However, they didn't follow through. The Liberals are suggesting that the Premier has an opportunity now. He's the boss. He's the Premier. He can actually make this happen right now in Alberta before we depart for Christmas.

Mr. Speaker, another thing that the Liberals feel is very important in accountability, especially with the amount of money that is spent in Alberta, is the question: are Albertans getting the results they deserve? We feel that Alberta needs an independent budget officer. This will be another Liberal amendment to make a good idea even better. An independent budget officer will be of tremendous benefit to taxpayers, to Albertans, and, frankly, to all MLAs in all political parties.

Mr. Speaker, we'd also like to see staffing rules for senior and executive level positions in significant agencies, boards, and commissions. The rules governing the process for staffing these senior positions are currently set out in a directive and are not written into law. Again, we want to bring this out into the public, not back behind closed doors, where with the stroke of a pen these decisions are made. Currently the rules are only guidelines, and it's up to the cabinet ministers' discretion whether to follow the process. The Liberals will propose an amendment to this as well that will see the particulars of this directive written into law so that the ministers are actually obliged to follow certain rules when making appointments to agencies, boards, and commissions.

Mr. Speaker, I want to speak to the cooling-off period. I believe the intent is very good. We should have a cooling-off period. But there's a loophole. The cooling-off period is largely meaningless because there's a loophole. The Ethics Commissioner can exercise that loophole and waive the cooling-off period. You know, we've already had a former MLA immediately appointed, Evan Berger, a good man. But the cooling-off period was waived, and the Ethics Commissioner at the time said: hey, it's all in the family. I think we just need to close the loophole. Don't put the Ethics Commissioner in a situation with the government where the Ethics Commissioner has to say no to the government. Just put this into law, and close the loophole.

Mr. Speaker, you know, we should maybe consider extending the cooling-off period to 24 months. My colleague the hon. member from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre supported that recommendation when this was previously discussed, and I support that as well. If the intent of Alberta's conflict-of-interest rules is to actually prevent conflicts, then the statutory cooling-off periods for elected officials, political staff, and senior civil servants should be honoured, full stop, one hundred per cent of the time, with no exceptions. As I said, to put the Ethics Commissioner in the position to pick winners and losers is not right.

Mr. Speaker, another thing that the Liberals would do differently or do better to improve the Accountability Act is requests for investigation of conflicts of interest. The province's Conflicts of Interest Act review recommended that section 24(6) of the Conflicts of Interest Act be repealed. That section states, "Where a matter has been referred to the Ethics Commissioner under subsection (1), (3) or (4), neither the Legislative Assembly nor a committee of the Assembly shall inquire into the matter." I, too, support repealing that section of the Conflicts of Interest Act and will be proposing an amendment to that effect.

Mr. Speaker, we had, oh, gosh, $1.25 billion in sole-source, untendered contracts in health care alone in 2012-2013. This Accountability Act, as I said, pertains to just a fraction, 1 per cent, of the whole budget. When the government claims it's in dire financial circumstances, we're suggesting that this apply all across government. The Liberals feel, and rightly so, like many Albertans do, that elimination of sole-source contracts in all but the most extreme circumstances be the practice and that it should be enshrined in legislation.

Now, the current Premier is trying to score political points by eliminating sole-source contracts but not through law. He's trying to do it through Treasury Board directive. Really, this is nothing more than Alberta honouring the terms of trade agreements like TILMA. Mr. Speaker, Albertans will accept no less.

There is a direct correlation between the level of government openness and transparency and the health of our democratic institutions, and the only way for Albertans to really know if government contracts are providing good value for money is if their particulars are made public, tendered out, and put on a website for all to see. In that way, we shouldn't have to rely on a FOIP process to get the information. Every business in Alberta should have an equal chance of prequalifying to be on the province's vendor list. This should not be a case where businesses with close ties to cabinet or the PC Party are the first amongst equals.

Mr. Speaker, also, the Liberals feel that a very important thing that the Premier promised he would do he hasn't done in the Accountability Act. We feel it's time to return to consolidated budget formats. That should be in the Accountability Act. The Auditor General himself has said that these aren't budgetary practices that are easy to report on.

Mr. Speaker, the other couple of things that we really need – I think I have just a couple of minutes here. Open data: let's have more government data publicly available for all Albertans to see. Government spends the money of the people. The people are entitled to find out how their money is being spent, where it's being spent, and what the accountability measures are. We need to have meaningful accountability.

Whistle-blower legislation was passed. Frankly, it makes whistle-blowing tougher than ever. We need real, meaningful whistle-blowing legislation. That should also be in this act, and it's conspicuously absent.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to see legislated accountability in health care. When I was an independent member, every other opposition party agreed at that time to legislate health care wait times. We're spending 74 per cent more today with Alberta Health Services than we were seven years ago. The population is only up 15 per cent, and we're a younger province.

The ministry will no longer report on the 56 measures – Mr. Speaker, you were minister of health at the time – publicly at the 90th percentile on a quarterly basis. They won't report that anymore. Instead, it's 16 measures at the median twice a year. That's a problem: the number one spending issue, 45 per cent of government spending, and the government will not report.

Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Liberals support the current bill, but we support it with amendments to make it the bill that Albertans deserve.

I thank you for the opportunity to participate in this debate. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no one, let us move to the leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise to speak for the first time on Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act. Now, I will say that I find this act somewhat ironic and certainly somewhat symbolic of the record of this government under its new management over the course of the last, I was reminded today, 90 days, I believe. You know, there was much hoopla made out of the fact that everything was going to be different with the new leader. It was like there had been some fairy dust sprinkled over the other 59 members of this caucus, and they suddenly changed into brand new people and were completely disconnected from the record of which they had been a part prior to the selection of the current Premier.

As part of that narrative which they are so desperately attempting to communicate to Albertans, which, I would suggest, is only very cautiously and marginally being processed, let alone accepted, they were going to clear the decks and actually hose down the government with Mr. Clean and make it fresh and sparkling and lemon scented. It was going to be like one of those amazing commercials, you know, where the kitchen suddenly gets really clean after it's been a real mess. That's what was going to happen under this incredibly inspiring new piece of legislation. That's what we were promised.

Like other things that I have observed, more recently over the last 30, 45 days or so, sometimes the delivery is a little underwhelming in relation to the hoopla associated with the promise. I have to say that this act is probably one of the best examples of the underdelivery problem that, I would suggest, the new management is struggling with right now.

Let me just say that this bill does not by any means secure or guarantee a new level of trustworthiness, openness, transparency, or accountability. Quite the opposite. Now, I will grant you that, you know, this government had a very large mountain to climb, I mean, because there were so many different things and elements that, really, this government needed to address in order to successfully hose themselves down with Mr. Clean. There was just so much stuff to clean up. It wasn't just one kitchen; it was like a block full of frat houses that needed to be hosed down and cleaned up.

You know, it was a bit of a legislative challenge to actually come up with a comprehensive answer to all the malfeasance that Albertans have been subjected to over the course of the last – oh, I don't know. I'm going to pick a number. I'm going to say six years because that's how long I've been elected. I know it actually goes much farther back than that, but I'm just going to pull "six" out of my hat and go with that. Certainly, it was a very steep hill to climb, and I understand that maybe they have not yet reached base camp on this. Fair enough. They're trying, and that's great, but it truly doesn't get it to where it needs to go.

What do we have in this bill? Essentially, we have a few legislative changes that for the most part amount to slightly better than window dressing, the actual legislative changes. I say this because I spent many months reviewing the conflicts-of-interest legislation in committee, and I spent many months reviewing the lobbyists legislation in committee, and I spent many months reviewing the election finances legislation. There's a lot of stuff that needs to be fixed, Mr. Speaker.

You know, there are actually reports out there, that are 200 or 300 pages long, filled with recommendations that would actually make this government accountable. This government picked one or two or three or four off of those 300 pages and then threw itself a party. So the cooling-off period has moved from six months to 12 months. Well, you know, there's low-hanging fruit, and then there's fruit that's actually been laying in the yard for a couple of years, and that's kind of what we're at right now because pretty much the rest of the country has moved to that 12 months already. So these guys throwing themselves a party for moving from six months to 12 months is, again, part of that overpromising, underdelivering kind of routine that we're seeing from them.

Definitely, without question, I agree with the previous speakers that they represent teeny-weeny incremental changes and improvements, those small sort of window-dressing legislative changes that were made. You know, sort of imagine an incremental approach to improving accountabilities much like these folks wanted to take an incremental approach to implementing human rights. Same kind of thing.

Anyway, there were a few improvements made that have already been outlined. Of course, probably the biggest pieces of this that the Premier dined out on were the issues of sole-source contracting and severances. Those were probably the ones that he spent the most time dining out on with the media and with potential supporters. The problem is, though, that they're not in here as pieces of legislation; they are in here as directives to the Treasury Board. I'm not entirely sure, but I think that, basically, what that means is that when we had the nicely arranged little conversation with the media yesterday, where it was explained that these Treasury Board directives would be made, quite honestly it is absolutely possible for them to have already undone them and not told us. That's how much clarity and certainty exists with these directives.

To promise legislation on something and then replace it with a Treasury Board directive, I mean, is classic bait and switch, folks. It's really classic. I'm not even, you know, being particularly inflammatory. If you looked up "bait and switch" in the dictionary, they would give an example of exactly this. And those were the two main components of the so-called accountability legislation. So we have a bit of a problem.

The other thing, of course, that I want to say is that I do find it ironic that the two flagship pieces of legislation that this Premier is bringing in are pieces of legislation undoing or attempting to undo the history of his caucus. Again, I would suggest that Albertans might be prepared to consider a different solution to that problem, but we'll get to that later.

So we have this bill that really underdelivers. What are some of the things that we're not dealing with in Bill 2? Well, we're not dealing with the provisions in the election finances act that allow a $450,000 cheque to be written to this PC government immediately prior to the election when the writer of that cheque is in the midst of lobbying for hundreds of millions of dollars from this government. Call me crazy, but I think Albertans think that's the kind of accountability piece that they would like to see addressed.

Some Hon. Members: Crazy.

Ms Notley: Thanks.

My Wildrose colleagues suggest that I am being absolutely demanding and crazy in suggesting that we might want to put an end to those $450,000 E minus seven cheques to the government by people in the midst of lobbying for hundreds of millions of dollars of grant money. So there's an example.

Another example is the degree to which members of the government caucus, who clearly have enhanced access to senior public officials and decision-makers in the bureaucracy, are able to lobby specifically for issues that directly impact their businesses. To me, that's kind of your classic, textbook case of conflict of interest, yet somehow that situation was reviewed and deemed okely-dokely under the current legislation. I would suggest that maybe what we ought to do is fix the legislation so that we don't have those kinds of decisions made in the future because it's . . . [interjections] Look at that. Yeah. It's kind of like The Simpsons as well. It's sort of like a Mr. Burns move, really, some of the decision-making that's going on over there. Yes, if someone over there wants to start petting their cat, I think probably that was what was happening while this legislation was being drafted. Anyway. So there's that. You know, we'd like to see that kind of thing removed.

We would also like to see the situation where we have the foremost, most important environmental regulatory agency in the province, which is making major decisions about the future of this province – we would like the people who are appointed to lead that to be subject to very rigorous conflict-of-interest legislation. Why would we want that? Well, because this government has chosen to appoint people who are leaders from within the very industry that is supposed to be regulated. Again, kind of textbook. If you looked up "regulatory capture," there would be a picture of the AER and its current chair beside the definition. Again, that's the kind of conflict of interest that should be closely monitored. Is it? Nope. Is the conflict-of-interest commissioner able to investigate this? Nope. Does this person report to the conflict-of-interest commissioner? Nope. That's the kind of thing that true accountability would have brought into play but has not.

There are other examples that I'd like to talk about, but I will probably spend some time getting into more of the things that should be included in this by way of talking about why this piece of legislation – while it's all great that we have it named, what we really want to do is actually provide for accountability. The way to do that, Mr. Speaker, is to ensure that a committee that has the true parameters to look at all the pieces of legislation that govern accountability is able to do that. The way this is currently drafted, it's so limited. We're probably going to be told we're not able to actually have the expansive conversation in Committee of the Whole that is required to turn this into a true accountability bill. So what we need to do instead is refer this matter to an all-party committee so that we can look more expansively at those parts of legislation that would at least get us to the base camp of the mountain that needs to be climbed by this government in its effort to ascend to minimal levels of trust, integrity, and accountability to Albertans.

I would like, then, as a result, to propose an amendment, Mr. Speaker, and if you would like, I will hand my amendment over to the pages and wait for it to be distributed.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We'll allow the pages to distribute the amendment. Would they bring one to me immediately as well?

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, if you like, you can read it into the record if it's not too long and then proceed with your debate.

Is that acceptable to all members?

It's not too long, so why don't you read it into the record and proceed onward with your debate on it? We have approval to proceed in that manner.

Ms Notley: I think I actually inadvertently gave out all the copies.

The Speaker: I'm sorry. We have pages who are distributing the copies right now, so carry on with your discussion on the amendment.

Ms Notley: Thank you so much. What I would like to do is move that the motion for second reading of Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following:

Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, be not now read a second time but that the subject matter of the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future in accordance with Standing Order 74.2.

In support of my amendment, Mr. Speaker, as I already started to touch on, the fact of the matter is that there are a number of issues that need to be addressed in order to secure for Albertans true faith in the accountability and trustworthiness of their government. Unfortunately, because the subjects touched on with this bill are so narrowly defined, there are a number of issues which we can't get to.

Now, I've spoken about a couple of them, but I'd like to talk about just a couple more. Albertans were quite concerned fairly recently to observe the practice of a member of cabinet using public dollars in the course of a by-election campaign to queue-jump a project, in contravention of sort of the clearly understood public criteria for that project, as part of an election campaign. That, of course, in my view, amounts to a very serious breach of public duty and ministerial responsibility and could be argued to be a conflict of interest. We'll see. I do understand that's under investigation.

Nonetheless, regardless of the outcome of the investigation in that particular case one way to be sure that it doesn't happen again is to amend the legislation to ensure that that kind of thing cannot happen. The best way to do that is to amend our Election Act in a way similar to what's been done in, say, Manitoba to basically ban the by-election bonus practice. So that's yet another example.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview on 29(2)(a).

Mr. Bilous: On 29(2)(a). Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am curious to hear the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona's last couple of points. She had begun to describe some of the changes that she would have liked to have seen in this act, and I'm very curious to hear her thoughts.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, and thank you to the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview for giving me that opportunity. As I said, there are several things which may not be ruled in order as appropriate amendments to this legislation but could be talked about in committee were this amendment to be passed by this Assembly. I've talked about trying to avoid the by-election bonus.

4:00

Another one is one that I refer to as the PC Party clause. I believe it's the current Attorney General that will recall the debate that we've had in the past, where the limitation periods for financial transgressions under the Election Act were conveniently amended by this government to ensure that one could not go very far back to review or investigate what would otherwise be illegal donations under the Election Act by public bodies to any political party. But, of course, our concern was specifically with the governing political party because one worries about the negative impact that has on the integrity of governance as a whole.

What happened was that this PC government – I can't remember now if it was 2012 or 2013, but amendments were made to the election finances act to essentially prohibit or limit the period of time that investigations could happen. Of course, there had been public conversations about the fact that some of these inappropriate donations appeared to or had been alleged to have been made outside of the limitation period that the government had conveniently imposed upon the Chief Electoral Officer, so the Chief Electoral Officer was banned from engaging in a comprehensive investigation of that. Now, that, to me, again goes to the heart of the issue of government accountability, yet we are not able to deal with it.

So, clearly, we would like to amend that part of the Election Act because that would get us to genuine accountability. Because the accountability bill that's being brought forward right now doesn't include any amendments to the Election Act, I am concerned that we will be unable to make amendments that would bring in those changes.

Same kind of thing is in relation to what I refer to as the building Alberta clause, and that just relates to the kinds of issues that we've been discussing for the last week and a half, where, you know, we know that our infrastructure is now probably the single biggest crisis, or the second-biggest crisis after the oil crisis, I suppose, facing this province right now because no one has been investing in infrastructure for a decade. So now communities are desperately in need of infrastructure, and it is integrally linked to the quality of public service that is provided. Now we have this question of: how is infrastructure and funding decision-making done? What we need is to make sure that there is absolute integrity, transparency, clarity, and objectivity injected into that process. We have a clear history of that being the exact opposite here in Alberta, so what we need is to ensure that we actually inject that accountability in.

So we would like to see amendments made to legislation that would deal with that issue, once again probably outside the scope of this very, very, very narrow so-called accountability bill. That's another reason why we would urge, our caucus would urge, members of this Assembly to support our motion to have this so-called accountability bill referred to a committee, where we could talk more expansively about the many, many pieces of legislation that need to be brought into this discussion if we are going to truly bring about any semblance of accountability to this 43-year-old government, which, just by the way, didn't land here 90 days ago, has actually been here quite some time.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Twenty seconds remaining in 29(2)(a).

If not, then we will label this amendment R1. Everyone is now able to speak for up to 15 minutes should they wish, and then 29(2)(a) will be available.

Are there any other speakers to amendment R1? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and speak in favour of this amendment that my hon. colleague the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona just put forward. First of all, I'm glad to have the opportunity to speak. This is the first time that I'm speaking to Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act. There are quite a few things that I want to share with members of the Assembly on this bill, but because this is my first time rising to speak to the amendment, which is going to refer this back to the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future – I think that the amendment makes a lot of sense.

I mean, you know, quite frankly, there are a lot of issues that this bill doesn't deal with. In its current state it's woefully inadequate. Now, you know, my surprise, Mr. Speaker, was that, again, this bill was touted as the centrepiece of this fall sitting for the PC government, and it falls very short in dealing with a myriad of issues that would actually bring transparency and accountability to all members of the House.

In keeping my speaking to the amendment, I'll just go through some of the reasons as to why I feel that this should be referred to the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future. Like I said, it is a baby step in the right direction, but it doesn't go far enough. I'll save the bulk of my comments on the bill for after this amendment. You know, there are certain areas that should have been included in this bill, as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona had said as well. The cooling-off periods should be a lot longer when you look at other jurisdictions. Increasing it from what it is currently to 12 months doesn't quite go far enough, in my opinion, Mr. Speaker.

I'd like to see the Conflicts of Interest Act amended so that it applies to people employed by government agencies. You know, I can think of two that I think should fall under the purview of the Conflicts of Interest Act, and those are the Alberta Energy Regulator and Alberta Health Services. I think Albertans would very much like to know. In the spirit of transparency they would like to see legislation that compels the government to publicly disclose criteria for determining public infrastructure priorities, investments, whether it's in the form of a list, but something that's very, very clear that Albertans can see. That way if there is a change on that list, the government is a lot more beholden to Albertans as far as having to explain why projects are shifted around as opposed to where we are currently, which is in the dark, Mr. Speaker. That's something that I would have liked to have seen in this bill, and I think there was a real opportunity when the bill was being written.

I'd like to see, Mr. Speaker, the Chief Electoral Officer with the ability to investigate improper donations – and we're talking about political election donations – because at the moment there are extremely short timelines with which the Chief Electoral Officer is able to investigate any, you know, alleged improper donations. I think we need to give him or her a broader scope and the ability to investigate with a larger timeline.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to see, as well, changes to this act as far as, you know, promises that are made during elections, especially by-elections, which could be perceived as trying to garner support or votes from constituents. Using one's position to jump the queue to go to the top of the list in order to secure much-needed infrastructure or resources, I think, quite frankly, is wrong and should be disallowed. That's something that the Alberta NDP has spoken on for a number of years so far as disallowing queue-jumping. That's one other area that this bill fails to address, which I wish it really would.

Now, there is an opportunity, of course, when we move into Committee of the Whole to make some amendments to this bill. Similar to my colleagues in the other opposition parties, the Alberta NDP will be bringing forward amendments to this bill as well. You know, Mr. Speaker, what may make more sense here is to just send this bill to committee, which would ensure that we write it and we get it done correctly the first time. The Member for Airdrie already was hoping for new legislation down the road that is an amendment to this act. I think we have a real opportunity to just get it right as opposed to having to bring forward legislation to correct past mistakes.

Interestingly, Mr. Speaker, one of the other centrepiece bills happens to undo the first bill of this current sitting government. Maybe the face has changed as far as who's leading the government, but ironically it was the same group minus three who brought forward a bill that's now being repealed. So it's interesting to see mistakes being made, advice being ignored, and we end up back in the same position. This amendment would save us the time and hassle of going through that, and I will strongly encourage all members of the Assembly to vote in favour of this amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, are there any other speakers to amendment R1?

I see no others. Are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment to second reading of Bill 2 lost]

The Speaker: We are back to the main debate at second reading on Bill 2. Let's see who we have. We're now into the ping-pong, so to speak, starting with a government member, then the Official Opposition, then a Liberal member, and then an ND member if there are any other speakers.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It seems the cat has all of my colleagues' tongues. I rise to speak to Bill 2 and to outline some of my comments on the reading of this.

Now, again, this bill does amend various acts that are intended to strengthen accountability and transparency. You know, one of the things that I find fascinating ever since I got elected is the names of the bills. Sometimes up is down and black is white, and it's almost the opposite of what is written in the bill.

This bill, as I mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, falls shorter than what I would have liked to have seen in an accountability act. A lot of the changes are fairly minor with what is needed to truly strengthen accountability and will have, in my opinion, very little impact or effect. Some of the challenges are, again, that instead of this bill making firm commitments to the changes that are going to be made to legislation, the government is asking for us to once again trust them as daddy knows best. Now, unfortunately, we have all been here and in the situation of, "Trust us, trust us, trust us," and then, whoops, things finally come to light and are taken to an extreme.

To give some examples here, there were severance payments of over $1.3 million – and I'm talking about within the last eight months – to the political staff of she who must not be named, some of whom worked only for a few short months before getting a very lavish severance. I've got a few statistics here just in case some of the members either disagree that it's not lavish or, you know – this is something that Albertans really couldn't get their heads around, someone who works as a political staffer for several months and then receives severance packages in the hundreds of thousands. She who must not be named, her former chief of staff took home over $300,000 in severance, Mr. Speaker, plus an extra $50,000 of earnings in lieu of benefits and vacation pay of over $38,000. She who must not be named, her principal secretary and former federal Conservative MP ended up walking out with almost $200,000 in severance. She who must not be named, her former communications director received over $100,000 in severance.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I mean, nobody is arguing that severance shouldn't exist in positions that are quite volatile; the issue, that I've heard overwhelmingly from my constituents and Albertans, is when these amounts are completely out of touch with the reality of Albertans. There is no Albertan that I've spoken to or known who, you know, in the span of six months working in a job can earn a severance package or payout of over $100,000. It seems a little absurd to me. Let me tell you that there was an opportunity to deal with that and ensure that that doesn't happen in the future, and unfortunately this bill falls short of dealing with it.

One of the interesting things is that, you know, two changes made in this bill are being done through Treasury Board directives as opposed to through legislation. One of the challenges that I have is that details need to be included and done through legislation, where we can have an open and honest debate, where all members of different political parties can weigh in with their constituents' perspective and also their political parties' perspective. But as soon as we take details out of legislation and put them into either regulations or directives, now decisions will be made behind closed doors. There isn't an opportunity for genuine public input, and that, if anything, obscures information and goes in the opposite direction of accountability and transparency, quite frankly.

Something that I appreciate in this bill is that high-level political staff will now be subject to the same conflict-of-interest principles that MLAs currently are. Now, one of the questions that I have, Mr. Speaker, is: what kind of enforcement is going to be existing in order to ensure that these staff now adhere to these conflict-of-interest principles? There are examples in the past where I've been confused as to how the laws have been interpreted by former ethics commissioners. I'm not calling into question the judgment of our current Ethics Commissioner, but there were decisions in the past that made me and Albertans scratch our heads. I'm talking about, you know, an MLA who was involved in policy decisions around builders' liens, that was deemed not to be in a conflict of interest just because the builders' liens affect the general public and a broad group of those involved in the construction industry as opposed to the member himself or those very close to him.

I can tell you that when this was being discussed and was, you know, at the top of the minds of many Albertans, there were real questions as to how the legislation was interpreted, how it was carried out, and how what appeared to be a very direct and simple conflict of interest, which was the impression that most Albertans that I've spoken with were under, wasn't interpreted that way, and therefore there was little recourse. You know, that's one of the areas that I was confused around.

Now, I do appreciate that some language around blind trusts and investment management for securities held by members has been clarified. I think it's a good change. I think it's a fairly minor one, but as I've said from day one, since I've been elected, I have no issues with, you know, giving the government kudos when they make a good decision that I feel benefits all Albertans. I mean, the interesting part is that that hasn't been very often, so I'm happy to say that that was one that I agreed with.

Other minor improvements. Again, as I said, the disclosure forms that political staffers will file and the fact that there'll be an administrative penalty for late filings, I think, are good. The extension of cooling-off periods for former ministers, deputy ministers, senior officials, and the Premier's administrative staff from six to 12 months is a positive step. Again, I would have liked to have seen that extended a little bit longer, to two years. Official staff members now cannot accept contracts from their former departments or act as lobbyists or be a part of organizations or businesses with direct dealings with their departments, and I think that's a positive step as well, Mr. Speaker.

Something that the Alberta NDP brought forward as a recommendation, that I see is in this legislation – we brought it forward in our minority report for the special committee – is that now MLA disclosure statements may be posted to the website of the Ethics Commissioner. Now, we're still not a hundred per cent there because they're not obligated to be posted, but at least they may be, and that's appreciated, when the government takes our recommendations.

Let's see here, Mr. Speaker. What else can I comment on in this bill?

One thing that I would have liked to have seen is a recommendation that was brought forward from the review committee last year, the idea that the Ethics Commissioner should be able to initiate investigations into alleged breaches where he or she has reasonable grounds to believe that a contravention of the act has occurred. I mean, the reason for this is that the Ethics Commissioner is, you know, theoretically the person with the most information about an MLA or staff activities through disclosure statements, and he or she is also the person with the most knowledge and understanding of the conflict-of-interest legislation and standards, so he or she is better placed to determine whether something needs investigating as opposed to just the general public. That's something that would have been nice to have included in this bill.

Again, the changes to section 25 are still quite limited, quite narrow, so the Ethics Commissioner is still limited in launching, again, his or her own investigations where he or she believes that members' staffers breached conditions. The act as well, in my opinion, should allow for anonymous tips to trigger investigations, Mr. Speaker. The recommendation, obviously, wasn't built into this, but by disallowing it or not bringing it into the bill, likely the government has deliberately made it more difficult and less likely for people to report suspected contraventions to the Ethics Commissioner.

Again, I think that it's especially true, Mr. Speaker, for those who would have the most knowledge of possible contraventions, which are those working in the public service, who might be rightly concerned about their employment security if reported. Again, this brings me back to a piece of legislation we debated last year, which was the whistle-blower protection, which was extremely watered down and really not going to protect the very folks who can provide the best oversight and feedback. So that's something that, again, should have been included in this bill, and it would have given it much more teeth.

As far as some of the changes to the Lobbyists Act, the way that it's currently written, Mr. Speaker, is a little bit of a concern. For example, legislation previously required public servant positions and their term of office to be included – oh, I'm speaking of a return, and now it only applies to public servants who've held their positions within the last two years. That brings questions to mind. I don't know if two years is sufficient. It means that if more than two years have passed, in other words, any connections to the government as a paid consultant or a lobbyist may not be known. Again, we're looking at imposing very short timelines and decreasing the ability to investigate and to look into lobbyists and ensure that that is being reported publicly.

You know, Mr. Speaker, this bill has quite a few changes, again, some not as significant as we would have liked. We will be bringing forward amendments, so at the moment I will likely be supporting this and hope and urge the minister and all members of the Assembly to seriously consider amendments coming forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

I see no one. Are there any other speakers at second? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to speak to this important bill, Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, to the principles of the bill. Who could question the value of accountability, which goes hand in hand with transparency, which are two terms that we hear over and over and over again from every new administration in Alberta since I became elected 10 years ago? Clearly, there is a need for rebuilding trust in this province, a key issue for this government, after 43 years and a progressive loss of trust and accountability, as we've seen, well, certainly in the last few years more powerfully than ever.

Albertans, first and foremost, want to believe that government is there to act in their interest and not only their interest but in the long-term interest, not the short-term, financial bottom-line interest, on everything. But the decisions, the processes that we follow, the access to information, the ability for citizens to hold a government accountable for its decisions, whether it be on spending or policy decisions, whether it be the funding that goes to nonprofit societies or charitable organizations or to publicly funded institutions or, indeed, to subsidize the oil industry: all of these have a show of return on investment for citizens and taxpayers, and that's been sorely lacking.

We welcome the opportunity to again raise issues of public accountability, conflicts of interest, the appointments process, which increasingly has been called into question, not least because a man who has championed that cause in coming into the leadership of the PC Party has already appointed half a dozen people without the same respect for due process and, in some cases, even elections. There's lots of skepticism, lots of cynicism in politics today, and I think there's a serious need to again address the issue. Words are one thing; actions have to follow the words. I think that people are watching carefully to see that this government actually is not only under new management but that they are actually going to provide the kind of openness and responsiveness and adherence to basic principles of honesty and integrity and due process that most citizens respect and most corporations respect. We've got a long way to go.

This bill proposes to amend the Conflicts of Interest Act, the Lobbyists Act, and the Public Service Act and undo the legacy of the last 20 years, where increasingly people have lost a sense of both direction for this government and respect in terms of their interests being represented. Not that any individual over there would violate some of these principles in their own personal lives, but collectively it seems that behind closed doors, when political interests and financial interests actually come to the fore and a small group of men and women make the decisions, it consistently seems to happen that political advantage and financial advantage seem to be the norm in Alberta.

Albertans, understandably, are fed up, Mr. Speaker. There's a consistent message that I get that if people are still engaged in any way in the political process – if they are still engaged – there is a tremendous skepticism and a tremendous sense, in some cases, of despair that we're going to see any improvements in the quality of political decision-making, long-term planning, any kind of vision that reflects the values of our children and our grandchildren and, as the First Nations would say, seven generations from now, as opposed to short-term personal political interests that continue to dominate, as we've experienced.

The key changes, as the bill proposes, would extend the cooling-off period for elected officials, political staff, and senior civil servants who leave government to a full year from six months. Presently the Conflicts of Interest Act specifically prohibits former ministers from accepting employment or soliciting or accepting a contract or benefit from a department of the public service or a provincial agency with which the former minister had significant dealings during the former minister's last year of service as a minister for a period of 12 months after ceasing to be a member of Executive Council. The Conflicts of Interest Act places similar restrictions on former political staff members for a period of six months, which is progress, Mr. Speaker.

Deputy ministers and other senior civil servants identified in the regulations are also presently subject to a six-month cooling-off period pursuant to the Public Service Act. Politicians and political staff must now wait a full year after leaving government before taking on lobbyist work, and breaking this rule has a fine associated with it of $50,000. High-ranking political staffers must now disclose financial conflicts of interest, and these will be published online. Late filers could be fined up to $500.

The bill introduces rules to enforce the distinction between government consultants and registered lobbyists. A single person can no longer work as a consultant informing government at the same time as he's working as a lobbyist attempting to influence government. What a shock, Mr. Speaker, that we're dealing with this in 2014, that somebody can't be a consultant and a lobbyist at the same time. Wow.

Rules concerning gifts and benefits are more detailed, and noncommercial travel, say a trip to Fort McMurray on an oil executive's jet, is now subject to tougher rules and must be disclosed within 30 days.

Also, the power of the Ethics Commissioner has been significantly expanded. At the same time we're concerned that the power of the Ethics Commissioner to exempt ministers from the cooling-off period has been in place and has been used by this government in the case of Evan Berger from southern Alberta. The former agriculture minister, after he was not elected, was then appointed to a similar role in agriculture. Appalling commentary on the current rules and the Ethics Commissioner at the time.

So some of these look like positives, and there's no question that we can support these.

One of the things it doesn't do despite earlier intimations from the Premier is that the bill does not amend the Financial Administration Act, which requires the province's finances to be presented in a clear, consolidated format, or require biannual report cards on the province's savings.

The other big issue, I guess, that we've been raising consistently in the House is the issue of an independent commission to manage public appointments in Alberta. This does seem like a no-brainer, and I'm certainly puzzled, personally, why this would not be embraced by a Premier who wants to distance himself from charges of cronyism and favouritism and failure to honour his commitment to merit over Tory connections. But it doesn't appear that that's going to fly with this government.

In Ontario the Public Appointments Secretariat independently manages the recruitment and vetting process for candidates seeking appointments to agencies, boards, and commissions. It was set up 23 years ago, incidentally, under Bob Rae's NDP government. It's interesting that this government can't see 23 years later that that is a very reasonable and responsible decision, to distance itself from the charges of favouritism and cronyism which continue to plague this government.

The Premier was a key member of the federal Conservative government that brought in the public appointments commission in 2006, a body that was supposed to be the centrepiece of Stephen Harper's much-touted accountability policy, and the mandate was virtually the same as the Ontario Public Appointments Secretariat. In theory the public appointments commission was supposed to oversee the hiring process for hundreds of federal boards and agencies. It could do so here with great benefit to both this PC government and to the public. All of us, I think, could feel better about appointments if it was an independent commission.

In announcing the Alberta Accountability Act, the Premier said that his cabinet will appoint people on boards and agencies strictly on merit and not on political or personal ties. However, without any independent vetting of prospective candidates the Premier will still be able to appoint people according to his own biases and narrow definition of merit. We've seen examples of this already with the appointments of Ron Hoffman and former Conservative MPs Jay Hill and Rob Merrifield. So it's clear that the Premier will not hesitate to appoint political friends and colleagues to positions that he chooses.

Somehow these are different, according to the Premier. They "were carefully selected as the most qualified people for the position," to quote his news conference on September 24, 2014. Notwithstanding the Premier's assurances the only real way to ensure that public appointments are based strictly on merit is to take them out of the governing party's hands. It's a no-brainer; have an independent commission manage the recruitment and vetting process for prospective candidates. Again, it's unlikely to happen, Mr. Speaker, and raises serious questions about how serious this government is in relation to changing the channel on accountability and transparency.

We on this side of the House would also like to see an independent budget officer modelled after the federal parliamentary budget office. This would provide more confidence and more objective, I think, reporting and accountability.

We certainly support the cooling-off period for elected officials and political staff and senior civil servants. What we would like to see are some penalties for those who flout the new rules. We would also insist on the closure of the loophole which allows a cooling-off period to be waived by the Ethics Commissioner.

The elimination of sole-source contracts is welcome. It's incredible, again, that we're dealing with the issue of sole-source contracts in 2014 as a continued thorn in this government's side. We would repeat calls for the government to disclose particulars of all contracts valued at $10,000 or greater. Particularly, I find it egregious that P3s are not made public. These are an increasing vehicle for this government to hide its debt and to give the impression that we are further down the line in terms of infrastructure than we are. It's troubling to me that despite these kinds of favourable arrangements, studies continue to show they benefit far more the corporations than they do the long-term public interest. Despite that, we still can't get access to these contracts. I guess I would wonder if that should not also be part of this accountability act.

There is a prohibition against stacking of smaller contracts, and we certainly support that and condemn in no uncertain terms the past practices of stacking the smaller contracts.

This side believes and we've said since 1993 that government appointments should be advertised, interviewed, and decided on through impartial bodies such as the personnel administration office and the Public Service Commissioner. That we said in 1993. There's no question that much of what this government talks about is excellent public policy, and they won't find any objection to it here. What we would like them to do is to do it fully the first time, show a real commitment to having the best, strongest independent decision-making around finances and appointments of anywhere in this country, not just the claims but the reality.

In October 2014 the Auditor General made it clear that the government's own procurement rules and those established under the province's various trade agreements – the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement, for example; the agreement on international trade; the New West Partnership; and the agreement on government procurement – were not followed in the awarding of contracts to Navigator, for example. Of course, the excuse was that this was an emergency.

We clearly also agree that there is a need to return to a consolidated budget format. We endorsed that in 2014 in a policy resolution and are pleased to see that. It's of note that past Treasury Board presidents in the PC Party also supported that.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available, hon. members, if anyone wishes to take advantage of it.

If not, are there any other speakers at second?

I see none, so the hon. member to close debate.

Mr. Denis: I would just like to thank each one of the members for their contribution, and I would move that we close debate.

[Motion carried unanimously; Bill 2 read a second time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 11 Savings Management Repeal Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'll keep my comments brief. You know, I really just wanted to mention the fact that, well, Albertans need to be reminded that this was a bill – I believe it was the centrepiece of this current government under a different leader – that was the centrepiece of this government, and now it's being repealed, which I find very, very interesting.

We are in support of the repeal, so we are in support of this bill, as we were opposed to this government's Bill 1, the Savings Management Act, which had those very contentious and untested social impact bonds, and we spoke at length as far as our concern. The bill was introduced in March of 2014 and came into force on April 1, and it's kind of ironic that eight months later here we are discussing it yet again. Only this time it's being completely yanked.

The concern, very quickly, Madam Chair, was the fact that the bonds were profit-driven, government-funded business deals. They were about, you know, providing investment dollars, not about public services. Many people had spoken against this concept. Now, let's see here. To quote Ricardo Acuña, who is the executive director of the Parkland Institute, his comments about social impact bonds: the reality is that these schemes will only serve to further pad the bank accounts of wealthy investors while turning the very concept of public services on its head and eliminating funding for a broad range of projects and activities.

Madam Chair, one of our biggest concerns was that this was effectively a way for the government to yank or hold back dollars for services that the government should be providing. You know, our social programs are very, very crucial – many Albertans rely on them – and this untested method of using social impact bonds was the cause of a major concern.

Basically, Madam Chair, when we look at the value of our public programs and services, they need to be properly and adequately funded. So the theme of today and especially this month, looking at the price of a barrel of oil and how much it's dropped, really should spur this government on to having conversations about other ways to ensure that we have a steady revenue stream and that everything from schools and hospitals to roads and municipalities will and should have stable, predictable funding. But as long as a large percentage of government revenue comes from the volatile prices of our natural resources, it basically means that, you know, whether it's a hip replacement for grandma or a classroom with an appropriate number of students as opposed to 40 or 50 in a classroom, we are dependent on the price of a barrel of oil, which seems quite ridiculous.

Again, I'm happy to see that this bill is going to repeal the Savings Management Act, but I do find it interesting that not eight months ago there were a number of MLAs on the other side that vehemently spoke in favour of Bill 1 and how fantastic it was. I believe there was unanimous support on the PC side for this bill. I don't think there was any member that was opposed to it. I know our caucus, the Alberta NDP caucus, was opposed to it, and I believe there were other members of the House as well. I find it very, very fascinating, Madam Chair, that eight months later we're here, and suddenly everyone has changed their tune. Now it's, "Yeah, that was a bad idea; that was a bad idea," but eight months ago it seemed like a brilliant idea for some.

I think it's important that Albertans are reminded that there are many examples of bills that have been brought forward hastily, poorly written, and without adequate and proper consultation, which then have to get yanked or paused or repealed, Madam Chair. I mean, a great example of this was Bill 10 last week, that has been put on hold because it falls into that category of hastily written, inadequate, and improper consultations. And here we are repealing Bill 1 from the spring.

I will take my seat, Madam Chair. I'm glad to see that this bill has come through. I hope that members opposite are learning lessons with pieces of legislation that shouldn't be brought forward to begin with so that they don't waste the time of the Assembly and we don't have to sit here and repeal bill after bill. Like I said, I find it quite ironic that we're here.

Well, there you go. I just found my numbers. I guess our oil revenues contribute about 25 per cent of our revenues. You know, as long as we are heavily reliant on that to fund our day-to-day and our programming, those services and programs will always be in flux or on the brink of being underfunded. I mean, should something happen, then the funding gets yanked out from under them. There's a list of education programming cuts and human services cuts in 2013 that affected thousands of Albertans, and Albertans are still reeling from a lot of those cuts.

You know, it's quite frustrating. I often get asked, Madam Chair, by Albertans who look and recognize the fact that Alberta is the wealthiest not just province in the country, but we're one of the wealthiest jurisdictions in North America, yet we can't adequately fund our schools, our roads, our hospitals, our bridges. Our municipalities all have skyrocketing infrastructure debt, which is basically kicking the can down the road and placing a burden on future generations. That, I find, is very disingenuous and completely unnecessary.

If we actually addressed the issues facing the province today with an open mind and a frank discussion, we should have the amenities, the services, and the dollars to ensure that our facilities are well maintained and that we have the programs being offered while simultaneously building up our heritage savings account and not drawing the interest out of it every year to pay for operational purposes. Those dollars should be left for the long term. We should be looking at truly diversifying our economy beyond, you know, the rip-and-chip mentality, Madam Chair. As my colleagues have often spoken about, we are strong advocates of value-added, of upgrading our product here in the province, keeping the quality of long-term jobs here, and ensuring that we have the dollars to provide the services and amenities that Albertans rely upon.

With that, Madam Chair, I will take my seat. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to comment or question? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. This is my first opportunity to rise to speak to Bill 11, the Savings Management Repeal Act. This act continues a theme of this session. I might call it the do-over session. It's just one big do-over. Everything that these guys were absolutely, fully committed to, they were passionate about, they were going to change the world eight months ago, well, now we're going to have a do-over. We're reversing, you know, reversing our plans. Bill 1: do-over. Bill 2: let's prevent ourselves from being super unaccountable, for lack of a more inflammatory term, and because we kind of have been in the past, so this is our signal of a do-over. Then we have Bill 11, which is do-over 3.0. That's what this one is, so there you go.

It's really tempting to do the whole I told you so thing because on most of these do-overs, of course, we did in fact tell you so, and this is one of them. When this awe-inspiringly aspirational piece of life-changing legislation was introduced with much fanfare last spring – Bill 1, was it? – I believe in March 2014, the world was going to be a much better place thanks to it. Now, of course, we are repealing it.

In principle we are in favour of repealing it because at the time we had some fairly serious concerns about it. One of the things that we were most concerned about, of course, was its authorization of this new experiment called social impact bonds, which we were deeply suspicious of and deeply concerned would ultimately result in some very serious wastes of money along with the commercialization and marketization of, generally, people's suffering throughout the province. So there were a lot of reasons why we were truly not in favour of it, and we are certainly glad that this is something that we are now backing away from.

As my colleague from Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview has already noted, savings and financial management, you know, is not as complicated as everybody might suggest or as this legislation's predecessor would have suggested. It's just about having more revenue than expenditure and having the commitment in the value of the public service, in the public interest to ensure that you generate adequate revenue even when it involves asking your well-heeled friends and insiders to forgo a fourth condo in Hawaii and instead pay a fair level of income tax.

That's really what leadership comes down to, and most other jurisdictions have managed to demonstrate that leadership. Here, this government has been coasting on a windfall over which they really had no responsibility. Now we're in a position where we seem to have a big gap between our spending and our revenue. So this bill was designed to do a bunch of things in theory to address that, although we never believed that that's actually what this bill would have achieved — not the bill that we are discussing, but the bill that this bill is repealing is what I'm referring to — and instead was getting into lots of exciting new ways to generally subvert the most direct path towards the provision of good public service with a whole bunch of money-making opportunities for, you guessed it, friends and insiders.

It's good that we're backing away from it, but I would also suggest that as we do that, we should also pair it with a simple, honest debate. I won't use the "conversation" word because it's still on my blacklist of words, but a simple, honest dialogue, shall we say, a forum, with Albertans about: "What are the services we want? What are the services we're prepared to pay for? Do we think the folks that are really, really doing super, super well in this province, maybe, they might want to start paying their fair share instead of capitalizing on the free ride?" You know, whether or not we're prepared to have that discussion with Albertans. I think that we would then not be compelled to play all these games: you know, which account we're putting which money into at which point.

In any event, we are not going to spend a lot of time on this except to say that we do support, for the most part, the repeal. We would like to see the government commit to responsible savings. The government has found a new statistic on Norway which, I think, does not take into account all the money that they've saved or that's in a separate fund. Nonetheless, you know, there are examples out there of responsible financial management when one is in the position of being a steward over an unprecedented amount of windfall in nonrenewable resource revenue, and there are the examples set by this province, and those are two separate things.

I would suggest that, going forward, what we need to do is look to those jurisdictions which have more successfully converted that nonrenewable resource into a long-standing asset for not only this generation but generations to come and do so in a way that responsibly balances the budget while maintaining the integrity of public services that support equality of opportunity and fairness in prosperity and all those kinds of good things that we in our caucus think are important to Albertans.

With that, I will take my seat and look forward to further debate on this issue. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who would like to comment or question? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'm speaking to Bill 11, the Savings Management Repeal Act. This caucus didn't support the Savings Management Act for a number of reasons when it was passed less than a year ago, so we can't say that we object to its repealing now. However, it does raise the opportunity to ask for some consistency, I guess, in the responses across the floor.

During the 2014 PC leadership race our current Premier agreed with Ted Morton about the need to entrench into law a savings formula for the heritage fund so that it can't be changed at the whim of a future government, and he committed to putting 50 per cent of all future government surplus into a debt retirement fund and the other 50 per cent into the heritage fund. Neither of those is found in Bill 11, unfortunately, so it does raise some interesting questions about the opportunity that's missed here if we don't honour our commitment to the heritage savings fund and look at a long-term, nonrenewable resource revenue savings plan for our future.

Again, I can't help but comment on the enthusiasm with which the original Savings Management Act was embraced under the former Premier, her flagship bill in the spring legislative session. There's an irony here and, I guess, again, a question of trust that's being raised when a government within the space of 12 months can unanimously support a bill and then unanimously will now be seen to repeal the bill. It does not give the impression of vision, a plan, leadership. It may be under new management, but it's clearly lacking in the kind of leadership that I think Albertans are wanting to see.

A luminary, the former Finance minister, in supporting this initial Savings Management Act 12 months ago, was quoted as saying:

Albertans have told me they would like to do more with our savings. [This management act] allows us to take a portion of our savings, which we are committed to growing each and every year, and do something meaningful for Albertans.

It highlights, again, the historic abdication of responsibility to future generations when since 1977 $216 billion was brought into the heritage fund, and less than 6 per cent of that – less than 6 per cent of that – has been saved, pretty much the same heritage fund that Peter Lougheed left in 1982. In fact, in 1987 this PC government stopped making any deposits at all into the heritage fund.

The Calgary Chamber of Commerce calculated in 2011 that had Alberta continued to save 37 per cent of resource revenue, as was the case under Peter Lougheed, the heritage fund would now be worth $128 billion. What a gift to present to future generations if there had been some leadership here. The government at the time, again in promoting the Savings Management Act, touted that this would ensure that we had the kind of investment in trades and technology and apprenticeships that would help build the skilled workforce that Alberta needs. Somehow that has gone by the wayside. The agriculture and food innovation endowment fund, which had merit in terms of investing in diversification and competitiveness, was also not seen as a priority for this administration.

Again, it just simply raises questions for many people in Alberta, including this side of the House, on just where this government is going and, if there's an election and this government should decide on a new leader, whether we're going to change directions yet again, Madam Chair.

Yes, we will be supporting this repeal act, but it raises serious questions about leadership today in this government and in this province. It's an appeal, I guess, to ask this government to be more thoughtful about its planning, about its consultation, about developing a longer term vision for Alberta, something that people can count on, something that we can have some confidence in and that can give us all a reason to believe that there is a longer term investment in our future, that we're protecting future generations, that we happen to know where we're going, and that we're not going to be chopping and changing every year around new priorities relating to political interests.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on Bill 11 in committee?

Are you ready for the question on Bill 11, Savings Management Repeal Act?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 11 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 9

Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise today to table the first of four Wildrose amendments to Bill 9. I have the requisite copies here.

The Deputy Chair: We'll pause for a moment while we get the amendment distributed. Just give us a minute.

Mr. Rowe: I'm sorry. I didn't hear you.

The Deputy Chair: Just wait a minute until we get some of the copies of the amendment distributed.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you.

5:10

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, while it is being passed out, I'll just let you know that this will be known as amendment A1.

Hon. member, you can proceed.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. This amendment seeks to clarify the difference between rules and bylaws. Bylaws are voted on by the owners and are the binding laws within the condo whereas rules can be made by the board for smaller things which are considered more or less nonessential. This bill in its current state leaves room for boards to establish rules that are overreaching and should require ownership to pass them in the form of a bylaw. This amendment helps clarify the boundaries between rules and bylaws.

I would ask for the co-operation of the members to pass this amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A1? The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. We've had a chance to look at this amendment, and we actually think this is a good amendment. It's an amendment that helps offer some clarity, and it's an amendment that will help strengthen Bill 9. I stand here to say that I support this amendment.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview on the amendment.

Mr. Bilous: Yes. Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to speak in favour of this amendment. I think it's important to have clarity when we're looking at the ability for condo boards to write their bylaws, which deals with the issue of governance, and also to clarify procedures that are used.

I also want to thank the Minister of Service Alberta for accepting this amendment. Again, as I've always said, I will give credit where credit is due, and I very much appreciate it when the government accepts amendments that improve and strengthen a bill based on merit and discounting all political partisanship.

With that, I will take my seat and support this amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A1?

Seeing none, shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members who wish to speak on Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, in committee? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment that I'd like to move on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Calder.

The Deputy Chair: Just give us a minute while we distribute the amendment, please. This amendment will be known as A2.

Hon. member, you may proceed.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Madam Chair. Shall I read the amendment into Hansard?

The Deputy Chair: Yes. Go ahead and read the amendment.

Mr. Bilous: I'm moving on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Calder that Bill 9, the Condominium Property Act, 2014, be amended in section 45 by adding the following after the proposed section 67(1)(a)(iii.1):

- (iii.2) the conduct of a person that has entered into a management agreement with a corporation if that conduct is oppressive or unfairly prejudicial to the corporation, a member of the board, or an owner,

Quite simply, Madam Chair, what this does is that it adds property managers to the people whose conduct is discussed in the act and who can be disciplined for inappropriate conduct under the act.

Now, Madam Chair, this is important because many condo boards and corporations employ people to look after the premises on their behalf. Because there's no regulation of these people currently, this is an interim step to try to provide those who live in condos some type of recourse should these people behave in a way that is oppressive or that otherwise harms the enjoyment of their property.

I will take my seat and urge all members of the Assembly to support this amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members who wish to comment on amendment A2?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A2 lost]

The Deputy Chair: Going back to Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, are there any other members who wish to comment or who have amendments for this bill? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have a second amendment to table. I have the requisite number here, and I will sit down until we get them distributed.

The Deputy Chair: We'll pause for a moment while the amendment is distributed. This amendment will be known as amendment A3.

Hon. member, you may proceed.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. This amendment helps to alleviate some of the concerns held by many condo owners that the condo corporation is held responsible for the negligence and damages of one owner. My amendment adds protection for responsible owners and allows them to recoup their costs more quickly. One example of where this amendment will help is when a frozen water pipe bursts. As the example was explained to me, if one resident leaves her window open and the pipes burst, damaging many other units, the condo corporation, a.k.a. the other owners, by default are responsible for the damages. This amendment would put in legislation the board's right to seek costs associated from the negligent individual. Quite simply, good owners shouldn't be paying for bad owners.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to comment? The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I know that the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview has some amendments coming in, and they're not quite ready yet. Having regard to that, I'm just going to carefully examine this particular amendment, because this member has been playing quite good ball with us.

Now, I speak as someone, Madam Chair, who owns three condos, and before anybody starts talking about this, they have been disclosed to the Ethics Commissioner.

5:20

The one issue I have with this particular amendment, Madam Chair, is that this could create a preference of one person's debt or another. So if you have a condo board who wants to seek contributions from a negligent owner, it seems to me that if that owner was owing other people money, had other judgments against them, that that same judgment would not have the same force or effect as this particular item. This member's amendment may be very well intentioned, but at the same time I'm concerned that it may create a preference of one debt over another. If you have a judgment against a particular person – the Latin term is pari passu – they would rank the same as one or the other.

So I'm not interested in supporting this particular item, but I would refer it to the Minister of Service Alberta.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'll speak very briefly to the bill, but I do want to thank the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills for rising and offering the amendment. You know, although the spirit of this amendment, I think, is very well intentioned and speaks to some real issues, it's the opinion of our department that we do actually have coverage for these issues within the act that are sufficient.

For those reasons, I will not be supporting this amendment. But I do appreciate the spirit, and I thank the member for bringing it forward.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you. Just for clarification here, the way it was explained to me is that in most cases – in fact, I can't think of any that wouldn't be – damages like these would be covered by the overall insurance company or their package for the whole condominium project. There would be a deductible on that, and all this amendment is seeking is restitution for the cost to the condo association of those deductibles. It's not like they're expecting the negligent owner to pay for all of the damage for the whole building; it's just the deductible.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have a question to the mover of this amendment. It provides a tool to the condo board to recoup, as you said, the insurance deductibles for, say, a broken frozen pipe. My question is: will that come from the person who, say, left the window open? Who is paying the deductible? Who is the money coming from?

Mr. Rowe: Well, apparently, it's coming from the association, the whole condo board's funds. We're saying that it shouldn't do that. All responsible owners shouldn't be paying the total bill for the negligent owner. The negligent owner should have to pick up the deductible.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to comment? [interjection] The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Please speak through the chair.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Madam Chair. Through you to the mover of the motion my question is: what is the process that the mover of the motion anticipates for establishing the issue of fault and the issue of negligence on the part of the alleged wrongdoer? I can see a scenario where the condo board says, "This is your fault," and the alleged wrongdoer says, "No, no. This happened because of the systemic problem, and it happened to first become obvious in my unit, but it's actually related to other systemic issues." So I can just imagine there would be a need for a dispute resolution mechanism before this authority could be exercised. I'm just curious as to what is the anticipated dispute mechanism for before this authority is exercised.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Let's keep the noise level down a bit, please. It's getting a little high.

Mr. Rowe: Well, this issue, while it seems straightforward, I think, is a perfect example of the complexity of this whole bill and the reason that we wanted to take it back to committee. That was refused.

Now, I'm not a lawyer. That's a problem with this bill; it is immensely complicated. There are several lawyers that have worked on this bill for days, the short days that we've had to work on the bill. I wish I had a clear answer for that. It may be able to be dealt with in regulations that will follow, some mechanism like that. But I still go back to the fact that all owners shouldn't be paying for the bad owners.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to comment or question on amendment A3?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

The Deputy Chair: Back to the bill in Committee of the Whole, Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I have another amendment that I would like to move.

The Deputy Chair: We have another amendment that will be distributed. We'll just pause for a moment while that amendment is passed out. This will be known as amendment A4.

Please continue, hon. member.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'll read this for the record. I am moving that Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be amended as follows; (a) section 6 in the proposed section 13 is amended by adding the following after subsection (2):

- (3) Notwithstanding any other provision in this Act, if a delay in occupancy of a unit is more than 90 days beyond the occupancy date set out in the purchase agreement, the purchaser may rescind the purchase agreement without penalty and the developer shall, within 15 days from the developer's receipt of a written notice of the rescission from the purchaser, return to the purchaser all of the money paid in respect of the purchase of the unit.

And (b) section 55(a) is amended by striking out the proposed clause (c.6).

Madam Chair, this amendment is designed to strengthen the protection for condominium owners. Basically, this is a change from Bill 13, the previous incarnation of Bill 9, which is not in the interest of consumers. There's a change respecting Bill 13, section 13.1. Basically, what this is is that from time to time there are delays when a unit will be ready for occupancy. Sometimes these delays may be months or years.

Now, currently the options available to a purchaser are set out in the purchase contract. These contracts are drafted by developers and often tend to be slanted in favour of a developer. Industry practice is that it is the sole discretion of the developer to return the deposit money or retain the money should the project have delays. Our amendment takes the remedy for these delays out of the regulatory powers granted to the Lieutenant Governor in Council in the act as it currently exists and places it into the legislation with clear rules. You know, I feel very much, Madam Chair, that this provides a much stronger, more robust consumer protection, especially for those who experience occupancy delays, and it is much stronger than what the current legislation provides. At the end of the day, this is about trying to ensure that condominium owners are protected as much as possible.

5:30

Yes, I acknowledge that sometimes there are unforeseeable delays in the construction and building of a new complex. However, you know, I think of examples of families that are planning to move and a delay is suddenly a year or longer than a year. Say, obviously, they find a place that is available. What tools do they have at their disposal to get their money back from the developer? Yes, there are some out there that are very co-operative with purchasers in getting the money back. Unfortunately, again, in order to ensure that individuals and purchasers are protected and aren't taken advantage of, we need to see this spelled out in legislation. I don't think it's good enough to say that this is in regulations and that the Lieutenant Governor in Council can make these changes or will ensure that purchasers are protected.

I urge the hon. minister and members on the other side to ask any questions, if they have any, but to seriously consider this amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to support this amendment, and it really strikes me as being a critical and important amendment. First of all, just to back up a little bit, almost all Albertans, frankly, probably 75 per cent of Albertans, will tell you that the biggest investment they will make in their life is in their home. That's the first thing. Now, amongst that group a growing and growing number of Albertans are making that investment into condominiums because it's the most affordable way, and with any luck someday we may actually move toward a more dense urban development strategy so that people are more likely to live in condominiums.

That being said, this is an issue that will only grow in importance over time. It is critically important to the people, the consumers, who invest in them, and it is a growing area of concern for all Albertans as they move forward. That being said, this legislation is fundamentally important, and we are very concerned about ensuring that Albertans who are the consumers of this increasingly popular and fundamentally important product, for lack of a better word, are protected. So the concerns that we are raising today through these many amendments all reflect a desire on our part to ensure that consumers, regular Albertans who make the biggest investment of their lifetime, are protected in the process of doing that.

Condominium development is not a complication-free process. When it comes to one condominium owner or even the collection of condominium owners in relation to the often exceptionally strongly articulated rights of the developer, there is the potential for problems.

Now, one of the problems that this amendment attempts to address, of course, is the problem with delays. People, again, will save up. They will have finally paid off their student loan and will be actively saving up in order to put a deposit onto a condominium. They put their deposit on, they balance how long they can pay rent before they start paying interest on that deposit and all that kind of stuff. Then the actual construction of the condominium is delayed. Of course, that happens increasingly in Alberta these days as, you know, development is approved and money is collected and then the follow through is decreasingly well regulated.

So we have average Albertans putting a lot of money on the line, and then that money sits there while at the same time they don't actually have a roof over their heads. They're still paying rent, they're still paying a mortgage somewhere else, or, heaven forbid, they're still living at home with their parents. That's a problem. Alternatively, there are seniors who are downsizing, and they've given up their homes in other capacities.

When you have that problem, you cannot afford to leave that money on deposit for an extended period of time if you are not provided with the quid pro quo, which is a roof over your head. Now, that's what, of course, Bill 13, the previous iteration of Bill 9, was attempting to address when it outlined a dispute resolution mechanism and the right, I believe, of buyers to get a refund if there is a delay of more than 90 days. That was what was in Bill 13, nice and clear in legislation: let's deal with that; yippee, that's great. Then suddenly further consultation happens, and suddenly that particular right of the consumer disappears from legislation and now will potentially be addressed in regulation. But, of course, as we all know, regulations can change. As we all know, regulations most commonly change when this government is subjected to intense lobbying. As we all know, intense lobbying is more likely going to be done on the part of the big developers than it is on the part of the individual condominium purchaser. That's where we are now, Madam Chair.

We've seen a dilution of condominium purchaser and owner rights between Bill 13, when it was introduced, I believe, last spring, and now, this fall, in the form of Bill 9. Why are we seeing consumer rights being diluted? To me, this is not an example of success for regular working Albertans. This is a success for friends and insiders who happen to have very effective lobbyists.

Now, the government will say: "Oh, don't worry. Trust us. It's in regulation, and you can trust us to do the right thing in regulation." But, you know, if we could trust them to do the right thing in regulation, why are they reluctant to put it in legislation?

You know, just watching the process of this bill and watching the pattern of the change would give a reasonable person reasonable grounds upon which to base some suspicions and some concerns about the rights of these consumers in the case that they have made a deposit on a condominium yet the condominium is not completed within a reasonable period of time and they have no place to live. That is the likely conclusion that a reasonable, objective, nonpartisan, noninflammatory person like myself would actually conclude. Indeed, many consumers have reached that conclusion. They are nervous about the fact that something which was helpful to them and protective of them was included in legislation, and now it's moving its slippery little way into regulation.

Our amendment would undo that change. Our amendment would restore that consumer right, that condominium purchaser right, the right of the regular working Albertan who's struggling to save up for their home, which tends to be smaller than big houses and less expensive but still important to them. This would restore their right to have their dispute with their developer properly managed through legislation as a result of them ultimately having a legislative right to get a refund after 90 days of delay. That gives them bargaining power. Let's face it; Joe Average Condominium Purchaser needs a little bit of bargaining power when they're up against a major developer. I mean, that's why we're here right now. We have example after example after example of an uneven level of bargaining power. The original plan in Bill 13 was an attempt to give a little bit of equality to that bargaining power, and now it's gone, so we are worried. Now we're trying to put it back in so that we can be less worried and so that the people purchasing their condominiums can also be less worried.

I urge members of this Assembly to stand up for the little guy. I know it kind of goes against your happy place. It's a little awkward for you, but I suggest that you give it a shot. [interjection] It's a totally reasonable observation, hon. member.

Nevertheless, my request to you is that you consider re-injecting this provision, which assists condominium purchasers and individual Albertans with their negotiating process in the event that the commercial relationship or the consumer relationship between them and the developer, from whom they are purchasing the condominium, starts to break down. This helps right the balance a little bit. I urge members to consider supporting this amendment on behalf of those condominium owners.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to comment on amendment A4? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'm pleased to rise and speak in support of the amendment. Again, I think the member has spoken fairly eloquently about the balance of power here and the need to in many cases address some of the vulnerability of some. I think about my own daughter and son-in-law, who had to struggle at the end, both in terms of some information that they found out about the condominium and its condition and also their ability to pay as a result of some changes in their finances.

I do have some difficulty in accepting an amendment that would go beyond six months, however, and return completely without penalty the full value of the condominium to the purchaser. But I do see some validity in extending the period of time upon which the purchaser has the full reimbursement of the costs of the condominium. I would, in favour of trying to move forward on this, hope that the government would support this as, I guess, a strong commitment to consumers, to purchasers, many of whom, as has been said, are in a vulnerable position and lack in some cases either the expertise or the legal support, when things start to change, to ensure that their interests are protected and that their large financial commitment is protected to some extent if it's beyond that three-month period even by a few days.

I would certainly like to see this supported and the time period of protection for the consumer extended. Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. I would just ask the members on the other side to remember a few days ago, when we first spoke about Bill 9 in the House. A member from Fort McMurray mentioned a major project in Fort McMurray that turned out to be nothing but a disaster. If you recall, I believe that I mentioned that those residents were given one hour to get as much of their personal belongings as they could gather and get out of the building because there was a fear of the building actually collapsing. I was on the Safety Codes Council board of directors at that time, and I got a first-hand look at the report of that building. That building should never have been occupied from day one.

Now, you can imagine – and I don't know if this happened or not. It was a brand new building, less than a year old. Were all of those units sold? Probably not. Did people put deposits down on those apartments or condos? Probably so, and they were waiting to move into them. What happened to those deposits? The developer declared bankruptcy and abandoned the project. This is the kind of bill that will protect condo buyers and their deposits. Think about that for a minute before you vote on this amendment. This is a very important amendment that does exactly what the condo act is supposed to do, and that's protect the condo purchasers and owners. Please think about that before you vote.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'll try to be brief. I have great regard for the comments I just heard, but I have to say that the example given of Fort McMurray isn't so much an example of a project not getting done. Honestly, in that case I'd say that the building inspectors have some culpability there that's undeniable, and whoever is responsible for them has some culpability, more so than the timing of the construction.

I will also say, Madam Chair, in looking at this amendment with "90 days," I once had a home built for myself, and it was more than 90 days late for a bunch of reasons. There may be a period of time where an amendment like this might be appropriate, but respectfully 90 days is too short. If anybody is in the habit of building things or knows somebody that's in the habit of building things, there are so many elements about construction that are beyond the control of those that build, municipal approvals not being the least of them, with financing approvals also being a big part.

Not only that, Madam Chair, but it's really important, I think, that one of the things we need to consider is that we want to encourage more housing to be built. Alberta is a province that in many areas is short of housing. We want to encourage those people that build housing to build housing because it's needed. In fact, the more housing that gets built, the more affordable, generally, on average, it is simply by the law of supply and demand, so you do want to encourage those people that are building housing to build housing.

One of the habits of people that build housing and the way that business sometimes happens, particularly with large condominium projects, is that they get financing based on how many deposits, on how many units they get up front before the construction starts. That's before the construction starts. Then, of course, before the construction starts is a long way before construction finishes, particularly on a large project. Dialling it in within 90 days is not always reasonable. Consequently, if you put this in, I would think there may be cases when it would be harder for those that build homes to put the financing in place knowing that one of the conditions of the financing, the deposits, may actually cause the financing to fall through on the back end, thereby unwittingly – and I will say that I know the hon. member's intentions are good – actually cause the effect of having less housing and, consequently, less affordable housing in Alberta.

To the hon. member. I would suggest that we don't support this. I understand the intentions are good. I just think the math of 90 days, with all the other realities, doesn't work.

The argument could even be made that the financing isn't the individual purchaser's problem. I suppose you could make that argument, but the reality is that financing is an element of housing getting built.

I think this House would do a great disservice by passing this particular amendment and, by extension, inadvertently making it harder for housing to get built in Alberta, which is something that we need very, very badly.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Well, thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'd like to address some of the comments made by the hon. minister. You know, first of all, this amendment is providing protection for the consumer or the purchaser. I find it extremely far reaching to say that if this amendment comes in, we're going to have a stoppage in building of housing and that developers are suddenly going to jump out of the game. What this is doing is ensuring that developers are responsible for the agreement that they sign on the time allotted to build and develop a unit.

I completely understand that there are delays and that delays happen, but again, you know, when delays are extremely long and prolonged, why is it the sole responsibility of the purchaser to have to find an interim place to live, to go through headaches and hassles with no recourse to the developer, who signed a contract stating that the unit will be available for occupancy on a specific date? What this does, Madam Chair, is that it provides for and puts more responsibility on the developer to adhere to their own timelines. I mean, what we're writing about here is not asking too much, that the developer actually builds the units when they say they're going to build them. There is still a buffer.

You know, I think it's quite absurd that a purchaser has very little recourse. If a developer delays for months and months and they can't get their units, what onus does that put on the people that were planning to move in on a specific date? Maybe they're selling a previous home, maybe they're moving across the country, or they have a job lined up. Now they're suddenly frantically scrambling to find another unit. Let's say that they don't want to rent. Let's say that they decide they want to purchase a different unit. Well, good luck getting your dollars back because, again, the contracts are often written with a bit of a developer bias, in favour of the developer, as opposed to, you know, being completely balanced or in favour of the consumer.

What we're doing here: two things. We're providing stronger consumer protection, which is what our laws and our bills should do, protect the condo owners. I want to remind all members of the House that condominiums account for 20 per cent of the homes sold annually, and 1 in 3 homes in Edmonton and Calgary is a condo. This act needs to be written in the best possible way. It needs to be inclusive of many of the critiques or amendments that the opposition has put forward. You know – and I'll speak to this more a little bit later – I'm still quite floored at the speed with which we're pushing this bill through, considering the number of Albertans it affects.

But I digress. Getting back to this, it gives consumers a tool. I don't think that you're suddenly going to have the floodgates open up, where as soon as a delay of more than 90 days occurs, everyone is backing out of their agreements. But at the moment there is very little recourse for a purchaser. I can appreciate the hon. minister's point that, well, all of the onus or responsibility can't be put in the hands of the developer because there are unforeseeable circumstances that arise and delays in projects. Maybe it's material delays that the developer has no control over. But it's equally unfair to place all of that responsibility onto the purchaser or the consumer or an Albertan who signed an agreement saying that they will get occupancy of a unit on a specific date, where months and months pass, and they have no recourse even if they say: "Forget it. I don't want this unit anymore. I'm going to find another unit." What we're essentially saying to Albertans is: "Well, too bad. I'm sorry, but you just lost your down payment. It's your fault; you have to pay for the delays that were out of your control." Again, the developer didn't live up to their agreement.

What this does, Madam Chair, is that it encourages – I disagree with the minister. It doesn't discourage developers from building more units. You know what it does? It holds them accountable and encourages them to build on time and within a three-month window, and if they don't, then they may lose the sale of one of their units. Well, you know what? That sounds pretty fair to me when we're looking at balancing the protection of consumers and Albertans versus balancing the interests of developers. As it currently stands in the condominium act, this favours developers far more than it favours consumers and Albertans. If we want to ensure that they are protected, then this amendment needs to get passed. It is extremely reasonable.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A4?

Ms Notley: Yes, on A4. I just wanted to have a chance to add to the comments by my colleague from Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, which is simply this. There's no question that unforeseen circumstances – a shortage in supply, building on a leaking gas well that nobody noticed was there, for instance, or any one of a number of other unforeseeable circumstances – are a bad thing. But then the question becomes: who bears the brunt of this, and who gets the financing to deal with this bad thing? You're either telling the purchaser, "You know what? You need to go out and get financing now to find an alternative place to live" or "Dial back your groceries a bit, maybe to just two meals a day rather than three." So either your purchaser is doing that, or your developer is finding alternative financing and going back to the bank to say: oops; we've got a problem here. I don't know. When I'm talking to banks, frankly, the ones most likely to get the financing are the developers, not the purchaser who's dialing back their grocery purchases.

I think that, again, what we need to do is make sure that the purchaser's rights are protected. Listening to the minister talk about the kinds of concerns that drive the deliberation of this cabinet makes me very concerned about the kinds of protections that we will ultimately see produced through the cabinet's regulation-making process. I am not convinced that we are going to land on the side of the grocery-buying purchaser. We're going to say: "No. They are the ones that get to shoulder the additional financing costs because, you know, it's too much to ask the developer to."

Now, I appreciate that sometimes it gets really bad and that there is some jeopardy to the project, but then one wonders, too: well, if the project is in jeopardy because it's 180 days delayed, are we really convinced that this developer is building a product which is going to stand the test of time over the course of the next few years, when other issues come up and all that kind of stuff? You know, there needs to be some balancing here, and I'm a little worried that, as usual with this government, the balancing is coming down not on the side of the purchaser or of the regular Albertan.

I certainly support the comments of my colleague from Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to comment on amendment A4?

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 9 Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm pleased to stand and present my third amendment, and I have the necessary papers here. We'll take a second and get them distributed. Third and final.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, this will be known as amendment A5.

Can we keep the noise level down, please? Thank you.

Hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, would you like to continue?

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Madam Chair. Thank you for that admonishment.

This amendment seeks to address some of the condo and individual unit issues. The first part of this amendment gives owners a voice in the changes to the appearance of their property as it affects their property values and unit.

I would like to take this opportunity to read a copy of the Canadian Condominium Institute's news release on this point, written by their counsel, Hugh Willis.

Section 38(4)(a) presently states that an item is not a capital improvement if it is "the contemporary equivalent of an obsolete property." This is problematic wording and may be unduly restrictive. For example, aluminum slider windows are still available and used for some specific applications, but are not commonly used because they are not energy efficient. Instead, vinyl slider windows are usually used. Under the present wording of Bill 9, the replacement of old aluminum slider windows with the contemporary equivalent (vinyl sliders) may be considered a capital improvement because aluminum sliders are, by most definitions, not obsolete. We recommend that s. 38(4)(a) be revised to allow for the replacement of any item with a similar item in accordance with common construction standards.

The second part of this amendment allows the condo board to access the reserve fund to pay for projects that they are ordered by law to comply with. These would include issues with occupancy standards such as mobility access to use reserve funds for the cost of that project rather than a special assessment, which is a much longer and much more formal process. This accounts for the CCI recommendation that the reserve fund study and report should be classified as a recurring administrative expense in the budget and paid for from the operating funds.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A5? The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Khan: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I do again want to thank the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Two Hills . . .

An Hon. Member: Three Hills.

Mr. Khan: Did I say Two Hills? Three Hills. Forgive me.

An Hon. Member: You shortchanged him a hill.

Mr. Khan: Shortchanged him a hill. You write good material.

Mr. Anglin: You lost a hill.

Mr. Khan: Lost a hill.

Through the chair – and I'll be quick – I think the intent is well said, well stated. Again, I want to thank the minister for bringing forward some constructive ideas and amendments that are echoed from CCI north. I've talked to the president of CCI north. We're grateful for their engagement and their stakeholder consultations so far, and we made a commitment to CCI to continue engaging them as we move forward in the consultation process for the regulations.

Specific to this amendment, Madam Chair, what I want to be able to tell you is that the act currently allows condominium corporations to use reserve funds for a broad, broad variety of purposes. The proposed amendments to section 38 are problematic because they remove the reference to managed property in section 38(1)(c). By removing this reference, corporations which make use of managed property may be left unable to actually use the reserve fund for the intended purposes.

So for those reasons I can't support this amendment, but again I want to thank the hon. member for bringing it forward. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, Minister.

Are there any others who wish to speak on amendment A5? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate that. I just want to say very briefly that certainly I support this amendment. Generally, we welcome Bill 9. I think that it's a necessary improvement from what we saw the last time, and I recognize the Service Alberta minister's work to improve I guess it was Bill 13 before, right? I just wanted to make that clear.

Also, we recognize some of the outreach that you did around the province, but the key to this whole issue was around – maybe it's just one group, but it's the group that ultimately is the owners of condos themselves. So, you know, we just found a number of issues that they wanted to bring forward, and working in co-operation with the Wildrose, we had a number of amendments that we developed together. Certainly, this is one of them that is important. It should be recognized, and you should recognize as well the utility of making sure that you look to consult with everybody before a bill comes forward.

So I certainly support this amendment from the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, and I hope everybody else does, too. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to speak to amendment A5? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Madam Chair. I would like to stand in support of this. It's essentially an amendment, although it is much more complex than that, that tries to ensure that condo associations have to bring any repairs to condominiums up to the standard at which it was in terms of value. Clearly, if we're going to act in the interests of owners primarily, we have to try to protect the value of the property, and condo associations or managers who make changes that would devalue the property would not serve the interests of the owners. So I would stand in support of this amendment.

Thanks.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A5? Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A5 lost]

The Deputy Chair: Now we'll go back to the bill, Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have another one of those amendments that I was talking about, so let's bring it forward.

The Deputy Chair: We'll pause for a moment while we have the amendment passed out. Can we have the five copies brought to the table, please? This amendment will be known as amendment A6.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, if you'd like to proceed.

Mr. Eggen: Sure. Thank you. I think one of the things that's been working well for condominium boards and organizations over the last 40 years is voting at general meetings, and the proposed revision to the act, we believe, inserts some needless complexity and maybe even litigation into what is usually a pretty straightforward process.

7:40

Our amendment to the legislation, this amendment that you have before you here now, is an attempt to fix one particular area, which is electronic voting although, again, we feel as though the legislation really should be delayed in order to consult properly with owners to see what kind of voting process they would like in legislation moving forward. We recommend that electronic voting not be permitted at general meetings at this time. The purchase cost of equipment and programs is not significant, especially when you consider that most condominium corporations only have one general meeting a year. The actual vote counting at a general meeting does not take a lot of time, especially since most votes are conducted on a show-of-hands basis. If the owners cannot attend a meeting in person but do want to participate, they can already attend by proxy and vote by proxy.

In the consultation analysis report dated June 2013 question 16 asked about electronic voting at board meetings. It did not ask owners if they thought electronic voting should be permitted at general meetings; nevertheless, many of the comments made by respondents set out their objections to and concerns about electronic voting at these meetings.

Including electronic voting, Madam Chair, at general meetings, I believe, may lead to situations where there is no effective discussion or debate on motions, where the owners may not be able to raise any of their concerns or issues, and where the owners are not able to fully participate in the governance of their communities. Okay? It may lead to complicated situations where people may not be having actual physical general meetings at all. That's another problem that we should consider here, too.

My humble but compelling amendment, that I bring forward on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, I think fixes that problem. You know, we all want to fix problems here, don't we?

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to speak on amendment A6? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Madam Chair. Yes, I'd like to stand in support of this. It's clear that we don't even have the technology to have confidence in electoral procedures in Alberta. An advanced society, and they're still questioning the validity of electronic voting, and to expect a condo association to be able to pull together a reliable, valid, and, I guess, trustworthy electoral system that's not based on paper and personal identification and X marks the spot is hard to fathom.

It's one of the many issues, I guess, that people across the province are raising to us about pushing ahead with a bill that is so complex and has so many dimensions to it. I hope that this, if nothing else, is a cautionary tale to the government to slow down in pushing this very large and complex legislation through when there are so many concerns from both owners and tenants of condos that this could be a problem. This is just one example of a number that we've tried to bring forward, and it's trying to extend a cautionary note to the government to slow down, allow some time for full discussion.

Many of the folks across the floor may not know about the Ontario consultation that went into their condominium amendment act. It took eight months. The two sides, the developers and the owners, were at odds, and over the course of eight months they had to come together repeatedly and hammer out some agreements on all these different decisions that have to be made about assets and liabilities, risks and benefits. Ultimately they hammered out a bill that all of them could accept in eight months.

The fact that we're pushing this through in less than a week raises, I think, serious questions about why we're not taking more time, including more consultations, and ensuring that we get it right the first time and not have to come back to it again next year or deal with all kinds of conflicts, court cases, inconsistencies that people from our constituencies are saying are simply problematic and should be given some time to sort through. This is just one example.

I will be supporting this amendment. It raises a flag. It provides an opportunity for government to pause and consider a full public consultation, industry consultation that would allow this to be the best possible legislation that it can be.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A6?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A6 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We will go back to the bill, Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Madam Chair. I have a couple of amendments to suggest to strengthen the bill, to add clarity, to add confidence to what should be – it's a critical economic and social and the largest investment, of course, that any person can make. I'll table this now. I guess you need the original.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. We'll just pause till we get some handed out, please.

Hon. member, I think you can proceed on amendment A7.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. This is an amendment to the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, itself, that Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be amended in section 35 in the proposed section 44 by adding the following after subsection (2):

- (3) The corporation must make every reasonable effort to assist an owner, purchaser or mortgagee or the solicitor of an owner, purchaser or mortgagee, or a person authorized in writing by any of those persons, with a request made pursuant to subsection (1) and to respond to each request openly, accurately and completely.

In some sense this is obvious, Madam Chair, but as we found in government, access to information is sometimes a problem. It's sometimes deliberately blocked. It's sometimes inadvertently difficult to get access to information. Our sense is that owners and purchasers need to have ready access to information that may be held by the owner, by the developer. It really is a duty to assist. This is a duty-to-assist clause. Certain persons like an owner can request documents from the board, and this clause, just like in the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, will require the board to assist with the request, not block the request, not provide undue resistance to access to information.

For example, in the FOIP progress reports we receive performance reports, and the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner will give us updates about where in the process the request for information is. Is it reasonable or unreasonable? Is it private? Is it open for discussion and access? The amendment will make it easier for the requester to obtain documents that would be helpful for the purchaser to make appropriate decisions and make the organization itself more transparent. As I summarize it, it's a duty to assist. It's an explicit duty to assist when people need access to information.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who would like to comment on amendment A7? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

7:50

Mr. Eggen: Thanks, Madam Chair. I certainly appreciate the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View bringing this up. It's really important to have communication between the developer and the purchasers. We see so many new condos being built all over in my constituency and around Edmonton, Calgary, Grande Prairie, Fort McMurray, and there have been a lot of problems – right? – not just right away but within the first five years of the building of these places. There's one just right over here. It's not a happy photo opportunity, but it's very appropriate; you can literally see the Legislature and within a block see a leaky condo. These are all over the place, like mushrooms sprouting up on the prairies, and not a happy situation for so many people. I have older couples wanting to not have their bungalows anymore and buying condos in the immediate area and then finding that they have a $30,000 bill to add to their mortgage within three or four years of their condo being built and purchased.

Anyway, my point is that communication is really important, as is access to the full disclosure of information. Some of these developers are changing their names as well like the leaves on the trees in the fall, which is not good. They reappear as someone else, another company. I'm sure that many other members have the same problem in their own constituencies. Until we make a law here to chase down some of these poor developers and then have full access to their information and their books and so forth, I don't think we're doing our jobs. So, certainly, this is a step in the right direction.

Thanks a lot, MLA for Calgary-Mountain View.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A7?

Seeing none, we'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A7 lost]

The Deputy Chair: That amendment is defeated, and we're back to the bill, Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Madam Chair. I'd like to move another amendment to again try to protect purchasers, the public.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you. We'll pause for a moment while we get some of those distributed.

Hon. member, you may proceed.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. This actually is a housekeeping amendment. I think anybody would recognize that this would be helpful to an absent owner or tenant or board.

The amendment reads that Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be amended in section 47 in the proposed section 69.3 by renumbering it as subsection 69.3(1) and adding the following, that when there is some kind of conflict,

- (2) On application to the Tribunal, an interested party has the right to appear in person or by agent or counsel.

It's simply to enable, whether it's a tenant, an owner, or a board, to name a representative to appear at the tribunal and act for them in terms of negotiating or arguing or contending some kind of dispute. It would allow people that are absent for whatever reason – sickness, travel, whatever – to have an agent appear on their behalf. It's a housekeeping edit, and I hope the members of the House will accept that.

Thanks, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate where this member is coming from. That being said, it is a well-known common-law right that an individual can appear through counsel, with his or her counsel or without his or her counsel, the counsel appearing on his or her behalf. So I would suggest that this is already referenced in the document just by prescription, and I think that putting this through would be redundant, respectfully.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any others who would like to comment on amendment A8?

Seeing none, we'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A8 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We're back on Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014. Are there any other members who wish to comment, question, or have amendments?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[The remaining clauses of Bill 9 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. At this point I would move that the committee rise and report on bills 9 and 11.

[Motion carried]

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: I would like to recognize the Member for Calgary-East to read the report.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 11. The committee also reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 9. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 7

Chartered Professional Accountants Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As we know, the bill is the result of bringing together three accounting groups – the CGAs, the CMAs, and the CAs – who have all requested that they be joined together into one group. We've done a lot of consultation. They're all in agreement. I'd just like to encourage my colleagues here in the House to support this bill.

I'd also like to thank the staff in JSTL and also the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar for having chaired a committee that travelled the province getting input on this.

With that and in the interest of moving things along, Madam Speaker, I'll just suggest respectfully to my colleagues that they support this very good idea.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. minister, you're moving third reading?

Mr. McIver: I am moving third reading, yes. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any other members who wish to speak in third reading on Bill 7, Chartered Professional Accountants Act?

Seeing none, we'll call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 7 read a third time]

8:00

Bill 8

Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014

The Acting Speaker: To move third reading, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and move third reading of Bill 8, the Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014.

Just to recap, this act amends several justice-related acts, including the Court of Queen's Bench Act, the Estate Administration Act, the Family Law Act, the Limitations Act, the Notaries and Commissioners Act, the Oaths of Office Act, the Perpetuities Act, the Provincial Court Act, the Wills and Succession Act, and does some minor housekeeping changes to several other acts.

Madam Speaker, this bill was developed with input from Alberta's judiciary, from the legal community, and from members of the public, and there was support for these amendments amongst those stakeholders. It reflects the work that we're doing here in the government to ensure that we increase access to justice for Albertans and improve our justice system for everyone's benefit.

I want to thank everyone in the Legislature for their participation in this debate, and I ask for your support in moving third reading of Bill 8.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to comment in third reading on Bill 8, Justice Statutes Amendment Act, 2014?

Seeing none, I'll call the question. [interjections]

[Motion carried; Bill 8 read a third time]

Mr. Denis: Madam Speaker, it appears to be past the bedtime of the Member for Lesser Slave Lake. As such, I would move that this House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 8:03 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Dear Lord, today, as we mark the international declaration of Human Rights Day, let us be mindful and respectful that human rights belong equally to all and that many have died in attempting to achieve and/or to protect those rights as a fundamental component of the freedoms we enjoy. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly a prestigious group of Albertans joining Citizens for a Civil Society and its flagship project, Daughters Day, in celebration of Human Rights Day, December 10. These Albertans have dedicated their lives to building a more inclusive and welcoming society, inspired by our common aspirations and democratic traditions that make human rights a way of life for all Albertans. As I say their names, I ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. Seated in the Speaker's gallery: Mita Das, president of Citizens for a Civil Society; Jack O'Neill, a recipient of the Order of Canada and former chief commissioner of the Alberta Human Rights Commission; Mary O'Neill, a former MLA for St. Albert; Elexis Schloss, a recipient of the Order of Canada, an advocate for the homeless, and a philanthropist; Muriel Stanley Venne, a recipient of the Order of Canada and the president and founder of the Institute for the Advancement of Aboriginal Women.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today marks the 66th anniversary of the universal declaration of human rights being adopted by the United Nations, and it is certainly a rare occasion that the House sits on December 10 and has an opportunity to recognize this important day. To share in this celebration, there are several prominent Albertans in attendance in the Speaker's gallery and the members' gallery. It is an honour for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly six Albertans who have dedicated their lives to achieving the spirit of the universal declaration of human rights for all people: Alexis Antonakis, a volunteer with Jewish Family Services; Than Aung, a volunteer with the Burmese Cultural Society; Sonia Bitar, a former citizenship judge and volunteer with Changing Together; Jagdish Bhatia, a businessman; Tara Bhatia, a mentor; and Shreela Chakrabarty, a filmmaker. Please rise and receive the traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly several prominent Albertans in attendance in the members' gallery who are here with the Citizens for a Civil Society and its flagship project, Daughters Day. Citizens for a Civil Society is a registered nonprofit organization in Alberta that promotes and supports human rights and dignity. Daughters Day celebrates the lives, contributions, and achievements of all daughters.

Sixty-six years ago the United Nations adopted the universal declaration of human rights, the principles of which are enshrined in law through the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the Alberta Human Rights Act, and the Alberta Bill of Rights. December 10 is a day worthy of recognition in this Assembly, and to that end these Albertans, who have dedicated their lives to building a more inclusive and welcoming society, are here with us today. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise as I call their names to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly: Lan Chan-Marples, a facilitator and volunteer with Chinese community services and the Canadian Multicultural Education Foundation; Earl Choldin, a human rights advocate; Satya Brata Das, cofounder of Daughters Day and the founder and principal of Cambridge Strategies Inc.; David Evans, a journalist; Soraya Hafez, a volunteer with the Canadian Council of Muslim Women, Edmonton; and Charan Khehra, cofounder and chairperson of Daughters Day.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is also my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some additional guests from Citizens for a Civil Society, an Alberta nonprofit organization that, as you've heard, promotes and supports human rights and dignity. My guests are here today as well to celebrate the 66th anniversary of the adoption and proclamation of the United Nations universal declaration of human rights. These Albertans have dedicated their lives to building a more inclusive and welcoming society, inspired by our common aspiration and democratic traditions that make human rights a way of life for all Albertans.

Seated in the members' gallery are Cynthia Lazarenko, a volunteer with Seniors United Now; Danielle Monroe, a volunteer with ACT Alberta, a group that prevents human trafficking; Philomina Okeke, a professor of women and gender studies; Jitendra Shah, vice-president of CIBC Wood Gundy and president of the Mahatma Gandhi foundation for peace; Lori Sigurdson, manager, professional affairs, with the Alberta College of Social Workers; Rose Marie Tremblay, consultant and volunteer with Edmonton Social Planning Council; and Paula Kerman, photographer, writer, and social advocate. I would now like to ask all of my guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Let us move on to school groups. The Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two community members from l'école publique Gabrielle-Roy, located in my constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar, a K to 12 francophone public school. They are here to bring awareness to the need for a playground for the school, that has had 50 per cent growth in the last five years. They're seated today in the members' gallery, and as I read their names, if they could please stand: Mme Diana Stralberg, playground committee chair, and M. Jean-Daniel Tremblay, principal of the school. I would now ask that they receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, I believe you have a group here from Mount Pleasant elementary to introduce.

Ms Notley: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's actually really a pleasure for me to rise and introduce this group because I speak to this grade 6 class usually every year. Every time I go and visit with them, they're brilliant kids and often have incredible observations to offer on politics and other issues. I always invite them to come and observe question period, so I'm very excited that they've been able to come today and that we're still here and they'll be able to observe question period. I would ask that all the students and the teachers from Mount Pleasant rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you two individuals I know, Kevin Feth and his son William. It's William's first time here for question period today, I understand. William is a student at Harry Ainlay high school here in Edmonton. Kevin I've known for several years. He is a partner with Field Law in Edmonton but also the president of the Law Society of Alberta. Kevin's term as president will be concluding in the next couple of months, and I wanted to thank Kevin, in particular, but also his family for the sacrifices that he's made serving our profession. Please join me in giving them both the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The Minister of Service Alberta, followed by Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Mr. Khan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to the rest of the Assembly two very bright and capable people who work very hard for Albertans every day in the Ministry of Service Alberta. I'd like now to ask Scott Seymour and Marisol Mora, who are seated in the members' gallery, to rise. Scott Seymour is newly married, and he and his wife live in Sherwood Park. Scott shares his hometown of Grovedale, a little hamlet south of Grande Prairie, with the hon. Minister of Transportation. Scott, the duke says hi.

Secondly, we have Marisol Mora. In addition to her public service, she is pursuing a management degree at the University of Lethbridge. She commutes from Lake Isle and is planning to go home to Costa Rica for Christmas to visit her family. Very lucky.

I'd ask the House to give them the traditional warm welcome. Thank you very much.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the Minister of Infrastructure.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a wonderful young lady, Wendy Collins. I met Wendy at a community town hall in the summer, and she was studying for her political science degree. She expressed an interest in working in the Legislature. Lo and behold, Wendy has been a valuable member of the Liberal opposition caucus team helping us do our job in the Legislature. Wendy is also working towards a PhD in psychology in addition to her interest in political science. If that isn't enough, today is Wendy's birthday. On this very special day on behalf of the Alberta Liberals and, I'm sure, all of the members in the Assembly I would like to wish Wendy a very happy birthday and ask her to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The Minister of Infrastructure, followed by the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've got two sets of introductions. First of all, I'd like to introduce a member of the family who, I would say, my wife thinks best resembles my behaviour, my three-and-a-half-year-old nephew, Jovan Sidhu. Jovan is a very enthusiastic member of my family, and I can see from his work ethic and his very charming nature that he is likely to be a future MLA, a member of this Assembly. I'll ask Jovan to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I guess I should introduce Jovan's parents: Sankalp Sonny Sidhu, and Nisha Sidhu. Sankalp is a very unusual name in all cultures, including my own. In fact, he is the only person in North America with the name Sankalp. So I would like to congratulate him for that as well today as he rises in the Assembly. Joining Sankalp and Nisha are their business partners Dany Fillion and Brian Marsin. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky, followed by the Associate Minister of Asia Pacific Relations.

Mr. McDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you two board members from NADC that are here doing their work this week: Pat O'Neill and Eva Urlacher. Pat, who is from St. Paul, has been a board member for seven years, and his daughter works for the Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour here in the Legislature. Eva has been a board member for six years and has done a tremendous amount of work in the Bonnyville-Cold Lake area and is a great asset to the board. They're in the members' gallery. Could they please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The Associate Minister of Asia Pacific Relations.

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you the fifth cohort of the global academic leadership development program with the University of Alberta. This exciting program, sponsored by the China Scholarship Council, selects university administrators from institutions across China to study at the U of A for three months. Our first five cohorts have hosted over 150 administrators from over 40 Chinese institutions. The 30 Chinese senior administrators here today are from 16 universities across China. They have been here since September and will leave on December 19, after completing a 12-week university leadership development program exposing them to Canadian university administration practices. They are joined by Miss Cen Huang, assistant vice-president, and Mr. Wei Liu, program administrator with the University of Alberta's international program. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I ask that they please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Human Rights

Mr. Wilson: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, 66 years ago the United Nations adopted and proclaimed the universal declaration of human rights. It was born out of the ashes of some of the most horrific crimes humanity has ever seen and stands as a document testifying to the most noble of ambitions: ensuring and maintaining the most basic of human rights for all people, groups from all nations, from all backgrounds. While the world since 1950 is still marked by horrific crimes against humanity and by nations still torn by war, I am proud to be part of a province and a country that continues the necessary work to achieve universal recognition of basic human rights across the world.

Here in Alberta we are lucky to have nonprofit groups like Citizens for a Civil Society to promote human rights and dignity along with community organizations like Daughters Day, who are committed to ending discrimination, violence, and human rights abuses against all women. With their incredible contributions here in Alberta a growing volume of citizens are gathering together, working towards achieving a more inclusive and welcoming society inspired by our common aspirations and strong democratic traditions.

On the national and international stage we can all be proud of the initiatives taken by our federal government. Our Prime Minister continues to work toward saving the lives of the world's most vulnerable women and children through the maternal health initiative.

Mr. Speaker, I'm proud of the work that Canada is doing on the front lines to protect innocent women, children, and vulnerable peoples from the most inexplicable and horrific crimes by groups such as ISIL.

Mr. Speaker, let's take today to remember the unspeakable injustices that are committed against individuals and all of humanity while celebrating the achievements we have made and looking forward to the work that must still be done.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by Edmonton-McClung.

Human Rights in Alberta

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is international Human Rights Day, and this year's theme is Human Rights 365, encompassing the idea that every day is human rights day. But LGBTQ youth in Alberta face a fight for their basic human rights every day, and now this PC government doesn't have the respect to be honest about why at this point they're not protecting these rights.

The universal declaration of human rights was proclaimed 66 years ago today, yet unfortunately our Premier's understanding of human rights has not kept up. Let's be clear. There is no right to discriminate, not for governments, not for school boards, not for anyone. The Premier is hiding behind an outdated interpretation of our Constitution to get out of having to take a real position on LGBTQ rights. There is no right to discriminate. There is simply an acknowledgement that Catholic school boards may retain the religious character of their schools. No court has ever found that these rights extend to creating what is essentially a separate but equal, 1950s-style group of second-class citizens.

GSAs are separate, voluntary, extracurricular groups. In no way do they infringe on anyone else's rights or interfere with the school's religious character. The Premier's best defence is a case which draws from precedent set in jurisdictions with a different system and that, more importantly, is almost 30 years old, when Charter rights were in their infancy. The law evolves, as does our province, even if this PC government won't.

Alberta's Catholic school boards themselves have said that they will not challenge a law protecting GSAs. There are no excuses left to avoid joining the 21st century. Alberta's LGBTQ youth have a right to a safe, inclusive education, a right to nondiscrimination, a right to dignity and respect. Today, on international Human Rights Day, this Premier needs to stop dodging the real issue and stand up for LGBTQ students in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Human Rights Day

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. December 10 is international Human Rights Day. Today we mark the anniversary of the signing of the universal declaration of human rights by the United Nations member states in 1948. Signing this important document meant that for the first time in history the universal protection of fundamental human rights was set out, providing a common standard of achievement for all peoples and nations.

The slogan for this year's Human Rights Day is Human Rights 365. The United Nations has launched the campaign to promote the importance of human rights not only today, on Human Rights Day, but 365 days of the year. The campaign celebrates the fundamental proposition in the Universal Declaration that each one of us, everywhere, at all times is entitled to the full range of human rights, that human rights belong equally to each of us and bind us together as a global community with the same ideals and values.

The Alberta Human Rights Act and the Alberta Bill of Rights are important pieces of legislation that help guarantee that all Albertans have the dignity and respect they deserve.

Mr. Speaker, in the 66 years since the universal declaration was signed, many advances have been made both here at home and around the globe to uphold the rights of women, minority communities, people with disabilities, the LGBTQ community, indigenous people, and many others. However, we are too often reminded that much work remains to be done to ensure that all human beings, regardless of gender, sexual orientation, ethnicity, where they are born and live, are afforded and protected by the same inalienable rights.

Mr. Speaker, a list of events being held across the province as well as more information about international Human Rights Day and the many ways Albertans can get involved is available on the Human Rights Commission website, albertahumanrights.ab.ca.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Hon. members, let us be reminded that we have 35 seconds each regardless of whether we're posing a question or trying to answer one.

Let's start with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, in the spring I asked the Premier's predecessor how she would balance the budget if oil dropped to $90. During the by-election we talked about the impact of $80 oil.

When session started, just four weeks ago, I asked the Premier what he would do about $70 oil. Today oil is kissing $60. The impact on our resource revenues will be substantial. The trickle-down impact on our economy could be severe. Is the Premier prepared to take steps to rightsize this government's spending while protecting core front-line services?

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for her question. Certainly, oil prices today, WTI prices, were in the range of $60.30 per barrel. I'm aware of the significance of this to our province's finances. But I think it's important to note that while there are as many opinions about oil prices as there are bank analysts, I would encourage the hon. member to consider what Moody's had to say today in the peer comparison that they published pointing out that the strengths that we have in our province are a strong balance sheet, our tax competitiveness, and our fiscal discipline, which we intend to maintain.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, a few days ago during question period I expressed hope that the Premier was right when he predicted that oil would range between $65 and $75 for the balance of the fiscal year. The last few days have dashed those hopes. We are starting to see the economic impact of a very low-price environment. Yesterday the Finance minister stood here and said that our economy was "still growing." Well, I'm afraid that if it is still growing, it won't be for long. Will the Premier reassure Albertans by telling us what options are under consideration to deal with this problem?

Mr. Prentice: Well, quite specifically, Mr. Speaker, the alternative that is under consideration is that we will maintain financial discipline in this province, as simple as that. We intend to do that. If you read the Moody's report which was published today, which I referred to, they indicate that that, in fact, is what Alberta needs to do. That is what financial agencies and raters expect our province to do in these circumstances. They point out, they highlight that our tax competitiveness and the strength of our balance sheet, which provides us with both long- and short-term financial assets and therefore liquidity, are exactly what we need to maintain.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, in the economic downturn of 2008 the provincial government prolonged the impact of a low-price environment by bringing in the new royalty framework. As a result, we didn't bounce back as quickly as we should have, and it took six major changes before they finally got it right. Will the Premier assure Albertans and our energy sector that his ministers aren't considering any policies that will make things worse?

Mr. Prentice: Well, certainly, Mr. Speaker, the circumstances that we are entering in are new. They're untested. It is going to take prudence and discipline on the part of the government in administering Alberta's finances. But we are in a strong position. While we are all concerned about this, I think it is important that we note that Albertans are tough and resilient. Our economy is tough and resilient. The Moody's report, again, projects that even in the circumstances that we are currently in, Alberta will experience growth in the next year, growth that leads this country. We continue to be disciplined, and we need to do exactly that.

The Speaker: Second main set of questions.

Energy Company Licensee Liability Rating Program

Ms Smith: Perhaps an example, Mr. Speaker. Speaking of places where poor government policy can make an economic downturn worse, yesterday we asked about the licensee liability rating program. While the goal of LLR is laudable, it was poorly crafted and earlier this year put many junior oil companies at risk of insolvency during a high-price environment. Its consequences will now be more severe during a low-price environment. Will the Premier put a pause on this program and re-evaluate the approach?

Mr. Prentice: We will certainly evaluate any measures which any department of this government proposes to take, Mr. Speaker, that will have an impact on jobs and investment in our energy industry over the course of this low-price cycle that we are in. We must all be mindful that we need to maintain our competitiveness through this. At the same time I want to be absolutely clear that no one should underestimate the strength and the resilience of the energy industry in this province. This price trough that we're in is not about our competitiveness or about our long-term future, both of which are strong.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, when we pushed the government hard on the issue of the LLR earlier this year, they modified the program, with a management regime that stretched out payments for smaller companies. That was good, but in the new very low-price environment more is needed. The program as structured may lead to the end of hundreds of small and medium-sized energy companies. This will increase the financial obligations and stresses on the remaining medium and large oil companies. Will the Premier agree to review the LLR program to ensure that it doesn't harm our economy?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I indicated in my answer that I had heard the concern from the small operators. I thank the hon. member for recognition of the goals of the program and the fact that a financial program is assisting the payments. I met with the small operators and identified the concern. I promised to meet with them again. I informed my department and the regulator that we would be meeting very soon. They're doing the background work. We will. It's not just that issue; we are deeply concerned about the competitiveness across the board, and I will meet with them. I guarantee you.

Ms Smith: I think meeting is a good first step, Mr. Speaker, and I do hope that we actually see some accommodation because if government policies reduce the capacity of the Alberta energy industry to bounce back from a low-price environment, we're all going to suffer.

This is a policy question, but it's also an intensely important personal question for hundreds of thousands of families who derive their income and prosperity from our energy industry. To the Premier: will he assure those Albertans and indeed all of us that the policies of his Energy ministry are not going to make things worse?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that nobody in this House is going to take this more personally than me and our Premier. I absolutely will meet with those operators, and I can assure their families that we will do everything we can. The competitiveness of our industry is absolutely critical to us. We understand the jobs and the wealth that they create, and we will absolutely work on this.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition. Third and final main set of questions.

Long-term Care

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, I asked some questions about seniors yesterday and discovered that the Health minister, the Seniors minister, and Alberta Health Services weren't on the same page. Yesterday an AHS executive ludicrously suggested that we have an overcapacity of long-term care beds in this province. The Health minister said that it was a regional thing; some parts of Alberta have "too many beds." This was curious, of course, since in the by-elections the Health minister announced new seniors beds for every region of Alberta. Can the Health minister tell us which parts of Alberta have too many long-term care nursing beds?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was making a reference to the province as a whole. I think that we in the last little while are in the process of building more long-term care beds in areas that are in need of them, and we'll continue to do that. We value making sure that our people, seniors, and those in need of long-term care will have facilities where they need them.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, let me tell the nature of the problem. In 1993 we had about 13,000 long-term care nursing beds in this province; 21 years later we have 14,200 beds. In the meantime we have gone from a 2.5 million population to 4.3 million residents, and our population has gotten older, on average. No reasonable person can actually believe that there are too many long-term care nursing beds in Alberta. Why are AHS and this Health minister trying to redefine who needs a long-term care bed rather than just simply building enough beds?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we will continue to do what's needed for the citizens of Alberta. But let's be clear. One of the policies this government has developed is for more attention to home care, trying to keep people in their homes. We're spending over half a billion dollars a year to make sure that we're able to keep people in their houses. We're working with them. We're encouraging people to stay in their houses. Our home-care program is doing that.

Ms Smith: Mr. Speaker, the Health minister knows that if there isn't a long-term care nursing bed, then they stay in acute-care beds in hospitals. He's not solving the problem.

We also heard another dodge yesterday when the Seniors minister suggested that the Seniors' Advocate had the authority to call for investigations into improper seniors care. Now, the minister should know this isn't true, but let's take him at his word. Since almost every month we hear about shocking cases of seniors with festering bedsores or seniors with fungal infections or seniors left for days in soiled diapers, why has the Seniors' Advocate not launched any investigations?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, the Seniors' Advocate plays a very important role. There are a number of avenues open to constituents and seniors and indeed MLAs from this caucus, including working with local management on issues as well as going to the Seniors' Advocate, who does have the ability to call inspections and to help constituents navigate. They've also got the ability to call under protection for persons in care, which has a toll-free number. I'll give it to you right now. It's 1.888.357.9339. As a matter of fact, people have an obligation and are compelled to call if they're aware of any abuse or lack of treatment for seniors.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. leader of the Alberta Liberal opposition.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before the election the PCs promised every Albertan a new car, a school, a hospital, and a chicken in every pot, and after the election some unforeseen fiscal reality requires Albertans to do some belt-tightening. Every PC Premier gives us a new excuse: a price differential, a bitumen bubble, and now a price drop. No matter what you call it, this PC government always acts surprised whenever volatile resource revenue goes volatile. To the Premier: how is it that your PC government can't balance the books and save enough money in the good times and falls so desperately short in the bad times?

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, there appears to be a question buried in the rhetoric of those comments. The long and short of it is that the world energy industry is currently in unexpected circumstances with oil prices, as I understand it, at 12-year lows. This is something that relates to what is taking place inside OPEC. It is something that every single oil producer in the world is grappling with right now. It is not unique to Alberta. Certainly, the Premier of Alberta cannot control energy prices. The key is to control what we can, and that is prudence in our fiscal finances.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the question is premised on the fact that the PCs have tied public services to the price of a barrel of oil.

At the last heritage savings trust fund meeting I asked the CEO of AIMCo about budgeting and planning for changing oil prices. He admitted that a year ago he warned that we should be preparing for $70 a barrel when oil was at $100, but that notion was not very well received according to him. The Alberta Liberals have been saying the same thing for years and urging the government to introduce a more stable revenue-stream structure based on taxation. Dr. de Bever says that he can't find an economist in the province who would disagree. To the Premier: why do you still refuse . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Premier, I hope you heard a question in there.

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I cannot speak definitively to the advice that's been offered by the Liberals in terms of the public finances of the province, but I will refer to the fact that the most respected credit agency in the world, Moody's, today said that one of the strengths that we have is our balance sheet and the state of our public finances, that we have relied in the past on prudent forecasting, and that we have taken windfall natural resource revenue and used it to pay down debt, to continue to build infrastructure, and to build up financial reserves. That is exactly what we need to continue to do, not the sort of policies that my friend is advocating.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the Liberals are the only ones who've paid down debt in this country, while the Conservatives have racked it up.

The Premier also told us that he'll be rolling up his sleeves over the Christmas break and wrestling this problem to the ground. While we certainly appreciate his commitment to hard work, no amount of cowboy economics is going to make this problem go away. Next year babies will still be born, children will go to school, the sick will need hospitals, and seniors will get old. To the Premier: the only thing that seems to be in question is if your government will give regular, hard-working Albertans a tax cut and ask the wealthy to pay their fair share. Will you reintroduce progressive income tax or not?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, we will continue to administer the finances of the province in a fiscally responsible way. I point out that my friend is critical . . . [interjection] My friend is critical of the state of Alberta's finances. I again refer to him . . . [interjection]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, there is a time and place where you will be recognized if you wish. Right in the middle of someone else's speech time is not it.

Let us move on to the hon. Premier to conclude.

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, if I might respond to that question, what we have in this province that makes us competitive and that will allow us to weather this tough circumstance is our tax competitiveness, the fact that we have the lowest taxes in the country, that they are fair, and that they're fairly administered, that we have built up financial assets that no one else in Canada has at this point and which put no one else in a position to be able to weather what is about to happen. That is exactly what we're going to continue to do.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Emergency Room Capacity Issues

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Doctors at the U of A hospital are reporting the most severe patient backlog since 2010. The emergency room is so full that doctors are treating patients in the corner of the waiting room. Experts say that the backlog is a risk to patient health and safety and requires urgent and immediate attention. To the Minister of Health: what specifically is your government going to do today to alleviate the unacceptable status at the U of A ER?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have great confidence in our emergency doctors. They do an incredible job. The nurses and their teams do tremendous work. We realize that there are challenges with an ever-growing population, but we have done some things for that. We're reducing the dependence on acute-care beds, opening up new long-term care beds. Actually, of the original 464 people, we've moved almost a third into long-term care beds. We've put in transition beds. We've made every effort at this point in time to try to help the system. We understand that there's an issue, and we'll continue to work with the physicians and the emergency doctors to . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Notley: Well, it doesn't seem to be working, Mr. Speaker. U of A doctors say that less than 40 per cent of patients are being seen and discharged within acceptable timelines and that, instead, patients are waiting up to eight hours to see a doctor. This crisis in the ER occurs repeatedly, and every time this government puts a Band-Aid on the problem, they then rip it off through their own incompetence. To the Minister of Health: when will this government take off its ideological blinders, start providing an actual increase in the number of long-term care spaces for patients trapped in our hospitals, and fix this ER backlog?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, several months ago we started that process, and under the leadership of the Seniors minister we're continuing that process. We're building more and more beds, long-term care beds, supportive beds, and trying to move people into those facilities. It doesn't happen overnight. As I said a few seconds ago, we have moved almost one-third of our original goal of 460 within the first year into those beds. We'll continue to do that. All of our teams are working very, very hard to be successful, and we understand the challenges.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, speaking of long-term care, when it comes to long-term care, this government is sitting by while Covenant Health saves money and reduces patient care hours on the backs of both patients and loyal, long-serving front-line workers. To the Minister of Health. Covenant's so-called reorganization is awe-inspiring in the level of chaos it is creating right now, and it will undoubtedly contribute to the number of vulnerable and ill patients who end up in ERs unnecessarily. To the minister: why in heaven's name are you letting them get away with this?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, Covenant Health is an incredibly well-respected organization that runs several facilities in Edmonton, and we are a great supporter of theirs. The fact of the matter is that they're a private operator, and they decided to make some changes. They have to meet all the standards set out by the province of Alberta. We will ensure that they do that. They've made a modest reduction of I think about five staff in their three facilities, where they have 650 employees. They'll continue to deliver service. That is a group of people, Covenant Health, that's passionate about people and will continue to deliver what's needed to Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by Calgary-Varsity.

2:10 Energy Industry Competitiveness

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The energy industry is the backbone of the Alberta economy. It impacts job growth, retail sales, and home values. But with oil prices in decline the industry is rightly concerned about the future. Right now major energy producers are cutting their capital budgets, cancelling investments, and bracing for uncertain times. To the Energy minister: what new policy changes are you making to ensure that drilling doesn't stop and our producers have the confidence they need to continue to invest in this current climate?

Mr. Oberle: Well, I thank the hon. member for the question, Mr. Speaker. Let's be clear that the current situation is driven by the international price of oil, not by the government policy environment. The energy companies are doing what they're going to expect our government to do, which is to manage their finances in a prudent and cautious manner. We fully expect them to do that. At the moment nobody has talked about curtailments in production. We are talking constantly with the energy industry, and we will respond.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Hale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do have some information, that I'll share with you, where some companies are cutting their budgets.

Given that a major pipeline project would go a long way to improving our competitive advantage but that most of these potential pipelines are years away from happening, if ever, Albertans want to know: what steps are you taking today to improve our competitive advantage and show the world that Alberta is still a responsible energy player and a good place to do business?

Mr. Oberle: Well, let me be clear to the hon. member that market access is number one in my mandate letter. The pipelines are going to happen, and they are not years away from happening. In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, we're working on value-added initiatives right here at home. This will be done right.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, given that in 2008, when the economy was in recession and oil prices were suffering, this government panicked and made things much worse with poorly-thought-out policy changes, can the minister assure this House that he's actually talking to industry this time and won't make policy decisions regarding the carbon levy or royalties that will further harm the oil patch?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, my colleague, I think, is referring to the comments that were made yesterday in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister. Both the Prime Minister and I have been very clear that we intend to protect jobs and investment in the energy industry. Key to that is the question of our economic competitiveness. We will be environmental leaders, as we currently are. What we will not do as Albertans is unilaterally impose penalties and levies on the energy industry that will damage jobs and investment in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by Calgary-Fish Creek.

School Construction Update

Ms Kennedy-Glans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans know that falling oil prices will impact government revenue. In fact, yesterday the Premier noted that if low oil prices persist over the next year, it could cost the Treasury as much as $6 billion or $7 billion. While revenues decline, population continues to increase, including more school-age children. In light of this, is the Minister of Infrastructure still confident that he can deliver on the 230 new schools promised?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yes, we are confident. Because the Alberta population continues to grow, we project that there will be a 25 per cent increase by 2023 of school-age children. Every time our population increases by about a hundred thousand, 15,000 of those people are school-age children, and that means we need 28 new schools. So we have to project for our continued population growth to make sure that the quality of life that Albertans are expecting is there for them.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: There's no doubt these schools must be built, but Albertans want to know that we're actually making progress, so we want some details. The 230 promised schools are divided into three phases. In phases 1 and 2 there are 160 schools. Will the minister tell us how many schools in these phases are completed, under construction, in tender, or in some other phase?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can report progress from the last time we discussed schools in this Assembly. In phase 1, 31 are complete, three of them are close to completion, and one, because of the Calgary floods, is in the planning stage. In phase 2 one is complete, 20 are under construction, 28 will be out of tender within this month, and 73 will be going to tender within the early parts of next year.

Ms Kennedy-Glans: People appreciate this detail.

In phase 3 government promised another 75 new or modernized schools, but only planning dollars were allocated. Why did the government do this, and when can we expect to see progress on these phase 3 schools?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What we heard from our stakeholders across this province is that the planning-and-design period can take upwards of one year, so in an attempt to shave off that time and to get children into new classrooms as soon as possible, we allocated planning dollars earlier so that people can begin the planning and the design of new schools so that, hopefully, we can get children into classrooms much quicker than before.

Long-term Care (continued)

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, last year the government spent $910 million on health services in long-term care, or more accurately that's the amount of money that they think was spent on health care. Long-term care operators receive funding based on the care plan they develop for residents, yet incredibly the Auditor General says that nobody bothered to check if those care plans are actually being implemented so that the seniors can get the basic care they so richly deserve. To the minister: when you spend almost a billion dollars a year on health services in long-term care, checking to see if those health care services are actually being delivered seems like a no-brainer.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are some people who don't have plans, but for the most part the Auditor General acknowledged that there are many, many who have health care plans. They're important plans. The health care plan allows the LTC facility to look at the kind of care the individual needs but also, which is vitally important, at whether or not we put the person in the right level of care. That's something that we've had a bit of a challenge with. I hope we'll continue to do that. We are doing that. We'll continue to do that under the auspices of Alberta Health Services and with the co-operation of the various facilities.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you. Given that in response to the Auditor General's report AHS said that they're ready to implement a system to monitor whether facilities actually hire the number and ratio of staff that they are funded to provide and that they would publish quarterly reports beginning in the fall of 2014, Minister, fall ends in 11 days, and the report is nowhere to be seen. Where is it?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, when reports become available and they're finished, we will put them on the website for people to review.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you. I'll look forward to that, Minister.

Given that oil prices are plummeting, the government talks about belt-tightening, and there are still seniors that aren't getting two baths a week even though you promised you'd do that, can the minister explain to me why I'm reading in the morning newspaper that a senior AHS executive wants to spend upwards of $25,000 to study Calgarians' feelings on e-cigarettes? Minister, that's ridiculous. How many baths would that be?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta Health Services should not be going out and doing those kinds of things at this point in time. These are difficult times, and we will talk to them about the kind of investments they're making.

Postsecondary Institution Accessibility in Calgary

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, all my questions are for the minister of advanced education. Over the past five years the number of turned-away students in the city of Calgary to our postsecondary institutions has increased by over 200 per cent. The comparable figure for Edmonton and the rest of the province is 93 per cent. Can the minister explain why so many students in the city of Calgary are being turned away from postsecondary education when they are qualified for entrance?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education.

Mr. Scott: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the member for the question and for being such a strong advocate for our postsecondary system. In this case we'd make sure that we are comparing institutions fairly. Acceptance rates vary across the institutions, across Campus Alberta. In this case an institutional comparison simply doesn't make sense because we have various policies and we have various programs at each institution. Like all members in the Assembly, we want Campus Alberta to be the best postsecondary system in all of Canada. I will take the member's concerns into account as we go forward.

Dr. Brown: Will the minister do something to lower the number of turnaways in the city of Calgary, and will he ensure that people can attend an institution closer to home, where they can get their education at a lower and more reasonable cost?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

2:20

Mr. Scott: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Our government is working hand in hand with our institutions so that we have the best system for learners and for taxpayers, a system that is accessible for students and sustainable for institutions and for taxpayers. The University of Calgary, like the rest of Campus Alberta, is working on an institutional plan for the year ahead. I'll be sitting down with all our Campus Alberta partners to make sure that they have a plan that makes sense and that is responsive for Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Final supplemental? Thank you.

Let us move on to Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Edmonton-Calder.

Covenant Health Staffing Changes

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government and Health minister continue to make wasteful decisions with predictable results, low morale in staff and intermittent crises from emergency rooms to long-term care. Dr. Bill Sevcik, whose letter I will table later, this week described staff frustration, increased legal liability, and intolerable risk to patients, largely due to the failed long-term care and home-care policies in this government. Now Covenant Health is laying off 600 LPNs at the Edmonton General site. To the minister: with ER Dr. Sevcik appealing for very practical improvements, increases in ER nurses today and reinstating triage physicians . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Minister of Health to respond.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health Services is doing all they can in working with ER doctors, with Covenant Health, with various other facilities in the province to deliver the kind of health care that they're able to do, and we're in support of what they do. They are challenged, we admit, but will continue to do things, whether it's creating transition beds, whether it's creating more long-term care spaces, whether it's working with the doctors to find new ways to transition some of the staff, some of the people in the emergency departments. We're working very hard to do it. It is a difficult task, and we'll continue.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, given repeated warnings from the Auditor General about the state of long-term care in Alberta by what logic does this minister expect the layoff of 600 front-line workers by Covenant to improve safety and care of vulnerable seniors and reduce visits to ERs? By what logic, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated before, Covenant Health is a private operator. As a private operator they make decisions within the context of the rules that Alberta Health Services and the Alberta government set in ensuring that proper patient care is taken. We will make sure they do that. In these difficult times they do what they can to make sure. Covenant Health, I'm sure, is always only interested in patient care and patient health.

Dr. Swann: You, sir, are responsible for the health of Albertans, not Covenant Health, which is publicly funded, by the way.

Given that Covenant Health duplicates the role of Alberta Health Services and collectively costs $57 million a year from the public purse, will you show some leadership and bring Covenant Health under Alberta Health Services and free up those dollars for front-line care? Fifty-seven million dollars a year.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health Services has an agreement with Covenant Health. The government has agreements. We'll abide by our agreements. We will work with the people we need to work with to make sure things are done as efficiently as possible, and we'll continue to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by Lacombe-Ponoka.

Supports for Refugees

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal Bill C-43 will allow the provinces to impose minimum residency requirements for refugee claimants to access social assistance. This means that this PC government could leave refugee claimants without any income at all if they follow this directive. To the Minister of Human Services: will you assure Albertans that refugees fleeing oppression and violence will not be left destitute by this government, and if not, why not?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill C-43 is being discussed at another level of government, the federal government. I want to assure the House that our commitment to providing support for refugees remains exactly the same.

Mr. Eggen: Well, given that many refugee claimants are ineligible for work permits and given that even these claimants who are eligible to work in Alberta need some source of income just to get settled and to get their feet on the ground, to the same minister – we need to get a clear answer – will you honour our human rights conventions regardless of the outcome of Bill C-43?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, as I said previously, this bill is currently in discussion, and I want to assure this hon. member and all members of the House that we will continue to support refugees that come to Alberta. Our commitment remains exactly the same.

Mr. Eggen: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that when the federal government cut refugee claimants' payments for their health care, we did not see any action on that at all from this government and given that regardless of Bill C-43 this government can still do the right thing, is this PC government going to follow its federal cousins in this race to the bottom of cutting off refugee claimants from income supports? People need to know. Yes or no?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To me, it's incredibly offensive, the fearmongering that's going on. I will say it again. Our commitment to supporting refugees remains exactly the same.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley.

Registered Nurses' Scope of Practice

Mr. Fox: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is home to 36,000 registered nurses, who've been trying to convince the government for over five years to grant them limited prescribing authority. These are some of the most skilled and dedicated health professionals in the province, who would be able to provide first-line treatment for common conditions where antibiotics or other schedule 1 drugs would be required. Making these regulatory changes would allow better access to care and would mean less burden on local rural health centres and emergency departments. To the Health minister. Other health professionals have been empowered with expanded scopes of practice. Why not Alberta's highly skilled registered nurses?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we much appreciate the question by the hon. member. As a matter of fact, I was meeting on that last night, and it's going through the process. Unfortunately, it's a two-sided coin. The nurses are not as quick, we're not that quick, and the system has not moved nearly as fast as we would like to see it move. We're in the process of trying to encourage everybody to move along the line so we can get the nurses to do the kinds of things that they've asked for in the bill. We're in strong support of this.

Mr. Fox: Given that many of the rural communities across the province have RNs working in emergency departments, often without physicians and nurse practitioners present at all times, and given that rural and remote emergency departments often require registered nurses to act immediately to treat life-threatening patient conditions, why won't the government provide limited prescribing powers to these highly trained nurses so that delays can be prevented and lives can be saved?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Yeah. Mr. Speaker, as I've said before, this is a process. It goes through legislation. It has to go through approval. A variety of people have to review it, not just the government but nurses and other individuals who are part of the process. Unfortunately, it takes too long. I would like to see this whole procedure go very quickly. I was quite surprised that it's been, I think, since 2011 that we've been working on this one. There is a need for the nurses to be able to prescribe the necessary medication in rural areas, but right now we haven't got that completed. We look forward to moving quickly. I do thank you for the question.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Fox: Mr. Speaker, the nurses have been working on this with the government for over five years now. Given that the government has rewritten regulations related to the scopes of practice for Alberta's 12,000 LPNs, 4,500 pharmacists, and even the dozen or so physician assistants – really, all good moves, by the way – at the same time the government has ignored the 36,000 registered nurses across this province, who could be utilized more effectively. To reiterate, it's been five years they've been working on this. Will the minister commit to working with CARNA to complete the regulation-drafting process by the spring of 2015?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would encourage the member to call CARNA up and tell them to move through the process as quick as they can. We'll move as quick as we can. We'll get this approved. It's an important step. We would encourage everybody to make a phone call, to get it done. We'll move quickly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley, followed by Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Neonicotinoid Pesticides

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On November 25 the Ontario government announced a move to limit the use of neonicotinoid pesticides. Several recent studies have tried to link the use of neonics as the single causal source in the decline of bee populations. Some of you may know that Falher is known as the honey capital of Canada, so this issue hits close to home for my constituents and all of the other beekeepers in Alberta. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: is the Alberta government considering similar things?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the hon. member for the question. He's a great advocate for bees and honey – I know that first-hand – a very important segment of the agriculture industry in Alberta but often overlooked. We have been following this issue very closely. We have no plan to restrict the use of neonics. As a matter of fact, we've been working very closely with the federal government, and our department has developed an analytical method to look at whether or not there are residues visible, and we're not finding much evidence of that in Alberta.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister, then: can you explain how common neonics use is in Alberta and what they are used for?

Mr. Olson: Well, it is a pesticide, and it's applied to seeds for the purpose of keeping down pests that affect the plant. It's interesting, though, that in Alberta we apply it differently. We use different equipment than in Ontario. In Ontario it's primarily used on corn and soybeans. Those are not the crops that we're using neonics on in Alberta. As I've said, we have not found evidence of a problem here. Any residues that we've found have been at very low levels.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, to the same minister: can you tell me what the government is doing to prevent bee deaths?

Mr. Olson: Well, this is an interesting issue as well because bee deaths are happening and in great numbers, actually, in other parts of the country and the continent. As a matter of fact, Alberta is the only place in North America where populations have actually doubled. Since 1989 we've had a doubling, from 142,000 colonies to 282,000. At the same time, though, the winterkill rate has decreased by half, from 40 per cent down to 20 per cent. That's due to good management practices, assisted by our department.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by Calgary-Currie.

Home Renovation Consumer Protection

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The state of Alberta's home reno market, as recent events have shown, is an utter mess, going relatively unchecked by this government. We have seen contractors abuse the system with the lack of control. Examples have shown that contractors who receive payments for work not yet done can file for bankruptcy, leaving the consumer with the bulk paid for unfinished work or no work done at all. Can the Minister of Service Alberta tell us what actions he has taken to address these issues for the protection of our Alberta homeowners?

Mr. Khan: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank the member for that very good question. As a former electrical contractor the member knows that the majority of contractors in the province of Alberta are hard-working, honest, capable businessmen. With that said, he does speak to an alarming issue. We have a couple of issues before us that we are investigating. As such, at Service Alberta we're always looking to improve, and I have directed our staff to look at what we can do to strengthen consumer protection when it comes to contracting issues.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you for that, Minister.

Given that for many Albertans the cost of home reno represents a significant investment, to the minister: how and why are irresponsible contractors allowed to take inordinate sums of money for prepayment, shut down, and open a new business in another name just to do it all over again?

Mr. Khan: Again, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to point out to the hon. member – and I believe he is aware and I believe all members of this House are aware – that Alberta is one of the very few jurisdictions in North America where we do have some consumer protection legislation in regard to contractors. Now, he also does raise a very good point in that contractors are remodelling and doing home renovations with very large sums attached. As such, that's part of our continual improvement agenda with Service Alberta. We're going to take a look at some of our surety bonds and make sure that we're getting the right protection for consumers.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Rowe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that in recent years fraud and deception have been unfortunate factors in this industry – we do recognize that there are many, many good contractors out there – and given that in some cases not only are consumers duped out of their deposits and reno's but some are finding liens placed on their homes for services and supplies of subcontractors, why does there exist no protection for homeowners for unpaid bills by the contractor?

Mr. Khan: Again, I want to thank the hon. member for the question. The hon. member does speak to an issue in regard to good and healthy consumer protection activity. Consumers should not be paying 50 per cent up front, Mr. Speaker. I think they know that. We can help consumers by getting that message out. He speaks to some issues around liens. Again, these are activities that I've instructed my department to start doing some work on to see if we can strengthen our consumer protections when it comes to contractors and some of these very important issues that the member talks about.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by Banff-Cochrane.

Sexual Violence Victims

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Sexual violence affects people of all walks of life. We are all vulnerable to being victims of this crime. Unfortunately, this issue often makes people uncomfortable and is rarely discussed in public. Recent events have placed the spotlight back onto sexual violence. My first question is to the Minister of Human Services. Given that only 8 per cent of victims are reporting cases of sexual violence, how can we even begin to help those who suffer the traumatic effects of this crime?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Sexual violence thrives in silence, and we know it's very hard for many people to come forward. We have 11 sexual assault centres and agencies across Alberta that can help victims. We also have some child protection centres doing incredible work, like the Zebra Child Protection Centre in Edmonton, the Sheldon Kennedy centre in Calgary, and, of course, the Caribou Child and Youth Centre in Grande Prairie. A multidisciplinary approach to solve the problems. As well, last May in Calgary a child sexual abuse forum was held to help inform the development of a child sexual . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Cusanelli: Mr. Speaker, my next question is to the Minister of Justice. What is your ministry doing to assist victims of sexual violence, and what do victims of sexual violence need to know that could help them navigate Alberta's legal system?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank this member for putting her attention to this important issue. I want it to be clear to all victims that your rights are put first, and help is available. There are 75 police-based victim services programs and 40 community-based programs spread across this province. I've met with several of them, and more than 2,800 highly trained professionals are ready to provide this information and crisis response. When victims come to any of these programs for help, they have to be treated with respect, dignity, and compassion.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you. Again to the same minister: what tools are provided to law enforcement to support victims who report these crimes in their pursuit of justice?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, our law enforcement offices are often the first point of response, and as such they have a responsibility to treat every incident of sexual violence with sensitivity and diligence. I have met with many of these officers across the province, and I would say that they do just that. My ministry is partnered with law enforcement agencies in many capacities to ensure the appropriate response to violent crimes. Again, it's always about putting the victim first. They didn't ask to be put in this position.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, followed by Calgary-Fort.

Tourism Levy Utilization

Mr. Casey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Tourism is a $7.8 billion sector employing over 135,000 Albertans. The Alberta tourism levy was created to help promote and develop Alberta as a destination of choice. Stakeholders in my constituency of Banff-

Cochrane have raised concerns about allocation of these funds and want to ensure they are used for the intended purpose. To the Minister of Culture and Tourism: can the minister explain what initiatives the Alberta tourism levy supports?

The Speaker: The hon. minister responsible for tourism.

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The tourism levy was developed in 2005 after extensive consultation with stakeholders and looking at what other countries and provinces do. It is a self-sustainable fund, meaning that there are no government funds that go into it, and it goes towards promoting and enhancing Alberta as a destination of choice and increasing our share of the market. I'm going to bring your attention to the Remember to Breathe campaign that Travel Alberta put out. That's the kind of work it goes into.

Mr. Casey: To the same minister: can the minister explain why the allocation of these funds changed from the 80 per cent to Travel Alberta and 20 per cent to the ministry agreed upon by the government and industry in 2005 to a recent 70-30 split between Travel Alberta and the ministry in 2013?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The tourism levy responds to the industry's requests for sustainable funding. In 2013, when there was a tough budget, there was a reallocation of funds, but all of the funds are staying within the tourism industry, and some of it is going over to the development of new products.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Casey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that funding to Travel Alberta is critical to the future of tourism in Alberta, can the minister offer any assurance that the 70-30 split in the tourism levy will not change for the 2015 budget?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Kubinec: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are working on our budget plan, and we don't know exactly what that's going to look like, but we do know, as our Premier has been quite clear on, that with falling oil prices, it's going to be a tight budget. My goal is to make sure that the full proceeds of that levy stay within the tourism industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by Red Deer South.

Homelessness Initiatives

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are two major shelters for the homeless in Calgary in my constituency, the Calgary drop-in centre and the Salvation Army Centre of Hope. Now, the risk of being homeless is facing harsh circumstances, particularly in the winter. Unfortunately, surviving this winter weather and trying to find the next meal is really important for some Albertans. To the Minister of Human Services: what is being done to support some of the most vulnerable Albertans who are homeless, particularly during the winter months?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. member for the question. First of all, the housing first approach that we have has provided $83 million in funding this last year. We know that once an individual is in a stable home, we can start dealing with addiction and mental health issues as well. Part of the success is that our community partners across the province have great housing first programs. Among those is the scattered-site assertive community treatment program. There is one in Calgary called the Alex Pathways to Housing, and that has helped those who frequently use the health and justice system.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. I learned that homelessness is no longer just an urban issue. What measures does your ministry take to help those people in rural communities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, this government helps vulnerable Albertans, urban and rural, wherever they are. We know that there are many homeless individuals in rural communities. We also know that the seven cities are working together to deal with this problem. The hidden homeless, some of the youth who are couch surfing, is what we're dealing with as well. That's why we're working with youth, especially in the area of youth homelessness. Some of the projects that we want to do are in Cochrane, Camrose, Peace River, Lloydminster, and Brooks.

Mr. Cao: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: living homeless, on the street or in an emergency shelter, is no place for young Albertans to grow up, so what plans do you have to keep the youth out of these situations?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned previously, the $3 million we're going to be investing in the youth homelessness across Alberta means that those youth will be able to have access to programs. Also, we always look at the families as a first approach, trying to get the youth to go back to their families. If they can't, of course, we try to assist the families and then keep them in homes on a temporary basis and then move to the housing first model.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. One hundred questions and replies were heard today.

Thirty seconds from now we will call upon the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo to continue with Members' Statements.

Impaired Driving

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's beginning to look a lot like Christmas everywhere we go. I was going to sing that, but – it's a wonderful time to spend with family and friends and raise a glass or two of holiday cheer. Sadly, it's also a time of year when we need to step up our efforts to curb impaired driving. Every year police services across our province, the country, and around the world are out in full force reminding people that if they're going to drink to plan ahead. It's as simple as calling a cab, taking public transit, phoning a friend, or designating a driver.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, it's a message that continues to fall on deaf ears. Health Canada estimates that more than 1,500 Canadians die and 74,000 Canadians are injured as a result of impaired driving every year. In fact, in 2013 80 people were killed in alcohol-related crashes in Alberta, and 396 people suffered major injuries. What's more, on average 8,600 people are convicted of impaired driving in our province each year. To put that into perspective, it's twice as many people as will fit in my new stadium in my constituency of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. Frankly, that's completely unacceptable.

Impaired drivers impose an enormous cost on our society. The consequences have a devastating impact on families, the health care and legal systems, and the general public. In other words, Mr. Speaker, we all pay the price. Drivers who decide to get behind the wheel after having one too many face not only the possibility of killing themselves, their friends, or someone else; they also face very serious legal, financial, and social ramifications.

As police so often remind us, if you drink and drive, your luck will run out, and you will get caught. Even worse, you may be involved in a severe collision that harms someone you love. It's a sober reminder before we head out to enjoy a wonderful evening: who are you willing to lose?

Mr. Speaker, I urge Albertans across the province to truly make this a season of joy by making the right decision, to not drink and drive. It's that easy.

Hospice Care

Mr. Young: They say that there are two things one cannot avoid, death and taxes. While we have not completely avoided taxes in Alberta, they are very reasonable, and with our public health efforts, the quality of life that we all have in Alberta, and a health care system that is the envy of many, indeed, Mr. Speaker, we are very fortunate. Nonetheless, death does come to us all.

Ideally, each of us and our loved ones will pass away in a place that we want to, with our family and friends and with the medical supports that we need. End-of-life care, or palliative care, can be provided in hospitals, in one's home, through hospice outreach, or in residential hospice. Hospice care is a type of care and a philosophy of care that focuses on the palliation of chronically ill, terminally ill, or seriously ill patients' pain symptoms and attending to their emotional and spiritual needs.

In my constituency Pilgrims Hospice provides end-of-life support and outreach. I would like to commend the board of directors, staff, volunteers, and families who collectively provide these services as Albertans' life journeys come to an end.

Community- and family-based hospice care provides terminally ill patients the supports they need in a dignified and compassionate manner. Typical supports include complex pain management, addressing psychosocial and spiritual distress for patients and family members, and end-of-life decision-making.

Located in the quiet community of Crestwood, Pilgrims Hospice is a family-centred organization in Edmonton-Riverview that provides end-of-life care in a supportive environment. Mr. Speaker, Pilgrims Hospice places an emphasis on the person's quality of life, developing respectful relationships with those who seek its services. Most of all, Pilgrims Hospice provides critically ill individuals the opportunity to live their last days in a calm, peaceful, and fulfilling way.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Heritage Savings Trust Fund Comparability

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I stand today to address a concern many have spoken about that requires clarification. I'd like to clear up some misconceptions regarding jurisdictional comparisons between Alberta and Norway. People have pointed to Norway as a model for how the Alberta government should treat its oil revenue. They compare Norway's global fund . . . [interjection] I'm sorry. I'm respectful when you do a member's statement. I expect the same.

The Speaker: Hon. members, there is a long-standing tradition that we don't interrupt folks when they're giving their private members' statements, and in particular we don't do points of order either. Let us abide by that on all sides of the House.

Hon. member, please continue.

Mr. Lemke: Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

People have pointed to Norway as a model for how the Alberta government should treat its oil revenue. They compare Norway's global fund and our heritage savings trust fund. They like to illustrate the amount in each to try to make the case that Alberta's fund is being mismanaged. It makes as much sense as comparing Alberta to the United States, Germany, or Nigeria. Like those, Norway is a sovereign country while Alberta is a province within a country. In fact, Alberta occupies only 6.6 per cent of Canada's land mass. We share revenue with the rest of the country through royalties and transfer payments. Norwegians pay 25 per cent in sales tax. Alberta has no sales tax, a low personal tax, and a low corporate tax.

Why has the government of Alberta adopted this strategy? It's simple: to attract business and growth to expand our economy. Is it working? Clearly, it is, Mr. Speaker. The proof is in the hundreds of thousands who have moved here and the investment that is being brought to Alberta. People are coming to Alberta because of the opportunity. Our challenge is to continue to provide the best health care, education, and quality of life possible, and that is truly a legacy we can all be proud of.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: Calgary-North West, do you have a petition there? Okay. Why don't you proceed, and then we'll go to Calgary-Buffalo.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling the requisite five copies of a petition signed by more than 3,500 residents of Scenic Acres in Calgary-North West. They are concerned about the proposed francophone school . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, is this a petition or a tabling?

Ms Jansen: It's a petition.

The Speaker: It's a petition? Okay. I thought I heard you say something else. Carry on.

Ms Jansen: They're concerned about the proposed francophone school for their community, that it hasn't received proper assessment, and they'd like the project halted until an alternative land option is reassessed.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two petitions I'd like to present. The first one has a couple of hundred signatures, and they are urging the Alberta Legislative Assembly to "consider a financial increase of the Monthly Core Benefits to the Barriers to Full Employment . . . Medical Benefits with Alberta Works."

The second one is in regard to the DRP process. They're petitioning the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to "re-evaluate the Disaster Recovery Program and how it has affected Albertans since its introduction following the flood of 2013, and to ensure flood victims are compensated for their losses." There are approximately a thousand signatures on that petition.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there other petitions? Lesser Slave Lake, did you have one? Okay. Please.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, I am tabling a petition from the constituents of Lesser Slave Lake requesting that "the High Prairie Medical Clinic be allowed to lease adequate clinic space in the separate Interprofessional Clinic building at the new High Prairie Health Complex site."

The Speaker: Thank you.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by Calgary-North West, followed by the Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. If you'll indulge me, I have two tablings today. The first is the appropriate number of copies of a letter sent to the Premier by Carmen McConnell, a mother of three whose oldest son is gay. In this letter she very eloquently stresses the needs for GSAs in all schools. She explains how any antibullying support would have been extremely helpful to her son, who at times suffered from self-hate to the point of cutting himself. I hope the Premier listens to her words very carefully.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the appropriate number of copies of an article from the International Business Times from December 8, 2014. The article includes a quote from Pope Francis stating that the Catholic Church needs to help parents stand by their gay children.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-North West, did you also have a tabling? No? Okay. I show you listed here as having a tabling as well.

Let's move on, then, to the Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege and pleasure to rise today to table the requisite number of copies of a letter from Mme Diana Stralberg, playground committee chair for a school in my constituency, l'école publique Gabrielle-Roy, appealing for support for their playground redevelopment project.

Our school population is highly diverse, representing at least 12 francophone countries [from] around the world, and over half of [the] students are from recent immigrant families. About 90% of students ride the school bus from other neighbourhoods.

Thus, the playground is the only place that they get to play during their noon hour. They need to raise money and came today to tell the Assembly about that. I have the tabling for you, and I'm sure everybody will get an opportunity to read that in due course.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings. The first is from Dr. Bill Sevcik, emergency room director at the University hospital, outlining his deep concerns about staff frustration, increased legal liability, and intolerable risk to patients as a result of the overcrowding and the lack of long-term care and home care.

The second is a tabling on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark in relation to his question to the Premier on the impact of the oil price tumble and the so-called price trough.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I have a copy of a letter sent to the Premier by yours truly noting a recent report showing that inequality in Alberta is rising. In particular, one group of people appear to be falling behind even further. It's women. In fact, Alberta has one of the largest gender wage gaps in Canada. Women make approximately 57 per cent of what men make in this country. One of the recommendations I make in this letter is that we introduce pay equity legislation like most other provinces in Canada.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Campbell, President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance, return to order of the Assembly MR3, asked for by Mr. Hehr on April 14, 2014, copies of government studies or proposals related to the establishment of flood or disaster insurance in Alberta that were prepared between June 1, 2013, and January 1, 2014.

On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Klimchuk, Minister of Human Services, responses to questions raised by Mrs. Towle, the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake; Dr. Swann, the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View; Ms. Notley, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona; and Mrs. Jablonski, the hon. Member for Red Deer-North, on April 9, 2014, Ministry of Human Services 2014 main estimates debate.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, there are no points of order today, so we can move on.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 11

Savings Management Repeal Act

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I'm honoured to rise on behalf of the President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance to move third reading of Bill 11.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Our caucus will be supporting this bill. This is obviously something that we actually have been fighting for. Certainly, when it came up as Bill 1, this was an attempt by the former administration to carve out sections of the Alberta heritage savings trust fund for, frankly, I'm sure, well-meant use. Nonetheless, the temptation would be to put them into these funds that could essentially be used to give out grants to various organizations at the will of the government. That, obviously, is not the point of the heritage trust fund. That's not the reason that we have that fund. This is clearly a bill that was designed to put an end to that brainwave. We're very glad to see that that has been put to bed, so we will be supporting this bill.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, similarly, the Alberta New Democrats will be supporting Bill 11. It's a long and winding road sometimes that we travel, to see the time and effort that we spent to fight this last year, and then, lo and behold, it's been pulled.

You know, we certainly did oppose the introduction of the Savings Management Act because of the ground that it was laying for the concept of social impact bonds, and we really have a strong problem with that. It squeezes and fragments the public sector. Social impact bonds are investments where private investors can fund projects and programs delivered by nonprofit or charitable agencies. This is sort of the way they've gone in the past in other places around the world. The project meets measurable goals. Then they pay back investors. This is the way it's played out in places like Britain, and it's been quite appalling. So this is a nice step back from doing this.

Rather than committing to social spending every year, this government has a tendency to sort of lash about between different pet concepts and making cuts. Under the grave pronouncements of the government here in these last few days with the price of oil, I also know that they have their slashing look in their eyes as well. You know, it's very unfortunate to see that taking place.

This act was only introduced in March 2014 and came into force on April Fool's Day in 2014, which is interesting, and eight months later here we are repealing the bill. We know that social programs are too important to risk on a new and untested method for funding social services. The bill removes the groundwork for that, so we're definitely back on some better footing. Our real concern, however, Mr. Speaker, remains that the consistent funding of Alberta's programs and services is always on shaky ground at best.

In 2012, for example, we were promised a balanced budget with no new taxes or service cuts. Certainly, there is a revenue situation that we have to deal with here, but, you know, if we make long-standing plans to save over time, then this would be a time when we could access those savings and balance out the vagaries of the international price of oil that we have to deal with.

While now the Premier here in the province has changed, what does remain clear is that regardless of who is the leader of the PC government, it has to start to make long-term plans for the future. We should be addressing our serious revenue problem. We all know that the drop in the oil prices will have an effect on programs and infrastructure. Currently 25 per cent of our revenue comes from oil, so this really leaves us vulnerable, as we see here today, with the price down to I think 60-some dollars here today. It's interesting to watch the national markets decline as well. We've created an overdependence on this industry right across the whole country, it seems.

It's certainly, I guess, something that we can look at and vote for. We've come to a consensus that that's what we should be doing on Bill 11.

The only other thing I wanted to mention is that the importance of leaving the capacity for us to save in our heritage trust fund I think is imperative. We know that if you do that in a codified sort of manner and do not just leave it up to the Treasury Board or political considerations or external economic considerations, then you are much more likely over time to have a considerable fund that you can rely on when times might get tough.

It's important to remember that we haven't hit the actual tough times. We heard it last year from this government as well. It's one of their favourite things to do, to cry, you know, that the sky is falling, always. Now we are in a situation where things are definitely more substantively being restricted in terms of energy prices, but it's important to keep an even hand and to remember what the government exists for in the first place. I mean, we're not an oil producer. We're a government, and we are existing to ensure that we provide essential services that our population requires. We happen to be an oil-producing province, but the distinction is very, very important to make. Of course, we would be responsible for providing essential health care, education, and infrastructure regardless of what our main industries are in this province. I think we need to take a long look at that. It's a great opportunity to do that, quite frankly, with a dip in the price of oil right now.

I know we have to make some adjustments, and this is a very good adjustment, the repeal of the Savings Management Act. We certainly will be supporting this, Mr. Speaker.

Thanks for the opportunity to say a couple of words.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is now available.

I see no one. Are there any other speakers to third reading of Bill 11? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll keep my comments short. I just want to remind members of the House that this is another fantastic example of a really poor piece of legislation brought in by this PC government and which had to be repealed eight months later. We spoke quite passionately against this bill. Its first incarnation was Bill 1, actually, the very centrepiece of this government in the sitting when we came back. Most members on the other side were on that side and part of the government, and many, interestingly, spoke in favour of Bill 1 and how great it was going to be. Yet we see now that, like many other bills that have been repealed – and there's quite a list of them – this is one that is being repealed.

Now, I can say that we are quite happy with the fact that this bill will repeal Bill 1. Like I had mentioned, Mr. Speaker, we were opposed to it when it was first tabled in this House. I just wanted to remind Albertans that with many pieces of legislation, when they're done hastily, when they're done without adequate consultation, when they're done without input from the opposition, we find ourselves in this situation.

A bill that pops to mind from a previous sitting is Bill 28, that threatened to haul mayors off to jail. We argued vehemently against that incarnation of Bill 28. Six months later there was an amendment act to it, and again it was amended and repealed. I found it very fascinating that many of the amendments in that bill in its second incarnation were amendments that the Alberta NDP had put forward when the bill was first tabled. You know, what I would like to see is more co-operation and work done between all parties, where the government accepts amendments and is open to dialogue from all different parties and points of view, which, in my opinion, would mean much better legislation for all Albertans instead of what we tend to see in this House, which is an unwillingness to accept most amendments by opposition parties.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, glad to see that this bill is coming through the House and repealing Bill 1. We will be supporting it.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is now available.

I see no one. Are there any other speakers to third reading of Bill 11?

The hon. member to close debate.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. members of the two opposition parties for their comments. I say that while we may differ on some facts of history, at least we agree on the intent and the apparent support for this bill.

I move that we call the question, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried unanimously; Bill 11 read a third time]

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we proceed with the next item of business, could we have unanimous consent to revert briefly to tablings?

[Unanimous consent granted]

3:10

Tabling Returns and Reports (reversion)

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Justice, please proceed.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the members for their indulgence. I neglected to table a couple of items here that I had just put under my desk in the Routine. I have five copies of the annual accountability report of the Law Society of Alberta.

I have five copies of the Alberta Human Rights Commission's annual report.

And I have five copies of the Alberta Law Foundation's financial statements. I will pass five copies of them all to the page.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading (continued)

Bill 9

Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014

The Speaker: Hon. members, we can proceed onward now with the presentation and movement at third reading of Bill 9 by the hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to the amendments in Bill 9, the Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014. The amendments will modernize the legislation, establish a framework for a condominium dispute tribunal, strengthen government enforcement powers, and create the authority necessary to enact required regulations.

Mr. Speaker, during second reading and Committee of the Whole there has been concern that there has not been enough consultation or that consultation did not engage the right stakeholders and that these amendments are being rushed through. This government is committed to ensuring Albertans have the highest level of protection and that changes to Alberta's condominium legislation reflect the input of our stakeholders.

Mr. Speaker, I want to lay out the consultation work that was carried out by the government on Bill 9. In 2009 the government formed a 16-member working committee to look at issues affecting the industry. The membership of this committee included the north and south chapters of the Canadian Condominium Institute, the Alberta Real Estate Association, the Association of Condominium Managers of Alberta, the Canadian Home Builders' Association – Alberta, and other members representing developers, owners, and the legal community.

In 2013, based on input from the working committee, Service Alberta developed the Let's Talk Condos consultation survey. This survey covered a number of topics, including dispute resolution, purchase cancellation rights, insurance requirements, disclosure to buyers, board governance, and standards of practice for condominium managers. We received over 4,000 responses from the public to the survey, and a majority were from condominium owners. Owners were a very important part of our dialogue, especially as this is consumer protection legislation.

Mr. Speaker, once we had analyzed the responses from the survey, the government set out to form a number of task teams to continue working on issues such as reserve funds, governance, condominium managers, insurance, new condominium developments, and dispute resolution. The membership of these task teams was composed of many of the organizations I named previously as well as input from owners and the legal community.

All this hard work culminated in the introduction of Bill 13 in this House towards the end of the spring 2014 sitting. Over the summer we allowed time for all stakeholders to review the legislation and solicited their feedback so that we could continue to improve the bill. The result of that feedback is Bill 9, which is a refined but substantially similar draft based on the comments we received from stakeholders.

Mr. Speaker, please be assured that we have listened to Albertans and that we will continue to listen as we move forward in implementing these changes. We were happy to work with the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills to pass an additional amendment, and I want to extend my thanks for his interest in this bill. In the coming months we will gather additional input from our stakeholders as we develop regulations.

In closing at third reading, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to note that the majority of Albertans who have contacted us have urged us to move forward with this bill overwhelmingly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and with that, I move third reading.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Rowe: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to actually support this bill now. [some applause] I know we find that amazing, but something is better than nothing. I always say.

There are gaps, I feel, in this bill that perhaps should have been addressed. I do want to congratulate the minister and Service Alberta for doing the consultations prior to writing the bill. That was a huge step, but I feel there's another step missing, and that was consultation after the bill was drafted. I think we could have avoided a lot of the amendments that went on and so on, but overall, as I said, I think something is better than nothing. We look forward to the regulations and to seeing how that's going to affect the bill and carry it even further.

What we're looking for here is consumer protection. While there were consultations being done, I don't feel there was enough with the actual people who were affected the most, and that is the condo owners themselves. But that's history now. Let's carry on. Let's make sure that the regulations address some of these issues and go forward.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I thank you, and I will support the bill.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) will be available after this speaker.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise and speak to third reading of the condominium act, Bill 9. I do have some comments that I'll make in regard to some of the comments made by the hon. member who moved this bill. You know, I appreciate that there was some consultation done by this government over the past year and a half. I attended some of the consultations or the public forums that were hosted. I can tell you, though, that there are numerous groups who do have reservations about the bill as it's currently written and the fact that there are areas that are omitted in the bill that would have actually given much stronger consumer protection. I get that the government likes to say it over and over again, but saying it doesn't make it so if it's not in the legislation. So I will go through and talk about my different concerns.

The first one is, again, the fact that there are groups that would like to have been consulted on what the government decided to include or not include. What I mean by that is that, yes, there might have been some initial conversations with different organizations and individuals, yet those same entities have no idea what's going to be included and what's not. The frustration is, again, that when a bill is tabled by this PC government, they can't wait to get the heck out of this House. So bills move at a breakneck speed through different readings, which severely limits the ability of and the role that the opposition plays in drafting amendments designed at improving a bill.

I think that members of the House need to be reminded that the purpose of Committee of the Whole and amendments is to draft amendments with all Albertans' best intentions in mind. Now, I infer that this government believes that they're the only ones with the best ideas. Well, I'm sorry to say that other parties, other members consult with other organizations as well.

Largely, one of the voices of concern is the Canadian Condominium Institute north Alberta chapter, which has a significant number of members and represents, first and foremost, individual condo owners. That's their clientele. That's who they speak with and on behalf of. Again, you know, it's not lost on me that a meeting of condominium owners was struck on Sunday evening, and there were over 300 people that turned out at a last-minute meeting to discuss this bill. So despite the government saying, "Everybody loves this, and we've consulted everybody, and this is great," I don't think that's the reality for many people.

Like I said, some of the issues were on the follow-up in consultation, you know, but there are three areas that I'm just going to talk about, matters of insurance and clarity around that. There are a lot of questions surrounding insurance and how it works. Property manager accreditation: a concern with the fact that in legislation it will fall to the RECA as opposed to going to an independent, arm's-length third party. The last point is on document disclosure to owners, Mr. Speaker.

What we were looking for is to defer this bill into the spring to ensure that it includes everything that it should to maximize protection for condo owners and consumers. Many issues, Mr. Speaker, that should be dealt with in this legislation as far as what impacts condominium owners on a day-to-day basis aren't being dealt with in the legislation, and this was probably one of our largest concerns. They're being left to regulations.

Mr. Speaker, we don't believe that this is the appropriate way to deal with these important issues. Changes that impact people's homes should happen in the Legislative Assembly through, you know, our robust debate, through different points of view, and through adequate oversight. Again, much of the details are being left to regulations, which are dealt with behind closed doors. I appreciate that the minister and other ministers have said: well, it's more expedient that way. Well – you know what? – nobody said that democracy is the most expedient form of government, but we do live in a new Westminster-style democracy, and details that affect condominium owners should be discussed in the light of day, not behind closed doors in the cover of darkness. That, I think, is a very legitimate concern.

Regarding property insurance, you know, some of the most serious issues facing all condominium corporations in the province are property insurance issues, Mr. Speaker. Although, certainly, condo boards and owners and possibly the government can't do much about the rising premiums, our position is that the government could have addressed insurance issues, including – and here are some questions for the minister – what property must the corporation insure; and what must the unit owners insure if a unit suffers damage because of an insured peril; who should actually be responsible for overseeing the work of restoring the inside of the unit, the corporation or the owner; who should be responsible for paying the deductible portion of insured loss, and under what circumstances? These questions are not answered and dealt with in the legislation, and I don't think it's fair to condominium owners across this province that those answers will be dealt with through regulations at some point in the future.

Looking at as-built documents, under Bill 9 developers are only required to provide as-builts if they exist. It doesn't require them to produce them. The as-builts are construction drawings produced upon completion of a project or a particular job. They reflect all the changes that are made in the specifications and working drawings during the construction process and show the exact dimensions, geometry, and location of all elements of work completed under the contract. A finished building rarely corresponds exactly to the original plans in every detail, and this normally happens because of unforeseeable on-site complications and variations. Sometimes such discrepancies may occur accidentally and may be economically unfeasible to rectify. That's one of the purposes of as-built measurement, to record these variations.

Accurate as-built drawings are one of the most important elements of any postconstruction process, including any major repair or renovation. If these drawings are not provided to the corporation, decisions will have to be made on guesswork, or the corporation will have to spend many tens of thousands of dollars attempting to re-create plans showing the now hidden elements in the building, the walls, the roof, the foundations, and the ground such as pipe and duct routing and sizing, terminal unit locations, et cetera. Also, as-built drawings can be a valuable day-to-day tool for the board. For example, the accurate depiction of a shut-off valve location is critical in emergency situations.

An approach to an as-built drawing preparation is for the installation contractors to maintain a master set of manually marked up redline drawings as changes are made during construction and as all components of the installation are completed. The contractors are required to confirm that they installed per the original drawings or the records or to record the changes made. These changes are then incorporated into the final as-built documents.

There is an added cost to the developer to produce these documents, so some developers objected to the requirement to provide the documents to the condominium corporations. Our position is that the cost, even if passed on to the owners in the purchase price of the units, is money very well spent, Mr. Speaker.

I can tell you that for those three reasons, in addition to follow-up on consultation, I'm very reluctant to support this bill. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I'd actually like to introduce a motion on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

The Speaker: Hon. member, are you talking about an amendment that you wish to present?

Mr. Bilous: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I am moving an amendment that "Bill 9, Condominium Property Amendment Act, 2014, be not now read a third time but that it be read a third time this day six months hence."

The Speaker: Thank you. Could you please present it to the pages? The pages will then distribute it, and we will then debate it.

Would the House agree to allow the member to continue on while it's being distributed since he just read it into the record?

I believe it's been agreed – so why don't you continue on as the pages distribute that? – but first bring a copy to me and to the Clerk just to ensure that it's all in order, and then we'll proceed.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. members for allowing me to continue. If I manage my time correctly, this should all fit within my window of opportunity to speak.

Mr. Speaker, I recognize that amendments to the condominium act are much needed and long overdue – I do recognize that – and I do appreciate much of the effort that the minister and his ministry have made. Again, you know, I'd be remiss if I just passed this forward after hearing causes of concern from individual condo owners and organizations that represent individual condo owners.

You know, it's my position, Mr. Speaker, that when we pass a bill through this House, we not only get it done but we get it done correctly. The concern that I've been hearing from many people is that this is moving too quickly through the House, and a delay of merely a couple of months, until we sit again in the new year, would mean that we can ensure that we have more details in the legislation versus relying on regulations, and we can get more clarity around insurance.

The most costly thing for condo owners is that when something happens or is discovered or there is a fault in a building, then who pays for that? Who is liable? Again, if it's the fault of an individual owner, if it's the fault of not just the developer but it's the inspector who signs off on it – I mean, Mr. Speaker, there of course are some very good developers out there who do follow the letter of the law, but there are also developers that cut corners, and at the end of the day you have individual Albertans on the hook with special assessments. I've had stories that people tell me of special assessments of $10,000, $15,000, $20,000, which in many ways is quite ridiculous, to expect a person to be able to cough up that much money, especially if it's something that could have been avoided.

For those reasons, Mr. Speaker, I will urge all members of the Assembly to vote in favour of this amendment. Let's redraft this bill, get it right, and come back and debate this in the new year.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is now available. The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview may find it somewhat shocking that I was listening rather intently to his comments, not with regard to the hoist amendment but specifically with regard to what he said a little bit earlier in his speech. If I could ask him a question about that, or do I need to stick directly to the hoist amendment?

The Speaker: Well, tie it to the hoist amendment because that's where he ended speaking.

Dr. Starke: Okay. Well, we'll tie it back, then. During the course of your speech, you mentioned about us following the new Westminster parliamentary tradition. I'm somewhat of a scholar of parliamentary tradition, and I guess I was always under the impression that we followed the Westminster tradition. As near as I know, New Westminster is a community in British Columbia. Perhaps this is a new NDP socialist idea that you want to bring in that would include delaying legislation by six months with unnecessary hoist resolutions. I'm just curious to know: is this part of the new Westminster parliamentary tradition that you're trying to introduce into our Assembly?

The Speaker: Well, hon. members, I think we're all aware that we follow the Westminster tradition, but hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, did you wish to put something on the record from your standpoint?

Mr. Bilous: No. I just wanted to thank the member for that riveting question. You know, clearly the member opposite has never made a mistake in his speech in his time.

Anyway, I would have appreciated an actual question regarding this bill, but I think all members of the House can grasp the reason for this hoist and my position behind it.

Thanks.

3:30

The Speaker: Are there others under 29(2)(a)?

If not, then speaking to the amendment, which will be called H1, I'll recognize Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Condominium Property Amendment Act which is before the House really is much-needed legislation. Although I will be supporting this hoist amendment, I would be remiss if I didn't point out that the Condominium Property Act that we have here in this province was a long time coming in the first place. I will point out that British Columbia actually had protection for condominium owners as far back as 1997. As a result of some leaky condos and some difficulty with condominiums and their construction practices, that province moved very quickly in that fashion and provided condo owners some protection in that province. In my view, it was much needed at the time.

You know, the wheels of justice move somewhat slower here in this province. It took us almost 15 years longer to introduce even basic protections for condominium owners in terms of actual protections to the property they were buying and protections for things like the building envelope and the like. We all know that there was a rash of troubles throughout much of the building phase that was going on in this province, actually, from that time, 1997, all through till we had legislation going forward.

I, too, have heard groups not only in northern Alberta but other people in Calgary who are otherwise concerned that this bill does not contain the requisite amount of information to allow people to govern their lives accordingly and to understand what the rules are in regard to their property, in regard, specifically, to insurance claims, in regard to property managers' roles and responsibilities and, in fact, the roles of who pays what and when and the legal recourse which this bill provides largely because, if you compare the legislation, our government in its wisdom is moving virtually everything with substance into the regulatory process. Although easier to amend and easier to go forward on, I don't think it gives people the ample insurance that their consultation has been heard.

I will give the government credit. There appears to have been some consultation on this file, yet because it is not present in the bill, because this consultation is not reflected in what we're actually seeing before this honourable House, the people are wondering if they've actually been heard, whether the consultation was meaningful, whether it led to any tangible results. That is the confusion and the concern that is out there, not only in the north but down where I live, in Calgary. Our office has been flooded with numerous concerns in this regard, that they're not certain what protections this bill is going to provide.

So I think that's where we are. The citizens would like to see in this bill the rules and the regulations of how they can go forward. That's where we are. I think we'd like a more fulsome bill coming forward from the government, with this in place. People could then see that they have been heard, that it's actually reflected in the bill, that it's not going to happen behind closed doors and the like. So if this passes and if this government would actually do the work of putting actual rules into the bill, I think that would be somewhat helpful.

I am almost certain that this amendment is going to fail, but I will say that the government going forward should try to bring more clarity to their drafting principles, allow for the rules to be put into place so that people have an understanding that it is open and transparent, that it's not going to be changed on a whim through an order in council or otherwise change the game halfway through its being played.

In any event, those are my comments, Mr. Speaker, and my advice to the government going forward. We'll see where this goes.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. I see no one.

Is there anyone else who wishes to speak to Bill 9? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: On the hoist – right? – Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: On the hoist amendment. Thank you.

Mr. Eggen: Yeah. Certainly, I support this idea. It's been a very interesting few days, quite frankly. This is not something that I have within my responsibilities as critic, but I learned a lot over the last short while about concerns of consumers, the people who actually own these units. I have a number of quite large condominium units in my constituency as well, and like what I said yesterday about leaky condos, and so forth, it's a great problem. I just really always want to defer to making sure that the homeowners are the first priority and are consulted first, in the middle, and last as well.

I think this is a very rational idea, to defer this particular bill, and I thank everyone who has helped us to build a sound and reasonable argument on Bill 9. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. I see no one.

Are there any other speakers to amendment H1? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'll add my support to this amendment. I think we've had quite a lot of e-mail and contact from a wide range of people interested in seeing a better bill come forward. It's complex. There's a lot at stake. And if the government is actually listening to the many who have written and the many concerns that haven't actually been addressed in some of the elements of this bill, they will pause and allow a longer process, a longer consideration, a more legitimate consultation, build a sense of respect, I guess, with the citizens of Alberta and the organizations that are trying to represent condo buyers, condo owners and take the prudent path, the conservative path, and delay the haste with this bill, which hasn't had the time and thoughtful amendments that could make it the very best it could be.

I'll be supporting this amendment. Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. I see no one.

Is there anyone else who wishes to speak to amendment H1? The hon. Minister for Service Alberta.

Mr. Khan: Mr. Speaker, thank you for this opportunity. I wasn't going to say anything, but I feel obligated. You know, we have members of the opposition who are suggesting that this bill is in some way rushed. We have members suggesting that this bill is in some way a hasty bill, that it hasn't been given proper consideration. This bill in terms of being thoughtful, in terms of the thorough consultation process – consultations started in 2009. I guess that might be hasty for some people, five years of thorough consultation, but from my perspective it's ample.

Mr. Speaker, this consultation was started under Service Alberta when it was in the hands of the current Minister of Human Services. She did an exceptional job of bringing the consultative process forward. That was carried further by our current Minister of Infrastructure, who again did an outstanding job of engaging Albertans in this consultative process. Again that torch was passed to the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright, who carried on this consultative process, an exceptional and thorough consultative process. Through that process the hon. Member for Sherwood Park toured this province. The hon. Member for Sherwood Park engaged – and I won't repeat the list, that has been mentioned a number of times, of bodies and agencies and owners who gave ample and thorough feedback into this legislation. We're grateful to the Member for Sherwood Park for her work and for her efforts across the province.

What we have before us, Mr. Speaker, is that there is one body – I'll grant that – an organization called CCI north, who has been involved in our consultation process from the beginning. They've come forward and, by and large, the people who are suggesting that this bill needs to be delayed, that this bill is not right, are affiliated or associated with CCI north. I've spoken to the president of CCI north and thanked him for his involvement. I've told him that Albertans have spoken. Albertans want this bill to be passed. I think that we've reached a point where, as grateful as I am to CCI north and their participation – one of the members spoke of a meeting that transpired this past Sunday. Again, it was a very constructive meeting, and they brought forward some amendments. We welcome that participation. I think that some of the amendments which our opposition brought forward were reflected from that meeting, and I'll come back to that.

I want you to know, Mr. Speaker, that CCI north – interestingly enough, we've talked at length that we've seen this bill before. It was Bill 13 in the spring. This bill made it through first reading, and had session lasted a few more days, it's very likely that this bill would have passed in the spring of 2013. It's very interesting to note that at that time this bill, which is substantially similar – there are very few wrinkles that have been added since the spring. CCI north endorsed the bill at that time. They didn't come out at that time and say that this bill wasn't ready or that this bill needed further consultation. It's interesting that they're stating those facts now, but I've spoken, as I said, to the president, and I've welcomed his participation in further consultation, as we will with all of our stakeholders, as we move forward with regulations.

There's also this thought that somehow we haven't engaged owners, Mr. Speaker, and that couldn't be further from the truth. I'll point not just to the ample and thorough consultation process that my predecessors have led and that the Member for Sherwood Park has done a phenomenal job of participating and leading. I'll point the members opposite to our Let's Talk Condos consultation, where we had 4,000 submissions, primarily from owners who have participated and helped us form this legislation. If we've done five years of consultation, if we have 4,000 stakeholders who have reached out to us and offered us guidance, I don't know how that can be conceived or construed as anything but solid, heartfelt, important consultation. To suggest that we've been hasty, to suggest that this is rushed, that just doesn't make sense to me, and it doesn't make sense to the Albertans who are anxiously waiting for this very important legislation to move forward.

Mr. Speaker, you know, just really quickly I want to talk about the amendments. Some of the opposition have suggested that they're not in favour of us moving forward and working out a good number of the details and amendments. I want to thank the Member for Calgary-Buffalo for pointing out the obvious fact that we can be agile and we can be more responsive when it comes to working out details in regulation. The current condo act is getting close to 20 years old. What we know is that the environment for condos 20 years ago was completely different than it is now. What we know also is that where we are with condos in the next 10 years will be completely different from where we are now. I want to thank the Member for Calgary-Buffalo for acknowledging that working out the details in regulation will help us be agile, will help us be responsive to our condo owners, to our condo boards, and to the condo associations as they move forward. So thank you for those comments, Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Speaker, I just can't support delaying this any longer, and the reason I can't support this any longer is that Albertans have spoken, and it's all our obligation in this House to listen to Albertans. The overwhelming majority of Albertans are demanding that this bill move forward. I can't support this hoist amendment, and I look forward to moving forward and doing good and collaborative work for Albertans.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, again, you know, one of the members talked about how this government isn't being collaborative. We've talked about being under new management. I can't recall who it was, but they suggested that the government is not listening to amendments, that the government is not being responsive. Well, I want to remind that member that this government did work with the opposition. I want to thank the opposition. I want to again thank the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills for his collaborative efforts on moving an amendment that I believe was one of the things that folks from CCI were actually speaking about. So to suggest in any way, shape, or form that this government is rushing, to suggest in any way, shape, or form that this government is not trying to do the best work it possibly can with our opposition, and to suggest that this government doesn't hold the values and responsibilities of Albertans as one of our paramount principles – I just can't support that idea.

I want to thank you for this opportunity, and we look forward to passing this bill, Mr. Speaker. I cannot support this amendment.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Calgary-Buffalo, under 29(2)(a).

Mr. Hehr: I appreciate the minister's comments. Let's give him all the kudos he wants for consultation. I'll grant that it seems like there's been a lot of that. Nevertheless, I think the concern is that this consultation is not represented in your bill's drafting. The finished product doesn't recognize the rules and clarify what the responsibilities are in terms of insurance, in terms of property managers and how they carry on their business, and the like. The concern is primarily around the drafting of the bill and the fact that although you've consulted with many citizens and organizations, this has not been reflected in your bill. Can you address the concern that much of this information is absent from the bill and that you're moving into the regulatory process to do it on a more ad hoc basis instead of actually getting this information into the bill more substantively? We're hearing from stakeholders where they want it, in the bill.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Anyone else under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any other speakers to the hoist amendment?

I see none, so let us, then, vote on the hoist amendment.

[Motion on amendment to third reading of Bill 9 lost]

[Motion carried unanimously; Bill 9 read a third time]

3:50 Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: I'll call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 2 Alberta Accountability Act

The Chair: Are there any comments or amendments to be offered? The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. I'm rising to speak in Committee of the Whole, on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General, some comments before we move on.

Bill 2 proposes amendments to three pieces of legislation: the Conflicts of Interest Act, the Public Service Act, and the Lobbyists Act. The Minister of Justice takes these matters very seriously and wanted to remind the House that twice he's been lauded by the CTF for his low expenses. The legislation is further supported by two Treasury Board directives, which will restrict severance and enhance procurement rules.

I listened with interest to the debate during second reading. I appreciate the comments from members who spoke to the legislation and its measures to increase accountability by elected officials, political staff, and the public service. The hon. members for Edmonton-Strathcona and Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview raised several points about the bill, which I'm happy to address on his behalf.

The Member for Edmonton-Strathcona discussed amending the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act, regarding large donations. I'd remind the hon. member that the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act already sets limits on political contributions.

She also spoke about the timelines for the Chief Electoral Officer to investigate allegedly improper donations. In Alberta standard limitation periods are two years. Limitation periods for administrative penalties and administrative penalties under the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act go beyond that. Those periods are set at three years. The Chief Electoral Officer can also make recommendations for amendments to elections legislation, and the purpose and effect of a statute of limitations is to encourage the timely resolution of disputes. Contravention should be pursued with reasonable diligence. The longer the limitation period the greater the chance that evidence has degraded or even been lost and that witnesses are unavailable. Pursuing prosecutions that have been long dormant is not reasonable and does not serve justice.

The hon. member also proposed four amendments to the Conflicts of Interest Act, including prohibiting members from using their position to lobby on an issue that directly impacts their financial interests; prohibiting member involvement in decisions that benefit political confidants; prohibiting the waiving of cooling-off periods for former political staff, members, and cabinet ministers; and applying the Conflicts of Interest Act to individuals employed by government agencies.

The Conflicts of Interest Act already states that a member has breached the act if he or she "takes part in a decision . . . knowing that the decision might further a private interest of the Member, a person directly associated with the Member or the Member's minor or adult child." In addition, that act states that a member breaches this act if he or she uses their influence or seeks to use their influence upon a government decision to further anyone's private interest.

Another point worth noting is that cooling-off periods apply to former ministers. They do not apply to former MLAs. The Ethics Commissioner's authority to waive or reduce cooling-off periods is appropriate. If a former minister competes on the same conditions as other applicants for a job, then the Ethics Commissioner can waive or reduce the cooling-off period so that the former minister may be hired for the job. If a contract is awarded through an impartial process that is open to a large number of people, the Ethics Commissioner can waive or reduce the cooling-off period so that the former minister can be awarded the contract.

There may also be situations in which there is no conflict of interest between the private interests of the former minister and the public interest. The Ethics Commissioner may waive or reduce the cooling-off period in such an instance. However, the former minister must comply with any conditions imposed by the Ethics Commissioner. The Ethics Commissioner is an officer of the Legislature, that is appointed upon the recommendation of the Legislative Assembly and is therefore in a position to act impartially in exercising her discretion.

The Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act requires public agencies to implement codes of conduct governing the conduct of its members and employees, and this includes the Alberta Energy Regulator. Alberta Health Services also has a code of conduct. These codes of conduct must include provisions requiring members or employees to carry out their duties in an impartial manner, not to act in self-interest or to further private interests, and to disclose real and apparent conflicts of interest.

The Member for Edmonton-Strathcona also proposed amending the Election Act to prohibit MLAs from using government resources during elections or by-elections. We all know that government needs to continue to operate even during an election campaign, and ministers are required to continue their work while they are running for election or re-election. Bill 2 does not deal with election legislation. I would also remind the member that any actions in contravention of existing rules or statutes could result in an investigation.

My colleague also spoke about his desire for the passage of legislation to compel public disclosure of criteria for determining public infrastructure investment priorities; two, a list of public infrastructure priorities; and thirdly, explanations for any changes to that list should that occur. The government does publish lists of capital projects on several ministry websites. These approved projects represent areas of priority funding for government, and this government will deliver on the Premier's mandate to report to Albertans on the status of its approved capital projects on a semiannual report card. We believe in planning and investing in Alberta's infrastructure today and over the long term. That's why our government has committed to publishing a 25-year infrastructure plan, that will guide and support government direction and priorities around infrastructure needs.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View spoke about making appointments on merit. The Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act already sets out requirements for recruitment to public agencies. The Public Service Act requires hiring of the most suitable applicants, but wherever possible preference shall be given to in-service applicants. It also contains rules regarding when competitions are departmental, limited, or open.

The same hon. member also talked about having a budget officer who would report to the Legislature. I would remind that hon. member that we already have an independent Auditor General, who reports to the Legislature.

A few hon. members also spoke about moving Treasury Board directives into legislation. In the case of severance, we already have two board directives dealing with severance. Those directives are the termination and release of deputy ministers and other senior officials directive and the termination and release of employees directive. Thus, the Treasury Board has a history of dealing with these kinds of matters.

Severance is a matter that falls within the internal business of government, the kind of business that Treasury Board directives typically cover. In the case of the procurement and sole-sourcing directive, section 78(1) of the Financial Administration Act gives the Treasury Board the authority to regulate government and provincial agencies' contracting standards. Therefore, the Legislature has had the opportunity to specifically contemplate that the Treasury Board will give this type of direction.

Mr. Chair, in conclusion, I would remind the Assembly of a saying that the minister thinks fits Bill 2 very well, that sunlight is the best disinfectant. With Bill 2 we are making significant changes, and more information is being publicly disclosed. We are turning the corner as we enter a new era of accountability. We are changing how things are done in government. We are doing the work to ensure that high ethical and accountability measures are in place and to show Albertans that their faith and trust in us as their elected officials is deserved.

Before I sit down, I would move that we ask for one-minute bells.

The Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader has moved that should we have a division during the committee, we have one-minute bells. This requires unanimous consent.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Chair: I'll recognize the next speaker, the hon. Member for Airdrie, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm just standing to propose a series of amendments. I'm sure other parties do have amendments as well, and I'll just get right to the point and circulate the first one.

4:00

The Chair: This will be A1, hon. member. Just a brief pause to get most of them circulated.

Proceed, hon. member.

Mr. Anderson: The amendment reads as follows. I move that Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, be amended in section 3(5) by adding the following after the proposed section 25.6(1):

(1.1) One or more of the codes of conduct and ethics made under subsection (1) must provide that a designated office holder, subject to any entitlements to termination pay under the Employment Standards Code, shall not accept, or enter into an agreement providing for, more than one severance payment from the Government or a Provincial agency in a 5 year period commencing from the receipt of the first severance payment.

Mr. Chair, this is a part of the law that I've been repeatedly trying to get into legislation for several years now. It's been the subject of two private members' bills and a private member's motion of mine along with another piece that I'll talk about later. The point of this is just to solve the problem of double-dipping that sometimes occurs.

What's happened in the past in a lot of cases is that an employee of, say, Alberta Health Services or a region will leave Alberta Health Services or the region and collect a severance, generally a very large severance. In the past, anyway, it's been a very large severance. Then they go in-house into government and work at the Department of Health or another department, work there for a year or two years or so, whatever, and then for whatever reason they're let go. Then they collect another severance, and it's a really large severance, and it happens in some cases within a couple of years, two, three years. Essentially, they're collecting two very large severances within a couple of years. When we're talking about large severances, some of these, in the past anyway, have been in the half-million dollar to a million dollar range, so we're not talking about small sums of money.

Now, this isn't going to save our $7 billion fiscal hole that we're in by any stretch, but it does two things. First of all, it will save us some money as a government. I think that over several years it will save millions of dollars. It doesn't say that people can't move from one area or agency of government to another and not collect their first severance. If that happens, you know, they're allowed to do that. However, it guards against the double-dip, where essentially they go from one to another to another, maybe, and they can collect multiple severances.

I think it increases transparency. I think it's a bit of an obvious fix. It's something that we've seen, this double-dipping, in the past. I'm not going to name any names. They're well publicized. There have been several examples. We've brought them up multiple times in this Chamber. I think that this is a very clear way to solve this problem, and I think it's long overdue. I hope that the government will support it.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader, speaking to the amendment.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to speak to this amendment. I don't recall, actually, the hon. member forwarding amendments on this particular topic, but I certainly don't deny that it happened. I will say with respect to this amendment to this bill that I think you could call this even an oversight. I think that this amendment adds value, I think I agree with the member that it adds some transparency, and I'm going to urge all members of this House to support this amendment.

Mr. Hehr: I, too, think this is a reasonable amendment. We've seen in the past where we've had an individual or multiple individuals who have worked through a government department or agency receive a large severance only to find that in a relatively short period of time they go to work in another government department and continue on in that fashion. It shuffles along, and all of a sudden multiple severance packages are out there, so we're leading to a compensation that exceeds, in my view, what the reasonable person would consider as what is to be found in their employment relationship with essentially the same government.

I think this will go some way to ensuring that the government watches its hiring practices, that it writes its employment contracts in a reasonable fashion that reflects the true nature of work being done. If they're working for the government in one department, well, my goodness sake, they can go work in another department without collecting an obscene severance package every time they get shuffled.

I think this would put the government on notice and, in fact, allow us to move forward in writing clear employment contracts that reflect the kind and the spirit of work we wish to receive from valued public servants.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to amendment A1?

Mr. Anderson: I'd like to thank the government minister. I know that we were in talks earlier with the Government House Leader, who presented this amendment to the Premier, who gave his support to it, and I want to recognize that. I think that it's a very good indication that there's an openness to improving transparency and accountability. Hopefully, we can see many such amendments to other legislation passed in the future.

Thank you.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to amendment A1?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Chair: Now back to the bill. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased to be able to rise in debate on Bill 2 in Committee of the Whole. The Member for Edmonton-Glenora in her initial comments responded to a number of the issues that we have raised and the concerns that we have with this piece of legislation.

Not to deal with all of them but a few of them, the notion that we need to restrict consequences to the governing party when it receives donations illegally from public bodies to only those illegal donations that have happened in the last two years because evidence, quote, unquote, deteriorates after two years is absurd. You know, typically that evidence is documented evidence, and it's actually quite easy to trace. Certainly, when people engage in financial activity which is barred under other pieces of legislation, the restriction and the limitation period is not just two years, especially when it's criminal.

Quite frankly, I think that when the governing party receives financial electoral donations from publicly funded taxpayer organizations because they feel they have to, that is borderline criminal. The notion that we can't possibly prosecute it or investigate it if it happened more than two years ago is, quite frankly, disrespectful to Albertans, who have a higher standard, I think, just generally based on common sense and common decency, than that. So that's not a sound answer to our concern about this government's intensely self-serving decision to limit their liability under the election finances act for their party's own illegal activity which occurred more than two years ago.

The member indicated that we already have language in the Conflicts of Interest Act which prohibits a member from engaging in lobbying that impacts their own private interest above and beyond what is appropriate. Of course, the problem is that we really don't have that language because, unfortunately, the language that we do have has been interpreted to allow and to justify and to protect the activities of the Member for Edmonton-Manning.

While I acknowledge that any criminal investigation ultimately came to an end, the fact of the matter is that the spectre of having a member who has accelerated and enhanced access to senior public officials lobbying on an issue which has a direct relationship to his own personal business just flies in the face, again, of the regular person's understanding of what constitutes fairness and transparency and ethical behaviour. The fact that our current legislation allowed that to occur is a sign to me that our current legislation is inadequate. If we want to say to Albertans that we're cleaning things up, then that's what we should do. We shouldn't rely on poorly drafted legislation to allow people to swim through loopholes the size of Mack trucks.

With respect to the question of whether certain senior public officials are covered under conflict of interest legislation, the fact of the matter is that a code of conduct is not conflict-of-interest legislation, Mr. Chair. It is different. It is enforced differently, its consequences are different, the transparency of its enforcement is different, the reports around the investigation for a breach of code of conduct are different, it's not transparent, and it can be changed with the stroke of a pen. It is fundamentally different than having those senior officials accountable under the conflict-of-interest legislation. For the Member for Edmonton-Glenora to suggest that the two are the same is either intentionally disingenuous or, conversely, demonstrative of her not understanding what it is she's speaking about. It's one or the other; neither is good.

In terms of the question around government use of public resources during elections and whether that is appropriate, well, the member argues that government has to keep working during elections. Well, that's true. But you know what? Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and even their friends in Ottawa operate under election legislation which prohibits them from using public dollars during the course of an election to buy votes. The fact of the matter is that we don't have that kind of legislation in Alberta. But it does exist in other provinces, and that is what we have suggested in the past.

She's right: this act doesn't amend the Election Act. But if we were going to focus on true accountability and ensuring true ethical behaviour, it would. The simple failure of the government to address an incredibly important issue is not in and of itself a justification for failing to address an incredibly important issue. So, again, that justification also holds very little water.

One of the other issues that the member raised was the question of whether it was appropriate to have the Ethics Commissioner have the right to waive the cooling-off period. Now, again, the fact of the matter is that the Ethics Commissioner has in the past waived the cooling-off period without there being a fully comprehensive and well-posted competition process for former members of this House. That is why we propose this amendment, and it is why Albertans expect to see it. It didn't look good, and it did not look like a particularly trustworthy behaviour when it occurred.

On that basis, Mr. Chair, I would like to propose an amendment to Bill 2. I will hand that over to the pages and wait for it to be distributed and then speak to it.

Thank you.

The Chair: Brief moment. This will be A2, hon. members.

Proceed, hon. member.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Let me just read in the amendment that I am proposing here. It goes as follows, that the Alberta Accountability Act be amended as follows:

A. Section 1(15) is amended

- (a) in the following proposed sections by striking out "12 months" wherever it occurs and substituting "24 months":
 - section 23.1;
 - section 23.7.

- (b) by striking out the proposed sections 23.11 and 23.71.

B. Section 3(5) is amended

- (a) in the proposed section 25.4 by striking out "12 months" wherever it occurs and substituting "24 months"; and
- (b) by striking out the proposed section 25.41.

What this amendment does, as far as I can tell – this is an amendment that changes the cooling-off period for all those officials subject to the Conflicts of Interest Act to 24 months from 12. It also removes the waiver provision that allows the Ethics Commissioner to waive or reduce the cooling-off period at his or her discretion. These changes correspond with the recommendations that our caucus made in our minority report for the Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee in 2013. These are the recommendations we made at that time.

The 24-month cooling-off period does reflect standards that are used in other jurisdictions. It ensures that people are totally separated from governance before they become consultants or lobbyists or employees of certain sections of our provincial government. It also, as I said before, removes the discretion to waive the cooling-off period. We clearly had an example before where we had a former minister hired under the former Premier within I believe it was three or four months of him having lost his seat by a very slim margin, and there was no clear record or proof of any kind of a full, competitive process, any posting of the position, any of that kind of stuff. Rather, it was a decision that was made very much to bring on an old friend, an insider, and find them a soft landing.

Quite honestly, Mr. Chair, the public service is not designed to be a soft landing for failed Conservative candidates. Taxpayers deserve better. That is why the conflicts of interest legislation is in place. There was never really any kind of significant explanation or worthwhile explanation provided for the waiver. Frankly, I think that it puts the Ethics Commissioner in an awkward and uncomfortable position. I think that if you have rules that are designed to prohibit conflicts of interest, then you should simply apply them and live by them. This is not rocket science. It is not the case that every time this government brings in a rule to control its own behaviour, they need to write in a loophole to avoid following the rule that controls its own behaviour.

Quite honestly, I think that if they really are concerned about demonstrating a commitment to ethical behaviour, then they will accept this amendment, that includes this elimination of the waiver, and simply sign on to follow the rules that they themselves passed.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Speaking to the amendment, the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

4:20

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. This is a very good amendment that I will be supporting. Moving the cooling-off period from 12 months to 24 months seems to be a reasonable time period from which we enact. Clearly, people with this type of power and influence in their former positions in the government should have a significant time away before they come back in to work in the government. Simply put, because of their position they would have a great deal of weight and sway and influence over various policies and provisions that have gone over, and they may actually limit the number of fresh eyes that go over legislation, fresh eyes that look at a problem differently, and fresh eyes that can implement a government agenda and work on behalf of the Alberta people.

I would also support removing the waiver provisions, largely for the same reasons that the hon. member spoke to. Having a waiver provision simply allows for an opt-out clause, that allows the government not to follow their own rules that they're setting under our code of conduct. That, to me, does not seem like a wise principle to put in. If you have the rules laid down, well, my goodness, you follow the rules. Having a waiver provision just seems like an ability to put a loophole in that allows the government, whenever they see fit, to appoint someone that used to be part of their government to a position, into a soft landing or into a job that they believe will provide that member with an employment possibility.

You know, why not wait the 24 months? Why not just enforce the code as put down and not put the various people in a conflict position themselves? Sending this to the Ethics Commissioner to get a ruling on a waiver: well, I too agree with the member that this puts the Ethics Commissioner in a very difficult spot in trying to analyze the rules as they're set down yet looking at this unique situation that has come about. In my view, it's not necessary, and we should, simply put, make the rule clear, make it transparent, make people follow it, and not allow for any wiggle room in this regard.

It would restore confidence in the system and ensure that situations don't arise like where we had a former cabinet minister lose in a close election and inside of three to four months receive a job within the same ministry where he worked. Well, my goodness, if that's not what we are trying to correct here, I don't know what is. We should close these loopholes and go forward in this regard. I think this is a good motion to go forward on.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I will be relatively brief as well. There are parts of this that I like. I understand the intent that the members are bringing forward by doubling the cooling-off period.

The Chair: Hon. member, if I may. You did send me a note, and if you're going to speak to that, I was going to try and send you one back.

Hon. members, the member has asked whether this amendment could be split and voted on separately. That can be done with the concurrence of the House. So if that is the wish, I can ask the question. I just need to verify.

With a majority of the members of the House, if that is your wish, hon. member, we could deal with that request. I'll leave you to continue and decide accordingly.

Mr. Wilson: Well, thank you for the clarification. I appreciate it on short notice. If I could ask for consent to do that. I don't know if you now call a vote.

The Chair: Just to be clear, then, hon. member, we have A and B. Are you hoping to separate that into two, or how would you propose to separate it?

Mr. Wilson: I would like to separate it into four if I may. Here's the intent of what I'm trying to do. I would like to be able to vote on the proposed sections 23.11 and 23.71 separately from the rest. So it's the ability to vote for A(b) separate from the remainder.

Part of the reason for this, if my hon. colleagues will entertain me, is because we had an amendment similar in intent to that, and I believe that if this is defeated, then we will not be able to present that amendment. So we'd just like to be able to have the vote separately for that.

The Chair: Well, if you want to put that to the House, then, hon. member, I can put that question, and we'll deal with it.

Mr. Wilson: So moved.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw is asking that this amendment A2 be dealt with in two parts by voting separately for everything but item A(b). I would entertain discussion on that proposal.

Hon. Members: Question.

The Chair: Just the question? Okay. The question, then, as asked by the hon. member, to be clear. We would vote this amendment A2. I would make it A2(1) and A2(2). Everything but item (b) under A is one, and the remainder.

[Motion lost]

The Chair: Then, hon. member, we're back to debating the amendment in its entirety. You may continue to speak.

Mr. Wilson: Well, I thank the members opposite for their co-operation in this matter.

I think it's pretty clear, Mr. Chair, the reason we would be supporting this, particularly around the striking of 23.11. You know, we're all very familiar with the situation that happened with our former agriculture minister, and I believe that the Ethics Commissioner having the ability to waive that period of time, the cooling-off period, for any former minister – I don't believe that that should be a viable alternative. I believe that if we're going to be truly accountable – and there's a reason why the cooling-off period exists – having the option to waive it or find a loophole in the legislation allowing for it to be waived is not ideal.

Now, I struggle with it because now that this amendment is one piece, I don't think I would be supporting the idea of doubling the cooling-off period to two years, because I don't know if that meets what I would call a reasonable test. So I am going to sit down and hear the remainder of the debate and will be making my decision on whether or not I support this amendment shortly.

Thank you.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A2?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A2 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill. Speaker to the bill? Are there others? The Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. This is my first opportunity to speak to Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act. I, too, will be offering some amendments to go forward on to try and make this bill better and more inclusive of what I think the members of the Alberta public want and actually deserve. I will note, for instance, that this bill largely tries to acknowledge in some small way the difficulty the current government is under when it comes to ways it has acted in the past in regard to, I think, being seen to be using the public purse and to the unfortunate matters that were not necessarily what the Alberta people expect out of government.

I will say that the bill does fall short. We remember the new Premier promised to do much more than he is currently doing in this act. He promised amendments to the financial management act that would require the budget to be presented in a clear, consolidated format; producing a biannual report card on savings; and also to have merit-based appointments for agencies, boards, and commissions. The promise to cap staff severance payments and to put an end to sole-source contracts also never made it into the legislation. Instead, those provisions were only written into the Treasury Board directives instead of law, a practice that is quickly becoming a hallmark of this government.

We would have liked to have seen that happen. I also think it's a fair suggestion that if we were trying to really get a handle on things here in this province, it would have been wise to open up the Election Act and deal with our finance laws here, which can only be considered outdated in comparison to other jurisdictions. The fact that we still allow for union and corporate donations in this province, in my view, is an outdated rule. We should simply get to the principle where individuals can contribute in a reasonable fashion. I don't believe that having the ability to contribute up to $30,000 in an election year meets the smell test of actually having average Albertans being able to contribute fully and fairly to the party of their choice. It leads to rampant abuses that can happen and rampant unlevel playing fields out there.

Simply put, we only look at the long list of contributors to political parties to figure that there is at least an air that people are supporting their political donations by having access to the government. We could go a long way to eliminating that perception if we actually got a handle on that. We all know that it's not in the government's interest at this time to do so, so I don't think we'll see that despite many members of this House stating that it is clear that we should have it. In fact, many editorial commentaries have been the same throughout this province.

So those are the shortcomings of the bill. I think you could have gone a lot further.

On that note, I would like to move an amendment to try and make the bill a little stronger if I could do that at this time.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member. Amendment A3. We'll pause for a brief moment and circulate that.

Mr. Hehr: I move this amendment on behalf of the leader of the Alberta Liberals, that Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(15) in the proposed section 23.1(1), (2), (3), (4), and (5) by striking out "12 months" wherever it appears and substituting "24 months."

If we look at this, it's simply to allow for much of what the last amendment was, to allow for a longer cooling-off period.

The Chair: Hon. member, just pause for a moment. This is out of order. This is exactly what we just dealt with in amendment A2. It's redundant.

Mr. Hehr: It's redundant? Well, it was approved by Parliamentary Counsel.

The Chair: I don't know about the sequencing of when they came through, but it's trying to do the same thing that we just dealt with a moment ago, hon. member. It's the same section, 23.1, and substituting "24 months" for "12 months." We just dealt with that.

Mr. Hehr: Well, are you ruling it out of order?

The Chair: This is out of order, hon. member. I won't accept this one. If you have another one, I'll deal with that.

Mr. Hehr: Sure. Let's try it again.

The Chair: Okay.

Mr. Wilson: Roll the dice.

Mr. Hehr: Let's roll the dice. Let's see what we can come up with next here. That is part of the difficulty, I guess, when we're dealing with amendments. Many parties in the opposition have similar ideas on how to increase openness and transparency.

Let's try this again. I will pass out another one here that may or may not pass your wise and thoughtful purview, but we'll try. I'll move it along.

Here it . . .

The Chair: Hon. member, if you'd just pause till I've seen it.

Mr. Hehr: Certainly. Sorry.

The Chair: Thank you.

This one is fine, hon. member. This will be amendment A3, and you may speak to it.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much. You know, we've come upon this time and time again in this House, where once a matter is kicked up to the Ethics Commissioner, we have a situation where we're not able to ask about it in question period. In my view, given that it often pertains to actions that the government is currently going through and that it actually applies to various things that are on the public's mind, I think this is an anomaly that may not be necessary in the spirit of openness and transparency and allowing us to actually get through the debates of the day.

We can see a situation that has arisen here recently where in the by-election numerous portables were granted to a school in the midst of a by-election. These portables were on a list that the Calgary board of education had at a lower priority than other schools in the area on the list. We see this government time and time again saying that they respect local autonomy and local school boards' ability to make those decisions on behalf of their constituents, yet in the heat of a by-election we had a candidate who was the Minister of Education making a decision that directly impacted the list that had been provided by the CBE and may have actually impacted the election.

Hence, I would actually have liked to have seen in this Alberta Accountability Act a law that would have come forward, much like in other provinces, that would say, "Government, you have to respect the 30-day election period and not muddle in it, to be seen to be acting in a way that is trying to influence the election," which I think is the only conclusion that a reasonable person could come to, that that's why that decision was made. I don't think it was in the best interests of serving a reasonable democratic system and providing reasonable elections going forward.

We saw that when that was an issue at play here in question period, where we would have liked to have held the minister to account, understood more his thought process behind making that decision and the like. We've had other situations where something has been before the Ethics Commissioner, and it essentially ties the hands of this body to deal with the issue that is front and centre in the minds of the Alberta public. We think that given the importance of this we should have the ability to do that, to have that discussion here and to explore it while the Ethics Commissioner is doing his work and investigating. We think this would allow for issues of the day to be dealt with in a more expedient manner while they're fresh and topical and while the Alberta public wants answers.

I'm not certain what my colleagues in this House think about this. It's a new approach, and there may be actually some drawbacks to it. Nevertheless, on the whole, on balance, I believe it allows us to cut to the thrust of debate in a more reasonable fashion.

I'll put that forward, and hopefully some people will provide their thoughts on what we're trying to propose here.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there speakers to amendment A3? The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will certainly be supporting this amendment. You know, we've seen this now twice in this Assembly, where there's an issue that is on the top of the mind of the public and we are unable to ask questions to those who are involved in this Chamber, where we're supposed to hold the government to account, because the issue is being investigated by the Ethics Commissioner.

I believe that it's a relatively loose interpretation of the clause that has been enforced as it is. It doesn't make sense to me that we can't come into this Chamber and ask questions to the Premier or ask questions to a minister about actions that they have taken simply because it's under investigation by the Ethics Commissioner. It's not right. I do understand why we may not have a special select committee struck or an ad hoc committee struck to investigate an issue, but in the sense of not being able to address it right here in this House, where the ultimate accountability is supposed to happen, it seems strange.

I thank the hon. member for bringing it forward, and I will certainly be supporting it. Thank you.

The Chair: Are there other speakers to amendment A3?

Ms Notley: I would rise very briefly to say that I, too, agree with the spirit behind this amendment. These are important political issues that are also important to the public. It has been the case in the past that debate in this Assembly has been, in my view, artificially restrained as a result of sometimes an inappropriate interpretation of this rule and sometimes a less clear interpretation of this rule. So I think that, certainly, if we were to accept this section, that would promote the transparency brought by sunlight. Was that the phrase used?

Mr. Hehr: Sunlight is the best disinfectant.

Ms Notley: Yes. Sunlight is the best. That would promote the disinfectants brought to bear through sunlight, and we want to do that at every opportunity we can. So I urge my colleagues to support this motion.

The Chair: Further speakers to amendment A3?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

The Chair: Back to the main bill. The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mr. Anderson: Yes, Mr. Chair. I have another amendment that I'd like to circulate.

The Chair: Please do, and we'll just pause for a moment. Thank you. This will be, if it's in order, amendment A4.

Hon. member, please proceed.

Mr. Anderson: Yes. All right. This amendment is dealing with sole-sourced contracts. Now, as we know, Bill 2 does not contain anything in the proposed legislation regarding sole-sourced contracts, which was a major campaign promise by the Premier. Now, what the Premier has done is that he has ordered or organized a Treasury Board directive that deals with sole-sourced contracts, improves the rules around sole-sourced contracts.

One of the biggest improvements, of course, was the idea of making any exceptions to the rule, any sole-sourced contracts, public within a quarter after they're entered into. This greater transparency is obviously going to improve and make sure that bureaucracies, departments, et cetera, are very sure that a sole-sourced contract is warranted and is justified under the circumstances because it will be public knowledge according to the Treasury Board directive.

That is a very good improvement, as is the fact that anything over a $50,000 contract for capital and $10,000 for services will automatically trigger a tendering process. That should save the public a lot of money. There has been a ton – a ton – of waste on sole-sourced contracts, particularly, again, in AHS. It's been a huge problem, as we've shown, billions of dollars in sole-sourced contracts, some of them probably justifiable, others, you know, almost loony-tunes. [interjection] Well, if we had a sole-sourced contract with the RCMP, for example, that would be a justifiable sole-sourced contract. But some sole-sourced contracts on things like communications and some of these other things are just not justifiable. There are many communication firms out there, and you can go down the list. So in most cases there is no need for a sole-sourced contract, which is why this will greatly improve things.

Now, the problem is, though, of course, that the Treasury Board directive is a directive and essentially is a policy of the government at this time, which means that it can change at any time. It can change with another Treasury Board directive or with an executive order of cabinet or what have you. What this amendment does is that it essentially takes the Treasury Board directive, particularly the piece about making things public if there is a sole-sourced contract, and moves it into the actual legislation, which I think is stronger and makes it so that instead of just policy, it's an actual law.

The amendment says:

(1.1) Any regulation made under subsection (1) must contain a provision prohibiting any employee from issuing, granting or otherwise facilitating a sole-sourced contract with a supplier unless it is made public and made in accordance with all laws, regulations, and policies adopted by the Government respecting procurement.

So it's saying that they have to follow that Treasury Board directive, but the most important piece of this is that it must be made public.

I think that even though the procurement process can be changed by policy, that piece about making it public, I think, is just good governance. I think sunshine is the best disinfectant. It just causes people, even people that, frankly, might not even mean to be doing something untoward, to just have to pause and think, you know: if I grant the sole-sourced contract to X communications firm or X building firm or so forth, can I justify this if it's in the public eye? That pause, that sober second thought, looking and knowing that it's going to be out there – not with a FOIP or anything else; it's just automatically going to go out there – I think is going to cut dramatically the waste that we see in government, particularly with regard to sole-sourced contracts. A very easy way to tighten our belts.

I hope, Mr. Chair, that this will pass. Thank you.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment? The Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I support this amendment. I think anybody who is serious about accountability in contracting and the problems we're having with public confidence and public trust in this province and the exorbitant overcosting of institutions like the south Calgary campus, which went from $500 million to $1.1 billion or $1.2 billion because it was a cost-plus contract – anybody who really is serious about wanting accountability and transparency I can't imagine not supporting this.

The other added dimension of it requiring any sole-source contract to be public is just another check and a complement to that particular amendment. I think it's a good suggestion to strengthen a bill that this Premier and this government wants to gain credibility on. If they're really serious about this move to be more transparent, more accountable for the public purse, there is no question that this should be supported.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Yes. I'm just going to speak in favour of this amendment so kindly and respectfully put forward by the Member for Airdrie, understanding that almost every sole-source contract is indeed justifiable, as he so kindly pointed out.

Notwithstanding that fact, I do think that this is a fundamental piece of the Premier's so-called accountability legislation, yet the way it currently exists, it's entirely discretionary and doesn't provide the certainty one would see if it were in legislation. So this amendment attempts to ameliorate that fact and attempts to put a more definitive rule in place with respect to the prohibition on sole-source contracting and to give it legislative authority. Presumably, members from the other side, following on the guidance of their Premier, who thought this was a huge priority, would be moving forward to support this amendment.

I agree that this amendment is a good one, and it should be passed. Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you.

Other speakers to the amendment? I'll go to the Member for Calgary-Buffalo, then Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

4:50

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. I thought it was a very good amendment put forward by the hon. Member for Airdrie. In particular, I like the piece around public disclosure. I think having that as an automatic flow through that goes through as a result of putting this into legislation would be a big step forward. I know right now it's a directive and not in legislation, and having that piece, I think, goes a long way to ensuring that the public at least has the information available so they can judge for themselves whether a sole-source contract was necessary at the time or whether it was not. Just having a flow-through mechanism to make it public would go a long way to making things better in this province and, I think, easier for us to do our jobs on the opposition side of the House.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I think that this is a very good amendment if we want to make government more accountable. I disagree with the Member for Airdrie citing that there are several examples of when sole-source contracts are necessary. I think that they need to be used with extreme caution.

You know, here's the thing, Mr. Chair – and I really hope the members accept this amendment. I find it really rich when you have a party that privatizes as much as it can in the name of competition in order to keep prices down, yet when it comes to contracts, then they play both sides. “No, no, no. But these contracts we're just going to give to our friends.” So if it's for your friends and insiders, then we don't want competition. We just want to hand it off to – I don't know – somebody who has a lifetime membership in your party. I don't know what the qualifications are.

You want competition, and then you don't want competition, so you're playing both sides of the fence here. I think that in the interest of saving and preserving and spending wisely the tax dollars that are collected, sole-source contracts are not the way to go about that. We do want competition. We want the best company being awarded a contract based on qualifications and merit and track record, not based on who they know on the inside, how long they've been a member, and how much they've donated to someone's campaign.

So this amendment, I think, is quite reasonable. In fact, after we've seen a few of the sole-source contracts go out this year for ridiculous amounts of dollars and then we learn about their connections back to the PC Party, I think Albertans want to see that there is a very open, transparent, healthy competition for government contracts. They should not be awarded or appointed; they should be earned.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A4 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the bill. Speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you so much, Mr. Chair. We were talking last time about decisions made by the previous Ethics Commissioner where certain issues arose which sort of offended the common sensibilities of most Albertans who would look at issues and say: “Yeah. It kind of looks like a conflict to me. How can this not be a conflict?” You know, it's kind of hard when you run into people in the store, or the grocery store, on the playground, on the soccer field and they say: “I could have sworn that's what a conflict of interest is. How did that end up not being a conflict?” Then you have to say: well, it's just that our legislation is both written unclearly and, in some cases, not interpreted as clearly as it could be. As a result, we have behaviour that really does offend the common-sense notion of what is or is not a conflict of interest, where that behaviour is protected by our less than effective conflict-of-interest legislation.

I want to propose an amendment, Mr. Chair, that I had outside of the Assembly referred to by reference to the name of the member that it related to, but I will simply say that a current member of this House would be impacted by this amendment going forward, were it to happen again. In any event, it's one that we want to bring in because it will ensure a higher standard of behaviour going forward by all members of this Assembly.

So I'm going to distribute it, and I will speak when you would like me to.

The Chair: Briefly, once I've seen it, hon. member. This will be A5.

Proceed, hon. member.

Ms Notley: The amendment – I'll just read it into the record – is that the Alberta Accountability Act be amended in section 1(3)(a)(v) in the proposed section 1(1)(g)(i) by striking out paragraph (B) and substituting the following:

- (B) that affects an individual as one of a broad class of the public, unless
 - (i) the individual would receive a direct benefit that exceeds the benefit that would be received by other members of the class, or
 - (ii) the interest is so closely linked to that individual that if the individual were to advocate strongly in support of the interest a reasonable person would conclude that the individual if engaging in activities respecting that interest that are prohibited by this Act would be in a conflict of interest.

In essence, Mr. Chair, what this amendment is attempting to do is correct a decision made by the former Ethics Commissioner that essentially said that a member may pursue and advocate and lobby for a private interest and use their elevated access to senior public officials in order to lobby for a private interest if that private interest is one that affects a broad class of people equally.

Then the former Ethics Commissioner's decision concluded that people who have businesses engaged in construction, who would all benefit from a change to the Builders' Lien Act such that the builders' liens would not compel the construction contractors to pay their debts as effectively as they currently do – one of the members was lobbying senior public officials very aggressively to make changes to the builders' liens rules in a way that would have very much affected and benefited a private business that the member also happened to have and to be actively engaged in at that time. What happened was that the Ethics Commissioner said: well, there's a broad class of people that would be affected by this, i.e., any builder.

Now, quite honestly, I think the member in this particular case actually had an uncharacteristically high number of legal disputes under way where they were defending against builders' liens, so I'm not entirely sure that I would buy the interpretation that it affected everybody in the class equally, because some people seem to be more engaged in litigation than others.

Notwithstanding that fact, that particular definition of a private interest by the former Ethics Commissioner essentially meant that it was not possible for a member to ever be found in a conflict of interest unless they had a business which no other person had. In essence, you'd have to be a person whose business was focused only on, you know, reproducing and sharing polka-dotted Barbie dolls with green hair because if anybody else was in the business of selling polka-dotted Barbie dolls with green hair, then suddenly there would be a broad class, and it was no longer a benefit to that member exclusively, so it did not amount to a conflict of interest under the legislation.

That's, effectively, how the Ethics Commissioner interpreted the legislation. It was, in my view, not a correct interpretation by that previous Ethics Commissioner. It essentially created a great big gargantuan loophole through the very heart of the Conflicts of Interest Act, the very foundational piece of the Conflicts of Interest Act which most Albertans would expect would work in a certain way, which is to make sure that MLAs aren't using the fact that they're MLAs to promote their private business interests. That's basic conflict of interest 101. Yet somehow this act was interpreted in such a way to allow a member to get away with basic conflict-of-interest behaviour 101.

This attempt at amending the act – and I will admit that it's a little bit awkward because we're limited to only amending the sections which are touched upon by the accountability bill that we're discussing. Nonetheless, what this language attempts to do is to inject a standard which comes down to: what would a reasonable person under reasonable circumstances conclude was going on? So a reasonable person test would be injected into this in terms of whether there is a perception of a conflict of interest.

And just in case people think that that's way too broad, just understand that conflict-of-interest legislation across the country has typically used different versions of the reasonable person standard. If it walks like a duck and it quacks like a duck, the odds are good that it may be related to the duck family, you know, if you're a reasonable person with a reasonably strong knowledge of what ducks look like. That kind of legal test has been injected into conflict-of-interest legislation in other jurisdictions.

Indeed, when the all-party committee looked at that issue, we looked at language from other jurisdictions that talked about this notion of not only should justice be done, but justice should be seen to be done. And where a member is behaving in a way that a reasonable person, based on all the facts and circumstances before them, would conclude that it looked like a conflict of interest was going on, then a problem arises and there is jurisdiction for the Ethics Commissioner to step in and make the behaviour stop and perhaps make a finding against the member.

That's what this section is about. We clearly have had a profound exception interpreted into our conflict-of-interest legislation by the former Ethics Commissioner, and it effectively means that there's almost no such thing as a conflict of interest in the Alberta Legislature right now. So if we don't take this opportunity to fix it, then we run the very real risk that, for all intents and purposes, there's almost no behaviour which is prohibited under the guise of conflict of interest for MLAs within the province of Alberta.

I don't think that that's what Albertans believe is happening. I don't think that's what Albertans want to see happening, nor does that align at all with much of the language that we've seen coming out of the new Premier in terms of what he thinks is happening. I'm not even sure if he understands or if he's aware of this very unfortunate interpretation of our current legislation, that essentially allows for us, for all intents and purposes, to have marginal, at best, conflict-of-interest protection for Albertans in this province and that, in fact, this needs to be fixed.

This amendment is our attempt to fix it, so I hope that people will give it some consideration. Is it a little bit awkward? Yeah. We're using the wrong sections because we are limited to the sections which this bill touches on. Might I have written it a bit better if I could have? Yeah. But at the end of the day what we're getting at here, very clearly, is to expand on the exception to the private interest allowance so that people who are engaged in active lobbying on issues that very definitively and directly relate to their private business interests don't do it. It's that simple.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A5?

Mr. Hehr: I will be supporting this amendment for the reasons given by the hon. member. I believe we have struck out here because of a previous Ethics Commissioner's ruling on a grey area that essentially allows us to drive a Mack truck through a loophole here, that allows for an interpretation that the Alberta public, in fact, would probably deem offside with where we wish to go.

We should look at this amendment very closely. I think it goes a long way to looking at the individual member's conduct in this House when they're directly advocating on behalf of their business interests. When they're receiving a direct benefit from changes that they are proposing, this would go a long way. I think that the wording is actually pretty good.

- (ii) the interest is so closely linked to that individual that if the individual were to advocate strongly in support of the interest a reasonable person would conclude that the individual if engaging in activities respecting that interest that are prohibited by this Act would be in a conflict of interest.

It enacts the reasonable person test, which is what we've gone to as a standard of law. It would allow our members under this act to understand, you know: govern yourself accordingly. I think that by having this in there, it would send a strong message to the public that we're not going to have this type of behaviour condoned in this province. I think that under the act, by injecting the reasonable person test, we'd be able to look at things as they are. As they are. Does this pass the smell test? Does it provide the protection that we are looking for?

We in this House have an honourable, you know, position. We have access to things and the ability to talk to other members and people in power and to make decisions in a much greater ability than the average citizen in this province. Accordingly, we need to be governed by strong rules that regulate our behaviour, that make sure it's above board, that serve the broad interests of the public.

I think it's a good amendment. I think we should support it. I think it moves this province forward. It makes us regulate our activities and makes us think about what we're doing prior to going forward and forwarding our own private interests, whether they be for ourselves or for other classes of people if we think about how this legislation is going to directly affect our economic outcome. If we see that situation where we're advocating for what has a direct benefit to our bottom line, well, then we have to govern ourselves accordingly, think twice, get clarification from the Ethics Commissioner and the like, and not allow for our actions to go past what would be acceptable behaviour under a reasonable person test that all Albertans could look at and say: yeah, that's not right. I think we need this to move forward in a fashion that would protect the public and would actually help us govern our actions more closely in this House.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A5? The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Wilson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Very briefly, I will just concur with my colleagues. I, too, believe that this is a valuable addition and adds some much-needed clarity to this section of the Conflicts of Interest Act. I understand what the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona was saying, that she would have possibly tried to write this differently if she'd had the opportunity to do so. Barring that, I do believe, as the Member for Calgary-Bufferlo just articulated, that inserting the reasonable person test and giving our Ethics Commissioner the option and the ability to insert and use a reasonable person test while making a ruling or a judgment in regard to conflicts of interest is an important option for the Ethics Commissioner to have. Right now the act doesn't have that written into it.

I think that we should pass this amendment, and I look forward to members across the aisle supporting it as well.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A5?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A5 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill. Speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

5:10

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I, too, rise today to talk about the Alberta Accountability Act, Bill 2. I would like to table an amendment as well, and I have the requisite copies of it here.

The Chair: We will just pause while we circulate that. Just a brief moment before you start to speak to it.

It is amendment A6.

Mr. Barnes: Amendment A6. Thank you.

Amendment A6 wishes to lay out some specific people that a minister cannot grant specific contracts or benefits to. This would prevent ministers from granting the benefit of a government announcement to a candidate during a writ. Of course, the recent by-elections, branded by the press as buy-elections, B-U-Y, went a long way to hurt the value of democracy in our province. It went a long way to hurt the entire system. This is an opportunity to tighten up the rules for everyone. This is an opportunity, maybe, to make it fair for all parties but certainly – certainly – to make it so that 4 million Albertans feel that the system is fair and that they want to engage in it.

One of the reasons way back in 2010-2011 that I decided to get involved was because only 28 per cent of eligible voters voted in the 2008 election in Cypress-Medicine Hat. We've all heard the reasons why, the cynicism that comes out of voters, you know: we're all the same; the bureaucrats make all the decisions anyway; it's about favours. Here we are with a situation where the words "buy-election," B-U-Y election, were in every paper for a long time, and we've seen this raised. We had it raised today by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and the Member for Calgary-Bufferlo, about a way we can make a law stronger, make the election process fairer and more First World for all Albertans.

It was interesting. During the by-election campaigns we literally saw billions of dollars worth of announcements in 28 days. It kind of surprised me, when we barely scratched the Stelmach schools, never mind the Redford ones, that we were announcing more. I hope someday that the cynicism of those announcements, when September 2016 rolls around and those schools aren't full of Albertans, will come back. Hopefully, I'm here to remind Albertans about what happened.

I heard some members, too, mention just briefly and recently the reasonable person test. The Member for Calgary-Bufferlo aptly called it the smell test. Everywhere in Cypress-Medicine people were saying: this is unfair; they're the government; they can do it; we know in opposition you can't. Again, guys, I think what happens is that Albertans don't reward you for it. They don't pat you on the back. Some of them support other parties, or they remove themselves from the system. Why would you want either to happen?

You know, other provinces, two of our neighbours, have already looked at this and said that it doesn't pass the smell test, that it doesn't pass the reasonable person test. Let's look at what Manitoba does. In Manitoba the government is not permitted to advertise or publish any information about its programs or activities:

(a) in the last 90 days before election day . . . in the case of a fixed date election,

(b) [or during] the election period . . . of a by-election.

Manitoba has recognized that this doesn't pass the reasonable person test, that it doesn't lead to our young people being involved in our democratic process, that it doesn't lead to the level of fairness that we all like to expect and we all like to have when we put our heads on our pillows at night.

In Saskatchewan

(2) During a general election, no government ministry shall publish in any manner any information with respect to the activities of that ministry.

(3) During a by-election in a constituency, no government ministry shall publish in any manner in the constituency . . .

or the city where the by-election is happening

. . . any information with respect to the activities of the ministry.

So Saskatchewan, like Manitoba, has already gone several steps here to ensure that the process stays fair, to ensure we have the best process possible so our 18-year-olds and our 19-year-olds and our people that have felt disengaged who want to be involved feel that their voice counts, as it should count for every Albertan. Rural, urban, rich, or poor: it should count for every Albertan.

Dozens of new schools, dozens of new modernizations. September 2016 is coming. I hope you make it. Does this amendment tie your hands in any way?

Mr. Mason: I hope so.

Mr. Barnes: Actually, I hope so, too. It ties it in some ways to be more fair. What a shame that would be.

This amendment would not limit the ability of the government to govern during by-elections because if the announcement is required to be made because of an emergency or another urgent matter relating to public safety, well, then, of course you could make it. The opposition would want it no other way; the voters of Alberta would want it no other way. To this House: I know the voters of Alberta want a system that looks more fair, that is more fair. They want a system that's more inclusive to every Albertan and a system that's more inclusive to all the opposition parties, even the ones without the $45-billion chequebook.

I will ask all members of this House to support my amendment and help me make this more fair for all Albertans. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Chair, it's funny; we always get accused and just did in the last bill of hastily constructing legislation and not consulting anybody, and then we go through this process where we craft several amendments in the dead of the night and supposedly somehow they were all well constructed.

Mr. Chair, this particular amendment proposes to change a section under 23. Section 23 refers to restrictions on former ministers – former ministers. When you get to 23.1, the section that we're trying to change, it talks about what a current minister is in contravention of if he deals with a former minister or a former member of the staff. But the section is about former ministers, so why would you all of a sudden talk about the relationship between the current minister and somebody else? This is about former ministers and their staff, so this doesn't belong in this section, first of all.

Second of all, you're talking about the conduct of a candidate or his campaign. That is best left for the Election Act, where we talk about the conduct of candidates and their campaigns and what is proper or not. Mr. Chair, I'd humbly suggest this is not the proper amendment, nor is it the proper place for such an amendment in this act.

I'm going to urge that the Legislative Assembly do not support it. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Chairman, just to respond. You know, the fact that the government has produced this bill and provided to the opposition for the last two or three days does not constitute a failure on the opposition to be thorough and consult. The government is setting the pace here, and for the minister to blame the opposition is just a little bit absurd. Nevertheless, I think the important thing here is that we might want to rename this the portable clause. The Minister of Education has said, you know, that he's listened to the public and so on and whatever and given them what they want. What they wanted, apparently, in the by-election was portables and school announcements, of course. Yes, they do.

I'm going to be making this point as we go on with some of the NDP amendments as well, that you can't count on this government to clean up its own mess. It has tightened rules except where there have been egregious breaches by the government itself in the past number of years. So the opposition, including our amendments, will try to hold the government to account and actually make amendments that would affect what the government has actually done or failed to do that violates the sense of ethics of the people in this province. I find it very interesting that they're not going to support these amendments. I think, quite frankly, what they've produced is an ethics and accountability bill that looks more like Swiss cheese than something that's bulletproof. [interjections] It reminds me of some highways just with driving around rural Alberta. It's full of holes, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Hon. members, would you keep the side conversations just to a whisper. Thank you.

Proceed, hon. member.

Mr. Mason: The government has multiple blind spots with respect to its own transgressions, and that's very evident in the bill they brought forward.

Thank you. I'm going to be supporting this amendment.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I'd just like to say that, frankly, I couldn't give a tinker's darn whether it's in the right place or not. Getting this amendment through in this fashion will go a long way to providing good governance going forward. So if it's in the bill, even if it's in the wrong place, it's on the books. It would preclude the government from doing actions which the Alberta public saw in the by-election as being essentially untoward and not necessarily what's expected out of a government in other provinces. Manitoba and Saskatchewan have written in this law. I think it's a very good place to put this rule in place. It would get it on the books, and it would save us from having to do it at another time. I applaud the member for doing it, and it's a good place to put this rule in so people have it on the books. We'll be able to see it and have it right there in plain view so this government can govern itself accordingly on that file.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I, too, will support this given that last year we spent many days on the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act amendments and tried to instill some of these principles into the reformed, improved Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act amendments, and this was rejected. Where else can we introduce it? This is an eminently reasonable and publicly supported principle of accountability and reducing conflict of interest and building trust. The only reason I can see for this government to reject it is that they don't want to be accountable, and they don't want to improve trust with the public in Alberta.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A6 lost]

The Chair: Hon. members, we are back to the bill.

Speakers on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I also have an amendment. I would like to present it now. I will send it up to the table on behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

5:30

The Chair: This will be amendment A7.

Hon. member, please proceed. You may speak to the amendment.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'll move on behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona that Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(3) by adding the following after clause (a):

(a.1) in subsection (5) by striking out “or” at the end of clause (d), by adding “or” at the end of clause (e) and by adding the following after clause (e):

(f) a person or group of persons in a relationship with the Member which a reasonable person would conclude is a proximate political or business advisory relationship or with whom the Member shares closely aligned personal or business interests.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is part of the NDP set of proposals for strengthening the Accountability Act. As you no doubt have been told, we focused very much on the transgressions of this government or members of this government in the past in trying to close the loopholes that were used in order to excuse behaviour that would have been considered very questionable from an ethical point of view.

This particular one focuses on the issue of the potential conflict of interest or the purported conflict of interest of a previous Premier, who shall not be named in deference to the PC's preferences. In that particular case, there was a major contract, a huge contract awarded, when a previous Premier was the Justice minister, to a law firm to fight a tobacco case. In this particular case, this massive contract was awarded to a firm in which her ex-husband, campaign manager, and close political confidant was a senior partner. Mr. Chairman, this was dealt with by the Ethics Commissioner, and in a judgment, which we strongly disagreed with, the incident was cleared.

This is an attempt to close that loophole. In fact, I think I can recall, Mr. Chairman, that the Conflicts of Interest Act specifically says that if the person was involved in making the decision, there is a conflict of interest. The former Premier argued that she had not made the decision, and she pinned it on the then Justice minister who replaced her, now the agriculture minister, for making the decision. But the documentation clearly showed that the initial selection of the firm from among three contenders had been made by the former Premier when she was the Justice minister. So she clearly was involved in making the decision.

Nevertheless, Mr. Chairman, the Ethics Commissioner for whatever reason ruled that the relationship between the former Premier and her ex-husband, campaign manager, and close political confidant was not sufficiently close to have constituted a conflict of interest. Nevertheless, we felt very strongly that the then Justice minister should have recused herself from this case and let someone else make the decision. In our view, the whole thing smelled very badly.

This amendment is simply an attempt to close the loophole, to say that in a case like that, there's no question but that a conflict of interest exists or that at least the perception of a conflict of interest exists, and the person should recuse themselves. This would strongly strengthen the bill, which, amazingly, seems to be dotted with bits of amnesia about what the real conflicts of interest are, what the real ethical lapses have been over the last five to 10 years in this government. This will strengthen the bill.

I'm sure all hon. members on all sides of the House will want to strengthen Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act, and correct those bits of amnesia and will support this amendment. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment?

Mr. Hehr: I think this is an excellent amendment. It allows our Ethics Commissioner and those in charge to apply the reasonable person test to be able to aptly judge in situations where close business or personal relationships or, in fact, political relationships are maybe being rewarded in certain instances. You can look no further than the examples brought up in this House over the course of the last number of years, and probably going back even further, where this principle has not been followed through on and the government of the day has played fast and loose and rewarded friends and political supporters with contracts. This would go a long way to end that practice and give us time where we can think about our actions and have laws that actually say that these actions will have more scrutiny and the ability to have an interpretation made about the behaviour in question.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Chair. I'm very pleased to stand in support of this as well. I think that if you ask the average Albertan if a close associate, business or otherwise, a relative, or a friend had an interest in one of the decisions of this Legislature, one of these ministers, the average person would say: of course that's a conflict of interest. Somehow that's escaped this government to this point, and I'm hoping that they will see this as an important opportunity, again, to rebuild some trust in our political process, in the decision-making, in the interpretation of conflicts of interest, in a sense of fairness, justice, and integrity, which there's a critical need to do.

There's no question that this is an important and strengthening amendment. It doesn't conflict with anything that these folks have said that they believe in. In fact, it would add to the strength of this whole bill. I hope that we'll see some support despite the fact that it's coming from across the floor.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there other speakers to this amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A7 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill. Speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Yeah. I have an amendment, sir.

The Chair: All right. If you would circulate that and just pause for a moment until I get the original at the table.

You may speak to this, hon. member. We'll call this amendment A8.

Mr. Hehr: I'm moving this on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark. It's to move that Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(12) by striking out the proposed section 20(6). The reason for this is that under the proposed section 20 of the Conflicts of Interest Act a minister cannot hold financial interest in a company where his or her decisions as a minister may benefit the same company. For example, holding significant shares in a bank while Finance minister is a major no-no as it can be a large conflict of interest.

There are exceptions to this, where there is a blind trust or if the Ethics Commissioner gives his or her blessing. Subsections (2), (3), and (4) of section 20 lay out the criteria for this blessing. However, subsection (6) allows the commissioner to arbitrarily approve the financial holdings "subject to any conditions determined by the Ethics Commissioner." As subsection (6) is written, it appears to give the minister an out so that other criteria need not apply. We believe that the commissioner should make decisions based on the criteria set out in the act and only in the act, to allow for less wiggle room and to allow the full criteria to be evaluated as it is written in the act.

That is my amendment. We think it goes some way to increase accountability.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Other speakers to the amendment?

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Chair, again, another statement of offering to strengthen a bill that while moving the yardstick a little bit could be moved a lot if this government would let go of some of its pride and allow some reasonable amendments to be embraced. This would, again, build trust, give a stronger sense that this government is truly committed to doing what it says it's wanting to do: create a new relationship with Albertans and the Legislature of Alberta, build a new sense of integrity and confidence in the political process, and reduce the level of conflict of interest that has been widely perceived and has created tremendous cynicism in this culture.

I'm hoping again that this government will honour its commitment to the people of Alberta and support this amendment.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A8 lost]

The Chair: Back to the main bill. The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm moving that Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(15) in the proposed section 23.3, and I have all of the copies right here.

The Chair: Okay. Just pause for a moment, please.

This will be A9, hon. member, and you may speak to it.

Mr. Barnes: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Chair. The whole idea here is to set out some general parameters for staff members on what constitutes a conflict such as influence or insider information. This amendment would be another way of preventing by-election announcements by saying that the Premier's and the ministers' staff enter into a conflict of interest if they participate in an announcement that benefits a candidate during a writ.

Probably a good idea is to have some protection from political staff. It's always important for employees and contractors to know where the boundaries are and what the limits are, so I feel that that may be helpful. Of course, a lot of our good, hard-working political staff can be very partisan at times, so clarification on ethical lines should be drawn. I don't see any way that this gets in the way of the work of political staff during the by-elections. It just keeps them from being pressured to take part in the kind of announcements that Manitoba and Saskatchewan know aren't ethical, that many people in Alberta don't like to see and know aren't ethical. It would give them some protection; it would give them some boundaries.

It's interesting when we look at this. As the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood said, you know: to get these into the exact proper spot, to get it into the exact proper part of the bill on such short notice is always difficult. So I very, very much appreciate my LAs' work on it, and my researchers' work on it.

But it reminds me of what the Auditor General said. I can't remember if it was the government planes or the sky palace he was checking into, but he said something like: you can't make a law or a rule for everything, so you have to fall back on principles. Manitoba and Saskatchewan understood the principle of not having partisan taxpayer money. All 4 million Albertans, all of them, get involved in a by-election in a way that is unfair, in a way that doesn't build a stronger democracy, in a way that doesn't promote a stronger and a better system.

Again, we saw billions of dollars of announcements during the 28-day by-elections a short time ago. People knew that all of the opposition parties, if we'd have won all four, still would have been the opposition. Is that a fair way to run an election in this time when we want more people engaged, when our people are smart and have so much information?

This amendment would go some distance – some distance – to make it so that staffers understand clearly where their lines are. It would go a long distance to make it so the system is fair, the system is stronger, and I would ask that members support it.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A9? Do you want to speak to the amendment, hon. member? Okay. Go ahead, please.

Dr. Swann: Thanks. Well, again, an eminently sensible recommendation that would add to the credibility of this bill. It's interesting to me that the other side rejects amendments without giving any arguments for rejecting them. They don't want to, I guess, be on the record as rejecting something that's reasonable and supportable. It's disappointing. It's not what I think most Albertans would expect of their elected representatives, that they just sit there and then reject amendments one after the other. It's disappointing, but I hope that we will see some change.

Thank you.

The Chair: To the amendment, the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Bikman: Yes. Once again we see that just because something is legal doesn't mean it's moral or ethical. We're talking about accountability, and it's really quite appalling to think that the government – I know you're not this unaware. You do have some self-awareness. You realize that you're playing on a field that isn't level, that it's tilted in your favour. It's one, of course, that's been very effective. It's one of the explanations for 44 years of continuous rule.

It's not so much that the results that you've produced are above reproach, because we've seen time and again examples of reproach and unethical behaviour, whether it's actually ruled that or called it. People know in their hearts what's right and what's wrong, and you do, too, I submit, hon. members across the floor and those sitting beside me to the right, of all places, when they actually should be sitting to the left.

But it's the right thing to do. It's the right thing to do. I think that sometimes you have to do the right thing even if it's going to make it a little harder for you to perpetuate the myth that the only government worthy of support in Alberta is a PC government. Because it simply ain't. [interjections] It simply ain't so in spite of the loud protestations to the contrary by those who have hair.

Nevertheless, do the right thing for a change and support this.

The Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm glad to stand up. I will not support this amendment. I've heard this same debate now twice in a row with the Wildrose, and I'm going to be blunt because that's what I generally do. [interjections] Can you believe that?

The public is not stupid, and this amendment makes this presumption that the public can't see through some sort of campaign stunt if it is a campaign stunt. The fact is that the original provision of the act does cover what I think everybody wants covered. This idea that we're going to legislate morality – what we're dealing with is something that is both moral and ethical, and the fact is that there has to be some sort of decision-making capability with the Ethics Commissioner. But on this idea that the public can't see through it, I disagree with the Wildrose. The public is fairly intelligent, and they get what's going on. They see through falsehoods, many of the same falsehoods that the Wildrose throws out there.

I will tell you this. This amendment is a terrible amendment. It presumes that the public is not intelligent. I will tell you that the public is intelligent.

The Chair: Other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Well, I can support part of this, but I do have a problem with one of the sections. Certainly,

- (a) to influence or seek to influence a decision to be made by or on behalf of the Crown to further a private interest of the member, a person directly associated with the member or the member's minor child or improperly further any other person's private interest, is clearly something that we can support.

However, (b) of the same section says that, you know, basically, the government can't talk about something good that it's done in an election. Now, that's a little different from our amendment, where you can't make specific announcements to further your interests in a particular election or a by-election. You can't make those announcements during that period. This is that you can't talk about it. You can't publicize something that the government may have already done. I don't know how you're going to do that. I'm in a bit of a quandary because I don't know how this government gets elected on its record as it is. But if it did have some good stuff that it had done, it seems reasonable to be allowed to talk about it during an election campaign.

So I don't know if we can sever it or if somebody from the Wildrose can explain this one to me. This one gives me a bit of pause. But certainly regarding trying to influence a decision made by the government to benefit a person or a member: that's absolutely worthy of support.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there others?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A9 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill. Speaking to the bill, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: I have an amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Can you pause for a moment while we circulate that, hon. member?

Mr. Oberle: I wonder – and I certainly defer to your wisdom, Mr. Chair – considering the time, if we should not consider calling adjournment until 7:30 this evening.

The Chair: I think the process, hon. member, is just that at 6:00 I would just recess until 7:30, so by the time I see the member's amendment, I suspect that's what will likely happen.

Mr. Oberle: I'm good to go. I'm sorry I interrupted, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Hon. members, this will be amendment A10.

You may speak to it briefly, hon. member. You might have about a minute or so.

Mr. Mason: I'll at least put it on the floor. On behalf of my hon. colleague the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona I move that Bill 2, the Alberta Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(17) in the proposed section 25(1) by adding "or where the Ethics Commissioner has reasonable grounds to believe that a breach or contravention of the Act has occurred or is occurring” after “reasonable notice to that individual.”

Speaking briefly to it, Mr. Chairman, the Conflicts of Interest Act currently only allows the Ethics Commissioner to investigate breaches or contraventions when there’s a request made or when he or she believes that the member or individual is acting in contravention of his or her advice or directions. This is really very narrow, meaning that a number of breaches or contraventions could happen and not be investigated as long as the MLA never approached the Ethics Commissioner for advice in the first place and no one else thought of requesting the investigation. So it says that the Ethics Commissioner on reasonable grounds can start an investigation, and that seems to be a very natural thing to have happen.

I have some other things to say, but that’s basically the nub of the issue. If there are reasonable grounds for the Ethics Commissioner to start an investigation, he or she should do so.

Thank you.

The Chair: Hon. members, the committee will now recess until 7:30 p.m.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, December 10, 2014

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: Hon. members, I'll reconvene the committee. Please take your seats.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Just before we move ahead with the debate on amendment A10, I wonder if I might ask that we waive the appropriate section of our standing rules in order to allow a one-minute time frame between division bells.

The Chair: I believe that because we just recessed, hon. Deputy Government House Leader, it continues. We don't? We have to redo it?

Mr. Oberle: Yeah. We have to redo it.

The Chair: Oh, okay, then. I stand corrected, and I appreciate your motion, hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: I didn't know that, actually. Your table officer told me.

The Chair: Okay.

Well, then. I'll ask the members of the House.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Government Bills and Orders

Committee of the Whole

Bill 2

Alberta Accountability Act

The Chair: We'll reconvene debate on amendment A10. Any more speakers to amendment A10? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: I'm not sure I was quite finished, Mr. Chairman.

I think that there are real limitations on the Ethics Commissioner's ability to undertake an investigation. The current Conflicts of Interest Act says that he can only do it under two circumstances: one, when he or she believes his or her advice has not been followed, which would require the member to approach the Ethics Commissioner in the first place and seek direction. That may not happen in all cases. Secondly, the Ethics Commissioner can undertake an investigation when he or she receives a formal complaint.

Otherwise, the Ethics Commissioner's hands are tied, but if it is apparent that something may have happened or, for example, if someone may want to bring something to his attention without laying a formal complaint for their own reasons – privacy, job security, other reasons may be valid – then the Ethics Commissioner is not in a position to open an investigation. I think that that is an unreasonable limitation that hamstring the ability of the Ethics Commissioner to look into matters that he or she should look into, and they certainly are not the kind of limitations that are put on other people who are responsible for investigating and enforcing legislation, for example police. I'm not trying to make the case that the Ethics Commissioner is a police officer or akin to one, but it's an example of how other officers responsible for investigating and enforcing legislation are not constrained by this kind of limitation, which the amendment will correct.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I'd urge all members to support it.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A10?

Mr. Hehr: I think that this is a reasonable amendment. It actually would free up our Ethics Commissioner to maybe do his job more efficiently and effectively. He would be able to undertake investigations at his own behest. His hands wouldn't be tied, as noted by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, where a complaint has to come through his office and the like before he can go out and look at certain situations or a member is going to have to seek his advice. If in the Ethics Commissioner's wisdom he deems the member hasn't followed that advice, then an investigation can occur. It seems like this limits his capacity not only to investigate but to hold people to account for what their true obligations are, to represent the public interest.

I think this would be a good move. I don't know if any other Ethics Commissioners have this wide a latitude, but it'd be a good place to start, right here in Alberta. So I applaud the amendment, and I would urge all members of this House to vote in favour.

The Chair: Other speakers to amendment A10?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A10 lost]

The Chair: We're back to the main bill.

You want to speak to the bill, hon. member?

Mr. Mason: I want to make another amendment, but I was really hoping for a standing vote on that one.

The Chair: Well, I did pause, hon. member, and at best I saw two.

Mr. Mason: Well, I think the hon. member . . .

The Chair: I didn't see him signal.

Mr. Mason: No?

The Chair: But I invite you to carry on.

Mr. Mason: Okay. All right, Mr. Chairman.

I have another amendment, which I will send to the table, and you let me know when you want to make it.

The Chair: Hon. member, you may speak to amendment A11.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. On behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona I move that Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act, be amended as follows. Section 2(4)(b)(1) is amended in the proposed schedule 1 in section 2(l) by striking out "became a former public officer within the previous 2 years" and substituting "is a former public office holder." Section 2(5)(b)(1) is amended in the proposed schedule 2 in section 2(k) by striking out "became a former public office holder within the previous 2 years" and substituting "is a former public office holder".

Well, Mr. Chairman, one of the objections that we've had to the act and to previous government decisions is this two-year time limit, this statute of limitations of a mere two years. Changes to the Lobbyists Act: the government inserted a two-year period, which didn't previously exist. This amendment removes that limited time period and makes the provisions in question apply to everyone who is a former public office holder. There are still other provisions in the act that allow for exceptions and exemptions, so there's no good reason here to insert a two-year time limit.

Those are my comments, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Speaking to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A11 lost]

The Chair: Back to the main bill. Speaking to the bill, any other speakers?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[The remaining clauses of Bill 2 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

7:40

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that we rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 2. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report just offered? If you do, say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Speaker: If you do not, say no. Accordingly, that is so ordered, carried.

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 2

Alberta Accountability Act

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise today on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General to move third reading of Bill 2, Alberta Accountability Act.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation is part of a package that will help restore public trust, improve accountability, and end entitlement. Bill 2 will strengthen the conflicts-of-interest guidelines for political staff. It will extend the cooling-off period for political staff and designated office holders, and it will clarify the distinction between the role of registered lobbyists and government consultants. Complementing the legislation will be two Treasury Board directives that will eliminate sole-source contracts except in clear and exceptional circumstances and restrict severance packages for political staff.

Bill 2 amends the Conflicts of Interest Act, the Lobbyists Act, and the Public Service Act. Changes to the Conflicts of Interest Act include prohibiting staff in Premiers' and ministers' offices from participating in discussions or using confidential information which would further a private interest and from using their office to improperly influence others for their own benefit. Bill 2 also bans ministers, the Premier, and their staff from lobbying government for 12 months after leaving office. The cooling-off period for ministers' and the Premier's office staff would be extended from six months to 12.

Premiers' and ministers' staff will also be required to make financial disclosures to the Ethics Commissioner each year, Mr. Speaker. Bill 2 also makes available an administrative penalty for those who do not file their financial disclosures on time. With Bill 2 more detail is provided about when an MLA may accept a gift in a protocol situation and includes additional reporting requirements about gifts to the Ethics Commissioner.

The bill also revises the exceptions allowing travel on noncommercial aircraft, making them similar to the federal model. Members must disclose all noncommercial travel to the Ethics Commissioner within 30 days. The Ethics Commissioner will make this information public.

The Accountability Act also expands the authority of the Ethics Commissioner. Two examples of those changes are providing authority to post public disclosure statements on the Ethics Commissioner's website and providing for greater investigative powers for the Ethics Commissioner such as the authority to call witnesses and compel production of documents. These amendments reflect input from both the Ethics Commissioner and the Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee.

Mr. Speaker, under Bill 2 a person would be prohibited from lobbying and providing paid advice to government or a prescribed provincial body on any subject matter at the same time. With this bill anyone who is currently lobbying and consulting would be required to choose which activity will continue and end the other activity within 60 days of the bill coming into force. Bill 2 amends the Public Service Act so that it parallels many of the conflict-of-interest provisions applicable to MLAs.

The Alberta Accountability Act makes important changes to the government. The amendments, coupled with the Treasury Board directives, will change how things are done in government. It will ensure high ethical and accountability measures are in place as we work together to restore public trust.

Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to Bill 2 and the changes that are being proposed by the government. Now, we've just heard the Deputy Government House Leader and Minister of Energy talk about how this will eliminate entitlements and restore public trust. I guess I will have to say that there are a few things about this act that are improvements, but I do not believe that it meets the goal of restoring public trust. If you compare the changes in this act to the government record over the past number of years and ask how this act would apply to various transgressions of members of this government over the past several years and whether it would fix those transgressions and prevent them from occurring in the future, the answer has to be no. I think that it bears some discussion.

There are some improvements in terms of this. High-level political staff will now be subject to the same conflict-of-interest principles as current MLAs. That's one thing. I know that in my notes there are some good things to say about this bill.

Another good change in Bill 2 comes from recommendations that the NDP made in our minority report of the special committee. That's now: MLA disclosure statements may be posted to the website of the Ethics Commissioner. But there's still no requirement that they could be posted.

There are changes to the Lobbyists Act, a few improvements there: expansion of the definition of a former public servant and the clarification of many sections, including schedule 1, 1(3) and 2, and schedule 2, 1(2) and 2, whatever those are.

I think there are good changes as well to the Public Service Act: greater transparency, the ability of designated office-holders that would limit the ability of office-holders to influence government decisions, and so on. They've added adult interdependent partner to the definition of spouse.

But I want to talk about the application of this bill, if passed tonight and proclaimed, to some of the issues that we have seen in the last number of years. Now, the hon. leader of the NDP and MLA for Edmonton-Strathcona released a list of priorities for ethics legislation from the NDP a couple of days ago, and the focus there was on looking at some of the things that had occurred in the past under this government that were found to be very questionable by many Albertans but were not dealt with because of interpretations of existing legislation that allowed these transgressions to be unchallenged, I guess you could say.

First of all, we had one clause to deal with the donation by Daryl Katz to the Progressive Conservative Party before the last election of over $400,000, clearly illegal under the act, but for some reason the interpretation was that you could divide it up, say that the different amounts had come from different people associated with Mr. Katz, either business or family, and it would all be okay.

We've proposed inserting a new clause under the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act that would say:

No person should

- (a) circumvent or attempt to circumvent a limit set out for maximum contributions, or
- (b) act in collusion with another person or entity for that purpose.

No person or entity shall

- (a) conceal or attempt to conceal the identity of the source of the contribution governed by this act, or
- (b) act in collusion with another person or entity for that purpose.

That was drafted in accordance with section 405.2 of the Canada Elections Act. That would have closed a loophole that this government used in the last election, but the government has chosen not to support that and to not make those changes.

Secondly, we have another proposal to deal with the appointment of a previous member of the cabinet, Mr. Berger, to a government position, and that would have amended section 31 of the Conflicts of Interest Act by changing the length of the ministerial cooling-off period to two years. That has not been accepted by the government. Those are based on a proposal from the B.C. NDP to their conflicts of interest act.

Thirdly, a clause to deal with actions taken by the Minister of Education in the recent by-election would insert a new section under part 6 of the Election Act, corrupt practices, that reads:

During the following periods a government department or Crown agency must not advertise or publish any information about its programs or activities:

- (a) in the last 90 days before an election and on election day in the case of a fixed-date election,
- (b) in the election period in the case of a by-election or a general election that is not a fixed-date election.

That does not apply to advertisements or publications required by law that are required for soliciting proposals to tenders or something that relates to an important matter of health and safety. It goes on to say that during the period of a by-election this also applies. These are based on section 92 of Manitoba's Election Financing Act.

These aren't, Mr. Speaker, just figments of the NDP caucus's imagination. These are actual provisions that have been provided in other legislation in other provinces but remain gaping holes in Bill 2.

There was a clause which we tried to amend tonight, named after a previous Premier of the province, to insert a new clause under section 2(2) of the Conflicts of Interest Act that reads, "For the purposes of this act a member has an apparent conflict of interest if there is a reasonable perception which a reasonably well-informed person could properly have or the member's ability to exercise an official power or perform an official duty or function must have been affected by his or her private interest" and insert a new section:

A person or group of persons in a relationship with the Member which a reasonable person would conclude is a proximate political or business advisory relationship or with whom the Member shares closely aligned personal or business interests.

This is language, Mr. Speaker, based on the British Columbia Members' Conflict of Interest Act, and similar clauses also exist in other jurisdictions, including Saskatchewan. The latter is derived from deficiencies noted in the Alberta act when it was reviewed by the Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee in 2013.

There's another clause that we would propose to deal with actions of a member of the government caucus who voted on something that closely affected his business, and that would insert a new clause under a section of the Conflicts of Interest Act that reads:

An interest that affects a person as one of a broad class of public except where

- (a) the Member or person directly associated with the Member or the Member's minor or adult child gains a direct benefit exceeding other members of the class, or
- (b) where the activities of the Member exceed that of other members and are so closely linked to the interests of the Member, a person directly associated with the Member, or the Member's minor or adult child if it gives rise to the perception of a conflict of interest by a reasonable person.

This is based on recommendations that arose from the Select Special Conflicts of Interest Act Review Committee when it reviewed the act in 2013, specifically in a discussion on how to strengthen the legislation in regard to the case of the Member for Edmonton-Manning.

There's a clause that we have identified, called the PC Party clause, which would amend the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act as follows: a prosecution under this act may be commenced within five years after the facts on which the information is based first came to the knowledge of the Chief Electoral Officer. These limitations were derived to take into account a typical election cycle. The latter clause was drafted to include the requirements that the Chief Electoral Officer be aware of the possibility of an offence before the limitation period has begun to run. That exists in legislation in Ontario, British Columbia, and Saskatchewan.

The next one that we proposed was called the building Alberta clause, to pass legislation that compels the government to publicly disclose criteria for determining public infrastructure investment priorities, a clear public infrastructure priority list, and a detailed explanation for changing the priority list when that occurs. I'm sure my friends in the Wildrose, who've been talking about this for several years, would have been very interested in seeing such a provision in Bill 2.

Another clause that we propose, Mr. Speaker, is called the friends and insiders clause, and it would amend the Conflicts of Interest Act so that public officials who are subject to both the act and the authority of the Ethics Commissioner would include those who run major government organizations, including the Alberta Energy Regulator and Alberta Health Services. Now, it is the case that Alberta Health Services has been included, but I think we could go further and talk about other boards appointed by the government that have large responsibilities as well, including the university boards of governors and so on.

Finally, we have a clause called: all cattle, no hat. Now, we've certainly said that the government's Bill 2 is all hat, no cattle, so if we wanted to put some hooves on the ground rather than chapeaux on the head, then we would do this. We would make sure that the promises of the Premier to limit severances and sole-sourced contracts exist in legislation and not in a Treasury Board directive that can easily be changed and, potentially, not noticed at all. It should actually be in the act if the Premier wants to be counted on for keeping his promise.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that we will not be supporting Bill 2 at third reading. It's not that there are not some slight improvements. It is because the actual violations of ethics that have taken place on the part of this government in the past several years are mysteriously missing from Bill 2. In other words, Bill 2 would have done nothing to change the bad behaviour of this government in many, many respects, and they have left those things out. They haven't written them into the act. They're trying to pretend that they're going to fix the PC Party. They're going to try and pretend that they fixed this Progressive Conservative government and all of the bad things that happened under she who must not be named, or before her, and that they will never happen again because they have made sure that it can't happen again.

Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. In actual fact, almost every egregious example of ethical violations conducted by members of this government in the past few years are excluded from this legislation, and that's why we're not voting for it. That's why we don't buy it when the minister stands up and says: "Well, you know what? We promise that we're going to fix things. We're going to make sure that the ethical standards are of the highest nature, and all this bad stuff that we really want you to forget about will never happen again."

Well, Mr. Speaker, there's no guarantee that it will never happen again because the legislation doesn't make it an offence. The legislation doesn't fix the problem. The government is misleading the people of Alberta when it's claiming that their legislation will clean up their own act. You can't count on this government to fix the problems of this government. Only the voters can do that, and I hope that they will. Once they realize that this piece of legislation is, in fact, not what the government promised, I think the voters will have something to say about this government's ethical standards. They have not fixed the problems that they themselves have created, and I don't think that's any surprise to any of us, Mr. Speaker. I don't think that any of us that have been around for more than a day or two really expected this government to actually legally prohibit the kind of behaviour that they've exhibited over the last five years, and certainly they have not.

Mr. Speaker, with that, I just want to indicate once more that we are not going to support Bill 2. We really have a set of proposals, I think, that would have made for some really strong and effective ethics legislation not based on a wish list as we're sitting around the caucus table or at an NDP convention but actually drawn from legislation that exists in other provinces that have dealt with some of these things that this government consistently refuses to do. I think that's really unfortunate. We could have really done some good work here together if the government had been serious about ending entitlement and ending the culture of corruption that has enveloped it in the last number of years, but unfortunately I have to say that they have not done so. They don't seem to have a desire to do so, and I leave it to the people of Alberta to draw the appropriate conclusion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we proceed, could I have unanimous consent from you to revert to the Introduction of Guests briefly?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: We have three quick introductions, one by the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General, followed by the Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations, followed by the Minister of Seniors.

Please proceed.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for your indulgence and to every member here. I just wanted to introduce to you and through you a long-time friend of mine with a great sense of humour. Lesley Kasper has joined us this evening. Please stand and be recognized.

The Speaker: The hon. associate minister.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's not often that we get visitors in the evening, and it's not often that we get visitors to stay more than about 30 seconds. So we thank all the visitors for coming tonight.

I had 14 years of basketball coaching, and in amongst all the youth and children that I coached were included Cameron and Lauren, the kids of Cindy and Rob Green, and they're here tonight. Cindy and Rob, could you stand up and say hello to the group, please?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege to introduce a very special individual, whom we lured out of retirement to be the president of Athabasca University, and we've managed to convince him to stick around for another year or so to help with that university. He's got quite a resumé, including being the president of the University of Saskatchewan for 13 years, I believe, and the dean of law there for a decade. He's a former chair of the Association of Universities and Colleges in Canada. He's a former chair of the Canadian Association of Law Teachers. In 2006 he was one of three people shortlisted for the Supreme Court of Canada vacancy at the time. He's on the Prime Minister's Advisory Committee on the Public Service. He has the Order of Canada. The original building at the University of Saskatchewan, a national historical site, is named the Peter MacKinnon Building, and he holds honorary degrees from five universities. So, Peter, please rise and be recognized.

The Speaker: Thank you, and welcome, all.

Are there any others?

If not, let us go back to third reading of Bill 2.

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 2

Alberta Accountability Act

The Speaker: We're looking for the third speaker, after which 29(2)(a) will be available. Are there any other speakers at third reading on Bill 2? I see one. That would be the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't tend to go long, but we'll look at the Accountability Act. I think it did go some small way to making things somewhat better here in Alberta. You can look at some of those things that on the face of it sound reasonable, and they have been put forward in this bill: extending the cooling-off period to a full year for elected officials and political staff and senior civil servants who leave government, and some other things like that. Then we go on, looking at gifts and when they're going to be allowed to happen and when they're not and the like in that matter.

But to be clear, there was so much more that this act could have done. We could have actually done a wholesale look at some of the things that have been happening in this province and made this accountability legislation the strongest in the country, which at this time it is clearly not. Look at some of the things that were promised to be brought in: amendments to the Fiscal Management Act that would require budgeting to be presented in a clear and consolidated format; producing a biannual report card on savings; and merit-based appointments for agencies, boards, and commissions. Some of these things were left off the radar, so to speak, and were not included in this bill.

I listened with great interest to the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, and I, too, believe that we could have used this opportunity to look at our Election Act and how we could have done better primarily around financing elections in this province. Everyone knows Alberta has the loosest arrangements when it comes to allowing donations. Extreme limits are present for corporations and unions and, in fact, individuals to give to what can only be called obscene limits when you compare them to other provinces and how they have moved in the direction of allowing only individuals to contribute, like our federal financing laws that say that only individuals can make up to $1,200 a year in contributions. I think that would go a long way, if we'd gone in that direction, to limit those rules on financing.

We also looked at ways where we could have empowered the office of the Ethics Commissioner to be more judicious and to have more freedom to investigate on his own and use the reasonable man test to ascertain whether, in fact, things are as they are and whether they could have been done differently. I think we lost an opportunity to do some of those things.

I think it was brought clear that this act has been brought forward to try and restore public trust. You know, it's great to put out a press release saying that we're actually going to change things and actually be different, but it takes more than that. I think this act fails to do that in that it would not have stopped many of the flagrant abuses and violations that we've seen of the public trust and, in fact, with the public purse over the course of the last number of years. That is disappointing.

Many good amendments were brought forward by all parties in the opposition, that I believe could have strengthened this Accountability Act. I think the government knew full well that when it brought in this legislation, it was merely scratching the surface of where it could and should have gone, and I think we need to do better. I think we have to look to other provinces that have moved ahead.

I thought one thing that we should be doing – and it's become patently clear over the course of the last little while – is that we should be bringing in election laws that limit what, in fact, the government can do during elections and by-elections. It is abundantly clear that this time period should not be used to make government announcements that are clearly trying to buy votes. We see other jurisdictions – Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and others – that have moved in that direction, that have actually said: look here; elections are no time period for us to make government announcements that are clearly derived for winning that election. Look, there's the business of the government to do, and then there's politicking. We should try to separate the two roles and responsibilities, and that has not been done in this act.

My hope is that the government will follow the lead of these other jurisdictions that have brought in comprehensive electoral reform. That, sadly, has been lacking here over the course of my time in this Legislature. It tends to suit the government of the day's purpose to allow election financing laws and other loose laws like this to exist. You know, really, I think it's time; we could have done better. We didn't do that, and I think the public record will show that.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, those are my final comments. I, too, will be voting against this bill for those and many other reasons.

8:10

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. Does anyone wish to participate?

If not, do we have any other speakers who wish to speak at third reading? I see none.

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that motion for third reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division.]

The Speaker: Just to be clear, I am aware of a previous motion that the time between bells would be limited to one minute. Is that still the agreement of the House? Is anyone opposed to that? I hear no opposition, so the distance between the two bells will be limited to one minute.

[The division bell was rung at 8:11 p.m.]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's been a pleasure working with you this session, my first session as Government House Leader. I want to thank the deputy House leaders and also the opposition House leaders for working with us this session.

Without further ado, it is my privilege to advise the House that the government business for the fall sitting has now been completed. Therefore, pursuant to Government Motion 5 the Assembly stands adjourned.

Statement by the Speaker

Decorum

The Speaker: Hon. members, I will adjourn the House in a moment. However, I want to make a couple of points known to all. I've had the privilege of being in this Assembly for over 20 years, and I have never seen the level of decorum that you offered, particularly during question period, in all 20 of my years. I don't know if you are fully aware of the gravity of what I'm alluding to, so let me put it to you in different terms. You have gone for four weeks without even a single point of order being raised during Oral Question Period. I emphasize during Oral Question Period, and the reason this is significant is because you may well have set not only a record in that respect for this Alberta Legislative Assembly, but you may well have set a record for all Legislatures in Canada, perhaps throughout the entire Commonwealth. We will research that and let you know. Over 700 minutes of questions, responses, replies, and answers were offered, which equates to over 10 hours of serious accountability during question period, and that totalled well over 1,300 questions, answers, responses, replies, what have you. I want to sincerely thank and congratulate you. You did well. Thank you.

With that, I also want to say thank you to our table officers and to others participating.

Therefore, pursuant to Government Motion 5, agreed to on November 18, 2014, the Assembly will stand adjourned until 2015 at a date to be identified in the sessional calendar, that will be published sometime during January 2015.

We stand adjourned.

[The Assembly adjourned at 8:19 p.m. pursuant to Government Motion 5]

Bill Status Report for the 28th Legislature - 3rd Session (2014)

Activity to December 10, 2014

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 1 to 199 are Government Bills. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills numbered with a "Pr" prefix are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If a Bill comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel, Alberta Justice, for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned chapter numbers until the conclusion of the Fall Sitings.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, March 10, 2015

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, everyone, and welcome back to the Assembly.

Let us pray. O gracious God and Great Creator, we pray for the future of this great province and for its great inhabitants, whom we are honoured to serve through our roles in this Assembly. May truth and wisdom, care and compassion guide us in our duties and deliberations. Amen.

Hon. members, please remain standing, if you would, for the singing of our national anthem, as led by Mr. Robert Clark.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Hon. members, may I ask you to remain standing.

As is our custom on our first day back, we pay tribute to members and former members of this Assembly who have passed away since we last met.

Mr. James E. "Bud" Miller March 31, 1923, to January 23, 2015

The Speaker: Today we pay tribute to Mr. James Edgar "Bud" Miller, who was born on March 31, 1923, and passed away on January 23, 2015. Mr. Miller served the Legislative Assembly of Alberta as the Member for Lloydminster for four consecutive terms from 1971 through 1986. He was born and raised in Kitscoty, Alberta. In addition to being a farmer and rancher, Mr. Miller also served as a sergeant in the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second World War.

He was first elected to our Legislative Assembly in 1971, and from 1979 until 1982 Mr. Miller served as the associate minister of public lands and wildlife. During his 15 years of service he also served on 10 select standing committees and was deputy chair of three search committees. Shortly after his retirement the Bud Miller all seasons park in Lloydminster was named in his honour in June 1986. His ongoing involvement in the development of our province continued long after his tenure as an MLA and included his participation in major initiatives such as being the chair of the biprovincial upgrader from 1988 to 1995.

In a moment of silent prayer I would ask you to remember Mr. Bud Miller as you may have known him, and I would ask that you add to your prayers Mrs. Margaret Miller, Bud's beloved wife, who passed away just four weeks after Bud, on February 19. O Lord, grant unto him eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon him. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: Hon. members, following up on our prayer, it is with great admiration and respect that we pay gratitude to members of the families who shared the burden of public office and of public service. Today I would like to welcome some special family members of the Miller clan who are present in the Speaker's gallery. Please allow me to introduce all of them. I would ask that they rise as I call their names, and then we can applaud them with our thanks and gratitude after they have all been introduced: Sandra Erickson, daughter of Bud Miller; Jody Erickson, granddaughter of Bud Miller; Joe Miller, son of Bud Miller; Elizabeth Miller, daughter-in-law of Bud Miller; Ian Miller, grandson of Bud Miller; Dan Miller, son of Bud Miller; Kathy Miller, daughter-in-law of Bud Miller. Honourable family members, please know that our thoughts and prayers are with you at this very difficult time. Thank you so much. [applause]

The hon. Minister of Energy, followed by the Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Mr. Joe Pastion, who is the chief of the Dene Tha' First Nation in the Peace River constituency in northern Alberta. I'm very, very pleased to have the chief here. I've had a chance to meet with him and discuss a couple of issues of common mutual interest. He's here with other Treaty 8 representatives to further the interests of Treaty 8 and their own individual communities. He's seated in your gallery, in the Speaker's gallery. He's risen. I'd ask that we all give him the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure and honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly two special visitors who are former MLAs and belong to the Alberta Association of Former MLAs, also known as the AAFMLA. They are Karen Leibovici, the president of the AAFMLA – Karen was the MLA for Edmonton-Meadowlark from 1993 to 2001 – and Mr. Julius Yankowsky, secretary of the AAFMLA. Julius was the MLA for Edmonton-Beverly-Belmont from 1993 to '97 and MLA for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview from 1997 to 2004. They are seated in your gallery, and I would ask that they rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're going to begin with school groups. Could I ask you to please keep your introductions as brief as possible because we have so many introductions to do today and so much business to carry on with.

Let us begin with the Minister of Seniors, followed by Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly a group of young students from H.A. Kostash school in Smoky Lake. Of course, Smoky Lake, in my constituency, is the pumpkin capital of Alberta and one of my favourite spots in the constituency. These students – I think there are 29 visitors – are joined by their teacher, Tara Harris, and parent helpers Shylha Brodyk, Mrs. Deloyce Kusick, and Mr. Billy McMullen. If I could ask them to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Young: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is truly my honour to stand and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 37 students from the Malmo elementary school. They are escorted today by their teacher, Mrs. Theresa Bonar, and parent helpers Brandon Bosma and Howaida Hassan. I ask that they all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by Drumheller-Stettler.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you 30 students from York elementary school, located in my constituency of Edmonton-Manning. They are accompanied by their teacher, Ms Dora Strasdin, and two parent helpers, Mrs. Lemmon and Mrs. Fenniak. These bright students are the future leaders of our province and country. They are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask my guests to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure today to rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 26 of the brightest young people from my diverse constituency of Drumheller-Stettler. One of the best parts of this job is to meet and greet the future of Alberta, and the future is bright, sir, with these students from Mother Teresa Halkirk Catholic school. They are accompanied today by Alyn, Michael, and Crystal. Please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you 20 visitors from McArthur elementary school along with their teacher and a chaperone, Ms Ginette Larocque and Ms Patsy Best. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of everyone here at the Legislature.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there other school groups?

If not, we'll move on to other important guests. Please remember that I will give you a signal if I see that you're going on a little too long with the introductions.

Let's start with the Associate Minister of Asia Pacific Relations.

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. For my first introduction it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the House some individuals who have contributed much to building vibrant and inclusive communities in our province. I have Mr. Allan Kwan, a former GOA executive and now an active volunteer with ASSIST Community Services Centre, providing services to newcomers, and a member of seniors and long-term facilities; Ms Sandy Pon, a successful realtor, business owner, and now very involved with the United Way and the Edmonton Realtors' Charitable Foundation. Also with us today is Ms Mary Fung, a former teacher who now volunteers with many organizations, including the Edmonton Seniors Coordinating Council and Age Friendly Edmonton for Edmonton's Chinatown. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I ask that they please rise and receive the very warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Thank you. Hon. associate minister, you have a second introduction?

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. For my second introduction I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you again three individuals who not only embody Alberta's international spirit but through their activities and actions have helped strengthen our international relations in Asia, an important region for the future of this province: Mr. Larry Lang has as a former director for economic development and tourism worked to enhance our trade ties in Asia and helped negotiate the establishment of the China-Alberta petroleum training centre in Beijing in 1985. It's been 30 years since Mr. Lang sat in this gallery. Next is Ms Eloisa Lau, who's been incredibly active in the Filipino community, has organized events and fundraisers when tragic disasters hit the Philippines. She has worked with the temporary foreign workers in our province and helped to solve many of their problems. Also joining us today is Mr. Gongjie Ma, an international student who graduated from Zhejiang University, a very important partner to the U of A. He also obtained his MBA from the U of A this last summer. Gongjie has been very active also with the Chinese international student community. They are now seated in the members' gallery. I ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Minister of Human Services, followed by Livingstone-Macleod.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly representatives from the Alberta College of Social Workers, a number of whom work with the government of Alberta. Last week was Alberta Social Work Week. Alberta has over 7,000 registered social workers, and I'm proud to share that over 3,000 are employed by the government of Alberta. Every day thousands of Albertans benefit from their support. They demonstrate dedication and professionalism as they work to improve the health and well-being of all Albertans. I would ask the following individuals to rise and accept the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly. First of all, Vince Pasqua and Colleen Geake are representing Human Services staff today. They are joined by Lori Sigurdson and Lynn King, representatives of the Alberta College of Social Workers, plus two social work students, Beverley King and David Von Haller. Please join me in welcoming these guests.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some very important team members. Nathan Steinke and Maureen Gough have recently joined team Wildrose and have been working hard to help prepare us for session. They are in the gallery here today. I know all members appreciate having great staff, so I'd invite them to stand and invite all members to welcome Maureen and Nathan with the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two hard-working Albertans who work to support communities all across the province through their positions with the Alberta Association of Agricultural Societies. Ag societies are present in many, many communities across the province and provide great services and facilities. With us today are Doug Kryzanowski, who is the president, and the chief executive officer, Tim Carson. They are in the members' gallery, and I would ask that they stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition, followed by Lethbridge-West.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I have the pleasure of introducing to you and through you to this Assembly my guests, Guy Smith and Tyler Bedford, both representing the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. AUPE represents 80,000 working Albertans who are an essential part of this economy. Tyler has worked in communications with AUPE for almost five years and is a former staffer at the Legislature, and Guy has worked for AUPE for over 25 years and is the current president. He spent decades fighting against government cutbacks to protect quality of care for all Albertans. His exemplary service to this province stands as a shining example of what can be achieved through political participation. I want to recognize these fine individuals for their hard work in this time of uncertainty, so in recognition of this I would ask Guy and Tyler to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West, followed by the Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Mr. Gord Tait. Mr. Tait is a long-time member of Lethbridge, he's a chartered accountant, and he's one of the founding partners with Meyers Norris Penny, which was a small local firm that is now one of the fastest growing firms in Canada. I would ask Gord to please rise and receive the warm greeting of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we won't be able to start question period right now, but I would beg your indulgence to let us carry on and complete the introductions and then move on to Ministerial Statements with responses and then go to OQP. I'm assuming that will be okay with everyone. Yes? Thank you so much.

Let us move on, then, to the hon. Minister of Infrastructure, followed by Sherwood Park.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you three individuals: Mr. Mike Brar, Kuldip Gil, and Kuldeep Sidhu. Mr. Brar is no stranger to this House, having previously worked for and closely advising then Premier Don Getty as a special adviser. Up till today he continues to be a tireless advocate for the community. He works very closely with many community organizations, and individuals like yourself and the hon. Premier would count Mr. Brar as a close friend. I'd ask all three to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

1:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly two visitors from my constituency of Sherwood Park. Dr. Herb Belcourt is a Métis, aboriginal, and First Nation champion, author, member of the Order of Canada, recipient of the Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee medal, and a long-time Progressive Conservative supporter, dating back to the '70s.

I also have with us Mr. Joe Lipka, a dedicated director of the Sherwood Park Progressive Conservative Association and a renowned champion old-time fiddle player. Most of all, he served our community and our country as an RCMP officer for many years.

These esteemed gentlemen are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask that they please rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Ms Cusanelli: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to introduce a good friend of mine and a guest who is no stranger to this House as well. Mr. Tom Olsen is here today. Through you and to the rest of the members of the House I would like him to rise and receive the honourable welcome.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

Are there any others? One from the Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce Jerry Aulenbach, a good friend of mine and a constituent and also on the Twitter feed ZoomJer. If Mr. Aulenbach could please stand up and give the Assembly a wave.

Thank you.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Gay-straight Alliances in Schools

Mr. Dirks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed my honour on this first day of the spring session to speak to the Assembly on a topic of profound importance for Alberta students and many others across our province. I am referring to Bill 10 and the matter of legislation regarding student gay-straight alliances in Alberta schools. This matter was first brought before us by the Member for Edmonton-Centre through her private member's bill early in the fall, and I want to acknowledge her efforts this afternoon. Your efforts have not gone in vain.

Late last year the Premier wisely put the government's Bill 10 on pause in order to permit a time of extended conversation with Albertans on this important matter. As Minister of Education I have felt a particular obligation to hear from as many Albertans as I could about this issue and have therefore spent much of the last three months speaking with a wide variety of teachers, parents, members of the LGBTQ community, religious leaders, trustees, principals, counsellors, legal experts, and a broad assortment of community leaders.

Most importantly, in my travels around the province I talked with numerous students who are directly affected by gay-straight alliances. If you could have joined me in these conversations, Mr. Speaker, you would have heard students talking about the taunting, mocking, and bullying they have suffered because of their sexual orientation. You would hear them speak of parents who don't understand them, of online bullying, and of suicidal thoughts. They told me, sometimes in tears, how alone and helpless they have felt when caring friends and sympathetic teachers are not around them. But when I asked them, "Tell me about your GSAs," their faces brightened, and with animated voices they would tell me about their GSA, how it helped them feel safe at school and how they now felt valued, respected, and welcomed.

Mr. Speaker, even if you talked to no one else on this matter except students, you would quickly come to the conclusion that GSAs are all about providing groups of gay and straight students with safe, caring, respectful, welcoming, and inclusive spaces at our schools. But, as I mentioned earlier, I also spoke to a broad spectrum of adults – teachers, parents, religious leaders, community leaders, trustees, principals, and others – who wanted to talk about the bill and tell us what they thought we as a government should do about GSAs. Not surprisingly, I received a wide range of opinions, but there is no question that the vast majority of Albertans with whom I interacted spoke in favour of ensuring that kids who want to form a GSA club in their school should be able to do so.

It was my privilege along with other members of this Assembly to attend at a public forum sponsored by the Rocky Mountain Civil Liberties Association, where I heard compelling presentations by mothers of gay students, professors, straight students supporting their LGBTQ friends, postsecondary students, and experts in civil rights. Their messages were clear. Schools should allow GSAs on school property, just like every other kind of voluntary student friendship club at school is permitted to operate.

Mr. Speaker, GSAs in schools do not segregate students. They are voluntary, open, and inclusive of anyone who wants to join, and they are not designed to be exclusive to LGBTQ students. As well, it should be noted that the freedom for religious, faith-based schools to engage in religious instruction is in no way limited by and does not conflict with the existence of a GSA at a school.

The conversation on Bill 10 and GSAs with Albertans these past three months has been of vital importance, and I am thankful to every Albertan who took the time to express their perspective to their Member of this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I am convinced that there is only one way forward. I am pleased therefore to table today a draft amendment to Bill 10 that stresses the importance of ensuring that every student in Alberta that feels the need for a GSA can have one. This draft amendment calls for students to be able to establish gay-straight alliances in any Alberta school, for these GSAs to be allowed to meet on school property, and for students to be able to call their club a GSA, a QSA, or any other name of their choosing.

Mr. Speaker, the draft language reads that if one or more students attending a school operated by a board request a staff member employed by the board for support to establish a voluntary student organization, or to lead an activity intended to promote a welcoming, caring, respectful and safe learning environment that respects diversity and fosters a sense of belonging, the principal of the school shall . . . permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity at the school.

For the purposes of the draft amendment an organization or activity includes an organization or activity that promotes equality and non-discrimination with respect to, without limitation, race, religious belief, colour, gender, gender identity, gender expression, physical disability, mental disability, family status or sexual orientation, including but not limited to organizations such as gay-straight alliances, diversity clubs, anti-racism clubs and anti-bullying clubs.

The amendment also clearly states that the principal of the school shall designate a staff member to serve as the staff liaison to facilitate the establishment, and the ongoing operation . . . or to assist in organizing the activity.

If no staff member is available to serve as the staff liaison, the principal shall immediately inform the board and the minister, and if so informed the Minister shall appoint a responsible adult to work with the requesting students in organizing the activity or to facilitate the establishment, and the ongoing operation, of the student organization at the school.

The draft amendment also states that the students may select a respectful and inclusive name for the organization, including the name “gay-straight alliance” or “queer-straight alliance”, after consulting with the principal.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, ensuring our children, who are the future of this province, have a safe, caring, respectful, inclusive school environment free from bullying is of paramount importance. Because this is such an important matter, it is my hope that all members of the Assembly will support Bill 10 moving back to Committee of the Whole so that this important draft amendment, that ensures every Alberta student who wants a GSA will be able to have one, can be dealt with in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Speaker, I have copies of these draft amendments to be passed out to each member. I thank you for the opportunity to bring this matter to members and urge them to take this matter up forthwith.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to get up and respond to the minister's statement. Let me start off by saying that I think credit has to go where credit is due, and that credit doesn't go to the government, but it goes to the Member for Edmonton-Centre, quite frankly, because she's the one that brought the legislation forward under Bill 202, which actually got this conversation started.

I want to start by saying that in 22 years in the Legislature I have never encountered a situation like we're seeing today. The tradition in this Legislature, as far as I can find – and we've checked – is that if a minister is making a ministerial statement, they share the ministerial statement with the opposition so that we have time to respond. That hasn't happened today.

What I find extraordinary is that I had a call from two of the ministers at about 11:30 this morning and asked with 10 minutes' notice to meet with them to tell me what they were doing. At that particular time I said, “Can we see a copy of the ministerial statement that the minister is preparing?” “Nope. Can't do that.” Not only do we see a statement, but we've also seen amendments tabled in the Legislature without giving us proper time to respond.

I want to say, though – and there's no question – that I'm on the record that I support GSAs, and I did when I spoke on Bill 10 about how I feel about GSAs in schools. I explained to people in the Legislature, when we were debating Bill 10, that I have a gay family member and am very proud of that and have been around gay, straight people for as long as I can remember. I think that where we're going on this is the right thing to do. If a gay student wants to start a club in a school, it's a club, and they should be allowed to do it.

So we are looking forward to seeing the amendments that the minister is going to propose. I don't think we should be playing politics when we're talking about children, quite frankly. To me, it's about providing a safe environment for our children, and it's apparent to me that the government is trying to get its act together, if I can say that. We will be speaking when we deal with the amendments on Bill 10.

Again, I truly want to thank the Member for Edmonton-Centre for all the work that she's done. I think it's something that she will be able to go down in history as saying she brought to this province, and I think it should be a very proud moment in her life.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask unanimous consent of the Assembly to allow myself and the leader of the New Democrat Party to respond to the ministerial statement.

The Speaker: Thank you.

You've heard the request for unanimous consent, and I'm going to add to that a request from the independent Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre to also add some brief comments. If anyone is opposed to giving unanimous consent to any of these three members who wish to speak, please say so now.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker, it's hard to contain my joy, but always being a stickler for process, I will just ever so gently chastise the minister for being unable to provide the ministerial statement in advance as is the customary courtesy. I understand why it didn't happen. Nonetheless, I'll just give a little gentle reminder there.

Today's announcement is a victory for safety and inclusivity and proof of the value of an effective opposition, an effective Liberal opposition. Last April with Motion 503 Alberta Liberals began the fight for gay-straight alliances in any school where they are needed, and that was brought forward by my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo. When that motion was voted down, it prompted a backlash that I don't think anyone expected. They underestimated the progressiveness and inclusive values that Martha's and Henry's children hold dear.

We understand these values because they are our values, progressive values, so we brought forward Bill 202, the most comprehensive bill to protect the LGBTTTQ community that this province has ever seen. While cynical political tactics were used to kill Bill 202 before it could ever be debated, we again saw an inspiring backlash at the alternative Bill 10. Together this inclusive, progressive generation of Albertans, Martha's and Henry's kids, has ensured that schools provide safe spaces for vulnerable children in this province.

Thank you to every Albertan that refused to tolerate discrimination in this province. Your voice mattered.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. leader of Her Majesty's fourth party.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do plan to acknowledge my colleague from Edmonton-Centre, but let me just say that making me get up to speak right after she gets teary is not fair.

Anyway, you know, all students can now claim their right to start a GSA, and they can now start the work of building inclusive schools in communities across this province. Gender identity and gender expression will be added to the Bill of Rights, and the offensive section, 11.1, in our human rights code is being removed.

All of this is a long-overdue step in the right direction, Mr. Speaker, but it's important to understand that it didn't come without a fight. In 1998 the Supreme Court of Canada told all provinces that protection from discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation had to be included in all human rights codes, but for over a decade this PC government and only this PC government in this province dragged its feet, refusing to fix our code. Even when they did, they gave with one hand and took away with another.

In 2009 I fought passionately against the decision to amend our human rights code so that teachers could be disciplined for talking about issues of equality and sexual orientation. Then last spring the issue of gay-straight alliances made its way into this Legislature, and the vast majority of government members twice voted down proposals that would have ensured that the best tools for protecting kids from bullying were a matter of right. Then even last fall our caucus proposed to include gender identity in Alberta's Bill of Rights, and it, too, was rejected. But – there is a but; don't worry – two and half months later it appears that we may be on the verge of fixing the unfortunate historical record of this government. Most importantly, we will provide real and meaningful support to members of the LGBTQ community in their schools and in their families, and that is the greatest outcome of the work that we will do on this bill.

I'd like to offer my thanks and congratulations to the many people who have been front and centre in these debates. I'd like to thank the Edmonton Youth Council, who successfully took a resolution to the Edmonton city council in support of GSAs. I'd like to note the Edmonton public school board and its former chair, Sarah Hoffman, who led the EPSB to developing the most inclusive and welcoming LGBTQ school policy in western Canada several years ago. I'd like to thank the many activists who never gave up pushing on this important issue over the last few months and over the last many years. I'd like to acknowledge my colleagues from Edmonton-Centre and from Calgary-Buffalo for using their rights as private members to set this debate in motion in this House.

The sad truth is that the PCs had to be dragged across the finish line on this one. That being said, they are here now, so I'd like to offer them our sincere welcome to this side of the line and congratulate you. This is a sound decision. It will help many Albertans, and it will represent a good step forward in the ongoing efforts to promote diversity and inclusion for all communities across our province.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills did state a point of order around 2 p.m., I believe. I did not hear it, but the clerks at the table did, so we'll recognize that in a moment.

My apologies to you, hon. member, for not having heard you.

Let's now hear, however, from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While there are a lot of accolades and thank yous and credit for what is happening here and certainly the Member for Edmonton-Centre deserves a tremendous amount of credit, as do other members in this House, I would also like to give credit to the Member for Calgary-North West for putting out a lot of advocacy on this very issue. I want to acknowledge the fact that the Premier did come around at some point, and now we have the changes that are coming forth to address this issue.

It's interesting to note that this is the 50th anniversary week of something called Bloody Sunday, which, as some of you people who are old enough might remember, was a huge civil rights moment. I liken the issue that we dealt with in Bill 10 and Bill 202 to a civil rights moment. I did that in debate, and I still believe that in my heart.

The idea of equal rights is always a battle against ignorance. The battle against ignorance is never-ending. This bill is a battle against ignorance. It does more than just provide equal rights. It does something that we need to take credit for; maybe we stumbled on the way to get credit for it. It actually reduces bullying, and it saves lives. The data is there to prove that it reduces teenage suicides. That is something that I am in favour of.

I want to thank the minister, and I want to thank the various members for standing up, for making this fight, and for getting the job done. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

The hon. member who is the Official Opposition House Leader wishes to raise a point of order.

Point of Order

Ministerial Statements

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be very brief. I just rise according to Standing Order 23(e), which states that a member can be called to order when he "anticipates, contrary to good parliamentary practice, any matter already on the Order Paper or on notice for consideration on that day." I would just make the observation, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Education minister reading an amendment before this House before it's been submitted into this Legislature is unheard of. I haven't heard that before. I think that clearly one can indicate the substance of such an amendment, but in terms of reading in the amendment verbatim before it's been properly submitted in this Legislature, it's contrary to good parliamentary procedure. It seems like a minor point, but there has been a steady deterioration in protocol here, so I would just ask that the Speaker consider that.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think that the point of order from the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills is more of a point of clarification. In his own submission he did not indicate any rule that was extensively broken. I don't believe there has been any rule broken by the Minister of Education or anybody else, and I would invite your comments.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Government House Leader is quite correct, and so, too, in part at least, is the hon. Opposition House Leader. No rule has in fact been broken. However, there is a spot in the agenda where tablings normally occur.

This was a very unique situation, too, however, because traditionally ministerial statements sort of run in that four- or five-minute range. Today it went, I think, a little bit over six, which is allowed because there's no rule about the length of ministerial statements either. There is a rule, so to speak, with regard to the length of time opposition members or independent members have to respond.

However, in this case I have sent a note already to the Minister of Education, so you might say that through words on paper we have chatted about what just occurred.

While I'm up, I might also just ask the members of Executive Council that any time you have a ministerial statement, it is the courtesy to usually provide a copy of that in advance to opposition members. In this instance my understanding is that the subject of the minister's statement was at least provided, so that was found to be helpful, but for whatever reasons in this case the entire speech was not. I'll leave that to House leaders and to individual ministers to determine how they wish to proceed in the future.

Therefore, there is no specific point of order because no particular rule has been broken; however, I believe the record will clarify what the intent should be going forward.

That being said, let us now move on to the next item of business, Madam Clerk.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Let us begin with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Fiscal Responsibility

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [some applause] Small but mighty.

Last week the Premier excused his government for the fiscal mess the province now sees itself in. When asked who is at fault, he told Albertans to look in the mirror. Now, if I were to hold up a mirror where I stand today, I'd see a principled opposition holding this government accountable for waste, entitlement, and bad management. If the Premier were to hold up a mirror right now, he'd see behind him the people directly responsible for the mess, his PC government. Will the Premier stand up, acknowledge what he sees in the mirror, and apologize to Albertans for blaming them for the mess his government created?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would similarly extend the courtesy of welcoming the Leader of the Opposition back to the Legislative Assembly for what, I think, has been a historic day in this Chamber.

Mr. Speaker, I take responsibility for what I say, whether it is in the media or whether it is in this Chamber. As the hon. member knows, as members of her party know, as former members of her party know, I have been the harshest critic of former governments, and that is, in fact, why I'm here in this position. I intend to continue to serve Albertans, and I intend to continue to take responsibility for what I say.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mrs. Forsyth: First the Premier blames Albertans for the provincial fiscal woes because it couldn't possibly be a series of bad decisions by a series of bad PC governments; now his ego won't allow him to apologize for insulting the very Albertans who pay for the most expensive Premier's office in the country, the most expensive MLAs in the country, and the most expensive government in the country. Mr. Premier, a little humility goes a long way. The former Premier had to learn that lesson the hard way. I'll ask you again. Will you apologize for the mess that you have incurred?

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, I take responsibility for what I have said. I will always take responsibility for what I have said. But the real issue is: what does the leader of the Wildrose Party have to say about the important issues that face Albertans today? What does she have to say about the fiscal issues that the government deals with on behalf of all Albertans? What indeed does she have to say in truth about the amendments to Bill 10 that have been put forward in this House today? It's about being accountable on the significant issues that we face as Albertans, and I look forward to hearing what the hon. member believes and is prepared to put forward.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, when Albertans hear about the sky palace, outrageous severances for health care executives, and sole-source contracts to friends of the PC government, they rightfully get upset. Albertans already contribute more tax per capita than anywhere else in the country. Now the Premier says that all of that waste is the fault of Albertans and that now Albertans are going to have to pay. Premier, Albertans don't deserve to be made the scapegoats for the failing of your government, whether it's the past or the present. Just how much are you going to make Albertans pay for the mistakes of your government?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. member that shortly after becoming the Premier of the province, together with the Minister of Finance we eliminated the possibility of sole-source contracts. It was one of the matters which I was a harsh critic of relative to the former government, which I spoke up about, and which I changed when I became the Premier. That's indicative of the sort of changes that we are making as a government.

We face challenging financial circumstances. Alberta is tough. It is resilient. We will get through this. We'll get through this together. But I look forward to hearing from the opposition the specific ideas that they have about how we can deal with maintaining core, quality front-line services and at the same time manage our fiscal situation responsibly.

The Speaker: Second main set of questions. The Official Opposition leader.

Mrs. Forsyth: Premier, that sole-source contracting that you're talking about: half of your front bench allowed them.

Government Policies

Mrs. Forsyth: In a radio interview the Premier said that he's fully committed to keeping every promise he made in the PC leadership race. In the summer he promised no tax increases. Since then he's talked about every kind of tax he can think of: a sugar tax, a higher gas tax, higher income tax, sales tax, health tax, more sin tax, and higher user fees for just about everything. It's hurting the economy, Premier, and it's the latest example of the Premier pinning the blame on Albertans. Premier, there's still a chance you can keep . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Premier to respond.

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've never at any time suggested that Albertans are responsible for a collapse in oil prices that has resulted in a $7 billion hole in the provincial government's revenue base. The real question is what to do about it. [interjection] If I might continue, the real question is what to do about it in a measured, balanced way. The Minister of Finance will be introducing to this Legislative Assembly a budget that is more than just a budget; it will be a fiscal plan for the next 10 years for how we will manage this circumstance. The real question for the opposition is: what do they intend to do about it? How do they intend to proceed? What do they have to say?

The Speaker: Thank you.

2:20

Mrs. Forsyth: Premier, you can't call an election on the price of oil and gas. Do you know how many elections you'll be in?

It's no wonder Albertans don't trust this government. It's obvious the Premier's tax talk is hurting economic investment. In October he said that it's time to wind down the government's $2 billion commitment to carbon capture, but two weeks ago he expanded the program to five years. We estimate that ending this type of corporate handouts will save over a billion dollars in the next year alone. Why is the Premier insisting on spending billions of dollars in corporate handouts while threatening job-killing tax hikes on Albertans?

Mr. Prentice: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance will put forward a very detailed, comprehensive fiscal plan for how, in a measured and balanced way, we will deal with the revenue shortfall that the government faces, how we will maintain quality services. Front-line services – health care, education, senior citizen care, and other front-line services – are extremely important to Albertans. How we maintain those services in the circumstances which we're in will require careful thought. It will require balance. I hope that the member opposite and her party have some concrete, specific ideas other than slashing and burning their way through the government.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Premier, I've already given you one idea. Stay tuned for the rest.

It's no secret Albertans are heading towards a very expensive, unnecessary, and, quite frankly, illegal election, and while the Premier had better be careful about what he wishes for, it's just another example of a broken promise he made to Albertans. The legislation is designed to be a contract between Albertans and the government. Premier, you are breaking this contract by threatening to call an election. Premier, are you going to honour that contract you have with Albertans? If not, will you tell Albertans today when you're going to call the election?

Mr. Prentice: Well, the hon. member knows full well that the legislation in question allows the Lieutenant Governor to call an election at another date, and, Mr. Speaker, in light of the financial circumstances that this province is in, circumstances that I think are without parallel, really in a generation, in terms of a precipitous collapse of our revenue by $7 billion, a $7 billion shortfall this year, $6 billion in the year after that, a structural deficit thereafter if we do nothing – these are significant circumstances – Albertans need to have their say. No decisions have been made relative to elections, but we will press on and table a fiscal plan in this Chamber.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The third and final set of questions. The Official Opposition leader.

School Construction

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, this PC government went around the province in 2012 promising 120 school projects to be built before the next election. Well, yesterday we find out that only one has been built. Construction has literally been slower than a snail's pace. The Premier seems intent on pinning the blame on Albertans who expect the kids aren't packed in the classrooms like sardines. So I'll ask the Premier: how do you think Albertans can expect these schools to be built on time with the dismal PC record of keeping promises?

Mr. Prentice: Mr. Speaker, there's been no more outspoken advocate about the need to catch up on our capital construction for schools than myself, and I stand by that. The schools in question – the hon. member should be frank with Albertans. It takes three and a half years to construct a school. That's a minimum in terms of the time that it takes. The schools that were committed to in 2011, some 35 schools, 30 of those schools are in fact completed. The schools that were announced in 2013, the 120 schools: 38 are under construction, 54 are in the design phase, and frankly another 26 are in the tender process. This is a process of a government building schools in a proper way, in a methodical way, in the best way possible, on time, and on budget.

Mrs. Forsyth: The Premier can try and run from his government's own record, but he can't hide. In October the Premier called the state of school construction the most expansive commitment we've ever seen in Alberta's history. But that was when the Premier was buying his Education minister a seat, and this is now. It's been six months since he announced 77 new schools, and – guess what? – not a single shovel is in the ground on any of these projects. It's this kind of electioneering and broken promises that Albertans are sick of. Premier, when are you going to look in the mirror, clean up the mess, and admit you won't keep your promises that you made to Albertans?

The Speaker: Thank you.

A point of order from the Government House Leader has been noted at 2:26.

The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As the Premier has indicated, of the phase 1 schools 30 are done. Two additional schools have students in the schools today. A further two are going to be ready in a very short period of time. Of the phase 2 schools 38 are in construction today, 54 are in design, 26 are in the tender process, and of the phase 3 schools that were announced last October, 12 of those schools have been expedited to have a target completion date of 2016.

Mrs. Forsyth: Now, Mr. Speaker, here is where the government aren't talking to each other. I'm going to try and put some facts out, Premier and Infrastructure minister. The Infrastructure minister says that it takes 12 to 18 months to build a new school. The Premier says three years. Wonder why people don't trust you? Six months since you promised 77 new schools, 60 of them are still in the planning phase. Zero are in construction. Excuse Albertans for their collective cynicism, but the stockpile of new school promises is beginning to rot. To the Premier: when are you going to stop announcing schools, reannouncing them, announcing them, and reannouncing them again?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, my comments have been very clear on this matter. To construct an elementary school, it takes between 12 to 16 or 18 months, and that is just the construction phase. That does not take into account the planning that happens with community groups, the design that has to take place on a specific site, testing the specific site conditions, and let's not forget our municipal partners that we have to get permitting from. That can take six months, eight months, 10 months, or even 12 months. The total process: about three to three and a half years.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's good to be back in the House. When the Premier looks in the mirror and sees a reflection of where the PC government has been over the last 25 years, he must see an awful sight indeed. The PCs have spent all the oil wealth in a generation. They're taking us into debt, unable to build schools our kids need or address poverty or provide good care to the sick and elderly. As a result of your negligent fiscal structure this generation will not have the same opportunities to be healthy or succeed as the previous. What is the Premier going to do to ensure that Martha's and Henry's kids are not left sweeping up broken dreams after the mirror shatters?

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I rise, I would just like to add my voice to congratulate and on behalf of the province and all Albertans thank the Member for Edmonton-Centre for her leadership on Bill 10 and Bill 202.

I would be more encouraged if the Member for Calgary-Mountain View would go back to gentle reminders, to use that phrase from the member. Nonetheless, Mr. Speaker, we are attentive to our children. We are attentive to future Albertan children, who will grow up to be the stewards of this province. We are intent that they do not inherit broken dreams but that they inherit a province that is fiscally sound, that has excellent front-line . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Swann: Forgive me, Mr. Speaker, for not being gentle when we're cutting 2,500 teachers from Alberta's schools. This is a failure to take care of our most cherished promise. Overcrowded classrooms, the lack of any commitment to full-day kindergarten: can you not see that Martha's and Henry's kids, our future, are not getting the education they deserve, and what are you going to do about it?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, I take great exception and umbrage to the assumptions of the member opposite. They are entirely inaccurate. We have no intention of cutting 2,500 teachers. That's an absurd thought. I'm here to advocate for education, not to cut 2,500 teachers, and the member opposite knows that. We're doing everything we can to ensure that we have a productive, progressive, healthy education system going forward, that will continue to provide the best in educational outcomes for our children.

Dr. Swann: Pray tell: how is $80 million cut out of Calgary going to increase the teacher-to-child ratio? That doesn't compute. To quote Michael Jackson, "I'm starting with the man in the mirror. I'm asking him to change his ways." We need revenue. Despite floating a series of trial balloons, the Premier has eliminated most of the ways to raise stable, predictable funding. To the Premier: if all Albertans are in this together and we should all be looking in the mirror, when are you going to ask the wealthy individuals in your collective and corporations to pay their share? Progressive tax.

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've been very clear in our discussions across the province that we're going to look after the low-income families. We're going to look after the most vulnerable. I'd ask the member just to stay tuned for the budget coming on March 26.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, when I look in the mirror, I don't see someone who doled out reckless tax cuts to Alberta's most wealthy while allowing schools to crumble and ER wait times to skyrocket. For months Albertans have been wondering how we got into this jam, and last week the Premier gave them an answer. He thinks that Albertans looking for who's to blame need to look in the mirror. To the Premier: will he finally apologize, not take responsibility but apologize, for last week's remarks and acknowledge that it is his party's failures that have left Alberta so financially vulnerable?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, at the risk of reiterating: I take responsibility for what I have said. I have always taken responsibility for my comments, whether they're in the media or in this Chamber or elsewhere. The hon. member knows that I have been amongst the harshest critics in terms of how the public finances of this province have been administered. That is why I ran for the leadership of my party, that is why I'm in this Chamber, and that is why I intend on doing the right thing by Albertans.

Ms Notley: Well, I guess that's a no.

Last week the Premier said, quote, we've had the best of everything in this province. But, Mr. Speaker, people in this province are crammed into crumbling hospitals. Students are paying more. Kids are busing hours a day to go to school in makeshift, overcrowded classrooms. To the Premier: if this is the state of our service after we've had the, quote, best of everything, why won't the Premier admit that the cuts he's threatening to front-line services will make things much worse, not better?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, to correct the leader of the fourth party, I have not suggested cuts to front-line services. I've been very clear. I've been very clear in this Chamber just this afternoon. This government intends on maintaining the quality of front-line services, health care, education, how we take care of our senior citizens, and so on. We do need a response from the government in terms of how we're going to manage through our finances facing a $7 billion shortfall in the coming year. The Minister of Finance is going to table a budget and a fiscal plan that addresses those circumstances. But I want to be clear. Front-line services and the quality of those services is critical to this government, and we stand by Albertans on that.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the Premier thinks that he can take 9 per cent out of the budget and not hurt front-line services, he's living in wonderland.

Now, schools, hospitals, and seniors' homes are so full that they're ready to burst, while people continue to line up outside. This, Mr. Speaker, is not the best of everything. The best of everything has been enjoyed by the Premier's boardroom buddies in corporate high-rises and by his very wealthy friends through massive tax breaks. So given the sacrifices that he's asking regular Albertans to make, why won't he stop protecting his friends and insiders and instead axe the flat tax and raise corporate taxes to bring fairness to this province?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the real issue in terms of taxes is what the NDP is advocating, what the leader of the NDP is suggesting. I would simply pose the question: is she advocating the AFL's so-called Better Way campaign to double personal taxes, to levy an $11.6 billion tax increase on Albertans? Is that what this party advocates?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. I will comment with regard to the new rotation for OQP later. We're trying to get as much in as we can by 3 o'clock, so let's curtail our preambles hereafter to supplementaries.

Let's start with Edmonton-Centre, followed by Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley.

Women's Economic Equality

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta women experience the largest income gap in Canada. The recent Parkland study indicates that the highest barriers to women's economic equality are part-time work, precarious work, and unpaid work. Alberta women put in a whole extra 35-hour workweek for domestic care, child care, and elder care. Martha's and Henry's daughters are doing worse, not better, under successive PC governments. To the Premier: why has this province allowed this inequality to continue, giving Alberta women 55 cents on the dollar compared to men?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, for that question today. I have to say that in Human Services we are very committed to diversity in our appointments and the questions about wage parity and all of the challenges that are out there for women that are working. One of the challenges for women who are working is adequate child care, and that's something that we have worked on very hard, with additional spaces for families who need them as well as making sure it's affordable, accessible, and it's quality for women who want to work.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. Back to that same speaker, thank you for recognizing that there is indeed a very close relationship between child care accessibility and cost and the availability of women for full-time employment in the workforce. However, I would ask the minister whether she recognizes how much the made-in-Alberta solution of this government toward child care has impaired Alberta women's ability to actually get good, quality, accessible child care.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, when we talk about women going into nontraditional occupations, which may demand child care 24 hours a day, most certainly we need to work in that area. We know that child care, if it just goes till 6 at night – many employees work past that. That's an important thing we need to work on. But it's really important to encourage women to go into nontraditional occupations. I look at Women Building Futures, the tremendous work that's going on there. We are moving in the right direction, and we need to encourage women to aspire to and reach for their dreams. [interjection]

Ms Blakeman: Scary thought.

To the Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour: why has this government steadfastly refused to implement equal pay for work of equal value in the public service in Alberta? That would certainly help close the wage gap.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, wage equity for women is part of Alberta's belief in fair and equal opportunity for all. In fact, the hon. member might like to know that in Alberta women make about $2 an hour more than the average across the rest of Canada, $25.38 an hour, and there's more work to do yet. In fact, in the report recently released, one of the points was that women don't have access to higher paying jobs, and that's why when my colleague mentioned programs that we have like Women Building Futures, we're actually allowing women to build those bridges and make those higher wages.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Dental Services in Northern Alberta

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The McLennan, High Level, and La Crête satellite dental clinics are still facing great uncertainty. Although promised funding until the end of July 2015, the employees of the clinic have been assigned their layoff notices, effective the end of March 2015. The clinics are important institutions in our constituencies, in my case serving over 5,000 patients. My question is to the Minister of Health. Will our constituents be facing a permanent closure of the satellite dental clinic?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, the clinic is not closing. This is simply an administrative issue. We are simply working to transfer responsibility from Alberta Health to Alberta Health Services. This means funding arrangements and changing, and the collective agreements in place for clinic employees outlines a process that needs to be followed under these circumstances. I understand that receiving layoff notices is frustrating and would be very concerning to all employees, but we will work that system out. This program will continue to provide affordable dental services to rural and remote area individuals.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. That's excellent news, but can you please confirm if funding is in place for the clinic past the July deadline?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I noted in my previous response, there are no plans to close the clinic, so the funding is in place. My ministry will be transferring funding to AHS for the continuation of the program. McLennan dental clinic is one of three satellite clinics operated by the University of Alberta dental outreach program, and the program reaches a high percentage of vulnerable Albertans and young patients. We intend to continue providing this very important service to Albertans.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

2:40

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: has there been any effort at all to communicate with the University of Alberta and the staff of the satellite dental clinics to ensure that they know their jobs will be secure after the proposed funding expires?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta Health has been working with Alberta Health Services and the University of Alberta School of Dentistry to continue to support this program. The University of Alberta has outlined all available options for clinical staff, and they have also made it clear that their goal is to maintain employment during this transformation. I want to ensure that affordable dental services, including preventative measures, will continue in Alberta's rural areas.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, I understand you are going next in place of Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, so please proceed.

School Construction (continued)

Mr. Bilous: Mr. Speaker, it looks like the PCs inflated their performance yesterday on the progress of new school construction. This morning we heard from the Red Deer school district that a school that the PCs said was starting construction next month has not even gone to tender. Families and communities should come first, not this government's self-interest. To the Infrastructure minister: how many other schools on this list has the government misled Albertans about?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, I'm not going to comment on the unparliamentary language, really, that this member here is implying. Regardless of the fact, this is the largest school build in Canadian history undertaken by a province, 230 projects under way – 230 projects – of which 30 schools are complete. Two schools have children occupying the schools, and a number of schools are under construction. If there is a specific question about a specific project, I'd be more than happy to provide the answers, as we always have, and make it very publicly available.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I think the admonishment has been given. I want to reiterate: let's watch our parliamentary language in the Chamber, please.

Your first supplemental.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If one new school is the largest in Alberta's history, that's pathetic.

Given that yesterday we got an update showing just how far behind the PCs are on school construction – again, 1 school out of 50 that were promised in 2012 – and given that those 50 new schools were election promises, can anyone in this government give Albertans any assurance that there is any reason to take them at their word?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, the fact remains that there are 30 schools today that are completed. There are an additional number of schools that have students actually occupying the schools. Students are in the schools. They're learning in the schools while minor work continues. In addition, 26 tenders are out there right now. The member is more than welcome to go and bid on them himself should he choose. There are 38 under construction right now, 54 in design. These are all publicly available on Alberta Purchasing Connection. I'd invite the member to take a look to see the progress that's . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.
Final supplemental.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to remind the member that those schools were promised four Premiers ago.

Given that leadership is about taking responsibility and given that no one in the government seems willing to take responsibility for manipulating schools for political purposes, to the Minister of Infrastructure: when will your government stop playing games with our public schools and provide real information that's based on reality, not political opportunism?

Mr. Bhullar: Mr. Speaker, I actually remember attending a school opening in the member's constituency. It was quite unfortunate that the member couldn't attend, but that was a school that was open in the member's constituency. We have attended school openings across this province. We are building schools. More schools are going to tender. More schools are getting their permitting in place. We've met with municipalities to say: how can we work together with our school boards to shorten the process? We're getting the job done.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, your point of order was noted at 2:43 p.m. Point of order at 2:43.

Let's move on to Strathmore-Brooks, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Bassano Health Centre

Mr. Hale: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my constituency of Strathmore-Brooks people are alarmed and concerned about what they have heard regarding the Bassano hospital. A recent report suggests that Bassano is in need of $1.2 million in repairs or upgrades, which many believe could lead to the potential closure of the hospital. To the Minister of Health: can you please clear the air on this issue and let my constituents know if the Bassano hospital is slated for closure?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to clear the air and say definitely that the Bassano hospital is not slated for closure. We know how important this facility is to the community, and we're committed to keeping it open. We recognize that the hospital has some maintenance issues. We're working with them to try to work through to get them repaired.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, given that I have delivered members' statements and asked questions on the Newell Foundation's proposal for a one-building, aging in community concept, a proposal which has been worked on for years and was presented to the Health minister of the time, can the minister let us know what the status of this business plan is?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, we appreciate the Newell Foundation's leadership in bringing this project forward, and we recognize the value of the aging in community model, which is really vital. A key step in approving any new health facility is the development of a business case, which outlines options and project costs. We're awaiting that, and when that comes in, we'll move forward as quick as possible.

Mr. Hale: Mr. Speaker, again to the same minister: given that we've been working on this project for years and that in order for the Bassano health centre to move ahead, AHS needs to sign an agreement, what is the status of that agreement, and when can we expect a signature?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first step before AHS can enter into any operational agreement is to have the business case complete. We're working with them, and we hope that this business case can be done as soon as possible, and then we'll sit down to work out an arrangement to move ahead with this very, very important project.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Sherwood Park.

Full-day Kindergarten

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much. In 2003 the Alberta Learning Commission recommended the government implement full-day kindergarten as such programs are essential to improve child development, especially kids at risk. A decade later the PCs promised to act on it, but Martha's and Henry's kids and their grandkids are still waiting. Now the even fewer remaining programs are in danger of being cancelled due to this Premier's 9 per cent across-the-board cuts. To the Minister of Education: why do you continue to stop Martha's and Henry's kids from getting the head start they need, especially kids most at risk?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, we know that when our children thrive, they are likely to become adults who are going to thrive. We continue to build a more integrated system of community supports for young children, with my colleague minister to the left, and families by exploring a range of programming and policy options. We are working to balance the needs and priorities of families, schools, and other stakeholders in the community, all while considering the new fiscal reality that we're now facing. School boards, of course, have the option as to whether to offer this kind of full-day programming. In many parts of Alberta they do.

Dr. Swann: They don't have the option, Mr. Minister. They don't have the money, and you know that.

The facts are clear. Full-day kindergarten improves social behaviour and child health, stimulates learning, reduces risk, and develops language and social skills. Why will you not support that as a priority?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, we provide millions of dollars every day to school boards across the province, and they set priorities based on their local needs and determinations as to what is going to be in the best interests of their children. There are full-day kindergarten programs in our province, there are half-time kindergarten programs in our province, and boards make those final determinations based on what they deem to be in the best interests of their students.

Dr. Swann: And how is a 9 per cent cut going to facilitate that, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, we have every intention of ensuring that we provide the funds that are necessary to protect our very important and crucial front-line education services. We want to ensure that every child has the kind of education that is going to help them become the adults that we all want them to be, thrive, develop to their full potential. That's exactly what we intend to do. Stay tuned for the budget.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by Livingstone-Macleod.

2:50

Seniors' Facility Safety Upgrades

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today the Minister of Seniors announced $80 million to make immediate upgrades to 105 government-owned and -supported seniors' facilities across Alberta. Actually, it was at the Hardisty care centre in the Edmonton-Gold Bar constituency. As MLA for Sherwood Park I was happy to share this good news with the Clover Bar Lodge in my constituency. Unfortunately, the management, while thankful for the funding, was somewhat disappointed. They feel the lodge requires replacement and that putting sprinklers into it would be a waste of money. My first question is to the hon. Minister of Seniors. What process did your ministry use to determine the safety upgrades?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. J. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to discuss the process. It is different than it's been in the past. In addition to the fire and safety initiatives, we are also selecting sites for the supportive living grants and the lodge renewal projects. In many cases in the past these would have been the same organizations bringing the proposals forward to us on these three initiatives: our housing management bodies, our municipalities, and our nonprofits. In the past they would have had to go to three different ministries, three different doors in government, even for the same project, but because this Premier put all the housing in one ministry, these groups have now one window in government to go to. It's allowed us to select projects faster and do more with the money we have. If you're looking for evidence that Alberta is under new management, this is it.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Seniors: will the Clover Bar Lodge ever be replaced?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, it's another good question from the member, who's a great advocate for her constituency and talks about her seniors' facilities there often. The lodge renewal program was announced by the Premier in the fall at the AAMD and C. There's $160 million over the next four years. We're in the process of selecting those sites. This site is certainly a candidate for that, and it will get fair consideration. But, moving forward, we do need to do a lot of work to renew some of our aging lodges and seniors' facilities.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given the fact that you'll eventually replace the Clover Bar Lodge, why are you wasting money installing fire and safety systems in facilities that could be bulldozed in just a couple of years?

Mr. J. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, we certainly don't view this as a waste of money. It may be less than ideal to put some money into some upgrades in some facilities that will be eventually replaced, but we can't compromise the safety of our parents and our grandparents. We can't replace all these facilities in one year, so while this project is a worthy project to be looking at for renewal and potential replacement, we're not going to wait. We're going to get to the fire and safety upgrades at all the facilities that need them, and we will also look at the renewal over time. It's not one, though, or the other; it's both of these things that need to happen.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, your point of order was noted at 2:52 during the first exchange of questions and answers between Sherwood Park and the Minister of Seniors.

Let us move on to Livingstone-Macleod, followed by Red Deer-North.

Municipal Sustainability Initiative Funding

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently the Minister of Municipal Affairs announced $400 million in increased grant monies for municipalities, but confusion has eclipsed this information and this announcement for our community leaders. To the minister: since this government hasn't even come close to meeting its $11.3 billion MSI funding promises from 2007, is this $400 million a new, ongoing commitment to our municipalities, or is it just another pre-election promise to mask this government's failed record and win votes?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for the question. The MSI commitment to our municipal partners is $11.3 billion, and we have made that commitment and will be keeping that commitment. MSI has provided over 6 billion, with a "b," dollars to date, has been able to access over 4,800 projects across the province for our municipalities. This is a program that is extremely important to municipalities, one that our municipal leaders support and one that we are long-term funding for them for municipal sustainability.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker, but I don't think we've got the answer to the question yet, Minister. Since this government has failed to meet its MSI funding commitment in any given year since '07 and considering that municipalities have consistently called for predictable, sustainable funding over the current complicated grant system instead, will you admit that this current boom-and-bust model doesn't serve our municipal partners well and that it's inadequate for maintaining infrastructure and hampers growth?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our government remains committed to investing in infrastructure that supports economic development and keeps Albertans working. That is why approximately $400 million is being provided from Budget 2014-15 to MSI, to ensure municipalities have the capacity to meet their existing infrastructure project commitments, to keep the economy strong, and to keep Albertans working.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's the same old types of answers and the same old platitudes.

Unlike this government, which could only manage to build one of the 50 schools it promised in 2012, Minister, our municipal officials are planning for the future and building critical infrastructure – or at least they're trying – but they need predictable funding to be successful. Does the minister expect municipalities to be satisfied with the odd injection of extra money rather than a predictable agreement that treats them with respect?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would say that $11.3 billion is significant funding, and it is predictable funding. Our municipal leaders very much support the MSI. I travelled across the province to talk to them prebudget. I talked to them, and the number one thing that they support that we do for municipalities is MSI. Quite frankly, last week we had our municipal leaders from AUMA, from AAMD and C, from Red Deer county and city, and they were quite grateful and thankful about the announcement. They support MSI funding.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by Drumheller-Stettler.

Eye Examinations for Children

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Children with undiagnosed visual impairments often have serious challenges learning to read, the foundation of all learning. These children usually suffer a loss of self-confidence, self-esteem, which further impairs their ability to learn, and in many cases they develop behaviour problems in school. To the Minister of Education: given that a comprehensive eye exam is one of the best ways to diagnose visual impairments and that the government covers the cost of comprehensive eye exams for children to the age of 18, how supportive are you of having every child receive a comprehensive eye exam before grade 1?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, kindergarten students may take part in the Eye See ... Eye Learn program, a childhood eye health and vision awareness program funded by Health. Education materials to support school staff in the identification of possible vision problems as well as information for parents about the importance of eye examinations are available through this program, and free eyeglasses are provided to children who require them.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, it's 1 minute to 3, so I'm going to recognize the Government House Leader since we have considerable business left in the Routine.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move that the House continue with the proceedings here past 3 p.m. notwithstanding rule 7(7).

The Speaker: The essence of your motion is to seek unanimous consent to waive Standing Order 7(7), which would allow us to go beyond 3 o'clock, complete question period and all the other matters in the Routine.

[Unanimous consent denied]

The Speaker: Unanimous consent has not been given, so that would end the Routine right at 3 o'clock.

You might squeeze in your last question. [interjections]

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that studies have shown that children . . .

The Speaker: Hon. members, Red Deer-North has the floor, and let's give it to her for the 30 seconds left.

The hon. member.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that studies have shown that children with undiagnosed visual impairments often require additional supports in the classroom and are unable to learn to their full potential, what is your ministry doing to ensure that all . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, but it is now 3 p.m. We do not have unanimous consent to proceed beyond and conclude the Routine, which includes question period. Apologies to those of you who are left waiting until tomorrow or another day.

With that, we shall move on to Orders of the Day.

My apologies. We have some points of order that must be heard, so we'll have to deviate and hear those now.

I have a point of order that was raised at 2:26 by the Government House Leader with respect to comments and questions coming from the Official Opposition, so would you please proceed with your citation.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Denis: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 23(h), (i), (j), and (l) as well as Beauchesne's 489. During her exchange the Leader of the Official Opposition had indicated the word "illegal," which is a prohibited term under Beauchesne's 489. I refer you to page 146. At the top thereof it indicates that there are two items that talk about "illegal" being a prohibited term.

3:00

Secondly, the member had also indicated in a question to the hon. Premier that – I don't have the exact transcript or the Blues, Mr. Speaker, but I believe it referred to buying a member a seat. I would submit to you respectfully that this is unparliamentary language, to assert that someone would buy someone a seat or offer or curry favour, and this clearly is offside of 23(h), (i), (j), and (l). All I would do is just to ask that the member please withdraw these comments and refrain from making them again.

The Speaker: Hon. Opposition House Leader, you would go first normally, but if you're ceding the floor to Edmonton-Centre, I'm prepared to recognize her. It's your wish to recognize her first?

Okay. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Thanks very much. If I just might disagree with the Government House Leader, I understand that in Beauchesne's 489 the word "illegal" does appear, but we need to be mindful that that particular section appears as a subsection under rules of debate, not question period, so it's not particularly applying there. If the Government House Leader had been trying to be more specific towards question period, I believe he would have been looking in the section that specifically referred to that, which is much more likely to be – yes, indeed – under the section that begins with 407, which is Oral Questions. Nothing in there talks about use or non-use of the word "illegal."

In addition, of course, we recognize in a number of places that words may be termed illegal at one point but at another point will not be. I would think that since the opposition leader was referencing a piece of legislation passed here that appeared not to be followed or would not be followed, the term was probably correct.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Opposition House Leader, briefly, please.

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to respond to the first point, about using the term "illegal." Of course, when you make a point of order, you have to do it immediately after the question is given. In the Official Opposition leader's question the term "illegal" was not used just right before the House leader introduced his point of order, so I would suggest that that would be out of order and there's clearly no point of order given that.

The second point. The House leader referred to the Premier buying the seat of the Education minister. I'm very glad that the House leader has brought this up because it allows us to elaborate a little bit more about what occurred during the election. In particular it allows us to talk about the Ethics Commissioner's ruling. I think that's relevant. It provides context to what the Official Opposition leader's comments were. It said:

However, having found that [the Education minister] did not violate the letter of the Act does not mean that his actions with respect to modular classrooms at William Reid School were appropriate.

This is the Ethics Commissioner.

If I had been asked advice on this matter during the campaign, I would have advised the Minister not to make decisions and act on specific issues in his constituency during the by-election. This issue was not one of general policy or ongoing work. . . . His actions, while not contrary to the Legislation, created an unfortunate perception. I would have advised him to leave this decision, if it were an emergency, to a substitute Minister or, otherwise, to deal with the problem after the election.

This is what the Ethics Commissioner concluded.

In this case the three approvals that were given during the election period and outside the normal approval process appear to have been done for purely political reasons.

What does she mean by purely political reasons? Obviously, if you read the whole judgment, it talks about the fact that when you spend money that helps a member's private interests in terms of getting elected – you know, it's open to debate. Was there causation? Did the abuse of taxpayer dollars as outlined in the Ethics Commissioner's ruling help the Education minister get elected during the by-election? It's probable.

With respect to the exact language, I mean, perhaps the Official Opposition leader could have said, you know, that the Premier spent a lot of taxpayer money in order to get the Education minister elected. If that would please the Government House Leader, I'm sure that we could accommodate that.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Hon. members, I think we're all seasoned enough to know that frequently comments get made in the House that sometimes are intended one way and are taken another. I don't have the benefit of the Blues on this occasion. I'm sorry. Normally I would have the Blues, and I'd be able to zip right into the exact verbiage that was used. But in this case I think it's more a matter of interpretation, so I'm not going to find that there is a point of order as such.

However, let us be careful when we're using charged language. At the same time let us be careful when we are referring to an act which clearly does allow for certain things to occur at certain times, and that would be the case with regard to any forthcoming talk of an election. I think you're all acquainted with it. So while the language was a bit charged, I don't find that there's a point of order, but I would ask you to please take greater care, all members, when you're speaking and when you're inferring or otherwise imputing any allegations.

Let us move on, then, to the second point of order, which was raised by the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, I think, during the time when the Minister of Infrastructure was speaking.

Please proceed with the second point of order.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise according to Standing Order 23(h),(i), and (j), and it was with respect to the minister's comment about the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview alleging that his language was unparliamentary language. I'd refer the Speaker to Beauchesne's paragraph 485, which says, "Unparliamentary words may be brought to the attention of the House either by the Speaker or by any Member." That's referring to that member putting forward a point of order.

Now, it's my understanding in this House that it's you that determines whether language is unparliamentary, not the government or the minister. If the minister felt that it was unparliamentary, clearly the Government House Leader could have risen on a point of order and had you make the ruling on it. Maybe the Government House Leader fell asleep at the wheel here. But his minister can't make that determination; it has to be you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, on a basic submission I would make the argument that alleging that language is unparliamentary is, in fact, unparliamentary, and I'd ask that you request that the minister retract that statement.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Anyone else wish to respond?

No. Again, hon. member, I regret not having the Blues, and I will look into that. I don't see immediately that there is a point of order, so I'm going to hold in abeyance my decision till I do see that because I don't have the Blues, unfortunately. It's a rare circumstance.

However, let's again be reminded about parliamentary language and unparliamentary language. It may be suitable in one instance. It might be the same word used again in a different instance, and a different finding could be had. The point is that it's not only the words that are used; it is also the tone, the temperance or lack thereof, the context within which they are used, and the general disposition and mood of the person offering the comments. That being said, a reminder: again, let's please be very, very careful during questions and during answers to not impugn these kinds of motives, if that in fact is the case, on others or onto certain circumstances.

Let us move on to the third point of order, that was raised at 2:52 p.m. by Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview during the exchange between Sherwood Park and the Minister of Seniors.

Please proceed.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll cite 23(h), (i), and (j). I just want to clarify for the record that the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood attended the opening of Cardinal Collins high school in the Clareview rec centre on my behalf as I was attending my own wedding. I want to assure the minister and the House that I take my duties and responsibilities very seriously in my constituency.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I'm sorry. I'm not sure what your point of order was or what citation you uttered. I was listening carefully, and I didn't hear one, so shall we just move on now that you've put your comments on record?

All right. Let us then move on. I believe that concludes that. However, I do have a couple of brief statements I need to read to you if you would allow me, please.

Statement by the Speaker

Commonwealth Day Message from the Queen House Leaders' Agreement

The Speaker: First of all, hon. members, as you will know, yesterday was Commonwealth Day, and throughout the world our Commonwealth nations are celebrating with a special message honouring a young Commonwealth given by Her Majesty the Queen. Please note that this message from Her Majesty has been placed on each of your desks for your review and for sharing with your constituents.

I also placed on your desks a copy of the new written agreement amongst all four House leaders. I will read it into the record tomorrow because we are short on time today, but you all have a copy of it on your desks. I'm obligated to read it into the record. I'll dispense with doing that and taking up those two minutes today.

We will move on.

3:10

Orders of the Day

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to first assure you that I'm not asleep.

Government MotionsEvening Sittings

16. Mr. Denis moved:
Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 4(1) the Assembly shall meet on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings for consideration of government business for the duration of the 2015 spring sitting unless on motion by the Government House Leader made before 6 p.m. which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned to the following sitting day.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Government House Leader has moved Government Motion 16. You've all heard it. This is not debatable.

[Government Motion 16 carried]

The Speaker: We'll move on to the hon. Government House Leader for the next motion.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Adjournment of Spring Session

17. Mr. Denis moved:
Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 3(9) the 2015 spring sitting of the Assembly shall stand adjourned upon the Government House Leader advising the Assembly that the business for the sitting is concluded.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the Government House Leader has moved motion 17. It, too, is not debatable.

[Government Motion 17 carried]

The Speaker: Let us move on.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Committee Membership Changes

18. Mr. Denis moved:
Be it resolved that the following changes to
- (a) the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund be approved: that Ms Smith be appointed to fill a vacancy;
 - (b) the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices be approved: that Dr. Brown replace Dr. Starke as deputy chair, that Mr. Saskiw replace Dr. Starke, that Mr. Strankman replace Mr. Bikman;
 - (c) the Standing Committee on Private Bills be approved: that Mr. Barnes replace Mr. Strankman;
 - (d) the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing be approved: that Mr. Stier replace Mr. Cao;
 - (e) the Standing Committee on Public Accounts be approved: that Mr. Saskiw replace Mr. Sandhu, that

- Mr. Saskiw replace Mr. Anderson as chair, that Mr. Anglin replace Mr. McAllister;
- (f) the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services be approved: that Mr. Strankman be appointed to fill a vacancy;
- (g) the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future be approved: that Mr. Stier be appointed as deputy chair, that Mr. Barnes replace Mr. Horne;
- (h) the Standing Committee on Families and Communities be approved: that Mr. Barnes replace Mrs. Jablonski, that Mr. Barnes be appointed as deputy chair, that Mr. Strankman replace Mr. McAllister;
- (i) the Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship be approved: that Mr. Strankman replace Mr. Anglin, that Mr. Strankman be appointed as deputy chair, that Mr. Stier replace Mr. Casey.

Mr. Denis: Going once, going twice. Mr. Speaker, I hope that's sold.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, this motion is debatable. However, if no one else wishes to speak, then let's go for the question.

Are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Government Motion 18 carried]

Transmittal of Estimates

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've received a certain message from His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, which I now transmit to you.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order!

The Speaker: Hon. members, I've received this message from His Honour via the Minister of Finance, and it reads: the Lieutenant Governor transmits supplementary supply estimates of certain sums required for the service of the province for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2015, and recommends the same to the Legislative Assembly.

Thank you, and please be seated.

The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When supplementary estimates are tabled, section 8.3 of the Fiscal Management Act requires that an updated fiscal plan be tabled. Accordingly, I wish to table the 2014-15 third-quarter fiscal update, which serves as the amended fiscal plan. The 2014-15 third-quarter fiscal update has already been provided to all members and released publicly as required by the financial management act. The quarterly fiscal update provides a framework for additional spending authority for the Legislative Assembly and for the government.

I now wish to table the 2014-15 supplementary supply estimates. Mr. Speaker, the supplementary supply estimates will provide additional spending to one office of the Legislative Assembly and 11 government departments. When passed, the estimates will authorize approximate increases of $730,000, an expense in capital investment of the Legislative Assembly, $459 million in operational funding, $705 million in capital funding, and $63 million in financial transaction funding for the government. These estimates will also authorize the transfer of $4.8 million of the previously approved spending authority for the Department of Municipal Affairs to capital investment within the Department of Seniors.

The Speaker: I understand that the message and the supplementary supply estimates have been distributed to everyone by the pages, correct? [interjection] Well, they will be shortly. That is my understanding.

Pages, as soon as you're able, if you could distribute those to all the members of the Assembly, that would be appreciated.

Government Motions (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and President of Treasury Board.

19. Mr. Campbell moved:

Be it resolved that the message from His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, the 2014-15 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund, and all matters connected therewith be referred to Committee of Supply.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, this motion is debatable. Does anyone wish to speak to this?

An Hon. Member: Question.

The Speaker: Okay. The question has been called.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, you had a point?

Mr. Eggen: Yes. I just wanted to get some clarification. We seem to have missed the notice of motion for a point of privilege, so I just wanted to get that on the record.

The Speaker: I've indicated to you twice that I'll address it in a moment, but let's deal with this first, please.

Mr. Eggen: Okay. Great. Thanks a lot.

The Speaker: The question has been called, then.

[Government Motion 19 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

20. Mr. Campbell moved:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 61(2) the Committee of Supply shall be called to consider the 2014-15 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund for six hours on Wednesday, March 11, 2015.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, the Minister of Finance and President of Treasury Board has moved Government Motion 20. This is not debatable.

[Government Motion 20 carried]

The Speaker: Just before we move on, I've had a couple of questions with regard to the point of privilege that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder did appropriately submit to my office within the time frames and so on. Unfortunately, we had to get unanimous consent to continue on with the Routine, and, as you know, Notices of Motions are part of the Routine, and first a notice of motion would have to be uttered in the Assembly. That opportunity was not available, and therefore we'll probably deal with it tomorrow, hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. So we'll move on.

Hon. Government House Leader, did you wish to make a comment here as to where you'd like to go?

Mr. Denis: No, Mr. Speaker. I just would move the item on behalf of the hon. President of Treasury Board. I have no further comments.

The Speaker: Actually, that has already been dealt with, and we're looking to see if you have other business that you wish to attend to this afternoon. If you do, that's what we're looking to hear.

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the Order Paper third reading of Bill 10 is going on here. Does that require a motion at this point?

The Speaker: As you wish. Bill 10 is on the Order Paper, and it would require somebody to move it at third reading if that's where you wish to proceed. I don't have any knowledge of that in my script, so if there's an agreement that that's where you wish to go, then we'll look forward to somebody who is sponsoring the bill to either move it at third reading or to someone on behalf of the member sponsoring it to move third reading at this time.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 10

An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Education or Government House Leader, would you like to move third reading of Bill 10 on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-North West? I need someone to move it at third reading.

Mr. Denis: Okay. I'm rising on behalf of my colleague the hon. Minister of Education who wishes to move third reading of Bill 10.

I believe there are 10 minutes to speak, Mr. Speaker. Is that correct?

The Speaker: It's Calgary-North West, isn't it? Hon. Government House Leader, I believe it's actually a bill sponsored by Calgary-North West on behalf of the government.

Mr. Denis: I rise on behalf of the Member for Calgary-North West to move third reading.

I understand there's 10 minutes of time. Is that correct, Mr. Speaker? Yes.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Denis: My understanding, Mr. Speaker, is that we're waiting for some amendments to come by and that there's one hon. member opposite that wishes to have this bill moved back to Committee of the Whole so certain amendments may be held. I will take my seat so that you can hopefully recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. A little tough not to see her today.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, I believe we have arrived at your space.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. I'm just delighted to rise and speak in third reading on Bill 10, and I'm delighted because what I am going to be doing here is moving a recommittal motion to move us back from third reading to Committee of the Whole in anticipation that we may be able to do some good work here today and make some changes to Bill 10. Of course, they're changes that I would really like to see. So, you know, you can understand why I want to do the recommittal motion.

Now, what was the problem? Well, as most of you know now, either here or in Internet land, I had introduced private member's Bill 202, in which I was trying to do a few small things that would be very meaningful to a number of people in Alberta. Specifically, I wanted to see that where students in a school asked for a gay-straight alliance, they would be accommodated and that there would be no discrimination that was specific to gay-straight alliances, that the students would be allowed to call the organization or the school group or the peer group a gay-straight alliance. Mr. Speaker, I'm just going to underline that again. That is important because these kids have to know that that's what it is and that it's clearly delineated and that they are able to go there and know that it's a safe space for them. It's not helpful if they are going to a diversity group or a multi-acceptance group or something by any other name. In other words, it was really important to me that there'd be no euphemisms. Use of euphemisms can be misunderstood, and if a kid accidentally outs themselves in a group that isn't a GSA, they're in serious trouble, serious physical trouble, probably setting themselves up for some pretty dramatic bullying as well. So it's important to me that they could call it a gay-straight alliance if they wanted to.

I understand that for some faith groups that is a challenge, but I believe that the Rocky Mountain Civil Liberties Association did superior work in their two public hearings done in Edmonton and Calgary, in which they opened it up to parents and students and brothers and sisters and neighbours to come forward and speak about how important GSAs were in schools for kids that had them and for kids that couldn't get them, and those kids were brilliant, absolutely brilliant. They spoke with passion and intellect and focus and understanding. They put the adults to shame, quite frankly, and I enjoyed every minute of it, and I was at all three consultations that were done, including the one sponsored by the Youth Council from the city of Edmonton in conjunction with the Edmonton Social Planning Council and Public Interest Alberta. Those kids so got it. They so got it.

I believe that the amendment is at the table. Yes, and it is currently being distributed.

This is a recommittal motion. I do these fairly often; I just don't get to get them passed very often. So we'll hope that that's going to happen here and that we've got the support of the Assembly to do that. Essentially what it does is say: "You know what? We need to go back to Committee of the Whole because there are some things that we want to look at again." Specifically, we want to look at and reconsider sections 1, 2, 3, and 5, and my thanks to Parliamentary Counsel for making my way through all of that and for helping me with the right language, because I didn't have it right the first time. Unusual, I know, but it just keeps me humble, don't you understand, when I make mistakes in public, no less.

I'd like to thank the Minister of Education for going and listening to those students. I faulted him a lot publicly for not holding a public consultation. I think he should have, but I do appreciate that he actually went to the groups where kids were talking, and I know those kids had an effect on him. They had an effect on me. I hope someday you all get a chance to read the papers that were produced both by the Rocky Mountain Civil Liberties Association and the one produced by the young people from the City of Edmonton Youth Council because they are just drop-dead amazing.

That's what the kids said. You know, GSAs are safe. I remember one kid that said: I just dreaded every day; I dreaded going to school; I dreaded every hour that I was in school, and then I went to another school, and there was a GSA there, and in three weeks my life turned around. Can you imagine? Her life turned around completely. She went from being on medication to joining a number of clubs, finding a leadership role, a leader in her home community, joined a bunch of stuff at the school. She just blossomed, just exploded, just took her place, as she should, as a young leader of today.

So I'm very pleased that the minister was able to go and listen to the students and the parents and the neighbours and the people that run associations who came out to these hearings and that he went to GSAs in different schools and talked to different people and that they were able to convince him, as he mentioned in his ministerial statement, of some draft ideas that he would like to bring forward.

I'd like to thank the Premier for his support. I know that it's rough trying to paddle that canoe upstream in a caucus as big as this one if you don't have the support of the leadership, and I do thank the Premier for his support and leadership in this. I'm so glad that you all heard those students. It was important that you did.

I also really want to thank the Trojan work of the Member for Calgary-North West, who responded so eloquently to my colleague's Motion 503 and did bring forward Bill 10 with the best of intentions, I know, although I disagreed with her absolutely. But that's okay. We will come through this, I'm sure.

So I'd like to get the motion on the floor if you don't mind, Mr. Speaker. So at this point I will move this motion, which would be numbered as A1 or R1.

The Speaker: A1. Amendment A1.

Ms Blakeman: I'm getting the body language here.

The Speaker: We'll go with A1 in case there's another one. That's our tradition.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Let's go with A1. So I'd like to move A1. I will move that the motion for third reading of Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following:

Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, be not now read a third time but that it be recommitted to Committee of the Whole for the purpose of reconsidering sections 1, 2, 3, and 5.

Please support this, everybody, so that we can do this. I look forward to – who knows? – unanimous support, and we will get this sucker back into Committee of the Whole and get this fixed.

Thank you very much.

3:30

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition on the amendment.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'm incredibly pleased, actually, to stand up and support the motion by the Member for Edmonton-Centre. I think, as she's alluded to in some of her speaking notes, that it's amazing how the Marthas and Henrys of the world have changed. I have not been shy to explain where my life has been in regard to this particular issue. You know, I can hardly wait till the day ends and I get to pick up the phone and call a family member and talk to him about the fact of being part of our family for the last – well, I don't want to say how long because then it says how old I am, and I'm not going to go there on that. [interjection] Twenty-nine and holding.

I'm honoured, actually, as I said, to stand up and support the Member for Edmonton-Centre. I think this is a good day for us in the Legislature, I think it's a good day, actually, for Albertans, and I think it's even a better day for the children in this province, quite frankly. I have always wondered why we hadn't been able to support this bill in the past when we're talking about clubs and how we view clubs and how we don't view clubs and what clubs are good to have in a school and what clubs aren't good to have in a school. I remember that in this Legislature many, many years ago, when as a government member I had to deal with the issue of same-sex marriage, there was a lot of controversy at that particular time – I can't even remember how many years ago that was – suggesting that the world isn't going to be any different tomorrow when we wake up, that it's going to be the same.

I am proud to stand up and support this motion. I am looking forward, as I'm sure my colleague is, to seeing the amendments. Quite frankly, I haven't seen the amendments other than what's appeared on Twitter. That's unfortunate, that it's hitting the Twittersphere before it's hitting what members in this Legislature can see. Debate, I'm sure, is going to be interesting.

I just have one question for the House leader if I may, because I'm not the Government House Leader. Am I understanding by reading the government motions that you're putting time allocation on these bills? Is that my understanding? Okay. Good. He's shaking his head no. That's good. I was wondering why on a bill that they consider so important, they would want to put . . . [interjection] No. I'm used to him, Mr. Speaker. I don't even have my hearing aids in. His voice seems to carry, similar to how people tell me mine does also. I'm glad that he's clarified that because that's one of the things.

We will be supporting the Member for Edmonton-Centre's amendment, and I look forward to seeing the amendments as they hit the Legislature. I just want to end by saying that this is a good day for Alberta.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Are there any other speakers to the amendment? The leader of the ND caucus.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've made many of my comments already in the response to the ministerial statement, but of course I'm pleased with the opportunity to support this motion so that it can go back into committee. With any luck, we can make some positive changes to Bill 10 as it previously existed and turn it into something that would be of use to the children of this province and, in particular, those who are members of the LGBTQ community as well as the adults who are members of the LGBTQ community.

I'm looking forward to that opportunity because I think that we could potentially do some good work here. I'm hoping that if we do go back into committee, we move through this at a respectful pace because we'd like the chance to review these amendments in the context of the act to determine whether there are opportunities for us to make improvements to the proposals that are coming from the government.

You know, some preliminary conversations that I've had are conversations that suggest that there wouldn't necessarily be disagreement on some of the points that we have raised as a question or as a concern, but that requires ensuring that we have enough time to carefully and thoughtfully analyze the language that's being put forward, analyze the language in the context of the bill as it currently exists, and draft our own proposed alternatives.

I very much support the idea of this matter going back into committee, but my hope is that members of this Assembly will then be given a couple of days to look at the proposed amendments before we vote on them all, because, of course, if one of the amendments is approved, then it may well block our ability to touch on that issue if we're only reading it as it's passing. If we're going to have a proper discussion about these amendments, we'd like a chance to review them and review the language that's being proposed with a little bit more, as I say, thoughtfulness because we are, really, potentially looking at a very historic time. So let's do it effectively and conscientiously in the process.

I'm very much in favour of this motion, and I look forward to having a considered conversation about moving forward on these changes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others?

If not, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment carried unanimously]

The Speaker: Hon. members, just before we move on, I want to express how delighted I am that there was such a high and positive spirit of co-operation amongst all parties, including the independent member, on this very important matter, which is clearly a high priority for Albertans throughout our province. I'm equally pleased that proper process was followed and that House leaders amongst themselves, perhaps with the help of others, found a way to get it done. It shows you that history like that can be made in our Assembly, and I'm delighted to be presiding over it, believe me. So thank you, all, for that spirit of great co-operation.

We shall move into Committee of the Whole, then, and hear whatever the committee might yield. Let us recess briefly for about 30 seconds.

3:40 Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mrs. Jablonski in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I would like to call the committee to order.

Bill 10 An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Dirks: Yes. I would like to move amendments to Bill 10. I believe they have been provided to the table and are prepared to be circulated now to all members.

The Deputy Chair: We'll pause for a moment while the amendment is being distributed. Hon. members, since this is a continuation of our last Committee of the Whole on Bill 10, this amendment will be known as amendment A6.

Minister, you can proceed if you are ready.

Mr. Dirks: Thank you. I do want, first, to say thank you to all members for agreeing to move into Committee of the Whole so that we can consider these important amendments, A6, that are now before us. I'm not going to give lengthy comments because I did make a significant ministerial statement on this. I just want to walk us through the four clauses, essentially.

Section 35.1(1): here we are giving students the opportunity to have a GSA in their school if they request one. If they ask a staff member for support to establish a voluntary student organization, or to lead an activity intended to promote a welcoming, caring, respectful and safe learning environment that respects diversity and fosters a sense of belonging, the principal of the school shall . . .

You'll notice there that it is the principal of the school.

- (a) permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity at the school, and
- (b) designate a staff member to serve as the staff liaison to facilitate the establishment, and the ongoing operation, of the student organization or to assist in organizing the activity.

It's appropriate, I believe, that the legislation direct the principal to do this as this is an activity that's happening at the local level. Education legislation in our province, of course, does give significant direction to principals in our world, so I think this is a significant improvement on the previous iteration of the bill. That iteration talked about boards getting involved, and this, essentially, keeps things at the local school level, where I think it's most appropriate for it to be determined.

The principal permits the establishment of the school organization or the holding of the activity at the school and designates a staff member to serve as the staff liaison. Now, we know there may be unique circumstances where a staff member may not be able to or perhaps even willing to, and we'll come to that later.

If we go over to the next clause:

For the purposes of subsection (1), an organization or activity includes an organization or activity that promotes equality and non-discrimination with respect to [a broad range of criteria] without limitation, race, religious belief, colour, gender, gender identity, gender expression, physical disability, mental disability, family status or sexual orientation, including but not limited to organizations such as gay-straight alliances, diversity clubs, anti-racism clubs and anti-bullying clubs.

Here we have a very large expression of options for students to establish the kind of organization that is going to accomplish what was talked about in 35.1(1). So while we are talking significantly this day about gay-straight alliances, the reality is that the legislation does permit a broad range of student clubs to be established in schools, and we can envision, if we wanted to, what some of those might be perhaps in the future, but we don't need to go there today. It's simply important to note that the legislation facilitates that to happen.

Then if we go to clause (3):

The students may select a respectful and inclusive name for the organization, including the name "gay-straight alliance" or "queer-straight alliance", after consulting with the principal.

We did hear in our consultations that students, of course, wanted and others felt that they should be able to name their organization. Some of them have actually moved away from the name gay-straight alliance and are using the terminology queer-straight alliance, as we know, and there may be other names that might come up. This amendment is suggesting, of course, that it be a respectful and inclusive name, and consulting with the principal before the name is actually picked would be a reasonable and respectful thing for students to do in the school environment, I think.

Then, finally:

The principal shall immediately inform the board and the Minister if no staff member is available to serve as a staff liaison referred to in subsection (1), and if so informed, the Minister shall appoint a responsible adult to work with the requesting students in organizing the activity or to facilitate the establishment, and the ongoing operation, of the student organization at the school.

There may be circumstances and I think it's important for the legislation to acknowledge and accommodate where a staff member may not be available to facilitate, and in such a situation it would be sensible and prudent for the minister to provide for the organization to be established, which is, of course, the intent of the first section that we talked about.

With those comments, I trust that all members will support this very important amendment to Bill 10.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you. I'm pleased to rise in regard to the government amendment to Bill 10, which is An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect Our Children. I am going to be supporting this amendment. I guess I'm just concerned about the fact of the process. I appreciate that the Government House Leader and the Premier want to get this passed. I'm just truly concerned about the rush.

I had a note from the House leader in regard to passing this amendment today, and I explained to him that, first of all, I've hardly had the opportunity to even look at the amendment – I'm scribbling and trying to write and trying to listen to the Minister of Education as best I can – and we have not even had this discussion as a caucus to make sure that things that need to be covered in this amendment are covered. I say that with all sincerity. I believe this is the third time that, you know, we've discussed this, and it's important that we get it right.

You made a comment in your speaking notes, Minister, when you were talking about clubs, and you were saying: well, we don't need to go there today. Well, I'm not sure. If we don't go there today, when are we going to go there? You know, is that tomorrow or after the election? All that sort of thing. I can't understand why we don't have the opportunity to kind of clearly read this, clearly have a discussion, and then come back tomorrow. I mean, we have a caucus meeting at 9 o'clock. We can have some thorough discussion.

It bothers me that such an important piece of legislation is dropped on our desk, first of all, by a process that I find unacceptable. When a minister is doing a ministerial statement, never in this Legislature do I remember that ministerial statement not being shared with the opposition, and we alluded to that when we were discussing that. Then you question about what's going to be in the bill, and it's: trust me. You know, I guess for me, Minister, it's about the fact of being able to read the amendments, see if this is what people in the gay-straight alliance want, if it's what they're looking for in a bill. I'm, quite frankly, going to do something that I haven't done in the past. I'm going to look to the Member for Edmonton-Centre and will be listening to her to understand if everything that's in this amendment is included in what she requests.

What I do like are some of the things under 35.1(1), where it says:

If one or more students attending a school operated by a board request a staff member employed by the board for support to establish a voluntary student organization . . .

I think Albertans will realize that we're not mandating anything. It's a voluntary club, so we don't have to worry that we're trying to shove something down that, you know, people don't – this is a voluntary club, and that's what it should be.

You go on to the point – you know, one thing I've learned in this Legislature is that there's a big difference between "shall" and "may". I see that you're saying that the principal of the school shall . . .

which is good. That's saying that you have to do that. It's not a "may"; it's a "shall."

(a) permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity at the school, and

(b) designate a staff member to serve as the staff liaison to facilitate the establishment, and the ongoing operation.

We go on about the principal. If you can't get a staff member, the Minister shall appoint a responsible adult to work with the requesting students in organizing the activity or to facilitate . . .

The Deputy Chair: Excuse me, hon. member. I hate to interrupt you, but the level of noise in the Assembly has reached a higher level than is acceptable. If you have conversations that you need to have, you can take those out into the Confederation Room or another room.

Hon. member, would you please continue, and maybe we can decrease the noise level.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you. It's hard to even think. Obviously, the government members think there are more important things to discuss than listening to the debate on this bill, that they are insisting has to be passed today.

It talks about:

The principal shall immediately inform the board and the Minister if no staff member is available to serve as a staff liaison referred to in subsection (1), and if so informed, the Minister shall appoint a responsible adult to work with the requesting students in organizing the activity or to facilitate the establishment.

I guess the question I have there is: why would you not have a responsible adult in a school whose mandate is the protection of the children that attend that school, that they have to find someone outside of the school to be responsible? You know, you have these little spidey senses that start going off when we have to look elsewhere to have the establishment of a club. I think what's important is the fact that – what has been presented before is something that's important. I mean, we don't have to discuss about – and we've heard the discussion as we've debated this bill – the high rate of suicides. So all of a sudden you can't even find a responsible adult in the school that is willing to work with the group or organization, and the minister then has to appoint somebody.

It goes on to the support for student organizations.

If one or more students attending a school operated by a board request a staff member employed by the board for support to establish a voluntary student organization, or to lead an activity intended to promote a welcoming, caring, respectful and safe learning environment that respects diversity and fosters a sense of belonging, the principal of the school shall . . .

There's "shall" again.

. . . permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity.

And then he designates a staff member.

I expect that this legislation will go very quickly through the Legislature, and I could be wrong – and I hope I'm wrong – but I would expect that this legislation will come back again because we've missed something because it's been so rushed from the government in regard to an amendment. I'm hoping that the Member for Edmonton-Centre is going to be able to speak up and clear some of the things, if there's anything that she spots, that might be a problem in this amendment. I haven't honestly had the opportunity to spend a lot of time going through this amendment.

I am actually looking forward to the debate. I guess, on the record again, I just can't understand why we have one day. We've spent literally months and months – I don't even remember when your Bill 202 first came out. Was it a year ago?

Ms Blakeman: No. It was the very end of October, beginning of November.

Mrs. Forsyth: October of 2014.

Then we had Bill 10, and now we have an amendment that's just hit our desks that we haven't, frankly, had the opportunity to even look at, let alone discuss, that's going to be passed. I will say that there's no question that I support gay-straight alliances in schools. I've been on the record suggesting that and saying that. Again, let's just make sure it's right.

This is obviously hasty legislation. When I questioned the minister that I met with at 11:30 in regard to the speech that the minister was going to give in his minister's statement, I was informed by the minister that I had a meeting with that it hadn't even been written then. If I may, Madam, I hope we're right and we've got this right the first time and we don't come back two weeks down the road and say, "oops, we forgot something," or "oops, we didn't check this."

Those are my comments, other than, again, being on the record that I support this. As they say, let's get it right the first time. I look forward to hearing, actually, from other members on the government side, and I look forward to hearing what the Member for Edmonton-Centre has to say.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Madam Chair, for the opportunity to rise and speak in our Committee of the Whole to government amendment A6. A fairly dense amendment, but it does appear to be tracking exactly as the minister had outlined in his statement earlier today. The first thing we have – and I actually, as I was flipping through my notes, found amendment A4, which was actually moved by the leader of the fourth opposition, the ND opposition, who had an amendment that's exactly what's being proposed in section A of the amendment here, which is specifically to include sexual orientation, sex, gender identity, or gender expression.

You know, I have to compliment the government for taking this step. I know that gender identity and gender expression is a bit of a leap for some people if they're not familiar with what it means and who it affects and what the possibilities are. I was really hoping that this could be included, and it's why I had included it in the language that I used in Bill 202, but I am really pleased to see that the minister and the Premier and the government caucus were able to understand and to include those two categories of gender identity and gender expression.

Just briefly, in case anybody following at home does want to know what that is – well, if I could tease the minister just a tiny bit.

Mr. Dirks: No.

Ms Blakeman: "No," he says. "Please don't tease me anymore."

Well, you know, let's say that there's a situation where somebody walks into a classroom and looks around and says: "Oh, gee. You know, how come it's all one sex in here?" Well, that's kind of a thing in this day and age, that we've come to understand that gender identity is more along a continuum. Oh, I'm getting a very odd déjà vu. Who was it that was talking about somewhere between Marilyn Monroe and Charles Bronson? Right? That's a heck of a continuum. But, in fact, we're now coming to understand that people fall somewhere on that continuum. Not all men are Charles Bronson, and not all women are Marilyn Monroe.

Ms Calahasen: Oh, come on.

Ms Blakeman: I know. Isn't that just crushing? What a blow, but it's true. Some members are more Marilyn Monroe than others. I'll give that to the hon. member from Slave Lake. Okay.

But that is what these kids today are understanding even better than their parents or their grandparents understood, and the way they express that is quite unique and often fun but kind of bizarre to somebody that's not really understanding what's going on there. Once you start to accept that, you know, somewhere between Marilyn Monroe and Charles Bronson, is – we're all on there somewhere. We're just closer to one end than to the other, one imagines.

I'm really glad that the government was brave enough to take that step, and I will give you credit for being brave. That one wasn't easy, and it wasn't a gimme. I didn't think you'd be able to go there.

Then we have the removal of the reference to section 35.1, which is part of your C section. I'm going to have to come back to that one because I don't have the right pieces of paper. This is the wonderful thing about Committee of the Whole, as I'm sure you're aware, Madam Chair, that you can speak more than once, so if you can't find your piece of paper right now, you can find it later and get up and correct your remarks then.

Section C is where a lot of the meat is, or for people who don't eat meat then the aubergine or whatever anybody is using as a meat substitute these days. That is saying that if students ask for a voluntary student organization that is intended to be welcoming and caring as compared to being, you know, discriminatory and nasty, that the local principal "shall," which is an important wording, as my colleague the Official Opposition leader pointed out, "permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity at the school." Right on. It has to be at the school. "Designate a staff member to serve as staff liaison" for the organization or help it to organize: that's really good because in a lot of cases we've got very connected teachers, teachers that understand the kids in this school, that want to be involved in being the adviser to a gay-straight alliance or to other kinds of voluntary student groups, and I would hope that they would be chosen and would be allowed to do that.

In schools where nobody wants to do it, and we can think of a few examples of where that might happen, we do have a section a little later on that deals with that. That is subsection (4), under C.

The principal shall immediately inform the board and the Minister if no staff member is available to serve as a staff liaison referred to in subsection (1), and if so informed, the Minister shall . . .

Not might, not wiggle room, not maybe, not if the sun is shining. It says shall.

. . . appoint a responsible adult to work with the requesting students in organizing the activity or to facilitate the establishment, and the ongoing operation, of the student organization at the school.

So if you have a school where the staff say, "Nope. Not interested. Thank you very much," and no staff member is coming forward to do it, you have a process here that's outlined where the principal goes to the minister and the board and says, "Okay. I don't have anybody," and the minister would then appoint someone.

Let me tell you, there are some good people out there. For example, in the Edmonton public school system – oh, as soon as I thought about her, her name went right out of my head. She's running the GSA round-table. She's employed by the Edmonton public school system, which is just light years ahead of us all and really leading the way on this issue. She would be a responsible person to have the minister appoint to help a student establish such a thing. The other woman I'm thinking of works for altView, which is an organization out of Sherwood Park established by my friend Bryan Mortensen, and I am not going to remember her name either. Claudette, Colleen, something like that. She goes out to schools as requested and works with the staff and the students to help put this together.

You know, there are people that exist, that have expertise, that are what I would call a responsible adult, that can be appointed by the minister to go into the school and fill that position if the staff are unwilling to do so, and I think that's an important part of it. It's to work with the students, to organize the activity, or to facilitate the establishment and/or the ongoing operation, so we're covering a lot of ground here.

We have the organization being established. We've talked about the staff that are going to look after it. As the minister spoke – this covers a lot of different kinds of student organizations, but it's meant to be peer support, leadership, nondiscriminatory clubs that are meant to help kids be resilient. You know, Kristopher Wells from ISMSS has joined us in the gallery, and that's a term I've heard him say, that the point of it is to help build resiliency in kids so that when they've got that support group, they can learn and build their resiliency so when they're in situations that aren't so great, they have that resiliency to get through it. They have the wherewithal to stand up and say, "No. You know, you can't bully me like that," or "Don't say that" to some other person, or just to withstand it and get home or walk away from the situation. That's the kind of thing we're trying to build in these kids so that they can get through it on their own and that they come through it in a way that's about thriving. It's about doing well; it's not about coming out kind of battered. I love that term, "resiliency."

I think that's what we're looking at here. In particular, it uses kind of a tip of the hat to the language that I was using because it talks about – it's not limited to organizations such as gay-straight alliances, diversity clubs, antiracism clubs, and antibullying clubs, which is what I was asking, that gender and sexual orientation not be discriminated against when we looked at all these clubs, and I think we've captured that here.

4:10

I spoke earlier about how important it was not to have to default to euphemisms when the kids name these clubs, and, in fact, that's the section that we're looking at in section (3). It says that the students may select a respectful and inclusive name for the organization . . .

Someday I'm going to buy the minister a glass of wine and find out what would not be a respectful and inclusive name for an organization. I'm sure he's heard some, but I can't imagine what they'd be. Anyway, a respectful and inclusive name for the organization

. . . including the name "gay-straight alliance" or "queer-straight alliance", after consulting the principal, so you've got to have the principal involved here. But one of the things I was trying to be careful of, and this is another one of Kris's big things, is that the principal could not stop them, could not say: no, you're not going to call it that. I think that's one of the concerns that I really had, and this says that they are going to be able to call it that. I'm looking at the minister, and he's nodding his head at me. Okay. So they may call it that, but they do have to consult the principal.

Then we've got the last section, section D, which is the support for student organizations, which says that if they're requesting a staff member employed by the board to support this or to lead the activity, "the principal of the school shall permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity" – listen carefully – "at the school." And that's important because one of the big fights we had on this one was that somehow we would hold it somewhere else but not in the school, that it could be in a community league, or, you know, down the road somewhere, or as I, in a very uncomplimentary way, said, in a garden shed on the property, which is not what we wanted.

The whole point is that if these kids have a bad experience at school or at home, they can go to their club meeting, their safe space, in the school. That's the safe space. Folks, you know, I don't want to hammer on this too hard, but you've got to remember that for a lot of these kids the safe space is not at home, and that's why we have to make sure that safe space is offered to them in the school, not in the garden shed, not down the road, not at the community league; in the school.

So in this case, where they have requested the organization, "the principal shall" – not maybe, not when the sun is shining, but shall – "permit the establishment of the student organization or the holding of the activity at the school," and "designate a staff member to serve as the staff liaison to facilitate" it. And it goes on to talk about "an organization or activity includes an organization or activity that promotes equality and non-discrimination with respect to . . ." and then we have the list, which is a long list now. As far as I can tell, everybody is on it. Just the thing about lists: you've got to have them all. But it does include

. . . without limitation, race, religious belief, colour, gender, gender identity,

Yes.

. . . gender expression . . .

Yes.

. . . physical disability, mental disability, family status, or sexual orientation, including but not limited to organizations such as gay-straight alliances, diversity clubs, anti-racism clubs and anti-bullying clubs.

Oh, I think I just repeated myself. Sorry about that.

An Hon. Member: It's never happened.

Ms Blakeman: Not usually.

The last two sections. Section E is amending section 3(7), so it's pulling out section 16.1, which I haven't had time to look at, so I'm going to go back and look at – oh, that's sounding very familiar. Okay. I'm going to go back and look at what 16.1 is and what 35.1 is, and I will have that by the time I get up to speak the next time. The final section, section F, is amending by striking out March 1, 2015, and substituting June 1, 2015. I'm just going to take a wild flyer here and assume that that is the proclamation date of the act or when it's all supposed to be implemented.

So I hope that's helped alleviate some of the concerns that I know people had. I know there's a concern about rushing this through, but, I'll tell you: sometimes you have to seize the moment, and the moment is now. I would really encourage people to seize it and to pass the government amendments now, today – look, we have all this time – then we could also pass it through third, and we would have it today. Because remember, my gentle ones, we've already had the passage of Government Motion 20, which, in fact, says that tomorrow, Wednesday, all day, we will be doing supplementary supply, so we wouldn't be able to come back to this tomorrow, and who knows what we're going to get up to on Thursday, some of that really exciting legislation that they're going to bring in soon, like the fisheries act. So let's try and get this done today.

I'm comfortable enough with it. I'm going to go and check the two sections I'm not quite sure of right now because I didn't memorize the whole thing, and I will allow someone else to speak before I do that.

I'm so sorry, Madam Chair. I'm getting a lot of recognition today. I appreciate that, and I'm basking in it, but really the person that started all of this is my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo [some applause] – thank you – who, you know, really struck out into the wilderness of human rights and education acts in Alberta with his Motion 503 and really did a brilliant job of bringing this onto the agenda and keeping it on the agenda long enough to inspire me to try it again. My thanks to him because that is a big – you know, you don't change public policy with one person. It's always a group of people coming from different places for the same good reason. I do want to make sure that we recognize that he was an integral part of this coming to the place that it is today.

I'm going to sit down and let someone else speak while I rush about and check these two other sections out. I look forward to part B. Thanks very much, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. It's a great honour to be able to speak to these amendments brought forward to Bill 10 by the government. I guess the question I ask is: now, boys and girls, was that so hard? No, of course it wasn't. Being on the right side of legislation in human rights in the direction of forwarding your society in those ways is important, and governments need to do it more often. So I thank the government for bringing forward this legislation.

Gay-straight alliances lead to less bullying in all schools and lead to fewer suicides and let kids live freer, more inclusive lives, that they are allowed to be who they want to be and not feel ashamed, bullied, or otherwise as a result. Gay-straight alliances work – the research is clear – and I am glad we have acted on that evidence today and gone forward on the path we have.

But I'd also like to go through a little bit of the history on how we got here. The hon. leader of the fourth party brought up some of the dark days of this province in terms of our respect for the LGBT community. We have to look back to 1998, the Vriend decision that came out of the Supreme Court of Canada, where it was ordered by the Supreme Court that sexual orientation be added to the grounds prohibited to be discriminated against. Alberta, to our shame, fought against that proposal. We fought against it for a full decade. Where other provinces accepted it as an idea whose time has come, an idea where we embrace human rights, not limit them, yet we chose to do the other thing for a full decade.

I will note that in 2008, when I got here, we seemingly were moving the ball a little bit forward. We heard a proposal that would allow for sexual orientation finally to be recognized in our human rights code. In fact, my first question in this hon. House when I became a member was to the then Justice minister asking: when are we going to have sexual orientation become part of our human rights code? We found that that day was coming, but it wasn't without some quid pro quo.

That was in the unfortunate Bill 44 debates. What transpired out of that was a little bit: well, okay, we're going to give the LGBT community the sexual orientation clause in the Human Rights Act, but we're not going to give up our social conservative roots that easily. In there we had an addition to our human rights code under 11.1 that many in our LGBT community felt discriminated against them, and rightfully so. We saw that sexual orientation was deemed not worthy of discussion in our classrooms.

Really, how that ever got put into a Human Rights Act, I, for the life of me, do not understand. It had no place when you compared it to other human rights legislation across Canada, in fact throughout much of the world. It was regressive. It was silly. It was just a mean-spirited act that the social cons in the governing party of the day put in to champion parental rights issues. In fact, many of the people who are still here today, well, guess what? They trotted along on this path for a long time.

We can also look at: hey, Alberta was the last province to officially recognize same-sex marriage. We did that just recently, and we were laggards in that regard, too.

So here we are today. I guess we have turned the page under this unfortunate history that has been Alberta in embracing human rights. That's a good thing. Guys, I'm happy we have done so. But I think this should be a lesson to this government, that what they often did in respect to this was that they didn't get out and lead; they often followed. They used politics, admittedly probably to their advantage. In 2004 when you did polling on same-sex marriage in this province, well, 70 per cent of Albertans were against that principle happening. Fast forward to today. Now about 85 per cent of the population is in favour of that happening.

The government of the day back in 2004 probably had the politics right. Okay. Generally it was within the sentiment of what the Alberta population was feeling. They didn't have the principle right. Of course, it was not within the spirit of moving human rights forward, and in fact it would have showed great leadership by getting out and saying: "Look, here we are. We are the government of the day. We are not going to tolerate this. We are going to get out and lead." Eventually that statement of principle by governments gets your population there quicker. That's what I advise the current government to do more often.

Look, we've been laggards in a whole host of areas. You know, seat belt legislation: last province. Smoking in restaurants: last province to recognize this. Now on LGBTQ rights, one of the last provinces to get there, all because we're basing it on polling, not on what is fundamentally right to human rights and moving the chains of justice forward. I think that this government should be more bold in that expression of doing what's right, making the case to the people, and showing leadership in that regard. That's what I would like to see going forward.

Today is a red-letter day for this province. I feel very proud that I played a small role in this, putting forward Motion 503. I put forward the notion that schools, whether they be public schools, Catholic schools, or private schools, where kids wanted to have a gay-straight alliance, that was to be mandatory. I knew from what was going on in the community that at all of these three school systems, for various reasons, kids were not being allowed to have a GSA, and that was unfortunate. So this is a good public policy piece that I thought would save kids' lives.

Starting that debate was important. Of course, my friend from Edmonton-Centre did a great job of putting forward Bill 202, and it corrected a lot of the errors of the past as well as added the notion that gay-straight alliances be made available in all schools where kids want them. I think it served an important role in galvanizing support behind an issue.

We can look to this exercise that we have gone through in this House and out in the public for why opposition MLAs are important. They really are. Without Motion 503, without Bill 202, I doubt that the government would have moved forward on this issue for perhaps another five, maybe 10 years. Okay? All during that time kids would have been left unprotected, vulnerable, bullied, and committing suicide at greater rates should we not have had this debate. We must remember that.

This was a red-letter day for democracy. It's how the system should work. Sometimes opposition members need to put up ideas that the government may not be thinking of and may actually be in opposition to their current policies or current direction that they believe is in the best interest of our society. What we saw by this exercise was really a celebration of our system. We put up an issue, people got behind it, they told the government where they stood, and lo and behold good public policy was instituted that wasn't in the government's bailiwick.

This is an idea that's been around for a long time. In 2006 the Alberta Teachers' Association passed a motion at their spring conference saying that gay-straight alliances should be in all public schools. I will note that this was supported 100 per cent by all teachers at that meeting, whether they were from the Catholic system or the public system. So this idea has been around for a while, and it took us to get to this stage here, where opposition members and other members of the public and organizations out there in the community had been pressing the government on this issue and where these ideas of GSAs were discussed broadly in the community and the LGBTQ community wanted to have them instituted. You saw that at the discussions around Camp fYrefly communities, ISMSS at the University of Alberta, all over the place. This was an idea whose time had come.

So I'd like us to all recognize the fact that this was democracy in action. I am glad to see here that it looks like we're going to have 100 per cent support of all people in this Legislature on this issue when, remember, just eight months ago that was not the case. The majority of PC MLAs, at that time the complete opposition of the WRP, and the like were against this idea. Over the course of eight short months this was changed. Again, a red-letter day for not only the LGBTQ community, human rights, but democracy. I applaud all members of this august Assembly for going through the motion and the exercise.

I will say, too, that part of the success of what got us here were many members of the government side. The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood spoke bravely about this issue through the summer. In the Bill 10 debates we saw the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs and the hon. member for Edgemont, I believe, get up and speak against a bill that they felt was wrong. That is no easy task, no easy feat, to get up and not support your government's own bill. Hey, this is with a Premier who at the time was riding very high in the polls, who had instituted his own bill, his own made-in-Alberta solution, that apparently balanced rights. Yet they got up, and they said that they didn't believe this was right.

I encourage other MLAs on the government side. You can't do it all the time, but you can pick and choose on certain issues to get up and voice your opinion on what you believe in your heart of hearts to be the correct direction for Alberta's society. I think that, in the main, if you're on the side of progress, on the side of human rights, you will eventually be rewarded for those efforts and recognized for your courage.

Nevertheless, as my time is running short, I'll comment more fully on the actual nuts and bolts of the amendments put forward by the government. In the main, they seem to support the purpose and intent of Motion 503 as well as Bill 202.

I am interested to see how in particular the one section will work: when a staff member is not able to be found to run or organize a gay-straight alliance, what will that process be, and how will it go forward and the like? You can envision some circumstances where this clause may be utilized by some schools or school systems to derail the process – derail the process – so I'm encouraged that the minister is thinking about that, how to ensure that, hopefully, a staff member is going to be able to lead this exercise. If not, what is going to look like an appropriate person to be there to support the kids, to ensure that the club is respected, to ensure that people have access to this great organization that can lead kids to having less worry, less angst, and less bullying in their lives?

In any event, Madam Chair, it's been a great honour to speak to this. I'd like to thank the government for bringing in this amendment, for listening to not only the opposition but to all Albertans, who have clearly moved on from the social wars of the past. I would encourage them to not be afraid of leading more often and leading in the direction of science, reason, common sense, and human rights. I think we will be rewarded for it as a province in terms of more reasonable legislation that supports an educated, modern society that understands the need for governments to lead.

In any event, thank you very much, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. Certainly, I rise with great interest in speaking to these amendments. It's an unprecedented series of events, I think, that we saw here on this first day of the spring session. I think it's a tribute to the evolution of an idea, where it is born from, I would say, hard work by activists right across the province, with many associations recognizing the psychological and social benefits of having GSAs in schools and then taking that concept and slowly working it through to today, where we are in fact building substantive law that really will, I think, help to establish the positive effects of GSAs right across the province.

I am grateful to have done some small part of that. Certainly, our New Democrat caucus has been working over many months, and I can see the amendments and some of the language that we brought forward over the last number of months in these amendments. Again, I'm grateful that we have an opportunity to perhaps pass them into legislation here in the very near future.

Now, I spoke to the hon. Education minister just briefly here this afternoon to look for some clarification on concerns that I have, talking to people about getting GSAs in their schools. Some of the concerns that I had certainly were as a teacher, that a teacher has responsibilities to students and responsibilities not just to curricular subject areas but also to extracurricular clubs and so forth. So a practical concern that was always in the back of my mind was: well, we could be all high and mighty here in this Chamber, advocating for GSAs, but a teacher somewhere in some school has to be the sponsoring person for that, right? That's the way schools function.

The principal has a part in that, too. I certainly saw some positive direction here in regard to these amendments to ensure that a principal has decision-making powers over creating and maintaining a GSA in a school. Then, of course, a co-operating teacher can put their name forward to sponsor these clubs without fear of retribution and/or other compromising potential situations, right? But I also would just like to venture further to say that in the interests of ensuring that a school board – a given school board might have some second thoughts about this legislation – would not be able to compromise the capacity of their staff to in fact sponsor these places, would not send, you know, a memo around to dissuade the staff from actually sponsoring a GSA in a school and thus try to somehow subvert the process as we move along.

Another concern that I had was in regard to private schools and charter schools and so forth. Again, it seems as though these amendments do compel those bodies to participate in this process – again, we've talked about this so much – but, I mean, it's not as though we are imposing the mandatory establishment of a GSA in a school. It's a process by which students and staff are looking for this to exist in a school, and then it's much more organic than top-down in regard to the establishment of a GSA although, certainly, when students and staff express their interest in doing so, then the authorities cannot step in the way of a GSA being established in the school.

Otherwise, another concern that I did have in regard to the amendments is just to, I think, ensure universality, as I said before, but also to ensure that the focus of the GSA not be watered down by, again, usually, school boards' maybe changing the definition of what it can be – right? – you know, like a social justice club or a culture club or something like that. I mean, this is a very specific intention with GSAs, to allow people to speak freely about concerns they have and to not just talk about problems but to celebrate diversity and sexual orientation in a very specific way. Again, it seems as though these amendments do define a GSA in a very specific way and do not have this watered-down process of turning it into a culture club or a political club or something of that nature.

Another issue that I had, just reflecting as a teacher, is to ensure that, yes, you are creating a positive place for GLBTQ students to have a place to speak about issues that concern them but also for the larger positive educative effects that a GSA can have on the overall student population so that it is being accepted in the most positive way possible. The mere existence, I would say, Madam Chair, of a GSA in a school or the past existence of a GSA will serve as a moderating influence to help educate and create and foster an environment of acceptance amongst both the students and the staff and parents in a school.

You know, after all, to revert to first principles, why we have public education in the first place is to educate young people at that most influenceable age, and it's remarkable how fast they will learn if you set up a positive social justice framework that is equal and so forth and is reinforced by the administration all the way up to the provincial Legislature here. Then they know that it's the right thing to do and, in fact, will help to educate the larger population on issues of equality and social justice.

Madam Chair, I'm very interested in this whole afternoon and, really, the last few months that started it. I thank the member. I know exactly when this first entered the Chamber here, with the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo bringing this forward and then later the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, the tumultuous debates that we had last fall around this. But, most of all, it's the public that put out loud and clear that they want a greater degree of equality and social justice in their schools and outside of their schools. Each of the groups, both parent groups and student groups from the university, expertise from inside and outside the province of Alberta, pushed this forward. That's the way, truly, we make progress in our society, and I think that we all can be remembering this day for the rest of our legislative lives as being a positive one.

With that, the one issue that I do want to bring forward – and we've drafted here very quickly – in the spirit of co-operation, again, is a subamendment in regard to the staffing and so forth. You know, we'll talk about that more in very short order.

You know, when I was teaching, one of the very first GSAs that was established, to my knowledge, in Edmonton was at a school I was teaching at. It really had a positive effect among students and staff, not for people necessarily to participate but just knowing it was there, right? We all have gone through high school, I think, most of us, anyway, and some of us were teaching and working in that environment, too. It's not always that you're accessing all of the benefits of a school at any given time, but just to know of the existence of a GSA in a school really is reassuring, and it creates an atmosphere of acceptance and normalization that I think we all need right now.

It's really important as well to know that when you make a gain in a society, when you make a societal gain to be more equal and just, it doesn't mean that you can let down your vigilance, and it doesn't mean that you can have some backsliding of people's attitudes towards equality and social justice. We know that so often the forces of prejudice and discrimination will come back if we're not vigilant, so establishing something like this in a public school setting and all provincial school settings is really good insurance, because we might think that we're all so progressive here in 2015, but you don't know where your society is going to be moving necessarily 10, 15, 20 years from now. We establish these institutions, these yardsticks, as in GSAs, and we are making a positive investment to probably ensure that the notion of equality and sexual equality between genders and for all sexuality will be ensured over time. Again, it's something that we can look forward to in a longer sense.

You know, I have spoken to lots of different people on this. I mean, it wasn't easy for certain groups and individuals and private schools and charter schools to deal with this. The most important thing was to reassure people that it's not as though they were having something imposed on them but, rather, that we were creating tools by which you can have a healthier society and a healthier population for students and for their own children to be looked after if they might be having some difficulties. As a therapeutic tool, certainly, GSAs are well recognized and recognized through many different cultures, through different socioeconomic groups, and so forth.

So in all ways, really, I'm pretty happy about this. Like I said, we just have a small amendment that we would like to bring forward to ensure the execution of this in the broadest possible way.

You know, I think the appetite for comprehensive GSA legislation is there amongst the general public. I think there are some people that might be dragging their feet a little bit, but as the hon. minister just mentioned to me in my conversation with him, you know, we make these laws here, and other groups and individuals will be compelled to follow, right? I mean, I think that for the most part it will be an easy process, a straightforward process, but certainly at the end of the day, we take the responsibility to create the laws and regulations that govern this province in regard to education. So this is not such a bad thing at all, really, taking responsibility like we are here today.

As the paper moves through the process, I think you've got a couple of things, Rachel, that you probably want to add on to this if you don't mind.

I thank you, Madam Chair, for your patience and for your chairpersonness.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thanks, Madam Chair. I just wanted to stand up and speak for a few minutes. As I indicated when I was speaking earlier, I was concerned about how quickly we're rushing this, and I said that I wanted to have the opportunity to listen to the Member for Edmonton-Centre. She and I had a delightful conversation back there. She reassured me that she is feeling – I guess that “seize the moment” was what she had said.

I guess the other thing that makes me feel a little better is that we've got Dr. Wells up in the gallery, so I have a little bit more security there. I asked about some of the other people when we were discussing this, like Murray Billett, and I understand that he's obviously . . .

Ms Blakeman: Suntanning. Sorry.

Mrs. Forsyth: . . . suntanning. He's here, but I would have loved to have the opportunity to be able to talk to him and, as I explained, some of the other gay friends and activists that I happen to know and cherish deeply.

You know, I'm not going to spend a lot of time. The Twitter world is abuzz, both pros and cons, actually, and there's nothing better than debating. There are some serious questions, Minister, on Twitter – and I don't know if you're following Twitter – that I think need to be answered. I can't answer the questions because I'm not the Education minister. They're talking about the dissolution of the Catholic schools with the bishop, et cetera, and I guess that's something that you're going to have to deal with as the minister. I don't have to deal with that.

I am going to listen to what my colleague has to say. I'm assuming that Dr. Wells has read these amendments and is comfortable with the amendments that he has seen. If he has anything else that he thinks needs to be added, we may have the opportunity to do that in a very short period of time. I understand that the leader of the fourth party has got some amendments that she's considering bringing forward.

I just want it in the House that we'll be supporting moving forward. As I said earlier, I was concerned about the time. I've been reassured by some people that I have a great deal of respect for, so we're going to be supporting this amendment, and I ask people in committee to support this particular amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much. It's a pleasure to be able to rise and speak to this. I think I've already commented at some length on this change and on these changed amendments to Bill 10, so I won't take a lot of time.

Again, if you go back to what Bill 10 looked like when it was first brought in, I believe the plan was for there to be GSAs except where the administration or the school board didn't want them, and then the students could go to judicial review. Having been a lawyer, I know that going to judicial review is not exactly a user-friendly process even for people who've had many years of legal education. Then phase 2 was: “Okay. Well, we won't make it voluntary. They do have to happen, but it may have to happen on somebody else's property.” That sort of took a bad situation and almost made it worse, of course, because at that point we were dealing with the idea of sort of separate but equal. Of course, I don't think that was anybody's intention, but it certainly was the implication, and it was clearly a problem.

Now we have this set of amendments, and this set of amendments basically does what it needs to do. It guarantees the GSAs in any setting where the kids ask for them. It gets rid of 11.1. It deals with gender identity. It's good. It's a good package, so I'm happy with this set of amendments.

There are two issues, though, that I'd like to touch on very briefly, one through a proposed amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, are you moving your subamendment at this point?

Ms Notley: I was going to talk about one other thing before I got to the subamendment, but I'll be there in, like, 30 seconds.

The Deputy Chair: Go ahead, hon. member.

Ms Notley: There is the section of these amendments that talks about: "Okay. Well, what if there's nobody available to lead and to be the liaison for this GSA?" That's a thoughtful section because there are a number of different circumstances in which that could happen. In small communities or in small schools definitely you could have occasions where the teachers themselves are simply not willing to participate in that role. It's good that we have section (4) in there the way it currently exists so that the minister has the capacity to come in and appoint someone else should no teachers be available. Maybe they're, you know, really exhausted because they've got 14 special-needs kids in their class of 40 – it's happened; oh, wait; no, it's happening – those kinds of things, so they choose not to volunteer for that particular project. We know that on a school-by-school basis the access to clubs varies tremendously between schools based on the workload of teachers. Section (4) as currently drafted is great because it provides a solution to that, and I'm happy to see that.

What I have, however, is an amendment because I'm afraid that section (4), without some quick correction, could end up being utilized in a way that was less positive, and I would like to fix that. So at this point what I'm going to do is propose an amendment and have this amendment distributed around for members of this Assembly to review.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, if we could just pause until everybody receives a copy of this amendment. This will be known as a subamendment, and it is subamendment 1.

Hon. member, would you like to proceed?

Ms Notley: Thank you. Before I talk about the merits or the substance of this, let me just walk you through the amendment. Essentially, it's divided into two pieces. The first piece adds a section after section (4) in the part of your amendment which deals with the Education Act. The second piece adds a section (5) after section (4) in the part of your amendment that deals with the School Act. So it's basically doing the same thing in both settings. Really, what you're looking at is adding section (5) twice because you're dealing with the Education Act and the School Act.

What it's doing is that it's building on the analysis that began with the inclusion of section (4), understanding that in some circumstances the school liaisons might not be available because the teachers themselves are unavailable, so the minister appoints somebody. Great. No big problem with that.

The other option, though, could be the case where sometimes you have teachers who want to do this, but they are prohibited from doing it by their administration, particularly in the case where the administration or the board remains resistant to this change. Now, I think that some folks over there would acknowledge that even as we bring forward this legislation, there will be some boards and some school administrations that remain resistant to what we are proposing and what the government is proposing through its amendment.

One of the ways, with the current construction of this amendment, that that resistance might come to fruition is that the principal would be completely within his or her authority to discourage . . . [interjections] I'm not sure what you're saying. [interjections] Okay. Forget it. They want me to talk less and more and louder and longer but quieter, so I'm very confused.

An Hon. Member: Not longer.

Ms Notley: No. I got a "longer" over there, too, so what can I say?

Anyway, you can have those situations. The way it's currently constructed is that the administrator, using their authority as the employer, could construct a number of ways to tell teachers that they're not available, then inform the minister, and then the minister has to bring someone else in. Your first answer might be: "Well, why is that a problem? At least someone is coming in." True, but I think we can all agree that the best-case scenario is for the teacher, who is part of the school community, who is part of the administrative community, who has an ongoing relationship with the kids, to be the person who is the liaison. That's your best-case scenario.

Imagine a resistant school or school board seven and a half hours out of Edmonton, and suddenly they exercise their authority as the administrators to essentially create a lack of availability of teachers. Then the minister is appointing somebody who is flying in on a frigging plane to, say, High Level or something once a week in order to facilitate this gay-straight alliance, which (a) is costly and (b) not best practice because this person is not connected with the community and they're not connected with the schools and everybody else.

Now, that may happen nonetheless if none of the teachers want to do it. But what drives this amendment on my part comes from my own discussions with numerous teachers in the separate school division, in private schools, in charter schools who themselves would love to do this and who have tried to do this, who have been told by the administrations that they cannot do this. This section is geared towards giving those teachers the right to say, "You know what? I want to be the liaison officer" and to make sure that they get to be.

Now, there still may be those cases where no one wants to be the liaison officer. Then the minister is doing his thing, and he's picking his person, and off you go. But I just want to make sure that we don't create a situation where we're inviting those resistant boards to essentially create a lack of availability and then actually create a much larger obligation on the part of the Minister and the Ministry of Education to fund and transport these school liaison officers around the province. This is a way to avoid that. Again, it reflects best practice, because I do truly believe that the teachers who are a part of the community, who have relationships with the kids, who are interested in taking on this role, who want to take on this role are the ones who are best able to do it, and they're going to do the best job.

That's what this is geared to doing. It's a good-faith attempt to give you an opportunity to potentially work against any resistant boards or administrators that you may have in some small remaining corners of the province. That's what this is about. It's pretty simple, and it also deals with those many, many teachers whom I've spoken with over the last, well, years, actually, but since this particular issue arose. It allows for them to do it should they want to do it and to not have their principal tell them they can't do it, not have their principal assign them to other activities. You know, there are a variety of tools that the administration can use to create the status of nonavailability. So if a teacher is really supportive and wants to help the kids, let's just make sure they can. That's what this is about. That's what the amendment is for. So I hope that my colleagues will consider supporting this amendment to what . . .

Mr. Eggen: I'm voting for it. I'm in.

Ms Notley: My caucus member is voting for it, so that's cool. I've got one.

Anyway, I hope you'll consider it in the spirit with which it was submitted, which is an effort to make this better and to give the government more tools to deal with somewhat resistant boards and administrators.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on subamendment 1.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Madam Chair. As we try and get legislation right and we try and anticipate all of the possible permutations and outcomes, it's hard to imagine where things might go wrong and where we might be able to set it up in the beginning so as to have it move along in the direction that we had hoped.

I think this is a reasonable subamendment, and here's why. Clearly, the writers of the amendments that the minister has brought forward were trying to anticipate a situation where the staff said: not doing this. Then the changes here were going to empower the principal to get someone in place, a reasonable person, some of whom I've discussed here and, unfortunately, can't remember their names properly: Eileen from the Edmonton public school board.

But the other sides of that can also be true. One is the staff refusing to participate, but this is anticipating where the administration – could be a school board; could be the administration, including the principal – wants to make it so that the staff can't participate or they don't want that staff person to do it and makes it difficult. This subamendment is anticipating that particular circumstance, and I know the sponsoring member well enough to know that she's not going to bring this forward on one person talking about this. She's obviously heard it from more than one place, where things get manoeuvred so that a willing teacher or staff member is manoeuvred out of being able to help establish or lead or be the facilitator for a GSA.

I think that's fair. We've got the amendment on the one hand anticipating where staff refuse to participate; this is anticipating where the administration are manoeuvring it, and you have a willing staff member. It's saying that if we've got a willing staff member and they indicate they're willing to do this, the administration can't manoeuvre them out of it. Basically, if someone has indicated that they're interested, the route that's available here is that the principal would say: "Oh, well, sorry; nobody can do this. Would the minister please appoint someone?" This is saying: "No. If there's somebody in the school that has indicated that they want to do this, they should be accepted as the individual who is able to do this." I think that's fair. It's another way of anticipating – it's just coming at it from a slightly different direction. It's trying to ensure that the flow of this continues to go in the direction of being able to establish the GSAs with willing participants. That's why I'm suggesting that it's worth while to pursue this, to take advantage of people that might be in place but, you know, their administration doesn't really want it to happen, so they're manoeuvring it rather than the staff manoeuvring it.

I'm sorry; that sounded more complicated than it actually is. Is that okay? Did everybody understand what I was saying? Work with me, audience.

Mr. Hehr: You're in favour of the amendment. There you go

Ms Blakeman: Yes, thank you. Very clearly I'm in favour of the amendment.

But that's why. The amendments that have been brought forward by the minister already anticipate one scenario where members of a school may not wish to participate and are trying to sort of foul the spark plugs, if I may use that analogy, and this is just another group of people trying to foul the same spark plugs. It's trying to say: "No, no, no. If there's someone that's available and they say that they want to do this, we're going to accept it." We're not going to let the administration get in the middle here and go, "No, you don't really want to do it," or "Gee, I've just assigned you to coach every single basketball game for the next century," and takes them out of commission so that they can't do it. This is saying that when there's a willing person there, we should take advantage of that and allow them to do it and not be rushing about saying: "No. I've made it so that it's impossible for them to be willing." God, I hope that clarified things.

Thank you very much. I do encourage my colleagues in the House, since we're all getting a bit weary, to pass this. Just think. We have a whole three more weeks just like this. I know how excited you all are. So let's pass this subamendment, and then we can get on to passing the amendment, and then, all things being willing, we could even just take a leap of faith here and pass it out at committee and go into third and pass it out of third. We could do that. We have enough time.

An Hon. Member: Let's do it.

Ms Blakeman: All right. Let's do it. Let's pass her subamendment. Thanks.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on subamendment 1?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on subamendment 1 carried unanimously]

The Deputy Chair: That takes us back to amendment A6. Are there any other members who wish to speak on amendment A6?

Mr. Dirks: If there's no one else who wishes to speak, I just want to thank all members for their participation in this debate. I think we've reached a good place, where we can now move to the full bill for consideration. So thank you to everyone.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any others who wish to speak?

Hon. Members: Question.

The Deputy Chair: The question has been called.

[Motion on amendment A6 carried unanimously]

5:10

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other comments in Committee of the Whole on Bill 10?

Hon. Members: Question.

The Deputy Chair: Are you ready for the question, then, on Bill 10, an Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children?

[The remaining clauses of Bill 10 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'd like to move that we rise and report Committee of the Whole.

[Motion carried]

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McKay-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports Bill 10 with some amendments. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report? If you do, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Speaker: Those opposed should say no. I hear no "no," so that is carried unanimously and so ordered.

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 10

An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Mr. Speaker, I'm rising to move third reading of Bill 10, An Act to Amend the Alberta Bill of Rights to Protect our Children, and it feels very good to say that right now.

I want to thank everyone for the support that we've gotten from all sides of the House today in making sure that this bill, Bill 10 in its new and improved form, is moving forward. I'm so proud today to be asking for the support of the House for this amended bill.

In November our government decided to put this bill on pause, and it was the right decision. We paused, and we listened, and we learned, and most importantly we heard from Albertans, and we have responded in the best way possible. We have responded in a collaborative way, with everyone working together, because our kids in this province deserve that collaboration when it comes to their safety, and they got it from all sides of this House today, and it is a wonderful, wonderful thing.

The work we have done here today makes three things very clear about GSAs: that, first of all, students who want a GSA in this province have every right to have a GSA, that that GSA has to be in their school, and that it has to be under the name of their choosing.

Mr. Speaker, it was more than a year and a half ago when I became associate minister of family and community safety, and LGBTQ issues were in my mandate. That's when I met Dr. Kristopher Wells, who is in our audience right now and who has been an amazing support to me on this issue. I went to my first GSA conference and heard from kids about the impact of GSAs, about the fact that for some kids in this province it is the only place that they can feel safe. That is why they're so important. A lot of these kids don't get that support at home. They will get that support in a GSA, and I'm so proud to be able to say that every child in this province who wants one can have one.

You know, Bill 10 in its entirety represents a huge step forward for LGBTQ rights in this province with respect to gay-straight alliances, and that is something that I have stood for in my career proudly. The bill enhances the Alberta Bill of Rights by ensuring that no Albertan will be subject to discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression. The fact that we are able to talk about those things right now is a wonderful moment in this province in terms of social justice. It is a hugely important piece. It also enshrines the rights of parents to make informed decisions about their kids' education, and that right continues to be honoured in this bill because we believe that parental rights are extremely important and so do Albertans. Finally, Bill 10 makes an important correction by moving section 11.1 from the Human Rights Act into the School Act and, most importantly, removing sexual orientation from this clause because we needed to do that, and we're doing that.

As those in this room and across the province know, I have been a forceful advocate for LGBTQ citizens. I think it's a hugely important issue for us. I was proud to steward the removal of the preamble to the Marriage Act that states that marriage is between a man and a woman. We are a progressive, conservative province, and I am proud that we are, and this shows that we are.

The advancement of the GSA issue is something I take personal pride in because I know how important they are to kids. I know that when we have a province with GSAs, we have kids who feel better supported, better protected, and they learn that that is an important quality to have. They are our future leaders, and they will take that going forward. They will take that inclusiveness. They will take that understanding and acceptance going forward. They are our future leaders. We have to lead by example, and we're doing an amazing job of it here today, everyone in this House.

I want to thank the Member for Edmonton-Centre because she has done a fantastic and forceful job on this issue. I think the conversations have been difficult but important ones, and I want to applaud her work on this issue because these are not easy things to talk about.

I want to take a special moment to thank the Member for Calgary-Buffalo because when he brought Motion 503 forward not a lot of us were talking about GSAs. In fact, not a lot of us in this province knew what GSAs were. The fact that we began to talk about them in the place where we make legislation was a major step forward for us, and it is the reason we are here today.

I know that we still have work today going forward on all the inclusive issues in this province that we want to work on. I really hope that the spirit we captured today in terms of collaboration is something that we can embrace going forward, because Alberta kids deserve that, and they got that today. I am so proud, and I thank all of you for your efforts.

With that, I'd like to call the vote.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West has moved third reading of Bill 10. Are there any other speakers at third reading who wish to address the Assembly on this bill at this time? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, briefly.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. Just really briefly because I'm getting the sense we're going to seize the moment here. I just wanted to conclude by saying how pleased and proud I am that the politicians in this Chamber have caught up to Albertans. I think that's important, and I thank everyone. I know that sometimes this is really difficult, and I do appreciate this because it's about creating a safe space for kids. In the end, it's about the kids.

I want to thank my mom for recognizing that this was an issue for kids in schools. As a principal and a teacher she got it, and she made sure that the kids at her school were safe and that the staff were safe. I appreciate the leadership that she showed me.

So thank you very much for everybody's co-operation. We still have work to do, and we will do it. It would be nice if we were as collegial as we've managed to be today, but I don't expect it. But thank you very much, everyone, for helping to move this along so that we have conclusion to it today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others?

Mr. Kang: Well, job well done. I want to congratulate everybody. This Chamber has made us all proud and has made all Albertans proud. I'm really proud of the work we have done today. Congratulations to the Premier, all the members.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any others?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-North West to close debate if you wish.

Ms Jansen: I'd like to call the question.

The Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 10 read a third time]

The Speaker: So it was almost unanimous, and that's good. I would declare this one carried and so ordered, but I do want to make one small observation, and I'll be very brief. Today through your good work on Bill 10 you have demonstrated something rarely seen in politics anywhere. I've had the privilege of being in many Legislatures around the world and looking at and observing debate and so on. Rarely do you see the kind of spirit of co-operation that occurred in this Assembly today and probably what led up to it yesterday and days before, and that is the spirit that moves something forward for the greater good of all. I want to congratulate each one of you for that. With that, I'm proud to declare this particular bill carried and approved at third reading.

Congratulations, and let me recognize the hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a little late in the day here, and I would hereby move that we call it 6 o'clock and that this Assembly stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:23 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, hon. members.

Let us pray. As we fulfill our duties today, may we find patience whenever disagreement arises, may we find strength whenever weakness appears, and may we find determination whenever uncertainty besets us. Amen.

Please be seated.

Statement by the Speaker

Election Anniversaries and Birthdays

The Speaker: Hon. members, just before we go to Introduction of Guests, may I take a moment to remind ourselves that we have two members today, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre and the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, who are celebrating their 18th election anniversary year as members of this Assembly. Congratulations, Edmonton-Centre and Calgary-Fort.

As well, please join me in acknowledging and congratulating a member who received one of the best birthday presents she could have yesterday, the hon. Member for Calgary-North West. Happy birthday.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Let us move on to school groups for introduction. Let's start with the hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by Leduc-Beaumont.

Ms Olesen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly visitors from Wes Hosford elementary school, located in the heart of my constituency of Sherwood Park. These bright young students, their inspirational teachers, and dedicated volunteer helpers are seated in both the public and members' galleries, and I would ask that they please rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some of the brightest students that Alberta has to offer from Saint-André academy in Beaumont. The school opened in September, and it is full. They are accompanied by their teacher, Miss Colette Chamulka, and two parent helpers, Mrs. Trenda Willcott and Mrs. Shauna Reynolds. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask that they rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, did you have an introduction as well?

Ms Blakeman: I have it in my notes that I do, but I believe they're coming in at 2 o'clock, so if I may, I'll preannounce them, and that is to give a very warm welcome to the students' union of MacEwan University, which is located, of course, in the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. Please join me in giving a prewelcome to those members that will join us at 2 o'clock.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there other school or university groups?

Seeing none, let's move on to other important guests, starting with Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville and followed by Edmonton-Decore.

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Renaye Wade and her mother, Tammy Wade. Renaye and Tammy have come here today to raise awareness on distracted driving. Renaye had her life changed forever when she was struck by a semi two years ago this month. Renaye has suffered multiple injuries and a devastating brain injury. These tragic consequences bring Renaye here today to advocate for awareness and greater penalties. You will never know what it's like to walk in her shoes. I would like Renaye and Tammy to please rise – they are seated in the members' gallery – and receive the traditional warm welcome.

Mrs. Sarich: Mr. Speaker, it's my honour and privilege to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly five very proud guests from the Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton, a very active not-for-profit organization established in 2012. My heartfelt best wishes for this organization's important leadership, strength, and the steadfast support given to improve lives and to advance the skills that Albertans and others need in our interconnected world. My guests are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and remain standing as I mention their names: Mr. Dhiaa Raheem, president, Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton; Mr. Ashraf Noor AL-Deen, vice-president, Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton; Mr. Sarmad Atalah, past president and founder, Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton; Mrs. Salool Alrashed, director and founder, Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton; Mrs. Nazik Zaidan, secretary, Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton. Mr. Kassm Kassm, treasurer, Iraqi Canadian Association of Edmonton, extended his regrets as he wasn't able to join us today. I would now ask the Assembly to please join me in giving them the traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. An honour and a privilege today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three very special guests, and I'll ask each of them to rise as I introduce them. Firstly, the reason that I've been able to spend the last seven years representing the people of Red Deer-South: my primary and most important supporter, my wife of 34 years, Jackie Dallas. Please rise, Jackie.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We all know the importance of the constituency work that's done in our offices, and I've been incredibly blessed to have one constituency assistant for the last seven years. She has done tireless, fabulous work for the constituents of Red Deer-South. Please welcome Brenda Johnson.

Mr. Speaker, finally and not the least of the three is Brenda's husband, Ken Johnson, who is an entrepreneur in our community, operates a company called Techno Solve, which provides LED lighting solutions, and is one of the best sign men in the business. Welcome, Ken.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, I have you down for a second introduction, but I don't see that your guests have arrived yet. Shall we move on?

Ms Blakeman: Yes.

The Speaker: Okay. Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have two minutes per statement. Let us begin with Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville and then the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Renaye Wade

Ms Fenske: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Driving is a privilege. Driving requires our full attention at all times. Distracted driving because our attention is diverted somewhere other than the road ahead can be avoided. Sometimes we need more than a gentle reminder to pay attention and avoid what can result in tragic consequences. Sometimes we need people like Renaye Wade to be an advocate to find a way to encourage others to pay attention. A dancer and dance teacher with a dream of becoming a lawyer, Renaye suffered a severe brain injury and was left in a coma for 34 days as a result of a horrific traffic accident. She has had to relearn to eat, drink, sit, stand, and walk.

Over the past two years Renaye and her friends have endeavoured to raise awareness of safe driving practices. To that end, RADD was formed, Renaye Against Distracted Driving. Friends of Renaye have participated in parades. Renaye speaks to young people in school assemblies. I think she has about half a dozen speaking engagements in the next month, and most recently she has created a petition that calls for demerits for distracted driving. One day in Mundare last week I saw Renaye's petition on the counter at the Esso, on the counter at Stawnichy's, and I regularly see her on Facebook.

As Renaye's mom, Tammy, says: my daughter will never be one hundred per cent because somebody didn't pay attention in a moment; they were distracted, not focusing on the road. Renaye and her family do not want to see others suffer as she has. She is convinced that safer driving must be encouraged by adding demerits to distracted driving violations, and she is here today to support the MLA for Calgary-East and his private member's bill.

Sunday, March 15, marks the second anniversary of the accident that changed Renaye's life forever. You are all invited to the steps of the Legislature to join her as she marks this anniversary and for awareness for stiffer penalties for careless driving. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: Thank you and welcome.

Let us move on to the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, followed by Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Official Opposition

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Three months ago I would have never dreamed of becoming the Leader of the Official Opposition. The outpouring of support from every corner of this province has been overwhelming and has brought me to tears at times. The one message I hear over and over again is, "Keep fighting; we're with you, and let's send a message to all Alberta that we're roaring back," because – and let me be frank for a moment – Albertans are beginning to see for themselves that this Premier is just the same as the old Premier.

They have watched him break almost every one of the promises he's made. He has been running around the province like Chicken Little, floating trial balloons, threatening tax increases, illegal elections, and has damaged the economic growth in this province. He has talked down to Albertans, blaming them, telling them it's their fault and to look in the mirror, and Albertans are beginning to recognize that the ideas that the Premier has said he has brought forward have come straight from the opposition, whether it's the licence plates, selling the planes, keeping the Michener open, sole-source contracting, or outrageous cellphone bills at AHS.

After 44 years this government is out of ideas. Now, I know that pundits and others have been quick to write us off, but, folks, Albertans love an underdog story. The fact is that the Wildrose believes in democracy. Our values, our principles, and our ideas remain just as important and as badly needed as ever. We're conservatives, and we're not ashamed of it. We believe our health care system should be there for Albertans when they need it, that we have a world-class education system, and we treat all front-line workers in this province with respect. Unlike the Premier, who tried to swallow up the opposition in the dead of the night, we are a party that firmly believes in strengthening democracy, and we are the only party talking about protecting taxpayers from tax increases and stripping government down.

Let me end this with a message. While the actions of a few tried to stop us in our mission, we will never give up, we will never stop fighting, and we will be relentless in our goal to put Albertans first. Thank you to all Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Fort McMurray Continuing Care Facility

Mr. Allen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question that I'm most asked by the constituents of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo is: when are we going to have a long-term care centre for the seniors in Fort McMurray? [interjections] This government has committed to investing in better seniors' care, focusing on long-term care beds, sprinkler and safety upgrades, and seniors' lodges.

As members of this Assembly are well aware, Fort McMurray has been advocating for more than a decade for its first long-term care facility. Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm thrilled to say that it's coming soon. The Parsons Creek continuing care has just been retendered after previous bids came in significantly over budget. In order to create the most value, the design of Parsons Creek has been simplified while still maintaining 30 long-term care and 70 affordable supportive living beds. The site also allows for expansion in the future.

Mr. Speaker, those in Fort McMurray can rest assured that we are not about to put vital infrastructure needs aside because of the price of oil and that we're ready to build up. Shovels will be in the ground this construction season on a new, 100-bed continuing care centre. Once open, it will also serve to open up an entire floor of our hospital, enabling the renovation of space for other critical health care delivery for the entire region.

Our government recognizes that Alberta's seniors are a valuable part of our province and need strong programs to support their needs. Ensuring that our seniors are well cared for and well looked after is something that I am deeply committed to. With Parsons Creek continuing care opening, our seniors, those very Albertans that helped convert the oil sands from Canada's largest research and development project to the engine of its economy, are now entering the sunset of their lives and will be able to spend their remaining years in the community they helped build. They will have familiar, homelike settings that provide an appropriate level of care, close to their families and friends. In addition to the continued twinning of highway 63, six new schools, and interchange work, this is a facility that I am truly proud will finally be constructed in Fort McMurray.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, please be reminded that it is not the custom of this House to interject when members are giving private member's statements or to raise points of order. So thank you for remembering that.

Edmonton-Calder, I understand you're going next, in place of Edmonton-Strathcona. Please proceed.

Government and New Democratic Opposition Policies

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This PC government has squandered our prosperity for far too long. They have neglected education, health care, and infrastructure in the good times and are only making more reckless damage now. They have weakened our most crucial public services and are now asking everyday Albertans to pay the price for mistakes the PCs made again and again and again. This short-sighted, panicked approach for slashing funding to our critical services will only make the problems worse down the road. Alberta has had a critical infrastructure deficit ever since the Klein era.

The PCs have lost sight of what makes this country great: publicly funded health care delivered by well trained front-line workers in modern, functioning hospitals; schools big enough to accommodate our booming student population and enough teachers to guide them through their education; and a variety of transportation infrastructure like safer highways and bridges and expanding public transit.

Alberta's NDP are focused on making things easier for Albertans, Mr. Speaker. While the PCs are out of touch with the needs of this province and are only concerned with priorities of privileged friends and insiders, we are concerned with the priorities of everyone. We are dedicated more than ever to making responsible, balanced choices that will build a more prosperous future for all Albertans. With a diversified economy, a taxation system where the wealthy pay their fair share, and a government that focuses on strengthening families and communities, Alberta's NDP will lead a bright, modern province that all Albertans deserve and need.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We have room for one more. Let's hear from Calgary-Southeast.

Social Work Week

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize Social Work Week, which took place last week, March 1 to 7. As a former social worker myself I am honoured to have this opportunity to acknowledge the great work done by my former colleagues and thousands of other social workers throughout the province.

This year's theme was the Art of Cultivating Communities. This is a very appropriate theme as social workers cultivate relationships by working together with schools, contracted agencies, nonprofits, and other organizations. Social workers are often called on to be empathetic, supportive, and patient while dealing with some of the darkest moments in human life such as addiction, violence, child abuse, and end-of-life support, just to name a few.

As social workers cultivate relationships, they are required to be professional, persistent, and sometimes courageous. They often have to adapt to new situations to help Albertans feel supported and able to make important changes in their lives. Sometimes they are the unsung heroes behind some of the horrific incidents that we encounter. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, social workers are engaged in an incredible profession. They're in the business of changing lives.

Today, Mr. Speaker, I encourage all Albertans to join our government in thanking those professionals for their exceptional commitment and compassion for serving Albertans. Through their efforts, they contribute to the quality of life of Alberta, making our province one of the best places to live, work, and raise a family.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, my script said Calgary-Southeast; with apologies to the hon. member from that area.

Thank you, Calgary-Hawkwod, for your statement.

Statement by the Speaker

Rotation of Questions and Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we begin the clock for Oral Question Period, I would like to advise members of some changes in the rotation to Oral Question Period and to Members' Statements that were necessitated by the changes in caucus membership that occurred in December 2014, while the Assembly was not sitting.

With respect to the Oral Question Period rotation I would draw your attention to the Oral Question Period rotation document that was placed on your desks yesterday. This rotation is the result of a new House leaders' agreement, which was reached on March 6, 2015, and it replaces the proposed question period rotation that was included in my memo to each of you on March 5, 2015, the memo that went to all members regarding procedures for the continuation, or what we call the procedural letter, for the Third Session of the 28th Legislature. I will table the agreement today at the appropriate time during the daily Routine.

The rotation of questions on day 1 through day 3 for questions 1 through 5 remains the same as it was on December 1, 2014, the last time the Oral Question Period rotation was modified. The Official Opposition retains the first three questions, while the Liberal opposition is entitled to ask the fourth question, and the ND opposition is allotted the fifth question on each of those days.

On day 4 of the rotation the Official Opposition may ask the first two questions, while the Liberal opposition is allocated the third question, and the ND opposition is entitled to ask question 4. The independent member may ask one question in the weekly rotation, and the fifth question on day 4 is reserved for that member.

In addition, the Official Opposition is entitled to ask question 8 on days 2 and 4 along with questions 12 and 14 on days 1 and 3 and question 18 on day 4. The Liberal opposition is allotted questions 6 and 10 each day, question 16 on each day except for day 1, and question 18 on day 2. The ND opposition is also entitled to ask question 8 on days 1 and 3, questions 12 and 14 on days 2 and 4, question 16 on day 1, and question 18 on day 3. The Progressive Conservative caucus is allotted questions 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, and 17 on each day of the rotation and question 18 on day 1. For the benefit of members and those following the ongoing proceedings today is Wednesday, but it is day 4 in terms of the rotation.

On another topic, very briefly, that being members' statements, the members' statement rotation has also been modified to reflect the current caucus composition of private members in the Assembly. I have not received a House leaders' agreement amending the rotation for members' statements that was included in my March 5, 2015, memo to all members, and therefore that rotation will be followed as outlined. This week is week 1 of the four-week members' statement rotation, and it is otherwise also known as day 17 on the projected sitting days calendar.

Thank you for your indulgence.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Let us move on to Oral Question Period, starting with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

School Construction

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On school construction the Premier said: we cannot delay any further; we will get shovels in the ground. A few days ago the Infrastructure minister announced that 38 new schools are already under construction. Well, you know what? Sometimes they exaggerate, so we decided to go see if any of these actually have shovels in the ground. In Edmonton not a single one, not even close. In fact, most of them remain empty fields. So I'll ask the Premier again: why did the Infrastructure minister tell Albertans that schools are under construction when they're not?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member should be, I think, responsible with her statements to Albertans since schools are important and people care about these. Of the phase 1 schools that were announced in 2011 – there were 35 such schools – 30 of them are now complete. In terms of the phase 2 schools that were announced in 2013, 38 of the 120 schools are under construction. So this is the largest construction of school infrastructure that has taken place in our country. We will get it done on time and on budget, and the hon. member should recognize that.

Mrs. Forsyth: What I do recognize is that the 2011 government is the one that you say you didn't like, didn't want to have anything to do with it.

When most Albertans hear "construction," they expect maybe some shovels, maybe some hammers, some nail guns, but not empty fields. In Edmonton alone there are empty lots at Windermere, Terwillegar Heights, Lewis Estates, Lewis Farms, Summerside, Blackmud Creek, and Bishop David Motiuk, nothing but snow and ice. In Calgary at the Auburn site, nothing but grass. Albertans know what construction looks like, but I'm beginning to wonder if your government knows what it looks like. To the Premier: when are you going to stop playing politics with our . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, we have no intention of playing politics with schools. They are far too important for the children of our province. You'll be pleased to know that this week we are opening two new schools, one in Chestermere and one in Airdrie, and this is a continuation of our commitment from phase 1, phase 2, and phase 3, 230-some projects. They will all be built as the Premier said, on time and on budget. That's our expectation.

Mrs. Forsyth: No, they won't, Minister. Pinocchio.

Let's be clear, Minister. At Lewis Estates we did meet a worker who was unloading some fence. When asked if any of these schools were under construction, he replied: nope. Now your Infrastructure minister has said: schools will be built; they'll be built within the time frame. Well, guess what? The Edmonton public school board themselves are saying that we'd be lucky to have any schools ready for 2017. The fact is that this is nothing more than PC electioneering and empty promises. To the minister: why is your government misleading Albertans on how many schools have shovels at them?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know how many times we have to tell the member opposite the statistics, that are very clear. In phase 1: 35 school projects with 30 of them completed, four under construction. In phase 2: 120 projects with a number of them in design, a number in tender, a number in construction. In phase 3: 57 projects. Our target is to open schools in '16 and in '17 and five high schools in 2018. I can't think of a better scenario for the children in our province.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Second main set of questions, hon. leader.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Minister, you and I are going to go for a drive.

Health Care Funding

Mrs. Forsyth: This morning the government announced that it's taking action on health care for Albertans. Interesting timing. Emergency rooms in Edmonton and Calgary will be renovated at a cost of $50 million over two years, but here's the catch. Apparently, it's all depending on detailed planning. Now, this sounds oddly familiar to the government's school strategy. Make an announcement, put up a sign, and walk away. Minister, Albertans are tired of empty pre-election promises. If you haven't done the detailed planning, how can you possibly announce that . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, we're moving ahead as quickly as possible on these plans. You can fast-track with creative people, get things done in a very expeditious way. We plan to move through our redevelopment of our emergency rooms because they're needed, and it will be done in a reasonable length of time because this government wants to see projects move ahead quickly.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Minister, whatever you do, don't get the Infrastructure minister because he doesn't move very fast.

Minister, you claim to be taking action, yet the transition beds you announced today won't even be built till next fall. We've seen how this government's promise evolves over the span of just one week, let alone half a year. Albertans aren't buying it. Last week an entire surgical ward was closed at the Peter Lougheed and nurses were laid off. The spin of this, of course, was that the beds were being converted into transition units for seniors. Good news. But if you're waiting for surgery, well, I guess that's too bad. Where are the 36 surgical beds going to be?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, this government is committed to maintaining their promises. Last fall we committed to 750 new long-term care beds, of which 466 would be available this year, and we will have 303. As to the surgical beds Peter Lougheed is in a position to deliver those services, but they're using some of the facilities for restorative care, which is a really important part of making sure our citizens are taken care of.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, we didn't get where the surgical beds are, so let's try this. It seems like only a few weeks ago the Premier stood up and pronounced to Albertans that there was no more money.

Zero. Nothing. Zilch. Now it seems, on the eve of an election, that the government does have money: money for schools, money for hospitals, money for seniors' beds, money for anything and everything that Albertans need. Now, we've seen this game before. You promise the world, you call an election, and then you break your promise. Premier, one minute there's no money; the next minute, there's millions. Where's the money to pay for these pre-election promises? Show us the money, Premier.

2:00

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would encourage the hon. member to stay tuned, and she will in due course see a fiscal plan and a budget and a financial plan that takes this province forward. We've been very clear, both the Minister of Finance and myself, that we will firstly maintain the quality of front-line services to Albertans because that is what Albertans want. We've also been very clear that we intend to get caught up and continue to build the social capital that we need in this province. That is what Albertans have expected from this government, and that's what we will deliver.

The Speaker: We're moving on to Calgary-Mountain View for your questions.

Childhood Immunization

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier and the Education minister helped Alberta take a progressive step forward by finally agreeing to an idea which seemed radical to them at the time but proved to be the right thing to do. I want to give them the same opportunity today. For years public health officials have been telling us that school vaccinations are the best way to protect Martha and Henry's grandchildren, make them healthy, and ensure that our communities are protected against preventable disease. Will the Premier show the same leadership today as he did yesterday and make vaccines mandatory in all schools in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Dirks: Thank you, member opposite and Mr. Speaker. This is an issue that is of concern to Canadians. We have seen the importance of vaccinations over the generations. I have experienced that personally, as I'm sure all members have. We would want to ensure that children are vaccinated; I think that's very important. We would want to have consultations with people across the province if we were going to consider the proposal that the member opposite is bringing forward today.

The Speaker: First supplemental, hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, the Public Health Agency of Canada also strongly recommends that children be vaccinated as it not only protects the individual; it protects all the people in their circle. Vaccines save lives. All 50 U.S. states and three Canadian provinces require proof of vaccination or an exemption for enrolment in school. Clearly, other jurisdictions are being progressive on the issue, but Alberta is still lagging far behind. We can change that today. Will the Minister of Education commit to making Martha and Henry's grandkids safer by requiring proof of immunization when a child is registered for school? Yes or no?

Mr. Dirks: I thank the member opposite for the question. Vaccinations do save lives, and they are very important for our children and for our grandchildren, so we want to ensure that children are vaccinated. I take very seriously the member's proposal. We would want to, as I said, consult with school boards, with parents, with Albertans to see what might be the way forward on this particular matter.

The Speaker: Final supplemental, please.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, only about 72 per cent of children by their second birthday have received the appropriate vaccinations. Alberta Health Services' own goal is 98 per cent. It's understood that not everyone can get vaccines due to medical and other conditions, so bona fide exemptions are understood and accepted. Again, this time to the Minister of Health: given that this would clearly help your department achieve its benchmarks, which we all know has been a major challenge, will you implement mandatory vaccinations for school attendance?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We concur with the Minister of Education. We'd be glad to work with all the institutions to try to find ways to ensure that all our children are vaccinated. It's important. But there are rules and regulations that we must follow and parental positions we must listen to.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, leader of the ND opposition, followed by the independent member.

Health Care Funding

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the last weeks I've released documents showing a crisis in Alberta's emergency rooms. On one day in September every emergency room in Calgary was so packed that critically ill patients arriving at emergency room doors were not receiving life-saving care in the way Canadian standards demand. Meanwhile this government is telling Albertans to expect a 9 per cent cut to services. To the Premier: why won't you at least admit that your plan to cut 9 per cent out of health care will make the problems deeply, deeply more difficult?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, I think it's vitally important to understand that this government is committed to making sure that front-line service is delivered in a most expeditious way. Our emergency departments in the two major cities have had some challenges. But you know something? We have some incredible people working there, who are working through the challenge they face. As you know, this year has been a big problem with the flu season. I believe it's over now. It should take some pressure off the system, which will allow it to be more efficient. Today we announced some changes, and we can talk about those after.

The Speaker: First supplemental, hon. member.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was at that announcement, but I will say that renaming existing hospital beds isn't actually opening new beds. As for the $50 million that the Health minister announced today, it kind of pales next to the 9 per cent cut. Indeed, a 5 per cent cut to AHS is almost a billion dollars, 20 times more than what you announced today. So if the Premier thinks that his announcement of $50 million today can help the front line, exactly how does he expect Albertans to believe that a cut 20 times that size will not hurt the front line?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, the intent of this government is to run an efficient, effective government. Our health care system is one of the best in the country. There are ways in which we can do things more efficiently, more effectively. There are metrics at which we can do more and be more efficient. The $50 million today is going to open up opportunities in several emergency rooms to begin to expand their ability to deliver services to Albertans as well as to encourage more mental health capacity for the systems. This government is committed to helping every single individual who needs emergency help.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, five years ago this PC government had another celebratory press conference, where they announced that by 2015 they would ensure that 90 per cent of ER patients are admitted within eight hours. Well, the facts tell a different story. Last week the average number of patients in Calgary and Edmonton ERs admitted within eight hours was 34 per cent. Not 90 per cent; 34 per cent. So five years and you're at one-third of your target. Again, to the Premier: why should Albertans trust your government to manage health care at all, let alone trust you to cut 9 per cent without . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, today's announcement of $50 million will go a long way in helping to improve that. The Premier's announcement in the fall – we're beginning to build more long-term care beds, of which we announced 750; 466 in the short term. We have improved and have put over 300 people in those long-term care beds. As I said earlier, the Minister of Seniors is going to announce tomorrow the ASLI program. We're making tremendous strides in trying to move forward, making sure that Albertans can move through our emergency system but also through our acute-care system.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Changes in Caucus Affiliations

Mr. Anglin: Last December the leader and House leader of the Queen's loyal opposition organized the greatest betrayal of the public trust in parliamentary history. They made use of their positions to influence or otherwise coerce members of their own caucus in a treacherous mutilation of an effective, elected opposition. To the Premier: when you first learned of the proposed offer to merge with the Wildrose Party and the now reconstituted offer to cross the floor en masse, did you at any time advise, consult, or otherwise inform anyone that this was or could be unethical?

Mr. Prentice: Well, there's a collection of language there that, if not unparliamentary, is certainly incendiary, Mr. Speaker. Let me just say that I'm proud of the Progressive Conservative caucus. I'm proud of the people who comprise that caucus. They are, without exception, decent, honourable people who come to work every day trying to do the right thing by Albertans, and I'm proud to call them my colleagues.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. independent member, let's watch our language a little bit here if we could, please. Let's hear what you have for your first supplemental.

Mr. Anglin: I didn't see a point of order, Mr. Speaker, but I'll be cognizant of that.

Before or during negotiations that effectuated the single most treasonous act in parliamentary history, did anyone known to you entertain, discuss, consider, or otherwise debate any offers or requests for cabinet appointments for these corrupt members proposing to cross the floor?

Speaker's Ruling Intemperate Language

The Speaker: Hon. member, I fail to see how that elevates the level of decorum or debate in this House. Personal attacks are not in question here, please, and they're not in order either. I don't need a point of order to rise and ask someone to retract or refrain or restrain. I'm going to ask if anybody over here wants to offer a comment to that question. If they don't, we'll move on to your final supplemental, which I hope you'll glance at quickly and clean up, if nothing else.

Anybody wishing to respond?

I see no one wishing to respond, so let's hear what you have for your final supplemental.

2:10

Mr. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I think the public deserves an answer to that question.

To the Minister of Justice: as a member of the cabinet and as a member of the Alberta bar, upon learning of the proposed floor crossing under discussion here, did you at any time advise, consult, or otherwise inform anyone that what was being proposed was or could be unethical?

Mr. Denis: I believe this member is asking for a legal opinion, which I'm not privy to.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Let us move on. Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-Riverview.

Sexual Health Education Curriculum Content

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Minister of Education and I helped the province take a very progressive step forward, and today I'd like to encourage him to come hand in hand with me and take another very progressive step forward by mandating the teaching of consent to young people as part of the school curriculum. Now, consent is fundamental in educating young people on the importance of individual rights, reinforcing gender equality, and reducing sexual violence, especially amongst females. To the Education minister: will he follow best practices and commit to putting the teaching of consent into the sex ed curriculum?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, we certainly want students to learn about healthy lifestyles, relationships, and wellness. Teachers already have the flexibility to discuss topics related to sexual health, including sexual consent, and we encourage them to tailor class discussions and projects to current issues and to student interests. Human sexuality education is currently offered in grades 4 through 9 in the mandatory health and lifestyles program. We're presently engaged in a curriculum review, and we welcome all school boards, parents, and other education stakeholders to share their perspective on the matter of sexual consent.

The Speaker: Thank you.

First supplemental.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I know that the curriculum is certainly about healthy and respectful relationships, but does the minister really think that being taught healthy and respectful relationships is going to empower kids to know their rights and to keep predators away? This is really important.

Mr. Dirks: Well, I'm sure the member opposite would agree that healthy lifestyles, relationships, and wellness include understanding issues pertaining to sexuality, and that's why we have some of those elements in our curriculum. As I indicated, we are presently engaged in a broad review of our curriculum, and we welcome all school boards, parents, and other education stakeholders to share their perspectives on the matter of sexual consent.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thanks, but it doesn't teach consent. Date rape for high school and university students is way too common, and it happens because kids find themselves out of their comfort zone and not able to deal with the situation. So why can't the government help these kids by allowing consent to be taught as part of sex education?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'll simply reiterate what I said, that we are in a curriculum review. It's a broad curriculum review of all aspects of Alberta's curriculum, kindergarten through grade 12, and we welcome school boards and parents and other stakeholders and the member opposite, if she'd like to get involved, to share their perspective on the issue of sexual consent during this curriculum review.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Postsecondary Education Access

Mr. Young: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has a world-class education system and universities. However, many of my constituents are concerned that access to advanced education is making it difficult for students to enrol in programs they are qualified for, particularly engineering, science, and medicine. Alberta already has the lowest involvement in postsecondary institutions in the country, and they fear that additional barriers may impact this further. My question is to the Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education. What is the minister doing to accommodate Alberta's students that fully meet the entry requirements . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you very much. I would like to begin by saying thank you to this member for being such a strong advocate for Alberta's postsecondary students. Mr. Speaker, this government is committed to a system that is achieving accessibility, excellence, and sustainability. Accessibility will be a key part of our postbudget discussions that I'll be having with all of our Campus Alberta partners. In spite of the enrolment challenges, nearly 9 out of every 10 qualified students receive an offer of admission following their applications. We also have a number of delivery options for those who don't receive their first choice.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Young: Given the funding that Alberta taxpayers contribute to universities, our Alberta students may not receive priority for program spots. What is the minister doing to serve these Alberta students before out-of-province and out-of-country learners?

Mr. Scott: Again, Mr. Speaker, Campus Alberta institutions are responsible for setting their individual entrance requirements.

Accessibility for Albertans will be a key part of our postbudget consultation across Campus Alberta. Accessibility for Albertans is important. We also need to keep attracting the best young minds from across the world to Campus Alberta. Let me tell you why they apply to Campus Alberta. In a recent ranking of 2,000 elite universities the University of Alberta ranked 84. Amongst universities younger than 50 years old the University of Calgary ranked 13th in the world and number 1 in Canada.

Mr. Young: Given Alberta's low participation rate why aren't there more grants, student loans, and bursaries available for students who wish to attend postsecondary institutions in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you. Accessibility is a priority for this government, and I'm proud of our record. We invest $234 million in student aid supports. That includes scholarships, bursaries, grants, and debt management programs. In addition, $408 million is available through student loans. Any Albertan who's eligible for a loan receives one. Our graduates are successful, and they're successful paying their loans back. We expect that 90 per cent of our student loan dollars issued this year will be paid back, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, followed by Stony Plain.

Michael Stanley

Mr. Saskiw: Thank you. In 2013 I asked the Minister of Justice why he did not work harder to put convicted rapist Michael Stanley behind bars. I said that he was at a high risk to reoffend and that we had a moral obligation to put him in prison to keep others safe. The Justice minister disagreed and let Stanley roam free to hunt for his next victim, and recently he found her. Stanley raped a 69-year-old lady in Seattle. Does the Justice minister still think it was the right decision to let this piece of scum roam free?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I'm a little bit confused. Does this member want me to spend taxpayers' dollars to bring a convicted sex offender back to Alberta? As far as I'm concerned, this man is outside of Alberta, and he can stay out.

Mr. Saskiw: According to the King county sheriff's office Stanley is being held on $1 million bail. At least somebody is doing the minister's job for him. Imagine that: keeping a criminal behind bars. In fact, despite acknowledging Stanley's violent record, the minister's department said that the charges he was facing, and I quote, do not typically warrant engaging the extradition process. Minister, he broke our laws. There should be consequences. Why did you let him go free?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, there were no outstanding charges against this individual in Alberta for any violent offences. I say again that this man is out of Alberta as a convicted sex offender, and he can stay out.

Mr. Saskiw: Apparently it's okay if the person gets raped outside of our country.

Given that it has been reported that Stanley has been in and out of jail since the minister let him free, including an arrest where he had to be subdued with a taser in a nursing home, and now he's being charged with raping a 69-year-old lady, does the minister still think it was the right decision to let him roam freely, or will he commit today to our suggestion to alter Alberta's extradition policy immediately so this won't happen again?

The Speaker: Hon. minister, it has just come to my attention that this matter still might be under sub judice elsewhere.

Mr. Denis: This is before the courts in the United States.

The Speaker: Thank you. Well, then let's have that clarified and move on. Thank you.

The hon. Member for Stony Plain, followed by Calgary-Mountain View.

Mr. Saskiw: Point of clarification.

Corporate Taxation

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During the past few weeks I've met with groups and individuals in my constituency of Stony Plain. They have provided me with valuable feedback regarding what they believe should be included in Budget 2015. Some of the many topics we've covered include arguments for and against the reintroduction of health care premiums; the pros and cons of introducing a sales tax, a progressive tax, et cetera; and raising corporate taxes. My question is to the Minister of Finance. Corporations have benefited tremendously from Alberta's resource-rich economy for decades. If we are all in this together, why are we not looking at raising corporate taxes?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Campbell: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like the hon. member, I've also been out listening to Albertans about our upcoming budget. The members know I can't talk about Budget 2015, but I think it's important to consider that given low oil prices, the slowing economy with slim to no margins, laying off employees, now is not a good time to raise corporate taxes. I also look at the forest industry that's now getting back on its feet. I look at the agricultural industry that's competing world-wide. Raising corporate taxes is not what we need right now. What we need to do is keep Albertans working and protect jobs. Raising corporate taxes would make Alberta a less attractive place to invest and would reduce our competitive advantage and discourage companies from investing . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Let's hear the first supplemental now, please.

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that we are facing a massive $7 billion revenue gap in this year's budget, is there a strategy in place that would involve all Albertans, including corporations, helping to fill the budget gap while at the same time keeping Alberta competitive?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, both the Premier and I have said all along that as Albertans we're all in this together. Corporations are entities large and small made up of people who live and work, raise families, and pay taxes in Alberta. They donate to many social and sports organizations in our communities.

We live in a global economy, and capital is increasingly mobile. Investors prefer to put their money in places where their returns are taxed at lower rates. I would prefer they continue to invest in Alberta instead of other jurisdictions. We must remain competitive on the national and international playing fields.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Lemke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: how about raising corporate taxes in specific industries or sectors that have benefited the most from our low-tax system?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it's well known that all Albertans benefit from our tax system. Currently if Alberta had a tax system like any other province, Albertans and Alberta businesses would pay at least $11.6 billion more in taxes, something that the AFL suggests we might do. I don't believe that now is the time to raise corporate tax. We need to keep Albertans working and maintain our competitive advantage during this economic slowdown.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage all members to stay tuned for Budget 2015 and to support this government as we deliver a 10-year plan to get us off the roller coaster of oil prices.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, you raised a point of clarification at 2:20 regarding the Minister of Justice's comment about this matter being sub judice, and we will hear about that later. I'll be happy to clarify whatever the question is. I'm sure you know what sub judice is, but I'll hear you anyway.

Let us move on to Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Little Bow.

Health Facility Funding

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, during the last health care crisis this government announced 360 new beds to help relieve pressure on ER departments, but a few years later the transition unit at the Royal Alex was closed even as the wait times worsened. Today the Minister of Health announced the creation of another 300 beds in hospitals. Every crisis, every election the PCs promise more beds just to take them away afterwards. This is another expensive political Band-Aid. To the Minister of Health: why should Albertans trust that this will be any different given your government's pattern of broken promises?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, we did not promise 300-plus beds in hospitals; we promised 300 beds in a new kind of setting, which will allow people to move more rapidly through recuperation.

Ms Blakeman: So where is it? In the parking lot?

Mr. Mandel: It's under the new ASLI program.

The Speaker: Hon. minister, through the chair, please.

Mr. Mandel: Sorry.

The Speaker: No need to take the bait. Let's carry on with the answer.

Mr. Mandel: She's cute.

So we've continued to meet our promises. We did it in the fall. We're doing it now.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, of course, the real problem here is that we're trying to get people out of these institutions and into the community. When will this government build the needed public long-term care beds and supportive home-care services so they're not getting into the hospitals and ERs?

Mr. Mandel: Mr. Speaker, that's exactly what we're doing. We're building facilities and having people move into these facilities so that they don't have to go into hospitals or, if they are in hospitals, they can recuperate quicker in the proper environment. These are long-term care facilities, and they will make sure that people move quicker through the system so they can be allowed to go home quicker or go into the proper care system.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Swann: This looks like more money for their private friends and donors. Will he guarantee that the ASLI grants will not go to private, for-profit care providers but will remain in the public system?

Mr. Prentice: Well, Mr. Speaker, I take exception to that comment. I want to be clear that the announcement of this minister today is about restorative care for senior citizens. That should be of concern to every single person in this Legislative Assembly. These are restorative beds that will make sure that senior citizens who are ill are in the exact perfect circumstances they should be in and not in an acute-care bed in a hospital. It's compassionate, it means a lot to seniors in this province, and the opposition should support it.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Rural Bridge Maintenance and Repair

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Transportation. Back in Budget '13-14 Alberta Transportation zero funded the strategic transportation infrastructure program, which contains local bridge file funds. Alberta rural municipalities demand access to the fund's engineering support and help in the repair and rehabilitation of these bridges in order to ensure the shortest, most direct routes for our products to market. What assurances can this minister provide rural municipalities that dead ends and long detours will not become the norm because the range and township roads are becoming unsafe?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the hon. member for his questions and for always being such as a strong advocate for rural Alberta. First, I'd like to assure this House and all Albertans that there are no unsafe bridges in this province. My department monitors the conditions closely, and we take appropriate action when necessary if deficiencies are found.

Second, while it has been disappointing to see the STIP program zero funded these last few years, rural municipalities do receive significant provincial funding to address local priorities.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Donovan: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that rural municipalities already receive millions of dollars through MSI funding grants and they can set their own infrastructure priorities, should the government in Alberta be picking winners and losers when it comes to handing out funds for the local road bridge funding program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The local road bridge program is about helping rural municipalities keep up with the maintenance of bridges that don't fall under provincial jurisdiction. The funds are distributed fairly based on the number and condition of local bridges in a given municipality. Again, it has been disappointing to see STIP zero funded in recent years, but the hon. member is right when he points out that municipalities do receive infrastructure funding through the MSI program, the basic municipal transportation grant, and the gas tax fund.

Mr. Donovan: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: does Alberta Transportation have civil engineers able to provide in-kind assistance to municipalities for their bridge projects, or do municipalities have to waste their precious money on grant dollars to give out to engineering services?

Mr. Drysdale: In fact, Mr. Speaker, Alberta Transportation does provide technical advice for our regional bridge staff to municipalities when asked. While delivery of most bridge projects does require site-specific engineering designs, we do provide the appropriate guidelines and standards developed in partnership with AAMD and C. In most cases municipalities as well as Alberta Transportation have been using engineering consultants to assist in delivering bridge projects for the last 20 years.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by Calgary-Hawkwood.

Support for Postsecondary Students

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government continues to ignore that student debt in this province is at record levels and that Alberta's tuition fees are amongst the highest in the country. This week the minister of advanced education announced that postsecondary students will now be able to pay off their loans using Aeroplan points. This is ridiculous. It would take almost 4 million points to pay off the average student debt. Will the advanced education minister agree to take real action to reduce the financial burdens of postsecondary education on students and their families, or will he continue to offer silly and ineffectual solutions that do nothing?

Mr. Scott: Mr. Speaker, let me put some facts on the table about how this government supports our postsecondary students. Alberta universities obtain almost 58 per cent of their operating revenue from government funding. This is 5 per cent higher than the national average and 16 per cent higher than Ontario. Tuition from Alberta university students accounts for a lower proportion of operating revenues, 30 per cent, than other provinces such as Ontario, where it's 50 per cent, and British Columbia, where it's 41 per cent. Alberta invests in our students. Our latest numbers show that Alberta has the third-highest expenditures for full-time students in Canada.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that Alberta has the lowest postsecondary participation rate in the entire country and given that this government appears to want to do nothing to reduce actual costs to students but everything to increase the ways that they can pay, to the minister of advanced education: what is your government's next big plan to increase participation in our postsecondary system? Will it be gift cards from Holt Renfrew?

2:30

Mr. Scott: Mr. Speaker, I'm uncertain why that member would criticize giving students an additional way to pay off their student loans. You know, we want to give innovative ways to pay student debt. That's exactly what we're doing. I spoke earlier about the steps we're taking to make postsecondary education more accessible. We're going to continue that work. Nine out of 10 students who apply to postsecondary institutions get an offer of admission. The record speaks for itself.

Mr. Mason: Well, maybe the minister can get a deal with Tim Hortons.

Given that few students that I know have thousands of Aeroplan points, certainly not those from families of modest means, and given that while some might be inclined to think this announcement is a joke, for those students unable to achieve their dreams, it's not funny at all, Mr. Speaker. Will this minister please knock off the goofy announcements and get serious about making postsecondary education affordable for all Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Scott: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Alberta ranks second in terms of providing student loans to cover basic education and living costs. Any student who's eligible for a student loan receives it. We expect this year that of the student loans we issue, 90 per cent of those student loans are going to be repaid. In 2013 and 2014 approximately 60,000 students received $775 million in federal and provincial loans and grants through Student Aid Alberta. Alberta students also benefit from scholarships and awards. We provided approximately $72.5 million in 2013-2014 to over 37,000 students.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Let us move on to the hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood, followed by Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Apprenticeship Training

Mr. Luan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The piping industry training program, or PIT, is an excellent training facility to provide training and upgrading to apprenticeships and journeypersons throughout our province. I had the honour of visiting this facility last winter and was particularly impressed by two programs. One is targeting high-risk dropout school kids, and the other is for aboriginals. Those both are vulnerable populations, as we can appreciate. My question is to the hon. Minister of Innovation and Advanced Education. Given the current fiscal climate many Albertans...

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. A number of our Campus Alberta postsecondary institutions are actively involved in preapprenticeship training, providing knowledge and skills to individuals interested in pursuing a career in the trades. In addition, I'm very pleased to say that Innovation and Advanced Education supports several organizations such as Women Building Futures and Careers: the Next Generation, that actively work to increase awareness and prepare Albertans to enter into the trades. My department continues to investigate options where we can increase support for programs and partners that help Albertans begin a career in the trades.

Mr. Luan: To the same minister: given that Trade Winds to Success is a program helping aboriginal folks, as you mentioned, has your ministry provided any financial support to this program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Scott: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Trade Winds to Success is definitely a valuable program, supporting aboriginal Albertans in pursuing a career in the trades. Human Services has provided funding to Trade Winds, and the breakdown is as follows: in 2011-12 it's $231,303; in 2012-2013 $492,525; in 2013-2014 $626,462; in the last year $246,183. We're continuing to work with Aboriginal Relations, Human Services, and Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour to explore funding options.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Luan: To the hon. Minister of Education: given that the program partners with CBE and has helped at-risk youth, is your ministry in any way or shape supporting this program?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, we're committed to providing our youth in Alberta with every opportunity to succeed in our job market and to gain experience, valuable hands-on learning. It's important. Our provincial dual credit strategy enables students to earn credit for both high school and postsecondary at the same time so they can explore their passions and career options. Of course, we have the registered apprentice program as well, which is very successful in helping them work towards a high school diploma. We encourage our school boards to continue with postsecondary and business and industry partners to provide our Alberta students with great learning opportunities through these initiatives.

School Construction

Mr. Bilous: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I asked the Minister of Infrastructure how many school construction projects the PC government had misled Albertans about, to which he did not provide an answer. Today we've learned of empty, snow-covered fields where, the government told us, construction was already under way. I guess I'll have to direct my question to the Minister of Education. When will you come clean and give accurate information about the status of these new schools?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know how many times my colleague or I have to stand in the House and provide the accurate information, which we already did again today: 230 school projects, creating about 78,000 new student spaces. We are moving forward on the tranche 1 and 2 and 3 projects. We're opening a couple of schools this week. Schools are being built, or they are in design phase or in permitting phase. The earthmovers are moving, the shovels are going in the ground, and the member opposite will see that these schools will be built on time and on budget.

The Speaker: Thank you.

First supplemental.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pounding a sign in the ground does not count as under construction.

Given that the update the Minister of Infrastructure gave Albertans on Monday stated that 115 new schools will be opened by the fall of 2016 and given that school boards are telling us there is no chance many of these new schools will be open by the fall of 2016, how can you possibly tell Alberta families that you're going to open these schools on time?

Mr. Dirks: Well, Mr. Speaker, all you have to do is look at the projects that we are working on right now and see that we are making considerable progress on those towards our deadlines, and the fact that we're opening two new schools later this week is a prime example of our commitment to meet our guidelines and meet our goals and meet our commitment to the children of Alberta.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that Alberta needed new schools years ago and given that students have had to learn in makeshift classrooms or ride the bus for hours each day to get to school and given that parents and families are tired of waiting, to the Minister of Education: do you actually think that misrepresenting the progress on new schools is going to hide your incompetence for very long?

Mr. Dirks: Mr. Speaker, last week I was in Lac La Biche, and we opened a new school. Previously I have been in Airdrie, and we opened a new school. We're opening a new school in Chestermere later and in Airdrie within the next week. These are indications of: promise made, promise kept. We're committed on 232 school projects for the children of Alberta. That is visionary leadership.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by Edmonton-Centre.

Temporary Foreign Worker Health Coverage

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Maria Venancio is a temporary foreign worker. She came to work at McDonald's and, while going to work, got hit by a car and was rendered quadriplegic. Now she is being deported, and she has no health care coverage at all. To the Minister of Health: why won't Alberta Health provide Maria with health care coverage so that she can get her badly needed medical treatment while awaiting her immigration procedures?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My heart goes out to the individual. It's very sad when situations like this occur. While I cannot speak about the specifics of this particular case, I can tell you that Alberta Health Services will provide emergency care to anyone who is in the province of Alberta, even an individual that does not have an Alberta health care insurance plan. But, like all provinces across the country, we don't do that if you're not a resident. So we need to look to another order of government – maybe it's the federal government – to do the kinds of things they need to do to put proper insurance in for these foreign workers.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the difficult position the minister is in. However, will he then raise this issue with his federal counterparts in Health and Citizenship and Immigration, knowing that Maria is not the only person who doesn't require emergency care but simply needs ongoing medical care while she is awaiting her deportation procedures?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mandel: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I will do all I can to ensure that this individual gets adequate health care within the province of Alberta with the support of the federal government.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. To the Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour. Mr. Speaker, again, this minister's hands are somewhat tied, but will he raise this issue with his counterparts in Citizenship and Immigration, making sure that this doesn't happen to anybody else, as in this case McDonald's Canada did not provide Maria with her short-term and long-term disability insurance as they should have according to the labour market opinion?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Jobs, Skills, Training and Labour.

2:40

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member talks about a case where I think we all feel compassion for the individual. As he rightly points out, this is a federal program. There's a compassionate-care clause within the federal government, as the hon. member says. I'll be happy to connect with him and try to connect the individual with that compassionate-care clause, and we can also talk to the federal government to see if there are improvements that we can make to their program.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Edmonton-South West.

Energy Industry Environmental Issues

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. We're all hearing about pipeline spills and leaks and the danger to the environment from that. I'm really curious because between 1996 and 2012 over 9,000 environmental incidents occurred, with over 4,000 of them in clear violation of regs and directives. For example, with CNRL's Primrose, the public still doesn't know how this leak began, if it has stopped, and how much bitumen has leaked. To the minister of the environment: why does this ministry have such a bad record on identifying environmental violations and in ensuring compliance?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for the question. As part of our integrated resource management system, that this government has put in place, we take environmental performance very seriously. While one incident is one too many, Albertans expect that the development of our resources is done in a responsible manner. We have the Alberta Energy Regulator in place, that is informed of any of these incidents and performs an investigation to understand why these incidents have happened and what the appropriate action is to take place. What is important is that with any of these incidents, the companies are responsible for the cleanup.

Ms Blakeman: Now, Mr. Minister, the AER's investigations are very limited.

Back to the same minister: how can the minister defend any record when industrial self-reporting has failed so spectacularly on openness and transparency, with 4,000 examples of environmental violation?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, as I reiterated, we need to make sure that our resources are developed in a responsible manner. Albertans expect, when we develop our resources, that the environment is top of mind in how we do that, and certainly our customers expect that as it relates to products that we sell outside of Alberta. What is important is that we have a regulatory system in place, that when these incidents occur, we have an independent, arm's-length body that goes in and does the investigation to determine exactly what is the cause of those incidents.

The Speaker: Final supplemental.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Back to the same minister, then: given that there is an entire program to compensate farmers for cows that have been killed by predators like grizzlies or wolves, what is the compensation program to Albertans when muskeg or wetlands are ruined and the entire ecosystem dies, as recently happened at the Murphy Oil site? How do we get compensated?

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, again, I want to reiterate that we care deeply about the environment and any incident that takes place. We have appropriate rules and regulations, some of the strictest in the world, when it comes to these sorts of things. As I said in my first comment, any environmental damage that is caused by these incidents is the responsibility of the producer to make sure that it is cleaned up and remediated back to its original condition. It is a polluter-pays model, and those regulations are in place.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. members. The time for question period has concluded.

In 30 seconds from now we'll continue with Members' Statements, and we'll hear from Edmonton-Riverview.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

University of Alberta Research Chairs

Mr. Young: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm extremely proud to rise today to speak about the research chairs at the University of Alberta. These chairs are not about a place to sit down; in fact, these chair holders are driving leading-edge research, and they're not doing it alone. Each of these chairs results in many postdoctorate researchers, graduate students who are advancing innovation and their own expertise. The University of Alberta, through partnership with the National Research Council, Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council, in partnerships with the government of Alberta's Alberta Innovates – Bio, Health Solutions, Technology Futures, and Energy and Environment Solutions – along with industry associations and individual businesses, has been able to pursue exceptional research, development, and commercialization. The patents, spinoffs, business, and innovation that's implemented are impressive to say the least.

The partnership that supports these industrial research chairs attracts and retains the best minds and the world's brightest talent at the University of Alberta. These funding agreements for these chair positions certainly can be onerous, and they address issues of governance, finances, intellectual property. But the value of the co-operation in bringing together academics, research, innovation, and industry continues to produce impressive results. The University of Alberta has been allocated an impressive number of these chairs, each pursuing excellence in numerous highly competitive fields, including engineering, natural sciences, health sciences, humanities, and the social sciences. With these expert teams of researchers and the leading-edge innovation the University of Alberta students also benefit from the interaction of innovation, research, commercialization, and the development of the next generation of innovators.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Clerk: Notices of Motions.

The Speaker: Just before we go to Notices of Motions, I've had a request to revert to Introduction of Guests briefly. Does anybody object to giving consent to do that? If you do, please say so now.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, Associate Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Dorward: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce two young people who have joined us this afternoon. We always encourage people to come over to the House of the people here at the Assembly, so Dan Rose and Andrea Urbina, friends of many here in this Assembly, are here. Please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

Thank you.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, you had a notice of motion that you wish to give.

Mr. Eggen: Yeah. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to give oral notice that at the appropriate time I'll be rising on a point of privilege concerning the fact that I believe that my ability to participate as a member of the independent Standing Committee on Legislative Offices was breached, the work of the committee was obstructed by actions which reversed a decision already made by the committee, and that a contempt of privilege has taken place.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

Bill 12

Common Business Number Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce Bill 12, the Common Business Number Act.

Our government is committed to ensuring that Albertans have a business-friendly environment through initiatives that reduce red tape and improve services for businesses. This bill is new legislation that will authorize Alberta to enter into a partnership with the Canada Revenue Agency to adopt a common business number identification system. The common business number is based on a one-business, one-number vision where businesses are provided with a single unique identifier that they use when dealing with any participating federal or provincial government programs.

Adopting the common business number in Alberta will enable our province to improve service delivery and simplify how businesses interact with participating provincial government programs. This will allow businesses to easily and accurately identify themselves using this common identifier already issued by the Canada Revenue Agency. Implementing this bill will position our government to modernize services, enhance the province's business environment, and support Alberta businesses to operate on a level playing field with businesses elsewhere in Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 12 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move pursuant to Standing Order 75 that Bill 12, the Common Business Number Act, be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

2:50

Bill 13 Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2015

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and request leave to introduce Bill 13, the Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2015.

Alberta's waterways are in danger of imminent zebra and quagga mussel infestation, and it's imperative that our legislation reflect the seriousness of this threat. Bill 13's proposed amendments include mandatory boat inspection on major highways in the province; adding a controlled invasive-species list, including aqua-invasive species of concern; enhancing the authority of the law enforcement to ensure compliance with aquatic invasive-species prevention measures. These amendments will help protect Alberta's vulnerability to mussel infestation, which would have severe and far-reaching economic impacts across our province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 13 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move pursuant to Standing Order 75 that Bill 13, Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2015, be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Bill 14 Agricultural Societies Amendment Act, 2015

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to request leave to introduce Bill 14, the Agricultural Societies Amendment Act, 2015.

The proposed amendments will serve to modernize existing legislation and ensure that it is well aligned with the Societies Act. The amendments will also ensure that all agricultural societies have effective bylaws in place to maintain good governance while recognizing that large and small agricultural societies need to have flexibility in how they are structured to meet their individual needs.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 14 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Bill 15 Securities Amendment Act, 2015

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and introduce Bill 15, the Securities Amendment Act, 2015.

The proposed amendments will further modernize, harmonize, and streamline Alberta's security laws and relate to four topic areas: enforcement-related amendments, point-of-sale related amendments, amendments that support the continued harmonization of derivatives regulation, and housekeeping amendments of a technical nature. Ongoing review and regular amendments to Alberta's Securities Act are required to keep pace with industry developments and to support the ongoing reform of the Canadian regulatory system. The proposed amendments will ensure that Alberta honours its commitment under the 2004 memorandum of understanding to ongoing reform and to satisfy our international commitments in the ongoing harmonization of security laws and regulations across Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 15 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Bill 16 Statutes Amendment Act, 2015

Mr. Donovan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce for first reading Bill 16, Statutes Amendment Act, 2015, on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta's legal system continues to evolve, and it's imperative that our laws are kept up to date. Bill 16 provides amendments to several acts to ensure that Alberta provincial legislation is clear and consistent. A number of amendments will also be approved to access justice and enhance services for Albertans. The bill includes amendments to a total of six acts: the Provincial Court Act; the Court of Queen's Bench Act; the Police Act; the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation Act; Land Titles Act; and Post-secondary Learning Act.

Mr. Speaker, the proposed amendments follow the consultation with a number of stakeholder groups, including the judiciary, Alberta legal communities, and members of the public. These stakeholders support these changes.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 16 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move pursuant to Standing Order 75 that Bill 16, Statutes Amendment Act, 2015, be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, I'm watching the clock as well. Let me recognize you.

Mr. Denis: Yes. I do have a couple of tablings, but I first would like to request unanimous consent of this Assembly that we continue with the Routine past 3 o'clock notwithstanding rule 7(7).

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Members, you've heard the motion. We have just a few items of business to tidy up. Unanimous consent has been asked for. If anyone objects to giving unanimous consent, please say so now.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: Let me hear from the Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just have two tablings here. I first would like to table the appropriate number of copies of the Law Enforcement Review Board's annual report for 2015. The Law Enforcement Review Board is an independent body that is an appeal body for public complaints concerning police conduct. It also hears appeals from police officers who have been the subject of discipline arising from a complaint and peace officers who have had their appointments cancelled.

Secondly, I also have five copies of the Chair-Initiated Complaint and Public Interest Investigation into the RCMP's Response to the 2013 Flood in High River, Alberta, which I have read with interest.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Other tablings? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by Leduc-Beaumont.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of tablings today. The first one, that I am just so pleased and proud to table, is a document called We Are Listening: Sparking Public Conversation on GSAs. This report is a summary of what was said on January 31, 2015, at the event that took place at the Winspear Centre in Edmonton, Alberta. This was the GSA hearing or listening event that was sponsored by the Edmonton Social Planning Council, the City of Edmonton Youth Council, and Public Interest Alberta. So I'll table that for you.

The second is an open letter to the Alberta government, which is essentially an article from the Red Deer Advocate signed by Leeanne Willoughby from Benalto. She is writing with great concern about the wolf killings that are this government's bizarre way, I think, of dealing with some declining caribou populations: so we'll kill the coyotes. I'll just table that as well.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont, followed by Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the five requisite copies of a sample of thousands of letters that were presented to the government of Alberta by some of my constituents in Leduc county. They're asking that a very dangerous intersection at highway 625 and highway 21 be improved and that it be made a top priority for the Minister of Transportation. I'm very pleased to support their efforts.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Jeneroux: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices and in accordance with section 19(5) of the Auditor General Act I'm pleased to table five copies of the report by the Auditor General titled Report of the Auditor General of Alberta, March 2015.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there others? The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings here. Both of them are the articles that quote the Premier in the matter that we will deal with in short order with the question of privilege.

3:00

The Speaker: Are there others?

Seeing none, I would take the liberty of making a couple of tablings myself. Hon. members, in my capacity as chair and pursuant to section 39(3) of the Legislative Assembly Act, I would like to table with the Assembly five copies of the following orders approved at the February 4, 2015, meeting of the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services: one, the Executive Council Salaries Amendment Order 11, being Order 1/15, which took effect February 1, 2015; two, the Members' Allowances Amendment Order 29, being Order 2/15, which took effect February 1, 2015; three, the Constituency Services Amendment Order 29, being Order 3/15, which comes into force April 1, 2015; and four, the Members' Allowances Amendment Order 30, being Order 4/15, which came into force on April 1, 2014.

My second tabling, hon. members, is five copies of my letter, dated December 23, 2014, to the leader of the Wildrose and the leader of the Liberal opposition respecting the designation of the Official Opposition following the changes to caucus membership last December.

My third tabling is five copies of the House leaders' agreement signed March 9, 2015, regarding Oral Question Period rotation, which I referred to in my statement earlier this afternoon.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Denis, Minister of Justice and Solicitor General, a book entitled A Silent Cheer: Against the Odds by Dr. Emily Roback and Faye Roback-Jones.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, we'll move on to points of order here first. Let me begin, please.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

The Speaker: Before we get into points of order that were raised today, specifically one point of clarification, I want to address one point of order, that was raised yesterday, March 10, 2015, by the Official Opposition House leader, on which I promised a ruling once Hansard became available since the Blues were not available to me yesterday.

As a reminder, the Official Opposition House leader expressed concern that the Minister of Infrastructure had suggested that language used either by the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview or someone was unparliamentary. In his argument, which is found at page 534 of Alberta Hansard for yesterday, the Official Opposition House leader noted that it was up to the Speaker to make the determination as to what is parliamentary language or not. While I appreciate the hon. member acknowledging the importance of the Speaker's role in that regard and, in fact, for other measures in this Assembly, this does not constitute a point of order, so we will move on.

Point of Clarification

The Speaker: Speaking of today's points of order, no points of order were issued, but a point of clarification was requested by the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, so I want to read something into the record. The Official Opposition House leader requested clarification under Standing Order 13(2) of my intervention during the Minister of Justice's response that a particular issue was in fact sub judice. The situation, as we all heard, is difficult since the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills' question referred to the Minister of Justice's actions with respect to an individual who is apparently facing serious charges in the state of Washington in the United States.

I let the main question go, and I let the first supplementary go, thinking that the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General might say something about the appropriateness of the question in the context of the sub judice rule. However, as members may know and might need reminding, the sub judice rule is codified in Standing Order 23(g). With respect to criminal matters the rule in the standing order applies from the time charges have been laid until passing of sentence, including any appeals and the expiry of appeal periods from the time of judgment.

Quite specifically, 23(g) says:

A Member will be called to order by the Speaker if, in the Speaker's opinion, that Member

(g) refers to any matter pending in a court or before a judge for judicial determination.

And then it goes on.

I called the Minister of Justice to order with a question, which he responded to in the affirmative. I did not interrupt the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills, who feels that I did, but I did not. It was the Minister of Justice that I intervened on and asked the question for clarification purposes because I must enforce the rule of sub judice, as you all know full well.

The rule itself, in fact, is a self-imposed rule by this Assembly to respect the judicial process, and nowhere is this restraint more important than when an individual's liberty is in jeopardy. While members enjoy freedom of speech in this Chamber, it is not in the best interests of justice for comments in the Assembly to interfere with an individual's ability to have a fair trial. I admit that the situation is complicated further when the person in question is in another country, but given the link that the member made to offences committed in Alberta and the charges that are now apparently laid in Washington state, I wanted to ensure that the rule was applied in this case, in this House, respecting the Standing Orders, to which we all have agreed. So that clarifies that.

I also would note in respect of the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills that he had requested that his point of clarification be withdrawn. But I wanted to make it clear because other people also asked me about it, so I put the comments on record, and I encourage you to read 23(g) so you'll have that knowledge.

Now we have a point of privilege. I believe that's the next item on the agenda, so let's hear from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, please, with that point.

Privilege

Obstructing a Member in Performance of Duty

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise on a point of privilege under Standing Order 15(2). It's based on the grounds that the independence of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices has been obstructed by actions outside our committee by members of the Executive Council.

Because the work done in that committee is vital to the independence of several officers of the Legislature and, as such, to their ability to properly ensure government is working in the best interests of all Albertans, the committee itself must be allowed to work independently of undue influence by external bodies such as the Premier's office or facets of the Executive Council. As such, any actions that bring the independence of this committee into question should be seen as impeding the independent work of the committee and impinging on the dignity and respect of members of the entire Legislature.

I'd like to briefly outline why it's necessary and appropriate to raise this point of privilege here today in the Assembly before moving on to an explanation of the facts of the case. Why is it necessary and appropriate to raise the question here? While I have also presented the case related to parliamentary privilege elsewhere to my fellow members of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices, it's important to note the reasons why it is necessary and appropriate to raise the point of privilege in the House here to you, Mr. Speaker.

First, because of the method of addressing questions of privilege in the committee settings, detailed on page 149 of the House of Commons Procedure and Practice as well as in your ruling as the chair of the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services dated February 27, 2013, this case has not appeared before an authority empowered to decide whether it constitutes a prima facie breach of privilege. So while the chair of the standing committee has been empowered to determine whether the matter does touch on privilege, only in the House are we able to deal with matters of privilege, and only you, the Speaker of the House, is empowered to decide whether this constitutes a prima facie case.

Second, while there is no provision in the Standing Orders of the House that explicitly bars a member of a committee from bringing forward a point of privilege, there are precedents that this House will hear questions of this nature without such a report. I would call to your attention, for example, Hansard beginning on page 3166. On these pages we see that my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona brought forward a point of privilege quite similar to the one I'm raising today. Further, the aforementioned ruling that you made in your capacity as chair for the Members' Services Committee is silent on the question of whether or not a vote of the said committee is to report on a question of privilege.

Finally, as members of the Assembly our rights are derived from the standing orders that govern the proceedings of this place. We all have certain privileges that are bestowed upon us to allow us to freely and independently make decisions that we believe are in the best interests of Albertans, that have elected us to serve.

The facts are as follows, Mr. Speaker. On Tuesday, February 10, both the office of the Child and Youth Advocate and the office of the Auditor General came before the committee to ask for additional funds for their annual budgets approved in December of 2014. At this meeting the request for additional funds for the office of the Child and Youth Advocate was declined, but the request for additional funds for the Auditor General was approved. The following day Premier Prentice and the Minister of Finance held a press availability, saying that this decision of the committee would not be respected, effectively overturning the decision made by the committee.

In regard to timeliness, according to the rules, the standing orders, privilege must be addressed at the earliest possible juncture. I believe this is the case here today.

Then, breach of privilege. Erskine May describes privilege as “the sum of the peculiar rights enjoyed by each House collectively” and each member of the House individually, from page 75.

As you are aware, at the commencement of the first session of each Legislature a number of committees are established, and the origin of this committee goes all the way back to November 1977. To help to ensure the independence, this committee consisting of nine members was established on March 20, 1978, and so forth. As will be shown below, the tradition of the Alberta Legislature to date is to treat these committees as if they are populated by private members. As such, it is understood that members are free to consult with anyone, including their fellow caucus members, but also are free from partisanship or the influence of Executive Council.

There are numerous examples, Mr. Speaker, by which there have been rulings on the proceedings of the committee that cannot be directed or represented by the government. A good example is May 14, 1992, when the Speaker ruled out of order a question posed by a member pertaining to whether or not the Premier would agree to direct the proceedings of a Members’ Services Committee in a certain direction, and in the ruling the Speaker said, “The government cannot answer on behalf of the whole committee ... the government ... cannot direct what happens to all the committee.”

Again, on December 1, 2011, a question by the Liberal leader at that time asked the Premier about the decision to appoint Justice Major to evaluate MLA pay, and that was ruled out of order given that it was a committee decision to appoint a judge and, therefore, should not involve the Premier. The ruling there by the Speaker was: “That question is out of order. The Speaker of the Legislative Assembly appointed the panel as per the direction of the Members’ Services Committee.”

At the same time the Premier as well as numerous government ministers and MLAs have also maintained that the committees of the Legislature are independent. During the widely publicized choice of the Leg. Offices Committee not to renew the contract of a Chief Electoral Officer, at that time the Premier, Mr. Stelmach, was widely reported as saying that it was not his choice to get rid of this Chief Electoral Officer. On February 17, 2009, he said in the House, “Again, I don’t make the decision on the employment of the Chief Electoral Officer. ... He’s responsible and answers to the Legislative Offices Committee ... they make that decision.” The Globe and Mail quoted him at the time saying, “The decision was made ... by the all-party ... committee, and that’s what we live by.”

On April 23, 1992, the then Premier, Mr. Getty, maintained that the Premier has no influence over the Members’ Services Committee. He said:

I also can’t anticipate what the Members’ Services Committee is going to recommend to us. We don’t know. They ... recommend ... solutions, some proposals that none of the members here are currently contemplating. Those are things that I really appreciate. It’s an all-party Members’ Services Committee. I’m pleased that they are going to be meeting ...

and helping with the matter of MLA pay.

So there are lots of instances like this as well as the lack of precedents in parliamentary authorities. As I described, in the House of Commons Procedure and Practice parliamentary privilege can be extended to both individuals and to the House as a whole. In regard to individual rights this includes, for example, freedom from obstruction, interference, intimidation, and molestation. At the same time privileges extended to the rights and powers of the House include the ability to regulate its own internal affairs.

As seen above, the Legislature of Alberta has seen fit to establish special and standing committees of the Legislature to work in a way that is independent. This concept of independence is especially held to be in the case of the Leg. Offices Committee given its power to make policy decisions on behalf of all MLAs. It could be said that the notion of independence of this committee, whereby the MLAs on the committee are expected to act as private members, has been accepted as a rule. As such, it could be argued that the dignity and respect of the House is on occasion hinging on the idea that these committees make certain decisions on behalf of all MLAs and not in the interests of the government.

On February 19, 2009, the Speaker also injected the following statements between the above passages:

Questions to the Ministry on legislation or on a subject matter that is before a committee, when appropriately cast, are normally permitted as long as the questioning does not interfere with the committee’s work or anticipate its report.

These procedures are in place to protect the work of committees and to maintain order in the House but have not been crafted in order to maintain how committees work without the influence of Executive Council and other political interference. However, they have been used in our Assembly to find that questions that allege the interference of Executive Council in committee were in fact out of order.

This raises an important question. While interference by Executive Council in the affairs of the Members’ Services Committee can be seen as an important issue, rules contained in parliamentary tradition detailing the parliamentary authority prevent us from asking a question along these lines in the Legislature. So this is a very important issue to look at.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, while the authorities may be limited in their ability to define and to take a measure to protect the independence of a committee, they do of course offer insight into the matter of parliamentary privilege and contempt. Erskine May states:

Generally speaking, any act or omission which obstructs or impedes either House of Parliament in the performance of its functions, or which obstructs or impedes any Member or officer of such House in the discharge of his duty, or which has a tendency [even indirectly] to produce such results, may be treated as a contempt.

However, Maingot, second edition, also notes that “as a working rule it can be said that when an offence is not identifiable as a breach of known and enumerated rights and immunities, then the offence is a contempt of Parliament.” He goes on to describe how contempt is “described as an offence against the authority” of the House. Maingot also states that “disobedience to rules or orders represents an affront to the dignity of the House.”

So when the Premier gathered media to announce that a decision reached by our independent committee of the Assembly was to be immediately disregarded by this Executive Council and the government more widely, it is my contention that the Premier was acting in contempt of both the privilege of the Legislature and the individual privileges of the Members’ Services Committee.

With concern to the privilege of the Legislature, by immediately invalidating a decision already made by an independent committee, it brings into question the independence of the committee itself and, therefore, acted as an affront to the dignity and respect that should be afforded it. While it’s said that the agenda of a political party rules the day, inside the committee, as shown above, it is always maintained by the government that decisions are not government decisions.

With concern to the individual privileges of members the Premier can be seen to have interfered with and obstructed the work of every member of this committee. As an independent committee it should be seen to involve honest and full debate before decisions are made on important issues.

As such, I respectfully request that you find that we have made a prima facie case of a breach of privilege and that you allow us the appropriate time to bring forward a motion to remedy this case.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I have the Government House Leader, followed by the Member for Drumheller-Stettler, followed by the independent member, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Centre, and perhaps even Livingstone-Macleod. We've not consumed a huge amount of time, but that was approximately 14 minutes or so.

Let's get to the cut of the argument if you would, Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not known for my long speeches, and I won't go offside that reputation. There is a process for dealing with these points of privilege when they arise in committees of the Assembly, and this process can be found in Standing Order 65 and in a ruling which was given on February 27, 2013, at the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services.

As far as I'm aware of the process that was followed at their committee meeting on February 17, 2015, members of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices debated extensively on whether a possible point of privilege should have been referred to the Assembly. I have reviewed these documents today. If you don't have them, I'd be happy to pass them over to you as well as to the other members. The vote determined that it should not proceed, and it's my understanding that it closed the particular matter.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as you're well aware, more than me, there are many rules and precedents which allude to the fact that Assemblies should not spend time debating issues that have already been decided.

I also refer you in this vein, Mr. Speaker, to Beauchesne's 558, which says:

An old rule of Parliament reads: "That a question being once made and carried in the affirmative or negative, cannot be questioned again but must stand as the judgment of the House."

Those are the words of Beauchesne's and not the words of myself that I'm quoting.

I therefore would respectfully suggest to you that because a point of privilege on this issue was debated and voted upon by the Legislative Offices Committee, it is not appropriate for the Assembly to debate on that same point of privilege, it's been pointed out to me, the Latin term for that being res judicata.

Thank you.

3:20

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler is ceding his spot to the Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Strankman: Yes.

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand and speak in support of the point of privilege raised by the Member for Edmonton-Calder. What we have here is a particularly bad example of disrespect shown to the Assembly as a whole and to the role of individual MLAs in particular. This is certainly not the first time that we've seen interference by the Premier's office in the functioning of a committee and government committee members who then appear to carry out the orders of the Premier. This is not the first time the House has faced questions about the independence of committees, committees which always have a majority of government members.

In the past we have seen the appearance of interference in the hiring or firing of a particular officer of the Legislature. In one example from 2009 a member stated that the government had fired the Chief Electoral Officer. This resulted in a point of order, and the Speaker in his ruling explained that the decision to appoint someone else was clearly the decision of the committee. In his ruling the Speaker stated: "The committee is a committee of the Legislative Assembly, not a committee of the government . . . If there's going to be misunderstanding about this, then why have these kinds of committees?" That can be found in Hansard, February 19, 2009.

Here are the facts of the point in question. On February 10, 2015, both the office of the Child and Youth Advocate and the office of the Auditor General requested additional funding for their annual budgets after 2 per cent reductions in December of '14. At that meeting the request for additional funds for the office of the Child and Youth Advocate was declined, but the request for additional funds for the office of the Auditor General was approved. Yet following the February 10, 2015, decision of the committee to approve the funding request of the Auditor General, the Premier and the Finance minister held a media availability and announced that this funding would not be extended.

The independence of all committees is important, but the severity of the issue is very clear. Here we are talking about the committee tasked with appointing the independent officers of the Legislature. These offices were established to watch the activities of the government, report on them, and make recommendations to the government. The announcement by the Premier shows that there's not even the appearance of impartiality when it comes to the budget of this office. This heavy-handed and shameless control of the budget of the Auditor General by the Premier is an insult to the dignity of the committee and the members who serve on it.

An issue about the independence of the Members' Services Committee also came up in 2012. In response to a question Premier Redford at the time said:

My understanding is that the work of that committee was to review the recommendations of the Major report. I understand that that's what they did, and I don't understand that it's my role to direct the members of the committee to do anything.

That's from Hansard, October 23, 2012, Mr. Speaker.

She went on to say:

Mr. Speaker, as you have so rightly said . . . this is not a committee of the government. This is a committee of the Legislature that at some point will make a decision that we as MLAs will consider . . . That's why we have a Members' Services Committee. It is the job of MLAs, not the government.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, the Official Opposition also had concerns about the composition of the committee at the time. We did not have a voting member on the committee, yet the committee business went ahead.

The Standing Committee on Legislative Offices is supposed to represent all parties and make decisions free from interference from the Premier's office. In this case neither happened. If decisions of the committee can be overturned by the Premier or announced in advance by the Premier's office, there is very little reason for these committees to meet. By immediately invalidating a decision already made by an independent committee, this government brought into question the independence of the committee itself. As we've seen, it has always been maintained by the government that decisions of the committee are not a government decision but that of an independent group of MLAs. By immediately reversing a decision arrived at by this group of MLAs, the Premier has interfered with the autonomy of this body to debate and make decisions.

Maingot, second edition, notes that “one of those matters of privilege is the right of the legislative body to control its internal affairs and proceedings free of interference from the Crown or executive, the courts or the public.” That’s on page 293.

To sum up, the Premier has interfered with and obstructed the work of every member of the committee in this case. This shows contempt for those members.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you find in this action a breach of privilege. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I tabled earlier two documents quoting the Premier on this matter. One is dated February 12, from the Edmonton Journal, where the Premier is quoted as saying, “I respect the discussion of the committee but there will be no increase in funding to the auditor general’s office.” Then it goes on to say that “the committee is now expected to meet again next week,” leading a reasonable and prudent person to believe that some sort of instructions were given to tell that committee to go back.

Now, on the 18th of February in the Canadian Press the Premier is quoted. When asked if he was overturning the decision of the committee, he replied, “Yes.” He was overturning the decision of the committee.

Mr. Speaker, there have been a number of citations given to you, but I’ll point you to Beauchesne’s, page 3, which is just the overview talking about the principles that lie in the basis of English parliamentary law, where it talks about the opposition if the electorate so chooses is to have an opposition that is ready and willing – and this is the quote, so I’m not giving inflammatory language – “to protect a minority and restrain the improvidence or tyranny of a majority.” Now, what that states is that the role of the opposition has a very important position in our government to basically do its job in the best of the public’s interest. That has to be protected by our own rules of this House and parliamentary rules, which basically stipulate that these committees are independent.

It leads to another question here, which was raised by the member earlier, the one of contempt. We have a prima facie case here of the preponderance of evidence that the Premier basically is quoted as saying that he’s overruling the committee. He doesn’t have that authority. He has the authority – the government has the jurisdiction to come down with the budget. That’s their jurisdiction. But the jurisdiction of this committee is to make the recommendation, and the Premier doesn’t have the authority to overrule the recommendation. That’s a recommendation. That’s the independence of the committee.

Now, if the government doesn’t have the money in their budget, so be it, but they don’t get to tell that committee to go back and rescind a decision of the committee. There’s no such right of government to do that, and this is about the fundamental respect.

If you turn to page 83 in the House of Commons Procedures and Practice – I have the second edition in front of me – it talks about “while our privileges are defined, contempt of the House has no limits.” It gives the Speaker here a lot of latitude in making this decision, and it talks about “deliberately attempting to mislead the House or a committee (by way of statement, evidence, or petition).” Somebody here, by the preponderance of the evidence of a reasonable and prudent person, is not being clear or not telling the truth. Was this committee told to go back into a meeting to rescind its decision? Who misspoke? This is really important because we’re still dealing with the very fundamental issue, in which I say the prima facie is made, that the Premier has interfered in the independence of the committee. The government has interfered, and they should be found in violation of that.

Going on further, it talks about this contempt being “interfering with or obstructing a person who is carrying out a lawful order of the House or a committee.” The opposition is carrying out that lawful order. The Premier or any member of the government does not have a right to interfere with the opposition members’ responsibilities on these committees.

3:30

In closing, the decision that is made here is not based on evidence that is beyond a reasonable doubt; it’s preponderance of the evidence. When you look at the evidence, it is basically saying that the Premier has an admission he’s overruling the committee, and then you have the contradiction between the chair of the committee and the Premier, that raises more questions. I would submit to you that a reasonable and prudent person would conclude there were some shenanigans going on here and that the committee was indeed ordered to go back to rescind the decision of the committee.

With that, I will leave that in your care to make a decision, but I believe that the government should be found in violation of the committee’s independence. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you.

We’ll have one final speaker, and that’ll be the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I think everything that my colleagues previous to me have said is quite true and right, but, you know, I’m just looking at my crystal ball, and I betcha what’s going to happen here is that the government is going to get up and say, “Hey, those members of the government caucus could have gone in and made any decision that they wanted to, and they happened to make the one that the Premier was hoping they would make,” and this will all be dismissed as not a point of privilege.

But there’s something much worse going on here, and it’s really critical to the election, so I hope people are paying attention. This is what happens when there is a ginormous majority. We are in a position as opposition members right now where we can bring no issue to the floor or to a committee without the approval of a government Tory majority. Nothing. We can do nothing. We can’t get an agenda up on the issue. We can’t get something in front of a committee. Nothing. When you have majorities like this, the government has the power to be able to move forward and indeed make a declaration like the Premier did, that this was going to happen, and then sure enough it happens.

You know, can we directly prove that this all happened as a result of the Premier saying it? Well, no, because they will say: oh, each and every one of them made this decision independently. But we know this isn’t true. I’ve sat on these committees for 18 years. I see people come into the room with scripts that are written for them by the minister’s staff that tell them exactly what to say word by word. How is that independence? It’s not. It’s definitely – you know, they get their marching orders. I know that members get their marching orders to come in and do a certain thing. Otherwise, it’s magical, Mr. Speaker, that every single government member turns up and wants to see exactly a 2 per cent cut in every legislative officer’s budget, not 1.5, not 5 per cent but 2 exactly, every one of them. Magical how they all come up with that on their own.

Mr. Mason: It’s a miracle.

Ms Blakeman: It's a miracle.

I mean, I think this is contempt. I think it's contempt and disrespect for the parliamentary process, but unfortunately it is all completely legit. It is legitimate under the letter of our law, under our parliamentary process. That doesn't make it right, and I don't think the intent is being followed. Members of the government like to get up and say, "Oh, it was made by an all-party committee" as though all parties agreed in this. Well, no, there was one member of one opposition and one member of another opposition and nine members of the government caucus. So what was this, really? It was a government caucus decision.

I have often felt that if we really wanted to be representative, what we should do is have the membership proportion on any of these committees decided by the popular vote from the previous election, and that would give a bit more of a fair fight and a bit more fair representation on these committees. That, of course, is greeted with derision by my hon. members opposite, but I do think that we have a very imbalanced system right now.

It's going to be really important in this upcoming election that we end up with a lot of people in the opposition. Right now there are 14 of us trying to do the work that a few years ago was done by 30 members and the accompanying staff. It's a struggle for us to try and keep this government accountable. This is one of the examples that we face where everything gets skewed beyond what we would like to see, and it's all perfectly legit. But, you know, they get to make the rules, too, because they have the majority when it comes to making up the rules of the standing orders in the House.

So you can see how this all starts to contribute to a disrespect, frankly. I hope that we will see something different soon. I am ever optimistic. I should have my hair in ringlets I'm so optimistic. I could have the middle name "Pollyanna."

I thank my colleagues for bringing this issue up and for making the effort to look up all the detailed references. I am afraid you will be sadly disappointed, and that's why, because we have a very uneven House at this point in time.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, I've listened very carefully for over half an hour now to all the members who just spoke. I am prepared to rule on the purported question of privilege that was raised by the Member for Edmonton-Calder. As a reminder to all, a point of privilege, as we all know, is one of if not the most serious charges that can be brought by one member against another.

Now, with respect to the formalities the Member for Edmonton-Calder provided written notice to me in the Speaker's office at 12:59 p.m. on Monday, March 9, 2015, and that notice was copied to the House leaders of the other parties and also to the independent member. Therefore, the requirements of Standing Order 15(2) were met.

I would also like to point out that yesterday was a somewhat unusual day in that it proceeded in a manner that prevented the Member for Edmonton-Calder from giving notice of his purported question of privilege. The member, however, was very gracious in agreeing to let this matter proceed today, and I want to thank him for his indulgence in that regard. To be clear, there is no prejudice to the member's application arising from the rescheduling of the matter to today rather than having been considered yesterday because notice had been provided at the earliest opportunity.

It is my understanding that the same member raised a question of privilege on this very same matter during the February 17, 2015, meeting of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices, of which he is a member. I must say that I feel somewhat restrained in talking about what transpired during that committee's meeting since there is no report from that committee to this Assembly regarding the purported question of privilege. It is my understanding that while the chair of the Legislative Offices Committee found that the issue raised by the Member for Edmonton-Calder met the low threshold for possibly constituting a question of privilege, the committee declined to report the matter to the Assembly. So there will be no report on the matter for the Assembly to consider.

As members likely know and should know, members may raise matters concerning privilege as it relates to committees of the Assembly pursuant to Standing Order 65(3). The practice to follow is actually outlined on page 46 of the March 2014 version of the Practical Guide to the Committees of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta.

It is noted in House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, at page 149 that Speakers have consistently ruled that, except in the most extreme situations, they will only hear questions of privilege arising from committee proceedings upon presentation of a report from the committee which directly deals with the matter and not as a question of privilege raised by an individual Member.

Nonetheless, not knowing precisely where the presentations might want to be taken, I did allow several comments to be made.

I am very aware of the procedure that I've just referred to since in my role as chair of the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services I faced a similar situation to the one just faced by the chair of the Legislative Offices Committee concerning a purported question of privilege. In fact, it is exactly the one before us at the moment. On February 27, 2013, I found that alleged interference in the work of the committee met the threshold for privilege, which led to the committee at the time voting on the matter. A motion to send the matter to the Assembly, however, was defeated, and that concluded that matter at the committee level.

One has to wonder why this matter is being raised in the Assembly when it was already raised and dealt with by the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices. If the committee had voted to report the matter, then it would be before the Assembly. However, as I've said, the committee chose not to do so. Now, as Speaker I am keenly aware that questions of privilege are very serious matters, as I've already said, and that they directly relate to a member's rights and immunities. As such, they should arise infrequently. The time of this Assembly is also valuable and important. As I stated on November 20, 2014, at page 88 of Alberta Hansard for that day in ruling on a purported question of privilege that had been raised before, "It is not in keeping with parliamentary tradition to raise a matter that has already been decided."

In this instance, the matter raised by the Member for Edmonton-Calder has been the subject of review, consideration, and decision by a committee of this Assembly. As Speaker I find that the principle of avoiding duplication of proceedings applies here.

In conclusion, this matter was considered under one process and should not be brought up in a different process, in a different venue so as to constitute a de facto appeal of the committee's decision outside of the established practice. Accordingly, I find that the purported question of privilege is not in order and therefore does not constitute a prima facie question of privilege. Under Standing Order 15(7) that concludes this matter.

Thank you. We'll move on.

Orders of the Day

Committee of Supply

[Mr. Rogers in the chair]

The Chair: Hon. members, I'd like to call the Committee of Supply to order.

Supplementary Supply Estimates 2014-15 General Revenue Fund

The Chair: Hon. members, before we commence this afternoon's consideration of supplementary supply, I'd like to review briefly the standing orders governing the speaker rotation. As provided in Standing Order 59.02, the rotation in Standing Order 59.01(6) is deemed to apply, which is as follows:

- (a) the Minister, or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, may make opening comments not to exceed 10 minutes,
- (b) for the hour that follows, members of the Official Opposition and the Minister, or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, may speak,
- (c) for the next 20 minutes, the members of the third party, if any, and the Minister or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, may speak,
- (d) for the next 20 minutes, the members of the fourth party, if any, and the Minister or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, may speak,
- (d.1) for the next 20 minutes, the members of any other party represented in the Assembly or any independent Members and the Minister, or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, may speak,
- (e) for the next 20 minutes, private members of the Government caucus and the Minister or the member of the Executive Council acting on the Minister's behalf, may speak . . .

And any member may speak thereafter.

During the above rotation speaking times are limited to 10 minutes. Once the above rotation is complete, speaking times are reduced to five minutes.

Provided that the Chair has been notified, a Minister and a private Member may combine their . . . speaking times, with both taking and yielding the floor [during] the combined period.

Finally, as provided for in Government Motion 20, approved by the Assembly yesterday, the time allotted for consideration of this matter is six hours. The Committee of Supply has under consideration the 2014-15 supplementary supply.

I will now recognize the hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance to move the estimates. The hon. minister.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'd like to move the 2014-15 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund. When passed, these estimates will authorize approximate increases of $730,000 for the office of the Child and Youth Advocate, $459 million in voted operational funding, $705 million in voted capital funding, and $63 million in voted financial transactions funding for the government. The estimates are consistent with the fiscal plan as presented in the 2014-15 third-quarter fiscal update and economic statement.

In addition to the Child and Youth Advocate, these estimates will authorize increases for the departments of Aboriginal Relations, Education, Energy, Environment and Sustainable Resource Development, Health, Human Services, Infrastructure, Justice and Solicitor General, Municipal Affairs, Service Alberta, and Transportation. The ministers responsible for these departments will be pleased to answer any questions from members of the House.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

I will recognize the hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler speaking on behalf of the Official Opposition. Hon. member, do you wish to share your time back and forth with the minister? We'd need to clarify that up front.

Mr. Strankman: Well, if he'd wish. It would be in order.

The Chair: Where will you start, hon. member?

Mr. Strankman: Well, I was hoping to start with Energy and the environment.

The Chair: So you're starting with environment, hon. minister?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that we do them just alphabetically and do each department and get it done. Otherwise, we'll be all over the place.

The Chair: Each department alphabetically? Are you prepared to start alphabetically? If you're not, if you're going to skip a particular ministry . . .

Ms Blakeman: If we don't go fast enough, we don't get to stuff, so I think we should be allowed to choose.

The Chair: Okay. Hon. member, do you wish to start, then, with Energy, or is that ESRD? Just to be clear, where exactly are you referring to those numbers?

Mr. Strankman: Well, I wanted to speak about the Energy department primarily.

The Chair: That's fine. The Minister of Energy is here.

Minister, you're willing to share the time back and forth with the member?

Mr. Oberle: Whatever.

The Chair: Proceed, hon. member, and the clock will start.

Mr. Strankman: Well, by the numbers that you've presented here, there is some increase of $7.7 million, and I was wondering if there is any itemization of that that you could fulfill with me to understand why the increase. It's been purported in the media that there will be budget maintenance at least if not a reduction, so I was wondering if you could . . .

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased to rise and address the member's question. First of all, I want to clarify for the member that we're not discussing budget here today. That'll be coming shortly. The budget, of course, hasn't been tabled in this House, and whether or not there's a reduction in the budget or maintenance or anything else will be subject to a budget debate at that time.

Today we're here to discuss supplementary estimates at third quarter, Mr. Chair, which involves spending within the current year's budget, and I'm pleased to address that. The member I thought said $7.7 million. Actually, there's $57.7 million in supplementary supply related to the Department of Energy. So I can tell the member in complete detail that $57.7 million in compensation was for lease agreements cancelled under the land-use framework.

Mr. Chair, in the Fort McMurray urban development subregion, which was development around Fort McMurray, $49.9 million is for what is known as UDSR, the Fort McMurray urban development subregion. Those are leases that are cancelled in accordance with that development proposal. That's compensation for 27 agreements held by 10 different companies. In the lower Athabasca regional plan there are a number of agreements that were cancelled in order to establish new conservation and provincial recreation areas in the region, so $7.8 million is for leases cancelled under LARP. That's the full summary of the compensation that we provided.

Mr. Chair, the mineral rights compensation regulation is a strong and solid system that ensures fair compensation of incurred costs to companies affected by lease cancellations. It's the process that was applied here. Ultimately, actions taken by government such as deliberate land-use planning resulting in lease cancellations show how we guide resource development in Alberta to meet the triple bottom line of environmental protection, economic benefit, and social licence.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Yes, sir. I'd like to apologize to the minister for my quote regarding the numbers. I guess it could be related to my age and my eyes. It's well received.

Can you also explain, sir, how that funding was arrived at? Was that the money that was actually spent by those companies for those leases? Is there any actual physical value related to their purchase of those leases?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Chair, I was not actually privy to the negotiations that happened with the individual companies. I of course delegate that activity to the department. I can assure this House that it was done in full compliance with the mineral rights compensation regulation, which allows for the repayment of land purchase costs, the cost to purchase a lease, and certain sunk costs. It does not accommodate future or opportunity costs. I'd invite the hon. member to look up the regulation. It's quite comprehensive.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. It's my understanding, too, that the single energy regulator bill, Bill 2, allows for complete discretion of the minister in this regard.

I'd like to move on to Environment and Sustainable Resource Development and talk about the additional costs there, the supplementary. I understand there are additional increases to wildfire hazards and the mountain pine beetle surveys. Can you explain to me how the $41 million for mountain pine beetle survey assessments, control, and rehabilitation was arrived at?

The Chair: I recognize the minister of ESRD. The question around mountain pine beetle . . .

Mr. Strankman: I'll repeat, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Fawcett: Sure.

The Chair: Please.

Mr. Strankman: Mountain pine beetle surveys, assessment, control, and rehabilitation worth $41 million: could you fill me in a little bit on how that was achieved, how that was attained, how that's brought forward? I understand it's somewhat of a seasonal event.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Fawcett: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. This is money that has been expended probably for the better part of the last decade on controlling mountain pine beetle. Obviously, many members of the Chamber are aware of the financial risk that mountain pine beetle poses, particularly to the forestry sector, as well as some of the environmental health risks to our forests. This is money that has been invested year over year. This is the same amount of money that was put into the budgets of previous years. One of the challenges that we faced was that for whatever reason we typically have not budgeted for this expense, like I said, but it's been expended over the last decade.

I could tell you as minister that it's something I'm advocating for with the current Finance minister, getting it as an ongoing expenditure. The reason why it hasn't been budgeted in previous years and why it wasn't budgeted this year is that the hope, I guess, was that eventually we would be able to completely or substantially reduce the expenditures in this particular area because we'd successfully thwarted the risk from mountain pine beetle. I could tell you that the work that this $40 million does essentially keeps it at bay and prevents it from progressing even further. This will be ongoing work that is not only done this year but will have to be done next year and the following year.

There is a good part of the story with this particular budget item, and that is that we signed an MOU with the government of Saskatchewan. They're contributing $1.3 million as part of our mountain pine beetle program because they definitely have an inherent interest to try to keep that particular species from moving further east. So we are getting some money from another jurisdiction to help offset some of the costs in this area.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Chair. I also wanted to ask the ESRD minister: in regard to flood infrastructure recovery measures my understanding is that it's some 14-plus million dollars. Have some of these funds been allocated, or what's the position? I know that in my constituency of Drumheller there's still a question about the timing of that. If you could go on further to the flood hazard identification program, there are some greater funds brought forward there, too. I don't know if you want to do it singularly. I'll be happy to oblige.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of ESRD.

Mr. Fawcett: Yeah. We are spending an additional $14 million, as the member correctly identified, for continued implementation of infrastructure recovery measures. This is specifically in regard to putting together what is essentially our mitigation and resiliency team, that is going through and doing all the work in assessing all of the different proposals for flood mitigation. There are a number of projects that were put on the table. We've had to assess, look at which ones might be feasible, may not be feasible over the last year. There have been a number of decisions made. We're still working through some of those decisions. For some of these projects – these are very large projects. For example, with the Springbank reservoir project we're in, you know, the couple hundred million dollars area.

This money is going to work in trying to get the information we require from those decisions, not to mention that we also have the Alberta community resiliency program, of which we've had over $700 million of requests from municipalities. Those need to be assessed and looked at and prioritized, and that's what this money is for.

Mr. Strankman: To be clear, Mr. Chair, the Alberta community resiliency program is also included in this?

Mr. Fawcett: Just to be clear, this is operational funding; this isn't the capital money that will be provided to municipalities. This is money that pays for staff that will work on assessing those applications.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Chair. Also, I find in here some $969,000, approaching $970,000, for flood hazard identification. I was wanting to know if that would include communities like Drumheller, where I believe they've flown the area with lidar to understand if there are going to be continuing issues there. Would that be part of this funding?

Mr. Fawcett: Yeah, that is part of this funding. Shortly after the floods in 2013 a decision was made to invest I believe it was about $8.7 million over three years in enhanced flood hazard mapping activities. After looking at what was needed to be done and the priorities, there was an additional million dollars that was asked for for that, and that's what this additional expenditure is for, to supplement that.

The Chair: The hon. member.

4:00

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Chair. The hon. minister is well aware of constituency issues that I brought forward. I don't see it directly related in the allocation of funds here, but there is the issue with the management of the elk herd in Suffield base, and I was wondering if any funds required are brought forward here that aren't specifically shown. This may be a new issue that's going to be brought forward in this next fiscal year, but I want to know if some of that – because that has been an ongoing problem.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Fawcett: Yeah. I thank the member for his question. The issue with the elk population within the CFB Suffield area is an ongoing issue, and it is an issue that we're addressing. However, as far as the resources required to deal with this issue, it is part of our ongoing wildlife management budget, and there are no additional resources that are required for this. It is merely some different policy decisions that need to be made, and that is not going to require any additional money.

The Chair: Thank you.

Back to the hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to roll over to Health here, where there seem to be also some other improvements or increases in the supplementals, so to the minister. I understand there's $157 million for operational spending – it was lower in other areas; totally, it increased to $206 million – $54 million more for physician services, $39 million more for primary care physicians. In my constituency of Drumheller-Stettler the physician population is dropping, so could you give me some sort of an idea of how this is spread to urban and rural? Is there a future program to increase? Like, why are these numbers being increased?

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Mandel: Yeah. Thank you for the question. One of the challenges is that in Health we aren't able to stop doctors from billing. Doctors who are in greater prevalent areas are continually billing, so the numbers go up. Where you have fewer doctors, unfortunately in some of the rural areas, billings go down. We're trying to encourage, through various programs, doctors and PCNs to expand into rural areas, but that is a challenge. The increase in physician cost is made up, really, of two numbers. One is the higher anticipated number of physicians, and then the number of undergraduate and graduate physician development programs. So it's really a matter of supply and demand that has the greatest impact on our program.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Strankman: I also see that there's $120 million more for labour agreements at AHS. Is that ongoing? I had understood that a lot of those contracts had been settled.

Mr. Mandel: No. Unfortunately, there were new labour negotiations and new settlements that happened, and this is one of those. I think it could be the UNA agreement that was settled, and that caused a dramatic increase in our costs.

Mr. Strankman: I also see that there's $170 million for pharmaceutical costs, and $124 million is for seniors' drug benefits. Could you explain to me how that's allocated there, pharmaceutical costs? In the rural areas the allocation of benefits to the pharmacies is being reduced, actually, so how could those pharmaceutical costs be rising?

Mr. Mandel: A lot of it is the cancer drugs. There's an incredible increase in the cost of drugs to fight cancer, various specialized drugs, and that's made a big difference. The seniors population is growing, so there's more allocation of drugs. People take them, and we pay for them.

Mr. Strankman: I'd like to now rotate over to Human Services, please, Mr. Chairman. It says that there's some $46.8 million in additional spending – of that, $38.7 million is being redistributed – with $43.4 million for employment and income support programs. Can you explain to me how the funding is transferred?

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you. I'd be happy to answer your questions. There is $47 million in operating in the sup estimates and $500,000 in capital funding for Human Services. The $43.4 million of this allocated to employment and income support includes nearly $41 million approved in the first quarter and $526,000 approved in the third quarter. This extra funding is for costs to support unemployed clients who are not eligible for employment insurance and other clients with low levels of literacy and essential skills. As well, $1.9 million was also approved for the targeted initiative for older workers. So this $43.4 million total was offset by a transfer from the federal government under the Canada-Alberta job fund and the targeted initiative for older workers, and there is no net effect on the province's fiscal position with those transactions.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Strankman: The hon. minister said that there was a transfer, that there is federal government involvement here. Can you explain to me what percentage that is?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you. That would be under the Canada-Alberta job fund, and that was offset by the amount of $43.4 million. No, that's not right. Sorry. I am actually not sure of the exact portion. But of the $36 million of supplementary funding – well, that's another matter, support to persons with disabilities. I would suspect that of the $43.4 million, the transfer from the federal government – I would have to get back to you, but I suspect it's a portion of that amount.

Mr. Strankman: I just wondered if you knew what percentage it was. Is it 5 per cent or something along those lines?

I see here it has $36 million to support persons with disabilities for the Michener Centre operating costs. Could you explain to me why there is a wage disparity between agency employees and equivalent public-sector employees for the Michener Centre?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you. I'll deal with Michener. We know that $36 million was allocated for support to persons with disabilities, and of that, $12.4 million was approved in the first quarter for agency wage funding. That was the increase that we gave to part of the commitment that was made in terms of increasing the wages for persons that are working in the caregiving area with individuals with disabilities, so that's where the wage is from. Then $10.7 million of that was approved in the third quarter to keep the Michener Centre open as well.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to jump over to Infrastructure if I could for a minute. For the numbers that I have in front of me, $15.25 million in new funding as well as $8.8 million in reorganized funding to come forward, can the minister explain exactly what projects are involved there?

The Chair: Thank you.

I believe the Minister of Health will speak on behalf of the Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Mandel: Yes. What was the number for the first one? [A timer sounded]

The Chair: That's just indicating that your first 20 minutes are over, hon. member. We'll continue for another 20, and you'll still get your hour if you choose to use it.

Mr. Mandel: So the first number was?

Mr. Strankman: It was $15.25 million in new funding as well as $8.8 million in reorganized funding.

Mr. Mandel: Okay. The $8.8 million was made available from lower than budgeted expenses in other programs: $4.7 million in savings identified as part of the cost-containment measures in December of 2014 and $4.1 million for the reallocation of the operational vote to amounts not voted to reflect a more accurate classification of the asset term provisions for the Swan Hills Treatment Centre.

And did you say $50 million or $15 million?

Mr. Strankman: One five.

Mr. Mandel: One five. Okay. Thank you. I have that here.

The Chair: I believe the Minister of Energy wants to supplement what you're offering, hon. Minister of Health, or were you finished?
The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Oberle: I rise, Mr. Chairman, as Deputy Government House Leader. I guess I'll call it a point of order although it's not actually what it is. I wonder if I might beg the indulgence of the committee to address an obvious difficulty that the Minister of Health is having, that he may be able to address the committee from a seated position. The committee extended the same courtesy to me at one time when I had a broken ankle. I believe the Health minister might find it a bit more comfortable to speak from his chair.

The Chair: Hon. Deputy Government House Leader, I believe that's quite reasonable. I have observed all day the minister's difficulties.

So, yes, we will allow you to address the committee from your chair.

4:10

Mr. Mandel: The $15.3 million includes $3 million for planning funds, and then there was $20.9 million for the 2013 Alberta flood recovery program. That was offset by $8.8 million in funding available from lower than budgeted expenses.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I find it quite ironic that the Minister of Health is in a debilitated position, especially in this province.

Mr. Mandel: Well, we all have issues.

Mr. Strankman: Most certainly we do.

The $20.8 million for flood recovery: that's an additional program? Can you give me some idea of the direction of that? Is that to the broad DRP program, or is there any specific location? It says $19.9 million for relocation.

Mr. Mandel: My notes say $20 million for floodway relocation programs. That's what it says, just relocation to various locations. It does not say specific sites.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to move now to Justice and Solicitor General. It says that there's an extra $16.7 million requested, $5.5 million for legal aid and $11.4 million for labour agreements in the adult remand and correctional centres. Can you explain to me if that's a new contract or if that's some continuing negotiations?

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Human Services will give you an answer on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Yeah. Thank you, hon. member. I'll just reference the $16.7 million. The minister has provided me with the information. The $11.3 million is an increase for costs associated with the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees and management agreements that were ratified in July 2014. In March 2014 the government offered a one-time lump-sum $1,850 payment to all staff for the '13-14 increases, which required an expenditure accrual with payments pending ratification of the agreement. This unforeseen cost caused the ministry to overspend its '13-14 voted appropriation. Consequently, the estimates were encumbered by $11.3 million to cover this shortfall.

Second, there was a $5.5 million increase in grant funding to the Legal Aid Society of Alberta, and the additional funds will ensure Legal Aid Alberta maintains current service levels as well as increasing the financial eligibility guidelines so that more applicants, including individuals receiving AISH, have greater access to full legal representation.

Finally, there was a $120,000 reduction in expense from lower than budgeted expenses in other programs.

Mr. Strankman: So to be clear, I understand that there is a certain amount of funding that was required from an overallocation of money. Is this a common occurrence? Is that money taken from future allocations to that department, or is that removed from some other funding source?

The Chair: Hon. minister, have you got that information?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you, hon. member. I think that when you look at situations like this happening, especially when there are unanticipated costs for employee wages, that's something where when those agreements are made, we have to abide by them. We can't control when they come out. Then the $5.5 million increase in the grant funding for the Legal Aid Society was something that came later in the year. It was really important to do, and that is why it's been brought forward now as a supplementary estimate.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. Not to miss anybody, I'd like to speak to the Minister of Municipal Affairs with some questions if I could. The information that I have in front of me says that the supplementary amount of some $400 million was – and we discussed that, I understand, yesterday to some extent in the House – for municipal sustainability initiative grants. Can I be apprised as to how you arrived at the increases there?

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, and thank you for the question. It's an important question. As you know, it's an extremely important program for our municipal leaders. The $400 million is an amount that we're looking at so that we can make sure, as the economy is slowing down with $50 oil, that we're still putting money towards municipal sustainability projects on the infrastructure side so that they can build out projects now while we're starting to see prices come down. Very, very important for our municipal leaders with regard to that. The actual amount is $398 million but, as you say, hon. member, right around the $400 million piece. Very important not just from the fact that prices are coming down, but also creating jobs, creating the economy going, and a lot of these projects. The RFPs have been out, and they're ready to go, so certainly important for them. As I said yesterday in the House to your colleague, another hon. member in the House here, with regard to – AUMA and AAMD and C were with us as were the reeve and mayor of the city and county of Red Deer. MSI is an extremely important program for our municipal leaders, as you know and have spoken about as well. Again, this is to help move existing municipal infrastructures forward as well.

Mr. Strankman: To be clear, this MSI funding – we have heard in the House even today that there are issues regarding bridge funding, et cetera. Could that funding allocation, MSI funding, be allocated differently within the municipalities for those needs, or is that something that's directly required by the MSI grant or bridge funding to be used only in that area?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you. That's a very good question, hon. member. The MSI funding: I was actually at the table as a vice-president for AUMA when we actually designed the program. The program was so that municipalities would have the flexibility on the capital side – there's a small amount that's operational as well – to pick the projects that are important for their communities because they know, dealing with their constituents and in their communities, what's more important. As the Minister of Transportation said earlier today in a question, the municipalities can choose to use capital funding for what they want. That might be for a bridge; it might be for a waste-water project or recreation centre. We have roads. We have numerous things that they can use it for. But the purpose of MSI is to have long-term, stable funding and to give the municipalities the opportunity to choose the programs and projects that are most important to them. So, yes indeed, they could use it for bridges.

Mr. Strankman: I'm sorry, hon. member, with your voice I was surprised you would take that length of time to answer the question so simplistically.

Mrs. McQueen: I just always want to give you the full amount of information, sir. We're always working so hard on this side to please the opposition.

Mr. Strankman: Well, I completely respect as a farmer that it's always important to haul a full load.

The supplementary amount of $6.1 million is requested with $51 million made available by lower budgeted expenses from that; $32 million approximately is for disaster recovery and municipal wildlife assistance programs. Is that up or down from – I understand that in other jurisdictions we have the disaster recovery program. Is this 32 point some-odd million dollars part and parcel of the flood mitigation?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you very much. Those were interesting comments you made as a farmer. I was a farmer's daughter for many, many years. Haven't really heard those comments before. You could take them many ways, but it's good we're having a little bit of fun here in the House as well. Now that we've all let each other know our agriculture backgrounds, I'll get to your question.

The answer to your question is, of course, that when disaster hits, we don't know from year to year what those may be. With Municipal Affairs the disaster program as it relates to wildfire is much different than the disaster program that the Minister of ESRD has as it relates to wildfire. His are on Crown, and ours would be on municipal land. So $32 million for this year for the supplementary estimates is provided for several disaster recovery and municipal wildfire assistance programs as we assist our municipalities in that. It includes with this the DRP for the 2014 southwestern DRP of $30.7 million. The DRP for the MD of Taber is $0.7 million as well, so with regard to that that's where make it up. In addition, in 2013 we still had some outstanding costs for Slave Lake, $0.3 million for municipal firefighting emergency operation costs in addition to $0.4 million that were related to the costs to convert the town ball diamonds to interim housing sites, that was still left over from the 2012 Slave Lake fires.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Chair. I see here on a line-by-line thing that there's some $700,000 for Alberta emergency alert broadcaster units. Can you give me some understanding of why that funding would be required? Are there updates involved there, or are there greater areas required to be broadcast to? I would think that modernization may reduce the costs.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, hon. member. [interjection] The Minister of Energy is adding his thoughts into this conversation, so I apologize; I'm not laughing at the question. It's a very good question. It's the Minister of Energy that's quite amusing these days. [interjections] No, no. It's fine. I didn't catch it all, so I'll leave it.

As you know, certainly, Alberta emergency alert certainly saves a great deal of lives, and it's the emergencies that are unpredictable. There's the amount being requested, $700,000 to pay for broadcaster units. These units enable Alberta's broadcasters to be in compliance with the Canadian radio and television commission's new standards. They have put new standards in. Alberta has put $700,000 to be in compliance, and this technology really helps us ensure a consistent ability to access across the province to make sure these alerts are there for public safety and that we have our standards the same as the CRTC new standards.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Most certainly public safety is paramount, although my friends who live at the Little Red Deer Store east of Sundre . . .

Mr. Anglin: Hey, hey. Get out of Sundre. You're in my territory.

Mr. Strankman: It would appear that the independent member now from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre feels that I may be cutting some of his grass. It's unfortunate. But I do have some friends in his riding, and they were very frustrated that they did not receive a warning because of the rising flood waters. I just wanted to throw that in for information.

I also have the information of $470,000 added for the new home buyer protection program. Can you help me to understand why there's extra funding? I thought that with the legislation going forward, that was not going to increase any cost to government for that legislation.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. That's correct, and I'm glad that you mentioned your good friend, your colleague from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, and that the folks there thought that they were not notified. Now we have a system that will be enhanced to make sure that we're rectifying those issues, so thank you for recognizing that. I'm sure he's grateful for you to be cutting some of his hay over there as well.

So the new home buyer program is part of that commitment. To keep the program running effectively, we are requesting $470,000 to address increased expenses due to a projected increase in the construction of housing units. These costs, as you did mention, will be offset by additional new home warranty registration fees collected by the government due to increased construction activities, so that's where the offset comes for that request.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Chair. I also see that the Alberta community partnership is increased by $30 million for our capital. Can you please explain the reasoning for that?

Mrs. McQueen: Absolutely. It's very important with the ACP, Alberta community partnership, that this is an opportunity for two or more municipalities – but then there could be some other partners as well – to partner for regional projects that bring regions together in collaboration. This is an important amount. As we move forward, $29,600 will be there so that the municipalities can work on regional partnerships, more collaboration. The deadlines have passed for submission. As you could imagine, hon. member, we would be having way more submissions than we have dollars.

This is certainly a program that I'm actually really excited about because it shows the true collaboration that's happening, whether that be here in the capital region, in the southern region of the Calgary metropolitan area, or clearly across the province. This is something that our municipalities, whether they be urban or rural, are really looking at, the opportunity to partner and to access dollars toward these. So there are some very interesting projects that have been applied for with these funds.

Mr. Strankman: For these funds, hon. member, a member that was from my constituency who previously also sat in this House made comment that in his day the issuance of taxation dollars cost roughly three to four times the dollar that was actually issued as a remuneration to the constituency or whatever cause it might be. I was wondering if the minister might have any idea that – Alberta community partnership has increased by $30 million, but could you give me any personal insight as to how many tax dollars it takes to collect those $30 million?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. That's a very interesting question, and I'm so glad that you brought up the hon. member that used to serve in your constituency before you, an outstanding member who did outstanding work across this province and someone who I and I know my colleagues on this side of the House and I'm sure across the way as well were very, very proud to work with. An outstanding member Mr. Hayden was and certainly someone that I have the utmost support and admiration for, who did an outstanding job in so many ministries across this province.

As the $29,600 is new money in here, and it certainly is – you're asking what's the cost of implementing the program. It's part of the staff that we have with Municipal Affairs under the granting program, so it's being absorbed with the current staff that we have in place.

Mr. Strankman: So just to be clear, hon. member, the money issued is including the administration costs?

Mrs. McQueen: Oh, sorry. Then I wasn't clear on your question, so thank you for that. This is just for the capital piece of it. We already have staff in place that administer grants, so this is strictly the money that is for the capital grants to the ACP.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thank you. I may not have been completely clear with my question and/or my statement because I still respond to former MLA Shirley McClellan as the Member for Drumheller-Stettler and my MLA. Mr. Hayden has other notoriety.

I'd like to move on, if I could, to Service Alberta and the supplemental...

Mrs. McQueen: Maybe, hon. member, just a last comment just so we can close out Municipal Affairs. Absolutely, Shirley McClellan is one of the most outstanding women, as are many, that have served in this Legislature, and I'm glad that you recognized Shirley. Both Shirley McClellan and Jack Hayden have served this province with a great deal of pride, so thank you for recognizing both of them.

Mr. Strankman: I'd like to move on to Service Alberta if I could.

The Chair: Okay. We'll start your last 20-minute segment, hon. member. Of course, we'll continue in the same format, so please continue.

Mr. Strankman: Well, if that's agreeable to the members opposite, I'm happy to try and continue the discussion.

The Chair: Carry on.

Mr. Strankman: Under Service Alberta I see there's an increased supplemental of $5.4 million, and $7 million is for motor vehicle services for secure ID. Would that have anything to do with the potentiality of the government changing the licence plate designation?

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Human Services on behalf of the Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you. Thank you, hon. member, for your question. Actually, what this amount does reflect is additional expenses incurred to meet the increased demand for motor vehicles services like drivers' licences and ID cards, and this was associated with the greater-than-expected population growth that we had over the past year. The additional expenses both in terms of transaction volume and the work to increase the activity – and this is certainly not negatively affecting the security integrity of Alberta's information. That's what it was referring to.

Mr. Strankman: Okay. It also mentions $4.5 million for postage stamps for the registration mail-outs. Is there not some other methodology that could be achieved at doing that?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you again, hon. member. Most certainly, the $4.5 million was used to purchase postage from Canada Post for renewal notices for vehicle registration mail-outs, and $9 million was used to purchase inventory such as the occupational health and safety handbooks and safety codes, which are sold by the Queen's Printer.

4:30

With respect to other ways of notifying individuals for renewal notices, we know that there's the technology that we have at our disposal with respect to e-mails. The challenge is collecting all those e-mail addresses, but it's certainly, I'm sure, on the minister's agenda with respect to being more efficient with our dollars. But, again, the way that they have been doing it is by mailing the registration renewals in the mail.

Mr. Strankman: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would think that they could be cycling in a method of electronically notifying the recipients of their renewal date, by e-mail or something. Has there been any looking into that? I think that would reduce the cost significantly.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Yeah. Thank you again. Previously, as the former Minister of Service Alberta – we began to look at that whole area to look for savings and efficiencies. It's by the first letter of your last name; you more or less know when to go and renew your insurance. That's something I'd be happy to pass on to the Minister of Service Alberta as that's an excellent suggestion.

Mr. Strankman: Also, I see there's almost $300,000 for the safeguarding of the registry system. Could you explain to me those increased expenses?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, thank you again for the question. I guess part of it is all the personal information that is collected and stored there in the registry system and by the registry agents, to keep the system robust and safe. You know, thousands of transactions take place on a daily basis across Alberta, so it's ensuring that the registry agents have access and they can serve the clients that come to see them in their offices.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Thanks again, Mr. Chair, and thanks to the member opposite for her responses.

I'd like to move on to Transportation here, where we have 15 and some-odd million dollars for provincial highway preservation. Could the hon. member give me some sort of background in that regard? In the constituency of Drumheller-Stettler and others that I drive in, it certainly wouldn't seem that there is any great amount of money spent on preservation, let alone maintenance.

Mr. Drysdale: Well, Mr. Chairman, I thought we were talking about supplementary supply here, not the budget, because we didn't spend over any money in highway preservation. We didn't exceed the budget there, obviously, as you stated.

But if you'd like, I could explain where we exceeded the budget in supplementary supply. Alberta Transportation requires an additional $11.9 million for supplementary estimates. You know, this request includes $1 million for a feasibility study for flood mitigation projects in southern Alberta, and it includes $15.6 million for unexpected repair work on geological hazards such as landslides and floods. This line item is unexpected; it's not budgeted for. It's, like, emergency things; for example, there were extensive stabilization and rebuilding efforts on highway 744 at Judah hill in the Peace River country. There was a major slide there last year, and we don't budget for that.

You know, that was $15 million out of our $11 million over, but it was offset by savings of $670,000 that we transferred to Municipal Affairs for the basic transportation grant, and that was for program delivery and support services. We also had an operational savings of $4.1 million related to cost containments in the 2014 year, you know. So that shows the difference of our $11 million dollars of overspending.

I'm not going to debate the budget, about whether we spend enough on highway maintenance and overlay, because as Minister of Transportation of course I'd like to do a lot more overlay in this province. I just need to talk to my friend the President of the Treasury Board.

Thank you.

The Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

The hon. member.

Mr. Strankman: Yes. Thanks. I may have interpreted my notes incorrectly there, so I apologize for that.

You mentioned in your dissertation there $4.1 million in operational savings from 2013, I believe it was. Can you explain? Were those savings rolled forward, or did that go back into general revenue, and if so, what was the incentive for those savings, to do that? I think that's an innovative idea and should be continued.
