There's a direct contradiction between the MLA for Sherwood Park and the MLA for Calgary-Klein that is significant and needs to be answered. What are this government's plans for REAs now? Is it the Member for Sherwood Park's version, or is it the Member for Calgary-Klein's version? Is the government concerned that REAs are going to take advantage of their members, or is the government concerned with protecting REAs' ability to be able to do their role inside rural communities? Which one is it? I'm confused. I'm sure you're confused, Madam Chair, after hearing both of those speeches. So I would love it if the government would acknowledge that.

We'd like to hear from the minister now on what her plan is for REAs and whether she agrees with the Member for Calgary-Klein that there is significant risk of REAs taking advantage of their members and that that's why they're doing this legislation. Is this legislation being brought in in an attempt to limit REAs' abilities? Or, as the Member for Sherwood Park brought up, is this legislation being brought in to stop Fortis from doing their job? It's very confusing now, what the intention of this government is with this bill. I don't know what the government wants to do. They clearly need to get their story straight because we're hearing two very, very different versions in relation to REAs, in particular in the last few minutes, from members across the way. It's disappointing.

What is most disappointing is that there's a clear amount of ignorance from the members on what an REA is, what their implications are for rural Alberta. I think the Member for Calgary-Klein, if he misspoke, should make that clear, should rise and explain it. If not, the government needs to explain what their intention is for REAs. Is this going to be a continued attack on rural Alberta, that we have seen from the NDP? Are they continuing with their attraction to attacking rural Alberta or not?

The Chair: Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Madam Chair. It's my absolute pleasure to stand up and talk about rural electrification associations. In the constituency of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville I have the privilege to represent the Lakeland Rural Electrification Association, the Zawale Rural Electrification Association, and the Battle River Cooperative REA. Over the last couple of years it's been a really interesting journey in getting to know how these different REAs work on a really local level as co-operative models. I know that, actually, after I was elected, the Lakeland REA was one that reached out to me immediately because they were very excited that the new New Democrat government shared the same ideological underpinnings as co-operatives. They were hoping that a new government with those ideologies would come forward in a way that would collaborate with them to figure out how to make those local drivers of economic development in rural Alberta sustainable, viable engines out in their communities. They want to know that there is someone that is actually fighting for them.

I know that the Wildrose members have come together on this issue because they represent mostly rural ridings. I know that these REAs that have come forward to talk to us were hoping to see new MLAs from these parties do something to better protect their futures, that had not been taken into consideration by the previous government at all. These groups out in rural Alberta, exactly like members have pointed out, came together to provide themselves with electricity when government would not help and when companies did not see the ability to make money. So they came together . . .

An Hon. Member: So why don't you trust them?

Mrs. Littlewood: I don't really know why there are members yelling at me. Maybe you could control your members. We're in agreement. We're talking about the same thing. [interjections] We all agree that these groups are incredibly important out in rural areas, out in small communities, for economic development.

An Hon. Member: But you don't trust them.

Mrs. Littlewood: I'm sorry. I don't know why the members from the Wildrose continue to yell at me. I'm sorry. I'm at a bit of a loss. I'm sorry.

Chair, is there a reason . . .

The Chair: Hon. member, please continue.

4:10

Mrs. Littlewood: I would like to, but it's a little bit difficult.

At any rate, it's my absolute pleasure to be able to represent these groups and work with them knowing that we can come together and look at how the legislation works, see how it is that we can work with other models of how it works in other jurisdictions such as the United States and how it has been a model unto itself. Because it is an agreement between someone like ATCO and the REA itself, so there is not the space in between for the Alberta Utilities Commission. It's a direct relationship that they have.

I think that we need to make sure that we find out how it is that these models can continue to be good for their members to continue to invest in. Because they look at how they buy their energy in markets, and there is, of course, instability inherent in that. I know that I've heard that from some of the smaller REAs just outside of the capital region of Edmonton, that when they buy at a rate higher for the future, you know, that they could have offered something that was more competitive if they didn't do that. But they're looking at how to make sure that they can actually provide the best value for their members, so they make those business decisions with the experience that they have.

We need to look to the future and see how we can better partner with them and their expertise. [interjections] I don't really know why the members continue to shout down REAs. It's a little bit confusing why the members opposite don't want to just work together on helping REAs into the future. You know, I think that we've been working very well on this for a couple of years, and I don't know why they're so angry that the government supports the work that the REAs are doing. Madam Chair, it's astonishing that we could be working towards helping rural Alberta and the Wildrose would instead try to score some sort of political points off people that are really just trying to make life better for their local communities.

I really do hope that we actually have some genuine support from across the way, but I'm not hearing that. I wish that we could work together on something that would actually help people as opposed to creating these strange sort of divides against people and against communities. I am very much hoping that we can maybe strike a more collaborative tone on trying to help these REAs into the future. I very much hope that the members can get onboard with the government's plan to make these groups more viable in the future.

Thanks, Madam Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. First of all, I just wanted to say that I think that when the Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville stands up and says that we're shouting her down, she needs to remember that we are actually giving good advice to this government to be able to make it better. Then what happens is that she gets us on Hansard so that it makes it look like we're shouting her down. In reality, the members opposite shout us down constantly. What I'd like to say to the member is that she might want to make sure that when she's pointing one finger, three are not pointing back at her.

Let me just talk to this really quickly. I think the issue here, that I see as a big problem – let me just read to you really quickly what the regulations say. I think it's really important, Madam Chair, to remember that this bill – I have no doubt that they believe in what they're doing and that they believe that this is in the best interest of Albertans. The problem is that there could be problems with it, so if we come up with a reasonable amendment, I think the members opposite should take a look at it.

So here's the question that I have. Under regulations it says:

- 6(1) The Minister may make regulations . . .
 - (b) determining or providing for mechanisms for determining one or more rates per kWh for the purposes of section 2(2)(b)(i) and determining the rate, if any, that applies to a particular owner or rate class of a particular owner.

First of all, members need to remember how these rates are set. The government thinks that the rates should be set by the minister, that they could go in at any time and pick and choose the companies – and we've heard a lot about the REAs in this situation – and that they need to protect Albertans against REAs that are actually member driven. It's absolutely ludicrous that they would say such a thing. Really, the devil's in the details, Madam Chair. In reality, if the minister has this right and the power to be able to change the regulations at any time, to take away the right of an REA to set the rate, then they could create a multi-tiered scenario at any given time, a multi-tiered scenario where they pick who's going to have what rate and could drive them out.

Now, one thing that I have seen over the last two years that is extremely concerning to me is that this government continues to restrict supply. When they restrict supply, they drive up the price. Simple economics. Supply and demand create the equilibrium price. This is why for a couple of hundred years we have had very successful societies, because we've allowed the market to decide those prices. The problem is that when the minister has the right to decide what those prices are, she drives up the price.

I have said this before in this House, Madam Chair. The concern I have is that if this government, if this bill was all about protecting Albertans, would you not protect them at the 3 cents per kilowatt hour that it's at presently? Why would you wait to when it has to get over a hundred per cent increase in the cost of this electricity before you decide to then protect them? That's what they're saying. They're saying: we're going to protect them when it hits 6.8 cents per kilowatt hour.

If that's the case, when they decided they were going to cap tuition rates, why didn't they wait for it to go up over a hundred per cent before they decided to cap tuition rates? Because they know that they would never get that vote again. They know that students would say: you guys have been completely destroying our economy, destroying our ability to get to school. So they capped the rate at the present rate. They didn't wait for it to go up a hundred per cent.

In this situation this whole idea of capping the rate at 6.8 cents when we're sitting at 3 cents per kilowatt hour is saying: "You know what? We're actually not going to protect Albertans. We're going to wait for it to go up to 6.8 cents. Then we're going to cap it, and you guys can go ahead and eat the over hundred per cent increase in the cost of electricity." How is that making life better for Albertans?

Now, the problem with this is that – I think that the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View has said: look, let's try to make this less bad. In order to do that, we want to make sure that there's an equal playing field in this market, an equal playing field where REAs and everyone else can have the same rate set. But under this regulation the way that it reads right now, the minister would be able to pick and choose who gets what, and I believe that that is a complete disaster waiting to happen.

If the members opposite believe that REAs would be okay with that, I have no idea where they'd get that kind of thinking because REAs don't need their help. REAs are member driven. They are fully capable and have been capable for quite some time now to have a strong, vibrant business model. This is the reason why we have so many REAs in Alberta. They are very capable of doing what they do because they're member driven and because they have a good business model. They don't need the government telling them how to do it.

4:20

This is the problem with this whole bill. The problem with this whole bill is that these guys are creating a scenario where they're going to dictate what the price is for each of these different entities in this market. I just think they are playing with fire on this one.

Albertans don't deserve it. They don't deserve to have them, first of all, drive up the price of electricity. I have talked to people in my riding who are absolutely irate. People who are on fixed incomes do not know how they're going to be able to deal with this. They're already struggling. They're already in pain because of the continual problems that this government keeps piling on them, and then this government is going to be complicit in driving the price up to 6.8 cents per kilowatt hour. They drive it up because they're trying hard, desperately to be able to bring in green energy.

Now, listen, Madam Chair, I believe in green energy. I want to see green energy come, but the technology has to be there. You can't drive this to happen. I gave an example the other day where I talked about a U.S. president back in the '70s, and he decided that he was going to restrict how much natural gas people could use. He drove greenhouse businesses out of business. It's interesting, as I read a little bit more about that, that he actually put solar panels on the White House. It didn't last because the technology wasn't there. It wasn't ready for it.

What we need to do is make sure that the technology is there before we start bringing in some kind of an ideological push so that it won't cost Albertans billions of dollars. This is what this boondoggle has created. It just seems like one problem after another has been created because they wanted to push. They wanted to push their green energy strategy. We've got lots of examples – Ontario, Germany, California, lots of examples – where this boondoggle has been simmering for a long time and has cost the people, the taxpayers of those jurisdictions a lot of money. For some strange reason this NDP government believes that they've got it right this time. No wonder Albertans are concerned. No wonder we're concerned. No wonder we don't believe that they do have it right, because they haven't shown a model that does work.

Anyway, Madam Chair, again, I think this is a reasonable amendment. I think that this is making this bill less bad. It takes the power out of the minister's hand so that she cannot just arbitrarily decide a rate for each of the different entities within this playing field. I think it's an extremely important amendment, and I will be supporting it.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A2?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A2 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:23 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Gotfried	MacIntyre
Anderson, W.	Hanson	Panda
Cyr	Hunter	Stier
Drysdale	Loewen

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Ganley	McLean
Babcock	Goehring	McPherson
Bilous	Gray	Miller
Carlier	Hoffman	Miranda
Ceci	Kazim	Nielsen
Connolly	Kleinsteuber	Payne
Coolahan	Larivee	Piquette
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Dach	Loyola	Sabir
Dang	Luff	Schreiner
Eggen	Malkinson	Sigurdson
Feehan	McCuaig-Boyd	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	McKittrick	Woollard

Totals:	For – 11	Against – 39
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A2 lost]

The Chair: We're back on the main bill. Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

4:40

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Yeah, I'd like to make a few comments on this bill we're discussing here today. In particular, I would like to quote some parts of a letter from Spot Power. This is a letter to the Energy minister and CCed to all MLAs in Alberta. It starts off with:

On Tuesday, you tabled Bill 16: An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates. The new bill will allow the government to place a cap on the Regulated Rate Option (RRO) for electricity. The retail price cap of 6.8 cents per kilowatt-hour will apply to those consumers on the RRO until May 31, 2021.

So they've outlined here what this bill is doing.

The subsidy, funded wholly from the Carbon Levy, will be paid to the RRO Utilities, Rural Electrification Associations (REAs) and the city of Medicine Hat to cover the difference between the calculated monthly RRO price and the government set cap of 6.8 cents per kWh.

Now, of course, they've described here where this is going to be funded from. It's from the carbon tax. Of course, the carbon tax is something that Albertans did not want and that the government did not campaign on.

It goes on to say:

All consumers in Alberta pay into the Carbon Levy Fund, but not all consumers will benefit from this subsidy. A policy that subsidizes only part of the population while requiring everyone to fund it, is simply wrong. We are all Albertans and should be treated fairly.

Since the carbon levy is just on fuel and heating and this money goes to electrical consumers, then the people that burn lots of gas, for instance, tend to pay more carbon tax, of course, and if they burn lots of gas and, say, have solar panels, then they get no return on that investment. That's what he's describing here in this letter, why it's not fair.

The subsidy payment will go to the RRO providers who are guaranteed a marginal profit based on their individual Energy Price Setting Plans. We ask you to realize that some of the utilities you are subsidizing have shipped Alberta jobs out of the province (Enmax to Tata; ATCO to Wipro; and Direct Energy to HCL). These jobs were once provided by Albertans in fields such as Information Technology, Customer Care, and Billing Services. Subsidizing RRO providers that shipped jobs to India, Guatemala or Ontario out of Carbon Levy dollars is not right.

So this isn't having Albertans' backs. These are some of the consequences of some of this government's actions that they don't realize.

The letter goes on to say:

The main message touted by the government for this new bill is "protection of the consumer from price fluctuations". Dear Minister, it is wrong to base your decisions on what RRO prices looked like in 2012 and 2013. Market conditions have changed. The market over the last three years has been stable and today, consumers are paying 3 cents for energy, not the 15.3 cents that was seen in the past.

By using averages going back to 2012-2013, it has somewhat distorted what's happening today. It's just not necessarily using the best data.

The letter goes on to say:

Are you expecting wholesale power prices to spike again given the various energy policies that you are planning on undertaking? If the wholesale market collapses and we see a return to 15.3 cent retail prices this will cost the government almost $120 million a month. Is this what you are anticipating?

I think that's a great question because if the prices do go back up because of this government's electricity policies, then the taxpayer is going to be on the hook for almost $120 million a month. That's a lot of money.

It goes on:

The Cost of Energy is Not the Problem

What does the average consumer bill look like today?

They've actually got a graph, and I'll be bringing this forward tomorrow into the Legislature. But it's got a graph here, and basically what the graph is saying is:

The charges on an electricity bill can be split into two categories, regulated and de-regulated. De-regulated charges vary depending on which provider you choose to supply you with electricity. Regulated charges are set by the Wires company which services your area and remain the same, no matter who you choose to provide you with energy.

De-regulated charges include:

- The cost of electricity consumed . . .
- Administration fees

Regulated charges include:

- Balancing Pool Allocation
- Delivery Charges
- Local Access Fees

The delivery charges make up over 74% of the total costs for the consumer . . . The actual energy consumption charges make up only 14% of the total costs.

Clearly the cost of energy is not the problem.

It goes on to say:

Over the last four years, energy prices have declined every month – year after year. It was the private sector that invested $17 Billion in building generation facilities, and consumers have benefited. Today, retail prices indexed to the cost of energy have never been lower. If the cost of energy isn't the problem, possibly the cap should be applied to the cost of distribution and transmission. Consumers can buy electricity today for between 3 to 4 cents per kWh but pay two times and as much as five times more for the cost of delivery.

He's kind of outlining some of the problems with the situation that we have here with this cap.

Now, having a cap to begin with I think is worrisome to Albertans because, obviously, what they're doing is setting the tone for where the electricity prices are going. That's worrisome, especially when you put the cap at double the rates existing today.

The letter goes on to say:

New Policies Will Cause Energy Costs to Rise

Closing coal plants, a conversion to natural gas, subsidies for solar PV, bailing out the Balancing Pool, and capacity payments being made to new generators will all contribute to pushing up the cost of generation.

Let me just kind of reiterate that. It says here that closing coal plants, a conversion to natural gas, subsidies for solar PV, bailing out the Balancing Pool, and capacity payments being made to new generators will all contribute to pushing up the cost of generation. That's a lot of things that will affect the cost of electricity in Alberta that are all as a result of this government's actions.

Now, it goes on to say:

The total annual load that is eligible for the RRO is about 19 terawatt hours . . . translated on average to [1.6 billion] kWh per month. This accounts for about 40% of the load settled through the Alberta Load Settlement System. If the wholesale market increases, thus causing the RRO to go above 6.8 cents per kWh, it is going to cost $10 million to $16 million in subsidies per month for every cent per kWh increase in the wholesale price. Wouldn't we be wiser to spend this money on subsidizing programs that would increase the quality of our life or help reduce the carbon footprint, rather than manipulating the market?

I think that's another good question, Madam Chair, how we're spending this money to benefit Albertans. We're spending billions of dollars here manipulating a system that was working fine, and to what end? Costing Albertans billions of dollars. That's who's paying for all this. Any time a company invests money in electricity in Alberta, that money will be recovered from Albertans.

What if the RRO spikes to 15.3 cents per kilowatt hour again? Under the cap that has been imposed, this would cost the government (consumers) $119 million during that particular month. This program could bankrupt the Carbon Levy fund and will do nothing to reduce our carbon footprint. Does the Carbon

Levy have enough money in the budget to fund the additional expense?

These expenses could be huge, Madam Chair: $119 million a month just on bailing out electricity companies if the price of electricity goes beyond the cap. That's a huge amount of money.

It goes on to say:

A question to consumers: where do you think the money is coming from that will be used to fund the cap? Where?

- Out of one pocket and into the other.
- Industry who is consuming 60% of the load in Alberta will be required to step up to subsidize the subsidy.

How will industry recover their losses? You know, they'll be charging Albertans, or Albertans will be paying for it through their taxes.

A higher cost of electricity will hurt consumers as well as our manufacturing and industrial sectors. When this happens, we start to lose the Alberta competitive advantage.

4:50

What this letter is stating, which is obvious, is that as you increase the costs of doing business in Alberta, that makes it less likely for companies to come here and set up businesses. It's all about having a competitive advantage over other jurisdictions. This is what we see over and over again. By driving away investment, we lose jobs, we lose tax base, and it's just a spiralling effect.

The letter goes on to say:

Does the Government Want to Kill a Competitive Electricity Market?

It is the competitive retailers in the market that drive innovation and are constantly introducing new products and services. The RRO cap will artificially tilt the playing field towards the RRO providers and away from competitive market participants. Those who will profit from the end of the competitive market are the same players who exported jobs out of the province. With unemployment still far too high, why are we going to subsidize RRO providers who shipped jobs out of the province?

That's a fair question.

The Carbon Levy is being used to subsidize 40% of the load in the province, yet the other 60% are not eligible for the subsidy but are required to pay. This taxation program will hurt the private sector, and in the long run, consumers.

Somebody has to pay for all this in the end. Who's there to pay? Of course, the consumers. Who are the consumers? Those are Albertans.

Dear Minister, we are asking you to avoid harming private sector businesses, the likes of Spot Power, and scores of others that have invested in this province.

So there's a letter from Spot Power to the Energy minister. Obviously, they're concerned. They've brought out a lot of great points as far as what this bill will do to make Alberta less competitive and to force the cost onto the taxpayer.

We all know that this bill is a way for the government to hide the true cost of electricity, to take it off the bill of Albertans and have it funded through the back door from tax money, which is also Albertans' money. That's the only reason this could have been brought forward, Madam Chair. It has nothing to do with protecting Albertans. It has nothing to do with lowering the cost of electricity. It's an admission that the electricity rates are going up, and it's an admission that this government wants to hide those costs from showing up on your electricity bill. There's no need for this bill. This is, again, another situation where the government has to bring forward bills as damage control for bills that they've already passed, bills that they passed that we warned had consequences.

Madam Chair, I'll be voting against this bill, and I'd encourage others that are concerned about Albertans and concerned about transparency to do the same. Thank you.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mr. MacIntyre: Thank you, Madam Chair. Well, there is a great deal to talk about in this bill, Bill 16. I would like to draw our attention to section 6 in particular. Regulations is the heading, and I'm going to go to subsection (g).

6(1) The Minister may make regulations . . .

- (g) respecting any matter or thing that the Minister considers necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

An absolute, wide open, carte blanche power given to the minister to make regulations respecting any matter or thing that the minister considers necessary to carry out the purposes of this act.

Let's have a look at the purposes of this act. Well, there are two very distinctly different narratives about the real purposes of this act. The government would have us believe that the purpose of this act is to protect Alberta consumers from price spikes on the retail side of our electricity market, up till now our competitive, free-market electricity sector, deregulated but not for long, apparently. The government claims that Albertans need protection from price spikes.

I believe it's been mentioned before. I'm going to mention it again. The RRO, the regulated rate option, is the fallback, the default rate for Alberta residential customers, small businesses, and small farms should they choose not to use a fixed-rate contract. We have available to us from multiple retail providers in this province fixed-rate contracts ranging from, I've seen, two years, three years, five years, that are already well below 6.8 cents, I should point out. I believe the current five-year contract from at least four providers is 5.59 cents. So the government's claim that the purpose of this bill is to protect Albertans from price spikes really falls to the ground when you consider that the protection has been there all along. Any of these fixed-rate contract providers also have mechanisms within those contracts for Albertans to opt out of a fixed-rate contract and go back to their regulated rate option if the customer chooses to. Some of these providers want 30 days' notice; some want 15 days' notice. In either case it's not a lot of notice. For some of them there's no penalty; you simply go back on the RRO if it's in your best interest to do so.

Right now with the rate being 3 cents, 3.1, 3.2 on the RRO, depending on your providers, it makes perfect sense to jump over there, take advantage of those low rates for a while, and if in your opinion as the consumer you want to lock things down at any point in time, then fine, phone up any of these providers. Get yourself a long-term contract or a short-term contract and protect yourself from price spikes. The deregulated electricity market that we had already had so many choices for consumers. It was in that very choice that the consumer was finding protection. They did not need Big Brother government coming along and putting in place an artificial cap over twice as high as the current RRO, strangely, and then claiming to be protecting Albertans from price spikes. They were already protected, fully protected. They could at any moment pick up the phone, call a provider, and lock down their electricity rate if they saw that rates were going to go up. It's a very simple process. That's the nature of a competitive market in a free-market economy.

Competition has always been the number one protector for consumers. We have competition in the purchasing of cars, the brand of food, the kinds of clothes we buy. You name it. There is competition out there for our business. That's where we find our protection, both in the quality of the product we buy and in the price for the product we buy. If you go around the world and you study economic history and you look at government models throughout the world that have employed supply management regimes, those economies consistently collapse. They fail because government then becomes the determiner of what is going to be the price for commodity A or B.

It wasn't all that long ago that we saw a total collapse in Eastern bloc nations under the old socialist regime. They had shoe factories producing shoes nobody wanted. They couldn't get bread produced because the flour was being sold somewhere else. This was all managed by a central government and managed wrong. Here in this country we had supply management under the Canadian Wheat Board, and thankfully it's gone. Thankfully, it's gone. You know, there was another monopolistic, centralized, planned regime in place.

5:00

Here we have a government that, for whatever reason, seems to think that they know best and that the competitive nature of a market doesn't ensure either quality or reliability or stability or competitive pricing. They have throughout the debate on Bill 16 and others used those words, that they need to do this for the sake of reliability in our electricity system, they need to do this for the sake of stability in our electricity system, and they need to do this for the sake of volatility and for the sake of ensuring that Albertans don't experience price spikes. Well, news flash: our deregulated energy market did a really good job. It did a really good job in providing all of that to Albertans.

The system wasn't broken. This government has come along and broken it terribly. They broke it to the tune already of well over $4 billion in unnecessary costs to Alberta taxpayers. So when we see something like this particular clause under section 6(1)(g), that "the Minister may make regulations . . . respecting any matter or thing that the Minister considers necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act," I would suggest to this House and to Albertans who are watching this debate that the real purpose of this act is not at all to protect Alberta consumers. It is to eliminate the deregulated electricity system. It is to eliminate the free market and choice. It is to eliminate consumers' only real protection, which has been competition. Its real purpose is actually to protect this government from the embarrassing reality of a series of horrific missteps in the management of this file. That is the real purpose of this bill that we have before us.

I reject the notion that this minister can be given carte blanche authority to make regulations respecting any matter or thing that the minister considers necessary to carry out the purposes of this act. I have no faith whatsoever in this minister or this government in getting it right. I do not want this minister or this government to be able to do whatever they want in regulation without having to come into this Chamber right here and answer for it. They saw fit to bring Bill 16 in with a 6.8 cent price tag on the cap, and as we have seen already, they want to give the minister permission to change it any way she wants. So does this section.

So I would like to introduce an amendment. I'll wait, Madam Chair.

The Chair: This is amendment A3. Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. MacIntyre: Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 16, An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates, be amended in section 6(1) by striking out clause (g) entirely. That is the amendment, to get rid of it entirely out of this bill for the reasons that I have stated. There is no way – no way – that this minister and this government should be given this kind of carte blanche authority to do whatever they want to, and that's what this section (g) does: "respecting any matter or thing that the Minister considers necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act."

As I've already discussed, there is a big difference between the purposes expressed by this government and the realities of the real reasons for this Bill 16 coming before this Legislature, and I do not believe for one moment that this Minister of Energy or this government should be given permission through a piece of legislation like this to do whatever they want to a free-market system that has been working quite well, thank you very much.

They even went so far as to use as some of their justification a price spike in the RRO that went slightly more than 15 cents, failing to understand that that price spike was actually caught by the MSA and the company responsible for it fined $56 million. Fifty-six million. In other words, our free-market economy with the built-in protection mechanisms that were put in place some time ago worked just fine. The contravening participant was caught. It went before the authorities. The authorities said: "No. What you did was wrong. You purposely went and withheld generation to force the price up. You took advantage of that, and you charged Albertans a lot of money for it. You've been caught red-handed, and now you need to pay this fine." Our system worked. The very competitive nature of the system with the built-in safeguards, specifically the MSA, worked just fine.

The government is claiming: oh, Albertans need protection because the price went up that time to 15 cents. I agree that we need protection there. We have it. It's called the Market Surveillance Administrator. They're the electricity police. They were notified of what had happened. The whistle was blown on TransAlta. TransAlta was fined. The system worked flawlessly.

Mr. Panda: How much was the fine?

Mr. MacIntyre: Fifty-six million dollars.

It's significant to realize that the system, in a completely deregulated environment, was not only working but even policing itself. The mechanisms existed. I should also note that – well, we'll talk about the MSA a little later, one of my favourite organizations within our electricity system.

As it stands right now, respecting this particular amendment that I'm putting forward before this House, I would hope that all members would consider the kind of carte blanche authority that is being given to this minister that has failed to demonstrate a solid understanding of the electricity file from the beginning, claiming from the beginning that she had not any knowledge of section 4.3(j), which led to this whole mess that we're experiencing right now.

Bill 34 had to come into being. The government had to bail out the Balancing Pool. Because of this minister's mismanagement well over $700 million in the pool vaporized. The pool was fined $29 million because of this minister's mismanagement, and we're going to give this minister carte blanche like this? I don't think so. I don't think so. And no accountability to do things in regulation without having to come to this House and answer for those actions? No. That is unreasonable.

You cannot come to Albertans anymore and say: trust me. That trust has been broken time and time and time again on this electricity file. Not only does the average Albertan not trust this government; the industry doesn't trust this government either. There's nothing to trust anymore. This government hit industry with a 70 per cent increase in the specified gas emitters rate. That doesn't engender trust, when you slap them like that within six weeks of coming into office. That doesn't make people trust you. Quite the opposite. Then you're shutting down coal – it's just crazy – and saying: "Trust me. We've got your back. We're making life more affordable for Albertans." Well, tell that to people in Keephills. Tell that to the people in Halkirk, Hanna, Forestburg. Go ahead. Stand on the corner with a big sign that says, "I'm making life more affordable for you," and see what the response is.

5:10

Mr. Panda: It's an insult to Albertans.

Mr. MacIntyre: It's an insult. They're not making life more affordable for Albertans. They're hurting Albertans left, right, and centre, especially in the electricity industry. And now here we have Bill 16. It's ridiculous.

I would hope that every member will consider this amendment to make the minister come back to this House whenever the minister wants to make a change to this bill. I think it's important. I think it's important because Albertans have no reason to trust that the minister will get it right. We haven't seen any analysis. We haven't seen any assessment. We have not seen any of the deliberations through consultation, none of it. Over and over again it's the same story: "Trust me; I've got your back. Trust me; I've got your back." No. No. Not happening. We do not trust this minister.

I would hope every member will support this amendment. Thank you very much.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A3?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[The voice vote indicated that amendment A3 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:12 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Hanson	MacIntyre
Drysdale	Hunter	Panda
Gotfried	Loewen	Stier

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Ganley	McLean
Babcock	Goehring	McPherson
Bilous	Gray	Miller
Carlier	Hoffman	Miranda
Ceci	Kazim	Nielsen
Connolly	Kleinstauber	Payne
Coolahan	Larivee	Piquette
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Dach	Loyola	Sabir
Dang	Luff	Schreiner
Eggen	Malkinson	Sigurdson
Feehan	McCuaig-Boyd	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	McKitrick	Woollard

Totals:	For – 9	Against – 39
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to Bill 16? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to take this time to speak to Bill 16, An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates. My understanding is that if this bill is passed, the regulated rate option, which is currently around 3 cents per kilowatt hour, will be capped at 6.8 cents per kilowatt hour. Is this not an admission from this government that the rate will more than double over the next little while? The RRO will be capped for the next four years, from June 1, 2017, to May 31, 2021. Regardless, even with their cap, we're in for a huge increase on our power bills.

This was completely shocking to me until I read further information about the file. Madam Chair, I have to tell you that after reading up on this file, I realized that this government is not in a position to govern the people of Alberta properly. This file is being completely torn to pieces, and Albertans will have to suffer the consequences of this NDP's action and inaction for decades to come.

I've been listening to a few of the speeches from the other side of the House, and it makes me wonder if any of those MLAs did any homework on this file or if they just were handed talking points and then went blindly into this foray. I have to admit that it angers me that this government is promoting this bill like they are actually sticking up for Albertan families. This is purely nonsensical. I talk to Albertans on a regular basis, and people on a fixed income especially are not happy about this bill.

You're telling us that you have to cap the regulated rate option at 6.8 cents per kilowatt hour, when currently it's 3.8 cents per kilowatt hour. Natural gas is cheap, readily available, and is capable of employing hundreds of thousands of people. What is more ridiculous is that this cap is only available for those who consume fewer than 250,000 kilowatt hours per year. So what about companies and industry, who supply Albertans with thousands upon thousands of jobs? Are you just going to cut and slash them so that they have no other option but to finally pick up and move to another jurisdiction, out of the province? Or maybe that is your plan altogether.

First, the job creators were hit by this government's massive corporate tax, then came the carbon tax, and now you're not going to protect our job makers and everyday Albertans from an increase to electricity that has been set in motion due to your radical and ideological policy decisions.

Will the government just admit to Albertans that due to their reckless NDP policy world views, they have completely turned this file upside down? They're meddling with a file they know absolutely nothing about. Albertans realize that the bill is just a cover-up due to their irresponsible rapid transition to renewables. We kept warning them over and over again: "Too fast. The economy can't handle this. Slow down. Do an economic impact study. Listen to Albertans." But they don't listen to reason, calling us climate change deniers whenever they get the chance, for political reasons, just so that they can press forward with their ideological nonsense.

5:20

Albertans are going to pay one way or the other, from job losses when industry has once and for all been decimated and forced to move, to massive debt that will occur due to the amount of money it will take to fund this cap. It's been estimated at over $20 billion to get us to the 30 per cent by 2030. Can you believe it? Where is this money going to come from, Madam Chair? Being completely out of touch with everyday Albertans and radical ideology are going to be the financial ruin of this province, this once-great province: a massive and costly lawsuit with Enmax, funded by taxpayers, phasing out coal at an accelerated rate, and the cost to fund this cap.

I urge the government to turn back the clock on this senseless and expensive transition to renewables and help restore Alberta to a place where businesses are thriving and Albertans are earning a good living. As I look over to the other side, I plead with those sitting on the backbench to do their own research. Don't just read off your talking points without giving what you are saying a second thought. Do the right thing and educate yourselves, if not for yourself, for your constituents, at least for the constituents, who will ultimately be paying the price.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mr. MacIntyre: Thank you, Madam Chair. I am very happy to rise again and speak to this bill. I would like to draw the members' attention to, again, section 6 under regulations. I'll just read it for everyone's edification here.

6(1) The Minister may make regulations . . .

- (f) adding to, clarifying, limiting or restricting any powers, duties or functions of the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the Minister considers necessary or advisable to enable the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator to exercise powers, duties or functions for the purposes of this Act.

I find it not surprising, frankly, that we would see this kind of wording in another act with respect to our electricity system from this government. In particular, I find it interesting and noteworthy that this government wants to give the minister the arbitrary power to limit or restrict any powers or duties or functions of the commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the minister considers necessary. Again, here we have another blank cheque given to the Minister of Energy to completely hamstring the Market Surveillance Administrator's ability to do its job, which is policing, making sure everybody is following the rules.

We saw this under Bill 27 as well. I put forward an amendment to this Legislature to try to protect the integrity of the Market Surveillance Administrator's ability to do their job, to police our electricity system. In that particular instance, under Bill 27, this government completely restricted the MSA's ability to investigate renewables developments. For some reason the MSA can investigate everything else but not renewables. I guess renewables developments never contravene the law, according to this government. And we did debate that vigorously. I put forward an amendment. In fact, I believe I put forward a total of 11 amendments in the Bill 27 debate. They were all to do with accountability, preventing sweetheart insider details, respect for landowners, et cetera. This government voted them all down.

It was particularly telling when it came to issues of accountability. This government just hates accountability. They want to give their ministers these sweeping, broad powers and limit the accountability and restrict and, in fact, eliminate accountability, in particular for the Market Surveillance Administrator when it comes to renewables projects. It completely eliminated the MSA's ability to investigate complaints regarding renewables developments. What does that say about accountability? It says that this government hates accountability.

So here we come with Bill 16, the regulations, section 6(1) and clause (f). I'm not surprised at all. Here we have the same kind of thing again. The power of the Market Surveillance Administrator to do its job is at the whim of the Minister of Energy. The minister can add to – that's okay – and can clarify. That's understandable. But then limiting or restricting any powers, any duties, any functions of the committee or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the minister considers necessary?

What we have, Madam Chair, is a government that wants to have its fingers so deeply down into our system of doing things that it is impossible for the motions and the mechanics and the mechanisms of a free-market economy to function properly. This government is getting its fingers down into our electricity system and not just in regulating it but in even determining what can and cannot be held accountable by limiting the powers of the Market Surveillance Administrator and the commission itself.

Clause (f), in my opinion, is one of the most potentially dangerous pieces within this legislation. In that regard, Madam Chair, I would like to introduce an amendment. I know you're surprised.

The Chair: That's amendment A4.

Mr. MacIntyre: Thank you, Madam Chair. Amendment A4. I move that Bill 16, An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates, be amended in section 6(1) by striking out clause (f). Period. Strike the whole thing out.

To allow this minister the arbitrary authority to limit or restrict in any way the Market Surveillance Administrator results in the direct political interference of the minister with a body that ought not ever have political interference. Not ever. The Market Surveillance Administrator by their very mandate is there to protect Albertans, to protect the integrity of our electricity system, the stability of our system and so on, and to make sure that all of the players within our electricity system are playing by the rules, rules that lead to stable power supply, reliable power supply, and a competitive marketplace, with "competitive" defined as getting the best price for Albertans.

5:30

As I pointed out earlier, this very body, the Market Surveillance Administrator, was the body responsible for taking TransAlta to task for economic withholding that caused a substantial price spike. The MSA did their job, did it superbly. They caught TransAlta doing what they did. They had a full investigation. Everything was made transparent, public. We all knew. Everyone in the industry knew what had transpired, and TransAlta paid the $59 million fine for what they had done. That is the blessing of having an organization like the MSA operating at arm's length, outside of the world of political meddling.

Now, I should point out, on that note of political meddling, that the Balancing Pool was supposed to operate this way, too. Yeah, they were. The Balancing Pool's mandate was that they be arm's length. Arm's length means just that, outside of the political meddling of the Ministry of Energy. But as this House knows and Albertans know, that very independence of the Balancing Pool is now under investigation because all evidence that we have seen thus far points to some very serious meddling, meddling that is costing Albertans billions. By the government's own estimate it's $4.437 billion – $4.437 billion – because the Minister of Energy chose to meddle where the minister wasn't supposed to meddle, in the Balancing Pool.

All right. Fast-forward to Bill 16. The very same problem is being set up here. The very same problem is being set up, where the Minister of Energy has the arbitrary power under this legislation to limit or restrict any powers. It doesn't say which ones; it's any. It's wide open here: "any powers, duties or functions of the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the Minister considers necessary." This is extremely dangerous.

Mr. Panda: They haven't learned their lesson.

Mr. MacIntyre: They have not learned their lesson from the $4 billion mistake that they made in meddling in the Balancing Pool.

Now here we go meddling in the RRO, meddling in the Electric Utilities Act, meddling in the affairs of REAs, meddling in the affairs of the city of Medicine Hat, meddling in what is supposed to be a free-market deregulated energy market, that has done a very good job of providing Albertans with reliable, stable, affordable electricity and that has fuelled one of the greatest economic engines in this country and that is now at risk because of this government's irresponsible and inappropriate level of meddling in that free-market economy. It's just crazy. It's a real head-scratcher.

Why would the Market Surveillance Administrator not be trusted to do their job? It's the very same thing, Madam Chair, as this government passing a piece of legislation saying: "Well, we're going to give the Solicitor General the absolute, unconditional authority to limit the powers of police to investigate crime. That minister can change, limit, or restrict any powers, duties, or functions of all police departments in this province." Does that sound like a good idea? Certainly not. But that's precisely what clause (f) is doing. It's taking the electricity police and giving the minister, who has already demonstrated a complete lack of understanding of the electricity system, that same minister who so sunk our Balancing Pool to the point of insolvency and then had to introduce Bill 34 to bail them out, an absolute, open-ended line of credit. That same minister is now being given the authority to limit or restrict any powers, duties, or functions of the commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator.

That is preposterous, Madam Chair. There is no way that this should be allowed in this bill. The Market Surveillance Administrator has a moral duty to act free of political interference. This completely reverses that. The MSA will no longer be at arm's length from political interference just like the Balancing Pool is no longer at arm's length from political interference. That political interference in the pool cost us $4.437 billion. How much is this going to cost? How much is this political interference going to cost? And I should point out: political interference with no accountability for it, no accountability whatsoever.

It's these kinds of things, Madam Chair, that anger Albertans. It's this kind of refusal to be held accountable that angers the voters. It is these kinds of things and a long list of others like them: lack of consultation, roughshod legislation, just bulldozing legislation along, never putting anything in committee to be opened up to the public so that they can speak to things. It's that lack of accountability that is going to result in this government being brought down because the people of Alberta ultimately have the last word, and thank God for that. In 2019 Albertans are going to get to express their opinion, and they're going to get to express their hope. If the polls are any suggestion whatsoever, this government is coming down to a very resounding defeat, and it will be because of things like this, because of meddling, political meddling in a free-market economy.

I would hope that every member in this House will give serious consideration to giving a minister the power like this to meddle in what ought to be an arm's-length policing body like the Market Surveillance Administrator. This is, in my opinion, the worst part of Bill 16. It's the reason why I cannot support Bill 16. It's the reason for this amendment. It's an attempt to make it better. It's an attempt to protect Albertans, contrary to the stated intent of this government that Bill 16 protects Albertans. How is this protecting Albertans by removing the power of the MSA to actually investigate and do its job, by giving the minister the authority to say one day, "No, you cannot investigate this," or, "I'm going to limit your scope of investigation into that"? That's what this does. That's exactly what clause (f) does. How is that protecting Albertans? How is that having Albertans' backs? Well, it isn't.

I'll tell you who it does protect. It protects this government from scrutiny. That is the intent of this. It's protecting this government from the scrutiny of an organization like the MSA, who has a very good track record of scrutinizing, of catching people doing what they should not be doing. The MSA has done a stellar job for this province over the years and will continue to do so only as long as they are free from political interference.

I would hope that every member on both sides of this House will give serious consideration to this amendment. It is an attempt to protect Albertans by giving the commission and the MSA the power that they need to do their job without interference from the Ministry of Energy.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Hon. members, I've got a request for unanimous consent to briefly revert to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Madam Chair. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a former colleague of mine from my time in Calgary, Adrian Boudreau. He currently resides in Edmonton. I'm not too sure why he's made that choice. Nonetheless, we'll do some catching up. I would ask that he please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

5:40

Bill 16

An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates

(continued)

The Chair: I'll recognize Calgary-Klein on amendment A4.

Mr. Coolahan: Thank you, Madam Chair. In 2019 I think we are actually going to put to rest the politics of fear in this province.

I understand that sometimes legislation is open to interpretation, but I'm going to help the hon. member over there with the actual intent here. The purpose of this section of the proposed act is to actually enable the MSA and the AUC to administer the act and the associated regulations. In particular, the regulations will require the MSA and the AUC to carry out certain functions to administer and enforce our price cap policy. In that sense, it actually expands their role. This includes ensuring that the government is paying the correct amount to the RRO providers if the 6.8 cents per kilowatt hour cap is exceeded. You know, this is also not unique. Similar provisions related to the AUC and MSA exist in the Electric Utilities Act and the Alberta Utilities Commission Act.

Moreover, under this section of the bill the AUC's and the MSA's powers could only be restricted or limited for the purposes of this act. They cannot be limited for other purposes. So, in fact, this bill adds to the role that the AUC and the MSA play in overseeing the electricity system operations and the behaviours.

It's for all of those reasons, Madam Chair, that I will not be supporting this amendment. Actually, it would probably be a better idea if they withdrew it.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Livingstone-MacLeod.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Madam Chair, and good afternoon, everyone. Interesting debate this afternoon on a very controversial subject, no question. I'd like to take the time today to speak to the amendment that we're dealing with at the present time. For those of you who are not sure just how this government is changing the law so that the Minister of Energy can interfere with the Market Surveillance Administrator's duties, section 6(1)(f) states that the minister may make these changes through regulations:

- (1) The Minister may make regulations . . .
- (f) adding to, clarifying, limiting or restricting any powers, duties or functions of the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the Minister considers necessary or advisable to enable the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator to exercise powers, duties or functions for the purposes of this Act.

Sounds like usurped authority.

Taking this all into account and taking it into context, the fact is that less than two weeks ago the Market Surveillance Administrator launched an investigation into the Balancing Pool. The Balancing Pool was established by the government of Alberta in '99 to help manage the transition to competition in Alberta's electric industry. Wildrose has obtained FOIP documents that indicate NDP government interference with the Balancing Pool. Currently the Privacy Commissioner is also investigating this matter.

The Market Surveillance Administrator also launched an investigation, like I previously stated, less than two weeks ago. This investigation could potentially unveil growing concerns that the Balancing Pool is operating coal-fired assets at a loss to undermine the competitive balance in our electricity market. Just imagine.

Now we have the Minister of Energy trying to add oversight, and we are very concerned that this bill will legally give the government the right to shut down this investigation. There's already been evidence of potential government interference, and now in order to hide their potential interference, they will use their legislative powers to override and add government oversight. If the Balancing Pool is found to be not acting in a commercial manner, they would effectively and knowingly purposely be putting the taxpayers of this province at increased risk.

If we put all the dots together, Madam Chair, we can finally see that there's an explanation for the enormous 4 and a half billion dollars in projected losses that were disclosed in the government of Alberta's fiscal plan, which you can find on page 119 of their 2017 plan. Unforgivable is the money that taxpayers will have to shell out for the lawsuit with Enmax. I would also like to include for the benefit of those listening that all of this loss will be superimposed by this government's propaganda. If it wasn't for the investigative rights the MSA now holds, this government would be allowed to cover up their interference and the true cost to the taxpayer. This right will be taken away once this bill is enacted in June of '17.

I encourage the backbenchers on the other side of the House to investigate this for themselves. All of you should be encouraged to be leaders and not just blindly follow. You can do this by educating yourselves. Don't just read the propaganda you were given.

Madam Chair, this additional section added to Bill 16 that gives the minister these powers is in essence the minister's way to control the outcome of the MSA investigation. That is clear. This should not be allowed, and it should be remembered by Alberta voters come the next election. The truth is, though, that when a government is so ideological and works in a silo and force-feeds its members and membership with repeated propaganda and ideological banter, if one doesn't think for himself or herself, they could very easily be charmed by the political rhetoric.

News flash for those of you over on the other side of the House working in silos, though: Albertans have been shaking their heads at how foolishly the NDP government has been handling their money. They will not forget that their increased debt burden, job loss, huge tax and power bills down the line are all a direct result of the NDP government's bad decisions. Albertans not only want stability, but they want prosperity. This government is systematically destroying all hopes of the Alberta advantage.

I ask all members of the House to think for themselves and vote today to include this needed amendment. The minister does not need to politically interfere and add, clarify, limit, or restrict the powers, duties, and functions of the commission nor of the MSA. I ask everyone to think about this seriously and to please vote in favour of this amendment to end these political games. Please.

Thank you.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A4? The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Panda: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'll be brief, looking at the clock. Yeah, initially I was not planning to speak. I see some backbenchers there very excited, so I'll try and get to the point here. Initially I didn't plan to speak today, but after hearing a very passionate argument here from my colleague from Innisfail-Sylvan Lake – he actually did some work on this file. You have to give him due credit for doing his homework, coming to this House, and eloquently debating on this matter. First, he's an expert. He's a subject matter expert. Second, all of us, when we are elected and sent to this House, are not expected to blindly rubber-stamp whatever the minister or the Premier wants the private members to do. That's not what we are here for. [interjection] It's not why we are here.

I'm talking to that member who is making noise there. He should first read before he speaks, before he makes any sense to people. The Member for Calgary-Klein said that this particular section, 6(f), on page 5 of this bill – this is your bill, not our bill. This is your bill. You guys drafted it. You should read that. He said that this section 6(f) enhances the powers of the MSA. On the contrary, if you read this before laughing and making stupid noises, if you read that, it reads:

- (f) adding to, clarifying, limiting or restricting any powers, duties or functions of the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the Minister considers necessary.

Where does it say that it enhances the powers of the MSA? Before you vote blindly, I want you to just explain.

You know, Madam Chair, people send us here to do our job. We end up paying $4.4 billion because of the incompetence or ideological reasons of this government.

5:50

Ms McKittrick: How about your ideology?

Mr. Panda: Taxpayers. It is reality. It is $4.4 billion.

You explain to me why you want me to support this bill first. You couldn't give me any valid reasons, and then this member, who did his homework, is giving us a compelling reason to vote in favour of this amendment, which will actually make Albertans' lives better. We have an empowered, arm's-length agency which will do the work on behalf of Albertans, which we are also supposed to do but we are failing to do here because we take the direction from the minister and the Premier and do what they want because you're the government members. I don't have that obligation. I'm elected as an Official Opposition MLA to hold the government to account and to support them if they make any reasonable acts or laws or arguments here, but they didn't.

I'm challenging them before they vote down this amendment, if you heard. I'm sure you all have good intentions because when I was hearing the member, there was pin-drop silence there. I'm sure some of the members definitely heard him making that compelling argument. They really want to do their job, but they're forced, because of the party whip or for whatever reasons – they're not doing their job. Either they convince me not to support that amendment, or they actually support the amendment. That's the common-sense thing to do, Madam Chair, and I urge all the members there to actually read it one more time and support the amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A4?

Are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A4 lost]

The Chair: Any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to Bill 16?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The remaining clauses of Bill 16 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? That's carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Carlier: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like now for the committee to rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 16. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Carlier: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'd like now to call for adjournment for this afternoon and to reconvene at 7:30 this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:54 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1377, 1404
Members' Statements
Josephburg Agricultural Society.....	1379
Energy-sector Unemployment.....	1379
Calgary Southwest Ring Road Construction Concerns	1387
Culture Days Grant Program	1387
Edmonton Islamic Academy Model UN Participation	1388
Engineering Profession.....	1388
Oral Question Period
Kinder Morgan Trans Mountain Pipeline.....	1379, 1381, 1384
Auditor General Recommendations on Health Care.....	1380
Energy-sector Unemployment.....	1381, 1383
Coal-fired Electric Power Plant Retirement.....	1382
Calgary Southwest Ring Road Construction Concerns	1383
Provincial Credit Rating and Fiscal Policies.....	1384
Carbon Levy Revenue	1385
Social Studies Curriculum Review	1385
Agricultural Concerns	1386
Crime Prevention in Rural Communities.....	1386
Presenting Petitions	1388
Introduction of Bills
Bill 18 Child Protection and Accountability Act.....	1388
Tabling Returns and Reports	1389
Orders of the Day	1389
Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole
Bill 16 An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates	1389
Division	1398
Division	1402

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Tuesday evening, May 30, 2017

Day 41

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawwood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Orr
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Drysdale	Schreiner
Fitzpatrick	Taylor
Gotfried

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Pitt
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Ellis	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, May 30, 2017

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: Good evening, everyone. Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

[Debate adjourned May 30]

The Acting Speaker: Are there any members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to speak to Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. I'm struck by the sheer volume of the bill. This is huge. There's a lot of stuff in here. In fact, a phone book comes to mind when I think about the size of this. Where to begin? We have card check certification, salting and MERFing, labour changes for farm and ranch workers, first contract arbitration, essential services, the Rand formula, enhancement of powers to the Labour Relations Board, arbitrations, duty of fair representation, international loopholes, and those are just the labour relations changes. There's no way that a perfectly reasonable government would create this legislation in 36 days of consultation.

I met with stakeholders. I met with the Canadian Franchise Association. When we explained to them what was going on and what was happening and how fast the rules for running their business were about to change, the looks of horror that crossed the faces of the small-business owners were ones of shock that they had been skipped over as a worthy body for stakeholder consultation. The NDP missed these small-business owners. The consultation was incomplete. Sadly, the line of scrimmage will not move. The NDP will not get a second or third down for a touchdown; they get unlimited downs until the clock runs out.

As such, I would like to move an amendment. [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, just wait till I see the copy of the amendment, please.

While we're waiting, just a reminder, everyone. Hon. members, just a reminder that we are in second reading, so if we could please be respectful to all the speakers in the House when they're speaking. Please go ahead.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move that the motion for second reading of Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by deleting all of the words after "that" and substituting the following:

Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be not now read a second time because the Assembly is of the view that the government has not provided Albertans enough time to be consulted on the specific changes being proposed and, further, has not provided assurances that a full economic impact analysis has been completed detailing any potential negative impact on the economic well-being of Albertans.

Now, Madam Speaker, let's take these two issues and deal with them one at a time. I contend that Bill 17 has not provided Albertans with enough time to be consulted on the specific changes. I know that not enough time was spent, and I know that not enough of the right people were spoken to. Thirty-six days in Alberta to change a stack of laws like this; Ontario is spending two years to do the same.

Given that the NDP refused the prior amendment to send this bill to a legislative standing committee, which would have fixed this lack of consultation problem, that tells me something.

That tells me that the NDP are trying to hide something from Albertans. In that way, they can say, "Oops," "Surprise," or "Gotcha" on the unsuspecting business community. It has nothing to do with the clock of the Legislature. I know that many in the business community are watching. They are reaching out and talking to people they haven't talked to in a long time, and they are saying things like: "I have a chain of retail stores, and I'm going to have to lay off staff and close stores because the labour changes are the last straw. We swallowed the minimum wage increase. We took the tax increase, and then we took more increases with the carbon tax. There's no profit anymore. Now these changes will force me into bankruptcy unless I lay off staff and close stores." There you have it, Madam Speaker: one business owner. The NDP tried to help the employees with a higher minimum wage and changes to the Labour Relations Code. Now they're going to be put out of a job. The NDP hurt the people that they try to help. Those people end up remaining dependent on the state for welfare and benefits, and the cycle perpetuates and repeats itself, all because the NDP failed to consult long enough or with the right people.

Now, the other part of this amendment is that the NDP did not provide assurances that a full economic impact analysis has been completed detailing any potential negative impacts on the economic well-being of Albertans. There has to have been some measure of economic impact analysis done to measure these proposed changes on the Alberta economy before they were proposed. To do so blindly is irresponsible, Madam Speaker. The government has an army of public servants to measure and evaluate the economy. It is quantifiable. Changes to the economy can be quantified.

As I mentioned in the tale of the retailers, whether it's the carbon tax, the electricity changes, the tax hikes, the minimum wage, the government either refuses to do impact assessments or ignores the evidence in favour of ideology. Continually this NDP government tries to settle ideological scores at a time when Alberta's economy cannot absorb it. They are sacrificing jobs to purchase votes. But you know what, Madam Speaker? Albertans are not buying it.

Clearly, the government intended for very little discussion to happen because they know this bill aims to please their big labour pals and not the rest of Albertans. We have a system of democracy in this place, and this government continues to disregard the importance of that process in crafting workable legislation for the benefit of all Albertans. It is contemptuous, Madam Speaker.

Alberta's current union certification system has resulted in 30-plus years of relative labour peace and the highest wages in the nation. I want to reiterate what I just said there: we have the highest wages in the nation. Something must have been done right. Throwing out that system without consultation is, pure and simple, wrong.

How wrong? Let's talk about salting. Bill 17 removes the uniquely Alberta protections against salting in the first 30 days after finding employment with an employer. Under the NDP you can hire an employee, and the next day that employee can start on a unionization drive. Thank you, NDP, for disturbing employer-employee peace with salting.

When unions use funds to unfairly help unionized contractors gain an advantage over non-unionized contractors when they bid for jobs, they use market enhancement recovery funds. The acronym is MERFs. Bill 17 removes the ban on MERFs. The NDP's experts insist that the ban never really worked. Then why change it?

Under current Alberta law the employer can suspend the remission of union dues to the union in cases of an illegal strike.

The NDP are taking this off the books. Bill 17 will now allow union organizers access to remote work sites upon permission from the labour board.

There you have it. The very same people the NDP think they are helping with a higher minimum wage and a better Labour Relations Code are now going to be out of a job. The NDP hurt the people they are trying to help, and those people end up remaining dependent upon the state for welfare. The cycle perpetuates and repeats itself, and Alberta no longer stands out as a beacon with the Alberta advantage, all because the NDP have failed in their duty.

For these reasons and many others, I move the amendment to not read Bill 17 a second time. More consultation with stakeholders is needed and an economic impact analysis is essential to make sure that we get this right.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to the reasoned amendment? You would like to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

7:40

Mr. Hanson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just a couple of things. You know, we've been basically preached to here for a couple of days about: how can you possibly be against a bill that supports workers' rights and people's rights to take leave if they have a death in the family or a sick child or a missing child? Then I look at the coming into force of the codes. Interestingly enough, the employment standards won't come into effect until January 1, 2018, yet the sections that deal with labour organizations and unions are coming into effect in September. So if the labour standards were the most important part of this bill – there are sections on underage workers that come into force on proclamation. The section on union certification comes into effect September 1. Yet the all-important labour relations portion, that supposedly protects people's rights and is supposed to be the big improvement and why this bill had to be brought in in such a hurry, doesn't come into effect until January 2018. It doesn't make a whole lot of sense to me when we've listened to all the rhetoric coming across from the other side.

When I put forward my original amendment to put this forth, I had mentioned the fact that this kind of smacks of pandering to unions and organized labour. I talked about how $42,000 was donated from union donations to our Premier for her run for leadership, that for the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie over 50 per cent coming from union donations, for the Member for Edmonton-Calder, our Minister of Education, 60 per cent for his leadership. Sixty per cent. So much for taking big dollars and unions out of politics. Come on, folks. If you think Albertans are stupid, you're making a mistake.

Mr. Nixon: Albertans aren't stupid. Yeah, he's giving a thumbs-up.

Mr. Hanson: Yeah, thumbs-up. That's all stuff that's wonderful. We can put that on bulletin boards during the next election. All that stuff: it's going to be great.

You know, getting further down to it, Madam Speaker, we've talked about this before. The Member for I believe Calgary-Hays was chastised for actually just asking a question that could have possibly affected his wife's company and her involvement in it. We had 13 per cent of our caucus recuse themselves during the debates on new-home buyers' protection because they happen to be partners or have a wife that's in a company that builds a couple of houses a year. Now, we have all these members sitting here that are union active. Some of them have been business agents; some of them have been presidents. They're getting heavy, heavy donations from unions to run their campaigns, yet they can stand here in this House in front of Albertans and claim: oh, we're just doing this for the poor folks that have a sick child at home so they can take time off.

Well, I worked a long time in the construction industry, and I did work for a time for a union for about nine years. Then, when we moved up north, I had to leave that, and I worked for the private sector up there. I'll tell you that with a lot of those companies up there, I mean, everybody knows everybody. Their kids go to school together; they play ball together. Whether you're the owner of the company or an employee, whenever there was a serious incident where somebody was sick, those companies banded together. They helped out. They did fundraisers.

I remember one incident where a worker was at work and his kids were at home with his mother because both parents worked. They were both heavily involved in the oil and gas industry. Grandma was babysitting the kids. She was out for a walk and the little three-year-old girl fell through a hole into a well. When the call went out to that company, they not only sent that man to where the accident had occurred, but half the company went there with their equipment, too, to help out. When the little girl was saved that day and brought out, she had some trauma, of course, and the dad and mom were both sent to Edmonton to be with their kid at the Stollery. There was no question about whether their job was going to be saved. The topic never even came up.

Now, if you're having issues like this in some of your union organizations and you need legislation to force people to have recognition, to protect people's rights, well, then, I'll buy it. But why not proclaim it? Right? We could do this today. But you won't. You're going to pass it off. It's not going to come into effect until January of 2018, but all of your union-protecting stuff is going to come into effect in September. What does that say about you folks? It says a lot about your priorities.

Most of this legislation is a joke. It's hiding behind protecting sick kids and people's right to go home and be with their sick kids. I think it's disgusting. It definitely shows, just in the way you've picked your proclamation dates, where your real priorities are as a government, and that is shameful.

I will end my arguments on that. I think that we need to push this bill to committee, where we can expose more of what this is actually all about.

An Hon. Member: Please do.

Mr. Hanson: Absolutely. Would love to.

Aren't you the one that was hollering at someone who was hollering at you while you were speaking? Funny how the shoe doesn't fit on the other foot, right?

Madam Speaker, this bill needs to be pushed to committee, where Albertans can come and have their say, where businesses can come and have their say. Like I say, if you're having these kinds of issues in your union organizations, then, by all means, put legislation in to force them into complying. But I can speak for the majority of the private sector that I've worked for. In a case like this, where one of their employees has an issue, whether it's a family member that's passed away or is critically ill, those companies get behind their employees. They not only give them the time off that they need to deal with it, but they support them financially. For this government to stand up and poke at the entire industry and the entire private sector because of incidents that have happened and, you know – I don't know all the details of those incidents, but I can tell you that that is not a fact in the industry. It is not a fact here in Alberta. It's shameful that we actually need legislation to make it so.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a), the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you to the member for his speech on this important amendment. I found it very interesting. One of the core areas I wouldn't mind if the hon. member would take a little bit more time to explore is around three concepts associated with the steps that this government has taken with this bill and the reasons for why this should go to committee and there should be more consultation.

The first is that the government indicates that because of some very serious compassion issues that are in this legislation, that are good, as the hon. member who was just presenting made very clear, it's very important that we get this through before the end of spring session. Now, Madam Speaker, as you know, we agree and have made that very, very clear. In fact, we will pass all of those issues tonight if they would like or tomorrow, immediately get them through the House and go on. But the government still has not taken us up on that offer and continues to keep it tied to other issues that they have not consulted Albertans on, which is troubling.

The second issue is the need for this large hurry that the government is putting forward because of the compassion issues that are involved with this legislation. The member touched on this, Madam Speaker. Maybe you don't realize it, but the government is not intending to bring this in till January of next year. Why you couldn't take time to consult over the summer if you weren't going to bring the bill into effect in January seems a little – you know, I think that needs to be . . .

An Hon. Member: Disingenuous.

Mr. Nixon: Yeah. Disingenuous, for sure.

. . . explained in more detail by the government. They haven't answered that. I'd be curious to see what the hon. member thinks of that, what he thinks his constituents would think of that.

Also, Madam Speaker, when you bring up the fact that the government brought this in what is expected to be the last week or week and a half of this sitting in the spring, if this was so important – and there are things within this bill that are definitely important. I guess the question is why the government waited till the last minute to try to ram things through.

7:50

Now, Madam Speaker, I don't have to tell you. You know. You've been here as long as I have, and you've seen some of the other behaviour, like Bill 6 for example, trying to ram it through before Christmas and the consequences that came from that to our communities. So I'd just like to hear from the hon. member a little bit more on how he thinks his constituents feel about the fact that the NDP is talking out of both sides of their mouth on this issue.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for . . .

Mr. Hanson: Lac La Biche-St. Paul . . .

The Acting Speaker: . . . St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Hanson: For the time being. You have to joke about it.

Well, thank you, Member, for the question. You know, I was a little confused about the whole issue when we first started talking about this bill because we all agreed on all sides – I think every party in the House here agrees – on the importance of the compassionate leave portion and the standards, making it fair and equitable and putting it into legislation. Again, like I say, I don't know which companies are involved, but having to have legislation like that to protect a family when they're going through a really tough time is a little bit shocking to me. I'm surprised that we don't actually already have that legislation on the books.

With that being said, I do now understand the rush. If it was just the compassionate portion of this bill that this government was so concerned about, being that they're not putting it in force until January of 2018, there would be plenty of time to consult over the summer. Unfortunately, a portion of this bill that deals with their labour negotiations, union certification, all the stuff that they're trying to hide behind compassionate leave, it comes into effect on September 1. So, of course, Madam Speaker, there is no time to go out and consult with Albertans because we don't sit until the end of October or early November, which would fail them completely on their real mission, which is to push through the union certification portion of this bill. I find it really unfortunate and disgusting that they will hide that behind compassionate care when the dates clearly show what is really going on here. You guys should all be ashamed of that, and I'm going to make sure that Albertans know about it. That'll be my job as opposition.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, just a reminder to all the members in the House that we're speaking to the reasoned amendment, which is to not be read a second time. The referral to committee has already been debated.

Are there any members wishing to speak to the reasoned amendment? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and good evening. I rise today to speak to the reasoned amendment to Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. The main point I want to touch on is that this government needs to realize that more consultation analysis is needed on their labour and employment changes. The economy is still in a precarious position, and these changes need to have proper consultation. If they are sincere in taking time to get this right, they will use the summer to receive meaningful feedback on all the changes and their combined ramifications.

This government is being disingenuous by lumping together all these changes to both the Labour Relations Code and the Employment Standards Code into one big omnibus bill. Clearly, the government intended for very little discussion to happen because they knew that this bill aims to please their big-labour pals and not the rest of Alberta. The contempt that this government has for the legislative process is unhealthy and, frankly, unacceptable.

There are a number of good ideas in this bill, and I want to begin by discussing a few of them before digging a bit deeper into the more nefarious aspects of this bill.

Maternity leave. While having a child is usually something to be celebrated, it is not all roses, and giving birth can and does take some time to recover. More important is how important those first months are for a baby and a mother to bond. Changes to maternity leave provide for 16 weeks of maternity leave versus the previous limit of 15 weeks. This is a step in the right direction and something that I support, and I suspect that most in this Chamber do as well. One additional thing that I am really happy to see with regard to maternity leave is the inclusion of leave for employees that experience a stillbirth or a miscarriage. This can be and often is a devastating experience, and this new leave is something, as I said, I am happy to support.

Parental leave. Changes proposed to parental leave will result in parents receiving up to 37 weeks of parental leave following the last day of maternity leave. Coupled with the changes to maternity leave, this is a real, positive change for Alberta families.

Compassionate care leave. Strong, compassionate families are the bedrock of society, and approving compassionate care leave from eight weeks to 27 weeks is a positive step.

Death or disappearance of child leave. I cannot begin to fathom what it must be like to experience the disappearance of a child, and I am happy to see that this government is proposing changes to support parents through what can only be described as devastating. The proposal in Bill 17 would allow parents up to 52 weeks' leave if their child disappeared due to crime and up to 104 weeks if their child died as a result of crime.

Critical illness of child leave. Bill 17 will provide parents with up to 36 weeks of leave to care for their sick or ill child. One question I have on this particular topic – and it is possible that it's been addressed already, but, if not, I hope that during the course of debate it might be addressed by the government – is: does critical illness leave apply for a child who suffered a critical injury but not necessarily an illness? I hope that is the case as I can think of many examples of parents whose child has been injured in a car accident or a sports injury or that sort of thing.

Long-term illness and injury leave. Changes to long-term illness and injury leave will result in employees receiving up to 16 weeks of leave in a calendar year due to illness, injury, or quarantine.

Domestic violence leave. Domestic violence is a scourge on society, and one of the ways that we as society can combat this problem is by supporting those individuals when they experience domestic violence. Overwhelmingly victims of domestic violence are women and children, and far too often they get caught in a cycle of violence that is incredibly difficult to get out of. Changes in Bill 17 will result in Albertans receiving up to 10 days' leave in a calendar year. This leave can be used to relocate, obtain services such as psychological and professional counselling, or to seek medical attention. We aren't the first province to implement this change, but frankly that doesn't matter. The right thing is being done, and I support it.

Personal and family responsibility leave. Raising a family or, even if you aren't raising children, being part of a family often means attending appointments and doctors' visits, et cetera. Bill 17 will result in employees receiving up to five days leave in a calendar year for their health or to meet their family responsibilities in relation to a family member.

Bereavement leave. The last two proposals I want to touch on today are bereavement leave and citizenship ceremonies. I'm not sure of two things that could be less related than the sadness and grief that accompanies bereavement and the joy and elation that is felt by each and every new Canadian as they participate in the ceremony to formally become citizens of this great dominion. Allowing for up to three days of leave in order to attend a funeral is certainly welcomed, and I support the change. Likewise, I support the recognition that this government is giving to the gaining of citizenship. All we need to do to understand the importance of the ceremony is to watch the emotions displayed on the faces of new Canadians when they officially receive their citizenship. It quickly becomes clear why it is important to ensure employees can attend those citizenship ceremonies.

What the government needs to do is spend the summer consulting on the bill, and I think they will find that Albertans aren't supportive of many of these changes. That is why I'll be supporting the amendment. Instead of protecting working Albertans, this government is using them as shields to protect their big, powerful union bosses. It's disgusting, and Albertans deserve much better than what they get from this government.

We have secret ballot voting. Many of the proposed changes to the Labour Relations Code in Bill 17 aren't just bad ideas; they are downright undemocratic. Canada marks its 150th birthday this year, and this government apparently wants to celebrate by taking Alberta's democracy back to the 1800s. Secret votes are going to be a thing of the past. All this government is requiring is a simple card check, a process that is fraught with intimidation and thuggery. For decades the NDP proclaimed themselves as the party of the people. Well, with Bill 17 and the ending of secret ballots for certifying a union, the Alberta NDP have made it clear that the people they proclaim to represent are actually just big, fat cat union bosses.

But don't take my word on the importance of secret ballots; here's what the experts have to say. Elections Canada states: "The secret ballot – which safeguards the right of all citizens to vote freely and in private, without fear of intimidation." Adam Steedman states in his article The History of the Secret Ballot, "No one ever speaks of an open voting system any more, the secret ballot paper is seen as an essential hallmark of a free election system." No one speaks of an open voting system anymore. Well, no one but the Alberta NDP, that is.

Steedman goes on to say that the secret ballot was first introduced as "a means of managing elections that had proved, or might prove, unduly fractious and where the hostility of competing factions was such as to render open voting neither practical nor decisive."

8:00

In his research on legislative rules in European parliamentary democracies Thomas Saalfeld found that secret ballots date back to ancient Greece.

Upon my election to this illustrious Chamber I never would have guessed that I would be forced to make a speech defending the right of Albertans to a secret ballot. This government never fails to disappoint. While I support aspects of this bill, the changes to certification votes and the removal of secret ballots are not something I can or will ever support. I will be voting for the amendment, and I encourage all members of this House to do the same.

Just to summarize, when it comes to Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, there are some things I like: maternity leave, parental leave, death or disappearance of a child leave, critical illness of a child leave, long-term illness and injury leave, domestic violence leave, bereavement leave, and citizenship leave. But if this government is sincere in taking the time to get this right, they will use the summer to receive meaningful feedback on all the changes and their combined ramifications.

This government is being disingenuous by lumping together all these changes to both the Labour Relations Code and the Employment Standards Code into one big omnibus bill. Clearly, the government intended for very little discussion to happen because they know that this bill aims to please their big labour pals and not the rest of Alberta. The contempt that this government has for the legislative process is unhealthy and unacceptable. Many of the proposed changes to the Labour Relations Code in Bill 17 aren't just bad ideas; they're downright antidemocratic.

As I mentioned before, Canada marks its 150th birthday this year, and this government wants to take us back into the past, to the 1800s. Secret ballots are going to be a thing of the past. All this government is requiring is a simple card check, a process that increases the chance of intimidation in the voting process. This government used to proclaim themselves as the party of the people, but that just isn't right anymore.

I can't believe that I'm sitting here in this Legislature talking about free speech, secret ballots, and having this government give more than 36 days' discussion on something that hasn't been changed in 30 years. They sit here and talk about how many years it's been since this legislation has been looked at, and what do they do? Thirty-six days, ram it through at the end of a legislative session, and then stifle the opportunity for Albertans to have their say. It's just not right. We need to support this amendment and have this properly consulted on with Albertans.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and thank you again to the hon. member for his comments on this important amendment, this referral amendment, and the need for the government to slow this process down, take a time out and go back to the boss, the people of Alberta, and have a conversation and make sure that we're getting this right, particularly around some of the consequences that will go on with businesses and that type of stuff in our province.

My question to the hon. member, based on his presentation, has to do with the last portion that he was talking about and his concerns around democracy. I'd like to ask him a question about trust. One of the things I noticed back home in my constituency, Madam Speaker – you may have noticed it in yours; I don't know, but I would certainly like to hear from the hon. member on this issue – is the complete lack of trust that most Albertans have in the NDP now and in this government.

You know, I was at a 4-H event in Sundre last night. I do a lot of work with 4-H clubs in my community. As you know, Madam Speaker, it's something I enjoy. What really struck me as I was talking to a bunch of the kids from the Sundre and Bergen multiclub last night – Sundre had their sale – was how much the youth in my communities are scared of the NDP government and don't trust them and how much of a tremendous impact some of the outrageous decisions had, that the caucus across from me made during, in their case particularly, Bill 6, which they saw as an attack on their families' livelihoods and something that they cared about so much.

Of course, it comes back to not consulting and not heeding the opposition's advice at that time and working with the people of Alberta. I can't help but think that if at the time the government wasn't so blindly and selfishly trying to move forward legislation that would, you know, attack children on their farms, they would not have lost trust of a whole generation of Albertans who will never, certainly, vote NDP. It will have long-term consequences.

I think of the implications of democracy in regard to some of the secret ballot decisions that we now see the caucus across from us doing, you know, and continuing the pattern that we saw in the last sitting, where they attacked democracy by manipulating election rules to their advantage or spending their time attempting to get taxpayers to pay for their political campaigns, one of the most outrageous things that anybody has seen in this building, I would suggest.

So I'm interested to see what the hon. member would think his constituents would feel in regard to trust and how much damage this government has done to the relationship with Albertans, you know, Madam Speaker, people that I know you know that they don't talk to. They stay with the people that believe in their world view, and they're not interested in talking to the majority of Albertans who don't buy into their ideological agenda. But in continuing to do all these things that lose Albertans' trust, what type of long-term consequences does he think this will have on his constituents?

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Yes. Well, thank you very much for the question. It's interesting because I'm seeing the exact same thing in my constituency, a lack of trust in this government because of the bills that they've passed and the lack of consultation that they've done. Just about every organization in Alberta has a story to tell about not being able to get a meeting with the minister or not being able to get a hold of their MLA.

I've had a chance to travel to other constituencies around mine that have NDP MLAs, and they are more than happy to see me. They welcome me into their community. They ask me to come and speak to them because they can't talk to their own MLA. They won't return the calls. They won't come out and speak. They won't go out in public. This is an issue that this government has, and it continues to happen to this day.

This government continues to attack democracy. We've seen that with the bills that they've passed. In fact, the member talked during the discussions on democracy and the changing of the fundraising act for campaigns about stacking the deck and how the government is always stacking the deck in their favour. It was sad to see. They had a chance to do legislation right, but they continued to try to stack the deck in their favour, and we see it all the time in this Legislature.

Now, getting back to this particular bill, we've said over and over again: split the bill. Split apart the labour relations and the employment standards. Split it. We will help pass it, and the other one can be consulted on over the summer. We'll support that. Then we can bring this into effect immediately. But this government wants to pass this all in one omnibus bill. They want to be able to sneak in the worst...

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to the reasoned amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to this amendment. I speak in favour of the amendment because there's no question, in my mind, that not enough consultation has happened, that we need some more time. I'm going to go into specifically why I think we need more time and what we need more time to consider. My hon. friends from the other side seem to have a different view of that. I'm going to talk about specifically why I think we need to spend some more time on this bill.

First off, let me say that any time there's the word "fair" in a bill title, I'm a little concerned. I worry a little bit about what spin the government is trying to put on it. I'm more of a fan of functional bill titles than the politicized bill titles, but here we are.

Look, there's no question that there are aspects of this bill I'm enthusiastically in favour of. The job-protected leave provisions are long overdue for change. When we look at compassionate care leave, I'm fascinated. It's certainly about time Alberta came up to speed with the rest of the country, with the exception of B.C., interestingly enough, who only allows eight weeks within a 26-week period. It's good to know that Alberta will be on par or similar, at least, to Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, other parts of the country.

8:10

Maternity and parental leave. I was very fortunate to take three months with our first daughter 13 and a half years ago. It was the greatest experience of my life, without question. We were in a position, fortunately, where my wife and I were able to split our leave. It's a time of my life I absolutely treasure. I think that all Albertans should have that opportunity, and aligning it with the EI program makes all the sense in the world.

The long-term illness and critical injury leave, the 16 weeks, again, makes a lot of sense, as does the personal and family responsibility leave, five days' job protection for personal sickness, short-term care of an immediate family member. Again, on just human and compassionate grounds these make all the sense in the world, and I enthusiastically support those changes, as I do the changes on bereavement leave.

I am pleased to see that domestic violence leave is being added to Alberta legislation. As I hope the House knows, I've volunteered with HomeFront in the past in Calgary. It's an area that I feel all of us have an obligation to set our minds to, addressing domestic violence in our society. I certainly very much support the government in their efforts to add this in.

Citizenship ceremony leave is not one I expected to see in there, but I'm pleased it's there. It's one of the things I get a chance to do here coming up in the next couple of weeks, attend a citizenship ceremony, and those are always remarkable days.

Critical illness of a child, death or disappearance of a child: again, these are areas that we absolutely should have in legislation in this province, and I'm very supportive of that.

If the bill was carved into these two component pieces, it would be very easy, I think, for us to pass this through the Assembly very quickly. I think you would have perhaps some support for unanimous consent. I know that's not going to happen, but it should. It should.

It's pretty obvious, I think, where the government is coming from on this. You wrap up things that are positive with things that are controversial, and then if any opposition member votes against the things that are controversial, they get called out for not supporting the things that are positive. There's a term for that, which is most certainly unparliamentary, and I won't even come close to going there, to what that is. I suppose I could say it and then apologize and withdraw, but that would be cheeky. I won't do that. That would be counter to the spirit of what we're trying to achieve in this Assembly. I'm glad to see that I have the enthusiastic agreement of Madam Speaker on that.

You know, what I see in this bill, I mean, when you look at the size of it – I have the original bill that was dropped on first reading, the fateful first reading as we'll all recall that remarkable day – is that very clearly there was a lot of work going on in this bill right to the very last minute, which is why it's printed on eight and a half by 11 paper and not in its booklet form. I suspect the government went through several iterations right up to the last minute, eventually running out of time, and said: "All right; this is what we're going with," which is one of those clues that we really need to consider on whether or not enough consultation, enough consideration has gone in.

Again, I'm going to go into some very specific clauses of the bill that I have concerns with, but let me just say this. What I see in particular in the labour code aspect of this bill – but I suppose to some degree it's in, potentially, some areas of employment standards as well – is a particular philosophy which is going away from what has served Alberta very well for a long time. That philosophy that I see in Bill 17 is a philosophy that says that employers are out to try to get their employees and that we have to have all the protections in the world from these big, bad employers and that the employees are at such a disadvantage that we need to make sure that we have overwhelming protection around these employees.

The reality in Alberta – and this has served us very well for a couple of decades as you see from the labour peace that we've had in this province. The reality in the vast, vast, vast majority of cases is that employees and employers are partners in creating shared prosperity in their businesses. That is tremendously beneficial to this province. Do you know what that does? That creates tax revenue. That tax revenue funds very important social programs that Albertans rely on. That's how it works. So on the question of where the money comes from, why is it that someone would put their hard-earned dollars at risk investing in a business if there's no likelihood of a return?

What this bill does: look, this bill in and of itself is not going to cause capital to flee the province. It may. It may have some impact on that, but it's another brick in the wall, it's another bump in the road for anyone who may want to invest in Alberta, for anyone who may want to consider expanding their business in Alberta. It's that cumulative impact of all of the changes this government has brought in in its two years so far that I'm most concerned about.

I have a lot of questions about this bill and a lot of questions about what impact this is going to have on Alberta's economy, an economy that I hope is ramping up and I hope is creating jobs and I hope is creating prosperity. What I worry about is that this bill may in fact stifle that prosperity, stifle the growth in this province and that it won't be as great or as big as it could be.

Let's just step through some of the concerns I have and the questions that I have. Let me be very clear. It's obviously a very long bill. My team and I are still going through it. There are aspects of the labour code, without question, that I'm sure I'll end up supporting.

First off, the hybrid certification, the card check 65 per cent: it solves a problem we don't have. How someone can think that anything other than a secret ballot is a legitimate way of making something happen – you know what I'd love? I'd like to spend the next two years door-knocking and getting my constituents in Calgary-Elbow to sign a piece of paper that says: we would like you to continue being MLA for Calgary-Elbow. If I get 65 per cent of my constituents to sign that piece of paper, no election. Does that sound pretty good? I imagine that would be pretty good. We could save some money, right? You know, that sounds good. Now, the 35 per cent of people who don't sign my paper: now I know who they are, and we can have some different conversations at some other time.

That just feels wrong. Can you imagine if that's how we were selected to sit in this Chamber? You just go around, and if you get 65 per cent of people to sign a piece of paper, no problem. It's fundamentally wrong, fundamentally counterdemocratic.

An Hon. Member: It's not as easy as you think.

Mr. Clark: It doesn't matter how easy it is. It doesn't matter how easy it is. The principle of a secret ballot is absolutely fundamental to democracy – fundamental – so to go away from that is certainly, clearly something I can't support.

The timelines for certification have become shorter, more regulated. Again, I'm not convinced that this is helpful. I have questions about that.

The farm and ranch changes: I have some concerns and questions about this, frankly, from a property rights perspective. If union organizers must be given access to farm property if there are nonfamily farm workers working on that property, what are the implications for property rights for farmers and ranchers who have workers living on-site? Again, I don't know the answer to that question.

I don't have an answer to that question right now, but those are the kinds of things that we're going to find out if we either split the bill in two – it sounds like it's not going to happen – or, speaking to this amendment, we have an opportunity to take some time to do the job right, take some time to do the consultation to answer those sorts of questions, answer questions about dependent contractors. If we have people who are independent contractors or incorporated all of a sudden getting caught up in a unionization drive, who had no intention of being part of it because they're incorporated and because they are contractors: I've got some questions about that. As someone who worked in that mode, certainly I wouldn't have expected to be unionized. That was part of the deal. I was able to work between different companies, different job sites.

The labour board procedures. There seems to be a lot of power heading towards the labour board. That may streamline the process. I'm a big fan of streamlining, and I certainly like a one-window approach to anything from a regulatory perspective.

I like the idea that there's priority for disagreements regarding job loss. I actually have a constituent who's really struggling with this right now, so I certainly would likely support something like that.

Again, I'm not convinced that we've heard enough from employers and union reps and employees on the implications of all of the things that are going to land on the desk of the labour board. Is this going to create a substantially increased workload? What does that mean in terms of resources required by the labour board? Who pays the freight? All these are questions that I have that, again, I think, can be answered if we take some time to thoughtfully go through a consultation process and a study process. Once we get to committee, I can only imagine that we're going to have some recommendations that we move this into committee.

8:20

The reverse onus clause seems like an interesting one. Again, I don't know if this is comparable with the rest of the country. Based on my initial reading of it, it feels like what we're seeing in Bill 17 is narrower than what we see in the rest of the country. That deserves, I think, some serious consideration and thought and input from Albertans.

The unfair practices pieces, the authority to certify or decertify where holding a vote has become impractical due to unfair labour practices, making a vote difficult, directed certification: I'd like to know how that compares to the rest of the country. I'd like to know what the implications of that are.

I've talked about the remote site access as it relates specifically to farming and ranching, but there are other areas.

What other points? Secondary picketing: do the provisions of Bill 17, in fact, align with the Supreme Court of Canada's Pepsi-Cola ruling? I don't know if they do or not. We're still in the process of looking at that. Perhaps that's something that we can answer here through the process of debate, but again I'd like to hear from a broad range of stakeholders, labour lawyers, others who may have some more expertise in that than I do.

You know, the MERFing and salting: that's an interesting one. We had a long discussion about this this afternoon in my office, about MERFing in particular. It may very well be one of those things that is not actually, frankly, a big concern in our country. I know Alberta is the only province, to the best of my knowledge, that outlaws this. It may be one of those problems that we, frankly, don't have. There could be no concerns in getting rid of that. I don't know. Again, we're looking into that.

But I do have concerns on eliminating and repealing the salting provisions. There are some examples that have been brought to me where you have a small number of seasonal workers who will come in for a period of time. Perhaps they've been there for 90, 91 days. A large number of them come, and then they move on, and then there's a relatively small number. Just to pick numbers off the top of my head, we have 10 permanent workers, and we have 100 people who come in on a temporary basis. One person said to me: "Well, I like the situation that we have. I'm one of those 10 permanent workers. I'm not particularly interested in being unionized, but if all of a sudden we only need 90 days before unionization can happen and we have this huge number of temporary workers who come in for 92 days, all of a sudden we're unionized. Those folks go away, but now we're in this position we don't want to be in." That's an important, I think, and interesting question for us to both debate in this House but also hear from Albertans on. So I have questions about that, and many, many, many more.

Madam Speaker, I think there's absolutely no question in my mind that more consultation is required, that the 36 days of consultation this government did are not enough. [Mr. Clark's speaking time expired] And there's my time.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Shepherd: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was interested to listen to the thoughts from the Member for Calgary-Elbow as he carefully read through, peered through the legislation, sort of identifying pieces about which he had questions. It seemed perhaps a bit improvised on the fly, but perhaps that's just the nature of what was happening at this time. We'll take it as it lies.

Anyway, I appreciated the thoughts that he had, though the member did repeat an argument that I've heard from some other members here this evening, Madam Speaker, that I found a bit odd, that being the argument that the majority of employers already provide good, stable, work environments and that since the majority of employers – and I don't dispute that at all. I certainly do believe in Alberta employers, and I certainly believe that the majority of them are looking out for their employees and seeking to provide safe workplaces, seeking to provide protection for their employees and seeking to be reasonable with their employees. Absolutely, Madam Speaker.

But the argument that because the majority of employers do so, there is no need to bring forward legislation to enforce that for all employers strikes me as a bit disingenuous. Indeed, the majority of employers may provide good working conditions. The majority of employers may not need to be additionally goaded into providing appropriate treatment or wages or working conditions or other things, but the fact remains that there is a minority of employers for whom it may be necessary.

The truth is, Madam Speaker, that we do not legislate anything else on that basis. We don't say: "The majority of restaurants are looking out for the people that eat there. Therefore, it's not necessary to provide regulations to ensure food safety, because the majority of restaurants don't want to poison their customers. That's bad for business, so there's no need for legislation for that to take place." [interjections] Now, admittedly, that was not fully the argument of the Member for Calgary-Elbow. It's an argument that's been put forward by some other members this evening, who seem to be quite vocal about that at this time, and that's fine. If they want to chirp about it, that's fine. They can go ahead and do so. I'd be more than happy to speak to them about that later.

But the fact is, Madam Speaker, that the Member for Calgary-Elbow also then went on to say that because there are exceptions in particular areas regarding labour legislation, the labour legislation may in fact have some possibly – he's not sure: possibly, maybe – negative effects on a minority of employers, that therefore we should not be passing certain parts of this legislation, that it needs much more discussion. It seems to me that that's kind of going both ways. In some cases, a majority of it being okay, it's fine for employees, then, perhaps to not have particular protections. But on the other hand, if it might possibly – possibly, again – affect a minority of employees, then we have to be very, very concerned.

Now, Madam Speaker, he also was noting his concerns about, you know, how this might affect the labour board. I will note that this whole process was overseen by Mr. Andy Sims, a former chair of the Alberta labour board, appointed by the previous, Progressive Conservative government, a man who has deep experience – deep experience . . . [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Members.

Mr. Shepherd: . . . in the area of labour law, in the area of knowing these things. He provided the recommendations on which this bill is based. In fact, Madam Speaker, he spoke very positively about this legislation. I have a quote here from Mr. Sims. [interjection] I do hear the member from the PC caucus there trying to disparage the possible intentions of Mr. Sims, suggesting that he might be making certain statements on the basis of contracts with our particular government. What Mr. Sims had to say was:

I listened carefully to the ideas and perspectives of both employers and employee groups during the course of this review. Drawing on my years of professional experience in this area, I was pleased to present the government with advice and workable options to modernize Alberta's labour relations system and bring it into alignment with the Canadian mainstream.

Mr. Sims was happy to stand with the minister when this legislation was announced and indeed has not spoken critically about this legislation, legislation which, I'll note, many people have spoken in favour of, including the hybrid card check system, Madam Speaker, which Mr. Ken Kobly, the CEO of the Alberta Chambers of Commerce, considered to be a compromise.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the referral amendment?

Mr. Nixon: I think it's a reasoned amendment.

The Acting Speaker: Oh. Sorry. Reasoned amendment.

The Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. I do rise to speak to the reasoned amendment. I think it's interesting as we've watched this process throughout the day and we continue to watch the government dodge consulting in any way or communicating in any way with Albertans on this legislation. I think there are a couple of things we should talk about which really illustrate the need for the government to stop this process, to spend the summer consulting with Albertans. That's why I think the hon. member brought forward this reasoned amendment.

One of the great examples, I think, Madam Speaker, that illustrates this is the way we received this bill last week. We received a bill like this when you normally receive a bill like this. Now, the reason that that happened is because the government couldn't get the bill to the printer in time because they were still tinkering with a bill this thick just before they tabled it.

8:30

You're telling me that this government actually consulted with Albertans, everyday Albertans, not the Albertans that stick with the world view that they usually talk to across the way here but Albertans across the province, employers from a wide spectrum, but they couldn't get the bill printed in time because they were rushing to get it through before we left for the summer. Now, why, Madam Speaker? I think that's an important question to ask when you look at that.

It's interesting – it's interesting – because the hon. members across the way, the government members across the way, say that they're rushing this without consultation because of the compassionate portions of the bill. Now, the opposition side of the House has offered to pass those in one day, provide immediate unanimous consent and move those through and get them done, but the government refuses to do that.

Well, let's look at the dates. This is very telling, Madam Speaker. Let's look at the dates. [interjections] When . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: When do the compassionate portions of this bill come into effect? I know, Madam Speaker. In January of next year. When do the controversial portions of the bill, that the NDP are attempting to attach to the compassionate portions to force it through this summer, take effect? When do the portions that their union bosses want in effect immediately take effect? In September of this year. The compassionate portions, that the opposition has offered to pass immediately – immediately, done deal, done today, tonight if they want – don't take effect till January, but the controversial portions of this legislation, that they won't consult with Albertans on, that they'll only talk to their union bosses about, people focused on their ideological agenda, take effect in September.

Madam Speaker, I don't know about you, but I'm appalled by that. This side of the House will deal with the serious compassionate issues immediately, get it done, get it to Royal Assent, and get it finished. That side of the House keeps rising and saying that this is why they're trying to rush it through, but they're not even going to let it take effect until next year. On the controversial portions of it, the portions that they didn't bother to talk to employers adequately about, that they only spoke about with Albertans for over 30 days – they have not been public about those consultations or making it clear what they've determined – those will be rushed through and take effect by September.

If this government was serious about the compassionate portion, they would take the opposition up on their offer, and they would get it through immediately so that it could take effect. Instead, what we will probably see throughout the rest of the evening is the opposite side continuing to rise and trying to convince Albertans that their focus is on compassion. But the reality is that when you look at the dates, that is not a reasonable argument.

Now, I would ask myself – I put things within the scope or the view of how my constituents would react to it. I believe that is our job, Madam Speaker, that we should be thinking about the people that sent us here and how they would react to the scenarios that we encounter. Our job is to vote on behalf of our constituents and to make decisions on behalf of our constituents based on what we think the majority of our constituents would want.

It's not always easy, but I can tell you that if you went to my constituency with me – and I would hope that one day you will come and visit my beautiful constituency, Madam Speaker. It's a great place. If you walked into, let's say, the Sundre A&W – I love the Sundre A&W – every day at 2:30 the great Myron Thompson, former Member of Parliament for Sundre, still a town councillor, with 50 years of public service to the community of Sundre and Mountain View county, holds court. Every day at 2:30 inside the A&W. You could come and you could visit with all sorts of people from all across the county.

Now, Madam Speaker, if you and I were there tomorrow, at one of Myron Thompson's great courts inside the Sundre A&W having a coffee, we could say: “Hey, they want us, Myron, to vote on this bill, but they couldn’t even get it printed in time. They want us to trust that that’s going to be okay for our constituents. They want us to vote on a bill, but they won’t put the compassionate portions through immediately. Instead, Myron, they want to make all the compassionate portions wait until next year, and the only portions they want to rush through, Myron, are the controversial portions, that we would get through in September.”

Now, Madam Speaker, do you think the people in the Sundre A&W would think that that was reasonable? In all honesty, do you think they would think that that was reasonable? I mean, I can tell from your reaction that you realize they would not think that that was very reasonable, and they would be right. The constituents of the members across the way wouldn’t think that that would be reasonable either. There is no reasonable argument that the other side can stand up and give that shows that that’s true. They can’t. They haven’t. All they do is continue to rise and try to put forward this vision that this is about getting compassionate issues associated with this bill through, but they don’t have the courage to get them through tonight or tomorrow.

They keep continuing to push those off to next year while they push through an ideological agenda on behalf of their union friends to get it through in September. Think about that, Madam Speaker. The compassionate issues that we would pass today: this government won’t allow them to happen until January 2018, just a little over a year from when they’ll be removed from office. But they’ll put through the controversial issues, that they have not consulted Albertans on, by September. Albertans aren’t buying it. They don’t buy it.

We have stood in this House many times for many reasoned amendments talking about the need for this government to consult, talking about the need for the government to take their time to answer some questions. Many hon. members have risen and asked serious questions about economic impacts, how this is going to impact employers, what the consequences are for remote work sites, what the consequences are for ranches and farms, lots of legitimate questions that we should be asking on behalf of the people of Alberta. This government, though, Madam Speaker, continues their pattern of behaviour that they have had from their very first day in office, and that is to ignore Albertans and to do whatever the heck they want, and it has serious consequences.

When I was speaking under 29(2)(a) earlier to another hon. member, I talked about my trip to Sundre for their 4-H show and sale on Monday night and the fact that as I was walking with the young kids in the club, the Keiver children, who are usually doing lambs and calves, smaller calves – they’re not putting steers in the sale – they were talking to me about what takes place up here. These are kids, nine, 10 years old. They are scared of the members opposite. They are petrified of this government. [interjections]

They laugh, but that’s a fact. They don’t trust them. Because they went forward with legislation so fast at the time that was associated with something that was so near and dear to them, young children don’t trust them. [interjections] They laugh, but it’s not funny. For generations in the community I represent there is no way those kids will ever accept any of these members across the way in any form because they attacked their very way of life.

Now, if they had slowed down, Madam Speaker, if they had slowed down and actually talked – you know, the Member for Calgary-Bow is heckling away. I don’t even know if she’s ever been to a 4-H sale. Maybe if she slowed down and actually went and talked to some of my constituents, she would have understood before she stood in this House and disregarded everything that they thought, everything about their livelihood, and voted for a piece of legislation that they will never forgive her for.

It’s the same example here. Now, it may not be as extreme in this case, but the point is that if you don’t take the time to talk to the people that the legislation will impact and you continue to hide behind a vision or an argument that is just ridiculous when you look at the dates – because it’s not about compassion. If it was about compassion, the hon. members would stand up and vote and get it through tonight, but they won’t because it’s not about compassion. It’s about forcing through their ideological agenda by September. The dates don’t lie. The dates are clear, Madam Speaker. If this was about the compassionate portion of it, then that would go through in September at the very earliest, at the same time as the rest of the portions of the bill, but it’s not.

An Hon. Member: This is the amendment, right?

Mr. Nixon: Yeah. It is the reasoned amendment, absolutely. Thanks to the hon. member for pointing that out. I’m glad that he’s keeping up that we’re on a reasoned amendment. A reasoned amendment is to point out why this needs to be consulted on and that this should stop. That’s what a reasoned amendment is for. This bill needs to stop, and this government needs to consult with the people that it will impact.

Now, Madam Speaker, why doesn’t this government ever want to do that? Over and over and over we ask why this government won’t do it. In this case why does this government not want to talk to the employers that will be impacted? Under this government’s watch over a hundred thousand people have lost jobs. Our economy has been destroyed. We will be $70 billion to $100 billion in debt by the time their time in office comes to an end, and it’s coming to an end. I mean, they are in the second half, and there’s not a reasonable person in this entire province that thinks this government will continue a second term in office. But the damage that they will do during this time is why this reasoned amendment is appropriate. We need to send this back for consultation. We need to take the time.

This government has a pattern, and this is very relevant to that. This government has a pattern of putting bills like this into the House just before the end of a session. They have a pattern of not talking to people. I mean, Bill 6 was one of the great examples where bureaucrats were going out and they had no clue. They were coming out from the government, and they had no clue about the reality of the legislation they were going to make, talking about sending bulls out with cows only in the daytime to make sure that they didn’t calve at night. Those stories happened. With the people that were there, that happened. That’s a lack of consultation. If you’re going to make legislation, you should talk to the people that it impacts. That’s not unreasonable.

8:40

Now, there are many good things inside this legislation, as has been pointed out by many members, and we should focus on that. In the end, if the members opposite took the time to talk to Albertans, they might get the legislation better that actually impacts everybody.

What would be very interesting to me, though, Madam Speaker – and many hon. members have spoken about this today – is an explanation for the dates, an explanation from this government on why they brought this forward during the last week if they truly cared. If they truly cared, they wouldn’t have waited until the last minute. They couldn’t even get it to the printer. These are not people that cared. They couldn’t even get the bill done in time and print it. How serious is that? Not very serious. They couldn’t even get the bill done and printed, and they think that they’re ready to debate it in the Legislature. They’re not.

Now they stand up, and again the core of their argument – over and over, Madam Speaker, you’ve heard it – is: well, you guys don’t want to get the compassionate portion through. Let’s bring it through today. Let’s do it. Right now. Move a motion, and we can move all that compassionate portion through. It’s very important. We agree. We’ll get it done.

Mr. Hanson: We’ll even change the enforcement date.

Mr. Nixon: Absolutely. We’ll change the enforcement date. Let’s get it up to the same as where they’re trying to get their big union boss portions through. That’s the point of this amendment, why any reasonable member across the way would not do that.

Now, earlier today we were, of course, debating a referral amendment to send it back to committee, and that was voted down. Again, more consultation was voted down, over and over and over. The only things this government will consult on are things they don’t want to pass. Have you ever noticed that, Madam Speaker? I’m sure that you’ve found that shocking in your time here, that the only bills that this government will take the time to talk to the very people of Alberta about, that are their boss, that pay the bills around this place, are legislation that they don’t want to pass.

The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler tried to pass legislation to prevent this government from using taxpayer dollars to pay for advertisement for political purposes, and it’s off to committee. We’ve never seen it again. It’s been about two years.

The time change legislation, coming from an hon. member across the way, is off to committee. Who knows if that’s coming back? They’re going to consult with Albertans on it.

Mr. Hanson: Property rights.

Mr. Nixon: Property rights. That’s another great one, something that this party said that they stood for. They’ve turned their back on farmers and rural people yet again and on Albertans as a whole. They care about property rights but turned their back on them. It’s off to committee to be discussed because it’s legislation that does not fit with their ideological agenda.

Now, as soon as we see legislation that fits with their ideological agenda, they push it through even faster than they push through the compassionate portions for the people of Alberta. That is shocking. And they will have the nerve to stand in this House and say: “This is about the compassionate portions. Oh, wait. No. We don’t want to pass that for another six months, until after our ideological agenda portion is through.”

How do they think that we, who are responsible to our constituents, can trust them, based on their pattern of behaviour, that they consulted on this legislation, when they won’t tell us whom they consulted with and what they found out? They won’t show us any financial studies, any details of the impact. And they can’t even print the bill on time, Madam Speaker. They can’t even print the bill. They were still messing with this bill just before they put it in the Legislature because they were rushing it through.

In fact, the reason that proves we need the reasoned amendment to go through was that we saw the government, for the very first time in their time, filibustering their own legislation in an attempt to slow things down because they were trying to rush through this legislation before they left. Now, Madam Speaker, the reason that was noticeable is because they weren’t any good at it. They weren’t. It was very obvious to the press, to everybody that the government was now filibustering legislation because they were trying to slow down the process so that they could try to get the bill through. Well, they will delay the compassionate portions of the bill, but they’ll force through the ideological portion before the compassionate portion, before the next sitting of this House.

So, Madam Speaker, I don’t know about you, but I would like to hear and hopefully we will hear in Committee of the Whole some more information on why this government sees fit to delay the compassionate portions of this bill and to force through the ideological portions of this bill.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul . . .

Mr. Hanson: Two Hills. Don’t forget Two Hills. It’s a very important little community.

I’d just like to ask the member – I know that I was pretty surprised when I realized that there were some significant differences in the dates of coming into force. One of the things I’d like to point out is that the big reason for this bill is compassionate care, and everybody agrees on that. We think it’s wonderful legislation. We’d like to put it through tonight. But it won’t happen because they won’t separate it out from the legislation. They’re going to put that off until January 1, but all of their really important union certification, card check, all of that stuff that just simply cannot wait will be coming through September 1.

Now, another little interesting fact. I know that they’ve thought about these dates because there’s another section in there with regard to underage workers, and that section comes into force upon proclamation. If the compassionate care portion was so important, so vitally important that this bill cannot wait, cannot go through the summer for debate – it’s got to get done here; this is extremely important stuff – why didn’t they put that as coming into force upon proclamation? I think it’s obvious what’s going on here. This group, who depend on union donations to fund their party right from every level, federally, provincially . . . [interjection] Member, did you know that every affiliated union pays $16.04 per capita per year into the Alberta Federation of Labour? Did you know that? That’s a little interesting fact, isn’t it? One of their huge supporters, Alberta Federation of Labour.

If the member would like to comment on and just, like, you know, take into consideration that last date I said. If they were really, really serious about this legislation, about compassionate care, if they really cared about people – you know, there are people right now that have sick kids at home that could benefit from this legislation. Right now there are people working in Alberta that could benefit from this legislation, and you’re going to drag this out until January 1, 2018. But your all-important union certification stuff: oh, man, that’s got to come through September 1. Underage workers: immediately upon proclamation. Right now there are sick kids at home where the mom and dad are at work and could benefit from this legislation. Absolutely shameful. I’m just wondering if the member would like to stand up and comment on that.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the hon. member for the question. I think that goes to the core of the main point, and that is just the complete lack of trust and the fact that, you know, nobody in Alberta trusts this government anymore. I certainly don’t, and it’s because this behaviour continues. This amendment is relevant to that because the question we have to ask is whether this was truly consulted on with Albertans, and we hear from Albertans: not.

As the hon. member knows, I mean, in my case, I hear constantly from the Red Deer ridings and the Wetaskiwin ridings, from their people who are needing our help because they’re not being able to communicate with their MLAs. We hear that constantly. Clearly, you know, we hear those stories all the time, of people calling for help from the constituencies of the members opposite. Their constituents aren't being spoken to. They expect us to believe that they actually have taken the time to consult on this. That's troubling.

But, in addition to that – and I think the hon. member's point is that the two dates are extremely troubling – it's extremely troubling that this government continues to rise and say that this is about the compassionate portions of this when we've offered to get this through immediately. In one day we could have that passed and off to help the people that are impacted by it. When you look at that bill and you actually find out, Madam Speaker, that the government's intention is not to do anything with the compassionate portion until at least next year but that it is to force through the ideological portion, where they stack the deck on democracy with ballots, that they push forward their ideological agenda, that's troubling.

It goes to what we keep saying, and that is that there's just no trust left in this government. They've lost all the trust of Albertans, and they know it. They know it, at least the ones across the way that actually take the time to talk to Albertans. You have to know it. You go anywhere in this province, and they don't trust them, but that's because of this behaviour, over and over and over, staying inside the bubble, not talking to the people of Alberta they're trying to impact, and forcing through ideological agendas. It's extremely troubling, I think, at its core, and the reason that we needed the amendment, the reasoned amendment, and, before that, to at least refer this to committee was because of that troubling behaviour.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Panda: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to support the amendment brought forward by the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner. I believe it's a very good amendment, and I'll tell you why. Because this bill has been rushed. If members opposite do not believe me, they can actually go ahead and read the bill. The previous speakers talked about the spelling mistakes and the technical mistakes in the bill. Those could be verified by the NDP members here if they read the bill. Members opposite have been told to filibuster their own bills because Bill 17 was not ready. That was also mentioned by the previous speaker.

8:50

Now they rise and say this, that this is what is good for Albertans, without ever having taken the time to speak with Albertans, Madam Speaker. They didn't speak to any Albertans. If they spoke, they haven't informed us whom they spoke to, what they told them.

They spent less time talking to Albertans about these changes than they did speaking to Albertans about daylight saving time, Madam Speaker. If you remember, they brought in the daylight saving bill, and then they referred it to the committee. We saw more advertising and more consultation periods for time change than we are seeing for labour changes. Even after all the consultation on daylight saving time, the NDP still wanted more time to consult, so they asked us, the opposition, to back their motion to send it to the committee.

Now, we want to do the same with this bill, and, Madam Speaker, I didn't see any agreement from the other side. We are more than reasonable in separating the most important parts of it, where we both agree. We said that we have no issue in supporting that and getting that approved and getting royal assent and making that effective, but they don't want to take that. That is very unreasonable. All we are asking is: take the summer to consult with Albertans. What's wrong with that? They didn't give us any justification for it. We want to spend, at the very least, the same amount of time on this bill as was spent on daylight saving time.

The only reason members opposite would be afraid to send this to the committee for more consultation is that they're afraid Albertans would be opposed to this, which they are, so your reasons are justified. I know that you know that Albertans are not happy with you for rushing this bill, but that is all the more reason to get input from Albertans. At least, then you have the satisfaction that you consulted Albertans and they gave you input. That gives you more confidence. I don't know why you don't do that.

Do the members opposite want to run a government that does not create legislation for all Albertans but only for a few? Do the members opposite really want to create legislation that only appeals to 1 per cent of Albertans? Do they want to create legislation that only union bosses are happy with?

Do they want to create legislation that allows unions to undercut businesses and drive out competition? That is literally what MERFing means, which they have included in this bill, Madam Speaker. Apply MERFing to any large corporation and see if they would be happy with that. Nowadays you've made friends with many corporations, which is good, so just check with them and apply MERFing and see what they've got to say.

Have the members opposite done local consultation to find out what they are introducing and how it will affect their communities? That's our job, Madam Speaker, to find out how it affects the communities. There has been less than one week for us to consult, and there is no way that any single person on that side of the House could possibly say that that is enough time to consult on a bill of this size, this large. If you did, tell us. It's not possible in just one week to consult.

MERFing alone could bankrupt businesses. If you understand business, if you understand the meaning of MERFing, that could actually bankrupt many businesses. Then, instead of introducing hundreds of unemployed engineers, we'll be introducing hundreds of unemployed construction workers, tradesmen, and oil field workers as a result of this bill, all of whom lost their jobs due to policies the members opposite signed into law. This is just one – one – of the many reasons why this bill needs more consultation. The Minister of Labour loves to quote movies and songs from the '80s to reference the last time there were any upset labour workers.

Let's keep this labour peace for one more summer and consult for one more summer. Just one more summer: that is all we are asking, Madam Speaker. Prove to us that Albertans want this bill. Prove to us that we are wrong. Just heckling us doesn't prove you right. You have to use reasonable debate and convince us to prove us wrong. I think that next the Justice minister will get up and speak and prove me wrong. I'm hoping. I know that members opposite would love to prove that we are wrong, which is good, but they have to use a reasonable argument.

Right now they have no proof because everyone is coming out against this bill. Right now we have the proof on this side of the House because lawyers are upset with this bill due to the wrong wording, construction companies are upset due to how it will destroy their businesses, business owners are upset at how they are being treated by this government as criminals, and workers are upset that their right to a secret ballot is being taken away. The only people who are happy, Madam Speaker – the only people who are happy – are the union bosses. That is the 1 per cent of workers that I was referring to. I do not know why this government is appealing to the 1 per cent. I do not know why this government does not care about everyone else.

Yes, many members across the aisle have been heckling me and my colleagues, including the member who had a member's statement about heckling, who sits right beside his colleague as they heckle, without trying to stop them. Those two make, you know, the Statler and Waldorf of the Assembly.

There are parts of this bill we all agree upon, and we said right from the start that if those pieces were in their own separate bill, we would pass them in a heartbeat. Everyone on this side, including the Member for Calgary-Elbow, said that, but since they will not show any compassion, we have to deal with the difficult portion of this bill in hopes that they listen before it is too late.

Fellow MLAs, my colleagues, if you do not understand what these phrases are, these phrases that are included in this bill, it means that you do not understand what you are passing. I implore you to consult more on this bill. MERFing, salting, Rand, card check, and right to work: if you do not completely understand what all those mean, then that shows that you are uninformed as to the contents of this bill. Please work with us to ensure that everyone in this House is informed, please work with us on this amendment, and work with us to have more consultation on this bill.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Connolly: Well, thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise under 29(2)(a) to make a comment about the speech by my hon. colleague from Calgary-Foothills. Now, he was asking quite a lot about consultation and what we've done for consultation and kind of what I've done for consultation, so I'd love to tell him what I've done to consult about Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

9:00

Even before this act was tabled, I was able to speak to my constituents directly. I, unlike some members on the opposite side, go door to door and talk to my constituents because they're the ones whom I'm here to represent. I go door to door, and I talk to them. I've heard over and over again from people like Karen from Hawkwood, who is happy that in Bill 17 we're going to make sure that if somebody is sick or their child is sick, they're going to have the time to go home. I have been able to go door to door, not just this weekend. [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, if we could respect both sides of the House, please.

Thank you.

Connolly: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I find it very disheartening that while I'm trying to speak up for my constituents, I have members from the opposite side trying to yell over top of me. I'd really appreciate it if those members could just calm down and maybe listen to some debate instead of just trying to talk over one another. That's how we have constructive debate, and I'm sure you know that.

I would really hope that my colleague and neighbour from Calgary-Foothills maybe gets out of his office and goes door to door and talks to his constituents about what this legislation means for him and how the I think it was almost 29-year-old labour legislation, this decades-old labour legislation, was so hurtful to our constituents and to all Albertans.

When I go door to door and I talk to my constituents, they tell me that – well, since I went this weekend, they were telling me how happy they were to see what's in this bill. They were happy that we are making sure that Albertans are well represented in this Legislature. They are happy that we are making sure that if something does happen to them, if something does happen to one of their . . . [interjections]

I'm tired of hearing from the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills constantly over top of me, so I'd ask him to please quiet down while I'm trying to speak through the chair.

Mr. Hanson: Did you tell them about the secret ballot?

Connolly: Excuse me?

The Acting Speaker: We were doing so well. Hon. members, we've actually been very quiet this evening, and we'd appreciate it if we could please, when both sides are speaking, be respectful.

Thank you.

Connolly: Thank you once again, Madam Speaker.

I also heard from Heather down in Silver Springs. Like the hon. member was saying, yeah, I did speak about what we're doing to make sure that people can either join a union or leave a union and making sure that if 65 per cent of people have a card, that union is then created. They are happy with that. They're really happy that between 40 and 65 per cent we still have a secret vote. Sometimes unions can't always reach that 65 per cent because many members of that workforce maybe don't want to be members of a union, so they might not sign a union card. That means we still have the secret ballot. That is why in Bill 17 we decided not to get rid of the secret ballot, unlike what the opposition keeps saying. They are completely making falsehoods out of Bill 17. I am sick and tired of it, and my constituents are sick and tired of it.

Mr. Hanson: Point of order.

The Acting Speaker: A point of order has been called. The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Hanson: With pleasure. Thank you, Madam Speaker. I make reference to the usual suspects: 23(h), (i), and (j). The Member for Calgary-Hawkwood clearly referred to members opposite here as basically lying by using the word "falsehood." [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Let the member finish, please.

Mr. Hanson: It's unparliamentary. It's been called unparliamentary. "Falsehood" and "not telling the truth" have been called unparliamentary in this Chamber many times in the past, and I would like the member to apologize and withdraw.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Would the government side like to respond? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Connolly: Yes. I'll retract the word that I used, and I do apologize for using that specific word. However, they are not necessarily always construing what our legislation is in the correct manner.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. Please continue.

Debate Continued

Connolly: Now, as I mentioned, Madam Speaker, some of the – sorry. I'm not done with my 29(2)(a).

As I mentioned, Madam Speaker, some of this legislation hasn't been updated since 1988, and the previous government's failure to keep up to date with the rest of Canada is completely shameful. The current opposition is coming up with all sorts of reasons to keep delaying those updates, and I think that's shameful, too. That was directly what the member opposite was trying to do and what they're trying to do with this reasoned amendment.

Albertans need a government that's got their backs and makes sure they have the same rights as people in other jurisdictions. These are things like overtime. In order to protect Albertans and keep up with other Canadian jurisdictions, Bill 17 proposes that rates of banked overtime and pay must be no less than time and a half.

Now, I know several people that are in the same position. My brother, as a matter of fact, is in that position. I am so happy that he is going to get his fair shake. He deserves it for the work that he does as an electrician. I know that for several people who work in the trades and people who even work elsewhere – like, when I worked even in retail, that was the case. We only got one hour for our banked hours in overtime.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Stier: Yes. Thank you, Madam Speaker, and good evening, everyone. Well, interesting conversations in the past few minutes, for sure, this evening, folks.

I'd like to rise this evening and speak highly in favour of this amendment. Actually, though, I'd like to start – I'm kind of getting tired of always getting up and speaking about how this government isn't listening to Albertans and about the lack of consultation this government holds on so many of their legislative policies. Frankly, if I didn't know any better, I'd say that they're outright allergic to the thought of listening to Albertans, Madam Speaker.

The NDP government needs to realize that more consultation/analysis is needed under labour and employment changes as Alberta's job creators have taken hit after hit from the NDP blindly pursuing their ideology since they were elected. If they are sincere in taking the time to get this right, they will use the summer to receive meaningful feedback on all the changes and their combined ramifications. That's what our amendment is asking you to do, to take the summer to go out and get feedback.

Economic impact assessments. Whether it's the carbon tax, electricity changes, the tax hikes, or the minimum wage, the government either refuses to do impact assessments or ignores the evidence in favour of ideology. This legislation from the NDP government is omnibus in nature and, in my opinion, would best be served if split into two distinct components to allow for faster passage of compassionate care leaves.

Actually, I'm supportive of many of the updates to the employment standards to protect those on compassionate leave, ladies and gentlemen. I really hoped to work with this government on passing those measures as quickly as possible. But I'm steadily losing hope that the NDP will recognize that these compassionate care components be separate and distinct from the broader employment and labour code changes that require consultation, which is really too bad. Albertans deserve so much better.

The NDP government is being completely insincere in their attempt to wrap up their really bad bill with really good proposals on improving compassionate leaves. Again, if they would take the time to actually listen to Albertans over the course of the summer, they would hear that. Again, that is what our amendment is set to do.

Make no mistake: the larger part of this province's Alberta advantage was the decades of labour peace. That didn't happen by accident. The NDP seem hell-bent on settling ideological scores at a time when Alberta's economy simply cannot absorb the continued blows. This government is sacrificing jobs to please their big, fat-cat union bosses. That's what it would seem. This legislation should require the government to take their time to get it right. Instead, the NDP is setting a course for destruction and taking us there at lightspeed.

Bill 17 has 124 pages. That is one page longer than Bill 21, the Modernized Municipal Government Act, that this government introduced last spring and that I was heavily involved in debating throughout the fall. The minister then went on the road all summer listening to Albertans, and when we returned in the fall, she – bless her heart – introduced amendments based on the feedback she received from Albertans and stakeholders. Bill 21 has been lauded as the gold standard for consultation and something this government should perhaps be emulating with Bill 17. Instead, Bill 17 is quickly becoming the lowest possible standard for how a government should pass a bill.

9:10

Debate on Bill 21 was measured in months. Bill 17 debate will be measured on a stopwatch, it would seem, and that is disappointing. This government should be ashamed of themselves in this respect. Consultation is something that's so important to all Albertans now since Bill 6, since Bill 21, since all of these things. That's been shown. Why they're not proceeding along that same path, I do not know.

The government clearly intended for no discussion to happen, I think, because they know that this bill aims to please the big, fat cat union bosses I mentioned a moment ago and not the rest of Albertans, who are already hurting from this government's disastrous economic policies. Alberta has a strong, stable system of democracy that has been in place for over 100 years, and this government continues to disregard the importance of that process in crafting workable legislation for the benefit of all Albertans. The contempt that the government has for the legislative process is unhealthy, and frankly it is unacceptable. Albertans deserve better, Madam Speaker.

Why the concerns with the other pieces? It's not clear what the impact would be to Alberta's businesses should the union certification provisions be rushed through. We need to take the time to do this right, and that means more than 36 little days of consultation and just a week of debate. Alberta's current union certification system has resulted in over three decades of relative labour peace, with the highest wages in the nation, and the fact that this government is willing to throw that successful system out without holding any consultation over the summer is simply wrong.

The government has essentially drawn a line in the sand that 65 per cent of employees signing union cards means 50 per cent are in favour of unionizing, and that's not right and it's not accurate, in my opinion. The secret ballot dates back to ancient Greece and has been the backbone of transparent democracy for over a thousand years, and somehow this NDP government seems to think that they know better than anyone else does. If this government is going to get rid of the secret ballot, they should have the intestinal fortitude to consult with Albertans. Again, that is what our amendment is about, consulting with Albertans throughout the summer.

I know why they refuse to speak to anyone or consult with anyone at this stage, because they simply don't have the justification to make those changes, and Albertans know it, and this government knows that Albertans know it.

I'm supporting this amendment because this bill proposes so many changes, 125 pages worth of changes, and this government has not even attempted in the least to do a proper job of consultation. I believe in consultation with Albertans. I believe in consulting thoroughly with Albertans about these kinds of major changes and any kind of change to legislation. So, Madam Speaker, I encourage all members of this Assembly to do the same. Support this amendment. Let's see some consultation this summer.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak on 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I appreciate my colleague speaking to this amendment. You know, one of the questions that I had was that I really just wanted to understand: why the rush to get this very controversial part of the bill passed by September 1? So I looked up how many union members are in Alberta. A little over 23 per cent of Albertans are union members according to one of the sources that I looked at, yet the latest polls show that the NDP have dropped to around 19 per cent. So one of the things that I was thinking was that it looks like they're actually losing even some of their union members, so they need to shore up that support, that is generally something that they've been able to count on in the past. I'd like to actually ask the hon. member if he could comment on what he thinks is the reason why they're pushing this forward and whether or not there's anything to the idea that they're polling even less than what the union members are in Alberta.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm not sure if I can answer the member's questions that he has provided. There are a few things that I could add, though, certainly, and that is that the NDP government needs to realize that more consultation is needed, both about the Labour Relations Code changes and the changes to union certification in the province. If they were actually sincere in taking the time to get this right, they would use the summer to receive that feedback that I spoke of and all the combined ramifications that are involved. This legislation from the government is omnibus in nature, and we would really, really suggest that it should be split into two distinct components to allow for faster passage of many of the important pieces of the legislation, but it's certainly something that needs further consultation.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Any other members on 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any other members wishing to speak to the referral?

The hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader.

Ms Ganley: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to note the amount of progress that we have made today and to begin by adjourning debate on the reasoned amendment and then adjourn for the evening until tomorrow morning.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 9:17 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act 1407, 1418

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday morning, May 31, 2017

Day 42

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Orr
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Drysdale	Schreiner
Fitzpatrick	Taylor
Gotfried

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Pitt
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Ellis	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

9 a.m.

Wednesday, May 31, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good morning, everyone.

If we could just contemplate and pray, each in our own way. I believe that today marks the 100 years ago that U.S. President John F. Kennedy was born. Let us be reminded of his famous line, where he challenged all citizens of the world by saying, “Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country.” Let us also remember that he suffered as a result of violence and terrorism. Let us work together to never let that dominate our country and province.

Please be seated.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

Mr. Hunter moved that the motion for second reading of Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by deleting all of the words after “that” and substituting the following:

Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be not now read a second time because the Assembly is of the view that the government has not provided Albertans enough time to be consulted on the specific changes being proposed and, further, has not provided assurances that a full economic impact analysis has been completed detailing any potential negative impact on the economic well-being of Albertans.

[Adjourned debate on the amendment May 30: Ms Ganley]

The Speaker: The Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I’m speaking to the amendment today. This is an extraordinarily large piece of legislation that we have before us today. It is, in fact, two bills brought together. It is trying to do, on the one hand, some positive things for Alberta families and Alberta workers, but on the other hand, it has some much more controversial items in it that go beyond basic working conditions and get into the basic structure of labour and employer relations in Alberta. These are two very, very separate things.

The first part of the bill I refer to deals with employment standards: underage workers, leave, overtime pay, holiday pay, employment standards for farm and ranch workers, temporary layoff periods, persons with disabilities, probationary periods for termination of employment, and administrative penalties. In some of these areas I think we’d find rather broad agreement on both sides of the House between the government, the Official Opposition, and the third party. There will be differences within there. There certainly are some problems on that side, but broadly it is trying to move in the right direction, and I think we could find a large degree of agreement on both sides.

But even where we do agree, at least on some of the broad strokes, we need to take time to properly consult with workers, with employers, with regulators, and with nonprofits and for-profit businesses. So far the only group that has been significantly consulted on any of this is the Alberta Federation of Labour and its affiliated major unions in the public and private sectors. That is not adequate consultation. A quick phone call to small-business groups is not adequate consultation. Even on the part of the bill where we have a rather broad degree of consensus at least on the direction we should be moving, if perhaps not on some of the details, we need to be able to speak with people in the field on these things. There’s not been anywhere near an adequate period of consultation. That is why this bill should be put on ice until we return in the fall. We should take the summer to go out and consult with people.

I remember that before I was elected, I was with the Canadian Taxpayers Federation, and there were four members of the current government here who served as the fourth party at the time. There were some bills brought forward by the previous government that dealt largely with pension reform, both the public and private sectors, but the more controversial side of it was on the public sector. It was actually one of the rare cases where I found myself in agreement with the former government and opposed to the Wildrose at the time. I actually felt that the Wildrose had taken the wrong position at the time, that it had been actually a matter of political expediency, and it was the wrong position to take. I was not a Wildrose member at the time, but I was certainly, generally speaking, a supporter.

This bill turned out to be pretty controversial. Members of the then fourth party, who are now in government, demanded that these controversial pieces of legislation dealing with pension reform go to a committee and that that committee spend the summer going out and meeting with stakeholders. I appeared before that committee. I remember the now Minister of Education was there. I was one of only two people to present in favour of the bill, and there were many, let’s just say, vocal public-sector workers who were there demanding that the bill be shelved. I saw the now Minister of Education in the hallway before I went in, and he told me that for my own safety I should probably be careful with my presentation. Needless to say, I was not careful with my presentation and had a few public-sector union members violently shove me on my way out. Nonetheless, it was the right thing to do to have that bill go to a committee.

That was a bill that eventually the Premier who succeeded at that time, Jim Prentice, ended up shelving. I disagreed with that decision. I thought that that was a good piece of legislation, broadly speaking, although it had flaws in it, and that those flaws could have been addressed when they toured that summer to try and consult with people. They actually went out and consulted with many of the people that the bill actually affected. It affected workers, particularly in the public sector. I was there to represent many taxpayers, primarily in the private sector, who also needed to be heard. So the committee was able to go out and listen to what Albertans thought about this.

Now, federally – I generally don’t look to our federal Parliament as a great example of a functioning democracy, but they do actually take much more public input at the committee level. Committees are not a shocking one-off thing. They have more than just the Public Accounts Committee. They have more than just committees that meet a few times a year to consider the estimates. They have regularly meeting committees, where they can receive testimony from members of the public.

The NDP used to stand for that when they were in opposition. You would think – you would hope, at least – that that zeal for listening to the public would carry over into government, but when you get to government, apparently you don’t need to listen anymore. You can just listen to each other in the Chamber. You can listen to each other in a caucus meeting. You can listen to your party members in your meetings. But you don’t have to go out and listen to the general public anymore. That is a very negative reflection on the transition from opposition to government for many of the members opposite, that I don't think they're proud of but they may overlook for purposes of political expediency.

So that committee went out and listened to many Albertans. In the end the government of the day made the decision to shelve that bill. Again, I don't believe they should have shelved that bill. I think that was generally a positive piece of legislation that should have been passed in an amended form. There were problems with the bill, and they should have passed an amended form of that bill, but instead it was scrapped outright.

It was a good experience for me to see that, look, here are MLAs going out to tour the province. They held public hearings in Edmonton, in Calgary, and, I think, in other medium-sized cities like Medicine Hat, Red Deer, Lethbridge, Grande Prairie and listened to people there. And the NDP very actively organized to bring out their supporters. They brought out many members of the NDP. They brought out AFL members. They brought them out in large numbers to try and testify at this committee, to make their voices heard as they had every right to do, although, as I found out in my experience there, they certainly didn't respect the right of other people to testify there, as in both volume and even minor forms of violence.

In any case, it was a positive experience, and I was encouraged when I saw the Minister of Education and, I think, the Member for Livingstone-Macleod, that sat on that committee as well. It was positive to see members of all the different opposition parties there with members of the government doing this. I genuinely thought that when those members formed government, that was something that they would carry with them into government, and it's not something we've seen.

9:10

This would be important to do even for the half of this bill where we have a relatively broad level of consensus on the high level of it if not on some of the details. But all the more so is it important for us to take the summer to consult on this bill on the areas where we have virtually no level of agreement right now. The other half of this bill, the Labour Relations Code changes, is a radical overhaul of labour relations and union legislation in this province. They deserve more than a cursory glance by the public before they become the law of the land. They deserve a careful and thoughtful examination from all sides. They deserve a full public hearing, with the ability for expert witnesses to testify, before we are voting on legislation to become the law of the land.

We can talk about card check certification. I think it's, without a doubt, the single most controversial piece of this piece of legislation. Card check certification would strip workers of the right to a secret ballot, would take away a democratic right from workers that Canadians have had since 1880. Eighteen eighty.

I was briefly chatting with I think it was the Member for Calgary-Currie. I know we had a big powwow in his constituency last night. I was chatting with the Member for Calgary-Currie about, you know, how we got the secret ballot. Canada's first federal election was conducted without a secret ballot. Everyone could see how you voted. The upside to that was that, you know, if you were in a Conservative area, the Conservatives would have essentially what amounted to a party or a barbecue next to the polling station, and if you voted for the right guys – they would know how you voted – you'd get invited over, and they would feed you, they would give you something to drink, and you would have had a good time with the other guys who voted Conservative. But if you didn't, well, you'd better hold on to your kneecaps.

The same thing would go on in Liberal polls. I suppose we didn't have the same party configurations at the time. We still had, you know, what we called Reformers and Clear Grits and things like that, too. But broadly we didn't have a secret ballot. So the upside to it was that you might get some free barbecue and beer out of it if you voted the right way, but the downside was that people were intimidated if they voted the wrong way. They only conducted one federal election after Confederation like that, but our elections pre-Confederation were broadly conducted like that.

In the united provinces of Upper and Lower Canada and the colonial provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, and Newfoundland they did not have the secret ballot until 1880 and Alexander Mackenzie, Canada's first Liberal Prime Minister, introduced the secret ballot. From that time on, Canadians have enjoyed the basic democratic right to keep their vote secret.

Now, as politicians we're constantly asking people how they vote. We love to know how people vote. We want to identify voters, to get them out. We want to figure out how people are intending to vote in polls. We're obsessed with these things. But that is a consensual handing over of information from a voter to a politician or to a pollster or to a campaigner.

That is very different – that is very different – than where you vote by signing a card. And if you don't sign the card, which is effectively a yes vote, then you are by default on the no side, meaning that a union organizer could come into your place of work, where you're just trying to do your job, and say: vote yes or no; I will know how you voted. They then have the ability to intimidate, to cajole, to trick, to bully workers into voting their way. I know that members on the other side are concerned about these issues. They talk about bullying and these things all the time, and those things are wrong. So it is beyond me to understand why they would do something which is sure to increase bullying and, potentially, cases of violence in the workplace. I don't know why they would do that.

This is a very significant change in our laws, and it deserves more than just a cursory look here and a couple of late-night sittings and debate between us. We should hear from the public. There's no need to rush this. We should take the summer, listen to Albertans, listen to constituents, listen to experts in their fields on both sides – listen to labour, listen to unions, listen to workers, listen to employers – listen to them, consult over the summer, and come back in the fall so that we can properly debate this bill with a bit more knowledge than we have right now.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, are there any questions, comments directed to the Member for Strathmore-Brooks concerning this amendment?

Are there any other members who wish to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this morning to speak to the amendment. I'm probably just going to keep my comments very, very brief.

One of the things that I've seen as a concern that's been noted from our friends across the way is in regard to the consultation process and what has taken place. Just to point out a couple of little facts here, there were two previous reviews done of the codes, both in 2007 and then again in 2014. Now, unfortunately, there was no action that was taken on those reviews by the previous government, and that has left us out of step with the rest of Canada for quite some time. You know, when you think about those reviews that were done and then nothing having been done there and take into consideration that a lot of our labour language is as much as almost 30 years old, I could see how maybe it's possible to confuse some of the things we're trying to bring into step now with everybody else in the rest of the country. That would seem a little radical to you, so I can certainly empathize on that.

With regard, again, to the consultation process that took place, you know, there was a lot that was done. We have spoken to organizations like the Alberta Chambers of Commerce, the University of Lethbridge, the city of Medicine Hat, the Alberta Caregivers Association, and organizations like Unifor. These are just a few examples of some of the consultation that has gone on, Mr. Speaker, including the nearly 5,000 online submissions that were added to try to guide the process here for this updated labour language legislation. Another 400 written submissions were also brought in.

Were small-business groups included in those consultations? Absolutely. But then again we can see that places like the Alberta Chambers of Commerce, very large organizations with a large business membership, have also been consulted on that.

We also engaged the services of Andrew Sims, a gentleman that has a very, very, very extensive background when it comes to labour law. His guidance was certainly fundamental in helping us navigate to ensure that our laws here in Alberta are now coming into step with the rest of Canada, with our friends in other provinces as well as even on some of our obligations on the international scale with regard to youth employment.

Mr. Speaker, I'm happy with the level of consultation that has taken place. I know for sure that, you know, the folks in Edmonton-Decore and I have been talking about this for quite some time. Given my background that's certainly a question that always comes up along with a lot of other things.

9:20

I want to thank the member that brought the motion forward. Hopefully, some of my comments have managed to address the consultation process and how, I think, after 30 years Albertans have waited long enough so that they can enjoy some of the legislation that the rest of the country is already enjoying. I'm not able to support this amendment, and I would ask that my colleagues in the House also not support this at this time.

Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, are there any other members who wish to speak to amendment RA1? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak to a reasoned amendment with regard to Bill 17, that

Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be not now read a second time because the Assembly is of the view that the government has not provided Albertans enough time to be consulted on the specific changes being proposed and, further, has not provided assurances that a full economic impact analysis has been completed detailing any potential negative impact on the economic well-being of Albertans.

Last week, Mr. Speaker, we came to a point in time where the Minister of Labour decided that it's time to put forward Bill 17, the Labour Relations Code and the Employment Standards Code amendment act. What we see here is a minister that has thrown together a document that got plunked on our desks stapled together, not completely, properly finished, I would suggest rushed at the end of a session, and where this government is now proposing that we push this through before the end of session.

I would suggest that the Minister of Labour needs to probably focus more on creating jobs, creating an environment of stability, and creating an environment for many of the unemployed workers that we've seen in our province over the last couple of years, where we've seen many people not being able to find work. We have a Minister of Labour that has been so focused on creating a bill that is not necessarily going to help create any new jobs and that, I would suggest, possibly is creating more instability within the workplace, within the investment community, and more uncertainty on whether or not we will be able to create the good-paying jobs in the future that we have been able to enjoy over the past few decades.

When I look at this bill, Mr. Speaker, I consider that this bill is not fair to workers, who are having their rights taken away, the rights to a secret ballot, and it's not fair to entrepreneurs trying to create jobs and prosperity. We have had relative labour peace for decades now. I would suggest that employers and employees have been working together collaboratively in the best interests of everyone and, at the end of the day, have been able to move forward in a collaborative manner, enjoying the mutual benefits of success, where employers and employees have been able to reap the benefits of a workplace that rewards each according to their needs.

Now we have a Minister of Labour who claims, after 30 years of relative work peace, that something is wrong. When we look at a situation that has been going quite well and working quite well, you've got to ask the question: why? If it's not broken, why? Why are we trying to fix something that is not necessarily broken?

Now, granted, Mr. Speaker, we have portions of this bill that are speaking to the Employment Standards Code. You know, we in the opposition have advocated for splitting the bill into two portions. The compassionate care components of this bill are separate from the labour code changes and should be treated as such. They should be two separate bills. How union certification operates, for instance, is an entirely different subject than whether or not workers should be able to take protected leave for compassionate care, for caring for sick or dying loved ones; for being able to take time off when they're caught in a domestic violence situation; and those types of things. Having their workplace or their job protected during those times of crisis is an important part of this legislation.

But to lump it all together, the employment standards and Labour Relations Code amendments, is saying to me that the government is trying to hide something, that they're trying to cover up what would be typically viewed as concerning legislation that is playing to their union bosses and the people that are part of the NDP governance structure in their party and playing to those individuals and those organizations that are expecting this government to make union certification easier, to simplify it. The minister has called it simplifying union certification.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that there has not been enough consultation with everyday Albertans, stakeholders, our job creators, and our investors in this province to get a good understanding of what the impact is going to be on our economy, on our job situation. I would suggest that if the NDP sincerely wanted to get this right, they would take the time to do it right. With 36 days of consultation, primarily on employment standards, and the four come-and-be-told meetings we heard about, where if you were invited, you were allowed to attend, I don't necessarily believe that that was fulsome consultation that is helpful to improving the investment climate and the job-creation climate within this province. It appears to me to be somewhat underhanded and disingenuous to the proper steps needing to be taken to ensure that all Albertans recognize that this government is working on their behalf and not on behalf of their union bosses.

The amendment would essentially say: take the time to do proper consultation over the summer. You know, we need to know the economic impact assessments on the investment climate and have proper evidence to get an understanding of whether the moves that are being taken at this time to essentially change our Labour Relations Code are going to actually help create jobs within this province.

We have for the last couple of months been asking many questions of the Minister of Labour, when she announced the labour review, and trying to get an understanding of what process she would be taking to ensure that proper consultation is being done and to ensure that all stakeholders were able to be at the table and discuss the changes that were being proposed. Many of the stakeholders had been writing letters to myself and to the Premier and to the Minister of Labour and to others, and we tabled many of those letters here in the House, Mr. Speaker, based on the fact that stakeholders felt that they were not being adequately consulted with. They were asking this government to slow down, take the time, extend the consultation period, and enhance the consultation period to make sure that all people that were interested in being part of that consultation had the opportunity to actually be a part of it and to learn and understand what this government was proposing.

9:30

But this government decided that they knew better and that they know better. Apparently, they think they know better than the people that actually do create the jobs in this province. It's quite concerning to me that we have a government that is plowing ahead with ideological legislation at a time when many Albertans are looking to the Minister of Labour to come forward with some type of hope, some sign of hope, some indication, some signal that she is actually concerned about the people that are out of work, that she is actually concerned that we need to create a stable investment climate that will create jobs and help these people to be able to provide for their families, to be able to provide for their communities, and to have a healthy lifestyle that we can all enjoy.

The Minister of Labour, who is also, apparently, by coincidence, the minister responsible for democratic reform, is introducing a bill here with regard to Labour Relations Code amendments. I would suggest that the minister responsible for democratic reform or renewal or whatever the title is should be appalled that this government, that the Minister of Labour is introducing a bill that essentially takes away the secret ballot right of the employee, however you spin it. Some have decided that, no, the secret ballot is still there. But when we get to the levels of 65 per cent, the minister decided: "Well, that's good enough. Enough union members here, enough members signing cards. Whether they're signing cards with full information being given to them or not, 65 per cent seems like a good number, so let's go ahead and certify that union."

I believe that that is going against the very pillars of democracy that we've been able to enjoy in this country for many years. We need to protect those democratic rights, and we need to be sure that individuals, employees in this case, are protected from other individuals that would use force or use other types or means of encouragement that possibly are not completely accurate or are possibly somewhat misleading, that would take these individuals down a path when they were not fully informed of what path they were taking.

It's interesting, and I've been thinking about this for the last few days, since the bill was introduced. I wonder if this government would be okay if 65 per cent of voters decided that it's time to decertify this government. You know, if you had a petition and 65 per cent of voters signed the petition and said, "We want this government out," would this government decide: "Yeah. That's good representation. Let's honour that. Let's shut it down, and let's go to the voters for a new election." I would suggest that possibly the government would say: "No, no. That's not going to work." We do need to protect the democratic rights of all individuals and in this case of employees that are being approached with regard to union membership and being approached with regard to unionizing a workplace.

I find it somewhat disingenuous. You know, Mr. Speaker, unions are big business. They're big business, just like any other business, and the union executives are in it for the dollars. At the end of the day, that's what drives unions, dollars. For anybody to think that unions are necessarily all for the worker and for the employee and for the rights of the people, that would essentially be looking through rose-coloured glasses, to think that, yeah, it's not about the dollars.

Unions are big business, and at the end of the day union executives are arguably bosses of this government. We look at the NDP government, the New Democratic Party, their governance structure, and we have union executives sitting on their board. They have a right to a position on the board. I would suggest that these big businesses, these unions, these executives are using this government. They're using this government for their business development strategy.

I would suggest that the unions in Alberta have essentially – they want to do things. They want the Minister of Labour to simplify things in their favour just so that they can take on more business, have more business, create more income. They would like us to believe that they're just in it . . .

The Speaker: Are there any questions under 29(2)(a) to the Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock? Any members under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing and hearing none, are there any other members who wish to speak to the amendment?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment RA1 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 9:37 a.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Speaker in the chair]

For the motion:

Cooper	Gill	Starke
Cyr	Pitt	Strankman
Fildebrandt	Schneider	van Dijken
Fraser	Smith	Yao

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	Miller
Bilous	Horne	Miranda
Ceci	Jansen	Nielsen
Connolly	Kazim	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Kleinsteuber	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Schmidt
Dach	Loyola	Schreiner
Dang	Luff	Sigurdson
Feehan	Malkinson	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	McCuaig-Boyd	Sweet
Ganley	McKittrick	Turner
Gray	McLean	Westhead
Hinkley	McPherson

Totals:	For – 12	Against – 38
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment RA1 lost]

The Speaker: Hon. members, I believe we're back to discussion on the main motion, Bill 17.

The hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to speak to Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. This bill aims to hide amendments to the Alberta Labour Relations Code that tip the scales heavily in favour of organized labour by wrapping them in smart, common-sense, compassionate updates to the Employment Standards Code. I'm sure the government hopes that one of two things comes out of this political sleight of hand: either they shame Albertans into supporting the labour relations amendments, which in no way reflect the modern realities of employee-employer relationships in Alberta; or they equate the opposition to labour relations amendments with opposition to the employment standards updates and brand us all as villains. But that couldn't be further from the truth.

For the record, my colleagues and I wholeheartedly support the job-protected leave provisions that would prevent employees from losing their jobs for things like taking time off to care for critically ill children or flee a domestic violence situation. Of course we do. To suggest otherwise is plainly untrue and a wilful attempt to mislead Albertans. But then again, Mr. Speaker, I'm not surprised that this is the level that this government would stoop to. It's behaviour that we've come to expect from the NDP. If they can't win on the strength of their own arguments, they spear their opponents with flat-out lies. If this government was confident that its proposed changes to the Labour Relations Code were anything other than a quid pro quo to NDP union friends, then they would let those amendments stand on their own.

But by combining these amendments with common-sense updates to the Employment Standards Code in the same bill, the NDP is actually admitting it has no confidence that Albertans would accept the pro-union, anti-employer provisions in this bill on their own. Why won't Albertans accept these provisions on their own, Mr. Speaker? Well, could it be the pitiful 36-day consultation, which in reality is an insult to every employer in this province? Thirty-six days is not nearly enough time to adequately consult with job creators on legislation that will have a major impact on how they run their businesses and how much it will cost them to keep their doors open.

The Minister of Labour likes to brag that a thousand employers took part in the consultation. Well, considering there are more than 169,000 businesses in Alberta, the reality is that she consulted with less than 1 per cent of Alberta's employers, yet the minister insists that this was enough to get an accurate read on the business community and their concerns. What we heard from stakeholders is that it was not.

On April 11 the president and CEO of Alberta Chambers of Commerce sent a letter to the Labour minister to outline his members' concerns with the consultation process. He said:

No matter how modest the scope for the review, [the government's] methods and timelines for engaging employers does not constitute as widespread consultation.

He goes on to recommend that the minister extend the consultation period and make a greater effort to meaningfully engage employers across the province.

The Alberta chambers went on to say that the government's approach to consultation left his organization deeply concerned the outcomes for this and related labour legislative reviews have been predetermined, and are little more than "windshield wiper" legislation where changes in labour legislation [are] the rewards of regime change.

Mr. Speaker, that is a scathing indictment of this government's consultation process if I ever heard one. Given that the minister refused to extend the consultation and engage in a meaningful way with the employers and job creators across the province, I would say that the Alberta chambers' concerns about predetermined outcomes are well founded.

Then there's the removal of the secret ballot for union certification. The government cites the potential for employer intimidation as the rationale behind a 65 per cent threshold and a six-month card-signing period. But surely they can acknowledge that there's just as much potential for unions to intimidate employees into signing. If at the end of that period they have between 40 and 65 per cent of support but have failed to reach the magic threshold, then the employees get their secret ballot vote. But realistically by the time the secret ballot rolls around, everyone will know who the holdouts are, which defeats the purpose entirely.

I've listened to some of the government members that insist the secret ballot for union certification remains in the Alberta Labour Relations Code. That may be true, Mr. Speaker, but it will continue to exist in name only. After this bill is rammed down Albertans' throats in the middle of the night sometime in the next few weeks, it certainly won't exist in practice.

Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that the proposed changes to both the labour code and the Employment Standards Code are completely unrelated. The only reason they appear together in the same bill is to provide the government with political cover, the same political cover that Amanda Jensen provided when they brought her into this Chamber last week and used her as a shield to defend against any criticism of this proposed legislation. It was a shameful exploitation of an Albertan's hardship, and the Minister of Labour should be embarrassed for using this woman to serve her political agenda.

We've heard many of my colleagues on the opposition benches agree that there are a great many proposed changes to the Employment Standards Code that we could wholeheartedly agree with, but to package them with major changes to the Labour Relations Code and make it even harder to own and operate a business in this province, Mr. Speaker, is dirty pool. Considering the fact that the majority of the businesses in Alberta are small and medium-sized enterprises and these small companies employ more than 80 per cent of the entire workforce in our province, the government's proposed labour relations amendments have potential to put a great many Albertans out of work, and we simply can't support them.

The lie that the government consistently tells Albertans, that big business is the target of the majority of their changes . . .

10:00

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'd just caution you. You know the sensitivity to the word "lie."

Mr. Fraser: Fair enough. I retract that.

But saying that big business is the target of their changes, Mr. Speaker – well, big businesses can afford it. Big business can live with a nominal amount being shaved off their massive profits. But let me repeat the statistic that I cited for the benefit of the members on the government side: 80 per cent of the entire workforce is employed by small and medium-sized enterprises, not big business. These companies just can't afford it, full stop.

When the government took office in 2015, Alberta's signature entrepreneurial spirit was strong. People from across the country and the world knew that if you had a dream of owning your own business, the best place to do it was in Alberta. But with hikes to personal and corporate income taxes, massive increases to the minimum wage, and, of course, the carbon tax, it's getting harder and harder for these Albertans to keep their dreams alive. When these businesses fail as the costs imposed on them by governments eat up their razor-thin profit margins, they have to lay off their employees. This government ought to think about that the next time they congratulate themselves for sticking it to big business.

Again, Mr. Speaker, while I support the common-sense, compassionate, job-protected leave provisions in this bill, I can't support legislation that will put more small and medium-sized enterprises out of business, resulting in even more job losses for hard-working Albertans. I strongly urge the government to separate the Employment Standards Code amendments from the Labour Relations Code amendments and allow the Assembly to debate them separately.

I want to speak on a personal note. First of all, when I say this, I'm not saying that I don't support unions. That's false. I'm not saying that I don't support that the employment standards need to be strengthened to support Alberta families. But I come from a unique place: I was the president of CUPE 3421 and I was also the son of a father who owned a small business in this province for over 40 years. I can tell you that my father conducted his business in a way that if I am half the man he is by the time I am dead, then I have achieved something because I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that when he could give, he gave; where he could train, he trained. Many of those people that worked for my father now own their businesses because of what he taught them. At the height of the business he had 25 employees. That's 25 families. He had good benefits, good vacation time. He was a caring and compassionate employer.

But, Mr. Speaker, at the same time, with that, with being an employer and being responsible, there are times where you have adversity with your employees, especially as you start to grow those small and medium-sized businesses. All I'm saying, when it comes to the Labour Relations Code, is that there is a far more fulsome debate that we can have about the code that would strengthen unions, that would benefit the members of the unions, not the executive of the unions but the members of the unions, because that's really who we're talking about when we want to strengthen those. I can tell you that, yes, there are bad employees, but there are also bad unions. And the ability to open up the Labour Relations Code and have a fulsome debate separately from the workplace standards would serve all members of this House better and all people in this province better and the members of those unions. That's all I'm saying by this.

To wrap this up and to vilify people one way or the other is just not right. Mr. Speaker, what I can tell you is that this caucus does support those compassionate, common-sense goals and changes to the Alberta labour relations standards. I can tell you that this caucus would also welcome a fulsome debate, a fair debate around the changes in the Labour Relations Code.

Mrs. Littlewood: Before you vote it in.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, it is interesting. I'm speaking of experience. I'm speaking with passion and care for this province. To be labelled something different is unparliamentary. It is immature. I respect this government. They're going to do what they're going to do. At the end of the day, Albertans will be the judge, not me, but I think it's fair that everybody in this Chamber have the opportunity to speak without being vilified, without being predetermined. We have talked about this before. We have talked about human rights and not labelling somebody by a title or a party or a gender. It needs to stop. We all need to grow more wise in this Chamber, more mature in this Chamber, to respect the difference of opinion and figure out how those different opinions can come together to serve Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, once again I ask and urge the government to separate these two pieces of legislation so Albertans can be respected in their points of view. Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there any questions or comments for the Member for Calgary-South East under 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Strankman: Mr. Speaker, it is indeed an honour to rise and comment because as the member was making his marvellous delivery, I noticed that there was heckling coming from the other side, particularly at the most passionate moment of the member's delivery, and I was wondering how he felt about that.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, I can say, with a degree of experience in this House, that we're all passionate. We all take a position. I do believe that everybody in this Chamber is trying their best to represent the constituents that elected them. I think, again, that not only do we do a disservice to this Chamber, these buildings where so many great decisions have been made on behalf of Albertans of all governments at some point – the member asked me how I feel about those things. Again, I can only speak for myself. I know I'm not perfect. In fact, just the other day – you know, I too get wrapped up emotionally, but I do make a point that when I feel that I maybe have offended another member, I take the time outside of this Chamber to apologize, to explain myself, to get to know that member's point of view.

Mr. Speaker, we need to remind ourselves that in this Chamber it is not politics; it is service. It is service to Albertans in the most sincere way. I don't have to come to this Chamber. When I wake up, I don't say: I have to come to work today. I get to come to this Chamber, and I feel deeply privileged. I feel honoured, and I'll continue to serve in the best manner, regardless of heckles, regardless of point of view. All I can do is to be sincere. I think all we can ask of all members is to be sincere, be passionate, and try to be respectful.

The Speaker: Any other comments under 29(2)(a)?

Are there any other individuals who – the Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock. To the motion, hon. member, the main motion?

Mr. van Dijken: Yes, for second reading. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The fact is this. The compassionate care components of this bill are separate from the labour code changes and, I believe, should be treated as such. How union certification operates, for instance, is an entirely different subject than whether or not workers are able to take protected leave. The Official Opposition along with the other opposition parties have made this point very clear. We believe that this bill should have been split into two separate bills in that we would be able to move forward in a unanimous manner with regard to many of the Employment Standards Code changes that are happening or that have been presented in this bill, and we would be able to move forward in a way that we could get these types of changes to Albertans.

I've got to reflect, Mr. Speaker, on how this government has been fairly disingenuous right from the start of the labour review and how the Minister of Labour continued to answer questions with regard to the Labour Relations Code report that Mr. Sims was going to present. We asked questions, whether or not we'd be able to see that report. We asked questions about the labour relations act, and the minister would continually deflect and deflect towards the employment standards, trying to make it look like they actually care about Albertans.

10:10

I must say that it's quite concerning that I see that the minister and the government and the members of the governing party are buying into this mantra, that is being essentially proposed to us by their big union bosses, on how they claim to be all about protecting Albertans and that the employment standards of Albertans are top of mind for them. Yet we see implementation dates with regard to the compassionate care components of this bill – not till January will we see these parts of the bill implemented, yet the other parts with regard to the Labour Relations Code and so on will be implemented by September 1. This is concerning, Mr. Speaker.

The intent of this bill by the title – it's talking about fair and family-friendly workplaces, yet I'm not sure that that's the true intent of this minister. It appears to me that this minister is hiding behind the employment standards portion of the bill to try and cloak a certain amount of secrecy behind the labour relations part of the bill. This should concern all Albertans. This should be top of mind for all Albertans, that big business, big unions are essentially utilizing this government and the members of this governing party as tools in their hands.

Many people think that unions are only there for the sole purpose of representing their members, but I would suggest, after many years of watching and seeing how unions operate, that they have become more about themselves than about their employees and the people that they are supposed to represent. It's more about the money that they take in than about making sure that they're doing proper representation of their people. It's quite often that we see that it's more about their political activism as opposed to working on collective bargaining for their employees.

Mr. Speaker, I have a lot of concerns on how this minister has decided to move forward with regard to the changes in the Labour Relations Code and the Employment Standards Code. I have grave concerns on how the process of consulting with Albertans and the labour review, that was done in March – a 36-day labour review, I would suggest, is not nearly fulsome enough in order to ensure that we are hearing from all stakeholders in Alberta.

The Minister of Labour has a job to do, and that is to ensure that workplaces are safe and that the employees there are being taken care of but also to provide an environment that allows job creators to come to this province and invest in this province and show that they are providing good, well-paying jobs so that all Albertans can move forward with a standard of living that we have been able to enjoy for many decades now.

But this government is rushing through major changes, Mr. Speaker, a 124-page bill, that was introduced just last week, I believe, on Wednesday. Here we are, we're a week later, and we're all expected and Albertans are expected to be able to discuss it intelligently and debate it and reflect on it. The government introducing this right at the end of session, I would suggest, is also providing a certain amount of cover for the fact that they are not prepared to properly go out and consult and defend the direction of this bill.

My concerns primarily, Mr. Speaker, are on how the labour review was done. We had many times where we were trying to encourage the minister to enhance and get more input, extend the consultation period, yet, no, the government has decided that they're just going to move ahead based on their ideology and based on what they believe is the right way forward, not necessarily consulting with Albertans to get an understanding of what Albertans believe is the right way forward.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that in Alberta we've had relative labour peace for over 30 years, and over those 30 years employers and employees have both been able to be quite successful in maintaining a standard of living in this province that most people in the world would be very envious of. I believe that it's our role as government, as Members of this Legislative Assembly to continue to provide an environment for opportunity to succeed and for investment to actually come to this province and see an opportunity for success.

When we have over 30 years of relative labour peace, it would signal to me that the system is not broken. Yet this government has decided that: "Oh, the system is broken. We have to change the system. The Labour Relations Code is broken." Who decided that the Labour Relations Code was broken? Did Albertans come to them and say: "We need this change. This is not working"? Employees didn't come to them saying that this is not working. It was their big union bosses that came to them and said: this isn't working; this isn't right. Now Albertans are going to be sitting holding the bag.

I think it's quite concerning that this government, that's supposed to be here to serve the people of Alberta, is more about serving their big union bosses and moving forward with an agenda, I would suggest, that is trying to simplify – and these are words from the minister's mouth, to simplify – the union certification process. Why? Why is that necessary? Because the big union bosses have decided that it's necessary. It makes their life easier, Mr. Speaker. Why are they using this government just to make their lives easier? They have a failed business plan, I would suggest, that they have not been able to implement properly for what they would like to see. Their business development strategy is not growing at the rate that they would like to see, and now they're using the government to put in rules that will simplify their work. Is it the role of government to simplify the work for these big union executives so that they can get more members, so that they can grow their membership? I don't believe so.

I believe it's the role of government to ensure that we have the ability to protect the job opportunities and create jobs for everyday Albertans to the best of our ability. Yet this government is bending over backwards for their big union bosses. It's quite concerning that they come forward under the guise of compassionate care leave and under the shell of employment standards improvements to try and hide from Albertans what their true intent with this Labour Relations Code and this bill is. I think all Albertans can see through this. I think all Albertans will recognize that this government is not acting on behalf of Albertans or serving everyday Albertans.

The Member for Calgary-South East had mentioned small businesses creating 80 per cent of the jobs within this province. What is this government doing to help small business to create more jobs? Well, let's talk about unionization. That should create more jobs.

I would suggest that this bill is creating more uncertainty, more instability within the province, possibly on a road to creating an environment where we cannot enjoy the labour peace that we've had for many decades, where employers and employees came together and saw that there's opportunity for everybody to succeed and that they were able to move forward in a collaborative manner and enjoy the ability to create wealth in this province and to share that.

10:20

For government members to believe that the small-business employers of this province have been taking advantage of employees, I would suggest, is few and far between. Having been a small-business operator and having had employees, the reality is that if you're not providing the necessary programs and compensation and benefits that would be competitive within the job market – and that's what it is; it's a job market. Our labour, the work that we do, is a market. It is a commodity just like anything else. We have to recognize that the ability for us to actually have work and have compensation for that work comes from a marketplace. We can think that we can take more out of the marketplace and it won't affect the market, but it does.

If we get into a situation where we have now put in place guidelines that are legislated down to businesses and those businesses are not able to change their business plans and work within those guidelines with regard to the competitive marketplace in which they exist, those small businesses close. That's the reality. Those small businesses decide that this cannot continue. They close, and those jobs are gone.

So, Mr. Speaker, we need a government that recognizes where we have significant breaks in our system, where we need to do better within our system of employment standards and labour relations. But for this government to come forward with this bill and try to hide behind the employment standards improvements that are in this bill while implementing their agenda from their union bosses, that should concern all Albertans, and I think Albertans will judge them for that accordingly. They will be judged accordingly for the way they're moving forward with their ideology.

It is concerning that a government would serve the interests of big union, of their big union executives over and above the interests of all Albertans. We've received many letters – I've received many letters, and the minister has received many of those same letters, and the Premier has received many of those same letters – from individuals, from stakeholders, from businesses, from companies essentially saying: "Whoa. Slow down. We were not properly consulted."

The Speaker: Hon. members, under 29(2)(a), any questions or comments to the Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock?

Seeing and hearing none, the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to speak on Bill 17 today. I want to preface my comments by stating that one of the beauties of a legislative Chamber and the design of a legislative Chamber is such that many people from a range of backgrounds and from a range of experiences and from a range of, you know, let us say, preconceived biases come together to exchange ideas and to exchange arguments in a hope to be able to hammer out the best legislation possible for the province. That's the idea. At times, unfortunately too often, I think that we fall short of that ideal.

I'm going to try to forge ahead today, relating some of my personal experiences and how they relate specifically to clauses within Bill 17 and where I support several areas of Bill 17 but where I also have grave reservations about Bill 17. I will say that one of the concerns that I do have – and it's been mentioned before. You can use a number of different metaphors to describe this, you know, whether you call it a Trojan Horse, whereby something that looks attractive is accepted in order to hide something much more nefarious inside. I use a much more simple metaphor. It's what we used to do when we had difficulty giving medication to patients. Some medications just don't taste good to dogs and cats, but if you wrap it up with something that they really like, they'll swallow it, and they won't even know that they got it. That's exactly what this government is doing with this piece of legislation. It's wrapping up something that's distasteful to the vast majority of Albertans into something that we can all agree with.

We're asking this government to unwrap that bitter pill. We're asking this government to separate the bitter pill and make sure that that bitter pill is something that the majority of Albertans want and not just a small group of union leaders. But no. That's not what they want. In fact, they very definitely want to take out the balling gun – and you can look that up if you're not sure what that is – and they want to ramrod this bitter pill, coated with whatever it is that will make it more palatable to Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I want to go back and talk a little bit about biases. I grew up in a union household. [interjections] Wait a second. You might not like this all. My father was a reluctant dues-paying member of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America local P243 for the majority of his working career, until that union was amalgamated into the United Food and Commercial Workers. I, too, was a member of that union for two summers. I will tell you that the issue that my father ran into repeatedly as a worker, as someone trained in Europe as a skilled tradesperson – being a butcher in Europe is something that actually takes several years of apprenticeship, and you eventually become a journeyman butcher – was that he faced intimidation and bullying throughout his career because of his level of work ethic.

My dad showed up early for work. He typically showed up half an hour early so that he could keep his knives sharp prior to going to work. He stayed late. He accepted overtime whenever it was offered. He would not go on the unauthorized – and I won't use the term because it's unparliamentary. But in addition to coffee breaks and lunch breaks, the union encouraged all workers to take additional breaks. I guess we'll call them smoke breaks because a lot of the workers did smoke. They were additional 20-minute breaks that were not part of the working schedule, two of them during an eight-hour shift. Mr. Speaker, my father refused to take those. My father was called all manner of names and insults because he believed that it was his duty to the employer to work for the wage he was being paid.

Many times – because, like I say, he became quite senior working at the plant – the union asked him to become a steward or to become a leader within the union leadership, and he consistently refused. There were a number of work stoppages over my childhood where my father was either locked out or there was strike action taken. I can tell you that those were the most nerve-wracking days of my childhood. I can remember my mother turning on the television each and every single day to see if the strike at Canada Packers was over.

So I understand that the members opposite see the good side of unions and that they have a very pro-union outlook on this and they see the positives of unions. I get that. I say that, absolutely, there is an important place for unions to play within the basic protection of workers' rights. I would not want to be in a society where we did not have an organized labour union movement because I think it provides a very important balance within our society and within our economy. But that being said, to suggest that everything about unions is positive and everything about unions is universally good has not been my experience, and it's not been the experience of a lot of other Albertans, too. That's something that I think you need to recognize. We understand that you are positive on unions. That's fine. You absolutely have the right to hold that opinion, but not all Albertans do.

10:30

Now, moving forward, after my experience for the two summers that I worked at Canada Packers, where I was a union member from 1985 to 1991, I sat on Lloydminster city council, and during that period of time I was twice involved as the city's representative on the negotiating committee on the renegotiation of the out-of-scope contract with our union. It happened to be a local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. I will tell you – and many of the people that sat at the table opposite me will tell you the same thing – that at times those negotiations are the biggest waste of time and effort I have ever seen because so much of it is chewed up and wasted in posturing on both sides. These negotiations happen. They each have their hired gun. We had our hired gun. CUPE had their hired gun, and they came to the table with a whole bunch of provisions and a whole bunch of demands and requests and all the rest of it.

You know, we would go out for a break in the negotiation, and I would talk to the employees that were on the committee because I knew these people. You know, they were folks that came to my business. I knew them from the work that they did, and I'd ask them: are you really wanting this provision or that provision? They'd say: well, not really, but they told us to put it in there because we needed some bargaining chips. I said to myself: you know, I bet we could wrap this thing up in about two hours if we kicked our hired guns out of the room and just sat down face to face, employer to employee, and worked this out, and I think we could come out to an agreement that was amicable. But, no. Instead, we had this very adversarial and drawn-out relationship where, in my mind, the only people that benefited were the hired guns for our side and for their side.

Now, during my time on city council, Mr. Speaker, I was also the chair of our local seniors' lodge. During that period of time the employees at the seniors' lodge made the decision that they wished to become unionized, or they made the decision that they wanted to go through a certification process. Of course, it is their right to do so, and they had a secret ballot to do so, which, in my opinion, is something that is so fundamental and so clearly obvious, that a secret ballot should be the way this should be done, so that there cannot be intimidation, so that there cannot be any public knowledge of how an employee wants to vote, whether yea or nay, and there can be intimidation on either side.

Now, I knew the vast majority of the employees that were working at the lodge, and, you know, some of them asked me, "What do you think?" I said: "You know what? It is your decision. This is your decision. You decide what you feel is best for you and your family." In fact, we were quite specifically told that we were not to speak to the employees, nor were we to indicate to the employees a preference one way or another on the certification vote. That's, to me, as it should be. This carding provision, this 65 per cent provision that's provided for: that's one of a number of bitter pills to swallow. So I've been through a certification process. I get that.

Now, the majority of my adult life, Mr. Speaker, I was a senior partner of our veterinary hospital. We started with two employees. When I retired, in 2011, we had 25 employees. We were not a union shop, but I can tell you that when I read through the provisions that are going to be proposed and many of the provisions that are in here, we've dealt with just about all of those situations in the close to 30 years that I operated our practice. We dealt with many situations of, certainly, bereavement. We dealt with critical illness of a child. We dealt with domestic violence, sadly, for one of our staff members. I guess the only one that we didn't have to deal with was the incidence of death or disappearance of a child.

We provided in most cases, actually, in excess of what was required by the proposed legislation to our employees. Why did we do that? Mr. Speaker, labour – and not just labour in general but your employees – in a small business are your most valuable asset. They're the most valuable thing that you have. They're well trained, they are dedicated, they are passionate, and they are loyal if you create a culture within your business that causes them to want to be loyal. That's what we tried to do in our business.

I think and I have reasonably good evidence that we treated our employees extremely well. We had a number of employees that would leave for one reason or another and then would come back. I think the record on that was one employee who came back five times. She was a great employee. We loved it every time she came back, and we were sad to see her go every time she did, but we said: "You know what? She'll be back." We had employees who came to us after they had left us and said that that was the worst decision they had made, that they loved the job that they did with us, and we had other employees that went on to other things but yearned for the days that they worked for us in our clinic. It's because we treated our employees with respect. We paid them a fair and living wage. We gave them the time off that they needed.

We were ahead of the curve considerably amongst other employers in our category in terms of providing benefits and providing a pension and providing employer contributions to that pension, in terms of giving a number of other benefits to our employees. I think that that package and that respect to our employees were part of the reason that our practice was named business of the year in Lloydminster in 2011 and why we were at one point nominated for small business of the year by the Alberta Chambers of Commerce a number of years ago. It's about respect.

As far as some of the provisions here, you know, I will tell you that the provision for increasing maternity leave from 15 to 16 weeks I'm absolutely in favour of. In terms of compassionate care leave – I want to be very specific here – I'm in favour of increasing it from eight to 27 weeks. Compassionate care leave is in place in Alberta because of a private member's bill that was introduced by a former colleague of mine, who's now an MP, Matt Jeneroux. Matt was the Member for Edmonton-South West. In a private member's bill he introduced compassionate care leave, and it was supported by the members of this House. I'm quite happy to see the proposal to expand it to 27 weeks. I think that's a very positive thing. Before members opposite suggest that nothing was ever done for employees, that's simply wrong, so I think that is something that you have to recognize.

You know, moving on, there are other concerns that I have. I guess one of the concerns that I have with this bill is that just about universally the notice required for the return from these various leaves is only 48 hours. Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, to be fair to the employer, who has provided leave and in some cases will have had to hire somebody to replace that person on leave, I think 48 hours is a little too short. Now, in some sections that are being amended, that notice is two weeks. If two weeks is too long, okay. But 48 hours, in my view, is really short. There's a lot of adjustment that has to be made when an employee returns, and I would suggest – and I'll be making an amendment to this effect – that something around a week would be more reasonable for both employer and employee.

Mr. Speaker, I want to come back and just conclude my comments by saying that this legislation could be passed, and some of the sweet outer coating that you put on the outside of this bitter pill could be swallowed very easily by all members of this Legislature. I urge the members of the government to consider doing that. As far as the bitter pill goes, if that's something that they want to do as well, well, I'd encourage longer consultation, but if they want to have the debate on that, let's have the debate on that. There is broad agreement on a lot of areas of this bill. Certainly, I agree with a lot of areas of this bill, and I would urge this government to reconsider having this go through all as one large, unpalatable package.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore under 29(2)(a).

Mr. Nielsen: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to thank the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster for sharing his story about his father's experience. I guess I just wanted to offer a bit of a comment on that. You know, when I hear things about people taking additional breaks, I had to deal with some of my own members in my own workplace at Lucerne who tended to take those extra things, and I always had to caution them: that's not a very good idea because the company could come back to you and call it time theft, okay? When I heard the story about your father getting pressured to take additional breaks, that was definitely very concerning. It's too bad that he had to experience those types of things. I know, certainly, that I myself would never ever coach a member to do that kind of thing because it puts them considerably at risk.

10:40

With regard to starting early and staying late, I saw members that did the same thing in my workplace, too. You can't help but commend them for their loyalty, for their drive to want to do the absolute best that they could possibly do for their employer. But just a little bit of caution that I always used to give members with that type of enthusiasm: should something happen and they are hurt during that period when they've started early and they're not actually on the clock or they've stayed late and they're not actually on the clock, there's a risk that they could not be covered with regard to an injury. Again, I certainly would never coach members to do that, but kudos to your dad for wanting to be that level of employee, that example for everybody to follow.

The other comment I just wanted to make was with regard to how you used to run your business, that culture that you were building to create that loyalty, and I have to commend you on that. You know, that is the type of thing that we like to try to promote companies to do, to set that example, to lead the way for everybody else to try to match those same standards. So, first, thank you for doing that.

The one thing that I've learned from my time with the labour movement is that when employers are doing that kind of work to create that culture, you know, where the loyalty is there and you're willing to put in absolutely everything for that business, that is to be commended. But I've also noticed that those workplaces very, very, very rarely will ever become union shops because of that desire to create that atmosphere for their employees. They don't need it. I just wanted to share those comments with the member.

Again, I'm hoping that we can move forward with this as a package because, you know, when we're talking about compassionate leaves and all the different labour regulations, that's all encompassed. That's called labour language; that's called labour rules.

Again, thanks to the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster for sharing those stories and for being an example employer for everybody else to follow.

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to thank the Member for Edmonton-Decore for his comments, and I have only a very brief few seconds to reply. I will tell you that with regard to what he mentioned, you know, about being early and staying late and not being covered, Dad clocked in, Dad clocked out, and Dad checked to make sure that he was covered. There was, actually, a doctor on-site at the plant. He was also our family doctor. He was also, sadly, the doctor that diagnosed my father with leukemia when he turned 60. But he worked an additional five years at the plant because he loved it. He loved his work.

I do want to say that I'm glad to hear that in your relations with your union members you discouraged what I'll call the abuse of the employer. You know, there has to be a balance here. There has to be a give-and-take here.

Finally, with regard to the way we ran our own clinic, you know, there's no legislation that required me to do those things. I mean, now there is and now there will be, and that's fine, but . . . [The time limit for questions and comments expired] Anyway, thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak to Bill 17 today, and I just want to touch on three main points: some of the things that I and we support in this piece of legislation, some of my concerns with this sort of all-encompassing belief from the government that unions act without any sort of bullying or intimidation and that they all act purely, and then just highlight some of my concerns with what may in fact be some ethical breaches on behalf of this government when it comes to their connections to big labour and exactly how that may affect this particular piece of legislation.

First and foremost, like many, I support significant aspects of this piece of legislation, and those sections have been clearly identified by a number of my colleagues and by the member who just spoke. It is very clear that this piece of legislation does many good things. It's also clear, as the previous member rose to speak about, that those good and important things that are taking place in this piece of legislation are being used as political cover for systematically changing the way that unionization happens to place an unfair advantage in the direction of the union as well as against the employer. There must be a better balance struck.

From the get-go this piece of legislation has been a concern, particularly around the consultation. I know that my colleagues have spoken at length with respect to the consultation on this piece of legislation, the 36 days, the fact that we never actually saw the report from Mr. Sims, the fact that the minister dodged questions day in and day out about whether or not they would be ramming this piece of legislation through at the end of session, would they be consulting over the summer, all of which was: dodge, dodge, dodge.

Now we've seen exactly what their plan was the whole way along, to rush this piece of legislation, these 124 pages of legislation, through in the dying days of a session while we spent significant periods of time debating things that there was widespread agreement on. Lots of times that can be a good thing. But when we are talking about tax statutes amendment acts or securities amendment acts, which in many respects are tidying up legislation, unifying pieces of legislation, it's disappointing.

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

I think that happened for two reasons. One, the government hadn't yet sent their bill to the printers. I think that's very evident in how the initial bill was presented to the House on photocopied paper, rushed – rushed – through the night, I can only imagine, until yesterday or the day before, when we actually got a copy back from the printers that looks much more like this piece of legislation, not like the one that was introduced, that was merely photocopied in the back of the Minister of Labour's office while they were efforting to try and get it here before session.

One of the reasons why I think they did that was to try to put some appropriate amount of space between the consultations that took place and when the bill was introduced. We have these conflicting sorts of pressures: one, to get it introduced, so we're rushing it into the House; and, two, needing to put space between when we actually closed the consultation and having it not look like it was already written. But at every turn this is not a good way to legislate.

While the government has done a horrible job of legislating on lots of different issues and a horrible job of consulting on a number of different pieces of legislation, there are a couple of bright points for the government – I'm more than happy to point those out – particularly around the MGA and the way that the piece of legislation was introduced. They took some time, consulted widely with municipalities, left it on the Order Paper, spent an entire break between sessions to ensure that they got it right. In many, many respects this is a great way to legislate.

So far we've tried to send this bill to committee so that we could have some further discussion about it. We've provided a reason why it shouldn't proceed, around the need for more consultation. It wasn't just us that said it. Many business owners, many nonlabour groups that have significant concern, who have felt like they haven't been consulted, are raising those same concerns.

10:50

The government clearly understands how to do this process, but what they pick and choose to do the process on is what's very concerning. Pieces of legislation like this, that potentially the government will feel some pain on, they don't consult on, they rush through the House in the dying days of a legislative session. Pieces of legislation that they don't particularly like or that they're unsure what to do with they send to committee, like Bill 203 from the hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler, that was specifically to do with funding announcements during elections, that would have had a negative impact on the government. First it got killed, then revived, then sent to committee to die again. On another Bill 203 the government is a little unsure of what to do, so they want to have more consultation around changing the clocks. Listen, I support that consultation.

This piece of legislation is critically important to the future of our province, yet they don't want to spend the summer consulting on it. They don't want to do that, and they're doing it under the guise of needing to get compassionate care and the other important issues in this bill passed. Well, Madam Speaker, if that was the case, when do you think the coming-into-force date for such an important clause would be? Would you say before the summer, when the bill passes; after the summer; or in January next year? I would have thought that if that was the primary purpose, it would have been when the bill passes. On all of the issues that they are saying are the most important pieces of this bill, they're waiting till January of next year to put them into place, but on all of the things that aren't as important according to them, doing away with secret ballots, no, they come into force in September, just after the summer.

So they're sending some very, very, very conflicting messages about what the purpose of Bill 17 actually is. Now, I believe that they are genuine in their desire to have these important changes, but they're certainly talking out of both sides of their mouth when it comes to the process, when it comes to the coming-into-force dates. Albertans should be concerned about exactly what the motivations are behind a piece of legislation like this.

Now, I've also heard the members on that side speak significantly about how this doesn't have to do with their big union bosses and friends in labour, but the connections to those groups are so deep that it's very difficult to not draw the conclusion that that's what Bill 17 is really about.

For example, Madam Speaker, you'll know that two members of the executive of the AFL are also automatically guaranteed as two members of the executive council of the NDP. Interestingly enough, who were the individuals that were invited to every single one of the consultation meetings?

Mrs. Aheer: Who was it?

Mr. Cooper: It was members of the AFL. I know that it's hard to believe. But you have these very, very close connections of big union bosses in the province to the political party of the NDP, and now we see the NDP acting on the things that those union bosses wanted.

I do find it interesting. If you look in the NDP platform from the last provincial election – I won't use her name, but she currently sits in the Premier's chair – it was her commitment to you and your family that:

- (2.3) We will strengthen the Conflict of Interest Act . . .

Listen, I also would support such a thing.

. . . to prevent MLAs from using their position to benefit their own financial interests or that of political friends.

I can tell you, Madam Speaker, that you don't put two of your enemies on your political party's executive council. You don't do that.

Now, I understand that the NDP is claiming that they've put two of their enemies on the oil sands advisory council, but you certainly wouldn't do that to a political party. I wouldn't describe the AFL as enemies of the NDP. I would describe them as their friends. There is significant benefit to the AFL when Bill 17 comes into force. I would never presuppose a decision of the Assembly, Madam Speaker, but I've got a good feeling on this one that the government is going to be supporting Bill 17 and that there's going to be a significant net benefit to the AFL, who is the political friend of the NDP.

There certainly seems to be a pretty significant conflict, with the government saying one thing and doing another. Now, you know, Madam Speaker, that I've spoken a significant amount in this House about the government's track record when it comes to saying one thing and doing another.

Cortes-Vargas: You're not the Ethics Commissioner.

Mr. Cooper: And this afternoon we're going to have another example of the government saying one thing and doing another, and I look forward to speaking about that in question period.

I heard the member say, "You're not the Ethics Commissioner," but it will be interesting to see what the Ethics Commissioner has to say about this very issue. I happen to know that my hon. colleague from Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills is literally meeting with the Ethics Commissioner in four minutes to have a discussion about this issue because we have some concerns.

The other thing that's equally as important as what the Ethics Commissioner may or may not say is that just like the Premier, when she was in opposition, recognized that the legislation needed to be strengthened, the Ethics Commissioner has said on numerous occasions that the legislation needs to be strengthened. It's possible that she'll say that there is no personal or financial interest. That doesn't mean that what's happening wouldn't be found to be a conflict of interest otherwise, but because the language in the legislation is such, she may in fact not be able to rule.

A perfect example of that was just this week when I had the opportunity to meet with the Ethics Commissioner on another very, very concerning process that the government is currently engaged in. Even if the Ethics Commissioner wants to rule, she can't tell anybody about it because the legislation prevents her from doing that. The report will go to a minister of the Crown, who may or may not want to tell anyone about it.

So the legislation may in fact prevent the Ethics Commissioner from ruling, but that doesn't mean that there is not a very, very, very clear conflict of interest with the political friends of the NDP. I think that Albertans should be concerned. The best ways to make sure that this doesn't happen are two things: split this bill in two so that we can really, really address the issue; and secondly, consult over the summer so that we can get to the bottom of this and do the right thing.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any other members wishing to speak to second reading?

Seeing none, I'll now call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for second reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 11 a.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	McLean
Babcock	Horne	McPherson
Clark	Jansen	Miller
Connolly	Kazim	Miranda
Coolahan	Kleinstauber	Nielsen
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Dach	Loyola	Schreiner
Dang	Luff	Sigurdson
Feehan	Malkinson	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	McCuaig-Boyd	Turner
Hinkley	McKittrick	Westhead

Against the motion:

Aheer	Pitt	Strankman
Cyr	Schneider	van Dijken
Fildebrandt	Smith	Yao
Gill	Starke

Totals: For – 33 Against – 11

[Motion carried; Bill 17 read a second time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mrs. Pitt: Madam Chair, thank you so much. Before we get started here on the debate for Bill 17, I'd like to make a request that in dealing with Bill 17, the votes be separated so that we can vote on part 1 and part 2 separately: on part 1, the Employment Standards Code, sections 1 to 100, and then on part 2, the Labour Relations Code, sections 101 to 146.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. It's not debatable, so we will continue on with comments, questions, or amendments.

The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair. Again, it is with some concern that I rise to address Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. We've had a lot of discussions around this piece of legislation and the largeness of it. The Member for Airdrie again is trying to put forward an opportunity . . .

Mr. Westhead: Could I just make a point of order?

The Deputy Chair: The Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Point of Clarification

Mr. Westhead: Just a procedural question under order 13(2), that the Speaker explains a decision. With the motion that the Member for Airdrie made, I'm just looking for clarification on if there's a vote required on that motion or how that works.

The Deputy Chair: Basically, it's a request to have the bill be able to be voted on in two parts. It is not debatable; it does not require a vote. It's a request that can be honoured, as the member requests.

Hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View, please continue.

Debate Continued

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you so much. As I was saying, we've had some time to discuss some of the parts of this bill. To my mind, I think there are a lot of giant assumptions that this legislation is either family friendly or fair, and I'm going to go into a little bit about why I'm suggesting that. The title, for me anyway – and I think that I can speak, quite frankly, on behalf of our caucus as well – is inappropriate given some of the contents of this bill.

I'm going to start with the not-fair piece of it. The bill – and I was speaking about this yesterday – opens the door to some extreme strong-arm tactics. If you look at the jurisdictions that have used the ability to have 65 per cent sign their cards, we don't know how they get to that number. Is it through intimidation? Is it through doing what's in the best interest of the person that's sitting beside you in how those cards are signed? Nevertheless, to get to 65 per cent signage on those cards and then to assume that that leads to an automatic doing away with the secret ballot is not fair. In fact, there should be a much lower threshold for triggering that discussion and to trigger an election that is democratic in order to make sure that you're representing workers.

11:20

As has been shown in some of the data, there are a lot of people who vote differently after they've signed their cards than they do if they have the secret ballot. But it's also been shown that having a secret ballot in no way takes away from a union's ability to unionize. In fact, if anything, that democratic process strengthens that union's ability to do that union under that because they've given that ability for people without having any intimidation or influence from anybody else to actually make the decision to unionize. Having a secret ballot actually strengthens a union's ability to defend the decision to unionize. That's one piece that I find is very unfair.

The other piece is salting. The fact that a person can be hired to start working to form a union right away and then leave without considering the impacts of their actions on the company or the employees: that is why a secret ballot is so important. If the decision to unionize is the right one, after that discussion happens, then that group of people should have the right with a secret ballot, without the influence of other people around them, to make the decision as to whether or not they unionize. Like with anything, a democratic process takes time to research. You need to be able to talk to the people around you. You need to make sure that that's actually the right decision for the company. The impacts of that could be huge, and I'll go into that a little bit more.

The Rand formula. This is really interesting. A company now has to collect union dues at the direction of the union – at the direction of the union – instead of the company and the union negotiating that collective agreement. The union doesn't have to ask for that, but if they do, the company cannot say no. So all of a sudden this government has in essence taken away the ability for a company to negotiate their terms. All of a sudden that piece of democracy is gone as well.

So, first of all, we have the ability for intimidation to happen, up to 65 per cent of the cards that are being signed. Now we also have the fact that the union dues are collected at the direction of the union instead of the company. And guess what? It only applies to the private sector. It only applies to the private sector. So you have that piece.

Then the second one – this one is very interesting – is that . . . [interjections]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members.

Mrs. Aheer: . . . there is suspension of dues during an illegal strike. Potentially, Madam Chair, this removes the penalty to the trade union for holding an illegal strike by cutting off the union from their funding. The business now is not collecting the union dues – the union is – and the question that I think we should be asking is: does the union want to strike? Is that the ultimate goal here, that we're actually wanting unions to strike? That is the question, because we have taken away any autonomy from the business to be able to work with the union and have some negotiating powers with those groups in order to make sure that it is in the best interests of all of those workers there.

Another piece I find very interesting is that that does not change for the public sector. Nurses and teachers can still carry on the way that they should, the way that it's been all the time, but the penalty only goes toward trade unions and illegal strikes. That's it. So we're penalizing one particular group of people, cutting them off by allowing them to hold an illegal strike. Explain to me how that's good for business.

Why is this government continuing to attack businesses? Why? You know, they keep saying over and over again that they are pro business. Well, I'm sorry; that is not pro business. How is it that we have one version for one group of people and a different version for the others? How is that working? I mean – wow – the government is showing its true colours. Unbelievable. Potentially, this removes the penalty to the trade union. They are taking away the rights of the business. [interjections]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, government members, we are in Committee of the Whole. There is lots of time for everyone to respond to comments and questions. If you could please keep the tone down to allow respect in the House for all members who are speaking.

Please continue.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair. The interesting thing is that potentially this removes the penalty to the trade union for holding an illegal strike. I'd like to understand how that works. I mean, obviously, there is lots of emotion and passion from the other side. Please explain it to us. I would love an explanation. That would be excellent. If I'm wrong, please explain it to me. I would love it. On top of that, I think it would be great for Albertans to understand and to actually hear from the government how this is going to work and benefit business. I would love to understand that. [interjections] You know, you'll get your opportunity to counteract anything that I'm saying, and I look forward to that discussion.

Okay. Now we're getting to the piece that I think is – this took me a little while. I had to read it over a couple of times. Under the present laws, the way that they look, we have something called division 25. This is something that's already in the legislation, and what happens with that is that presently, if there is an illegal strike, the union is held accountable, potentially by being fined $1,000 a day. This is good, and that's still in the legislation. But, on balance, now with the changes to division 19 – and division 19 was this piece of legislation that made sure that unions would have consequences for an illegal strike.

We were talking about the Ethics Commissioner a little bit earlier. I'd like to just take a moment to describe my impression and my understanding of this. For me, for example – and I can only use myself as a personal example – when we had the legislation on the home builders, I actually removed myself from those discussions because I am a home builder. I own a company, and I do those kinds of things. I removed myself from that. The reason I did that wasn't even because I might be held accountable. When I actually asked the Ethics Commissioner about it, he advised me that, based on my history and the things that I've been involved in, it would be better for me to not participate in those discussions, so I actually removed myself from those discussions.

I can use another example. We have things like the Stampede, that is coming up. Everybody has gotten that e-mail recently – right? – about what you're allowed to go to, how much money can be given to you in terms of tickets, and the limitations on those. We all got those e-mails, and there's a good reason for that. They're trying to make sure that we have those rules and that we also understand, in the back of our heads, that there are really big consequences for stepping outside of the premise of what the Ethics Commissioner is doing on that.

A lot of the groups that ask us to come to things are lobbying for our ability to be able to bring their ideas forward. There's nothing wrong with that, but if it's being incentivized by a gift, it could look bad. I personally appreciate those reminders from the Ethics Commissioner. I know that people look at my expenses every day. I get comments about my expenses all the time. Again, I'm extremely grateful for that. It's a level of accountability, I think, that all of us appreciate in this House. So that's one piece of it.

We look at division 19 and what is possible here. Again, please correct me if I'm wrong. If there is an illegal strike – and this is just within the private sector, so trade unions and that kind of thing. Right now division 19 has the ability to decertify a union if a union has an illegal strike. That is a great consequence for any group, especially if you consider a business. A business depends on its workers, and if the workers have an illegal strike, there are massive consequences for that business and everybody else that's involved in this because the business cannot function without its workers. In the consequences of division 19 there was an ability for that union to be decertified as the result of an illegal strike. I would like somebody to explain to me why that has been removed.

11:30

Division 19 has been struck from the legislation, and that is a massive level of accountability to that union and to the business that supports that trade union. The workers now have the ability to strike illegally and not be held accountable for that strike because this government has taken that piece and removed it from the legislation. Am I wrong about this? Please tell me if I'm wrong about this. How does that make life better for Albertans?

I mean, we were just talking about the political friends, about the AFL, about all of that influence, and now, not only that, the government has taken away division 19. We have the balance on one side where a union can be charged a thousand dollars a day, but then all of a sudden they can fund raise to keep that going. They are able to intimidate the business that they work for. With any business, depending on how large or small that is, they have families, and they have commitments to the things that they're doing. That's not to say that there may not be a good reason that maybe this employer needs to have consequences. There are consequences already. But all of a sudden the union has no consequences. How is that possible?

We look at the ultimate certification laws. They can stop sending these to the union. How long can a business actually hold out without workers? On top of that, the union has no consequences. This is the kind of legislation we're passing? That has been removed. That was accountability. How can you even call this bill to have accountability, to be family friendly or fair? How is that fair? How is that fair? And it only applies to the private sector. How is that fair? We're encouraging illegal activity. How is that fair? How is the government going to explain that to Albertans?

How is it that the government can take something that was already in there that was able to have a consequence for a union, a good one? Do you know what? In my understanding, it's never even had to be invoked because, most likely, you're thinking: "Oh, my goodness, if we do that, this could happen. We could lose our certification." But now this government has struck that from the record. It is removed from the legislation. How is that fair? How is that fair? I don't understand.

Like I said, when you're talking about the Ethics Commissioner and all of the things that all of us are responsible for in this House – and we have a ton of watchdogs. We have lots of people who look at our expenses, what we say on Twitter, who we like on Facebook, who we interact with, who we have meetings with. All of us have done that across this way and held each other accountable for all manner of things. Can you imagine if we were no longer allowed to do that? Then all of a sudden the government has no accountability because we're not allowed to bring that up. How does that work?

All of a sudden unions are being given this special pedestal, that they no longer have consequences to the business that they represent. The businesses have consequences. The whole legislation is around how to make sure that this legislation protects the workers, but the workers aren't going to have a business if that business goes under because of the ability all of a sudden of the union to hold them at bay at a thousand dollars a day. They can be funded, they can fund raise, they can put this business out of a business or try to intimidate. This government has given permission to the unions to do that. That is absolutely appalling and shameful. "Fair" should be struck from this title altogether.

I think back to Bill 25, with the cap on the oil sands, and Bill 27, where the government removed the Minister of Energy's accountability from the legislation. In fact, it was struck from the legislation, the ability to bring forward information and be accountable. Those words were actually struck from the legislation. Did you think that we weren't going to find this? Madam Chair, there's nothing fair about this. There's nothing fair about giving one group more power than the other. There's nothing fair about taking a business and then having a union able to hold them at bay because of an illegal strike. It's an illegal strike. Are we actually encouraging illegal activity? Is that where we're headed with this? Madam Chair, somebody needs to be accountable for this and explain to those of us on this side how that's possible.

Division 19 is being struck from the legislation, folks. It was there as an accountability measure for the unions. Please explain to me why that is being struck from this legislation. Somebody in here needs to explain that. I'm absolutely appalled. I look at the amount of scrutiny that an MLA, a person who is in public office undergoes, and I am grateful every single day for that. The Ethics Commissioner probably gets sick of hearing from me because I write them about everything. I mean, I don't know what everybody else does, but I do that personally because I just don't think there's any way I can understand every piece of it, and I'm terrified of making a mistake. I'm absolutely grateful for the amount of time that these folks spend talking to me, going: "No. That's okay. That's not okay. Do this. Do that."

Actually, it's one of those things that I've got in my head. I understand some of it, but still they're the experts, so I would always err on the side of caution and ask for permission. That's their job. They do an excellent job of it, and I'm grateful every single day. So is my assistant Peter, who has more conversations with the Ethics Commissioner than anybody I know. I love that. I love that accountability. It makes me very, very happy to know that I'm working within the premise of what I'm supposed to do under this government. If I ever made a mistake, it would truly be my own fault, because I didn't ask. I know that I have the ability to ask. I know that.

I can only transfer my personal desire to understand and to make sure that I'm within the rules, and then I look at this legislation and see that this government is promoting illegal activity. It's saying that you can strike illegally, and there's no consequence to you. Division 19 is struck. I would highly recommend that you take a look at it. If that's not the case, then please explain it to me. That is not fair. It is not fair.

Let's go into another piece here. We've already decided that illegal strikes and lockouts, division 19, is removed, the fact that a union can lose their certification. Very interesting. I'm not sure how the government is going to justify that that makes life better for Albertans. I'm not a hundred per cent sure how that's going to happen.

I also want to talk about the family-friendly piece. That's interesting, too, because the thing that probably shocked me the most today was finding out that that legislation won't go through till 2018, the pieces of that legislation that are about compassionate care. Everybody in here yesterday was very passionate about the fact that we voted against first reading. Well, you know what's interesting about first reading? For the last three months we've been talking in this Legislature every day asking: when is the legislation coming, and are you getting rid of secret ballots? Three months. Then all of a sudden the legislation is put down in front of us with nothing from the Minister of Labour, I might add, suggesting to us that she would protect the workers' rights with that.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members that have comments, questions, or amendments? The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Yao: Thank you, Madam Chair. Labour is a complex issue. It's something that can't be rushed in a couple of weeks. These things need to be developed with true consultation and understanding. Based on your previous careers I would say that you all understand one aspect of this, but do you truly understand how market forces and private business work?

Well, let us talk about unions. Why were they created in the first place? Because workers needed basic rights. Let us be clear. Unions fought to make sure that people would have a safe and amicable environment in which to work, that they would have the right tools and equipment for the right job, that these machines that they worked on were properly maintained so that the workers could do their job safely, that they would have fair benefits like salaries that are agreed to with their employers, that things like holidays and vacations are respected, that workers would be treated fairly and respectfully, including in terminations, and that employers must ensure that their employees are not harassed or discriminated against.

11:40

Our society, though, for the most part has reached a pinnacle in regard to work standards. Every workplace should follow occupational health and safety guidelines. Every employer needs some insurance like workers' compensation. We have hazardous incident assessments to ensure that dangerous things are identified, and safe storage rules for inflammable and toxic chemicals. We have guidelines and standards that permeate workplace processes to ensure consistency and safety.

AEDs are common now in workplaces alongside mandatory first aid kits. We need to have safety people in our workplaces. Employers demand that they hire reasonably educated people and that they can supplement that education with additional training to ensure efficiency in the workplace.

These are things that in other countries they fight for. We take them for granted. This peak that we've reached is also reflected in the payroll. Unionized public environments have surpassed the private sector for wages, with numbers reflecting approximately a 10 per cent difference in the pay scales. Unions have done their job very, very well.

What do we mean by bullying? You hear our side talk about this bullying that comes from union leaders. What does that mean? What are the hazards of having a simple signed card as a voucher for instituting a union? It doesn't just result in a deduction on your paycheque, which some might interpret as simply another form of tax on an individual's paycheque. Can anyone from across the way actually identify what it means to be set apart as different, to be targeted as different, to be intimidated, to be called rude names, to see how people's prejudicial values come out? People might look at you differently. You see that little furrow in their brow become a little bit more aggressive. Maybe their tone with you isn't that pleasant. Perhaps the words used when they talk to you are quite harsh.

The open-card system is used to draw a line in the sand. It helps identify people who don't think the way that you do. I wonder if anyone on the other side understands in any aspect, way, shape, or form the feeling of being different and discriminated against. Anyone? Perhaps you don't get that promotion or that sweet desk next to the window. Maybe you are just treated differently. It might not be a lot of people, but key people. Maybe it's your supervisor. Maybe it's your steward. Maybe it's your union president. Who knows?

I've had this experience. I was a member of local 2494, International Association of Fire Fighters up in Fort McMurray. It's a good union. Good members. Excellent people. I did get harassment. I use this term loosely. I crossed the floor to management's side. I took over running EMS in the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo. For four years I had the honour of running EMS in Fort McMurray, and I also had to deal with the trials and tribulations of being taken over by Alberta Health Services during that time. It's very, very difficult to have two bosses.

That said, where does bullying come from? Well, the minute I crossed that floor the union president started attacking me through e-mails, through his lectures with the membership. It was a very, very difficult time. He had the municipal nurse fight me on hand cleanser. You guys understand all those cleansers, those lotions that you put on your hands, disinfectants? At that time it was a new thing, and I was getting it in our ambulances and in our municipal facilities right across the municipality. I was using a product that was far better than alcohol. Alberta Health Services said: oh, you should use alcohol-based products. It was just a general blanket statement, but I'd done my due diligence and found this product to be much better and less harmful on the hands. I got attacked for bringing in a product that, even though it wasn't recommended by AHS, the information I had was that it surpassed the use of alcohol in a hand sanitizer. So I have had this experience of being bullied. The irony is that I was still technically part of the union at that time.

There are some groups that represent workers at sites all over this province, and perhaps if someone is petty, they don't give that worker those so-called sweet jobs. They have to accept whatever comes their way. I have had stories of that, too, from my friends. They can't help but notice that they only get jobs in the less appealing locations. Maybe they have to go very far away and travel for weeks on end, away from their families, to go to a job in a distant location. Or other things: jeez, maybe they swore that they should have been called for a job by now, and why did Joe and William get their second jobs already when I swear my name was in front of theirs on the list? I mean, these are the things that can be done.

Does the NDP understand the feelings of being discriminated against, of being separated, of being identified as different? I wonder. Based on this bill, I guess not. They don't understand the discrimination that happens because maybe you have different thoughts and different subject matter.

After this election where all 87 of us were elected, people would tell me that they supported me and that they voted Wildrose. I have patrons of the PC Party that have told me that they supported the PCs. Other than the five openly NDP members in Fort McMurray, no one else would openly say that they voted NDP. What were they worried about? As I travel across this province and visit with Albertans, it is the same story.

I wonder: why doesn't anyone admit to voting NDP? What do they fear? What do they have concerns about? Do they have some sort of concern that if they say who they supported in the election, they'll be ostracized? At worst, people would laugh at you, but you shouldn't fear some sort of physical retribution or verbal belittling or being shunned somehow. Albertans recognize that everyone has a right to an opinion, and though someone might identify you as a grasshopper in a province full of conservative ants, varied opinions are accepted.

The only people that shame others for not sharing their beliefs seem to be NDP supporters. I base that on the Twitter and Facebook comments that I receive from the trolls. People that this government has introduced into this House continually belittle me. They try to shame me for my opinions. Shame.

The Deputy Chair: Are you speaking to the bill?

Mr. Yao: Absolutely.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Just checking.

Mr. Yao: But I accept it, and I realize that it's an aspect of our jobs that we must deal with. I won't plead and cry and say: oh, you triggered some negative emotions in me that are impacting me in an unvirtuous way.

In closing, I guess we just need to recognize that there are aspects of this bill that need more consultation, more understanding by Albertans. We thought we had taught you how to consult, but this bill demonstrates that you have not learned that. You do this, and you might save yourself a lot of grief when it comes to Albertans not being consulted. It is difficult when people are going to be put under laws by this government without being asked about their opinions. It is so vitally important.

You put forward a Fair Trading Act recently. It was on automotive repair, and even your own government realized that this should go to committee because they recognized that there are parallels in an existing system. They recognized that there was a redundancy. It was a pure demonstration in proper consulting. When it was in committee, groups were invited in to discuss and express their opinions. They provided real numbers that demonstrated how they would be impacted. They demonstrated existing legislation that already addressed the issue. In the end, the clock ran out on that bill, and it was pushed aside because it was recognized even by the government side that it was redundant. You only did that through consultation. Without that consultation, you would have been in your blissful state of ignorance, where you usually are.

11:50

It's important to know that you are reaching out and trying to become more understanding. What you need to do with this bill as well is to reach out and understand the aspects of it more because the only people that you've listened to are your friends, and that's not necessarily consultation, is it? That only demonstrates one aspect of this. It is so, so important that we consult. That's our job as MLAs. It is our job to reach out to all the people, even the ones that may not share your opinion, to understand and to come out with a balanced effort when you're creating a bill.

Again, with this bill, so much of it is good. There's some housekeeping in there. The leave for difficult family issues is one hundred per cent commendable. That is good, and there's not a person in this House that will disagree with a lot of that. But, again, did you consult? Did you see how much of an added expense a lot of this will be?

Probably not, because you think that all business owners are greedy mercenaries that just rule the world. The truth of the matter is that so many of these are small businesses that just struggle to survive. Their markup isn't what you think. They're not making millions and millions of dollars. They're struggling just to pay their bills as well, and, at that, they have increased bills now because of carbon taxes.

I get what this government is trying to do. You're trying to discourage the purchasing of goods and services because anything that people do impacts the environment. Anything that we do adds to the carbon issue. From the moment that man made that first fire, he was contributing to the carbon pollution. It's something that we just have to recognize because we're carbon-based life forms.

It is important that if we're going to move forward here, you need to consult. You need to take this bill, and you do need to split it in half. You can't put in all the compassionate stuff and use it to blind everyone while you slip some other things inside it that are going to impair businesses and possibly hurt them.

Again, workers' rights: I think everyone agrees with that. Everyone understands the basis of the unions. But, that said, the unions and our work culture, with all of our standards, have changed. It's become more about the money sometimes, and that is unfortunate.

Again I ask anyone from across the way to talk about this card system that you so openly promote. I wonder if you understand if the people that don't sign that card will be exposed to any discrimination, to any prejudice, to any bullying. It's very possible.

You laugh when you say: oh, union executives would never do that. Well, I know. I've experienced it. It was from one person, but he was the key person. He was the president. Maybe he was just attacking me simply because I was on the management side, and he felt that that was his job. But he attacked me on things that were really quite helpful and ahead of the time. Now you see hand sanitizers everywhere. You carry it in your pocket, and you wonder: jeez, can you imagine the day when they didn't have that? Yeah. A nurse fought me on that. A nurse. Can you imagine that? An occupational health and safety nurse with the municipality fought me on that. That is a shame.

I also got fought on AEDs in my community. I got fought so much on AEDs that I finally gave that to our union charities and said: can you guys carry this forward because I'm literally up against the wall with the bureaucracy blocking me from putting AEDs in our facilities? That's the good stuff that unions do. They get AEDs into the community. I had the route there to take, and it was wonderful.

In that sense, I respect unions. I respect them for ensuring the rights of employees. But I don't respect them when they're trying to bulldoze things through. That's what this bill is doing. You're trying to push something through so that they can bulldoze workplaces all over this province. Now, maybe your idea is to shutter a lot of businesses because they're all making carbon . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, but due to Standing Order 4(3) we shall now rise and report.

Mr. Yao: I'm sad. Thank you very much, Madam Chair.

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 17.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Seeing the time, I move that we call it 12 o'clock and adjourn till 1:30 this afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 11:56 a.m.]

Table of Contents

Prayers	1421
Orders of the Day	1421
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act	1421
Division	1424
Division	1432
Committee of the Whole
Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act	1432

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday afternoon, May 31, 2017

Day 42

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawwood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Orr
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Drysdale	Schreiner
Fitzpatrick	Taylor
Gotfried

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Pitt
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Ellis	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, May 31, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, you have a number of introductions today.

Mr. Yao: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Timberlea school from Fort McMurray along with their teachers Andrea Organ and Alexa Thorne and their chaperones Jennifer Collins and Owen Collins. These amazing kids are not only ridiculously good looking, but they're ridiculously intelligent as well. I ask them all to please rise and accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. member, I did meet these students, and you're correct. They are very, very intelligent.

Your second introduction.

Mr. Yao: Thank you so much. We have another school from Fort McMurray, Christina Gordon school. It's another group of grade 6 students who really re-emphasize the fact that they are ridiculously good looking and smart. They are escorted by their teachers Mr. Gavin Rutledge and Ms Erin Gates. I ask you all to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome. Welcome to you as well.

Mrs. Schreiner: Well, good afternoon, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you from the constituency of Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater the Landing Trail intermediate school. The students are accompanied by their teachers Mrs. Hope Bradfield and Wanda Bury. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. members, are there any other school groups today?

Seeing and hearing none, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Yao: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise today and introduce to you and through you Rick Kirschner from Fort McMurray. He's a very active community member, and his charity, King's Kids, just recently celebrated its 25th anniversary. Rick is the brother of Dave, who I mentioned on Monday, and I'd like to invite him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Peace River.

Ms Jabbour: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on your behalf to introduce to all members of the Assembly someone who is now a familiar face to us, Ursella Khan. As we heard in the House on Monday, Ursella recently took a stand against racism at her high school in Red Deer. Her ability to remain respectful, cool-headed, and eloquent in the face of adversity is certainly inspirational to all Albertans. Today Ursella is here with her family – Aroosha Khan, Sadia Khan, Shanzay Khan, Harris Khan – and Tessa Murphy. They are all seated in your gallery, and I would ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome. Heroes almost always have strong family behind them.

The Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three introductions today. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you two visitors in the members' gallery – I ask that they rise as I introduce them – Sofia Calderon and her mother, Joanna Calderon. They are constituents of Edmonton-Glenora, and Sofia has been selected to be on the Dragon Boat Canada U16 national team. She is the only athlete to qualify from Alberta. She has maintained an honours standing despite her very rigorous training schedule. Sofia, we are so pumped that you will be representing Canada on this team, and we will all be cheering you on. Colleagues, please join me in welcoming Sofia and her mother today.

My second of three introductions, Mr. Speaker. Consistent with past days, as part of Paramedic Services Week it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you three veteran front-line paramedics seated in the members' gallery. I ask that they rise as I say their names: Genevieve Marshall, a second-generation paramedic with 12 years of service; Jason Visscher, a paramedic with 25 years of service; Michael Plumbtree, a paramedic with 30 years of service. Again, thank you to you and your colleagues for all you do to keep us safe. Colleagues, please extend the traditional welcome of our Assembly.

My final introduction, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce a constituent, again, of Edmonton-Glenora who's seated in the members' gallery. This is Trustee Patricia Grell, who is a member of the Edmonton Catholic school board, a trustee for ward 71. She's a tireless advocate for LGBTQ students. I ask that Ms Grell rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Minister of Culture and Tourism.

Miranda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mr. Josue Eurico Nsiamfumu, a constituent in the wonderfully diverse riding of Calgary-Cross. He's an artist, a musician, a community leader, the regional director for Alberta of black Canadians, and the international Francophonie director of black Canadians. I had the privilege of meeting Mr. Nsiamfumu through his work, especially with the Nigerian community in northeast Calgary. He is visiting us today from Calgary, and I wish to commend him for his work in community development and for helping to strengthen the diversity of Calgary-Cross. I would ask him to please rise and receive the traditional welcome.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Shepherd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a number of employees from Telus, an Alberta union employer, who hosted Kits for Kidz outside the Legislature this morning as part of Telus Days of Giving. Kits for Kidz partners with elected officials across Canada to ensure that nearly 12,000 children in need are able to start the school year with pencils, pens, paper, notebooks, and other needed supplies. I and several colleagues here on both sides of this aisle today had a chance to participate in the event, and it's always a pleasure to work alongside partners in the business community to make life better for Albertans. With us today from Telus are Claudia Roszell, Zainul Mawji, Shane Sabatino, Dan Campbell, Japman Bajaj, and Shadi Sakr.

Also here are some great members of the community who were out helping us stuff backpacks today: formerly of the Edmonton Oilers, Mr. Paul Coffey; formerly of the Calgary Flames, Mr. Theo Fleury; formerly of the Calgary Stampeders, Mr. Randy Chevrier; and formerly of the Edmonton Eskimos, Mr. Jed Roberts and Mr. Randy Spencer. I would like to ask all of these guests to rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. member, I think I saw a red and a purple standing beside each other. I'm not sure that that's possible. Who would have thought?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Loyola: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you the Babyroni family. Rakshit, who is visiting us from India, is newly wed to Divneet Babyroni. They are accompanied by Divneet's daughter Notica and, as well, by Divneet's father, Jarnail Basota, who is a notable figure in the Sikh community. He is a great friend of mine and a host of Radio South Asia as well as of Parwaaz on TV here in the city of Edmonton. I ask them to rise, as they have, and accept the warm traditional welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Minister of Seniors and Housing.

Ms Sigurdson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Nadja Lalor. Nadja is a social work student from NorQuest College. She is completing her field placement practicum in my constituency office over the course of the summer, and we're delighted to have her around. I'd ask that she rise, as she already has, and that everyone give her the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

1:40

Mrs. Schreiner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some of my friends who are visiting from the Professional Young Insurance Brokers of Alberta, or PYIB. The PYIB is a standing committee of the Insurance Brokers Association of Alberta, who represent almost 90 per cent of the insurance brokerages across the province. The standing committee's mission is to build a strong, professional young-broker network through continuing education, industry involvement, and political action. I invite the young brokers to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Klein.

Mr. Coolahan: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I actually didn't know that my colleague was going to introduce this individual, but if you'll indulge me, I'll just do it quickly to make him stand out, as he always has. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Theo Fleury, the former NHL star, Olympic gold medallist, and two-time bestselling author. He is a Calgary Flames legend and helped the league's best team to the franchise's first Stanley Cup victory in 1989. He was here today helping with the Telus Days of Giving, and I ask him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome again.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Energy Policies and Social Licence

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let's face it. The NDP's social licence scheme is a complete failure. For two years this government has been imposing ideological tax hikes and caps on our oil sands, all in the name of social licence. The Premier conned Albertans, undermined the authority and integrity of our national energy regulators to excuse her long-held radical environmental agenda. She turned her back on Albertans when they needed her most, all because she wants to cozy up to the unrealistic Leap Manifesto fundamentalists in Ottawa, B.C., and Paris. She hustled Albertans.

Not only do we not have the social licence, but these radicals are more emboldened than ever before. Yesterday the new NDP-Green alliance in B.C. had a stark warning for this Premier. They are determined to, quote, immediately employ every tool available to the new government and stop the expansion of the Kinder Morgan pipeline. End quote. Members of the Alberta oil sands advisory group could barely contain their excitement. The Premier's top oil sands adviser, Tzeporah Berman, celebrated on Twitter, saying that this is "a turning point for BC." Alberta's pain has certainly been Ottawa's gain. They're collecting millions in GST on carbon taxes, they're turning northern B.C. into an antidevelopment Great Bear park with the tanker ban, and they're considering yanking the NEB out of Calgary.

So what was the point, Premier? Why did this NDP take money out of Albertans' pockets when they can least afford it? Why did you scare away job investment at a time of record job losses? This was never a scheme; this was a scam. Let's cut the nonsense and call the social licence sales job what it really is, snake oil. Stop working against us.

They talk down to Albertans by calling them rodents. The top new radical of the B.C. Greens, Andrew Weaver, had a message for this Premier. He said that she needs to get with the program. I have a different message: stop working for the radicals, and get with Albertans.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have a request for unanimous consent for an introduction.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Greenway.

Mr. Gill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my absolute honour to rise today in this House and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly one of my close friends, Mr. Harinder Pal Singh Sethi, who is from Amritsar, my hometown in India, and visiting Canada with his wife, Harleen Kaur Sethi, and son Dilrajpreet Singh Sethi. They are in the gallery with a family friend, Mr. Armander Batra, his wife, Ranjeeta Batra, and their daughter Sharmeen Batra from Spruce Grove. Mr. Sethi has a very successful, affluent business, and I'm honoured to call him a great friend. I do cherish your friendship, sir. I do ask for them to rise, which they have already done, and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Members' Statements (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Immigration Policies

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a restaurant manager I had the fortune to employ people from many countries like Australia, Great Britain, Germany, Chile, the Philippines, and Slovakia, to just name a few. These workers built rapport with my diverse clientele, contributed to the financial success of my business, and helped with the annual growth of my establishment. However, there were challenges these workers faced. As they started to get settled in and applied for PR or citizenship, they got caught up in bureaucratic red tape and understaffing at Immigration Canada.

For whatever reason, Mr. Speaker, the problems with the immigration department caused delays in some cases by many months. Then these employees' visas and work permits would expire, and they would be forced to go back to their country of origin. I have too many stories to share: from the Central American dishwasher who'd fled gang violence, who had to go back home; the American who had been married to a Canadian for years, who couldn't pay back her student loans because she couldn't legally work; to my having to hold a crying, pregnant server's hand because her husband of U.K. descent had to go back home to work to save money for their baby.

As an MLA my office handled many inquiries because the former Member of Parliament for Calgary Midnapore would not answer constituents who were caught up in the backlog. I will never forget telling a family of five from Mexico that they had to pull their kids out of school mid-year because they had to go back home.

The former MP for Calgary Midnapore, Jason Kenney, was in charge of Immigration Canada for five years. As an MLA I know that decisions made by government have real impacts on people and can ruin their lives. The decisions that Jason Kenney made as a minister of immigration caused untold hardship for people who contributed to the growth of my business. When he laid off front-line workers and added red tape to immigration, it caused direct negative impacts to my business, my workers, forcing me to spend tens of thousands of dollars in retraining and recruitment. [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. members.

Mr. Sucha: This is the new leader of the Conservatives in Alberta, the person they want to trust with our economy and our social welfare? Is this the kind of person we want running our province? I say no.

The Speaker: I want to remind all members that this House has a long-standing practice of no comments during Members' Statements.

The hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

Paramedics

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today in Alberta a man will have a heart attack, and by tomorrow that man will be alive, recovering at home, surrounded by family. Today in Alberta an expectant mother at home will go into labour, and by tomorrow she'll be holding a happy, healthy baby. Today in Alberta a child, sibling, parent, or a friend will be overdosing from fentanyl abuse, and by tomorrow that person will be returned from the brink of death, given a second chance.

Between these times of crisis and healthy, long lives that follow are a few critical moments, moments on which a course of a life turns. It's in those moments that the services of a paramedic can make all the difference. For most Albertans it is just a moment, but for paramedics and other emergency medical personnel those moments make up a lifetime. What might be the most traumatic moment in one of our patients' life could be one of many such moments that week for a first responder. Speaking from experience, you never really get used to those moments.

While there were many moments in my career when I managed to be just on time in the right place to save a life, there were also times when despite my best efforts, there was simply nothing more I could do. Those moments stay with you. There are members in this House and in this gallery who know exactly what I mean. When you see a paramedic or other emergency medical workers, remember that they carry these moments with them: the panic moments, the triumphant moments, the awe-inspiring moments, and especially the tragic moments.

My plea to this House and all Albertans is to acknowledge the heavy burden that these people carry on our behalf. As an advanced care paramedic I'd like to take this opportunity to express on behalf of myself and the entire PC caucus our profound gratitude for the work that they do. I encourage all Albertans: if you know a paramedic or if you run into one off duty, take a second and express your gratitude because we could all use a few more good moments like that.

Happy paramedics day.

Educational Curriculum Review

Ms Luff: The province of Alberta has begun the process of updating the K to 12 curriculum so that it better prepares students for success in a rapidly changing world. The rewrite process is being led by teachers and provides opportunities for feedback at multiple stages.

When you read the documents, you see that many of the things that parents have been calling for are directly incorporated: mental math, financial literacy, and First Nations history and culture. These are also only scope and sequence documents. The individual learning outcomes have not yet been written.

When the opposition stands up and asks questions about how we are social engineering the curriculum, I wonder whether they know what scope and sequence means, if they've actually read the documents, or if they only read opinion pieces about the documents.

Jason Kenney believes that our current education system hardwires youth with collectivist ideas. The president of the PCAA compared it to Nazi indoctrination, and the Leader of the Opposition seems to just want education to be the same as it was when he was in school, when teachers wrote things in chalk and students sat in rows and memorized things that the teachers wrote. This is a factory model of education that teaches students what to think but not how to think. To look at the world that we live in today and think that this is an appropriate way to teach our children is beyond ridiculous. In a modern economy, where all of the world's knowledge is literally at your fingertips, we need critical thinkers, problem solvers, co-operators, and entrepreneurs. The basics are important, but basics alone won't prepare students for the world that we live in.

1:50

Every teacher I know works incredibly hard to teach all sides of issues, to teach how to tell if sources are credible, to present a logical argument. This draft curriculum aims to do these things, too. The math curriculum “supports students in developing resiliency through productive struggle, becoming critical thinkers and problem solvers.” The science curriculum ensures that students “have the capacity to critically evaluate information, make informed decisions and solve problems.” And in the social studies curriculum “students learn to address issues in society by respectfully considering multiple perspectives and engaging in dialogue with others.”

I would seriously question any politician who claims that this is a bad thing.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Energy Policies and Social Licence

Mr. Jean: The NDP imposed a carbon tax on Albertans that they didn't ask for and can't afford all in the name of social licence. According to the NDP world view this carbon tax buys social licence to have our opponents get out of the way of new pipelines. Well, they couldn't be more wrong. Their NDP friends in B.C. are openly waging war on Kinder Morgan. So here's the Premier's chance. Will she stop punishing Albertans for her misguided ways and axe the carbon tax? Yes or no?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, the Leader of the Opposition couldn't get a pipeline built to a gas station, and the reason we know this is because he was in a government that got Alberta nowhere. There's a reason for that, and we saw it on display yesterday. While the leader was outside telling the press that he was totally able to have a good working relationship with the B.C. government, his front bench was tweeting, calling them lunatics in an asylum. You know what? These guys couldn't get their act together, don't have their act together. Thank God that Albertans are not relying on them for a pipeline.

Mr. Jean: With this government in charge of legislation regulation, no one is going to get a pipeline built anywhere.

Social licence is an ever-moving goalpost. It ignores our world-class NEB process, hurts Albertans, and ruins investor confidence throughout the world. The B.C. NDP and Greens could not have been more clear yesterday that they are going to, and I quote, immediately employ every tool available to stop the expansion of the Kinder Morgan pipeline. End of quote. Social licence is a scam. Will the Premier wake up to the facts and quit her endless pursuit of snake oil social licence? Yes or no?

Ms Notley: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, we have a strategy to build a pipeline. We brought together industry, environmentalists, First Nations, and workers. We brought them together. We delinked pipelines from the issue of climate change emissions. We then secured approval from the NEB. Then we secured approval from the federal government. It wasn't easy, but we got it done. What have the members opposite done? Sent lots of angry tweets, and that's it. You know what? We're getting the job done. They never will. Thank goodness, once again, that it's us who are in charge.

Mr. Jean: When Trudeau announced the tanker ban, this NDP government was silent. When Trudeau cancelled Northern Gateway, this NDP government was silent. Now this government has the gall to claim that we are cheering for Alberta's failure when it was their minister who literally co-wrote a how-to book on pipeline obstruction with her friend from Greenpeace. If the Premier wants Trans Mountain built, she should shelve her social licence fantasy that she created and is now being used as a barrier to stop this pipeline. Will she do so and cancel the carbon tax while she's at it? Yes or no?

Ms Notley: Well, you know what, Mr. Speaker? When the Prime Minister announced Kinder Morgan, the opposition was silent, and it was a shameful day – a shameful day – because we all know they'd been cheering for Alberta's failure. However, we are moving forward much better than the opposition is. We put together a plan. We are moving forward with it. The federal government, who are exactly the ones who should be approving this pipeline, did exactly that. The pipeline will get built, and it's because of the work of the members on this side.

The Speaker: The second main question.

Electric Power System

Mr. Jean: B.C.'s anti-jobs coalition will cost Albertans billions of dollars, and the Premier only has herself to blame. Under the NDP-Green agreement the site C hydro dam may now sit on the chopping block. The Premier and the Energy minister were recklessly banking on this project to bail them out after they spent billions of Albertans' hard-earned dollars killing Alberta's coal-fired electricity and all the jobs that came with it. Can the Premier explain how many more billions of dollars the NDP's reckless electricity plan will now cost them?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that when we were elected government, we inherited an electricity system that was on the verge of breaking. Industry and investors told us that the only way they could invest in new electricity infrastructure was if we took the cap from $1,000 per megawatt hour to $10,000 per megawatt hour. That would be a 10-fold increase in the spikes of electricity. Alberta families could not possibly tolerate a 10-fold increase in unpredictability in their electricity prices. The system was broken, and we're on the way to fixing it.

Mr. Jean: What that NDP government inherited, Mr. Speaker, was the consistently lowest power prices in North America.

The Premier's entire economic vision for our province was built on nothing but a house of cards, and it's starting to collapse. She promised Albertans that we could kill coal and transfer to renewables pain free. Boy, was she ever wrong. The fact is that the Premier rolled the dice, hoping to import electricity from the site C hydro dam after she spent billions to wipe Alberta's coal generation off the map. If site C is now off the grid, what's the Premier's plan B?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To be perfectly clear, site C was never part of our plan ever. We're still working on plan A because plan A is a good plan. What that plan involves is creating stability in our electricity sector and also creating affordability in our electricity sector. I know that the members opposite are upset that people can't bang on their grandmother's door anymore and sell them direct contracts where they're banking on and selling stability as a product because those guys over there think instability is something that everyone should see. We are making the kinds of changes that end that . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: The Premier owns this, Mr. Speaker. She's worked for the B.C. NDP, and her chief of staff was most recently the chief of staff for B.C.'s NDP leader. Her backbench and staff spent years campaigning against pipelines and campaigned for the NDP out of province. She endorsed the federal NDP, who now want to implement the economy-destroying Leap Manifesto. It would destroy Alberta's economy. She's lost authority over her antidevelopment coalition, and they're feeling stronger and stronger every day. Will the Premier admit that her plan has failed and start to change Alberta's course?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That was a little hard to follow. Nonetheless, we are very proud of our plan. We are moving forward to create a more stable electricity system to make life more affordable for Albertans and also moving forward with respect to climate leadership. You know, a famous hockey player – I believe it was Wayne Gretzky – once said that the key to winning is that you go to where the puck will be, not where it just was. These guys have governed for decades on the basis of where it once was. We are governing on the basis of where it will be, and Albertans are so glad to finally have a government that's looking forward.

The Speaker: Third main question.

Mr. Jean: Unfortunately, when this NDP government does that, they leave the people of Alberta behind.

Opium Use

Mr. Jean: Alberta is right now in the midst of a full-blown opioid crisis. You wouldn't know it, though, from the NDP government's mishandling since the start of this file. We've had a dramatically increasing number of deaths, a toxic illicit drug market that is getting rapidly worse, and massive resources spent on preventable effects of this crisis in hospitals, jails, social services, and law enforcement. The NDP would rather fearmonger than change legislation to address the crisis. How does the Premier think her plan serves Albertans who desperately today need their help?

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, as the member opposite knows, we were very pleased today to be able to announce our emergency opioid response regulation, that we'll be moving forward on co-ordinating people across the government to make sure that the work that's already been under way is more seamlessly co-ordinated and that the additional ideas that are required to move forward can be delivered to cabinet quickly, quickly, quickly, because we understand that this is an emergency. We need to do more because we understand how this hurts families and it hurts the people who suffer from these . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: Over one death a day in Alberta, and it took two years to set up this commission, Mr. Speaker. Shameful.

We won't solve the crisis without evidence-based clinical services in the community. The Q1 report shows that in three years access to treatment increased for, at the most, 2,300 people. The NDP wants to take credit even though the vast majority of people right now are not receiving any support from Alberta Health Services or the ministry. Experts suggest that there are tens of thousands struggling right now with opioid use disorder in our province. How is the Premier going to bridge the gap between the trickle of available services currently through her government and reality?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, this commission will be looking at those issues and making recommendations on exactly that issue on a very urgent basis. What I can say is that we have already significantly increased resources with respect to addictions treatment and addictions prevention. Quite frankly, for the member opposite to be complaining to us that we don't put enough resources in when they are at the same time demanding that we cut $3 billion out of our operating budget in one year is just untenable. You've got to decide what your plan is and then stick to one plan for more than a day.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: Two years to set up this commission, Mr. Speaker. Ridiculous and unacceptable.

An overprescription of drugs is creating a new group of addicts. The Q1 report shows that almost half of people who die from an OD were prescribed an opioid in the year before their death. The College of Physicians & Surgeons says, "We prescribe opioid painkillers . . . too freely, which fuels the supply of – and demand for – opioids and other drugs, both legal and illegal." The overprescription of opioids is hurting Albertans and killing them and getting them hooked. What's the Premier's plan to address this issue?

Ms Notley: Well, the member opposite actually identifies a very, very important issue. That's why the minister and the associate minister have been working on this issue with the college, because we know that their prescription strategies do need to be changed and that they do need to find ways to reduce the degree to which they prescribe those particular substances. That's not the only issue, of course – there are many – but it's absolutely an important one, that we are asking them and that they have agreed to work on very quickly to change the pattern that the member opposite describes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Child Intervention Panel Recommendations

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, this NDP government is about to waste a golden opportunity to improve the lives of children in care. The opposition demanded an all-party committee so the minister could not hide until the next child death hits the headlines. Government instead chose a ministerial panel, which does allow the toughest issues to be buried out of public view. Now our fears have foundation. Many of the panel's recommendations go into what the government calls, and I quote: no legislative change required. To the Premier. You told Albertans in this House that the panel would make meaningful recommendations for real change and they would be listened to. Why did you not keep that promise?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the member opposite read the legislation as well as the recommendations a little bit more carefully because there is almost no recommendation that the government hasn't committed to moving forward on. Where the legislation reflects the recommendations – indeed, the legislative drafting process began by looking at the recommendations. I can take every recommendation and attach it to an action or a legislative change, so I'm not sure what the member opposite is actually talking about. [interjection] I'm very pleased with the work that has moved forward on this so quickly . . . [interjection]

The Speaker: Hon. member.

Ms Notley: . . . after decades of being ignored, through an all-party process. Quite frankly . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier. Thank you.
First supplemental.

Mr. McIver: Thank you. I will table today a government document showing many of the recommendations, and beside it says: no legislative change required. Premier, you're not telling us the facts.

The legislation labels many of the panel's recommendations as not needing legislation. I don't agree, but since your minister has decided not to commit to legislation for these changes – she now has had six weeks to take internal action on these key changes to be made. The answer won't fit in 35 seconds, so, please, Premier, can you tell this House and all of Alberta where we can find a written account of the specific nonlegislated changes made, or have you done nothing?

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, it is super rich for the member opposite to suggest that a six-week turnaround, from a group of recommendations to this House to a form of legislation, is doing nothing after the decades of inaction by those people over there. Outrageous.

That means that what we did – just so that the member opposite is clear, when it says, "No legislation required," it means that we can follow the recommendation without changing the law. That's what it means. It doesn't mean that we're not going to do it. We have every intention of doing it. The member opposite should read the legislation and read the recommendations.

Mr. McIver: I helped write the recommendations, Mr. Speaker, and the Premier hasn't acted on a single thing she had a chance to say. She notes that she can publish the name of a child. Paula Simons had to wake this Premier and all of us up. She said that the child Serenity's name could be named by the Journal but not by the advocate. As a result, we're at risk of ignoring the plight of children in care until there's public outrage. We have to do better if justice is to be achieved. Is that the best we can do? Premier, will you commit to additional legislation to include more of the panel's recommendations in the next session of the Legislature? You haven't acted on the ones that are in legislation now.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again I would suggest that the member opposite read the recommendations because nowhere in the recommendations do they suggest that we start publishing the name of every child whose fatality is investigated by the advocate. That's not in the recommendations, and for him to imply that it is is exceptionally disingenuous. That being said, we are moving forward on the recommendations. We've brought in legislation within six weeks. They have never acted that fast to get their parking space allocated, let alone to work on an important piece of legislation that matters to Albertans. [interjections]

The Speaker: Thank you.

Just checking with members. It seems to be getting a little warmer in here.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Opioid Emergency Response Commission

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today the government announced what they call their aggressive opioid plan, which can be summed up as more piecemeal action, including the creation of a new advisory opioid commission. Not only is this an admission that the government's response has not been sufficient, but after four years of increasing opiate deaths, instead of giving us a clear evidence-based plan – to the minister: now that you've got the advisers, how long before we see a public strategic plan with specific targets and timelines?

The Speaker: The Associate Minister of Health.

Ms Payne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm incredibly proud of the group that's been brought together to form the opioid emergency response commission, which includes harm reduction program advocates, parent advocates, law enforcement, and representation from indigenous communities. The commission has scheduled two meetings for the upcoming month, and I look forward to their recommendations in the very near future. I'm going to allow the experts that we've assembled to bring together their recommendations rather than try and presuppose their outcomes.

Dr. Swann: All good people, Mr. Speaker. A little late to the table.

The minister has repeatedly told us that it was not necessary to declare a public health emergency because the government already had enough power and resources to deal with the crisis. We disagreed. Now she's claiming that the new plan will expand her powers but can't say what the new powers are or what will change. To the minister: specifically, what new powers does the minister have to stem the tide?

The Speaker: The associate minister.

Ms Payne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. You know, instead of trying to use powers that were meant for an infectious disease outbreak, our government has crafted new, aggressive emergency tools that will move forward and address the actual crisis in front of us, which is a public health crisis. It's a question of how we react and respond to people who are living with a chronic health condition. This is an important issue, and as a government we think it's very important that every single Albertan who is struggling with substance use is treated with respect and dignity and has access to the treatment and the supports they need as quickly as possible.

2:10

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the people on the front lines are looking for answers, not rhetoric.

Whether or not these additional powers are sufficient remains to be seen, but what is clear is that these powers are for the minister, and the commission itself reports to the minister instead of to a public health expert, a mental health and addictions expert. To the minister: how can Albertans have confidence that you will do what's necessary, especially since it's taken a year and a half just to get the advisory panel in place?

The Speaker: The Associate Minister of Health.

Ms Payne: Thanks, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. The commission will be directing aggressive action focused on six key areas, including harm reduction, treatment, prevention, enforcement, collaboration as well as data collection and monitoring. The commission will be providing recommendations directly to my office around how we can best use the tools and the $30 million in new budget dollars for 2017 to have the best impacts quickly within our communities, and then the commission is going to be responsible for implementing those actions. I fully trust the members of this commission to do an excellent job. We have a very talented group assembled.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
The Member for Edmonton-Whitemud.

Dr. Turner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All Albertans are concerned about the opioid overdose crisis and are pleased to hear that this government is taking action. As a health care professional I know first-hand of the importance of prevention and harm reduction strategies such as supervised consumption services and ready access to naloxone. While the opposition spends their time criticizing these measures, we're saving lives. To the Associate Minister of Health: please update this House on actions that were taken today to magnify the government of Alberta's response to the fentanyl crisis that is affecting my constituency and all of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Payne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I was joined at the Legislature by a strong and diverse group of Albertans who will sit on the Minister's Opioid Emergency Response Commission. This group brings together leading experts on substance use treatment, public health, and law enforcement alongside Albertans working at the front lines in our community agencies. This group will guide our next aggressive actions to fight this crisis, backed by $30 million in new spending identified in Budget 2017. They'll be providing recommendations on how to expand access to treatment and eliminate treatment barriers, increase harm reduction supports, and increase data collection and analytics so we have the fullest sense possible of what is...

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
First supplemental.

Dr. Turner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the opioid crisis has hit all of our communities and we know that a one-size-fits-all approach is unlikely to succeed, how has the minister ensured that the commission will be able to reach all the Albertans that need help?

Ms Payne: It was really important for us, Mr. Speaker, that we were able to bring together a diversity of voices to the table and formalize that role for those individuals. We've included Dr. Tailfeathers, a family physician from the Kainai First Nation, who has been at the forefront in her community's response to the opioid crisis. We also have Atiya Ashna, a cultural outreach worker within the city of Calgary, who has a tremendous record of outreach, particularly among ethnic and religious groups, where the topic of substance use is a difficult one to broach. We also included Karen Turner, president of The Alberta Addicts Who Educate and Advocate Responsibly. Ms Turner has a powerful message...

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
Second supplemental.

Dr. Turner: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Given that there have been calls for the government to declare a public health emergency, to the same minister: why is the creation of this emergency commission a more effective way to address the crisis and support Albertans affected by opioid overdose?

Ms Payne: Well, while a public health emergency is attractive on the surface, it is the wrong set of tools for this unprecedented crisis. Instead of trying to use powers that are meant for an infectious disease outbreak, we have crafted new, aggressive emergency tools designed specifically to help Albertans get the help that they need for access to treatment, harm reduction services, and public awareness. These are the tools that will help us address this unprecedented crisis. I certainly hope that all members of this House will support the work of this strong and diverse team of Albertans.

Minister of Finance

Mr. Fildebrandt: The Minister of Finance got a bit defensive yesterday when we noted that he had no background in economics, finance, or budgeting. That's understandable because the truth hurts. While some people can learn on the job, the Minister of Finance has shown that he's incapable of this. He's shown that he's incapable of listening to economists, budgeting experts, or even sober-minded credit-rating agencies. Will the minister finally admit that he's over his head?

Mr. Ceci: You know, Mr. Speaker... [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Ceci: ... my focus all the time is on Alberta. The focus needs to be on helping people recover in this province. It's been a tough couple of years, Mr. Speaker, but every step of the way this government has had people's backs. Of course, there's more work to be done. Forty thousand jobs have returned to this province. That's because of the work of this government, not those people over there. We have Albertans' backs. Why don't they get onboard and support Alberta, too?

Mr. Fildebrandt: Given, Mr. Speaker, that it's impossible to do your job if you don't take it seriously – like, when an electrician doesn't take his job seriously, someone could get shocked, and he will lose his licence, or if a lawyer doesn't do her job seriously, she will lose cases and then clients – and given that if the Minister of Finance doesn't take his job seriously, taxpayers will have their money wasted and children will be saddled with another generation's debt, does the minister believe that there should be consequences for not taking his job seriously?

Mr. Ceci: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, I think the focus always has to be on Alberta, so I'll say again that economic growth is returning to this province because of the work of this government. This Minister of Finance, that Premier, this Health minister are all doing their jobs, and recovery is happening. The Conference Board of Canada has said that our GDP will grow 3.3 per cent. They've upgraded us half a per cent since the last time they reported. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Given, Mr. Speaker, that after two years most people are expected to be able to do their jobs competently, surely by now the Premier realizes that her Minister of Finance is just not up to the job. Given that the training wheels are off and the minister keeps crashing, with new credit downgrades at a rate of two every time he introduces a new budget – he's had his chance, and he's not getting any better – does the Minister of Finance believe that he is fit to do his job?

Mr. Ceci: Thank you very much for the opportunity to ask the opposition, maybe this Finance critic: where is your shadow budget? Anybody see one? [interjections]

The Speaker: Order. Order.

Kinder Morgan Trans Mountain Pipeline

Mr. Gotfried: Mr. Speaker, B.C.'s antipipeline NDP voted to ratify a governing agreement with the Green Party. This agreement states that they will immediately employ every available tool to stop the expansion of Kinder Morgan. Your government has spent two years telling Albertans that we need the carbon tax to build pipelines. Well, we've got the job-killing carbon tax but still no pipelines in sight. To the minister of environment: can you provide the name of just one pipeline protest group or individual who opposed Kinder Morgan in 2015 that has been convinced of its merits because of your hollow mantra of social licence?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, the Premier said it very eloquently yesterday, and I'll repeat: make no mistake; Kinder Morgan will be built. We've had naysayers from the beginning who said that you can't do environmental responsibility and extract resources. We proved them wrong. We got two pipeline approvals. We proved you wrong, and we're going to prove you wrong again.

Mr. Gotfried: Mr. Speaker, please show us the flow.

Given that when asked about the future of Kinder Morgan, the Deputy Premier stated that the federal government was in a position to grant approvals, that they have granted those approvals, and that we are committed to moving forward with the pipeline and given that the Northern Gateway was also approved by the federal government of the day and supported by more than half of the affected aboriginal bands, to the Minister of Energy: can you please explain how today's Kinder Morgan is any different from Northern Gateway, which another well-known NDP Premier – yours, by the way – personally opposed when she took office?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

2:20

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the differences is, as our Prime Minister said, that our climate leadership plan was one of the deciding factors for the pipeline. Again, instead of joining your B.C. pals and cheering against Alberta, it's time that you stood up for Alberta like this side of the House.

Mr. Gotfried: Mr. Speaker, we always cheer for Alberta on this side.

Given that yesterday the Premier stated that she is open to going to B.C. in order to change people's minds about Kinder Morgan and given that after the NDP and Greens announced their intent to govern, the ever-fireable Tzeporah Berman called it "a turning point for BC, our coast, Reconciliation & our climate," to the Premier. Berman, Mahon, Weaver, Horgan: just how do you intend to convince an entire government to support two pipelines when these economic bouncers continue to cut up your social licence and just take it as fake ID?

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: You know, Mr. Speaker, this is a critical project not just for Alberta. It's for Canada. Alberta has never backed down from a fight, and we're not going to do that now. We're going to stand up for Alberta jobs. We're going to stand up for Alberta energy because that's the right thing to do. When are you guys going to join us? [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Access to Information

Mr. Cooper: Following the election in 2015 Wildrose said that the improper destruction of records goes against the heart of an open and accountable government, and we stand by that today. The government, however, seems content to move further and further beneath the cloak of secrecy. To the Minister of Justice. Your staff regularly deleted and shredded records. What is your office covering up, and why does the NDP continue to hide information from Albertans?

The Speaker: The Justice minister.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, we did have one incident in which an individual was misinformed about the policy and made an error in judgment. That incident was immediately investigated and was reported proactively to the FOIP commissioner. Turning that one incident into "regularly destroys" is just a little bit absurd.

Mr. Cooper: Mr. Speaker, given that the Privacy Commissioner has given many, many examples, including the deleting of e-mails for the PPAs returned, and given that this Justice minister has a horrible track record of dealing with the access to information, what exactly are you hiding, and how many FOIP requests have been tampered with under your leadership?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, this incident was of concern to us. As soon as the department was made aware of the direction within the sheriffs branch, they immediately and proactively called in an investigator to investigate this. They proactively went to the FOIP commissioner to disclose that this had happened. We are working with the relevant authorities. We have brought into place a FOIP policy to ensure that this never happens again because it was determined that the lack of policy was a problem in this case. We take this very seriously, and that's why we've moved to address it.

Mr. Cooper: Mr. Speaker, I have a very simple question. If your department was so proactive, why did it take the opposition to release the report today?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to begin by pointing out that, in fact, the report was disclosed to the applicant by my department, so it was a report that was asked for by my department. It was a report that was prepared by my department. It was proactive disclosure on our part to the office of the Privacy Commissioner. We're not trying to hide anything here. [interjections] I think that the noise coming from the other side is just a little over the top.

The Speaker: Just to remind everyone, it's your time. If we can't hear, more time is going to get used, so keep the tone down, please.

The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Municipal Government Act Regulations

Mr. Stier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the MGA review has been concluded for some time now, and apparently regulations are being developed. The former Minister of Municipal Affairs in November of '16 promised that all legislation and corresponding regulations would be enacted before the fall municipal election. Subsequently the new minister in January of '17 stated that before being proclaimed, all regulations would be posted for public feedback for 60 days. To the minister. That deadline has passed, and municipalities are wondering: has the feedback process been completed, and have the regulations now all been set?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. S. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the member is right. We will have everything posted and done and ready to go for the fall, before the municipal election. That's our plan, and I did state that. I didn't set a hard deadline. I'm not sure which date he's talking about – we did say the spring and into the early summer – so if you'd like to inform me of that, that would be great. We are working on the final regulations to post them. There's a lot of work to be done. It is the second-biggest piece of legislation in Alberta's history, so we want to make sure we take the time to consult and get it right.

Mr. Stier: Well, Mr. Speaker, a little clarity would be appreciated by municipalities.

Given that the municipal elections are only 140 days away and given that the government has committed to proclaiming all legislation and corresponding regulations before then and given that to date only 10 regulations have been posted publicly, back to the minister: when will you actually be posting the next phase of regulations, then, and when will all of these be made public so that municipalities can plan accordingly?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. S. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, there are a lot more than 10 regulations in this legislation – I know that – and there have been a lot more than 10 that have been posted over the past little while. There are more to come. When I get that exact information, everybody will see it because it will be posted publicly online for everybody to look at and everybody to provide feedback on.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Stier: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that key components of the regulations yet to be released – and I'm sure you would agree, Minister – are certain charters for Edmonton and Calgary, the city charters, and given that this government has committed to posting the city charters for public comment in the spring and given that the spring is nearly over and the election in the fall is soon to occur, 140 days from now, to the minister: what is the holdup with this subject? Precisely when will you release the city charters to the cities and the public?

Mr. S. Anderson: Listen, Mr. Speaker, and to the opposite member, I appreciate his question. As I said before, when we're working with regulations such as the city charters, we're going to take the time to get it right. We've been meeting with the mayors from Edmonton and from Calgary. [interjections] If you listen, I'll tell you what's going on. We've been meeting with them constantly, with their administration. On a constant basis our administrations are speaking to and discussing the finer details of what's going on, and once we get it ready and once the big-city mayors and we decide that we are ready to bring this forward to the public, we will do so.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Greenway.

Charter Schools and Alternative Education Programs

Mr. Gill: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This NDP government has a track record of not coming clean with Albertans about its intentions. It sprung Bill 6 on farmers, it played coy about the secret ballot, and all Albertans know that it never mentioned the carbon tax while campaigning. It claims to be a champion of choice in education, yet the Premier has called charter schools "havens of elitism," leaving parents with a lack of confidence in the government's supposed support for alternative education. Minister, are you going to suddenly stop funding alternative education? Yes or no?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It seems as though we have this sort of question every few weeks or so. We can reassure everyone once again that from the beginning we have been funding enrolment for education in all forms, including charter schools, and in fact I've been working very closely with charter schools to improve and to build their extensions. I gave a 15-year extension to Westmount Elementary School. We have approved a loan for another charter school over a 25-year amortization period. So, you know, people can rest assured. The only time people are not assured is when the opposition likes to throw gasoline on the fire and pretend that there's a problem.

2:30

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Gill: Given that government is no longer respecting local autonomy with the policies that allowed a child to attend the same charter school as their siblings and given that spreading children around multiple schools creates such inconvenience that parents may have to enroll all their children in the public system for the sake of simplicity and given that the minister talks about funding charter schools today but never commits to doing so in the future, Minister, are you not dealing with the sibling issue because you want to push all students into the public system? Is this your government's hidden agenda?

Mr. Eggen: Well, you know, again, Mr. Speaker, it's convenient for the opposition to try to cast aspersions on the solidity of charter schools. We know that we have been working very closely with them, and we will continue to do so in the future. We sent some very strong messaging to their charter school associations, and we always have a very good relationship, and we will continue to do so. It's not easy when you have to clean up the mess of 40 years of education instability. But you know what? I'm getting the job done.

Mr. Gill: They have been top five in the world, just for your information there, Minister.

Given that this government's school fee reduction system is designed for parents in the public system, which displays this government's lack of concern for the parents of children in the alternative education programs, and given that an example is an increasing transportation problem for alternative programs to the point of pricing them out of parents' ability to pay, Minister, is your plan to financially overburden parents so they're forced to enrol their children in the public system?

Mr. Eggen: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, I mean, this was sort of a salad or a montage of so many different issues that don't necessarily go together. What I can tell you is that we are putting more money into schools, we're putting more money in to reduce the burden of school fees, we're building 200 schools around the province, and we are funding for enrolment. You know, all of those things are a sharp departure from the previous government, and Albertans do notice that this government actually invests in education and has a long-term plan to commit to investment for our children in our province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Refugee Resettlement

Ms McKittrick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Canadian Council for Refugees, an organization recognized for their immense contributions to the lives and success of newcomers, is commencing their national spring consultation here in Edmonton, starting tomorrow. Thank you to the sponsoring groups, immigrant settlement agencies, community members and businesses, and labour unions who have done so much to support these newcomers in our communities. To the Minister of Labour: how is the government helping refugees settle within our communities?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Settlement agencies are the first point of contact for newcomers, including refugees. I'm very proud of the government's productive working relationship with our settlement agencies. Settlement staff help with orientation, assessments for language levels, education and skills training, housing needs, translation, finding doctors, schools for children, and many, many more services. The government has provided the Alberta refugee resettlement grant initiative, designating $1 million to local agencies to help refugees integrate. We've also provided $1.1 million to AUMA to help build welcoming and inclusive communities. These are just a few measures...

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
First supplemental.

Ms McKittrick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Member for Calgary-Shaw reminded us of the disastrous policies of the former minister of immigration, Jason Kenney. To the Minister of Labour: has the number of refugees coming to Alberta increased when compared to previous years?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Between November 2015 and December 2016 Alberta welcomed roughly 7,000 refugees. Of the 49,000 permanent resident admissions to Alberta for 2016, refugee admissions accounted for 15 per cent compared to 7 per cent in 2015. Though 2016 was an unprecedented year, planned admissions for refugees in 2017 are double those in 2015. There will be more privately sponsored refugees in particular as more Canadians are applying to sponsor refugees.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Ms McKittrick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you, Minister of Labour. Given that we are anticipating a significant growth in the number of refugees settling in Alberta, how are we going to support this increase as a government?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Moving forward, Alberta Labour is looking at new ways to deliver settlement services to better support all newcomers, including refugees. We are supporting refugees by funding projects that support their needs; for example, collaborating with one of our community partners to provide language and on-the-job training to help refugee women learn language and secure employment. The integration for refugee women project is a communications and job skills workplace training program that builds work readiness for 24 refugee women and leads to employment in banquet or concession services. We continue to enhance our...

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
The hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler.

Suffield Elk Herd

Mr. Strankman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently this government's own agency known as the Special Areas Board corporation sent a letter outlining their concerns with the growing Suffield elk herd. This herd has an estimated size of anywhere from 4,000 to 7,500 head. As it continues to grow and expand its range well outside the base, this has possible ramifications with biosecurity risks to the cattle industry. To the minister of environment: when was the last time an official count of this herd was completed within the Suffield base and the surrounding area to which the herd has expanded?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. S. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For those who don't know what the Special Areas Board is – I know the hon. member across the way does, which is why we discuss it quite frequently – it was established in 1938 during a severe drought and economic hardship, and it's quite an interesting area. Actually, it's under my purview, and I've had great meetings with the boards on each side. [interjections] I'd like to inform them more if they'd actually listen at some point.

Thank you very much.

Mr. Strankman: Mr. Speaker, given that the bovine TB outbreak in 2016 impacted producers and cattle which used community pastures in and around the Suffield Block and given that the department knew that the elk herd contained avian TB when they were transplanted from Elk Island in '97 and given that avian TB can present a false positive for bovine TB, resulting in unnecessary quarantine of cattle stock, Minister, will you commit to testing the Suffield elk herd for bovine TB, as requested by the Special Areas Board, this government's own agency?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. Carlier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for the question. The elk stock in question on the Suffield base had been checked for bovine tuberculosis before they were in there. Subsequently, this last hunting season, close to a thousand head had been tested also for bovine tuberculosis and received no positive hit on those animals that were tested. So I'm not a hundred per cent sure what the member is talking about. That testing continues as those elk are in that area.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Strankman: The second supplemental will help.

Given that the news reports out of Elk Island national park have stated that those elk and moose populations have grown to levels where a hunt or cull may be necessary and given that the Suffield elk herd has also grown to unmanageable levels and given that biosecurity risks can no longer be ignored, with chronic wasting disease now confirmed in the Suffield herd, will you release an updated wildlife management plan to concerned area landowners and the public should one exist?

The Speaker: The hon. minister of agriculture.

Mr. Carlier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. It's also a fact that that herd has been reduced to about half of what it had been even several years ago, so there is a reduction in that herd. The member is absolutely correct. There was a positive test for chronic wasting disease in one bull elk in that area. It's a situation that as minister of agriculture I take seriously. We'll continue to monitor, working with the Minister of Environment and Parks, to ensure that our domestic herds around those elk stay safe.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Auditor General's Recommendations on Health Care

Dr. Starke: Mr. Speaker, last week the Auditor General released his report on health care in Alberta. Now, in it he describes a fragmented system, lacking integration of professionals, and a lack of sharing and use of clinical information. The Health minister will tell us that all of this was the fault of the previous government. Fine. You've been Health minister for over two years. What evidence can you provide that you are making the quantum leap to take the system to the next level?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the member for taking some responsibility for the system we inherited. We are certainly pleased to move forward with a number of recommendations to make Alberta's health care system better. One of the very first things we did to enable an environment where we could stop and do that was stop drastic and rash ideological cuts. That's one of the reasons why we are keen to have a system that has stability, so that we can actually work with our front-line providers, including the physicians, to be able to come up with a new amending agreement that will save up to half a billion dollars in just two years as well as bring forward a blended capitation model that will provide better health outcomes to Albertans.

2:40

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, the initiatives that the minister has described fall clearly into the category of incremental change, reorganization, and moving in circles. There's no quantum leap in sight here.

Given that the Health minister also has 41 outstanding recommendations from the Auditor General and given that there has been painfully little progress on these recommendations during her tenure, to the minister: you haven't acted on the 41 outstanding recommendations from the Auditor General, so why should Albertans have any faith that you will act on the outstanding report that he filed last week?

Ms Hoffman: Again, I want to thank the Auditor General for his report and his recommendations in the past. Many of them have been in place since the 1990s. While, absolutely, we are keen to move forward with improvements to the health care system, what we aren't going to do is move forward with what those folks in the opposition campaigned for in the last election, which was a billion dollars' worth of health care cuts. Instead, we're working with front-line providers, including physicians, to find ways to return half a billion dollars to the system so that we can invest that in improvements, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased that the Auditor General sees a great deal of opportunities for us to continue to move forward, protecting and enhancing public health care, because that's exactly what this government is going to do.

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, the minister just did it again. She constantly equates health spending reductions that are proposed by the opposition members to cuts in front-line services.

Given that the Auditor General has clearly stated that more money is not the solution and given that both this minister and her predecessors of the previous government failed in keeping expenditure increases under the combined inflation and population growth, to the minister. The Auditor General has clearly indicated that expenditures and performance are not correlated. When will you stop equating spending cuts or increases to deterioration or improvement of health care performance?

Ms Hoffman: Mr. Speaker, that is so rich coming from the members of the opposition who regularly saw increases in excess of 6 per cent. What do we have to show for it? A blooming wait-list. We had deferred maintenance throughout the province, and what we're doing instead is that working as a province, we've gotten our increases down to about 3 and a half per cent as opposed to the 6 from the members opposite. And we're doing it with Albertans while protecting public health care instead of pushing for a billion dollars' worth of cuts, as they had in their last election platform. Now they're asking us to make even more. I think the last number was $3 billion from operations. Give me a break. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. members, in 30 seconds we will continue. [interjections]
Hon. members, continue discussions outside.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Red Deer Regional Airport Expansion

Ms Miller: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I dedicate my statement to recognizing a major transportation and infrastructure improvement to the central Alberta region. On May 12 I had the opportunity to attend the official grand opening of the expanded portion of the Red Deer regional airport. This expansion, in the form of a major runway extension, is a necessary economic boost to a region that is quickly growing. Providing the capacity to serve larger aircraft and longer haul flights will make Red Deer an attractive destination to more airlines.

Along with connecting Red Deer to new regions around the country and continent, the economic impact cannot be stressed enough. The direct impact of Red Deer regional airport is 225 jobs, equalling over $13 million in wages and salaries, with a further $13 million in wages and salaries when indirect impact is considered. With Red Deer regional airport's operations contributing an estimated $52 million in total GDP and $99 million in total economic output to the provincial economy, this is an essential addition to the province and the communities in central Alberta. Red Deer can be a new gateway for tourism and investment in the region.

Mr. Speaker, I'm proud to be part of a government that is investing in projects that contribute to diversifying the economy and create long-term economic growth. The federal government backed out financially, but with strong advocacy from myself and my counterpart from Red Deer-North the government of Alberta funded the $6 million shortfall.

Also, thank you to all the major stakeholders who worked with us to get this done and are continuing to work on making RDRA even more competitive. A special thanks goes out to Red Deer regional airport CEO, Graham Ingham, and former CEO, R.J. Steenstra, for their co-operation and leadership on this project.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon.

Parliamentary Democracy

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have the privilege of living in a democracy. Democracy: demos, the people; kratia, to rule; rule by and for the people. In a country as large and diverse as Canada we have chosen to have a federal representative parliamentary democracy.

It is easy to focus on its flaws. It's not a perfect system. It is not immune from ego or personal and ideological political conflict. In many ways our system of democracy, like all human institutions, is no better or worse than the people that participate in it. Our democracy can ignore the people's will. The Legislature can be dominated by political hubris and political ego. Party politics can visibly reign supreme when question period degenerates into rude, hyperpartisan politics.

Yet our democracy works. We do not make decisions in Alberta at the point of a gun, and the people do have political choice. The checks and balances built into our democracy do ensure that all legislators maintain the rule of law. When it works, no other process of decision-making is better anywhere in the world. We must not let its flaws overshadow the amazing good that is done in this Legislature by its MLAs.

The MLA for Bonnyville-Cold Lake sponsored a private member's bill to address the problem with the distribution of nonconsensual pictures on the Internet. It was supported by all parties in the House and was passed unanimously during this legislative session. The MLA for Chestermere-Rocky View introduced private member's Bill 206 to enhance the communication that will help to connect prospective adoptive parents with expectant families and parents. This is another good example of legislation that appears to have broad support in this House.

It is easy to point out the flaws in our parliamentary democracy, but today let us focus on the good that we do and have done over this past session.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the appropriate time I will move the following motion under Standing Order 42.

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly provide an instruction to the Committee of the Whole that, during its consideration of Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, the committee be granted the power to divide the bill into two bills: the first consisting of the amendments to the Employment Standards Code; and the second consisting of the amendments to the Labour Relations Code.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is five copies of Paula Simons's column in the Edmonton Journal entitled Child Death Review Legislation a Betrayal of Public Trust.

The second one, Mr. Speaker, is the Alberta government's Child Protection and Accountability Act: Impact on Recommendations from the Ministerial Panel on Child Intervention, referenced today in question period, which says the opposite of the Premier's answer.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I table an article today in reference to some of the comments I made in my member's statement in relation to bureaucratic red tape and challenges in immigration. It's entitled Jason Kenney's 10 Biggest Blunders as Immigration Minister. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

2:50

Motions under Standing Order 42

The Speaker: Hon. members, I believe that we may be now at the time to deal with the matter raised by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. I want to now recognize the member to give his arguments with respect to his application under Standing Order 42.

Division of Bill 17

Mr. Cooper:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly provide an instruction to the Committee of the Whole that, during its consideration of Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, the committee be granted the power to divide the bill into two bills: the first consisting of the amendments to the Employment Standards Code; and the second consisting of the amendments to the Labour Relations Code.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to Standing Order 42, the waiving of notice. For reasons of brevity I'll just speak to Standing Order 42(2).

If the Assembly grants unanimous consent to proceed with the motion, each Member who wishes to speak in the debate shall be limited to 20 minutes, and the debate shall conclude

- (a) when all Members who wish to [have taken] part . . . and the question is put.

I might just add Standing Order 42(1).

A motion may, in case of urgent and pressing necessity previously explained by the mover, be made by unanimous consent . . . without notice . . . under Standing Order 39.

There are a couple of reasons why one would do this. Today we have a situation before us that is pressing, and that is that the government is currently on a path to move a piece of legislation through the House that hasn't had appropriate consultation.

Mr. Speaker, we have heard at length from the government about how this piece of legislation is about making significant changes to the Employment Standards Code, and a lot of that discussion has been around the need for compassionate care, the need to update our legislation with respect to employment standards. While there are many, many good things in there, all of those things are being used as political cover to pass other sections of this legislation. We as an Assembly have the ability to make some necessary changes to provide the committee the opportunity to divide these pieces of legislation.

Now, I'll be the first to admit that it is not all that common that this sort of procedural activity would happen, but there is broad support, widespread support inside this Chamber for sections of the bill: in fact, part 1, sections 1 to 100. While there may be some smaller areas of disagreement between the government and the opposition, I'm certain that we could get widespread support to in fact have that piece of legislation passed today.

Now, one small amendment that I would probably still recommend would be to move the coming-into-force date. The coming-into-force date on this section of the bill actually doesn't take place until January 2018. You would think, Mr. Speaker, that if it was the most important piece of the legislation, you would want to do it, say, in September, at the same time the labour piece would come into force. We could have a small debate around that later should the Assembly grant the powers to the committee to divide the bill.

This is a very pressing issue, Mr. Speaker. The reason why it's pressing is because members of the opposition have heard at length from stakeholders that are concerned about this particular piece, the labour portion of the bill. We've heard from business, we've heard from chambers, and we've heard from individuals concerned about some of the ramifications around the second part of this bill. All that this motion here before us is asking for is the ability to proceed to the motion, the ability for us to have a full and robust debate this afternoon around the need for this bill to be separated into two separate pieces.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that you would find that there are a number of times in the past when the Government House Leader has spoken about the risks of large pieces of ominous legislation. The motion before us would allow us to debate that so that we can come to the best-case scenario for Albertans, and that is clearly to divide this bill in two.

I encourage all members of the Assembly to support the motion so that we can do what's right not just for this piece of legislation but for all Albertans.

[Unanimous consent denied]

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I would like to call the committee to order.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments? The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair. I had an opportunity to speak to this earlier today, and I would just like to continue a little bit with some of the questions and concerns that I have with respect to aspects of this legislation.

One of the things that I was talking about earlier, Madam Chair, was the impact that some of the changes in the legislation will have not only on workers but also on the ability of businesses to run their businesses if some of this legislation is passed. Again I'd like to point out that there are some giant assumptions that are being made in this legislation that, for me anyway, are neither family friendly nor fair. The title seems a bit whimsical in that aspect, especially given the fact that we just brought forward a motion to actually split the bill into two so that the compassionate care piece could be taken care of right away and potentially even have the legislation brought forward and have the regulations done and get it going right away.

Right now as it stands, if this legislation does pass, folks that are in need of that compassionate care will not be able to participate, use, or otherwise invoke that legislation until 2018. I'm not really sure how we're helping out anybody who is requiring that compassionate care right now without actually having it go forward right away. For something that has been thrown back in our faces, that we're not agreeing with this legislation, the government sure does not seem to be in any hurry to make sure that that compassionate care piece is brought forward. I don't understand how you can call it family friendly when the most important piece of this legislation, at least as far as what the government has made clear, is actually the last piece that will be invoked for the public's benefit.

3:00

We're looking at some of the legislation, in fact, with regard to compassionate care. We're looking at being able to protect workers to leave for the care of a sick or dying loved one. What does that mean for folks that that's happening to right now other than some of the legislation that's already there? Obviously, the legislation needed to be changed. Somebody who is caring for a loved one right now, has a child go missing, is requiring a specific amount of bereavement that's actually outlined in the new legislation will have to wait till 2018, Madam Chair. Does that not matter to this government?

Does it not matter that sexual violence and domestic violence don't have a time limit on them? It's not going to only happen after 2018. These are the things that are happening right now. That's why this legislation was brought forward, to help out these families. Why would you not want to pass it immediately, right now, with everybody here, get it through the gate? No, no, no. We're going to actually wait till 2018 now. Is that my understanding? Anybody who is having troubles in their home or could be subject to domestic violence: well, the government thinks that that can wait till 2018 to come forward. Is that my understanding?

I want to understand why, when we've given the opportunity to work on one part of the legislation that all of us can unanimously agree on – split the legislation, get it through the gate, make sure that the compassionate care is there, set the precedent, set it right now for everybody – that didn't happen. There's nothing family friendly about that, and it's certainly not fair to somebody who is right now suffering at the hand of somebody who may be violating them or being subjected to abuse. I just don't understand. It is such a contradiction. It's just manipulative. Instead of looking at this piece of legislation in the two pieces in which it needed to be handled – and it's a very reasonable request.

All of the other legislation, had the government chosen to leave it for a little while, given us the summer and some months to do a bit more consultation, to strengthen legislation that obviously needed to be changed – then I look at some of the other changes, which I was mentioning this morning. Division 19 will now be removed from the legislation, should it be passed. Division 19 basically says that if the union decides to have an illegal strike with a trade union and in the private sector, there are absolutely no consequences for that group. There are no consequences for that union now. That union can have an illegal strike. They can also continue to take dues, and they can put a business out of business. They can intimidate the business owners.

Like I said earlier, this is about protections. Well, the workers certainly need to be there for the business to succeed, but if the business is no longer there because of intimidation and the impact of this legislation on the workers towards the business – it's two parts of a puzzle that actually need to work together, and now you've chosen to elevate one cause over the other, inherently throwing a business, potentially, under the bus. Now, if there is a legitimate reason for striking, that's different, but we're talking about illegal strikes here, and that section, division 19, has been removed.

Now, in all fairness the government kept in division 25, which allows for penalties to be put against a union should they throw an illegal strike, which are about $1,000 a day. But unions can fund raise. The AFL can come in and participate, and they can hold a business at mercy until that union gets what they want illegally. I don't know what else to call that other than: the government is okay with encouraging illegal activity. I don't think that's fair at all. In fact, it's so completely wrong that once Albertans understand what this government is doing, it's another notch in the belt of a government that does not care about this province, that does not make life better for Albertans.

We have that piece, and then when we go into the family-friendly pieces or not so family-friendly pieces, I want to speak a little bit about the resolutions that will be addressed through Bill 6. Bill 6, as you know, has been widely criticized across the province, and if you didn't see the rallies and the demonstrations and the active media sites and everything that are still criticizing the government for not consulting with farmers and Albertans – now, a large part of this bill will be left up to the supposed consultations around Bill 6. Well, we haven't seen those consultations, and we certainly haven't seen any regulations brought forward so that the public can look at the regulations and see how it's going to impact family farms and those aspects. I mean, this isn't even about safety per se or any of the other things that are obviously important to making sure that farmers and farm workers and families are protected.

If you look at things like the inconsistencies around compassionate leave time, well, that's another thing that I would think, after seeing what happened with Bill 6, you'd want to have some consultation on. Like, there are so many pieces of this that don't show any consistencies and seem to just be random numbers that are thrown out in order to rush this legislation through in the last days of the Legislature. If we're talking about compassionate leave time, we completely support that. We want all families to have the opportunity to meet their needs through leave, but we want it to be consistent – actually, people need that to be consistent – and within that consistency a good boss or owner of a business or anything like that is going to talk to the people that are in that state at that time to find out what is necessary for that person.

There are going to be unique differences between any person that is looking for compassionate leave time. It's not always going to be easy, but to be so prescriptive is also not necessarily going to be conducive to making sure that people are taken care of. Albertans shouldn't have to be concerned about determining the time allotment they need depending on their family crisis that they're facing. Those are individual situations, and I would assume, whether that's union or private sector, that most people are going to care about the well-being of the people that work for them because they want them to continue on. Maybe that's a grand assumption.

I can only do it based on my own personal, being a job creator and having several businesses, and on the way that we take care of the folks that work for us because ultimately they take care of us. I don't have a business without workers. I don't have a business without having people who are interested in working for me and having relationships with them and knowing their families and going to their kids' birthday parties. That's the way that we roll. I'm nothing without my workers. There's just no point. I can't do it by myself. These people are inherently important to my ability to be successful and to their own as well, so there's got to be an ebb and flow there.

I just wanted to go over some of the crossjurisdictional analysis on card check as well because this is one big issue for me where I believe the fairness is really being called into question. If we are moving card check certification in this bill and getting rid of the secret ballot vote to unionize in a workplace, then let's take a look at some of the crossjurisdictional perspectives here just to give you an idea. In Alberta right now if at least 40 per cent of the employees have signed union cards within 90 days, the Labour Relations Board can arrange for a vote to be held, usually within 15 days, but there's actually no time limit. The vote is to be done by secret ballot if a majority of employees want to join the union. That's going to change. All of a sudden we're going to be jumping to a threshold of 65 per cent, and then if 65 per cent is reached through whatever means possible, all of a sudden the vote is revoked.

In British Columbia a vote is required if at least 45 per cent of the employees have signed union cards, and a labour board can arrange a vote to be held within 10 days. In Saskatchewan a vote is required. In Saskatchewan if at least 45 per cent of the employees have signed union cards, the labour board can arrange a vote to be held.

In Manitoba a vote is required. Now, this is interesting because in 2016 the Conservative government in Manitoba brought back the secret ballot vote through Bill 7, the Labour Relations Amendment Act. Before this if more than 65 per cent – does this sound reminiscent of what's going on here? – signed the cards, the labour board could certify the union. If 45 to 65 per cent of the employees have signed cards, the labour board can arrange a vote to take place within seven days. A public opinion poll by NRG Research Group on behalf of the CFIB found that 71 per cent of Manitobans believe that all workers should have the right to a secret vote. Where are this government's numbers? Madam Chair, where are this government's numbers showing us that this is what the workers want? In Manitoba there was clearly a vote, and it was clear that Manitobans wanted the secret ballot.

3:10

I must say again and reiterate that a secret ballot in no way takes away from the strength or the organization of unionization at all. In fact, the metrics prove that secret ballots actually strengthen a union's ability to unionize because that person can vote freely, with their own will. This government is actually taking away that from these people. I guarantee you that the reason this is being rushed through is because this government knows that. They know that, and they are doing this based on the larger administrative pieces and not for the workers at all. If you cared about the workers at all, you would make sure that they had a secret vote. End stop. That is democracy. Can you imagine if your vote was taken away from you and you had to tell the person standing beside you or the person you worked for who you voted for? Can you imagine? Every single one of us in this House would stand up and make sure that that never happened. Or if your vote was taken away from you.

All of us are reaching out to the youth right now, asking them to vote in their municipal elections, in their provincial elections, in their federal elections, begging the youth to come out and show that they want to participate in democracy. But this government is willing to take it away from the very workers that want to make sure that they have that vote and have democracy. That's shameful, especially, on top of that, then to have the intimidation factor of being able to have an illegal strike and not have any consequences for that. How is this government going to justify that? It's not possible.

To continue on, the card count in New Brunswick: if more than 60 per cent of employees have signed cards, the labour board can certify the union. When 40 to 60 per cent of the employees have signed cards, the labour board will hold a vote.

The other thing, too, is that in this province now if division 19 is removed, guess what? Not only is there not a consequence; they won't decertify the union. They don't have to do that because you have removed division 19 from the legislation. That is the biggest piece of accountability. Explain to Albertans how it is that you're going to justify that. It's not possible.

The Newfoundland and Labrador card count. In 2012 the PC government in Newfoundland got rid of the secret ballot vote if more than 65 per cent of employees signed cards. The Labour Relations Board would certify the union without holding a vote. With 40 to 65 per cent of employees signing cards, the board would hold a certification vote generally within five days. In June of 2014 the PC government brought back the mandatory secret ballot, which is to take place within five days.

Nova Scotia requires at least 40 per cent of signed union cards in order to trigger a vote. Ontario has 40 per cent to trigger a vote. Prince Edward Island has over 55 per cent to trigger a vote. Quebec has 50 per cent.

Then federally, which is really interesting, they got rid of the card check certification altogether. For federally regulated workers a secret ballot will be required in all cases after evidence of support is demonstrated by at least 40 per cent of the membership. At the federal level, for federal employees, they actually have to have a vote. Maybe you should look at some of these other jurisdictions and amend this legislation quickly.

Based on the fact that I with all my heart do not believe in any capacity that this legislation is either fair or family friendly, I would like to propose an amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Member, this will be referred to as amendment A1.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended as follows. The title is amended by striking out "Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act" and substituting "Employment Standards and Labour Relations Statutes Amendment Act, 2017". In the following provisions "Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act" is struck out wherever it occurs and "Employment Standards and Labour Relations Statutes Amendment Act, 2017" is substituted.

Again, I don't think I could be more clear on how I feel about this. It is glaring, the lack of consultation. It is glaring, the lack of crossjurisdictional representation. It is glaring that the government did not take the time to talk to other jurisdictions to see how this would impact the very people they represent.

There is so much evidence, data-based evidence, on how imperative it is that you do these consultations to see what the people actually want. The simple fact is that you have removed the 40 per cent target and put it ahead to 65 per cent and, on top of that, give adequate ability for people to be intimidated and pushed. What I find particularly interesting is that the government keeps talking about the compassionate side of this legislation, yet some mother or family member or somebody in a union could be bullied by the person sitting beside them to sign a card to get to 65 per cent so that a union could happen. How do you justify that? How do you justify that? If you trigger this vote at 40 per cent, chances are that if it's a good decision, people will vote for the union. What are you afraid of?

So change the legislation. There's nothing family friendly about that. That is bullying in the most obvious, obvious capacity. There's absolutely no way for anybody to be able to say without a shadow of a doubt that they had their say democratically when at 65 per cent

all of the sudden the vote is gone. At 65 per cent you should be thankful for and welcoming a vote because, obviously, people are interested. Why not? You're at 65 per cent. So have the vote. What have you got to lose? Nobody has anything to lose by having a democratic vote. It strengthens the union. It strengthens the ability for people to justify the need to unionize under those circumstances. But then again you've also taken out division 19, which clearly, clearly takes away accountability from the unions, that if they strike illegally could be decertified. That decertification was always in the backs of those unions' heads, knowing that if they were going to strike illegally, they could be decertified. But now that's gone, and that's because of this government. That is not fair.

So, yeah. You've taken away their right to vote. My goodness. I mean, if this is any indication of governance at all – you've taken away their right to vote. You have taken away their ability to hold the union accountable. You're basically throwing business under the bus. Surprise, surprise. On top of that, the entire mechanism is a big, big bullying mechanism to be able to take advantage of the people that work for these unions. How are you going to justify that to these folks? I am interested in people coming forward and saying: yes, 65 per cent is great, and I don't need a vote after that. I just doubt that people are going to be willing to give up the vote.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to amendment A1?

Ms Gray: I just wanted to address some of the remarks from my colleague on division 19, removing the ability to suspend dues. The member in her remarks was talking about how important crossjurisdictional scans are, how important it is to look to our neighbours as to what they're doing. Division 19 was unique to Alberta and, in fact, double penalized unions because, of course, we already have the ability for the fines, that we have left in, which are standard for other jurisdictions as well. But what typically happens more often is for there to be court proceedings. That's usually where these things start to get discussed.

So being able to remove the ability to suspend dues to unions – I'll clarify that union dues do not get paid during a strike because the members are out on the line, and they're striking. There are no union dues to suspend at that point. What would happen is that after the strike ended, when everyone comes back to work, then union dues would start to be suspended.

3:20

Again, it's something that only Alberta did, and it double penalized. Not necessary. There are other measures. This was not something that was considered controversial during our discussions with both employers and labour going forward. And being aware of what's happening in other jurisdictions is really important.

Speaking of that, the member, who was speaking about other jurisdictions and card check certification, may not be aware that the federal government is currently bringing back card check certification. It will become the new standard for federal government, and that's in progress. As well, Ontario is expanding card check. They currently use it in the construction industry, and Ontario is expanding it to other areas as well. So there are other jurisdictions that are moving towards that card check system.

The final remark that I'd like to make is that the member opposite talked about as an employer wanting to treat employees respectfully and to work with them, and her experience is absolutely the experience of most employers in our province. It's been my experience as an employee, in many cases, that we have wonderful employers in this province, but that's not the universal story. Every time I talk about the protections that are a part of Bill 17, whether it's on a radio call-in show or at a round-table, the stories that I hear, Madam Chair. Just yesterday while I was in Calgary, I heard the story of a woman whose son experienced over a hundred seizures on a weekend. When that person needed to take time to make sure that their son got to the hospital, they lost their job because we don't have the job-protected leave. I absolutely respect that most employers most of the time provide these, but there are strong reasons why we need to have these, and there are strong reasons why other jurisdictions already have them.

These types of measures, the process that went into talking to all stakeholders have brought forward Bill 17, which is fair and family friendly. I believe strongly in the title that we have. We have found a balance between the two parties when it comes to the labour relations system, when it comes to employment standards, making sure we're balancing the relationship and the power dynamic between those two so that we can have a fair collective bargaining system in our province.

I very much wanted to address just briefly a couple of the member's comments because a crossjurisdictional comparison and deep discussions with all stakeholders were important to us. I will not be supporting the member's amendment to the title of the bill because this bill is fair; it is family friendly. It will make a significant difference for workers in our province, and I'm quite proud of the work that we've done to bring this forward today.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you. I wanted to take a moment to thank the hon. minister for the changes to compassionate care. We completely agree with you a hundred per cent. In fact, that's why we want to split the bill so that that can get put through right away. The concern I have, Madam Chair, is that for all of those beautiful words that were just said – and I completely agree with you – it doesn't get enacted until 2018. Like, that's not helping anybody right now. We were wanting to put it through right now, pass it in one day, and get it through the gate so that compassionate care can be put forward as legislation right now. I completely agree with you.

My issue here is that if we're looking at card check, the federal level is going to be at 40 per cent, and it still triggers – it still triggers – a vote. We're not talking about that. We're talking about the vote itself. Sixty-five per cent enables unions to be able to manipulate and intimidate and work over the system so that they are not able to have their vote. The minute that they reach the 65 per cent threshold, that's it. It's done. Why remove the vote at all? That's where the change needs to be made. Do whatever threshold you want to trigger the vote, but have the vote. That secret ballot is the most important piece.

The other piece that I also wanted to address is the fines. Like I said, there is a balance. Division 25 is the fines. That's the thousand dollars a day that a union will be charged if they do an illegal strike. But there are ways that a union can fund raise. They can use the AFL. There are a gazillion ways that a union can raise that money and hold that company at bay. That is not good for the workers, and that's not good for the business.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1? The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Madam Chair. Earlier today there was, I thought, a really good way to solve this problem – and it was brought up by the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills – to be able to make this a family-friendly bill. What he wanted to do was to essentially split the bill into two components so that we can demonstrate to everybody what the family-friendly components are and what the labour relations parts of the bill are. You know, when the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills brought up notice of Standing Order 42, he proposed the following motion. He said:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly provide an instruction to the Committee of the Whole that, during its consideration of Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act . . .

So he's going back and making sure that he's looking at this.

. . . the committee be granted the power to divide the bill into two bills:

Two bills so that we don't have the problem that the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View was talking about, the part that talks about illegal strikes or strikes that, really, there's no notification. Like, if it's 65 per cent, you just become a union. What's that got to do with a fair and family-friendly workplace?

It also goes on to say:

the first consisting of the amendments to the Employment Standards Code;

That's what we were talking about there.

and the second consisting of the amendments to the Labour Relations Code.

Now, you can make that family friendly if we divide it in two. I thought that was a very fair motion that he had proposed earlier today.

This name is, frankly, just not what it says it is. I agree with this amendment. We need to have this name changed because it's just not what we're looking for in a bill. "Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act" should be amended, substituted with the "Employment Standards and Labour Relations Statutes Amendment Act" to reflect what this is because that's what we're talking about for the most part. I would love to see – there are so many parts to this bill that I think need to be brought forward and that I would be able to support. If we were able to divide those two, I would be able to support them. But separately we need to be able to go back and talk. We need to be able to go to our constituents and have that time to be able to show them what's in this bill.

Whenever you make a bill, it's very complex, and each word can have a nuance all of its own. We have to respect all the employers that are in this province that will be impacted by this bill. Each word can mean something else, and we frankly don't want to see any unintended consequences happen as a result of having words that perhaps were not the best intentioned.

Much of this bill deals with unions. There again, I don't see where this becomes a family-friendly workplaces act when you're talking about unions and the unions' ability to salt. Yesterday I had talked about salting, and I will remind the House again that salting is when a union employee or sympathizer gets a job at a non-union workplace solely in order to organize workers or disrupt company operations. So if they're hired and on that same day that they're hired they want to be able to form a union, but they have not actually worked there to see if there are actually any problems in that workplace, they can just go ahead and try to create a union. That causes disruption, frankly, in the workplace. It does not make it family friendly but disruptive, Madam Chair. The title is misleading. It, frankly, needs to be changed.

3:30

You know, these are reasons why I would be definitely supporting this amendment, because it's a well-planned-out, well-thought-out amendment. We need to be accountable as a government, and we don't want to be misleading to the public. If you're giving names that just aren't true or not completely true – there are parts that are absolutely correct when you're talking with regard to being able to support people in the workplace, but when you're talking about unions, I don't get how those two should be coming together.

For those reasons, Madam Chair, I will be supporting this amendment, but I can't support this bill the way it's been put together. If we can change the name, that's a step forward, but I really think that we should have done what the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills said and divided the bill into two parts. That would have saved us, frankly, a lot of time because we could have now moved on with that one part and been able to vote on it and then from now until October, November be able to talk to our constituents and talk to the workplaces and talk to all the people that are stakeholders that will be impacted by this bill.

In Ontario they've taken two years, Madam Chair – two years – to be able to go to this, to get to this point, and we're trying to do this in weeks. We're talking about fairness. Right in there it says "fair" as the first word of the title. Well, how is that fair to Albertans? I would like the government to be able to explain the fairness of that, when you take weeks to do something that Ontarians are given years to do. This does not demonstrate transparency to the public. It doesn't give them any chance to be able to really look at it and look at the nuances that will impact them.

Again, I will be supporting this amendment, and I hope the rest of the House here will do so as well. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. A pleasure to rise here in Committee of the Whole to speak a little bit about Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. I guess I just wanted to start a little bit with regard to what we're talking about here in terms of splitting up the bill, and I'm drawing on my experience from my previous work with regard to speaking to this. I'm not aware of any union contracts anywhere where they take a certain section of the language and divide it up and then the rest of the language is all over here, essentially having two contracts in a workplace. I'm not aware of that occurring anywhere. All of the language is together. That's why they call it labour language, okay? It's to help direct how relations between employees and employers are supposed to work.

When we're talking about this, let me quickly touch on a couple of other things that we're looking at in terms of the labour language with regard to the minimum wage, repealing the ability for employers to pay employees with disabilities less than the minimum wage. Now, granted, there have been no permits issued on this in the last 10 years, but, you know, again, this is labour language. When we're looking at that as a package, that is part of the stuff that we have to deal with. Trying to separate these things out is not really practical because we're talking about the language as a whole.

All right. Some of the other things that are being discussed within the language are youth employment and how we need to start complying with our obligations to the International Labour Organization with regard to youth employment, rest periods, compressed work weeks, temporary layoffs or terminations, deductions in terms of employers that penalize employees for a dine-and-dash or a gas-and-dash. Okay. Again, it's all labour language. To try to divvy up the two, we're not dealing with it as a whole.

To get a little bit further with regard to the amendment that has been proposed about "Fair and Family-friendly," let's focus on the "fair." Part of the consultations that were done with businesses was a bit of a concern with regard to the implementation time with some of the leaves and how that would impact their businesses. There was a bit of, I guess, an ask by these businesses that they be allowed to have a little bit of time in order to implement and adjust to these changes that will be coming through. When we're seeing some of these different timelines in terms of implementation, those were part of the reasons why we're seeing the fluctuations.

I think, very clearly, that when we're talking about the language as a whole, we are talking about fair language. We are talking about family-friendly workplaces. It's all put together. I think the bill is very appropriately titled. I appreciate the member across the way bringing the amendment forward. Unfortunately, I will not be able to support it at this time.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. Speaking to amendment A1, essentially to strike out the current title, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, and replace it with "Employment Standards and Labour Relations Statutes Amendment Act, 2017." I think this is a completely reasonable amendment to make. When we look at our Labour Relations Code and our Employment Standards Code, they are two codes that are separate, and we know exactly what we're speaking to if the title reflects the two codes that we're speaking to.

You know, the minister, if she wanted to, could have easily said, "Fair and Union-friendly" because I would suggest that many of the changes within here are pandering to her union affiliates and the New Democratic Party affiliates and the wishes of those businesses to be able to grow their business and utilize government legislation, government regulations to help them grow their business. I would suggest that when we look at this bill being union friendly as opposed to family friendly, you know, we could look at the fact that the bill is friendly to unions but not necessarily friendly to the employers, and there is an unfair balance, I believe, in what is being proposed here.

Card check certification. Sure, the minister will talk about how the federal government and the Ontario government are expanding their card check systems, but part of the problem is that if the need is so critical for unionization certification, it would be obvious, and the workforce would have no problem meeting the current criteria. But what the union bosses are encouraging this government to do now is to pave the way for them to grow their business in a way that's not necessarily looking out for the best interests of the workers. I suggest that this is more looking out for the best interests of big-business unions and the union executives rather than looking out for everyday Alberta workers. If the government is doing what they're called to do – and that's to serve the people of Alberta, not just to serve their union bosses – then they would look for family-friendly language here as opposed to union-friendly.

3:40

The minister also talked about double penalizing. So here we are; we're union friendly. Again, we're talking about being union friendly. She did not consider it to be fair that they were being double penalized, but she also mentioned that she did not consider increasing the penalties either. I don't know how old the penalties are, but possibly that should be looked into. The penalties should be considered to increase. If the union is involved in illegal activities, the penalties are what the penalties are, but now we're looking at a very union-friendly act here, and we're saying: oh, well, they shouldn't be double penalized for their illegal activity. I fail to see how this Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act title actually applies in this situation.

I think what we recognize also is that this bill is not fair to the workers that have their rights taken away. The secret ballot is very much a democratic right within our country, and to move in this direction, where all of a sudden we open ourselves up to union intimidation without possibly all the facts being put in front of each of the individuals that are being asked to sign a membership card or to join the union, then I would suggest that that is unfair practice. It's not fair to the employees if they're not able to actually have all of the information put before them and they're being fed very one-sided information.

You know, this legislation is more about pandering to the wills of big unions as opposed to pandering to the needs of Albertans – Alberta workers, Alberta employees – the people that the Labour minister is called to represent and to try and present legislation and an environment for that will encourage investment in our province, which will then create jobs. This piece of legislation addressing the Employment Standards Code is acceptable, but when we move into the Labour Relations Code and we're doing it just for the will of the big union bosses – I didn't have anybody coming to me when talking to my constituents and saying: "Yeah, our union rules are out of sync, and this is not fair to the unions. They're working in an environment that makes it impossible for them to be able to actually exist." I believe what's currently in place has been very acceptable and very fair, so we need to recognize the relative labour peace that we've had over the last three decades and recognize that a labour marketplace can work very effectively without having to pander to the union bosses.

I believe the amendment makes a lot of sense. It speaks to what the actual bill is addressing, and that's the Employment Standards Code and the Labour Relations Code. The title Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act is so subjective. Everybody has a different interpretation of what's fair, what's family friendly, and I believe that that title is completely irrelevant to the legislation that's been put before us.

With that, I would encourage everyone to vote in favour of this amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I'd just like to briefly speak about some of the reasons why I believe it's important that we accept this amendment and make the necessary change. Since the government was elected in 2015, we've seen this continual decision by the NDP to politicize legislation, and at every turn we see the government using the opportunity to say one thing and do another.

Any time a piece of legislation with a fancy name comes across, it should provide folks the opportunity to just put a pause on and dig a little bit deeper into what's exactly happening. You know, traditionally speaking – and maybe that's often in this Chamber – at least previous to this government, we saw pieces of legislation being called what they actually were. A good example of that in this particular session would be Bill 15, the Tax Statutes Amendment Act, 2017. It's fairly clear what that piece of legislation does. It is a statutes amendment act on the tax statutes. The Securities Amendment Act, 2017, is an act that amends the Securities Act.

This one is borderline, but I'll give it to them: An Act to Strengthen Municipal Government. Now, probably a more appropriate title would be the municipal government amendment act, but it's close. Then we see pieces of legislation like this one, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. There could be lots and lots and lots of things that that piece of legislation does.

Every time the government chooses to say one thing and do another, they use a fancy name. A perfect example would be Bill 1 from last session, the Promoting Job Creation and Diversification Act. We all know how well that particular piece of legislation created a job. Another good example of this from last session: An Act to Implement a Supreme Court Ruling Governing Essential Services. Well, it certainly did that. There was much in that piece of legislation that was way beyond the scope of the title. The Seniors' Home Adaptation and Repair Act: that was Bill 5 from last session. Again, a piece of legislation that didn't adequately reflect what was happening.

Now, here in this session: the Voluntary Blood Donations Act. We all know that that was around banning paid plasma, not really about encouraging blood donation. An Act to Enhance Post-secondary Academic Bargaining: don't know why they didn't say, "implement the Supreme Court ruling," because that's the same excuse they used. An Act to Support Orphan Well Rehabilitation: also a very friendly name to describe what's happening but not accurately reflecting what is actually in the legislation.

My colleague, very rightly, is efforting to call the legislation exactly what it is. We could have gone much further and in itself made it political by saying something like, you know, an act to remove card check, an act to strengthen unions, an act to give the AFL a leg up, whatever. We could have. But, no, my colleague is efforting to change the name to exactly what they're proposing in the bill. It says nothing in this amendment about splitting the bills, although it's well established that that's a good idea. It says nothing about splitting the bills; it only speaks about what it is. Employment standards and labour relations statutes amendment act: that is what Bill 17 does. It amends all sorts of different statutes in two separate areas, and that's what we're doing.

We should stop overpoliticizing the names of bills, start calling them what they are. That's exactly why members in this Chamber should vote to support this amendment.

3:50

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate that, and I will try to be brief on this. This bill, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act: there have been some questions that have been asked about why the name was picked.

I was thinking about a convention that I went to last year, that I was invited to. That convention was a union convention. It was the first one I've actually gone to in my life. I actually gained some understanding about why it's called the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. The reason why is because when you go to a union convention, they call each other brothers and sisters, so I now understand what this meant. The actual reality is that family friendly means union family friendly. I'm trying to help my colleagues to understand, to be able to read into the nuance of this question. The question that I'm asking is: how does the fair part fit it? I'm still really questioning and scratching my head on that one.

You know, the other part that I really wanted to say is that every time I hear someone say "fair" in any title, it reminds me of a used-car salesman when they say: "I promise you that this car is shipshape. It'll be fantastic. You won't have any problems with it." Immediately my spidey sense was tingling on this one, and I started to think: well, we really need to read into the details of this act.

Anyway, I just wanted to be able to bring some clarity to my colleagues to help them understand that, yes, this makes sense, that we should be striking it out and calling it what it is, but my colleagues need to understand that this isn't regular families that we're talking about. It's actually union families that we're talking about. That might help my colleagues understand this a little bit better.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1? The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to speak to the amendment put forward by the hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View to amend the title of Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, and replace it with the "Employment Standards and Labour Relations Statutes Amendment Act, 2017."

Names are important. After my third child was born, I thought that my wife and I were on the same page with regard to the name that this child would have. I got it explained to me quite clearly afterwards that somehow we hadn't agreed on the name. I thought that we had agreed on the name Sarah, and I thought that we had agreed that her middle name would be Elizabeth. Well, I got the Sarah part wrong. When she was about two years old or so, because she couldn't say Elizabeth, she would go running around saying: I'm Sarah a little bit Smith. I wondered if that had something to do with the postman. That's a family joke. I can say that. I don't know if we got Sarah's first name right or not because "Sarah" in the Jewish culture means princess. She is definitely the daughter that I love more than anything else in the world, but I am not sure that we would ever call her a princess.

Now, language is important. I know that as a teacher I would sometimes have to explain to my kids that using appropriate language in an essay was important, that there's a difference between, say, a social studies essay and an English essay. They're written, sometimes, very differently. The kind of language that you might use, the descriptive language that you might use, in an English essay is not necessarily the language that you would use in a social studies formal essay. As a teacher there's professional language that we use. We have formative and summative evaluations. We use that language to try to make clear the purpose of the action that we're going through, of the assessment that we're using.

So language is important, and titles are important. Names are important, and the name and the title in this amendment is actually important. I thank the hon. member previous to me who read through all of the different titles that have been given to legislation by this government. They were accurate, formal, reasonable names. I think that this amendment speaks to the need to pursue that, to pursue a language and a title that actually describes what the amendment is going to be all about. The title Employment Standards and Labour Relations Statutes Amendment Act is a very descriptive, formal, and accurate title. This piece of legislation is better off having that kind of title and language than the one that the government has provided for it, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

We've heard a lot about what is fair. You know, when we go through the labour code portion of this act, we can see that there is going to be a great deal of debate, I have a belief, as we go through and ask ourselves what is fair. Is it fair that first contract negotiations can be arbitrated after 90 days? Is that fair to the workers? Is it fair to the employers? There's going to be some reasonable, I would believe, disagreement on that.

We have a formula that we're probably going to be talking about called the Rand formula, that looks at how workers are covered by the collective agreement and that if they are, they have to pay union dues. But this is a balancing, this Rand formula, between the worker and the employer and the union. A worker should have the right to decide whether or not they are going to join any organization, including a union, but if they're going to be covered by that collective agreement, the courts have ruled that they have to at least pay the union dues. There's an attempt to find a balance there in the idea that you have the right to have a union, but you don't have the obligation to join it.

What we're looking at here is trying to find balance. Whether or not this act finds that balance and whether it finds a fair balance in some of the pieces of the Labour Relations Code that they're looking to change is, again, up for debate. You know, we face a situation where Bill 17 makes mandatory the collection of union dues by the employer should the union request it. Automatic dues collection by the employer: is that fair to the employer? Is it fair that they should have to outside of the bargaining process? I mean, if they agreed to do that through the bargaining process, that's one thing, but when they're forced to do that and to have the costs and the time and the paperwork that go along with that, is that fair? Many people will argue that it's not.

4:00

When we start to look at this piece of legislation, I believe that this changing of the title of this bill will actually make it better. It's about making it clearer, because there are going to be arguments about whether this is fair and whether it's family friendly. Is it fair that as a worker I could have my right to a secret ballot restricted, that if it reaches 65 per cent, that now is a threshold that will take away my right to a secret ballot? I don't believe that's fair to a worker. I believe that opens the worker to a wide range of perhaps bullying and discrimination. I believe that they should always have the right to a secret ballot. That's what's fair, I would argue, for the workers of this province.

I guess that when we take a look, I would speak in favour of this amendment. I speak in favour of it because I believe that the title is a more accurate description of what this bill is all about. I believe that it sets aside that misleading title, and it allows us to actually debate the merits of the bill. So I would speak in favour of this and ask for the House to support the amendment.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1?

Seeing none, I will call the question on amendment A1.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A1 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:02 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Hunter	Smith
Clark	Panda	Taylor
Drysdale	Rodney	van Dijken
Fildebrandt

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Ganley	McLean
Babcock	Gray	McPherson

Bilous	Hinkley	Miller
Carlier	Hoffman	Miranda
Carson	Horne	Nielsen
Ceci	Jansen	Payne
Connolly	Kazim	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Kleinstauber	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Loyola	Sigurdson
Dang	Luff	Turner
Eggen	Malkinson	Westhead
Feehan	McCuaig-Boyd	Woollard
Fitzpatrick
Totals:	For – 10	Against – 37

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now on the original bill. The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. As we dug into Bill 17, my staff identified areas that they felt could use some improvement within the bill, and with that I will rise and would like to please propose an amendment.

4:20

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your amendment will be referred to as A2. Please go ahead.

Mr. Clark: Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in the following provisions by striking out “48 hours” and substituting “1 week’s”: section 34 in the proposed section 53.92(1), section 35 in the proposed sections 53.952(1), 53.962(1), and 53.972(1).

What this amendment will do is to change the notice requirement for return to work from 48 hours to one week, and this is for the longer job-protected leave provisions within the bill. The current period, for example, for compassionate care leave, which I believe is currently eight weeks: the bill seeks to increase that to 27, if I’m not mistaken. That notice period of two weeks seems a bit long, but a notice period of only 48 hours does not seem like quite long enough.

When we have a longer term leave that could be up to half a year or perhaps even longer than that, the employer is very likely to put in a temporary backfill employee in that place. If that person is there for more than 90 days but less than a year, they would be entitled to either one week’s notice or one week’s severance pay. This amendment seeks to align the notice period for the employee returning to work after a leave with that severance pay to ensure that it is something that is, again, fair to the employer and, I also feel, doesn’t put an undue burden on the returning employee.

This is based both on our own analysis and reading of the bill but also on stakeholders, particularly chambers of commerce speaking on behalf of employers, who have indicated that this would be something they would like to see changed. I have had the opportunity to speak with the minister on this. I imagine that perhaps she will make some of her own comments. I also wanted to thank my team for their hard work in pulling together this amendment in short order.

My sincere hope is that through this amendment we can improve the bill without unduly burdening employees and, certainly, without unduly burdening employers, allowing people to take their leave. I think the reality in practice is that the vast, vast majority of employees and employers would be in contact with one another anyway, but this ensures that employers will not be surprised by a relatively small notice window of an employee returning to work to rightly claim their position even if they have been away for a long period of time.

It’s my hope that the entire House can support this amendment. I do think it makes the bill much stronger. Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to amendment A2? The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you, Madam Chair. I’d like to thank the hon. member for not only bringing forward this amendment but bringing it to my attention in advance so that I would have a chance to review it. I think it is absolutely understandable, making sure that employers have adequate time to adjust, particularly in the case of one of these longer term leaves that we were talking about. My office as well had heard from chambers about this. Making sure that we have that flexibility so that employers can prepare, understanding that in so many circumstances employers and employees will negotiate these arrangements – and often there might even be frequent updates while someone is away so that the employer knows what’s happening – make those arrangements together, hopefully, most of the time, and providing this minimum one week of notice is more than reasonable.

I think that the member opposite’s amendment does make sense. I’m happy to support this amendment going forward. Thank you again for reaching out to me on this.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A2?

Seeing none, I’ll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Thank you, Madam Chair. I want to bring forward an amendment to Bill 17, the so-called Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your amendment will be referred to as A3. Please go ahead.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Thank you, Madam Chair. The amendment we’re proposing here is quite simple. Building on Bill 1 of the very first session of this Legislature, it is to ensure that union dues are not spent on political or partisan campaigning of any kind. The first bill that the government brought forward after the last election was one that enjoyed all-party support. It was something that the Wildrose Party campaigned on in the last election, to ban corporate and union donations from politics. It was a common-sense move. It was a big step in the right direction, at least a step towards getting big money out of politics.

But the job is not done. Currently unions are able to use union dues to finance campaigns of a partisan or, at the very least, political or ideological nature. Unions are able to take the dues from members, dues that members have no right whatsoever currently to not pay – they take mandatory dues from members – and they can spend them on political advertising. You know, we see in Ontario that unions – I think they call themselves the Working Families coalition – spend more money than even the Conservative Party of Ontario on advertising. They are, for all intents and purposes, the largest or the second-largest spender of dollars on advertising during elections in Ontario. We have witnessed in recent years a sharp increase in political union activity.

Now, the role of a union is to bargain collectively for the rights and compensation of workers. It's their job to deal with their employer, to get the best possible working conditions for workers, to get a fair level of compensation. That is the legitimate role of unions.

What is not the legitimate role of unions is to take union members' dues, dues that they're forced to pay even if they don't want to be a member of that union or regardless of the political party that they might support or not support, and to put them towards a political campaign. While it is currently illegal for a union to donate to the NDP or to the Wildrose or to the Progressive Conservatives, it would be quite within the bounds for a union to spend money promoting the ideas of the NDP or, heaven forbid, the Wildrose or the Progressive Conservatives. They could also use it on attack ads, probably not against the NDP but more likely against the Wildrose and Progressive Conservatives.

4:30

This is something that is very commonplace in Ontario. In return for benefits the Ontario Liberals help the unions, and the unions turn around and spend massive sums of cash attacking their Conservative opponents. This gives the Ontario Liberals, which are, for all intents and purposes, more or less New Democrats, a massive unfair advantage in elections. It largely spikes elections in favour of the incumbent government because they're able to do that.

Now, that's not just unfair in terms of elections, in terms of giving one party who favours union boss power an unfair advantage. It's not just unfair from that perspective. It's also unfair from the perspective of union members. In my constituency we don't have a very high rate of unionization, but of the private-sector union members in my constituency very, very, very few, it would be fair to say, support the NDP. It would not be fair to those people that they would be forced against their will as individuals with their own political preferences for whom they support and whom they don't support, to force them to support political campaigns, to force them to support attack ads or promotional ads in favour or against any political party.

Imagine that we had a community association somewhere and the dues were mandatory, but that community association was allowed to take mandatory dues and spend it on ads attacking the NDP for whatever kind of policy. Say there was a policy that they didn't like. It would not be fair to the members of that community association who support the NDP that their dues would be used against the party of their choice. It is a fundamental violation of their basic, individual, democratic rights and their rights to free expression and assembly.

No one should ever have to have their money go towards supporting a political party or a political campaign that they do not support. They should also never have to have their dues used against a political party that they do support. This is basic fairness and equity, and I would hope that the members on the government side would recognize the fairness of this, that passing this amendment would go at least some way in making clear to the public that this bill is not, in fact, what we suspect it's about: trying to increase the political clout of union bosses in Alberta society for the political benefit of the NDP. This is a chance for the NDP to actually do something substantive on this bill to improve the lives of workers. This would improve the lives of workers: to not take the dues of union members against their own will for spending on political campaigns.

You know that it happens. They know that it happens. They know that unions right now have people on their payroll who are nothing but propaganda chiefs. Their job is to sit there and do opposition research and to write blog posts and write propaganda. That's all they do. They do nothing but that. They don't actually do anything for the collective bargaining of workers. Some of these people on union payrolls do nothing but propaganda all day long.

If those people want to write propaganda all day long, they have the right to do that, but they should not have the right to do that with the dues of union members, the dues of people who have no legal recourse currently to opt out of their union dues, people who must pay dues to a union even if they don't want to be a part of that union. Then those dues can get turned around and used for promoting the partisan propaganda of the NDP.

We know it happens right now. We know exactly who it is and how it happens, and we know that this comes to the direct benefit of the NDP. The NDP benefit from the status quo, where they are able to wash their hands of it and not get their own hands dirty because their union boss friends, who control the NDP – they're embedded in the constitutional structure of the NDP, where union bosses effectively run and own the NDP. They're able to stand back and say that their hands are clean, that they have not gotten their hands dirty, while unions are paying for propagandists with the dues of union members, hard-earned dollars.

People working want to know that their dollars are being spent effectively when they have no choice but to hand them over. When they hand them over to government, they want to know that their tax dollars are being spent smartly and fairly. They don't like it when they see that the NDP spent $10 million a year on carbon tax propaganda ads. Those ads are an abject and complete waste of money, and most taxpayers cringe when they see them on TV. The good news about when they put those carbon tax ads on is that we're pretty sure that every time people see those ads on TV, the NDP get less popular because it reminds them of what they're doing.

But that is beside the point of it, that it is unfair. It is unfair that taxpayers have to pay for partisan propaganda from the NDP. It is equally true that union members who are paying dues often have no choice because that money comes straight off their paycheque, and they get no choice whatsoever on if they're paying those dues or not, and there is no accountability for how those dues are spent. They have no rights to ensure that those union dues are not going towards partisan propaganda. Even if a majority of the members of that union wanted the money to go to propaganda, if 51 per cent of the members of a union wanted to see their union spend money on attacking one political party or supporting another political party, the rights of the 49 per cent are being violated. We do not have a legitimate right to vote ourselves other people's money for our benefit even if we have the majority. This kind of democracy is like two foxes and a hen voting on what to have for dinner.

Even if a majority of the union vote to support a union boss on supporting a political party or attacking another political party with their dues, the 49 per cent have rights, minority rights. These are real minority rights, the right of the minority in any democratic situation to have their voices heard, to have their own say. In the Legislature the minority have rights. They are entrenched in the rules. The NDP are going to enjoy minority rights in the Legislature very soon, so I hope that they respect them. The minority in any situation needs to have the right to not be forced to have their own money spent on some cause that they would vehemently disagree with.

This amendment is an opportunity for the NDP to do that, to show that this bill is not a transparent partisan effort to help themselves with their own dwindling chances at re-election. I hope that all members of this Legislature will stand up and support it.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to amendment A3? The Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'm very pleased to speak to this amendment, specifically because it gives me a chance to talk about so many of the important things that our government has done to make sure that our democracy is strong. In this case Bill 1 of our government was banning corporate and union donations. Taking that big money out of politics has been a huge priority for our government, and I'm very pleased with the work that we've been able to do so far, making sure that voters have their voice back and making sure that voters are able to contribute to the conversations that way, making sure that corporate and union dollars are not influencing our political system in that way.

We followed up Bill 1 with changes to our elections financing legislation. I was very proud to bring that forward. It did a number of important things, spending caps and whatnot, but the other thing that it did was put some real boundaries on third-party advertising, making sure that if third-party advertising was taking place in our province, the advertisers would need to register with Elections Alberta that all of those pieces are in play so that we know who is advertising when there are ads on TV either outside of an election period or within an election period. Taking our province several leaps and bounds forward to get big money out of politics and to make sure that we have some of the strongest third-party advertising rules in the country was a priority for our government.

I will not be supporting this amendment. I'm very proud of the work that we've done. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to this, but I will not be supporting the member opposite's amendment to our Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

4:40

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A3? The Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Thank you, Madam Chair. The Minister of Labour didn't say why she's not supporting it. She talked about a bill that every single member of this Legislature voted for, Bill 1, of the First Session of this Legislature. That's something we all supported. That's what she talked about, that that was a good bill. We were behind it. So we agree with what she just said. We passed the bill about this time two years ago, and it was a good bill. We agree on that. But she didn't say one word, not one word, about why she will not support this amendment, why she does believe that unions should be allowed to take the dues of their members and spend them on partisan campaigns.

Perhaps it's because the minister has a conflict of interest. Perhaps the minister has a conflict of interest here in her re-election. Perhaps her re-election depends on the ability of unions to take the dues of workers against the will of those workers, against the individual consent of each and every worker, and spend that on partisan advertisements at the next election. Perhaps they're counting on big union bosses bailing them out on partisan advertising using union dues. That sounds like a conflict of interest to me.

The minister should at least give a reason why she won't vote for this amendment. She didn't give a single reason. She stood up and said: we passed a bill two years ago; that bill was nice. Thank you very much. That bill is not here before us. This amendment and this bill are here before us right now. She has a conflict of interest on this. In fact, I'm not sure how she can sit here and say that she doesn't because her own re-election is going to hinge very much on the ability of the AFL and big union bosses to force people against their will into unions – because they've taken away the secret ballot – and the ability to use the dues of workers against their own will to fund the NDP's re-election.

I'm glad that the minister supports a bill that we all voted for two years ago, but I want to know why she will not support the amendment here right now. I'd like to hear the minister speak to this amendment, not Bill 1 of the First Session of this Legislature. Let's hear the minister.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Madam Chair. I just have a question for the Member for Strathmore-Brooks. Not in the speech he just gave but when he was moving the amendment, he mentioned that union members currently don't have the option to opt out of paying union dues, and he said "yet." I just wonder if the member can clarify his position on the Rand formula for the Assembly.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Mr. Fildebrandt: First, I'll say that I'd like the government to answer the questions that the opposition is asking. This is their bill, and they need to be accountable for it and answer questions for it. It's a sad day when the opposition is more likely to answer questions from the government than the government is willing to answer from the opposition.

But I'll amuse him with what I think about that. I don't believe that any worker should be forced against their own individual decision to pay into an organization with a political agenda. The minority of voters in Strathmore-Brooks should not be forced to be members of the Wildrose Party because a majority of constituents in Strathmore-Brooks voted for the Wildrose and for me. The minority in Strathmore-Brooks have the right to not fund my campaign. The minority of workers also have the right to not fund the NDP's re-election. The same thing goes. Every single worker should have the right to make their own decisions, independent of what union bosses tell them, of what the NDP tells them.

Now that the opposition has answered the government's questions, I want to hear the government answer the opposition's questions. Let's hear them.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A3? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. A pleasure to rise to speak to this amendment here to the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. I certainly want to echo some of the sentiments that the minister had brought up about Bill 1 and taking union and corporate donations out of politics. Maybe I'll say it a slightly different way. That means that unions cannot put money into the political process.

Perhaps maybe if the member was a little bit more familiar with the workings of a union and how it's structured – you probably know that the membership has the ability to ask about the financial workings of the union, what they do with this money, and they also have the ability to vote within their union. If they think those monies are not going in the proper places, they can certainly direct how that is supposed to happen because, as everybody knows, a union isn't, you know, the president and the secretary. The union is the membership – okay? – so they are the ones that direct that.

The minister had also made some remarks around Bill 35 with the advertising boundaries that were put in, so I don't think the member needs to worry about how advertising is going to be done. There's disclosure around that, and Albertans, of course, will be able to make their decisions on their own.

I would certainly encourage the member to maybe reach out, learn a little bit more about the structures of how unions work internally, how their finances work, and I'm sure some of his concerns could be addressed in those fashions.

With that said, Madam Chair, I'm not able to support this amendment at this time, and I would encourage others in the House to not support it as well.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Taylor: Yes. Thank you, Madam Chair. I think this is a really good amendment. You know, it just, frankly, gives clarity and clarity that would be needed. If you're truly wanting to not have these political donations going from the union, then there's absolutely no harm. It says, "No deductions made by an employer and remitted to a union pursuant to this section may be used for political advertising." What's wrong with that? If you're clearly saying that there's no money that's going to be going towards this – that's what I've heard – then why would you be afraid of having this amendment? I think it's a great amendment.

You know, you had talked about it. The government had put forward Bill 35, the Fair Elections Financing Act. There again they're using that word "fair." The government likes to use the word "fair." We're using "fair" with this bill, and we were using "fair" back then. I don't see why we keep saying "fair." In this case fair to whom? Fair to the union? Fair to these union employees? Not the union employees because they don't have a chance to say. So I don't think that part is fair, but it is for the unions themselves.

This is a good amendment that I can support because it does give clarity and it would help out the bill itself, Madam Chair. So I will support this amendment. Thank you. [interjections]

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. members. Just a reminder to all members if you could please speak through the chair, not to each other.

Any other members wishing to speak to the amendment A3? The hon. Member for Strathcona-Sherwood Park.

Cortes-Vargas: Thank you, Madam Chair. I just wanted to rise to speak to the amendment because I'm opposed to it for a variety of reasons. I think that the members opposite, you know, are dripping with hypocrisy when they come up and bring something like this in, especially when we talked about third-party advertising, when we made sure that the playing field that we're working in is fair for all parties. Like, they would never introduce something that would allow the Rebel media to have limited freedom of speech. They just wouldn't do that. When you look at third-party advertising, when you look at being able to make sure that there's an equal playing field, we've already done that. That's why it was a reference to the election financing act. That's why we looked at those things.

4:50

The thing is that this is a pattern of the Conservative Party, a pattern that we saw when you look at whether charities could participate in any form of political discussion. And what happened there, Madam Chair? They're currently revisiting it because what happens when you limit the capacity of an organization to be able to talk to political conversations is that it reduces their capacity to advocate for the needs of that community. So for charities this has an incredible impact. When it's a group that wants to end poverty and they can't talk to any political parties, it reduces their capacity to be effective. It reduces their capacity to meet the needs of the members that they're supposed to talk about. For unions, they represent the needs of labour interests, so in certain cases, if there were prevalent issues for union members in a specific sector, they could advocate. Those are political decisions that need to be looked at.

Yes, they are part of the third-party advertising thing, and doing this would be unfair because it's not applied across the board. They are not saying that they are committing to making sure that the super PACs or all of these other ways of making sure that political advertising that favours them in other ways are reduced, but they are willing to make sure that a specific group of people, specifically, workers, Madam Chair – workers. They don't want workers to have a voice. That is incredibly, incredibly shameful for the opposition to say that they have their backs but then come in and say: but as long as they don't have a voice.

At the end of the day, we have to make sure that we lay the groundwork for the democratic process to proceed. You're going to have voices from various spectrums, and that's the point of democracy, to have a political discussion. They just want to preclude it from happening altogether. That is actually not invoking a democratic process; that's invoking a one-sided system, Madam Chair, so, no, we will not be supporting this amendment proposed by the opposition.

I think they need to do better. I think they've seen the willingness of the government to consider the various amendments as they bring them through. We saw one amendment go through today, but when they come up with amendments like this, they're specifically doing it to clarify their position that they do not want to have workers with voices. So, no, I will not be supporting this amendment, and I hope the rest of the Chamber does not as well.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A3?

Mr. Fildebrandt: Once again, Madam Chair, the NDP confuse the rights of workers with the rights of union bosses. They conflate the two. They are not the same. Union bosses are the heads of organizations that people have no choice but to belong to regardless of what they as individuals have decided. Workers are people who are actually paying into those organizations.

This would not hurt the rights of workers to be heard. Workers will always, every individual will always have the right to make a donation with their own money voluntarily towards whatever message they want to get out. If they want to donate their money voluntarily towards an NDP union-friendly organization, they all have the right to do that. As a free man, as a free woman they can hand over that money as an individual. That's the way political advertising should take place, outside of the party structure.

The same thing goes on our side except we don't have organizations engaging in any kind of propaganda based on the dues, the mandatory dues, of people. Nobody is forced to put a single dollar – not a single dollar – against their will towards communications or advertising of any kind on the right in Alberta. No one is. The only advertising in Alberta that people are forced to pay for, the only politics that people are forced to pay for against their will are on the left. So when you have private-sector workers in my constituency who are in unions who overwhelmingly do not support the NDP, why should they be forced to take their hard-earned dollars and hand them to them for their floundering efforts at re-election? It's not fair, and it's not right. They are the only party that is benefiting right now from the mandatory dues of workers. Workers have no right not to hand over money to organizations which are effectively propaganda arms of the NDP.

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

We've seen here right now that the NDP have made their intentions known. They're going to do what the Kathleen Wynne Liberals in Ontario do. They're going to use unions. They're going to use union bosses. They're going to scratch their backs, and the union bosses are going to come and scratch their backs back. That's what they're going to do. That's their best hope at re-election, and we're seeing it here because if they had any interest in actually getting big money out of politics from big businesses or big unions, they would vote for this. That's why they're voting against it, because they know it's their only shot at getting re-elected. I know you agree with me, Mr. Chair, nodding your head.

Anyway, we now have seen the way the government is going to vote. It's transparent what they're going to do, but they're going to be on the record, and I'm going to be able to go back to Strathmore-Brooks and tell people. I'm going to be able to tell private-sector and public-sector union members in my constituency that the NDP have voted right here and right now to take their money against their will to try and get the NDP re-elected, and we're going to see how they react to that.

The Acting Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A3? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I just wanted to hope that as the member is going back to talk to his constituents, he also, you know, mentions what I have been talking about earlier, about this reference to big union bosses. They are accountable to their membership, okay? The union is the membership, okay? Those folks are voted in on a regular basis. If they were not doing things that the membership liked, I'm sure they would be voted out. So I'm hoping that the member there will be mentioning that to his constituents and how the accountability – both what they do and the money that is spent are accountable to the membership. I'll hope he'll mention that when he's heading back.

The Acting Chair: Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A3?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A3 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:58 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

For the motion:

Cooper	Hunter	Taylor
Drysdale	Rodney	van Dijken
Fildebrandt	Smith

5:00

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Fitzpatrick	McLean
Babcock	Ganley	McPherson
Bilous	Gray	Miller
Carlier	Hinkley	Miranda
Carson	Hoffman	Nielsen
Ceci	Horne	Payne
Connolly	Jansen	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Kazim	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Kleinstauber	Sigurdson
Dach	Loyola	Turner
Dang	Luff	Westhead

Eggen	Malkinson	Woollard
Feehan	McCuaig-Boyd
Totals:	For – 8	Against – 38

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

The Acting Chair: We are back on Bill 17. The chair will recognize the Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I rise, and I have an amendment if you'd like to pass it around.

The Acting Chair: I'll just wait for the original. That will be amendment A4.

Please go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I move that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 33 in the proposed section 53.9(9)(a) by adding “seven days after” before “the last day”. This amendment addresses what I believe to be, in a way, a streamlining of this bill a bit so that some services are easier for Albertans to access. In this case our amendment is aimed at making the transition from compassionate care leave to bereavement leave simpler.

Now, none of us want to be in a situation where a loved one that we're caring for dies, and cases where that person dies after an extended period of illness can be very difficult. We should do our best not to add any more hardships to people in this difficult time, so my amendment today is an attempt to build the bereavement leave into the compassionate care leave. Normally compassionate care leave would end at the last day of work of the week in which the person being cared for died, and bereavement leave could be applied upon the death of that person, for additional leave of one week after. What this amendment would do is change the end of the compassionate care leave from the last workday of the week in which they died to seven days after the last workday of that week. This way people would be able to take that extra week of time that would normally be allowed for a bereavement leave without having to apply for another leave. This would remove any additional concern during a period when people already have so much on their minds.

With that, I would ask that all members of the Legislature support this amendment, which I believe is a good, common-sense improvement to the bill.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: Any members wishing to speak to amendment A4?

Cortes-Vargas: Mr. Chair, it's nice to see you in the chair. I'm just getting the bound copy of my Bill 17 out. I was listening to the member opposite talk about adding “seven days after” the last day when looking at “compassionate care leave ends on the earliest of the following occurrences.”

Mr. Rodney: Sounds like a yes.

Cortes-Vargas: Well, I'm going to read it, and let's find out.

For an employee to be eligible for a leave, the physician must first certify that. It's editing section 33, section 53.9(9)(a), “the last day of the work week in which the family member named in the medical certificate referred to in subsection (4) dies” and adding “seven days after” before “the last day”. Sorry. I'm just a little confused here. I need some time.

Mr. Rodney: Do you want to just say yes?

Cortes-Vargas: No. I'm going to understand what the amendment is before I vote for it.

Mr. Rodney: You don't understand the amendment?

Cortes-Vargas: Yeah. It just wasn't a clear explanation.

So, Mr. Chair, I'm just going to go through this. I'm going to take my time to understand what the amendment does before voting on it.

Mr. Cooper: Here, I'll trade you spots.

Cortes-Vargas: Yeah? Okay. Go ahead.

The Acting Chair: All right. The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to this very, very reasonable amendment. I think that my hon. colleague from the northern portion of Alberta laid out the facts of this amendment very clearly. You know, all of us have had the misfortune of losing a loved one, and there is a lot happening around that period of time. Particularly, I think of someone who might have the death of a parent. They're working and have children, and they're dealing with the death of a parent as well as figuring out what needs to happen at home as well as taking care of kids and planning funerals and dealing with wills. Perhaps they're even the executor of the estate.

5:10

All that my colleague efforts to do is to remove one little headache, one extra step that would require that individual to go back to their employer and ask for another type of leave or an extension of that leave. What the amendment clearly does – and I appreciate that the government might need a couple of minutes to put this together. Listen, I think it's important that we legislate appropriately and thoroughly. That's just one of the reasons why you should have sent this bill to committee because then you would have had the opportunity to have a larger discussion on this. Perhaps we could have called in expert testimony for amendments just like this. In fact, we could have adjourned the amendment. I know that the government members are experts on adjourning amendments at committee so that they can come back to them, which is reasonable. Unfortunately, in the ebbs and flows of Committee of the Whole it does present a bit more of a challenge when trying to make decisions in a much quicker fashion.

We have before us an amendment that takes one small item off the plate of a grieving individual, provides them with the opportunity to make – it changes the way that they have the leave so that we can allow them to focus in on the things that are actually important instead of going through the paperwork with their employer. I don't see any significant challenges here. I think it's more than reasonable that this is the kind of thing that we would like to do as a Chamber.

We've heard the government speak at length about the importance of compassionate care, at length about these types of leave situations that are important to individuals, that their employment shouldn't be put at risk for situations just like this. And if you believe all of the doom and gloom that the government talks about when they speak about an employer and how horrible they are, this is the type of thing – not getting the leave right is what an employer might use to reprimand an individual. We certainly wouldn't want that. Now, I don't believe that that's the case in the vast majority of employment-employer relationships.

I think that my colleague is providing a reasonable solution. He's not asking for a massive, significant change. I see no reason why we shouldn't be able to move on this amendment and move on it quickly, and I encourage all members of the Assembly to do so.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and thank you very much to the member for bringing forward this amendment. Essentially, what this amendment would do in the case of the death of the family member named on the medical certificate is give an additional seven days in a form of bereavement leave, is my understanding. What we have tried to do very much and one of the founding principles of what I've brought forward was to mirror the federal employment insurance leaves and to mirror the system that exists federally, giving Albertans job protection so that they could access those existing federal EI leaves. For that reason, we've worked to not deviate from the federal leaves.

What we did do, though, was bring in a bereavement leave. Your amendment, I think, could potentially cause confusion because someone may take those additional seven days and then also request a bereavement leave. Is that your intention? Should someone be able to do both of those things? We heard through the consultations and the round-tables with stakeholders a desire for clear leaves, clarity between the leaves. We did consider doing some sort of combined leaves, and it was employers who specifically said: "We would like to have distinct leaves. We'd like to know what our employees are entitled to. We'd like to go through that."

Certainly, the member opposite just recently spoke to that, that many employers and employees will come to their own arrangements. What we're talking about in this legislation, in employment standards, is minimum standards. What is the bare minimum that every Albertan has the right to expect? In many cases, particularly when dealing with tragic circumstances, three days of bereavement leave is not adequate for many people, and alternate accommodations may need to be made. What is in our employment standards is the minimum.

While I appreciate the intent behind this amendment and I see the good intention that is driving it, for clarity, to make sure that we're mirroring the federal EI leaves and to be responsive to employers, who asked us to make sure that we had some of those clear basics defined going forward, I will not be supporting the amendment. But I do, certainly, in drafting employment standards, encourage all employers and employees to continue to work together productively to make the arrangements necessary that they need.

I'm very proud that we have legislation that mirrors the federal employment insurance leaves and will provide job protection for Albertans who have not had that. It's certainly a big step forward. I'm glad that we were able to bring forward the improvements to compassionate care leave and the addition of a bereavement leave, that previously wasn't there, as well as many of the other leaves that we've introduced to the benefit of all Albertans.

Thank you to the member.

The Acting Chair: The Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Yes. Thank you, Minister. It was my belief that the information was shared with your department before, and if it wasn't, that's too bad. You know, I'm a little confused that this is called the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. Maybe it should be the federal-friendly act if you're more worried about mirroring the federal act than you are about families.

Unfortunately, I lost a son – he was killed at 21 – so I know what bereavement is in these situations. You know, it's difficult if you haven't been there, and I hope that none of you have or ever will. When you're in that situation, you're not thinking clearly. You can't be filling out forms and asking for bereavement. So this would just make that simpler and more family friendly.

I'm not worried about the federal government. But I don't want to criticize. Good for this. I mean, when I lost my son, I was a farmer. We don't worry about unions and agreements, and I'll tell you that the whole community came together, did my farm work, did the work, and I could take all the time I wanted. So you don't need all these laws.

I get it that people in the city are union people, and you need the laws. You don't have the common sense or employers and employees that respect each other and work together.

To make it family friendly, I think this is probably a pretty good addition, but if you're more worried about mirroring the federal act, I get it. You know, I know that you guys have the power to vote against it, so I'm just making my case.

Ms Gray: I do want to say thank you because your office did send it earlier this afternoon, so I appreciate that. I do see the positive intent here, but given the large number of changes for Alberta employers, those who have been just providing the minimum, certainly not all employers, making sure that we have clear communication about each leave, its length, and how that works is one of my priorities as well as responding to the feedback that we received from employers during the round-tables and then having that mirroring so that when someone qualifies for the federal leave, they know that they have job protection that matches that.

Thank you very much for thinking about ways that we can make Alberta families and their lives better.

The Acting Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A4?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A4 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:19 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

For the motion:

Cooper	Rodney	Taylor
Drysdale	Swann	van Dijken

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Fitzpatrick	McCuaig-Boyd
Babcock	Ganley	McLean
Bilous	Gray	Miller
Carlier	Hinkley	Miranda
Carson	Hoffman	Nielsen
Ceci	Horne	Payne
Connolly	Jansen	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Kazim	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Kleinstauber	Sigurdson
Dach	Loyola	Turner
Dang	Luff	Westhead
Eggen	Malkinson	Woollard
Feehan

Totals:	For – 6	Against – 37
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A4 lost]

The Acting Chair: We are back on Bill 17. The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Ms Miller: Good afternoon, Mr. Chair. Today I'm extremely proud to be speaking to the importance of Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. This government is bringing positive change by recognizing the changing face of Alberta and the conditions that workers face. This government recognized a need for change.

With this bill we are taking huge steps in modernizing the workplace to help protect workers and their families from losing their jobs from everyday challenges and seeking to reinforce the notion that workers are the backbone of this province. These fair and modern and balanced workplace laws protect the rights of hard-working Albertans, support Albertan families, and help our businesses stay competitive without sacrificing the health of our citizens.

This legislation is long overdue. Alberta hasn't made any serious changes to workplace laws for nearly 30 years despite the changing demographics and makeup of this province. As someone who has worked closely with organized labour, I know how important this legislation is to working people of Alberta. As a former active union member I worked hard to protect the rights of my fellow workers and local union members. Now as an MLA I have the opportunity to enhance the protection of workers all across this province.

Many people are asking: why now, or why should we make big changes on the back of a recession? Let us be clear. We recognize your concerns but know that enhancing workplace protection and ensuring the rights of people who are working hard to provide for their families can't wait and simply shouldn't wait. This has been put off too long, and this party is proud to stand with the working-class people of Alberta and let them know that we are putting their interests first despite calls for delay.

We have consulted with many stakeholders, those who represent small and large businesses as well as those who represent workers all across the province. We have listened to Albertans, and we know that protecting the working people of this province is what this government was elected to do. We conducted a focused review over the period of five weeks, and it became clear that the time to act was now. We worked with groups such as the Alberta Chambers of Commerce, the city of Medicine Hat, and Unifor while also receiving close to 7,000 submissions through e-mail, letters, and online surveys regarding the labour code. All of this feedback has been taken into consideration.

We have heard from countless Albertans with many heart-breaking stories. While I won't delve into these stories again, we know that there are problems with our labour system, and they need fixing. Whether it be caring for your sick child, burying a loved one and having time to grieve, being able to recover from illness without the fear of termination, or being able to escape domestic violence without the pressure to return to work after a traumatic experience, these things matter.

Groups from across the country and across the province are seeing what this government is doing and recognizing that we are taking this province into the 21st century. Let me be clear. The rights of workers should not be a partisan issue, not in 2017 nor ever again.

Some key changes that we are making include making sure that overtime is recognized and paid out properly, something that has long been in place in other jurisdictions across the country. We are making sure that youth are safe while still providing them the opportunity to gain important life skills by enforcing the minimum age of work of 13. This is an international standard, and we are happy to make sure that we can protect children from pressure to work at such a young age. Education shouldn't be sacrificed for spending money or work experience.

To those who question the results these changes will have on business, I implore you to do research on how satisfaction and job security play out in the morale and efficiency of workers. Workers who aren't sick or stressed perform better, and businesses reap the results. If someone comes in sick, not only is their productivity down, but they become a health concern. Whether it be doing a job dangerously or spreading illness, the ultimate costs of these things vastly outweigh the cost of letting someone recover. Businesses suffer the costs of illness, and so do taxpayers. Getting someone healthy as quickly as possible should be the preferred modus operandi as opposed to having someone prolong their illness and burden a workplace or emergency room. These same points are pertinent when it comes to grieving, caring for sick children, or escaping domestic violence. If your mind is elsewhere, your productivity suffers, and so does your mental health.

People in the fields of organized labour are giving this government a pat on the back. We want to make sure that those who want to organize have the opportunity to do so without intimidation from employers, who often create a narrative through guilt and scare tactics, acting as if workers uniting to secure their rights makes the company a victim. Our proposed system for certification is simpler, quicker, and it avoids undue influence that can occur between votes.

In response to the media and the public's concern about eliminating the secret ballot, we are not doing that. We have decided to shift to a hybrid system, where the secret ballot votes will take place if unionization approval is not overwhelming. For situations in which the Labour Relations Board finds 40 to 65 per cent of workers seek to join a union, a secret ballot will occur. In a situation where that number is over 65 per cent, a considerable majority, a vote would not be required as it would be unnecessary.

We have protected Albertans through making sure that continuing care facilities are included in essential services.

5:30

Before I close, I want to thank all the Albertans, stakeholders, and the groups that reached out to this government to let us know your concerns with the current employment and labour landscape in this province. This government takes pride in its consultation practices with stakeholders and the public, and this legislation comes as a result of that. Taking Alberta forward requires us to protect and ensure the rights of families, workers, and unions just as much as those of large and small businesses. We have titled this bill the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act because fairness and Alberta families are two of the core interests of this government and the priorities of this bill.

Thank you to my fellow MLAs and colleagues who helped craft this important piece of legislation. Thank you to the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods for having the courage to enact these necessary changes. Advocating for working-class Albertans is one of the major reasons I sought election as an MLA, and this legislation, that I'm sure will help countless Alberta families, is a point of pride for this government and me.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: The chair will recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm very pleased to stand and speak to an amendment to the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, Bill 17, and will circulate the amendment.

The Acting Chair: This will be referred to as amendment A5. Please proceed.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Chair. Well, I'm pleased with almost all aspects of this act, but this is one of the issues that I think either the minister has overlooked or has been subject to strong lobbying by the agriculture coalition, by some of the large landowners and industrial agriculture operations.

I would hope that we might consider paying overtime to people who work overtime. It's a basic principle of employment. It operates in all other industries. Indeed, we made significant progress with Bill 6 in getting some basic health and safety rights and workers' compensation and recognized farm workers as equal to all other workers in this country. I applaud the government for finally bringing that good legislation in. I therefore was a bit shocked to see exemptions for overtime for farm workers, when exploitation has been the history of farm workers for a hundred years, and clearly it's going to continue in some, not all, workplaces where there is unethical or exploitive leadership. By exempting farm workers from this overtime pay, it's a clear indication that the agriculture coalition has had a lot of influence in the working groups. In fact, I know they've dominated some of the working groups and softened the right to equal treatment in the workplace for paid farm workers.

The opportunity here is to recognize that these rights under both our Constitution in Canada and as part of the charter of human rights, which gives all workers the right to a safe workplace, to compensation for injury ... [interjection] Who's whistling?

Mr. Cooper: Sorry.

Dr. Swann: I don't need that. Thanks. I'm having enough of a time concentrating.

... the opportunity to recognize these rights and not treat them as second-class employees. It's disappointing, and it's certainly unjust. It's saying that some workers are more equal than others.

Now, I recognize that farm work is different, that ranch work is different, and that it indeed may be reasonable to expect farm workers to work a 10-hour day and not expect overtime, but when we get beyond 10 hours in a day or over 60 hours in a week, surely we could recognize overtime as we do in other workplaces. I doubt that there's a single person in this Legislature that would not expect to be paid a fair overtime wage when it got to over 10 hours in a day or 60 hours in a week. I really doubt that any of us would feel fairly treated if the boss said: sorry, you're going to just have to work overtime and accept regular pay. That opens the door to exploitation. It opens the door to increased injuries and accidents when people are fatigued. When they feel unjustly treated, they're going to be rankling and stressed and not feeling good about themselves or their workplace, and that is not good for anybody.

It's understandable that change is challenging in the ag sector. Paid farm workers are already exempt from time-off provisions under this bill. They don't get the same time-off provisions in a week or in a month. They're exempt from that. Surely, then, we could recognize significant overtime, beyond 10 hours a day and beyond 60 hours a week. That seems pretty fundamental, especially to a government that talks about equal pay for equal work and human rights in the workplace. They certainly have championed that for unionized workers, and I know they believe that all citizens should have the right to form unions. These are some fundamental rights that we fought and died for over generations here, and we're now finally dragging the agriculture sector into the 21st century on these issues. Giving them second-class status as far as hours of work and overtime is disappointing, and I hope that the minister can find a way to acknowledge in this bill that something has to be addressed in terms of overtime, even if not the usual over eight hours of work in a day or 44 hours in a week. Let's at least compromise a bit and extend the right of agriculture operations to only start paying overtime after 10 hours in a day and 60 hours in a week. That's not a big sacrifice to the industry.

I've made my pitch, Mr. Chair, and I think that all fair-minded people will see the wisdom of this not only in terms of health and safety but in fairness and just treatment of paid farm workers. I'm not talking about family members. I'm not talking about extended family members. I'm only talking about those who are hired to do a job as they would be hired to do a job in any other sector of society and have a reasonable expectation that if they're pushed beyond 10, 12, 14 hours a day, which I know many farms require at certain times of the year, they should be paid reasonably and, if not equitably with other jurisdictions, at least get some recognition that overtime requires extra recognition.

Thanks, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, and thank you to the member for the amendment and for the advocacy that you've done on this issue. Part of Bill 17 is the continuation of our dialogue with the farm and ranch community that really continued with our technical working groups, so bringing together farm and ranch community members, owners, labour organizations, and stakeholders to work together as a group to create recommendations for the government. The technical working groups spent significant time talking about the Employment Standards Code and brought to government a series of recommendations. We took those recommendations and posted them online and invited all Albertans to provide their input and their feedback as to those recommendations and where the technical working group had landed. Based on the feedback from all Albertans and looking at the recommendations with Bill 17, we've tried very much to respect the farming and ranching way of life and to accept some of that good advice from the technical working groups and to find that right balance between worker needs and employer responsibilities.

5:40

In the case of overtime the technical working group had recommended to us that employees be exempt from overtime provisions. They provided as their rationale that in most jurisdictions in Canada the agriculture sector is exempt from overtime, pointing to kind of other jurisdictions and that standard, that the hours in the agriculture sector are unpredictable because of the nature of the work, that overtime rates would only lower the base pay rate, which would not increase total earnings of employees and, furthermore, cause complications in calculating pay. After this technical working group, which was intended to be a mix of voices from all sides of the table, came together, the recommendation that they came to was the exemption. I think a large part of that was having to do with just the seasonality of the work and the difficulty in enforcing fixed-hour provisions.

The technical working group's recommendations were something that we took very seriously as we were moving forward with Bill 17. There are areas where we did end up disagreeing with the technical working group because we wanted to find that right balance. One of those areas was making sure that vacation pay was calculated on total wages, not just a maximum of 44 hours per week, so when someone does do that extra work during a time when increased hours are needed in a day, making sure that vacation pay is calculated on top of that.

Generally speaking, looking at what the technical working group recommended – and that consensus recommendation was very important to our government. Moving forward with that overtime exemption, with a series of changes that are, you know, a big change for the farm and ranch community, I think, and wanting to make sure that we are finding that right balance between workers' needs and employer responsibilities, making sure that we're respecting the process that we engaged with the community on through the technical working groups: for those reasons, I'm afraid I'm not going to support the amendment. I absolutely do understand the intention of it and understand some of that reasoning, but making sure that we do respect the farm and ranch way of life and the work that the technical working group did as we move forward are the main reasons for my decision to not support this amendment.

I look forward to hearing any other colleagues within this Chamber, their thoughts. Thank you.

The Acting Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A5?

Seeing none, I will call the question on amendment A5 as proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

[Motion on amendment A5 lost]

The Acting Chair: We are back on the bill. Are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 17? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I am rising and wish to move an amendment to Bill 17.

The Acting Chair: That will be amendment A6, hon. member. Please proceed.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 111.

Mr. Chair, in Canada we are fortunate enough to have the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the descendant of the Bill of Rights, and contained in the Charter, in section 2(c) and (d), are the freedom of peaceful assembly and the freedom of association. This essentially means that people also have the freedom to not associate. In other words, people have a right to determine if they want to be in a union or not.

If people choose not to be members of unions, they should also have the right to determine if they pay dues to a union they are not part of. Why would I pay dues to an organization that I am not a member of? It is fundamentally wrong to be paying good, hard-earned money to something you don't want to belong to and never had a decision in joining. Forced union membership is like the Borg from Star Trek: you will be assimilated, and resistance is futile. But resistance is not futile. Resistance is what makes us human beings with the right to choose whom we wish to associate with.

A 2002 poll found that 76 per cent of Canadians supported the statement that employees should not be legally required to pay dues to a union that they don't want to join. Over three-quarters of Canadians believe in this, yet we are stuck here holding to a Supreme Court decision from 1946 that says otherwise. The princes of reason, as John Ralston Saul called them, the Supreme Court justices of the day, imposed collective rights overtop the individual rights.

I wonder if the Rand formula would survive a Charter challenge today. It is reasonable to think so. It's currently not automatic that an employer will collect union dues from its employees and remit them back to the union. This is one more way that the government is removing choice and flexibility from Albertans. It shouldn't be automatic. Employees should have a choice, and if union dues must be deducted and the payroll system can't be amended to change the deduction for all, those employees should be able to have their deductions directed to a charity.

When you see unions spending millions supporting left-wing political ideologies or parties and being formally and constitutionally part of the NDP, it's no wonder employers and employees want no part of providing them funds. You end up with a situation where the president of the Alberta Federation of Labour takes a leave of absence, goes and runs for the NDP, and then, after he loses, he takes his job back. That campaign and leave were funded by union dues and donations.

Mr. Chair, this is why I have brought forward this amendment, and I challenge the Members of the Legislative Assembly to support individual rights over collective rights. People have a right to determine if they want to be in a union or not. This is the freedom of association. Consequently, people should not be required to pay dues to a union they are not part of as a condition of employment. I encourage the members of this House to support this amendment and respect choice.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A6? The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Section 111, that the member is suggesting we remove, is referred to colloquially as the Rand formula. The reason that it's called the Rand formula is because it's essentially named after Justice Ivan Rand, who made a Supreme Court ruling essentially making sure that in the labour relations field there is a compulsory check-off of union dues to be deducted when a trade union is bargaining for employees in a bargaining unit.

That Rand formula is, in practice, used in nearly all jurisdictions, so it is considered the standard. It's currently not required in our legislation, but most unions would bargain it as part of their collective bargaining when they're creating their first contract. Here in Alberta not including that Rand formula can be considered an unfair labour practice, so by practice our Labour Relations Board historically makes sure that the Rand formula is accommodated and included in every collective agreement. We are codifying what is the standard practice not only here in Alberta but in other jurisdictions.

5:50

Making sure that we have updated our legislation to account for Supreme Court rulings is an important part of the updates that we are bringing to Alberta through Bill 17. Making sure, again, that we put into our legislation something that is already happening through the Labour Relations Board, through the collective bargaining practices in Alberta is what's happening with our section 111. I will not be supporting the amendment brought forward by the opposite member because, again, it does not acknowledge that there has been a Supreme Court ruling on this, that this is standard practice in Alberta, and that it is included in the legislation in other jurisdictions.

I would, as a final note, mention that there is an exemption for religious reasons to the paying of union dues, and that is standard in the legislation across Canada and, I believe, in other areas. I think what we've put forward in section 111 is reasonable, is mainstream, and is standard practice here in Alberta today.

Thank you.

The Acting Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A6? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to the amendment. I think one of the things that I found the most frustrating when I was a member of a union was this pressure or bullying tactic that other members used to have people be a part of the union. In fact, if there was anyone that spoke out against the union in this particular place of employment, the workplace relationship became very strained. I think that we need to do more things that provide the options for employees of unionized workplaces to opt in, opt out of this mandatory membership. Even if there are situations where membership isn't technically mandatory, functionally it can be mandatory by the way that other members treat those who would choose or try to choose not to be part of the union.

Amendments like this provide more flexibility when it comes to joining or not joining, and I think that it is critically important that we do all that we can to minimize situations in workplaces where abuse takes place. The union has an equal responsibility for that, but certainly in my case the union was the propagator of the challenge. I specifically remember a time when I was concerned with our contract. I was working in a large hotel chain at the time that had about 30 different properties, so I was calling all of the other properties – the unionized ones, the non-unionized ones – to find out what sort of contract they were receiving in pay for the exact same job and years of experience and all this stuff and then expressing some significant concern because many of the non-unionized properties actually had better wages.

Certainly, we were in the lowest of the wage category, so I started asking questions about this. I remember clearly the shop steward sitting me down and talking about how we do things as a group and that, "You know, this is going to create a challenge not just for us but for you," this real pressure from the union. If I had had the opportunity, I would have certainly opted out of that particular union.

Anything at all that we can do to prevent these sorts of situations and allow more flexibility in the workplace – listen, if the union is going to exist inside a workplace, I certainly believe that people should be able to opt in or opt out. If this amendment provides any sort of flexibility when it comes to the freedom of association – the freedom to be part of a union, the freedom to choose not to be part of a union – to have more sense of what happens with your union dues, to make a path that's easier for your union dues to not be collected in the first place, all of these sorts of scenarios I think are a positive.

I think it's disappointing that the government is choosing not to pass the amendment. It continually reflects exactly what this piece of legislation is about; that is, doing everything that's possible to appease the large unions, to make it easier for unions. You know, the government always claims that they're on the side of the worker. Well, what about when the worker doesn't want to be part of the union? What about that? Are they on the side of that worker, or are they only on the side of the union in this case? It's certainly disappointing as the government continues to reveal exactly what this piece of legislation is about. It's very clear that it's about making things better for the unions. I hear often the government saying that they're making things better for Albertans, but in actual fact this legislation is clear evidence that they're making things better for the unions.

I encourage members of the House to support the amendment. I encourage all members to reflect upon and consider the fact that not all unions behave in a manner that reflects well on the union, that not all unions behave in a manner that reflects well on this government, and that the government makes claims that they are only here for the worker when, in fact, they are here for the union.

I know that, in my experience, it was very clear that the union's number one job was to take care of the union. I'm not saying that that's the case everywhere, but that was certainly my personal experience. This particular union didn't reward initiative. It didn't reward ingenuity. It didn't reward people wanting to go above and beyond. In fact, other members did the exact opposite. I would have loved to have been able to not be a part of it. I would have loved to have been able to not have my union dues going to an organization that I certainly didn't support.

If there are things that we can do that can allow that to happen, that make it easier, and also where the union would be respectful of that, of an individual that may or may not want to be involved in the union, I think that that would be a net positive and, hopefully, a net positive for the union as well. It makes the union more accountable to the members when it's significantly easier for them to associate with the union or not.

The Acting Chair: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt. The time is now 6 o'clock. The committee stands adjourned until 7:30 tonight.

[The committee adjourned at 6 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1437, 1438
Members' Statements
Energy Policies and Social Licence.....	1438
Immigration Policies	1439
Paramedics	1439
Educational Curriculum Review.....	1439
Red Deer Regional Airport Expansion	1447
Parliamentary Democracy	1448
Oral Question Period
Energy Policies and Social Licence.....	1440
Electric Power System.....	1440
Opioid Use.....	1441
Child Intervention Panel Recommendations	1441
Opioid Emergency Response Commission.....	1442
Minister of Finance.....	1443
Kinder Morgan Trans Mountain Pipeline	1444
Access to Information.....	1444
Municipal Government Act Regulations	1445
Charter Schools and Alternative Education Programs	1445
Refugee Resettlement.....	1446
Suffield Elk Herd.....	1446
Auditor General's Recommendations on Health Care	1447
Notices of Motions	1448
Tabling Returns and Reports	1448
Motions under Standing Order 42
Division of Bill 17.....	1448
Orders of the Day	1449
Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole
Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act	1449
Division	1455
Division	1460
Division	1462

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday evening, May 31, 2017

Day 42

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawwood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Orr
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Drysdale	Schreiner
Fitzpatrick	Taylor
Gotfried

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Pitt
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Ellis	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, May 31, 2017

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

The Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Just before we begin this evening, I would like to make an introduction. We have a new face at the table. We're very fortunate to welcome back Ms Fiona Vance, who will be serving as sessional Parliamentary Counsel for the balance of this sitting. This is a role she also filled during the First and Second Sessions of the 28th Legislature. Fiona is a partner with the firm of Shores Jardine in Edmonton, received her law degree from the University of Alberta, and was called to the bar in 2007. Fiona did part of her articling rotation with the office of Parliamentary Counsel. Please join me in welcoming Ms Vance.

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Chair: We are currently on amendment A6 to Bill 17. Are there any members wishing to speak to this amendment?

Seeing none, are we ready for the vote?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A6 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 7:32 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

The Chair: Hon. members, just to clarify, we don't do this very often, but we recessed in committee. That's why we started in committee, and we don't do the whole formal kind of process. Because we recessed in committee, we're a continuation of this afternoon's session, meaning that the bells are already reduced to one minute on the same bill. So that's where we're at.

For the motion:

Aheer	Loewen	Rodney
Ellis

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Ganley	McKittrick
Babcock	Goehring	McPherson
Carson	Gray	Miller
Ceci	Hinkley	Nielsen
Connolly	Horne	Phillips
Cortes-Vargas	Jansen	Renaud
Dach	Kazim	Rosendahl
Dang	Kleinstauber	Schmidt
Drever	Larivee	Schreiner
Eggen	Littlewood	Turner
Feehan	Loyola	Westhead
Fitzpatrick	Malkinson	Woollard

Totals:	For – 4	Against – 36
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A6 lost]

The Chair: We are back on the main bill. Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I stand this evening again to speak on Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. Now, it's pretty easy on this one. We could just start with the title, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. This is misleading all in itself. I don't think it's fair to workers in Alberta to take away a proper opportunity for them to have a secret ballot. I mean, this bill definitely reduces that. It's not fair. Right off the bat, that is just not right.

There are parts of this bill that we support, and we went through those multiple times already. These are the parts of this bill that deal with compassion, the employment standards part. We've offered to break this bill up so that we could just go ahead and get this part that deals with compassion passed. But, of course, this government has no interest in that because they have to have this big bill so that they can hide their controversial labour legislation for their union buddies.

Obviously, there's no real concern about compassion here from this government, and that's made even more clear by the dates when this bill comes into effect. The compassion portions of this bill won't come into place until January 1, 2018. But the labour parts of this bill, the controversial parts, the union parts: September 1, 2017. Madam Chair, compassion is not foremost on this government's mind. Otherwise, they could bring the compassion portions into effect immediately or on September 1 also. Why would they have compassion as the last part of this bill to come into play? Because they're hiding their labour legislation in this omnibus bill. It's shameful, it's misleading to Albertans, and it's just not right.

7:40

Now, we know that leading into this bill, the government wasn't ready. We've seen this government filibustering their own bills in the last couple of weeks, bills that clearly had support across the House, that could have been passed immediately. But, no, they decided that they were going to put speaker after speaker up to talk about these bills so that they could waste enough time so that they could get themselves prepared to bring this bill forward.

This was proven again by how this bill was presented to this House. It was presented in a format that I've never seen a bill presented in before, in a full-page document instead of a folded document like it normally is. They had to rush this thing through. They spent the last two weeks wasting the Legislature's time trying to prepare for this bill.

All along our suggestion has been: leave this bill, consult over the summer, and you can bring it forward in the fall. But that's not what they had in mind. They felt that they had to rush this thing through. Now I guess we see why. Because they want to get this labour stuff going on September 1. They don't want to wait until the end of October to bring this forward.

Mrs. Aheer: Except for compassionate care.

Mr. Loewen: Except for compassionate care, of course. We'll leave that until January 1, 2018.

So there's nothing fair about this bill. This government isn't concerned about compassion for workers. There are some good parts of this bill that deal with compassion, but that isn't the government's foremost thought. Otherwise, why would they not have it come into effect until January 1, 2018, instead of September 1 like the labour part of the bill? It's very simple.

Now, this bill should represent exactly which legislation is being changed. The Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act doesn't tell the people of Alberta what's in this bill. It's all fluff, no substance. It doesn't represent what the bill is doing. It's not fair to workers, who are having their rights taken away, or to our businesses, who are trying to create jobs and prosperity in the province. This bill is friendly to unions, though, and not so friendly to businesses. It's a very unfair balance.

This government passed a bill that wanted to get big money out of politics. We brought a motion forward on this particular bill to do exactly that. But, of course, this government didn't support that. They're not interested in getting big money and union money out of politics. It was just so interesting to hear this government talk about this bill and talk about how great it's going to be for the people of Alberta when, really, it's going to be great for the unions in Alberta but not so great for the people of Alberta.

I think that probably another reason why this government wants to make sure that this bill is passed in this session rather than waiting for fall is that they want Albertans to forget about all the poor legislation that they've done. We're over the halfway point in between elections, so now this government has to start worrying about the upcoming election. They want Albertans to forget about things like Bill 6 and the carbon tax. The carbon tax will be hard to forget about because, of course, the carbon tax increases by 50 per cent on January 1, 2018. That will be hard for Albertans to forget about.

They want Albertans to forget about Bill 17. They don't want to bring it up in the fall, six months, eight months closer to the next election. They're counting on Albertans to have poor memories on what this government has done, but I don't think Albertans are going to forget that easy, Madam Chair.

Bill 6, for instance. What's it been? A year and a half? The farmers haven't forgotten about Bill 6, Madam Chair. They haven't forgotten about it at all. The people of Alberta won't be forgetting about Bill 17. They know that this government doesn't care about them. They know this government doesn't have their backs. Otherwise, this government would be talking about the compassion portions of this bill coming forward earlier than the labour portion. [interjections]

You know, it's interesting to hear the other side, when they're speaking, accuse us of yelling at them. They're yelling at me right now. But carry on. Feel free. Yell all you want at me. I'm fine with it. Pot, kettle, black: that's all I've got to say. That's just typical of this government. They say one thing – they said lots of things before they were elected, and of course once they were elected, a complete flip-flop. A complete flip-flop. They sit here and talk about this side being loud and chattering and this sort of thing, but of course they're carrying on here right now, Madam Chair. It's priceless. It really is. You can't make this stuff up. This is too good. [interjections]

Unfortunately, as much as they want to laugh over there, this isn't funny. This affects people's lives. This affects businesses in Alberta. This affects our economy. This affects whether somebody is going to invest in Alberta and bring jobs to Alberta. That's what this stuff affects.

Again, we've offered to separate the compassion parts and get them passed immediately. We can do that any time this government chooses to. All they have to do is make that decision, but they won't do it, Madam Chair. They won't do it because they can't hide their labour legislation in it then. They'd have to separate it, and then they might have to go talk to Albertans.

You know, they sit here and talk about how in 29 years this labour legislation hasn't been touched – 29 years – and then all of a sudden they think: "Okay. This has got to be done with 35 days of consultation." Twenty-nine years are going to be solved in 35 days, and they're going to have all the consultation that they need. Madam Chair, it's actually despicable. It is. It truly is despicable that this government would suggest to Albertans that with something they feel is so important, that hasn't been touched in 29 years, we've got to do this as fast as possible and that we need to take care of this because it's been so unjust for so long that we desperately have to do this. And they feel that 35 days is justice to Albertans to have consultation on this? It's not right. It's not right.

The Municipal Government Act, that they changed: they had months of consultation – months of consultation – for that. Had it been 29 years since it had been adjusted? Probably not, Madam Chair. They're going to spend way, way more time – months – talking about the time change. They sent it to committee. For months they're going to talk about the time change, but labour legislation hasn't been touched for 29 years. They feel that it is so unjust and not up to Canadian standards and that every other province has all these things that Alberta doesn't have in their labour legislation.

7:50

They're going to sit here and tell us that 35 days is justice to Albertans, that it's fair to Albertans, to businesses that rely on this legislation to create jobs in Alberta. I don't buy it. Albertans don't buy it. There's no way they can justify the minimal consultation that they've done on this bill and bringing it forward haphazardly, filibustering their own bill so that they can finally rush it together and throw it out on the table at the last minute, at the end of the session. Why didn't they bring it out at the first of the session? Why not, Madam Chair? Why didn't they bring it forward at the beginning of the session? Well, it wasn't ready, for one thing. But, of course, it's way better to wait till the end of the session and ram it through, when Albertans don't have a chance to see exactly what's going on.

Madam Chair, this just continues on with this government. Every time we come into this Legislature, we see the same things over and over again: no consultation, rushing things through that fit their ideology, pushing off to committee, and killing property rights legislation. They just killed it. They claim to be the beacon of property rights in Alberta, and what did they do? They killed the bill. They just absolutely dropped it. Again, like I said, hypocrisy: say one thing; do another. That's the definition, right? We see it all the time with this government.

Again, we should just split this bill, take care of the compassionate care parts, get them passed – they've got the support they need; they'll have the support from this side of the House – and take at least the summer to consult. For 29 years this hasn't been touched, and they feel that they can just in 35 days pound it through and that that does it justice? I don't think so, Madam Chair. I don't think so.

But it isn't about compassion. It's about taking care of their unions. It's about taking care of their political agenda, to make sure that they take care of as much of this nasty legislation as possible early in their mandate so that it doesn't get too close to an election in hopes that Albertans will forget. Albertans won't forget. Albertans haven't forgotten Bill 6. The communities that are being affected by the caribou plans: they're not going to forget. They're not going to forget.

Madam Chair, again, split the bill. Let's take care of the compassionate care parts and consult over the summer on labour. Rushing this through at the end of the legislative session is not fair to Albertans. It's not fair at all. It isn't the proper way to do business. "Fair" definitely should be removed from the title. There's nothing fair about that. This government can't seem to help itself, I guess.

Madam Chair, I guess I'll leave it at that. I wish they would listen to Albertans. I wish they would consult with Albertans. I wish they would take some of the good suggestions from this side of the House that have been brought forward, but they just unilaterally turn every single one down.

Thank you.

The Chair: Any other questions, comments, or amendments? Go ahead, Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair, and good evening, everyone. Folks, guess what? I have an amendment. [interjections] I do. I know, right? It wouldn't have been an evening session without an amendment. I am so excited. I am positive you're going to go for this one.

The Chair: This will be amendment A7.
Go ahead, hon. member.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair. We've brought forward a couple of amendments today, and to my huge chagrin many of our amendments, as thoughtful as I thought they were, have not been looked at or, I think, brought forward in a way that strengthens this legislation.

One of the things that I wanted to talk about for just a minute – we keep hearing this, and I'm going to repeat this again just for the sake of going over it because I think it's worth saying again – is that the government keeps saying that they have maintained the ability for workers and unions to have their say through secret ballot. But what they keep forgetting to say along with that is that the target has moved to 65 per cent. What that means is that once that target is hit, that secret ballot is gone, absolutely gone.

It's interesting that they followed along with one of the provinces that's actually changing back, which was Manitoba. In Manitoba, when a union presents cards signed by employees that claim to support the union and it forces automatic certification of a union, for example, then if more than 40 per cent of the employees are signing the cards, it triggers a vote. But if it goes to 65 per cent – and we don't know how that 65 per cent comes to be – then all of a sudden union certification happens without having a vote.

I'd like to say again, for at least the 10th time today, that in a majority of the cases – and this is coming from the brief that I quoted from yesterday. This actually talks about how it strengthens unions.

In a majority of cases the percentage of employees supporting a union increased from the time cards were signed until the certification vote was held. This suggests [that] a secret ballot vote would support those who feel intimidated to sign certification cards, but at the same time, such a process would not negatively impact those who wish to vote in favour of a union.

That's just a comment to everybody who keeps saying that the secret ballot is there. It is not. It is not there. There is not a trigger for it now. It's been moved to 65 per cent.

Having said that, in terms of the amendment I would like to move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in a section in the proposed section 27 by adding the following after subsection (5):

(6) A trade union must disclose on a semi-annual basis to the employees it represents the details of any expenditure of union dues remitted pursuant to this section.

We know that with union dues the money is going to be collected whether a person wants them to be collected or not. A person may not opt out of those dues unless for religious purposes.

The Chair: Hon. member, can you clarify which section you're amending to make sure that we're reading from the same information?

8:00

Mrs. Aheer: You betcha. "Be amended in section 111."

The Chair: Section 111. That's what I've got. All right. And then "in the proposed section 27"?

Mrs. Aheer: Section 27. Yes.

The Chair: Perfect. All right. Go ahead.

Mrs. Aheer: I apologize. Sorry for the confusion. It's late.

Anyway, as I was saying, the money from these dues goes to the union no matter what. People do not have the option to opt out. They cannot change the way that those dues are collected unless it's for religious reasons. In those situations, then, a person who is paying their dues can donate them to a charity of their choice. I think that's just fine. But if the money is going to be collected no matter what – the person has absolutely no say on where their dollars are going – don't you think that in order to be transparent to the folks that you are collecting dollars from, on their behalf, supposedly, you should at the very least be transparent?

You already shot down an amendment to make sure that dollars are not going towards partisan events. That's already been shot down. This government said no to that, and I don't understand why. There's absolutely no legitimate reason for doing that. Obviously, it would be prudent for this government to at least show where the dollars that you are collecting are going. Where are the dollars going? You're already taking away the secret ballot from people. Within the working people of this union, who are forced to pay these dues, would it not be appropriate, then, for the trade union, for example, to disclose to the employees where the dollars are being spent? I think that's a very, very reasonable amendment. In fact, it strengthens the union because the union is able to tell the folks where their money is going.

If I was to make a comparison, it would be to look at the government. The government is responsible for being transparent. All of us are responsible to be transparent about how our dollars are spent. Most certainly, all of our expenses are listed. We have to make sure that we take into account our gas, our mileage, what we spend on in our offices. Everything is disclosed so that the public is able to look at all of our expenses and make sure that as MLAs we are spending our dollars appropriately. In the past people have been caught not spending that money appropriately, and that's a good thing. That's part of the accountability.

Now, I brought up an amendment earlier about accountability as well with respect to division 19, that has been taken out of this legislation, which automatically makes it impossible during an illegal strike – that the union cannot be decertified even if they have an illegal strike, which was a good consequence. In fact, I don't even know how many times that actually happened. I don't think it did because the unions would automatically know that if they overstepped that line, they would be held accountable and could be decertified. That section has been removed by the government. Division 19 has been struck from the legislation. Great job on accountability, folks. I'm sure that Albertans are going to love that.

Here's another opportunity for the government to remain transparent. Simply, all it says is: "disclose on a semi-annual basis . . . [the] expenditure of union dues." I don't understand why that would be a big deal. I would think that on behalf of the unions that would strengthen the legislation.

We've already seen in this legislation – we tried to give the government the option to do the compassionate care separately, and this would have put that legislation through right away. We've said I don't know how many times that it's separate from the labour code changes and should be treated as such. It's a very reasonable request. Then what ends up happening is that you end up being able to put those into action right away.

If there is bereavement, if somebody is losing someone, if they've lost a child, if a child goes missing, or any of the other things that are listed in the legislation to protect workers from unions, then we have to make sure that that is invoked right away. Why would you wait till January 2018 to make sure that if somebody is suffering from domestic violence – at this point in time it's not in the legislation. Wouldn't you want that to happen tomorrow? We could have passed that last week. We could have passed it when the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills brought it forward this afternoon and said: let's divide the bill; let's take care of compassionate care because it's obviously important – it's a good idea – and have unanimous consent of the House and have compassionate care taken care of. But, no, the government is putting that piece of legislation, that was supposedly the most important, to January 2018.

You can imagine why we're asking this government to show transparency, and we're asking them to ask the same thing of the unions, to show transparency. All of us campaigned on this. The government campaigned on this, we campaigned on this, and now you're removing the ability of unions to be transparent on several different levels. I would like to understand, again, if somebody can explain it to me, why it is that the government wouldn't want to make sure that that is disclosed. We ask that of ourselves. We ask that of ourselves. As a business owner I have to declare how I spend my money, where it goes. I mean, I have to pay my taxes. I have to do all those things. It is a requirement.

I really believe with all my heart that this is one of those things that the government can do to lead by example and make it transparent so that the unions are responsible for disclosing this to Albertans. It is imperative so that it shows transparency on behalf of the unions. For the unions themselves, it strengthens their ability for their legislation.

Already, like I said, the fact is that the trigger for having a secret ballot has been removed, so if you've changed that and you've taken away a person's right to democratically vote for their decision to be part of a union – like I said earlier, if somebody came in here tomorrow, to the Legislature, and told us that we were not allowed to vote or that a certain number of things triggered a vote only under certain circumstances, and somebody was trying to intimidate me to sign a card to say that I should vote for this person, I think all of us would stand up together unanimously and say: that's not going to happen in a province or a country, for that matter, that believes in democracy.

So why would you allow that to happen to workers in unions? Why would you change the legislation so profoundly that you're in essence taking away the secret ballot? How is that possible? You're following behind a province that is actually right now making changes to go back from that target. If you look crossjurisdictionally at all of the other provinces, they're at about 40 or 55 per cent, but the vote is required. The vote is required because if everybody agrees or if you get the majority of the vote, you strengthen the union. It's just common sense. So I don't understand. [interjection] It is laughable. I'm glad you're laughing because I think it's quite interesting, too, and I think it's really interesting that any time we bring around legislation for transparency, the government laughs.

Again, I can bring up Bill 34, the electricity bill for the Balancing Pool. This government removed the words "accountable" and "transparent" from the legislation verbatim. They removed those words from the legislation so that the Minister of Energy can bring in all sorts of infrastructure and renewables under the wire without letting Albertans know what's going to happen. They therefore had to pay out the Balancing Pool, after spending $705 million of the Balancing Pool money, because they completely and intentionally removed that language from the legislation.

So we've got that over there, not to mention the fact that the carbon tax was never campaigned on by this government, and neither was Springbank dam, I might add. There are so many things that have happened that bring questions.

Why not lead by example and ask of the unions the same things that you would ask of any of us who are in this House? When I was elected, I had to disclose everything about my businesses, everything about everything I owned, the whole package. Quite frankly, and like I said earlier today, I'm so grateful that the Ethics Commissioner's office is as patient with me as they are because we call them all the time. But as I've said before, I would much, much rather err on the side of asking too much than taking for granted that I can just do whatever it is that I want to do. Like I said, they've been extremely patient with me, and they are gracious enough to answer every single e-mail that we send to them, specifically around things with regard to the Ethics Commissioner.

8:10

Basically, that's what we're asking here. Within the legislation this is an ethical piece that asks the unions to disclose to all Albertans how it is that they're spending the dues. I think we are being responsible by asking them to do that. The question, I guess, should be: why wouldn't you ask them to do that? Why wouldn't you? [interjections] Where is it disclosed? Where can I go see that? Where are the union dues disclosed? I don't know where I can go and see that. I don't believe that it is. What I'm asking is that the trade unions have to disclose on a semiannual basis to the employees so that the employees can see where their union dues are going, because they have to pay them. They're forced to pay them. There is no opt-out. So give them the benefit of understanding where the dollars are going. I think it's a reasonable request.

In fact, I would be surprised if any worker in a union would say, "Oh, no; that's okay; just take my money and do whatever you want with it," although that's what the government seems to do all the time anyway. They forget that taxpayer dollars aren't theirs, that they actually belong to the taxpayer. Maybe it's the same thing with the unions because they are leading by example.

Instead of actually calling for transparency – and I'm surprised that this wouldn't have been in your own legislation. Why didn't you add this into your own legislation? Why wouldn't you call for transparency? This government is the one saying that in 30 years the legislation hasn't been changed. Well, don't you think transparency and accountability should be a major part of that change in the legislation? Then all of the people that vote for this legislation can stand on that pillar knowing that they've looked at absolutely every aspect to make sure that the workers that they're trying to protect in this legislation are truly protected.

Any other company – if a company ever charged for things outside of the scope of what goes on in that business, they would have to disclose that. You would have to disclose anything that's outside of the scope of the fees or the benefits or anything else. So unless you have a very good reason for not wanting to disclose or not making sure that the unions are disclosing, it just doesn't make any sense. It's a very common-sense amendment.

You know, if the government was sincere about the legislation, again, why not split the bill? Why pull out division 19? You have division 25, and as the Minister of Labour said – and she said it very eloquently – there is a penalty, but that penalty can easily be fund raised for. That penalty: the AFL can step in, the union people can step in, or anybody can step in and fund raise and keep that fight going on and on and on while a business goes under. So how does a worker go back to work when the business is destroyed, and how does the business function without its workers? That's not possible.

Division 25 takes care of the penalty, but is it severe enough? Is it the right penalty? I believe the Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock said that earlier. There is no balance there. You have this one way to penalize unions for misbehaving, yet you've taken away the accountability piece whereby they could lose their certification if they illegally strike against the company that they're working with. Why would you remove that? There's another piece of accountability that is completely wiped from the slate. I don't understand. It's not fair. It's not family friendly. It does not take into account the workers. How is it that you can justify standing up for the workers when you're allowing unions to be able to illegally strike and potentially have those folks lose any opportunity to get back to work again, especially if that business goes under?

Did you know that a small percentage of unions have had 100 per cent of their certified cards go through, and then when it came to the vote at that time, they had 100 per cent go against the union? It's actually a really small per cent. It's not that big. Quite often when the cards go through, the vote goes through, and it's very aligned, but there are 32 that have been put in the data that, for sure, when they voted, voted against unionizing. Thirty-two accounts. Four of them had 100 per cent that signed their cards and 100 per cent voted against the union.

An Hon. Member: Table it.

Mrs. Aheer: I did yesterday. It's this one. Maybe you should read it.

I was going to say that one of the things that would be really, really impressive is to see the government bring forward pieces of legislation that actually invoke transparency. [Mrs. Aheer's speaking time expired]

Thank you. [interjections] I know; you're so sad.

The Chair: Hon. members, we've had a request for unanimous consent to revert to introductions briefly.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Ms McLean: Thank you, Madam Chair. It is my privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House Brett Barden. He has joined us today to visit the Legislature. He is the executive assistant to the national president of the Telecommunications Workers Union, United Steelworkers Union local 1944. He is very proud of the work that unions do on behalf of their members and the representation that they provide, and I'm sure he's finding the conversation extremely interesting. If I could ask all members to provide him the warm greeting.

The Chair: Just for the information of members, I did get some questions yesterday regarding whether we are allowed to revert to Introduction of Guests when in committee. Technically, by the rules, we're not to do that. We can't actually waive the standing orders when in committee. However, the past practice of this Assembly has been to allow the introduction of guests when in committee, so that's why we're proceeding this way, just so everybody is aware. You don't have to send me notes anymore.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

(continued)

The Chair: I'll recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Ms Jansen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Wow. Where to start picking through this tossed salad of factlike statements?

Mr. Rosendahl: Word salad.

Ms Jansen: Word salad.

It's almost as if they had watched the movie Sharknado and now they're experts on weather systems. I'm going to give away the ending for you: the sharks don't actually travel in tornadoes. So there's that. [interjections] Spoiler alert.

Now, I was interested to hear the words of the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View and, of course, before her the words from the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky. Fittingly, both of these members spoke about the need to not waste the time of the folks here in the Legislature. I say "fittingly" because both of them are responsible for 99 per cent of the heckling that happens when questions get asked in this House.

An Hon. Member: Ninety-nine per cent?

Ms Jansen: That's what I said. [interjections] Oh, wait. This is the part, Madam Chair, where I say: "Those people across the aisle are yelling at me. I'd like it on the record. Blah, blah, blah." [interjections] And the guy in the Panama hat is over there, too. [interjections] Oh, you can't make this stuff up.

I did want to address some things that are not just concerning to me. I think that they're concerning to a lot of people as they listen to this. I've heard words like "nasty" and, you know, a lot of really negative wording around unions. I look at this amendment and I look at some of the other amendments that the members have brought forward, and I don't believe that they are presented with the idea of making legislation better. I don't believe for a minute that if we'd split this bill to begin with, they would have liked anything in either part because they haven't liked anything we've done. The public has; they haven't.

8:20

I will say this. It's all about, from my perspective, the vilification of union members. Now, you can say "union bosses," and you can use that term as many times as you like – and you do over and over again – but what you are really talking about are the thousands and thousands of Albertans who belong to unions in this province. And let me tell you that I talked to some of them at the Building Trades function I went to tonight. I'll tell you what. You create all the narrative you want about unions being in the back pocket of the NDP. These guys were my sign guys in 2012 and 2015, and they are still with me today, not because of the party I belong to but because they're loyal and because they want to support good people with good ideas.

And I'll tell you what some of these guys said to me. They were talking to me tonight. They were hurt, and I'll tell you why they were hurt. They were hurt because there were a whole bunch of these guys who, in the wake of the Fort Mac fire, opened up their homes to people with nothing, who were fleeing from Fort McMurray with not even a wallet in their pockets. As they left, their fellow union members reached out and offered them food and lodging and sympathy and a shoulder to cry on and a lot of other supports. When you blather on across the aisle about union bosses, you're really talking about all of these Albertans who help each other out through thick and thin. What you're saying is: "If you've got any association with a union, there is something wrong with you. You're doing something wrong." I've heard the term "crooked." I've heard the term "nasty."

The Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky is quite fond in question period of yelling the most egregious stuff across the aisle, rarely gets called on it, and now stands up in the House holier than thou and explains to all of us what it means to be dignified in this House. We're not buying what you're selling.

An Hon. Member: Snake oil.

Ms Jansen: That is snake oil.

They talk about all fluff, no substance. It's funny when they talk about that because every amendment I have seen put forward this session by the folks across the aisle is designed to divide. It's not designed to make anything better that we have worked on so far. It is simply an effort to poke away at this government, using the kind of language that is divisive, and then when someone has the nerve to even make a sound across the aisle and sometimes even when we don't, you want it on the record that you were heckled. In all my years in here I have never seen that kind of behaviour.

You know, they talk about how outrageous it is that the NDP government wanted to take big money out of politics, and from what I've seen of their unite the far right social conservative parties, there's a lot of big money floating around there. In fact, we never really had a conversation in this province about super PACs until they started doing that stuff across the aisle. So there's a lot of hypocrisy floating around in here.

I will just say that when Albertans are watching this, they're not looking to you as saviours from a union. They are looking to you and wondering why you are insulting their fathers, their mothers, their husbands, their wives, and their kids. When the dust settles on all of this, you will not come away looking good. You will come away looking like what you are, which is bullies, because when you talk...

Mr. Cooper: Point of order.

The Chair: Hon. member, we have a point of order.

Point of Order

Allegations against Members

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to speak to 23(h), (i), and (j), making allegations against another member. I think you'll find that making an allegation – unfortunately, I don't have the Blues handy, but what the member said is: what you are is bullies. That is a very clear allegation against members on this side of the House. It certainly is not going to add to the debate and very clearly was directed at members of this side of the Chamber and is not likely to create order inside this Chamber. The member is very aware of the words that she chose. She's very aware of how that is going to affect the Chamber. It is mildly ironic that she would choose to make an allegation like that in the middle of the comments that she is making. I ask that she withdraw and apologize.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. Obviously, things are getting a little heated in here, but I think that this probably falls under the category of dispute as to the facts. The hon. member was obviously not making an allegation against any one specific member but talking generally about a group of people and about the behaviour of that group of people. You know, there's a big difference between taking a personal attack on one individual person and talking about the behaviour of a group of people, which can be in some instances, I think on both sides, a little bit over the top.

Madam Chair, I mean, in this case, certainly, as I'm sure you're no doubt familiar with, we've seen a lot of this behaviour today. I think, you know, at the end of the day, there is that distinction – and it exists – between talking about one specific person and talking about a group of different people. I think that in this case the hon. member is simply trying to point out the absurdity of the behaviour of complaining about the behaviour of one side while simultaneously doing pretty much the same thing.

The Chair: Any others wishing to speak to the point of order?

You know, there are some concerns about the way words are used, and in my mind there is a difference between saying, "You are something" or "You are engaging in a certain behaviour," so I would suggest to the hon. member that it would be better to rephrase that particular statement.

Debate Continued

Ms Jansen: All right. On that theme, when you look at a group of people who make about $50,000 a year and they're working hard and they're paying their taxes and they're doing their job, and a group of people set upon them who make $150,000 a year and that group has power, influence, money, organization, and a voice across the province, that is the essence of bullying behaviour. Is it not?

I would just say, in closing, Madam Chair, that there are a lot of folks in this province watching this discussion unfold right now. I realize your frustration. You thought you'd get a lot of steam out of this issue, and it's falling flat. You're frustrated, and you probably want to go home early because you're kind of getting trounced a little bit on this.

I will say this. We will cut you some slack, and you do your amendments. You do you – and you'll continue to do that – and we will go back to all the union members in this province and say: that's okay because you actually know who really has your back.

8:30

The Chair: I'll recognize Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Now, what we're talking about here right now is the amendment, the amendment that says:

- (6) A trade union must disclose on a semi-annual basis to the employees it represents the details of any expenditure of union dues remitted pursuant to this section.

Now, if you were listening to the previous speaker, Calgary-North West, speak, I would probably presume that you have no idea that that's what she was speaking to. What was most priceless about her speech was that it related to decorum in this House. Of course, a point of order was called on the words she used. She had to change her words. Obviously, when she used the word "hypocrisy," it was very well meant. I'll leave it at that.

But there is one thing I'd have to take particular exception to. There were lots of things to take exception to in that speech, lots – lots – that were not true, inaccurate, and meant to be inflammatory. One thing I have to say, Madam Chair, is that when the government suggests that we don't care about union members, that is false. That is not right. That is incorrect. The suggestion was made that I obviously don't care about my son, who is a union member. My son is a union member. You don't think I care about my son? How about my two sisters-in-law, that I love so much, too? Do you think that I don't care about my sisters-in-law that are members of unions, that actually are union representatives?

An Hon. Member: Then do a better job of representing them.

Mr. Loewen: That's not true, and I take personal exception to any suggestion of that sort.

We are talking about a bill here. In fact, we're talking about an amendment here to bring transparency, to protect union workers so they can see where their money goes. We're talking about this amendment here, Madam Chair. As we've said before, separate the compassionate parts of this bill. We'll pass them immediately. There was a suggestion that we wouldn't do it. Try us. Just try us. Put it to the test. Split the bill. Bring it forward. Prove that we won't do it. We will. We said that we will. It'll happen. But this government won't do it because they don't care about the compassionate parts. They care about the labour parts and their big union friends. They don't care about the workers. They don't care about the union members. They care about their union bosses. That's clear. And to suggest that I don't care about my son and my two sisters-in-law is absolutely false. I take deep exception to it. It's not true. Let's get back to the bill.

Thank you.

The Chair: Edmonton-Ellerslie on amendment A7.

Loyola: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. As always, it's a pleasure to get up in this House and speak to bills that we have before us. In this particular case, I'll be speaking to the amendment brought forward by the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

As has been pointed out by members from the other side of the House, I was a union member. They've said it very clearly: the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie used to be in a union. From that side of the House, not this side of the House. Well, on this side of the House everyone knows, too. And I'm proud of that. I'm proud to have been a union member.

I'll be honest with you. In the union that I was in, I felt that it needed better leadership. Now, don't get me wrong. The leadership that it had: they were good people. But one of the things that I wanted to do was to get involved in my union, and I decided that I was going to work on the bylaws committee. So I put my name forward, and I was selected, voted to be on the bylaws committee. Eventually I then decided to put my name forward as the vice-president of the union. I campaigned, and the members elected me to become their vice-president.

An Hon. Member: Did you say "elected"?

Loyola: I was elected. Not only was I elected, but I was elected with about 71 per cent of the vote.

See, this is the amazing thing about democracy. When you campaign, you talk about your ideas. I used to spend every lunch hour. The lunch hour was what I had free because I had to work during business hours. I wasn't doing anything wrong. During my free time I was going out there, and I was talking to other members of the union, and I was saying: hey, this is what I would like our union to be as we move forward. I got elected.

Then, at the suggestion of many members – they were, like, "Rod, you should run for president of the union." And I said, "Okay; I can do that." I decided to put my name forward. At the next election I put my name forward and ran, campaigned about the ideas, where I wanted to see our union go, where many people had suggested to me they wanted to see the union go. Gladly I put my name forward, and – guess what? – I was elected. I say this because, to me, unions are probably one of the best examples of democratic institutions that we have in our society. This is what's really important here, right? Members have an opportunity to vote for their elected representatives.

So when the members from across the way start talking about union bosses – and I even heard a couple of times the derogatory name-calling, calling them "union thugs." That's shameful. I mean, we want to maintain a certain level of decorum in this House. We're talking about people. We're talking about colleagues of mine. So it's very important that I just share with the members across the way: please, let's be respectful, right? If you want to call them – and it's really strange, this whole thing of "union boss," because as far as I know, a boss isn't elected to run a business. Am I right? They run a business, and it's their right. They're job creators. They're doing their part for this society, but they're the boss, and nobody questions them. What they say goes, right? They're not elected.

Then I'm wondering: "Okay. Here we've got an institution that's democratic, and people elect their leadership. They have a president and a vice-president and a treasurer and a secretary and perhaps many other positions in the union leadership, the directors of the union, and they're all elected." So I think that the whole concept from the members from across the way, the wording "union boss," is perhaps a little bit – it's a misconception. And "union thugs" is derogatory. I would suggest to the members across the way – many of them I respect a great deal; I would never say something bad about any member – to please refrain from using that kind of language so that we can maintain a certain level of decorum in this House.

8:40

Now, the other point that I wanted to make about unions – and I already mentioned that unions have a treasurer, right? Guess what? The amendment that we have before us from the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View is suggesting that a union "must disclose on a semi-annual basis to the employees it represents the details of any expenditure of union dues remitted pursuant to this section." From my experience – now, I've already mentioned that I've been the president and vice-president and on the board of the Non-Academic Staff Association. I was also part of the chemical, energy, and paperworkers union for a time, another union that I'm very proud to be associated with, which over time has now become Unifor.

But what's really important is that the treasurer – and again I'm speaking to my experience and the unions that I've been in, and I know that this happens in many unions – does a financial report at every monthly meeting. So the amendment that the hon. member is proposing would actually mean less disclosure than what's actually currently happening in most unions, right? You know, I would almost dub this the go-to-a-union-meeting amendment.

I think it's really important that people understand – and by no means am I trying to man-explain; I'm just sharing information with the hon. member – that disclosure is part of the democratic institution of the union, and they communicate what they are spending and how they are spending it at every possible opportunity. I'll never forget that the treasurer in our union – and I've heard this about other unions as well, that the treasurer will always say: "The books are open. If any one of you members wants to come and see what we are spending our money on, what the union dues are that are coming in, what we're spending on, the books are open for you, membership. Come on in. You're a member of this union, and you have the democratic right within our union structure to know what we are spending our money on because it's your money."

Again I go back to the fact that unions are democratic institutions, and the other important part that I want to suggest is that unlike a corporation, where you have to be a stockholder and you can vote based on the amount of stock that you have in that corporation, a union is quite different: one member, one vote. You know what? I've always been a supporter of that concept: one union, one vote. The reason why I say that is because I've been part of other governing structures – you know, nonprofit organizations or people that are trying to get a nonprofit off the ground or this or that – and people sway away from that idea of one person, one vote. They're, like: oh, well, I'm part of another organization that's going to be part of this group, and I represent 100 people, so I want to have 100 votes to my name. But in a union: one person, one vote. Very democratic.

Disclosing how much money the union is spending and what it's spending on is always connected to the vision of the union. This is another point, that I'm just going to finish up on, this whole concept that, you know, very eloquently members from the other side were talking about, individual rights over the collective rights and the whole concept of opting out from paying your union dues. But then I would ask: well, then, would you opt out of the benefits that the union is getting you because you're a part of that union? I want people to think about this. What are all the rights, the workers' rights, that we've managed to establish?

Sorry. I've got my union hat on, and like I said, I'm not ashamed of it. I'm not ashamed of it. I'm proud to have been a union member, right? What are all the benefits that workers have now and will have when we pass this piece of legislation? I'm so proud of everything that unions have been able to accomplish, you know, since the onset of the Industrial Revolution. Think about it.

And by no means am I suggesting that the members across the way would support this, but think about it. Back in the day children that were eight years old were having to work in factories. This still happens in some places in the world. Children. I have an eight-year-old, and I think to myself: oh, my God, if my son, who is eight years old right now, were subjected to the kinds of things that people in the past were subjected to. Now, I'm not saying that the owners of the factories and the businesses were bad people because of it. They were just following the existing laws of the land, much like now.

The owners, the bosses, the people who run – and don't get me wrong. I understand that these are our job creators. They need to be respected, but we also need to have balance. We need to have balance between the job creators and what they're doing in order to benefit our society and help our economy grow and the rights of the average individual who works for those businesses. When we establish the right balance between those two things, we're going to have a healthy democracy, sustainable communities that thrive, where individuals that live in neighbourhoods have children that go to school, and people are living at a good standard. A good standard of living: that's what we're after, that balance.

Now, when the laws of the land don't reflect the balance that should exist, then that's where the problem lies, and employers, a majority of employers – don't get me wrong. Members from across the way have made the point that there are lots of employers out there that do more than what they should under the current legislation. I get that. That's wonderful. That's beautiful. But not all of them do. Some of them just try to meet the bare minimum.

This is our opportunity. By passing this piece of legislation in this session, we are going to bring the standard up and just have us match other jurisdictions across our great country. To quote my good friend from West Yellowhead, what's wrong with that?

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: West Yellowhead, go ahead.

Mr. Rosendahl: Yeah. Well, boy, I could have fun with this. I've been involved in the union for probably 35 years, and I'm proud of it, very proud of it. I've had many positions in the union, many, whether it was president of the labour council or the vice-president of the union at the mill. I had many positions: shop steward, general shop steward, presenting grievances to arbitration, all these things. I've done that, representing our union brothers and sisters throughout West Yellowhead, throughout Alberta and Canada, when I represented members at the Canadian Labour Congress, and I was proud of it.

8:50

But I'll tell you what is really disappointing. When I hear about the way in which we look after our money, I'm really concerned about some of the I call it silliness, because people don't understand. And echoing my brother – because in the union movement he is my brother. They're brothers and sisters, and they're treated as such. Okay? That's the way it is in the union movement. But when we look at the money side of it, the member mentioned about the treasurer and the treasurer's reports done monthly. I'll tell you what. My last job was a trustee. What does a trustee do? There were three of us. We oversaw the books of the union. We oversaw every nickel and dime that was spent. Every nickel and dime that came into the union we also recorded and made sure that it was correct.

This amendment here flies in the face of what we did. You don't obviously understand. When we filled out our reports, who did we answer to? Our membership. Any time any of our members had a concern or a question about some spending or something like that, they could come and see us, and we would open the books for their perusal. That is good union stewardship, looking after the money, and that's important.

When you look at amendments like this, this is silly, because we do all those things already in accounting to our members on what the money is used for, where it's going at any time. We did that whether it was at the local level with the union. We did that at the labour council. We did that at the federation. We did that at the Canadian Labour Congress. Every nickel and dime is accounted for and where it goes. And you know what? Every member has a right to vote on it. You can't spend any money until the union members okay it. That's the way it works.

So for anybody to say anything else or put out amendments like this is silly, and I can't support it. Thank you.

The Chair: Any other speakers to the amendment? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I stand to speak to the amendment, which would propose:

- (6) A trade union must disclose on a semi-annual basis to the employees it represents the details of any expenditure of union dues remitted pursuant to this section.

Judging from what I'm hearing from across the way, these members would support that. They are claiming that all unions are doing this. So, then, why would it not be included in this legislation?

We have other items where we've identified that most employers are participating in many of the different aspects of the employment standards. I've heard from members across the way that most are, but maybe some aren't, and it's important that we close that loop.

Now, I believe that this amendment is helping to close that loop to ensure that trade unions are being accountable and transparent to their membership.

I believe that the amendment is actually solidifying what the members across the way from the governing party are identifying as already happening. So I don't understand. You know, I believe it would be wise, then, to include it in the legislation. If you see that there's value in making sure that that accountability and that transparency are there, then why would you not include that in the legislation?

We've heard from members who believe that what's being proposed is not being proposed to improve the legislation but that it's just picking and picking and picking. In reality, this amendment is just ensuring that there's accountability, just to be sure that that will continue to happen. To hear members say, "Well, this is already happening, so it would be silly to include it" would be the same thing, essentially, as saying, "Well, we don't have to do all the good work that's going on with regard to the Employment Standards Code in this legislation because most employers are doing that."

In conclusion, I would just love to see this be part of the legislation that's being proposed at this time to ensure that everybody is held to a standard of transparency, especially when we're dealing with employees' money where it is mandated that they have to give it to the union. It's part of making sure that that accountability and that transparency will continue to go on. That's part of why legislation occurs, to ensure that good practice continues.

I've heard from many with regard to: well, this is already being done. I would encourage everyone, then, to support the amendment as it is written.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A7?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A7 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 8:57 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Loewen	Smith
Cooper	Panda	van Dijken
Ellis	Rodney

9:00

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Goehring	McPherson
Babcock	Gray	Miller
Carson	Hoffman	Nielsen
Ceci	Horne	Phillips
Connolly	Jansen	Renaud
Cortes-Vargas	Kazim	Rosendahl
Dach	Kleinsteinuber	Schmidt
Dang	Larivee	Schreiner
Drever	Littlewood	Turner
Eggen	Loyola	Westhead
Feehan	Malkinson	Woollard
Fitzpatrick	McKittrick

Totals:	For – 8	Against – 35
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A7 lost]

The Chair: We've had a request to revert to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you so much, Madam Chair and to my colleagues, for this opportunity to introduce on her birthday my mom, Sylvia Hoffman, who's in the gallery.

Some Hon. Members:

Happy birthday to you,
Happy birthday to you,
Happy birthday, dear Mom,
Happy birthday to you.

Ms Hoffman: Thanks, everyone. Aw. Isn't that nice.

My mom is Sylvia Hoffman, and with her this evening are her husband, David Gordon, as well as – and feel free to stand when I say your names, please – my uncle Larry Tebbutt, my cousin Kyler Tebbutt, my very good friend Jeannette Gysbers as well as her husband, Ed Boraas, who's also a good friend, and their children Tyko Boraas and Anika Boraas as well as my auntie Jenny Yakimik and my uncle Mel Yakimik. Thank you all for being here tonight. Thank you, guys.

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act (continued)

The Chair: All right. Back on Bill 17, are there any further questions, comments, or amendments? The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Well, thank you very much, Madam Chair. May I say: happy birthday, Mom. God bless you.

Madam Chair, I rise for an amendment. I have the requisite number of copies here, and I will begin by passing it off to the page. If it pleases the chair, I could simply read it as it is while it's being distributed or take my seat until you give me further permission.

The Chair: I'd prefer having a chance to look at the original first.

Mr. Rodney: Okay.

The Chair: This will be amendment A8.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Rodney: Okay. Does it please the chair for me to read this?

The Chair: Go ahead.

Mr. Rodney: Okay. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 81 in the proposed section 125 as follows: (a) in clause (c) by adding "receives" after "requests" and (b) by striking out "or" at the end of clause (c), by adding "or" at the end of the clause (d), and by adding the following after clause (d):

(e) refuses a leave to which that individual is entitled under Divisions 7, 7.1, 7.2, 7.3, 7.4, 7.5 or 7.6.

Now, that's the legalese, Madam Chair. We will put this away and speak a little bit of English now if I may.

I first of all want to thank the minister for a couple of conversations that we've had on this, just in this evening session and going back to this afternoon. Truly, this amendment is very much in line with the spirit in which the bill is actually written. What we're simply trying to do with this amendment is fill in what we see as possible gaps in the protection of people who are seeking leaves. I trust that we could actually get all-party support on something like that because – let's face it – there's a whole lot in this bill that we do agree with and are happy to support.

Those of us in our PC Party know that the overwhelming majority of business owners are forthright, honest, and decent people. I appreciate the comments of the previous speaker who said that most often, indeed, that is the case. Their hard work is what makes Alberta great. It makes it one of the most prosperous jurisdictions in the world to live in and created that Alberta advantage that we've enjoyed. We expect that for most of our business owners we don't actually need these rules because they would respect their employees' requests for leaves.

But, of course, Madam Chair, there are exceptions. That's what this is about. The government acknowledges this in the proposed section 125, which restricts punitive action being taken against workers who request leaves. Again, in commonspeak, what is this amendment really about? It's intended to simply reinforce some of those protections by adding that these punitive actions may not be taken against people that have received some measure under the act and not just requested it. We believe that we're closing the door on adverse effects that may be felt after leave has been granted. Further, by adding that adverse effect on their employment is also prohibited in cases where they've refused the leave, we are making sure that leaves are used for what they're intended for.

We're hoping that this clause will actually stop employers from pressuring employees to go on leave if that employee does not wish to leave. Perhaps we all have had experiences or at least known people who have been pushed into that situation against their will. It might sound like a little bit of an unusual concern, but there have been instances in which this has happened in the past, and we just want to avoid it in the future. So if someone is in a situation where they don't want to take a leave because they do want to keep working and they're completely able to keep working and they want to support themselves and it's medically okay and all the rest, we don't want them feeling pressured into taking a leave that they don't want.

In conversation with the minister a question was asked: does this happen elsewhere? I'll give two examples. From the Ontario Ministry of Labour: can a person be fired for taking leave? I'll just quote this section.

No. If you are eligible, you have the right to take a leave.

You are entitled to be reinstated to the same position you held before your leave if it still exists, or to a comparable position if it does not.

Your employer cannot intimidate you, fire you, suspend you, reduce your pay, punish you in any other way or threaten any of these actions because you take or plan to take any of these leaves.

If this happens, contact the Ministry of Labour.

That is from Ontario.

Now, this is from the Canadian Labour Code, RSC, 1985, c. L-2. It's section 209.3(1).

No employer shall dismiss, suspend, lay off, demote or discipline an employee because the employee is pregnant or has applied for leave of absence in accordance with this Division or take into account the pregnancy of an employee or the intention of an employee to take leave of absence from employment under this Division in any decision to promote or train the employee.

These are just a few of the examples to which this would apply. I understand that some would say that this is already covered. But – let's face it – for people in positions like this, we truly want to make sure that there's no uncertainty whatsoever. I believe this amendment will close some gaps in protecting employees from adverse effects on their employment because they seek to take a job-protected leave.

I hope, Madam Chair – and I'll end with this – that I can count on the support of all sides of this House because, truly, this is beyond politics. It's beyond anything partisan. It's about protecting our employees in the spirit in which the bill is being given.

Thank you for the opportunity.

9:10

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, and thank you very much to the member opposite for bringing forward a genuinely well-intentioned amendment looking to potentially close a gap that may exist in this bill. Because he was able to chat with me about it earlier, I've been able to really consider it and determine that it is, in fact, redundant. Under the current Bill 17, the way it's been written now, someone would not be able to be forced to take a leave. I've been able to confirm that with the help of some of the people who helped to draft this legislation.

So with this amendment being redundant, I will not be supporting it, but I do appreciate the intention, and I certainly encourage continued collaborative efforts going forward. Thank you very much to the member.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A8?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A8 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 9:11 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Loewen	Smith
Cooper	Rodney	van Dijken
Ellis

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Goehring	McPherson
Babcock	Gray	Miller
Carson	Hoffman	Nielsen
Ceci	Horne	Phillips
Connolly	Jansen	Renaud
Cortes-Vargas	Kazim	Rosendahl
Dach	Kleinsteuber	Schmidt
Dang	Larivee	Schreiner
Drever	Littlewood	Turner
Eggen	Loyola	Westhead
Feehan	Malkinson	Woollard
Fitzpatrick	McKitrick

Totals:	For – 7	Against – 35
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A8 lost]

The Chair: Back on the main bill. Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Madam Chair. You know, it's always interesting. We all come to this House with different backgrounds. It's my pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 17 tonight and to the amendment that I'm about to propose to the House. It's always interesting to take and to listen to the backgrounds and the stories and the diverse perspectives that we have on the bills that are before us, in this case the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

I was interested – I won't say riveted, but I was fairly interested – in the comments from the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie on his background as a union member. Of course, Madam Chair, I've never been a part of a union, but as a member of a professional association that bargained for me collectively and that often acted in part of its capacity as a union, although we would never call ourselves that, it was interesting to be able to listen to his perspective on how things work in his life when it comes to his union experience and to Bill 17.

I rise today to bring forth a notice of amendment on Bill 17. I will provide you with the original and keep a copy here. I'll wait until you let me know that I can go on.

The Chair: This is amendment A9.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Madam Chair. With this amendment I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 112 and substituting the following:

112 Section 33(a)(ii) is amended by adding "provided none of the applications for membership were obtained by unsolicited visits to employees' residences," after "certification was made."

Madam Chair, I alluded to this in my comments just a little bit earlier, but for 30 years I was a member of a professional association and proudly a part of it. At times it drove me crazy; at times I was very proud of the organization. That's probably life. I appreciated the fact that that organization bargained collectively on my behalf and that it could represent us as teachers when we were working and trying to decide how to fairly represent us before our employers. So I believe that as an MLA I'm not against unions. I see the value of a union. I believe that the people that are part of unions, the men and women in my constituency, are hard working, that they deserve the ability to exercise their right to freedom of assembly and, therefore, their right to bargain collectively, and as their MLA I will represent that position to the best of my ability.

9:20

I believe that portions of Bill 17 are worthy of our support, especially those that govern and talk about maternity leave and parental leave and compassionate leave, et cetera. This amendment that I bring before the House this evening I believe talks about the balance that the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie referred to in his comments earlier. Workers have the right to bargain collectively and to be paid fairly. That's important. We do not live in a society that is in the 1750s or the early 1800s, where workers' rights were sorely neglected and abused. Workers have the right to expect to be treated fairly regarding their hours and their wages, their working conditions, et cetera.

Unions are one way that workers can protect themselves from a business that is more concerned with their bottom line than with respecting the rights and the safety of their workers. This, I believe, everyone in the House can agree on. But workers also have rights to be individuals and to be protected from any organization that would impinge on their individual rights, including when that organization is a union. When unions go astray, just as business goes astray at times, when unions impinge on the rights of workers, then we must find, in the words of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, that appropriate balance, for just as we expect an appropriate balance between the rights of the worker and the business, we would also expect an appropriate balance between the rights of the worker and their relationship with the union.

Bill 17 is called the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, and this amendment, Madam Chair, is asking to fulfill the spirit of this piece of legislation by ensuring that the unions, when trying to introduce a union into a workplace, will respect the privacy rights of any potential member or worker, that when an individual chooses to consider the joining of or the creation of a union within their workplace, they do not give up their privacy rights. This amendment is an attempt to draw some boundaries around the process of certification of workers.

When and where is it appropriate for a union representative to try and get a worker to sign a union certification card indicating their desire to be part of a union? Where would it be appropriate for those conversations to be held, to occur? We know we need to have that balance. We want to ensure that the workers have an opportunity to clearly and without pressure and coercion consider whether they choose to have a union enter into their workplace, but where and when would that be appropriate? There are times and there are places when it is absolutely appropriate and where they should be free to be able to consider and to have those conversations and to be able to sign, but there are also times and there are also places when it is inappropriate, and this amendment deals with that issue. This amendment would place restrictions on union representatives when it comes to the residence of the worker. I believe this to be completely reasonable.

The family home is sacrosanct. As the old saying goes, a man's home is his castle. Home is the one place that a person can call their personal refuge. It's that harbour in the storm of life. It's the safe place, where the rest of the world has to ask permission to enter. It doesn't matter whether you're the government or you're a church or whether it's your neighbour or whether it's the workplace or whether it's the union or whether it's any other organization; they must in normal circumstances take second place to the privacy that you have within your home. This is the safe place for the family, where the rest of society needs the permission of the family in order to be part of that family life.

If the state believes that it must intrude into that family life and enter that family home, then it must have just cause. Madam Chair, only in rare circumstances, for most people, if it chooses to try and enter into that family privacy – they must have sometimes even a warrant. Your neighbour and any person in the general society must either be invited onto your property or they must ask permission. Now, in the rough-and-tumble world of union politics sometimes this is forgotten.

We are all individuals, and we all have the right to privacy. We all understand that while we are part of the larger society and we must work within the confines of the law within that society, we are also individuals. We do have the right to determine when our privacy will be invaded. Governments and society sometimes have to have restrictions placed on them in order to maintain that. But let us be clear. It is a right that we have, a right to privacy.

This is not granted by the state. It's not at the whim of any government. Our right to privacy is enshrined in our laws and our Constitution because we are people, because we are humans. Our Constitution says: "whereas Canada is founded upon principles that recognize the supremacy of God and the rule of law." As we were developing our Constitution, there was a great deal of debate as to whether that sentence should be in our Constitution. While some placed that into the Constitution because they believed that it was important to have the traditional concept of God within the concept of our rule of law, others understood it to mean this, that our rights can be restricted by the state but that we do not derive them from the state. They come from, in some people's minds, God or, as others interpret it, simply outside of the state or the government.

If the state can give you your rights, then the state can take them away. We are trying with this sentence in our Constitution to understand that our rights are not at the whim of any one particular government or state. We allow the state great power over us, but even it has restrictions, as outlined by our Charter and as they apply to our natural rights. This amendment simply tries to uphold the natural rights that we have as given by God, if you believe, or as simply a part of what we have because we are humans, we are Albertans.

9:30

Now, this amendment places some restrictions that we place on any group, whether it be the state or a union or any other organization, when it's trying to sign up members. When you're trying to sign up a member, this should be a voluntary process, and it should respect the right of any individual to the freedom and the privacy to be able to say yes or no for the reasons that they choose to have and not to be harassed or coerced unnecessarily in order to have that signature on that card or that agreement to join that organization.

There is a place and there is a time for this activity of signing someone up in order to see if they would like to be a union member, but it should only occur at the residence of the worker if it is by the choice of that worker. Yet we know that in the rough-and-tumble world of union politics sometimes this right to privacy is forgotten. Sometimes the pressure to sign and the tactics used to try and ensure that that occurs cross the line. We know that you cannot solicit a worker while you are at work. You cannot do that. It would make sense to this MLA that you cannot and should not be able to solicit unless you have been invited into that home or onto that property in order to do that.

This amendment, I believe, finds balance. This amendment places the power in the right hands at the right time and in the right place. The decision, I believe, must be in the hands of the worker and only the worker, and they must be the ones that request a visit to their house. That is why I fully anticipate that the members across the House will support this amendment. They understand, I'm sure, that while we may all support the right of workers to belong to a union, we also support the right of Albertans to the sanctity and the privacy of their home, that unions, in their sometimes overzealous desire to sign up members, should respect the right to the privacy and the sanctity of their homes, and that they would not abuse, in their desire to see a union in a workplace, the sanctity of that home.

Just as we have drawn a boundary around the workplace, so we draw a boundary around the home. I believe that the support of this amendment, Madam Chair, will allow for that appropriate balance. It keeps the workplace out of the home, yet it still allows, in a reasonable fashion, for the union workers or for the workers that desire to be a part of a union to have those conversations. There is nothing in this amendment that stops the union from calling meetings to encourage people to come and hear why they should be a part of a union, to sign a card that certifies a union, the desire of that worker to be a part of a union. There is much that allows and supports the concept of a union. It just draws a boundary and says that the home, that place where everyone has the right to live and to be private and to take care of their family and to not be bothered by any organization, union or otherwise . . .

Loyola: Can we ban Wildrose's campaigns from coming to our door?

Mr. Smith: You know what? I bet you that if I add that to this amendment, there would be a lot of Albertans that would support it.

But you know what? I think this is a reasonable amendment, and I think that if you think through this, you can see that it strikes the appropriate balance, Madam Chair, that it still allows for the certification process to move forward, but it allows for the worker to continue to work on the job site and to be able to come home and not have to think about the politics of unions or the job. It allows them to focus on their families and the things that are important in life that lie outside of the job and probably the more important things in this life, as far as I am concerned.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Before I recognize Edmonton-Decore, we've had another request to revert to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Environment and Parks.

Ms Phillips: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. It's a great pleasure to introduce to you and through to all members assembled Mike Rezanoff and Jeff Sloychuk. They are both from Building Trades, Mike from Building Trades accounts and Jeff from the carpenters' union. Jeff has been a long-time contributor to the New Democratic Party and to the labour movement in Alberta and then the labour movement in the Yukon and now the labour movement in Alberta again and personifies the spirit of the organizer. Both of these men stand up for working people each and every day of their working lives, and we're all better off for it.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

(continued)

The Chair: On amendment A9, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to say that it's a pleasure to rise to speak to this amendment, but unfortunately it's not actually, really, a pleasure. We've heard some comments throughout the debate on Bill 17 that have been quite disparaging towards people that, you know, come from the labour movement. My good friend from Edmonton-Ellerslie, as he stated, is very proud of his background roots, and I, too, am very proud of my background roots and do not make apologies for them.

I've had the opportunity to be involved in some organizing drives, and to be painted, quite honestly, as somebody who's invading the privacy of somebody's home – I can certainly attest to the fact that I very respectfully come up to the door, ring the doorbell, find out if it's a good time to speak and if by chance we could schedule a time to sit down, whether that be in the individual's home, whether that be in a coffee shop or wherever else they would kind of like to meet.

Madam Chair, you know, I find some of these comments like "the rough-and-tumble world of union politics" to be very, very stereotypical comments and quite offensive. I think anybody who happens to be a union member in this province would also find this quite offensive. I'm very, very disappointed in the member for bringing these types of comments forward. Again, you know, the Member for Calgary-North West had pointed out about this repetition of comments that we seem to continue to get because you happen to be associated with a union membership and maybe involved in going out and educating individuals about the benefits of joining a union. As I said, I've always been very, very respectful of people's time and where they would like to meet to have those discussions.

Madam Chair, I am certainly not going to support this amendment that was presented, and I very strongly urge members of this House to not support this amendment.

9:40

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A9?

Mr. Cooper: Madam Chair, I would like to take a chance on a motion to rise and report progress.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 17. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Mr. Cooper: Seeing the wonderful progress that we've made this evening, in the spirit of co-operation I move that we adjourn the House till tomorrow morning at 9.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 9:43 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Government Bills and Orders

Committee of the Whole

 Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act 1467, 1471, 1475, 1478

 Division 1467

 Division 1475

 Division 1476

Introduction of Guests 1471, 1475, 1478

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Thursday morning, June 1, 2017

Day 43

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Orr
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Drysdale	Schreiner
Fitzpatrick	Taylor
Gotfried

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Pitt
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Ellis	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

9 a.m.

Thursday, June 1, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Let each of us pray or reflect, each in our own way. Let us grant upon ourselves and others the courage to continue the work that needs to be done. Let us remain uplifted and find strength when tempted to give up. Allow us to find guidance from our communities, our families, from one another, and from a superior being if one believes.

Please be seated.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 18

Child Protection and Accountability Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Ms Goehring: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Children's Services it's my pleasure to rise today to move second reading of Bill 18, the Child Protection and Accountability Act.

The proposed legislation would improve the way child death reviews are conducted in Alberta, make child protection more transparent and accountable, and help build a stronger, better child intervention system. When a child dies receiving services, Albertans expect our system to take a hard look at what may have gone wrong, implement changes where needed, and prevent similar deaths from happening in the future.

Our government is introducing this legislation because for way too long Alberta's death review system has failed to meet this standard. This was heartbreakingly demonstrated last fall when Albertans learned of the tragic case of a little girl named Serenity. For all of us here in this Assembly that was a clear call to action that we needed to do better for Alberta's vulnerable children. This legislation is about the thousands of children receiving services in every town, city, and village in this province. We owe them a stronger, better system.

That's why earlier this year our government formed an all-party Ministerial Panel on Child Intervention, which I am proud to be a member of. That all-party panel consulted with stakeholders and experts across the province and came together to issue a series of recommendations for improving child death reviews. Those recommendations form the foundation of the legislation being debated here today. As a former social worker before I was elected, I take my responsibility to improve the child intervention system and improve the way we support vulnerable children extremely seriously. I thank all my fellow panel members and all members of the Assembly for the shared commitment to this life-changing work.

Currently the Child and Youth Advocate conducts systemic reviews of death where it believes there is a public interest in doing so. These investigations are discretionary. Under Bill 18 the advocate would be required to review every death of a child up to 18 years old who is receiving services at the time of their death or up to the age of 20 if they received services within two years prior to their death. This goes beyond the panel's recommendation to ensure no child dies in the system without the advocate critically examining the tragedy to see what can be learned and how we can improve.

Mandatory child death reviews would be a first for Alberta and an important step toward creating a system that learns from its mistakes, but mandatory reviews alone are not enough. [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. member. Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre and Minister of Status of Women.

Ms Goehring: We know that a review is only as effective as the quality of information that informs it. In the past barriers to sharing information delayed death reviews, impacted police investigations, and failed Albertans. That's why this legislation proposes breaking down those barriers by requiring any and all bodies with information relevant to a death review to proactively share the material with the advocate. For the first time it would no longer be acceptable to wait until asked because the advocate cannot request information that it does not know exists.

Nowhere is the need for timely, open information sharing more important than between the advocate and law enforcement. Without it, death reviews can be delayed and police investigations could be jeopardized. That's why under the proposed legislation the advocate would be required to communicate with law enforcement and the Ministry of Justice and Solicitor General to see if a review will compromise any ongoing investigations or prosecutions. If police then request a review be delayed, the advocate must check in on the status every six months to see if its work can now proceed. To support this, we'll soon be signing a new information-sharing protocol between law enforcement agencies, the government of Alberta, and the OCYA. This will spell out what information will be shared, when, and by whom.

Albertans expect a death review system that is not only transparent but also holds government accountable. That's why Bill 18 would require the advocate to publicly report to the Legislature every six months, informing the public of those reviews that have been completed and the status of all those that have been delayed or are incomplete.

Timelines have also been lacking in our current system, with reviews occurring years after the death itself. Under Bill 18 the advocate would also be required to complete its death reviews within one year whenever possible, and when this is not possible, it would be required to report this delay so that the public would know why.

The public must also know how government responds to recommendations from the advocate. This legislation would require departments to respond to every recommendation, to share this response publicly, and to do so within 75 days. Albertans need to be confident that their government is not only listening but taking action.

Alberta is a diverse, growing province, and reviews must reflect the cultures of the children involved. At the same time, it's a sad reality that indigenous children are vastly overrepresented in the system. Increasing cultural expertise and ensuring strong indigenous input in death reviews is essential to creating meaningful change. Under Bill 18 every review would include an appropriate expert from the culture of the child who died, and a permanent roster of indigenous advisers would be established to provide advice on both a case-by-case basis and on the advocate's overall approach. For the first time the advocate would also be required to notify the families and community of the child when a review starts and finishes and involve them in the review itself, as appropriate, to give them a voice.

This bill would also propose additional legal protections to help family, front-line staff, and others who participate in an open and honest way. This includes a provision to ensure that individuals who report to authorities will retain their anonymity and afford the same privacy protections included in the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act and a provision that would protect a staffperson or family member's identity and ensure that any information they provide the advocate can't be disclosed by the advocate to be used in court. These protections are also used in the fatality inquiry process and other proceedings. This would ensure that individuals have the legal protections they need to provide honest, open reflections that can help drive real change in our system.

The proposed legislation would not alter the current mandate of the advocate. It has played a vital and trusted role in helping support children and youth across Alberta. Under Bill 18 the advocate will retain its current ability to conduct systemic reviews as it sees fit and to review cases of serious injury or sexually exploited youth in need. Protecting and supporting children is one of the most important roles any government or Legislature can undertake.

This bill is an important step towards creating an intervention system that Albertans can believe in. Bill 18 would create and empower an accountable Child and Youth Advocate to head timely death reviews that hold individuals and governments accountable, that operate transparently, and that share information, and, most importantly, to learn from its mistakes. Ultimately, this is not about enhancing processes or strengthening a system; it's about the more than 10,000 children receiving services across our province today and making sure that we do everything possible to ensure that they have a safe, healthy, and happy life.

I would like to take this opportunity to encourage all colleagues across all parties to support this bill, and I look forward to participating in the debate. Thank you.

9:10

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today, of course, to talk on Bill 18. Since Bill 18 was introduced yesterday, I've been studying it more closely, having a look at that bill in great detail. I have to say that at first I was optimistic about this bill but that, unfortunately, I'm developing serious concerns. The more that I look at this bill and the more that experts across the province look at this bill, the more those concerns are piling up.

My concerns were compounded and increased even more when Paula Simons' article in response to the introduction of this bill came out. Now, Paula Simons is very invested and very informed in the child intervention system and child death review. [interjections] I know the members across the way are heckling about me referring to Paula Simons, and that's disappointing because her work on this issue has been particularly effective and has done an excellent job in raising some serious concerns with the child intervention system in our province. Now, she quotes concerns from Mr. Del Graff, who, of course, Mr. Speaker, is the Child and Youth Advocate, whose office is the one who will be expected now to have extensive new responsibilities and higher caseloads. The fact that he has concerns with this legislation should be a second red flag.

Now, I also personally have substantial concerns that this bill does not accurately reflect the spirit of the panel's recommendations, and I will explain why shortly. But let me be clear on this, Mr. Speaker. I am a member of the panel, and this bill does not respect the spirit of those recommendations. There are panel members that will be disappointed in the direction that the government has taken.

Now, the number one issue that was identified by the panel was accountability and transparency when you're looking into the death review process. It was pretty clear that there are serious issues with transparency and accountability within the system, and this bill does not deal with that. In fact, I would contend that in some ways it makes the secrecy problem worse.

Let's start with having some discussions about that. Mr. Speaker, what is the part of Bill 18 about a government department having 75 days to publicly respond to recommendations? Now, I can tell you that I don't see it anywhere in the panel recommendations. Recommendation 1 from the panel included:

The Advocate, as an independent officer of the Legislature, will report to a Standing Legislative Committee with the appropriate mandate to ensure accountability, as per the Auditor General's recommendation. The committee can also compel department members to respond to questions and present information.

As a panel member the idea was – I want to be clear on this, Mr. Speaker – that the advocate would have a committee backing it up. The Auditor General has a Public Accounts Committee, as you know. The core of this recommendation was the same. The PAC committee is chaired by the opposition, and it can call department members in order to follow up on their implementation of recommendations issued by the Auditor General after a review.

The Auditor General had given two options to consider. One was what the panel recommended, Mr. Speaker, which was that a standing legislative committee similar to PAC – we must be very clear on that – be built into the Child and Youth Advocate, which is the act that we are dealing with here today. The other suggestion from the Auditor General was an audit committee, which reviews the Auditor General's reports prior to its release. This is a good idea. But this isn't about accountability. PAC is about accountability, the number one issue identified by the panel, accountability and transparency.

The committee proposed in Bill 18 is not a legislative committee. Let me be very clear on that, Mr. Speaker. The committee that is being proposed by this government in Bill 18 is not a legislative committee and is a complete contradiction of the recommendation that the panel brought forward. It's an audit advisory committee, extremely similar to the audit committee that the AG is part of. Bill 18 simply says that this audit advisory committee can make its own rules for its meetings. The only teeth here seem to be that the advocate can require a meeting with the committee to bring a matter to its attention.

Now, I recognize that this bill also refers the advocate's annual report to the legislative committee, which will contain its reviews for the year, but that is not timely nor sufficient. The panel wanted a committee like PAC, with established processes to boost accountability – accountability – Mr. Speaker. The advocate himself is quoted as saying: "The only vehicle I have to compel the government to act is public pressure . . . saying they have to 'respond' in 75 days is just not sufficient." That is the person that this government is proposing to put in charge outright saying that, without a doubt, after reviewing the bill, the bill is inadequate. Or as Paula Simons has said, it is actually "a betrayal of public trust."

So for the government to stand here today and in any way express pride in their behaviour is extremely disappointing, particularly when we think of what the subject is that we're talking about, Mr. Speaker, which is children who are dying or being killed in our care. A betrayal of public trust. The minister and the members across the way should hang their heads in shame when they think about that. It is very disappointing.

Now, the publication ban, which has received much talk within the panel, or an attempt to talk – and we'll talk about that in a minute – has received a lot of press and concerns around it. The one thing that was discussed briefly in phase 1 of the panel was rules around privacy and information sharing. Paula Simons was right to point out that the advocate's reports do not share the real names of children. Serenity's real name, the young girl that brings us here today, was discovered through investigative journalism. The advocate's report, which was extremely useful and important, Mr. Speaker, had her name down as Marie.

Paula's concern is that the body now responsible for doing all the reviews – and, by the way, I think it's very important that we have someone ultimately responsible for doing those reviews because, prior to this, do you know how many internal reviews this government and that department had completed? Zero. Zero internal reviews, which is why somebody has to be accountable. This body is not allowed to publish any such information, as other review processes can and as public inquiries can. By the stunt that this government has pulled, they can essentially make it more private, less accountable, less transparent, and be able to limit information to the public.

On the note of public inquiries, I'd like to read a concern raised by the media: I am concerned that the ability to pursue cases through a public inquiry will be hampered because the advocate is now doing these reviews. Again, the number one goal of the panel, stated very, very clearly, was to get accountability and transparency back into the process. This government has taken steps to make it less transparent.

Will the minister please explain the interactions between the Public Inquiries Act and this bill and what the changes will mean? Most of the panel members wanted to revisit the issue of the publication ban and how we balance privacy with transparency, but unfortunately a select few NDP members of the panel keep trying to punt that responsibility back to the department, and the majority of us can't do anything about this because it's a consensus-based model.

Now, Mr. Speaker, interestingly enough, it's only a consensus-based model when it works for the NDP. The only time that we have seen anything resembling votes during the panel process was when the NDP were attempting to shut down the opposition or the external experts. The reason that the publication ban portion is still alive in panel discussions is because the external experts, who have done a great job on this panel – they are excellent experts, very, very professional with lots of wisdom – have sided with the opposition on that panel to make sure that that issue can stay alive. They have worked hard, to their credit, to make sure that the NDP government members on the panel could not stifle the discussion and stop the issue of the publication ban being reviewed and handled appropriately. Instead, if they had not stood with us to do that, the NDP would have swept that under the rug and continued to force through a tremendous amount of secrecy. Very disappointing.

Some panel members are still trying to get this issue on the agenda, and I hope this government will finally let the panel address this issue as a valid concern because it is. The media is saying that it is, the experts are saying that it is, and the opposition is saying that it is. The only people who are not saying that are the NDP in their ongoing work to continue to stifle accountability and transparency within the department.

Now, the staying of investigations is another concern I have. Bill 18 adds new provisions to the Child and Youth Advocate Act that allow the government to pause the advocate's investigations. Maybe all these provisions and expectations in this bill are legitimate, but I'm worried that this is actually just the bureaucrats giving themselves loopholes in order to cover for other bureaucrats, which is another situation that we have seen during panel deliberations. If it wasn't in the act before, why is it in there now? Will the minister please offer us a hypothetical scenario where the assistant deputy minister would ask for the advocate to stay an investigation pending prosecution?

We obviously know that the advocate was able to investigate Serenity's death while a criminal investigation was ongoing. For peace of mind, please tell us a legitimate example where it would make sense to stay the investigation until actual prosecution. If this power is abused, the only recourse would be through the courts, which is a lengthy process and expensive, too, for both parties, which are funded by taxpayers. The court process also is not clear. Does the application to the court have to be accepted and heard? On what basis will the court make its decisions?

I'm also worried about the burdens and expectations placed on the advocate. Apparently, it's going to be the advocate's job every six months to check in with the people staying the investigation to see if he can keep going. If he doesn't hear back within 21 days, he can continue. How about this alternative? The person can only stay the investigation for, say, two months, and unless they renew it, the advocate is automatically allowed to continue, which was the intent of the panel.

9:20

Designated services. There are also questions about whose death the advocate must review. The government says that with this bill it is going above and beyond the intent of the panel's recommendation, which was: "review all preventable deaths of children and young adults who have received a designated service within two years of [their] death." The current review of the legislation, which is before the Legislative Offices Committee, has discussed the definition of designated services at length. A designated service includes a service other than adoption under the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act, the Protection of Sexually Exploited Children Act, and the youth criminal justice system. Something interesting here is that the phrase used in this bill is something different: "receiving intervention services as a child in need of intervention." I would like to have the minister explain why the choice was made to go with this language and what the difference is between this and the group of children that the advocate can currently help.

Under this bill the advocate will be reviewing the deaths of children under 20. Legislative Offices just agreed to increase the age of the person the advocate can service to 24.

I acknowledge that this government had a difficult time defining preventable deaths. However, my concern with them going above and beyond the intent of the panel's recommendation is the burden we are placing on the advocate. Does this bill mean that the advocate has to notify the involved family members, law enforcement, DFNAs, and government ministries about a review it has to do of a child that died of cancer but who happened to have contact with intervention workers within two years prior? The government ministries would have to hand over all records of that child if that's the case. Wouldn't this notification of a review add stress to grieving families? Perhaps the advocate should be given some discretion on who is notified based on the cause of death.

At this point I'm willing to keep working with the government because the issue is too important, but I think I've made it clear that I have significant concerns. I've also made it clear that I am not the only one with significant concerns. Many people have raised concerns in the last few days, since this bill was tabled, many people who are not partisan in nature, which should give this government pause, including people like Paula Simons, who has done, nobody can argue, incredible work bringing the stories of some of the great tragedies that have happened in our system to light to make sure that people can be held accountable and responsible. The Child and Youth Advocate, the individual that this government has chosen to make responsible for all of this, has raised concerns that this legislation will not work for what the government is trying to do and, in addition to that, will actually make it worse, particularly when it comes to transparency and accountability.

Mr. Speaker, I want to be clear. The number one issue the panel has seen is issues around transparency and accountability, issues around the government and the department using privacy not to protect the privacy of individuals that are involved but to protect people from being held accountable for mistakes where children have died. We are talking about an extreme consequence: little children, who I know you care about, Mr. Speaker, and I care about and, of course, all the members across the way care about, who have lost their lives in our care, sometimes in brutally violent circumstances, sometimes where they've asked for help, sometimes where people around them have asked for help, sometimes where it's been reported that they've been physically abused, starving, sexually abused, and nobody has come to help them.

On the case of Serenity, which has been talked about so much in this Chamber, that brought us to this process, let's be clear. There is evidence that somebody reported to authorities that that little girl was being sexually abused, starved, and beaten, and ultimately it would cost her her life. Nobody came to help her. This is what we are trying to solve. By the government in any way attempting to go towards making less transparency, less accountability, to slowing the process down, they are, as Paula Simons said, betraying the public trust. It is so disappointing.

I want to close with this, Mr. Speaker. This government has continued to rise in this House, particularly ministers associated with child services and the Premier, and say that the way they have dealt with Serenity and other cases, to get to the bottom of it, was to make the panel. Yes, the opposition agreed to do the panel in order to deal with those situations, but I want to be clear. This government continues to misrepresent the facts when it comes to that. This panel has not been allowed to deal with the Serenity case. It has been stopped by the NDP. This panel has not been allowed to deal with case-level data. It has been stopped by the NDP. In fact, any time on this panel when I've come close to being able to ask questions and find out answers on some of the mistakes that have been made in the death of that poor little girl, the government members on that panel have moved away from consensus based automatically, all of a sudden, and used their majority on that panel to block that transparency from coming to the public.

The public will not accept anymore any government, anybody in the department stopping accountability and transparency when it comes to kids that are being killed in the care of our province, so if the government wants to continue to go down this road and betray the public trust, there will be consequences because there have to be consequences. The children of Alberta are depending on us. I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that all opposition parties will not go away. We will not let the NDP sweep these issues under the rug. We will continue to stand in this House over and over and over on behalf of the children of Alberta until the situation is finally fixed.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to this bill. If ever there is an issue that will be before this House that should not be politicized, this is it. I know that it's an issue that inflames passions and emotions and that that all comes from a very good place, but when we're talking about children in the care of our province, where the province has become the parent on behalf of all of us in our community, that is the most serious thing, I think, any of us will ever deal with, and it is something, I know, that for everyone in this House, on both sides, is a responsibility that we take very seriously. I also understand and get where the emotion, passion comes from. At the same time, when we're talking about these issues, I would hope we wouldn't heckle one another and talk over one another.

When we're talking specifically about what Bill 18 is and is not, I think it's equally important that we don't make this bill out to be more than what it is. It is a start. It is a small step on a very long road, and I would like in my comments here this morning to frame it in that way, that it is not going to solve every problem. It shouldn't. It would be inappropriate for us at this stage of where the ministerial panel stands to suggest that it would. It would also be, I think, naive to think that we could do such a thing in this Assembly, as much as I know that each of us would really like to.

What we see in child intervention is the result of a very long line of intergenerational trauma, of poverty, of addiction, much of that as a result of residential schools. We need to understand how it is that we got to the place that we are at now and why it is that we are grappling and struggling and not succeeding, flat out not succeeding, and failing children in our society.

I want to be clear. That's not intended as a shot at this particular government or, certainly, at the people who work in child intervention services or child and family services or Community and Social Services or Health or Education or Justice or any of the departments. The vast majority of people I know who work in those departments are tremendously dedicated people, working in conditions and situations that I know I'm not brave enough to work in. I couldn't do it, yet we have people who do step up every single day and do that.

Is this bill perfect? It certainly isn't. Does it reflect the phase 1 recommendations of the child intervention panel? I'd say that mostly it does. One of the things I've grappled with as a member of that child intervention panel and as I learn more about this issue – and I also think about my role on this side of the House as an opposition member – is the comments that we make in this House, the impact that that has on people working in the system, and the contribution that we may make inadvertently, I hope inadvertently, that I hope comes from a good place but which can contribute to a closed culture, a culture of fear, a reactive culture. When we're dealing with situations that are desperately critical, desperately sad, and just outright tragic, there are things where no matter how good the practice may have been, no matter how many safe landings there may have been – there may have been 500 safe landings in a row – the thing that we talk about is the 501st, that didn't go well. Now, that 501st shouldn't have happened.

I will talk about some concerns that I have with the bill and some of the things I hope to continue to see out of the panel because certainly things are not perfect, not as good as they could or should be. I want to be careful and very clear that I'm not excusing certain ways of working, but, you know, I'm grappling with the need to hold people accountable for mistakes and for bad practice. Of course, we do. I don't think anyone would suggest that we don't. But how do we do that in a way that doesn't create or contribute to a culture of fear within child intervention services, child and family services, within Alberta's public service generally?

9:30

I always have questions about the balance, then, between privacy and transparency. Transparency is an important thing. It's what I think, obviously, this Chamber is about. But I think it's important that we're clear on why it is that we as a panel have not been able to find consensus on the question of the publication ban. Some of the experts on our panel have argued quite forcefully that, in fact, we actually need to change or extend the publication ban based on the changes that were made, I believe, in 2014, coming out of the fatal care series.

The changes that were made to the publication ban to allow for publication within four days of a death of a child in care were well intentioned and solved a problem we very clearly had. There was a frightening lack of transparency, and a lot of things got swept under the carpet that should not have. That transparency, I believe, is absolutely important, but the discussion around the table has been: "Well, have we gone too far? What is the impact on communities? What is the impact on families? These are families dealing with the tragic loss of a child, who need to decide within four days to make a court application. Is that fair or right? Is that appropriate? Are there better ways of doing that?" That's the conversation that we're having around the table. So to see that that has not been able to be resolved by the panel is, frankly, not a surprise to me. Now, I think that we have perhaps kicked the can down the road further than we might like, but it is still an issue. I can assure you that I'm not going to drop that issue, and I know the other panel members won't either. So I'm not surprised to not see that in the bill.

The question about fatality inquiries. Part of the challenge with fatality inquiries is how far in the future they occur relative to the incident. That, unfortunately, can do a couple of things. It can retraumatize people who have gone through a very difficult situation. The recommendations that we find – in fact, there was a fatality inquiry conducted recently for an incident that happened 10 years ago. Well, without question, the practice that occurred 10 years in the past is no longer the practice today. The learning that happened happened very shortly after whatever it was that caused that particular incident. That isn't to say that we should never have a fatality inquiry. Of course, we should. It's not to say that we should never see a name published. We absolutely should. But it doesn't act in a timely way.

What I see in this bill are some initial steps to address some of those challenges. The one-year time frame, I think, absolutely is an appropriate one. The resources required to meet that, I think, are an open question, a very good question. I recognize that procedurally we can't address it in this bill. It is a process that we'll need to go through. I think the OCYA has some very legitimate questions that need answers. There are only seven investigators in his office. He is certainly going to need more than that if we're going to achieve the timelines that we strive for.

Information sharing is obviously a very, very important part of this bill and something that this bill does not fully address, but it takes some steps to do that.

You know, another question I have is on having culturally relevant experts. I think that's a very important part of the bill, and I'm very pleased to see it there.

Then there's designated funding, which is substantially underfunded. The funding gap between the services provided by delegated First Nation agencies, DFNAs, on-reserve and what children off-reserve receive is not right. Some of those challenges fall into that jurisdictional morass of provincial and federal funding, but children find they fall between the cracks of the different bureaucracies, different jurisdictions on-reserve, off-reserve. You know, that's one of those things I think all of us have a moral obligation to address. This bill won't address that, nor would I expect it to.

You know, in hearing from indigenous peoples and DFNAs in particular, some of the stories of band councils having to supplement their budgets – they're very meagre budgets. I'm just astounded at how small those budgets actually are. Some of that is provincial responsibility, but primarily it's federal. That doesn't excuse inaction. Are there opportunities for us to invoke Jordan's principle and say: "You know what? We're going to fund that. We're going to make sure that children are taken care of, that DFNAs have the resources they need. Then we'll go fight with the feds in the background." That's the complexity we're going to manage on behalf of children to ensure that they get the services they need so that we can start to move towards some better outcomes. That's what we should be doing.

Certainly, I will be supporting Bill 18. It's a small step, and I would suggest, if I can offer some advice to the government, not trumpeting this as some massive move forward. It's a small step in response to what we saw coming out of phase 1 of the panel. It's an incremental step. There is much, much, much more work to do. I'm certainly committed to doing that, and I hope that all members of both the child intervention panel and of the Assembly are as well.

One of the areas where I think we really do need to do some work, again reflecting on my role in opposition and all of our roles here as elected officials: what are we doing to contribute to a positive culture within child intervention, recognizing that there are going to be times when things don't work out and that when that happens, we should take that as a learning experience? There may be times where we do need to hold people accountable, where something truly has been missed in a way that is negligent, but I believe that those changes that need to occur are not so much on the front lines of the child intervention workers and the social workers and the remarkable people who work there. Perhaps there may be a case or two where that's not true, but I think that in the vast, vast, vast majority of cases, those are the folks that are really doing what they need to do.

As we saw in our meeting last week, a lot of those people will push the envelope, will colour outside the lines where necessary, will not just find themselves in a bureaucratic box because the situations they're dealing with don't lend themselves very well to bureaucratic boxes. There are some remarkable, remarkable people who do tremendous work and who are willing to go: "Well, I know this isn't the rule, but right now this is what's needed. So if I get in trouble, I guess I get in trouble, but I've helped someone today." How do we in the opposition react when someone has done that, but it doesn't go well? What probably happens is that a question gets asked in question period, a news release is issued, and then there's a great hue and cry: well, they broke the rules, and something bad happened. Well, what about all the other times when they went outside the rules or interpreted things in a way that allowed them to help someone that did go well? That's the kind of culture I think we need to be creating.

I think we've also seen in the panel, earlier on, some evidence of a blocking culture, where people came before the panel, relatively senior, and were asked: "Well, what would you do?" "Well, I don't feel that's my place to say," was the response. "What are you afraid of?" That, to me, was evidence of a very closed culture, a culture of fear. When you have people in an organization, especially higher up, who perpetuate a culture of fear, that's not good. That's not the kind of responsive system that I think we want to try to build.

So Bill 18 is a start. It's a small step. It's a step in the right direction. It's not everything, nor should it be everything at this stage. What it tells us is that we have so much more work to do. You certainly have, Mr. Speaker, my commitment to do that work.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Under 29(2)(a), are there any questions for the Member for Calgary-Elbow?

Seeing and hearing none, the Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Fitzpatrick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I stand in support of Bill 18, and I'm really pleased to do so. I want to thank the Member for Calgary-Elbow for his very thoughtful and helpful comments.

I'll begin by saying how privileged I felt to be asked to participate on the Ministerial Panel on Child Intervention. There are some experienced and thoughtful people on the panel who have brought their expertise to thoroughly review our recent and past history of child intervention and to provide recommendations to address the problems and deficiencies within the process.

9:40

Although I was not in the country when the panel was initially established, I have not missed a meeting since the very first meeting, when they began the process, and I was certainly engaged in every single presentation that was given. The information presented kept me even more alert to the issues which have caused all of this legitimate concern. Since February we have been meeting and have heard from a very diverse group of presenters. Their presentations have been informative, challenging, and sad, sometimes all at the same time. The perspectives which have been shared have really provided a very fulsome picture of what is going on, what went on, and what should go on.

There are a number of items which were brought forward and considered very carefully, a number of things that stood out in every presentation, issues such as having all the relevant voices at the table, transparency in the system. It should be effective, culturally appropriate, and improve information sharing. There should be a single entity responsible for the child death review.

Now I will speak to a few of the recommendations from the panel to the minister. The first recommendation was to identify the primary authority for the child death review, and that is the office of the Child and Youth Advocate, the OCYA. Within the proposed legislation this would actually, as has been said before, exceed the intent of the recommendation made by the committee in that it is "requiring reviews of all deaths of children under 20 years old who were receiving services or had within two years prior to their death." This bill will empower the OCYA, require that all relevant recommendations from past death reviews be referenced in child death reviews, and enable the advocate to direct recommendations and observations as it sees fit. As proposed in this legislation, the advocate would report to the Speaker of the Legislature for referral to an appropriate standing committee.

The issue of accountability and transparency is also included and is certainly foremost in this bill. Section 9.1 directs:

- (3) The Advocate must
 - (a) complete the review under subsection (2) and make the report of the review . . . within one year from the earlier of
 - (i) the date that [the office of] the Chief Medical Examiner provides notification of the death under section 32.1 of the Fatality Inquiries Act, and
 - (ii) the date that the Advocate first collects information from the Registrar of Vital Statistics under subsection (7) about the death of the deceased person . . .
 - (4) The Advocate must report to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly every 6 months in accordance with the regulations
 - (a) as to the number of completed reviews.

Now, I think those are good things, and I'm certainly going to have further comments in different parts of either the Committee of the Whole or third reading.

I want to say that I'm not God, but I can do the best that I can do as part of this panel. We as a government can do the best that we can do. Every single front-line worker who works with children at risk is not God, and you do not know what may happen that may change circumstances. You can't predict the future. I will not take vigilante action against front-line workers. I believe that our job is to look at how the system works, how the process works, and do legislation that will support the work that needs to be done. I believe that that was what we were trying to do on the panel, and that's what we are trying to do with the bills that we are moving forward.

As the Member for Calgary-Elbow said, this is a first step, and I think it's a pretty good first step. Some people may not agree with that. That's their opinion, and I respect that, but I have been focused, just like most of the members of the committee, to do the best job that we can. I certainly want to see that continue. I know that we've got meetings scheduled until the end of July, so we're continuing to work on this.

As I said, there's lots in the bill, and I'm going to have more to say later, but I just wanted to begin by saying how much I support this bill. I recognize, as did the Member for Calgary-Elbow, that it isn't perfect, but it is a really good first step. So I encourage all to support this bill and move it forward.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Any questions under 29(2)(a) for the Member for Lethbridge-East?

Seeing and hearing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you for recognizing me, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand and talk about Bill 18. I think it's important to acknowledge at least at some length how we got here. I think it's important to acknowledge that kids in care haven't had the government's best for a long time. They didn't have the government's best under the previous government, and they haven't had the government's best under this government. I think it's important to say that out loud because this is a shared responsibility.

You know, Mr. Speaker, very often this issue of children in care gets ignored and has for years until it hits the headlines in the media. I heard the Member for Lethbridge-East, who sits on the children in care committee with me, talking about how this is a good first step. Well, maybe it is. Maybe it's a first step, but this is the 20th or 30th first step we've taken, and I think that as Members of this Legislative Assembly we have to commit to sticking with it this time to get from the first step to the second step and the third step and actually make things better for kids in care rather than waiting another six months or another two years or until the next headline with another child terribly treated and then have another first step. At some point we have to get past the first step.

I would half agree with the Member for Lethbridge-East because I think this is half of a first step. There is some good stuff in this legislation, but it's not as good as it could have been, based on what the committee actually recommended to the minister. Let me just say that the last wake-up call we got was from Paula Simons from the Edmonton Journal. Isn't it sad that we have to wait until we get a message from the media in print on the front page of the paper with ugly and very, very disturbing details about the death of a four-year-old child? When I think about that, I think about the responsibility we have to make this better.

Mr. Speaker, we in the opposition have been doing our best to co-operate and push this thing forward, but I have to say that it has been an uphill battle since day one. You know, we started and demanded in this House a committee to make the treatment of children in care better. We pushed the minister, we pushed the Premier – we pushed the Premier, we pushed the minister over and over and over again – and you know what? Sadly, the biggest achievement we've had so far is getting one incompetent minister fired on this file, so we've moved on to another minister. I suppose that's a small accomplishment. But it won't be felt or seen or heard by children in care, so that isn't really a step forward for children in care. It only is a step forward for the Legislature, we hope, in giving ourselves a better chance to come to a better conclusion on this file, this very important file.

9:50

Mr. Speaker, after we got the first minister fired, who was sitting on his hands, the second minister and the Premier finally agreed to not the right answer but a sort of right answer. The right answer would have been an all-party committee where we could have called in witnesses and had more of an even playing field while we discussed this. We could have actually as a group done this, and we could have done it in such a way that the report at the end of the all-party committee's activity would have been one where no one, including the government, could hide the most uncomfortable details in a minister's office. But the government instead opted for a ministerial panel.

Even then, Mr. Speaker, it was an uphill battle with the opposition members. The government didn't want to have any official records of the meetings. We had to actually take to videoing the meetings and streaming them ourselves until, unfortunately, sad to say, we browbeat the minister and the government into doing half the right thing. They still don't video stream the meetings, but they do audiostream the meetings. It's very sad that it took the sustained, long-term effort on behalf of the opposition parties to get the government to even begin to be transparent, to even begin to be accountable to Albertans for how we treat children in care. We did that, and it wasn't pleasant. We did it because it's important, because children in care matter.

We've moved along the path. Mr. Speaker, let me say that this whole thing started this time around – again, this isn't the first start. This is the 20th or 30th half of a first step, but this half of a first step started because of the case of Serenity. To date in the committee we haven't been allowed to talk about Serenity. Why do we want to talk about Serenity? So that we can talk about how she came to meet her brutal fate. We want to talk about Serenity so that we can make sure that no other child lives in the same place. So far we have not been allowed to do that. I can hardly tell you how disturbing that is.

The Speaker: Take your time, hon. member.

Mr. McIver: Furthermore, we don't get to talk about the changes with the staff on the ground that experienced what led up to what happened with Serenity. Yes, I know there will be government-side members that will say that we did have people that work in administration looking after kids that spoke to us, but when we asked them questions that actually would have helped, that would have been useful, questions like, "What would you do differently, and what needs to change in the system?" we universally got pretty much the same answer: well, I don't really want to say. So they've been silenced. They've been silenced.

An Hon. Member: Maybe it's because you were recording them.

Mr. McIver: I'm sorry. I know this is uncomfortable for government-side members. It's uncomfortable for us, too, because I acknowledged right off the start that these kids weren't looked after as well as they should have been under our government either. But whether it's uncomfortable or not, now's the time to talk about it.

Mr. Speaker, when we asked those staffers, those hard-working administrators, what should change with the system, they pretty much universally said: well, I don't really want to say. They've been muzzled. They've been silenced. I don't know how overtly or how subtly, but they all had the message: don't rock the boat.

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

Well, if we aren't going to rock the boat, we should all go home. This process needs to be about rocking the boat because the boat is on the wrong path. The boat needs rocking. Kids in care are not being looked after as well as they should be, yet the government is hanging on to the don't-rock-the-boat mantra. It's not a good mantra. It didn't work for our government, and I can assure you that it won't work for yours. It won't solve the problem.

Madam Speaker, it's important that we do rock the boat. It's important that we rock the boat because that's the only way we're going to get to the bottom of this. It's the only way we're actually going to, in the light of day, point at who and what went wrong, how it went wrong, and make it better. There's plenty of blame to go around, but the blame isn't nearly as important as talking about the problem so that we can make it better.

I think I heard somebody use an expression that we don't want vigilante action against the staff. Of course not. No one is calling for that. I think the Member for Lethbridge-East used that expression. No one on the committee has called for that. Nobody in the opposition is calling for that. What we are calling for is to exercise the expression that the best disinfectant is sunlight. Unless we shine light on what has gone wrong, we are not putting ourselves in a position to make it go better.

Children are depending upon us, folks. Bill 18, unfortunately, doesn't get there. There are some good things in Bill 18 that surely we're supporting. Unfortunately, it's probably only half as good as it could be. I asked the Premier about it yesterday. I expressed to her that we're still not allowed to talk about Serenity.

I also heard the Member for Lethbridge-East say that she hasn't missed a meeting. Well, I missed one, and the opposition missed one because, Madam Speaker, we weren't invited. I'm getting a dirty look here, but I'm telling you that the fact is that we were not invited to one of the meetings. That's a fact. You know what? Whether it was an honest mistake or not, we weren't invited to one of the meetings, and that is a concern.

The fact is that until we can actually talk to people that are on the ground – and you know what? Again, the Member for Lethbridge-East talked about vigilante action, but I can tell you that the opposition hasn't talked about that. We've talked about making it better. We've talked about asking people on the ground: what's wrong, why can't you do better, and how would you change the system?

You know what? I really sense that they want to help. The people that work in Children's Services: I really sense that their hearts are in the right place. I really feel that they care about the kids that are under their charge. I really believe that they want those kids to do well and that they want to be part of the solution. Again, Madam Speaker, when given the chance to address the committee, they went silent. I don't blame them for that. Somewhere along the way they got a message that to rock the boat will be detrimental to their employment health. That's the only thing that makes sense to me.

Ms McLean: It happened under your government and the culture of it.

Mr. McIver: Again, I know I'm making the government-side people uncomfortable. They should be uncomfortable, and we should be uncomfortable on this side, too, because we all own this. Those kids in care belong to all of us.

Ms McLean: Your disingenuousness is making me uncomfortable.

Mr. McIver: We all have a responsibility, Minister of Service Alberta, all of us do, including you. [interjection] The minister can chirp if she wants, or she can wait her turn and get on her feet and talk about solutions, as I am doing.

Ms McLean: We're actually acting.

Mr. McIver: No, you're not.

Madam Speaker, I know that the Minister of Service Alberta hasn't got on her feet, and she wants to chirp from where she is, but I'm telling you that I think it's important. If she wants to talk about this, she should stand up instead of running away from the issue. It's not a pretty issue, and we all know that.

I asked the Premier yesterday about the issues that under the ministerial panel are not being addressed and are under the notation of no legislative change required. I would have more comfort with that if the minister said: here are some of the changes we're going to make under regulations instead of legislation. But they haven't revealed that.

You know what? This is the problem with regulations. I understand that regulations are an important part of the legislative process, but regulations can be changed at the stroke of a pen in a cabinet meeting. I think the people of Alberta want to know after this process – and the government should remember that they were browbeaten into this ministerial panel. They should actually take note of that and know that the people of Alberta want to know what we're going to do to make how we look after children in care better.

When a good part of the recommendations of the panel are buried under the heading no legislative change required and there are no details about what regulations are going to be put in place, then of course it takes us back full circle to where we could be back to another half first step again two years after Paula Simons or some other journalist puts something in the headlines of the media. And that's not something that any of us should want, on any side of the House, because, at the end of the day, we're all responsible.

10:00

So I would implore the government, as we go forward, to be a little more open, a little more transparent, a little more accepting of the facts. Again, the facts aren't pretty, but we're not going to get past the facts that aren't pretty until we talk about them out loud.

Again I asked the Premier in the House yesterday what changes, you know, were made on the nonlegislative agreements, and she couldn't name a single one, stating that six weeks was too short. Apparently, it was plenty long for a consultation on a labour bill that affects everybody in Alberta, but it's not long enough to make a single change for children in care. I don't accept that.

You know what? The Premier said to me yesterday in question period, "Your government dragged their feet on this, too," and she's right – she's right – which is part of the reason why we're here. Again, the fault of this, if there is fault, isn't on one side of the House; it's on both or certainly on all of us that have been in government. We need as a team to admit it, we need as a team to talk about it out loud, and we need as a team to get past it.

Now . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays for his comments and also for his service on the panel. It is appreciated. He touched on one issue, which is what I keep hearing from this government – and I think it's greatly unfortunate – and that is the issue around the accusation that the opposition wants to have a witch hunt. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Let me be clear on what we're talking about when we say responsibility and accountability. Madam Speaker, as you know, I'm a dad of three children, a very proud dad of three children. I take that responsibility seriously. In fact, I have said many times in this Chamber and elsewhere that that job is my number one job, to be a dad. I love that job. I'm the dad of a little girl, who, certainly, I want different things for than what happened to Serenity.

When we talk about responsibility and accountability, it's because our system is so broken that right now we're judging whether a child has success in our system based on whether they're murdered or not. That's a problem. I don't think about my children and their success being based on whether or not they've been killed in my care. I have very different dreams for my children, and I expect us as a government and as a society to have very different dreams for the children that have been put into our care.

When we are talking about responsibility and accountability, Madam Speaker, I think it's important to be clear that we're not talking about going after an individual worker who may or may not have made a mistake. We're talking about years of recommendations – years of recommendations – as the hon. member has said, under different governments, multiple governments now, that have come forward to make the system better so that we no longer evaluate it on whether a child has been raped or killed in our care.

The people that need to be responsible or accountable for that are us. It's this government right now because they have the privilege of being the government, and the responsibility and the accountability mechanisms that we are trying to put in here are to hold government accountable, to hold the authorities accountable for why they're not fixing the mistakes that over and over and over are seeing some children die tragic and violent and terrible deaths in our care. We're trying to get responsibility and accountability not just for this government but for this side of the House when it's government in 22 months if Albertans give us that privilege. It's about making us responsible. Somebody has to be responsible for these children.

Right now in my household, for my three children, my partner and I are one hundred per cent responsible for our children, and if something terrible happens like with Serenity inside my household, I sure hope that somebody is going to hold me responsible and accountable as their parent. We are responsible for these children in our care. It is not our responsibility to accept responsibility or punishment for the terrible crime that may have taken place with that child but to accept the responsibility that we have to fix the system to make sure that it doesn't happen to another child.

What you learn – and this is why I want to hear some comments, if I could, from the hon. member – when you participate in a panel like this and you start to do all the reading, what really strikes you are the stacks and stacks and stacks of recommendations that have happened for years and that nothing has happened with them. For me, that is what we're talking about, being responsible and accountable. Albertans expect us to be responsible and accountable for what's happened to these children and to make sure that it's not happening again. And the actions by this government, by not going all the way with the recommendations of the panel, are in my view dodging that responsibility and accountability.

I'd like to hear a little more from the hon. member, if he would, on that topic.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you to the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, who's been a valuable member of the panel, as have the government-side members – as have the government-side members – and the other opposition parties.

I agree with what he said as a parent and a grandparent myself. If we don't get this right, we can point at each other all day long, but at the end of the day we all ought to point at ourselves, which is why I'm doing my best to make this as uncomfortable as I can so that there's nowhere to hide for any of us, so that we get to solutions on these things because children are still in care. Children are still – you know what? Many get good outcomes, which is fantastic. But this is about reducing and, hopefully, eliminating the bad outcomes. We're not going to get there unless we face up to it. So we continue. We continue.

Here are some things, you know, in the legislation, according to the Alberta government report, where no legislative change is required.

OCYA will advise all families engaged in the child death review process that they have access to supports throughout the review and support connection to the same. Families may access culturally relevant supports as needed. Ensure the family has a designated individual . . . to support the family to navigate the system . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to second reading?
The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to Bill 18, the Child Protection and Accountability Act. I've been around for a few years and have been involved in both the 2014 child death review panel as well as, obviously, hearing and reading reports over the last decade on children in care who have died and have been reviewed by the Child and Youth Advocate. It was roughly, I think, seven or eight years ago, after considerable pressure from the public and from the opposition parties, that the PC government finally agreed to make the Child and Youth Advocate independent, not simply reporting to the minister and telling the minister what the minister wanted to hear and having the unfortunate perception, if not the reality, that reports were sanitized to not offend or embarrass the minister of the day. So I give credit that the PCs, after so many years of not being willing to face the music, created an independent office called the office of the Child and Youth Advocate. That was progress.

I think it's fair to say that we all recognize that there is a particular population of people who are most vulnerable in this society, that are most disadvantaged, that come out of homes that are most broken and vulnerable. Violence, drugs, poverty, a host of issues create the conditions in which parents cannot cope or cannot deal responsibly with their responsibilities. Given that roughly 10,000 children are reviewed annually by child services, they somehow have to make assessments in each case on whether these children would be better in or out of their homes and, if out of their homes, where out of their homes, in kinship care, in foster families, guardians of the government initially. In some cases all of these alternatives prove to be unsatisfactory for various reasons. Either the child can't cope with the particular situation, or the family can't cope with the child, or some combination of social and environmental circumstances requires the child to be again disrupted and moved to different situations.

10:10

With that having been said and the dominance of First Nations folks in this population and our long history of betrayal and abuse in terms of services for First Nations and the intergenerational trauma that we've heard so much about, in part thanks to more and more awareness and a government today who has been courageous enough to highlight this important, long-standing trauma and the long-standing impacts of this trauma on the kids and the families, what we've come to today is the review panel, that I think has to acknowledge that critically important work, very sensitive work, traumatic work for those of us who hear stories either at the panel or in our everyday lives, in our offices about things that aren't what they should be.

I guess that with the view that we are, in fact, just three months into this review and the government has already come forward with significant changes to the process and the focus of the child death review, I am mightily encouraged by having a bill before us already. I did not expect this until the fall. It's not perfect, but it's a big step forward in terms of clarifying a unified approach instead of three different organizations reviewing deaths, overlapping, creating some perception of gaps, conflicting in some ways, redundant in resource use.

All of this is to say that this is progress. We're now going to have the office of the Child and Youth Advocate review all deaths, whether in care or within two years of leaving care. That's progress. We're going to see, for example, more timely reporting. He or she, whoever the advocate is, has to report within six months on the progress of every death that they're reviewing. They are going to have to complete a report within one year instead of in some cases seeing these dragged out for years and years, with tremendous ongoing suffering within the family, who can't resolve issues completely without closure and the help of the office and its report. We're going to see cultural advisers for the first time required in every case of a death review. These are signs, to me, of a government that's listening.

I think it's important in the context of this whole complicated business of dealing with children to think about the various impacts on these children and families, whether it's their biological family, their family of guardianship, the influences of their community, their school culture, Alberta Health Services and their involvement with that child and family, the social services system and its involvement, the police and their involvement with that family, not to mention the fact that these families grow in a cultural context, a social and economic context that is creating the conditions for significant risk, significant disadvantage. So to blame one system, I think, is really to miss the point, and to focus all of our attention on one system is to miss the point. Every aspect of government and community, not to mention the federal government, which has a huge role here, has to be working together to focus and hone their supports on families and individuals that are at risk.

It may be the case, as our hon. colleagues in the Wildrose and Conservative parties have said, that there isn't enough transparency in these reportings either from the office of the Child and Youth Advocate or in terms of the panel work that we're doing. It may be that there is a need for more recording of statements, perhaps, and more access to the panel discussions by the whole population of Alberta. But, frankly, Madam Speaker, we are a very effective panel, from my point of view. We're hearing from everybody we can think of. We've had in camera sessions that enable people to speak their minds with confidence and confidentiality. Whether they're past employees of child and family services, whether they're DFNAs, designated First Nation agencies, whether they are police, whether they are adoptive families, guardians, we've had a wide range of people tell us the good, the bad, and the ugly about what they've experienced. Some of them are very ugly stories, and they have not minced words about what they see and what they try to do.

I think, all things considered, that in my 12 years here I see significant progress. I don't see a perfect bill. I see a tremendous amount to be grateful for in terms of a ministry that is putting tremendous resources into and a willingness to be open and transparent with anything that we request. I guess I would argue that we're in a process. It's a complex process. It's focused on one tiny aspect of what we've considered to be important in terms of child and family services, and we're making that better, and we will continue to hone that. There may be some good amendments that we will put forward in the next stage of the bill in terms of greater transparency, more accountability for people at the top of the ministry, but this to me is significant progress. Based on second reading and the principles of what we're trying to do here, I have significant satisfaction.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm very interested in what the member has been speaking about. He made reference to the fact that there had been difficulties over the years with the reports from the children's advocate. They haven't always been listened to. At least this is a step forward and progress in the future. I'd be interested in hearing a little bit more about his experience with why it didn't work with the previous children's advocates. I know that reports came out from John Mould and John Lafrance indicating significant difficulties in the past. Many of the things that are being moved forward right now are reflections of things that have been asked for for many years, and I know that the member has experience with those previous children's advocates and has some depth of knowledge. We'd like to hear a little bit more about that.

Before I sit down, I also want to add that he has made reference to some of the structural issues, noting that this one ministry cannot solve the problem and that there is a much larger and greater demand out there to change real circumstances in the lives particularly of indigenous people, as I'm concerned about, in order to reduce the number of children coming into care. So I'd be interested as well about some of the other larger structural changes that the member might like to see as we move forward in trying to build on the work of this particular act and to do so much more than what we're doing in this one instance.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and thank you to the minister for those insightful comments and questions. I have been working in prevention services for 25 years, and it's very clear to me that we as a society have not embraced prevention. We have not looked deeply at the origins of illness, disability, premature death, injury in a serious way that tries to get at root causes. We deal with symptoms. We deal with crisis very well. I guess it's been frustrating for me and for many in this culture to say, "Yes, prevention is where we should be going," and then seeing the budgets go 95 per cent towards crisis and intervention after the fact. The opioid crisis affecting First Nations in a big way is a symptom, another symptom that we're going after in a big way well after the problem has shown itself.

I want to say with respect to the previous child and youth advocates that they did their best under the circumstances that they were given, given the political realities of reporting to a minister, of being paid for by the minister's budget, being overseen by the minister's staff, being subject to the political whims and sensitivities that were there. Was the Child and Youth Advocate doing their full scope and role? No. They couldn't. I would argue the same thing is happening with other advocates in our province: the Health Advocate, the mental health advocate, the Seniors Advocate, and now the disability advocate. If we're serious about wanting to advocate for special groups and vulnerable groups, they have to be independent.

10:20

I've seen tremendous progress since this Child and Youth Advocate became independent in terms of the depth and the clarity and the hard-hitting nature of the reports that force government, like this particular panel has been forced, to review things and look for change and find out why changes aren't being made when the Auditor General himself has made recommendation after recommendation after recommendation. All this to say that the process of I guess I would call it administrative change, political change has to come about through a progressive increase in pressures and the political will that comes not only out of the office of the minister but comes out of the public and all the bodies that are adding to the pressure to do the right thing.

With respect to some of the many challenges that we're now moving into, phase 2 on the panel, looking at the more systemic issues that relate to child and family services in the province and how we could improve those and reduce the failure rate of those taken into care, prevent those in some cases from getting into care, supporting families in their own locations, supporting First Nations people in kinship care and following up with these families after the death of a child, I mean, that's another area where we are simply ignoring . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to second reading?

Seeing none, I will call on the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs to close debate.

Ms Goehring: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would like to close debate on Bill 18.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs has moved second reading of Bill 18, Child Protection and Accountability Act, on behalf of the hon. Minister of Children's Services.

[Motion carried; Bill 18 read a second time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I would like to call the committee to order.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Deputy Chair: We are currently on amendment A9 as moved by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon. Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered in respect to amendment A9?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A9 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now on the original bill, Bill 17. Are there any comments, questions, or amendments? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to speak to Bill 17 and I would like to propose an amendment at this time.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. Your amendment will be referred to as A10.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by adding the following after section 98:

Review by committee of the Legislative Assembly
98.1 Within 5 years of the coming into force of Part 1 of the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, a committee of the Legislative Assembly must begin a comprehensive review of the amendments made by that Act to the Employment Standards Code and its impact on Alberta's economy, and must submit to the Assembly, within one year after beginning the review, a report that includes any amendments recommended by the committee.

Now, Madam Chair, by opening up the Employment Standards Code, the NDP have afforded an opportunity for socioeconomic policy research unlike ever before. We have a baseline measure, the current employment standards. If the NDP are not willing to review this before we implement these changes, then we absolutely need to review them after they have been in place for five years. By making changes to the employment standards, we have an opportunity to have the bureaucrats and the university professors and think tanks step up, monitor changes, study the changes, and quantify their effects on Alberta's economy. Such studies would then be able to be rolled up in a major study by the Legislative Assembly by 2022, a full five years from now. The NDP should be happy for such an amendment because the academics will get jobs measuring the changes.

Knowing that a review and a report will be coming in five years will give some peace of mind to employers and employees that in five years if there are negative, unintended consequences to this act, they will be examined and hopefully fixed. Some union members may find errors or omissions and changes that will need to be made within the next five years. This will provide them with this opportunity. By having this report, those changes can be captured and implemented at that time.

This amendment changes nothing about the bill. It just encourages the next government to review what effects this bill brought upon Alberta. Like the Minister of Labour said – and she often used references to some fairly awesome '80s songs, I must add – it might have been over 30 years since this legislation was reviewed. This amendment ensures that it won't be 30 years for the next review, and the review of those effects will be recorded for all government to see and study. Good decisions can be made on public policy for themselves.

This is a good amendment, Madam Chair. There is nothing scary or dangerous that upsets the main piece of the NDP legislation agenda here. There is good governance. If the Legislative Assembly is confident that Bill 17 is good for Albertans, the Assembly will pass this amendment. If Bill 17 is not good for Alberta and the NDP fail to pass this amendment, they acknowledge they will be embarrassed by the economic impact data that would populate this five-year report. I challenge the NDP to support this amendment, that brings about good governance and does not affect the NDP legislation agenda contained in this bill.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to amendment A10?
Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A10 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 10:29 a.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Gill	Loewen
Cyr	Hanson	Stier
Drysdale	Hunter

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Jansen	Phillips
Bilous	Kazim	Piquette
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Renaud
Carson	Larivee	Rosendahl
Clark	Littlewood	Sabir
Connolly	Loyola	Schmidt
Coolahan	Malkinson	Schreiner
Cortes-Vargas	McLean	Shepherd
Dach	McPherson	Sigurdson
Drever	Miller	Sucha
Eggen	Miranda	Swann
Feehan	Nielsen	Turner
Fitzpatrick	Payne	Woollard
Goehring

Totals:	For – 8	Against – 40
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A10 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are back on Bill 17. Are there any members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Ms Renaud: Thank you, Madam Chair. It's my pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. Yesterday in this House – well, the last few days, actually, it's been really disturbing to hear some of the things coming from across the way talking about folks who belong to unions. They've been referred to as union thugs, all kinds of names, and they seem to believe that we are responsible to union bosses. I'm not sure what exactly that means, but, you know, given their propensity for conspiracy theories, like, climate change related, I'm not too surprised.

I'd like to share a little bit about one of my union bosses. I was the executive director of the Lo-Se-Ca Foundation for many years and managed a staff of about 150 people. We had a number of folks with disabilities that had located and secured inclusive employment. Two of those fellows – one had Down's syndrome; the other one had cerebral palsy – were employed by Superstore in St. Albert. Guess what? They were in a union. [interjections] I know. They were really bossy, too.

But the really great thing about the union, chatting with them over the years, is that they learned a lot about democracy, and they learned a lot about what their rights were. So not only was it a great experience for them, working there, being employed there, but they were also protected. While many people with disabilities in inclusive employment set-ups will often lose hours or lose positions when there are problems in the economy or things shift, these two folks did not. They were included. They were supported by the union. I just wanted to give you an example of a union boss.

The other thing that I was a little bit disturbed about was the constant reference to cherry-picking. You know, they want to say: "Well, if you just pull this part out, we'll vote for it. Totally in favour of it. Pull this part out. We like it.” Here’s the thing. It’s inclusive legislation. It’s about employment, and there are many, many pieces that go along with that for people that belong to unions and people that don’t belong to unions. I’ll tell you that for many years I managed a staff of about 150 people, so I got to know the labour standards fairly closely, and I’ll tell you that they were shamefully outdated, shamefully. Now, most employers in this province understood that and went over and above, but there are certainly some that do not. It is incumbent on us to update that.

But I get why the previous government steered away from this. They did so because it takes some political capital to do that, and they were not willing to do that. Clearly, this group is not willing to do that either, so it makes sense that they’re going to join.

The piece that I was really happy to see is – and I’ll tell you that the community of people with disabilities and their allies have been lobbying and advocating for many, many, many years to have section 45 repealed altogether. Finally – finally – section 45 is going to be gone if we approve this legislation. Section 45 was a minimum wage exemption for people with disabilities, so employers were able to apply for this permit to pay people less money. Although in the last few years it hasn’t been used very often, historically it has been, and it has been used to support things like enclaves of people that do contract work for businesses. It’s been used in place of a training allowance for people with disabilities. What it did was keep people down. I’m incredibly thankful that this is in this legislation.

10:50

Last week I heard somebody say: well, why not just pull that piece out? Why would you pull it out and deal with it separately? We need employment legislation and labour legislation that is inclusive of all people. Whether you have a disability or not, whether you work with a union or not, it has to be inclusive. Constantly wanting to pick out pieces that you’re okay with or that your base is okay with is not only disingenuous; I think it just doesn’t do service to the people that work in those situations. I for one am extremely happy that we are going to support, I am going to support this legislation.

I wanted to say one other thing. It’s been tough listening to some of the things that come out of this place from the other side. I don’t think they realize sometimes that when they’re assigning these really nasty labels to people who work in unions, these are men and women that were present when your children were born. These are men and women that were there when you took your last breath. These are people that work in the community supporting folks with disabilities. These are home-care workers. They’re firefighters. These are emergency workers. These are first... [interjections] Keep yammering away. That’s A-okay with me.

An Hon. Member: He’s calling them sewer rats.

Ms Renaud: You’re calling us sewer rats?

Mr. Hanson: Nice try.

Ms Renaud: You know, it’s unfortunate...

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members.

Ms Renaud: These guys like to stand up and call names.

The Deputy Chair: If we can speak through the chair, please.

Ms Renaud: Let’s focus on the point here, and the point is that this is inclusive legislation, and I’m incredibly proud to support it. You should be embarrassed about the things that you’re saying about men and women, Albertans who work hard every single day to raise their families, to make this a better province, to make this a stronger province. You know, you’re just painting them with a brush. You’re stereotyping them. You’re generalizing.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, through the chair, please.

Ms Renaud: Oh, sorry. Sorry, Madam Chair.

Mr. Nixon: She had a lot of trouble with the rules. It’s disappointing.

Ms Renaud: Yeah. I like the rules. I do stick to the rules, so I will go through the chair.

You know, I wanted to say that they like to tell us that they want to work together, they want to make things better, but early this morning I saw two panel members stand up and speak. They both say that they are working towards the same goal, the same legislation, the same end product, yet one of them will call the other disgusting and then expect to have a healthy working relationship when they go back to the panel table. That is disingenuous, Madam Chair.

Those are my comments about it, and I’m happy to support this legislation.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Minister of Status of Women and Service Alberta.

Ms McLean: I was just wondering, Chair. Questions or comments: is that...

The Deputy Chair: We’re in Committee of the Whole, so you have 20 minutes to speak.

Ms McLean: Oh, okay. No. That’s fine. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Greenway.

Mr. Gill: Thank you, Madam Chair. On behalf of my colleague from Calgary-Hays I would like to move an amendment, that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 9, in the proposed section 12(2)(b), by adding “, unless the deduction would reduce the wage of the employee below the minimum wage to which the employee is entitled” after “authorized to be deducted by a collective agreement that is binding on the employee.”

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. Your amendment will be referred to as amendment A11. Please go ahead.

Mr. Gill: Thank you, Madam Chair. This amendment, if passed, will ensure that any working individual cannot have their pay reduced below minimum wage because of union dues.

Now, I know that as soon as our caucus introduces an amendment which pertains to unionized employees, many members from the government will assume that this is an attack on unions, but it’s not, actually. The individual at or near minimum wage can least afford any form of wage reduction from union dues or any other reasons, right? I’m sure a number of members from the government side will rise and speak to all the benefits these individuals receive from being part of a union; however, that conversation is for another day.

Minimum wage earners are among the most vulnerable working people in this province, and anything we can do together as elected officials to ensure that the take-home portion of their wage is as high as possible is something, I think, everyone would support, and we all should support that. At the end of the day, this amendment generally seeks to ensure that no individuals in Alberta will be paid below minimum wage, no matter where they work. I know my staff had sent this across to the minister's office ahead of time because we feel that this is a positive amendment and are hoping for the minister's support. I think that ensuring that all working Albertans get to legitimately make the minimum wage is a rather straightforward action.

I hope all members of this Assembly support it because, at the end of the day, this government's intention is to, you know, fight for everyday Albertans. So let's show them that we're protecting you. I'm hoping that I can get the support of all the members of this Assembly.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. Just to clarify, you are moving the amendment on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays?

Mr. Gill: That's right.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Mr. Gill: Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Are there any members wishing to speak to amendment A11? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I thank the member for bringing the amendment forward and, I guess, you know, maybe some kudos, trying to protect workers on the lower end of the scale. Of course, I would love to see more enthusiasm with regard to bringing up that minimum wage to begin with. But on first look at this, as far as I know, this is not occurring in any other jurisdiction anywhere in Canada and would also violate the legislation around the Rand formula. So at this time I am not able to support this amendment and would encourage folks in the House to not support that as well. We can't be allowing these types of changes.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A11?

Mr. Coolahan: Just briefly, Madam Chair. Thank you for the amendment, but it's not an altruistic amendment. Let's face it. It's meant to sort of display that people have to pay union dues even if they are making minimum wage. What the members need to understand is that a lot of union dues go into defence funds so that members can access a lawyer if they require one. Someone on minimum wage is not going to be able to pay their own lawyer. That's what a lot of union dues are used for, defence.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A11?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A11 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 10:59 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Gill	Loewen
Cyr	Hanson	Stier
Drysdale	Hunter

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Jansen	Payne
Bilous	Kazim	Phillips
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Piquette
Carson	Larivee	Renaud
Connolly	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Loyola	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Malkinson	Schmidt
Dach	McLean	Schreiner
Drever	McPherson	Shepherd
Eggen	Miller	Sigurdson
Feehan	Miranda	Turner
Fitzpatrick	Nielsen	Woollard
Goehring

Totals:	For – 8	Against – 37
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A11 lost]

The Acting Chair: We are back on Bill 17. The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mr. Cyr: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to speak. I do want to move an amendment. I would like to discuss it.

The Acting Chair: That will be referred to as amendment A12.

Please proceed, hon. member.

Mr. Cyr: Okay. I unfortunately gave my only copy to you. If I could get that, please, Mr. Chair. Thank you very much.

The Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake to move that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 112.

Now, in that section what we've got is a government that is moving the threshold for the carding process from three months, which is 90 days, to six months, which is 180 days. Now, at this point I haven't heard from the government a good reason to be moving the process by 100 per cent to a higher threshold.

If for some reason we were to hear that we had a higher threshold than other provinces to make this vote happen, then that would be a justification that we could probably see. Let's say, for instance, that we had an 80 per cent threshold that we needed to meet where, let's say, Nova Scotia has 40 per cent. Then what happens is that we can say: well, because we've got such a high threshold, the unions should be given an opportunity to be able to make that 80 per cent threshold. Now, what we've got, though, is a very low threshold when you look at all of the provinces across Canada. Actually, from the reading I can see – and the government can correct me, but I would say that from what I can see here, we're tied with the lowest several of the provinces, reaching the threshold at 40 per cent. This amendment deals with that, saying that we've got a very acceptable range, which is 40 per cent.

My question is: why do we need to increase it from 90 days to six months? I think it's reasonable to say that it looks like what we're trying to do is to more or less allow the unions an unfair time frame to be able to influence the workers that may not want a union to go into their facility. That's where possibly we could see badgering or intimidation being brought forward, and this, obviously, is not what I would hope the intent of the government is, to bring an undue influence.

Ninety days seems to be a very reasonable time frame that a union can use. What their goal here is to go in and make sure that the employees are educated on the benefits of a union. Then what we've got is the employer saying that this is what we believe that we've got without the union here. Then within that 90-day period we end up with a vote that's held, and we're able to see whether or not that entity is able to bring forward a vote for a union.

Now, what we end up seeing here, as many of you know, is that the longer we create this process, the more strife we've got inside of the process. If you look at some of the – well, let's go with the last federal election. I would argue that because of the length of time of that federal election, there were just a lot of people that stopped even caring about it after a while – that's a shame – which is why focusing this to 90 days gets everybody on task. It gives everybody the ability to be able to get to those employees. It gives everybody the ability to say: this is the right direction for us.

What happens here is that by the government saying that we want to unilaterally double this time frame, we are actually creating strife in the workplace. I don't believe that's what the government's intent is. I believe that their intent is to say: let's give a fair representation of being able to get this information to the employees. But in the end, I have not heard from the government as to why 90 days isn't sufficient.

So I encourage the government to strike section 112 from the bill. I encourage the government to go back to the 90 days so that we can actually have a fair time frame that has worked for, as the government continues to state, 30 years.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The chair recognizes the Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I thank the member for bringing the amendment forward. I know you pointed out that there are some jurisdictions, of course, that don't have these numbers in place, but there are also jurisdictions that do have them in place.

The reasoning behind the six-month period that was brought in, Mr. Chair, was with regard to employees that work for companies that are very, very large, vast in the number of employees that are there, as well, possibly, in multiple locations around a jurisdiction. This allows a reasonable amount of time for folks to consider whether they want to unionize or not because of geographical location, the numbers of employees. Essentially, I guess what I'm saying is that this is not a new practice by any means. It's pretty much almost Canadian mainstream now.

At this time again I'll thank the member for bringing it forward, but I won't be able to support this and will urge folks in this House to not support it as well.

11:10

Mr. Cyr: Well, I'm sad to hear that they're not looking to support this amendment. What we've seen here is a unilateral approach to dealing with everybody within Alberta. So what you've done is that you've said that because there are exceptions to this, because they may take time, let's treat all of the businesses in Alberta the same way. Let's say, for instance, there is a business out there with 10 employees. Suddenly what we've got here is that six months is just way too long.

What we need to be looking at here is: if you wanted to bring forward something that said, "Because of the length of time it takes for some of these larger companies to be able to get to the employees, possibly anybody over 300 employees," and I am picking a number out of the sky, "is a company that would be allowed to apply to the minister for an additional three months," that, I think, people would be able to accept, but by unilaterally deciding that six months for everybody – a one-fits-all, if you will, approach is not okay. That's why I'm saying that the government should put this amendment forward and then deal with it later on.

Thank you.

The Acting Chair: The Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thanks, Mr. Chair. I appreciate the comments from the member. By extending the timeline from 90 days to six months, this in no way inhibits any kind of activities, meaning that, you know, if you have a smaller employer, it's going to have to drag out to six months. The process still goes as it does now, just as at 90 days. It just allows for that room for the larger groups of employees. Again, there's nothing inhibiting anything smaller. This is just simply something that's already being done in other jurisdictions to allow for the larger and more diverse geographical locations of employers.

The Acting Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A12?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A12 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 11:13 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Drysdale	Hunter
Cyr	Gill	Loewen

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Jansen	Payne
Bilous	Kazim	Phillips
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Piquette
Carson	Larivee	Renaud
Connolly	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Loyola	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Malkinson	Schmidt
Dach	McLean	Schreiner
Drever	McPherson	Shepherd
Eggen	Miller	Sigurdson
Feehan	Miranda	Turner
Fitzpatrick	Nielsen	Woollard
Goehring

Totals:	For – 6	Against – 37
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A12 lost]

The Acting Chair: We are back on Bill 17. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Shepherd: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It's a pleasure to rise today to speak to the bill. You know, if you'd asked me, say, just over a week ago how much I thought I had in common in my beliefs with Mr. Lorne Gunter, a columnist with the Edmonton Sun, I would have guessed that number to be very, very low. In fact, if you'd asked me to draw a Venn diagram of our relative positions on social and political issues, I'm not sure those two circles would have touched, let alone been on the same page.

However, Mr. Chair, as of last week it appears that I was, in fact, mistaken. There is indeed a small sliver of agreement that exists between us, a sliver that contains perhaps agreement that puppies are adorable, that “with his do-nothing budget and early election call, Jim Prentice merely confirmed Tory arrogance and cynicism” – we agreed there – and lastly, that the bill that we have before us today, Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, is, in fact, “pretty bland” and “merely brings Alberta . . . into alignment with federal law and – more importantly – with recent Supreme Court decisions on leaves and job security.” Indeed, as Mr. Gunter noted, the changes that this bill is proposing “are already standard practice at many (most?) Alberta businesses.”

Mr. Chair, there is nothing extreme about this bill. Of course, no one would know that from watching the members across the aisle, who have apparently dedicated themselves to lighting their hair on fire in order to decry some aspects of this bill as the continuing advance of some kind of socialist apocalypse. Frankly, I’ve lost track of the number of times we’ve heard the words “radical” and “ideological.” Now, this isn’t unusual. It’s actually been a pretty common tactic of some on the right of the political spectrum to try to shift the goalposts that define the political centre. For decades there have been various organizations on that right end of the spectrum who have worked to try to paint common-sense and compassionate policies as being extreme, as being part of some sort of scary socialist plot, in order to portray their own extreme ideologies in a much more moderate light.

11:20

Now, Mr. Chair, Bill 17 is not extreme. It simply brings Alberta in line with standard policy across Canada. Bill 17, unlike the views of many of the members opposite, is moderate and mainstream. It is not in any way radical or extreme. What’s extreme is the view of the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner that there should be no minimum wage.* What’s radical are the views of the Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake on the realities and effects of man-made climate change. What’s truly ideological is the apparent belief of the Member for Strathmore-Brooks that government should never, regardless of economic circumstances, take on debt and his apparent belief that employees who benefit from the work of a union on their behalf should be able to leave it to others to pay for it. Now, of course, the view that you should be able to enjoy all the benefits of systems that are built through collective effort without contributing yourself isn’t that uncommon for those who hold a libertarian view of the world.

But, that said, indeed what was well outside the mainstream and indeed outside any reasonable interpretation of rights in our country was the previous government’s attempt to threaten prosecution and financial penalties for anyone other than a union official or a government employee to suggest that unionized government employees participate in or consider what they deemed an illegal strike.

Mr. Hanson: Point of order, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: Hon. member, a point of order has been called.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hanson: Yeah, just a point of order, Mr. Chair, under 23(h): “makes allegations against another Member.” The member very clearly said that the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner made a statement in the House that he believed that there should not be a minimum wage, and I would like to challenge him to, you know, produce the Hansard remarks that show that the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner actually said those statements. Otherwise, I would ask him to apologize and withdraw that statement.

Thank you.

The Acting Chair: The hon. government whip.

Cortes-Vargas: Mr. Chair, I mean, if what we need is the Hansard, then we can provide the Hansard if we can come back to this.

The Acting Chair: Hon. members, at this time I do not have the benefit of the Blues to refer to or the citations which have been referred to, so at this moment I’ll view it as not a point of order. But I do caution members about any disagreements on statements of the facts here as well.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, please proceed.

Mr. Shepherd: Certainly, Mr. Chair. I will take that under advisement. Thank you for your caution.

Debate Continued

Mr. Shepherd: Mr. Chair, I will return to my remarks. Now, indeed, as I was saying, previous legislation brought forward by the previous government which looked to restrict the free speech of individuals regarding unionized government employees participating in or considering what they deemed an illegal strike: that was extreme, ideological, and radical.

This bill, Mr. Chair, is none of those things. It’s simply a long overdue alignment of Alberta’s employment and labour standards with the rest of Canada, and the fact that it’s taken this long for these changes to be introduced speaks to the cowardice and the skewed priorities of previous governments, who apparently had time to pass constitutionally fraught legislation that threatened the pensions and freedoms of government employees but none to ensure the protection of tens of thousands of workers across our province.

That said, Mr. Chair, now that our government is taking action to bring our employment standards into the 21st century, I’ve been glad to hear members across the aisle state that they’re one hundred per cent in support of these changes, or at least they are in principle.

You know, I’ve heard more than one member of the Official Opposition opining that all employers they know already look after their employees and treat them well and wondering if it’s therefore necessary to enshrine these requirements in legislation, which, frankly, leads me to question whether if, knock on wood, they had formed government in the last election, they would have had the will to provide Alberta workers with the same protections enjoyed by workers everywhere else in Canada. Mr. Chair, it’s not enough to say that most workers are protected, that most employers are reasonable and compassionate. All employees in Canada deserve to be protected no matter where or by whom they are employed.

Now, Mr. Chair, last night I had the opportunity to visit Action for Healthy Communities. That’s an organization in my constituency that supports new Canadians as they are settling in our city and helps to ensure that they are able to thrive here. Last night I had the opportunity to go to Action and to speak to a group of new Canadians about my work as an MLA and how I and all of us can be of help to them. After I spoke, there was a second presentation, from the executive director of the Alberta Workers’ Health Centre, an organization dedicated to educating workers, both unionized and non-unionized, about their rights, particularly in the areas of health and safety.

Now, I mention this presentation for a few reasons. First of all, the presenter, when I spoke with him, noted that they’ve been running a program specifically targeted to new Canadians, a program that’s been funded through a penalty that was paid by an employer after the workplace death of two Chinese temporary foreign workers in 2013. Now, I recognize that we’re not here discussing health and safety regulations, but I think it’s important to recognize that new Canadians and temporary foreign workers are particularly vulnerable to exploitation by employers. And this is true across the board, not just in terms of health and safety but also in terms of having access to sick leave, being able to take time off when needed to look after their children or other family, being paid the full value of their overtime, or being held responsible for a dine and dash or a gas and go.

*See page 1519, left column, paragraph 16

Now, new Canadians are more likely to find themselves in somewhat precarious employment, and due to the challenges of learning a new language and culture, they are also more prone to exploitation. Sadly, there are some employers, admittedly nowhere close to a majority but some, who will attempt to exploit these workers and offer less to them than perhaps most Albertans enjoy. This bill ensures, first, that it is legally required for these employees to be granted the same rights enjoyed by employees in every other jurisdiction in Canada and, secondly, that if employers fail to meet these standards, there are administrative penalties that can be applied. Information about these employers, any employer who contravenes the code, will now be able to be published, and there is an enhanced ability to recover earnings that are owed to an employee. That's something that is going to make life better for many Albertans.

Now, the second reason that I mention the presentation that I saw last night from the Alberta Workers' Health Centre is to address the issue of consultation. Members across the aisle have repeatedly risen to claim that our government failed to conduct adequate consultation before bringing this legislation forward. They've complained about the number of consultations and who was able to take part. To be clear, Mr. Chair, this is not an issue that has never been seen before. Previous governments, in both 2007 and 2014, conducted reviews of the codes, but, as with their studies on health and safety protections for farm and ranch workers and so many other issues, those studies were simply shelved, with no action taken, because they lacked the simple courage to provide Alberta workers with the same rights that are enjoyed by all Canadians. Those governments did not have the courage or the will.

Again, Mr. Chair, these are rights that every other jurisdiction brought into place, some in response to rulings of the Supreme Court over the course of nearly 30 years, that were simply overlooked, ignored, and not addressed by previous governments in Alberta. Well, our government went through the information from those previous reviews. We looked at the court rulings. We looked at the norms and practices from every other jurisdiction in Canada. We then held face-to-face round-tables to hear from all stakeholders who might be affected, including employers, business associations, labour groups, and advocacy organizations on both sides of the political spectrum. We ensured we had all perspectives at those tables. We reviewed 400 written submissions and 5,000 responses to an online survey.

11:30

Now, Mr. Chair, to return to the presentation that I was speaking of from the Alberta Workers' Health Centre, after it was completed, the executive director of that organization came to speak to me and expressed his thanks and his appreciation for how our government conducts consultations. He talked about how much they appreciated being included and heard at the round-tables to shape the regulations being developed under the Enhanced Protection for Farm and Ranch Workers Act. He spoke of how happy they've been to see government valuing and including the voice of workers on par with all other stakeholders in considering labour legislation, something previous governments repeatedly failed to do. He noted that in the past it was generally not the case, that previous governments had a tendency to listen to the same voices, those who were loudest in the room, and not take the opportunity to ensure that all voices were included at the table.

So, Mr. Chair, I am proud of this piece of legislation. I am proud of all aspects of this piece of legislation.

We've heard from the members across the way considerably about their opinions on unions within the province of Alberta. Indeed, they seem to have a very well-developed and not terribly positive ideology developed about unions in the province of Alberta. They've had much negative to say.

They've been very adamant that we not besmirch employers in the province of Alberta, Mr. Chair, and indeed I agree with them on that. We have many, many, indeed a majority of wonderful employers in this province that are truly concerned for the welfare of their employees and truly want to do their best by them and provide them with good, healthy working conditions and fair and accessible alliance.

I would say the same for our unions in this province. I have been a union employee. I have been a private employee. I have seen good employers. I have seen good unions. I've seen poor employers, and I have seen some poor unions. It does not serve us well in this House, Mr. Chair, to paint either with a broad brush, to indulge in ideology, indeed to some extent I would say tinfoil hattery, about either group. Some of the opinions that have been expressed in this House on this particular issue I have found, to borrow a word from the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre, disgusting.

That said, Mr. Chair, the changes that are brought forward in this legislation, I believe, are reasonable and balanced, and, as I noted early, Mr. Gunter seems to agree with me. Indeed, in the opportunities I have had to discuss this with constituents, with Albertans, indeed at my niece's barbecue birthday dinner the other week with some members of my family, in explaining how this legislation works and the intent and the realities of other jurisdictions across Canada, I have not encountered anyone who does not find that these changes are reasonable and fair.

We are not here, Mr. Chair, to tilt the balance in one direction or another. We are here to restore a fair floor on which all Albertans have the opportunity to be treated equally, to access the rights that all other Canadians enjoy, to be able to have the time off to look after their family when they're ill, to indeed take time off when they themselves are ill. Indeed, we are here talking about the rights of mothers to be able to look after their children, to take the full maternity leave that is available to them under EI, all things which, again I will state, I have serious doubts would have been priorities should any of the other members across the aisle had formed government, looking at the history of how Conservative governments in this province have chosen to operate.

Mr. Chair, I also truly believe it is fair and it is balanced in our approach to the rights that are available for union certification, keeping the secret ballot, and allowing a vote to take place should there be less than 65 per cent of workers who have signed a card. In the case that after hard work and discussion more than 65 per cent have signed a card, I think it is reasonable that we grant that union.

Indeed, as has been discussed in this House, there can be intimidation in that process, and it happens on both sides of the table. We on this side of the House are not singling out one group over the other, unlike members across the aisle, who seem to consistently disparage unions, which work hard to represent the people of this province, to serve their interests. I'm very proud to say that we are indeed keeping the private and secret vote just as it was unless they're able to get a supermajority, which I don't think is unreasonable. Mr. Ken Kobly of the Alberta Chambers of Commerce agreed that it was a reasonable compromise. These are steps which are going to provide, I think, a more fair and balanced workplace for all Albertans despite the protestations of those across the aisle.

We are not hiding anything in this bill, Mr. Chair. I am standing proudly in this House for all aspects of this bill, aspects which are all connected, all related, all to do with labour and employment standards, all to do with the kind of workplaces and opportunities that employees have, unlike other governments in Canada, which would bring forward large omnibus bills on unrelated subjects, covering a ridiculous range of topics. In this circumstance this is not an omnibus bill. It's a large bill, absolutely. It would not be so large had not previous governments taken 30 years to look at making badly needed updated changes.

Frankly, Mr. Chair, this could have been a much, much less painful process if, as these rights were introduced in other parts of Canada, as the Supreme Court had brought in rulings, previous governments would have taken those changes in stride, if they'd had the courage to face those who would stand against them or those who they were concerned about, who were perhaps making donations or other things, which kept them from making motions or moving forward on these changes. These changes could have been implemented over time.

But that is no argument, Mr. Chair, for why these rights, that are enjoyed by other Canadians all across our country, should be withheld a moment longer from the people of Alberta. It is high time these changes were made. It is high time this legislation was brought forward and passed in this House.

I will be proud to stand as a member and vote in favour of this legislation as it stands. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Mr. Chair. The member opposite from Edmonton-Centre used the word "courage" quite a few times. You know, I was just thinking about it, as he said that word multiple times – I think that the reality is that an act of courage on the part of many of the members over there would have been to recuse themselves from this conflict of interest because they talk about these things that they're in complete conflict of interest on. That would've been courageous. The kind of stuff that was coming out of the member's mouth there, I just thought – you talk about courageous out of one side of your mouth, but you're not willing to be courageous and actually recuse yourself from the things that you are doing.

The other thing that I wanted to say as I was listening to him – you know, the reality is that I talk to a lot of members . . .

The Acting Chair: My apologies for interrupting. I've just been advised that in relation to policy anything that's been referred to the Ethics Commissioner should not be referenced in the House until deliberations have been concluded.

Mr. Hunter: Okay. Thanks very much for saying that. I appreciate your giving me that information.

You know, Mr. Chair, I was thinking about this issue and about the problems that we're facing with this . . . [interjections]

The Acting Chair: Hon. members, the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner has the floor.

Please proceed, hon. member.

11:40

Mr. Hunter: Now, I was thinking about the problems with this bill, and I talked to lots of businesses out there. I keep on hearing on that side that "everybody we talked to" – the Member for Edmonton-Centre said: everybody I've talked to is in favour of this. You know what? I would have to say that that member needs to get out a lot more because the people I talk to are very upset about this bill. In fact, many of the people that I talk to say that this is the absolute worst bill that this government has brought in. [interjections]

The Acting Chair: Hon. members. I hesitate to interrupt, but I want to . . . [interjections] Hon. members, the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner has the floor. Please allow him to have his opportunity.

Please proceed, hon. member.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Anyways, what I was trying to say was that in talking with the job creators, there is a symbiotic relationship between the job creators and those who have jobs. That symbiotic relationship is defined by our labour laws. It is not unreasonable for us to take their considerations as well as those of the employees into account.

As I listen to this, to the arguments that I've heard over the last few days about this, I remember a story that was told to me many years ago. I thought that it would be applicable here. It's the story of a young boy that went to his mom and wanted to have some fish pets. His mom decided to go and get him a bowl and water and fish, and said: "You need to feed these fish. You need to take care of them." The young boy for a long time kept on feeding the fish, and mom was happy with the situation, and then the fish started to . . .

An Hon. Member: Unionize.

Mr. Hunter: That was funny.

The boy decided that he wanted to start feeding the fish arsenic, and he would feed little bits of arsenic to the fish, and his mom came to him one day and saw what he was feeding to the fish and said: "You can't do that. If you feed that to the fish, they're going to die." He said: "No, mom. I've been feeding this to the fish for a while now, and you know what? They haven't died." She said, "Listen, if you keep on feeding this to the fish, they're going to die." Now, the mom had some information here that the young boy didn't.

The problem with this government is that, as I've watched this government for the last two years, I do not think they realize that if you continue to feed this economy the arsenic that you are, the job creators are going to leave, and they have been leaving. In fact, for the last two years we've dropped $24 billion of investment. The Conference Board of Canada: you can't argue with those numbers. You keep on talking about how the Conference Board of Canada says: 3.3 per cent increase in the economy. They say that we've dropped $24 billion in the economy. A death by a thousand cuts is still a death. What happens is that they keep on piling onto Albertans.

They keep on telling Albertans: "They didn't do it right in the past. They don't know what they're doing. We'll do it better now." How many times have we heard that from a government of an NDP or a Liberal ilk? It is amazing how many times we've seen it.

We've seen what has happened in Ontario, and continually this government goes down that road. It's almost like they think: "You know what? No. Mom, we can keep on giving them the arsenic. The fish won't die." But they did die in Ontario. They're leaving. High energy prices over there. The cost of business has skyrocketed, and they're leaving. They just can't do it anymore. These are the job creators. You are supposed to be the champions of the employee. Do you not realize that there is an actual symbiotic relationship between the employer and the employee?

The issues that we are dealing with here have real consequences, Mr. Chair. Unfortunately, I do not believe that this government is taking those consequences into account. They refuse to do economic impact studies, which would actually tell them in advance, based upon other jurisdictions that have done these sorts of things, what the consequences to the economy would be. They refuse to do it. I've asked them numerous times: will you please do an economic impact study? And they say: "No, no. We know what we're doing. Trust us. Scout's honour."

In the end, we continue to lose jobs, a hundred thousand jobs lost, two years. You're absolutely right. We have been in a low oil price economy. This has caused us a lot of problems, but you're not helping. You're not helping when you bring forward this kind of omnibus, sweeping legislation to this kind of . . . [interjections] You know what? If I could just pull out the legislation now and show you the size of the book, you'd realize that it is actually an omnibus.

An Hon. Member: Size doesn't always matter.

Mr. Hunter: That was actually funny, too.

Mr. Chair, I rise and I want to speak to this Bill 17. In an employee-employer relationship there is straight time for wages, but there is also overtime. The employer can ask an employee to work longer hours for compensation. On the other side, the employee might be so motivated and in need of extra work that they might wish to work the overtime and offer to work the overtime to the employer. One is employer driven; the other is employee driven. Provisions need to be made for both of these scenarios. Employers need to have the flexibility to reward that overtime.

I heard the government side of the House say just the other day that one size does not fit all. Well, one size does not fit all in overtime legislation as well. Having all overtime, no matter what the circumstances are, rewarded by 1.5 times the wages lacks that flexibility. So I wish to move an amendment, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: That'll be amendment A13, hon. member. Please proceed.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 15(c), in the proposed section 23, by adding the following after subsection (4):

- (5) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this Division, an employee and employer may agree that the employee may work overtime hours in order to have time off with pay and the employer shall provide time off with pay instead of overtime pay, which shall be paid at the employee's wage rate at a time that the employee could have worked and received wages from the employer.

Now, Mr. Chair, there are many employees who request to work an hour or two extra a day in cases where they want to have a longer weekend or a certain day off without using their holidays. Albertans are known for their hard-work ethic, and we shouldn't discourage it. This would no longer be able to happen under this bill. The NDP wanted a fair and family-friendly workplace, and this amendment helps make Bill 17 more fair and family friendly for the Albertans that have a get 'er done attitude.

Not being able to bank hours instead of getting time and a half in pay can inhibit families who want that time together. If an employee wishes to work now instead of later and it is agreeable with their boss, who are we to say that we cannot do this? The agreement is consensual. Why would someone cap and restrict and demotivate the employer by forcing the one-fit pay option at 1.5 times the hours? An employer is less likely to let an employee work now instead of later if they have to grant the employee 1.5 times the hours in lieu. Governments want their income taxes, right? Well, an employer just might try to bypass income tax and just do it under the table instead. Is that what the government wants? With the income taxes falling because of fewer people working, the government needs those tax dollars flowing to pay for their spending. We all know how much governments, especially NDP governments, love to spend, but this amendment would still protect workers in that if their boss asked them to work longer now instead of later, they are protected and receive 1.5 hours in return. This protects workers while also allowing workers to have the choice of when they want to do overtime work.

11:50

We do not know the situation of every person in every job. We should not legislate as though we are all-knowing and that everyone is the same. With changes to the global economy happening and the growing high-tech and technical skills markets in Alberta, employees want the flexibility and the increasing need to be able to work at the same time as people in Tokyo, Hong Kong, Mumbai, or London. These provisions of this amendment allow that international collaboration and teamwork on projects. This keeps the spirit of the NDP bill while improving it to protect workers' choice.

I look forward to receiving the support of my hon. colleagues from the government bench on this amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A13?

Mr. Cyr: I would like to thank my hon. colleague for bringing this forward. This actually is a bill that is – the part that has been brought forward by the government on this is overtime. I understand why they're wanting to go in that direction, but I will tell you that this is something that will change the field that I used to be in, which is accounting. What happens is that we compress our time from about January till May. We spend a lot of our hours in that time doing a lot of overtime. What happens in the accounting industry is that it slows down remarkably when you hit June, July, and August, and then the corporate part takes up some time in September, October, November, and December. So what happens for the accountants is that you work a lot of hours, but you can take a lot of the summer off. It actually is a system that has worked for years very, very well. The time-in-lieu system is what makes it work so well.

When we have the government tinkering in this area, my concern is that we're going to start seeing accountants move away from full-time employees. They're going to bulk up during that tax season time frame. So instead of having the normal, say, 15 or 20 employees that we used to sit at, we'd end up with 30 or 40 employees for January, February, March, and April. And then what would happen is that you would lay everybody off because, in the end, your business can't support them through those other months. I can only imagine that there are other professions out there that are going to be dramatically impacted by this change in the way that we deal with time in lieu of.

So I encourage you to support my fellow member. This is actually a thoughtful amendment that is going to solve problems before the government has to go in and fix it. This needs to be fixed.

Thank you.

The Acting Chair: Are there any other speakers to amendment A13? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I was just a little bit delayed coming in here.

I appreciate the member across the way bringing in the amendment here. This pretty much circumvents what we're trying to create, which is already pretty much a standard in most, if not all, of the jurisdictions in Canada. Overtime is overtime. An employer controls that overtime, okay? I know in the past with my members I've always counselled them: never build your life around overtime because it's always here today, potentially gone tomorrow. That's the right of the employer to give overtime when it becomes necessary for the business, as they should.

The other little concern I have is that if we did accept this amendment, potentially workers that are in precarious positions could now be, shall we say, compelled to take a lower option rather than being paid rightfully for the overtime work that they have been asked to work. I don't think anybody on this side of the House is prepared to put those folks in that position.

Again, I will thank the member for the amendment here. I won't be able to accept this and support it at this time. You know, this is about making sure that everybody has a level standard right across the board, and this certainly would not create that level standard.

The Acting Chair: Hon. members, pursuant to Standing Order 4(3) the committee shall now rise and report.

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 17. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report? Say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Those opposed, say no. That report is carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Carlier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We had very interesting work this morning, but I wish now to adjourn and reconvene at 1:30 this afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 11:56 a.m.]

Table of Contents

Prayers 1481

Orders of the Day 1481

Government Bills and Orders

 Second Reading

 Bill 18 Child Protection and Accountability Act..... 1481

 Committee of the Whole

 Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act..... 1490

 Division 1491

 Division 1493

 Division 1494

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Thursday afternoon, June 1, 2017

Day 43

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, June 1, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Ms Jabbour: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on your behalf to introduce to all members of the Assembly former MLAs from Alberta, Ontario, Quebec, and Manitoba along with their spouses, who are here attending the Alberta Association of Former MLAs annual general meeting today and tomorrow. All of us here on this floor recognize your passion, and we truly understand the commitment all of you demonstrated either in this House or in your respective Legislatures across the country. We hope that your time after serving as elected officials has been equally fulfilling. Please know that your individual imprints on democratic history will never be forgotten.

Sitting in your gallery today, Mr. Speaker, are former Manitoba MLAs Mr. Clif Evans and Dr. Linda Asper; former Ontario MPP Mr. John Hastings; former Quebec MNA Ms France Dionne; former Alberta MLAs Mr. Bill Wyse, Mr. Blake Pedersen, Mr. Rob Renner, Mr. George Rogers, Mrs. Mary Anne Jablonski, Mr. Shiraz Shariff, Mr. Don Tannas, Mr. Bill Purdy, Dr. Raj Sherman, Mr. Gene Zwozdesky, Dr. David Carter, and Mr. Ray Martin. I ask all of these former members, who have risen, along with all of the other former Alberta MLAs that are sitting in the members' gallery to please accept the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: Let me just say, if there was ever a test for working without a net, today is the day.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Schneider: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my distinct privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a remarkable group of grade 11 students from the Calvin Christian School in my riding. Now, Calvin Christian is located just off of highway 3, a couple of miles north of the town of Coalhurst. I had the privilege of meeting this impressive group of young students on the steps as we took a picture and met a couple of the teachers and some of the chaperone parents as well. As I say your name – and please forgive me if I butcher this – please rise and stay risen: Mr. Jeremy Fluit, Mr. Marinus Vande Merwe, Mr. Ben Middelkoop, Mrs. Glenda Middelkoop, Mr. Evert Van Ee, Mrs. Kim Van Ee, Mr. Frans VandeStroet, Mrs. Jolanda Vandenhoek. Now I would ask the students to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Schreiner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all my fellow members in the House the grade 6 class from Glendale elementary school in my constituency of Red Deer-North accompanied by their teachers, Mr. Adam Leonhardt and Ms Katie Bruinsma, along with their chaperones, Sheri Smith, Aerielle Buchholz, Maria Lee, Meghan Elgert, and Dianne Rumhor. These bright and eager students are here to experience the wealth of history that is encompassed in our Legislature. I'd ask my guests to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Ms Sweet: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on your behalf to introduce to all members of the Assembly your grandson Xavier Wanner-Lewis; your wife, Ms Joan Emard-Wanner; and your mother, Ms Mary McNeil Wanner. Xavier is a grade 6 student from Sunnyside school in Calgary and is visiting the Legislature with his nana and his great-grandma today. Xavier loves playing all sports but especially as a goalie for hockey. Mary McNeil Wanner was born in Weyburn, Saskatchewan, 98 and a half years ago, and Mary has called Medicine Hat home for over 30 years. Ms Wanner, Xavier, and Joan are seated in the Speaker's gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: So if there's any doubt about my anxiety, with all of those other people in addition to my mother – there is a high expectation.

Mr. Hanson: You'd better do a good job today, sir.

The Speaker: Yeah. I'm counting on you guys to make sure that I look good, okay?

Mr. Cooper: That's a problem.

The Speaker: I know I have a problem; I have about 86 problems.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure today to rise in the House to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two very special constituents of mine, Mark and Sandi Sandercock. Mark has worked for the RCMP as a forensic scientist in Edmonton for almost 30 years. After being an occupational therapist for 10 years, Sandi's priorities changed with the arrival of two children, whom Mark and Sandi chose to educate at home. They are both looking forward to Mark's retirement and are thinking of starting a business. They are in the members' gallery today watching their daughter Claire in her last session in her position as a page, which she has held since January 2016. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome. And you can be proud.

The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As part of my acknowledgement of paramedics this week, as it is Paramedic Services Week, it's my pleasure to introduce two front-line paramedics with Beaver EMS. They are in Tofield and Viking. They're seated in our public gallery today. I'd ask that they rise as I say their names: Jason Geller, an advanced care paramedic, with experience in both ground ambulance and critical care air transport; as well as Adrienne Renton, who is a primary care paramedic and who also volunteers with the CNIB and emergency social services. I want to thank them both for their life-saving care. Colleagues, please join me in extending the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly my wife, Dr. Jessica Simon. Jess had me promise that I wasn't going to embarrass her, but when I'm your husband, that's a tall order. We all know what it takes to be in this Assembly, and what that takes is an incredibly strong family behind us. Jess is a remarkable mother who works full-time plus as a physician. More than anything, though, she's a remarkable person, and I'm incredibly lucky to have her as my wife. Jess, if I can ask you to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome. [interjections]

It's going to be a great day. Mr. Fildebrandt and I are laughing together. That's an outstanding happening. And I just made a mistake; my apologies to the House. I told you I was going to be nervous today.

The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

1:40

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly one of my Fort Saskatchewan neighbours, Kelly Thompson. Kelly is a statesman, artist, and active community leader who is heavily involved in Fort Saskatchewan and surrounding areas. He has served on various government and community boards at municipal and provincial levels, including the Minister's Student Advisory Council and the Curriculum Policy Advisory Committee, and was named a national ambassador for bilingualism in 2011. I would like Kelly Thompson to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Mr. Carlier: Mr. Speaker, it is my sincere pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly an energetic youth leader and her family. This young woman from Lacombe has been an active member and a leader of 4-H clubs in Lacombe and Lethbridge. She has been chosen as the recipient of the 4-H 2016 Premier's award. She has held executive positions in her clubs, has attended numerous programs, and has represented 4-H Alberta in various competitions. She is currently a third-year student at the University of Lethbridge, where she is taking a bachelor of science in agricultural biotechnology. I would like to ask Christine Suominen, her parents, Cameron and Annette, and brothers, David and Peter, to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Yao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature Kichul Nam. He is the general secretary of the Edmonton Korean Canadian Cultural Foundation, and he is also a tae kwon do master. He wanted to know more about provincial politics, to which I indulged him. Please enjoy the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You might say the outstanding constituency of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, as I have four outstanding constituents here joining us today. They are from the lovely Torrington part of the constituency, home of the world-famous gopher museum.

An Hon. Member: I could go for that.

Mr. Cooper: I like what you did there with "go for that."

They are George and Betty Hiebert and their two lovely daughters, Melissa and Emily. They are in Edmonton because Melissa received a provincial recommendation for her piano-playing abilities and is competing at a competition later today.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Are there any other guests today, hon. members?

Members' Statements

Unionized Workers

Mr. Westhead: Once upon a time the Wildrose stood alongside unionized workers while the PCs tried to dismantle public-sector pensions. At that time the Wildrose position was "not [to] balance the budget on the backs of front line public sector workers and services." My, how times have changed. Nowadays about the only thing the Wildrose does promise is to balance the budget on the backs of public-sector workers and services.

It's clear that the Wildrose and their PC frenemies have shifted even further to the political right. Not long ago the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner labelled Alberta's 300,000 unionized workers as thugs. Then last night the Member for Strathmore-Brooks pledged to throw out the Rand formula in an ideologically driven attempt to undermine unions. The members opposite are so blinded by their extreme ideology that they see paramedics and jail guards as enemies. Conservatives just don't understand working people. They would rather give tax breaks to their wealthy friends than allow people with disabilities to earn at least minimum wage.

But just who are these so-called thugs that the opposition vilifies? They are our neighbours, sisters, brothers, fathers, and mothers. They are our children's teachers. They are the nurses who care for us at urgent care clinics. They are not thugs, Mr. Speaker. Far from it. Unionized workers are kind and generous, and they make meaningful contributions in their communities. They fight for equal rights, safe workplaces, and against discrimination. On this side of the House we support the fundamental constitutional rights guaranteed to all Canadians. Our proposed changes to Alberta's Employment Standards and Labour Relations codes demonstrate our commitment to those values.

The opposition thinks the Alberta advantage is predicated on exploiting workers by denying them basic rights most other Canadians enjoy. Rather than a race to the bottom, as the conservatives would have it, I'm proud to stand with a government that is taking tangible steps to make life better for working people.

Conservative Party Unity Agreement

Mr. Stier: Mr. Speaker, as a long-time member of the Wildrose and as one of the five members of the previous Wildrose caucus team that remained strong in their principles, I was so glad to be selected by my leader and caucus to participate this year in work on a historic unity agreement between the two conservative parties in Alberta. Many good people have worked long and hard on the new conservative unity agreement, and there is much more work ahead. It has been an honour and privilege to work on this process as I can say wholeheartedly that everyone involved is there for the right reasons.

As a grassroots, member-driven party, Wildrose's constitution requires 75 per cent support from members for this deal to go ahead. Therefore, I look forward to seeing a record level of democratic participation in the upcoming weeks and months. I joined Wildrose many years ago because it was a party that respected its members. This is as true today as it was then. The members of our party will be the ultimate decider on conservative unity, and I trust in whatever decision they make. This will be one of the greatest exercises in grassroots democracy Alberta has ever seen. Every single vote will matter.

In every corner of the province Albertans are asking for unity. They know the future of Alberta hangs in the balance. Our conservative unity team is working around the clock to ensure their voices are heard. We need good, everyday Albertans, regardless of occupation or location, to buy a membership and answer the call for democracy. I'm calling on these folks to take their future into their own hands and help write the next chapter of the Alberta story. To all Alberta conservatives: we have a unique opportunity to set a new standard for conservatism in Alberta. The spirit of the conservative movement in Alberta is stronger than any one name and any one party. Let's all come together and take back Alberta.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Mr. Clark: Mr. Speaker, self-attribution bias is the tendency for people to attribute successes or good outcomes to their own abilities while blaming failures on circumstances beyond their control. That sounds very familiar. When the NDP came to power, Alberta's economy was already on its way down. Oil prices were tumbling, and Alberta jobs and government revenues fell along with them, but anything bad that happened was only a result of circumstances beyond the NDP's control.

But did they do everything they could to cushion the blow? Absolutely not. Their biggest mistake was creating uncertainty in Alberta's investment climate, unnecessarily driving capital from our province. They didn't make any effort to find reasonable efficiencies in government, just like households and businesses all over our province were forced to do. They didn't pursue transformational change in health care, and they raised Alberta's corporate tax rate 20 per cent, which actually drove down tax revenues further than they would have gone from a slowing economy alone.

And now that Alberta's economy is recovering, who is there to take the credit? Why, it's the NDP, Mr. Speaker. They don't think it was their fault when things went wrong; it is certainly not their doing when the economy rebounds. I can assure you that Alberta's economy would come back much stronger if the NDP had exercised even a modicum of fiscal restraint and taken steps to create investor certainty. Sadly, the NDP haven't done enough to attract new industries to Alberta and instead continue to rely on the price of oil. I sincerely hope oil prices do recover and our economy with them, but the NDP needs to take real, concrete steps to support Alberta's entrepreneurial spirit.

The Alberta Party would pursue an "and" economy where we continue to produce reliable, responsible oil and gas, and we would create the conditions where Alberta entrepreneurs can create the jobs of tomorrow in green tech, agribusiness, renewables, IT, and so much more. It is possible, Mr. Speaker, but only if we have a government that understands innovation and is willing to create the conditions to allow it to happen here.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Stony Plain Community Organization Grants

Ms Babcock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Community organizations in Stony Plain recently received $271,000 through CFEP and CIP grant programs. It's impossible to talk about all the good work these organizations do, but I want to give it a try.

The Forest Green Parent Council Association received $125,000 for the playground at Forest Green school. They fund raised for years and raised over $55,000 themselves. With this grant and additional community and volunteer commitments they can now move ahead with their rebuild.

The Smithfield Community Hall Society received $9,000 for upgrades to the septic tank and monitoring systems.

The Blueberry Community League received $31,000 for renovations to the Blueberry Community Hall, which is home to the Blueberry Playschool and a venue for many other community events.

1:50

The Alberta Parenting for the Future Association received $51,000 for renovations in the Family Connection Centre, where about 40 nonprofit organizations serve our community. The funds will be used to upgrade the aging kitchen so it can be used for things like healthy food classes, meal programs, and more.

The Graminia Community School Foundation received $11,000 for communication equipment.

The Parkland Potters Guild received $2,000 towards engaging the community in arts and learning.

Moms Canada received $8,000 to help provide mentorship programs, learning opportunities, and resource connections for single mothers.

The Stony Plain Cowboy Gathering Society received $9,000 for the music and art gathering 2017, which allows residents and visitors to experience top-notch talent in our own community.

The Carvel Ukrainian Cultural Society received $23,000 for upgrades to the Carvel Hall facility, creating a new, barrier-free space for community use.

All of these organizations rely on the commitment of dedicated volunteers and staff and the support of our surrounding communities, and I'm so proud to be part of a community like Stony Plain, that pulls together and works together to make life better for all of us.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Carbon Levy and Pipeline Approvals

Mr. Jean: Albertans are footing the bill for a social licence plan that is getting Albertans absolutely nowhere. If the Premier truly believed that pipelines in every direction were good for our province, she would respect the National Energy Board process, that has served us so well, but she just couldn't help herself. She decided that imposing a carbon tax on Albertans was better for her NDP world view. Now that it's clear her social licence is getting us nowhere, will the Premier do the right thing and axe the carbon tax? Yes or no?

Some Hon. Members: Groundhog Day.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, yes, it is a little Groundhog-y in here today, I must say, but again I will say that the opposition would have us sacrifice jobs, investment in new pipelines by scrapping the very program that got us the approval for the pipeline, that they never got. I don't know how much clearer I can be. The people who have the ability to make that decision are the federal government. The federal government made it very clear that they made that decision because of our climate leadership plan and the fact that the pipelines were delinked from carbon emissions. I know the member opposite is absolutely keen to cheer for Alberta's failure. We are not.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: The Premier should do the right thing and listen to the overwhelming majority of Albertans, who didn't ask for social licence and don't want this carbon tax, and scrap the tax. The Premier should know that there's no making eco radicals happy. She has some in her own caucus, so she should be aware of that. The sooner the Premier decides to stand up for our province and stop kowtowing to those who want Alberta to fail, the better off all Albertans will be. Will the Premier send a strong signal that she's finally looking out for Alberta's interests and rip up her fairy-tale social licence contract?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm wondering if the member opposite is actually getting his questions written by the Trump administration. Interestingly, a number of business leaders and investment leaders and leaders around the world are talking about how that's actually the wrong decision, the one that's being taken down south, for the world economy. The fact of the matter is that we need to understand that we need to work with our energy industry to reposition it as a progressive, sustainable, nonrenewable energy industry that can play on the international market. That's exactly what we've done together with industry, and that's how we're going to diversify the economy and grow the economy.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: The Premier created the hurdle to getting pipelines built in Canada. It's called social licence, and now the Premier finds herself constantly tripping over it. The rest of the world has rejected it, but it's no surprise, of course, that her brothers and sisters in the NDP have latched onto the social licence concept that the Premier created. They are the same people who wrote the Leap Manifesto. The Premier created the problem, and now she needs to fix it. When will the Premier send a clear signal to her NDP buddies, both west and east, that the only approvals needed for the pipelines in Canada are those coming from the NEB?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's actually the federal cabinet that makes the decision, not the NEB, and thankfully they did make the decision. As a result of that, we have a pipeline. We have a pipeline that's going to create tens of thousands of jobs. We have an additional pipeline. That pipeline is going to ensure that we can diversify our markets and get the best price for our resources, and that's something that's happened under our watch because we have never stopped advocating for it. Even as the members opposite prayed against its success because they saw it as a, quote, doomsday scenario, we had Albertans' backs.

The Speaker: Second main question.

Wildfire Response Reviews

Mr. Jean: Today, Mr. Speaker, marks the one-year anniversary since the people of Fort McMurray were allowed to return to their community after the worst natural disaster in our province's history. Promised reports into the government's performance in the fire are either gathering dust on the minister's desk or are still not complete. There are too many unanswered questions from Albertans. People are tired of waiting, and they want transparency and full accountability from this government. When will these reports be released, and why the ongoing delays in the release of the reports by this government?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, our government is absolutely committed to standing with the people of Fort McMurray as they work to recover from that awful disaster, and that's exactly what we've been doing from the first day and moving forward. I'm very proud of the work that the government has done, and I'm even more proud of the work that our public servants and our emergency responders have done, and of course I'm most proud of the way in which the people of Fort McMurray responded to this horrible, horrible challenge. We, as a result, are looking forward to receiving the two independent reports that we've commissioned, and I can tell the member opposite that they are imminent.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: The fact is that we've had two major fires that have devastated two northern communities since 2011. The Slave Lake fire Flat Top Complex report in 2011 warned that Alberta was at risk of "large and potentially . . . catastrophic wildfires." It appears that it happened. But even with that warning, several of the report's recommendations went unanswered, unimplemented, or not addressed with any sense whatsoever of urgency. It's become clear that reports commissioned by the government are not enough. Albertans deserve real answers, real accountability, and real action from this government. Will the Premier call an independent inquiry into our wildfire response, and if not, why not?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, in fact, the member opposite is mistaken because every single recommendation in the Flat Top report has been implemented. More to the point, however, it is really quite ridiculous that the member opposite would be calling for a public inquiry before he has reviewed one single fact from either one of the two independent reports that have been commissioned by the government of Alberta. It really makes one question whether this is really about good policy or whether it's about politics. I would urge the member opposite to read the two reports when they become available and then make a decision about what kind of inquiry is required.

Mr. Jean: Mr. Speaker, they have not been fully implemented by this or the previous government.

Here are, actually, the independent inquiries that the NDP called for in opposition: the mad cow crisis, the state of the foster care system, queue-jumping, the murder of a Camrose group home worker, the state of mental health services, the state of our child welfare system, and government spending under the Redford government. If it was good enough for these types of incidents, why is it not good enough for the wildfires that happened in Fort McMurray? We're calling for an inquiry where 2,500 homes were burned to the ground and an entire city of 80,000 people was evacuated for more than a month. It's reasonable, and it's something the Premier would have called for if in opposition. What has changed?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, what we have done is that we have commissioned two independent reviews of what happened with respect to the fire. As the member opposite knows, he was actually invited to participate in those reviews. In addition, the regional municipality will also be doing their own review. I think that it would be wise and not inflammatory for us to receive those reviews, to share them with the public, to review their conclusions, and then have a conversation about next steps.

The Speaker: Third main question.

2:00 Auditor General Recommendations on Health Care

Mr. Jean: Our health care system is bloated, wasteful, and inefficient, but the NDP is happy, as usual, with the status quo, a status quo where patients languish for 240 days for a knee replacement or 230 days for cataract surgery, a system where couples are divorced by nursing home as they age in a system where seniors are stuck waiting for long-term beds right across the province. The Auditor General has made it clear that it's time to measure performance by outcomes, not by dollars spent. Why doesn't the Premier agree?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, as I've said repeatedly, there are actually a number of outcomes in our health care system that we're very proud of. We've managed to reduce a number of wait times in a number of different sectors. At the same time we've increased services in a number of different parts of the province with respect to addictions treatment and mental health services, and of course we've moved forward on significant infrastructure investments, that members opposite and their friends ignored for decades, like, for instance, the cancer centre in Calgary. In fact, we are absolutely focused on getting the best health care outcomes for Albertans, and we'll continue to do that.

Mr. Jean: The AG's report shows that the system is a mess right now from the very top. We have multiple systems that don't talk to each other and are muddled in duplication and waste. We have managers managing managers that manage managers and a health bureaucracy that remains very removed from local health care needs, which are so important. His report says that duplication has been ingrained for decades, but as time goes on, the need to make major structural changes gets more and more important and needs to be done right now. Is the Premier happy funnelling billions into this waste, or will she actually find the courage to stand up and fix it for Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, I think one of the things that challenges our health care system in Alberta is the fact that it has been the victim of major structural change after major structural change after major structural change. Every time that happened, services went down, costs went up, and chaos ensued. The member opposite thinks that that's what we need to do, more structural change. I say no. That's exactly what we said to Albertans in the last election, that's exactly what they voted for, and that's exactly what we're delivering.

Mr. Jean: Mr. Speaker, this is not my opinion; this is the Auditor General's opinion. They've clearly stated and highlighted the need for integration in the health care system. Other countries have integrated their systems, and now we are seeing Alberta fall down the rankings as other countries figure out how to deliver more and better health care for less money. Unnecessary prescriptions, repeat scans, and repeat tests, and the overall cost of long wait times are dragging our system way down. This is hurting patients, hurting Albertans and Alberta families. When can they expect to see fundamental change take place as recommended by the AG?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I've said before and I will happily said again – first of all, let me just point out that once again the members opposite just can't get their plan straight. One day they want us to cut $3 billion out of our operating expense, and the next day they're complaining that we're not doing enough in the health care system and that somehow we can magically make it all better through some weird sort of restructuring. We all know what that actually means. They want to privatize. They want to bring in a two-tiered system. They want one health care system for the wealthy and another health care system for everyone else. That will never happen on our watch.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Kinder Morgan Trans Mountain Pipeline

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This week the Premier arrogantly proclaimed the federal cabinet's approval combined with the National Energy Board's guarantees that shovels will be in the ground on Kinder Morgan. That would be nice, but her B.C. siblings promised to block the project. The Northern Gateway pipeline also had cabinet and NEB approvals, and where is that project today? Nowhere. To the Premier: with your B.C. NDP and Greens prepared to go to war against this project, what makes you think these two approvals from the feds add up to a guarantee when this has not been the case till now?

Ms Notley: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, the failure of other pipelines that had approvals ultimately came down to the courts, and the courts said: "You know what? When you ram stuff through without accommodating indigenous interests, without considering environmental issues, without talking to the communities, then the thing ain't gonna fly." That's what happened under their cousin's federal system that was in place before. That is not, in my view, what happened this time. I think that those issues have been properly addressed both by the NEB process as well as by the subsequent process and by the cabinet's review. I suspect that we'll find that the courts support that view, and we'll get a . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, here's what did happen. The Premier did not campaign on a carbon tax, but she did campaign on killing Northern Gateway, which died despite NEB and federal approvals. After she blindsided Albertans with that carbon tax, she justified it with the promise of mythical social licence to convince B.C. eco warriors to support the project. The B.C. wing of the Premier's party made it clear that nothing will buy social licence. To the Premier: will you now admit that you have no social licence even with your family and that you sold Albertans a bill of goods when you rammed the carbon tax down their throats?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What I will proclaim with great pride is that we have a climate leadership plan that enjoys the support of industry, that enjoys the support of indigenous people, that enjoys the support of the environmental community. This is a climate change leadership plan that will create jobs, will support diversification of the economy, and it will also – wait for it – reduce emissions, something which the previous government failed to take into account at all. We did that, and in addition we delinked emissions from pipeline construction. That is a fundamental argument that we have made and we will continue to make . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier. Thank you.

Mr. McIver: The Premier's plan doesn't even have NDP support outside of Alberta. It's now proven that Albertans can't bank on federal and NEB approvals alone to be enough. For this government to suggest otherwise is wilful ignorance. On this side of the House we want this project to succeed. We want to see shovels in the ground, but there is no reasoning with the eco warriors who now call the shots in B.C. To the Premier: do you now regret opposing Northern Gateway, and do you have any real plan to get Kinder Morgan's shovels in the ground?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What I don't plan to do is to talk down the chances for Alberta's growth, talk down the fact that Alberta is actually a great place to invest, try to discourage people from coming here by telling them the sky is falling when it's really not, all the kinds of politically motivated things that we see from those guys over there and those guys over there. They are so interested in their own political success that all they want to do is to see economic failure for Albertans. Thank God Albertans have a government that's actually standing up for them, that wants to see them prosper, that wants to create more jobs and – you know what? – is succeeding in that.

The Speaker: Calgary-Elbow.

Dementia Care

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last month Dementia Network Calgary met, and the room was full to capacity. One of my constituents said that the stories she heard that day, quote, highlighted the magnitude of the gaps for care for people with dementia and their families and the lack of knowledge and understanding about dementia in our province. Now, after hearing this and other stories, I looked into whether there is a provincial dementia strategy, and it turns out that there was a thorough process that resulted in a draft report and recommendations in 2015. To the Premier: will you implement the recommendations of this report, and if not, will you commit to creating a comprehensive provincial dementia strategy?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question on the very important topic. The numbers of Albertans continuing to be diagnosed with dementia are continuing to increase, and of course those individuals are impacted as well as their friends and their family members, who care about them. This is one of the reasons why we're investing in building 2,000 new long-term care and dementia care spaces throughout our province, and it's one of the reasons why we are pleased to have the report. The department is working on next steps, and we will continue to make sure that we move forward supporting Albertans, who clearly deserve to be supported.

Mr. Clark: But no commitment to creating an actual strategy.

Mr. Speaker, as the minister referenced, there are approximately 13,000 people in Calgary and area living with Alzheimer's disease or related dementias, and it won't be long before 1 in 10 Albertans over the age of 65 and nearly half of Albertans over the age of 90 will be living with dementia. But the word "dementia" is mentioned exactly once in the Ministry of Health business plan. I'm concerned about this government's commitment to dementia care. Again to the Premier: is dementia care a priority for your government, and if so, why have you done so little about it?

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Absolutely, health care and dementia care supports are a priority for this government. That's one of the reasons why, immediately upon taking government, we reversed the billion dollars' worth of cuts that were proposed by the outgoing government. That's one of the reasons why we're moving forward on building 2,000 long-term care and dementia care spaces throughout our province. That's one of the reasons why we're investing in and ensuring that front-line services can be grown and supported in terms of helping people live in the communities that they helped to build, and that's one of the reasons I'm so proud that physicians stepped up and renegotiated a contract enabling us to have half a billion dollars reinvested into the system to make sure that we can improve it.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Clark: With respect, Mr. Speaker, without a strategy, how do you know what you're doing and why you're doing it and if the resources are in place that you need?

The federal government is debating a national Alzheimer's and dementia strategy, and Ontario has been proactive, recently announcing a $100 million spend over the next three years to implement their dementia strategy. This government has the opportunity to do some good and enact a made-in-Alberta plan so that we're ready for any available funding the federal government may provide. I'll ask one more time: why are you not being proactive and bringing forward an Alberta-based dementia strategy?

Ms Hoffman: I'll answer the question one more time, Mr. Speaker. That's exactly what's happening. We are actually putting our investment where we say we will. We're making sure that we're supporting seniors in living in their communities, supporting their families, enhancing long-term care, home care, dementia care, and making sure that Albertans can have the supports they need rather than pushing for ideological cuts that all three conservative parties on the opposite side are pushing for. We're pushing to make Alberta stronger, we're supporting Alberta health care, and we're supporting the people who live here.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Calgary Southwest Ring Road Construction Concerns

Drever: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At a recent town hall and in my office I have heard many concerns from my constituents about the impacts of the southwest Calgary ring road project. Given that there have been discussions on putting an asphalt plant in this area and no decisions have been communicated to the residents of Calgary-Bow, to the Minister of Transportation: can this government give a clear answer to my constituents on whether or not an asphalt plant will be operating in their neighbourhood?

Mr. Mason: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for her question. I want to thank her for her advocacy on this issue and for bringing the concerns of the residents to my attention. This is not the first time that she's done so. The Calgary ring road is an important and a complex project, but the safety of the residents is an important priority. It's my top priority. Due to the feedback we've received from the member's constituents and the member herself, we've selected a location for the asphalt plant west of Sarcee Trail and south of Glenmore Trail. The location is more than one kilometre away from the nearest residents, and it is the farthest of . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
First supplemental.

Drever: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that residents of West Springs have expressed concerns about the gravel operations planned near Old Banff Coach Road and 101 Street S.W., what action is this government taking to protect the health and safety of Albertans from the effects of this operation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, as I said, the government takes the health and safety concerns related to infrastructure projects very seriously indeed, and that's why we ordered a health impact assessment of the gravel operations. The report was reviewed by the acting medical officer of health, who found that our plans to monitor and mitigate dust levels will protect the health of community members. These measures include berms, processing gravel below the natural ground level, and monitoring noise and dust levels to ensure that appropriate thresholds are followed.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Drever: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that residents have shared concerns about these operations with my office and your ministry for months, again to the Minister of Transportation: how has your ministry responded to this feedback, and was this feedback taken into account when making decisions about this project?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for her question. Quite simply, we've listened to the concerns of local residents and found the right balance between the work and the safety of the community and the people working on the project. We've held multiple information sessions about the project, and we're attending more this spring. My office has responded to over a hundred pieces of correspondence and dozens of phone calls on the issue. That's why we have moved asphalt operations as far as possible from homes and are putting in robust mitigation for gravel operations. Our government is committed to minimizing the impact of this work on the community.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Energy-sector Unemployment

Mr. Panda: When the big three oil sands companies announce thousands of layoffs, one number that doesn't show up is the thousands of contract workers – electricians, welders, pipefitters, work camp cooks, cleaners, and other unionized trades – that also get laid off as a ripple effect spreads across the province. Does the minister of economic development know how many contract jobs have been eliminated with the NDP-initiated downsizing of the oil sands?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I'll thank the member for the question. First and foremost, you know, the number of layoffs that have occurred are attributed to the fact that there was a dramatic and sustained drop in the world price of oil, something which the government of Alberta, despite what the opposition says, does not control. We are a price taker, not a price maker. We acknowledge that it has been a rough couple of years for a lot of Alberta families and communities and workers. That's exactly why we announced our Alberta jobs plan, which has a historic investment in infrastructure and new projects with a number of other initiatives to help get Albertans back to work.

Mr. Panda: Mr. Speaker, given that this minister has responsibilities for growing the economy – yet so many like the engineers and unionized trades protesting here on Tuesday prove that the minister is killing jobs rather than creating jobs – and given that my friends and former colleagues cannot find jobs because the oil companies are leaving Alberta due to this government, with more pink slips still being handed to employees, outweighing new jobs, will the minister admit that his job-creation plan is a complete and utter failure?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish the member opposite and his party would actually look at the statistics and facts that are coming out. Number one, the Conference Board of Canada is projecting that Alberta's economy will grow by 3.3 per cent this year, the highest and fastest growth out of any province in the country. Full-time employment rose for the third straight month. Alberta led the country in private-sector investment last year and is on track this year. The number of cars sold in Alberta, for example, is up 15 per cent. Alberta operators drilled just shy of 2,000 wells during the first three months of 2017.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Panda: Mr. Speaker, given that the minister said that he would create a hundred thousand jobs, yet we are negative 60,000 jobs, which is 160,000 jobs away from his promise, and given that on Tuesday faces behind the jobs he destroyed came here and the minister was too busy to meet with them until he was shamed into it by the protest, can the minister explain why he disrespects the unemployed by refusing to meet with relevant stakeholders until they come in hundreds knocking on his door?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The only kernel of truth in that preamble was the fact that there were dozens of workers that came up to the Alberta Legislature. Not only did the Minister of Energy along with staff from Economic Development and Trade and from Labour meet with this group; after they came here both the Minister of Labour and I met with them. There are a number of announcements that have been made that are going to be putting engineers back to work in this province, including the fact that Pembina-PIC, one of the successful PDP applicants, will be tendering a $100 million contract for detailed design work that will be going to engineers. As far as . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

2:20 New Edmonton Hospital

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This week the government announced a new hospital in south Edmonton. This is great news for Edmonton and area residents, but I can provide many quotes from different ministers who have said that they won't make any capital announcements without first having a business case, functional plan, design, and cost estimates. So to the Minister of Infrastructure: do you have the business case, functional plan, design, and cost estimates for the new Edmonton hospital as per your announcement?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you very much for the question. The issue really is this: do you announce a budget for a project without doing the work to decide what are the necessary services you're going to provide, what the need is going to be in the future, and what the approximate costs are? All of those things should be done before you develop a budget for the process and announce prices. We haven't done that. We've said that there's going to be a new hospital. We've said that we're doing the analysis, working with Alberta Health Services on what the needs are, what the mix of services is going to be. We've picked a site. We have not set a budget. Unlike the previous government that announced prices before they . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
First supplemental.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the government has not produced these documents or doesn't have them and given that the Beaverlodge hospital has been the number one capital project in AHS's north zone for several years and they have done the business case and the functional plan and the Infrastructure minister said a few weeks ago that the design was almost done, to the same Minister of Infrastructure: does this urban-centric government have two different standards, one for big cities and one for rural Alberta, when it comes to capital announcements?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question, which highlights the fact that his government, even while he was Minister of Infrastructure, failed to build a hospital in a community that – he's right – had been identified for many years as in need of one. I think it's pretty rich of you to say that we don't need one in Edmonton. We haven't had one in Edmonton since the 1980s. Premier Getty was in office. That is a long time. The people of Alberta deserve better, and all parts of Alberta deserve to have the very best care, and that's what they've got from this NDP government.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that in April 2016 the Minister of Infrastructure also criticized the former government for announcing the Grande Prairie hospital and then designing it and said, "Now we scope out our projects before we make a political announcement," and given that this government has not designed the Edmonton hospital before announcing it, to the minister: wouldn't you say that you are now designing the Edmonton hospital to fit your political announcement? How is this different from the previous government?

Mr. Mason: Well, it is very much different than the previous government. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Mason: If you take the Grande Prairie hospital as an example, it was announced including a price, including a budget. That's what the former Premier announced in Grande Prairie. It turns out that the price was way more than was necessary, but the bureaucracy decided that they had to design the hospital to fit the political announcement that had been made by that government's Premier. As a result, the shell of this hospital is quite a bit larger than it needs to be, and the costs are quite a bit higher than they needed to have been if that government had done its homework first, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Rural Education Funding

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Many rural schools are struggling to stay open given the compounding costs of the carbon tax, the cap on high school credit funding, the impact of Bill 1, and declining enrolment. A school board in my riding is facing some very difficult choices in trying to meet the needs of their students in their rural schools. To the Minister of Education: how many rural school boards have you met with to examine the funding model to find solutions to keep small rural schools open to avoid loss of front-line workers and lengthy bus rides for young students?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you very much for the question. It's very important that we retain a high quality of education in all corners of the province, so that's why globally we have made sure that we have increased the funding to meet the needs of Alberta's schools. I have been meeting with school boards around the province. In fact, I will be meeting with the balance of them here on Saturday and then on Monday as well to talk about these very issues.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the minister for that answer. Given that the Wildrose policy recognizes the social and economic importance of keeping schools open in small urban and rural school environments and given that we advocate to better fund the associated costs and given that the recent rural school symposium focused on partnerships that can support a healthy, vibrant, rural community and given that many rural schools are facing closure or already have been closed, what is the minister doing specifically to ensure that the beating heart of rural Alberta is protected and that schools stay open?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you. This is a very important question that we need to address because, of course, if we do lose schools, they're very unlikely to open again, Mr. Speaker. We are working with some programs and looking to strengthen them. The small schools by necessity program looks to augment funds and looks for special geographic circumstances. We just announced the building of a school in Irma, Alberta, in partnership with the community raising money to use it as a community centre. I want to be creative because I want to make sure that we have the very highest quality education for all of our students.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
Second supplemental.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that last Friday I attended a meeting with the Aspen View school board in Athabasca along with the Member for Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater and given that they would like a meeting with you to request a review of the funding model for rural schools and given that the other member has not publicly brought the issue forward on behalf of the school board this week, how is the imminent closure of any Alberta school making life better for Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I totally agree that it's very important that we seek to find creative ways to keep schools open and to build new schools in rural Alberta, to rightsize these schools so that we have something we can work with in the future. Certainly, we will be meeting with the specific school board. I'll be seeing them here on the weekend and on Monday, and I'd be glad to talk to them and the rest of the rural school boards about ways by which we can improve the funding model for rural education in the province of Alberta.

Minister of Finance

Mr. Fildebrandt: Today the NDP are in court again, being sued for their latest attempt at a beer tax tariff on out-of-province brews. The minister's first tariff failed, and he refused to listen. We warned him about his second tariff, and he refused to listen, and now they're in court again. If the minister loses in court again, it will throw Alberta's brewers into chaos and uncertainty and open up Alberta taxpayers to millions of dollars in back taxes. If the minister loses in court again, will he finally admit that he lacks the competence to do his job?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll tell you what our government did. Our government is standing up for Alberta brewers. We are standing up for Alberta businesses. For far too long other provinces' companies have enjoyed Alberta's open borders and open trade markets. Finally, it took a New Democrat government to negotiate a fair trade agreement for all of Canada where now our brewers have equal access to other markets.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Given, Mr. Speaker, that it's clear that beer is impairing the judgment of the minister and he's not seeing straight as he swerves from left to left and that he has not only violated the Constitution on free trade but his very own laws that he himself introduced and given that he broke the law by illegally spending $1.1 billion on the coal phase-out and that he had to repeal his own debt ceiling law just months after he introduced it – the first step towards recovery is admitting that you have a problem. Will the Minister of Finance admit that he's got a spending problem?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

2:30

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know what? I want to commend, first of all, the Minister of Finance for his work to help support small brewers in this province. In less than three years the growth of craft breweries and brew pubs has exploded from 14 to over 60 by the end of this year. What I'd love to ask the member opposite and the opposition: why are they working against Alberta brewers and cheering for them to fail and defending brewers in other provinces? [interjections]

The Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Fildebrandt: They should let the Finance minister stand up and stop benching him.

Given, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Finance has left behind a mess, with a projected $100 billion debt, historically low credit ratings, record high spending, and a long trail of legal and constitutional violations that were easily avoidable, and given that the minister is starting to look like a renter who's left such a mess of the place that he plans to move out and forfeit the deposit, does the minister have any plans to clean up his mess, or does he intend to leave it to his successors?

Mr. Bilous: Mr. Speaker, you know, I want to start off by quoting the National Post. "Alberta's non-discriminatory uniform tax rate with targeted grants to craft brewers is the most trade and constitutionally compliant in Canada." We came up with a fair system, where we charge the same markup, whether it's a brewer from Alberta, Saskatchewan, or somewhere else, at $1.25 a litre. We are standing up for Alberta brewers and Alberta crafters. The opposition is cheering for Saskatchewan. I want to know if the member opposite is planning to run in their next election. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order. [interjections] Order.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

School Transportation in Calgary

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Over half of all Calgary board of education bus students have enjoyed great success in attending schools of their own choosing, but parents are now being told that the board will no longer fund any portion of their transportation costs and that they'll no longer run school buses in these areas. That means that in many cases very young students will have to negotiate multiple transfers on public transit, which can be both terrifying and dangerous for children of that age. How can the minister possibly claim that Bill 1 is making life better for the 13,000 families who are simply trying to get their young people to their school of choice and back safely?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, An Act to Reduce School Fees, in fact, does do that for 600,000 families. They will be seeing a reduction in their school fees, including bus fees as well. It's not an act to eliminate school fees because, of course, there are a myriad of fees that are out there after decades of this previous government allowing fees to go wild. We're bringing them in. Certainly, I'm working with the Calgary board of education and many others to make sure that they understand both the letter of the law and the spirit of the law to keep school fees in moderation and to provide the services that they need.

Mr. Rodney: That's not what all these parents are saying, Mr. Speaker.

Given that the parents tell me that they are more than willing to pay increased transportation fees but that the CBE will not work with these families on a transportation solution because they feel that they're being held hostage by the minister's lack of understanding of the impact of his bill on parents and students, Minister, will you commit to working with school boards and actually consult with parents to ensure that funding has been provided, and will you commit to meeting with representatives from these families to find manageable, affordable, safe transportation solutions for these children so that these successful programs, that families have chosen, will not die?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I'm more than happy to and do work with parents and school boards around school fees in general and then bus routes specifically. You know, the effort to reduce school fees for Alberta families in general is very, very well received. Yes, there are some things to work out along the way, but at the end of the day for us to reduce school fees for more than 600,000 families in the fall – I think that we will see a considerable advantage and make life better for Alberta families.

Mr. Rodney: Given that the system was working extremely well before the NDP started manipulating it and given that a survey of parents in two schools in our area indicates that transportation costs will increase over $850 each year and that costs for before and after school care will increase over $530 to accommodate all the school time changes in an effort to reduce their transportation budget as a direct result of Bill 1, how can the minister claim that the NDP has the backs of these families, who are now faced with more than $1,000 per child in additional costs with a significantly worse level of service than they enjoy right now?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's very important for us to work together with school boards to make sure they understand that they're not meant to increase school fees because of An Act to Reduce School Fees. You know, the hon. member should have looked at the bill to see that one part of it is to reduce school fees and another one is to regulate to make sure that if school fees are excessive, they will not pass. These school fees will come to my attention, and we will review to see if, in fact, they are legitimate or not.

Tourism and Canada 150

Mr. Westhead: Mr. Speaker, 2017 marks Canada's 150th birthday. Tourists from across Canada and around the world have their sights set on visiting Banff, the birthplace of our national parks system. This is great news for the tourism and hospitality industry but will put a lot of pressure on the park's infrastructure. Over the May long weekend 31,000 vehicles entering Banff set a new record. To the Minister of Culture and Tourism: what is the government doing to help towns like Banff and Lake Louise deal with the influx of tourists and to help ensure a positive visitor experience?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Miranda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. Staff in my department are working very closely with the town of Banff, Parks Canada, Banff/Lake Louise Tourism, and other stakeholders to effectively manage the increase in visitors to the province's national parks and to help ensure that visitors are aware of free shuttle services and other transit options within the Banff and Lake Louise area as well as to ensure accurate and timely information is available at entry gates and online before they arrive.

Thank you.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister. Given that the government's latest stats show that the province's national parks and resorts experienced record visitation and occupancy rates last year – and this is great news for businesses in my riding and the region – to the minister: what strategic investments are you making to maximize these opportunities and expand the tourism industry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Miranda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. We know that tourism spurs economic growth, creates jobs, and makes life better for Albertans. That's why we're partnering with the Aboriginal Tourism Association of Canada to help grow indigenous tourism in our province. We're enabling communities to reach and engage more people with improved tourism technologies through the visitor services innovation fund, and the government is investing $54.2 million this year for improvements to campgrounds throughout Alberta through the Alberta parks capital plan.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the popularity of destinations like Banff and Lake Louise has a spillover effect on neighbouring communities like Cochrane, Canmore, and Kananaskis, again to the Minister of Culture and Tourism: what is being done to help these towns capitalize on the influx of visitors we are expecting this year and into the future?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Miranda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. We're working with Travel Alberta and the tourism industry to encourage visitors to travel beyond the mountain park resorts, to discover all the hidden gems that our province has to offer. Alberta's visitor information centres in places like Canmore, Hinton, West Glacier, and Crowsnest Pass are monitoring local conditions such as high traffic volumes to help redirect visitors to alternative sites and hidden gems in our province. We're also highlighting destinations like Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump, a drive along Cowboy Trail, and a visit to Fort Macleod national historic site.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Air Ambulance Service Contract

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It has come to my attention that AHS has actively taken a role in assisting CanWest Air as they attempt to comply in the multibase medevac RFP. We are being told that this includes contacting airport authorities and employing coercive tactics. AHS issued the RFP, and now the contractor selected is failing to meet that RFP, all while the losing contractors are left wondering how fair the process was to begin with. How can the Minister of Health be complicit by allowing this to happen?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. I wish it was about government policy, but instead it's slandering front-line workers, so that's unfortunate. I'd have to say that I respect the fact that there is a contract negotiation under way. That is taking place right now. Should it be successful or not, then we'll be in a position to discuss next steps, but I respect both parties, that are in the process of trying to negotiate a contract, doing that in a way that's fair, respectful, and appropriate.

2:40

Mr. Hunter: Mr. Speaker, given that AHS has issued a number of inaccurate, incomplete, or misleading statements to the media to counter legitimate concerns from local community leaders, including saying that the successful vendor will meet all requirements of the RFP by the time the existing contract expires in late August, and given that no lease arrangements or construction permits have been issued for new medevac bases in Medicine Hat or Peace River, Minister, how is it a fair and transparent process when AHS is rigging the RFP in favour of the operator without bases in these areas?

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for the question. Certainly, it's our constant expectation that things are done in a fair and upright manner, and that's going to continue to be my position. We expect that when there is an RFP, when there is a contract that's to be negotiated, it's done in a way that's fair. There hasn't been a contract signed yet. I think that the member opposite is trying to fan some flames when the truth is that there are negotiations happening right now. My commitment is to ensuring that we have local air ambulance at the communities where it's currently housed, and that will continue to be my commitment, ensuring that everybody is safe.

Mr. Hunter: In a nutshell, Mr. Speaker, given that there is ample evidence that CanWest cannot comply with the RFP and given that we have been told that the contract for Medicine Hat and Peace River will be signed today, why would the minister sign any contract with any potential service provider that cannot meet an RFP?

Ms Hoffman: Again, Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of accusations and hyperbole in place. AHS is in a position where they're the ones who are negotiating the specifics of the contract. My policy direction, which was very clear and in accordance with the Auditor General's recommendations, is to set the box and ensure that the service providers are operating within that. My box is ensuring that we have the very best care throughout the province, that no matter where you live, you have access to adequate air ambulance. Of course, we want to do that at a rate that's fair for taxpayers.

AHS, I believe, is having a conference call tomorrow with the municipalities of both Peace River and Medicine Hat, and I look forward to hearing how those conversations unfold, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: In 30 seconds, folks.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

National Aboriginal History Month

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to mark the beginning of National Aboriginal History Month and acknowledge that we are on Treaty 6 land. When we walk to this House and throughout the city, we do so in the footsteps of the indigenous peoples who lived here for thousands and thousands of years. Since 2009 June has been recognized each year as National Aboriginal History Month in Canada.

This year also marks the 21st anniversary of National Aboriginal Day, celebrated on June 21 of each year. The purpose of this national day of recognition is to encourage solidarity amongst all First Nations, Métis, and Inuit people and for all Canadians to celebrate the many contributions and successes of indigenous peoples across the country. National Aboriginal Day also celebrates and recognizes the many diverse indigenous languages, cultural practices, spiritual beliefs, and communities. It is important to share these stories and this history because for too long they have been missing from Canada's official history.

Even more important is the work together, government to government, with First Nations to make life better for indigenous families. I'm very proud to be part of a government that is taking action to do just that by investing in clean water, education, jobs, and economic development to create opportunities and support strong First Nations communities.

I'm looking forward to participating in the upcoming activities this year and hope you all will as well. With little effort you can find amazing events in communities throughout Alberta. I invite you to Maskwacis to share the rich historical heritage of our central Alberta Cree nations. I will have the privilege to attend the inauguration of the Samson Cree Nation Chief and Council this June.

As we move forward together in reconciliation, let us acknowledge and embrace the long history of traditional teachings, medicines, spiritualism, and the many First Nations, Inuit, and Métis Albertans. [Remarks in Cree]

Thank you.

Landowner Property Rights

Mr. Strankman: With the recent Court of Appeal's decision upholding the Redwater Energy bankruptcy decision, it seems that once again the little guy is left in limbo while the local MLA is completely mute on the subject. Now landowners face issues such as the Lexin receivership, and unless they already had a judgment approved under a section 36 application to the Surface Rights Board, they are out of luck as their application will be put on indefinite hold.

Why does this matter? It matters because this government has been extremely vague in answering questions about how they are going to protect landowners in regard to renewable energy projects. Despite attempts by the opposition to ensure some level of accountability and protection measures, this government simply bullied its legislation through.

NDP ministers routinely ignore constituents' questions and, instead, attack the messenger. It's a typical response from a government that all too often rushes through incomplete or ill-thought-out legislation. Ministers routinely accuse their critics of being anti-industry or antijob. Recently one minister even took a mayor's comments out of context to give a typical non answer to the Member for Little Bow's question. The mayor publicly expressed her disapproval, but I doubt that will stop the government from continuing the practice.

Given recent events and the lack of will exhibited by this government to stand up for landowners, it should really come as no surprise to Albertans. This government constantly puts its ideological agenda ahead of common sense and won't allow a basic thing such as property rights to stand in its way. A government whose approval ratings fall far behind the opposition parties' simply has nothing to lose.

Mr. Speaker, they may have the majority now, but that won't stop members of the opposition from shining a public light on silly ideological ways. We will continue to hold them accountable and to stand up for the average Albertan.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Bill 208

Government Organization (Utilities Consumer Advocate) Amendment Act, 2017

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to request leave to introduce Bill 208, Government Organization (Utilities Consumer Advocate) Amendment Act, 2017.

Mr. Speaker, our government is committed to practical changes that make life more affordable for Albertans. Electricity and energy for homes, businesses, and public institutions are essential, and consumers need to know that the companies they're purchasing from are well regulated and fair. Bill 208 will support greater consumer protection, and I look forward to discussion and deliberation with my colleagues in the House.

[Motion carried; Bill 208 read a first time]

2:50 Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table a document which I referred to in my member's statement that proves that the Wildrose has moved to the ideologically extreme right and that they've broken their promise to working people.

The Speaker: Do we in fact have that point of order today? The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Point of Order Language Creating Disorder

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll try to be brief. I rise today on Standing Order 23(h), (i), and (j). I can just briefly run over them for you:

- (h) makes allegations against another Member;
- (i) imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member; [and]
- (j) uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to [cause] disorder.

At approximately 2:20 this afternoon, during question period, the hon. Minister of Economic Development and Trade used the term "the only kernel of truth," which, to me, would be a very clear implication that the minister called the Member for Calgary-Foothills a liar on all other statements that he made in his question.

Many references and roundabout ways of calling a member a liar have been attempted in this House and have been ruled out of order in the past, and I would ask . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. members.

Mr. Hanson: . . . that this be treated the same way and that the hon. member simply apologize and withdraw his comment.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I don't believe that there is a point of order here. You know, I've watched with some interest as this sort of line of thinking has developed with the opposition. Because they have used very clear language that is unparliamentary such as "liar" – and they use that in their members' statements – and "deliberately misleading," which are clearly unparliamentary and have been ruled so not just by you but by previous Speakers here and Speakers throughout the Legislatures and Parliament of this country, that does not mean that any particular phrase that could be interpreted to suggest that someone has not told the full truth is, in fact, out of order.

Now, in this particular case the hon. minister said, "the only kernel of truth," so he was acknowledging, in fact, that there was some truth contained in the thing, but obviously he was disagreeing with some of the parts of the statement that had been made by the hon. member.

I think the opposition has been making a serious error here in their attempt to extrapolate clear rulings about clear violations such as saying "lie" or "deliberately mislead" and making that apply to a member in almost any situation that is actually part of the norm of parliamentary discourse in this place. Mr. Speaker, it's quite acceptable in this place to make statements like that. I often say, when I disagree with statements or facts in question period, that nothing could be further from the truth. There are other cases where Speakers have ruled on things like "the member is a stranger to the truth," different ways of expressing that point of view that are not considered unparliamentary.

The hon. Minister of Economic Development and Trade was very far from any sort of line with respect to his comment. He was talking about his view of the question that was being put to him, and he acknowledged that there was a kernel of truth. That may imply that there are some things that were not true in the statement. That's a far cry from calling a member a liar, Mr. Speaker, and I think it's time we settled this question without ambiguity because, clearly, the opposition doesn't understand the distinction, and I hope that we can get this cleared up.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there any other members who would like to speak to this matter?

Well, I agree. This particular discussion has gone on on so many, numerous, occasions that there seems to be a desire on this side of the House to see some kind of black-and-white rule with respect to the use of such words and phrases. There have been rulings in the past, some of which have been made by myself, with respect to this item. Most often, if not always, the point that I've made is to the context in which the comments are made, and even that particular application of principle is one of maybe an art form but certainly not a science.

The member wasn't accused of lying or of a deliberate falsehood, so it doesn't really qualify as an allegation. With respect to the "language of a nature likely to create disorder," Government House Leader, it is getting awfully close to that. You do make very compelling arguments when you say statements like referring further from the truth, et cetera.

I contemplated this considerably when I heard the comment by the minister. I think soon we're going to be having a long summer respite, which might well help all of us, and I would ask each of you as we go forward to consider ways in which the points you want to protect personal freedom with are used in such a manner that we do not even risk causing a disorder in this House.

In this particular instance, hon. member, I don't believe there is a point of order. However, Government House Leader, let me remind everybody and your caucus to be more conscious, please, of the utilization of these phrases, and let us come back to this House in the fall with a better, shared understanding of what is acceptable in this House.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

Ombudsman and Public Interest Commissioner Appointment

22. Mr. Mason moved:
Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly concur in the report of the Select Special Ombudsman and Public Interest Commissioner Search Committee tabled in the Assembly on May 25, 2017, and recommend to the Lieutenant Governor in Council that Marianne Ryan be appointed as Ombudsman and Public Interest Commissioner for the province of Alberta for a five year term, effective July 1, 2017.

The Speaker: Any members who wish to speak to Motion 22?

Seeing and hearing none, no need for a closure statement. Having heard the motion as proposed by the Government House Leader, does the Assembly agree with the motion? All in favour, say yea.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Speaker: Aye? Okay. Fine. Nay? Motion is carried. It's been one of those days.

[Government Motion 22 carried]

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can certainly say yea to that decision.

Auditor General Search Committee

23. Mr. Mason moved:
Be it resolved that:
1. A Select Special Auditor General Search Committee of the Legislative Assembly be appointed consisting of the following members, namely: Mr. Shepherd, chair; Mr. Malkinson, deputy chair; Mr. Cyr; Mr. Gill; Mr. Horne; Mr. Kleinsteuber; Mrs. Littlewood; Mr. van Dijken; and Ms Woollard, for the purpose of inviting applications for the position of Auditor General and to recommend to the Assembly the applicant it considers most suitable to this position.
 2. Reasonable disbursements by the committee for advertising, staff assistance, equipment and supplies, rent, travel, and other expenditures necessary for the effective conduct of its responsibilities shall be paid subject to the approval of the chair.
 3. In carrying out its responsibilities, the committee may with the concurrence of the head of the department utilize the services of members of the public service employed in that department and of the staff employed by the Assembly.

4. The committee may without leave of the Assembly sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned or prorogued.
5. When its work has been completed, the committee shall report to the Assembly if it is sitting. During a period when the Assembly is adjourned or prorogued, the committee may release its report by depositing a copy with the Clerk and forwarding a copy to each member of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, are there any other members who would wish to speak to Motion 23?

[Government Motion 23 carried]

3:00 Committee Membership Changes

24. Mr. Mason moved:
Be it resolved that the following committee membership changes be made.
- A. on the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future: that Mr. Panda replace Mr. Orr and that Mr. Gill replace Mr. Drysdale;
 - B. on the Standing Committee on Families and Communities: that Mr. Orr replace Mrs. Pitt;
 - C. on the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices: that Mr. Gill replace Mr. Ellis.

The Speaker: Are there any members that wish to speak to Motion 24?

[Government Motion 24 carried]

Alberta Property Rights Advocate

25. Mr. Mason moved:
Be it resolved that:
1. The 2016 annual report of the Alberta Property Rights Advocate office be referred to the Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship for the purpose of conducting a review of the recommendations outlined in the report;
 2. The committee may, without leave of the Assembly, sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned or prorogued;
 3. In accordance with section 5(5) of the Property Rights Advocate Act the committee shall report back to the Assembly within 60 days of the report being referred to it if the Assembly is then sitting or, if it is not then sitting, within 15 days after the commencement of the next sitting.

The Speaker: Are there any members who wish to speak to Motion 25?

[Government Motion 25 carried]

Missing Persons Act

26. Mr. Mason moved:
Be it resolved that:
1. The Missing Persons Act be referred to the Standing Committee on Families and Communities and the committee shall be deemed to be the special committee of the Assembly for the purpose of conducting a

- comprehensive review pursuant to section 13 of that act;
2. The committee may, without leave of the Assembly, sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned or prorogued;
 3. In accordance with section 13 of the Missing Persons Act the committee must submit its report to the Assembly within one year after beginning its review, and that report is to include any amendments recommended by the committee.

The Speaker: Are there any members who wish to speak to Motion 26?

[Government Motion 26 carried]

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 16

An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs on behalf of the hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. S. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise and move third reading of Bill 16, An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates, on behalf of the Minister of Energy.

I am proud to stand with my caucus colleagues to vote for putting the cap on electricity prices to make life more affordable for Albertans. I look forward to easing Albertans' minds by letting them know that we are keeping their electricity rates in check.

My caucus colleagues and I know how hard the energy-only electricity market has been on Alberta families. Unfortunately, that is not true of everyone in this House. Some have suggested that the broken system that we inherited is actually working. They've called it healthy, high functioning, and once prosperous. If you've never struggled to make ends meet or never felt sympathy for a family that worries about next month's prices, then maybe it seems to work just fine, but the people in our caucus remember far too well the hardship that volatile electricity prices have caused for Alberta families. Some of us have even experienced this first-hand.

One thing that I know for sure: once you've lived through these challenges, once you've struggled alongside other families who have worried that their next bill might break their budget, you can't forget how broken our system has been, so I cannot understand how anyone could forget the years of wild price swings, the many months of sudden spikes that we have lived through alongside our neighbours and constituents. On our side we can't forget the hardships caused by these spikes, but given that some in this House have called these spikes reasonable and part of a healthy, high-functioning market that was working well, apparently it bears repeating.

From 2010 to 2014 the one thing you could bank on with your power bill was that you could never bank on it. The only thing that was consistent with the bill was its inconsistency. In those five years rates were over the cap of 6.8 cents as often as they were under. So if anyone is still struggling to understand why we are doing this, you need only to look back a few years.

What made it even harder for families and small businesses was the volatility. From month to month you didn't know what rates might do. Spikes regularly sent prices over 8 cents per kilowatt hour and often over 10 cents. In 2011 and 2012 alone rates flirted with or surpassed 12 cents in six separate months and once jumped over 15 cents. That meant typical residential electricity bills with energy charges well over $90 per month, two to three times what they were only a season earlier. How does a family plan for that? How do you make your family budget work with that kind of uncertainty, and how could you ever forget the anxiety that comes with it?

While some have said that this was part of a working system, that this was fair and reasonable treatment of Albertans, we have decided to take action. We are bringing the reforms Alberta needs to make our power system cleaner and more stable. Our capacity market will bring stability to the broken, volatile system that we inherited, a system that clearly hasn't been working for Albertans and a system that the top experts said was struggling to attract new investments.

Designing the right fix for such a broken system is going to take some time. It was left too long in disrepair. While we're stuck with a system we all inherited, that spikes our power rates unpredictably, Albertans deserve to feel secure that they can at least guess at next month's rates. They deserve to have more security for their finances than has been allowed under our current market.

With this bill Albertans would know that they wouldn't need to pay more than the cap, and that applies straight across the province to all consumers on the RRO, including those who receive their RRO from an REA or a municipality. As we know, these providers are in a different situation. The Alberta Utilities Commission does not regulate their rates. That meant that it was more complex to include them in the cap in a fiscally prudent manner. But we committed to working with the REAs and municipalities to include them in the cap, and through this collaboration we found a good solution. Promise made, promise kept. We're thrilled to be able to make the cap work for the REAs and for all Albertans. That's why we are setting this cap, so that regulated rates can't spike to unreasonable levels the way they have in years past.

Mr. MacIntyre: Oh, what are you drinking over there?

Mr. S. Anderson: You should cool your jets, Member.

That's our plan in a nutshell.

The electricity system is complex, but making life more affordable for Alberta families is a simple idea. We are setting the stage for a more reliable electricity system that is more attractive to investors and more stable and predictable for consumers. While we take the necessary time to get that right, we won't let the broken system we inherited continue to subject consumers to its scary roller coaster. We are making life better for Albertans by moving forward with our bill to cap electricity rates.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mr. MacIntyre: You guessed it. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Well, that was an interesting fairy tale. Just to maybe illuminate something for the hon. member, Albertans have had available to them all the way along fixed-rate contracts, which brings stability to their electricity prices. We know that. Most Albertans are aware of that. In fact, I would say that all Albertans except maybe the hon. member have been aware of that.

Let's get down to what this particular piece of legislation is really about. It is not about protecting Albertans from price spikes in electricity. This act is a bill to protect this government from enraged Albertans, enraged as they watch this government mismanage the electricity file consistently, from the get-go; enraged as they watch this government bankrupt the Balancing Pool, vaporizing a $705 million surplus in literally months, forcing the Balancing Pool to the verge of bankruptcy, having to introduce Bill 34, a rushed piece of legislation to try to get something in place to bail out the Balancing Pool because this government mismanaged the electricity file so bad that now we're staring at $4.437 billion of debt. That's certainly making life more affordable for Albertans, isn't it?

3:10

This bill is actually to protect this government from enraged Albertans as they see this government destroy the once competitive power market and replace it with a $20 billion electricity market, $20 billion in utility debt that we have not had. That's now going to be on the backs of the taxpayers.

During debate this government rallied their backbenches to speak in support of this bill with a blistering defence, and I just want to repeat some of the excellent oratory that we were receiving from other side there. We had the hon. Member for Sherwood Park telling us that the REAs would be very supportive of this because they're co-ops and they're socialists, after all. Well, frankly, the responses I'm getting from the REAs are not repeatable in this House.

Then we had the hon. Member for Calgary-Klein talking to us about how the government does not intend to remove the powers of REA boards of directors or city councils that independently set their own rates. However, to help ensure that rates are reasonable, the government will put a mechanism in place that will provide reimbursement for reasonable rates, and here we have our mechanism that we're discussing in this section.

Should these providers choose to put in place unreasonable rates, the government will . . .

On and on he went. Basically, charging the REAs, that are member owned, member driven – their members are on the board – and suggesting that these REAs are somehow going to be unreasonable to their own people. It was just incredible. I tell you, what a blistering defence of this bill.

This bill has nothing to do whatsoever with protecting Albertans. It has everything to do with ensuring that this government has as minimal and as controlled a PR problem as possible as they move our electricity forward into the most expensive model possible, with the greatest amount of debt possible, and it's mounting by the day. By their own estimates we're looking at over $4 billion just to bail out the Balancing Pool, thanks to their excellent management of that, what was supposed to be an arm's-length body.

Then, of course, we come to the section in this bill regarding the MSA, the Market Surveillance Administrator, or, as I like to call them, the electricity police. Of course, again we had the Member for Calgary-Klein illuminating us on the purpose of that section, the section regarding the MSA. According to his own words, the section of the proposed act is to actually enable the MSA to add to their capabilities. I think he might have used the word "enhance." Well, I believe the hon. member needs a new thesaurus because in the act itself it says, "limiting or restricting any powers, duties or functions of the Commission or the Market Surveillance Administrator as the Minister considers necessary." News flash: limiting and restricting are not synonymous with enhancing. Those aren't synonyms for the words "enhance" or "add" or "enable." Limiting and restricting is exactly what it says, to rein in.

We saw this very same thing with Bill 27 as this government is terrified of having the Market Surveillance Administrator actually investigate and look into the situations regarding renewables deployment in this province. They're terrified of it, so much so that they absolutely stopped the MSA, through Bill 27, from being able to do its job. Here we have now the minister, an elected politician, meddling in the affairs of a surveillance administrator whose mandate is to be free of political interference, whose mandate is to protect us, the people of Alberta, in a manner that is unfettered by politics. Yet here we have the very minister being given extraordinary powers to determine what the MSA is and is not able to do. That is reprehensible. They are completely gutting the powers of the MSA here.

This, as I said, is not an act to protect consumers. This is an act to protect this government from enraged Albertans experiencing the full onslaught from this government's reckless disembowelment of our deregulated electricity market. It's crazy.

So on we go. We have a situation where this government has so mismanaged the electricity file that we now have a broken system. A competitive system is the very best mechanism to protect consumers. It always has been. The protection comes from various players vying for our dollars, providing better services than the competition, better prices than the competition, better anything and everything than the competition. It's good. It's healthy for an economy to have strong competition. It's interesting to note that the very portions of our electricity bill that have actually riled Albertans the most over the years are all those sections of our electricity bill that have remained fully regulated by the government. The deregulated side of our electricity bill, the actual consumption charges for the usage of electricity, is the line item that has been coming down. We're down now around 3 cents and a bit. That's a great rate. The current RRO is great, yet this government seems to think they need to protect Albertans from that, really, pegging it at 6.8 cents for some reason. It's wild.

This government seems to think that they know better, and they are going to completely gut the deregulated system that we have in place and put that whole thing as a regulated system. We are going to have capacity contracts. And on that note, it should be pointed out that this particular bill before us right now expires once the capacity contracts come in. That raises the question: don't we need protection after that? Aren't we going to need protection from these unreasonable people jacking up our electricity rates that the government seems to think are out there lurking in the wings? Somehow at the end of four years, when the capacity market comes along, well, we're not going to need that kind of protection?

There are things going on here. The stage is being set for Albertans to experience an Ontario-style jump in the cost of electricity, not just the consumption cost. There are many more costs other than the per kilowatt charge that Albertans are paying or are going to be paying for electricity. This government is going to need, if they carry out their 30 per cent renewables by 2030, something in the order of 2,400 megawatts of new transmission just to connect all of the renewables to the grid. Somebody is going to have to pay for that. Guess who? The good old taxpayers again, on and on.

We're going to have $20 billion to $25 billion in cost in capacity contracts. That's going to be on the taxpayer's back. Then there are transition costs yet that we do not know about for how this government plans to help our coal mining communities. On and on and on these costs keep mounting. On and on and on this government keeps shifting those burdens onto the taxpayer. On and on this government is hiding. They're hiding the true cost of their mismanagement of this electricity file. It is atrocious. They continually say, "No, we're not following in Ontario's footsteps," yet the tracks are unmistakable, shifting the burden onto the taxpayers when we had no utility debt before, putting in place all kinds of mechanisms that weren't necessary in an open-competition market like we had, hindering the ability of the Market Surveillance Administrator to do their job.

It's one thing after another, Mr. Speaker. This government is definitely taking us down the Ontario path. There is no mistake about it. Just take a look at who's working in the wings behind for this government. It's all there. The earmarks are there. It's unmistakable.

An Hon. Member: There's a conspiracy.

3:20

Mr. MacIntyre: Here we go with $20 billion. Twenty billion dollars is not a conspiracy; $4.437 billion in Balancing Pool debt is not a conspiracy.

These are bills Albertans didn't see before. This government is actually encumbering future generations through their own mismanagement. All of that utility debt is going to be added to the provincial debt, and it's just going to balloon that $70 billion number up to who knows what? That's going to be on our children and our children's children because of this government, and it is completely unnecessary.

The electricity system wasn't broken. What is broken is a government that doesn't know how to manage its affairs. What is broken is a Minister of Finance that has at least been consistent, consistently bad but consistent. Five credit downgrades: that is not sound management. Bankrupting the Balancing Pool is not sound management.

The Minister of Energy wouldn't even respond to the pleadings from the chairman of the Balancing Pool when he was in desperate need of direction from her department, and there was silence. They ended up having to pay a $29 million penalty because of that minister's mismanagement, on and on again.

The electricity system wasn't broken. What was broken is this government, and this government is breaking the people of Alberta, financially encumbering future generations with an irresponsible and reprehensible amount of debt. It is shameful. They should be apologizing to Albertans for their mismanagement of Albertans' economy, Albertans' electricity system.

As you can tell, Mr. Speaker, I'm not in favour of this bill. I knew you knew that.

An Hon. Member: Say it ain't so.

Mr. MacIntyre: Yeah, it's true. I'm not in favour of this bill.

Being faithful to our job as the Official Opposition, we put forward some amendments that would make this bill better. The government made it really clear that they don't want the MSA to be able to exercise its powers, so the amendment was voted down.

If I had the time, I would have loved to have carried on with this, but frankly, Mr. Speaker, it's obvious that this government thinks this bill is just dandy the way it is, that it's fine to give away the arm's-length nature of our Market Surveillance Administrator and the other agencies within our electricity system and allow for the Minister of Energy to meddle as deeply as the minister wants to within those functions and, I will say, to the detriment of Albertans.

I will not be supporting this bill. I would urge all my hon. colleagues not to support this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For years before the NDP won government, we saw harmful electricity price spikes making life for Albertans very difficult. That is why we are taking action. The problem was especially acute in the first half of the decade, from 2010 to 2014. Electricity prices were over the government's 6.8-cent price cap half of the time. They were regularly over 8 cents, often 10 cents, and Alberta families had to deal with spikes near and over 12 cents in six separate months from 2011 to 2012. In fact, the price spiked one month, one time, to 15 cents. The energy charge on the average residential bill could move between $20 and $90, depending on the month.

People certainly noticed, and we heard this when we were campaigning. For the government the problem was always clear: the energy-only market that the PCs adopted in the early 2000s requires price volatility to work.

The archives are replete with examples of news coverage of this problem, particularly in the first half of the decade, when families endured the hardship of budgeting with spikes up to 60 per cent from one month to the next. From November 2010: Frigid Weather Sees Power Price Spike. From July 2011: August Brings 30% Spike in Local Power Bills and EPCOR Hikes Power Bills to Spike 43%. From December 2011: Anger over Electricity Prices Puts Producers on Edge. From January 2012: Power Price Spike Shuts Plants; Alstom, Alberta Newsprint Halt Production as Electricity Cost Hits Threshold Level. From a July 2012 Edmonton Journal article: now in a free market system, where private companies assume all risk, there's no incentive to build anything that isn't practically profitable; that makes the system less elastic and could lead us into occasional darkness. From 2014: Albertans Warned of Power "Price Spike". From the Calgary Herald July 2015: consumers will see jump in power bills. In August 2015 the Calgary Herald said: province's electricity policy under review after complaints; aggressive behaviour by utilities and price spikes cited as reasons.

This is not a two-year problem. This has been going on for more than a decade.

The cause of these recurring spikes was not a mystery. In an October 2012 Calgary Herald article called Alberta Power Rates among Highest in Country; Deregulated Market Blamed for Price Spikes, with the opening line, "Residents of Calgary and Edmonton still pay among the highest prices for electricity in the country," you can read this clear passage: "Electricity consultant Sheldon Fulton said electricity costs for residential consumers are high in Alberta because of market volatility that can rocket the megawatt-hour price of electricity." It's not something that's happened just since we became the government.

As the volatility and uncertainty for consumers continued, even the PCs had to take notice, and they renewed their well-worn messages about considering changes. In October 2014 the late Premier Prentice said:

I'm open to a look-see at why we have the consumer price spikes that we have had and what can be done about them and what steps we need to take to ensure that we don't experience these going forward.

And:

The kind of price spikes we've had for consumer pricing of electricity in a province where energy is abundant is something that people want a closer look at.

Through these years the Wildrose knew that the system was unfair to consumers. The Wildrose opposition used to see the problem. In December 2013 Wildrose critic Joe Anglin told the Herald that Albertans keep getting gouged each month by their power bills. He also said that we've got to change how the wholesale market operates so there aren't those wild swings in electricity prices and that the cost spike hurts families and businesses and demonstrates that Energy minister Ken Hughes is obviously oblivious to the deficiencies of the power market.

This is from an Edmonton Sun article from October 2014:

Wildrose energy critic Jason Hale said the market is volatile and unaffordable for businesses and families on fixed incomes. The Wildrose is pledging to reduce price volatility for consumers and businesses who have not signed a fixed price contract for their electricity – if Wildrose is elected government.

That is exactly what our bill, An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates, does, and I support this bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we move to 29(2)(a), I wonder if we could get unanimous consent to make an introduction to the House.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly members of the Johnson family who have travelled long and far for five and a half hours from the community of Barnwell to be here. I would like to ask them to rise and remain standing as I call their names: Angela Johnson, Dylan Johnson, Brandon Johnson, Jennifer Johnson, and Justin Johnson. Please join with me in giving them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 16 An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates (continued)

The Speaker: Hon. members, are there any questions for the Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing and hearing none, is there anyone else that wishes to speak to Bill 16?

Hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, do you wish to close debate?

3:30

Mr. S. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to take a moment to express how proud the Minister of Energy is of this legislation – we all are – and my gratitude to everyone who contributed to its development and enactment.

I want to begin by thanking the bill's cosponsors, the Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose and the Member for Calgary-Klein. Each of these members has contributed to this important legislation with their hard work, their feedback, and their input.

I also want to thank my caucus colleagues for their support, motivated for some by their first-hand experience with the hardships caused by our volatile electricity system, and for all their compassion for the Alberta families that each and every one of us knows have struggled.

I also want to thank the Energy ministry staff for all of the hard work they have contributed to developing this careful, measured, and precisely tailored piece of legislation. In direct contrast to the worry and anxiety that Albertans have felt in the past, Albertans will benefit from the security and certainty of this policy.

Thank you to all who have made this possible.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for third reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 3:31 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Speaker in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hinkley	Phillips
Babcock	Hoffman	Piquette

Bilous	Horne	Renaud
Carlier	Larivee	Rosendahl
Carson	Littlewood	Schmidt
Cortes-Vargas	Loyola	Schreiner
Dang	Mason	Shepherd
Eggen	McLean	Sigurdson
Feehan	Miller	Sweet
Goehring	Nielsen	Turner
Gray	Payne	Woollard

Against the motion:

Anderson, W.	Loewen	Starke
Hanson	MacIntyre	Stier
Hunter

Totals:	For – 33	Against – 7
---------	----------	-------------

[Motion carried; Bill 16 read a third time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I would like to call the committee to order.

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Deputy Chair: We are currently on amendment A13. Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered in respect to this? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I just wanted to finish up with talking about this issue. The amendment that we brought forward, I think, is misunderstood by the members opposite.

Mrs. Littlewood: The government.

3:50

Mr. Hunter: For now.

I just wanted to be able to clarify really quickly what this amendment is trying to accomplish, and that is that with overtime – there are two scenarios. Number one is that an employee wants to be able to work overtime, yet there's really no incentive for the employer to have that happen. But it would just work better if the employee can work. Maybe he or she needs to be able to earn some extra money that month. The other scenario is that the employer needs to have the employee work overtime. This happens all the time in the workforce. Those situations are completely different.

What this amendment was specifically trying to accomplish was to delineate between those two. When the employer wants the employee to work, then they should have to pay time and a half. We agree with that. That makes sense. And we would agree with the government if that's the case. The government has stated, though, that if you work overtime, you should always be paid at time and a half. The problem is that there are times where the employee just wants to be able to earn a little extra money, so they're initiating the process. They're initiating the process in order to be able to work. Now, in the event that the employer doesn't really care if they work or don't work – it can happen tomorrow, whatever – this allows the employee to be able to work hard, be able to earn a little extra money without actually penalizing the employer. This amendment is specific in terms of being able to try to help the employee.

Now, I've heard many times the government opposite say that this is about trying to help the employee. This amendment, I thought, out of all the amendments that we've presented, would be the amendment that you would pass because it specifically speaks to this issue. Let's not penalize an employee that has a lot of energy and excitement and wants to work hard. Let's give them the opportunity to be able to do that. If you pass the bill the way it stands now, it will incentivize the employer not to allow that person to work extra time because they will have to say: "You know what? I don't know if I really want to give them the extra half time."

I really wanted to be able to present that to the members opposite because I see this. I've seen this many times in the workforce. I don't think that we should be telling employees or shackling employees from actually being able to – if they want to work hard, let them work hard. If they want to work longer, let them work longer. Don't penalize them for that desire to be able to work longer. But if you do pass it the way it is, the employer will be disincented to stop an employee from actually working the extra time, and we don't want that in Alberta. Albertans are hard workers. You know that. We know that. We shouldn't penalize them for wanting to work hard.

You know, I recognize that – I had some communication with the Labour minister through texting. We talked a little bit about this. She said: you know, it would have been better if you guys had sent this over to us so that we could have taken a look at it. I agree. I apologize for not doing that. I just thought that when you heard this, it would make a lot of sense, that we could pass this thing, and then we'd be able to move forward on it.

I hope that you will take a sober second look at this amendment, take a look at it as a way of being able to help incentivize employers to allow for that work if the employee so chooses and not to stop that employee from being able to either bank time or work longer if they want to.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A13? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thanks, Madam Chair. I appreciate the member's comments. As we had mentioned earlier, one of the things that we are looking to do with regard to our labour regulations and whatnot is to bring the standard up to, you know, the level that a lot of really good employers out there are setting, okay? We don't want to be looking at this race to the bottom. It's the race to the top here. Again, there are a lot of really, really good employers out there that are well and beyond above this. When they start offering overtime, you know, they don't even think about it. They're paying time and a half because that's how much they value their employees, and their employees are more than willing to go out of their way in order to work with their employer.

One of the concerns, of course, that I had mentioned was that the language as presented here will put precarious workers in a position where if we have an employer that maybe isn't as upstanding as a lot of the employers here in Alberta are, they will start to compel these employees to work overtime but at straight time pay, and they really do want to get time and a half.

With that said, I mean, I don't want to belabour this any longer. I won't be able to support this amendment, and I will encourage other members of the House to not support it as well.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Any other members wishing to speak to the amendment A13? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I do want to just take a moment to talk about this amendment. I guess what I see this as is that by not passing this amendment, it actually stifles opportunities for employees, for workers. What I see is, I guess, that a couple different situations could come about. Let's say that a particular employee had a particular hobby that would have him partake in this hobby during regular work hours, and the employer doesn't care when he or she puts their hours in as long as the hours get put in. Now, when this employee goes to the employer and says: "Okay. I would like to work an evening and a Saturday so that I could have Monday morning off because that's the only opportunity I have to partake in this hobby of mine." And the employer says: "I would love to do that because it doesn't matter to me when you put the hours in as long as you put them in, but I honestly can't afford to give you time and a half for that for something that's for your enjoyment." Turning down this amendment cuts away that opportunity.

Let's say, for instance, that the employee – maybe their cousin had a doctor's appointment, and this employee was very close to their cousin. It wouldn't apply under anything else as far as a close family member to attend with this cousin to go to a doctor's appointment, so the employee says to the employer: "Could I work extra hours here so that I can take this time off to go with my cousin?" And the employer would say: "Well, I would love to, except I would have to pay or give you time and a half off, and that's just not in the budget to do that."

This is a very simple, straightforward amendment. This would help employees in their dealings with their employer, and it would help that kind of interaction between the two. This actually interferes with that opportunity for employees and employers to work collaboratively to help each other with their schedules. So I do want to speak in favour of this amendment. I think it's pretty straightforward to be able to give this opportunity to employees.

I would hope that it wasn't the intention of this portion of the bill to take away this opportunity for employees and employers to work together to accommodate each other and create a win-win situation. These situations I just described are win-win for both. The employer doesn't lose anything, they get a happier employee, and the employee gets to partake in activities that they want to partake in that they otherwise wouldn't. Both win in this situation, so I'm really not quite certain why the government won't support this amendment. I think it makes perfect sense. Win-win to both. I can't see a problem with it. Honestly, you know, if a worker is working overtime, time and a half, that's the standard. That's fine. But in a situation like this where the employee could ask the employer for time off and want to work time in lieu, that's not an infringement on their rights. It's actually something they were requesting, and I think that's only fair.

Thank you for the opportunity to leave these comments. Thank you.

4:00

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A13? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I think the member across the way might be confusing overtime with things like averaging agreements, which are currently accessible by employees when, you know, schedules don't sort of work into the normal 9-to-5 workday. They have the ability to talk to their employer and say: can we move things around a little bit, which could give me a potential day off over here? Employees already have the access and the ability to do that.

When we're talking about overtime, overtime is overtime. Like I've always told my membership before, don't ever bank on overtime – okay? – because the employer has the right to hand out that overtime if they see fit and if it works into their business plan and whatnot.

Special arrangements within their normal schedules are already accessible. This amendment does not address that, but for folks that are in the position of vicarious work, they could be compelled to work for straight time when, rightfully, they should be getting overtime.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A13?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that motion on amendment A13 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:02 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Loewen	Stier
Hanson	Starke

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Gray	Payne
Babcock	Hinkley	Phillips
Bilous	Hoffman	Piquette
Carlier	Horne	Renaud
Carson	Larivee	Rosendahl
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Schmidt
Dach	Loyola	Schreiner
Dang	Mason	Shepherd
Eggen	McLean	Sigurdson
Feehan	Miller	Turner
Goehring	Nielsen	Woollard

Totals:	For – 5	Against – 33
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A13 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now on the original bill. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Shepherd: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to rise. I just wanted to address a statement that I made earlier this morning.* I had the opportunity to return to Hansard and read a bit more closely a comment that I had remembered from the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner. Now, when I had recalled that remark, I had made some comments on it this morning, and after having referred to Hansard and having reread his original comments, I would like to correct some statements that I made on the record.

To begin, Madam Chair, I'd like to just reference what the member actually did say here in the House. I believe it was in May of last year when we were debating a motion on the minimum wage. The member stated:

But remember this: the difference between a tax and charity is that the tax is mandated; charity is freely given.

So when I hear the argument saying, "You know what? We should do more," guess what? In reality, when they came to this great country, people came here not for a guarantee. They came for an opportunity. They did not ask for a guarantee. In communist countries they got a guarantee. That is not what we offer in Canada. What we offer here is an opportunity. If you come here and you work hard, you study, you develop your skills, you have the ability to grow and prosper and provide for your family, whatever the sky offers. This is what we offer here in Alberta. This is what we offer here in Canada.

Now, Madam Chair, in recalling this, when the member was saying, "They did not ask for a guarantee. In communist countries they got a guarantee," I had interpreted him as referring to minimum wage in general and that it was his belief that minimum wage in general was a guarantee that should not be provided.

4:20

I recognize, Madam Chair, having read this more closely in context, that the member was simply disagreeing with the idea that we should be guaranteeing that people are able to earn a decent living from minimum wage, that they should be able to earn a living wage.

Indeed, the member on other occasions commented that the then minister of jobs, skills, training, and labour had remarked that that was the reason why we were raising the minimum wage, so that all Albertans would be able to have or take home a decent living wage. His remark at that time was:

Well, I hate to tell you, but no one started this minimum wage as a living wage. That is not something that we ever promised anybody. We promised people that if you go get educated and you get more skills, then you can rise up in your jobs.

And again he referenced that:

We're not a communist country. This is not something that we do here.

While I fundamentally disagree with the member, and I think that historically it's quite clear that minimum wage was always intended to be a wage on which people could afford to live, I misconstrued the member's statement this morning, and I did want to clarify that for the record.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I do want to stand again and address this bill once more. I guess one of the things we've been talking about a lot is the secret ballot and what it does and what it doesn't do and the effects of coercion by not having a secret ballot. I just want to read a few comments here.

A secret ballot prevents most ills, since no one knows how an employee will vote or voted, irrespective of signing a card. Conversely, a serious flaw in the public card check process is that it is inherently rife with the potential for intimidation by union officials.

In 1996, an employer presented evidence to the NLRB that "on the day before the election, a bargaining unit employee approached another employee and solicited her to sign a union authorization card. The card solicitor allegedly stated that the employee had better sign a card because if she did not, the Union would come and get her children and it would also slash her car tires."

I'm going to go through and read a few more of these comments here.

The modern record is full of cases of intimidation. Former United Steelworkers organizer Richard Torres wrote in a February 2007 letter to the House Education and Labor Committee that he quit his job when a union official "asked me to threaten migrant workers by telling them they would be reported to federal immigration officials if they refused to sign check-off cards."

I'll just keep reading some of these. They are numerous.

An affidavit given to the NLRB described a New Jersey food service staff member's ordeal, where a union organizer visited her home, and we talked about the visiting of homes by union members, and told her “I wouldn’t have a job in Sept. if I didn’t sign the card and that the Union would make sure that I was fired.”

*See page 1495, left column, paragraph 3

Now, this is an affidavit, Madam Chair.

I’ll go on to another one.

Mike Ivey, a Freightliner employee, gained attention when he fought organizing attempts by the United Auto Workers. According to a March 2007 story, Ivey said, “Some employees have had five or more harassing visits from these (United Auto Worker) organizers . . . The only way, it seems, to stop the badgering and pressure is to sign the card.”

I’ll just continue.

A local of the United Food and Commercial Workers, for example, went so far as to institute a bounty system that offered a three-tier “incentive plan” to pay employees per signature they collected from their colleagues.

So here they had a bounty system where they had a three-tier system to encourage people to go and badger their colleagues to get signatures.

In the famous Gissel Packing case the Supreme Court stated:

We would be closing our eyes to obvious difficulties, of course, if we did not recognize that there have been (card solicitation) abuses, primarily arising out of misrepresentations by union organizers as to whether the effect of signing a card was to designate the union to represent the employee for collective bargaining purposes or merely to authorize it to seek an election to determine that issue.

Madam Chair, just another example here, and that was actually from a court case.

Why would someone sign a card if they didn’t support joining a union? Consider this letter to the editor of the Winnipeg Free Press from April 2016. That’s pretty recent. Dave Deighton described how two large union organizers came by his house late at night to encourage him to sign a card in favour of joining a union. The letter writer went on to describe how the process was intimidating and that the secret ballot . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, but pursuant to Standing Order 4(3) we will now rise and report progress.

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Rosendahl: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 17. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: All those opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Madam Speaker, given that’s it’s almost 4:30 and we automatically adjourn at 4:30 but we don’t want to spend the next two minutes sitting here, I will move that we call it 4:30 and adjourn until Monday at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:27 p.m.]

Bill Status Report for the 29th Legislature - 3rd Session (2017)

Activity to Thursday, June 1, 2017

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 1 to 200 are Government Bills. Bills numbered 201 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills numbered with a "Pr" prefix are Private Bills.

* An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If a Bill comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel, Alberta Justice, for details at 780.427.2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned chapter number until the conclusion of the Fall Sitings.

Bill 1 — An Act to Reduce School Fees (Eggen)

First Reading — 6 (Mar. 2, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 105-10 (Mar. 8, 2017 morn.), 192-96 (Mar. 9, 2017 aft.), 235-42 (Mar. 14, 2017 morn.), 269-71 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft.), 273-74 (Mar. 15, 2017 morn., adjourned), 282-91 (Mar. 15, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 424-31 (Mar. 21, 2017 aft.), 556-58 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 674-78 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017 c6]

Bill 2* — An Act to Remove Barriers for Survivors of Sexual and Domestic Violence (Ganley)

First Reading — 67-68 (Mar. 7, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 110-11 (Mar. 8, 2017 morn.), 192 (Mar. 9, 2017 aft.), 314-22 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft.), 336-39 (Mar. 16, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 455-59 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 678-79 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017; SA 2017 c7]

Bill 3* — Voluntary Blood Donations Act (Hoffman)

First Reading — 208 (Mar. 13, 2017 aft., passed.)

Second Reading — 323-36 (Mar. 16, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 394-400 (Mar. 21, 2017 morn.), 421-24 (Mar. 21, 2017 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 472-80 (Mar. 23, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Mar. 30, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force Mar. 30, 2017; SA 2017 cV-5]

Bill 4 — Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2017 ($)

First Reading — 191 (Mar. 9, 2017 aft, passed)

Second Reading — 306-07 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft., adjourned), 322 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 389-93 (Mar. 21, 2017 morn.)

Third Reading — 449-52 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Mar. 30, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force Mar. 30, 2017; SA 2017 c2]

Bill 5 — Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2017 ($) (Ceci)

First Reading — 266 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 310-14 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 393-94 (Mar. 21, 2017 morn.)

Third Reading — 452-55 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Mar. 30, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force Mar. 30, 2017; SA 2017 c1]

Bill 6 — Northland School Division Act (Eggen)

First Reading — 524 (Apr. 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 558-61 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 671-74 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 755-59 (May 2, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017; SA 2017 cN-5.1]

Bill 7 — An Act to Enhance Post-secondary Academic Bargaining (Schmidt)

First Reading — 552 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 679-81 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft.)

Committee of the Whole — 810-15 (May 3, 2017 morn.), 828-38 (May 3, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 865-66 (May 4, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017, with exception; SA 2017 c4]

Bill 8* — An Act to Strengthen Municipal Government (S. Anderson)

First Reading — 577 (Apr. 10, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 691-700 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn.), 716-22 (Apr. 20, 2017 aft.), 780-84 (May 2, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Committee of the Whole — 784-95 (May 2, 2017 aft.), 838-45 (May 3, 2017 aft.), 855-65 (May 4, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 991-1004 (May 11, 2017 morn.), 1101-06 (May 16, 2017 aft.), 1107-10 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed on division)

Bill 9 — Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2017 (Carlier)

First Reading — 606 (Apr. 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 683-87 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 687-90 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn., passed)

Third Reading — 759-62 (May 2, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — 880 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017 c5]

Bill 10 — Appropriation Act, 2017 ($) (Ceci)

First Reading — 670-71 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Second Reading — 690-91 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn.), 700-02 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn.), 722-23 (Apr. 20, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 762-67 (May 2, 2017 morn.), 795-97 (May 2, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 799-810 (May 3, 2017 morn.), 845-47 (May 3, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — 880 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017; SA 2017 c3]

Bill 11* — Public Interest Disclosure (Whistleblower Protection) Amendment Act, 2017 (Gray)

First Reading — 771 (May 2, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 849-55 (May 4, 2017 morn.), 924-39 (May 9, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1072-77 (May 16, 2017 morn.), 1092-1101 (May 16, 2017 aft.), 1168-69 (May 18, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1199-1202 (May 23, 2017 morn., passed)

Bill 12* — New Home Buyer Protection Amendment Act, 2017 (S. Anderson)

First Reading — 877 (May 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 939-44 (May 9, 2017 aft.), 945-56 (May 10, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 956-62 (May 10, 2017 morn.), 1004-1008 (May 11, 2017 morn.), 1008-10 (May 11, 2017 morn.), 1111-20 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1169-71 (May 18, 2017 morn., passed)

Bill 13 — Securities Amendment Act, 2017 (Ceci)

First Reading — 893 (May 8, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 977-90 (May 10, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1027-31 (May 11, 2017 aft.), 1065-72 (May 16, 2017 morn., passed)

Third Reading — 1137-44 (May 17, 2017 aft., passed)

Bill 14 — An Act to Support Orphan Well Rehabilitation (McCuaig-Boyd)

First Reading — 1090 (May 16, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 1144-52 (May 17, 2017 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole — 1225-30 (May 23, 2017 aft., passed)
Third Reading — 1244-46 (May 24, 2017 morn., passed)

Bill 15 — Tax Statutes Amendment Act, 2017 (Ceci)

First Reading — 1137 (May 17, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 1184-89 (May 18, 2017 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole — 1215-25 (May 23, 2017 aft., passed)
Third Reading — 1246-48 (May 24, 2017 morn., passed)

Bill 16 — An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates ($) (McCuaig-Boyd)

First Reading — 1214 (May 23, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 1262-78 (May 24, 2017 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole — 1279-91 (May 25, 2017 morn.), 1291-97 (May 25, 2017 morn.), 1351-58 (May 29, 2017 eve.), 1389-1406 (May 30, 2017 aft., passed)
Third Reading — 1514-17 (Jun. 1, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Bill 17* — Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act (Gray)

First Reading — 1260 (May 24, 2017 aft., passed on division)
Second Reading — 1311-22 (May 25, 2017 aft.), 1359-61 (May 29, 2017 eve.), 1363-76 (May 30, 2017 morn.), 1407-20 (May 30, 2017 eve.), 1421-32 (May 31, 2017 morn., passed)
Committee of the Whole — 1432-36 (May 31, 2017 morn.), 1449-66 (May 31, 2017 aft.), 1467-79 (May 31, 2017 eve.), 1490-99 (Jun. 1, 2017 morn.), 1517-20 (Jun. 1, 2017 aft., adjourned)

Bill 18 — Child Protection and Accountability Act (Larivee)

First Reading — 1388 (May 30, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 1481-90 (Jun. 1, 2017 morn., passed)

Bill 201 — Justice System Accountability Act (Jean)

First Reading — 127 (Mar. 8, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 208-20 (Mar. 13, 2017 aft., defeated on division)

Bill 202* — Protecting Victims of Non-Consensual Distribution of Intimate Images Act (Cyr)

First Reading — 245 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 375-86 (Mar. 20, 2017 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole — 578-86 (Apr. 10, 2017 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading — 738-40 (May 1, 2017 aft., passed on division)
Royal Assent — 880 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force 3 months after date of Royal Assent; SA 2017 cP-26.9]

Bill 203 — Alberta Standard Time Act (Dang)

First Reading — 253 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 496-503 (Apr. 3, 2017 aft., referred to the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future)

Bill 204 — Protection of Property Rights Statutes Amendment Act, 2017 (Stier)

First Reading — 444 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed)
Second Reading — 503-07 (Apr. 3, 2017 aft.), 899-905 (May 8, 2017 aft.), 1046-50 (May 15, 2017 aft., reasoned amendment agreed to on division)

Bill 205* — Advocate for Persons with Disabilities Act (Jansen)

First Reading — 552 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft.)
Second Reading — 1050-57 (May 15, 2017 aft.), 1120-25 (May 17, 2017 morn., moved to Government Bills and Orders), 1153-63 (May 18, 2017 morn., passed)
Committee of the Whole — 1163-68 (May 18, 2017 morn.), 1191-99 (May 23, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)
Third Reading — 1231-43 (May 24, 2017 morn., passed on division)

Bill 206 — Child, Youth and Family Enhancement (Adoption Advertising) Amendment Act, 2017 (Aheer)

First Reading — 1024 (May 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1334-45 (May 29, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Bill 207 — Regulatory Burden Reduction Act (Hunter)

First Reading — 1310 (May 25, 2017 aft., passed)

Bill 208 — Government Organization (Utilities Consumer Advocate) Amendment Act, 2017 (Hinkley)

First Reading — 1512 (Jun. 1, 2017 aft., passed)

Bill Pr1 — Calgary Jewish Centre Amendment Act, 2017 (Kazim)

First Reading — 524 (Apr. 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1110 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1110-11 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed)

Third Reading — 1261-62 (May 24, 2017 aft., passed)

Bill Pr2 — Paula Jean Anderson Adoption Termination Act (MacIntyre)

First Reading — 524 (Apr. 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1027 (May 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1027 (May 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 1110 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed)

Table of Contents

Introduction of Visitors	1501
Introduction of Guests	1501, 1517
Members' Statements
Unionized Workers.....	1502
Conservative Party Unity Agreement.....	1502
Provincial Fiscal Policies.....	1503
Stony Plain Community Organization Grants	1503
National Aboriginal History Month.....	1511
Landowner Property Rights.....	1511
Oral Question Period
Carbon Levy and Pipeline Approvals.....	1503
Wildfire Response Reviews.....	1504
Auditor General Recommendations on Health Care.....	1505
Kinder Morgan Trans Mountain Pipeline.....	1505
Dementia Care.....	1506
Calgary Southwest Ring Road Construction Concerns	1507
Energy-sector Unemployment.....	1507
New Edmonton Hospital	1508
Rural Education Funding.....	1508
Minister of Finance.....	1509
School Transportation in Calgary.....	1509
Tourism and Canada 150.....	1510
Air Ambulance Service Contract.....	1510
Introduction of Bills
Bill 208 Government Organization (Utilities Consumer Advocate) Amendment Act, 2017	1512
Tabling Returns and Reports	1512
Orders of the Day	1513
Government Motions
Ombudsman and Public Interest Commissioner Appointment.....	1513
Auditor General Search Committee.....	1513
Committee Membership Changes.....	1513
Alberta Property Rights Advocate.....	1513
Missing Persons Act	1513
Government Bills and Orders
Third Reading
Bill 16 An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates	1514
Division	1517
Committee of the Whole
Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.....	1517
Division	1519

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Monday afternoon, June 5, 2017

Day 44

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawwood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKittrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKittrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKittrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, June 5, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Hon. members, our world has once again been inflicted with violence in various locations. One of those situations included the loss of a Canadian. I'd like each of you to reflect or pray, each in your own way.

Today I'd like to read a prayer from the Ute First Nation entitled Earth, Teach Me.

Earth teach me quiet as the grasses are still with new light.
 Earth teach me suffering as old stones suffer with memory.
 Earth teach me humility as blossoms are humble with beginning.
 Earth teach me caring as mothers nurture their young.
 Earth teach me courage as the tree that stands alone . . .
 Earth teach me freedom as the eagle that soars in the sky.
 Earth teach me acceptance as the leaves that die each fall.
 Earth teach me renewal as the seed that rises in the spring.
 Earth teach me to forget myself as melted snow forgets its life.
 Earth teach me to remember kindness as dry fields weep with rain.

Hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, we will now be led in the singing of our national anthem by a special guest, Akesh Aheer. I would invite all to participate in the language of their choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
 True patriot love in all thy sons command.
 Car ton bras sait porter l'épée,
 Il sait porter la croix!
 Ton histoire est une épopée
 Des plus brillants exploits.
 God keep our land glorious and free!
 O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
 O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great joy and honour today to introduce to you and through you to the Legislature two special people in my life for the last number of years. First of all, David Khan, the newly elected leader of the Alberta Liberal Party: born and raised in Calgary, a background in sciences and chemistry at the University of British Columbia, a law degree from the University of Toronto, fully bilingual, which exceeds my capacity, an indigenous rights lawyer and activist operating on the well-known Liberal values of opportunity, freedom of the individual, and fairness for future generations. Welcome him as the next Premier of Alberta.

With him is Gwyneth Midgley, our executive director of the party for the last two years. She has been in Calgary for 25 years, working for the last two years as the executive director of the Alberta Liberal Party, past president of Calgary-Buffalo and Calgary-Elbow, was the Calgary-Buffalo president for Kent Hehr for five years. Please stand, Gwyneth, and we'll give you the warm welcome of the Legislature.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you today and through you to the whole Assembly Westbrook elementary school, which is nestled away in the north-west part of my riding. The school strives to celebrate diversity in learning, encourage students to think critically, and develop life-long thinkers. They are accompanied today by Mrs. Arlene Walker and Mrs. Elizabeth Branco, their teachers. I would like to ask them all to rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Livingstone-MacLeod.

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of grade 11 and 12 students visiting from Livingstone school in the bustling hamlet of Lundbreck, right down near the Crowsnest Pass, in my constituency: their teacher Kathy Rast; chaperones Diana Bramer and Dale Bueckert; and students Skylar Bueckert, Jonathan Erickson, Ty Ancil, Justyn Connelly-Engel, Quinlan Connelly-Engel, Contessa Penner, and Logan Desjardins. I would ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. members, are there any other school groups today?

Seeing and hearing none, the Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you Vera Saunders and her family, who are seated in the Speaker's gallery. I ask that they please rise as I read this introduction. Vera is an honoured constituent of Edmonton-Glenora, where she raised her family and had a long teaching career. She was born in Swift Current, Saskatchewan, and this summer she will be turning 105. Vera still lives quite independently. She's at McQueen Place Lodge in Edmonton-Glenora, where she enjoys the distinction of being the eldest resident. She is joined by her daughter Lorraine, her son-in-law Andy, and another Edmonton-Glenora constituent, my good friend, her granddaughter Lyndsey. Please, colleagues, join me in extending the warm welcome to Vera and her family.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Ms Hoffman: Mr. Speaker, I do have a second if it would be permissible.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This second introduction is to introduce to you and through you Dr. Gerry Falk, who's seated in the members' gallery. Again, I ask that she rise as I introduce her and her guests. Gerry is retiring this June from Edmonton public schools after a very rewarding career, where she has been employed for more than 50 years as a principal and a practising psychologist. Gerry is joined by her husband, also a doctor, Michael Falk, and another doctor, her friend Larry Payne. I ask that they all rise and receive our appreciation and welcome to this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four if that's okay. I'll do them in little chunks here.

It is with great pleasure that I introduce to you and through you some amazing women. First is Gerda Krebs. Gerda started teaching yoga in the early 1970s to junior high students in a school cafeteria that used towels as yoga mats on a cement floor. She also taught adults in her basement for 25 years and had her own television show, called Yoga Fits In. Gerda has empowered and strengthened many people for almost 50 years with her very simple message: in order to be healthy in mind, spirit, and body, you have to act as though you are healthy, and you need to live a well-rounded, balanced life. Gerda is turning 86 this month and is still teaching yoga three times a week. You can still find her TV show, which is very inspiring, on TV.

Along with Gerda is Chris Erdmann. Under Gerda's skilled, passionate mentorship a long-time student has also become a yoga instructor. It was this community of committed and dedicated instructors and practising students that became the backbone of the support for Chris to open Yoga for Today in 2001.

Following that is Tina Chavda, who is also with Gerda. Tina is one of those long-time members of the yoga community in Sherwood Park. Her strength shines through her quiet joy in sharing health and strength with her students.

Also, I'd like to say that with this group is our very own Maureen Gough. Many of you already know her, and what you probably don't know is that she has practised yoga since she was a young teenager and started with Gerda in 1974.

If I could have this lovely group of women stand and please receive the warm welcome of the House.

1:40

The Speaker: Welcome.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is also with pleasure that I am going to introduce to you Theresa and Daniel Ng. Theresa is the parent who brought our attention to the inappropriate links on the provincial GSA co-ordinator website. Her vigilance and advocacy resulted in the links being removed from the website. I would like to congratulate Theresa for her efforts on behalf of all Albertans. We owe her a debt of gratitude for her careful attention. Later today I will be tabling the names of 2,700 of those Albertans who stand for the protection of all children. With Theresa today is her son Daniel. I thank Theresa for bringing Daniel to remind us all in this Assembly that it is the children like him who are impacted by many of our decisions and the actions of our government. I would hope that, potentially, the minister will have a chance to meet with Theresa regarding her concerns. I would ask Daniel and Theresa to please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mrs. Aheer: Oh, no. I have two more, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Two more.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you. I would also like to introduce to you and through you a very good friend of mine, Cassandra Montour. We have a mutual passion for public service. Cassandra has a keen interest in community advocacy and in the areas of education, arts, culture, and affordable housing. Cassandra, if you could please stand so you can get the warm welcome of the House.

Finally, Mr. Speaker – thank you so much – it would be completely horrible of me to not also mention my beautiful husband, who is sitting in your gallery along with my son, who had the privilege of singing O Canada in this House today. I would like them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you all 20 government staff members who are here from Service Alberta, Economic Development and Trade, and Treasury Board and Finance. This group includes management, technical, and administrative staff as well as summer students, who have recently joined us. I would like to welcome them to the Legislature and the Chamber and ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Yao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members some folks in the gallery whose roots are up in Fort McMurray. I ask, as I say your name, that you please rise and stay standing. Iris Kirschner is from Fort McMurray. Iris is the wife of Dave, who I mentioned last week, and her father, Peter Chaba, was a Social Credit MLA for Redwater. She is accompanied by her son David Jr., his wife, Tina, and their children Eliana, Nadya, David, Jonathan, and Benjamin. I would ask that the Assembly give them the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Ms Luff: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly my mom, Pam Bush, who is visiting from Vancouver. She has been a lifelong NDP supporter, is a proud feminist, a union worker, and one of the strongest women I know. If everyone could please give her the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Rimbeey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two guests today, that I have here. The first is Brianna Morris. Brianna works with me on the child intervention file and has been working hard on the panel as well. In addition to that, she works with the hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock on the labour file, two big pieces of legislation that this Legislature is dealing with right now. Her work has been invaluable, and I want to be able to recognize her for that. In fact, some people would say that she is a factotum of the Federal Building, getting everything done for us, and it's much appreciated. I'd ask if she would stand. Along with her today is her sister Carla Heinrichs, who is Brianna's older sister. She teaches English as a second language and is getting ready for a trip to China. She is a big supporter of the Wildrose and is looking forward to a sane government in the next election. Before she left, she wanted to be able to see the Legislature this way because it won't be that way when she comes back. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly

Brodie Parker from my constituency office in Calgary. Brodie is a student in political science at the University of Calgary. He is seated in the public gallery. I would now ask Brodie to stand to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The Minister of Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. Carlier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 16 of our 2017 government interns. I ask Miss Megan Perram, Andre Tinio, Blaire Christensen, Juan Vargas, Max Harrington, Genna DiPinto, Shae Doyle, Pariyanka Chandan, Lauren Hanon, Margaux Robertson, Ayesha Herian, Bruce Cinnamon, Frank Finley, Aldrick Dugarte, Sumaira Islam, and Rowan Ley to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gottfried: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you two of my esteemed constituents from Lake Bonavista in Calgary, Amy and Brian Salisbury. I would ask them to rise and remain standing as I introduce them as my honoured guests. Amy, a recent addition to my Calgary-Fish Creek PC Association board, is a lifelong resident of Calgary and graduated with a bachelor's degree in history from St. Mary's University, located on the bluffs above beautiful Fish Creek provincial park. Amy's current career is in financial services, but she has previous experience in the hospitality and creative industries. Brian, originally from Wisconsin, has called Alberta home for the past six years and has a successful career in the oil and gas services sector. Amy and Brian are proud to be raising three bright young Albertans, and, with our congratulations in advance, they have a fourth on the way this August. I would ask all members to extend the traditional warm welcome of this House to Amy and Brian in recognition of their first visit to the Alberta Legislature.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Minister of Labour and democratic renewal.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly several proud and hard-working Albertans who represent electricians, paramedics, front-line health care professionals, and employees from all lines of work in Alberta. Today with us from the HSAA Trudy Thomson, Mike Parker, Donna Farquharson, Kris Moskal, Amanda Freistadt; from the IBEW 424 Scott Crichton, Delaine Coleman, Kyle Hamilton; and from the AFL Gil McGowan. They're here today because they're very keen to watch the debate unfold in the House. I'd now like all members to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

A further introduction, Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm so sorry; I missed a very important person in my original introduction. Chris's daughter Kerra Boyko is also here. She is a high school student who wants to study veterinary medicine. Thank you so much for giving me the opportunity to add her in. Would she please rise.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Post-traumatic Stress Disorder Awareness Day

Ms Goehring: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about Post-traumatic Stress Disorder Awareness Day on June 27. Last year I was honoured to bring forward a private member's bill that would acknowledge PTSD Awareness Day annually. This passed with unanimous consent in this Legislature. To all of you, thank you for recognizing the importance of this day. I feel truly honoured to have heard and continue to hear the personal experiences of so many Albertans who in some way have been impacted by this devastating anxiety disorder.

1:50

PTSD is a strong and lasting emotional reaction to a very disturbing event such as war, violent crime, or natural disaster. It can make it very hard for those affected to deal with the stressors of life or work and can even affect their ability to interact with family and friends. This year on June 27 I'm hosting a panel and resource fair at the Federal Building from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and a second resource fair in my own constituency at the Castle Downs Family YMCA from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Both events will have resources available for those who have experienced trauma. Each case is different, and there are a variety of treatment options available to fit the needs of the individual. Raising awareness is key because an early and accurate diagnosis is vital. We are also co-ordinating with municipalities and organizations to encourage Albertans to light up Alberta for PTSD. Many of you may see notable buildings lit in teal. This will be to acknowledge PTSD Awareness Day.

I invite my colleagues in the House to join me along with Albertans from all across this province to help those suffering in silence. Let's all help them find the support that they need, help them to build strong, happy memories to replace the ones that still cause them pain, and help to raise awareness of this destructive disorder.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Victims of Sexual Assault

Mr. Jean: Angela Cardinal was a survivor of kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault, yet when it came time to testify against her attacker in court here in Alberta, Angela was sent to jail shackled and then transported to court in the same van as the person who was ultimately convicted of kidnapping and sexually assaulting her. Angela was the victim of a horrific crime, and the system treated her like a criminal. Can the Premier please explain why it took a media report to inform the public of how badly our justice system failed Angela Cardinal?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The member opposite is correct. It was a tragedy and, actually, quite an appalling set of circumstances that Angela was faced with. Let me begin by joining with our Minister of Justice to personally offer my apologies to Angela's family for what she was compelled to face. It's not acceptable, absolutely not acceptable. No victim should ever be treated that way. All victims should be treated with respect and with support and, ultimately, justice. That's why I'm very pleased that our Minister of Justice is working as quickly as she can to ensure that this does not happen again.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Jean: The request to place Angela into custody came from the Crown prosecutor and was agreed to by the judge presiding over the preliminary inquiry. That judge was previously a Deputy Minister of Justice. I practised criminal law for 10 years, and I've never heard of a victim of sexual assault being shackled and jailed by the system meant to protect them when she was willing to testify and had committed no crime. An independent review is a good first step, but Albertans want to know, Premier: who will ultimately be held accountable for this shocking failure of the system?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, as the member rightly points out, there was a decision taken by the Crown to request that form of relief from the judge, and as a result of that, the Minister of Justice has put in place a new policy to ensure that should that kind of request ever be made again, it is reviewed by much more senior officials within the Justice ministry, because it is not, quite frankly, a provision of the Criminal Code that should, I think, almost ever be used. That being said, the minister has also appointed an independent investigator, and that investigator will prepare a report that will in large part answer the member's questions.

Mr. Jean: Our justice system is supposed to protect all Albertans, not just those who have the resources to protect themselves. Angela was an aboriginal woman who was homeless. Her pleas to be released from jail after committing no crime were ignored. This is an absolute failing that shatters the credibility of our justice system, and it happened under this government's watch, and it took two years for the story to finally come to light. Albertans want to know: how many other victims of crime have been shackled and jailed alongside the perpetrators of the very crimes?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again, I'm very pleased that upon the Minister of Justice being advised of this outrageous situation, one of the things that she immediately did was to task a special committee to recommend aggressive policies and policy review with respect to victims' services. That committee will in fact include indigenous representation as well as representation from people involved with supporting victims of sexual and domestic assault because, as the member opposite rightly points out, no victim should ever be treated the way Angela was.

The Speaker: Second main question.

Support for Junior Oil and Gas Companies

Mr. Jean: The majority of Canada's junior oil and gas companies have disappeared. It's just another day and another headline under the NDP government. There's no doubt about it: while our junior oil and gas companies have been suffering, the NDP government has just been making things much worse with carbon taxes, oil sands caps, and damaging new regulations. Seventeen publicly traded junior companies have disappeared over the last 30 months. That's under your watch, Premier. When will the Premier and her government finally give our juniors in oil and gas here in Alberta a break?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As the member opposite knows, the province of Alberta and all economic players within the province of Alberta have been struggling as a result of the drop in the price of oil. One of the things that our government did soon after being elected was that we implemented a royalty review. Having done that, we brought in place a modernized royalty regime that was designed to support efficiencies within the oil and gas sector and, in fact, to give them opportunities to improve their performance and, ultimately, to improve their success. We are pleased that rig numbers are now on their way back up.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: If we want our oil and gas sector to thrive, our junior oil and gas companies have a critical role to play, but now industry experts don't see a recovery for them any time soon. The NDP is making recovery nearly impossible. Their new oil sands cap will only drown these companies out of the market as control consolidates behind a few major players. This cap is hurting investment in our economy and Alberta businesses. When will the Premier finally realize that it is a mistake and remove it?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the member is absolutely wrong with respect to his characterization of the importance of that oil sands cap not only to the environment but ultimately to the long-term sustainability of our oil and gas industry. Fundamentally, that cap was a cap that was put in place as a result of the joint request of environmentalists and senior oil and gas leaders. That is how you develop a long-term, sustainable industry, that is the way we make sure that our economy recovers, and that, of course, is the way we make sure we get that pipeline built.

Mr. Jean: Now, we know, Mr. Speaker, that government can't fix everything, but it can stop getting in the way. The Premier can scrap a carbon tax that is punishing Alberta with absolutely zero benefit. They could for instance get rid of their arbitrary cap on oil sands, they can reverse many of their damaging regulations or just the number of them, and they can stop apologizing for an industry that puts bread on the table for hundreds of thousands of Canadians. Will the Premier implement just one of these ideas to get our junior oil and gas companies back on their feet?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What our government has done, actually, is that we have worked closely with the oil and gas industry to promote their interests and to advocate for their rights in the international markets, because we actually do understand that good jobs are absolutely what Albertans need and that that is tied to a healthy, sustainable oil and gas industry. We are very proud of our record. We also know that, going forward, it is important to pair economic growth with environmental responsibility. That is the path to a long-term, sustainable industry, something that the folks over there have long since forgotten.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The third main question.

Government Policies

Mr. Jean: Mr. Speaker, the NDP plan is simply not working. It's time to change course. Just look at the numbers. Since May 2015 60,000 full-time jobs have vanished in Alberta under this NDP government's watch. At a time when our economy is supposed to be stabilizing, Alberta has lost nearly 7,000 jobs just since December. Our budget sheet is melting down, and all that Albertans can expect is more of the same – more debt, more deficit, and higher taxes – from this NDP government. What other damaging policies can Albertans expect the Premier to announce this summer?

2:00

Ms Notley: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, what we won't do is continuously talk down the economic prospects of this province and Albertans just so we can make political gains. It is absolutely ridiculous, making political hay at the expense of Albertans. Employment is up. Housing sales are up. Rig numbers are up. Exports are up. Capital investment is up, and once again we will lead the country in economic growth. I know that the members opposite hate to hear good news, but thank goodness Albertans don't.

Mr. Jean: Of course, unemployment is up. Debt is up, record debt. The deficit is up. Seven thousand more jobs lost in 2017. There's no recovery for real people outside the halls of this Legislature. For anyone who pays taxes in Alberta, these past few months of the NDP have been nothing but bad news. Taxpayers are being forced to cough up billions and billions of dollars because of the NDP mistakes and tinkering in our electricity grid. The carbon tax is set to go up another 50 per cent in January. And for what, Mr. Speaker? More light bulbs. How many more taxes, fees, and nickel and diming will Albertans have to pay for this Premier's mistakes and incompetence?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that facts are an inconvenient concept for the members opposite and that, you know, it must be a struggle for them. In fact, we have had several straight months of employment growth. We had 20,000 jobs created just in March. Our plan is working. Their plan was to take $3.5 billion out of our economy in one year. Their plan was to not build schools. Their plan was to not build a hospital. Their plan was to make Albertans pay for their failure to plan for the need for a diversified economy. Our plan is working.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Jean: The NDP plan is a fairy tale, and it's not working. We've seen a growing sense of arrogance from a government that just doesn't understand the plight of struggling everyday Albertans. Albertans concerned about this government were called rodents. They insulted job creators and workers by trying to drive through omnibus legislation after holding embarrassingly short consultations. They are under investigation by the Privacy Commissioner for deleting e-mails and have been condemned for hiding information from Albertans. How can any Albertan trust this Premier or her government with this type of record of secrecy and incompetence?

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, what our government has done is that we've fought hard for pipelines, we've secured intervenor status, and we've moved forward to get a pipeline approved. What those folks have done is cheered for pipeline opponents and promised to scrap the very plan that got us here. What we did was that we built the Calgary cancer centre. Those folks would never have moved forward on it. What we did was decide that we would feed hungry kids at school. Those people are still waiting to figure out if that's a good idea. What we did was announce that we'd build new schools. Those guys would never have moved forward with that, and they would never have created the jobs. I will put our record up against theirs any day.

Victims of Sexual Assault (continued)

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, like all Albertans, I was shocked to hear of the horrific treatment that Angela Cardinal received from our justice system after she was brutally assaulted. Forcing a victim to ride in a transport vehicle with her attacker can never be justified. While I appreciate the Justice minister's call to action on an independent investigation, I'm concerned that the case has exposed larger issues of how our justice system treats victims of sexual assault. To the Minister of Justice: will you issue a ministerial order today prohibiting putting victims in close proximity to their accused attackers?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think, like all Albertans, all members of this House have been shocked by the details of this case. The treatment of the victim in this case was absolutely appalling. We have absolutely indicated and the sheriffs branch is absolutely aware that transport of accused people and victims should never occur in the same transport. In fact, the member opposite is absolutely right. This has unveiled some systemic problems, which is why we're having an internal review as well as an external review.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. McIver: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I hope the minister will do that order today.

As I struggle to comprehend how something like this could possibly happen to a victim of violent crime, I can't help but wonder if racial prejudices and stereotyping might have played a role in the Crown's request to have Ms Cardinal remanded under section 545(1) of the Criminal Code and the judge's decision to grant that application. Again to the Justice minister: does Alberta's justice system have a systemic problem with racism, particularly towards indigenous people?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's, of course, very difficult for me to speak to the motivations of the individual people involved in this particular case, but I do struggle with and I am kept up at night by the question: had this victim been Caucasian and had she been housed, would this have happened to her in this particular case? I think this has unveiled a number of systemic problems with the justice system, and we will absolutely be moving forward to address them.

Mr. McIver: Mr. Speaker, we thank the minister for her actions so far to conduct an investigation and for striking a special committee to make policy changes to ensure that there are no more victims that get treated this way. Thank you. To the minister: when did you know, what are the anticipated timelines for both the independent investigation and the committee to complete its work, and if you don't mind, will you make both of those fully public when they're finished?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think this case has unveiled a number of systemic problems, and one of those systemic problems was certainly the fact that this was brought to my attention in late April by the reporter at CBC. Certainly, that is one of the challenges we absolutely look to address. The review in terms of policies from the internal committee should be reporting back within three months with those policy changes. In terms of the other review, we're still finalizing the terms of reference, and I should have more to say about that shortly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Health Care System

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. For years Alberta Liberals have been pointing to the Alberta Health Services quarterly performance reports as an excellent way for Albertans to assess how the system is working. Unfortunately, those reports are rarely up to date. When I asked the Health minister last week – two weeks ago, actually – she said that she hadn't seen the report yet, which is troubling.

An Hon. Member: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order noted.

Dr. Swann: She did promise to follow up immediately with Alberta Health Services and inform the House. Two weeks have passed. The minister needs to respond. When will the reports be released so that Albertans can finally decide what's going on?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to congratulate the member on his second attempt at retirement as leader of his party. Certainly, your service to your party and to Albertans is appreciated, hon. member.

I have followed up with Alberta Health Services, and the report is making its way to their board. Once it is finished going through the board process, it will come to my office, and then I will release it as quickly as possible. This is a process that happens typically. As it's part of the annual report, it goes to the full board. When it is available, I will certainly reach out to the member and ensure that he's aware of it.

Thank you.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, what the data have consistently shown is that we're failing to deliver humane, comprehensive seniors' care in this province. The Health Quality Council reports hundreds of seniors not receiving the right level of care in the right place at the right time: 787 people most recently reported being warehoused in hospitals and 973 waiting for placement in the community. With numbers like these how can the minister say that she is providing seniors with dignity at the time when they need it most?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the member. Absolutely, there has been a long need for additional seniors' care, including long-term care, dementia spaces, and increased investment in home care. Certainly, that was the case under the previous government for many years. I'm glad that we're making important investments in those areas. We're on track to be able to open 2,000 new long-term care and dementia care spaces within two years, and we've increased home-care supports significantly. For those who are living in hospital, we certainly think that the staff there are doing a better job than warehousing, but living in a hospital is not ideal.

2:10

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the Auditor General's report on better health care for Albertans highlighted the opportunity for better integration of clinical information systems. Unfortunately, the government has not yet required physicians to provide their clinical data to other caregivers. Clinicians are looking for leadership. When will the minister require reporting standards for physicians to share important information with other caregivers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. We're working with the Alberta Medical Association to implement the amendments that were done to the agreement that we have with the physicians. These amendments will see improvements in primary care such as information sharing and data sharing as well. I'm pleased that the physicians came back to the table two years before what was required under the previous agreement under the former government and that we were able to make these important changes as well as committing investment to a clinical information system to ensure that patients can have integrated, seamless access to their data and that the health professionals who are making decisions have the best up-to-date information for those patients as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Rural Health Care Service Interruptions

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just this morning Alberta Health Services informed my constituents in Tofield that the emergency department at the Tofield Health Centre would be closed until Wednesday. As anyone in a rural community can imagine, this is incredibly alarming. Can the Minister of Health please update residents of Tofield and area on why this was necessary and what is being done to ensure that their safety is kept this week?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question and for her ongoing advocacy with her office and with AHS to ensure that we have the very best information and ability to serve her constituents. A full-time physician chose to leave Tofield earlier this year. AHS has been covering with locums, including physicians from other parts of the member's own riding, including Fort Saskatchewan. Sometimes there are gaps, however, in coverage. To ensure safety, acute-care beds have been prioritized. That will require a short-term closure of the emergency department, but EMS is on standby to transport anyone in need of urgent care.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister for the answer. Given the impact that this may have on the surrounding area, to the same minister: what's being done currently to address this staffing issue at the Tofield Health Centre?

Ms Hoffman: Thank you again for the question. AHS is working very closely with the community, with the local health advisory council, the local foundation, as well as with the Alberta Medical Association. They're actively seeking to recruit new physicians and also are offering flexible options to provide coverage with locums. As several members will recall, we've been through this process a number of times in rural communities. We will make every effort to avoid any service interruptions, but patient safety will always be the number one priority, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the minister mentioned that many rural communities have experienced temporary closures or service interruptions due to staffing problems, what is the government's plan going forward to address what could become a worsening inequity in health care in rural Alberta?

Ms Hoffman: Thank you again to the member for the question. This is very important, something that previous Conservative governments failed to address for decades. I grew up in a rural community in the north, and I'm very proud of the work that we are doing with the AMA to help match our physician workforce with the communities that need them the most. This is part of our commitment to work with communities and with health care professionals instead of against them, Mr. Speaker, as the members opposite continue to call for time after time.

Minister of Finance

Mr. Fildebrandt: The Minister of Finance has taken the annual deficit from $5.3 billion to $10.3 billion in a matter of 24 months. We have gone from $11.9 billion of debt when the minister came to office to a projected debt of $94 billion. We have gone from the best credit rating in the country to five downgrades and counting, putting us on par with basket cases like Ontario. No more excuses. This minister is incompetent and incapable of doing his job. Will he step aside and resign?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to stand on my record any day. While the member opposite performed his little stunt to launch his bid for the UCP leadership, I and my government colleagues are working hard as we emerge from this recession. We have Albertans' backs. We're feeding hungry kids at school; they call that irresponsible. We're freezing tuition so that the cost of an education doesn't stand in the way of an Albertan's dreams; they call that a mess. I'm standing up for everyday Albertans, and I'm not apologizing.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Given, Mr. Speaker, the minister has demonstrated gross negligence and irresponsibility in carrying out his duties – he blames everybody but himself when something goes wrong – and the minister blamed the first four credit downgrades on mysterious forces beyond his control and given that when our credit rating was downgraded a fifth time, he blamed S&P for having a conservative agenda and that the minister has demonstrated beyond a doubt that he is incapable of competently doing his job, will he step aside and resign?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Let me read to the House what the TD Bank said about our budget. They said that "the recently tabled . . . 2017-18 Budget was stimulative in nature, with the government continuing its commitment to investing in health care, education and social services." We're putting Albertans back to work, building badly needed infrastructure like the new Edmonton hospital and the Calgary cancer centre, that the opposition dragged their feet on for decades. I think it's time the hon. member came clean with his plan. You know, what would he cut? How much in taxes . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Fildebrandt: Given, Mr. Speaker, the Premier knew that her Finance minister had no qualifications whatsoever for the job when she appointed him and she has refused to listen to expert advice that could help him compensate for this and given that he has shown time and time again that he can't competently do his job and he doesn't care that the fiscal house is burning down around him – he needs to go – Premier, will you fire your Finance minister?

Ms Notley: Well, you know what, Mr. Speaker? Because of this Finance minister, our kids aren't stuffed into overcrowded classes. Because of this Finance minister, Calgary is getting a new cancer centre. Because of this Finance minister, tens of thousands of Albertans have jobs building new schools. Because of this Finance minister, this province will lead the country in economic growth. I wish I could give him a promotion.

The Speaker: Hon. members, let's stay focused on policy rather than on personalities.

The Member for Calgary-West.

Child Safety Reporting and Investigations

Mr. Ellis: All right. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Another session, another missed opportunity to pass Serenity's law. Near the end of the fall session, when everyone agreed more action was needed to protect children, I suggested a minor legislative change that would require adults to contact police if they know a child is in need of intervention. In December, just before the session ended, this NDP government said: that's a great idea, but we've run out of time. Minister, what is your excuse this time? And don't say that you're waiting for the panel to bring it forward because you have already ignored most of their recommendations.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm actually very thankful for the work that the panel did prioritizing vulnerable children and working together to come up with consensus recommendations. I'm very proud to have accepted them, and I'm moving forward with implementing every single one of them because this issue is so important that we all need to come together and rise above politics and figure out what is in the best interests of our children. From that perspective, I'm very excited to hear what the panel comes forward with after the second phase, and I look forward to working with them on implementing those recommendations as well.

2:20

Mr. Ellis: Given that this bill was called Serenity's law because there were adults who knew that little Serenity was in danger and did not call the, quote, director, unquote, and given that it could easily be called Ezekiel's law, Ryan's law, Alex's law because each of these children suffered long, neglectful deaths and adults other than those found responsible for their deaths knew about their suffering, Minister, you have not introduced legislation that will take immediate action to save children's lives as you promised that you would do, but there is still time. Will you bring forward Serenity's law before this session ends?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again, for the first time ever all parties in the Assembly are considering real, meaningful changes to the way that we protect children. Again, this is one idea that the panel can consider. As previously stated, we do need to engage with police and others who would be involved in this. In the meantime I would absolutely encourage every single Albertan to just know that you're legally required to report child abuse, and if you do know of an imminent threat to a child, please call 911.

Mr. Ellis: Given that I have consulted with experts in health and safety law, police, legal counsel, people who work with the intervention system, parents who've lost their children and given that Serenity's family came to the Legislature to provide powerful personal support for the immediate passing of this law and given that if I could, I would introduce Serenity's law today, Minister, unfortunately I'm not in a position to take this action, but you are. Why are you choosing not to do this?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Absolutely, we are all committed to moving forward in terms of supporting vulnerable children in this province. Absolutely, I'm looking forward, you know, with tremendous excitement to hearing the outcome of the work of the panel as they move through phase 2 to talk about how we can improve the child intervention system in this province. Again I would state: Albertans, it is your obligation to call and report child abuse should you know of it. If you know of a child who's at risk of abuse or is being abused, please report that. If there's an imminent threat, please call 911.

Air Ambulance Service Contract

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, the handling of the fixed-wing air ambulance RFP has become a scandal in rural Alberta. First, we learned CanWest, a company with no aircraft bases in major rural stations like Medicine Hat and Peace River, won the RFP. Now we know this government hired Toronto lawyers to handle the tendering of this RFP. To the Minister of Health. Air ambulance is critical to patients in rural Alberta. Why are you making crony deals with Ontario companies who don't understand our province?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to address the irresponsibility that has come from the opposite side both on Thursday and today. They are continuing to inflame things where none exist. First, let's dispense with the rumours and irresponsible statements offered by the members opposite. We have an excellent air ambulance system in Alberta. We are improving on that system, and we have a competitive procurement process under way, but we will not change services, and there will be no change in base locations.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, given the NDP has developed a bad habit of awarding government contracts to companies with NDP connections from Ontario, including a contract to screw in taxpayer-funded light bulbs, and given that this contract would have been welcomed by our out-of-work local contractors in these tough times, can the minister explain to Alberta contractors who were passed over for the taxpayer-funded light bulb contract and now the Alberta law firms who were passed over for the air ambulance: why does the NDP hate Alberta businesses?

Ms Hoffman: Unsuccessful proponents have the right to challenge the RFP, Mr. Speaker. That's a process that's laid out in the New West Partnership. There was a time when the members opposite believed in competitive procurement and believed in the New West Partnership. I have to say that I wish it was surprising to see them abandon their principles, but they do it day after day. Enough is enough. Things are moving forward fairly, respectfully, and we will ensure the very best outcomes for Albertans and that their safety continues to be the top priority.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, this isn't just about cronyism or waste; it's a lack of oversight. Given that AHS is now the fourth-largest employer in Canada, boasting a small army of lawyers and bureaucrats, which this minister refuses to trim, and given the minister thought it was a good idea to spend even more taxpayer dollars by handing this RFP issue to a bunch of lawyers from Toronto, Albertans are wondering: does this minister or anyone on that side understand the value of a dollar?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's nice to see the member have an opportunity to ask a question. I think he's been here more than one day, but let me explain the way it works. Alberta Health Services are the ones that are in the contract negotiations. Alberta Health Services are the ones who are determining what supports they will need. Alberta Health Services are negotiating in a fair and open and transparent process to make sure that the policies of this government, which are that health will be the number one priority and public safety – that we will find the very best way to have service and protect the current base plans and that we will make sure that we do that while respecting taxpayers. I wish the members opposite would do the same.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Centralized Ambulance Dispatch Wainwright Health Centre

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Too often the Wainwright hospital has been left without ambulance service because they are too busy transporting patients two and a half hours away to Edmonton. This requires a full five-hour trip. In Edmonton this situation is called a code red, which can become a critical situation when there is no help to send. Why does this minister insist on centralizing services to Edmonton and endangering the lives of rural Albertans?

Ms Hoffman: Again, the irresponsible and inflammatory language from the members opposite needs to be addressed, Mr. Speaker. Nothing could be further from the truth. Our government is committed to making life better for every Albertan by protecting and strengthening patient care. The members opposite are calling for deep ideological cuts. We're not doing that. We're standing with Albertans. There's a new ambulance bay under construction, an expanded ER project, in the very community as one of the examples. Construction for this important project will begin early in 2018. We are very proud to be investing in Wainwright instead of making cuts like the members opposite are calling for.

Mr. Taylor: They take one ambulance bay out to put another one in but one doctor for these rooms.

Given that rural Alberta at such great distance has not the affordability to provide the big-city services and given that AHS could reverse the flow of ambulance traffic to rural Alberta with specialized services, that would also attract doctors to rural Alberta, why does the minister insist on everything being done in Edmonton and Calgary?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very proud of the investment that we're making in communities, including Wainwright. That's by this NDP government. I'm very proud of the fact that we have the very best technology, and we're bringing it out to communities as well, whether that's through electronic health records, whether that's through a patient portal that enables them to interface with the data, or whether it's a stroke ambulance that actually brings the very best in stroke treatment to the patient rather than waiting for them to get to the health facility. These are the kinds of investments that this NDP government is making in health care in communities, including Wainwright. The members opposite continue to call for cuts. We're not going to do that.

Mr. Taylor: Given that rural Alberta does not have a major tier 1 or even a tier 2 facility in east central Alberta, causing patients and ambulances to travel hours on end, and given that opening operating rooms without staffing additional doctors doesn't improve the quality of health care, when Alberta Health Services builds a new Wainwright hospital, will they be building a higher tiered facility to attract doctors and nurses to east central?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. I am very proud of our government's investments, including the $5 million important for upgrades in the health centre in Wainwright. I am so proud of that. The members opposite have one plan – cut, cut, cut – and on this side of the House we're standing with Albertans. We're working to make their lives better. We're working with physicians to ensure that we have the right attraction and recruitment strategies, instead of laying off nurses and doctors throughout Alberta, which certainly would be the inevitable outcome of their deep $3.5 billion worth of cuts.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

2:30 School Transportation Fees

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since last week when I asked in this House about the changes in school transportation brought about by Bill 1, my constituency has been flooded with e-mails and letters confirming the same story. School boards are facing budget shortfalls because they can't collect fees for transportation, and those shortfalls are resulting in changes to bell times and more students being pushed onto public transportation and congregated stops, often at increased cost to parents, both financially and emotionally. To the Minister of Education: are you willing to admit that Bill 1 has led to increased costs for certain families, or are you going to hide behind the name of this bill and pretend that those families don't exist?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for the question. Certainly, Bill 1 is to reduce school fees. It will put money into the pockets of more than 600,000 families across the province. We know very well that we are covering those bus fees, so if a school board is not paying for that thing – in fact, the government is paying for it. We need to make sure that we are working with clean communication on this, but the bottom line is this: parents and families will pay fewer school fees in the fall as a result of Bill 1.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, given that the minister still won't meet with school board trustees and given that this sort of meeting should have occurred prior to the introduction of Bill 1 – this needs to happen now more than ever – and given that the minister has so far refused to admit the negative consequences of Bill 1, to the same minister: will you meet with the school board trustees who are having to face the tough questions over Bill 1, and will you actually listen to those trustees and make decisions based on the feedback that they give you?

The Speaker: The Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you very much for the question. Certainly, we have been working with school boards very closely. In fact, I will be meeting with every single school board this evening, so we will be talking about this very subject. You know, it's important to remember that Bill 1 is to reduce school fees. The other part of it is to regulate the out-of-control school fees that this previous government let go hog-wild over the last 10 years. That's part of what we're doing here now, and I'm very proud of how far we've made it so far.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Giving a speech at a dinner is not a meeting, and it's not consultation.

Given that alternative and second-language programs have been disproportionately affected by the changes in bell times and transportation and given that these changes have resulted in families looking at possibly a $1,000 cost increase and given that the increased costs and difficulty in co-ordinating pickups for different bell times are pushing families away from alternative and second-language programs, to the same minister: can these families expect any support from you in choosing the education that best suits their children, or have you given up on diversity in our education system?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you. You know, Mr. Speaker, that sort of inflammatory language and misleading paths of describing things only serve to make things worse. We're putting in billions of dollars to meet enrolment here for education in the province of Alberta, and we are making sure that the students get the education that they need. We've made significant investment in education. You know what? This is a regulation to regulate school fees. We're not going to let school fees go up in an Act to Reduce School Fees; we're going to make sure that they are affordable, and we will communicate that information very, very soon.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Advocate for Persons with Disabilities

Ms Renaud: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. People with disabilities and their allies have been asking for a disability advocate to assist them in navigating very complex systems like AISH and PDD. To the minister: how specifically will your ministry consult with that same community to ensure that the advocate's role accurately reflects the intent of the bill?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community and Social Services.

Mr. Sabir: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to begin by thanking the Member for St. Albert for her advocacy on this file and also thanking the Member for Calgary-North West for bringing forward this important piece of legislation. What we have learned over the period of the last two years is: Nothing about Us without Us. As we move forward to create this position, we will work with the community to make sure that the legislation is followed in letter and spirit.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms Renaud: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How will the Ministry of CSS, Community and Social Services, ensure that the advocate's role remains focused on the principles identified in the bill, which is focused on the needs of the community?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Sabir: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, Member, again. The bill brought forward by the Member for Calgary-North West is an extremely strong bill. She had consulted – I personally know that – extensively on this bill with the community. As we move forward with implementation of the bill, we will make sure that the advocate's role is focused on what the legislation says, and we will do so in consultation with the community.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Second supplementary.

Ms Renaud: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How will the ministry work with the community to identify desired outcomes in order to ensure meaningful oversight?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Sabir: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, Member, for the question. I think our record is pretty clear. We have worked with the community over the period of the last two years. In terms of the safety standard regulation brought by the previous government, we worked with the community and repealed it. Instead of the supports intensity scale brought by the previous government, we worked with the community, and we repealed it. Going forward, we'll work with the community on all issues that matter to them, and I think that when we work with them, we have a good relationship and their lives are better off.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

School Transportation Fees

(continued)

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A parent from Robert Warren school said that she felt like she'd been kicked in the gut when she heard what the Calgary board of education is forced to do to implement Bill 1. The CBE alternative program will not be provided with school buses because it is not the designated school for people in many communities around Calgary. This government promised to maintain educational choice for parents, and access is a critical part of that. What regulations will the minister consider around Bill 1 to ensure that parents can transport their children to their school of choice?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, we've been working very closely with the Calgary board of education to ensure that we have adequate transportation needs for all students in Calgary, and, you know, we are working to reduce school fees as well. But let's remember that it's not an act to eliminate school fees; it's an act to reduce school fees. We are going to work very hard to make sure that we have an equitable way by which to do so across the city and across the province, and certainly you'll see, when we are building and finishing the regulation, that we will moderate the fees to ensure that they are affordable.

Mrs. Aheer: Well, there's an extreme deficiency in clarity here. Given that we warned the government about the potential negative impacts of this bill and given that parents across the province are asking for clarity about how this bill is going to be implemented and given that the regulations are still being developed and that no one seems to be able to address the transportation issues and given that school authorities are doing the best they can to accommodate transportation needs – you said that you'd be meeting with the school boards. How many, Minister? How many school authorities has the minister met with to figure out this mess called Bill 1?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would hardly categorize a bill that would put money into the pockets of more than 600,000 families across the province to be anything but a success and a way by which we can make life better for Alberta families. Quite frankly, we have been working very closely with school boards. I have been meeting with them for many, many, many months. We will be with them again this evening. We're working out a way by which to make sure that school is affordable here in the province of Alberta, which would certainly never happen if you made billions of dollars of cuts, as the opposition would like.

Mrs. Aheer: You know what would never happen, Mr. Speaker? We would not be doubling school bus transportation fees.

Given that the Calgary board of education's alternative programs are based on student needs and offer critical choice for parents and given that they need at least 25 students to make these programs viable and given that the fallout from Bill 1 will force families to move from their designated schools, undermining their choice, Mr. Speaker, and given that school boards are not allowed to make changes in transportation fees without permission from the minister, when is the minister going to start supporting school boards to ensure that the unintended consequences of this bill do not remove authentic choice in education?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you very much for the question. It's very important that we recognize the hard work of school boards, of parents, of school councils, and so forth to ensure that we build a system that is not just educating kids but is strengthening it for the future as well. So that's exactly what we're doing. You know that the regulation is forthcoming, and you must ... [interjection]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mr. Eggen: You've got to make sure you listen to the answer because otherwise you don't get any of the information. I'm sorry. [interjection] No, keep going. Keep going. That's fine. Finished?

We're working to build a better education system for Alberta families, Mr. Speaker, and I welcome everybody to help in that enterprise.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

2:40 Opioid Use Prevention and Mitigation

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The opioid emergency response commission is an important weapon in the war against opioids in Alberta, and I have no doubt that the excellent panel members will work tirelessly in tackling the ongoing fentanyl crisis; however, Albertans may never be able to appreciate the contributions of this committee because the recommendations are to go directly to the minister and cabinet, where they can select suggestions with no public accountability. To the minister: for the sake of transparency and to save more lives faster, will you direct the commission to report on a quarterly basis to the Standing Committee on Families and Communities?

The Speaker: The Deputy Premier.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to address a question raised with regard to the devastating opioid crisis, which is impacting Albertan families, communities, and, of course, those who have been victims themselves. That's why we must move rapidly and why we announced the opioid emergency response commission, which includes, again, harm reduction program experts, parent advocates, law enforcement, and others. We're keen to implement their recommendations, we're very proud of the stakeholders that have been coming together to do this work, and we'll be proud to update the House in a timely fashion on the very important outcomes.

Mr. Rodney: Given that the Kainai, out of grave necessity, became a leader in Canada in addressing the fentanyl crisis at a local level and given that this model included distributing naloxone, proactive on-reserve enforcement to prevent trafficking, and establishing a successful opioid replacement to treat addiction and given that the fentanyl crisis is a life-and-death issue in a number of First Nations communities across Alberta, to the Minister of Indigenous Relations: what are you doing to monitor the crisis on other reserves, and what specific actions have you taken to implement the Kainai's successful framework on other reserves clear across Alberta?

The Speaker: The Deputy Premier.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. We're proud to be able to move forward in partnership with a number of indigenous leaders, including Dr. Esther Tailfeathers, who's actually part of the specific opioid crisis response commission. It's important that we work with leaders throughout our communities and acknowledge the very important role they play in standing up for their communities and their members as well. On Monday we opened a clinic in Grande Prairie, which, of course, has many First Nations in close proximity, and it has a capacity to treat up to 200 people. That was last Monday. We're very proud of that work.

Mr. Rodney: Given that in their efforts to address the fentanyl crisis within their community, the Kainai have also taken a very proactive and preventative approach to addiction and given that this includes recognizing the underlying issues which lead to addiction, including poverty, poor educational opportunities, unemployment, and a lack of housing supports, amongst others, to the Minister of Health this time: what specific initiatives have you undertaken with the Minister of Indigenous Relations to expand this approach to other reserves, and what are you doing to implement this approach in all affected communities right across Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much. As the Deputy Premier and as the minister responsible for this file it's my pleasure to address this answer, Mr. Speaker. On Monday, again, we addressed a number of those communities in Grande Prairie. We're also opening additional space in Wetaskiwin, Rocky Mountain House, Stettler, Ponoka, and surrounding areas, and I am very proud of the work we've done with Treaty 8. For example, we have working groups that sit down face to face and talk about the challenges they're facing with regard to a number of different ministries. I think this is bringing about great outcomes for a community. It will take time. We have a significant deficit that we're making up for, that was created over many years, but we certainly have the right people at the table to make significant improvements as we move forward, including the Minister of Indigenous Relations.

The Speaker: In 30 seconds we'll continue with Members' Statements.

Members' Statements

(continued)

Farmer's Day

Mr. Schneider: Mr. Speaker, for over 50 years the second Friday in June was a provincial holiday in Alberta. This day was recognized as Farmer's Day. Schools were closed, and communities big and small all over Alberta would celebrate the importance and impact that agriculture has had.

Although no longer formally recognized as a holiday, some rural boards do recognize the importance of the day and celebrate the spirit of the occasion. As such, the United Farmers of Alberta cooperative has chosen to continue to celebrate this day by acknowledging the hard work and contribution of Alberta's farmers. On June 9 UFA locations will thank their local farmers and communities by hosting several farm store events.

As we know, this past season has been difficult for some Alberta farmers. The weather can be both a blessing and a curse, and as we've seen, some Alberta farmers can't catch a break. Late-season rains last fall, an early winter, and a damp spring left almost a million acres unharvested in central Alberta. It's still a toss-up if these farmers will get a decent crop seeded this year.

While Mother Nature is as unpredictable as ever, what hasn't been is how this government has been treating rural landowners and farmers. The vague, ill-conceived patchwork of legislation that is Bill 6 has done nothing but create animosity and distrust as this government stumbled through botched consultation and ignored the very people it purported to be helping. To compound matters, a carbon tax was dropped upon farm and ranch operations, and the government seemed genuinely shocked that anyone would question its impact. The fact is that the brunt of calls I get are from agribusiness operations that cannot be competitive on the world stage because of this punitive tax.

Just as a reminder, earlier this month this government voted against private member's Bill 204, which proposed to give property rights back to landowners and end the squatters' rights issue. Maybe on the 9th of June government members should visit a UFA farm outlet and actually listen to the people who are being harmed by their policies.

Rural communities and those of us involved in agriculture understand its importance to Alberta. My sincerest wishes for a happy Farmer's Day for all.

Government Policies

Mr. Rodney: It's time to review the spring 2017 legislative session, and I'm not even going to start with the NDP's record-setting deficit, debt, and downgrades. The government opened with Bill 1, which will increase transportation and other costs by over $1,000 per student for many families in my riding, the opposite of making lives better for Albertans.

Next, while Ontario took two years to review their labour legislation, the Alberta NDP spent a mere month on a 252-page document to learn that business and employer groups are gravely concerned that they are not being heard. It sounds like the NDP are on the backs of Albertans. The NDP claimed that they needed to get it done right now, yet they had two years and two ministers to get this process rolling but chose not to. Apparently, stories about Star Trek, pink eye, the WWE, and expanding a window frame are more important to the NDP.

The NDP also had two ministers in two years to introduce a viable bill which could have ensured real change to the child intervention system, but Paula Simons' scathing assessment of Bill 18 demonstrates just how much is missing from this legislation.

Then the NDP missed yet another opportunity to declare Serenity's law. Her family even came to the capital to encourage the government to take action and call a public inquiry. Our caucus asked questions on their behalf yet again, and still the NDP refused to budge.

And there's more. Hundreds of Albertans have died as a result of the fentanyl crisis, yet despite constant calls from this side, the NDP refused to ever call a public health emergency.

Finally, the NDP have been telling Albertans that the burden and harm caused by the carbon tax would all be worth it in the end because it would give Alberta the social licence required to build pipelines to tidewater, except that the NDP's comrades from the other side of the mountains unequivocally reject the notion of social licence.

The NDP try to talk a good game, but Albertans can't wait for 2019. There's so much more, but I've only got two minutes. We can only revive the Alberta advantage for future generations once we unite Albertans once again.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Glenbrook Community in Calgary

Mr. Malkinson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pleasure that I rise today to speak about a community in my riding of Calgary-Currie that not only is doing fantastic work but also inspiring other communities across Calgary. I'm speaking, of course, of the Glenbrook Community Association and specifically to the work they've done to upgrade their community spaces.

Glenbrook has been a vibrant and growing community since the 1950s. The community association board is made up of dedicated, long-time residents whose own kids have grown up and who recognize that young families are now moving into the community. They wanted to be ahead of the curve, Mr. Speaker, by developing their community space into a lively recreational hub.

Murray Ost, a city of Calgary firefighter, has been president of the Glenbrook Community Association for over 20 years. He is the sort of person who gives out his personal cellphone number to all residents who live in the community so that they can call him first if there's a problem. He is just one example of the many great volunteers who make Glenbrook a fantastic community.

2:50

Just last spring Glenbrook received a CFEP grant of $109,000. They used it to renovate their outdoor multisportsplex rink and to create the only rink in Calgary to have a summer surface that gets covered with ice in the winter. Their new rink is an inspiration to other community associations across the city.

On Canada Day the community plans to have a grand opening barbecue. They're going to have plenty of things for everybody to participate in – paddle sports, basketball, ball hockey, and more – and a number of sports organizations are going to be there holding their camps as well. You really have to come see it for yourself, Mr. Speaker.

The Glenbrook Community Association is truly thankful for grants like CFEP from the Ministry of Culture and Tourism. I am proud of the Glenbrook Community Association for their spirit of helping and for being a leader in the city.

I am also honoured to be hosting my Stampede breakfast at the Glenbrook Community Association this year. I look forward to running my wiener dog races on that new rink, and I look forward to the entire community coming out. I invite all members of the Legislature to see this wonderful event as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Camrose and District Support Services

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 2017 the Camrose and District Support Services will have provided wanted and needed social programs for 50 years. I congratulate them. Also, congratulations to Margaret Holliston, the current executive director, and all her staff. They have worked hard to achieve the goals of family and community support services and enhance individual, family, and community assets by enhancing the strengths, skills, and abilities of clients to be more resilient and better able to deal with the challenges of life; building individual and environmental safeguards that enhance the ability to deal with stressful life events, risks, and hazards; and by addressing protective and risk factors that affect clients.

The Camrose and District Support Services and I would like to thank this government for its continued support. We appreciate this government's understanding that programs to assist vulnerable Albertans should not be lost in attempts to raise a credit rating while sacrificing human value and dignity.

CDSS includes the collaboration of eight municipal partners, both urban and rural. CDSS often launches projects and services with seed money and a lot of in-kind organizational support. Successful projects include Camrose Children's Centre, Open Door, which is a youth shelter doing youth outreach, and Service Options for Seniors, to name only a few. CDSS is particularly proud of the growth of Camrose Pride, which promotes inclusion, respect, and human rights. CDSS has annually updated their community help book with its vast information and referral services, which has been extremely valuable to my constituency staff in aiding the many constituents who seek help through our office.

Our government's continued funding of the Camrose and District Support Services is just one more example of how we are supporting organizations which, in turn, make life better for individuals, families, and Alberta communities.

Thank you.

29th Legislature Spring Sitting and Summer Break

Mr. Taylor: As we go into the summer recess, I'd like to take time to salute the hard-working Albertans that depend on us as legislators to debate bills and bring in laws that help them. Unfortunately, the NDP have used their majority to pass bills that many Albertans don't agree with such as the carbon tax and the labour bill. Both will have a lasting impact on this province. In particular, though, I'd like to acknowledge the farmers and the oil field workers. These men and women have been hit hard by the recession and oil prices and poor conditions in the fields. They are the backbone of our economy and make up a large part of my riding of Battle River-Wainwright.

Over the coming summer months it will be my honour to meet with them both in their homes and at events like the Wainwright Stampede, to consult with them, and to discuss how we can make their lives better. Discussions and debates will continue throughout the summer around the legalization of marijuana, eliminating Alberta daylight saving time, and the protection of Alberta's youth, especially under the watch and care of the government.

Possible conservative political restructuring in Alberta this summer will indeed lead us to interesting times. The Wildrose and the PC Party will, through their membership, see if we can set aside our differences and work together in unity so that all Alberta can reap the benefits. Our Wildrose grassroots will be making decisions this summer on whether or not we unite. Albertans will have the final say on July 22.

The message that I'm getting from Albertans is that we cannot afford not to. Albertans will not be able to afford a higher budget that sinks us deeper and deeper into debt, an anticipated $94 billion in debt by the next election. That's 94 billion reasons why we need a strong and united conservative voice to end the financial disaster. So please come out, sign up, and vote to make a difference.

Thank you.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud.

Dr. Turner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the requisite five copies of a new report from the Public Health Law Center in St. Paul, Minnesota, titled Leading from up North: How Canada Is Solving the Menthol Tobacco Problem. This report documents Canada's and Alberta's global leadership in banning flavoured tobacco products and profiles the efforts of several provinces which have approved and implemented legislation to remove flavours from tobacco products, including Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of Theresa Ng and with respect to the inappropriate content available for K to 12 kids in schools are 2,700 names on a petition from concerned parents. I have the five requisite copies of that. I would also like to table received correspondence on this subject as well, please, with the five copies.

Cortes-Vargas: I'd just like to briefly stand and table a document from an incredible constituent who is actually in the gallery today. He has been an oil and gas worker for many years. He's been working as a trade worker, I think. It's in response to some of the comments that have been made by the opposition about union thugs, and it talks about the great contribution that the unions played during the Fort McMurray wildfire, Mr. Speaker. I have the requisite number of copies.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the Assembly that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Feehan, Minister of Indigenous Relations, responses to questions raised by Mr. Rodney, the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, at the April 13, 2017, Ministry of Indigenous Relations 2016-17 main estimates debate.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I believe we have a point of order that was raised.

The Deputy Government House Leader.

Point of Order Insulting Language

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It sickens me to have to rise on a point of order today. I make reference to Standing Order 23:

- (h) makes allegations against another Member;
- (i) imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member;
- (j) uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.

Mr. Speaker, I have two examples that happened around the same time. At approximately 2:07 today, during the Minister of Justice's response to questions from the Member for Calgary-Hays, the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo said, directed at the Minister of Justice: is it because you're a racist? Around the same time the Member for Drumheller-Stettler, referring to the Minister of Justice, said: you're only a dime-store lawyer.

I want to start off by saying that that kind of language is offensive. It's offensive not only to members of this House; it's offensive to Albertans. In fact, I think we are better than that and need to hold ourselves to a higher account, Mr. Speaker. First of all, the term "racist" is unparliamentary. I can give you a number of examples. I would argue that it is very unbecoming of a member of this House to use that type of language. I want to point out that just because a microphone is not on, it doesn't mean that a member can say anything, you know, or can utter remarks like that, to basically make accusations against another member.

Frankly, the question exchange between the Member for Calgary-Hays and the Minister of Justice is about a very, very serious matter that has been revealed to us and to Albertans. To have an accusation made against the Minister of Justice, a very serious accusation, on a day such as today makes it even harder to stomach, Mr. Speaker.

3:00

Again, comments like one member accusing another of being a racist undermine the dignity and respect of this House. It is beneath this Assembly, Mr. Speaker. I would just like to quote from Hansard on April 30, 2003. Speaker Kowalski in a ruling said:

There are few allegations that could be made against a member that could be more damaging than that he or she was promoting or condoning discrimination. As the chair has said over and over again, freedom of speech carries with it great responsibility. The events on Monday bring no honour to this Assembly, which is extremely regrettable not just for the chair but for each and every member of the Assembly.

At that point the former Speaker went on to demand an apology from the member for uttering such comments.

Again, Mr. Speaker, it's quite disappointing, not only for this side of the House, but again, I mean, we have members of the public that are in our galleries, and we have folks at home that watch. We should hold ourselves to the highest standards because of the public office that we hold. I was extremely disappointed to hear both of those comments made, and I would ask that the member withdraw and apologize not only to the Minister of Justice but to this House and to all Albertans.

The Speaker: The Opposition House Leader.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me begin by saying that these are serious allegations that are being made by my colleague the Deputy Government House Leader. At that time it was a very serious question that the Member for Calgary-Hays was raising about whether or not the Department of Justice was treating certain groups or individuals differently and if there was a bias directed towards certain groups or individuals.

While I don't have the benefit of the Blues and I can say with all certainty that I am not a hundred per cent sure of what the member sitting behind me said, he most certainly did not make the allegation that the minister is a racist. Now, he may have asked – in fact, I literally did not hear the words that he did not say. However, I did ask him if he had said those things, and he spoke about if the department was functioning that way, which was the very heart of the question that was being asked. At no point in time did the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo make an allegation that the minister was prejudiced.

I might go as far as to say that at that very moment the minister was giving a very thoughtful response about how this very issue, that the department is functioning with a bias, keeps her up at night. I know that my colleague from Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo shares those same concerns and challenges and frustrations about how certain groups of people are affected by the way that the department treats them. I would find it highly unlikely that he, in fact, uttered the words “It's because you're a racist,” as in the allegations that are made. Now, I will agree that he was frustrated at the time that the question was asked because of the absolutely unbelievable conditions to which Miss Cardinal had been treated by the Department of Justice, a question specifically about whether or not she would have been treated that way if she was from a different ethnic group.

While no one in this House has the benefit of knowing exactly what the member said, to make the allegation that he said that about the minister without being a hundred per cent certain is also concerning because this is an issue that one ought not tread lightly into. I'm not suggesting that the minister isn't, but I don't believe that the member made that sort of allegation as it would not be consistent with his character, particularly around this particular issue.

While I think that you may find it very difficult to rule because it's unlikely, if I didn't hear, that you heard, I do take this very seriously. I know that the member does as well, so I will leave it in your capable hands and at your discretion. Now, if – if – the House believes that that is what took place, I'm certain he would be happy to withdraw and apologize, and I would do that on his behalf, but I am also convinced that that was not what happened today because that would have been highly and wildly inappropriate.

The Speaker: Hon. Opposition House Leader, I believe there was a second allegation, about a second comment. Could you speak to that matter?

Mr. Cooper: I can speak to that very briefly, Mr. Speaker. I also did not hear what may or may not have been said in the heckling, the back and forth. Certainly, one of these allegations, if that took place, is well beyond the scope of what is reasonable to say inside the Chamber. The other, I think you'll find, is the ebb and flow of this place.

The Speaker: The Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be brief. One of the benefits of sitting in this part of the House is that I don't tend to hear all of the things that go back and forth. That is actually quite a benefit, I have to say, because a lot of what goes back and forth: “unhelpful” would be, probably, a gentle term.

I think that when we're dealing with issues this serious and emotions are running high, it's incumbent on all members to check ourselves and really ask what purpose it serves. Alleged comments like this are deeply troubling, and it's a pattern. It's a trend that, I think, unfortunately is perhaps not unique to our Assembly, but I think that we in this House, all of us – and I'll include myself in this – can be better. I don't think that it serves democracy. It does not, I think, live up to Albertans' expectations of how we all ought to behave. These sorts of comments, whether you find they did in fact occur or not, are truly unhelpful.

So I think this, as we wrap up session or get close to it, anyway, perhaps serves as an opportunity for us, as we go back to our constituencies and back to our families, to reflect on how we behave in this Assembly, and I would hope that we can all be better, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I too did not hear the two comments that are alleged, nor as I look at the Blues, do I see an account of the statements being made.

It seems to me, though, hon. members, that this is yet another opportunity for this House. Collectively, as we move into this summer break, each of you needs to ask yourselves, when you're raising points in heated discussions or not heated discussions, whether you're actually contributing to the good and healthy democratic debate that takes place in this House. Sometimes it appears to me that comments are made as to how close one can get before being called on a point of order by the Speaker or being called by another member. Let this serve as an example and another opportunity, that when we all return to this place, we will be more cognizant of the comments that we make and of whether they, in fact, contribute to the success of this institution.

I'm going to say, hon. member, that I see no point of order at this time. I just would leave it as a reminder. Unless I hear and see the point, I cannot make a ruling, as per page 618 of House of Commons Procedure and Practice.

The Opposition House Leader seems to want to say something else. I've made a decision. I'm not sure how he will contribute to this matter.

3:10

Mr. Cooper: Not speaking to the point of order, sir, just rising to request unanimous consent to do away with Standing Order 8(1), that allows private members' business on Monday afternoons, that we would move immediately to Government Bills and Orders.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Good afternoon, everyone. I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered in respect of this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-South East.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, please wait till I see the original, and then we can continue.

Hon. member, your amendment will be referred to as A14. Please go ahead.

Mr. Fraser: Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 118(1), in the proposed section 53, as follows: (a) by adding the following after subsection (7):

(7.1) A revocation vote is not required if, on the basis of the evidence submitted in support of the application and the Board's investigation in respect of that evidence, the Board is satisfied that at the time of the application for revocation the applicants had the support, in the form set out in section 51(2), of more than 65% of the employees in the bargaining unit.

(7.2) At any time after the Board begins assessing an application referred to in subsection (7.1), the applicants may elect to waive the right to revocation under subsection (7.1) and to proceed with the revocation based on the results of a revocation vote.

(7.3) If the Board determines under subsection (7.1) that the applicants lack the necessary 65% support of the employees in the bargaining unit, but have the 40% support required by subsection (5), or if there is a waiver under subsection (7.2), the Board shall within 3 working days of that determination or waiver, give notice of a revocation vote.

And (b) in subsection (8) by adding "or (7.3)," after "vote referred to in subsection (6)".

Thank you, Madam Chair. That was definitely a mouthful.

When I speak to this, Madam Chair, I want to put some context around it. You know, certainly, my time in the union – I have to get this set out in the beginning, when I started my career in Calgary paramedics a number of years ago. I have to give credit to my friends in the union at the time that went before me, that made that job incredibly enticing. They did such tremendous work not only to promote labour issues but the profession. In fact, what I can say is that both in Calgary and Edmonton under those respective CUPE bargaining units they did amazing work. I will always lift up the amazing work that they have done, so this is not in any way a reflection that this is anti-union. In fact, this is actually an opportunity to speak about the bill and the title of the bill, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

Madam Chair, when we talk about, you know, certifying a union, the government has spoken about that 65 per cent threshold, where everybody signs a card and then, essentially, it becomes automatic and that for anything below that, between 40 per cent and 65 per cent, it will go to a vote. Well, we all know, at the end of the day, that it is extremely important that we as Albertans get our fair chance to speak about the things we're passionate about and, more importantly, to have the opportunity, the ability to vote. So when we talk about being fair in this legislation, I guess you could say that what is good for the goose is good for the gander. What this does is that it allows employers and it allows those folks – and I'm not going to mention any particular union, but we know there are times when the union doesn't uphold its end of the deal with its members, and I've heard that.

What we want to do is make sure that there is an equal opportunity. Madam Chair, you know, in my time in the union, in fact, I've been on the steps with some of the people in this gallery against the government that I came to serve because I felt that at that time they weren't listening. But it was our opportunity to exercise that. When we talk about this, at the end of the day, to certify, you need that 65 per cent threshold. To decertify or for a revocation vote, you need that 65 per cent. It's fair right across the board. It creates equality, and I can't imagine that the government and their members and private members would want to take that opportunity away from Albertans. To me, it's a friendly amendment.

Madam Chair, the other part of this that I'd like to speak about is that we as a caucus and I myself, I can tell you, given the opportunity, would support the workplace safety changes to better things for Albertans. I think you've heard that from almost all opposition members: given the opportunity to do that. But when I talk about this specific piece and why I put this amendment forward, I think there is a real opportunity here for us to take a look at the Labour Relations Code and speak about a number of things that I know folks inside the labour movement aren't happy with, that I know folks even perhaps in government may not be fully supportive of. It is an opportunity to open up that entire act and have a fulsome debate about what it means for Albertans, what it means for employers, what it means for the members of unions, and I'm speaking from experience on that.

I think there are opportunities, again, to create that part of this legislation, to have it be more fair, more transparent. In fact, we all know that when we call it evergreening legislation, it is bringing it up to date, to a current standard, not just a portion of it. I would recommend to the government my thought process. In fact, in speaking to the Minister of Labour and, in fact, speaking to anybody in cabinet, it is important that we have the ability to be heard. I hope that there's somebody on the government side that might be able to speak to this, because I think it's important. It talks about equality, it talks about fairness across the board, and it talks about our ability to actually get things done properly, in a more fulsome debate, by separating those two pieces.

I won't speak much longer on this. Again, I think this is fair right across the board for everybody.

Thank you, Madam Chair, for the opportunity.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A14? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Shepherd: Well, thank you, Madam Chair, and thank you to the member for bringing forward this amendment. I certainly appreciate the thought and consideration that he's put into this, and I'm certainly aware that this member has indeed worked in a union environment, indeed has been part of the folks that have been in leadership in that, and he's certainly been vocal about looking out for those that he worked with and his brothers and sisters in that employment. So we appreciate the thought that he's put into this amendment and the consideration in general that he's put into these aspects of the bill.

3:20

Now, certainly, Madam Chair, the intent of this bill is to ensure that Albertans have a fair and family-friendly workplace, that laws that we put in place in our labour codes, in our labour acts are supporting a strong economy and ensuring that people are able to look after themselves and their families.

Certainly, Madam Chair, I am well aware, having myself worked in a number of union environments, of the importance of ensuring that the rules we have in place that govern the means by which unions are put in place or indeed by which unions are revoked are fair and reasonable. Indeed, a union can be a very powerful force for good for employees. I know that, for myself, in the past at some of the places I've worked, particularly when I worked for the Canada Revenue Agency and had the opportunity to be represented by PSAC there in the call centre that I worked at, I was greatly appreciative of the work that they had done there, of the ability that I had there to earn a very good wage for the work that I was doing and of having the opportunity to benefit from the work that they were doing there.

At the same time, Madam Chair, I recognize that a union, in the work that it does, needs to be held accountable. There may be times when members find that the union that they have representing them has ceased to represent them to the extent that they feel is important or adequate. We need to have fair means in place which allow that union to be revoked so that members have the opportunity to seek another union to bring into that place or to consider going without representation, because indeed that also is about having a fair and family-friendly workplace.

Those are just my general thoughts. I'm interested in hearing more on this. I know, certainly, I have some colleagues who have even deeper experience in the labour movement, and I look forward to perhaps some of the insight they can bring to this particular amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A14? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. A pleasure to rise again this week in Committee of the Whole and be able to speak about Bill 17 and this amendment that was just brought forward by the hon. member. I do thank him for bringing it forward, and I understand the intentions of what it is he is trying to accomplish.

Of course, what we have right now in our system is, you know, the protected vote when employees are looking to form a union. What we've suggested is that now, when you're able to sign cards at 65 per cent and once that has been verified through application and petition to the labour board, they will automatically certify. One of the things that we've been trying to do now, of course, is to line up right across the board with other jurisdictions that are doing the same thing. Currently, right now, there are no other jurisdictions that have this type of language within their legislation.

I think that at this time, again, I'll thank the member for bringing the amendment forward, but I'm not willing to support it at this time, making sure that we're staying standard with the rest of the jurisdictions across the country, and I'll ask other members to not support it at this time.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A14? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, and I'd like to thank the hon. member for introducing this amendment. It appears to be an amendment that seems very in line with what this government is proposing with regard to fair treatment moving forward.

From what I've heard from the other side, on the basis to not go in the direction where a revocation vote can be triggered by 65 per cent of the employees in the bargaining unit, they're utilizing the argument that it's not used in any other jurisdiction. If I'm wrong in the way I interpreted what was presented here, then I stand to be corrected, but I do believe that this would completely fall in line with the guidelines that are being proposed by this government, that if it's good for one, it's good for the other.

I do believe that I would support this amendment, and I look forward to all other members supporting a very reasonable amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A14? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gottfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to rise in support of the hon. Member for Calgary-South East's amendment. We speak a lot about fairness and transparency, and I think that all members of this House would say that the will of the employee should be the strongest voice in any decisions around unionization or revocation of that unionization. We all want what's best for the employees. We want to ensure that their decisions are made in a transparent manner, without undue influence from either employers or unions.

This amendment allows that process to take place in a fair manner, the same fair manner in terms of – and I'm not a big fan of the straight card check on the way in, but if that's going to be the rule, then we need to make sure that those same principles are employed on the way out of a union. I think that that's only fair to the employees, that we're trying to protect here with legislation. I think it's an opportunity for this House to actually do what's right on this occasion, to again look at fair, equitable, transparent behaviour. You can't speak out of this side of your mouth about fairness and transparency and equitable behaviour and the will of the employees and not have it spoken out of the other side. I think there's an opportunity here for this House to do the right thing, to pass this amendment, and to ensure that this legislation, with all of its flaws, at least has some balance in some of these opportunities for some amendment on some of the minutiae of the bill.

I'd like to encourage everybody in this House to support this amendment. It's well thought out. I think that it's very clear what the intentions are here and that it's something where, if somebody looks, certainly, into their own principles on this, they'll understand that this is a balanced and fair approach to the legislation.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Klein.

Mr. Coolahan: Thank you, Madam Chair, and thank you to the member for the proposed amendment. Now, this is not apples and apples. When you're signing up, why the 65 per cent for card check is a good thing is simply this. You have to think about who is actually in charge of making the decisions about who is employed and who isn't. Now, can you imagine the potential for intimidation in going around and asking people: do you want to get out of the union? It's absurd. This is not a fair comparison. Just think. I just want the members opposite to think about what that would look like in their own situation at any workplace. A union representative does not make the decision on who is employed there and who is not; management does.

That's all I have to say, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Mr. Fraser: Madam Chair, I respect the comments, and I can totally understand that, but I think the problem is that we're making the assumption that every employer is nefarious.

Mr. Coolahan: Absolutely not.

Mr. Fraser: Well, that's the assumption when we say that we can't balance it by staying the other way.

Now, certainly, depending on how a labour organization is organized, it can be done with force, it can be done with care, it can be done with good intent, or it can be done with bad intent. I think we all recognize that. And the same for the employer. That's why we have the Labour Relations Board, Madam Chair. The Labour Relations Board is there to hammer all these things out and penalize those people who don't follow the law. All this does is enshrine this in law, that whatever the process is to organize a union, to move out of a union the same way would be done in a fair way.

I will tell you that I will be the first one to champion any organization and any employee who's bullied by their employer. I guarantee you that. But what I'm saying is that every time we take a look and it tips the scales one way or the other – all I'm saying is about trying to balance the scales here. This is a fair amendment to take a look at that.

This is why, again, I go back to the idea of why these two pieces of the legislation need to be separated. The member brings up a fair point. The labour board itself and the labour code can be bolstered by this. It can be brought out in committee so that everybody has a fair understanding of how it works, including employers. Not every employer is afraid of being unionized, and not everybody who works for an employer wants to be unionized. When we talk about it just being fair and being equal across the board, that's what this amendment provides. I think we should be careful about making assumptions one way or the other. I just think it's important. We could balance the scales with this.

Again, I would support it if the government would separate these pieces of legislation so that we can actually get down to the nuts and bolts of what's going on with the Labour Relations Code versus what's happening to employment standards.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

3:30

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A14?

Mr. Nielsen: Just a couple of things to clarify. You know, I was speaking to this last week during the discussion about separating out the language. Again, drawing on my experience from my time in the labour movement, I'm not aware of any contract anywhere between any union and any employee where they separate out their language – okay? – so that you might have a book that holds compassionate care language over here, and over here you'd have the book that deals with every other language. It's all in one, one contract, and all the language is called labour language. So when we talk about splitting it up, we're talking about trying to tear apart labour language and making two different discussions here. I just thought I'd remind the House of that.

With regard to the amendment, Madam Chair, right now the system that is working here in Alberta and the process around decertification really has never had any problems. We've been looking at trying to standardize our labour language with what other employees across the rest of the country already enjoy, and they haven't attempted to change this in any way.

Again I'll ask members to not support this amendment at this time, and I'll probably have more to say about some of the other comments later.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to A14? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. Not to belabour the point, but it's interesting that the argument used to speak against this very reasonable amendment is that the system has not had any problems. Now we're moving into a system that's being introduced by this government into the certification of unions, which, I would argue, has not had any problems previously. So if we're going to move to a system of this type of democracy, so-called democracy – I would suggest that it's not necessarily what I would believe to be fully democratic – and opening the door to abuse from employers or employees or from unions, then we have to do it on equal scales, whether we're certifying a new union or whether we're revoking that.

I do believe that this is a critical understanding, that if it's good going in, it should be good going out so that we are comparing apples to apples. On the argument that it wasn't broken and it didn't have any problems, I would suggest that we also didn't have any problems previously with the secret ballot process of certifying a union to begin with. So I don't understand why it can be used to argue one way and then to argue the other way when we're talking about a very reasonable amendment here.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

Mr. Gotfried: Madam Chair, you know, this is, I think, a very fair amendment, but in some respects it doesn't go far enough. Maybe we should be asking for unions to have to recertify every year or two years or three years, which would mean that they would have to hit that 65 per cent threshold once again. All we're asking for is that to reverse that decision, to actually be able to back out of it, the onus is then back on the employees to prove that they want to decertify as a union. We're not asking for something that is actually skewed in favour of decertifying a union. We're actually asking for the same fairness to decertify as to certify in the first place, which, quite frankly, I don't think is fair. I think that the card check system is flawed. I think that it should be held to a secret vote. I mean, there's huge precedent and huge outcry that we're hearing not just from employers but employees around the fact that they want a secret ballot, that a secret ballot is the only way to ensure absolute transparency for themselves from fear of any kind of reprisal or undue influence or retribution or anything of that sort from a decision that they can make with their own clear conscience with the best interests of themselves and their families and their future at stake. This, I think, is a very watered-down way. Again, with all respect to the Member for Calgary-South East, he's actually being extremely fair and equitable and transparent in proposing this amendment, which is actually just asking for the same treatment as the government is asking for in this bill to certify.

Really, I think we should say that maybe you have to hit that 65 per cent mark again and again and again to prove that you actually hold that same power among your employees, that same decision-making power, that they continue to want that certification of that union. We're not asking for that at this juncture here today. What we're saying is that there needs to be balance on the fairness of certification or decertification of a union. I think that that's a simple principle to grasp, that we're asking for that.

Again, I don't think it goes far enough. I think that the card check system is flawed, and I think, talking about apples, that there are bad apples out there. There could be bad apples on the employer side and bad apples on the union side. I think that every employee deserves the opportunity to make that decision through their own conscience alone without having to open their kimono on that and say: "You know what? Here, I'm going to tell everybody what I'm going to do so that you can possibly harass me, intimidate me, or continually advocate or use peer pressure on me to make that decision." We're only asking here for this amendment, to be flawed in its own right, to allow people to say: we want out.

For that reason, if this is the farthest we can go – and I don't believe, again, that it's far enough – it's better than what we are sitting with today in this legislation. We should be supporting this. All members of this House should be supporting this amendment because it is fair and equitable and transparent to both sides, using the same rules, which, again, I do not believe are fair, but it's better than what we have today.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A14? The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Madam Chair. I just wanted to say a few things about this. First of all, I'll start by saying that I'm incredibly proud that we have a section in the amendments titled Inquiry into Certification Application because we have one of the most outdated and regressive labour codes in the country, which is why we have the lowest number of Albertans that belong to a union.

I just wanted to say that I want to thank the groups that have come and had input into it to make sure that it was coming closer into line with the rest of the country. I know that employers have said that they want time to be able to synthesize a lot of this into their practices at work with employment. I wanted to speak just a little bit to our members in the gallery that are here to join us. I'm not going to list off their names because I'll forget most of them, but I'm thankful to know their faces and count them as friends.

I know that they are disparagingly referred to as union thugs and union bosses, but I want to say that people like Scott Crichton, who was able to mobilize . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, if you could just speak through me, through the chair, please, and not to the gallery, I would appreciate it.

Mrs. Littlewood: I'm speaking about the gallery, not speaking to the gallery.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, they've already been introduced, and you can't speak to the gallery. You have to speak through me, please.

Mrs. Littlewood: Madam Chair, it is my pleasure to know that there are members in the gallery that I count as friends that have been incredibly helpful with putting together this legislation and, I should say, people from groups like IBEW, that were able to mobilize 150 letters to come from Mundare and Andrew and St. Michael and Tofield and Lamont and Fort Saskatchewan and Strathcona county to say that they want to see change that makes their lives better, their work lives better, that they know that the people that fight on their behalf do so with research, they do so with commitment, and they do so with incredible heart.

I want to just make it very clear that I support our legislation in Alberta, with the labour code coming into the 21st century, and that is why I'm going to vote down this amendment.

3:40

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster first, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Dr. Starke: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to speak to the amendment proposed by my colleague the Member for Calgary-South East. It is clear to me and it should come as no surprise to any members here – I spoke to this when I spoke to this bill on second reading – that there are certain biases within the Assembly. I don't think it should come as any surprise to anyone that most of the members of the government caucus have a pro-union bias. That's not a surprise. In fact, most of them are quite readily willing to accept and wear that as a badge of honour, and they're allowed to do that. That's fine.

It could also be said that many members on this side of the House have – I'm not sure what you'd call it. I wouldn't call it an anti-union bias. As I said, I was once a member of a labour union myself, and I recognize the role that organized labour has within society. It is important that there be a balance between organized labour and management in all situations.

But here's the problem. It's a little bit like pulling for two different sports teams. Because we're in Alberta, I'll use Edmonton and Calgary as an example. The members over on the government side, a lot of them, may well be fans of the Edmonton sports teams, while the folks on this side may well be fans of the Calgary sports teams. Now, this is hypothetical, of course, because I would never cheer for Calgary sports teams. Let's just say for the purposes of this particular illustration, Madam Chair, that that's the situation, that we have one side that is pulling for Edmonton and one side that's pulling for Calgary. But here's the thing. We're setting the rules in this match. We're setting up how the rules will govern how this interaction is to play out.

What we have here is a situation where the folks that are pulling for one team are in the majority, and the folks that are pulling for the other team are in a minority. The folks that are pulling for the one team and that are in the majority are specifically setting the rules in favour of the team that they're pulling for. That's exactly what is going on here with this particular section of Bill 17, and my hon. colleague is simply trying to set the rules evenly.

You know, like I say, it's a little bit like a situation whereby if the route into a certain situation is relatively simple whereas the route out is relatively complex, it stands to reason that over time more and more situations will happen where organizations move into that situation but then have a hard time moving out simply because the rules to move back out again are not the same.

That's the situation that we find ourselves in here. We find ourselves in a situation where the government side, which is specifically more pro-union, is setting up the rules in such a way that certification of unions is done under one set of rules, is done by one procedure. But the exact mirror image of that, to allow for a group of employees, should they desire, to revoke their certification: all of a sudden those rules are more difficult. All of a sudden those rules are more complex. Very clearly, even if you don't have, you know, a specific bias one way or the other, if you look objectively at that situation, that is very clearly an unfair and unbalanced set of rules.

Now, our role here as legislators is to set our biases aside and to actually consider what makes for the best legislation. The best legislation is legislation that is balanced. It is legislation that would allow for, if you will, a two-way street; in other words, a situation where for those who wish to become certified, if there's a certain set of rules – and it's been mentioned before, and I'm not enamoured with the rules that are being proposed in Bill 17, but if those are the rules that are going to be set up for certification of labour unions, then in order to be fair and in order to be balanced, it would seem to me that revocation of certification should follow the exact same rules. That is what this amendment proposes. That's what my friend the hon. Member for Calgary-South East has proposed.

An Hon. Member: For 40 years you've been talking about it.

Dr. Starke: You can talk all you like about past history and all that other stuff. We are in the here and now. We are setting rules for going forward. You don't start talking about, you know: we're going to even the playing field by flipping the scale over to the other side. That's not our role here. Our role here is to provide even and balanced legislation.

What we have here again, Madam Chair, like I say, is a team that has been on a 44-year losing streak over there. So now in order to try to get on their own little winning streak, they're going to try to set the rules in their favour so that they can go on a 44-year winning streak. That's not right. That's simply not right, and it's not what should be done by the legislators in this Chamber. Our job is to set good legislation, not prebiased legislation but good legislation. This member has proposed an amendment that would put that forward, that would correct a bias in this legislation as it exists currently.

Now, the members on the other side don't want to correct that bias. That's fine. That's fine, but you will have to answer to the people of Alberta when they look at the legislation and they say: "This legislation is biased in favour of labour unions. This is unfair legislation. This legislation has been poorly crafted." If you're comfortable with answering to Albertans and those charges on that legislation, then defeat this amendment.

Personally, being part of an Assembly wherein we should be passing legislation that is even and balanced and is fair to all parties, it seems to me very clear that the rules going in and the rules going out should basically be mirror images of each other. If they are not, then there's a basic unfairness. For that reason, I'm in favour and will vote in favour of my colleague's amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to A14? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Hey, I must admit that I was rather interested in some of the comments that were made across the way here a little bit. You know, last week I had encouraged members from the other side to maybe reach out to maybe even some of the fine members that we have sitting in our gallery here today to learn a little bit about how a union actually works, okay?

There were comments about how, well, every four years a union should try to see if they could get their certification back. Maybe if you were a little bit more familiar with the rules, you'd understand that the end of every contract, 90 days before, is when people have the time to go and decertify if they so choose, and it happens at the end of every single contract. Sometimes those contracts are one year long, two years long, three years long, four years long. Again I would certainly encourage the members across the way to maybe go seek some of the help of our fine folks in the gallery here.

You know, another bit of biased positioning here. I heard a lot of table-banging last week when there was talk about possibly removing the Rand formula – yeah, that's not tipping the scales in the other direction – talk about poorly crafted legislation, repealing the ability for employers to pay less than minimum wage to a person with disabilities. I didn't realize that removing that would be considered crafting poor legislation. [interjections]

Again, getting back to the amendment, Madam Chair – and I know folks across the way are chattering away, but we're going to keep plowing along here – this is about standardizing our language across the board where it's already been working in other jurisdictions in Canada. What they're suggesting in the amendment has not been suggested in other jurisdictions. I guess they don't feel that that has tipped it in one way or the other. Again, all the members of the House I would encourage to not support this.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Just a reminder. I know we just came out of question period, but if we could please try to refrain the rhetoric going back and forth across the floor and be respectful to the speakers, I would appreciate it.

Anybody else wishing to speak to amendment A14?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A14 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 3:50 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Barnes	Hanson	Stier
Cooper	Loewen	Swann
Drysdale	Orr	Taylor
Fraser	Rodney	van Dijken
Gotfried	Starke

Against the motion:

Babcock	Hinkley	Miller
Bilous	Horne	Miranda
Carlier	Jansen	Nielsen
Carson	Kazim	Payne
Ceci	Kleinstauber	Phillips
Connolly	Larivee	Piquette
Coolahan	Littlewood	Renaud
Cortes-Vargas	Luff	Rosendahl
Dach	Malkinson	Schreiner
Dang	Mason	Shepherd
Drever	McKitrick	Sigurdson
Feehan	McLean	Turner
Ganley	McPherson	Woollard
Gray

Totals:	For – 14	Against – 40
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A14 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill, Bill 17. Are there any amendments, questions, comments? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I have an amendment to submit.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. If you could please just wait until I have the original.

Your amendment will be referred to as A15. Please go ahead.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'm very pleased to stand and speak to Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, with an amendment I think that everyone here will find reasonable. It has to do with break times. I mean, to expect workers to work unlimited hours without a break – and I'm speaking here of paid farm workers – seems eminently unfair, non family friendly, and it flies in the face of all of the values that this government has said that they believe in. We're suggesting here that we amend section 4 in the proposed section 2.1(1) by striking out clause (a) and substituting

(a) section 16 of Part 2, Division 3, Hours of Work;

Madam Chair, under the workplace standards everywhere else in Alberta after five hours of work it's expected that a worker would get 30 minutes of rest, but unfortunately paid farm workers are exempt from any kind of provision for rest. I'm particularly concerned with young people, foreign workers, people who are vulnerable, people who may not want to ask for a rest because it's not written into their contract. I don't see how we could avoid at least putting in some concrete terms the recognition of the need for a rest break.

Under the current rest period for every other worker an employer must provide each employee who works five hours or more with at least 30 minutes of rest, whether paid or unpaid, unless there's an accident or different rest provisions are provided or it's not reasonable for the employee to take a rest period during that time. Well, that to me says that we have a double standard again.

4:10

I raised this issue about overtime pay, and now I'm raising the issue in relation to fair and safe work practices where people can have a break. We're putting this provision in not only for an unfair expectation of, especially, naive workers and foreign workers; we're also putting them at risk of injury if they push on and push on. In some farm operations it's true that you just have to work overtime. But if we're not putting into legislation some legislated protection for some kind of rest period, we are setting people up for injuries, accidents, and problems.

Further to that, I don't think I need to add that this is a government that wants to be fair. They want to be family friendly. There is just absolutely no reason why you wouldn't include in these important changes for employee standards and labour standards, some provision for rest. I rest my case, Madam Chair. I can't imagine any refutation of that.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A15? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the member bringing forward this amendment. Certainly, the spirit of the intention of this amendment is definitely a good one. One of the things that we heard within the working groups that have been working very, very diligently with our farm and ranch owners and the workers that they pointed out is that this type of amendment might kind of push things a little bit too far, that they're unable to adapt to this. You know, that was one of the recommendations that was brought forward to us. The government looked very, very seriously at this. You know, as the title says, the fair part – what we have so far is a very big gain. As the system begins to grow and we see where things are maybe not working as well, we can certainly start to adjust for those.

It's very, very reluctantly that I would not be able to support this amendment at this time. Again, I do want to thank the member for bringing this forward. I certainly understand the intentions of it. I would have to ask members of the House to not support it at this time.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak?

Dr. Swann: Well, that's very unfortunate, Madam Chair. It strikes me that this government has been cowed by industrial agriculture. They got such push-back on Bill 6 that they're now backing away from the most fundamental worker right of all, a chance to rest when folks are tired. On one hand, they seem to have said that it's time for a change in Alberta, but somehow it's a step too far to ensure that young people and new Canadians especially are treated fairly in the workplace. Folks could work 28 days straight under the current legislation with only one day off and no rest periods. They could work 18 hours and have no break under the current legislation.

It's really disappointing to me that they would take the big step, certainly, to bring in Bill 6 and ensure some kind of safety, some kind of standards, and then exempt farm workers just because of the aggressive ag coalition and their throwing their weight around in the rural areas and, presumably, intimidating this government in terms of its election and political future in the rural areas.

Again, I think that any reasonable person looking at it would say that rather than err on the side of putting no constraints on employers, especially industrial agriculture, we should at least put something in there that suggests that there is a recourse for an employee who feels vulnerable to losing their job and at the same time feels vulnerable if they carry on under the conditions that they're being asked to continue under. It flies in the face of what this government says is fair and family friendly and all because they're afraid of push-back from big ag, which has continued to dominate the scene since these working groups were established.

Again, it's not only disingenuous to say that we have reluctance to address these needs; some of the accidents, injuries, and even deaths will be on your watch if you are unwilling to even look at a modicum of required rest for, especially, young people. We're now allowing 14- to 16-year-olds to do certain duties on farms. Quite frankly, even an 18-year-old who is new to industrial agriculture will be very reluctant to push against the employer and say: "This is unreasonable, to expect me and others to work in hour 18 when I haven't had a break and when I feel like I'm numbed out. I can't even think straight, and I'm not going to expect anything from you." Ninety-five per cent of employers would never do this, obviously, but the reason we make legislation is to cover the 5 per cent of people that are not reasonable, that are not responsible, that are not thinking of their workers. They're thinking of themselves and their own bottom line.

So I encourage the government to rethink this. Even enshrining something for the protection, the rest protection of paid farm workers would send a message: "We recognize that people are human beings, and they have a right to a break, whether they are a paid farm worker or any other worker. We value your health. We value you as a person. We recognize that you have the rights of every other worker in this province to be safe and take the rest breaks as you need them." I would encourage the government to rethink this as it smacks of political opportunism, and I don't think it will escape most paid farm workers that this is not a fair or family-friendly decision.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A15? The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mrs. Littlewood: Sorry. I cede the floor to my colleague.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Sorry for that small confusion there.

You know, I guess I just wanted to point out for other folks here some of the folks that were part of the working group that brought forward these recommendations. We had members such as Blaine Staples, a Red Deer county producer, U-pick and agritourism operator; Stuart Theissen from Strathmore, a producer, a cow-calf and grain feedlot operator; Susan Schafers, a Stony Plain egg farmer; Laurie Fries, a Wainwright mixed livestock producer. The list is a lot longer as well. I certainly don't want to belabour the point here, but this was just some of the folks that were part of that working group other than sort of the big agribusiness as well.

They were also onboard with trying to – you know, with the new rules coming in, we didn't want to make things too hard going forward and wanted to ensure that our farm and ranch sector thrives going forward. Certainly, as that happens, we'll be able to probably have more discussions with these groups and businesses in order to go forward and again try to build consensus, like we did this last time, about any changes that they might want to look at in the future.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Madam Chair, thank you. Again, we're talking about a thriving agriculture sector on the backs of exploited people. I don't get that. It flies in the face of your values and your stated goals in Bill 6. Yes, we want it to thrive. In fact, it will thrive better if they don't have lawsuits and accidents and deaths because a few bad apples are forcing people to work significant hours and overstrain themselves and take on things in poor judgment. It doesn't wash. It just doesn't wash. I think these folks will be wearing egg on their faces if they continue to argue that it's not right for 95 per cent of the workers in the province but that it's okay for the 5 per cent or 10 per cent that are described as paid farm workers. It doesn't make sense.

The fact that quite a few owners and operators said, "Yes, this is okay with us": where are the farm workers? What is their voice in this? In fact, it's been barely heard on some of these panels because farm workers are still too intimidated to speak out, demand their rights, and ask for equal consideration in all this. It's disappointing.

There it is, Madam Chair.

4:20

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A15 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill, Bill 17. The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have another amendment here that I'd like to hand out.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. Your amendment will be referred to as A16. Please go ahead.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 33, in the proposed section 53.9, as follows: (a) in subsection (1) by adding the following after clause (b):

(b.1) "nurse practitioner" means a registered nurse who is entitled to use the title of nurse practitioner in accordance with the Health Professions Act and the regulations under that Act and provides care to a family member.

And (b) in subsection (4) by adding "or a nurse practitioner" after "medical certificate issued by a physician."

Madam Chair, this is a pretty straightforward, common-sense amendment. This amendment would give not just a physician but also a nurse practitioner the ability to sign off on compassionate care leave, critical illness of a family member, et cetera. You know, this government has always said that they support nurse practitioners, so I'm sure they're going to want to support this amendment by supporting nurse practitioners.

You know, this is a prime example of what happens when you rush a bill and don't consult. This amendment didn't come from me. My office and I got e-mails on Friday and this morning asking me: how can we change this legislation? It was from a nurse practitioner in Grande Prairie, in my constituency. It said, "Is it too late to make any changes?" I said: "Well, we've probably got Monday. That's all." So we're trying to rush this amendment in.

You know, this amendment would make it a lot easier for Albertans in a stressful situation, and it should fit with the family-friendly workplace legislation. It'll make it a lot less stressful for families in a bad situation. Also, Madam Chair, this will save Albertans money and save our health care system money because if you're dealing with a nurse practitioner and she gives permission, now you've got to go try and find a doctor and take his time to sign off on it after a practitioner already has. It costs the government money when you're paying a physician to fill out forms.

I think that's pretty well all I need to say. It's pretty straightforward and simple. It's just the simple change of adding practitioners to give them the ability to sign off.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A16? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the amendment coming forward here. Essentially, they're suggesting that nurse practitioners be allowed to issue doctors' notes. Well, you know, it's not necessarily a bad idea, because it is done in Ontario. However, Ontario nurse practitioners are more widely involved in primary care delivery than in Alberta. This would require us to go out and get a lot more consultation within Health, the UNA, and the college. I certainly appreciate the intent of this amendment, but we would need a little bit more time in order to understand what others within the field are thinking about that. So at this time I won't be able to support this amendment, but again I do want to thank the member for bringing this forward. We will certainly look at maybe further consultation on this in the future.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A16?

Dr. Starke: Well, Madam Chair, my only comment to the last comments made by the Member for Edmonton-Decore is: unbelievable. Unbelievable. This government, that talks a great game about bringing in team-based medicine, about bringing in additional health professionals to share the load, to move things out of constantly having to be only done through physicians' offices, when given a concrete opportunity to do that through this amendment, an amendment that was suggested by nurse practitioners – I know my colleague from Grande Prairie-Wapiti received e-mails this past Thursday and Friday. I received e-mails from nurse practitioners in my constituency. They want to be involved. They want to help their patients.

In some parts of Alberta the nurse practitioners have in fact become the primary source of medical care for many families. Many families don't see a family physician on a regular basis because they simply find that they're not available. In some communities, in fact, the nurse practitioner has had a longer tenure in the community than any of the family physicians that are practising in those communities. Those nurse practitioners have come to be people of great trust. These are professionals with a great deal of skill, and contrary to the Member for Edmonton-Decore, in many rural communities these professionals have in fact become a critical element of primary care, maybe not in Edmonton-Decore, but I can tell you that in Vermilion that is true. That is true in many, many other communities.

I will also point out that when we conducted the rural health review, I had a nurse practitioner on our committee, and she outlined in many instances all of the different things that she is able to do as a nurse practitioner and that the biggest thing holding back a broader application of nurse practitioners in our province is lack of a proper funding model and funding formula to allow a greater usage of nurse practitioners. What is unfortunate is that most of the nurse practitioners that are currently practising in the province of Alberta are not practising independently but, in fact, are practising in conjunction with some other thing where they are still directly involved with the physician.

In this instance, where we have sections of this bill that specifically require signing off by a physician, nurse practitioners have come to us and have said: this needs to be expanded to allow nurse practitioners to be able to provide this same service for their patients, the same service that is provided by primary care physicians. In some communities it is difficult to get in to see a primary care physician, and when you ask for an additional document that is not covered under the Alberta health care insurance plan, the doctor may in some cases charge an additional fee for drafting that document.

So in a situation where, generally speaking – and I know the case, certainly, in Vermilion is that the ability to see the nurse practitioner on a more rapid basis is in place. In order to make the provisions work – and I think these are good provisions, and we’ve said that repeatedly, that these are provisions that we support – for things like a critical illness of a child or injury leave and those sorts of things in those sections of this bill that require a physician, to have that definition expanded, as my colleague’s amendment would do, to include nurse practitioners absolutely makes sense.

It is absolutely consistent with what this government has told Albertans, that it believes in nurse practitioners, that it acknowledges and recognizes the skills and the abilities of nurse practitioners. I mean, I certainly do, and especially after working on the rural health review, I can tell you that not only myself but many, many communities that we went and spoke to talked to us about their desire to have nurse practitioners form a greater role or play a greater role in the delivery of primary care in their communities because of the skill and the professionalism of these individuals. For the government to now say, “We would need more time,” well, you know, without putting too fine a point on it, that’s kind of what we’ve been urging you to do for weeks. We’ve been urging you to slow down the passage of this bill so that things just like this would have the time to be properly implemented.

4:30

Now, if there is the urgency that you suggest there is, that this has to be passed here in the waning days of this spring session, then fine. If that urgency is there, then that urgency also means that this amendment should pass. This amendment improves this piece of legislation. This amendment makes it easier for Albertans. This amendment makes life better for Albertans. Isn’t that your daily mantra in question period, how your government wants to make life better for Albertans? Well, this amendment would do that. This amendment would allow those Albertans who rely on the services of a nurse practitioner to be able to obtain the documentation necessary in order to access very desirable and absolutely favourable sections of this bill that we support.

When nurse practitioners come to us and say, “You know what? This bill is good, but this bill should be expanded to allow nurse practitioners to sign off on this because in many cases we are the primary health care provider for many families in Alberta,” it behooves us as legislators to listen to what they have to tell us and to respond and react appropriately, to respond and react in a way that is helpful to Albertans.

If you vote down this amendment, basically, first of all, you’re telling Albertans that rely on a nurse practitioner that the choice they’ve made in terms of their primary health care provider isn’t quite good enough for this government. That’s the first message you’re giving. The second message you’re giving is to nurse practitioners, those folks that you are trying to curry favour with. And not just curry favour with, but you acknowledge their professionalism. You acknowledge their abilities, and I think we all acknowledge their abilities.

If we’re to do the kinds of things that the Auditor General called for in the report that was released a week and a half ago, which includes more team-based, co-ordinated health care, including the involvement of other professionals like nurse practitioners, licensed practical nurses, pharmacists, dietitians, physiotherapists, chiropractors, and a whole long list of other health care providers, then we have to acknowledge, when we’re drafting new legislation, that they have those skills and abilities and not leave them out.

This is a glaring omission in this bill. It can be corrected relatively easily. This is an amendment that would improve this piece of legislation, and I am, frankly, dumbfounded, Madam Chair, that this government would consider voting against this amendment. All I’m saying is: explain that to the nurse practitioners the next time they have a meeting. Explain why you wouldn’t include them or you wouldn’t acknowledge their professionalism when you drafted your flagship labour bill. I think you have some explaining to do, and I think that with the explanation that’s been offered so far, that we just need a little bit more time, well, you know, quite frankly, we’ve been telling you that for weeks. But since you’ve said that, no, we don’t need more time and that this is urgent, well, if it is urgent, then it’s urgent to pass this amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I do want to thank the member for his passionate words. You know, we certainly don’t want to sound like we’re not respectful of what nurse practitioners can do and how they’re looking to expand their role. The consultation process in that particular area just was not as robust as in all the other areas.

We’re not calling it a bad amendment. You know, I need to be very, very clear about that, Madam Chair. This is not a bad amendment. We just have to make sure. I mean, we hear all the time from the other side that we don’t go and consult. Here we are. We’re going to try and go and consult, take a look at this, and move forward from that point. But to delay everything else at this moment I think wouldn’t be fair. Again, using an example of somebody getting paid below minimum wage because they have a disability, we need to move forward on those things.

Again, I want to thank the members across the way for bringing this amendment forward. It’s a very fair amendment. We’re just not able to support it at this time.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I speak in favour of the amendment as proposed by the Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti. This is exactly why we do consultation. It was brought to his attention by nurse practitioners about the weakness in the bill and about how we move forward in a way that allows the employment standards to be implemented in a way that is, I would suggest, transparent, fair, and accountable to all. Nurse practitioners are held in high regard in that they carry the professionalism that would be required to meet the guidelines under the compassionate care leave.

You know, we work hard and the government works hard to try and streamline the health care system, and here we have an opportunity where we're not going to tie up the limited amount of resources with the doctors, who are maybe in some cases not even the primary caregiver to the patient involved. Yet we are moving in a direction that would require some more red tape in the system and tying up professionals, doctors in this case, to do a job that I believe would be very well taken care of by nurse practitioners, especially nurse practitioners that are right at the front line, working with the individuals that are needing this extra care from family members or those that are closest to them.

I would really encourage all members to support this amendment and recognize the value that it has in not only improving this bill but in helping us to be sure that we don't burden more of our health care system to a point where red tape starts to slow down even more of the care that we're trying to give to the patients within the province of Alberta. I would really encourage all members to recognize the value and to recognize that we are putting it in the hands of professionals, these nurse practitioners' very capable hands, to make this available to all family members.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

I'll now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. Twenty-seven working days of consultation; four face-to-face, by-invitation-only meetings, in which the minister could not confirm to us anything more than giving a speech at one and no full involvement with the engagement there; 124 pages of legislation; and we're told that there's not enough time here to consider this amendment. Maybe if the consultation had been done in a more robust way, we wouldn't have to propose the amendment from the Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti to actually not only improve this but to actually just plug one of the holes in this legislation and actually make it practical for Albertans who may have a nurse practitioner in a smaller jurisdiction, a smaller village or town or hamlet, to consult and make it easy for them to access some of the positive aspects of this legislation, some of the compassionate- and illness-related legislation that has been put forward here. On both sides of the House many of us have said that we're in agreement with many of those clauses, but now we're being told that they didn't have adequate time to get it right. Not enough time?

4:40

I guess one of my questions would be: where were the nurse practitioners on the invitation list for those four sessions, those limited four sessions, that were by invitation only and that we know were skewed heavily towards people from unions and not from businesses themselves, not from, obviously, medical practitioners from a broad spectrum as well? They will have to actually administer much of the legislation that's put forth here to make sure that it's accessible and easy for Albertans to take advantage of some of these improvements in the legislation. It just doesn't make any sense. It just flies in the face of reason and common sense and good judgment with respect to the legislation.

Madam Chair, we're giving this House a chance. You know, maybe the decision-makers aren't here. Maybe the decision-makers need to come back to the table here so that they can hear what these amendments are and that this is reasonable and fair. This is an amendment that, actually, we should probably just quit talking about and vote on and vote in favour of because it's – I hate to use the term here – a bit of a no-brainer. It doesn't affect anything negatively. It doesn't create any burden or barrier. It doesn't even have any touch of any kind of ideology in it, for gosh sake.

This isn't an ideological amendment; this is a practical amendment, a common-sense amendment. Maybe we need a bit more common sense in this House so that we can move ahead with this and get on to some of the other amendments, which, I think, are well reasoned and balanced and speak in many respects to what my colleague for Vermilion-Lloydminster said earlier, which is: let's take some of the ideological bent out of this. Let's do what's best for Albertans. Let's look at fair, open, and transparent and actually adjudicate that from within our own principles and values of what this actually means, to do something better for Albertans, to create better legislation, with all of its flaws. Let's try and at least make it the best we possibly can.

That's what I believe the members on this side of the House are trying to do here, desperately, to improve flawed legislation. Again, granted, some of it is good – we support some of the compassionate leave and some of the illness leave there, no question about that – but there are some concerns even with that part of the legislation, with the employment standards. No question that there are huge flaws in the Labour Relations Code, and we're trying to improve that as well.

But this one is a simple one. This one is – again I'll use the term – a no-brainer. It's a common-sense amendment. I'm looking across the floor here, and I wish somebody could give me a good reason other than that we don't have enough time. Well, we could give you a lot more time if you want to send this bill to committee or delay it so that you and your government can actually do some proper consultation.

I think we've been talking about that for months, forever, since you launched this with a short, short time window of consultation, 27 working days. People have said that it was 36, but it wasn't. It was 27 working days because – don't forget – some of the people that you may have needed to consult there are governed by union rules. It wouldn't have allowed them to work the overtime or the extra hours to get it done, to put in the extra time during those 27 days to actually make it 36. Twenty-seven days for a 124-page piece of legislation that, we heard from the other side of the floor here, needed to be changed because it hadn't been touched since Beetlejuice.

You know, I learned a lot about pop culture during some of the debate. Let's get out of pop culture. Let's talk about Albertans. Let's talk about what's good for Albertans here, and let's talk about the practicalities of this.

My sister-in-law is a nurse practitioner, and I can tell you that she's been a medical professional for over 30 years. She has dealt with the brain injured and people with strokes and so many different things, and people trust her. She is in charge of life-and-death decisions every day – every day – at the Foothills medical centre. Families count on her to make decisions. And we're going to deny them the opportunity to actually sign a document that allows someone to take advantage of a compassionate leave or an illness-related leave? That makes no sense.

Madam Chair, this is an opportunity for the members on the opposite side to actually look within themselves at principles and values of common sense, of fairness, and of actually doing what's right for Albertans. I would encourage them to go back into their lounge, talk to some of their leaders, and get permission, if you need to, to vote for this amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

I'll now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Ms McPherson: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to seek the unanimous consent of the House to revert to introductions.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, please go ahead.

Ms McPherson: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm really excited to be able to stand here today and introduce the staff, parents, and students of Huntington Hills elementary school. I believe it's grade 6. It might be grades 5 and 6. I'm going to read out your names, and after that, if you could please stand. I apologize if I don't pronounce them correctly. Derek Dedemus, Christopher Dewsbury, Kenedy Hart, Karen Ehrmantraut, and Heather Kunimoto, if you could all rise, please, and the students, and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

(continued)

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A16? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Madam Chair. I don't want to drag this out any longer. I thank the member across for responding. Some good points have been made by my colleagues, probably articulated better than I can. But just to answer a couple of questions, you know, he said that they need more time. Well, as soon as we found out and prepared the amendment this morning, we sent it over to the department, or the ministry, to review it, so he should have had some comments from them.

Speaking of more time, we get a phone book here, and in a week you want it passed. I think we could have used a lot more time, but I guess I know how it works in here. It works one way, I guess. I don't know why we couldn't – with just this little notice we found these amendments, you know, not from us, from Albertans, from people that see that we could make this better. Why wouldn't we do like we did with the MGA last year? You introduce it, it's in committee, you let it sit over summer, and then you come back and pass it in the fall with the amendments. That would make more sense. Anyway, I won't belabour the point. I think we've made it.

The other thing is that this is the second amendment that I've made. The other one the minister agreed was a good amendment, but she said that it didn't match up with the federal legislation. And I heard that this morning, that this wasn't in the federal legislation, so maybe this fancy name, calling it family friendly, you should just change to federal friendly instead of family friendly. But this amendment does make it family friendly.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A16?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A16 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:48 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Drysdale	Orr	Stier
Gotfried	Rodney	Taylor
Loewen	Starke	van Dijken

4:50

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hinkley	Miller
Babcock	Hoffman	Miranda
Bilous	Horne	Nielsen
Carlier	Jansen	Payne
Carson	Kazim	Phillips
Ceci	Kleinstauber	Piquette
Connolly	Larivee	Renaud
Coolahan	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Cortes-Vargas	Luff	Schmidt
Dach	Malkinson	Schreiner
Dang	Mason	Shepherd
Drever	McKitrick	Sigurdson
Feehan	McLean	Turner
Ganley	McPherson	Woollard
Gray

Totals:	For – 9	Against – 43
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A16 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on Bill 17. Are there any comments, questions, or amendments? The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to propose an amendment. I can start whenever you're ready.

The Deputy Chair: Just give me one minute, please. Thank you.

Hon. member, your amendment will be referred to as amendment A17. Please go ahead.

Mr. Taylor: Okay. What I'd like to do is propose an amendment that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 131. Section 131 repeals division 19, measures during illegal strike or illegal lockout. With the amendment that has just been handed out to everyone, I move to strike out that section, where the NDP would remove division 19. I would like the measures during illegal strike or illegal lockout to be in the Labour Relations Code, but I would like to discuss today why this would be just condoning illegal behaviour for either case, be it the employer or employee.

The first section that would be repealed by the government would be the suspension of dues check-off. Currently if an illegal strike is prohibited by divisions 15.1 or 18, this part commences. The labour board may direct the employer to suspend the deduction and remittance of union dues, assessments, and other fees that are otherwise payable to the union. The suspension could continue for one to six months depending on how the labour board directed, and they would then direct the employer to serve the union with a copy of the directive. The union can then apply to the labour board within 72 hours after service of the directive to determine if the strike actually occurred. If the union doesn't apply to the labour board, the employer can then suspend deduction and would not have to submit the union dues to the union as per directive from the labour board. If the union does apply, the employer will not suspend the deduction until the labour board determines that an illegal strike has occurred.

Built into the Labour Relations Code, it states that if they determine an illegal strike occurred, "an employee does not become ineligible for employment" just because union dues were not submitted to the union and that "at the end of the suspension period the employer shall resume the deduction and remittance of union dues, assessments and other fees in accordance with the collective agreement." Under this code no other provision can be made for substitution.

The second section that would be repealed would be payment of union dues during an illegal lockout. Currently under this section if a lockout commences that is prohibited by certain divisions, the labour board may direct the employer who locked out the employee to pay the union dues, assessments, and other fees that would otherwise be payable by the employees through the employer to the union. The payment will continue for a period directed by the labour board of one to six months after the lockout commences. The employer may apply to the board within 72 hours after receiving the directive until it's determined that a lockout indeed occurred. If the employer does not make the application, then the employer will have to make the payments. If it is determined the payment is to be made, the payments will be deemed as debt owing to the union and may be collected from the employer through civil action if required.

The last section that the NDP would like to repeal would be the direction by Lieutenant Governor in Council. This section specifically spells out the Lieutenant Governor in Council's power to either revoke certification of a union that causes members to illegally strike or to prohibit an employer's organization from representing employers for the purposes of collective bargaining if they cause or participate in an illegal lockout. These powers would be stripped away.

Madam Chair, if the strike is illegal, why should the employer be required to continue to collect and remit dues to the union engaged in an illegal activity that is harming the employer? This seems unreasonable, that they would choose to repeal the only recourse that employers would have to any rights themselves, especially when it comes to divisions 15.1, 16, or 18, which deal with essential services, compulsory interest arbitration, and emergencies. Essential services as part of the Labour Relations Code are defined as

- (a) the interruption of which would endanger the life, personal safety or health of the public, or
- (b) that are necessary to the maintenance and administration of the rule of law or public security.

Any work that would be deemed as an essential service or emergency would be deemed as illegal in the case of a strike, so division 19 is still relevant and should be included.

Favouritism seems to be a recipe of the day with this government. Repealing division 19 of the Labour Relations Code is showing this government's hypocrisy, especially when these changes would not affect the Public Service Employee Relations Act, where the government is the employer. For some reason only private-sector employers are singled out and stripped of these rights according to the new legislation. Even though the Supreme Court of Canada declared the right to strike to be fundamental and protected by the Constitution, there are still certain instances where a strike could be illegal. If a strike isn't illegal, none of this would apply and would therefore be nullified anyway. What is this government's decision for repealing this division? I would like a more fulsome explanation because I'm pretty sure that some services that trade unions are involved in could be deemed as essential.

Nonfamily employees on farms and ranches can choose to organize according to the new legislation, yet what happens if crops and animals are affected due to a strike? The government themselves have stated that this would be deemed essential. All of these unions would fall under the Labour Relations Code, yet there would now be no penalties for these types of illegal strikes due to the section's repeal. Why should the employer have to continue to pay dues, assessments, and fees if the union decides to strike illegally? This seems to be just another avenue for this NDP government to show the private sector that they don't care what happens to them. If I am completely wrong and there is another reason other than that no Canadian jurisdiction provides for dues suspension, then please educate me.

5:00

These are some of the very reasons why some private companies felt safe setting up shop here in Alberta and to have unions come in to do the work. Yes, there has to be protection for the worker, but there also needs to be some sort of protection for the private-sector employer. The rationale seems to be too one-sided. This is just another piece of legislation that will be another reason for private companies in Alberta to relocate. Alberta used to have their backs. Why would they want to financially contribute to a government who shows no need for their business, Madam Chair?

Another question I would have for this government would be: why on earth would you promote or take away any law to empower an organization who is engaging in illegal behaviour? This government has stated that it seems like there are already too many penalties inflicted upon them. Is this correct? When someone is doing something illegal, they should be penalized. Why would you choose to empower an organization when illegal activity is going on?

It seems like this government is condoning illegal activity with a clause and repealing the only safeguards that private employers have for any recourse. Likewise, there is now going to be no penalty for a company to lock out, not be penalized and made responsible to the workers. That doesn't make sense. By repealing division 19 from the Labour Relations Code, you are essentially supporting illegal activity, and that is something that should never be done in this House. It's a complete insult to everything we all stand for.

I ask the minister to please show us today what reason there would be to support any illegal activity. My hope would be that you'll support a simple amendment by striking out section 131 in Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A17?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A17 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. [interjections] They didn't get up fast enough. I didn't see three get up fast enough, so we're going to move on to the bill, Bill 17.

Are there any other amendments to the bill? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise with an amendment on behalf of the Member for Calgary-Foothills. I'll just wait until you're ready.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, this is now amendment A18. Please go ahead.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. Like I said, I rise on behalf of the Member for Calgary-Foothills to move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 127.

Madam Chair, I believe that it is hypocritical for unions to argue that the right to strike is a fundamental right but then advocate to remove that right in favour of first contract arbitration.

An Hon. Member: You almost said that with a straight face.

Mr. van Dijken: I did.

Madam Chair, such a move goes against everything the labour movement, in my estimation, has ever stood for. Removing the right to strike in order to arbitrate a first contract goes against everything that I thought the NDP and labour stood for. Requiring arbitration interferes with an employer's right to lockout, which is the flip side of the right to strike and arguably a fundamental right also. If an employer cannot close his doors and close his business because they are being held up by union arbitration, then we are fundamentally going against the grain of everything workers have bargained for in the past.

Arbitration compels one or both parties to enter into an agreement they might not otherwise make. If it is binding arbitration, both sides can almost certainly go away completely unhappy with the arrangement. It breeds resentment and poor morale in the workplace. This affects productivity, so the business will suffer. Then layoffs will occur to save money, and the cycle repeats. Rather than bargaining to get a deal, parties often bargain to best position themselves for arbitration, with no intention of an actual deal skewing the collective bargaining process. As we have seen with public-sector negotiations, compulsory arbitration might protect and prevent labour disruption, but it does come at a cost to the employers.

Madam Chair, we want open and honest negotiations. We want open and honest negotiations if a union comes into a workplace. We don't want bargaining for position, to stake ground, only to have an arbitrator move the goalpost, skewed out of balance, potentially damaging the employer. For an employer arbitration is a risky proposition. An outsider with no knowledge of its business is given a mandate to decide what the employer will pay, what the employer should pay or could pay, and what the terms and conditions of employment will be.

A union focused on eventual [first contract arbitration] has little incentive to compromise before arbitration, thinking that the arbitrator will likely split the difference between its demands and the employer's position. For the employer, arbitration is a risky proposition, as I've said before.

An outsider with no knowledge of its business is given a mandate to decide what the employer will pay and what the terms and conditions of employment will be.

That is from lawyer Rick Dunlop.

Some other feedback we received from stakeholders was:

- Requiring arbitration interferes with an employer's right to lockout, which is the flip-side of the right to strike and arguably a fundamental right also.
- First contract arbitration is really an accommodation of the union only, and its interests, not workers. The sole purpose [of first contract arbitration] is to protect the union, not the workers but the union.

The union is worried that employees may change their minds about representation or lose interest. It wants to have a collective agreement imposed before that happens.

That's feedback we received from the Progressive Contractors Association.

With that, Madam Chair, I urge the members in this House to support amendment A18 and recognize the fact that we want to protect the right to strike for employees. First contract arbitration essentially in this bill allows the unions to request arbitration solely and would not give the right to the employees to strike.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A18? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the member bringing forward this amendment. Right now what we have in terms of language going across Canada is the 90-day period for employers and employees to try to reach an agreement when it comes to first contract language and then, of course, the ability to seek other measures should that become a problem and they can't reach the contract language. I mean, we even have similar language in places like Manitoba and B.C. as well, so we're not doing anything new. We're not reinventing the wheel here.

5:10

Unfortunately, though, what this amendment will end up doing is that it will end up denying workers the right to a first contract. You know, certainly, what we've seen with some strikes over the past is that some employers will just simply try to wait them out, to hopefully either walk away or accept something lower, which is not what they're hoping to do when we're talking about fair bargaining.

So I will not be able to support this amendment at this time. I urge other members of the House to not support this because we certainly don't want to deny people who have decided to unionize and are looking for a first contract the right to try to get that even if it means going through arbitration and having it settled in as fair a fashion as possible.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A18? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I would like to again refer to the fact that with this type of legislation in place, we get into situations where possibly the union does not negotiate with any intention of coming to a first contract. When we move in that direction, we are essentially, I would suggest, stacking the deck in favour of the union and with little regard for the employees or the employer.

The government decided that they were going to use Mr. Andy Sims to essentially facilitate their movement in the direction of changing the Labour Relations Code. Mr. Andy Sims has one opinion. They held a few by-invite-only consultation periods, with limited input from others within industry and within Alberta to be able to give feedback. It was brought to our attention that this is a pitfall within some of the other provinces and that we need to focus on: how do we get to a fair contract in first contracts?

By putting forward legislation such as this, in my opinion and also in the opinion of people that we have been consulting with, with first contract arbitration there's little incentive for the union to actually negotiate in good faith and good will. We have concerns with the fact that, again, we are putting in place what I would describe as not a level playing field here and that we are stacking the deck to try and protect the union from disgruntled people, who are possibly being brought into a union for the first time and finding out that maybe it's not all it was cracked up to be, so in order to get past that first contract, this is what unions are going to try and implement.

We're concerned with the right to strike, with the employers' rights to lock out, and the employees' rights in this situation. I would encourage everyone to vote in favour of amendment A18.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to A18? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I don't think the member across the way is familiar with the fact that in a situation where you might have unfair bargaining going on, unfair labour practices, the labour board is still there. Either party can make application if they think one or the other side is not bargaining in good faith. Of course, the very last fallback position is Court of Queen's Bench as well. Those are still there. They're available for either side to utilize, you know, should one side or the other be accused of unfair bargaining.

Again I will urge others to not support this at this time.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I am perfectly aware of the fact that the Labour Relations Board can be asked to take a look at possible unfair labour practices. What I am concerned with here is that we are essentially asking a body to make an interpretation on what would be considered unfair negotiations or possibly skewed negotiations with no intention of coming to any kind of agreement. So with that, by forcing arbitration, then, again, we're putting into the hands of the Labour Relations Board a contract with no understanding of the business implications of the employer. To me it's putting that business at risk and all those employees' jobs at risk.

So I would encourage you again to take a look at this as being fair to employers, employees in the ability to come to a first contract.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Klein.

Mr. Coolahan: Thank you, Madam Chair. Just briefly, you know, I think this is a good provision in this bill, and it's something that's been missing in Alberta's labour law for a long time. I think what the hon. member who proposed this amendment needs to understand is that one or both parties of the dispute can apply for first contract arbitration, and I suggest that a lot of employers will apply for this because it will speed up the process, that can go on for several years and can lead to labour slowdowns. Nobody wants that. Then, you know, these first contracts that usually are arbitrated are not – how would we say? – great for anybody a lot of the time. They're very vanilla, and they just establish a working contract that can be negotiated later, whatever the provisions are, in one or two years.

Anyhow, with that said, I will not be supporting this amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to A18?

Seeing none, I'll call the question on amendment A18, as proposed by the hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A18 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:17 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Cooper	Gotfried	Rodney
Loewen	van Dijken	Drysdale
Orr	Stier

5:20

Against the motion:

Bilous	Jansen	Nielsen
Carlier	Kazim	Payne
Connolly	Kleinstauber	Phillips
Coolahan	Larivee	Piquette
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Renaud
Dach	Luff	Rosendahl
Dang	Malkinson	Schmidt
Drever	McKittrick	Schreiner
Feehan	McLean	Shepherd
Gray	McPherson	Sigurdson
Hinkley	Miller	Turner
Horne	Miranda	Woollard

Totals:	For – 8	Against – 36
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A18 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are back on the original bill. Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise today to move an amendment on behalf of the Member for Calgary-Hays, and I have the requisite number of copies. I'll begin reading once the table gives me permission to do so.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, the amendment will be referred to as A19. Please go ahead.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. Notice of amendment to Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. Mr. McIver to move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 113 in the proposed section 34 by adding the following after subsection (11):

(11.1) In accordance with any rules made by the Board, the Board shall prohibit the applicant and the employer from causing, incentivizing or preventing any employee to attend or be absent from a place of work or place of voting during the time period for a representation vote.

Madam Chair, there's been much discussion in the House on this bill, and much of that centred on the concerns of intimidation, peer pressure influence, and other forms of intervention of employees in their decision-making. There have been fingers pointed at both unions and employers, accusations of intimidation leading up to a union vote, which, of course, is not acceptable to any member of this House. Clearly, the government landed on the side of protecting the union. No surprise there. We've heard a little bit about some of the perceptions and perspectives and biases which may be brought into this legislation.

Since they're allowing unions to avoid the complications of having to actually hold a vote in many circumstances when a 65 per cent card check is achieved, there are some concerns and some problems with the process as we move forward, particularly if a ballot is required. Since they were so concerned that a secret ballot could somehow lead to intimidation of workers, despite that being the entire point of a secret ballot, that there's actually secrecy and nobody knows how anybody voted, which is, of course, our argument around using secret ballots versus card checks for the process – the point being is that it's hard to intimidate someone when you can't actually confirm who they voted for, kind of like what we have in our election period, Madam Chair, that we're actually allowed to vote our conscience and allowed to vote without actually having to tell anybody how we voted but have that in our clear conscience whereas it seems much easier to check if someone has signed a union card or not and then possibly lean on them to put their name down. I use the term "lean on them" in a way which I think really implies what we're worried about here, which is intimidation, peer pressure, any kind of being called out or being disenfranchised or being rejected by their peers.

But that's beside the point, I suppose, since the government has already made their decision that the card check seems to be a preferred method, which, unfortunately, allows for that potential, that peer pressure, or, God forbid, bullying to occur.

The amendment I'm bringing forward today concerns what happens in the small window where the government saw fit to allow democracy to happen, when the card check process ends up between 40 and 65 per cent. Then members actually get a chance to vote, to voice their opinions freely and without fear of repercussion. This amendment aims to make sure that when employees actually get a chance to exercise what had previously been a democratic vote, they don't have to worry about influence from either side, from the employers or from the unions. Sounds reasonable. Sounds fair.

Once they actually get a chance to vote, this amendment ensures that neither the unions nor the employers will cause or persuade employees through any manner or any methods to be present or absent from the vote. No influence about their attendance. No calling up and saying, "You know, I'd rather you not be there," or "You better be there." That should be the employee's choice. That means that when it does come down to a vote, in this narrow circumstance the government still allows, between the 40 and 65 per cent, there won't be any promises or enticements to convince employees to stay home or show up that day. They can actually do it of their free will.

This amendment would make sure that when it comes to a vote, it will be up to the honest and sincere belief and the best interest of the employee whether or not a union would be good not only for the workplace but for them, for their families, for their future, for their career, something that I think we should all take seriously here, Madam Chair. It will protect employees and maintain their ability to choose, not somebody else's, not through undue influence, which is what we should be trying to do as legislators instead of trying to restrict the options for voting or to allow undue influence or to allow peer pressure or to allow those phone calls in the middle of the night or to allow someone to knock on their door and suggest that they should do one thing or another. I think it's incumbent upon us to make sure that that type of influence is not allowed in this process.

While I wish the government would come to their common senses and restore the ability of employees to vote in a secret ballot at all times, ensuring that transparency and that freedom and that freedom of conscience, which, again, I would hope that we would all defend in this House as part of a democratic right and democratic expectation within our society – I think it was mentioned before by someone else that maybe instead of going to the ballots every year, we should just go out, and whichever party sells the most memberships wins the election in that constituency. Wouldn't that be a unique opportunity to do so? Maybe we can do it through a card check system so that, you know, we know exactly, everybody knows who's done it, so you can knock on doors and twist more arms and tell people that they need to vote for you. Then we don't have to have elections, Madam Chair. I think that that's an expectation in our society that, unfortunately, this bill has taken away, that reasonable expectation of democratic freedom without fear of repercussion.

I think that if the government were actually concerned about protecting employees from that potential for intimidation – and that's all we need, Madam Chair, that potential. As I think, as was mentioned by the Member for Calgary-Klein before – he was talking about apples – there are some bad apples on both sides of the tree sometimes. I think it's our job to ensure that we protect Albertans from those bad apples, from those worms that might get into those and turn that tree and that fruit into something rotten. [interjection] We've heard that about you.

[Mr. Dach in the chair]

I think if we were actually concerned about protecting employees from intimidation, they'd pass this amendment and abandon the 65 per cent short-circuit of democracy, but since they don't seem inclined to do that, I hope that all members of this House will consider ensuring that what is good for the goose, the unions in this case, is also good for the gander, the employees and employers in this case, and that all members of this House, Mr. Chair, will support this amendment.

Thank you.

5:30

The Acting Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to A19? The Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Mr. Chair, and thanks to the member for bringing the amendment forward here. I'm not sure if the member was aware, but right now in the labour regulations the labour board already has these powers. What we're talking about is potential coercion at the voting site during a certification vote, and in section 151(f), which gets into the specifics of that, the labour board already has the powers to deal with any kind of coercion during the voting process. Certainly, this has nothing to do with card certification or how union members will very respectfully come up to a door, knock on it, ask if it's a good time to talk, and if it isn't, when a good time would be, where they could talk, things like that. But, again, that's not really to this amendment.

So I'm going to urge all members in the House not to support this. The labour board already has the ability to do this, and this is basically redundant.

Thanks very much.

The Acting Chair: Thank you, Member.

Any other members wishing to speak on A19? The Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Well, thank you, Chair. It's a pleasure to rise and speak in support of the amendment. I just speak for a couple of reasons. If it's already there, there's no reason to not make sure that these sorts of protections are in place as well so that there can be no doubt.

While I hear the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore talking about just how respectful unions are, I myself have been subject to not respectful interactions. In this case it was the Teamster union that was efforting to unionize a workplace where I was employed. [interjections] I received a number of what I would consider threatening letters, harassing phone calls, and I know that they efforted to knock on my door, all of which was unwanted.

I hear the members say: well, of course, that's just them. Perhaps I was paraphrasing, but I heard members say: of course. Well, all the more reason for more protections, then. If there are clearly organizations that don't behave in a manner that reflects well upon unions, clearly we need balances, safeguards in place to ensure that this sort of bullying tactic, these sorts of intimidation tactics don't take place in the workplace. I find it interesting that it's acknowledged that these sorts of things happen yet not the same level of desire to put in protections from these bad apples, I guess, if that's all that they are.

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

I can appreciate that, just like there are some employers who aren't perfect, there are definitely also, on the other side of that coin, unions that aren't perfect, so we should be ensuring that we take every reasonable and necessary step to have protections in place, that we treat the unions' ability fairly, the employees' ability fairly, and vote in favour of these sorts of measures so that we can deliver exactly that.

This is about creating a fair, level playing field for both sides of this ledger, and I would encourage all members of the Assembly to support this.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A19? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Just to reiterate the powers that the Labour Relations Board already has, I'll help out the members here a little bit.

Prohibited practices by trade union, etc.

151 No trade union and no person acting on behalf of a trade union shall ...

- (f) use coercion, intimidation, threats, promises or undue influence of any kind with respect to any employee with a view to encouraging or discouraging membership or activity in or for a trade union.

So there we have it. There it is. It's already there.

We don't need this amendment, Madam Chair, and I will urge everybody to vote against it.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. With respect to the Member for Edmonton-Decore, this specifically talks about the activity around the vote, and it also includes not just the unions, but it also includes the employers. So this is meant to be a more robust approach to it, to ensure that it's embedded in the legislation. It is very specifically not around all of the activities prior to but about the vote, which can be a very slippery slope, a very difficult period because really, at the end of the day, it's only that vote that counts.

This one will ensure that both sides, the employers and the unions, are held to a very high standard with respect to any influence, intimidation, access to enticement of any sort to attend or not to attend a vote.

Madam Chair, I would say that this is very specific. It clarifies something that sounds a little vague to me and does protect the employees. Again, I would like to think that all members of this House are here to protect Albertans from influence from either side of this equation, so I would encourage everybody in this House to support this amendment.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A19?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A19 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:37 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Cooper	Orr	Stier
Gotfried	Rodney	van Dijken
Loewen

5:40

Against the motion:

Babcock	Horne	Nielsen
Bilous	Jansen	Payne
Carlier	Kazim	Phillips
Carson	Kleinsteuber	Piquette
Connolly	Larivee	Renaud
Coolahan	Littlewood	Rosendahl
Cortes-Vargas	Luff	Schmidt
Dach	Malkinson	Schreiner
Dang	McKittrick	Shepherd
Drever	McLean	Sigurdson
Feehan	McPherson	Turner
Gray	Miller	Woollard
Hinkley	Miranda

Totals:	For – 7	Against – 38
---------	---------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A19 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment I would like to propose at this time to Bill 17.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, this will be amendment A20. Please go ahead.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by adding the following after section 145:

Review by committee of Legislative Assembly

145.1 Within 5 years of the coming into force of Part 2 of the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, a committee of the Legislative Assembly must begin a comprehensive review of the amendments made by that Act to the Labour Relations Code and its impact on Alberta's economy, and must submit to the Assembly, within one year after beginning the review, a report that includes any amendments recommended by the committee.

Madam Chair, the intent of this amendment is essentially to provide a mechanism that would recognize the need to continually review the work that is being done here and to recognize that changes that are implemented through legislation have impacts – they have consequences – and as we recognize that, we also have to recognize that we need to measure that as time goes along.

It's been identified by the Minister of Labour many times in the lead-up to the introduction of this bill that there was no review or no significant changes to the Labour Relations Code in the past 30 years, and that was the reason for bringing forward the labour code review and then what led up to Bill 17 as we see it here. I would suggest that the labour code review that was implemented by this minister had a very limited amount of consultation, a very limited amount of engagement with stakeholders within Alberta and that there are likely to be significant implications both economically and also on our labour peace within this province, so we need to have an understanding going forward as to: what are the consequences of Bill 17 on the Labour Relations Code?

We currently have a baseline measure that can be utilized to have an understanding of where we've been, the current Labour Relations Code. As we move forward, based off of the baseline, we can get an understanding of the economic impact and any other consequences that come forward through the passage of Bill 17.

You know, we take a look at full engagement of stakeholders to do proper consultation and to come upon what the minister has identified in her business plan as that we need a fair and balanced labour code, and we on this side of the House believe that also. We need to continually review the Labour Relations Code as we move forward to understand the full impact of any changes that we do.

We have encouraged the government to do a fulsome analysis of the economic impacts that this bill may bring forward, through feedback from industry stakeholders, from employers, employees, unions, the investment community, to try and get a good understanding of what these changes, good or bad, have on the Alberta economy, have on the Alberta labour environment, and to be able to monitor that going forward. This can be put in the hands of the experts to be able to get an understanding. The committee would call on experts to do those measures, to be able to come back to committee and identify any consequences – unintended consequences, intended consequences, good consequences, bad consequences – and how we can actually improve on a continual basis moving forward and how we can serve Albertans in a way that allows them to be reassured that the members in this House are looking out for the best interests of all Albertans.

Knowing that a review is coming in five years will help to give some peace of mind to Albertans that the Legislature, the Members of this Legislative Assembly, are going to proceed in a manner that is fair and equitable, fair and balanced on an ongoing basis, and that employers and employees can have peace of mind that we will be examining these things going forward.

I do believe that every member in this House is looking out for the best interest of Alberta. We have different ideas on how that plays itself out, but I do believe that every member comes here with good intentions to try and serve Albertans in the best way they can. Albertans have sent us here to be accountable to them and transparent to them, and by passing this amendment, we have the opportunity to say to Albertans, you know: "We're passing a bill here. There is a bill that's going to be passed, and we look forward to ensuring that in five years we do an analysis on the full impacts of this bill." That should give peace of mind to employees, employers, unions, all the stakeholders involved here.

This amendment changes nothing in the bill. It changes nothing in the bill. All it does is it adds a level of accountability that, again, I believe brings some peace of mind to all the stakeholders that we have come here to serve. It brings a level of accountability that we will not go 30 years without a review of how this bill is affecting Albertans and how we can possibly improve it in five, six years' time again. You know, we call on this Assembly. Some of us may still be here, some of us may not be here, but at least then we have the peace of mind going forward that this Assembly is going to continually review these codes in this act as we move forward.

5:50

I believe there's nothing scary here. It's a very reasonable amendment that helps us to do good governance in this place and helps us to ensure that good governance continues on going forward. As members of this Assembly move on and as new members come in, then they have the opportunity through committee work to review these acts and review the Labour Relations Code as we are implementing it at this time, and in five years' time we can have a good understanding as experts identify possibly the good implications of this bill, possibly some bad implications, consequences that we didn't identify at this time and that need to be tweaked down the road.

So nothing scary about this amendment. I believe it adds a level of accountability, and I believe that the governing party should not be scared of this amendment. It provides a level of good governance that we should all be trying to fulfill within Alberta, and it helps us to ensure that good governance continues on even after we are no longer in this place. I would submit that this amendment is just adding a level of accountability to the work that we are doing here, trying to serve Albertans.

With that, I will conclude my comments. Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A20? The hon. Member for Calgary-Klein.

Mr. Coolahan: Thank you, Madam Chair, and thank you to the member for the proposed amendment here. I will not be supporting this amendment.

An Hon. Member: What?

Mr. Coolahan: I know. It's shocking.

I'll tell you why. For many years, you know, myself, members of the caucus, and hundreds of thousands of hard-working Albertans have spent decades trying to convince PC government after PC government to move our labour standards in line with other provinces, okay? And then we're finally getting here so that Albertans can share in the same rights and protections provided to people in other provinces, by their governments.

Madam Chair, you know, should this bill pass, this is something to celebrate. I and hundreds of thousands of Albertans will celebrate, and we will celebrate the fact that Albertans finally have a government that sees the benefits of fair workplace legislation. Let me try and put the joy that me and hundreds of thousands of Albertans will feel upon the passing of Bill 17, should it pass, into context for the opposition, okay? Our joy will be the equivalent of the joy that the opposition would feel if they got to pass a bill that, say, outlawed unions or lowered the minimum wage or dismantled public pension plans. That's how much joy I will feel.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, I'm just wanting to clarify that you're actually speaking to the amendment in regard to an economic study.

Mr. Coolahan: I am. I certainly am, because what I'm getting at, Madam Chair, is to say that this bill is very good and has been a long time coming, and we've known what has been needed in this bill for many years, and we have addressed that. That is what I'm speaking to.

Madam Chair, here's the thing. Governments have choices to make, and different governments have different priorities that direct these choices. This government chooses to see the individual and societal advantages to ensuring that people can earn a living and meet the demands of family life at the same time. This government will not sit by and watch Albertans have fewer protections in the workplace than other Canadians. This government will not stand idle while another parent loses their job because they have to take some time off work to care for a loved one. We will not continue to come up with reasons not to support fair work legislation. This bill, Bill 17, is a testament to this government's position that Alberta's workers deserve equal protection to those in other provinces.

Now, Madam Chair, what I read in this amendment is really what we hear a lot from the opposition, which is restoring the Alberta advantage. That's what they're saying here. They want to be able to review it and pare down the bill. But what does the Alberta advantage really mean when they talk about it? The Alberta advantage to them means a tax system that favours the wealthy and large corporations, lacks labour laws, and the ability to pay a low minimum wage.

Madam Chair, we must have a level of corporate tax that allows Alberta to attract and retain large and small businesses, and this government has ensured this: 12 per cent for corporations, 2 per cent for small businesses. We are well in line with the other western Canadian provinces. But I'll tell you that this government will not view substandard employment and labour laws or having one of the country's lowest minimum wages as a benefit to attracting these businesses. That is certainly not a benefit to Albertans. We think the Alberta advantage is its people. In order to keep this advantage, we have to ensure that Albertans are healthy and educated through sustained, predictable funding for hospitals and schools and that they're safe at work and able to earn a living and take care of their families at the same time.

Madam Chair, the opposition is again finding excuses to avoid bringing Alberta's labour laws into the 21st century, and it is sad. They treat these protections with disdain. It's evident in the fact that most of them voted no on the first reading – it's absolutely disgraceful – before reading the bill. Well, you know, they talk a lot about – I mean, this is more about consultation that they've talked about for this amendment. Let's face it. They are not concerned about consultation. It's a red herring, disguising the fact that they don't want fair legislation for Alberta's workers. The pendulum has swung too far over the last 30 years, and we're just bringing it back to a place that's fair for everyone. Consultation should not supersede or negate basic rights. Not only has it been 30 years since the labour code has changed or the employment standards, but this government did consult, which is why we don't need this amendment.

The government held four face-to-face round-table meetings to hear directly from those who would be affected by the changes, including a broad cross-section of employers, business associations, labour groups, and advocacy organizations. In addition, there were 5,000 online surveys completed plus 400 written submissions received, covering a broad range of topics. You know, the opposition talks about the leave components for this legislation not coming into effect until January of 2018, but that was done in consultation. We listened. The fact of the matter is, they would never do it.

Madam Chair, I will put this legislation onto my long and growing list of legislation that this government is introducing in which I wonder: why wasn't this done decades ago? It's funny, you know. I have spoken about the past government's legislative paralysis I like to call it, especially when it came to the labour file. They did review the code. They reviewed it in 2007. They reviewed it in 2014 but changed nothing.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, but pursuant to Standing 4(4) we will now recess until 7:30 this evening.

[The committee adjourned at 6 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Prayers	1521
Introduction of Visitors	1521
Introduction of Guests	1521, 1544
Members' Statements
Post-traumatic Stress Disorder Awareness Day.....	1523
Farmer's Day.....	1531
Government Policies	1531
Glenbrook Community in Calgary	1532
Camrose and District Support Services	1532
29th Legislature Spring Sitting and Summer Break	1532
Oral Question Period
Victims of Sexual Assault	1523, 1525
Support for Junior Oil and Gas Companies	1524
Government Policies	1524
Health Care System	1526
Rural Health Care Service Interruptions.....	1526
Minister of Finance.....	1527
Child Safety Reporting and Investigations	1527
Air Ambulance Service Contract.....	1528
Centralized Ambulance Dispatch Wainwright Health Centre	1528
School Transportation Fees	1529, 1530
Advocate for Persons with Disabilities.....	1529
Opioid Use Prevention and Mitigation	1530
Tabling Returns and Reports	1533
Tablings to the Clerk	1533
Orders of the Day	1534
Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole
Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.....	1534
Division	1539
Division	1544
Division	1547
Division	1549

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Monday evening, June 5, 2017

Day 44

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta
The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (ND), Speaker

Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (ND), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees

Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (ND), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (W)
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (ND)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (W)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (ND)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (W)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (ND),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (ND)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (ND)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawwood (ND)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (ND)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (W),
Official Opposition House Leader
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (ND),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (W)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (ND)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (ND)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (ND)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition Whip
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (ND)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (PC)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (ND)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (W)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (ND)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (PC)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (ND)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (PC)
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (ND)
Gottfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (ND)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (W),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (ND)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (ND)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (ND)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (W)
Jansen, Sandra, Calgary-North West (ND)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (W),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (ND)
Kleinsteuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (ND)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (ND)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (ND)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (W)

Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (ND)
Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (ND)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (W)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (ND)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (ND),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (ND)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (PC),
Leader of the Progressive Conservative Opposition
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (ND)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (ND)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (ND)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (ND)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (ND)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (ND)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (W),
Official Opposition Whip
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (ND),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (W)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (W)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (ND)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (ND)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (ND)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (W),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (ND)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC),
Progressive Conservative Opposition House Leader
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (ND)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (ND)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (ND)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (W)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (ND)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (ND)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (ND)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (W)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (W)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (W)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (ND)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (W)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (ND)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (W)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (ND),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (ND)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (W)

Party standings:

New Democrat: 55

Wildrose: 22

Progressive Conservative: 8

Alberta Liberal: 1

Alberta Party: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk

Fiona Vance, Sessional Parliamentary Counsel

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms

Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of House
Services

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services

Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms

Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel

Nancy Robert, Research Officer

Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel and
Legal Research Officer

Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Infrastructure, Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Monday, June 5, 2017

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

The Chair: Hon. members, I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Prior to starting tonight, I just wanted to make a statement regarding the time between division bells. Hon. members, there was some confusion flowing from Wednesday evening last week, when the Committee of the Whole continued from the afternoon. As members may recall, the bells rang with a one-minute interval rather than there being a 15-minute division. As I explained at the time, the reason for the shorter interval between bells, even though it was the first division of the evening, was that the committee had recessed at 6 p.m. rather than rising and reporting. My explanation can be found at page 1467 of Alberta Hansard for the evening sitting on May 31, 2017.

However, given the confusion that has occurred and to lend some certainty to the proceedings, the first division in the evening on a bill will be 15 minutes long, as prescribed in Standing Order 32(3.01), whether or not the committee has recessed or risen and reported in the afternoon. Of course, the first division in the morning and in the afternoon on a bill will be 15 minutes, and subsequent divisions in the morning, afternoon, or evening on the same bill will be one minute.

I hope that will clarify the issue.

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Chair: We are currently on amendment A20. Any questions or comments regarding amendment A20? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Why, thank you, Madam Chair. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to the amendment put forward by my colleague from Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, sometimes known as BMW.

Mr. Coolahan: Madam Chair, I thought I was still speaking to the amendment.

Mr. Cooper: It's committee. There's no adjournment.

The Chair: We continue on, hon. member, so you can speak again after. I'll recognize you.

Mr. Coolahan: That's fine. Thank you.

The Chair: Go ahead.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Madam Chair, and apologies to my colleague. I didn't mean to interrupt what before the dinner break were stirring and wonderful remarks that we will never get back.

One of the things that was so interesting about the remarks from my colleague from the NDP Party was some discussion around how nothing had changed for well over 30 years. We heard the Minister of Labour numerous times – numerous times – in question period speaking about how this legislation hadn't changed since the late '80s. You'll know, Madam Chair, that I have a real passion for song. She provided the opportunity for many cheerful renditions of '80s numbers from the chair of the Member for Olds-Didsbury-

Three Hills, including things like If I Could Turn Back Time, wonderful, wonderful hits from Rick Astley. Let's just say that I'm never going to give up on you or this particular remark.

My point is that there had been this narrative created by the government that nothing had changed in 30 years, and somehow that was a challenge for the government. Perhaps the case could be made that now is a good time to update this particular piece of legislation. As they say, time waits for no one. What we have before us is a real opportunity to prevent this 30-year gap in reviewing what's a very important piece of legislation. So I was surprised to hear my colleague from the NDP speak so negatively towards an amendment that would prevent some of the very things that they were the most concerned about in this piece of legislation, this lengthy time between when the legislation came into law and any significant reform.

What my colleague has provided is a five-year window for this legislation to be reviewed, and we do this on all sorts of pieces of legislation. Some people call it an evergreening clause. I know that the Member for Calgary-Varsity has moved and passed numerous amendments with this same sort of idea, in this vein. She didn't pass the amendments in vain; she moved this sort of vein of amendment to make sure that we are staying up to date, that we are not getting too far behind. All that this does is provide that opportunity for a legislative committee to review part 2 of this particular piece of legislation, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, so that we don't wind up in the same situation.

Now, sometimes reviewing legislation can be politically challenging, but this takes a lot of that out of the way. You would think that if there was going to be a significant change in government over a long period of time, which may be very possible starting in 2019, this is the kind of amendment that the NDP would want to put in place to provide themselves some protections and some safeguards to ensure that on a go-forward basis we won't be going anywhere past five years prior to this legislation being reviewed.

I encourage all members of the Assembly to go ahead and support this amendment and pass this amendment. I know that we've heard from the member that he won't be, but I encourage his colleagues to rethink what is a very, very reasonable amendment.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Klein.

Mr. Coolahan: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. Thanks for the comments on that from the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. He hasn't done anything to change my mind about not supporting this amendment because, really, there are rights in this bill that should never ever – ever – be considered for revocation.

As I said earlier, you know, we did listen to Albertans in crafting this bill. It's a good bill. It includes protection from losing one's job for caring for a loved one, protection from losing one's job for being sick, protection for young people that work, protection from losing one's job when fleeing domestic violence, protection to ensure fair pay and breaks. One piece that I'm particularly happy with in this bill is that employees will not be held responsible and docked pay for dine-and-dash or gas-and-dash incidents. [interjections] Hear, hear.

Madam Chair, the gas-and-dash death of Maryam Rashidi occurred in my constituency of Calgary-Klein, only blocks from my house. In fact, that morning I was taking my daughter with me to the local hardware store, and we were just moments away from seeing the incident happen. You know, the reasons why Ms Rashidi did what she did are unclear. However, I believe the new legislation prohibiting employees from being held responsible for missing money and items will prevent this from happening in the future. I spoke at Ms Rashidi's funeral, and I never want to have to do that again, and I don't want another family to suffer in this way.

You know, we've been hearing a lot of misunderstanding about unions from across the way, particularly around the Rand formula, and sadly some of you even disparaged the work ethic of unionized employees. It's shameful. They talk of union thugs using intimidation to get union cards signed. Well, Madam Chair, during my time as a business representative for the United Utility Workers' Association I didn't participate in recruiting or union drives because the UUA is not a union that actively recruits. My job saw me focusing on collective bargaining, grievances, and representing people in front of arbitration. But we hear the opposition speaking of people being forced into a union. Well, yes, some people aren't happy that being part of a union is a term of employment at a place of work. But these same individuals who are unhappy with being in a union always change their mind when they see the professional representation that they receive should there be an incident of discipline in the workplace and that they have access to legal representation if necessary and that they have an entire union in their corner.

7:40

Madam Chair, you know, the noise coming from the opposition in regard to the bill hiding changes to the labour code behind changes to employment standards is utter nonsense. They simply don't want a card check system because, yes, this could potentially make it easier for unions to organize in a workplace. But let's be clear: this is not guaranteed. There's still a lot of work to do to procure a union and get certified.

You know, the opposition is using an argument about unions intimidating employees to sign a card, but an associate professor of labour relations at Athabasca University, Dr. Bob Barnettson, recently wrote that during his time on the labour board he heard one complaint – this was two years – of union intimidation and hundreds regarding employers intimidating employees during a vote. Now, he also said that, on balance, card check appears to result in workers being better able to choose whether or not they want to unionize free from intimidation than certification votes do.

In contrast to the opposition equating a secret ballot vote as the most democratic way, like a general election for members of government, he makes the salient point that government doesn't typically threaten to take away your job if you vote against them. That's the difference. This legislation is in no way meant to vilify employers. The vast majority of employers are good employers, just as the vast majority of unions and union leaders provide excellent representation.

To Dr. Barnettson's point, an acquaintance of mine recently told me a story about how he and some colleagues attempted to form a union at the company he was working at. They started by signing cards, and they got 75 per cent. On the subsequent secret ballot the vote went down to 55 per cent. Now, trying to get a first contract proved impossible. We were talking earlier about how important first contract arbitration is. There was even a union buster brought out from Toronto, Madam Chair, a professional union buster. Now, perhaps there's a line of work for some of our opposition members who don't fit in with the UCP.

Anyhow, this union buster was successful in getting meetings with employees behind closed doors before and after the vote, and he employed many devious tactics and intimidation, bringing the vote down and ultimately crushing the hopes of forming a union in that place of employment. What really stuck with me from this story was what this union buster actually said after he had accomplished what he had set out to accomplish, and it was this: "I love Alberta. I can do whatever I want and get away with it." Shameful. Is this what the opposition calls the Alberta advantage?

This is why they oppose the card check system. They even oppose the very reasonable middle ground being presented in Bill 17. Nothing is perfect, Madam Chair – we understand that – but Bill 17 makes life better for all working Albertans.

Madam Chair, I'm also very pleased about the changes to employment standards around layoffs and provisions around enforcement. You know, of course, as I said, the majority of companies comply with the code even when it comes to layoffs. Again, in my previous role one of the biggest issues I had with employment standards was that employers sometimes did not take employment standards seriously. One example was when I was dealing with several layoffs. In the act the employer has to pay out all monies owed within a few days or a week, depending on the circumstances. Well, this was a global company, a major company that wasn't paying all the monies owed to these laid-off employees for up to eight weeks. When I phoned the employment standards, basically what they said was: by the time we resolve this, investigate it, they will have been paid, and therefore your complaint would be moot. What this does is strengthen that, give the administrative penalties, and then it makes employers take seriously their obligation to pay employees in layoffs.

I will just close on this amendment by saying that, you know, Madam Chair, I urge the opposition to put aside its partisanship, its ideology that continually champions keeping Alberta's workers at a disadvantage to other workers in this country. I urge the opposition to understand that this legislation is for all workers, not just unionized workers. I urge the opposition to support Alberta families and ensure that one does not lose their job because they must care for a loved one. I urge the opposition to support those who seek a union in their place of work in a fair and democratic way, and I urge the opposition to support fair wages and breaks for all Albertans. Ultimately, I urge the opposition to take a break from being themselves and support Alberta's workers in having the same protection under the law as workers in other provinces.

As such, Madam Chair, I will not be supporting this amendment. Thank you for your time.

The Chair: Are there any other speakers to amendment A20? Are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated the motion on amendment A20 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 7:47 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Clark	Gill	Loewen
Cooper	Gotfried	McIver
Cyr	Hanson	Orr
Ellis	Hunter	van Dijken

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Gray	Phillips
Babcock	Hinkley	Piquette
Bilous	Hoffman	Renaud
Carlier	Jansen	Rosendahl
Carson	Kleinsteuber	Sabir
Ceci	Littlewood	Schmidt
Coolahan	Loyola	Schreiner
Cortes-Vargas	McPherson	Shepherd
Dach	Miller	Sigurdson

Feehan	Miranda	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	Nielsen	Turner
Ganley	Notley	Woollard
Goehring
Totals:	For – 12	Against – 37

[Motion on amendment A20 lost]

The Chair: Before we continue on Bill 17, I've had a request to revert briefly to Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair, and thank you, colleagues. It is my honour to introduce to you and through the chair to everyone three people who are very important to me. First, Don Macfarlane, who currently works at the U of A for the information services and technology team. Don is a member of NASA and was the Alberta NDP candidate in Strathmore-Brooks in the 2001 and 2004 elections. With Don is Katrina Foster, a strong supporter of and treasurer for the Edmonton-Mill Woods NDP, who has been known to the current Minister of Children's Services since they were teenagers. Katrina has lived in the Cayman Islands for almost a decade, and since returning she's been working for the labour movement, AFL, CUPE 30 and is a proud member of COPE 458. Both Don and Trina are alumni of the TUXIS Parliament of Alberta.

Finally, the last person is Neal Gray, my husband, who has come to watch us many times but has never wanted to be introduced until now. I would like to highlight that Neal has himself been a political candidate. He works with me on all things NDP and has run federally in the past. He is an information technology guru who works for the RCMP, and I could not do what I do every day, in and out, without his support. I'm so proud to be able to introduce him and have him stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act (continued)

The Chair: Back on Bill 17. Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments? The hon. Member for Calgary-West.

Mr. Ellis: Thank you, Madam Chair. I do have an amendment here for Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. I'll wait until you receive it before I continue on.

The Chair: This will be amendment A21.
Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Ellis: Thank you, Madam Chair. I would like to move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 100 as follows. In subsection (1) by striking out "except section 44," and substituting "except sections 9 and 44," and by adding the following after subsection (2):

- (3) Section 9 is deemed to have come into force on the day the Bill to enact the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act received first reading.

Madam Chair, this is a very important amendment, I think, not only to me but, I believe, to the members of this House as well as the people of Alberta. I'd like to certainly commend the government. As I was reading this, you know, of course, this refers to deductions from earnings: "an employer must not deduct [or] set off against or claim from the earnings of an employee," and, of course, there are some subsections that were not there before, and I think that is very important.

You know, in my former career as a police officer, sadly, I've been to many dine and dashes, many gas drive-offs, and I can tell you that it is completely unfair to the employee who is a server or possibly a bartender or somebody in that sort of capacity when a criminal offence occurs and they are the victim of that criminal offence although, technically, under law the establishment itself is the victim. But to have an employer or, sadly, a manager essentially force that employee to pay when they themselves become the victim of that crime I think is completely unfair. So it's great to see that this stuff has been rectified in this particular act. You know, of course, according to my amendment we just want to make sure that this comes into effect right away because this will have a very positive impact on the people of Alberta and, certainly, people within that industry.

As we go on to the section regarding gas drive-offs, this is a section that really can save lives. What people don't realize in regard to this is that sometimes – of course, I don't want to put everybody in this boat, but there are some employees and gas station attendants where, whether it be the owners or the management, again, they make them pay for that gas drive-off, another practice that is completely unfair. You find that, you know, that person who is working as an attendant, they're the ones that sometimes are chasing after that vehicle and many of whom, sadly, have either been seriously injured or in some cases have died. Sometimes in certain situations it's because that person is going: "I'm going to be out that $60. I'm going to be out that $100. Maybe that's all I made during the day." And that's completely unfair, that the employer has put that person, essentially, on the hook for that.

8:10

With this amendment, again, it's consistent, of course, with the law itself. All we're asking in this is that it be enacted right away because it's going to have a positive impact on the people in, of course, the customer service industry when it comes to restaurants, but it's also going to have a very positive impact in the world of the gas stations and where fuel is being pumped. I think employees need to know that if somebody commits a criminal offence, they're not the ones that need to be responsible for the monetary loss that the owner of that gas station is going to incur.

I certainly encourage all of my colleagues in this House to support this amendment. I believe that is something that should be enacted immediately, as per what is stated here in this amendment. I certainly encourage all members of the House to support this.

Thank you very much, Madam Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair, and thank you very much to the member for working with the government in reviewing Bill 17 and thinking about the impacts that the various sections will have on the very real lives of the Albertans that this bill is going to protect and improve their quality of life and their work-life balance and a number of other things. The section that the member is highlighting is very, very important to me.

Since becoming Minister of Labour, there have been deaths due to gas and dash. That's something I take very seriously because every employee should be able to go to work, to do their job, and to come home safely at the end of the day. Incidents like those are preventable, and they should not be happening.

Some of the actions that I've taken, that we've taken as a government include doing some very specific inspections of convenience and gas stations where our occupational health and safety officers went and did proactive inspections across Alberta, urban and rural, talking to the employees about their health and safety, how things are set up, if they understand current employment standards rules and were issuing tickets when they found that there might be a deficiency or misunderstanding. They made a point of talking to the employers, the owner-operators, and they followed up at every single station to make sure that any improvements that were needed for safety and security were followed through on. Those proactive inspections continue through the OH and S team, and I'm very proud of the work that they're doing.

In this amendment to Bill 17 we are clarifying that an employer cannot deduct from pay gas and dash or dine and dash, but I do want to stress that that clarification and talking about that today are very important, making sure that that's clear. Gas and dash and dine and dash are currently – through our current employment standards you cannot deduct that from an employee's pay. This clarification is going to help with understanding. It makes it more readable. But we want to assure everyone that that has always been the case, so when our occupational health and safety officers have gone to visit and explained these things, making sure that employees understood. That's part of the training.

The change that has been brought forward adjusts the coming-into-force date, so upon first reading, essentially making this one item out of Bill 17, which is a fairly large series of changes given how overdue a lot of this work was and how important it is to the protection of Albertans to the fairness for workplaces for Albertans. One of my concerns is making sure that we're communicating clearly with our stakeholders, including employers, particularly employers who are going to need to be responsible to update their systems, to update their processes, and to enforce and start following Bill 17 once it comes into force.

Through the consultations, which were fulsome, over 5,000 Albertans provided surveys. We had round-tables. I personally met with stakeholder groups like the Alberta Enterprise Group, Merit Contractors, different business leaders, chambers of commerce, and so on. One of the things that I heard was that we as a government need to support the employers as we're making these changes, so my ministry is going to be preparing materials, brochures, pamphlets, online materials, in-person sessions to really help make sure that the changes that are laid out in Bill 17 are understood so that as we move towards the coming-into-force date of January 1, people know what to expect and can update their systems as needed. I don't want to confuse these issues by changing the coming-into-force date to different times. I think that January 1 for our employment standards section is what needs to happen to make sure that we give our employers time on Bill 17, that we listen to the feedback we have. I've worked very hard to try and put forward a moderate, balanced series of changes, listening to feedback from employers.

For that reason, I will not support the amendment, but I appreciate very much the member opposite for submitting it. I thank him for his contributions, but I will not be supporting this amendment. I think having a single coming-into-force date for these changes and allowing my ministry time to prepare the materials so that they can be understood and the enforcement can be turned on is the best way to move forward.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A21?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for amendment A21 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 8:17 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Clark	Gotfried	McIver
Cooper	Hanson	Nixon
Cyr	Hunter	Orr
Ellis	Loewen	van Dijken
Gill

8:20

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	Phillips
Babcock	Jansen	Piquette
Bilous	Kleinsteuber	Renaud
Carlier	Larivee	Rosendahl
Carson	Littlewood	Sabir
Ceci	Loyola	Schmidt
Coolahan	McCuaig-Boyd	Schreiner
Cortes-Vargas	McKittrick	Shepherd
Dach	McPherson	Sigurdson
Feehan	Miller	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	Miranda	Turner
Ganley	Nielsen	Westhead
Gray	Notley	Woollard
Hinkley

Totals:	For – 13	Against – 40
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A21 lost]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'd like to stand to introduce another amendment.

The Chair: This will be amendment A22.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you, ma'am. I'll read the amendment and then just give a brief explanation.

The Chair: Go ahead.

Mr. Hanson: I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended as follows: Under section A, section 100(1) is amended by striking out "January 1, 2018" and substituting "September 1, 2017". Under B, section 146 is struck out and the following is substituted:

Coming into force of Part 2

146(1) This Part, except sections 103(b)(iii) and (c), 104, 128 and 145, comes into force on January 1, 2018.

(2) Sections 103(b)(iii) and (c), 104 and 145 come into force on September 1, 2017

(3) Section 128 with respect to the enactment of section 95.2(2) of the Labour Relations Code is deemed to have come into force on the day the Bill to enact the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act received first reading.

Basically, what this tries to do is – you know, I looked at the coming-into-force dates, and I've listened to many of the arguments from the government when we tried to put this bill off and get it into committee so that there could be further consultation with business owners in Alberta and just regular Albertans on this very important labour bill. The government's argument was: "This bill is far too important. We must get these employment standard changes into effect as soon as possible, so there's no time to go out and consult. We've done enough consultation, and we're going to put this bill forward." Then when you look at the coming-into-force dates, you see that the all-important labour standards don't come into effect until January 1, 2018, while all of the sections that deal with union certification and all that stuff, that's supposed to be less important, come into force on September 1, 2017.

What this amendment serves to do is to give the government an opportunity to put their money where their mouth is. If this is really the all-important section of the legislation, the employment standards, let's switch the dates. Put the union stuff on January 1, and put the employment standards stuff, that's so important, on September 1. Now, I would personally like to see that section come into effect immediately, but, you know, we're going to give them a little bit of space here and allow employers to prepare and all that.

I think that switching these dates and, you know, showing Albertans what you really mean by this legislation – and if you really mean that this is the important part of the legislation, then you'll have no issue with switching those dates. I'd appreciate to hear some comments on that.

Thank you.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A22? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Thank you to the member for bringing the amendment forward. As the minister had pointed out a little bit earlier in the last amendment, we had talked about how, you know, the employers need some time to implement some of the items. There are cost factors that are involved for the employers in order to update these kinds of things. This is pretty much the exact same thing that we're talking about here. Employers do need to have enough time to be able to adapt and react to these things as well as with some of the regulations in terms of penalties. We need to have the time to bring those forward as well.

Again, I'll thank the member for bringing this forward. I won't be able to support this at this time, and I would encourage other members of the House to not support this as well.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. It's my privilege to rise and speak in favour of this amendment. I think it's well thought out. When the government introduced this bill, they were tripping over themselves talking about how important the employee safety elements of this bill were, and they didn't want to talk nearly as much about the doing a favour for their friends sections. It was all about the safety, all about the extended leaves. It was all about that.

Well, here is a chance for the government to be honest and say: "Yeah, you know, we meant what we said. We want to put the personal safety things first." In fact, in the bill they put it last, so here's a chance for the government's actions to match their words, and I will be supporting this amendment. If the government indeed takes the opportunity for their actions to match their words the least bit seriously, I know that they also will support this amendment.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I guess my question to the Member for Edmonton-Decore is – the argument that he just made there was that the businesses that they had consulted with said that they needed more time to be able to implement this, and this is the reason why they would not be supporting this. I agree a hundred per cent with you, Member, and I believe that the businesses, from what I've talked to, agreed that they need more time to be able to consult and to talk to the government about these issues. We've brought forward reasonable amendments that would help the government give them the time, but the government has refused that.

What we're seeing here today, Madam Chair, is a government that is being disingenuous to those people who they have said that they have consulted with. They refuse to do the proper consultation. We have given them ample time through proper amendments that we've brought forward, but each time they have said: no, we've given the right amount of time. Yet I've just heard, from what I remember, the Member for Edmonton-Decore saying that the businesses need more time in order to be able to implement and that this is the reason why they can't do that switch.

Now, you cannot have it both ways, because this is exactly what I heard. So if this is about the compassion part of it, which – we've already said many times, Madam Chair, that we are willing to pass it immediately if it is about the compassionate part. The part that we have problems with is the labour part, that we need to be able to actually have that consultation time and that we have not had that opportunity with Albertans to be able to give us that feedback so that we can get this right.

The other point that I wanted to make is that when the members opposite talk about that there hasn't been the labour peace, you know – I would have to say that I think we have had labour peace here, but let's just go with their argument that we haven't had labour peace. The reality is that if we haven't had the labour peace, what they're saying is: "Let the pendulum swing to the complete opposite side, and let's go against what's happened and create no peace. Let's create the war and strife between the employee and the employer."

8:30

Now, I have to say, Madam Chair, that it doesn't surprise me. History is replete with examples of socialist governments that do the same thing every single time. There are lots of historical examples where a socialist government has said: we're going to create that strife between the employee and the employer. That's the only way that they can get the votes. It's called the politics of envy. So when they actually go down this road – I have no problem with them going down this road. Just call it that. Just say that they're going to do that. This is exactly what they've been doing in the past. It's exactly what they're going to do now. Tell Albertans all about it. Tell them that this is why they're doing it. This is a political move. This is a strategy that they've been using for years and years and years throughout history. I just think: come clean; let Albertans know this.

I think this is a very reasonable, well-thought-out amendment that I have no problem supporting, and I will be in support of this.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. I'm not going to address all of what the member opposite just said. I'm going to stick to the parts dealing with the amendment here, and I really just want to make clear to the members opposite why they should be voting against this amendment.

It appears that the members opposite think that the employment standards section only provides for some leaves. That is all they seem to be referencing. They seem to have missed the significant amount of work that we have done on our basic standards around calculations for overtime, vacations, holidays, breaks, key things that impact employers, reasonable changes that make sure that all Alberta employees are treated similarly to other jurisdictions, that update our regulations. For example, someone who works over five hours: for every five hours they get a 30-minute break. Right now if someone works over five hours, they get a 30-minute break, and that's it. Someone who works 12 hours just gets a 30-minute break. This is very different from other jurisdictions. For those types of changes, Madam Chair, employers, who often have human resources systems that run their operations, need time to adjust. These employment standards could impact large employers and small employers.

The other major change that the opposition seems to be ignoring is the fact that Alberta has been the only jurisdiction that did not have an enforcement and administration system in their employment standards. Now, what does that mean, Madam Chair? That means the ability, for example, to fine an employer who is taking advantage of their employees or perhaps an increase in the fine when an employer is repeatedly violating employment standards. That enforcement administration system is not something that my ministry can just turn on tomorrow. That is something where we are going to need to update IT systems. We are going to need to train people. We need to train our employment standards officers on all of these changes.

When the members opposite talk about how they want to pass the leaves today, I appreciate that, Madam Chair, but they are ignoring a huge portion of our employment standards changes that are dramatically important to Alberta employers and workers. We need time both for the employers to update their systems and to understand the rules so we can send this information out and teach people what's changing and also for our ministry, our government departments to update our processes so that we have an enforcement system that we can be proud of and so that we make sure that bad actors in our province have a fine system that holds them to account. We've said it before, and I'll say it again. The majority of employers in Alberta are great employers, but we need to have a system that makes sure that everyone is playing fairly, that we have a level playing field for all employers.

I hope that clarifies for the members opposite why it's a bad idea to start rushing things when it comes to the implementation. I hope that clarifies it. I'm very proud of the work we did bringing forward Bill 17 and of the consultations we did. We've got a measured bill in front of us with fair and balanced changes, and we're going to work with our partners, with businesses, on that implementation in a reasonable time frame. The members opposite trying to rush us is just not going to make sense.

I will not be supporting this amendment. Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I rise in response to the minister's comments. It's disingenuous and it's almost embarrassing, what we just watched here. The fact is that this minister wants to stand up and claim again that it's about the humanitarian issues associated with this bill, and we've given this government every opportunity to get those through immediately.

What are they doing, Madam Chair? They're putting it off until next year and rushing this bill through so that they can get their ideological portions of this bill through, that they didn't consult with Albertans on, while the humanitarian portions of this bill they've pushed off till next year. Albertans can see right through that. The fact is that this is a government that already stood in this Chamber in their time in government and accused farmers of trying to kill people. This is how disappointed they are, and that is the most disingenuous thing I've ever seen from a minister.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A22? Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: I just have to say that I agree with the previous member, with what he said. It was like the minister is actually talking through her hat. That's hat with an "h".

Madam Chair, she says she hasn't got time, yet she claims she got a ton of consultation done in six weeks, a ton of consultation, talked to a whole bunch of people, got a whole bunch of work done, lots of preparation. When it suits the minister's purposes, she seems to magically be able to at least claim she got a lot of work done. When it suits Alberta workers, when it actually does something good for them in the good parts of the bill, well, it takes way too long, helping people. She never has time to do the good stuff, but the bad stuff just slides through her ministry like it was no effort at all, Madam Chair. It slides through her ministry. [interjections] I'm glad to hear the Premier trying to shout me down though I have the floor because it was the Premier that two days ago in this House said that she didn't have time to do something in six weeks.

Well, apparently, if it's good for Albertans, the Premier and her minister don't have time to do it. If it's bad for Albertans, it seems like no effort at all; it doesn't take any time at all. Bad stuff flies through the ministry. Bad stuff flies through the Premier's hands. Good stuff that protects Albertans: they just can't quite find the time to get that stuff done. [interjection] They just can't find the time. It's really telling. It's really an indictment of this government's true nature that what they say and what they do are two entirely different things. [interjection] The fact that the Premier is trying to outshout me while I've got the floor tells me how guilty she feels about this, and it makes me happy to hear her reveal how she really feels, unless she's willing to get up on her feet, and I'd love to hear that.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A22? Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Madam Chair, I have got to speak about this because the minister has just accused us of trying to force this timeline. She has said many, many times in this Chamber that they did extensive consultation in six weeks. In six weeks they got all of the consultation done that they needed to do. I will remind you that what we are asking them to do is to implement this in double the time, 12 weeks. That's what we're talking about. So they would have 12 weeks to be able to get it all taken care of, yet six weeks is all it took for this government to be able to get all of the consultation done right.

This is complete hypocrisy, Madam Chair, for her to say that six weeks is fine to be able to consult all businesses in the province, yet we're going to give her 12 weeks, double the time, in order to be able to make this happen. Completely disingenuous.

The Chair: Any further speakers to amendment A22? Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A22 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 8:39 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Fraser	Loewen
Clark	Gill	McIver
Cooper	Gotfried	Orr
Cyr	Hanson	Starke
Ellis	Hunter	van Dijken

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hinkley	Notley
Babcock	Hoffman	Piquette
Bilous	Jansen	Renaud
Carlier	Kazim	Rosendahl
Carson	Kleinsteuber	Sabir
Coolahan	Larivee	Schmidt
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Schreiner
Dach	Loyola	Shepherd
Dang	McCuaig-Boyd	Sigurdson
Drever	McKitrick	Sucha
Feehan	McPherson	Turner
Fitzpatrick	Miller	Westhead
Ganley	Miranda	Woollard
Gray	Nielsen

Totals:	For – 15	Against – 41
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A22 lost]

The Chair: We're back on the main bill. Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment to propose on Bill 17.

The Chair: This is amendment A23.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. van Dijken: Okay. Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 113(1), in the proposed section 34, (a) in subsection (2)(d) by striking out “subject to subsection (8),”; (b) in subsection (6) by striking out “subject to subsection (8),”; (c) by striking out subsections (8), (9), and (10); (d) in subsection (11) by striking out “or (10).”

Essentially, what I'm trying to propose here, Madam Chair, is a recognition of the current system of union certification through a secret ballot and the recognition of that being an integral part of a democratic society, that we are able to enjoy the freedom of a secret ballot, to vote our conscience in the privacy of a booth or a secret vote.

You know, when we look at the proposed legislation here, where the government is proposing that if a union is able to present cards representing over 65 per cent of the workforce, then they would be eligible to be certified with the labour board – secret ballots have been put in place to ensure that all individuals in a democratic process are able to vote their conscience without undue pressure from others around them. With regard to unionization certification we are looking to ensure that employees are protected from the intimidation processes and intimidation from both employers and union organizers. It's a critical part of being able to stem the tide of abuse and reducing the pressure that employees feel when they're asked to sign union cards. They also have the ability to vote their conscience if they're receiving undue pressure from their employer.

The secret ballot is essentially a major release valve for that pressuring and harassing of workers to get card checked. They can get you back in the secret ballot. Can you imagine, Madam Chair, where you have to decide to vote for or against a union while union organizers or friends or colleagues are sitting right there with you or behind you, looking on? There is a significant amount of peer pressure that is understood or can be recognized in that situation, where individuals, employees in a workforce are feeling the pressure from their co-workers. They're feeling pressure from union organizers, especially if they're superior in their position in the workforce, to actually sign the union card. At the end of the day, no longer is a union vote a secret vote when you go to this card check system.

Madam Chair, even the government admits that the secret ballot gets an average of 10 to 15 per cent less support than the card check shows – and we know there are cases where it is much more than 10 to 15 per cent – so how can we justify that this is a system that is protecting employees and protecting the rights of employees to their democratic rights within a democratic society?

Having an aggressive organizer or someone in a foreman or a senior position pressuring you to sign a card, I would suggest, is not fair. Under this type of legislation I believe that it would actually get worse, that there's no ability for the employee that is being pressured to sign a union card to be able to decide that they're not in favour of unionization in that workforce, whereas when they have that secret ballot – you know, that's why there's typically less support in a secret ballot vote than what shows up when members sign a card. Those are typically employees that just want to have the union organizers or their fellow co-workers leave them alone: “Okay. Let's sign the card. We'll put it to a vote in the workplace.” I think that's fair, and that's proper, and that's a very legitimate way to understand what the true feelings of your workforce are.

8:50

You know, like, what we're currently under in the province of Alberta is where the secret ballot would be a counterbalance to keep the way from tactics or ruthless endeavours by either employers or union organizers. I think we would be kidding ourselves if we sit here – and we even heard members earlier talking about the situation with my fellow colleague, where that particular union was known for their abusive ways of trying to get members to follow their guidelines. I believe that there are some unscrupulous union organizers out there, and there are businesses that need to be held in check also. I believe that the secret ballot gives the employee the freedom to be able to vote their conscience without the pressure and without the knowledge, necessarily, of their co-workers, their employer, their union organizers as to what their vote was. That's why we utilize it, so that we can come to a true understanding of the will of the workplace.

You know, it's interesting, Madam Chair, that the government is proposing a system, and they claim that it's a system that's been adopted in most other jurisdictions in the country, yet as I look across the country, in British Columbia a secret ballot vote is always required for certification for a union. Saskatchewan: a vote is always required. Manitoba: a vote is always required. We have Newfoundland and Labrador: a vote is always required. Nova Scotia: a vote is required. In Ontario a vote is always required.

We're looking at even individual cases where they have gone to a card check system and found out some of the difficulties that are faced, with abuse of employees. That type of activity starts to increase, and then they go back to a secret ballot system to ensure that the employees can get the negative pressures off their back. They'll sign the union card and bring it to a secret ballot vote, and they can move on with their lives without feeling the pressure from the union organizers.

You know, I think it's critical that we recognize the democratic right of all individuals and employees, especially at this time, that we recognize that we need to protect the rights of the employees from the abuses of other people within the workforce that will be very adamantly trying to ensure that they get their way with these employees. I don't believe that it's fair to the employee to be under that kind of extra pressure. The fact that we had a secret ballot in place allowed that employee to vote their true conscience without the pressure from others around them because they were able to do that in secret.

With that, I'd like to encourage all members to vote in favour of this amendment to ensure that employees are protected from abuse and that we ensure that the interests of all Albertans are recognized and that the right of a democratic vote continues to be established in the province of Alberta.

Thank you.

The Chair: Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. Wow. You know, I don't know exactly where to start on this one. Continually through this entire debate we have seen members of the opposition vilify people from the labour union. I can tell you from first-hand experience that nothing could be farther from the truth. I'm getting a little tired of these folks telling everyday Albertans: because you're a union member, you're going to pressure, bust into somebody's house to make them vote. Come on, guys. Like, let's start giving Albertans here a little bit of credit, okay? I don't know if any of you have done any organizing, but I've done some organizing. I've been very, very respectful of people's time. I've been very, very respectful of how they want to place their vote. [interjections] I'd appreciate it if I could have the floor because I've given you the floor.

Madam Chair, maybe the folks across the floor didn't realize this, but votes that are supervised by the Labour Relations Board don't allow for people to look over somebody's shoulder while they're taking a vote. We're talking about 65 per cent of the workplace, a very, very clear majority, that is looking to unionize. That is their right, so quite honestly I cannot support this amendment here.

You know, when we hear about all these jurisdictions that don't have it: there are a lot that do, and it's working just fine.

Madam Chair, I'm going to urge all members across this House to not support this legislation. It's time that we stop this rhetoric that we're hearing about unions because if you knew anything about unions, you'd know that's not the case.

The Chair: Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair. Interesting to hear from the Member for Edmonton-Decore and look through his rose-coloured glasses and believe that there are no individuals that would put undue pressure on employees to sign union cards. He talks about how he's getting tired of hearing from the opposition concerns that we have with regard to union tactics to try and grow their business.

At the same time I hear from the other side that they're vilifying businesses that are not living up to the employment standards that are being put before us. On the majority of the employment standards I would suggest that most employers within Alberta have been very fair with their employees. The excuse that the government is giving is: well, we've got to cover off for a few.

That's exactly what we're trying to do here with the secret ballot. We're able to ensure that we do not have individuals within the union movement or even employers that would use undue pressure to influence their employees from being able to have their right exercised through a secret ballot. We have the ability to have that relief valve of a secret ballot, that protects the rights of the individuals, the employees that are deciding on whether or not they want to move forward with this in their workforce. I believe that that's a fair decision, to protect that decision, and that that employee has that freedom to do that in the secret ballot vote.

The member opposite wants to label us as being against unions. Nothing is further from the truth. I just want it to be a fair process that allows the employee to feel like they are being protected from the thuggery of . . .

An Hon. Member: Both sides.

Mr. van Dijken: . . . both sides, the employers and the unions. I see it on both sides. I give you that. I see it on both sides. I can see where the potential is on both sides.

At the same time, we have to recognize that and we need to put legislation forward that will stand the test of time and be fair to all because otherwise we're going to be back here in a few years recognizing that this didn't quite get covered off and that we're going to have cases where, like in other provinces, they've had to return to the secret ballot. What we're trying to do here is to ensure that we don't go down a road that we're just going to have to decide to change in time.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'll be brief. I like a secret ballot. I think a secret ballot is one of those cornerstones of democracy. I mean, that's kind of a remarkably obvious statement. And some of the things I've heard tonight are around: well, 65 per cent; gosh, that's a high bar. I have two points to make. One, I would love the opportunity and I encourage the government in the next election to please campaign on this promise. Campaign on this promise. Go door-knocking in your constituency, and if you can get 65 per cent of your constituents to sign a piece of paper saying that you ought to still be the MLA, you get to be the MLA without a vote. That's it. That's number one.

9:00

The second point, being the point of the hon. Member for Calgary-Klein, in talking about how difficult it is to get 65 per cent, Madam Chair, is that if the threshold were 100 per cent, I would still be against it because what's wrong with a secret ballot? I don't understand the problem we're trying to solve. If we set the threshold at 100 per cent – that's maybe not a bad idea for an amendment. I don't know how late we want to be here. Maybe I'll try that. But if we set the threshold at 100 per cent, it's still out in the open who signed and who didn't sign, and that just makes the process open to threats and intimidation or to the potential for that. Getting rid of the secret ballot solves a problem we don't have, and it's really unfortunate because, you know, the members may be right that 65 per cent may very well be a difficult threshold to hit, and it may in fact not be used all that often.

So as an attempt to provide an olive branch to their base, they have managed to make a lot of right-thinking Albertans – and by right I mean fair-thinking Albertans that just believe fundamentally in democracy and, yes, right-thinking Albertans in the other sense as well, of course. But fair-thinking Albertans who believe in democracy can't possibly support this. It's a concept foreign to all of us in the province of Alberta.

I will absolutely support this amendment and look forward to bringing an amendment of my own which will attempt to address some of these challenges as well.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A23? Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Yes. Thank you, Madam Chair. I think it's critical – and the Member for Calgary-Elbow highlighted it – that we recognize this as a basic democratic right. We also have to recognize that – I don't see that the system is broken. I don't understand why this government believes that the system is broken. It has everything to do, in my opinion, with that they believe there should be more union workplaces in Alberta. But I actually believe that Alberta has been able to enjoy the creation of wealth and that employers and employees have been able to come to a good position of being able to share that amongst themselves. That has created a system that all sides benefit from, and we've been able to live in relative labour peace for several decades now.

You know, it appears to me that removing the secret ballot is more about trying to make it a simplification. The minister has said this, that it's a simplification for unionization within the province of Alberta. I don't understand the simplification as being necessary. It looks to me like the government is playing into the hands of the unions here to put in rules that will help the unions in their business development strategies more than protecting Albertans and ensuring that Albertans are able to enjoy living in a free and democratic society that protects those rights.

So I think we highlight here that the secret ballot has been able to protect the rights of all individuals, the Albertans that we are here to serve.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A23?

Are you ready for the question?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A23 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 9:04 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Gotfried	McIver
Clark	Hanson	Nixon
Cooper	Hunter	Orr
Cyr	Loewen	Starke
Ellis	MacIntyre	van Dijken
Gill

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Jansen	Nielsen
Bilous	Kazim	Piquette
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Renaud
Carson	Larivee	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Littlewood	Sabir
Dach	Loyola	Schmidt
Dang	Mason	Schreiner
Drever	McCuaig-Boyd	Shepherd
Feehan	McKittrick	Sigurdson
Fitzpatrick	McPherson	Sucha
Gray	Miller	Turner
Hinkley	Miranda	Westhead
Hoffman

Totals:	For – 16	Against – 37
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A23 lost]

The Chair: Further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Yes, Madam Chair. I do have an amendment, which I will hand over right now and await your receipt of that, and then I will start speaking.

The Chair: This is amendment A24.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. In light of that last amendment to restore the secret ballot process failing and other amendments in efforts to eliminate the card check process – oh, I apologize. I have to read out the amendment. My apologies. I will do that now.

I move that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 113(1) in the proposed section 34(2) by striking out “and” at the end of clause (d) and by adding “and” at the end of clause (e) and by adding the following after clause (e):

- (f) the trade union or a person acting on behalf of a trade union did not engage in a prohibited practice under section 151(f) against any of the employees in the unit the Board considers an appropriate unit for collective bargaining.

I will just talk about why I've come up with this amendment and then dive into the details of specifically what it does. I don't like the card check process, Madam Chair. I don't think that's any secret, but given that we've seen repeated attempts to restore the fundamental principle of a secret ballot fail in this House, I thought I would do whatever I can to try to improve the card check process.

9:10

One of the biggest challenges to the card check process is the perception if not the reality – one would hope not the reality. But at the very, very least it's the perception of intimidation as part of the certification process. What I hope this amendment does is that it strikes a reasonable balance, which I think actually could be a win if the card check process is to move forward. It looks like it is, whether we like it or not. So if it's going to be there, what can we do to make it as good as it can possibly be? Make a bad idea as good as it can be, I guess, is sometimes all we can try to do in opposition. Hopefully, Madam Chair, this could be seen as a win for unions because it strengthens the process. In the case where the 65 per cent threshold is met, it removes the perception that intimidation happened.

As the bill is currently written and as I interpret it, the Labour Relations Board does not have the power to investigate or could perhaps be interpreted not to have the power to investigate. Let's just look to section 113(1) of Bill 17, that repeals section 34 and replaces it with a new section 34, which outlines what the Labour Relations Board can do when certifying an application for unionization. The heading is Inquiry into Certification Application, and 34(2) reads:

- (2) Before granting an application for certification, the Board shall satisfy itself, after any investigation that it considers necessary, that

- (a) the applicant is a trade union,
- (b) the application is timely,
- (c) the union applied for, or a unit reasonably similar to it, is an appropriate unit for collective bargaining,
- (d) subject to subsection (8), the employees in the unit the Board considers an appropriate unit for collective bargaining have voted, at a representation vote conducted by the Board, to select the trade union as their bargaining agent, and
- (e) the application is not prohibited by section 38.

What we're doing is adding a section (f) to that to ensure that the Labour Relations Board can also consider whether or not the trade union or a person acting on behalf of a trade union did not engage in a prohibited practice under section 151(f), which I'll get to in a minute, against any of the employees in the bargaining unit. What this says is that the Labour Relations Board will be able to review and include coercion and intimidation as one of the areas that they consider when inquiring into the certification of an application. If this test is met, we can be satisfied, and as long as the Labour Relations Board is satisfied, I think Albertans can be satisfied that no coercion or intimidation happened. That's obviously a concern we've heard repeated again and again.

Any process that's open, that involves a vote that is not a secret ballot process is open to this risk. I'm not suggesting that it happens every single time. I'm sure it doesn't happen every single time, but it's certainly open to the risk. What evidence do we have of that? The evidence that was presented by the government and by Mr. Sims is that when there's a card check process that takes place that is followed by a secret ballot, as Bill 17 will enable for those card checks that achieve 40 to 65 per cent – when there's a secret ballot vote that follows a card check process, that vote tends to be 15 per cent lower than the card check process.

Now, why would that be? Well, I wonder why that is. That might be that people feel pressured into signing a card in open, plain view of their colleagues – they actually don't want the unionization drive to happen – and then in the secret ballot process mark an X for no as opposed to yes. The reason that 65 per cent was chosen was because of that 15 per cent difference. Given that, it's very difficult for me to hear from the other side that no intimidation ever happens, that no one is ever leaned on, that no kind of quiet conversations happen in the hallway. When 15 per cent of people are changing their vote, very clearly something has happened. Something is different between what people do in the privacy of a voting box and what happens when it's all in plain view.

To ensure that the system is as sound as it can be, this amendment seeks to enable and ensure that the Labour Relations Board has the power to consider whether or not there was intimidation, a prohibited practice under section 151(f). By the way, the wording that we got for my amendment comes from the current labour code. Section 151(f) is not repealed or amended by Bill 17. It is already today in the labour code, will continue to be in the labour code, and is not changed by Bill 17. It uses almost exactly the same language, which is why we have adopted it here for this amendment.

Again, I'm not a believer that a card check process is appropriate. I don't believe it's necessary. I think it's a step backwards. This amendment attempts to address the greatest shortcoming of a card check process, and I sincerely and genuinely would encourage and hope that the government would consider this amendment and include it in Bill 17 to make what is not a great provision of the bill at least just a little bit better.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A24?

Ms Fitzpatrick: Let me introduce myself. Apart from being the MLA for Lethbridge-East, I was for 32 and a half years with the Public Service Alliance of Canada. I was the person that the opposition referred to as a UT or a UB, a union thug and a union boss. You know what? I'll wear that, and I'll wear it proudly because if a union thug means that I represented my members, I did. I never lost a grievance. I might have gone to mediation to get it finalized, but I never lost one. The one thing that I'm most proud of is that, in fact, I met with management on every issue that came up and tried to resolve it at the lowest possible level, and in most cases I did.

Now I'm going to speak to this amendment. I am opposed to the amendment because in my 32 and a half years of being part of a union that did organize other groups to become part of our union, first of all, we didn't have a 15 per cent difference between the card check and the vote. We always had a higher number who voted to be unionized than signed on the card check. I'm also going to tell you that I was spoken to by management during my 32 and a half years on many occasions and told that my career was at risk if I continued to support the union and do the things that I was obligated to do under the duty of fair representation.

I joined the union because I became a public service worker, and right from the very beginning it was suggested to me that I not sign off on the fight for pay equity for women by not just one boss but probably half a dozen. I told you that I'm a boat rocker, but more importantly I am somebody who fights for equality and fights for what is right. Now, that clause (f), that's already, as you said, in the current legislation, doesn't say anything about those bosses who try to intimidate you to not sign a card. It isn't the union organizers, at least certainly not a good union organizer, who would ever try to intimidate anybody. We talk about what the union does. We talk about the weekend that you enjoy, that's brought to you by the union. We talk about fair, decent wages that are negotiated, not legislated.

9:20

You know what? I'm here as a legislator, and I believe that every time we sit down with any union that represents GOA employees, we do it on a fair and respectful basis. And you know what? One of the biggest things that the union members I represented asked for was respect. The reason many of them joined unions was that they were not respected in their workplaces. They were not valued for the work that they did. And you know what? When there's a union in place, many times that changes because the employer doesn't want unrest in the workplace.

I absolutely support Bill 17 – absolutely – but I can't support this amendment because it's going after the wrong group. Thank you.

The Chair: Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you, Madam Chair. You know, I want to agree with the Member for Lethbridge-East. Intimidation of all kinds is absolutely wrong. So for your employer to come and try to lean on you to not sign off on pay equity, it's absolutely wrong, fundamentally, absolutely, one hundred per cent wrong. It shouldn't have happened under any circumstance. And that's what this amendment seeks to address. There are times when intimidation is going to happen.

Let's also not forget that Bill 17 extends the window for a unionization drive from 90 days to six months – it doubles the time – so that gives more opportunity for people to be influenced one way or the other. That doubling of the time is another big challenge.

Also, I just want to address the question of whether employers are allowed to interfere in the process or intimidate. Of course they aren't. That is already in the legislation, as it should be. Employers should also not be allowed to intimidate, and that is already clearly covered in the labour code. It's already covered in section 149(c) in the current labour code, so it's already there.

Again, I would encourage the government to rethink this, vote in favour, and include this because I do think that although the card check process itself is flawed, this would at least perhaps strengthen it and bring more of a perception of legitimacy.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to this amendment? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Yes. Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm going to speak in favour of the amendment that's being proposed by the Member for Calgary-Elbow. As he's alluded to, it's not ideal. We both very much support the principle of secret ballot, and under this system – the minister calls it a hybrid system – the principle of secret ballot is actually lost and is essentially done away with. We have a situation now where there's potential for individuals to use coercion, intimidation, threats, promises, or any undue influence to move forward.

He also brings up a very valid point that it's now extended into pretty much six months' worth of time where these employees can be intimidated and coerced and can continue to be harassed, so even more time for the employee to finally say: okay; just get off my back. We need to ensure that we recognize that there is a potential for disruption and a potential for employees to feel very much uneasy in their workplace. I don't believe that there's any need for that. If we look at the fact that the secret ballot allowed them to vote their conscience, that's a relief valve there.

I will support this amendment, trying to ensure that we continue to work in this province in a way that protects the employees on the front lines from any undue influence, coercion, intimidation, any of those types of activities that go on and that could possibly be going on. You know, we can all sit here and think that it's not going to happen, but history has shown us that it can happen. In any situation where you are not protecting the democratic principles within a society, these types of situations tend to arise over time. I believe that this amendment helps us to try to stem the tide on those types of situations and those uncomfortable positions that employees might find themselves in.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A24?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A24 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 9:26 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, W.	Gotfried	Schneider
Clark	Hanson	Starke
Cooper	Hunter	Strankman
Cyr	Loewen	Taylor
Drysdale	MacIntyre	van Dijken
Ellis	McIver	Yao
Gill	Pitt

9:30

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Jansen	Renaud
Bilous	Kazim	Rosendahl
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Sabir
Coolahan	Larivee	Schmidt
Dach	Loyola	Schreiner
Dang	Mason	Shepherd
Drever	McCuaig-Boyd	Sigurdson
Feehan	McKittrick	Sucha
Fitzpatrick	Miller	Turner
Gray	Miranda	Westhead
Hinkley	Nielsen	Woollard
Hoffman	Piquette

Totals:	For – 20	Against – 35
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A24 lost]

The Chair: We're back on the main bill. Are there any further questions, comments or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Thank you, Madam Chair. At this time it's a pleasure to introduce an amendment that I believe addresses a concern that was raised a little bit earlier. I'll just hand it to the pages. I'll wait until everyone has had a chance to look at it, but I'll preface the comments without going past the bounds of what is within the standing orders with regard to making reference to a past vote because I don't suggest to do that.

What I do think that I recognize – and I believe that it is a recognition on the part of members on both sides of the Assembly – is that over a period of time Albertans have accessed medical services from an ever-expanding group of medical practitioners. Where perhaps at one time a family physician was the only source of medical assistance or information, we do know that that is changing. One of the key sources of information is nurse practitioners. We had a debate on that on a motion that was brought forward by my colleague the Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti. That debate was held just earlier today.

I do want to give credit where credit is due, and that is certainly to our colleagues on the government side, specifically to the minister in this case, and that is recognizing that there was an opportunity that we shouldn't pass up to improve this piece of legislation.

With that, with those remarks to preface this introduction of this amendment, I would like to move that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended as follows. In part A section 2 is amended by adding the following after clause (g): (g.1) by repealing clause (p) and substituting the following:

(p) "medical certificate" means a statement signed by a physician who is entitled to practise medicine under the laws of the jurisdiction in which the physician practises or by a member of another health profession authorized by the regulations for the purpose of this clause.

In part B section 33 is amended in the proposed section 53.9 by striking out subsection 1(c) and in subsection (4) by striking out "issued by a physician."

In part C section 35 is amended in the proposed section 53.96 by striking out subsection 1(d), in subsection (5) by striking out "issued by a physician," and in the proposed section 53.97(3) by striking out "issued by a physician."

Finally, in part D section 93(a)(viii) is amended by adding the following before the proposed section 138(1)(m): "(1.1) for the purposes of section 1(1)(p), authorizing members of other health professions to sign a medical certificate in respect of one or more provisions of this Act."

A very simple and straight-forward amendment, Madam Chair. The net effect of this – in fact, it serves to combine a couple of other amendments that we had prepared but that we actually had withdrawn after the defeat of the amendment introduced by Grande Prairie-Wapiti – is recognizing that other health professionals are providing services to Albertans, critical services, and in some areas of the province nurse practitioners and other health professionals as well. I think this amendment is good. It is very robust in that it allows for adding additional health professionals to the overall definition whereby people couldn't get the certificate that they required to qualify for the leaves that are specified under the various sections that are specified here.

What this allows for is people who use nurse practitioners, especially in communities, you know, like the one that my colleague represents or like the one I represent in Vermilion, where many, many people have come to rely on nurse practitioners as their number one source of medical assistance and information for them and their families. I think it acknowledges the contributions of nurse practitioners to the overall health care system in Alberta, and I think it also acknowledges that we are moving toward a system of more team-based medical care, especially in the primary care areas, that are so critical to the overall health of Albertans.

I do want to thank the minister for the work that she and her staff did with members of our caucus staff in drafting and sort of reworking this amendment. I can tell you that this amendment had about three or four different drafts before we landed on this. But we have landed on this, and while it may be unusual to see this sort of rapid co-operation between the sides of the House, as we often said or was often said when I hit one of my very rare straight and long golf shots: even a blind pig finds the occasional truffle.

Madam Chair, it's with a great deal of pleasure that I move this amendment, and I hope that it garners the support of members of all sides of the Assembly. I think that it's a positive change to what is otherwise a flawed piece of legislation. It is a change that will provide assistance and provide increased and more ready access to some of the more palatable parts of this particular bill, and therefore I'm entirely in favour of it, and I hope that members on both sides of the House agree with this amendment.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair, and thank you very much to the member for this amendment. I think it's very good. I think the member does himself a disservice referring to himself as a pig, but I do think that he has found a good amendment with this change.

An Hon. Member: Pigs are very clever.

Ms Gray: Pigs are indeed very clever. You're exactly right.

I appreciate what this amendment is doing, which is providing more flexibility and giving us the opportunity to continue to work to make this legislation the best it can be, and by deferring to regulations, we'll have the opportunity to make sure that we're engaging in consultation with the people we need to be talking to.

Madam Chair, I would like to improve upon this good idea by introducing a subamendment.

The Chair: This will be known as SA1.

Go ahead, hon. minister.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much. Madam Chair, what we're doing with this subamendment is essentially accepting what is a really solid amendment and then improving upon it by touching on something that impacts group terminations. We want to make sure that for the purposes of group terminations we allow for circumstances where someone might be excluded from group terminations.

To read my subamendment out loud, amendment A25 is amended by striking out part D and substituting the following: section 93(a) is amended in subclause (ii) in the proposed clause (d.3) by adding "respecting the circumstances under which a notice under section 137 is not required," before "respecting the information," and in subclause (viii) by adding the following before the proposed section 138(1)(m): "(1.1) for the purposes of section 1(1)(p), authorizing members of other health professions to sign a medical certificate in respect of one or more provisions of this Act."

9:40

With the introduction of that subamendment I thank the member opposite for bringing forward this change and speaking to how it will impact his community. I hope all members will support both the subamendment and the original amendment. Thank you very much, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any members wishing to speak to subamendment SA1?

Seeing none, are you ready for the vote?

[Motion on subamendment SA1 carried]

The Chair: We're back on amendment A25. Are there any further speakers to this amendment?

Mr. Yao: Sure. Why not? Let's do this. Madam Chair, how are you tonight? You know what? This is a good amendment. I'm going to raise his blind pig and a truffle and go with: a blind squirrel finds a nut every now and again.

Recognizing other health professionals: you know, this is a good amendment because it is time to start recognizing the other health professionals. Currently if you look at the way the health system has evolved, we really have evolved to a point where even amongst doctors they're too specialized. Now, my father, back in the day before we had access to a lot of those specialities, would do all the stuff himself. If someone had a foot issue, maybe it was a foot elevation; one leg was shorter than the other. He had to figure those things out himself. He had to read books. He had to consult by calling people. It was a little bit difficult sometimes for people to travel, so he'd have to do the work of a podiatrist, an orthopaedic surgeon. Well, as a doctor he had to learn how to translate those X-rays and to try to figure out about those fractures and all that sort of fun stuff. And it goes on and on.

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

In this day and age we now refer to internists and psychologists, anything and everything, Mr. Chair, and that just demonstrates how specialized medicine has gotten. But as our health system gets more expensive, I think we realize that we need to maybe reconsider how we do things and re-evaluate and recognize that perhaps we might not want to consider physicians as gatekeepers to our health care system, that perhaps we should consider allowing other professions to provide the support. One of those, as identified by the good Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, is nurse practitioners. That is one step. There are also physicians' assistants and other professionals that are slowly evolving over time to the point where we feel strongly about the education levels that they have and their capabilities because they have experience in analyzing and evaluating a lot of this stuff. It is important that we do recognize a lot of these other groups.

Again, I think this amendment really is a step forward in helping with that. In this bill, of all things, we might actually get that foot in the door for the rest of our health system to continue to evolve so that even the Member for Banff-Cochrane could possibly be one of those gatekeepers one day if he furthers his education and his experience.

This is a good amendment. I hope that everyone agrees and everyone concurs and votes in favour of it. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Acting Chair: Are there any other speakers to amendment A25?

Seeing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A25 carried]

The Acting Chair: We are back on Bill 17.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Chair, I think that's a very commendable act of co-operation across the aisle tonight. Carry on.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'd like to rise today to make an amendment on behalf of the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, who is tired after having his successful amendment there. I have the requisite number of copies here with me. I'll begin reading once the table gives me the permission to proceed.

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

The Chair: This is amendment A26.
Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. One of the themes of this government's labour legislation is that businesses are not to be trusted. I heard reference on the other side to union thugs. I don't think anybody's used that term, and we'd like to think that there's...

The Chair: Hon. member, I've just noticed, on the amendment that you've presented, that you've done it on behalf of the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster. However, he's in the House, so you can't do it on his behalf.

The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. In danger of tempting fate and trying to go for two in a row, I'll now read the amendment into the record.

I move that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 141 and substituting the following: section 151 is amended (a) by renumbering it as section 151(1); (b) in subsection (1), (i) in clause (d) by adding "subject to section 151.1" before "except" and (ii) by repealing clause (h.1); (c) by adding the following after (1):

(2) If a complaint is made in writing to the Board in respect of an alleged failure by a trade union or person acting on behalf of a trade union to comply with (1)(a) to (g), the written complaint is itself evidence that the failure occurred and the trade union or the person acting on behalf of the trade union has the burden of proving that it did not.

Now, Madam Chair, again I want to point out that I think one of the key things in this piece of legislation is the concept of balance and that having balance between both employers and employees, whether those employees are represented by an organized labour union or not and regardless of what form the employer takes, whether that's an individual proprietorship, a partnership, a small, medium-, or large-sized business, or indeed a large corporation – you know, in general I think that we can all agree that that co-operative relationship between employees and employers has benefited Alberta over the years. We have had a strong economy, notwithstanding the fact that that economy at times does suffer from various challenges that we are very familiar with.

9:50

Now, I think that in general Albertans have the sense that the people that run businesses, that own businesses and have businesses are, for the most part and in the main, decent people who treat their employees with respect. Certainly, my experience over the period of time that I was involved in our business and in other businesses that I was involved in, some of which were operating in a union environment, was always one where I recognized that our employees were, in fact, one of our greatest assets, if not our greatest asset, especially serving in a service industry, as we did.

We were only able to provide the service and the care that we provided through our practice through the expertise, the skill, the knowledge, the compassion, and the commitment of our employees. I can tell you that when we had a team of employees that worked together and, you know, were all on the same page with regard to the importance of providing those services, we always felt that that was the ideal circumstance. To have a great deal of turnover or to have a situation where we had employees coming and going was never a preferable thing.

Because of this, though, I think that one of the things that we have to guard against is that there's bias – and I mentioned this in a previous debate, that there's bias – either bias against a trade union, a labour union, or bias against an employer. Now, I guess our concern in moving this legislation or this particular amendment is that I believe that there are aspects of this piece of legislation that are, in fact, negative towards business, and they make assumptions about business that I think are not necessarily borne out in fact.

The section in the new, proposed legislation that places the burden of proof on a business to show that they did not commit an offence that they've been accused of seems to me to be an overreaction. You know, I can understand the desire of the government to target businesses, which I would suggest are in the vast minority, that are trying to take advantage of employees. But if that's the standard that they're going to be held to, then I believe that it's only fair, once again, that unions be held to the same standard. We discussed this mirror image in this fairness proposal whereby the provisions are a mirror image. Now, in that situation it was the certification versus decertification of a union, but in this situation it's the proof to determine that there's a breach of section 151 of the Labour Relations Code.

In the same way that I think it is fair to state that most businesses, the vast majority of businesses, I would suggest, treat their employees with respect and recognize the importance of a positive and harmonious labour and management relationship, I think it's also true to say that the vast majority of unions work in the best interests of their membership. They provide those benefits and look out for grievances that can arise from time to time in the workplace. Unions provide advocacy on behalf of their workers that is valuable. I think that they have moved the cause of social justice forward, and I think it's important that we recognize the fact that the organized labour movement has done these things.

You know, it's interesting. I'm reading a book right now, called The Winter Years, that talks about the situation in post World War I Winnipeg leading up to the Winnipeg General Strike, and it talks a lot about the emergence of the labour union movement in western Canada and the importance of the labour union movement in terms of addressing some of the imbalances that occurred at that time.

In terms of the overall fairness that we need to talk about in section 151, section 151 talks about placing an onus on businesses to prove that coercion or unfair influence, shall we say, has not occurred. You know, to suggest, though, that only employers, that only management can be guilty of that and that somehow the other side of the equation, labour unions, never has that happen, I think, is disingenuous. I think most people would agree and understand that that's simply not a reasonable thing to expect. So if we are going to put safeguards in this piece of legislation guarding against employers abusing employees in a situation like that, I think we should have similar or mirror-image safeguards in place with regard to labour unions.

I think that there should be balance and fairness in legislation, and that is exactly what this amendment is trying to address. I would therefore ask members on both sides of the Chamber to support this amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A26? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Chair. I just wanted to rise in support of this amendment, which, again, I think is about fairness and balance. I think the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster stated that the majority of employers are good, hard-working, honest, and decent people, and the same is true of the unions, but this balance to protect against those few that may not be, I think, is a valid argument to be made and protects employees, which is the intention of this.

Madam Chair, I was involved in the past with a company and had a lot of work with a group called the Great Place to Work Institute. That institute is the purveyor of the best workplaces in Canada, and they work with employers not just to win awards but actually to improve their performance as employers to ensure that they meet the highest standards and expectations of their employees. The company I worked for was a member of that, the best workplaces in Canada, for over 10 years, and we see other organizations doing these: best employer recognition in Canada, in Alberta, in various provinces.

The key factor in that is actually something called the trust index, and it's, surprisingly, a secret ballot, a secret questionnaire of all the employees, which actually determines, after all of the metrics are put in place, whether that company actually measures up to the expectations of their employees. I can tell you, Madam Chair, that that trust index is transparent. There's no way to identify how people answer, but it is the true measure of whether an employer is a good employer and a fair employer and a decent employer who really looks out for their people.

I can tell you that the outcome of that – and I think it was mentioned by the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster as well, the pride and the hard work and the customer satisfaction that come from creating a positive work environment like that – does deliver things like employee pride, employer pride, which comes from that, customer satisfaction, and, actually, a strong performance of the bottom line. Those are measurable from the satisfaction and hard work of the employees.

The other thing is that – it might be a little different right now – during busy times in Alberta one of the biggest goals of most employers is to attract the best talent, and one of the best ways to attract that best talent is by actually being recognized as a best employer.

Madam Chair, I just want to implore all the members of this House to support this amendment, which, again, creates balance between the unions and the employers to the benefit of Alberta employees.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the member bringing forward this amendment. Right now what we have in the regulations is that the Labour Relations Board is able to conduct hearings with regard to any kinds of actions that are taken that are against the rules. That already exists. We're not aware of this type of legislation being present anywhere else in other jurisdictions. You know, it kind of plays a little bit, again, to that narrative that unions out there are these big, bad, bogey organizations that are constantly looking to do things in the wrong way, to do things unfairly, to pressure people.

With that being said, Madam Chair, I'm not able to accept this amendment at this time. As I said, the board can conduct hearings with regard to any problems that are happening. Either the union or the employer is able to apply for those types of things, and the labour board has the expertise to figure this out. I would urge all members in the House to not support this.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A26? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

10:00

Mr. McIver: Ever so briefly, after hearing about the pigs and the truffles and the nuts and the squirrels, I only had to say that I support this because this legislation really speaks to the axiom of what is good for the goose is also good for the gander.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A26?
Are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A26 lost]

The Chair: We're back on the main bill. Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Okay. Thank you, Madam Chair. I just want to read a bit from Hansard here from way back. This is from the MLA for West Yellowhead.

Subsequent to all of that input, the final report of the committee was put out, a document that was received with interest by Albertans. I forget the exact number, but something like 8,000 or 10,000 of them were distributed around the province. Again, considerable input was received, Mr. Speaker, and that input was considered in the development of draft legislation termed Bill 60. That draft legislation was tabled in the Legislature on June 17, 1987, and the government invited input from everyone who felt they had an interest in it. The Bill was intentionally left over the winter for input. We received some 300 briefs in response to Bill 60, and I myself had over 200 meetings with individual Albertans, groups of Albertans of all types. In other words, the process that I described which led up to the introduction of Bills 21 and 22, which is under consideration this evening, was probably unprecedented in Alberta for the consideration of new legislation.

Now, Madam Chair, that is from June 7, 1988. The previous year the government of the time and the MLA for West Yellowhead at the time introduced Bill 60, which was the Labour Code. Now, what's interesting is that they introduced it on June 17 for consultation with the public, and what they did subsequently was that they were in consultation with the public for 10 months. Of course, this government consulted with the public for 27 working days. I would say that that makes the previous government about 10 times better at consultation than this government. That's just some simple math for you.

What they did do, which was interesting, is split that bill up into two bills, bills 21 and 22, employment standards and labour relations. Now, where have we heard that before? Here we have a government that the present government complains about all the time, and they actually split the bill into two pieces so that they could separate two different issues altogether.

Now, another thing that's really interesting in here is that they introduced Bill 21.

But let's talk about Bill 22. They introduced Bill 22 on April 15, 1988, and it gets past third reading on June 30, 1988. That's 10 weeks that it was before the Legislature. What did we have? Well, I think we've had about seven days of discussion on this bill here. Ten weeks is 70 days. Seven days that we had with this government:

that, again, makes the previous government about 10 times better than this government.

Bill 21, introduced on April 15, 1988, was passed on July 5, 1988: 11 weeks of legislative discussion on that bill.

Madam Chair, I'll leave it at that, just a little bit of history as far as that we keep hearing about 29 years ago since the last labour legislation hit the province here, any changes, and obviously how it was done then is substantially different than how it was done now with this government. I would suggest that it was previously done about 10 times better than this time.

Thank you.

Mr. Mason: Well, we've carried on successfully for a little while, so I would like to move that the committee rise and report progress.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 17. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official record of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Any opposed, say no. So ordered.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Statement by the Speaker

Page Recognition

The Speaker: Good evening, hon. members. If I could just have your indulgence for a very special event that I know all of you look forward to, and I know I speak for all members when I say that one of the most enjoyable experiences that we have in this House is seeing the efforts, the courtesy, the professionalism, and dare I say the patience of the pages who serve this institution on a regular and very disciplined basis.

I would now ask that all of the pages who are here if they might, please, come to the dais in front. Many of them are not with us tonight, but I would like to read to you on their behalf a letter which has been written by the pages to the House. I know that the hon. Government House Leader may begin to cry when I read this, but I'm going to try not to, okay?

Dear Mr. Speaker,

Although the end of the Spring Sitting marks the halfway point of this Assembly's Third Session, for some of us the conclusion of today's sitting represents the end of our time on the Chamber floor. We have created everlasting memories while delivering bills, amendments, notes and even sharpening pencils for some of the Members.

10:10

I'm looking. I'm sure there is ample evidence of who that might be.

For this, we would like to express our sincerest gratitude, and for the incredible opportunity we have had to serve the Legislative Assembly of Alberta.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the many people who have supported us throughout this memorable experience: the Sergeant-at-Arms for imparting on us his pearls of wisdom and exceptional leadership; the Table Officers for their constant guidance and a breadth of knowledge; the office staff in 315, 412, and the Speaker's Office for demonstrating to us the true meaning of dedication to one's work; and, the Legislative Assembly Security Service members for their round-the-clock sense of humour. We would also like to extend our heartfelt gratitude to Mr. Speaker, and all Members of the Legislative Assembly, without whom our role in the Chamber [simply] would not exist. It has been a great honour to facilitate each and every Member's service to the people of Alberta.

When we began serving the Members and Officers of Alberta's Assembly, none of us could have possibly imagined the impact that the Page Program would have on our lives. We are especially thankful for the amazing depth of knowledge we gained through our time here. Nevertheless, it is not just the broad understanding of the functions of Parliament that will stay with us; nay, it is the appreciation of the human side of our parliamentarians and their support staff. The Members and Officers of the Assembly stand as a source of inspiration to never cease striving for more than we thought previously possible.

As our time in the Chamber comes to an end, we look forward to giving up our "Best seat in the House" to the next generation of Pages, knowing that incredible experiences lie ahead for them. From our four chairs in the Chamber, we feel extremely privileged to have witnessed the making of decisions that will determine the future of our province. As we turn a new page and a new chapter in our lives, we will use the experiences and knowledge gained here, under this dome, to guide us in our future endeavours.

Farewell and don't forget us,

Kylie Kwok, Alyssa Bucyk, 28th and 29th Legislatures

Andriy Krugliak, Avery Roberge-Eadie, Caitlyn Brown,

Chelsea Parker, Christian Fotang, Claire Sandercock, Lauren

Barter, Lucille Bergmann, Moses Ndekezi . . .

He gave me a hard time about this last week.

. . . Olivia Adams, Rowan Ley, 29th Legislature.

I know that I speak for all of you. I would ask the Deputy Speaker if she might come forward and present to our head page a small token of our appreciation.

What she's really telling her: because the best people that are in the House today – we didn't have the official gift packaged and available because you're such an unpredictable group of people. But I told the head page that the new car would be delivered to her house in the morning.

Hon. members, I wonder if we might . . . [Standing ovation]

I think the demonstration of emotion by all of the members expresses nearly not enough of their appreciation of all the work that you have done. Thank you very, very much, and the very best. I suspect that many of you will be sitting in these rows very, very quickly.

Government Bills and Orders

Committee of the Whole

(continued)

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

The Chair: I'd like to call Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 18

Child Protection and Accountability Act

The Chair: Are there any questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I rise today, of course, to discuss in Committee of the Whole Bill 18, which is before the House this evening. I think as we start to discuss Bill 18 tonight and begin to go through all the amendments that will come forward in an attempt to try to make this legislation better for the children of Alberta, it's important that we take a few moments to discuss the process that we have had to follow to get here, the process that has been started in order for us to get this legislation here because that is really what we should be comparing the legislation to, the lens that we should be looking at this bill through as we begin to discuss amendments.

I think it's important for all members of this House today to remember that the reason that we are debating this bill today, the reason that we have gone down this path over the last several months on the panel, that I sit on and that you sit on, Madam Chair, is because of a little girl, a four-year-old girl by the name of Serenity, who died. She died in the care of our province. She was sexually assaulted, she was beaten, and she was starved. When that came to light, people began to express concerns about Serenity's well-being, about the fact that the government had let her down, that the people around Serenity had let her down.

The Child and Youth Advocate carried out a review of Serenity's death. At the time we did not know Serenity's name, but the advocate did a review. An investigative journalist, Paula Simons, put a face and a name to the little girl that was identified in that report, Serenity. The public was outraged. Madam Chair, you were outraged. All of us in this Chamber were outraged, and we demanded answers.

Public outrage was renewed when it was discovered that the RCMP were missing key documents from this government that were needed for the criminal investigation into the death of Serenity. This government then responded to that outrage. After tremendous pressure from the public and tremendous pressure from the opposition the government responded finally and established the Ministerial Panel on Child Intervention. Now, I will say, Madam Chair, that the government was right. We needed to examine the child death review process and also take a second look at the system that let little Serenity down in the first place.

Phase 1 of the panel and Bill 18 are about the child death review process. Unfortunately, Madam Chair, as you know, this panel did not discuss Serenity's case specifically. In fact, it was stopped at all times by the NDP majority on that panel from being able to discuss the case of Serenity in any detail. Despite the fact that we witnessed in this Chamber repeatedly the minister and the Premier and the Deputy Premier rising and saying that the panel was discussing Serenity and was able to discuss Serenity, the fact of the matter is that that was not the case. That has been prevented. It's disappointing to the people that are on the panel. It is most definitely disappointing to Albertans, who trusted this government to bring forward the panel to actually deal with the case of Serenity. When most Albertans find out, when I tell them and when other people discuss with them that in no way have the panel members been allowed to talk about the case of Serenity and that, in fact, they have been stopped by the NDP majority on that panel, they are extremely disappointed.

In addition to that, I am very disappointed in how this government has twisted one of the panel's recommendations in particular. The panel brought forward several recommendations on the death review process, but one that's very important is that the panel recommended that a legislative committee be given the mandate to ensure accountability. Madam Chair, you know, because you sit on that panel with me, that one of the main issues that came to light often in the discussions of the panel and the people that presented to the panel was concern around transparency and accountability when it came to children in care.

The Auditor General, recognizing the concern, recommended that the Child and Youth Advocate have a committee for itself similar to how the Auditor General has the Public Accounts Committee. That recommendation was very clear from the Auditor General, and the recommendation to do that was very clear from the panel. However, this government instead decided to do an audit advisory committee for the advocate, which is not at all about accountability. Its job is not to follow up and ensure that the advocate's recommendations are being followed. Instead, the advisory committee gives the advocate feedback on its report before it is made public.

The number one concern, again, was accountability and transparency. The Auditor General identified it. The panel identified it. The experts on the panel identified it. This government, instead of taking the path of the recommendations that the panel came forward with, lowered the level of transparency, lowered the level of accountability, and decided to go with the status quo. For those who are concerned about what happened to Serenity and other children like her, that is extremely disappointing. It is extremely disappointing and shocking.

Now, here we are in Committee of the Whole, and I have to say that I'm not super optimistic about this bill because, quite frankly, Madam Chair, I don't think it goes far enough. It goes nowhere near what the recommendations of the panel were. It doesn't even touch nearly to the level of what the panel recommended. It goes nowhere near where the experts have suggested that we go. It goes nowhere near the recommendations that have come out of other panels in the past. In fact, Paula Simons, the lady who worked so hard doing investigative journalism to bring this to light to the people of Alberta, goes so far as to call it "a betrayal of public trust." This bill that is before us is a betrayal of public trust.

10:20

We need to ask ourselves: if this legislation had been in place five years ago, would it have prevented what happened in Serenity's case? Madam Chair, that is the question that we should be asking ourselves. That is what we set out to do six months ago. The fact that the NDP have chosen to block any attempt to be able to deal with the details of Serenity's case is troubling, and that is the lens through which we should look at this to decide if this government and the panel were able to accomplish what they started.

Madam Chair, the most appalling thing that I have learned through this process is this. Not one internal death review has been completed. Not one. Zero. It's shocking. This bill does not even deal with internal reviews. Recommendations dealing with internal reviews have been deferred again, something completely against the panel that you and I were a part of and a completely different direction by this government. Another betrayal of public trust.

Now, I hope that the government has given some serious consideration to our amendment, Madam Chair, that we will bring forward in Committee of the Whole. In fact, we sent those amendments to them well in advance in an effort to be able to work with them to attempt to make this legislation better for the people of Alberta. With that said, though, I do think that it is important that we remember, as we go through this debate, the lens of that poor little girl that brought us here, that little four-year-old girl who despite people calling for help for her, despite reports of sexual and physical abuse to her ended up starving to death under our watch, who is still not allowed to have been talked about despite the claims by the Premier, the Deputy Premier, and the Minister of Children's Services, who continue to rise in this House and say that. It's extremely troubling.

While I do hope that during Committee of the Whole, as we start here, we will be able to make that legislation better, I think it's important that we also recognize from the start that this legislation does not go far enough, that it is a betrayal of public trust. It is incumbent on this government across from us to take steps now – we are going to give them an opportunity – to make this legislation at least a little better for the people of Alberta and that going forward they will actually use the panel and their ability as a government to finally fix the child intervention system and not continue to just provide lip service and try to sweep it under the rug.

With that, Madam Chair, I look forward to more discussion during Committee of the Whole on the bill.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm happy to rise on Bill 18, the Child Protection and Accountability Act. It's one that's received some discussion. There are some good things in this bill, but I think there's also room where, if we worked together as a group and as a team, we can improve this bill. It's in that spirit that I would like to move an amendment with your permission. I'll wait for your word before I...

The Chair: This will be known as amendment A1.
Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 18, Child Protection and Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(14)(a) in the proposed section 21 by adding the following after subsection (1):

(1.1) The Advocate must report in the Advocate's annual report under subsection (1) on the progress of the implementation of the Advocate's recommendations.

Now, Madam Chair, this amendment, I believe, is important. It doesn't really change the substance of the government's bill, with one exception. It requires an annual report on the progress of the advocate's recommendations. In other words, it's a way for the government to show faith, that they are taking the children in care issue seriously. It's an opportunity for the government to improve the accountability and the transparency of the efforts that all of us on all sides of this House want to make. As my colleague from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre said ever so recently, when we serve these children well, we serve them well on all sides of the House, and when we fail these children, we fail these children on all sides of the House.

I'm hopeful that all members of the House will support this amendment. Again, it's an effort to strengthen the bill. It's an effort in a way to say to Albertans that children in care are that important, and we think that we want to report to Albertans on a regular basis and let them know how we are doing at improving the conditions of those children in care.

With that, I will listen to the debate, and I will respectfully ask all members of the House to support this amendment.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. I just want to speak to how wonderful it is to be here today with all of my colleagues in this House to talk about the bill that came from recommendations that were arrived at via consensus in an all-party panel that engaged in a way that, quite honestly, is historic, to really work together to address this long-standing, complex problem and to have a very open and transparent conversation in a way that had not happened previously.

Madam Chair, I'm thankful to the panel for all of the work that they did to come to these recommendations because, clearly, the child intervention system has been in need of change for a very long time. We're proud of the work that we've done as a government and the work that we did prior to government in terms of advocating for this. It's certainly a wonderful day to work together with my colleagues to make this bill even better.

With that, in terms of the current amendment being presented, it is the current practice of the Child and Youth Advocate that he reports on recommendations in the annual report. However, I certainly support that he continue to do so and have no problems with mandating or requiring that to happen via legislation. I would be pleased to support this amendment.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A1? Are you ready for the question?

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Chair, and good evening, everyone. It's always with sadness and regret that I rise to speak on this particular situation and to Bill 18, the Child Protection and Accountability Act. Why am I full of regret? Well, simply because of the road that we travelled to be here today and that every time that I think about my own children, these precious young men that I've had the privilege of raising, she crosses my mind. When I go into my pantry, that is chockfull of food, late at night to grab a snack or I let the dog out at 3 a.m., I think about that little sweetie pie, Serenity, padding across the floor in the middle of the night to get food because she was starving. Her picture and her story are discussed in our home all the time, and we try to honour her and the others' memories and the children that we as government are responsible for.

We're compelled to see and hear and experience this tragedy over and over again. Why? Because we must never forget the rape, abuse, terror, and starvation and the story of Serenity. We must never ever stop asking the question: who did this to her? Who is responsible?

Alberta's Child and Youth Advocate called for better safeguards after we lost Serenity in 2014. Madam Chair, I think that what is equally sad, for me anyway, is that we not only lost her in this tragic and painful and horrific death, but we lost her under mountains of paperwork. We lost her to incompetence and gaps in a broken system and finger pointing. When this case emerged publicly, none of us slept, I'm certain, knowing that we had shirked our responsibilities to this family and this child. We demanded information and clarification to try and understand how this case could have been so poorly handled. We kept on at the government day after day, question after question. Nothing.

10:30

Finally, in response to the appalling and horrible handling of Serenity's file, the government agreed to an all-party panel. Here we are at the end of phase 1, Bill 18 in hand, and we're here to debate the child death review process. Just let that roll around in your mind for a minute. The child death review process. Where are we with this? That's the billion dollar question. How is this little girl honoured? How is accountability honoured in this process when the panel members themselves, who've spent weeks and weeks and weeks at the table discussing how to protect our children, are not privy to all the information to legitimately help make decisions and are literally blocked by the government from asking questions?

Madam Chair, how does one attempt to find solutions when there are limitations to discussions of the very members tasked to finding those solutions? I don't know about anybody else, but the vision of this little girl just doesn't leave. How does that work, exactly? I mean, the bill is a start, but constantly you look at these kinds of things, and you have to ask: what has the bill set out to accomplish? Where is the clarity? Within that clarity, how do we accomplish that? How do we make sure that Albertans understand that children in our care are going to be competently taken care of?

For example – and I'm repeating, and I apologize for that, but I think it's important – not one child death internal review has been finished to date, Madam Chair. Why? Why can nobody give us an answer about that? Why is there no clarity on the children who've passed under our watch and how that happened? How are we supposed to create legislation when we don't know from where the mistakes came? Who's being held accountable for that? I mean, legitimately we look at a lot of legislation in this House, but if we can't protect our children, then what is this for?

With respect to Serenity I want to know where the ball was dropped and who or what minister's or organization's mess-up led to this little girl's death. This isn't a finger pointing. We've been called "going on witch hunts," all sorts of things like that. Well, you can call it whatever you want. Call it whatever you want. That will in no way stop this side from every day digging in to find out what happened to her. When she was starving in the middle of the night, she would go across from where she lived and then be beaten for taking food. Don't you want to know who did this to her? I certainly do. There's no amount of blocking that can happen that will ever stop us from asking those questions over and over again. How did this happen?

Another important question, like with any piece of legislation: does the bill actually do what it's intended to do? Does it bring accountability, and is it going to protect the children? That is the name of the bill, isn't it?

I have to say that when the bill was brought forward, I was extremely grateful to see a piece of legislation that, obviously, had a lot of panel members in a nonpartisan way working together, but then to see that the legislation doesn't adequately reflect the title yet again? This is entirely different. This isn't an electricity bill. This is a bill about human beings. This isn't about fair and family-friendly environments. This is about children. Don't you think, Madam Chair, that the title should adequately reflect accountability and protecting children? I don't understand how that's being reflected in this bill.

So many of the panel recommendations have been deferred to the next phase, but if the panel members themselves are not privy to the information to inform them on how to envision this legislation, Madam Chair, how is the panel effective? The panel members are literally trying to help create legislation, basically feeling around in the dark, trying to figure out through nuance what the government is trying to achieve. What's the endgame, folks? The government succumbs to pressure from the opposition to have a panel to find out what happened and then goes forward to withhold information that could – and I think that this is the most frustrating part for me. What happens in this panel right now could actually determine a go-forward with respect to laws that could actually save children, potentially save children. It could go from being a death review to a review about potential things that could actually stop those deaths from occurring.

So what is being hidden? Why are there no consequences for the ministries that do not respond to the advocate's request? Why? How are you going to explain that to Albertans? Why is the panel being blocked from digging into a case so that the appalling mistakes that led to Serenity's death never happen again? What meaningful changes will come from this? There is nothing in this bill to show that the work that was done here by many members in this House actually has followed through.

Now, I understand that there's another phase to this, and I respect the fact that legislation like this can't only happen in one chunk. In fact, I appreciate the fact that it's been broken up. I do. We've asked for that on other legislation. That's a very reasonable thing. But if this is the beginning to legislation that lacks clarity, how do you go forward? We're asking people on this side of the House and everywhere else to help make legislation while uninformed.

The point of the panel, in my understanding and based on the title, was to create accountability, to protect children, to create legislation that will inherently change the way we look at how a child is taken care of in government care, to create best practices – right? – I would assume. Now the advocate will rely on public pressure to force the government ministries to respond to the advocate or to take and implement the recommendations. What is mind boggling is that public inquiries, investigative reporting, or sheer luck may be the only way to reveal the truth.

There are fears that fewer fatality inquiries will be held because of this bill. How is that possible? How do we balance privacy and still be transparent? Well, here's an idea: let the panel discuss it with all of the relevant information so that together you can come up with solutions on how to proceed. From my understanding, solutions were put forward. Ideas were put forward. Questions were asked and not answered. How do we actually protect the children? That is the intended outcome of this panel, isn't it? Am I correct in understanding that?

Let's talk about some interesting gaps in Bill 18, Madam Chair, that seem to be built to help cover up some of the mistakes that have already been made. This is very disconcerting. It sounds a bit deceptive, doesn't it? Well, let's unpack that a little. The government, in its infinite wisdom, has given itself the ability to pause the investigation. Just in case you didn't know that, that's actually being done by the government, to pause the investigation. I'm telling you that if I had the privilege of being in government right now, I would be looking at the ministerial bench and saying: are you kidding me? This is when it's imperative for government to hold government accountable for their actions. Or do the members opposite just prefer to be guilty by association? Ask the questions, people. This is important.

To the members opposite: did you know that this little piece was added in? On top of that, what's worse is that that was not in the previous act. Why would you add in a loophole to cover up mistakes? This is actually a delay. This isn't even about actual time. This is about the effect that a delay can have on the ability of an advocate to do their job. A delay like this is actually an artificial limitation that has nothing to do with what's going on and certainly does not enhance this legislation. We are supposed to protect these children, Madam Chair. We're supposed to protect them, not be looking for loopholes to protect ourselves.

10:40

The panel's job was to come up with solutions and legislation to understand how we ended up here. If it hadn't been for the media release, where would this even be? Still buried somewhere. So we are given this absolutely amazing opportunity, really, if you think about it, that this horrible, tragic death could lead to legislation that may save another child from a similar situation, yet we give every opportunity to stop this legislation from being all that it could be. I don't understand. I'm a mother. I have a gazillion friends who are parents and people who are in all sorts of situations, and, without judgment, their children end up in all sorts of different situations for various things. If all of us in this House cannot honestly stand here and say that we can be responsible and make sure that that legislation is there to protect those children, why are we here, Madam Chair? Why? What was the point?

The panel's job was to come up with solutions and legislation to understand how we ended up at the point with the deaths of these children in our care, not to cover them up. I can honestly say: how do you participate in something like that and walk away from this building knowing, ultimately, that you've created a loophole in your own legislation to stop the ability to reveal the truth? When a child is in government care and they are returned to their family, we must still make sure that those children are safe, and we have failed. So I ask the question again, Madam Chair. You were a part of this panel. Many people in this House were part of this panel. How do you look at these things; how does the government look at this information and honestly stand up and say, "We've done everything possible at this point to make sure that no other child will endure what Serenity went through"? We haven't done anything to make sure that that won't happen again because we haven't held anybody responsible.

This isn't about finger pointing or witch-hunting. Again, I really don't care what you want to call it, but until somebody is held responsible for this act, the perpetrators will continue to be able to get away with these things without consequences. Do you know who's going to take the responsibility for that? All of us.

I must say again that I would love to be able to understand how this legislation is actually going to enable us to do our jobs to make sure that this little girl, Serenity, is not only honoured but that the horrible things that she endured will not ever happen to another child in our care ever again.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you, Madam Chair. I want to speak briefly on this. As a member of the child intervention panel I want to bring a little perspective. I just want to be very clear that I agree absolutely with the sentiment of the Member for Chestermere-Rocky View and where she's coming from. I share her emotions and her, I know, legitimate desire to ensure that what happened to Serenity never happens again, that what we in this House do and what we do in that committee spurs real action and real change, and that we never allow that to happen ever again.

That is how we honour Serenity, and that's absolutely what I certainly intend to do. I hope that we get the facts about Serenity's case from the minister. I've written to her, as I know other members in the opposition have, and I hope at some point we will see those. I'm optimistic that we may in fact yet get a chance to see that information confidentially so we have the full information we need to do our job.

We do need to spur action, but I think we also need to be very careful about knee-jerk reactions. You know, we've been debating Bill 17, and one of our criticisms, I think, legitimately, of Bill 17 is that not enough consultation went into what the government did. One of the challenges and risks we take here by acting too quickly on Bill 18 and adding too much in is that we may in fact make changes without proper consultation. There's some risk there.

While I think that the government certainly should not be given a free pass and there are gaps and additional changes I'd like to see in the bill – and hopefully this evening we'll see some more amendments coming forward – I think we need to be careful to ensure that what we do does not jump ahead of the process. There is other legislation. The Child and Youth Advocate Act is under review by the Legislative Offices Committee. That's going to make some recommendations which I know will touch on some of the things that – we want to be careful about anticipating that committee as well.

Of course, there needs to be accountability – of course, there does – in Serenity's case specifically and in other cases as well. But let's not fool ourselves into thinking anything other than – the horrible situation that Serenity found herself in and that other children in our province find themselves in is the end of a very long and tragic road that has its roots in colonialization, has its roots in residential schools, has its roots in poverty. Those are things that we as a society, as a community need to grapple with, but no single bill of this Legislature, unfortunately, as much as we'd like it to, can solve those problems overnight. We can take steps to make it better every day.

While I think that Bill 18 certainly has its shortcomings, again I will hope that some of the amendments that we see coming tonight will address the shortcomings, as the one amendment that has passed already this evening has done. I hope we have that opportunity, but let's be careful that we don't jump to conclusions. Let's allow the process to play itself out. I think that, Madam Chair, is how we will honour Serenity and ensure that this never happens again.

Thank you.

The Chair: Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. I would like to move an amendment. I have the appropriate number of copies. I'll just wait till you tell me I can start.

The Chair: This is amendment A2.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. This amendment states that the legislative committee which receives the advocate's annual report will review it and report back to the Assembly within 90 days.

As you know, Madam Chair, one of the concerns that we continually saw on the panel was the fact that often stuff was not taking place for long periods of time. There were no clear timeline or accountability mechanisms. You know, one of the great examples is, of course, the fact that zero internal investigations have ever been done by the department.

Now, what the panel wanted was a committee like PAC, like the Public Accounts Committee. They wanted to have a PAC-like committee, the same thing the Auditor General wanted, that would follow up on the advocate's recommendations to improve the lives of children in the intervention system. Now, sadly, this bill does not give us that. This bill does not give us what the recommendations of the panel were. I know that the minister earlier this evening rose in this Chamber and said that it does, but – let's be clear – it does not. The fact is that this does not give us a PAC-like committee to work with the advocate. It does not do what the Auditor General's recommendation was. However, this measure is at least to encourage clarity and some more accountability by giving the committee a deadline to review the reports it receives from the advocate. A similar section, interestingly enough, is found in the Property Rights Advocate Act but only allows the committee 60 days.

A reminder that I would say to the government members of this House is that the advocate is concerned that nothing in this act before us right now requires the government to act. The advocate, the person the government is putting in charge of these reviews with this bill, is concerned that this act, that the government has brought here, does not compel it to act. In fact, Madam Chair, the bill simply just states that the government department must respond to his recommendations. This amendment attempts to provide some clarity on that timeline, at least a little bit of accountability, and responsibility.

I encourage all members of the House to vote for it.

10:50

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. I want to say once again that what happened with Serenity absolutely was a tragedy, but there have been many, many, many tragedies over the years. She's not the only one. There have been many children who have died while in care, over many decades, in this province. Certainly, there has been an indication for a very long time that we needed to make change.

Again, I'm very proud of our government for creating a Children's Services ministry, for investing in families, and I'm certainly proud of this legislation and proud to go forward. Certainly, the job of this House, unlike the justice system, is to protect children going forward, to craft legislation so that as we go forward, we can do a much better job of protecting Alberta's vulnerable children. Madam Chair, I think this legislation is an important step moving in that direction.

In regard to this current amendment, certainly I do feel that this provides some clarity in the legislation, and I would be happy to support this amendment.

The Chair: Any other speakers to amendment A2?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to Bill 18? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to rise on Bill 8.

Some Hon. Members: Bill 18.

Mr. McIver: Pardon me?

An Hon. Member: Eighteen.

Mr. McIver: Eighteen, yes. I left the "teen" off. Thank you for that correction, everybody. Gee, it's starting to be so helpful here, Madam Chair. I can hardly believe it. I would like, with your permission, to move an amendment, please.

The Chair: This is amendment A3.

Mr. McIver: May I proceed?

The Chair: Go ahead.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate that. Here's what the amendment says, that the Child Protection and Accountability Act be amended in section 1(8), in the proposed section 14.1, by adding the following after subsection (5):

(5.1) A person must not take any adverse employment action against another person because that other person, acting in good faith, provided information or records to the Advocate for the purposes of carrying out the Advocate's powers, duties and functions under this Act.

Madam Chair, what this amendment suggests that we do is that we protect people who protect children. That's what this says. This says that if somebody provides the office of the Child and Youth Advocate with information or documents in good faith that they believe will protect a child in care, they are protected. I think that's completely within the spirit of the act. I believe it's within the spirit of what the government's intentions are in the act. I believe that it should be viewed positively by every member of the House.

Without this, Madam Chair, I think – you know, if we can't get support for this, I think the rest of the act will be in some trouble because, of course, the act is intended to increase and improve the protection for children that are under the care of the government, which by extension is under the care of us in this Legislative Assembly. I think it's only logical. It's only right. To me it's an obvious thing to do to protect a worker or a citizen that helps the office of the Child and Youth Advocate to protect those very children.

With that, I don't think it takes a lot more explanation of this. I believe it's fairly straightforward. I hope that this meets with the approval and the support of the House, and I shall sit down and listen to the debate and comments that come forward.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. We'd like to thank the member for his thoughtful amendment, that clarifies and strengthens the legislation as it responds to the panel's recommendations, and on that note, we will be voting in favour.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to this amendment?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A3 carried]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments?

Mr. Nixon: Madam Chair, I'd like to move an amendment. I have the appropriate number of copies.

The Chair: This will be known as amendment A4.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. This amendment is simply to clarify what we hope is already the expectation of Bill 18. Bill 18 states, "The Advocate must report annually to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly." This amendment states that the Speaker must then table this report so that all members may review it. This measure encourages accountability and encourages follow-up on the recommendations contained within the advocate's report. I hope all members of the Assembly support it.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A4? The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. Certainly, having looked at the amendment, I'd like to thank the member opposite for the amendment. Once again, we would be happy to accept it in the spirit of the fact that this is very much legislation resulting from the panel's recommendations.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A4?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A4 carried]

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate the opportunity to stand and to move another amendment to Bill 18. I'll try to get that number right the first time without all the help that I required last time around. Madam Chair, again, as I believe is the custom, we'll wait till you give me the go-ahead on this.

The Chair: This will be known as amendment A5.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. The amendment that is being distributed is that the Child Protection and Accountability Act, Bill 18, be amended in section 1(3)(a), in the proposed section 9(0.1), by adding the following after clause (b):

(b.1) is the child of a child referred to in section 2(d).

Madam Chair, section 1(3) of the bill amends section 9 of the Child and Youth Advocate Act explicitly to include several types of people as a member of the family of the deceased child, but those sections of the CYA Act and the Family Law Act do not robustly address young mothers. This amendment proposes to add children of young mothers to the list of people that make up members of a child's family, essentially the children of children. Changes would need to be made in section 1(3)(a) of Bill 18. Calgary's child intervention system provides services for persons up to the age of 24. The intent of the panel with their recommendation was to investigate deaths of individuals who had received services within two years of death.

11:00

Now, Madam Chair, there are many young mothers in this province that, unfortunately, need the services of the child intervention system, and children of those young mothers are obviously family members. So if a young mother passes, that young mother's children should be eligible for the emotional and community supports like the rest of their family and to participate in their mother's death review process. Obviously, if they're of that age, by participate it would mean get the support due and eligible to family members as articulated in the government's bill, as I believe is intended in the government's drafting of the bill.

Making it explicit that the children of children, which is, of course, in the case of young mothers, ought to get the support due to other family members, to me at least, seems self-evident, that this is an extension of what's in the legislation. I don't know whether it's something the government overlooked or didn't think of. I certainly don't believe that the government left this out on purpose, and I'm sincerely hopeful that the government will consider this an improvement to the text that's in the bill now and an improvement to the care that will happen for the families of children in care when those unfortunate incidents crop up when a death occurs.

I recommend that members of the House support this, and I will sit down and listen to that debate and comments and hear what members of this Legislature have to say.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. We appreciate the spirit of this amendment. However, involving very young children in the child death review process is a very complex issue. The advocate already has a lot of discretion in terms of who to involve as well as a very broad definition of family in the legislation, so at this point we're unable to support this amendment.

The Chair: Any further speakers to amendment A5? Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I guess I'll just say to the minister that that's disappointing. I think Albertans listening to this debate either now or in the future will indeed be set back just a little bit by the government's refusal to provide services to the children of children in care; in other words, the children of very young mothers having the courtesies, the support, and the means of looking after those kids that are available to other family members under the act. I have to say that I'm disappointed heartily that the government, the minister, has just said that they will not extend that courtesy to the most vulnerable of Albertans, the most vulnerable of Albertans being, in many cases, newborn children who are, in the case of this amendment, the children of children that are in care.

I'm heartily disappointed and hopeful that in the next few minutes the government will see their way clear to supporting the most vulnerable of all Albertans.

The Chair: Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Yeah. Thanks, Madam Chair. I rise in support of my colleague from Calgary-Hays' amendment. I am disappointed to hear the comments from the minister that, you know, she and her government will not take the steps to make sure that the children of children in care are also covered and put within this legislation. The minister indicated to the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays that it was complicated. Madam Chair, I would submit to you that most of the issues that we have been dealing with on this issue for the last several months are about as complicated as it gets. However, I don't think that we should shy away from something that's complicated when we are dealing with consequences that involve the loss of life sometimes of children that are in care.

The argument that it is complicated or that it's hard to do is something that I reject, you know, and I would encourage the minister to reconsider that argument and certainly everybody in this House to support the Member for Calgary-Hays' excellent amendment.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mrs. Pitt: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to speak in favour of this amendment. Quite often in my personal experience and in my professional experience as an MLA I've come across children of children in care in the system who absolutely need to have the protection that should be provided to them. I think this is a generational problem, and I'm very saddened to hear that the government will not be supporting an amendment like this. I think it's very short sighted. I absolutely believe that this will be a mistake, and I have a feeling that this will be something that will need to be brought back to the Legislature and amended at a different time and brought forward in another separate piece of legislation because I absolutely believe that this is an oversight.

This is a shame, and I urge all members of this House to reconsider and to support this amendment. Thank you.

The Chair: Any further speakers to amendment A5?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A5 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 11:06 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Jabbour in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Gotfried	Pitt
Cooper	Hanson	Schneider
Cyr	Jean	Starke
Drysdale	Loewen	Strankman
Ellis	MacIntyre	Taylor
Fildebrandt	McIver	van Dijken
Gill	Nixon	Yao

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Gray	Miranda
Babcock	Hinkley	Nielsen
Bilous	Hoffman	Notley
Carlier	Horne	Renaud
Carson	Jansen	Rosendahl
Ceci	Kazim	Sabir
Clark	Kleinstauber	Schmidt
Coolahan	Larivee	Schreiner
Cortes-Vargas	Littlewood	Sigurdson
Dach	Loyola	Sucha
Dang	Luff	Sweet
Drever	Mason	Turner
Feehan	McPherson	Westhead
Fitzpatrick	Miller	Woollard

Totals:	For – 21	Against – 42
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A5 lost]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to Bill 18?

Mr. Nixon: Madam Chair, I'd like to move an amendment. I have the appropriate number of copies for the pages, and I will wait till you tell me I can proceed.

The Chair: This is amendment A6.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. This amendment clarifies that the court's role in dispute resolution when it comes to Bill 18 is to determine whether there is a reasonable basis for a stay of an investigation.

Now, Madam Chair, I hope and I think you hope that this is already the intent of the legislation. We think, though, that it's not clear and that clarification is worth while. Now under Bill 18 the only requirement for a stay of the advocate's investigation is that, in the opinion of a senior official or ADM, it "could reasonably be expected to interfere with... an ongoing law enforcement investigation" or prosecution. I would contend and argue that the court should be determining whether that opinion is reasonable or not.

We presume that the dispute resolution process is not there only to rule on procedural issues; for example, whether a written request was done properly or not. The default should be that these reviews are happening. The panel and, I think, Albertans expect that these reviews are happening. It should not be super easy to interfere with the advocate's important work. If there is to be a stay of an investigation, there had better be a good excuse as to why. Not only is it burdensome and unnecessary for the advocate to notify and involve all these people for reviews of this nature and for agencies – oh, I actually think the core point, given the time, is that it should not be the advocate's responsibility to prove that investigations should not happen; it should be the people that are looking for the stay. And a judge should not only determine whether or not the appropriate procedures have been followed to apply for a stay but that there's a reasonable reason why that investigation is being delayed.

With that in mind, I would ask all members to vote for this amendment.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to amendment A6? The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Madam Chair. I want to thank the hon. member for bringing forth this important amendment. I think it's important that we provide as much transparency for the advocate as possible, and this amendment is quite valuable just to clarify certain clauses within the legislation. I'd encourage all members of the House to support this important amendment.

The Chair: Any other members wishing to speak to this amendment?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[Motion on amendment A6 carried]

The Chair: Are there any further questions, comments, or amendments with respect to this bill? Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I appreciate this. I have an amendment prepared, and with your permission I shall put it forward.

The Chair: This will be known as amendment A7.

Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. Now, this amendment, I believe, is an important one. It's somewhat of a technical one, but I hope members will agree that it's an important one.

It reads like this, that the Child Protection and Accountability Act, Bill 18, be amended as follows. In the following provisions "or their designate" is added after "Assistant Deputy Minister responsible for the Alberta Crown Prosecution Service": section 1(3)(b), in the proposed sections 9(6)(b) and 7(b); section 1(4), in the proposed sections 9.1(5)(b) and 6(b); and section 1(4), in the proposed section 9.2(1)(b).

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

In the following provisions "or their designate" is added after "Assistant Deputy Minister": section 1(3)(b), in the proposed sections 9(6)(b) and 7(b); in section 1(4), in the proposed section 9.1(5)(b) and (6)(b); and finally, in section 1(4), in the proposed sections 9.2(1)(b)(i) and (ii).

Now, Madam Chair, section 1(3)(b) of this bill enables the assistant deputy minister responsible for the Alberta Crown prosecution service...

11:30

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, good evening. It's getting awfully loud in here, and I'm having a hard time hearing the member read his amendment. If you could please just keep the volume down.

Thank you.

Mr. McIver: Thanks, Madam Chair. The amendment enables the assistant deputy minister responsible for the Alberta Crown prosecution service to tell the OCYA that reviewing a child death would or would not interfere with an ongoing prosecution. This amendment to the proposed 9(6)(b) and the parallel sections would allow other designated individuals in that office to also provide information to the office of the Child and Youth Advocate about pausing and resuming investigations in the case where the assistant deputy minister is incapacitated or otherwise unavailable. I would hope members of the House would not want these important decisions on an investigation to be held up because the designated officer is unavailable and the authority is not there to designate someone else to do that in their absence.

For the same reason that we didn't want a single point where matters would be held up with the Labour Relations Board on Bill 17, we don't want to create a single point where the office of the Child and Youth Advocate review could be procedurally stalled if the assistant deputy minister becomes unavailable to update the OCYA on the status of cases. This enables the Crown prosecution service to designate other individuals to contact the OCYA other than the ADM. This, I believe, will strengthen the bill in that, again, it won't allow a couple of single points of failure to occur should two of the valuable members of the administration with the authority to provide this information be unavailable, for example, for things beyond their control: illness, family emergency, whatever it happens to be.

I hope the members of the government and other members of this House will see the value of not putting ourselves at risk of holding up the office of the Child and Youth Advocate from having important information and at risk of holding up important decisions about stopping or starting investigations. Of course, we want the office of the Child and Youth Advocate to go ahead, and for the people that have the knowledge and the authority to know when they might have to, in some cases, hold up a decision in order to not compromise an investigation, we don't want to be in a position where the person with the knowledge and the skill and the ability to do that is unavailable and no one else is designated to do that in their absence.

In that event, I don't believe that it changes the intention of the government's legislation at all, but I think it would be an important stopgap and fail-safe, and for that reason I would ask the members of this Legislature to support the amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. The intention of this bill is to support reviews to proceed during police investigations whenever possible. That is why the bill requires a senior official from both police and the Department of Justice to contact the advocate when a stay is requested. Allowing only the assistant deputy minister to request a stay ensures that the responsibility is taken seriously and that stays are only requested when absolutely necessary. For that reason, this authority should not be delegated to a designate. This will ensure accountability for when these stays are requested. I know that accountability was important to the panel, and it is important to me.

Certainly, Madam Chair, should the assistant deputy minister be unavailable, there is always an acting assistant deputy minister who would be responsible in that particular case, and they would have all the authority to do so. For that reason, I will not be supporting this amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A7 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the bill. Are there any members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. I wish to move an amendment. I have the appropriate number of copies for the Sergeant-at-Arms' staff.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your amendment will be referred to as A8. Please go ahead.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. The panel, of which you, of course, are a member, wished to require the advocate to review all preventable deaths. You know, we recognize that it's difficult to define preventable, but by expanding the advocate's mandate to review all deaths of children receiving intervention service, this raises, quite frankly, some new concerns.

Remember, Madam Chair, that the advocate must notify the following during its reviews: any relevant government ministry, the members of the family, any relevant band, any relevant DFNA, any relevant community or culture group, any relevant law enforcement agency, the office of the Chief Medical Examiner, and Alberta Health Services. It also must involve many of these parties, and many of these are also required to hand over information and records for the investigation.

Madam Chair, what if, for example, a child who came into contact with the intervention system died tragically in a car accident or from leukemia? Not only would it be burdensome and unnecessary for the advocate to notify and involve all these people for reviews of this nature and for the agencies to subsequently turn over records, but it also might add stress to the grieving family members, worried about what that review means for them. This bill should be focused on holding our government accountable. Our concern is not with the advocate doing his or her job properly. This amendment does not prevent the advocate from doing anything or notifying people if the death is a medical death. It simply allows the advocate to use some discretion, and we would ask that the government support our amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A8? The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. Certainly, there's full recognition of the fact that this legislation does go beyond just preventable deaths. We were somewhat concerned that trying to define preventable deaths would be a challenge and, in fact, might exclude some cases in which there should be a review because there would be an opportunity to learn from that.

I'm so proud of the work we've done in expanding the scope to ensure that the deaths of all children in care certainly are investigated. We certainly agree that there are times when the advocate needs discretion. We'd like to thank the member for raising this important issue, and we would be happy to vote in favour of this amendment this evening.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A8?

[Motion on amendment A8 carried]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the bill. Are there any other amendments, comments? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. It's my pleasure to move an amendment to Bill 18, and I have it ready.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your amendment will be now referred to as A9. Please go ahead.

Mr. McIver: Thanks, Madam Chair. Now, A9 is an amendment that the Child Protection and Accountability Act be amended by adding “, Métis Settlement, indigenous community or organization” after “any relevant Band” in the following provisions: section 1(3)(b) in the proposed sections 9(8) and (9) and section 1(4) in the proposed sections 9.1(8) and (9).

Métis settlements should be included in the list of people and groups to be contacted when a child dies during an investigation. Madam Chair – you know this as part of the committee – we heard a lot from Métis groups, and in many cases they feel left out by the system as it is now. They feel disrespected, and they have legitimate reasons for needing to be in the loop when their children are negatively affected in the system.

11:40

Section 1(3)(b) of this bill lists several types of persons or entities that the office of the Child and Youth Advocate should contact during an investigation or review, including “any relevant Band.” Our amendment proposes to add relevant Métis settlements and other indigenous communities or organizations that are not self-described as bands to the list of indigenous resources to be consulted by the OCYA. This is to recognize that not all indigenous children in care are members of an Alberta band or members of an indigenous community defined in federal or provincial law.

This also addresses indigenous children who are supported in urban settings by indigenous organizations that are not bands. Indigenous children from other provinces in Alberta's child intervention system or living in urban communities without band affiliation or membership should not be disadvantaged by the office of the Child and Youth Advocate due to geography.

This improves the legislation by making it more inclusive, and of course it makes it stronger by making sure that we don't leave out different indigenous groups. Madam Chair, you and I know and several other people on all sides of this House know that indigenous children, depending on how you add the numbers, make up between 50 and 70 per cent of all the children in care, and this is making sure that we include them and their settlement or their originating group that may not be described as a band in communication so that they don't feel left out, so that they get the respect and the privileges of citizenship that other citizens of Alberta get.

For that reason, I believe that this amendment strengthens the bill, and I sincerely hope for the support of all sides of the House for that reason. I will now sit and listen to the debate and comment that shall come forth.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. Before I respond to the amendment, I just want to take this moment to officially, in this Legislature, congratulate you on your engagement.

Now, Madam Chair, after that incredibly happy note, I just want to speak for a moment about the fact that, being the Member for Lesser Slave Lake, I actually have 12 First Nations and three Métis settlements in my riding, so I'm very familiar, having been a nurse there for almost 18 years, with the challenges faced by the indigenous people in both northern Alberta and right across this province. Certainly, there are tremendous barriers and issues for all indigenous people in this province, and we need to very seriously move forward with strategies that improve the outcome for indigenous children in care.

Madam Chair, I have made a promise to the indigenous people of my riding and indigenous people right across this province that I will do so, and I am committed to moving forward on that promise because those children deserve better. I expect to move forward and make changes that will make that happen.

In regard to this amendment, given the uniqueness of First Nation service delivery the inclusion of DFNAs and bands was absolutely required. Indigenous advisers, based on the legislation, will provide advice on how to engage the appropriate communities as the advocate has been required to do so in the legislation. We have intentionally included Métis representation on that list to ensure that proper consideration is given to inclusion of Métis people, including the Métis settlements, but adding the blanket term “indigenous groups” is simply too broad.

Madam Chair, absolutely, the people of the Métis settlements, the children on Métis settlements deserve all the investigative review, but this is not just about geography. It's about service delivery and the uniqueness of service delivery with the First Nations. Given that the blanket term “indigenous groups” is too broad, we simply cannot support this amendment.

Once again, Madam Chair, congratulations.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I must express my disappointment, particularly after I heard that the minister promised the Métis settlements and the groups in her riding that they would be looked after. What we've heard in the committee is that there are a wider variety of indigenous groups than most people recognize and certainly a wider variety than has been traditionally recognized in the legislation. I think this is an opportunity where we could actually correct that shortfall. I'm disappointed that the government has chosen not to do that when we've heard over and over and over again that different indigenous groups feel disrespected, that they feel underserved, and that they feel ignored even though their children represent well over half of the kids in care and receiving services.

It would be a great disappointment if we don't receive support from the government on this amendment that, in my view, would seem completely in line with what the government has promised that they wanted to do and what we heard on the committee needed to be done.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A9?

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A9 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 11:46 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Jean	Schneider
Cooper	Loewen	Starke
Drysdale	MacIntyre	Taylor
Gill	McIver	van Dijken
Gotfried	Nixon	Yao
Hunter

11:50

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	Nielsen
Babcock	Horne	Notley
Bilous	Jansen	Piquette
Carlier	Kazim	Renaud
Carson	Kleinstauber	Rosendahl
Ceci	Larivee	Sabir
Clark	Littlewood	Schmidt
Coolahan	Loyola	Shepherd
Cortes-Vargas	Luff	Sigurdson
Dach	Mason	Sucha
Dang	McPherson	Turner
Gray	Miranda	Woollard

Totals: For – 16 Against – 36

[Motion on amendment A9 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now on the original bill. The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Your amendment will be referred to as A10. Please go ahead.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. It was made very, very clear by panel members and to panel members that more cultural sensitivity is necessary after a child in the intervention system dies. Our amendment is to ensure that we also have other nonindigenous culture experts available to advise the advocate.

The bill does have indigenous cultural experts to be able to advise the advocate. That was something that was important to the panel, and I'm happy to report, Madam Chair, that it's part of Bill 18, but the panel made it clear that they wanted to make sure that other cultural experts would be available for nonindigenous children that may have unfortunately passed away in the system. Indigenous families are disproportionately represented in the intervention system, but they do not account for all the children that are killed in care and do not account for all the families that are associated with children in care. The advocate should be prepared to consider the unique cultures of all child deaths it reviews, whether the child be indigenous, Somalian, Filipino, or Ukrainian.

I think it was clear that that's what the panel expected, and I would be disappointed to see the government vote against such a reasonable amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak to amendment A10? The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. Absolutely, the panel wanted to ensure that reviews are conducted in a culturally appropriate way and paid special attention to the issues involving indigenous young people in care, so we've implemented the panel's recommendation by requiring the advocate to involve any relevant community or cultural group in his review, recognizing the diversity of cultures, religious identities, countries of origin, et cetera. This ensures that reviews are conducted in a culturally appropriate way while giving the advocate the flexibility to determine who best to engage on a case-by-case basis.

Madam Chair, we feel quite confident that we've met the intent of the panel in this measure and in the best way that respects the flexibility required by the advocate. For that reason, I will not be supporting this amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A10?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A10 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the bill. Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment here, which I will furnish the copies for.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, the amendment will be referred to as A11.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair, and congratulations on your engagement.

Madam Chair, this amendment moves that Bill 18, the Child Protection and Accountability Act, be amended in section 1(3)(b) in the proposed section 9 by adding the following after subsection (6). It would read:

(6.1) Notwithstanding subsection (6), the Advocate may, with the consent of a party providing a written request under subsection (6)(a) or (b), continue or resume any part of an investigation that does not interfere with or harm an ongoing law enforcement investigation or prosecution.

Of course, the intent here, Madam Chair, is that while we need to be – and I think we all support this on all sides of the House – sensitive when something untoward either happens or is being investigated to not interfere with the investigation, what's equally important is to not hold up the work of the office of the Child and Youth Advocate in those cases where there is no risk to the investigation. That's why it says "with the consent of a party providing a written request" under those sections. This is a matter of not having unnecessary delays.

As we all know, one of the reasons, one of the events, the tragic life and death of young Serenity, one of the big issues that is still before us now is that the investigation is either not complete or at least not made public. I think we should all be feeling the urgency of this amendment to make sure that not only in Serenity's case but in the case of all other children the investigations of the office of the Child and Youth Advocate don't hold up any police or other investigations. But, on the other hand, we need to take care that at every opportunity the investigation of the Child and Youth Advocate can go forward without unnecessary or undue delay. I think we should all support those investigations going forward without unnecessary or undue delay. Certainly, we've seen the tragic evidence and the painful evidence experienced by the families and loved ones of children that pass in care when delays similar to Serenity's and other ones happen.

For that reason, I sincerely hope all members of this House will see the value in this amendment and will choose to support it for the betterment of Alberta's children in care and those that love them.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A11? The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Chair. Certainly, this legislation provides the opportunity and the requirement for the Child and Youth Advocate and law enforcement to move forward with a renewed relationship in terms of communicating with one another and relating to one another. We certainly feel that in the vast majority of cases the advocate's work will be able to continue. The legislation already provides for cases that are too complicated for concurrent investigations in a number of ways. So we will be voting against this amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members?

Mr. McIver: Well, Madam Chair, I'm disappointed in what I heard, in the minister's own words, that it'll be okay in "the vast majority of cases," when passing a simple amendment would get us past the vast majority of cases and perhaps get all cases done on time. Surely, that's worth adding a few words into the legislation. As a result, I sincerely hope that the minister, who promised only the vast majority of cases, will actually reach for that higher bar of all the cases and support this amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A11 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. I wish to move an amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

This will be referred to as A12. Please proceed.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Chair. You know, Bill 18 is supposed to be a bill that was about accountability. [interjections] I know the Government House Leader wants to participate in the debate right now, but I do hope he'll wait his turn. I'd be interested to hear from him today.

12:00

This bill is supposed to be about accountability and strengthening the child death review process. In fact, the Premier and the minister have risen in this Assembly often and, you know, tried to say that that's what their process was with the panel, when the fact is that that's not what's taken place. Sadly, that's not what's taken place. The panel, despite this government's best efforts during this panel to derail and stop accountability and transparency, was able to get some solid recommendations out mainly because the external experts, who are excellent, Madam Chair, sided with the opposition and against the government members of the panel to be able to force those types of things forward. Sadly, despite solid recommendations around accountability and transparency this minister and this government disregarded the recommendations from the panel and from the external experts and chose to go with that.

The problem with the timelines of the death review process have been highlighted again and again during debate. This government, Madam Chair, has not yet completed one internal death review to date. The Premier, who is laughing right now, has not finished one internal death review debate, not one internal death review debate.

This amendment reverses the onus so that the person staying an investigation – the minister, Madam Chair, maybe should listen so that she will be able to understand what the panel recommendations were because she continues to rise in this Assembly and say that she knows what they were and misrepresent the facts. That's not what the recommendations were. The recommendations were to have a transparent process. This amendment that I am bringing forward right now will reverse the onus so that the person staying an investigation into a child's death is required to renew the stay. Right now the bill requires the advocate to follow up with the person staying their investigation to ask permission to continue. If there is an important reason for an investigation to be stayed, the person will take the steps to renew the stay. It's that simple. We are already burdening the advocate – and the advocate is concerned about it – with new responsibilities, and this would alleviate a tremendous load.

The default should be that reviews happen. The default should be that reviews happen and that the behaviour of this NDP government cannot continue with zero investigations, the whitewash that they continue to do, putting things underneath the rug. Hiding it from the public cannot continue, and with this legislation they continue to do it. They continue to hide from their responsibility for the people of Alberta at a time where we're talking about the issue that kids were killed in our care. It's shameful, and if the government truly, truly wants to do it, they will at least take the small step despite the fact that they completely ignored all the recommendations from the panel and went ahead with their own process to hide it.

I see the minister laughing about it, but I can tell you that the external members and the other members of the panel are extremely disappointed in her behaviour. They are extremely disappointed in watching the minister and the Premier rise in this House and say that they followed the panel recommendations. They are extremely disappointed to watch them completely disregard the Auditor General's recommendations. They are extremely disappointed to see what Paula Simons calls a breach of public trust by this Premier and this government when it comes to kids in care. It is disappointing. They have had an opportunity to stand up, and they could do what is right once and for all. But, sadly, Madam Chair, I suspect they will continue to whitewash it, continue to sweep it under the rug. I can tell you that this side of the House won't put up with it.

Let's see if they will truly put their money where their mouth is and stand up for accountability and transparency. Instead, what they will continue to do is whitewash children being killed in care, stand up and misrepresent the facts to the people of Alberta, say that they're supporting the panel's recommendations when they clearly are not.

Mr. Clark: Madam Chair, as a member of the child intervention panel, as a member who sits on this side of the House, I profoundly and fundamentally disagree with my hon. colleague from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre. This is an incredibly challenging topic. It's getting very late at night here. I know emotions are running high, and I will imagine that the member's intentions only come from a good place.

As I talked about earlier, we've heard over and over and over again that consultation has not been adequate on Bill 17 and many other things this government has done, and I agree with that. The process that we're going through on the child intervention panel is a thorough, methodical consultative process. If we jump ahead by putting things into a bill now, we do exactly the opposite of what the Official Opposition constantly asks the government to do, and that's consult. Especially in an area that is this complex and this challenging, if we don't think very hard about ensuring we get things right, then it's going to make things worse, so I will certainly be voting against this amendment.

You know, look, I don't think this bill is perfect. I don't think the government has done a perfect job of this, but it is an incredibly challenging file that has many and various complexities. I'm also very sensitive and in tune to the role that we play in this Assembly in creating and contributing to a culture of fear, in particular for front-line service providers in areas that are incredibly challenging, that go far beyond anything I have the bravery to do. I could never do that job. I don't have the guts to do that. There's no way I do, so I have tremendous respect for the people who do that job.

That isn't to say that there isn't work to do, because there clearly is. What happened to Serenity happened, and it shouldn't have. I know this government doesn't want that to ever happen again. None of us do. I know they don't, but I believe the process we're going through here on the child intervention panel is a good process. I would ask and hope that the Official Opposition commits to allowing the process to play itself out and to trying not to let politics get in the way of that process.

There'll be plenty of times to have these loud and long debates. This is not the time for that. Let's let the process play itself out. Let's pass Bill 18. Let's make the system a little bit better today than it was yesterday, continue to make it a little bit better tomorrow than it is today, and that's what we can do. That's how we're going to help address and solve this issue. As much as it may make for sexy politics to be very up in arms about this, I don't think it's helpful at this stage. I really, genuinely don't.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. Member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you. I will disagree with the last member to speak. You know what? There's nothing sexy about kids dying in care. To hear any part of the debate described that way, frankly, is very disappointing.

The Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre has made a good point. You know what? Unfortunately, what he said is true. The minister and the Premier have stood up many times in this House and said that we were allowed on the committee, for example, to discuss the case of Serenity. That is, in fact, not true. [interjections]

Premier, if you disagree, stand up and disagree with me, but I've got the floor now. I'd love to hear your side, love to have you get to your feet, Premier. You're the highest-ranking person here. All of Alberta would love to hear your side of this, but the fact is that this committee has not been allowed to talk about Serenity. This committee has not been allowed to talk about the little girl that actually caused us to push the government to have this minister's panel. In fact, we pushed the government to have an all-party committee, which would have been better.

That's part of the reason why we've got so many amendments here, somewhere between 10 and 20, because the government chose to have a ministerial panel, which gave them the authority in this legislation to put many, many of the panel's recommendations into regulation in the Trust Me; We'll Get It Right Later section. Trust Me; We'll Get It Right Later is exactly the attitude that has gotten the past government in trouble, the attitude that's got this government in trouble, and the attitude that will get future governments in trouble until they get past that and they start discussing the most difficult issues publicly.

I'm sorry. I would say that there are good things in this bill, but there are also things that the minister will be allowed to and has given herself the authority, through this legislation, to sweep under the carpet. It's very much a shame. The children in care in Alberta deserve better. They haven't gotten better, and that is truly sad.

To hear the Member for Calgary-Elbow stand up and really defend the half-hearted effort to be as transparent as possible by the government – I'm frankly disappointed. The member is, in my view, pandering to some group that I don't understand. It's surely not children in care that he's pandering to when he stands up in here. I'm very disappointed and sad because – you know what? – as much as there are good things in this legislation, enough good things to vote for it, as a friend of mine would say to the government: keep up the mediocre work.

12:10

The problem, Madam Chair, is that the government could have been great on this one. They could have been great, and they haven't reached that standard because they decided that that was too high a standard for them to meet.

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A12?

Seeing none, I will call the question on amendment A12 as proposed by the hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

[Motion on amendment A12 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We will now be on the original bill, Bill 18. Are there any other speakers wishing to speak to the bill?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The remaining clauses of Bill 18 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act (continued)

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on Bill 17. All right. On Bill 17 there currently are no amendments. Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered in respect to the bill?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. I actually have an amendment to move, and with your permission I will put it forward and speak to it.

The Deputy Chair: Please go ahead, hon. member. This will now be referred to as A27.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Madam Chair. The amendment reads as such: that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended in section 31 in the proposed section 50, (a) in subsection (1) by striking out "consecutive" wherever it occurs and (b) by adding the following after subsection (1):

- (1.1) An employee and employer may agree that the employee may take any period of parental leave entitled under subsection (1) consecutively or in non-consecutive periods of at least 1 week.

Madam Chair, there are a number of ways in which the workplace is changing, but one of the most pronounced ways is that employees are looking for more flexibility in balancing their home lives and their professional lives. This amendment that I'm bringing forward today is in recognition of that desire. Parental leave is an important recognition of the adjustment that parents of a new child need to make. Making sure that new parents have the ability to take some time and adjust to their new situation is crucial for the healthy development of the child and for the health of the new parent. But it's not always possible or desirable for a new parent to take one long, uninterrupted leave. For example, maybe two weeks after the baby is born, the grandparents are there to babysit, and that allows the parent on leave to come back to work for a week and check up on things, which is why I believe this amendment is important. The ability to take parental leave in nonconsecutive chunks would allow someone on a parental leave to balance new responsibilities with both their partner and their employer.

The other part of this amendment that I believe is important to highlight is that nonconsecutive leave would be dependent upon reaching an agreement between the employee and the employer. Most businesses are very understanding about the need of a new parent to spend time with their child or partner, but one concern we hear constantly from the business community is the need for stability and certainty. I believe that by making this nonconsecutive leave contingent on an agreement between employee and employer, we are doing a good job of eliminating surprises. You can never do that perfectly, but it would eliminate some of the surprises.

Therefore, I believe the amendment strikes a good balance between the ability of new parents to spend time with their newborn child and the concerns of the business community. I would therefore encourage all members of this House to support this amendment, which I believe improves the bill.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. Thank you to the member for thinking about ways that we can make important life events like having children easier for Albertans. The flexibility that is often needed, especially at such a challenging time in new parents' lives: I appreciate the thought behind this.

But I've had the opportunity to stand and talk about one of the core philosophies when we were drafting Bill 17, which was alignment with the federal employment insurance leaves and making sure that we're providing to Albertans job protection when they're accessing that employment insurance system. By introducing this amendment, I think that, obviously, it would not be aligned. It leads to an interesting scenario where someone would be potentially collecting EI and then also working at the same time but only for a short period of time and then going back. This is not to say that nonconsecutive parental leave isn't potentially a good discussion, but I think we would need to make sure that what we were doing was in alignment with the federal employment insurance system. So for that core reason I will not be supporting this amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A27 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. Any members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I rise to speak to Bill 17, and I would like to propose an amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your amendment will be referred to as A28. Please go ahead.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Chair. I move that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended as follows: section 138 is struck out, and section 141(b) is struck out.

Madam Chair, the ban on MERFs, or market enhancement recovery funds, found in section 138 in Bill 17: I propose that it get repealed. This amendment ensures that the ban on MERFs remains. MERFing is when unions use funds to unfairly help unionized contractors gain an advantage over non-unionized contractors when they bid for jobs.

If a business were to do this with a product, it's called dumping. Dumping causes trade disputes on a global scale. All we have to do is look at the softwood lumber case brought forward by the U.S. against Canada. The United States thinks that Canada is dumping wood into their market. We can't help being more efficient than the Americans with the softwood products, but we are. The Americans think our stumpage fees on Crown land are too low compared to their own private woodlot owners. We have won this case many, many, many times, and we'll win it again.

We have another case of tariffs being raised by Ottawa because they thought the Americans were dumping drywall into the Canadian market. Watch all those new homes get more expensive because of that tariff. But when the coal stops being burned and the fly ash is no longer produced, what is going to go into the cement and gypsum to make the drywall and the concrete?

Tariffs and barriers can have unintended consequences for fighting dumping. MERFing is the organized dumping of labour to get the contract. Now, it is beyond me why someone would want to bid on a job at a loss in order to keep another good Alberta company from getting the work only because that Alberta company that loses is not unionized, but I guess if their long game is to drive out the competition so that they can drive up their price in the future, then that's what they'll have to own. Now, some learned individuals insist that MERFing never worked as intended and that unions found alternative means to ensure that their unions got the job.

12:20

Nonetheless, we have rules of trade, and MERFing is a distortion of the economy, the marketplace, and has people playing by different rules. We need people to be playing by the same rules. This is why MERFing must remain banned. You know, it would be very similar to having a baseball game where you had an umpire that was not going to be a fair umpire. If the one team was looking to be able to play with a fair and open field and the umpire was – it didn't matter whether or not that team was able to play better than the other team. If the umpire wanted to rig the game, then that umpire would have the ability to do that. Obviously, if this was the case, people would call foul.

This is what's going on with this MERFing. We cannot allow international unions to come in with big pools of capital and MERFs to undercut the existing contractors just so they can decrease competition and drive up price. Even then, international unions might upset local, homegrown unions. It happened in Toronto when the international union came and shoved out the duly elected local union president at the Toronto Transit Commission. It went to court, and in short order the international union was told to move along. They had no jurisdiction, and the local president was re-established.

We have good labour laws. Let's allow this amendment to be adopted so we can keep it that way. Support the amendment. Support the ban on MERFs.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A28? The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you, Madam Chair. Alberta is the only jurisdiction with restrictions on market enhancement recovery funds. It harkens back to a past era that we have this ban at all. In fact, no MERFs have been formed since 2008, and it is time that we come into alignment with the rest of the country on this. So for these reasons, I will not be supporting this amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A28?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A28 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 12:23 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Gotfried	Pitt
Anderson, W.	Hunter	Schneider
Clark	Jean	Starke
Cooper	Loewen	Strankman
Drysdale	MacIntyre	Taylor
Fildebrandt	McIver	van Dijken
Fraser	Nixon	Yao
Gill

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	Nielsen
Babcock	Jansen	Notley
Bilous	Kazim	Piquette
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Renaud
Carson	Larivee	Rosendahl
Ceci	Littlewood	Sabir
Coolahan	Loyola	Schmidt
Cortes-Vargas	Malkinson	Schreiner
Dach	Mason	Shepherd
Dang	McKittrick	Sigurdson
Drever	McPherson	Sucha
Feehan	Miller	Turner
Gray	Miranda	Woollard

Totals:	For – 22	Against – 39
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A28 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. Are there any other amendments? The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Mrs. Pitt: Thank you, Madam Chair. I would like to read an article here, found on unionfacts.com, and it's called Card Check Intimidation, Coercion, and Confusion.

An Hon. Member: Here we go again.

Mrs. Pitt: This is important. There are some good words that need to be heard in this room. I will proceed.

The claim of moral superiority is a favourite technique of union organizers when discussing coercion.

American Rights at Work . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, I know it's late, and we're trying to stay awake, but I'm having an extremely hard time hearing everybody, so if we could please keep the volume down in the House and listen. Thank you.

Hon. member, please continue.

Mrs. Pitt: Thank you, Madam Chair.

. . . a union-funded organization, makes this case: "While we polled workers on union and employer coercion, it's important to note that they aren't equivalent. Pro-union workers and union organizers attempt to make their case persuasively. But when the person who signs your paycheck calls you into his office and tells you he's against the union, that's an entirely different kind of influence."

The evidence tells a different story. A secret ballot prevents most ills, since no one knows how an employee will vote or voted, irrespective of signing a card. Conversely, a serious flaw in the public card check process is that it is inherently rife with the potential for intimidation by union officials.

In 1996, an employer presented evidence to the NLRB that "on the day before the election, a bargaining unit employee approached another employee and solicited her to sign a union authorization card. The card solicitor allegedly stated that the employee had better sign a card because if she did not, the Union would come and get her children and it would also slash her car tires."

"The modern record . . ." [interjections] Madam Chair, it's disheartening to hear that the government thinks it's funny that the union members – and the Member for Calgary-North West is laughing, thinks it's funny – would come and get her children and also slash her car tires. This threat being made by the union worker is in an article I'm reading.

12:30

I will continue.

The modern record is full of cases of intimidation. Former United Steelworkers organizer Richard Torres wrote in a February 2007 letter to the House Education and Labour Committee that he quit his job when a union official "asked me to threaten migrant workers by telling them they would be reported to federal immigration officials if they refused to sign check-off cards."

There's actually a similar tactic used by those who want to enter persons into human trafficking, labour trafficking.

An affidavit given to the NLRB described a New Jersey food service staff member's ordeal, where a union organizer visited her home and told her "I wouldn't have a job in Sept. if I didn't sign the card and that the Union would make sure that I was fired."

Mike Ivey, a Freightliner employee, gained attention when he fought organizing attempts by the United Auto Workers. According to a March 2007 story, Ivey said, "Some employees have had five or more harassing visits from these (United Auto Worker) organizers . . . The only way, it seems, to stop the badgering and pressure is to sign the card."

Peer pressure is a significant concern among employees who happen to be in the minority opinion, whether they support a union or not. Whereas a secret ballot protects these minorities, paid union staff and peers who support the union can pressure employees if their decision is public. A local of the United Food and Commercial Workers, for example, went so far as to institute a bounty system that offered a three-tier “incentive plan” to pay employees per signature they collected from their colleagues.

Coercion is not the only problem inherent in card check campaigns. Equally troubling are stories of union organizers gaining signatures from employees who didn’t understand the documents they were signing.

In the famous Gissel Packing case in 1969, the Supreme Court stated:

We would be closing our eyes to obvious difficulties, of course, if we did not recognize that there have been [card solicitation] abuses, primarily arising out of misrepresentations by union organizers as to whether the effect of signing a card was to designate the union to represent the employee for collective bargaining purposes or merely to authorize it to seek an election to determine that issue.

A host of recent stories verify this time-tested theory.

In April 2007 the Service Employees International Union in Oregon was forced to reach a settlement with the NLRB in which the union agreed to discontinue card check organizing for six months. Their offense? SEIU Local 49 officials allegedly tricked employees into signing “information flyers” that they later counted as votes favouring unionization.

Interesting. Sounds familiar.

Perhaps not surprisingly, an NLRB regional official noted that the board had earlier reached a similar settlement with the same local.

The article, which I will table and I urge you to read, goes on in similar fashion.

There are many challenges here, to which I would like to move an amendment on behalf of my hon. colleague from Bonnyville-Cold Lake. I will pass this around, and I will read it. Mr. Cyr moves that Bill 17, Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 112 and substituting the following: section 33 is amended (a) by renumbering it as 33(1); (b) in subsection 1(a)(ii) by adding “, without undue influence,” after “certification was made”; and (c) by adding the following after subsection (1):

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), undue influence includes any practice intended to induce, mislead or compel a person to become a member of a trade union or to impede, prevent or otherwise interfere with the free exercise of that person’s decision to become a member of a trade union.

Thank you. I urge members to vote for this amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member. Your amendment is referred to as A29.

Are there any members wishing to speak to the amendment?

[Motion on amendment A29 lost]

The Deputy Chair: We are now back on the original bill. The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. I have an amendment here to move, if you will allow it, to Bill 17. It’s a good one. You’ll like it.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your amendment will be A30. Please go ahead.

Mr. McIver: Thank you. I move that Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, be amended by striking out section 114 and substituting the following: 114 Section 34.1 is repealed and the following is substituted:

Certification representation vote

34.1 A person is not eligible to vote in a representation vote referred to in section 34(2)(d) in respect of the certification of a trade union as a bargaining agent unless all of the following apply:

- (a) the person was an employee of that employer for at least the 30-day period immediately preceding the date of the application for certification;
- (b) the person has not quit or abandoned the person’s employment between the date of the application for certification and the date of the vote;
- (c) the person meets any requirements with respect to eligibility to vote established in rules made by the Board pursuant to section 15(4)(a).

Madam Chair, this government made it known they would bring forward labour legislation, and I think everybody on this side of the House knew that their pals would receive a few concessions. Bringing back salting is one of the most obvious examples of this exact thing happening. For those who are not aware, salting is a tactic which involves sending someone to work for a particular company with the specific intent of organizing a union once they are hired but not intending to stay. The person has no intention of staying in the company long term and is simply there to advocate for the interests of a particular union.

Why should that person be allowed to have a say in whether or not that particular company decides to unionize? The employees of the company, of course, should be able to make that decision, the employees that have worked there and intend to work there. Someone that shows up just to organize and then leave probably shouldn’t have the same authority over this particular long-term decision as those people that want to stick around and work and support and make that company successful through their labour. If they want to vote to join a union, that’s their right. I support that right. It should be a secret ballot, but I support that right. But somebody there just clearly for the purpose to organize and leave is not part of the company and truly is not able to represent the will of the employees that are going to stick around. The only people that want these are those that want to organize.

Reimplementing salting by this NDP government does nothing to improve workers’ safety in Alberta. It does nothing to modernize workplace laws. It, in fact, takes them backwards. For a minister that wants to modernize the law, this takes it backwards, and it does nothing to help businesses stay competitive and keep paying employees. These are the stated goals of Bill 17, to help businesses stay competitive, and salting should not be part of this legislation. It doesn’t belong. This type of change is exactly what the government is trying to hide behind a number of positive changes being made to employment standards.

12:40

Allowing this process of salting to once again become the practice in Alberta is simply an act by this government to pay their friends. The only intent of salting is to make it easier and less fair to unionize in Alberta, plain and simple. Forming a union within a particular company changes the company, and employers that want to make that decision in the way that they bargain with their employer have the right to do so. Allowing people to roll in and have the same authority to make that decision as the employees that have been there working, the employees that intend to stay there working, is just plain wrong.

By voting for this amendment, you will ensure that the monumental decision to form a union or to not form a union is made by the actual employees of the company that intend to stick around, support the company, hopefully make a good living, and be part of that which they create, not by somebody that wants to create it and leave and not be any part of it. I would encourage all members of this Assembly to support this amendment. It truly is in the spirit of a fair and democratic process to unionize or not unionize businesses. This amendment would prevent people from coming in to make a change without showing responsibility for the change before they make it and while not sticking around to be responsible for the change they want to make after it's made. I hope all members of this House will support this amendment.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A30? The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. Alberta is the only jurisdiction that currently restricts this practice. Removing this . . .

An Hon. Member: Salting.

Ms Gray: Salting.

. . . restriction simply brings us in alignment with the rest of the country. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment A30 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 12:42 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Aheer	Gill	Schneider
Anderson, W.	Gotfried	Starke
Clark	Hunter	Strankman
Cooper	Jean	Taylor
Drysdale	Loewen	van Dijken
Fildebrandt	McIver	Yao
Fraser	Nixon

Against the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	Notley
Babcock	Jansen	Piquette
Bilous	Kazim	Renaud
Carlier	Larivee	Rosendahl
Ceci	Littlewood	Sabir
Coolahan	Loyola	Schmidt
Cortes-Vargas	Malkinson	Schreiner
Dach	Mason	Shepherd
Dang	McKitrick	Sigurdson
Drever	McPherson	Sucha
Feehan	Miller	Turner
Gray	Miranda	Woollard
Hinkley	Nielsen

Totals:	For – 20	Against – 38
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment A30 lost]

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'd like to introduce an amendment, and it is already at your table.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, Minister.

Just to notify everyone in the House that part C of this amendment has already been addressed and agreed to earlier this evening on the subamendment to amendment A25. The official copy of the amendment will be corrected here at the table, but the rest of the amendment can be debated.

Ms Gray: Thank you, Madam Chair. With your permission may I read each section and just briefly describe it?

The Deputy Chair: Yes.

Ms Gray: These amendments are minor refinements that do not substantially change the proposals put forward in Bill 17. They're meant to add clarity and context to some sections of the bill based on review and feedback that we've received. When dealing with important provisions like overtime and essential services, we do want to be absolutely clear.

Part A. Section 62 is amended in the proposed section 95(2) by adding the following after clause (c):

(c.1) a notification of a cancellation referred to in section 23.1(7).

This relates to the new provisions regarding hours of work averaging agreements. The amendment clarifies that an appeal may be filed within 21 days if the employment standards director makes a decision to cancel an hours of work averaging agreement. This ensures affected parties have the proper path to appeal a decision in this area if they so choose, essentially just wanting to make sure that access to an appeal is available.

Part B. Section 92 is amended in the proposed section 137(1) by striking out "If" and substituting "Subject to the regulations, if." This as well as consequential amendments which were covered in part C, which has already been addressed, ensure that we have the flexibility around requirements for group termination notices. It's important that the government receives group termination notices within an appropriate time frame. They also deal with areas where group termination notices maybe should not apply. For example, there are often large construction projects where subcontractors are hired for a specific task for a specific amount of time. The expectation is generally agreed that the subcontractors' work concludes when the task for which they were hired is finished; therefore, no termination notice is required. This amendment will give us the ability to have those regulations granting those amendments.

12:50

Part D. Section 103 is amended by striking out clause (b)(iii) and substituting the following: (iii) in clause (l) (a) by adding "and includes a dependent contractor" after "wages" and (b) by striking out "or" at the end of subclause (ii), by adding "or" at the end of subclause (iii), and by adding the following after subclause (iii).

(iv) a person employed on a farm or ranch who is a family member of the farm or ranch employer as determined under subsections (2) and (3).

Part D clarifies the definition of dependent contractors as it relates to the Labour Relations Code. As you've heard, we want to protect dependent contractors in this legislation and ensure that they have same rights as an employee. This amendment also ensures that we are not capturing family members on farms and ranches in our Employment Standards Code.

Part E. Section 129(a) is amended by striking out the proposed section 96(1)(j) and substituting the following:

(j) employers whose primary operations are the provision of medical laboratory diagnostic services under a contract with a regional health authority, other than employers that are professional corporations within the meaning of the Health Professions Act, all the employees of those employers.

Part E just ensures that physicians are excluded from the Labour Relations Code provisions as they are now. Physicians are currently afforded protections through their professional body, and we're not looking to change that in Bill 17. That is why we refer to professional corporations within the meaning of the Health Professions Act.

Finally, Part F. Section 133 is struck out. Part F would alter a section of the bill that repealed appointment provisions for the Labour Relations Board dealing with bias. After further discussions with the board, we're satisfied that this section should be kept and not repealed.

These amendments are going to ensure understanding and proper interpretation of what we're trying to accomplish, and that is making sure that Albertans have fair and family-friendly workplaces. I hope all members will support these straightforward amendments.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Well, thank you, I think, Madam Chair. I'd like to seek some clarification from you if I might with respect to the amendment if presented in this form, with part C still included in the amendment, actually – and I appreciate your comments prior where you said that the rest of the amendment could be debated. But given that part C seems to have already been addressed and may or may not make this amendment in order or out of order as it's presented to us at – oh, I don't know – five to 1, which makes six relatively significant, some more significant than others, amendments to the legislation, perhaps you can provide some additional comment. Because I have an amendment that includes part C, which, if I understood your previous comments, is not in order. Is the amendment, in fact, in order or not?

The Deputy Chair: Thank you for asking the question, hon. member. The balance of the amendment is in order.

Mr. Cooper: Okay. I appreciate the fact that the balance of the amendment is in order. Can you provide clarification? Is part C out of order?

The Deputy Chair: Part C is not part of the amendment. It was already provided to Parliamentary Counsel for adjustment.

Mr. Cooper: Okay. I'm a little confused, then. If part C is not part of the amendment except that I'm holding a piece of paper that appears to be signed by Parliamentary Counsel that includes part C, I'm a little unclear as to exactly how this works.

The Deputy Chair: The official copy has been reflected to remove part C, that was already debated earlier, so I announced that prior to the debate. There is precedent in this House where we have been able to support members with their amendments and change them as requested.

The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Madam Chair, and thank you for the opportunity to speak to government amendments to Bill 17. We have before us a document that outlines a number of changes that the government is discovering after the fact need to be cleaned up.

I guess I would like to bring our attention to the fact that we are faced with an omnibus bill right at the end of session that the government has decided to try and rush through with limited consultation and put before us, where we have had, I believe, 30 amendments come forward with regard to shortfalls and with regard to other issues that have been identified within the bill that we feel could have been addressed in a much more fulsome way through enhanced consultation over the summer.

We put a reasoned amendment forward for it to not be read a second time based on the lack of consultation that occurred, a period of 36 days, where only 27 working days were included in the actual consultation period. Then we see before us less than a month after that consultation is completed a document that's some 120 pages long, 124 pages of adjustments to the Employment Standards Code and the Labour Relations Code.

You know, as opposition members we play a critical role in being able to try and help this government identify shortfalls that stakeholders and Albertans bring to our attention with legislation that is brought forward. This is an important role that we have to be very cognizant of, and it's to be there as a sober second thought for the government, to ensure that they are looking at all different aspects of this bill.

Now we've got a government amendment that comes before us, you know, and we see in this amendment that many of these things could have been addressed in a very fulsome manner through work by committee or by consultation over the summer to come back with a bill that has been fine-tuned. Instead, when the bill was first introduced to us, we got a document that was very evident that it was at the last minute stapled together and thrown on our desks. I would suggest that this is a sign that the minister and the government have put forward a bill that was not complete in the first place.

I would like to highlight part F of the amendment, where all of a sudden one portion of this bill, section 133, is struck out. Now, the minister and the government saw fit to present section 133, where they propose that section 139 is repealed, so I guess section 139 stays. Not sure why or the reasoning behind that, but I would suggest that fulsome consultation and full discussion and understanding of why there was possibly a need to remove section 139 – and now we're finding out that, "Oh, no. That's maybe not what we want to do, so we'll leave section 139 in." Section 139:

Except in the case of a chair, no person shall be disqualified from acting as a member of an arbitration board or other body unless that member is directly affected by the difference or has been involved in an attempt to negotiate or settle the difference.

Now, there is maybe some explanation as to why we are returning to this, and possibly it's where we are getting into situations where you're going to continually be needing new chairs. I'm not exactly sure what that's regarding, but it would be good to have more clarification on that.

1:00

There are many times when we can have good legislation brought forward, and that's usually when it's done in proper time and with proper consultation. You know, the fact that we have these before us now is identifying that proper consultation did not take place with regard to Bill 17, and we could have been able to alleviate this difficulty if the time would have been taken to do it right in the first place.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to amendment A31? The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. At 12:48 a.m. the government introduces two pages of amendments to a 124-page bill and expects those of us in the opposition to have researched and analyzed all of the implications of what could be far-reaching changes. We don't know; we have to take the minister at her word that these are minor refinements. How in the world do we know that, when they've added words like "subject to the regulations"? Ah, we're just subject to the regulations. What regulations? Regulations are as wide ranging as it could possibly get, including changing the dependent contractor in certain aspects of the bill, with absolutely no idea what the implications of those are. That is remarkably disrespectful to the House.

I would challenge the hon. Premier on what she would have done, sitting in this spot in the Assembly, if the government of the day, the PC government, did the same thing to her. I can assure you that she wouldn't sit back quietly and say: well, I'm sure it's probably nothing; I'm sure it's just fine. This is not, I think, acceptable practice. It's not what Albertans would expect out of their government, but what it shows is the slipshod manner in which this bill was put together, slapped together at the last minute.

It is a massive change to incredibly complex legislation. Look at the size of this thing. Look at the size of this bill. You can't possibly expect anyone on the opposition side, let alone those of us standing here with precisely one researcher in the backroom, to have any concept of what this actually means.

So if anyone was thinking, prior to my comments on Bill 17, that I'm somehow in the pocket of government, hopefully after this you realize that there's not a chance that I am.

When you bring in these kinds of changes here at the last minute, should I just take you at your word? I mean, when you talk about regulation changes, the breadth of that is monumental. Section D: do I think it's a good idea for "a person employed on a farm or ranch who is a family member of the farm or ranch employer" to be excluded as a definition-dependent contractor? Probably. I don't know. I imagine I do, just on the surface of it. But I've just seen this. I've seen this document here for a few scant moments, and here we are at 1 o'clock in the morning trying to blast through a bill and get out of the House. Perhaps the government should have brought the amendment done exactly – here the Minister of Municipal Affairs has some things to say.

Perhaps this bill should have been treated like the Municipal Government Act was treated, where you introduce the bill, you spend some thoughtful time throughout the summer travelling the province and listening to people. That's what you do when you actually want people's input, when you actually want to hear what Albertans have to say. Then you come back in the fall, and you introduce a series of thoughtful amendments based on the feedback you received from the good people of the province of Alberta. Given the implications of Bill 17 on the economy of this province, on the people of this province I would expect no less from this government.

But what they do at 12:48 a.m. is drop two pages of amendments on our desks, confusing whether or not they're actually in order. I can only assume – given the expertise of our Parliamentary Counsel I will take their word that, in fact, these are in order. I'll take the chair at her word as well that they are in order.

But how in the world can we evaluate the implications of what these changes mean? The whole idea of these sorts of amendments, the whole reason why we have this Assembly is to thoughtfully debate amendments and changes to bills and hopefully make them better. But how in the world we can possibly do that when they're dropped in the wee hours of the morning is absolutely beyond me. It's shameful that the government would take this tack.

You know, I hope that all members recognize that I do strive for balance and reasonability in most things that I do in this House. This is unreasonable. It is absolutely unreasonable that the government has done this at the last moment. We'll try to get through it and try to figure out what the implications of it are, but it's one of the many reasons you'll find that I'm not going to be supporting this bill at third reading.

Thank you, Madam Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Madam Chair. What's before us really raises a whole raft of questions. Now, I understand that the little letters PP at the top corner are the same as a parliamentary stamp. I accept that. But the fact is that somehow what's good for the goose doesn't seem to be good for the gander here. I know that when opposition puts together an amendment, if something has to be changed, if Parliamentary Counsel wants us to change it, we have to go back, type it all again, and then get it stamped the way Parliamentary Counsel wants it. We don't get to scratch out this and assume it's scratched out there.

An Hon. Member: Welcome to the opposition.

Mr. McIver: Yes. Welcome to the opposition. Well said.

Really, I think the more pertinent point for those in TV land that are still up, both of those Albertans that can't sleep and found themselves by accident on this channel or on this Internet page, will now realize, if they've been watching, that the question that we've asked the minister for weeks, "Have you consulted with Albertans?" – and the minister said yes – was actually proven not to be true. The minister said in her opening comments and since the bill has been in the public for the last week – these are changes that members of the public gave to the minister because they wanted change when the public finally got to see the bill a week ago, not six or eight weeks ago like the minister said. A week ago. The minister claiming that this was out for weeks, that everybody saw it is absolutely not true, and she's proven it. She's admitted it. She's made it obvious right here. It's absolutely not true. There's no way it can be true, and she's essentially said it.

When the public finally could see it, they come up with a bunch of changes. She would have the House believe from her questions in question period week after week from all the opposition that everybody's had weeks to see this.

Now, I was pretty suspicious of this all the way along, but I can tell you what: I was more suspicious when we got to the embargoed preview of the bill a couple of weeks ago, when Andy Sims, who is a fantastic person, one of the greatest labour experts in Alberta if not the greatest one, which the government trotted out as being proud of having Mr. Sims involved – and you know what? I would be proud to have Mr. Sims involved, too. When I was labour minister, he used to work with me, and he's a fine man, one of the best people in Alberta on labour legislation. But you know what he did when we were getting our advancer on the bill, Madam Chair? He distanced himself from this legislation in a serious way. He made it very clear that he never wrote this legislation. He made it very clear that in every section he laid out to the government what all the choices were in a menu form, and the government picked from the menu. Mr. Sims, the man that I trust, the man the government was bragging about having in their corner, distanced himself from this piece of legislation in a very big way.

We can see why now: because the government didn't share it with the public, because the government didn't take the best advice that they had. They got the best advice in Alberta, and all they did was have him lay out a menu which they picked from, and now we don't know which sections Mr. Sims would agree with and which ones he didn't. But I can tell you what: Mr. Sims said to us that he is taking no responsibility for this other than laying out the menu and the government picked. So we don't know whether the government picked the good, the bad, or the ugly in each section for the choices. I'm sure there are a couple of cases where the government might have picked the good, but it's pretty obvious now that they picked some bad and some ugly also. That's pretty obvious from the legislation.

Madam Chair, what we have here is a government that couldn't organize a two-car parade. They are the gang that cannot shoot straight under any circumstances, and now they're caught red-handed with their pants down, talking in the corner, trying to sort out the deep, deep hole they've dug for themselves in front of the TV cameras. No one's watching tonight, but it's in Hansard, and you'll be able to see the replay of it to see what a mess they made of this legislation, that's going to affect every worker in Alberta. This gang couldn't get anything right if their lives depended upon it. The sad thing is that Albertans' lives depend upon it, and this government is screwing it up big time.

1:10

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the amendment?

I will call the question on amendment A31, as proposed by the Minister of Labour.

[Motion on amendment A31 carried]

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Yeah. Thank you, Madam Chair. I just want to provide the government one more opportunity to move an amendment at the last minute before this bill moves out of committee.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you. Well, Madam Chair, the government pushed this thing forward after basically admitting that everything that they said was true wasn't, the fact that they had consulted with Albertans. They did that.

You know what? There was another clue, too, when the government brought a poor woman here whose son had cancer and she'd taken time off work and lost her job. That's not fair, and fixing that is a good thing in this legislation. But the fact that the government hid behind this poor woman all this other stuff that's in this bill that's bad is shameful. It's shameful to hide behind this poor person, that actually needs your support – to hide a bunch of negative legislation is despicable. The whole world knows it now. It's just a shame that they have done that.

You know what? [interjections] I love that the Health minister – I'd like to see her get on her feet and take the microphone if she has something to say. You know, you've got lots to say, but you don't have the microphone. I'd love to yield the floor and let you speak because your government has made a mess, Minister . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, I'm speaking. Member for Calgary-Hays, please. Through the chair when it's your turn to speak, both sides. Enough, please.

If we could please move forward on the amendments and/or on the debate in question. Does anybody have anything they would like to speak on in regard to the bill?

Seeing none, I will call the question. All members, as you will remember, there was a request to be able to divide the bill into two separate votes. I will call the question on part 1, and then I will call the question on part 2.

[The remaining clauses of part 1 of Bill 17 agreed to]

[The voice vote indicated that the remaining clauses of part 2 of Bill 17 were agreed to]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 1:14 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the committee divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hoffman	Nielsen
Babcock	Jansen	Notley
Bilous	Kazim	Piquette
Carlier	Kleinstauber	Renaud
Ceci	Larivee	Rosendahl
Coolahan	Littlewood	Sabir
Cortes-Vargas	Loyola	Schmidt
Dach	Malkinson	Schreiner
Dang	Mason	Shepherd
Drever	McKittrick	Sigurdson
Feehan	McPherson	Sucha
Gray	Miller	Turner
Hinkley	Miranda	Woollard

Against the motion:

Aheer	Gotfried	Pitt
Anderson, W.	Hunter	Schneider
Clark	Jean	Starke
Cooper	Loewen	Strankman
Drysdale	MacIntyre	Taylor
Fildebrandt	McIver	van Dijken
Fraser	Nixon	Yao
Gill

Totals: For – 39 Against – 22

[The remaining clauses of part 2 of Bill 17 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Yes. I move that the committee rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

1:20

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Rosendahl: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills with some amendments: Bill 17, Bill 18. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 18

Child Protection and Accountability Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Yes. I would request the unanimous consent of the House for one-minute bells for the rest of the evening.

[Unanimous consent denied]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children's Services.

Ms Larivee: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to move third reading of Bill 18, the Child Protection and Accountability Act.

This legislation would improve the way that child death reviews are conducted in Alberta, make child protection more transparent and accountable, and help build a stronger, better child intervention system. When a child receiving services dies, Albertans expect our system to take a hard look at what may have gone wrong, implement changes where needed, and prevent similar deaths from happening in the future.

This legislation is about Serenity, but it is also about children across this province who receive services from the province. We owe those children and their families a stronger, better system. We owe them a system that responds quickly to tragedies when they happen and learns from what went wrong to ensure that we don't make the same mistake twice.

We all came together in this Legislature, realizing that we needed to move forward on this quickly. I want to thank the all-party panel for their work and thank the opposition for working with me to strengthen this bill in the House today. We're not finished. There is more to be done on critical issues in phase 2, issues like historical trauma, poverty, and resourcing of the system. But this is a start that I'm proud to make, a step in the right direction, one that I hope my colleagues across the aisle can support.

It makes the Child and Youth Advocate the single authority for reviewing these deaths and ensures that government responds to those recommendations and that Albertans can hold us to those changes. It ensures that agencies that have information about a case are required to share that information with the advocate to help inform his review. All of these issues were highlighted in the tragic case of Serenity last year, and I'm proud of the steps this bill takes to address the issues we saw in that heartbreaking case.

I'm committed to making the change that needs to happen going forward, and I look forward to continuing to work to make things better for children in our province. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to third reading?
The hon. Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise today on third reading to say that the opposition will support this bill, with the caveat, though, that this bill is not the end but the start.

It was very disappointing to watch the minister rise just now and again present that this bill in any way deals with the facts around Serenity's case or that her panel deals with the facts around Serenity's case when, in fact, those are just not the facts of the situation, Madam Speaker. It's disappointing that the minister continues to do that and that the Premier continues to misrepresent the facts of this panel to the people of Alberta.

Specifically, this bill that we are talking about in regard to third reading does not go far enough, nor does it have enough teeth to deal with the serious issues that we've been talking about. I have clearly stated my main concerns with this bill. I am not the only one who has stated concerns with this bill. External experts that the government brought into the situation have stated their concerns with the bill. The Child and Youth Advocate, who will now be in charge of the issues associated with this bill, has stated serious concerns with the bill. The media, including Paula Simons, whose great work brought forward the issue of Serenity to the public, has stated concerns with the bill, going so far as to call it a betrayal of the public trust.

For the minister to rise in this House with that kind of a review from people who have worked extremely hard on this file going so far as to say that the legislation she has brought forward is a betrayal of public trust, does not acknowledge the serious holes that this minister has left behind – for her to rise in this House and try to take a victory lap, particularly around the issue of Serenity, an issue she has not dealt with at all with this bill, is absolutely shameful. Not one little piece of that issue has been dealt with in this bill, and to attempt to take a victory lap on that is shameful, Madam Speaker.

That being said, I do want to thank the government and the minister for working with us on some of our amendments. They did not work with us on several important amendments, including protection of cultural issues inside the death review process, something that was very important to many people that presented to the panel and to panel members. It is extremely disappointing for myself and, I know, for many people to see the minister and this government go out of their way to prevent the opposition from doing what people wanted in regard to cultural issues, to protect people's culture when dealing with a horrendous situation, the death of a child in the care of the government. I implore members of this House, Madam Speaker, to not pat themselves on the back, as we just watched this minister do, and to not think for a minute that this issue has been dealt with.

You know, Madam Speaker, I keep a picture of my 10-year-old daughter on all my desks: in my constituency, in the Chamber, and in Edmonton. When I look at her, I feel very grateful that she's been able to grow up in a place where she's safe and with a mom and dad who love her. I love her very much.

Then I think about poor little Serenity, who was raped, murdered, starved to death. People reported concerns with what was happening with Serenity. Nothing happened. Nobody came to help her, and in the end she suffered some extreme consequences. As a result of that, the public, the opposition, and many people raised concerns. In the end, we had to push the government to do the right thing, and we got a panel. Since then we've watched this minister right there stand in this Assembly over and over and claim that the panel is dealing with the Serenity issue when she knows without a doubt that that is not true. It's shameful that that continues to happen. It's totally unacceptable.

In addition to that, the fact that the advocate cannot publish the real names of children is one issue that definitely needs to be discussed again. The issue around the publication ban has been blocked by this minister at the panel and by her NDP colleagues on the panel. In fact, they went so far, Madam Speaker, as you know because you were in the room, to attempt to make the panel vote and deal with that issue with 45 minutes' warning and said that it had to be done. The only reason that we were able to stop that is because the external experts that the minister put on the panel sided with the opposition against the government's attempt to whitewash that issue. That's got to be dealt with.

One of the recommendations that was deferred is that the department's internal investigations must be completed within one year. What we found when we went through this process, and you were on the panel, Madam Speaker, so you know, is that zero – zero – internal investigations have been done, including for Serenity. Think about that. Despite this government repeatedly standing up and trying to assure Albertans that they're doing something, they have completed zero investigations.

[Mr. Sucha in the chair]

The panel did put in a recommendation to make sure that internal investigations would be complete. This government has deferred that. Under this Premier this NDP government and this minister have deferred that and, again, went out of their way to prevent accountability and transparency when it comes to children that have been killed while in the care of the government. To date not one internal review has been completed. That is outrageous, and it's completely unacceptable.

Furthermore, the government has acknowledged that many of the panel's recommendations are not changes that happen through legislation. For example, the panel highlighted a need for the ministry to make sure that it has articulated a mechanism to share recommendations with front-line service delivery staff. The government says that Children's Services is addressing that through policy and practice changes. The opposition wants to be told what these changes are so we know that indeed these recommendations have been addressed.

1:30

The child intervention panel, Mr. Speaker, is doing some good work. The panel finishes its meetings in July. Similar panels and round-tables have come and gone, and despite it being the desire of the panel, we still do not have a legislative committee with a mandate focused on fixing the cracks in our child intervention system. This minister with her bill and this government disregarded the panel's recommendations, disregarded the Auditor General's recommendations, continued with their status quo of hiding things from the people of Alberta, of hiding things when it comes to children that have been killed in their care, and of not taking proper or adequate steps to make sure it doesn't happen again, a complete and utter whitewash. It is not a PAC-like committee. It is not what the Auditor General recommended. Let us be very clear on that.

The opposition will do what it can to see improvements in the system and hold the government departments accountable, but the actual government is in a much better position to do this, and if it had listened to the recommendations from the panel, it would have been able to do that.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, this legislation came as a result of Serenity. It came as a result of a young girl that was killed in the care of the government. It came as a result of a young girl, where the abuse to that girl, who lost her life, was reported, and nobody came to help that little girl. When that came to light, this government, who was in power when it came to light, did nothing to hold the people accountable for it. In fact, they messed up, and they didn't even get the proper documentation to the RCMP to make sure that the criminal investigation could happen properly. It took the work of this opposition, and it took the work of the media to make them do the right thing and call a panel, and it will continue to take the work of the opposition and the media to make them actually finally do the right thing with this panel instead of standing up and saying that they're doing the right thing when they're not.

We will continue to hold them to account. Mr. Speaker, I will continue to rise in this House. I will continue to rise in this House and speak about this very important issue on behalf of my daughter, on behalf of the children in care in Alberta, on behalf of Albertans. But, most importantly, I will continue to rise in the House and bring it up on behalf of Serenity, who cannot speak for herself, on behalf of Serenity's mom, on behalf of Serenity's family, who cannot speak for themselves.

I will continue to stand up through you, Mr. Speaker, and call the minister out for not doing her job all the way, for bringing halfway legislation to this Assembly at a time when she could have brought full-way legislation to this Assembly, for not completing the Auditor General's recommendations, and for continuing to stand up and support her government in misleading the good people of Alberta about their behaviour, in misleading the good people of Alberta by saying that they're actually addressing an issue, saying it repeatedly in question period and repeatedly during this bill debate. They have taken us through a panel process where this minister and this government have continued to block the Serenity issue from finally being dealt with.

So while we will support this legislation because there is some good stuff in it, let us be very, very clear. It does not go far enough. The minister knows it does not go far enough, and until the minister will stand up and actually do her job on behalf of the children of Alberta, we will have to continue to push forward this agenda to make sure that there will finally be a change in our system, to make sure that another little girl like Serenity cannot be starved, beaten, and raped until she is killed. That is her responsibility, and if she will not do it, we will do it for her, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wishing to speak to Bill 18? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to speak to Bill 18. As my colleague from Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre said, this bill is worth supporting. But this bill should be an A plus, and it's about a C or a C minus, and that is a shame. The minister, the government, the Premier settled for mediocre when they could have had great. The difference wouldn't have cost them any more money. It wouldn't have been any more effort. They just didn't have the courage to be held accountable, and that is a shame.

I guess we shouldn't be surprised because that's how this started. Let's be clear. This started because of Serenity. Let's be clear. Serenity died on the previous government's watch, which I was a part of. We didn't get that right, and this government hasn't got that right. The only thing I will say different is that this government has not yet admitted that they haven't gotten it right. That truly is a shame, and that has stopped them from doing the best job they could do because – you know what? – the first step is admitting that you've got a problem, and they haven't admitted that they have a problem.

But they did succumb to some pressure finally, starting with Paula Simons with the Edmonton Journal and with other media and with the opposition pressuring them day after day and not getting honest answers here on the questions that we asked. Nonetheless, the pressure was there.

You know what? If the government had taken our advice, they could have been heroes. They really wasted an opportunity here. Had they listened to the opposition and called an all-party committee, we could've been more in control of it instead of just on the minister's schedule, could've had open conversations about what happened to Serenity, and could've had open conversations about why the other children are still in the house where Serenity used to be. We could've had open conversations about why charges haven't been pressed and what was done wrong and what needs to be done right in the future. We haven't even been allowed to address the issue that brought us to this point because the minister made a choice, with the Premier's permission presumably, to put this in a place where she could sweep the details under the carpet instead of talking about it publicly.

Yes, government members, you should hang your heads because your minister has let you down. She has let us down. She has let children in care down. She's done some good. She just hasn't done half of what she could have done, and that, Mr. Speaker, is truly, truly a shame.

Again, the history of it is the fact that the government was badgered, taunted, pressured into finally firing the one minister, thank goodness, and hiring another minister that was supposed to do better. Probably, what that minister is doing is still better than the one that got fired, but the fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the job is not up to what it should have been.

The fact is that some of the issues that brought us here – the issue of Serenity hasn't been talked about. The issue of freedom of information and protection of privacy hasn't been fully dealt with. Again, as has been said, currently the media can publish the name of a child that dies in care but the office of the Child and Youth Advocate cannot in some cases. You know what? We got advice. We got advice from an Edmonton police chief that said that there are changes that he would like to see made to the FOIP legislation. Those changes sadly went missing, so for the minister to stand up and say, "We did everything" or for the Premier to say, "We did everything that this committee recommended" is patently not true. Absolutely, flat not true. It's a terrible shame. It's a terrible shame.

Even some of the amendments: it's kind of unbelievable to me that some of them got turned down tonight. Here are the themes that we heard. Mr. Speaker, you're on the committee with me, so you know this. You heard the same things at the same time in the same place that I heard them. We heard from First Nations people, Métis people, and other indigenous people that they are being treated like second-class citizens. They don't get the information they need, they don't have the same resources, and the system is full of indigenous kids, about 2 out of 3. Some of the amendments that were put forward tonight to make sure that indigenous children and their families get better treatment, more like what everybody else gets, the government turned down.

To be clear, I am grateful that the government did pass some of our amendments. I am very grateful for that. That actually improved the legislation. The fact is that had they listened to us in the beginning, had they had an all-party committee, had they taken our advice, had they allowed the ministerial panel to talk about Serenity, had they dealt with the FOIP issue, had they made the changes to bring aboriginal, Métis, and other indigenous people up to the same standards that other people have, this legislation could have been great. You know what? I suppose there are places – we've got members sleeping over there – where the government can settle for average or mediocre. Children in care is one of those places where they ought not to have settled for mediocre, yet they did.

So, Mr. Speaker, we're not done. The committee will go on. All members of the committee, I'm sure, the ones on the government side will continue to do their best. I sincerely hope we get better support from this Premier and this minister in the future than we've gotten so far. I can tell you, as my colleague just said, that the government can feel like they made an improvement, and I will agree with that, which is why I and we will support this legislation, because it has made things better. The fact is that they only went half as far as they easily could have, and that is a crying shame.

1:40

The Acting Speaker: Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)? Seeing none, are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 18?

Seeing none, the hon. Minister of Children's Services to close debate.

Ms Larivee: Okay. Well, once again thank you very much to the panel for the work in creating the recommendations that allowed us to bring forward this legislation. I'm looking forward to moving forward with this legislation, should it pass, and improving life for children right across this province.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 18 read a third time]

Bill 17

Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Labour and minister responsible for democratic renewal.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise and move third reading of Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act.

This bill contains a number of measures that are going to improve the lives of Albertans and align our legislation with other jurisdictions because over the course of 30 years it has gotten greatly out of line with other Canadian jurisdictions. I'm proud to move third reading. I think that this bill will move Alberta forward significantly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any members wishing to speak to Bill 17? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this evening, in the early hours of the morning maybe, to speak to third reading of Bill 17, the so-called fair and family-friendly workplace amendment act. At a time when our province is experiencing significant uncertainty and many Albertans find themselves without a job, this government has decided to add even another level of uncertainty. By adding significant changes to the Labour Relations Code, we have opened up, possibly, another signal to send to the marketplace that Alberta is moving down a road of uncertainty.

Alberta has suffered a severe recession. Tens of thousands of Albertans have lost their jobs. These people need a government to do no more harm, yet at a time when Albertans need their government to focus on creating an environment conducive to investment and job creation, this government's priority is to pander to their union friends. This is quite concerning, Mr. Speaker. This government is sending signals to the marketplace that are not helping. Bill 17 is not helping to encourage investment needed to bring back well-paying jobs.

This government should be ashamed of itself for ramming through an omnibus bill at the very end of session. Look how late we are in the day. We're discussing this bill because this government was scrambling. This government was scrambling to put together a huge bill after so little consultation. Even at the end of our work in Committee of the Whole this government had to bring forward last-minute amendments to change the bill because they recognize that they haven't got it right, yet we could have taken the time. We moved many amendments to take the time to do it right.

This government knows that many elements of this bill are specifically designed to serve its union bosses and are not in the best interests of everyday Albertans. The government's strategy was to take away public attention from the changes to the Labour Relations Code. Continually the minister would highlight and focus on employment standards parts of the legislation but never highlight what was being done in our Labour Relations Code, hoping that Albertans would not notice. Mr. Speaker, Albertans have noticed, and I do believe that they will recognize that this government has been working more for their union friends than for the everyday Albertans that are just – all they want is an environment where they can go and find a job. This government's main priority appears to not be to look after vulnerable workers at all; it is to enable their union bosses to expand their reach and increase the market share of the province that is unionized.

One way to do this is to get rid of the secret ballot vote to certify a union, a democratic right, a pillar of a democratic society to protect the rights of all individuals to a secret ballot to be able to not be put into a situation of coercion. Union activists will now be able to coerce 65 per cent of a workplace's employees into signing union cards, and then their job is done. It doesn't even matter how many employees are in that business.

Opposition members brought forward some 30 amendments. As I said previously, even the government had to bring forward amendments to try and improve this bill.

We put forth an amendment so that the government can rethink its removal of the secret ballot. The government had an opportunity to acknowledge that secret ballots are a fundamental aspect of democracy that serves an important purpose, but this government voted down our amendment. This is not compassionate and is inconsiderate to the vulnerable workers who would sign cards knowing that they could say in a secret ballot how they really feel when they cast their secret ballot in a subsequent vote.

Mr. Speaker, it is disgraceful that the NDP even defeated our amendment to prevent unsolicited visits to employees' private residences. The NDP recently banned door-to-door sales for other sectors because they say that some residents are very vulnerable to some of the tactics used. Now they're endorsing it if it could mean more unionization. This government's main priority was not to protect Albertans or to protect employees from coercion, intimidation, threats, promises, undue influence, and the like; this government's main priority was to simplify union certification.

In addition, this government would not reverse its unjustifiable decision to double the amount of time that union organizers have to get people to sign these cards. It used to be that workers had to sign the union cards within 90 days of the application for union certification. Now the cards are valid for up to 180 days, even more pressure on employees in the workforce and even more time to be intimidated.

In fact, this government voted down many reasonable amendments proposed in this House. One that immediately comes to mind is when it comes to banking overtime. With this bill employers must give workers one and a half hours off for every one hour of banked overtime. One of our concerns with this is that overtime is often banked at the initiative of the employee. For example, an employee might come in an hour early and leave an hour late from Monday to Thursday so that they can take an extended weekend with their family, maybe go camping at the lake or spend other time with their family. Now under Bill 17 an employer is less likely to allow their workers to do that if it costs the employer time and a half. We tried to pass an amendment to return the ratio to one hour for one hour generally but only if banked overtime was at the initiative of the employee. It's a very common-sense amendment, but this NDP government voted down that motion.

When this affects Albertan families, who now have much less flexibility in the workplace, we will make it clear and remind them that this is because of the NDP. The NDP's world view is one that the government should tell people how to live and that the government knows what's best for the people. The NDP's world view is one that business owners, whether large or small, are on a mission to extract as much as possible out of their employees and exploit them at every opportunity. Mr. Speaker, there are many, many hard-working Albertans that are good people who create jobs and bring value to society through their businesses.

1:50

With this bill especially the NDP shows serious disregard for the plight of business owners and job creators at this time. This NDP government keeps piling on and on, making it difficult for businesses to adjust. Businesses can adjust, but they need time to adjust. It becomes very difficult in troubled times to adjust your business to be able to survive and produce the jobs that Albertans are looking for. Businesses are already having to deal with the highest minimum wage of all provinces. Now, while our economy is slumping, they will have to pay more for overtime, be unable to have compressed work weeks, have to grant indefinite secure leaves, provide more notice for group terminations. The list goes on.

This government should be focused on getting Albertans back to work. It should be focused on making sure we have a stable economy that is attracting investment. As we attract investment, we create the jobs that Albertans so badly need. But, no. Instead, this government is focused on, it appears, their priority of helping its union friends and its union bosses with their interests. This government voted down reasonable amendments that are fair to union members; for example, a requirement for unions to disclose their financials. We also moved an amendment that would prevent mandatory union dues from being used for political advertising. This would have helped the NDP meet its own touted objective of getting big money out of politics.

Mr. Speaker, we even put forward an amendment that would not change the bill at all but that would allow and encourage and make subsequent governments review this act in five years so that we would not be stuck in a position where governments down the road would take their time. This minister was concerned that it was just about 30 years since it was last updated, yet this government voted that amendment down also.

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

Madam Speaker, I will not be voting in favour of Bill 17 at this time, and I would ask this government to do better, to look out for Alberta families, to look out for Alberta employees, and be sure that they're sending the right signals to the investment market to help bring the jobs back to Alberta, that our families so desperately need.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think that if you seek it, you will find it, that unanimous consent for one-minute bells may be granted.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. As I rise to speak to third reading of Bill 17, I truly wish that it was two bills because I am absolutely enthusiastically in support of the changes to employment standards, especially as it relates to job-protected leave. I'd probably vote in favour of the employment standards portion of this bill. If that was a stand-alone bill, I absolutely would have easily voted for it, and I suspect this entire House would have as well. I'd proudly vote in favour of job-protected leaves like bereavement leave, compassionate care leave, parental leave, leave for victims of domestic violence, long-term illness and injury leave, leave for attending a citizenship ceremony. These are very good changes. They're good for Albertans, and they are welcome.

But, unfortunately, the changes to the labour code did not provide the same benefits that were found in the changes to employment standards, and I couldn't support the changes to the labour code. So here at third reading, Madam Speaker, I will be voting against Bill 17 based on the changes that are contained for the labour code and to the labour code alone.

While the government calls this a modernization, what they really are repealing are modern policy measures. Innovative ideas like the secret ballot seem to have gone away. This bill and this government aim to increase the ease and frequency of unionization and union density in Alberta while directly increasing costs for business. Now, like I say, I strongly support job-protected leave, but now is not the time to put in additional barriers and cumulative impacts for industry and small business in this province. Albertans who want to join a union can do that today. They don't need the help of a union-friendly government to help expand the footprints of unions in this province.

One of my biggest concerns is how rushed this bill was. The NDP introduced two pages of amendments here after midnight and pushed them through the Legislature with virtually no time for the opposition to review them. Before the bill was introduced, there were very few actual consultations that directly involved employers and employees. Now, talking to just employer and union advocacy organizations absolutely must be supplemented with public consultation and meaningful dialogue with employers and employees and all Albertans, and on this the NDP badly missed the mark. The government should have consulted on the draft legislation throughout the summer, like they did with the MGA, to give all Albertans an opportunity for input on the dramatic changes proposed to Alberta's labour code. I sincerely fear, Madam Speaker, that there will be serious unintended consequences.

The process on Bill 17 was an absolute failure. From start to finish it failed and showed how little the NDP care, really, about what Albertans need, especially those in the business sector. I specifically don't like getting rid of the secret ballot provision, Madam Speaker. They refused our amendment to increase accountability of the card check process. They continually reminded the House and Albertans how long it's been since the legislation was reviewed and then rejected multiple attempts to establish a mandatory review period. The last-minute amendments with very little time for us to review that and consider the implications of that were very disrespectful, I think, to the House and to members. The changes to overtime pay, without allowing employers time to adjust, is yet another brick in the wall that business owners in this province have to face as a result of this government.

The specific changes in this bill are troubling enough on their own, but when added up with all the other changes this government has brought in, it makes it increasingly difficult to start a business in Alberta, it makes it increasingly difficult to expand a business in Alberta, it causes companies to want to look at other jurisdictions, and for the companies that are looking to be located in Alberta, it causes them to think twice. These sorts of changes cause a flight of capital out of our province, Madam Speaker, and that impacts the prosperity of all Albertans. When Albertans are not as prosperous, they pay less tax, which means we have less money to fund important social programs, which I know this government believes in. The money has to come from somewhere.

What we have in this province is a strong track record of very good relationships between employers and employees, a true partnership, and that is what I don't think this government understands. Hearing the debate here in this House on Bill 17 lays bare the bias this government has and the true belief they have about business and how the terrible business owners are only out to take advantage of the poor workers. Well, you know what, Madam Speaker? It's very important that we protect people who need protection. There's absolutely no question. There are changes in this bill, especially to employment standards, which achieve that goal, and I'm enthusiastically in favour of and supportive of them. But there are other changes which do nothing more than constrain business in a way that's unhelpful, which causes capital to flee our province, and that is not good for Alberta.

For those reasons, I will be voting against Bill 17. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm going to stand today to speak against this bill, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act. Fair? Well, that's questionable. Family friendly? Well, I think we'll find out more about whether that's actually true. Improving the lives of Albertans? The jury is out on that one. It's kind of doubtful in certain areas, but I'd welcome this government to prove it to us, that this is going to be fair, family friendly, and improving the lives of Albertans.

2:00

Madam Speaker, let's make no mistake. We all believe that this should have been split into two bills right from the very beginning. It was voted down on first reading. It should have been sent to committee. There was a lack of consultation here, very clearly – 27 days of consultation by invitation only and in only four locations across the province and online – 27 days of consultation for an inadequate piece of legislation. Again, some good elements to it, but unintended consequences, I believe, are going to be key to this.

Much of what's been said by my colleague the hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock is going to be repeated here, but I think it deserves repeating. We've been speaking out on behalf of Albertans together, many of us here.

An Hon. Member: Which Albertans? The firefighters?

Mr. Gotfried: Many Albertans, actually.

And we're hearing from Albertans that they believe in self-reliance, they believe in free enterprise, they believe in hard work. They also believe that the best social program is a job.

Madam Speaker, I'm very proud of some organizations we've been working with as well. They've been speaking out on behalf of their members, the Albertans that they represent, businesses that they represent, employees that they represent, groups like Keep Alberta Working, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, the Alberta Hotel & Lodging Association, the Calgary Chamber, the Alberta Enterprise Group, Merit Contractors, the Alberta Chambers of Commerce. These organizations represent people and businesses and investors and risk capital that create jobs. They should be commended. Many of these organizations have said to us: we're apolitical; we don't want to take on any ideology; we want to speak out on behalf of Albertans and businesses. Those are the people that matter to them, not just the owners and operators but the employees that make their living, that have that job, which is the best social program we can deliver.

We hear from dozens of private businesses. We tabled many letters from owners and managers and HR professionals from organizations across this province, across all sectors, telling us how frightened they were about certain elements of this legislation.

Small to medium-sized businesses are already struggling because of a carbon tax that has driven their bottom line into the ground; increasing minimum wages, which have forced them to lay off employees so that they can at least eke out a meagre existence and pay themselves as owners, investors, entrepreneurs a modest wage without having to work 20 hours a day themselves; struggling through an environment of unemployment, where people don't have disposable income; trying to make ends meet.

We hear about the criticism of the existing labour legislation that we have in this province. Madam Speaker, I remember that when I was with Calgary Economic Development – I think it was in 2012, 2013 – 87 per cent of the new jobs in Canada were created right here in this province. Eighty-seven per cent. That doesn't sound like a flawed labour market to me. We were recruiting across this country and around the world, telling people to come to this great province to find work, to fill the jobs that we had here, for the skilled labour jobs, the labour that they needed, the highly skilled individuals, the engineers, to come to Alberta. That doesn't sound like a flawed labour market to me except that we had a shortage in finding skilled people to come here, who wanted to come to this great province. Now we're suffering with a low disposable income, high unemployment. And here we're going to layer legislation on top of that that is going to burden the recovery that we all hope to see.

Yes, there are some good parts to the employment standards here. No question. We all agree with that. We voted for those. But those costs are borne by someone, Madam Speaker, even for the changes in the legislation that are compassionate, that we believe in, and that are socially responsible. Those costs are not borne by us in this House, the 87 of us. They're borne by businesses and investors. If we don't understand that those costs are going to be there, with the fact that somebody can come back – thankfully now not 48 hours later. They'd have to give us seven days' notice, but maybe the employee that you've got in there you need to give two weeks' notice to. Well, somebody has to bear the cost of that extra week of labour costs.

For a small employer that might be significant. For somebody with hundreds of employees that could be significant. We cannot be cavalier about the costs we layer on Albertans and Alberta businesses that are creating jobs in this province. They're on the brink of survival. Some of these small businesses are being wiped out, and with that are the jobs, the tax base, and a modest living for owners, who only expect a modest return on investment. Make no mistake. When they fail, they take with them landlords and cleaners and building managers and their suppliers and trades that they work with. Madam Speaker, we've made a lot of sacrifices here – and for what? – for big labour, for a perspective and an ideology which have skewed this legislation in favour of big labour with unintended consequences.

The big piece of this, Madam Speaker, is the rescinding of the secret ballot, which we've talked about ad nauseam here. The secret ballots have been an expectation within a responsible and responsive democratic society for as long as any of us here have been around and many years before, a right fought for by our forefathers so that we could have that kind of freedom, that kind of privacy, an expectation of anonymity and freedom from pressure, persecution, intimidation, scorn, ostracization, shunning, or – God forbid – bullying from somebody in your workplace. We're worried about that, not just from the employer side but from the union side.

We tried to introduce some balance for that in our amendments. Twenty-eight of those amendments were voted down by this government. Many of those could have been used to improve this legislation. Make no mistake. Albertans are watching you in this endeavour. The economy may respond positively, or it might deliver unintended consequences, that we've spoken about. Again, 28 rejected amendments here will bear witness to whether you actually took enough time and consulted adequately. You didn't even consult well with us in this House. Thirty amendments and only two were accepted; 28 of those were rejected. Don't forget that we are here as the voice of Albertans, and you didn't listen to that voice either.

You rushed to pass this legislation after only 27 days of consultation: a botched, late presentation of this legislation, some late amendments brought to us looking like they were printed off, a quick print just minutes ago, on the back of a napkin, hardly signed, looking a little bit amateurish, I would say. It looks like the whole bill, stapled when we first got it, was rushed here. Why? Because we had 27 days of consultation, and that's plenty to listen to Albertans.

Madam Speaker, this government pushed, this side of the House pushed back in protection of the rights of Albertans – employees and employers, hard-working people, families – and now we're stuck with their flawed vision of the good, the bad, and the downright ugly in terms of labour legislation. The government over there, as they're looking at the amendments, looking at that rushed legislation, they need to wear it, and they need to bear responsibility for the flaws and for this last stake in the heart of the Alberta advantage. [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any members wishing to speak to third reading?

Seeing none, I will now call on the hon. Minister of Labour and the minister responsible for democratic renewal to close debate.

2:10

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. Bill 17, the Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act, is going to make sure that no more will someone in Alberta get fired for being sick or lose their job because they have a child that needs chemotherapy treatments, will make sure that reasonable breaks are given to all employees, will make sure that we have an enforcement system that gives us a chance at collecting the over $18 million in unpaid fines that currently exist in our employment standards system, will make sure that we are holding people to account, improving our system, and aligning it with other jurisdictions. I'm very proud of the changes in Bill 17, and I'd like to thank all members for contributing to the discussion.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for third reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 2:11 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

For the motion:

Anderson, S.	Hinkley	Nielsen
Babcock	Hoffman	Notley
Bilous	Kazim	Piquette
Carlier	Kleinsteuber	Rosendahl
Carson	Larivee	Sabir
Ceci	Littlewood	Schmidt
Coolahan	Loyola	Schreiner
Cortes-Vargas	Mason	Shepherd
Dach	McKittrick	Sigurdson
Dang	McPherson	Sucha
Drever	Miller	Turner
Feehan	Miranda	Woollard
Gray

Against the motion:

Aheer	Gotfried	Schneider
Anderson, W.	Hunter	Starke
Clark	Loewen	Strankman
Cooper	MacIntyre	Taylor
Drysdale	McIver	van Dijken
Fildebrandt	Nixon	Yao
Gill	Pitt
Totals:	For – 37	Against – 20

[Motion carried; Bill 17 read a third time]

Some Hon. Members:

Solidarity forever, solidarity forever
Solidarity forever . . .

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I didn't know that the Wildrose members knew the words to that song. Apparently, they have been studying.

I just want to thank all members for their contribution to a very, I think, full legislative session. The debate has been vigorous, and by and large it's been positive. We've got a lot of business done.

I'd like to thank the opposition House leaders for their co-operation in helping us navigate this. I think we managed to make it work a little more efficiently than might otherwise have been the case.

Pursuant to Government Motion 21 I wish to advise the Assembly that the business for the sitting is concluded and that the Assembly stands adjourned.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, you are adjourning the House until October 30, 2017, as agreed to?

Mr. Mason: Yeah. Whenever is in the rules.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to Government Motion 21, agreed to on May 25, 2017, the Assembly stands adjourned until Monday, October 30, 2017, unless otherwise ordered.

[The Assembly adjourned at 2:18 a.m. on Tuesday pursuant to Government Motion 21]

Bill Status Report for the 29th Legislature - 3rd Session (2017)

Activity to Wednesday, June 7, 2017

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 1 to 200 are Government Bills. Bills numbered 201 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills numbered with a "Pr" prefix are Private Bills.

* An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If a Bill comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel, Alberta Justice, for details at 780.427.2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned chapter number until the conclusion of the Fall Sitings.

Bill 1 — An Act to Reduce School Fees (Eggen)

First Reading — 6 (Mar. 2, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 105-10 (Mar. 8, 2017 morn.), 192-96 (Mar. 9, 2017 aft.), 235-42 (Mar. 14, 2017 morn.), 269-71 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft.), 273-74 (Mar. 15, 2017 morn., adjourned), 282-91 (Mar. 15, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 424-31 (Mar. 21, 2017 aft.), 556-58 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 674-78 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017 c6]

Bill 2* — An Act to Remove Barriers for Survivors of Sexual and Domestic Violence (Ganley)

First Reading — 67-68 (Mar. 7, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 110-11 (Mar. 8, 2017 morn.), 192 (Mar. 9, 2017 aft.), 314-22 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft.), 336-39 (Mar. 16, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 455-59 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 678-79 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017; SA 2017 c7]

Bill 3* — Voluntary Blood Donations Act (Hoffman)

First Reading — 208 (Mar. 13, 2017 aft., passed.)

Second Reading — 323-36 (Mar. 16, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 394-400 (Mar. 21, 2017 morn.), 421-24 (Mar. 21, 2017 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 472-80 (Mar. 23, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Mar. 30, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force Mar. 30, 2017; SA 2017 cV-5]

Bill 4 — Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2017 ($)

First Reading — 191 (Mar. 9, 2017 aft, passed)

Second Reading — 306-07 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft., adjourned), 322 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 389-93 (Mar. 21, 2017 morn.)

Third Reading — 449-52 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Mar. 30, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force Mar. 30, 2017; SA 2017 c2]

Bill 5 — Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2017 ($) (Ceci)

First Reading — 266 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 310-14 (Mar. 15, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 393-94 (Mar. 21, 2017 morn.)

Third Reading — 452-55 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Mar. 30, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force Mar. 30, 2017; SA 2017 c1]

Bill 6 — Northland School Division Act (Eggen)

First Reading — 524 (Apr. 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 558-61 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 671-74 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 755-59 (May 2, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017; SA 2017 cN-5.1]

Bill 7 — An Act to Enhance Post-secondary Academic Bargaining (Schmidt)

First Reading — 552 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 679-81 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft.)

Committee of the Whole — 810-15 (May 3, 2017 morn.), 828-38 (May 3, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 865-66 (May 4, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — 879 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017, with exception; SA 2017 c4]

Bill 8* — An Act to Strengthen Municipal Government (S. Anderson)

First Reading — 577 (Apr. 10, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 691-700 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn.), 716-22 (Apr. 20, 2017 aft.), 780-84 (May 2, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Committee of the Whole — 784-95 (May 2, 2017 aft.), 838-45 (May 3, 2017 aft.), 855-65 (May 4, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 991-1004 (May 11, 2017 morn.), 1101-06 (May 16, 2017 aft.), 1107-10 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on various dates; SA 2017 c13]

Bill 9 — Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2017 (Carlier)

First Reading — 606 (Apr. 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 683-87 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 687-90 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn., passed)

Third Reading — 759-62 (May 2, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — 880 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017 c5]

Bill 10 — Appropriation Act, 2017 ($) (Ceci)

First Reading — 670-71 (Apr. 19, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Second Reading — 690-91 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn.), 700-02 (Apr. 20, 2017 morn.), 722-23 (Apr. 20, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 762-67 (May 2, 2017 morn.), 795-97 (May 2, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 799-810 (May 3, 2017 morn.), 845-47 (May 3, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — 880 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force May 4, 2017; SA 2017 c3]

Bill 11* — Public Interest Disclosure (Whistleblower Protection) Amendment Act, 2017 (Gray)

First Reading — 771 (May 2, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 849-55 (May 4, 2017 morn.), 924-39 (May 9, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1072-77 (May 16, 2017 morn.), 1092-1101 (May 16, 2017 aft.), 1168-69 (May 18, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1199-1202 (May 23, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation, with exceptions; SA 2017 c11]

Bill 12* — New Home Buyer Protection Amendment Act, 2017 (S. Anderson)

First Reading — 877 (May 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 939-44 (May 9, 2017 aft.), 945-56 (May 10, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 956-62 (May 10, 2017 morn.), 1004-1008 (May 11, 2017 morn.), 1008-10 (May 11, 2017 morn.), 1111-20 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1169-71 (May 18, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017 c10]

Bill 13 — Securities Amendment Act, 2017 (Ceci)

First Reading — 893 (May 8, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 977-90 (May 10, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1027-31 (May 11, 2017 aft.), 1065-72 (May 16, 2017 morn., passed)

Third Reading — 1137-44 (May 17, 2017 aft., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 7, 2017; SA 2017 c12]

Bill 14 — An Act to Support Orphan Well Rehabilitation (McCuaig-Boyd)

First Reading — 1090 (May 16, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1144-52 (May 17, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1225-30 (May 23, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 1244-46 (May 24, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 7, 2017; SA 2017 c14]

Bill 15 — Tax Statutes Amendment Act, 2017 (Ceci)

First Reading — 1137 (May 17, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1184-89 (May 18, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1215-25 (May 23, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 1246-48 (May 24, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on various dates; SA 2017 c15]

Bill 16 — An Act to Cap Regulated Electricity Rates ($) (McCuaig-Boyd)

First Reading — 1214 (May 23, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1262-78 (May 24, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1279-91 (May 25, 2017 morn.), 1291-97 (May 25, 2017 morn.), 1351-58 (May 29, 2017 eve.), 1389-1406 (May 30, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 1514-17 (Jun. 1, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 7, 2017, with exceptions; SA 2017 cC-2.3]

Bill 17* — Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act (Gray)

First Reading — 1260 (May 24, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Second Reading — 1311-22 (May 25, 2017 aft.), 1359-61 (May 29, 2017 eve.), 1363-76 (May 30, 2017 morn.), 1407-20 (May 30, 2017 eve.), 1421-32 (May 31, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1432-36 (May 31, 2017 morn.), 1449-66 (May 31, 2017 aft.), 1467-79 (May 31, 2017 eve.), 1490-99 (Jun. 1, 2017 morn.), 1517-20 (Jun. 1, 2017 aft.), 1534-51 (Jun. 5, 2017 aft.), 1553-67 (Jun. 5, 2017 eve., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1589-93 (Jun. 5, 2017 eve., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on various dates; SA 2017 c9]

Bill 18* — Child Protection and Accountability Act (Larivee)

First Reading — 1388 (May 30, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1481-90 (Jun. 1, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1567-79 (Jun. 5, 2017 eve., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1587-89 (Jun. 5, 2017 eve., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017; c8]

Bill 201 — Justice System Accountability Act (Jean)

First Reading — 127 (Mar. 8, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 208-20 (Mar. 13, 2017 aft., defeated on division)

Bill 202* — Protecting Victims of Non-Consensual Distribution of Intimate Images Act (Cyr)

First Reading — 245 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 375-86 (Mar. 20, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 578-86 (Apr. 10, 2017 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 738-40 (May 1, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Royal Assent — 880 (May 4, 2017 aft.) [Comes into force 3 months after date of Royal Assent; SA 2017 cP-26.9]

Bill 203 — Alberta Standard Time Act (Dang)

First Reading — 253 (Mar. 14, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 496-503 (Apr. 3, 2017 aft., referred to the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future)

Bill 204 — Protection of Property Rights Statutes Amendment Act, 2017 (Stier)

First Reading — 444 (Mar. 22, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 503-07 (Apr. 3, 2017 aft.), 899-905 (May 8, 2017 aft.), 1046-50 (May 15, 2017 aft., reasoned amendment agreed to on division)

Bill 205* — Advocate for Persons with Disabilities Act (Jansen)

First Reading — 552 (Apr. 6, 2017 aft.)

Second Reading — 1050-57 (May 15, 2017 aft.), 1120-25 (May 17, 2017 morn., moved to Government Bills and Orders), 1153-63 (May 18, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1163-68 (May 18, 2017 morn.), 1191-99 (May 23, 2017 morn., passed with amendments)

Third Reading — 1231-43 (May 24, 2017 morn., passed on division)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2017 cA-5.5]

Bill 206 — Child, Youth and Family Enhancement (Adoption Advertising) Amendment Act, 2017 (Aheer)

First Reading — 1024 (May 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1334-45 (May 29, 2017 aft., passed on division)

Bill 207 — Regulatory Burden Reduction Act (Hunter)

First Reading — 1310 (May 25, 2017 aft., passed)

Bill 208 — Government Organization (Utilities Consumer Advocate) Amendment Act, 2017 (Hinkley)

First Reading — 1512 (Jun. 1, 2017 aft., passed)

Bill Pr1 — Calgary Jewish Centre Amendment Act, 2017 (Kazim)

First Reading — 524 (Apr. 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1110 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1110-11 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed)

Third Reading — 1261-62 (May 24, 2017 aft., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 7, 2017]

Bill Pr2 — Paula Jean Anderson Adoption Termination Act (MacIntyre)

First Reading — 524 (Apr. 4, 2017 aft., passed)

Second Reading — 1027 (May 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole — 1027 (May 11, 2017 aft., passed)

Third Reading — 1110 (May 17, 2017 morn., passed)

Royal Assent — (Jun. 7, 2017 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 7, 2017]

Table of Contents

Government Bills and Orders

Committee of the Whole

Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act	1553, 1555, 1579
Division	1554
Division	1556
Division	1558
Division	1561
Division	1563
Division	1581
Division	1583
Division	1586
Bill 18 Child Protection and Accountability Act	1567
Division	1573
Division	1576

Third Reading

Bill 18 Child Protection and Accountability Act	1587
Bill 17 Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act	1589
Division	1592

Introduction of Guests	1555
------------------------------	------

Statement by the Speaker

Page Recognition	1567
------------------------	------

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Monday afternoon, October 30, 2017

Day 45

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (NDP), Speaker
Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (NDP), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (NDP), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (UCP),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (NDP)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (UCP)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (NDP)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (UCP)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (NDP)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (NDP)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (NDP)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (NDP)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (UCP)
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (NDP),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (UCP)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (NDP)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (NDP)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (NDP)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (UCP)
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (NDP)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (UCP)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (NDP)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (Ind)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (NDP)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (Ind)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (NDP)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (NDP)
Gotfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (UCP)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (NDP)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (UCP)
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (NDP)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (NDP)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (NDP)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (UCP)
Jansen, Hon. Sandra, Calgary-North West (NDP)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (UCP)
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (NDP)
Kleinstuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (NDP)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (NDP)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (NDP)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (UCP)
Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (NDP)

Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (NDP)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (UCP)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (NDP)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (NDP)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (UCP),
Official Opposition Whip
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (NDP)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (NDP)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (AP)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (NDP)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (NDP)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (NDP)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (UCP),
Leader of the Official Opposition,
Official Opposition House Leader
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (UCP)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (UCP)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (NDP)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (NDP)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (NDP)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (NDP)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (UCP)
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (NDP)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (NDP)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (NDP)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (UCP)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (NDP)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (NDP)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (NDP)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (UCP)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (UCP)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (UCP)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (NDP)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (UCP)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (NDP)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (UCP)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (NDP),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (NDP)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (UCP)

Party standings:

New Democratic: 54 United Conservative: 27 Alberta Party: 2 Alberta Liberal: 1 Progressive Conservative: 1 Independent: 2

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk
Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of
House Services
Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel
Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services
Nancy Robert, Research Officer
Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms
Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms
Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms
Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Sandra Jansen	Minister of Infrastructure
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

Parliamentary Secretaries

Jessica Littlewood	Economic Development and Trade for Small Business
Annie McKittrick	Education

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabbour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, October 30, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back, members.

Let us reflect or pray, each in our own way. As we once again come together and continue proceedings in this Assembly, let us reflect on the time we were blessed to be able to spend with our constituents, our families, and loved ones over the past months. May we strive to be respectful, constructive, and principled in the manner in which we represent our constituencies throughout this incredible province. May we draw strength from those who support us and find inspiration from them to have the humility and fortitude to work together. Peace be with each of us.

Hon. members, as is our custom, we pay tribute on our first day to members and former members of this Assembly who have passed away since we last met.

Mr. Edwin LeRoy Fjordbotten
November 4, 1938, to June 8, 2017

The Speaker: Mr. LeRoy Fjordbotten served four terms as the Progressive Conservative Member for Macleod. He was first elected to this Assembly on March 14, 1979, and served until June 14, 1993. He was a lifetime farmer and rancher. He was a member of the Flying Farmers of Alberta, which combined his love for the land and his skills as a pilot. Mr. Fjordbotten was keen to represent rural Albertans and wanted to contribute to the development of the public policies that impacted agricultural marketing and small business. One of his enduring contributions was in 1981, when he introduced a bill to regulate the dairy industry in Alberta. During his 14 years of service Mr. Fjordbotten held the portfolios of minister of agriculture from 1982 until 1986, minister of tourism from 1986 to 1987, and minister of forestry, lands, and wildlife from 1987 to 1992. Mr. Fjordbotten passed away on June 8, 2017.

Mr. Leonard Clarence Bracko
December 2, 1943, to August 19, 2017

The Speaker: Mr. Len Bracko served one term in the Legislative Assembly of Alberta as the Liberal Member for St. Albert from 1993 to 1997. During that time he served as critic for Municipal Affairs and critic for economic development. Mr. Bracko was a teacher by profession, teaching in junior and senior high schools beginning in 1967. He served on the St. Albert city council from 1989 to 1992 and from 2001 to 2013. Mr. Bracko passed away on August 19, 2017.

Mr. Bruce John Collingwood
May 16, 1953, to August 28, 2017

The Speaker: Mr. Bruce Collingwood served as the Liberal Member for Sherwood Park from 1993 to 1997. Mr. Collingwood began his career with a bachelor of science degree in zoology before becoming a teacher. After a decade of teaching he obtained his law degree and specialized in corporate finance and commercial law. After his election in 1993 he served as the critic for environmental protection and then became whip from 1996 to 1997. Mr. Collingwood passed away on August 28, 2017.

In a moment of silent reflection I ask you to remember those who have gone before us and their families.

Hon. members, ladies and gentlemen, we will now be led in the singing of our national anthem by Jinting Zhao, and I will invite all to participate in the language of their choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
Car ton bras sait porter l'épée,
Il sait porter la croix!
Ton histoire est une épopée
Des plus brillants exploits.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Statement by the Speaker

Leader of the Official Opposition

The Speaker: Hon. members, today I received correspondence from the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills advising that he would be resigning his position as the Leader of the Official Opposition and requesting that the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre now be recognized as the Leader of the Official Opposition. My best to the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. Excuse me. The wonderful community of Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

An Hon. Member: Outstanding.

The Speaker: Fantastic.

I will therefore today recognize the Member for Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre as the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. Welcome to your new role.

Well, the climate may have changed, but I still get notes on a continuous basis, so that seems to be the constant that we have.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: Hon. members, with our admiration and respect there is gratitude to the members of families who shared the burdens of public office and public service. Today I would like to welcome members of the Fjordbotten, Bracko, and Collingwood families who are present in the Speaker's gallery. Please rise as I call your name and remain standing, if you would, until all have been introduced.

First of all, from the Fjordbotten family: Kelly Fjordbotten; Larry and Karen Fjordbotten; Kim Fjordbotten and Phil Bentson; Chelsea Fjordbotten; Janet and Glen Jeske; and Renee, Tim, and Presley Elford.

1:40

From the Bracko family: Barb Bracko, spouse of Mr. Bracko; Robert Bracko, brother of Mr. Bracko; Theresa Bracko, sister-in-law of Mr. Bracko; Marlene Bracko Herbert and Colleen McDougall, sisters of Mr. Bracko; Gordon Beatty, brother-in-law of Mr. Bracko; Katrina Beatty, niece of Mr. Bracko; Colleen Soetaert, good friend and legislative colleague of Mr. Bracko. My apologies for the dropping of the names.

From the Collingwood family: Janis Collingwood; and Evan Collingwood, Taylor Collingwood, Josh McGregor, and Matt McGregor, Mr. Collingwood's four sons.

Would we all extend a warm welcome and appreciation.
[Standing ovation]

The Speaker: I would like to acknowledge the Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Hope is on the horizon. As the former head of the Alberta and Canadian taxpayers federations and the former federal minister of immigration, employment, National Defence, and multiculturalism Jason Kenney brings a wealth of experience to bringing common sense back to Alberta. He will stand up for Alberta jobs, Alberta families, and the Alberta economy. He will restore the Alberta advantage and get our province back on track. Sixteen months ago he set out to unite the conservative family here in Alberta, and he accomplished what many thought was impossible. He has united our party; he will unite our province. I am humbled and honoured to introduce our dear friend the newly elected leader of the United Conservative Party, the Hon. Jason Kenney. Would he please stand to receive the warm ovation of this House?

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Ms Sweet: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you some amazing students from McLeod elementary school. Along with them today are their chaperones, Ms Fataba Mboma and Curtis Thompson, as well as their teacher, Mrs. Kercelyn Pasternak. If I could ask them all to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you a couple of guests from the Alberta Council on Aging, which is a nonprofit in the constituency of Edmonton-Glenora, which I'm very proud to represent. It's my pleasure to introduce their executive director, Donna Durand, and treasurer Gail Hiller. They work every day to create an Alberta free of ageism and promote inclusion for older persons in Alberta communities. I ask that that Donna and Gail please rise and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Greg Jeffrey. Greg was elected as the president of the Alberta Teachers' Association on March 20, 2017. I would like to congratulate Greg on his win and his position. Teachers play a vital role in building positive futures for students and families across Alberta. Thank you for your strong commitment to education. I would ask him to rise and please accept the warm reception of the Assembly.

I'd also like, Mr. Speaker, to introduce to you and through you to all the members of the Assembly Mary Martin. Mary has been with the Alberta School Boards Association since 2015 and was elected president in February 2017. She was recently re-elected as well for a fourth term in the Calgary Catholic school district, representing wards 13 and 14. I would like to thank Mary for her dedication to education, for the work that she does to help make young Albertans have a bright and optimistic future, and for all of the great advice she gives to me all of the time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Ms Kazim: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Rabbi Shaul Osadchey and his wife, Roberta Osadchey. Rabbi Osadchey is a senior rabbi at the Beth Tzedec congregation of Calgary. He is also the co-chair of the Calgary Interfaith Council, which is the voice and advocate of the interfaith community in Calgary and southern Alberta. The council builds bridges of respect and understanding amongst various faith communities. I will speak more about the good work of the council and Rabbi Osadchey later today when I introduce my motion on United Nations World Interfaith Harmony Week. I invite the Osadcheyes to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Labour and minister responsible for democratic renewal.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly the family of Ki Yun Jo from Thorsby. I'm pleased to introduce Meyoung Hee Han, Jo's wife; Sung Hyun Jo, his son; Ka Yung Jo, his daughter. Ki Yun Jo, or Jo as he was called by his friends and neighbours, was a loving father and husband and a beloved member of his community. He bought a gas station in Thorsby shortly after moving to Canada from Korea in order to provide for his family. Earlier this month Jo was taken away from his family and away from his community in a brazen gas-and-dash incident. As Albertans were heartbroken when we heard what happened to Jo, we cannot let this happen to another worker. I'm very pleased that his family is able to join us today for the introduction of Bill 19. I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly representatives from Husky Energy Inc. who have joined us for the introduction of Bill 19 today. I'm pleased to welcome Lawrence Richler, VP, Canadian products marketing; Joel Skulsky, director, programs and retail fuel; Adam Sparkes, director, government relations; district managers Ken Kyle, Hugh Armstrong, and Allan Blair; and Edmonton Husky retailer Mian Ahmad.

We are honoured also to be joined today by the family of Surinder Pal Singh, who died after trying to prevent a theft at an Edmonton Husky station in 2015. I want to welcome Sandhya Singh, Surinder's wife; Mandeep Singh, his eldest son; and Jasbeer Singh, his brother. Surinder was a cheerful man and a tireless worker, loved by everyone who knew him. Mr. Speaker, Husky Energy has moved to mandatory prepayment of fuel across Canada, in part due to what happened to Surinder. I thank them all for being here, and I ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: With the number of guests and visitors, Government House Leader, did I see you prepared to move unanimous consent to go past the time for Oral Question Period?

Mr. Mason: I so move, Mr. Speaker.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

1:50

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. An honour and a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the House the leader of the Alberta Liberal Party, an indigenous rights lawyer, and the next Premier of Alberta. David Khan is here today to get dark money out of politics. He and I both will be trying to improve our democracy in this province, and I will be bringing forth a bill during this session to regulate political action committees. He is seated in the public gallery. Let's give him the warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly several dedicated employees from the Ministry of Justice and Solicitor General. These 16 individuals work hard in various areas, and I'd like to thank them for their commitment and professionalism. I would like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Jennele Giong. I had the pleasure of meeting and working with Jennele in Calgary, where she resides. Jennele has a bachelor of arts in law and business and presently works as a research assistant at the U of C. She is also Miss Asia Canada 2017. Jennele, please accept the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Are there any other guests for introductions today? The Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour and privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a friend of the House and a friend of mine, David Dorward. David, a chartered accountant, was first elected in 2012 representing Edmonton-Gold Bar. Amongst his other accomplishments he served as the associate minister of aboriginal affairs under Mr. Prentice's cabinet. I see he has risen, and I would ask the House to give him the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation and Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to give oral notice of . . . [interjections] Is this notices of . . .

An Hon. Member: Ministerial Statements.

Mr. Mason: My ministerial statement. Okay.

Member for Calgary-Lougheed

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker and members of the Assembly, today I'm rising to speak to the news that my esteemed colleague the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed will be leaving the Chamber and resigning his seat in the next few days. I must say that I was surprised when I heard the news, being one of just three of us in this Chamber who were elected prior to or during the provincial election in 2004. It is fitting that some tributes are paid today to the hon. member.

Many will know of this hon. member's ability to scale great heights, and there's no greater height to be scaled than Mount Everest, Mr. Speaker. Most people don't know this, but the hon. member accomplished that feat not just once but twice. It was, therefore, not surprising that upon his arrival at the Legislature after being elected, the Member for Calgary-Lougheed was one of the first government MLAs to call for a province-wide ban on smoking in public places. The member was years ahead of many colleagues at the time, and it took a few more years and plenty of political wrangling across the province before the member's ideas to protect children and nonsmokers from the effects of second-hand smoke were adopted, passed, and proclaimed as law in Alberta.

The member has regularly advocated for all of us in this province to lead healthier lives, be it through nutrition or exercise. I know the member is very proud of his work as associate minister of wellness as well as parliamentary assistant for health and wellness and parliamentary assistant for sustainable resource development. Most recently he served as House leader, and I certainly enjoyed debating points of order and matters of privilege with him. The member is also well known as a motivational speaker, and he often brought those skills to this Chamber during debates.

The member has made an honourable decision to step aside at this time and is doing what he feels right for the party that he represents.

I hesitate to add too much more about the member's list of accomplishments during his time as MLA. The reason for this is that I noted with interest that he indicated he may at some point in the future seek a return to this House in a future election. So at the risk of saying something that might end up in his campaign brochure, allow me to simply wish him well on behalf of all members of this House and to wish him the very best in his future endeavours.

The Speaker: The Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, Minister, for your kind, kind words. I am truly humbled.

I'd like to begin by expressing my deepest appreciation for my mom and dad, who in the beginning hoped I might become a doctor or a lawyer or a minister of the cloth, but in the end they were not disappointed with my work as a lawmaker instead and as associate minister of wellness instead. I thank my wonderful wife, Jennifer, who has been my inspiration since the day that I met her. I thank our beautiful boys, Dawson and Evan, who are the most amazing teachers I will ever meet. Our family has made countless sacrifices over the years just so that I could attempt to help to make Alberta just a little bit better, and I love them more than words can say.

I thank the Lougheed family for the rare and distinct honour of serving the constituency that bears their name. I will never forget their guidance and their friendship. I thank the constituents of Calgary-Lougheed for entrusting me to be their representative during four elections, nine leaders, over 13 years. It's true. Together we built no fewer than four schools and the Calgary South Health Campus. We achieved the historic agreement with our friends the Tsuut'ina – [Remarks in Sarcee] to them – in building the southwest Calgary ring road. It's under construction now, and we happened to pass more private members' business than any other member in our time.

I want to thank all of the legislative assistants that I've been pleased to work with, and I really want to thank Darlynn Linn. She's the most amazing constituency manager I could have ever hoped for. You know, we've survived and thrived on all sorts of peaks and valleys, and I will forever hold dear our time working together.

Thank you to all who have ever assisted with the Calgary-Lougheed board. That's a very long list, Mr. Speaker, but I'd like to make special mention just of Keith, Janice, Bob, Debbie, Joey, Barb, Brian, and Tasha, whose straightforward advice, unconditional friendship, and boundless diligence for serving Albertans is nothing short of awe inspiring.

Thank you to all Premiers and MLAs I've worked with. I have learned so much while I was honoured to serve on what happened to be dozens of committees from local to international – I guess that happens over time – and, yes, as House leader and deputy caucus chair and also as chair of Calgary caucus and the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission and certainly as associate minister of wellness. I'm especially proud of our wellness team, Mr. Speaker, as together we initiated healthy eating and active living programs and policies for all Albertans that were positive and proactive and preventative, that helped keep people happy, healthy, and out of the hospital as much as possible, and that have been emulated in many regions around the world.

I would like to thank MLAs from all parties who supported dozens of wellness projects in the past, including the Smoke-free Places Act and the tobacco reduction act, my first private member's bill and my last government bill; the provincial wellness strategy, health for all, wellness for life; and the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act, or GO Weekend Act. And there's a lot more.

Fellow Albertans, after all of this and with so much more to do, part of me finds it very difficult to step aside for now, but I'm confident that now, well, starting November 1, is exactly the time to do that because Alberta did change in a big, wonderful way yesterday. [A timer sounded] I thank you for another 30 seconds, Mr. Speaker.

2:00

Our province gained the most amazing leader it could hope for during these trying times, and he deserves a shot at a place in this Legislature to share his vision with Albertans. You know, before my time as an MLA I enjoyed careers in national and international business and education and humanitarian work. I can tell you unequivocally that I've never met a harder working person than Jason Kenney.

Mr. Speaker, I will dearly miss working in Calgary-Lougheed and in this Chamber for all Albertans, and I truly wish every single one of you nothing but the best as together we strive to build the strongest and most compassionate province possible.

Thank you, all, and God bless Alberta. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, I know you're having difficulty shifting gears in this new routine again, but would you desire to make a motion?

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I would request unanimous consent of the House to permit an additional member from the UCP caucus and the Alberta Party caucus to participate in a response.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, members of the Assembly, for providing this opportunity to wish the best to my colleague from Calgary-Lougheed.

Born and raised in Saskatchewan, as so many people that have responsible roles in Alberta were, the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed is one of the most upbeat, positive, professional, friendly people that I have ever met. I've even heard him described as a stone cold fox. I'm sure he doesn't want to hear that today, but it's too late, hon. member. Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has been a teacher. He has a bachelor of arts, a bachelor of education, a master's degree in religious education. He is a keynote speaker. For those listening, get your bookings in now; I think he'll be busy.

I have to say that he's done a lot of things, but I remember him being the most proud of the things that he did here as associate minister of wellness and his general efforts towards wellness, to keep Albertans healthy before they get in the health care system, to keep them out of the health care system. I think the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed hasn't just talked the talk; he has walked the walk. You'll probably never see in this House a more active person who lives out wellness along with his wife, Jennifer, and his two sons, Dawson and Evan, who, I might say, Mr. Speaker, are two of the most polite young people that I've ever seen, which I think speaks highly of the hon. member and his wife, Jennifer, and the way they've raised those two fine children.

He served here in a number of roles, as a House leader not very long ago. He was very supportive, as was mentioned, during the negotiations for the Tsuut'ina Trail part of the ring road. As was mentioned – and I just learned this today – he has climbed Mount Everest twice. He hasn't yet, Mr. Speaker, revealed to me whether he went the second time because he left his wallet up there the first time or because he forgot his camera the first time. Nonetheless, the hon. member is a person that when he puts his mind to do what almost no one else in the world can do, can do it twice. He was the first Canadian to perform that feat twice in one lifetime.

Many members of our caucus have expressed sadness at the prospect of the member leaving and not sitting among us anymore. I share that sentiment. For those that need to stay awake during the long nights here, Mr. Speaker, slip into the back room where there is a survival kit named after the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, full of coffee and sugar and hot chocolate and a whole bunch of other things to horse you up when we're here till 2 in the morning. I don't know whether he's leaving that recipe behind or not, but if he is, I'm sure it will be well used.

Hon. member, it's been an honour to serve with you. I wish you all the best. I know that everyone in this House will miss the smiling face that I'm looking at right now.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I guess the cat is out of the bag that the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed has summited Everest two times. [interjections] You know, we know this is all in good fun because he has been known to strike a lighthearted tone here in this House. He's succumbed to my goading to read interesting and possibly unparliamentary things into Hansard. I have always very much admired that great sense of humour and his ability to make us smile and to keep things light here in the House.

At the same time, over his long tenure in the House he has shown his ability to tackle important issues and debate them seriously and with great insight. Most recently he's championed issues related to postsecondary education and indigenous relations, and he leads by example through tireless volunteer efforts here in Canada and beyond.

Of course, his lifelong commitment to wellness has made a tremendous difference in the lives of Albertans. Among his many successes here in the House include passing the Smoke-free Places Act, the Alberta Personal Income Tax (Physical Activity Credit) Amendment Act in 2008, and of course his service as associate minister of wellness. Whether he's leading debate in the Assembly or planning fun events like hockey games and team-building events for his party and community, the Member for Calgary-Lougheed has shown leadership through his high spirits and never faltering energy.

On behalf of the newly expanded Alberta Party caucus thank you for your many years of service to the people of Alberta. Good luck in the future. I hope you finally get the chance to spend more time with your family, and keep climbing those mountains.

Thank you.

The Speaker: My personal wishes to you, Member for Calgary-Lougheed, on the new chapter in your new life.

Statements by the Speaker

Rotation of Questions and Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we proceed to the next item of business in the daily Routine, I would like to make some remarks on the rotation of oral questions and members' statements.

As noted in the memorandum that I sent to all members last Friday, the Speaker's office received two documents signed by the House leaders on October 25, 2017, confirming their agreement on the Oral Question Period and Members' Statements rotations. I will be tabling my memorandum at the appropriate time later today. Copies of both rotations were attached to the memorandum, but members can find copies on their desks of the rotations along with the projected sitting days calendar, which outlines the Members' Statements rotation.

After sending my memorandum to members, I received notification from the Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill that she will now be recognized as a member of the Alberta Party caucus alongside the Member for Calgary-Elbow. The Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill and the Member for Calgary-Elbow will be seated together, as you see, in the Assembly as the two-member Alberta Party caucus.

I would note that the number of independent members in the Assembly at present is unprecedented. Therefore, it is my request that the House leaders consult with the Alberta Party as well as those who are identifying as Progressive Conservative, Liberal, and independent members to review the question period rotation given the events which took place over the weekend. I would appreciate receiving a House leaders' report on the review by Wednesday if possible. We will follow the rotations in the October 25 House leaders' agreement until further notice.

2:10

The Oral Question Period rotation is based on an eight-day, 16 questions per day format. As noted in my memorandum, the Assembly will begin on day 4 of the Oral Question Period rotation. I'd also like to take this opportunity to remind members that questions and responses should be up to 35 seconds in length and that preambles to the supplementary questions are only allowed for the first four sets of questions each day, excluding question 4 on days 4 and 8.

With respect to the Members' Statements rotation the House leaders' agreement provides for a three-week rotation. As with the Oral Question Period rotation, changes may be required as a result of the new caucus affiliation of the Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill. I encourage the House leaders to look at the Members' Statements rotation at the same time as they review the Oral Question Period rotation.

Parliamentary Secretaries

The Speaker: Before I conclude, I would like to comment on the new positions that the government recently created. The members fulfilling these roles, which have been called parliamentary secretaries, continue to function as private members for the purposes of the Assembly.

This has a number of implications. First, the two parliamentary secretaries, the Member for Sherwood Park and the Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, as private members may ask questions, but they may not respond to questions.

Second, in posing questions it would be inappropriate for the questions to be directed to the minister with whom the parliamentary secretary is affiliated. As Speaker Kowalski, in dealing with a very similar situation, stated on April 16, 2008, "If a parliamentary assistant were to ask questions of the minister with whom he or she works, there might be an expression of discomfort by the chair and undoubtedly from members throughout." Those remarks can be found on page 13 of the Alberta Hansard for that day.

Last, parliamentary secretaries, as with other private members, are not able to sponsor what are commonly called money bills. As Standing Order 83 sets out, a minister only, not a private member, may introduce a vote, resolution, address, or bill to which the royal recommendation is attached.

Reusable Cups in the Chamber

The Speaker: On a final note, you will notice some reusable cups on each of your desks. The purpose of these containers is to reduce the waste and the costs associated with purchasing disposable cups. To be able to meet that purpose, these reusable containers are to remain within the Legislature precinct, and I would ask that they not be removed.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Pipeline Approval

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on August 23 the NDP announced that they would for the first time assess upstream and downstream emissions in a pipeline review. A short while later, Energy East was dead. The inclusion of emissions in a pipeline assessment clearly violates Alberta's jurisdiction regarding oil and gas developments, rights that Premier Lougheed fought hard for. This Premier was in Ottawa at an October 3 meeting with the Prime Minister of Canada. Common sense would be to raise this critical matter at that time. To the Premier: did you personally raise this violation of Alberta's jurisdiction when you met with the Prime Minister? Yes or no?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, both our Minister of Energy and I have spoken with our federal colleagues about the concerns we have with respect to assessing downstream emissions, and we will continue to do that. But I need to say that it's a bit rich for the UCP to play politics with pipelines. I guess we shouldn't be entirely surprised. It's all they've ever done, played politics with pipelines, and we know what's happened as a result of that, no pipelines approved. We've gotten two pipelines approved. That's what's going to help Alberta's energy industry, and we're not going to stop until we get the job done.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, this Premier has had more pipelines cancelled than approved so far. She's one to talk.

Following the scuttling of Energy East, the government merely issued a bland written statement and then went dark on the matter. The Premier was nowhere to be found. The $16 billion Energy East pipeline was a critical project for this country and for this province, expanding market access for Alberta while securing energy independence for Canada. Can the Premier tell us if she has since raised the matter with her close ally Prime Minister Justin Trudeau?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I believe I've in fact just answered that question. But here's another question. Where was the UCP's brand new leader when Albertans needed him? Fun fact: 20 years in the House of Commons allegedly representing the people of Alberta, and not once did he get up to speak in favour of Energy East. Yet somehow the folks over there try to put this on us. Our government is making progress. We are getting very close to breaking the deadlock, and it's because of the work that we've done. We're proud of it, and we are going to help Alberta's energy industry move forward. [interjections]

The Speaker: Keep the noise down, folks.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, this government has been missing in action on this critical file. The Trudeau Liberals are attacking Alberta, and this NDP government is doing little to nothing to defend our province. We know that the Alberta NDP are Trudeau's close allies. Will the Premier commit today to immediately demand that the government of Canada implement clear legislation prohibiting the National Energy Board from considering upstream and downstream emissions in pipeline approvals?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, unlike the members over there, we are not actually in the business of denying climate change. As a result, we believe it is important for all Canadians to consider the matter of upstream emissions, and that's why our government has taken action in partnership with Alberta's energy industry to do just that. It's because of that that we got the pipeline to the B.C. coast approved, because that's the right thing to do. We are not going to turn the clock backwards; we're going to continue making progress on behalf of all Albertans.

The Speaker: Second main question.

Carbon Levy and Pipeline Approvals

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the NDP claim that forcing Albertans to pay a carbon tax would win so-called social licence for pipelines. How has that worked out? Quebec politicians worked tirelessly to sink Energy East, and they succeeded. The NDP government in B.C. has sworn to stop the approved Trans Mountain pipeline. Yet despite all this, the NDP is going to hike its carbon tax by 50 per cent in just two months. We'd obviously welcome a full repeal of that carbon tax, and that day will come, but since this government is unlikely to oblige, will they commit to an immediate freeze to the carbon tax until Albertans start to be treated with respect?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I know that our friends over there love to make predictions. They love to make predictions against Alberta's interest. They love to hope desperately for bad news. But the fact of the matter is that this government – this government – has gotten two pipelines approved. None by the former Conservative government, two by this government, and the reason for that is because we are acting responsibly on the matters of climate change, and as a result of that, we are going to succeed on this file. We are going to address climate change issues, and we are also going to grow our energy industry sustainably, responsibly as we move Alberta forward, not backwards.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, this NDP government did not campaign on a carbon tax. They didn't even mention it, actually, but one day they just told us that we'd have a $30-per-tonne carbon tax. Then Justin Trudeau demanded that Alberta hike that tax to $50 per tonne, and the Premier happily obliged. All this was done before a single pipeline was physically completed, let alone started. Common sense would make payment dependent on delivery. We're being taken for suckers. When will this government start standing up to the Ottawa Liberals instead of acting like a doormat to their Trudeau allies?

Ms Notley: Well, actually, Mr. Speaker, one of the pipelines started in August. I know: facts, very inconvenient. Nonetheless, the other thing is that if we were to go ahead with what those folks want to do and move away from our carbon levy, we would then give all the authority over to the federal government, who would then make their own rules about how to impose a carbon levy. In fact, because we took action, we've developed a made-in-Alberta plan that was put together in concert with industry in order to ensure that our economy can continue to grow. We are not handing responsibility for that back to the federal government like those folks over there want to do.

2:20

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, it's quite clear that the carbon tax was nothing more than the largest tax grab in Alberta's history. Market access was used for a cover story by this NDP government. Can the Premier tell us: if the Trans Mountain pipeline is blocked, would she support a repeal of her carbon tax given the failure of social licence?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, what I can tell the members opposite is that (a) they really, really should stop cheering against Alberta and that (b) – you know what? – when the construction on that pipeline begins, not only will Albertans celebrate, but we're going to even invite the naysayers over there on the other side of this building to the party. I hope they celebrate with Albertans because the rest of us will be doing it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Trans Mountain Pipeline Construction

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The NDP has touted the paper approval of the Trans Mountain pipeline as a historic victory, and we all want to see the pipeline built, but plenty are working to stop it, as I understand it, some within the Premier's own party. The Premier talks a good game on pipelines at home but then seems to go noticeably silent when outside our borders. Can the Premier please tell us: what communication have you had with fellow NDP Premier John Horgan since he was sworn in as Premier of B.C.?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As the member opposite would probably know, I did have an opportunity to meet with Premier Horgan and to continue to make the case not only for the energy industry but, frankly, for all Albertans and for all Canadians because we know that getting that pipeline to tidewater is not only in the best interests of Alberta workers; it's in the best interests of about 40,000 B.C. workers. It's in the best interests of workers throughout this country, and that's why we won't stop pushing for it until that pipeline is complete. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Premier.

The city of Burnaby, B.C., is currently dragging its feet on issuing municipal permits for the construction of the Trans Mountain pipeline, clearly overstepping their jurisdiction. Kinder Morgan has asked that the National Energy Board intervene. Will the Premier join this chorus and demand that the federal regulator intervene to ensure the construction of the pipeline?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We will continue to work closely with Kinder Morgan to determine what it is that we can do and what we have the authority and the jurisdiction to do legally, but we will also continue to make the point to B.C.-ers why it is that this pipeline is good for them. Our minister of environment was out there just very recently making that case to a number of different British Columbians, and I'll be doing more of that this fall. At the end of the day, the key thing to remember is that the decision has been made. I know it makes the guys over there really unhappy, but the reality is that it has been approved. It's been approved because we've struck the right balance, and we are very proud of that.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Mr. Rodney: As a follow-up to the Premier's promise in her last answer, fighting for Alberta's market access does not stop with paper regulatory approval. Words need to be backed up with action. Will the Premier visit British Columbia to make the case for the Trans Mountain pipeline before the new year?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Of course, I've been to B.C. throughout this process a number of times to make the case, but it's coincidental that the member raises that because, in fact, I do also have another trip planned for B.C.. So indeed I'll have an opportunity to continue to make the same case that this government has been making since we first got elected, and that case is that when we strike the right balance, we build not only Alberta's economy but B.C.'s economy and Ontario's economy and the Atlantic provinces' economy because it's good for all Canadians, and we will not stop making that case, not ever.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Official Opposition Health Care Finance Policies

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to offer my congratulations to the UCP on the election of their new leader. In the interests of promoting a more multipartisan atmosphere in this House, I thought I would help Mr. Kenney get some straight answers and hard numbers for the platform that he tried so hard to keep secret. To the Minister of Health. Mr. Kenney stated a desire to cut 20 per cent from each department and each budget. What would the impacts of 20 per cent cuts to health care be on Albertans that rely on it most?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Jason Kenney's 20 per cent proposed cut to my ministry would mean cutting $4.3 billion from the health care system. It could mean shutting down 53 acute-care hospitals like the one in Sundre. It could mean closing 88 operating rooms and cancelling 144,000 surgeries while Albertans wait in pain, closing 600 emergency rooms, and that is not even enough to hit $4.3 billion. [interjections]

The Speaker: Keep it down.
First supplemental.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Health: can the minister tell the House whether having 20 per cent cut out of our health care system would have a positive or negative impact on our front-line services that save lives every single day?

Ms Hoffman: Jason Kenney's 20 per cent cut to health care is reckless, extremist, and would put lives at risk. In addition to closing hospitals, $4.3 billion could also mean taking 412 ambulances and the paramedics that staff those ambulances off the streets, 23,000 cancer patients being denied public funding for their life-saving drugs, and 13 million essential prescriptions for seniors would be defunded, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Health: given the enormity of the cuts proposed by Mr. Kenney and given that he clearly has no issues terminating employees, can you share with the House in human terms how many nurses, doctors will have to be fired as a result of 20 per cent, or $4.3 billion, in cuts to the Health ministry alone?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the question. A $4.3 billion cut would mean no nurses at the bedside of Albertans when they need them most. If Jason Kenney's proposed cuts were to move forward, 28,400 nurses and nearly 5,000 doctors in this province could be fired. Jason Kenney's proposed cuts are super reckless, super extremist, and super cruel. While we're working to make life better for Albertans, Jason Kenney would make life far worse.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Federal Small-business Tax

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The NDP's federal Liberal allies launched an unprecedented attack on the beating heart of Canada's economy, our small-business men and women. We should not be surprised. The Prime Minister previously accused our entrepreneurs of being tax cheats. To the minister: now, I know these decisions are being made in Ottawa, but could this government please tell us if it used its relationships with the Trudeau Liberals to lobby against these disastrous changes?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Let me first say that, of course, small businesses are the engine of Alberta's economy. They are working directly with Albertans all across the province. They create jobs all across the province. The federal government has a responsibility for tax fairness in this at their level, and they are bringing forward changes. I understand that the federal Minister of Finance has listened to Canadians from across the country, including Albertans, and he is bringing forward changes.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, I'm one of those small-business owners and a job creator. Since the current NDP government has a very close working relationship with the Ottawa Liberals, will the minister immediately and vocally speak out against these changes, given the major negative effects on Alberta's economy, and actually stand up for Albertans and small-business owners?

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, the . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, the federal Finance minister would have to make sure that no unintended consequences occur that negatively affect small-business people in this country. [interjections] This government has cut small-business taxes by 33 per cent. That side would threaten small business by rolling back the climate leadership plan, which was a source of the tax cut for small business on this side. We have invested $10 million to expand small-business incubators here in Alberta. That side cheers on . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Now, hon. members, I know that over the summer you were saving up all that energy and were just waiting to get into this place, but remember the energy you're going to need in the long term as well.

Second supplemental.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

So you're defending the Trudeau Liberals and their decisions about the tax grabs that they're doing here.

Given that Albertans have been waiting for this government to stand up for them and given the government's de facto silence on these very important matters, can we assume that the government of Alberta supports the Trudeau Liberals' tax changes for small business? To the minister: please answer with a simple yes or no.

Thank you.

Mr. Ceci: It's simply not true, Mr. Speaker. What we are doing is standing up for Alberta small businesses by cutting their taxes 33 per cent. The owner of Transcend Coffee said that the small-business tax cut will "help small businesses move forward and put them in a position to grow" and create jobs in this province. That's what we're doing. We're helping small businesses. The climate leadership plan is doing that. They would put all that at risk.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Federal Small-business Tax on Farm Operations

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's family farms are deeply worried about the pending tax changes coming from Ottawa. Farmers spending countless hours harvesting in the past months have not taken too kindly to the smear of their farms being called tax shelters. Has this government raised Alberta's farmers' concerns with their federal counterpart?

Mr. Ceci: Mr. Speaker, I think I've made it clear that Alberta supports small businesses, whether they're family farms or Transcend Coffee or any other kind of business. We are supporting them with a tax cut in this province. The federal government's responsibility is to ensure there is fairness. They are looking at the unintended consequences and changing their plan as a result.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this is not a time for the government to sit on its hands and given that farms that have been in families for generations are now at risk across Alberta, will the government today vocally denounce the proposed changes coming from Ottawa?

Mr. Ceci: Mr. Speaker, what I denounce is the recklessness coming from that side. They would put it all at risk by cancelling the climate leadership plan. We have brought $185 million to the table for small businesses in this province. We brought another $10 million to the table so that incubators could get up and running. That is helping small businesses, whether they're farms or other sorts of things, because of the actions of this side, not that.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that I cannot understand why the government is so unwilling to speak up on this issue and given that the NDP has such a strong relationship with the current federal government, will they not speak up given what's at stake, or is the friendly relationship with the Trudeau Liberals more important than fighting for Alberta farmers? [interjections]

The Speaker: Keep it down, folks.

Mr. Ceci: Mr. Speaker, if we want to talk about speaking up, let's talk about pipelines. That side couldn't get anywhere with pipelines. We spoke up for pipelines. Jobs are up in this province, wages are up in this province, and growth is up in this province because of this side, not that side. [interjections]

The Speaker: Folks, we're not getting very far down this list today.

Educational Curriculum Redesign

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, Albertans are gravely concerned about the NDP's pending changes to the education curriculum. One individual involved has said that the goal is to turn students, our children, into, I quote, effective agents of change. At the same time the government refuses to provide any details on who is actually writing the curriculum. Will this government cease the obstruction and let Albertans know who is writing our children's curriculum?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, we are engaged in probably the biggest curriculum rewrite in the history of the province of Alberta and the most transparent as well. We have more than 35,000 people who are participating in the curriculum, including energy companies. We have 4-H clubs. We have banks and so forth. You know, it's part of a process by which we are building actual evidence-based curriculum and not just using it for political propaganda like Jason Kenney and the UCP do.

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, given that our children shouldn't be used as tools to push the NDP world view and given that a draft document for the social studies curriculum shows a noticeable absence in the teaching of important history, I ask again: will the NDP tell us who specifically is writing our curriculum?

Mr. Eggen: Well, you know, I guess, Mr. Speaker, if you're going to spread around mistruths, then you might as well tell whoppers, and that is clearly the case. We literally have thousands of people working on the curriculum in the most transparent way possible. What the UCP and Jason Kenney are doing is trying to demean the work that is being done on that curriculum. Albertans don't believe it; the only people who do are the conspiracy theorists over there. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, I just don't understand why this government is so against transparency. If there is nothing to fear, then surely they should have no issue with letting us know who is writing the curriculum. Why is this government so insistent on obstructing, on keeping their plans secret, very secret, from Albertans?

Mr. Eggen: Well, Mr. Speaker, part of my job is to make sure that I protect teachers and professors from attacks by Jason Kenney's attack dogs on Twitter and so forth, demeaning the character of those people. I mean, I will follow the law in terms of privacy and so forth, you know, but I certainly will make sure that I protect children first, I protect teachers first and not give in to conspiracy theorists such as this. They want to out kids who are gay, and they want to out the teachers who are writing the curriculum. [interjections]

The Speaker: Come on, folks. Calm it down.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill.

Cannabis Distribution

Ms McPherson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past weeks Albertans have heard some stakeholders say that only a government-regulated agency can ensure the appropriate controls for the imminent distribution of cannabis. Done properly, the legalization of cannabis presents a remarkable opportunity to create jobs without sacrificing safety. To the Minister of Justice: given that the AGLC reports 98 per cent compliance for private liquor retailers, what evidence is there that private distribution of regulated substances such as cannabis is better managed by government?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much. I'm happy to take the first one. I'm sure the Minister of Justice can reply in detail to the remainder. Albertans have a very clear choice. We are giving them an opportunity to provide that feedback, Mr. Speaker, and we welcome the voices of all. I'd love to know where all members in this House stand on these issues, and they certainly have an opportunity to give that feedback clearly to the public. We are taking the information that all Albertans are providing to us as the Minister of Justice prepares to unroll the plan just prior, we hope, to delivering her new baby.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Ms McPherson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the strong history of entrepreneurship and small-business growth in Alberta, opportunities for the development of small and medium enterprises have been few and far between during the most recent slump in the economy. To the Minister of Economic Development and Trade: have you consulted with entrepreneurs in Alberta who are willing, able, and anxious to tap into the economic opportunity of legally distributing cannabis as mandated by the federal government?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We've had the opportunity to speak to a wide variety of people, small businesses amongst them, entrepreneurs amongst them, security experts as well. We just had the most successful consultation in Alberta history to hear from Albertans. We've recently published our framework, going back to Albertans to make sure that we heard what they said, and we've had a very successful second round of consultations. We hope to have more to say about that in the very near future.

Thanks very much.

Ms McPherson: Mr. Speaker, given that the Alberta Party caucus estimates show that the start-up costs alone for government-run cannabis distribution would be at least $168 million and given that the government of Alberta reaps hundreds of millions of dollars from the private distribution of controlled substances such as tobacco and alcohol, does the Minister of Finance have an estimate of the economic impact both in the cost to government of the setting up of brand new infrastructure for retail sale of cannabis and the anticipated revenue? If not, when can the members in this House expect an update?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We spent a lot of time doing an enormous amount of modelling. Of course, this is a brand new market, so it's impossible for anyone to predict with absolute accuracy what the outcome is going to be. Certainly, it is the case that those estimates were creative. As we move forward, we will be assessing that, but we're not in a position to predict with certainty because at this point they are just predictions. But we will absolutely be guided by Albertans on this matter.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Catholic School Sex Education Curriculum

Mr. McIver: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier of this great province has outrageously maligned an entire faith community by alleging that Catholics condone marital rape. It is possible the Premier was misinformed when she made her damaging comments. To the Premier: will you immediately and unreservedly apologize to Alberta's Catholic community?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, the document in question that was submitted as possible parallel wellness here in the province of Alberta was entirely unacceptable. Reflective of the feedback that we had received from tens of thousands of Albertans on this important curriculum work, I can assure Albertans that under our government any curriculum changes will be inclusive of all students, no matter what their sexual orientation is or their gender identity as well. Certainly, our job one, two, three, and four is to protect the mental and physical well-being of our children in schools.

Mr. McIver: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's outrageous. Given that the document in question is abundantly clear in stating, quote, consent is always necessary and given that I can't understand how the government could possibly let this smear of hundreds of thousands of good Albertans stand – the Premier clearly made a mistake in her statements – I again ask: will the Premier apologize to Alberta's Catholics, whom you have accused of condoning marital rape? Are there any other groups that the Premier wishes to accuse, or will this be it?

Mr. Eggen: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, it's very important that we build coherent curriculum that is in keeping with best practices, with science, and to ensure the safety and the security of children and the general public as well. So I would suggest that if the UCP and Jason Kenney are interested in doing so, they help us to constructively build curriculum that actually is evidence based, not just using side shots to somehow make some political points.

Mr. McIver: The minister is dodging the question, Mr. Speaker.

Given that, I would like to know: are there any other groups of Albertans that the Premier would like smear by accusing them of condoning marital rape? The Premier accused not only Alberta Catholic teachers, parents, essentially those people that voted for them, and all the school board people that sent in the curriculum that makes it clear that consent is needed. To the Premier: will you apologize for accusing Alberta's Catholic community of condoning rape?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, I want to make it clear that consent is the law here in the province of Alberta and in Canada, and we teach the law in public schools. You know, the same thing in regard to practicing safe sex. I mean, clearly this is a health and safety issue, and clearly we need to build an Alberta health and wellness curriculum that's in keeping with best practices and with science and the law to ensure that we are protecting our children.

Thank you very much.

Oil Sands Advisory Group Membership

Mr. Panda: Mr. Speaker, the NDP's carbon tax has done nothing to gain this so-called social licence. Just this past weekend protesters in kayaks staged a protest against the Trans Mountain expansion in Vancouver, kayaks made of petroleum products, of course. Who was one of the organizers of that protest? Karen Mahon, who was part of the government's oil sands advisory group. Does the government regret appointing Karen Mahon to such an important body?

The Speaker: The Minister of Environment and Parks.

Ms Phillips: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, Jason Kenney's conservatives: I'm surprised they weren't in kayaks behind those protesters cheering them on because they have been cheering on Alberta's demise since the very beginning on this matter of pipeline approvals. They have proven time and again that they want to see Alberta fail on this matter of market access. We, on the other hand, have put forward a careful plan in conjunction with industry to ensure that our industry remains competitive while we get that pipeline to tidewater.

Mr. Panda: Mr. Speaker, since the government won't answer on Ms Mahon, let's try another one. Given that the Energy East pipeline was cancelled and former NDP oil sands advisory group co-chair Ms Tzeporah Berman posted, "I am glad Energy East was cancelled and I will stand in front of the bulldozers [if I have to] and take a stand against Kinder Morgan," given this and other statements, will the NDP admit that appointing Ms Berman to the oil sands advisory panel was a mistake?

The Speaker: The hon. minister of environment.

Ms Phillips: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to update the House that the oil sands advisory group has in fact delivered their deliberations on that matter of implementing the regulations governing the 100-megatonne cap. We'll have more to say about that in the coming weeks.

You know, it's no surprise that folks on the other side of the House would prefer a plan imposed on us by Ottawa given the size of Jason Kenney's pension coming from Ottawa, Mr. Speaker. It's no surprise that they like things from that end of the country.

Mr. Panda: Mr. Speaker, I don't understand why this is so hard. Governments do make mistakes.

Given the actions of two of their favourite former appointees, why won't the government simply admit their error of judgment and denounce the outrageous statements and actions of Ms Berman and Ms Mahon? Will you?

The Speaker: The hon. minister of environment.

Ms Phillips: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, Jason Kenney's conservatives like to ignore the contributions of indigenous peoples to the oil sands advisory group, which have been many. There have been representatives from Mikisew Cree, from various Métis organizations, from Treaty 8, and from Treaty 6. The results of the oil sands advisory group were described, in one industry leader's estimation, as unprecedented collaboration. That's how you get pipelines approved. That's how you move this province forward. That's how you engage in unprecedented new levels of drilling and activity and so on as we get this province back on its feet while we . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

2:50

Official Opposition Postsecondary Educational Finance Policies

Mr. Malkinson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unity was on full display this weekend as the United Conservative Party elected their first leader, and what a joyous occasion it was. They now have an opportunity to come clean about what exactly they will slash and burn to achieve the $11 billion in cuts that Kenney has promised. But in the event that the UCP will seek to deny the impact and pain that the reckless cuts will have on Albertans, I ask the Minister of Advanced Education: what would Jason Kenney's plan for an $11 billion cut in postsecondary institutions mean?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Schmidt: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, you can always rely on me to tell the truth when others may not be so reliable, because Mr. Kenney's proposed cuts would make life worse for Alberta students and their families, plain and simple. His cuts would mean that mental health supports for students wouldn't be available when students are suffering from anxiety or depression. His cuts would mean that the foundational learning for English for new language learners wouldn't be available. Education would be much more expensive for those who would be able to go given the closures of the programs as a result of his cuts. Our government is investing in postsecondary education, making sure that every Albertan has an opportunity . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
First supplemental.

Mr. Malkinson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Member for Strathmore-Brooks promised that if the UCP was elected, there will be pain and given that he has also told Albertans that conservatives are not to be trusted when they say that their cuts will not impact services, I ask again to the Minister of Advanced Education: can the minister tell us exactly what programs, projects, grants, bursaries, or courses would be scrapped by the UCP's gleeful desire to make our students in postsecondary feel the pain?

The Speaker: The Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Schmidt: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said before, of course, everybody in this House can rely on me to give it to them straight when talking about the UCP's plans for higher education. While our government is focused on making life better, Jason Kenney's proposed cuts would mean that 81,000 students wouldn't be able to get student loans to go to university or college. That still wouldn't be enough for him. He also wants to cut 21,000 Alberta students' foundational educational supports. Our government's investments mean that students will be able to get an education that they can afford at institutions that will keep their doors open.

Speaker's Ruling Restrictions on Oral Questions Oral Question Period Practices

The Speaker: I'd just like to caution the House that question period is supposed to be related to the policy area, and there seems to be some suggestion . . . [interjections] Hon. minister, please.

To this side of the House, particularly the Member for Calgary-Hays: Calgary-Hays, your voice is too loud. Please keep your volume down when you're answering the questions. Your volume is in excess, so please take that under advisement.

Thank you.

The Member for Calgary-West.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Speaker: No? Okay. I'm sure it'll be related to policy, right?

Mr. Malkinson: Absolutely.

The Speaker: Yeah? Good.

Official Opposition Postsecondary Educational Finance Policies (continued)

Mr. Malkinson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given Mr. Kenney's belief that students who make up postsecondary institutions lack an understanding of economics, money, politics, and history, I was hoping we could clear up something for him and the UCP opposition, so I ask the Minister of Advanced Education: can the minister advise the House and the opposition what happened last time conservatives took an axe to postsecondary funding?

The Speaker: We're going to have to look at this matter – I will, anyway – in terms of what is really related to provincial policy. But I'll turn it over.

The Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Schmidt: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to talk about our government's policy of reversing the time-honoured tradition of conservative cuts to higher education. Our government has increased investments in students, increased investments in our universities and colleges so that every Alberta student has the opportunity to receive an affordable education right here at home, and we will continue to do that on behalf of the people of Alberta.

An Hon. Member: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order.
Calgary-West.

Pipeline Approval and Construction

Mr. Ellis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is under unprecedented attack from multiple directions. The Trudeau Liberals are now using the National Energy Board to kill off important energy projects. It is quite clear what is happening here. To the Premier: why won't this government denounce the changes to the NEB and demand that their federal allies cease this behaviour?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, in reference to the Energy East decision, we were extremely disappointed by that, but we had spent a lot of time before that talking to the NEB and the minister about the forward thinking of the modernization. As recently as October 2 I wrote a letter talking about the historic overreach that the NEB was planning for Alberta.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Ellis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given recent events the double standards are shocking. Given that Quebec politicians worked to block the Energy East pipeline and succeeded and given that they were also subsidizing a massive new cement factory, a factory with massive carbon emissions, and given that the Trudeau Liberals wouldn't dare slap punitive regulations on that factory, Premier, when will this government demand fair treatment for Alberta's industries?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, it was our climate leadership plan that got the securement of two pipelines, and it was cited for those pipelines. In our talks to the minister about the NEB modernization we have acknowledged that that climate leadership plan is addressing upstream emissions. We disagree with the downstream because it is taking care of the upstream. We worked very hard this summer to work on those pipelines while you folks over there were politicking and taking care of making Alberta better for your friends.

The Speaker: Hon. members, it appears that we may go past 3 o'clock. Is there a motion for unanimous consent to work past 3?

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, thank you for that. I would move that we request unanimous consent to continue until the completion of Routine.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Ellis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given this government's unwillingness to denounce the changes from Ottawa that killed Energy East, Premier, what assurance do we Albertans have that your government will stand up and fight against the B.C. NDP and their allies, your allies, in the upcoming battles over Kinder Morgan?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned, we have fought very hard for pipelines and in particular Trans Mountain. But, you know, other things that we're fighting for: in our royalty framework and in our climate leadership plan we fought for our energy industry. I'm pleased to say that drilling activity is up, wages are up for oil fields, production is up, jobs are up. We have confidence in the Alberta energy industry, and we're fighting every day to make that energy industry better, unlike these folks, who cheer constantly against our energy industry. They work for their friends, not for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

First Nations Development Fund Grant Oversight

Mr. Hanson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Auditor General's report from October included a review of the government's financial statements. I was very surprised to note that the Auditor General was compelled to repeat two specific recommendations for a third time. It is shocking to know that complex grant applications are being accepted without sufficient information to support a funding decision and that there is no consistent oversight to ensure compliance with the grant agreements. Does the Minister of Indigenous Relations share the Auditor General's concerns?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

3:00

Mr. Feehan: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We are very concerned about this and have worked very closely with the Auditor General to resolve this. In fact, this particular process has been put in place during this year and has been completed, so we're very much looking forward to the new report from the Auditor General in future.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the development fund grant guideline specifically restricts the use of funds to approved projects and prohibits any spending for certain purposes such as operating a casino or providing a security interest in the grant monies and given that the Auditor General's recommendations have been collecting dust on the minister's desk since 2015, can the minister identify exactly how much money has been improperly granted or spent outside the terms of grant agreements?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very happy to say that there is nothing that I need to report to the House that is of concern. I can see that the opposition is trying to find something to complain about, and since they haven't found something to complain about, they're trying to fabricate that someone else is complaining.

Thank you.

Mr. Hanson: Mr. Speaker, that was a wonderful answer.

Given that the significant funds are provided through the ministry's grant process and that Albertans expect their government to be accountable and responsible in determining funding recipients and providing ongoing compliance with funding agreements, can the minister comment right now on implementing the Auditor General's recommendations immediately, or is he working on an excuse for delaying implementation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We have been enjoying a very good relationship with the Auditor General and have complied with all of the requests that he has made of us and made important changes. And I'm very happy to know that the opposition has finally found indigenous people in this province and are likely to begin, hopefully, to look at some of the programs we have put forward, such as the many solar panels that have been put up all across this province, which they want to take away from indigenous people. I'm just told, for example, that in Maskwacis they're saving $10,000 a month because of the solar panels. That's money you want to take from them. I'm very disappointed that you want to do that not only for that community but all the indigenous communities.

Electricity Power Purchase Arrangement Lawsuit

Mr. MacIntyre: Mr. Speaker, this government launched a frivolous and unnecessary lawsuit against Calgary's own Enmax. A recent decision from the courts has made it clear that this government has failed to make their case because, frankly, they have no case. Will the Minister of Energy tell Albertans just how much money has been wasted on this very unnecessary litigation?

The Speaker: Hon. member, I would look for some advice. There's a matter in the courts, as I understand it, as we speak, and the Minister of Justice may wish to comment as to whether this is sub judice.

The hon. minister.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Okay. As you mentioned, Mr. Speaker, that matter is before the courts, but I'm pleased to update on what we have been doing. As you know, we inherited a system that . . .

The Speaker: Is it your view that this question is sub judice?

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: No, sir, because it's a matter of the courts right now for that specific question.

The Speaker: Then I think you need to reframe your question so that it does not make reference to the matters currently before the courts.

Mr. MacIntyre: What I'm asking for is no details on that but, rather, the cost. I'm asking about legal costs, sir. [interjections]

The Speaker: Quiet.

Mr. MacIntyre: I'm not talking about the outcome of the case, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I'd like to seek counsel.

Hon. minister, are you prepared to answer the question as it was first asked?

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: I'm happy to respond about the situation, Mr. Speaker, but I do not have the amounts at this time. It's in the courts.

The Speaker: Then first supplemental.

Mr. MacIntyre: Thank you. Given that until this lawsuit is settled, the Balancing Pool is unable to wrap up all remaining PPA terminations, to the minister again: just how much more money is this delay costing Albertans each month that the Balancing Pool is held up?

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I make no apologies for standing up for Albertans against unfair electricity prices. Those prices were the result of bad deals made many years ago, and we are looking at fixing that problem. The Balancing Pool's job is to look out for the market and make decisions on PPAs. Our job is to stand up for Albertans.

Mr. MacIntyre: Mr. Speaker, given that this government went so far as to bring in a lawyer from outside Alberta to do its dirty work rather than use government lawyers already on the payroll... [interjection]

The Speaker: This is his second supplemental. Second supplemental.

Mr. MacIntyre: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, given that this government went so far as to bring in a lawyer from outside Alberta to do its dirty work rather than use government lawyers already on a payroll, will the minister tell Albertans how much of their money this government has wasted paying that lawyer to go after one of Alberta's best-managed job creators, Enmax?

An Hon. Member: How much, Minister?

The Speaker: Hon. member, I spoke to a peer of yours about the volume. The way you pounded that desk today in my view is not acceptable, and I'd ask that you no longer do it.

Hon. minister.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I make no apologies for standing up for Albertans, and if that means bringing in the best lawyer for our case, that's what we do. We took action to protect Albertans while these folks would recklessly keep the same system that takes care of their friends. We negotiated with companies giving the Balancing Pool a loan, and they continue to defend the backroom deals. We stood up for Albertans. We're fighting for families. They're fighting for a system that was broken and doesn't stand up for Albertans, Mr. Speaker.

Speaker's Ruling

Sub Judice Rule

Oral Question Period Practices

The Speaker: Hon. members, we all knew that this was going to be a new phase in the life of this Assembly. First, to the sub judice – and my comments will make this clear – I certainly will but also the member and possibly the House leader of the Official Opposition might want to take a reread of the sub judice principle 23(g)(ii), on civil matters, whether or not the question you were asked was inappropriate or not.

In addition, I would like to suggest that I'd like to have a meeting with the House leaders sometime at my request so that maybe the issue of the roster will be in place, but I'd also like to discuss a couple of other matters. Those are largely with respect to the volume of noise that comes when a question is answered. I would hope that that tones down as we move forward. I think in the past I've been fairly fair in the application of this, but we're on the first day, and this is going to be five, six weeks of difficult times. I think we need to move the benchmark a little differently than we have today.

3:10

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

High School in Edmonton-South West

Mr. Dang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Schools are bursting at the seams in Edmonton-South West. Years of neglect and lack of funding by the former government led to what some parents in my constituency called a crisis. I'm glad our government recognized this and took action. Our government took action, Mr. Speaker, by fully funding hundreds of schools across this province, and eight of those schools have now been opened in my constituency. I sincerely want to thank the government for that.

Those schools, Mr. Speaker, are now full of students. They're full of students between kindergarten and grade 9. Those students need somewhere to go, and those students need somewhere to go that's a high school. Over the last two years I have been asking this government, including in this very House and in question period, to build a high school in Edmonton-South West because our students deserve the best facilities that they can have. Our students deserve a world-class education.

To achieve that, to ensure that they aren't forced to travel across town and lumped into crowded classrooms around the city, my constituency needs infrastructure, and it needs that high school, Mr. Speaker. The government and minister need to commit to supporting the students in my community. They need to commit to supporting our families. High schools prepare our students for the future and ensure that we have a well-educated workforce right here in Alberta.

I know that our government believes in a caring and inclusive education system. I know that our government believes in a steady, predictable future for our children and our educators. Mr. Speaker, I urge the government to build a high school right in my constituency, right here in Edmonton, to prove it.

Thank you.

United Conservative Party

Mr. Cooper: Today is a great day for small "c" conservatives across our great province. For the first time in this Legislature let me proudly say: the United Conservative Party caucus is here to serve. After a very long road to Saturday night we have a new leader ready to offer Albertans a positive vision and alternative to this high-taxing, high-spending NDP government.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

To my friend Doug Schweitzer and the member for Fort McMurray-Conklin: I want to thank you for your efforts in the leadership race. Each of you brought great ideas and great energy to our party. We thank you. We thank your families for all the time and hard work that you've given in helping to build a strong foundation for our party.

To our new leader, Jason Kenney, let me say how proud I am to work with you as we offer a fresh and positive approach for Albertans.

To moms and dads who have felt the pinch of this government, content to raise your taxes, let me tell you: you have a place in our party. To small-business owners let me say: you have a place in our party. To the rig worker who has seen this NDP government turn a blind eye as our province is beaten up by the B.C. NDP, the Trudeau Liberals, and the mayor of Montreal as they oppose pipeline projects, let me say: you have a place in our party. To the farmers and ranchers who are sick and tired of a government that legislates without understanding the rural way of life, let me tell you: you have a place in our party.

To the hundreds and thousands of Albertans from every corner of our province we say thank you. You have helped us create a single, unified, compassionate conservative party, and we will continue to work tirelessly to earn your trust as we form government.

Madam Speaker, we all know that the NDP will resort to divisive politics and name calling because that's the only tool that they have against us, but Albertans are resilient. They are strong. They're looking for common-sense leadership, and that's exactly what the United Conservative Party caucus will offer them.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon Member for Calgary-Klein.

Supervised Opioid Consumption Sites

Mr. Coolahan: Well, thank you, Madam Speaker. I am proud to rise today as a member of this government and as a Calgarian. Many of us, I know, have met with constituents who have lost a loved one to an accidental opioid overdose. In almost every one of their stories their loved one was alone when they died.

On Friday the Associate Minister of Health was joined by a member of our city council, our deputy chief of police, and many others to announce federal approval for supervised consumption services at the Sheldon Chumir health centre.

The evidence is clear, Madam Speaker. Supervised consumption saves lives. Calgarians who use substances will have a safe space, clean equipment, and professional medical supervision. This will reduce the spread of disease. It will mean less public substance use and fewer needles discarded in our parks, our alleys, and our public washrooms. Supervised consumption also provides an accessible on-ramp for Albertans to seek treatment when they are ready and to be in contact with health care professionals they have grown to trust. Above all, it will save lives.

I'm very pleased that supervised consumption will also be available soon here in Edmonton and Lethbridge. In fact, the Royal Alexandra hospital will be the first in North America to offer this service to its patients. This sends a clear message to Albertans who use substances and to their families that their lives are important to us and that they are not alone. Whether or not they are ready to stop using substances, our public health care system is ready to help them, without judgment and without stigma.

[The Speaker in the chair]

The opposition remains utterly silent on this issue. Mr. Kenney was part of the federal government that spent years in court trying to prevent Canadians from accessing these life-saving services. On this side of the House, Mr. Speaker, we are proud to support evidence-based policies that save lives.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

United Conservative Party

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today as a member of the new United Conservative Party of Alberta. Over the weekend tens of thousands of Albertans exercised their franchise as UCP party members and elected Jason Kenney as our new leader. This leadership election was a culmination of a 16-month process that saw the legacy Wildrose and PC parties put aside their differences and agree to move forward together as a single, principled conservative party.

It's been a long road, but as we take our seats in this Assembly for the first time as a team, I can tell you that we are stronger and more united than ever. For the first time in more than two years Albertans can see hope on the horizon, hope that they now have a credible, common-sense alternative to this NDP government, an alternative that puts people ahead of ideology, an alternative that will stand up for them against the disastrous economic policies of the NDP here at home and the Trudeau Liberals in Ottawa. Together these two governments have conspired to drain opportunity and prosperity from our once great province, leaving tens of thousands of hard-working Albertans without a job, billions in lost investment, and destruction of the Alberta advantage.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans are sick and tired of these attacks on their quality of life and their ability to support their families. That's why they signed up by the thousands to participate in the United Conservative first-ever leadership process. It was inspiring to see so many people come together to support our movement, and that was only the beginning. Today we begin a new chapter in Alberta, one that finally puts Albertans first. I'm incredibly proud to be part of this team and ready to get to work holding this NDP government to account for choices that are hurting Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Diversity and Inclusivity in Alberta

Ms Kazim: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm proud to rise today and speak about a subject that is close to my heart. Diversity and inclusivity are two terms with simple meanings. Diversity, according to the Collins dictionary online, means "the state or quality of being different or varied." Inclusivity, according to the Oxford dictionary online, means "an intention or policy of including people who might otherwise be excluded or marginalized, such as those who are handicapped or learning-disabled, or racial or sexual minorities."

We know that Alberta is a diverse society. Since the election of our government in 2015 this Chamber reflects that diversity more than it ever did. Inclusivity is a powerful tool for change. When we accept and support members of minorities and marginalized groups, we all grow. Society as a whole benefits from diverse viewpoints, religions, and outlooks. We also know, Mr. Speaker, what happens when inclusivity is not practised. We know how easily hatred and violence can spread. We see it on the news every day.

This summer I have been to many events which celebrate inclusivity: the Calgary Pride Parade, where we celebrated the LGBTQ-plus community; a Tsuut'ina Nation powwow marking the rich heritage of our indigenous community; and many others besides. I attended the Filipino Fiesta; a sugar shack at Heritage Park, where the francophone community shared their culture; Rosh Hashanah, a Jewish New Year celebration; a Japanese tea-tasting event; a Chinese dragon boat race; and Muslim Iftar events during Ramadan. I also took part in a round-table on housing and homelessness issues for vulnerable Albertans, including those with disabilities.

3:20

Mr. Speaker, our government has made a strong commitment to inclusivity. I trust and hope that every member of this Assembly will do the same and make Alberta a great place to live for everyone. I look forward to attending upcoming Hanukkah and Christmas celebrations.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

United Conservative Party

Mr. Orr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A year and a bit ago two great conservative Albertans started on a journey. Our recent leader and our new leader began a dance. They invited Alberta conservatives to look to the future, to believe in the greatness of Alberta, to put aside their differences and come together. On July 22 conservatives voted overwhelmingly in support of unity, renewing the Alberta advantage, supporting the creative spirit of business, jobs, prosperity for Albertans, and hope for families. We have made history. We have forever altered the course of Alberta's future for the better. We chose unity over division and common cause over conflict.

Unity is not a milestone but a process of nurturing relationships. This is just the beginning. We will continue to practise unity because Albertans want a stable, mainstream, courteous, and compassionate government. While many Albertans are thankful for the quality of our health care, we can and will make it better, and we will carefully trim unnecessary costs without reducing front-line services so that Albertans have the best health care possible for the dollar we spend.

Albertans used to have the best educational system in the world, and we will help our students and parents achieve that once again.

Alberta has the highest petroleum industry standards and the cleanest oil in the world. We have vast reserves of oil and gas that can put our province back to work again, improve our quality of life, and pay for the services that a civil society depends on. We will support high-tech innovation, the agriculture and forestry sectors, business and financial services, culture and tourism, manufacturing and construction industries so that people can get back to work and look after themselves with dignity.

Today is the beginning of a brighter future for the people of Alberta. The United Conservative Party is a party where all people of common sense and optimistic spirit will find a welcome for their ideas and their concerns for a smaller and nonobtrusive government. Alberta's best days are yet to come.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Loyola: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with section 5(5) of the Property Rights Advocate Act it is my honour as the chair of the Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship to table five copies of the committee's report on the 2016 annual report of the Alberta Property Rights Advocate Act.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future I'm pleased to inform the Assembly that the committee report on Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act, sponsored by the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West, was deposited intersessionally on October 2, 2017, as sessional paper 445/2017. This bill was referred to the committee on April 3, 2017, and the committee was required to report back to the Assembly by October 4, 2017.

I would like to acknowledge the support provided by staff of the Legislative Assembly Office. Sincere appreciation is also extended to the thousands of organizations and individuals who contributed with written submissions and made oral presentations as part of our review. I would also like to thank my fellow committee members, who worked thoroughly together to ensure this review was completed on time.

Mr. Speaker, the committee report recommends that Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act, not proceed. The report also includes and makes recommendations to the government. I request concurrence of the Assembly with respect to the report on Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Dang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 18(1)(b) I wish to speak to concurrence on the motion regarding Bill 203.

Speaker's Ruling Debate on Committee Reports

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Assembly has a rare circumstance before us on which I'd like to elaborate. As members have just heard, the chair of the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future has presented the committee's final report on Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act. He also moved a motion that the Assembly concur in the report. Typically motions for concurrence in committee reports are not debated. However, such motions are debatable as provided by Standing Order 18(1)(b). Today Edmonton-South West, who is also the sponsor of Bill 203, rose to debate the concurrence motion, as you did. At this point the Assembly is still in daily Routine, which is not the usual time to debate such a motion.

When this situation arose on October 28, 2013, Speaker Zwodzesky determined that a more appropriate time to debate a motion for concurrence in a private member's bill was during Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders, which will be called this afternoon after Orders of the Day.

In keeping with the time limits for private members' business, as set out in Standing Order 29(3), members with the exception of the Premier and the Leader of the Official Opposition will "be limited to 10 minutes' speaking time," and the mover of the motion is entitled to "5 minutes to close debate." You are going to get an opportunity to do that. It's the sequence of events.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, do you have a petition?

Mr. Hunter: Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a petition from 821 residents representing 28 communities in Alberta who have petitioned for highway 845 to be paved through the town of Raymond, from highway 52 north 1.3 kilometres to where it is already paved. There are over 2,000 vehicles a day on that highway, and the threshold is 200 to 400 vehicles a day. I'd like to present these petitions, please.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation and Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to give oral notice of a bill for tomorrow's Order Paper, that bill being Bill 22, Resident and Family Councils Act, which will be sponsored by the hon. Minister of Health.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Leader of the Opposition.

National Energy Board Act

Mr. Nixon:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to immediately demand that the government of Canada introduce amendments to the National Energy Board Act that would prohibit the board from considering upstream and downstream emissions in pipeline approval assessments.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the appropriate time I intend to move the motion pursuant to Standing Order 42.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Labour and minister responsible for democratic renewal.

Bill 19

An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers for first reading.

As Albertans our hearts break every time someone is injured or killed in a gas-and-dash or convenience store robbery. Our hearts go out to all Alberta families impacted by violence in these workplaces, and I'd like to say thank you to the families and stakeholders who have joined us here today.

Bill 19 is thoughtful legislation built on discussions with businesses, workers, law enforcement agencies, and families. Bill 19 would make prepayment for fuel mandatory in Alberta, and it also makes violence prevention plans mandatory in retail, fuel, and convenience stores and outlines requirements for those programs.

Mr. Speaker, we said that we would take action to protect gas and convenience store workers. Bill 19 is that action.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 19 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment and Parks and minister responsible for the climate change office.

3:30

Bill 20

Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act

Ms Phillips: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce Bill 20, the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act.

Mr. Speaker, this is a special act of the Legislature to improve two interbasin transfers to address drinking water challenges in both Mallaig in the county of St. Paul and the Whitefish Lake First Nation. This bill will allow an interbasin transfer to make good on our commitments to indigenous peoples under the UN declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples and bring drinking water to that reserve. We are tremendously proud to be undertaking this work, and that's what this bill represents.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 20 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-South West.

Mr. Dang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings for you today. The first is an article titled Can We Fix Daylight-Saving Time for Good?, which shows 24 states are moving to abolish daylight saving time; the second being 'End It': Finland Urges EU to Stop Daylight Savings Time Because Change Makes People Sick; and the final one saying If You Want to Get Rid of Daylight Saving Time in BC, Premier Says Email Him.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills.

Mr. Panda: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table two documents. The first document is a press release from the BNP Paribas bank, stating that it will no longer invest in companies involved in the oil sands or shale gas industry.

The second is a joint study by numerous universities in Canada, including the U of A, entitled Fusion 2030: Roadmap for Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: It's actually a tabling to the Clerk if I may, sir. It's a document from all resident owners of Sierras of Evergreen condominium. They hereby ask the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to consider allowing an exemption for age restrictions on condominiums and specifically an exemption for 15 Everstone Drive SW, Calgary. It's a designated 40-plus residence as this was a lifestyle choice those of us living at Sierras of Evergreen have specifically made. I trust the minister will take the time to read it. It is signed by every single one of them. It's a very important issue, and I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Mason: I have another tabling.

The Speaker: Yes. Go ahead.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings today, all on behalf of the Minister of Energy. The first one is a letter that she sent to the Hon. James Carr, Minister of Natural Resources of the government of Canada, on June 15, outlining our concerns with the National Energy Board's modernization expert panel's report in which she indicates to him that it is Alberta's view that Canada's regulatory framework should facilitate, not frustrate projects. Decisions on projects should be made on their own economic and environmental merits through a credible, public, balanced process designed to hear, test, and assess the facts.

That's that one.

The second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is a letter from the Minister of Environment and Parks to the Hon. Catherine McKenna, Minister of Environment and Climate Change Canada, in which she states that "we believe public confidence in the regulatory review . . . is crucial to ensuring projects move forward in a timely manner."

Mr. McIver: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Point of order noted.

I was about to comment, hon. House leader. Pick up the pace insofar as what you've got.

Mr. Mason: Okay. Mr. Speaker, it is normal that a few lines from these can be read. I'm keeping it to one or two lines in each case.

The third letter is dated October 2 from the office of the Minister of Energy to the Minister of Natural Resources Canada in which she states that “the inclusion of downstream uses in the scope of the Energy East review is an historic over-reach. In our view, this is simply not an appropriate issue to include in the review.”

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. Are there any other tablings that you have?

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I think this puts to rest whether this government has been active in lobbying for . . .

Mr. McIver: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Any other tablings?

Hon. members, I have two tablings. The first is that I'd like to table five copies of the 2016-17 Electoral Boundaries Commission final report, titled Proposed Electoral Division Areas, Boundaries, and Names for Alberta, which was received in my office on October 19, 2017.

The second is five copies of my October 27, 2017, memo and attachments to all members regarding Oral Question Period and Members' Statements rotations.

The Speaker: I believe we now have at least three, maybe four points of order, noting the last comment that was made. I believe the first one was made by the Leader of the Official Opposition. Is that correct? Please proceed.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I hate to actually rise on the first day to talk about it, but it was just so obvious that I think we have to set the appropriate tone as we go through this session. So I rise on 23(h), (i), and (j), particularly (j). At the time that I rose on that point of order, the hon. Member for Airdrie was asking a question of the Minister of Education. In response to the hon. member, the Minister of Education – I don't have the advantage of the Blues, of course, but the gist of it was that the Minister of Education told the hon. Member for Airdrie that the member was telling an untruth. In fact, a “whopper” I believe was another word that was used at that time.

Mr. Speaker, clearly, we have a long-standing tradition in this Assembly of not calling members liars or using language that in any way would imply that a member was not telling the truth. Certainly, saying they weren't telling the truth does that. I would also argue that the word “whopper” implies that, saying that the member was saying a whopper. But even before that, very, very clearly saying, “You're not telling truth,” is telling the member that they're not telling the truth.

Mr. Speaker, I think the fastest way to deal with this would be to have the member withdraw those comments and let us move on with the day.

The Speaker: The Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The rules around this are fairly clear and well canvassed. It's one of the most often argued points of order in this Assembly and, I have no doubt, in others as well. Of course, it's very clear that one of the things you simply cannot do in this House is call another member a liar or suggest that they have told a lie. However, there has been a great deal of latitude afforded to members for making statements that may indicate that the statement itself may not be true but it was not with intent or a deliberate attempt to mislead the House.

I just have some interesting things here. Hansard, May 2, 2017, the then leader of the Wildrose opposition in the House started out talking about the provincial credit rating with the words: “Speaking of whoppers, Mr. Speaker, the Finance minister delivered a few more whoppers yesterday on the state of Alberta's finances.” There was no point of order with respect to that one, Mr. Speaker.

Unfortunately, Hansard has names, and I forget. What's your constituency?

Mr. Loewen: Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Mason: Thank you. Back on March 7, 2017, the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky said, “Well, I'll tell you that somebody better call Burger King because I just found their Whopper.”

Moving on, Mr. Speaker. There are several cases where the hon. member for Calgary – it used to be your . . .

3:40

Mr. McIver: I can't help you anymore today. That's all the help you get.

Mr. Mason: Okay. That's it, eh? They're not going to help me.

That guy that sits there now, Mr. Speaker, talked about, “I do want to address quite a few things that I have heard, some mistruths,” and so on. There was no point of order in that respect as well.

The Speaker: Excuse me. Hon. member, could you just say that last part again, please? You referenced somebody.

Mr. Mason: It was Calgary-West.

The Speaker: What was said?

Mr. Mason: “Mistruths.” Let me see. Yes. “I . . . want to address quite a few things that I have heard, some mistruths.” He was referring to debate on the government side with respect to Bill 9 at that time, Mr. Speaker.

In none of these cases was a point of order made or upheld, Mr. Speaker, so I would submit that the use of “whopper” has been well established and used often by members on the other side. It's hardly reasonable, then, for them to now stand in their places and to make a point of order with respect to the government's use of the very same word in the very same fashion. I would submit that there is, in fact, no point of order.

The Speaker: Are there any other members who would like to speak to this? Calgary-Hays.

Mr. McIver: Yes. Thank you. The hon. Government House Leader just gave a few examples of when a point of order wasn't called, which, unfortunately, makes his arguments irrelevant because his arguments weren't whether it's in order or not. He just gave examples of when an order wasn't called.

Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. Government House Leader might even agree that we would never get any business done here if somebody called a point of order every single time that someone said something offside. What is at issue here is what actually was said today, and I would ask you to rule it out of order.

The Speaker: Any other members?

Well, in this particular situation, again, context. I read the Blues, which say, “I guess, Mr. Speaker, if you're going to spread around mistruths, then you might as well tell whoppers.” That's what was said today. For the record I'm not sure about the word “whopper,” but I can tell you, though, that on a go-forward basis I urge all the members – and I would be asking that your minister withdraw the comments about mistruths.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In that case, on behalf of the Minister of Education I withdraw the comment about mistruths but apparently not the whopper.

The Speaker: I think we have another point of order.
Calgary-Elbow.

Point of Order

Oral Questions

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. So long as the Whopper is Alberta beef, I guess it's probably okay, right?

I rise, Mr. Speaker, in my ongoing and continued battle against the puffball question. You yourself, when the Member for Calgary-Currie was on his trajectory earlier today, quite rightly raised a note of caution with the hon. member for the line of questioning. I will make several citations here today.

From Beauchesne's, when referencing the role of Oral Question Period, section 408(1) reads:

Such questions should:

- (a) be asked only in respect of matters of sufficient urgency and importance as to require an immediate answer.

Subsection (1)(b) is no longer in use, inquiring whether statements made in a newspaper are correct.

But 408(2), I think, is very instructive here. It says:

Answers to questions should be as brief as possible [and] should deal with the matter raised, and most importantly, Mr. Speaker, should not provoke debate.

I think if we were to unpack the questions asked by the hon. member and previous questions by the government private members today, I think it's very clear that those questions were argumentative, were designed to do nothing more than to provoke debate.

I also want to reference, Mr. Speaker, Beauchesne's 410, which notes, most importantly:

- (3) Time is scarce.

I think we would all agree.

- (5) The primary purpose of the Question Period is the seeking of information and calling the Government to account.

Not the opposition but calling the government to account. That, I think, is an important one.

Finally, and my last:

- (12) Questions should not be hypothetical.

Now, I would suggest that from the very little we have heard from the new UCP leader, given that he's not in this House and not running in an election campaign, one could argue that any statements there are hypothetical.

Mr. Speaker, I want to just reference a ruling by Speaker Zwozdesky which I have referenced previously. It references Oral Question Period on December 6, 2012. Now, what's most relevant about this time period is that it was immediately after a provincial election, and there were many new members of the House. We've now been at this for about two and a half years, and I would suggest that none of us can count ourselves as new members of the House. At the time Speaker Zwozdesky was referring to the then Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, who asked a question. In response, before the minister answered her question, Speaker Zwozdesky on page 1344 of Hansard from December 6, 2012, said, "Hon. members, as you all know, the purpose of question period is to seek information and to hold the government to account." That, again, I think speaks specifically to what we're talking about here.

I won't go on in much greater detail, respecting that time is scarce here, Mr. Speaker, but again I would agree with your caution that we, all members of this House, in particular government private members, need to use question period for the legitimate purpose of holding the government to account, standing up for the interests and best wishes of their constituents and all Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I appreciate the perseverance of the hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow. By my count this is at least the third time and maybe the fourth time that he's made a similar point of order. You have ruled in each case, and I'll read your ruling on December 8.

I note to all members that the ability for private members of the government caucus to ask questions of the government is a long-standing practice and tradition in this House, and it certainly has been in the period of time that I have been in this chair. In other words, all private members have the opportunity to hold the government to account. All private members have the opportunity to seek information. I would conclude by saying that all private members should continue to do exactly that. I find that there was no point of order.

Mr. Speaker, the questions raised at that time specifically had to do with the funding of postsecondary education. The questions today had to do with what would be the case if the government made significant reductions in their funding for several areas. In this particular case it was directed to the Minister of Advanced Education.

I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that in fact there is no point of order here.

The Speaker: Any other members? The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I won't belabour this too much because I think that we have a lot of important work to do this afternoon and this evening, and we already are behind schedule. With that said, I think the leader of the third party – I don't know what he is. I think I'll just stick with the independent Member for Calgary-Elbow. He did a good job, though, of discussing the responsibility of the opposition with questions to hold the government to account. I have to say, Mr. Speaker, that you already raised during question period, and I thought rightly, some concerns about whether or not the questions that were going through had anything to do with government policy – I heard you bring that up a couple of times; I would be interested to hear more of your input on that – and I was alarmed about that as well.

3:50

Now, I do appreciate the excitement of the government caucus on the election of Jason Kenney as the leader of the United Conservative Party. I do appreciate that they want to continue to raise his name in every sentence of their question. I'm excited about it, too. I'm happy to say the name "Jason Kenney" over and over and over. But the fact is that the now leader of the United Conservative Party, Jason Kenney, is not the Premier of Alberta yet, Mr. Speaker. When he is, then the NDP, who will be presumably – presumably – in opposition, can ask the member, Jason Kenney, the Premier of Alberta, questions about his government policy, but in the meantime I think we should stick with the rules of the House.

The Speaker: Any other members who would like to speak to this matter?

Mr. Cooper: Just the soon-to-be Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

The Speaker: You've just a little less volume than when you were in the front row, hon. member, but I still can hear you.

This is what I think the point of order was raised on. In fact, I have some other notes here that it may have been suggested that the subject matter was referenced at other times in the last Oral Question Period.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given Mr. Kenney's belief that students who make up postsecondary institutions lack an understanding of economics, money, politics, and history, I was hoping we could clear up something for him and the UCP opposition, so I ask the Minister of Advanced Education: can the minister advise the House and the opposition what happened last time conservatives took an axe to postsecondary funding?

I struggle to find the part of that question which addresses government policy, and I think that in this instance, Mr. House Leader, I ask that you refine your questions during Oral Question Period to focus on government policy.

Please note that there is one more, that I think was made, again, by the Opposition House Leader at the end of Oral Question Period. Is that correct?

Mr. Nixon: I think, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member would be happy to withdraw it. I believe he actually dealt with that point of order as he was raising it if I recall. We'll withdraw it.

Motions under Standing Order 42

The Speaker: Leader of the Official Opposition, I think I neglected your Standing Order 42.

Pipeline Approval Assessments

Mr. Nixon:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to immediately demand that the government of Canada introduce amendments to the National Energy Board Act that would prohibit the board from considering upstream and downstream emissions in pipeline approval assessments.

Mr. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 42 I'd like to ask for unanimous consent to move the motion.

Mr. Speaker, like many Albertans, I was devastated and I know many of my constituents were devastated to see what happened with Energy East, to see the cancellation of a pipeline project that would have brought thousands of jobs and billions of dollars to our economy, not only in this province but across this great country.

I was also, I would say, shocked, just like the people of Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre as they were looking on, at the silence of this government and particularly the Premier of Alberta, who went completely silent after that, missing in action, and who gave a very simple and bland statement that really did not speak to the issue at all and certainly did not do an adequate job of standing up for Alberta, standing up for our largest industry, and recognizing that what the National Energy Board was doing was wrong, Mr. Speaker. It was disappointing to see that. I know many people that I have talked to across the province have brought that up with me and agree with that.

But what's interesting to me, Mr. Speaker, is that despite that muted response, despite the fact that, as I pointed out in question period today, the Premier has inadequately brought this up with her friend Justin Trudeau, the Prime Minister of Canada, despite the fact that she has met with him since this has happened and has not raised that issue in any adequate way for the people of Alberta, it interests me that the NDP still claim that they are opposed to the National Energy Board changes.

My intent today with this motion is to give the NDP an opportunity to be able to vote to show that they are in agreement with the majority of Albertans and with the opposition about the concerns with what has taken place on this issue.

You know, Mr. Speaker, this is important. It's important because the changes that the National Energy Board have put in place are now responsible for scuttling a $16 billion project that would have brought energy independence to Canada and market access for Alberta. One of the most important issues that we have talked about in this Chamber over the last couple of years is getting market access. The NDP repeatedly rise in this Chamber and say that that's important to them, but when the time comes to be able to stand up for Alberta on that very issue, they remain silent. It's extremely troubling.

It becomes even more troubling when you recognize that counting upstream and downstream emissions makes no sense. Pipelines don't make emissions. They don't make emissions. They deliver the product. So counting them is just unreasonable, particularly when you consider the fact that the federal government does not account for emissions when giving cheques to Bombardier for planes that burn the oil that is in the pipeline nor for money to the auto manufacturing plants in Ontario. Why, Mr. Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, I want to urge you to get to the rationale for the urgency.

Mr. Nixon: I'm getting there. The urgency, Mr. Speaker, in my mind, is: why is this government not standing up to the hypocrisy that is coming from the National Energy Board when it comes to Alberta and our largest industry, when it comes to pipelines trying to get to the market?

Mr. Mason: Point of order.

The Speaker: The point of order is what?

Point of Order Standing Order 42 Motion

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, it's clear that the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition is merely attempting to debate the item, to make his attacks on government policy. If he wants to know what the government has done, I tabled three letters today that will help enlighten him. But in the meantime the question here is on the urgency, and he has not made a case for the urgency of this matter at all.

The Speaker: Hon. member, as you've heard, I said: get to the urgency question.

Mr. Nixon: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Government House Leader may not think that the loss of thousands of jobs in this province and the loss of billions of dollars for this province is urgent, but I can tell you that I think it's urgent, and my constituents think it's urgent.

I will get to the point, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Yeah. Please do.

Debate Continued

Mr. Nixon: Surely, if the NDP oppose the changes, as they say, they'll have no problem supporting this motion and making a request to their friends in Ottawa. I will call . . .

The Speaker: So what's the urgency, hon. member?

Mr. Nixon: Again, Mr. Speaker: loss of jobs, loss of billions of dollars to our economy. This government says that this is something that's important to them, and they're not standing up for it . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

There's been a motion under Standing Order 42 for debate, an urgent debate on a matter. There is no debate on this matter, so is there unanimous support for the motion as proposed by the Leader of the Official Opposition to proceed with debate?

[Unanimous consent denied]

Orders of the Day

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders

Motion to Concur in the Report from the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Bill 203

Alberta Standard Time Act

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The Member for Calgary-South West.

4:00

Mr. Dang: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think it's Edmonton-South West.

An Hon. Member: It's a promotion.

Mr. Dang: I think my colleagues on this side might disagree.

It's my pleasure today to rise and speak to the concurrence motion on the Alberta's Economic Future recommendation on Bill 203. I do want to begin by thanking the committee members for all the incredible work that they did, the nearly 14,000 Albertans that they connected with and the report that they were able to generate to give to this Assembly for us to be able to be here today.

I believe that the work and the recommendation that they made were hard work, for sure, Madam Speaker, and it was also the right recommendation at the time. However, I believe that new information since that report was compiled and deposited fundamentally changes the context in which we must view that recommendation.

The committee recognized that 75 per cent of Albertans supported having one unified time year-round. This was because of the various health effects, physical effects, and mental well-being effects that it has on people across the province, and it also was because of how it adversely affects productivity and safety across the province.

Madam Speaker, the committee also recommended that the government not proceed with this bill pending engagement with other jurisdictions in Canada and the United States. Now, I believe that Canada should take a lead and be torchbearers in that conversation because just weeks ago mayors from the Union of British Columbia Municipalities voted 62 per cent in favour of abolishing daylight saving time in British Columbia. Premier Horgan has indicated that he would be open to discussing and consulting British Columbians on how B.C. abolishes daylight saving time.

The time to act and be a part of how Canada moves away from the time change is now. We know that at the state level in the United States of America two dozen states currently have bills pending to abolish daylight saving time. That's nearly half of all American jurisdictions. The government of Finland has just received a 70,000-person petition to abolish daylight saving time, and a parliamentary committee in their Parliament, Madam Speaker, is advising the government to raise the issue with the European Union's Parliament.

I understand, Madam Speaker, the very legitimate concerns that businesses in our committee brought forward in dealing with other jurisdictions and how this could bring us out of step with other provinces here in Alberta, but I believe that these recent developments fundamentally change that information. These recent developments change how we must view that recommendation. They change the context in which that recommendation was made, and I think that's information that the committee would have found valuable during their work.

The committee heard loud and clear, as did I during my consultation, from many Albertans, for many reasons, that one time year-round was the way to go, but we did stop and consider some of the larger effects around what the interjurisdictional play and issues may be. Now, I believe that if we were to reject the committee's recommendation, if we were to vote no here today in this House, we could solve those problems that were raised. Other jurisdictions have already passed and are moving forward with this type of legislation. Let us be leaders in the nation. Let us be somebody who says, "We will not wait and follow, but we will drive that horse forward," Madam Speaker.

If this House were to reject the recommendation of the committee and allow the bill to continue through second reading and into Committee of the Whole, I believe strongly that the issues that were identified, specifically those issues with how our businesses interact with other jurisdictions, could be remedied during Committee of the Whole. In fact, I would say so far that I would be willing to move amendments myself that would address the concerns about us being out of step with other jurisdictions.

The debate should not end here today, Madam Speaker. Today we should decide to be leaders in the conversation and be prepared to guide the rest of the country based on Alberta's framework and Alberta's leadership. I believe that I could move amendments that would satisfy the concern that Alberta would be out of step with other provinces and states, but those amendments could only be considered in Committee of the Whole. That's why today I think it's so important that we reject this recommendation and that we allow ourselves the opportunity to continue debate. I believe we should give ourselves the opportunity to have conversation and see what we can do to fix our legislation.

What I'm asking here today, Madam Speaker, is very simple. I'm asking all hon. members in this House to continue having that conversation with me in this House because over 70 per cent of Albertans want one time year-round. We saw that time and time again, not just in my survey but in the one that the committee did as well. We have the opportunity to continue that conversation for them. We have the opportunity to listen to those constituents and those Albertans while addressing the very real business concerns and implications across the province, across the country, and across North America.

I believe we can fulfill in spirit the recommendations that the committee brought forward. We can fulfill those things in spirit and principle, but I believe that in order to continue to be national and international leaders in the conversation, we must vote to allow debate to continue in this House. We must be permitted to continue talking about this issue in this very Legislature, Madam Speaker, and I would commit to making the amendments that would ensure that Alberta would move forward with a co-ordinated approach with the other jurisdictions so Alberta would not fall out of step with the rest of the country or the rest of North America. I do want to urge all my colleagues to consider today that our constituents and Albertans have told us that they want one time year-round. I believe we can do that for them. I believe that we can find a fair middle ground acknowledging the concerns of our business partners and our interests.

I believe that if we vote together today, if we vote to reject the committee's recommendation, we can bring a common-sense bill forward that will make Alberta a strong national leader in that conversation. I do urge all of my colleagues to vote against the concurrence motion here today. We can make a good bill together. We can tell Albertans that we heard them. We can tell Albertans that we know how to work together to make common-sense change that reflects their wishes. So let's continue that conversation.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-South West. I apologize for temporarily moving you to Calgary.

Any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock.

Mr. van Dijken: Good. Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you for the opportunity to rise and speak to Bill 203. It was a pleasure to be working with the Economic Future Committee on this consultation process through the summer and talking to Albertans on what their wishes are and seeing what Albertans had to say about how we could best move forward. I believe the committee did some great work on the discovery of trying to understand the best way to move forward. I do believe that the recommendation that came forward from the committee is to consider one time year-round going forward but then to also do that not as if we're on an island unto ourselves but to consider that in consultation with other jurisdictions that we are intertwined with not only in our trading practices, but also socially we're intertwined with them.

We sought feedback from stakeholders and held public meetings in several cities. I was able to participate in public meetings in Grande Prairie and Edmonton, and other members were able to participate in other jurisdictions in the province. I want to thank all of the people that came forward to participate in those meetings. It was helpful for myself and I believe it was helpful for other members on the committee to understand the wishes of Albertans from one end of the province to the other. I did find it very interesting that we were able to see that depending on where you are at in the province, the choice to go with Central Time or the choice to go with Mountain Standard Time was probably the biggest consideration for those that wanted to stop changing the clocks.

What we did learn in Grande Prairie: the Chamber of Commerce in Grande Prairie, Madam Speaker, did a survey amongst their members. I found it very interesting that it was a survey that was split pretty much three ways. A third of their members were saying, "Let's just continue on the way we are," and then another third of the members of the chamber were interested in, "Let's stop changing the clocks, but let's have Mountain Standard Time," and then another third were in favour of Central Time. One thing we did learn also is that when you're that far west in our province, to go to Central Time through the winter would mean that they would be dark until very late in the morning.

That was a big concern for Grande Prairie relative to the concerns in, say, a place farther to the east. Lloydminster would have fewer concerns about being on Central Time because they are right next to Saskatchewan, which is on Central Time. So it was less of a concern as we travelled east that way.

4:10

Before we make a decision as Albertans to stop changing clocks and, not only that, to switch time zones, to go from Mountain Standard Time, which we are currently in, and to essentially become part of the central time zone, which would put us in the same time as places such as Chicago and Nashville, Mexico City, you know, places that are quite a bit further east of us – it became quite evident that we needed to have a conversation with other jurisdictions, our trading partners, and other parts of the world that would also be affected by the decision that is made here.

In my opinion, the committee's consultation ended up with the committee making the right decision, which is that Bill 203 should not proceed and that the motion that came forward would essentially put us where we would then, in consultation with other jurisdictions, decide on the best path forward.

I would like to read from the report the motion that came forward. I'm just trying to find it here, Madam Speaker. I thought I had it. The motion that came forward essentially is recommending that we do not proceed at this time with Bill 203.

The one thing that did concern us in the final report of the committee was the motion that was put forward at committee. The NDP majority passed the motion. My colleagues and I from the UCP Official Opposition that were a part of the committee effort felt it important that we point out that the majority, the NDP majority, passed a motion that we were not able to concur with and that we actually voted against being put forward in the report. The motion was to this effect, that the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future direct research services to include in its report regarding the committee's review of Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act, that approximately 75 per cent of the submissions en masse to the committee were in support of abolishing the observance of daylight saving time and identified that it has a negative effect on [but not limited to] their physical and mental well-being, their children, families, productivity at home, at work, at school, and safety on roads.

Madam Speaker, I was not in favour of that motion because, in my opinion, it was not an accurate reflection of the information that we had received as a committee. I believe that we need to be clear with Albertans on the information that came forward. You know, while the committee received approximately 13,562 written submissions, it doesn't necessarily accurately represent a province of over 4 million people, especially considering that these submissions were on a voluntary basis. Voluntary surveys, although helpful, can be very often skewed and have a response bias that would not necessarily be the opinion of the population as opposed to conducting scientific polling, that would be probably more accurate on what the general population's opinion is with regard to the issue at hand.

Furthermore, the motion exaggerated the findings of these supportive submissions by saying that in them people identified that daylight saving time "has a negative effect on . . . their physical and mental well-being." Not all supportive submissions listed any of these things. In fact, the greatest proportion of submissions in favour of abolishing daylight saving had no rationale attached to them at all. They just simply said that there is no benefit to the time change and they would prefer to stick with one time.

Because of these things, we expressed our opposition to this particular motion being included in the final report. It's important that the final report represent clearly and accurately the submissions that came forward.

With that, Madam Speaker, I would like to thank the Member for Edmonton-South West for doing the work on the bill. I would like to thank the committee for also doing the work on the bill. I believe that the committee has come to a conclusion that the Members of this Legislative Assembly should respect and understand that the committee, I believe, has heard from Albertans in a way that we can move forward on this item with other jurisdictions and be ready to . . .

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Malkinson: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It's a pleasure to stand up and talk about the concurrence motion. I am in agreement with my colleague from Edmonton-South West that indeed the time is now – I'm sure there's a pun in there somewhere – and disagree with the results of the report from the committee. Just sort of great notes from our friend in Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock about the work of the committee. I think that the circumstances have changed since that report came forward. I respectfully disagree with that report and say that we be bold when it comes to daylight saving time.

The report at its core recommends that we engage with other jurisdictions to make sure that we do not have any problems when it comes to interjurisdictional business with other provinces and other parts of the United States. However, I have heard loudly from my constituents that they are overwhelmingly in favour of stopping the switch twice yearly and that we stay on daylight saving time year-round. I have had more responses to my office on this particular topic than on any other topic that people have written in to me about.

In particular, I have had several individuals come into my office and sit down with me to give specific examples of why this twice-yearly switch is bad for them. I believe our colleague from Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock talked about how some of the submissions didn't have a specific reason. Well, as many people in this House know, I do a lot of work with persons with disabilities. I had several of them come and sit down with me in my office and talk to me about this bill. For many who have disabilities, the importance of routine in their daily lives is very important to helping them manage their disability, whether it be physical or, in particular, mental. Having even that one-hour time-difference switch: for some of us who are, you know, perhaps a bit younger, getting used to the change perhaps only takes a day or two. Well, for these individuals it could take weeks. That dramatically affects their quality of life, their ability to go out and interact and be meaningful members of society as much as they can.

Recently, on Friday, I had a constituency open house, the one I have at the beginning of every session. I had about 30 people come out. I asked the question to them. I have to admit that I prefaced it with the best arguments I've heard both for and against daylight saving time, and they were, in fact, in the report. In that open house people were, again, overwhelmingly in support of stopping the twice-yearly change. Overwhelmingly in support.

4:20

In fact, even from the survey that the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West did, there were 166 individuals from my riding of Calgary-Currie who responded to his survey who strongly agree with his bill. There were another 22 that agreed with his bill. However, there were only 39 who either responded that they didn't know or that they disagreed with the bill. That is an overwhelming majority of my constituents who want this bill to continue moving forward in the Legislature. In listening to them, again, I'm going to have to respectfully disagree with the committee's report. To that, I say to all members of this House that we should be bold. We should lead on this particular topic because that is what my constituents are telling me, that we should lead on that. Be bold.

In the report there seem to be two particular points. Many businesses presented to the committee, and I had a chance to talk to some of my colleagues to get their feedback on how, if this bill was to go forward, it might hurt small businesses. We heard from various hockey teams, businesses, and, of course, from our local airports. I think the airports, you know, made a very interesting case on why this might be a problem, particularly as it relates to connecting flights. That was actually the example I used when I talked to my constituents in my office and said, "Hey; this is by far the strongest case I've heard for why we shouldn't go forward." The response I got from my constituents is: "You know, yeah. That makes sense. However, it seems like something that could, after a bit of a transition, be managed." That was what my constituents were telling me in my office. I tend to agree with them on that particular point.

The other part was related to, you know, the importance of matching up with other jurisdictions. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West mentioned, there are several other constituencies who are working on this. In fact, in B.C., as he mentioned, there is a 62 per cent vote in favour of B.C. moving off the twice-yearly switch, which means that that conversation in B.C. is already starting, and it seems like perhaps they're about a year behind us.

If we vote with the report of the committee, then we will end this conversation. I think the hon. Member for Edmonton-South West made some very great points about how he would be able to address some of the concerns in the report. On the topic of, you know, other jurisdictions this is a little bit of a chicken-and-egg problem. If we wait for other jurisdictions and then other jurisdictions wait for those other jurisdictions – I think that we should be bold. We should take the first step and vote no to concurrence so that we can continue this debate.

With that, I ask you, all my colleagues: let us be bold and lead into the future and continue the debate in this House. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. You know, I have some real concerns with the arguments coming from the other side. There's a committee that very thoughtfully debated and discussed this bill that was referred to it. Just some of the dismissiveness, I think, of the work that had gone on in the committee is really troubling to me and some of the very, very thin rationale that's being used to perhaps suggest that we reject the recommendations of this committee: that the B.C. Premier, quote, is discussing the idea that perhaps we would do this, that B.C.'s equivalent to the AUMA has passed a resolution suggesting that perhaps the government of British Columbia should consider this. These are very preliminary steps that the government is taking, and it's nowhere near enough, in my opinion, to override a unanimous motion of a committee of the Legislative Assembly.

I will say, Madam Speaker, that I find it curious that when that committee, an all-party committee, unanimously voted to not proceed with this bill and once that news came out, the Premier herself was then scrummed shortly thereafter and expressed her personal opinion that actually maybe this issue isn't dead.

Well, there are a couple of things that really concern me with that. One, it's a committee of the Legislative Assembly that's passed a unanimous motion, including, of course, members of her own party. But this, Madam Speaker, is a private member's bill. Now, again, we have the government very clearly cracking the whip on their backbench on an issue that perhaps the Premier herself has a strong opinion on, so it makes me wonder what the purpose of this entire process is if, really, the Premier just will do whatever it is she wants.

I will say this. I am perfectly fine with the idea of ending daylight saving time. However, if we're going to do that, we need to ensure that we are co-ordinating with not just our neighbours to the east and west in Alberta and in Canada but with our largest trading partner south of the border. Now, I understand that perhaps as many as half the states in the U.S. are thinking about eliminating daylight saving time, and that's a great idea. Let's do that. If we're going to do that, let's do it as a co-ordinated North America wide effort. I think it would be very damaging to Alberta's fragile economy for us to be out of step with our largest trading partner. Frankly, it makes no sense at all.

Now, I was very encouraged and curious – and I know there's no 29(2)(a) in private members' business – when the Member for Edmonton-South West said that he also would want us to make sure we don't fall out of step with our neighbours and the rest of North America. That's important. It'd be very, very damaging, I think, for Alberta to move forward unilaterally.

I look forward to seeing the amendments that he will propose, but again what I don't understand, Madam Speaker, is what isn't addressed by accepting this motion. Why do we need to not accept the motion? I'll read the motion, and that is that the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future recommend that Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act, not proceed and that the government of Alberta engage other jurisdictions in Canada and the United States to develop a co-ordinated approach to eliminating the practice of observing daylight saving time.

That's a good idea. That's what we should be doing.

I agree. I agree with the majority of Albertans that daylight saving time is an antiquated practice that probably does more harm than good. However, we've lived with it for decades, and if we get out of step with our trading partners, we're in trouble. My question is: why would we reinvigorate this debate? Is there going to be a scenario where we're out of step with our largest trading partner? I certainly hope not.

I believe that the motion as passed unanimously by the committee addresses the concerns that have been raised by the Member for Edmonton-South West.

One final and, I think, perhaps the most important point of all: continuing the debate on daylight saving time sends exactly the wrong message to all of those stakeholders who came to that committee. They provided their thoughtful input.

What this does is it adds more uncertainty to an already very uncertain business climate. And if there is one thing this government could do to help entrepreneurs, to help the economy of this province, it is to end the uncertainty. By passing that motion unanimously, there was a collective sigh of relief from airlines, from companies that do business all over North America, who export throughout the world. But now, all of a sudden, these companies go: "Wait a minute; I thought we'd settled this thing, and now we're back on it. We have to debate this thing again?" The uncertainty that this bill brings – I recognize it's a private member's bill, but it's a private member's bill of the government side – the uncertainty created in Alberta's economy by this government, is just killing jobs. It's killing investment. This is the reason that companies are unwilling right now to invest in Alberta. It's this incredible uncertainty.

I would strongly encourage the Assembly, all of my colleagues in the government, to accept this recommendation because it achieves what I have heard the other side wants to achieve, and that is to continue to co-ordinate with other jurisdictions as they move forward. That's what we should be doing. But we should allow this bill to die and make sure that we bring at least a modicum of certainty to Alberta's business climate.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by Calgary-Greenway.

4:30

Mr. Dach: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise on this first day of the session to speak to Bill 203, and I rise to concur with the motion and recommendation put forward by the committee that Bill 203 not proceed. I believe that this committee sat in many, many meetings, listened to submissions, that were probably one of the largest numbers of submissions ever received by a committee of this Legislature, and they came up with the correct conclusion, that it's not really a question of if but when we stop changing our clocks and decide upon which time zone to adopt year-round.

I speak in support of the recommendation, and I encourage all members to do the same thing because I think that in its wisdom the committee, in adding a further recommendation that the government of Alberta engage other jurisdictions, as mentioned by the Member for Calgary-Elbow just recently, sought to address any concerns that individuals might have that we weren't going to move in lockstep with other jurisdictions, which the committee heard was very, very important to do if and when we decide to go ahead and not change our clocks any longer and would decide upon a time zone to adopt year-round. I think the committee rightfully makes this recommendation knowing that the large majority of Albertans wish to stop changing their clocks and that they wish to do so in conjunction with neighbouring jurisdictions, in particular British Columbia, and perhaps other jurisdictions in the United States.

I'd urge all members of the House to follow my lead and choose to accept the recommendation of the Alberta's Economic Future Committee that Bill 203 not proceed.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Greenway.

Mr. Gill: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise today to support the motion not to proceed with Bill 203, Alberta Standard Time Act. I am a member of the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future, and the proposal of this bill to eliminate daylight saving time did involve potential impact on Alberta's economic future. We heard from various stakeholders. We heard from our business community that any move to eliminate daylight saving time at this juncture would put us out of sync with the rest of North America. That could be damaging to our businesses.

Particularly compelling was the feedback from Calgary and Edmonton airport authorities. Bill 203's proposal to move Alberta two time zones from B.C. during winter was particularly concerning. Should that have come to pass, WestJet indicated that its connecting flight system would have meant that customers in British Columbia would have had to catch their flights at 5 a.m., which means they have to be at the airport for international flights, like, as early as the middle of the night. The concern from the airline was that the B.C. travellers might simply choose alternate routes that bypass Alberta rather than face those departure times. As the Calgary Airport Authority noted, Calgary's economic engine generates more than $8 billion in GDP through a carefully balanced system that depends on negotiated schedules with various partners around the world. That is basically, of course, the crux of the issue.

Yes, jurisdictions in Canada and the United States are reconsidering the value of daylight saving time right now, but the movement is just beginning. Just last week states in the New England region began pondering the advisability of eliminating daylight saving time. A bill was even brought forward in Maine. Its experience was interesting because even though the bill passed both chambers in the state Legislature, the Senate added a provision that Maine voters must approve it through a referendum and that a vote could only be triggered by neighbouring Massachusetts and New Hampshire also changing their time zones. That speaks to two important issues, that it is important not to move out of sync with your region when it comes to time zones and that referendums are the tools for these kinds of decisions.

Time after time in the consultation period with Albertans on Bill 203 they requested the same allowance. Since daylight saving time was brought in by a referendum decades ago, should Alberta's Legislature be considering a similar move, they should send it to a province-wide vote. That has been the consistent position of our UCP caucus on the matter. Yes, I understand there is a cost to this referendum. However, if it is partnered with the provincial election, then the cost is manageable and justifiable when Albertans are the ones asking for it. We can manage effectively if we're willing to do so.

Albertans were also asking for another thing when they provided submissions to the committee or attended to address us in person. They asked us to deal with the very real problem that Alberta is facing today, and that is, as we all know, the economy. The economy is top of mind for them, Madam Speaker. When so many Albertans are out of work, when our economy has taken a dive from which it has yet to recover, when we're posting $10 billion deficits over and over again with no plan to pay it back, when Alberta's debt load is escalating to the point that Canada's parliamentary budget office, our AG, and respected economists are warning us to get our fiscal house in order, why would we spend so much time on this issue? That's just my question.

Alberta is desperate for common sense from their government these days, and time and money spent deliberating over this bill when other challenging issues were just pushed through the House with almost no consultation – labour legislation comes to mind. Bill 6 comes to mind. Carbon tax comes to mind. They wanted us to get down to work on the issues that will set our province on an economic course that will allow them and their family members and their friends and their neighbours to get back to work. I for one and all my colleagues in the Official Opposition are more than willing to do this. We don't need distractions like these bills the NDP keeps bringing forward. We're here to better the lives of Albertans, and we intend to do that, so let's focus on the issues that matter the most to Albertans.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I want to begin by saying that I believe that the idea of getting rid of daylight savings time is a good idea, and I believe it's widely supported by Albertans. I also want to say that I understand the concern as it relates to being out of sync with other jurisdictions. I appreciate the good work of the committee and particularly of the sponsor of the bill that we are here to discuss today. It definitely reflects the hundreds of families that reached out to me in particular and others. I had about 300 people from Edmonton-Glenora contact me with feedback, and I believe it was nine that said that they wanted to keep daylight savings. I think that this is more complex, though, obviously, than the information that most individuals have at their hands. I respect what's being said about being out of sync with other jurisdictions, and obviously we don't want to do anything that could jeopardize our economic recovery.

We are set – by the way, Madam Speaker, I plan on saying this a lot in this Chamber, so this is my first shot – to see the strongest growth of any jurisdiction in Canada this year under this NDP government. I'm very, very proud of that. It is absolutely the right place and the right time for people to be investing in Alberta.

I agree that we shouldn't be moving forward without other jurisdictions being ready to follow suit with us because of that fragile position of our economy. Therefore, I'm of the opinion that the committee should find a way to give this another shot. The committee should find another way to engage with the New West Partnership. The committee should find another way to engage with the Western Governors' Association. We are part of so many different organizations that are engaged with other governors across this country as well as across North America, and I really am hopeful that Alberta will be in a position to lead those conversations.

4:40

Of course, I want to stay in step. Of course, I want to support those investments in continuing to come to Alberta, and I'm a little disappointed that the only recommendation is that we just don't do this work. I think it's important that we be leaders on this file, and I want to again thank the Member for Edmonton-South West for being a leader on this file. I understand what some of the precarity is, but I really do wish that the committee give it another shot and find a way to move forward with Albertans, who are definitely making a lot of their opinions very clear, as well as protect the economy and the investments. Doing that in a way that's in partnership with engaging, as I mentioned, the New West Partnership as well as the Western Governors' Association would be a reasonable way to do that, in my opinion.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. The member that brought forward this bill says that we need to be in step and that there are a bunch of states that are actually looking at this bill. I've got a sheet here in front of me that shows a lot of that that is going on. Colorado Bill 1226, to make daylight saving time year-round standard time, failed.

Mr. Gill: What?

Mr. Hanson: Yeah. Bill 1226 failed.

There's a whole raft of them here: Illinois, referred to committee; Iowa, referred to committee; Maine, died in the House; Mississippi, failed in committee; Mississippi, again failed in committee. It's been tried. Numerous attempts have been made, and some of these fall in the same time zone as us. Again, New Hampshire failed to adopt standard time. You know, it goes on and on and on. I really think that if we're going to take this step, we have to be – if we're going to be out of step with the rest of the jurisdictions south of us, east of us, and west of us, especially British Columbia, I think it's just a bit insane.

The time spent on committee – you know, there are a lot of us that don't live in Edmonton that do a lot of travelling when it comes to committee. People from Calgary drive up, or, you know, we phone in and sit on the line for hours and try to take part in these important discussions.

I think this is an important discussion. It was given a fair bit of time in the committee. A lot of people came and submitted. I mean, if we ignore the submission by the Calgary Airport Authority, where they say, "The YYC economic engine generates $8.28 billion in GDP" – this just seems like another attack on another industry in Alberta, and I think that in the last two years we've seen enough damage done.

The frustrating part is that while a lot of this was taking place – and I look at the money that was spent on consultation. I'm all for consultation, but the important issues of the day that were ignored while this was going on – the $10 billion debt, the projected $90 billion in deficit and debt coming forward – are the things that we should have been spending our time on.

While the money was being spent on this, a little program in the town of St. Paul – you know, we talk about not affecting front-line workers and front-line patients – called the STRIDES program was cancelled this summer. A lady came into my office crying with a letter saying that basically they were being thrown out in the street, and this program was dropped. When I started looking into it, it's like: man, this must be some huge money-saving program for this government. This affected people with brain injuries, gave them something to do every day, gave them something to get up for in the morning. You know what this thing was worth? Twenty-four thousand dollars. Cancelled by Alberta Health Services.

Ms Hoffman: You know how many of those you're going to have to cancel to find 20 per cent?

Mr. Hanson: Shameful. Shameful that you would even say that.

You know what? Dealing with some of this stuff in committees where we would get into a robust discussion and when the other committee members – I'll remind you that this committee decision was made by a majority of government committee members that voted unanimously for this. But I find it very frustrating a lot of times. It's like peeling balloons, right? It's just poof, and it's gone.

Where did I get that from? Well, when I was in high school, I read a book by Kurt Vonnegut called Cat's Cradle. In this book they talk about an island in the south Pacific where they had their own society called volcanism, and they had their own language. One of the words in that language was the word "granfalloon," and I think it describes this government in the way they handle committees perfectly. Basically, if you want to look it up on Wikipedia, it could help you out there. It says that one of the definitions is that it's a proud and meaningless collection of human beings. It is a group of people who effect a shared identity of purpose but whose mutual association is totally meaningless.

If we go and make decisions in committees and have unanimous decisions and somebody does a flip-flop and changes their mind on it, it basically is a waste of taxpayers' time and money. It's a waste of committee time. How are people supposed to be engaged? Who is going to come and present to our next committee when we open it up for the public to come in and submit? People take a lot of time. They put these proposals together. They take time out of their own businesses to come and present and to basically be – oh, well; we've changed our minds again – you know, left out in the cold.

We find it very frustrating that we would take this committee decision, again, that was voted on by a majority of the government committee members, all-party committee members that were there – the people that came and submitted really good submissions, talking about how $8.2 billion is nothing to sneeze at. That's down in Calgary. What are the people down in Calgary going to say when they see that, or even the Edmonton airport authority, that basically submitted the same type of proposal, that this is going to cost a lot of money? You know, those airports are constantly fighting to bring international flights into our area, and something like this just makes all their efforts look like a joke.

I would submit that we need to support the committee's recommendation on this, vote for this motion, and kill this bill. Until we can get a collaboration of all of the jurisdictions that we work with on a daily basis in this province, we don't need to put another nail in the coffin of Alberta and the economy of Alberta. We need to support the Alberta economy, airports, tourism, everything that goes with it.

That's about all I've got to say. I just hope everybody realizes that this decision was made, and we have to support our committees. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Gottfried: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm privileged and honoured, of course, to be a member of the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future, which was charged with addressing this Bill 203. You know, in my committee and subsequent public consultation roles in the subcommittee, which I was honoured to serve on as well, I was able to review and consider the various written and verbal submissions received from engaged and, in many cases, concerned Albertans and stakeholder groups.

One thing that struck me throughout the entire process was the lack of a clear mandate for change, in fact, the contrary, with much confusion, dissension, reasoned economic and logistical concerns being raised, and, yes, yes, a good number who also suggested that our clocks should never be changed again. In fact, it became clear and we must recognize that there are many factors at play in this issue, in fact too many for us to lead blindly into the unknown, possibly at great costs with respect to jobs and the economy, which must be first and foremost in our minds during these difficult times.

Yes, again, many of the written submissions received by the committee indicated a desire to abolish daylight saving time. However, even these submissions were split on what permanent time we should adopt. Do we make a permanent leap forward, do we take a risky step back or just maintain the status quo, or do we want to be bold and act as a global outlier with great risks attached to it?

During the live in-person consultation process, where we invited key stakeholders to present to the committee, the majority, in fact, were opposed to Bill 203. I kept my own record of that in Calgary and Edmonton specifically. As someone who has spent almost two decades in the airline industry myself with Hong Kong based Cathay Pacific Airways, it was no surprise to me to see such important transportation stakeholders as WestJet, Edmonton International Airport, Calgary airport, and Fort McMurray all opposing Bill 203 for strategic reasons, good reasons that could ultimately affect investment, employment, our global connectivity, and the building of strong passenger and cargo hubs that support Alberta trade, commerce, tourism, cultural exchanges, and prosperity.

4:50

Bill 203 would put Alberta two time zones away from B.C. during the winter months. WestJet specifically cited this as a serious, in fact a potentially critical concern in their plans for a regionally, continentally, and globally connected Alberta. Their representatives indicated that guests departing B.C. on a given morning through a Calgary or Edmonton hub that they worked so hard to establish would now have to depart at a highly inconvenient, perhaps traffic-killing 5 a.m. instead of 6 a.m. They expressed concern that this change would be unappealing enough to many of their customers, who may then choose alternate routings that bypass Alberta, possibly sending business to competitors south of the border, weakening our ability to focus on strategic growth in what I can assure you after 20 years is a highly competitive industry.

They went on to state:

This connecting traffic is [foundational] to the growth of WestJet's...

Yes, that proud Alberta company.

... hub in Calgary and continued expansion in Edmonton.

It also has a positive downstream impact on the strength of our services in Fort McMurray and Grande Prairie.

Bill 203 puts this growth at risk. Members, is that a risk that this Assembly is willing to take? I don't think so.

As you can see, one of Alberta's major employers and a global leader in civil aviation has a very real concern with this bill. I do not think it is wise to cast aside such concerns when the potential for negative impact is clear but the depth of that impact is absolutely unknown and perhaps unpredictable were we to take such an unjustifiable leap of faith. Or should I call it a flight of fancy?

All of the input from the thousands of written submissions, in-person stakeholder presentations, and public consultations were transparently available to all members of this committee and, in fact, all members of this Legislature, with attendant rationale, arguments, and emotional pleas when we as a committee made a unanimous recommendation not to proceed with Bill 203, which brings me to my next point. The Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future was tasked by this Legislature with reviewing Bill 203, the Alberta Standard Time Act, and returning to the Assembly with a clear recommendation. We have done this work, and, again, we unanimously passed a motion which indicated that Bill 203 should not proceed.

All parties and members were of course welcome and able to attend any of the committee meetings and offer their insights and input. We have now heard from many Albertans, Madam Speaker, and the only logical decision is clearly not to proceed given the uncertainty of costs versus benefits in any leap forward on this bill.

I think we all need to say our final piece, Madam Speaker, as Albertans. We need to respect the committee. We need to respect the members of that committee, the majority being from that side, and all of the people that worked hard on this and support the recommendation to now put aside Bill 203.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Fitzpatrick: Thank you, Madam Speaker. First of all, I'm going to say that I'm on the Economic Future Committee. I was on the subcommittee for this bill, and I listened to every single presenter at the meetings.

Now, I listened. I was part of the unanimous decision that this bill not proceed further, but there was a second recommendation from that committee, and that recommendation was that the government of Alberta engage other jurisdictions in Canada and the United States to discuss a co-ordinated approach to eliminating the practice of observing daylight saving time. I put that forward, and I put it forward because I listened to Susan Schneider when she came to the mike and she said that she hadn't even planned on coming to the mike to speak but she had to. She was somebody who had MS. She said that every time the clock changes, her body reacts both physically and psychologically because she has to adjust her medication. She said that it is a month of hell after she has to change that clock. Because of her I put that motion forward; this bill may die right now, but the issue cannot. It has to move forward because we represent Albertans, the Albertans like Susan. We have to consider every single part of this argument, and, let me tell you, I listened to every single submission.

I also listened to the people that came to my office. I did a little survey with my church choir. Of the 39 people in that choir 38 said to stop changing the clock. Of course the issue is: are we going to mountain or central? That is an issue that has to be discussed. It has to engage conversation with our neighbours, and it has to because we need to do it simultaneously. So I support the motion that the committee put forward for this bill not to proceed, but I also support the second recommendation, which is to engage our neighbours.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other members wishing to speak?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw to close debate.

Mr. Sucha: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'll be very brief on this. I do want to thank all the committee members. This was a very thorough review that commenced. As we move forward, it is important, as it was recommended, that we engage the jurisdictions moving forward with this process. I specifically can commit to the Legislative Assembly that I will be bringing this forth, amongst other items, including fighting for pipelines, when we are in PNWER this weekend. It will be one of the many focuses and dialogues that are happening. So the conversation will continue.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The Chair of the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future has requested concurrence in the report on Bill 203. Does the Assembly concur in this report? Say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed, say no. That motion is carried.

[The voice vote indicated that the committee report was concurred in]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:58 p.m.]

[Fifteen minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

For:

Aheer	Gottfried	Nielsen
Anderson, S.	Hanson	Orr
Anderson, W.	Horne	Phillips
Babcock	Hunter	Piquette
Carson	Jansen	Rosendahl
Ceci	Kazim	Sabir
Clark	Kleinstauber	Schreiner
Coolahan	Larivee	Shepherd
Cooper	Littlewood	Starke
Cortes-Vargas	McCuaig-Boyd	Stier
Dach	McIver	Sucha
Drever	McKittrick	Sweet
Drysdale	McPherson	van Dijken
Fitzpatrick	Miller	Westhead
Ganley	Miranda	Woollard
Gill

Against:

Dang	Hoffman	Malkinson
Eggen	Loyola	Turner
Totals:	For – 46	Against – 6

[The committee report was concurred in]

Motions Other than Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

World Interfaith Harmony Week

508. Ms Kazim moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to recognize the first week of February as World Interfaith Harmony Week in support of the United Nations General Assembly resolution 65/5.

Ms Kazim: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This motion has the objective of declaring the first week of February beginning in 2018 to be the annual United Nations World Interfaith Harmony Week. World Interfaith Harmony Week was proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly on October 20, 2010. The resolution highlights that mutual understanding and interreligious dialogue constitute important dimensions of a culture of peace and establishes World Interfaith Harmony Week as a way to promote harmony between all people regardless of their faith. World Interfaith Harmony Week aims to enhance mutual understanding, harmony, and co-operation among people, and the United Nations encourages all countries to support this valuable work.

I find it most appropriate in a time where misconceptions and misunderstanding lead to fear and hate crimes that we encourage harmony and understanding in Alberta when it comes to diversity, especially diversity in faith. Alberta, as the rest of Canada, has a diverse community. Here in Alberta we celebrate and share our diversity throughout the year. Here in Alberta we are proud of our diversity. In fact, here in Alberta our diversity is our strength. I'm very proud to be part of a government that supports communities and initiatives that promote interfaith and cultural harmony. We on this side of the House and, I hope, across the aisle, too, value diversity in our communities and in our province. That is why our government supports and encourages the mutual understanding, harmony, and co-operation among people through multiple initiatives.

In July the Premier tasked the Minister of Education with gathering input on ways the government can fight racism, foster acceptance, and promote an inclusive society. The minister, the Premier, and government MLAs have met with over a hundred community organizations to hear directly from them on what they are seeing and experiencing. After hearing their concerns about the challenges faced in their communities, the Minister of Education will report back on his findings and possible recommendations this fall.

Another way that we celebrate diversity in this province is through Alberta Culture Days, a three-day provincial celebration that raises awareness, accessibility, participation, and engagement of all Albertans in the arts and cultural life of their communities. The 10th anniversary of Alberta Culture Days happened last month, and our government provided grants to assist nonprofit organizations in becoming celebration sites to provide cultural programming.

The declaration of April 2017 as Sikh Heritage Month celebrates the contributions of Alberta's Sikh community to Alberta's cultural diversity and the richness of thoughts and ideas that Sikh Albertans contribute to our province.

This year Alberta became the fourth province in Canada to proclaim February as Black History Month. This month-long celebration recognizes the contributions of people of African and Caribbean descent and gives all Albertans the opportunity to learn more about the black experience in Alberta and hear amazing stories of struggle, of hope, and of triumph.

The Ministry of Culture and Tourism also provided $2 million in funding to commemorate the 150th year of the Confederation of Canada, Canada 150. This supported projects by nonprofit organizations that tied into the Canada 150 themes. Two of the four themes are: diversity, inclusion, and the building of common interests and relationships; and supporting efforts toward reconciliation of indigenous and nonindigenous Canadians. Adding such opportunities for Albertans from different faiths and backgrounds to come together strengthens the cohesion that exists in this province, but we know that there is still work to do. That is why we have been reaching out to communities across Alberta to gather their input on racism in Alberta and on the practical steps our government can take to fight racism, foster acceptance, and promote inclusion and diversity today, tomorrow, and for generations to come.

5:20

Our government is committed to listening to Albertans who are experiencing racism and hearing from them on how we can best work together on ways to fight it. I'm proud that our government is taking steps to combat racism, and I feel that interfaith harmony week will contribute towards the education and relationship building needed in combatting racism and intolerance.

This motion will keep building on the many supports that this government has shown and given to Albertans. It will provide the time and space to celebrate and help to create understanding of the many faiths that are practised in Alberta. It will celebrate Alberta's diverse ethnic, cultural, and religious communities. It will encourage dialogue and respect the equal rights and privileges of all.

This motion will celebrate diversity in our communities, enhance mutual understanding, promote harmony and co-operation, and inspire Albertans to practise one's religion, convictions, or beliefs without fear. Albertans will have a designated time to celebrate their faith and come together in a sharing and communing spirit.

I know how important this need is, having heard directly from the Calgary Interfaith Council on how participation in the UN World Interfaith Harmony Week builds bridges of respect and understanding amongst faith communities. In fact, the Calgary Interfaith Council launched its newly amalgamated organization in February 2017 with its participation in the UN World Interfaith Harmony Week. Earlier this year the Calgary Interfaith Council program was even awarded a prestigious gold medal interfaith harmony prize in Amman, Jordan, because of their work encouraging interfaith co-operation.

By declaring the UN World Interfaith Harmony Week, Alberta will join various communities across the globe and right here in Canada such as Nova Scotia and the cities of Halifax and Calgary, that already celebrate interfaith week. The province of Alberta will join millions across the world to celebrate what unites people in faith, love, and good actions.

I ask the members of this House to support my motion that urges the government to declare the first week of February, beginning in 2018, to be the annual United Nations World Interfaith Harmony Week. Let's build an opportunity for Albertans to come together and celebrate their faith. Together we will continue to build a successful province and make life better for Albertans regardless of their skin colour, immigration status, or faith.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Orr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise today to thank the member opposite for bringing this motion before us and also to speak in support of recognizing World Interfaith Harmony Week in our great province.

Albertans in many respects have been collaborating across faiths for decades in things like food banks and disaster relief, community building, elder care, things like that. But there are still challenges, and it's important for us to think about this and talk about it and recognize the intent of this motion. Having a formal day of recognition may bring more people to the table and inspire future collaborations, which would be a good thing.

I think it's important to say that Alberta has seen very little, relatively speaking to other places in the world, interfaith conflict, which really is the concern of an interfaith harmony week. In Alberta we've had relative interfaith peace, respect, and collaboration, but, tragically, it isn't always the case, and it hasn't been in the past, nor, I suspect, will it be in the future. I think we do need to emphasize the importance of always reminding ourselves about these things. The reality is that sometimes faith has been the point of conflict. Sometimes faith just gets blamed for economic and social conflict. Sometimes faith is twisted and used corruptly to create conflict. That's tragic because all faiths, in their true forms, seek peace, goodness, and kindness toward family and foreigner. Hence, support for World Interfaith Harmony Week to remind all people of faith to stay true to the virtues and the graces of their teaching is a worthwhile effort.

Just last week, Wednesday, I was at the Red Deer College 12th annual interfaith conference. The theme of this year's conference is particularly relevant to this motion today. It was Global Conflicts and the Need for Justice. Speakers were a visiting Jewish Israeli, a Roman Catholic from Edmonton, an imam from Ahmadiya Muslim Jama'at from Calgary, and two native elders from Maskwacis, all presenting very informative and positive ideas.

Alberta is actually, as has been referred to already, blessed with adherents of approximately 100 different religions or denominations or spiritual traditions, all of which, I believe, strengthen our province and continue to bring people to our province. Stats Canada data released in October shows that Alberta is becoming increasingly attractive as a place for newcomers to exercise both their personal and their religious freedoms. To quote Stats Canada:

Over the past 15 years, the share of recent immigrants in the Prairie provinces has more than doubled. The percentage of new immigrants living in Alberta rose from 6.9% in 2001 to 17.1% in 2016, a higher share [even] than in British Columbia.

Stats Canada goes on to say that moreover, many new immigrants chose to settle in areas with an established community from their [own] home country.

What Stats Canada may be overlooking there is that there are often forerunner folks who settle in communities alone where there may not be a large community of people from their home countries. For some of them it is actually often shared-faith communities that provide the support and the friendship and the connection from which to start out in the middle of a prairie province even when the common bonds of language and home country are not there.

For instance, in my constituency of Lacombe-Ponoka our community is enriched by the diversity of faiths represented in approximately 50 different cultural and faith communities: again, Stats Canada data. That includes various First Nations and Métis, Inuit, Acadian, various European origins, which I humbly share. We've welcomed Hindus from south Asia and the Caribbean; Muslims from Europe and the Middle East; Catholics from Asia, the Pacific islands, Central America and South America; Buddhists from the Far East; and of course the list goes on, far beyond that.

Lacombe has also been the home for over 100 years to a faith-based educational institution now called Burman University. I recently had the good fortune to join the Minister of Advanced Education there for the installation of a new president of this great institution. This faith academy community has greatly enriched the community of Lacombe and does so with deliberate intent to engage. As an ordained minister one of the greatest joys I've experienced is in seeing folks explore and express their faith, and in return I've received insights and affirmations from Albertans who may pray or believe differently or even not at all, quite frankly.

It's been my goal and, I believe, the goal of many community leaders to consider new ways to showcase the innovative ways in which working across faith brings people together in our communities. Community leaders, for instance, in Calgary, whose World Interfaith Harmony Week celebrations this year took first place among 79 entries world-wide, should be an inspiration to all of us as we work together toward goals of larger faith.

Encouraging and understanding and collaboration is where I believe that we as legislators can have a positive impact. As people with skills in legislation and policy we have opportunities to help nonprofit organizations such as places of worship to identify, reduce, and remove barriers that hinder or prevent them from understanding one another and/or working together in ways that are helpful. Whether those barriers are policies and governments that discourage different groups or governments around the world that in some way try to restrict them or limit them or whatever kinds of ways that hinder people and faith groups from trying to work together, whether it's uninformed stereotypes about other groups held by an unrepresentative few in a community, we need to speak out and help to reduce those kinds of barriers and misunderstandings.

5:30

A good example of collaboration here in the city of Edmonton is the Edmonton Interfaith Centre for Education and Action Society. They hold an annual interfaith exhibition to celebrate faith, again representing many aboriginal, Baha'i, Buddhist, Christian, Hindu, Jain, Jewish, Muslim, Quaker, Sikh, Unitarian, Zoroastrian, and other faiths.

But there remains much work to do, and we need to recognize that. We need to recognize and reconcile and heal historic rifts of faith around the world as well as here at home. As European colonists, including many of our ancestors, expanded westward in Canada, religious and government leaders sought to eradicate faiths of people indigenous to this land through residential schools and laws prohibiting practices of faith such as the potlatch and the sun dance. In so doing, government and religious officials left behind a legacy of broken communities, families, and individuals who were forced to abandon their culture and their faith.

Those actions taken in the name of religion continue to harm indigenous peoples today through intergenerational trauma; disproportionately high representation in the justice and child intervention systems; reduced opportunity; loss of culture, language, and faith; and diminished quality of life. While I don't think that we can go back and rewrite history or make different choices back then, working to improve understanding across faiths will help to prevent such tragedies and injustices from ever occurring again in the name of faith here or in other countries.

In light of an unfortunate and persistent and possibly growing climate of intolerance, prejudice, and even violence against people who express their faith around the world, the reasons why the UN General Assembly actually initiated the resolution for World Interfaith Harmony Week back in 2010, all of that remains especially relevant even today. As world leaders have said – I think of just a few: David Cameron, Angela Merkel, the Pope – and others have pointed out, the age of religious persecutions and martyrs is not over. Most data points out that Christians are the group most persecuted and killed for their faith in the world today. Muslims are the second most persecuted. But there are others also.

Some have called this the premier human rights challenge of our era, and I think it is a challenge for all of us even here in Alberta. For my caucus colleagues and myself, who are ourselves of diverse faiths and represent constituents of even more faiths, it is right to promote a culture of peace and goodwill with religious and cultural understanding, harmony, and co-operation of one another's religions and beliefs.

Mr. Stier: Madam Speaker, is there a 29(2)(a) opportunity?

The Deputy Speaker: No, not on this. This is a private member's motion.

The hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Ms McKittrick: Thank you, Madam Speaker, for the opportunity to rise today and speak to Motion 508. I am so pleased to see the Member for Calgary-Glenmore introduce this motion. I know that the MLA for Calgary-Glenmore has introduced this motion because it is something that she not only believes in but models through her work as an MLA. I want to take the opportunity to thank her for her leadership in this area, as I've witnessed in her work, in the things that she has said in this Assembly, and just how she has modeled the true meaning of intercultural harmony. So thank you.

I share with the MLA for Calgary-Glenmore and with many of my constituents the importance of having one's faith and beliefs respected and recognized. I have been to too many places in the world right after wars that have been caused due to religious intolerance. Knowing that there are so many different faith groups that are active in Alberta really underscores the importance of recognizing the United Nations World Interfaith Harmony Week here in Alberta. I understand that next year in Edmonton we're going to see an international congress around interfaith work, and I'm so pleased that this organization has chosen to come here to Alberta.

The United Nations General Assembly proclaimed World Interfaith Harmony Week seven years ago, and it has proven to be an effective way to recognize different faiths and promote harmony between all people regardless of their faith. It would be very fitting to see this week declared and recognized in Alberta, where we are so proud of our diversity.

I'm very proud of the diversity within our own caucus, where we come from many different ethnic backgrounds, faiths, sexual identities, marriages, young and old. We are really lucky to reflect the diversity of Albertans within our caucus. Like the Member for Calgary-Glenmore, I feel a great sense of pride to be part of a government that supports Alberta's faith and cultural communities and promotes interfaith and cultural harmony. In our efforts to stand up and reject intolerance and racism, it is vitally important that we do everything that we can to encourage harmony and understanding in Alberta when it comes to diversity.

Last week the Baha'i community celebrated the birth of their founder, Baha'ullah. Baha'is may not be well known in Alberta. Many have fled Persia and other countries due to persecution, and others became Baha'is through learning about the tenets of the faith. Baha'is believe in community service and in educating youth on the virtues of volunteerism, peacemaking, and not speaking ill of each other. Baha'ullah calls his followers to good deeds, kind words, upright conduct, service to others, and collaborative action. I can attest to how the Baha'is in my own constituency model these teachings and the legacy this has in our community.

Another example of how Albertans are involved in interfaith harmony is the recently held Christian-Muslim dialogue initiated by A Common World Alberta. On Saturday table discussions took place between Christians and Muslims following some very thought-provoking remarks by leading Muslim and Christian clergy. This event was funded by a diversity of groups with deep roots in interfaith dialogue, including the Mennonite Central Committee, the Intercultural Dialogue Institute of Edmonton, the city of Edmonton, and a number of mosques and churches. The vision of A Common World Alberta is: "As Christians and Muslims, we strive to create spaces for gatherings where our faith communities can engage each other in order to overcome stereotypes and embrace our differences."

This event was part of a week of meetings in various churches, university campuses, and mosques to promote dialogue and understanding. I know that through this event my colleagues from Edmonton-McClung and Edmonton-Mill Creek, like me, were provided with the opportunity to dialogue with Albertans who have deep faith and who, like this motion calls for, really believe in intercultural harmony.

Like my colleague, I am extremely proud of our government's antiracism initiative, led by the Minister of Education, and I think this initiative is going to have some very far-reaching things not only in our schools but through our community. I really would like to again thank the Premier for initiating this initiative.

Many Albertans, including some of my constituents, have taken the time to visit the government's website and share their perspective on how our government can support efforts to combat racism, foster acceptance, and promote an inclusive society. In Sherwood Park the Strathcona County Diversity Committee, which is a grassroots initiative, has provided leadership in promoting intercultural harmony, including ensuring that a new mosque in our community is welcomed. I look forward to the official opening of the masjid in the park and the welcoming place that this mosque will be in our community.

Creating opportunities for Albertans from different faiths to join together is an important way that we can strengthen the bonds that already exist in our community. Faith communities add vibrancy to our province, and the members of these communities contribute so much to Alberta. I believe that interfaith harmony week will remind us as Albertans that despite our differences, we have a shared proud history of coming together on our common values of the importance of family and devoting ourselves to our communities.

I would urge every MLA to buy the multifaith calendar. If you don't know where you can buy the multifaith calendar, please come and see me, and I'll be happy to give you the information on where you can buy it. This calendar is really key in doing what this week calls for, which is the promotion of intercultural harmony and, especially, learning more about other faiths.

Once again I would like to thank the Member for Calgary-Glenmore for making this motion and for providing a valuable opportunity for all of us to recognize people of different faiths, to learn more about each other's faith, and to see what we have in common.

Thank you very much.

5:40

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I first of all want to say thank you to the Member for Calgary-Glenmore. It's a real pleasure to rise and speak to this motion, and I would like to thank the member for bringing it forward. I love this motion.

World Interfaith Harmony Week: I mean, if you think about what that means, it encompasses so many things that are important to so many Albertans. It seems these days that we just can't get through a week without hearing about some horrific attack, some attack destroying the lives of hundreds of people around the world, and our hearts go out to everyone who is impacted. Unfortunately, these situations tend to hide behind the banners of faith and create fear and confusion around the world about what religion actually is, what it means to us, and what it stands for. I really believe that this motion goes a long, long way to fostering understanding between religions and really creating community and embracing faith and also the teachings of that faith.

I actually feel extremely blessed to have been born to a Hindu father and an Anglican mother. From my very first breath I've had the good fortune of a wealth of spiritual and cultural traditions that surround me. I've had the privilege of growing up with an array of religious beliefs and traditions. My family actually found some really magnificent ways to combine all of those different traditions.

For example, when my dad first arrived in Canada, this lovely woman whose name is Pansy and her husband, George, who became my Grandma Pansy and my Grandpa George, went to the airport – they didn't have children of their own – and took all of these young East Indian men that were just getting off the airplane and embraced them and brought them into Canadian culture and taught them about, you know, their life and Christmas and all of these other things. These young men were away from their family and their comfort and the food that they knew. They were vegetarians. They were coming to a cold country. All of a sudden this cute little woman from the IODE shows up at the airport and embraces 15 of them.

To this day – my dad is close to 80 – they're still friends. That's what community, that's what that interfaith, that exchange of ideas, is: sitting down and having a meal with somebody in a nonjudgmental way. That's what this motion really encapsulates for me, that feeling.

On the flip side, my mother, when she married my father in Edmonton here – she was part of the Centennial Singers; both my mother and father were – embraced the Indian culture and the Hindu traditions, having come from an Anglican background. Everything that I appreciate about my culture actually came from my mother. She taught me how to wear a sari. She cooked the south Indian food. She eats way spicier food than anybody. For being a little Irish woman, she's got a real good flair for spicy food. Those are all things that were a complete blessing, just having the natural coming together of my parents and having the blessing of growing up in that situation.

When I was 15 and a half, the Aryan Guard was really, really taking hold in Caroline, Alberta, and I remember receiving information that I was considered an abomination by the very nature of having been born from a mixed marriage. So it sort of started me down my path to having a political mind and being involved in politics at that time. It just goes to show you how things can be interpreted if we don't have the communities and the understandings of faith around us to be able to appreciate where all of us come from and that background. So I really, really appreciate this motion.

My Indian-Irish family background provided me with these amazing opportunities to explore and understand many faiths and traditions and the practice of those faiths, something that I take very seriously because I personally am a very spiritual person. I don't practise any particular faith, but I'm very respectful and understanding and honour other people's choices and their faith and how they practise. It gives life vibrancy, and for a lot of people it is their reason that they wake up every morning.

Because of my musical career as well, I've had the humungous privilege of singing in pretty much every kind of church you can imagine: at celebrations in my own culture; at Durga Pujas, which is a celebration of women in the Hindu culture; at midnight Masses celebrating the birth of Jesus. You know, with our careers and where we are here, we're also blessed and very, very fortunate to be invited to so many things that many of us would never be able to participate in if we didn't have the blessing of having this job.

I was really happy to be invited to the installation of Calgary's Bishop McGrattan. I've been invited to sweetgrass ceremonies with First Nations and to some of the more serious things: the Holodomor memorials, prayers at the Ismaili khane, pride Shabbat, Hindu temples. I mean, the list goes on and on. Again, I'm just so gratified that we're in a position where we actually get invited to these things and people want to share their faith and their culture with us, which I really think, again, embraces the idea of this particular motion.

I'm thankful to the Member for Calgary-Glenmore. I'm very grateful that you've tabled this motion. If it's passed, like you had said, Alberta will be the first jurisdiction in Canada to recognize the United Nations resolution for a world-wide week of interfaith harmony, that other jurisdictions have honoured since 2011.

There are a lot more reasons also why I'm very, very glad to see this motion coming from government. I have to say that this is very forward thinking on behalf of the Member for Calgary-Glenmore. She's obviously been listening to people and understands the importance of faith in our communities, especially when it feels at every turn that the government wants to undermine the very diverse faith traditions that we have and celebrate here in Alberta. On one hand, we hear the desire for diversity and the desire to incorporate people, and then, abysmally, the track has been that there's been this complete undermining of faith consistently in our society. I'm grateful that this member understood this in order to bring this motion to the floor, so thank you. Thank you so much for that.

It's very difficult coming into a situation like this, where in my lifetime – maybe I was just lucky that way. I didn't see a lot of things that made me question who I was other than the things that I've spoken about, and it's very important to speak up about those. When a government seems to actively be working in a divisive way to separate faith, to take that out and to critique it but, on the same hand, is going to bring a motion forward to honour that, you can understand why I might be a little bit confused. The government chooses to divide Albertans on the basis of religion instead of creating community. How is that possible? A motion is coming forward right now to speak about interfaith unity and harmony, but it seems that every single step of the way, no matter what happens, that divisive nature is the underlying feeling.

I have to say – this is really disappointing, and we brought this up in question period today – that the Premier and the Minister of Education have come out with unacceptable rhetoric, threats against the Catholics, but in the same breath we're having a motion put in front of us to honour faith and to honour harmony. The contradiction is absolutely appalling.

Mr. Gill: It's the height of hypocrisy.

Mrs. Aheer: It is. It's hypocritical.

Most notably, the Premier, you know, accused Catholics of supporting marital rape. The words coming out of my mouth – it's absolutely mind-boggling. I'm very grateful to the member for bringing this forward because, potentially, maybe the government will take this wonderful motion from this member and actually apply it to legislation. What a thought process. It's an excellent motion, but we would really like to see the application of that being brought forward.

The refusal to apologize. I'm not Catholic, but I cannot imagine that language being used in conjunction with a faith. There are bad people everywhere, in every faith, in every background, in everything, and to accuse a religion of having that mentality – I'm very, very glad that the member has brought this motion forward because maybe the Premier can learn a thing or two from the Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

5:50

I would like to know: when having a motion like this, that actually brings forward exactly how we all feel, exactly how we should move forward, how is it that the undermining process of this government is supporting communities and faith? That is actually a part of what was just said in the opening comments from the member. How can, on one hand, the government say that they support faith and then at the same . . .

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Tourism.

Miranda: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I want to thank the Member for Calgary-Glenmore for bringing this to the floor of the Assembly for discussion today, and I stand in support of her desire to declare the first week of every February as United Nations World Interfaith Harmony Week in Alberta.

Madam Speaker, we look at this Assembly and see members of many faiths. We look around our constituencies and see churches, mosques, synagogues, temples, and other places of worship that bring people together.

Madam Speaker, I'm proud to be an Albertan. I came to this country as a refugee in 1988 with my family. After arriving, we made our home in the beautiful constituency of Calgary-Cross, where we still live, a riding that is as diverse as they come, a riding that consists of Hindus, Sikhs, Buddhists, Muslims, Jews, Christians, atheists, indigenous traditions, and many, many more. All these great traditions and religions have this in common: they inspire us to meet need with compassion and charity, to give of ourselves in service to others, and to achieve the highest level of personal integrity and conduct. Those shared principles should lead all faiths to live together and in harmony.

In my Ministry of Culture and Tourism Alberta Culture Days is one of our largest celebrations of the arts, heritage, culture, and community. Through Culture Days for the past 10 years more than 800 communities from all over the province have come together to increase awareness, accessibility, participation, and engagement of Canadians to talk about their communities.

Mosques, temples, synagogues, and churches have all played a huge role in shaping this as well, be it the Baitun Nur mosque in Calgary or the community dining kitchens, the langars, in Calgary Sikh temples – I learned about their many charitable activities and their members' commitment to building caring communities of hope and faith – be it the festivals of Diwali by lighting the diyas, the candles, and the fireworks, lighting the candles of the hanukkah, or sharing a meal with friends on Eid and taking time for prayer and renewing our commitment to help each other. Acknowledging and celebrating these moments reaffirms the good done by people of all faiths to build a more equal, welcoming, and inclusive community and province.

Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, we have seen in recent actions around the world and, in fact, in our province and even in my own constituency of Calgary-Cross that hatred, bigotry, and intolerant behaviour still exist. Albertans continue to face anti-Semitism, Islamophobia, racism, homophobia, transphobia, and, in fact, many other forms of discrimination. There are still victims of hate crimes and vandalism simply because of their religion and ethnicity. I'm sad to say that twice in the last year we have seen hate crimes in my own constituency. The last instance saw a swastika etched into a car that was set on fire. This is extremely heartbreaking but does not represent my community at all, and I'm proud to say that.

Madam Speaker, there are people out there who want to divide Albertans, people who want to demonize Albertans from different cultures and faiths, people who fearmonger, pander to the extremes, and try to put Albertans down for being who they are. Well, I will say that this is not who we are as Albertans or what we believe in. Albertans believe that our diversity makes us stronger. We believe in a caring, inclusive, safe, and equal province for all. Albertans believe in moving forwards, not backwards. Albertans believe that it does not matter if you're Jewish, Christian, Sikh, or Muslim. We are in a province where all faiths and cultures are welcome and can live and work together to promote acceptance, raise our families, and contribute meaningfully to our great province.

I am proud to be part of a government that actively supports and encourages religious and cultural diversity by, for example, declaring Sikh Heritage Month, recognizing Yom ha-Shoah, Holocaust Memorial Day. Our government encourages understanding and acceptance by reaching out to thousands of Albertans about antiracism strategies to help foster acceptance and promote diversity, showcasing Alberta heritage all the way, providing funding to support Canada 150 projects with themes that include diversity, inclusion, and building common interests and relationships.

Madam Speaker, religious acceptance must continue to be a fundamental feature of our multicultural society, and our government is working to make life better for Albertans by supporting a culture of acceptance, inclusion, and harmony. In the spirit of that, I ask the members of this Assembly to support the motion to declare the first week of February 2018 and the very first week of February each year after to be recognized in Alberta as United Nations World Interfaith Harmony Week in treaties 6, 7, and 8.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other members wishing to speak? Edmonton-Mill Creek.

Ms Woollard: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I know I don't have long. I'll just say a few things about it. I'm really pleased, as are so many others, to see the Member for Calgary-Glenmore introduce this motion. I've heard from many constituents in my constituency especially. I find that, on consideration, one of the biggest privileges of being elected has been to get to know some of the many diverse religions and cultural groups in my constituency.

As a previous colleague was talking about, there are so many groups coming along to try to encourage connections between the different groups. Their function is to establish what common grounds we have between our various groups, and they're wonderful. This event on Saturday was, I think, the second I've gone to, and I walked in the door and immediately knew so many people from previous years and from so many great groups. It isn't that you walk in and stay with your own particular cultural group. People don't do that. They are actively looking at ways to establish common ground.

Another event I went to recently that made a huge impact was called the Tea Connection. In my constituency it is a very grassroots endeavour to get people from all different organizations and, basically, newcomer groups to come together to support each other. They can practise English, and they can get information on how to use local transportation, so many different things that aren't kind of covered in any of the more formal programs that they get together to do.

What made an impact is that one of the older members of this group was having a birthday, and to celebrate it, her son had come with a cake. The group of people there decided to sing Happy Birthday, so Happy Birthday was sung in English. Then it was suggested that we sing it in French, and that was done. A third member volunteered to sing it in Hindi, which was beautiful. Finally, our member from the local Edmonton public library sang it in Ukrainian.

It was just a wonderful event, and it really illustrated that there are things happening all the time. This is an endeavour to keep it going, to reinforce it, to encourage that we keep the voice going, that we keep the connections being made.

That's about it. I'm really proud of the antiracism initiative being led by the Minister of Education. Every time there is an antiracism event, I love to hang around because I meet members of my constituency going in or going out, and they talk about how pleased they are, sometimes for the first time since they've been in Canada, to be involved in an organization, in a group that's talking about some of the challenges that people have in interacting with the kind of broader community and how they can help make . . .

The Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt, hon. member, but pursuant to Standing Order 4(2) the House stands adjourned until 10 tomorrow morning.

[The Assembly adjourned at 5:59 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Prayers	1595
In Memoriam
Mr. Edwin LeRoy Fjordbotten, November 4, 1938, to June 8, 2017	1595
Mr. Leonard Clarence Bracko, December 2, 1943, to August 19, 2017	1595
Mr. Bruce John Collingwood, May 16, 1953, to August 28, 2017	1595
Statements by the Speaker
Leader of the Official Opposition	1595
Rotation of Questions and Members' Statements	1599
Parliamentary Secretaries	1599
Reusable Cups in the Chamber	1599
Introduction of Visitors	1595
Introduction of Guests	1596
Ministerial Statements
Member for Calgary-Lougheed	1597
Oral Question Period
Pipeline Approval	1599
Carbon Levy and Pipeline Approvals	1600
Trans Mountain Pipeline Construction	1600
Official Opposition Health Care Finance Policies	1601
Federal Small-business Tax	1601
Federal Small-business Tax on Farm Operations	1602
Educational Curriculum Redesign	1602
Cannabis Distribution	1603
Catholic School Sex Education Curriculum	1603
Oil Sands Advisory Group Membership	1604
Official Opposition Postsecondary Educational Finance Policies	1604, 1605
Pipeline Approval and Construction	1605
First Nations Development Fund Grant Oversight	1606
Electricity Power Purchase Arrangement Lawsuit	1606
Members' Statements
High School in Edmonton-South West	1607
United Conservative Party	1607
Supervised Opioid Consumption Sites	1608
United Conservative Party	1608
Diversity and Inclusivity in Alberta	1608
United Conservative Party	1609
Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees	1609
Presenting Petitions	1609
Notices of Motions	1609
Motions under Standing Order 42
National Energy Board Act	1610
Pipeline Approval Assessments	1613
Introduction of Bills
Bill 19 An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers	1610
Bill 20 Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act	1610
Tabling Returns and Reports	1610
Orders of the Day	1614
Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders
Motion to Concur in the Report from the Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future	1614
Bill 203 Alberta Standard Time Act	1614
Division	1620
Motions Other than Government Motions
World Interfaith Harmony Week	1620

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Tuesday morning, October 31, 2017

Day 46

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (NDP), Speaker
Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (NDP), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (NDP), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (UCP),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (NDP)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (UCP)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (NDP)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (UCP)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (NDP)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (NDP)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (NDP)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (NDP)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (UCP)
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (NDP),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (UCP)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (NDP)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (NDP)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (NDP)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (UCP)
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (NDP)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (UCP)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (NDP)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (Ind)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (NDP)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (Ind)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (NDP)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (NDP)
Gotfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (UCP)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (NDP)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (UCP)
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (NDP)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (NDP)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (NDP)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (UCP)
Jansen, Hon. Sandra, Calgary-North West (NDP)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (UCP)
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (NDP)
Kleinstuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (NDP)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (NDP)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (NDP)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (UCP)
Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (NDP)

Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (NDP)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (UCP)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (NDP)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (NDP)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (UCP),
Official Opposition Whip
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (NDP)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (NDP)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (AP)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (NDP)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (NDP)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (NDP)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (UCP),
Leader of the Official Opposition,
Official Opposition House Leader
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (UCP)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (UCP)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (NDP)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (NDP)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (NDP)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (NDP)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (UCP)
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (NDP)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (NDP)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (NDP)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (UCP)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (NDP)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (NDP)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (NDP)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (UCP)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (UCP)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (UCP)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (NDP)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (UCP)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (NDP)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (UCP)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (NDP),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (NDP)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (UCP)

Party standings:

New Democratic: 54 United Conservative: 27 Alberta Party: 2 Alberta Liberal: 1 Progressive Conservative: 1 Independent: 2

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk
Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of
House Services
Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel
Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services
Nancy Robert, Research Officer
Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms
Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms
Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms
Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Sandra Jansen	Minister of Infrastructure
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

Parliamentary Secretaries

Jessica Littlewood	Economic Development and Trade for Small Business
Annie McKittrick	Education

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabbour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

10 a.m.

Tuesday, October 31, 2017

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Deputy Speaker: Good morning.

As we begin another day's work here, help us to proceed with the respect and honour this House deserves, filling our hearts and minds with wisdom and determination to always do what is right for our constituents in this province and always remembering that for a society to be truly healthy, democratic, and prosperous, we must first care for the weakest and most vulnerable amongst us.

Please be seated.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader.

Constituency Week

27. Ms Ganley moved on behalf of Mr. Mason:
Be it resolved that, notwithstanding the calendar filed with the Clerk pursuant to Standing Order 3(5), the constituency week for the 2017 fall sitting shall be held the week of November 20, 2017, with the Assembly reconvening on Monday, November 27, 2017.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. By way of background I can indicate that the motion proposed is moving the constituency week, originally set for the week of November 13, to the following week. This change would allow for greater participation of MLAs in AAMD and C and AUMA conventions in the coming weeks. I should indicate here for the information of all members that in a few minutes I intend to move Motion 29, which addresses the fact that moving the constituency week would result in a loss of Monday business.

The Deputy Speaker: Any members wishing to speak to this motion?

[Government Motion 27 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader.

Morning Sitting Adjournment

28. Ms Ganley moved on behalf of Mr. Mason:
Be it resolved that on Thursday, November 9, 2017, the morning sitting of the Assembly stand adjourned at 10:45 a.m.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. This change is being made to accommodate Remembrance Day ceremonies scheduled to take place in the rotunda at 11 a.m.

The Deputy Speaker: This motion is not debatable.

[Government Motion 28 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader.

Morning Sitting Items of Business

29. Ms Ganley moved on behalf of Mr. Mason:
Be it resolved that, notwithstanding Standing Order 8(2), during the morning sitting on Tuesday, November 14, 2017, the only item of business for consideration of the Assembly shall be Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. As the members know, the Assembly does not sit on November 13 due to Remembrance Day. When the opposition were consulted about moving the constituency week as per Motion 27, it was pointed out that this would result in the loss of Monday to deal with private members' business. Motion 29 is aimed to address that fact by ensuring that private members' bills are dealt with on Tuesday morning, November 14.

The Speaker: Any other members wishing to speak to this motion?

[Government Motion 29 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader.

Morning Sitting Adjournment

30. Ms Ganley moved on behalf of Mr. Mason:
Be it resolved that on Thursday, November 16, 2017, the morning sitting of the Assembly stand adjourned at 10:45 a.m.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. This time change is being made to accommodate Louis Riel Day ceremonies, which take place in the rotunda at 11 a.m.

Thank you.

[Government Motion 30 carried]

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 20

Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead on behalf of the hon. minister of environment.

Mr. Rosendahl: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Today I move second reading of Bill 20, Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act, on behalf of the minister.

This bill will allow for the approval of two interbasin transfers from the North Saskatchewan River basin to the Beaver River basin, and this bill is a plan to make life better for all Albertans.

These interbasin transfers will allow Whitefish Lake First Nation and the hamlet of Mallaig in St. Paul county to connect to regional waterlines in order to address long-running issues with drinking water in their communities. Clean drinking water should be seen as a basic human right, and the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act is an important step towards solving drinking water issues in these communities.

Interbasin transfers are not to be taken lightly. The Water Act requires that any licence which transfers water between major river basins in Alberta be authorized by a special act of the Legislature. All western provinces have legislation that prohibits transfers between major river basins with some exceptions allowed. Since 2003 five interbasin transfers have been authorized in Alberta by a special act of the Legislature. All five were potable waterline extensions to rural communities. This is why our government introduced Bill 20.

Both St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation explored multiple options, and connecting to the regional waterline was determined to be the best solution to address their drinking water challenges. To ensure a safe, reliable supply of drinking water for their residents, both communities have requested that the province approve an interbasin transfer, allowing them to extend existing regional waterlines.

Whitefish Lake First Nation looked at five options prior to pursuing an extension of an existing potable water pipeline from the highway 28/63 regional water commission in the North Saskatchewan River basin. The highway 28/63 regional water commission received $20.66 million from our government's United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples/First Nations regional tie-in project fund. That was quite a mouthful; anyway, I got through it. An additional $1.98 million was committed by the federal government to complete the waterline connection to the reservoir on the reserve.

Of course, environmental impacts were considered prior to introducing this bill. Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation are small communities, and the North Saskatchewan River is a reliable source of water, with an average annual volume of approximately 7.5 billion cubic metres flowing through Edmonton.

The existing municipal allocation held by EPCOR to provide drinking water throughout the capital region totals close to 200 million cubic metres. The proposed transfer for St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation would total 600,000 cubic metres. Environment and Parks confirms that the additional transfer of drinking water will have no measurable effects on the North Saskatchewan River. Consultation has been conducted, and both proposed interbasin transfers are widely supported among the stakeholders.

St. Paul county also specifically engaged a water rate policy on the upcoming water rate increase for Mallaig residents prior to engaging in the regional waterline connection project. Mallaig residents will receive three months' notice that the water rate will be raised to match the two other hamlets in St. Paul county that already receive EPCOR-treated water via the regional waterline. This is in addition to written notice from the county in January 2017 regarding the county's move to full-cost recovery water rates that come into effect as of March 2017.

10:10

Provincial and federal grant funding for the project will help ensure that St. Paul county's water rate is the same as other users on the highway 28/63 regional waterline. There is no water rate increase anticipated for the residents of Whitefish Lake First Nation.

Alberta's water for life strategy sets the stage for a new way of working with Albertans to ensure safe, reliable, and quality water supplies for a sustainable environment and a growing economy. Water for life is centred on the achievement of three goals: safe, secure drinking water; healthy aquatic ecosystems; and reliable, quality water for a sustainable economy.

Approving the interbasin transfers would support the water for life strategy and is a key priority to providing safe and reliable drinking water on-reserve as part of the implementation of the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples.

I hope the House will support Bill 20, thereby providing the necessary approval for the interbasin transfers for both communities. It's important to note that both river basins are open for allocation, so there is no impact to the other licence holders.

Following the approval of the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act, two water licences will be issued under the Water Act, one licence to the county of St. Paul and the other to the highway 28/63 regional water commission to provide water to the Whitefish Lake First Nation. The Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act includes the maximum amount of water allocated to each community on an annual basis.

I hope all members of the House will see the value of allowing these interbasin transfers to secure a reliable source of drinking water for residents of Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation. This solution has widespread stakeholder support. The environmental impact study identified no concerns regarding the long-term health of the North Saskatchewan River. Both projects leverage federal funding.

If approved, the county of St. Paul and the highway 28/63 regional water commission will be responsible for construction, operation, and maintenance following completion of the pipelines.

I'm very proud to move second reading of Bill 20. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Good morning. I rise this morning to speak in favour of Bill 20, the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act. This act, if passed, would allow for the transfer of water from the North Saskatchewan River basin to the Beaver River basin through two water pipelines. One pipeline will connect the Ashmont water treatment plant to Mallaig, and the other will tie into the existing Highway 28/63 Regional Water Services Commission waterline between the village of Vilna and the hamlet of Spedden and run north to Whitefish Lake First Nation.

The Water Act states in section 47: "A licence shall not be issued that authorizes the transfer of water between major river basins in the Province unless the licence is specifically authorized by a special Act of the Legislature." Bill 20 fulfills this requirement.

Mallaig is a hamlet in the county of St. Paul which currently obtains its drinking water from nearby groundwater sources. While there are no immediate concerns with Mallaig's water source in terms of quality, the water source that Mallaig draws from has seen its levels decrease in recent years to the point where it is quickly becoming critical that they find a long-term replacement. The groundwater source that the community is currently using is simply not able to sustain the expected population in years and decades to come. Mallaig's current water treatment process meets health requirements, but the North Saskatchewan River basin water that they will be receiving through the pipeline is of higher quality.

The Whitefish Lake First Nation, on the other hand, is facing a slightly more critical issue. They currently draw their water from a nearby lake which has recently seen a measurable and escalating decrease in its water level. This is due to the lake's inability to naturally recover the water that the community draws from it. This drop in water level is concerning not only from an environmental standpoint, but more importantly it has resulted in increased parts per million of carcinogenic contaminants that exceed recommended levels.

While it doesn't present a short-term health problem, it is critical that the Whitefish Lake First Nation switch to the much higher quality North Saskatchewan River basin water without delay. I think that in our society, in a first-world country, it's expected that we would have good water for the people of Alberta. The sooner the community switches, the sooner the lake they draw from will begin its water level recovery, which will undoubtedly bring ecological benefits to the lake and the surrounding community.

The UCP caucus supports Bill 20 and looks forward to passing it as quickly as possible so as to not delay the construction of these two important water pipelines. Clean, reliable drinking water is vital to maintaining a healthy and successful community, and Bill 20 ensures that the Whitefish Lake First Nation and the hamlet of Mallaig have access to a high-quality and sustainable potable water source for many, many years to come. Section 47 of the Water Act mandates that any transfer of water from one river basin to another must be approved through a special act of the Legislature. Again, Bill 20 fulfills that requirement.

Another reason why this should be passed without delay is that Bill 20 has the support of the municipalities in the area. Since the proposed pipelines are being built on existing rights-of-way, the project minimizes the negative impact on area property owners. When it comes to the cost of the pipelines, the money has already been approved at all necessary levels of government. This is a shovel-ready project.

The pipeline that will service Mallaig is budgeted to cost $10.2 million, with $4.75 million to come from the federal government, $4.75 million from the provincial government, and the remaining $700,000 to come from the local municipality. The pipeline that will service the Whitefish Lake First Nation is budgeted to cost $22.6 million, with $20.66 million being paid for by the provincial government and the remaining $1.8 million being paid for by the federal government. The federal government's portion covers the cost of the pipeline being built on federal and reserve land.

Lastly, I'd like to address the issue of availability of water in the North Saskatchewan River basin. I know that some of my colleagues from southern Alberta have been dealing with a shortage of available water and that in some places the shortage of water has even started to impact their community's ability to grow and expand. According to Alberta WaterPortal the annual discharge of the North Saskatchewan River is 7.3 million cubic decametres. The total amount of water being transferred between the North Saskatchewan River and the Beaver River basins in Bill 20 is 601.1 cubic decametres, which represents just eight one-thousandths of 1 per cent of the annual North Saskatchewan River discharge, not much at all, obviously. Now, the Beaver River basin flows into Hudson Bay, and the North Saskatchewan River also flows into Hudson Bay via Lake Winnipeg.

I'd like to thank you and urge all of my colleagues on both sides of this House to support Bill 20.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Bill 20, on the face of it a logical and sensible and, obviously, critical thing to do for health and for sustainability of communities, including a First Nations community. I want to add my caution, though, to that of the mover of this bill. The reason these bills come to the Legislature is because it's a big decision. Transferring water from one basin to another has costs, and it has benefits.

10:20

I don't think we in the Legislature necessarily appreciate the costs of continuing to transfer water from one basin to another. We've had five in the past. I was part of those decisions. They were in southern Alberta and related to some groundwater quality issues and quantity issues.

I think it behooves us to think about why we are continuing to have to provide interbasin transfers, which have some ecological risks. Those are contamination of certain species going into another ecosystem and potentially becoming invasive species, overriding certain species of fish, dominating the fish mix, and certain potential toxins, obviously, whether plant toxins or industrial toxins.

So there's that dimension, and there's the other dimension, which has to do with whether we're conserving appropriately the water that we're currently using in a particular basin.

The third aspect is: do we understand what's happening to our groundwater? Why is the groundwater declining in that area? What are the factors that are contributing to its decline? Is it population demand, agricultural demand? Is it industrial demand? Is it a failure to conserve in places where we could be conserving?

Are we seeing the kinds of issues related to the Rosebud area, where fracking and coal-bed methane actually contaminated quite a significant number of people's groundwater wells and therefore required trucked-in water and eventual new sources of water for these folks? What do we know about our groundwater? What do we know about what's happening, especially in the new shale gas developments? We seem to have learned nothing from the 2006 fiasco in Rosebud, where after all this volume and this gas was coming up in people's water wells, we suddenly realized that we didn't know what the baseline gas was in those wells because we hadn't been doing baseline groundwater monitoring.

We did 12,000 samples in that area, and 10 years later we don't have meaningful results from those groundwater tests because the sampling techniques were different, the laboratories were different, the standards were different, and we can draw almost no conclusions from that whole Rosebud fiasco. Are we doing baseline groundwater monitoring now in relation to the shale gas developments? No. We're leaving it up to the industry to decide whether groundwater is being protected or not, and only on complaints do we actually get in there and sample the water.

So I have serious concerns about our groundwater. I'm not saying that this particular transfer is wrong. I'm saying that we haven't yet taken seriously the growing threat to both surface and groundwater in terms of our demands: agricultural, industrial, residential, municipal. We haven't taken seriously the fact that, especially in the southern and eastern parts of this province, we're headed for real trouble with climate change. We don't know what we should know about our groundwater, we don't know what the industrial impacts are, and I don't think any of us believe that we're conserving our water and using it to the best available opportunities.

Again, a note of caution that these issues come to the Legislature because we have the final say, and I don't know how much information we have to make these decisions. We continue to pass them. This will be the sixth interbasin transfer. I don't know if we're asking the right questions of our ministry, and that includes the Energy ministry because the industrial activity in this province is second to none under the surface. Over 450,000 wells puncture through our water tables, and we don't know what we need to know.

I met with a groundwater expert last week at the University of Calgary. He's still trying to sift through and get some semblance of conclusions, some reliable conclusions from those 12,000 samplings that were done in 2006 and '07 in the Rosebud area. He's having a great deal of difficulty because of the problems I mentioned.

We don't know the volumes of water available in our groundwater, which is the ultimate source of our surface water. We need to start asking some hard questions of our Energy and Environment ministries and ensure that we know what we're leaving for the next seven generations.

I will be supporting this transfer but with great concern that we don't know what we need to know to make these decisions. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Under 29(2)(a), any questions or comments?

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'm very proud to stand up today and speak to Bill 20. It's been something that's been on my mind and on the mind of our council out in St. Paul for quite some time. The project has been something that has been talked about and planned for quite a few years, so it's really good to see it come through in this fall session so that they can get to work on this project and finish the final leg of it.

It's very important that we do respect the Water Act and these clauses that try to protect the interbasin transfers. I know from my previous life in the industry that when major pipelines are being built all the way across the province, north and south and east and west, whenever they come to transfer water across, they're not allowed to do that. They have to do their hydro testing and keep that water on that side. So I do respect the reasons for having this part of the legislation and part of the Water Act.

However, the fact that our northern communities are isolated doesn't mean that they should be living in substandard conditions, and I speak specifically to the Whitefish Lake First Nation. They're a very viable, vital community up there. You know, they're doing great things. They've got some great education programs, trying to get their youth trained up for industry work in scaffolding and other areas.

I know that one of the other issues that they have is busing. A lot of the students from Whitefish Lake are bused to Ashmont. This waterline is a step in the right direction, and the next one that we're going to have to work on is – and I see the minister shaking his head. You know, there are times when the kids miss a whole week of school because of muddy roads or snowy roads. That's another one that we're going to have to deal with, but this waterline is a step in the right direction.

As well, I'm sure that people have heard me speak about Mallaig quite often. They host Haying in the 30s every long weekend in August, where they raise money for cancer support groups. They do a wonderful job there. It's a very, very unique community, one of the few that's actually growing out in that area of the county. There are some beautiful homes in there. This is just another thing that's going to help make them a more attractive place for young families to move to.

I really support Bill 20, and I hope everybody else does as well.

One thing I'd like to add is that the waterline currently ends at Ashmont, and it's completely legal to pull up to the water station at Ashmont and fill a truck with 4,000 litres of water and drive to Mallaig and put it into a cistern. You know, the pipeline is just going to serve to make it easier to do those water transfers.

I don't see a real issue from an environmental standpoint. The amount of water that we're dealing with here is not that substantial that it's going to cause any real grief to the Beaver River watershed.

I would hope that everybody, you know, recognizes the importance of fresh, clean drinking water at Whitefish Lake and Mallaig. I think that they deserve and have a right to it, just like any other Albertan does. So whatever we can do to push this bill through as quickly as possible so that we can carry on with this project would be much appreciated by the county of St. Paul. I know that for sure.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)? The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'd like to start by thanking the opposition for standing up and supporting this bill. It's obviously a very important bill, and I, too, will speak to it in a few moments.

I just want to note that this is $20 million out of the $100 million coming from the budget this year to enhance water to communities, and I know that you support all of that. I'm just wondering if the member can speak to the fact that they voted against the budget and here we are in this place, where the actual fruits of the budget are being discussed, and they're voting in favour of it. I just wonder if you might somehow articulate how it is that you're working with the communities to enhance the things that we absolutely, obviously agree on in terms of the benefits to the community, agree on in terms of the need to have communities live in the modern time, you know, with fair and just services, as every other community in Alberta would rightly expect, as you do as well, and then at the same time vote against the very budget that allowed the money for this to happen. I'd just like to hear how you would justify that.

10:30

The Deputy Speaker: Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Mr. Hanson: Thank you. Thank you for the question. Yeah. Indeed, we did vote against the budget. We voted against a $10 billion deficit and ever-growing debt in the province that our children and grandchildren are going to have to pay for. This project is very much needed, and it's a very small piece of the pie. I really appreciate that the government has put this money in because I think Whitefish Lake absolutely deserves this and the hamlet of Mallaig absolutely deserves this, like I said.

The road construction project that I talked about as well: I mean, it's going to take a lot of money, and it's going to take collaboration between the federal government and the provincial government. This is what we're here for, to push forward these projects and make sure our communities are viable and that they have the rights and the drinking water that they need. So, yes, you know, we can vote against a deficit budget and still support community programs that are needed.

An Hon. Member: No. You can't.

Mr. Hanson: Yeah. We can. We just did.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you very much. I appreciate that comment. I'm just wondering if I can ask the hon. member whether we can anticipate that in the next budget coming forward, you will speak favourably in terms of our increasing the provincial budget in order to provide roads for indigenous people in this province.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, do you wish to respond?

Mr. Hanson: Madam Speaker, thank you very much for the question. I will not be voting in favour of any budget that increases the debt load on future generations of Albertans, period. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, any other speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to stand in this Chamber and support Bill 20, the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act. Many of you in this House will have heard me speak about my roots from small-town Alberta, from the village of Thorhild. I'm quite familiar with what living with groundwater supply is like. Thorhild for many, many decades, even when I was a child until I probably was in my teen years, relied upon well water, and the whole community had a reservoir from which they drew their water. I know that home movies will testify as to the quality of that water. When siblings and I were bathing, we had home movies taken, and there were comments when people see them because the water is yellow. It was yellow coming right out of the tap because of the organics that were in it. People are shocked now to see that that water quality was acceptable back then.

Ultimately what happened was that the city of Edmonton water supply eventually was brought to Thorhild and some other surrounding villages and communities, and it really improved the quality of life for that village. The water was less and less desirable, and it ultimately got to the point where they demanded something be done, and finally it happened. It was actually an extension of a city of Edmonton waterline that went out to Thorhild and other communities which were relying on well water that wasn't up to the standard that most of us in Alberta in more urban situations expect.

Many people had their own wells, of course, in town, but in my grandmother's case that well in Thorhild was one that was only for vegetable washing. That was all you could use that water for. The rest of it was well water from a reservoir that everybody used. But the quality of life of the whole community changed when they could turn on a tap and have a reliable source of water that didn't smell like peat moss, as their source of water in Thorhild did. So I'm sure the communities of Mallaig and Whitefish Lake will benefit in a similar way from this water transfer.

But I agree with the Member for Calgary-Mountain View that we definitely must take seriously the concerns about water transfer between basins. Water is life, but also there are things to be concerned about when you are transferring between basins. That was taken into account prior to this legislation being brought forward.

It's not every day that a water basin transfer happens or takes place. It was noted by other speakers before me that there have only been five such transfers since 2003, which indicates that it's very seriously considered before a decision is made to go ahead and do an interbasin transfer. These transfers are done to really raise the quality of life of the communities that they're proposed to serve. There is a good reason why the transfer has to come before us in the Legislature for approval; it is a serious thing to do, to have an interbasin transfer.

I know that the government consulted with other stakeholder groups, and this was determined to be the best way to move forward. I can only imagine what the people of Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation are thinking about in anticipation of having a higher level of water quality available to them in the near future.

The fact that we're going ahead with this is a moment to celebrate, but it's something that we also have to take a look at in respect of the whole picture of water quality in Alberta. I do agree with other speakers. Knowing that water is life and conservation is important and groundwater quality is important, this government is taking those thoughts into their consideration in a longer term picture. We certainly are aware in this province of the value of our water resources and the need to look at a long-term measure to protect them. I think that in the shorter term we must also act in the interests of the communities we are serving in other more rural areas of the province so that they are not denied the health and quality of the water supply that most Albertans take for granted in their more urban settings.

St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation have already been looking at options for years and applying for funds to make these waterlines a reality. I know that it was years ago that Thorhild was looking to do the same thing. I think that in the future when we do see these types of situations occurring, we should probably see what we can do to expedite the new supply of water for communities where we can within budgetary limitations. It's such an important consideration for the quality of life of the communities and the people in them that we serve. It behooves us to see if we can speed up the process where there is a demonstrated need for a higher quality of water when the current supply of water is dwindling over time.

Now, it's a testament to the work and vision of this government and the federal government that funding is already in place for both projects. We've heard that St. Paul county has $9.5 million in funding from the province and the federal government. They must spend the federal funding by March 2018, or it will expire. The highway 28/63 regional water commission received $20.66 million from our government's United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples/First Nations regional tie-in project fund. An additional $1.98 million was committed by the federal government to complete the waterline connection to the reservoir on-reserve. It's truly the case, Madam Speaker, of citizens, municipalities, regional organizations, the provincial government, and the federal government all working together.

I know, Madam Speaker, that our government also thinks of a clean and sustainable environment for all Albertans as they consider these kinds of transfers. After all, the impacts that our actions have today will have a great impact on our children and grandchildren far into the future. We on this side of the House know that and try to enact legislation that takes environmental sustainability very seriously. I'm proud to note that environmental impacts were considered prior to introducing this bill.

Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation are small communities, just as the village of Thorhild when I lived there was quite tiny. They deserve our consideration and respect when it comes to making sure that their water supply is up to the standards that all the rest of us in Alberta take for granted.

10:40

The North Saskatchewan River is a reliable source of water. The amount of water that this transfer will take from the flow of source of the North Saskatchewan River is really quite small. EPCOR already holds an allocation close to 200 million cubic metres to provide treated drinking water throughout the region. The proposed transfer for St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation would total 600,000 cubic metres. Extensive bottling has been done to confirm that this additional transfer of drinking water will have no measurable effects on the North Saskatchewan River. I also further know that the government has consulted with NGO stakeholders who study and monitor water use and that no concerns were raised. As with everything this government does, we also considered the criteria of making life more affordable for Albertans.

We know that St. Paul county consulted with Mallaig residents before deciding to pursue this option. The water rates in Mallaig are set by the county, and after this extension is completed, the water rates in Mallaig will be the same as in the two other hamlets in St. Paul county that already receive EPCOR-treated water via the regional waterline. Funding from the provincial and federal governments for this important project will help ensure St. Paul county's water rate is the same as others on the highway 28/63 waterline. There is no water rate increase anticipated for residents of Whitefish Lake First Nation.

I'm also very happy that this project falls within the parameters of two of our government's strategic policies moving forward. One is Alberta's water for life strategy, that is centred on the achievement of three goals: safe, secure drinking water; healthy aquatic ecosystems; and reliable, quality water for a sustainable economy. Another key priority for our government, as it should be for all Albertans, is the absolute necessity to provide safe and reliable drinking water for First Nations as part of the implementation of the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples. This is one of the initiatives that I'm most proud of that this government has put into place since its inception after the 2015 election. It is a long time overdue, we're actually doing it, and it's the right thing to do, Madam Speaker. I hope that everyone in this Legislature agrees.

For these reasons I'm going to support this bill, and I hope that everyone in this Legislature does so as well. I remember seeing yellow water coming out of the tap in Thorhild and knowing that I thought it was odd, even as a kid. The people of Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation deserve to have clean, clear, fresh, well-treated drinking water coming out of their taps, just as everybody else in the province does.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Under Standing Order 29(2)(a) the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Well, thank you to the member for his thoughtful comments. I assume, given his research on the issue, that he has been given some explanation for why the groundwater is diminishing and the lake water is diminishing. Could he share with the House his research on the explanation for why the water is diminishing?

The Deputy Speaker: Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and thank you for the question from the Member for Calgary-Mountain View. While we certainly are aware that the groundwater is diminishing and there are concerns around that, I don't profess to be a hydrologist or a complete expert on the matter, but I'm certainly aware that it's a concern that we have in this jurisdiction, as it is throughout the world. Water resources are something that we have to pay more attention to, and it's the responsibility of every government, every jurisdiction to do so. We take that seriously here.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, any other speakers to the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud.

Dr. Turner: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise to discuss this very important bill. I'm also very pleased to hear the tenor of the debate this morning. From all sides the debate has been productive and has contributed to, I think, improving the lives of Albertans, as is the main priority of this government.

I do want to make some comments on the interchange between the Minister of Indigenous Relations and the member representing Lac La Biche-Two Hills-Cold Lake, if I have that in the correct order.

Mr. Kleinsteuber: Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills.

Dr. Turner: I'll get Hansard corrected later.

I think this interchange actually strikes at one of the fundamental differences between this side of the House and the other side of the House. I mean, everybody in this House agrees that the millions of dollars should be spent on getting a safe, reliable, healthy supply of water to the residents of Mallaig as well as to other parts of St. Paul county, including Whitefish Lake. Also, everybody agrees here that UNDRIP is a very important issue and that we need to do everything in this House to make sure that the principles of the TRC report as well as the advice that's been given to us by the United Nations is fulfilled. So we have to spend money now to achieve this.

That money, actually, is going to help prime the economy of this province, the economy of St. Paul county, the economy of the residents of Whitefish First Nation, and, basically, the economy of the city of Edmonton because EPCOR is actually going to be the contractor that does this work. That money is going to be spent now, and it means that the children and the grandchildren that were referred to by the member opposite are actually going to be able to benefit from a healthy, safe water supply. They're going to have a much higher quality of life. They are going to do better in school. There's good evidence that with a safe water supply the attendance at school is better and the achievements at school are better. There will be the ability to participate in various sporting activities that come along with having an adequate water supply, and there will be less time spent dealing with the sort of adverse effects of poor water supplies, that really do have a major effect on health.

I'm actually pleased that we're adding to the deficit to get this accomplished, and I'm pleased that that's going to mean that those children and those grandchildren are going to be able to benefit now rather than having to wait for some unknown future to benefit. They may actually not survive to that future if we don't spend that money now. So I think that's one of the most important issues here, that there are things that we need to spend money on now, irrespective of the fact that that may add to our deficit, because they are needed and they are essential.

I'm the MLA for Edmonton-Whitemud, and it's bounded by the North Saskatchewan River. The quality of life of those that live along the North Saskatchewan, all the way from the headwaters above Brazeau, all the way down, actually, into Saskatchewan and Prince Albert, and then all the way into Manitoba and eventually into the Nelson River: that's a key thing to me. I'm reassured that this bill, as has been stated before, with a water transfer, is not going to have any effect on that, but it does represent, I think, a recognition that we have to husband our water supply very, very carefully.

I was born and raised in southwestern Manitoba, and the Assiniboine and the Souris River are very important water sources there. About 20 years ago or maybe longer the government of the United States acceded to some demands from the state of North Dakota to change the way that Devils Lake was drained. That's a lake in North Dakota. Now, the Devils Lake was previously in the drainage of the Missouri River, and with the changes that came about, the Devils Lake ended up draining into the Red River. Well, guess what's connected to the Red River? The Assiniboine at the Forks in Winnipeg and then the Souris River in southwestern Manitoba. What happened with that change in the drainage was that there were invasive species that did come up the drainage from Devils Lake. You know, there are going to be some long-term consequences, so I'm very familiar with the need to make sure that we're doing things very safely.

10:50

I know the member across may disagree with this, but the Beaver River is really underappreciated, both historically and currently, in the economy of Alberta. The Beaver River does connect to the Churchill River in Manitoba through Lac Île-à-la-Crosse in Saskatchewan, and it was a very important river in the exploration of western Canada. Indeed, my hero, David Thompson, came to the Beaver River in 1798 and actually made it all the way to Lac La Biche. There was a fort – I think it was called Cold Lake house – that was established on the Beaver River, and it was one of the first fur trading posts in Alberta.

As has been said, the Beaver River now probably has a smaller discharge and needs some assistance in maintaining its activity, and I think the work that the environment department has done to make sure that this is being done safely is going to protect us in that.

Another thing that I do want to speak to – and I've spoken to this previously – is the wonderful work that's done in the village of Mallaig. That Haying in the 30s organization that was alluded to earlier is a phenomenal organization. In my experience as a cancer physician at the Cross that group has been instrumental in improving the quality of life of a large number of people from northeastern Alberta, and whatever can be done to help that community and that group I'm definitely in favour of.

I basically want to summarize that, you know, no matter where people live in this province, they deserve to have clean and safe drinking water, and providing that water, especially to First Nations and to small communities, is an obligation that this government takes very, very seriously. Those who live in Alberta's urban areas like me rarely think about water, but it's certainly in the minds of those that live in rural areas and in First Nations. We don't take these transfers lightly, but this one is a good one. It's a fundamental need and I believe should be a human right. As a physician I'm very cognizant of the need for any community to have a safe and reliable water supply. I think that should be a human right, and I'm pleased to see that our government in collaboration with the federal government is moving in the right direction to achieve those ends.

With that, I will encourage all of my colleagues on both sides of the House to support this bill. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-Hawkwood.

Connolly: Well, thank you very much, Madam Speaker, and thank you very much to the member for the great statement that he made. When he mentioned that he was happy to spend the money on this exact thing, there were a couple of snickers over there from the Member for Airdrie, who apparently believes that we need to be prosperous before we can be caring and compassionate. So can you please explain why it's important to spend this money and to help these individuals have clean drinking water?

The Deputy Speaker: Edmonton-Whitemud.

Dr. Turner: Well, thank you very much, Madam Speaker and to the Member for Calgary-Hawkwood for that very insightful question. It comes down to that fundamental difference between the party across and the party on this side of the House. We recognize that there are certain inviolable needs of the citizens of Alberta: education, health care, safe and caring institutional environments, good roads, safe bridges, maintenance of all of those things, making sure that our environment is taken care of, making sure that we have the resources to encourage the diversification of our economy, making sure that we have resources to make sure that our colleges and our universities and our institutes of technology are able to get our citizens ready for the future, whatever that brings, making sure that we can attract businesses like Amazon. That's going to create 750 great jobs close to Airdrie, isn't it? It's Balzac, actually, where that's going to be.

I mean, if we didn't spend some money on encouraging Amazon to think about actually having its headquarters here in Alberta – and, by the way, that probably is adding to our deficit, but I'm happy to see that money being spent. You know, again, who could be against providing a safe, potable water supply to our First Nations people? For 150 years the government of Canada has not stepped up to the plate on that. I'm proud of what our minister is doing to make sure that the pipelines – the Minister of Infrastructure is helping out. The minister of environment is helping out. They're stepping up and making sure that this fundamental human right is supplied.

Thank you very much for the question.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, under 29(2)(a).

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I just want to pick up on the member's comments about the truth and reconciliation process. In my constituency I have the Stoney Nakoda First Nation. Often when I have meetings with them and talk about the things that we're doing to help indigenous communities, they say: "You know what? We've heard all that before. We sat with the former government. They sat and told us they were going to do all this and do that, and they never did." When I meet with the First Nations, they tend to be skeptical about the things that we're promising to them.

I think this bill right here is a good example of making good on our promise to the truth and reconciliation process. It's putting it into action. They say: talk is cheap; let's see your action. This is action. This is giving clean drinking water to First Nations communities and honouring the truth and reconciliation process.

We heard the Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills earlier say that he wouldn't vote for a deficit budget. Now, these people can't wait for oil to be $100 a barrel again to have clean, safe drinking water. They need it now. That's why we're doing this now. They can't wait. This is their human right. It's on the provincial government to give these people their human rights. You know, the folks over there want to slash public services and balance the budget, pray for oil to come back up, and only then would they consider giving people their fundamental human rights. They did it for the last 40 years, total inaction from the conservatives, so I'm proud of our government that we're doing this and would like to thank the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud for his comments, too.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am very delighted to stand up in support of this bill today because it truly is a moment where we get to reflect on a much larger issue and place ourselves in the context of history and place ourselves in the context of doing what's right.

When this government entered into the responsibility of taking care of all of the people in this province and making life better for everyone, we said from the very first day that that included indigenous people and that we were going to ensure that that happened in a way that had not happened previously across the country and, essentially, for the 150 years of the existence of Canada. It's now time for us to step up and do something different. As part of that, we adopted the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples and made the commitment that we would do everything we could to change our laws, our policies, and our practices to align ourselves with that wonderful document, which was largely written here in Alberta, by the way.

11:00

As a part of that process, we distributed the United Nations declaration to all of our ministries within the provincial government and as well to many community organizations such as treaties 6, 7, and 8, to the Metis Settlements General Council, to the Métis Nation of Alberta, to the Institute for the Advancement of Aboriginal Women, and to the friendship centres. The question that we asked all of them in giving them this declaration was: what do we need to do to bring Alberta into the modern times, to align Alberta with the international declaration that indigenous people are indeed people that need to be respected for who they are and provided with the services that we would expect to have in any other place in this city or in this province?

From that came a list of about 20 first-step items. We understand there'll be many more as time moves on, but we derived a list. One of the top items on that list coming from the indigenous communities was the fact that so many indigenous communities were living with inadequate water supplies, something, of course, that was very concerning to those communities. They had lived for thousands of years, tens of thousands of years on this land being able to drink the water, being able to provide for the health and well-being of their communities just by being part of nature and taking care of nature in a way that we all should be doing, a lesson we need to learn from the First Nations communities and the Métis communities in this province.

Now they find themselves in a place where, because of our water use, because of our industrial use, because of our municipal use, and because of changing environmental circumstances, the undeniable truth of climate change, they're not able to drink the water in the way that they used to be able to drink the water. They used to be able to go out onto the land and dip their hand into any puddle and drink that water feeling safe and secure that that was going to enhance their well-being, not harm them. Now we find ourselves in a very different place. Part of our commitment through that United Nations declaration is understanding that we have been part of that change, that very unfortunate change that doesn't allow them to drink the water in the way they used to.

So we made this decision, made a decision that we have a commitment not only to the individuals who are living in those communities right now but to all the generations coming forward, many generations ahead, to provide them with what we all expect, and that is clean, drinkable water accessible to them at all times for their health and their well-being.

As a government we also faced a second problem. The second problem was that the previous governments have always taken the position that First Nations issues are a federal jurisdictional issue and have always essentially dismissed the First Nations people in this province and the Métis people in this province by virtue of saying: "I'm sorry. There's nothing we can do about that. That is a federal government issue." For the very first time in this province we made a decision that that kind of jurisdictional divide was not acceptable to us. We had committed ourselves to the United Nations declaration, and as a result of that commitment, we had to fulfill it by actually living in practice the commitments that we had made.

So we made a decision that has not been widely done across this country. In fact, we may be the very first provincial jurisdiction to have said: we are going to put money in our provincial budget to provide water to First Nations communities in spite of the fact that First Nations communities are supposed to be taken care of by the federal government but, clearly, for over 150 years have not. As a result, in the spring we put $100 million in our budget in order to ensure that there is clean drinking water in various communities throughout this province. I'm very happy to be here today to help us spend $20 million of that $100 million to ensure that clean drinking water is coming to the Whitefish (Goodfish) Lake First Nation and, of course, to the community of Mallaig close by.

This is really important for a number of reasons. One of them is that we're fulfilling our commitments. It's the right thing to do, and we are a government that puts our money where our mouth is, so we know we have to put dollars into it. You can't make commitments with your heart and then run away with your wallet. It just doesn't work that way, and that's how it's always worked in the past.

Having fulfilled that commitment, we also realize that there are some other benefits, that I want to make sure that we point out here. One of them is that we have made sure that we have provided leadership to the federal government. As a result of our decision to put $100 million into water for reserves, the federal government has stepped up. In all of the communities that we have designated for bringing water to the community, the federal government has agreed that they will work with us to ensure that once the pipe arrives at that community, that water will be dispersed throughout the community appropriately. That means that we, through our leadership, are actually getting the federal government to take action on something that they have neglected for 150 years. That's an incredible stance for us to take.

As well, that means we're also leveraging federal dollars. We're getting them to invest dollars in our province, which is something that we're very proud to do as a province, and to ensure that we are getting our just due in this larger entity of Canada, that we are very proudly a member of.

The benefits of taking this kind of important leadership position are numerous. We have a commitment filled, we have an increase of dollars brought into the province, and we have helped a federal government which is dragging its heels to take steps forward on commitments that they have made but they have not followed up on with their wallet, unfortunately a problem with many governments. Thank goodness; finally, an NDP government got elected, so we could actually do these kinds of things.

One of the other things that I also think is very important about this type of movement forward is the fact that we sometimes hear complaints about resources going to First Nations communities. Of course, I could take hours talking about why it's appropriate for that to happen, but one of the things I want to remind people of is that whenever one part of our community experiences a better life, we all experience a better life. This is an absolute, great example of that. We have a First Nations community that is asking for water, we have provided the dollars for that water to arrive there, and, lo and behold, at the same time we have another community close by the First Nations community which benefits from the work we have done for the First Nations community. As a result, Mallaig is now finding itself able to get clean drinking water, that they were not able to get before.

This summer a very similar process happened when we brought the water pipe from Stony Plain to the Alexis reserve, just west of Edmonton. While we brought that water to the Alexis reserve as part of our commitment, we also made sure that it was available to all of the summer homes around Lac Ste. Anne and to the town of Alberta Beach and other towns along the way.

It's something for us all to remember. If we want to uplift the province of Alberta, if you want to uplift your community, you need to uplift other communities. Alberta is uplifted when the First Nations communities are uplifted, and when the First Nations communities are uplifted, so are the rest of the cities and towns in the province of Alberta. That is the nature of good governance, and that is the commitment that we made to ensure that all people live a better life in the province of Alberta.

I think that having made these steps along the way, we have taken some very important first steps, but we also need to do a number of other things, and I'd like to mention a few of those things. One of them is that we now need to ensure that First Nations have full participation in terms of the water regulation boards across this province. So if Whitefish (Goodfish) is on the waterline, they should also be on the board that regulates that waterline. That's a commitment we're making to try to work with all the municipalities to ensure that First Nations truly have representation, that they can speak to their needs, that they can fully participate, because we believe that that is good. That is good for First Nations, but it is good for all of Alberta. We all lift up together, and I think that's something that's very important for us to remember.

I also want to comment on the very important comments that were given by the MLA for Calgary-Mountain View about our concern for: why is it that we're having difficulties with water in various parts of this province? Another commitment we have made to First Nations in this province is to talk to them about water just as an issue, not connected necessarily to a pipeline of water to their community or to other specific projects but, rather, to look at: how do we ensure that water is well protected in this community, in this province and that we can make sure that that water will be a benefit to all generations coming forward? As a result, we have established a committee working with First Nations communities to discuss water, to discuss water movement, and to discuss how we can improve the health and well-being of all the community through ensuring clean and safe and protected water.

11:10

I take the comments from the Member for Calgary-Mountain View very seriously when he reminds us that there is scientific work to be done to ensure that we have an understanding of the water needs that we have in this province, that we have an understanding of the present circumstance of water in this province and how any actions that we take moving forward will affect the present circumstances and the circumstances that should have been in place and that were in place long before the nonindigenous people arrived in this province.

From this one small action I've already mentioned four different ways in which this has serious implications for us in the province, with the United Nations declaration, through leveraging federal action and dollars, and through benefiting everybody in this province.

I stand here proudly with my colleagues saying that this is what you get when you have an NDP government. You get people who are committed. You get people who turn that commitment into action, and we get results today.

I want to thank those members of the opposition who have stood up in support of this piece of legislation for recognizing the important work that is going on today and supporting us in doing this. I look forward, as I mentioned earlier, to their support for actually putting their money where their mouth is and not simply standing up and making a commitment to support individual projects in their community, whether it be an emergency room or an ambulance service or a bridge or a road being built, but actually standing up when it's time to pay for all those things, when it's time to commit yourself to saying: if I say that this is worth doing, then I will actually do something to make it happen. That's what you get when you have this government.

I look forward to our other initiatives moving forward. I look forward to all the work coming out in this particular round of the Legislature and all of the work that we as an NDP government are committed to providing on behalf of our constituents, the people of Alberta, including the First Nation and Métis people in this province.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane under Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Mr. Westhead: Yes. Thank you, Madam Speaker. I just want to take a short moment to praise the Minister of Indigenous Relations for the work that he and his team in the ministry have done. I've had an opportunity to witness the minister and his team in action when we've been in meetings with the Stoney Nakoda First Nation in my constituency. The ministry has bent over backwards to meet with the nation there, and the ministry has worked extraordinarily hard to move things forward. I know that the ministry is struggling under the enormity of what work was left for them by the former government due to their inaction, but I know that the minister, the Indigenous Relations ministry have taken up the task to tackle those difficult issues. I just want to thank him for the work that he and his team have done, and I want to put it on the record that it hasn't gone unnoticed. Thank you, Minister.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Any other speakers to the bill?

Seeing none, I will call on the hon. Member for West Yellowhead on behalf of the minister of environment to close debate.

Mr. Rosendahl: I would like to move that we close debate on Bill 20.

[Motion carried; Bill 20 read a second time]

The Deputy Speaker: Before I recognize the hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader, I just would like to have an announcement on behalf of the Speaker that he would like to proceed with the group photo of Members of the Legislative Assembly on the front steps, which is scheduled to take place at 12:10 p.m. today. The Speaker would ask that members be prompt to ensure that the photo will be taken as quickly as possible. Thank you.

The hon. Acting Deputy Government House Leader.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. Seeing as we have made some good progress already this morning, I move that the House adjourn until 1:30 this afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 11:15 a.m.]

Table of Contents

Prayers	1627
Orders of the Day	1627
Government Motions
Constituency Week	1627
Morning Sitting Adjournment	1627
Morning Sitting Items of Business	1627
Morning Sitting Adjournment	1627
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 20 Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act	1627

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Tuesday afternoon, October 31, 2017

Day 46

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (NDP), Speaker
Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (NDP), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (NDP), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (UCP),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (NDP)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (UCP)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (NDP)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (UCP)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (NDP)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (NDP)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (NDP)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (NDP)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (UCP)
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (NDP),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (UCP)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (NDP)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (NDP)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (NDP)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (UCP)
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (NDP)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (UCP)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (NDP)
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (Ind)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (NDP)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (Ind)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (NDP)
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (NDP)
Gotfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (UCP)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (NDP)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (UCP)
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (NDP)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (NDP)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (NDP)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (UCP)
Jansen, Hon. Sandra, Calgary-North West (NDP)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (UCP)
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (NDP)
Kleinstuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (NDP)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (NDP)
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (NDP)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (UCP)
Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (NDP)

Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (NDP)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (UCP)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (NDP)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (NDP)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (UCP),
Official Opposition Whip
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (NDP)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (NDP)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (AP)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (NDP)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (NDP)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (NDP)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (UCP),
Leader of the Official Opposition,
Official Opposition House Leader
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (UCP)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (UCP)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (NDP)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (NDP)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (NDP)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (NDP)
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (UCP)
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (NDP)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (NDP)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (NDP)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (UCP)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (NDP)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (NDP)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (NDP)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (UCP)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (UCP)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (UCP)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (NDP)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (UCP)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (NDP)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (UCP)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (NDP),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (NDP)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (UCP)

Party standings:

New Democratic: 54 United Conservative: 27 Alberta Party: 2 Alberta Liberal: 1 Progressive Conservative: 1 Independent: 2

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk
Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of
House Services
Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel
Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services
Nancy Robert, Research Officer
Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms
Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms
Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms
Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Sandra Jansen	Minister of Infrastructure
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

Parliamentary Secretaries

Jessica Littlewood	Economic Development and Trade for Small Business
Annie McKittrick	Education

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Rodney
Horne	Shepherd
Jansen	Swann
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabbour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, October 31, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

First of all, we will be taking a photo in the gallery of this Legislature. We attempted to arrange a picture. I'm seeing a message that we're not taking a photo? [interjections] Now please be seated.

Hon. members, first of all, I'll explain. We're taking a risk on the picture outside. We wanted to aim for the "150" banners that were out there, but because of the weather and circumstances we have decided to attempt to do that at a later date. That may not be successful, but we will do our best.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you very much. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to the Legislature His Excellency Mr. John Lanyasunya, high commissioner for the Republic of Kenya, and his staff, who are sitting in the Speaker's gallery. Mr. Lanyasunya will be meeting with the Lieutenant Governor; yourself, Mr. Speaker; as well as a number of cabinet ministers, including myself; and with senior government officials. The high commissioner's visit will focus on fostering economic co-operation between Alberta and Kenya. I would like to ask everyone in the Assembly to provide a warm reception to our guests.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The Minister of Labour and minister responsible for democratic renewal.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some wonderful students from my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. The students of Millwoods Christian school are here accompanied by their teachers Ashley Merta, Thomas Hughes, and Sarah Inman. We have three classes of grade 9 students. I would like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. members, are there any other school groups for introduction today?

Seeing and hearing none, the Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Mr. Clark: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my great honour to introduce to you and through you to my colleagues in the Assembly Tara Martin. Tara and I had the honour of working together in Calgary back in the days before I got into politics. She still thinks it's probably a good idea that I got involved in politics. We're not sure. I really enjoyed working with her and welcome her to the Legislature. I would ask that she rise now and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you one of Alberta's occupational therapists. I'd ask that Abid Valji please rise as I do this introduction. October is dedicated to occupational therapists as they dedicate their careers to the well-being of others. Occupational therapists work to help Albertans in need of care to care for themselves and to live inclusive, fulfilling lives. Please join me in extending the traditional warm welcome to our guest.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The Associate Minister of Health.

Ms Payne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this House some additional members of the Alberta College of Occupational Therapists. Occupational therapists empower and enable patients to reach their goals and are valued members of patient-centred, team-based care. I'd ask that Gayla Grinde, clinical lead at CASA, Elizabeth Taylor, associate professor in occupational therapy at the U of A, Shaniff Esmail, associate chair and professor of the department of OT at the U of A, Sharon Brintnell, a global leader in occupational therapy and service development, and Maggie Fulford, registrar for the Alberta College of Occupational Therapists, please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Peace River.

Ms Jabbour: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on your behalf to introduce to all members of the Assembly some familiar faces: Amanda Porter, Kylie Kwok, and Andriy Krugliak. These three incredibly hard-working and dedicated young Albertans are not strangers here because they are former or current members of the Legislature page program. Former head page Kylie recently started her second year at the University of Alberta studying biological sciences, current head page Amanda is in her final year at Paul Kane high school in St. Albert, and former Speaker's page Andriy is enjoying his second year of honours in economics at the University of Alberta. Andriy, however, wasn't quite ready to leave legislative life after his term as a page, so he's now balancing a full course load while working as a dynamic member of the Speaker's office team.

Kylie, Amanda, and Andriy are here today to sit back and relax for a change while observing this afternoon's proceedings. They are standing in the Speaker's gallery, and I would ask all of the House to please give them the warm traditional welcome.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek.

Ms Woollard: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this House two of the forces behind the Schizophrenia Society of Alberta, Louise Daviduck, provincial director of development, and Rubyann Rice, provincial executive director. The Schizophrenia Society works to improve the quality of life for those affected by schizophrenia and psychosis through education, support programs, public policy, and research. With their efforts to support those affected by schizophrenia, Louise and Rubyann embody the motto of the Schizophrenia Society: caring, empowering, educating. I'd invite Louise and Rubyann to now rise so that we may welcome them with the traditional warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Rosendahl: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you a group from the MS Society:

Nicole Gasior, Garry Wheeler, Julie Kelndorfer, Michael MacFynn, and Bonnie MacFynn. I will speak more about the MS Society later today, but I want to now thank the MS Society for the great work they do to provide invaluable supports to those living with MS. I'd ask my guests to now rise, which they already have, and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Fitzpatrick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am so pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you Telus employees Matt Mosby and Rob Wright and their supervisor, Theresa Stevens. You may have heard about Matt and Rob in the news a few months ago when they rescued a family of four from a terrible apartment fire in a neighbourhood in my constituency of Lethbridge-East. They truly embody what it is to be Albertan, Lethbridgian, and make us all proud. I'd invite Matt, Rob, and Theresa to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

1:40

Dr. Starke: Mr. Speaker, it's my honour today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly representatives of over 120,000 Lutherans in Alberta and over 80 million world-wide who are today marking the 500th anniversary of the start of the Protestant Reformation. I might add that to the best of our knowledge this is the largest gathering of Lutherans that didn't first involve a potluck supper. I would ask my guests to rise and remain standing as I introduce them.

Reverend Dr. Edwin Lehman is past president emeritus of Lutheran Church – Canada. Reverend Dr. Larry Kochendorfer is bishop of the Synod of Alberta and the Territories of the Evangelical Lutheran church of Canada. Reverend Dr. Glenn Schaeffer is district president of the Alberta-British Columbia District of Lutheran Church – Canada. Reverend Dr. Harold Ruf is the past president of the ABC District of Lutheran Church – Canada, and Mrs. Ruth Ruf. Reverend Dr. Stephen Chambers is academic dean and professor of exegetical theology at Concordia Lutheran Seminary.

Pastor Keith Hoveland is pastor at Zion Lutheran church in Golden Spike, Alberta, and his wife Carole. Pastor Curtis Boehm is pastor at Grace Lutheran church in Edmonton. Reverend Jason Anderson and Reverend Ingrid Doerschel are pastors at Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church in Edmonton. Reverend Heidi Wachowiak is pastor at St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church in Ellerslie along with Jacob Rempel and Tammy Kirkwood who are staff members.

Reverend Clifford Haberstock is retired but was previously president of the Concordia Lutheran Mission Society. Dr. Harold Witte is also a retired pastor. We have Reverend Walter Hambrook. Michael Harmon is a pastoral intern at the Armena Lutheran parish in Armena, Alberta. Reverend John Haycock has a specific interest in my soul because he's my pastor from First Lutheran church in Lloydminster and Zion Lutheran in McLaughlin. We also have some members of First Lutheran, Ron and Ann Faulkner, long-time friends, as well as my son Roland.

Mr. Speaker, I'm very pleased to have these guests with me today, and I'd ask that they receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. member, the Lutherans got suppers, but we Catholics got bingo.

Members' Statements

Martin Luther

Dr. Starke: Mr. Speaker, 500 years ago today an unknown German priest in a backwater town wanted to start a discussion. You see, the Catholic church was needing to raise money to build St. Peter's Basilica in Rome, and for a few coins faithful members could buy an indulgence, a little piece of paper that absolved them of all sin and even sprung a dead relative from purgatory. Now, this priest had some problems with that. He compiled a list of 95 objections and nailed them to the church door at Wittenberg. That priest was Martin Luther. Today I join with my fellow Lutherans world-wide to mark the anniversary of Luther's courageous act of defiance, an act that triggered the Reformation and changed the course of world history.

Now, what Luther did was not without risk. Others had challenged the overwhelming power of the church and were rewarded for their efforts with execution as heretics. But Luther was a man of principle, courage, and unwavering faith. Forced to appear before the Catholic authorities, he was threatened with death if he refused to recant. His defence was simple. "I cannot and will not recant anything, for to go against conscience is neither right nor safe. Here I stand, I can do no other, so help me God. Amen."

Luther was excommunicated and declared an outlaw. To avoid execution, he disguised himself as a knight and went into hiding at Wartburg Castle. While there he began the work of translating the Bible into German so that the Holy Scripture could be read by the common people. He returned to Wittenberg, married a nun, fathered six children, and spent the rest of his life preaching and teaching that justification is by grace alone, through faith alone, for the sake of Christ alone.

Lutherans do not worship Martin Luther. He would be the first to acknowledge his many human flaws and his need for God's grace. But people of all faiths can learn from what Luther embodied, his steadfast adherence to his principles despite tremendous personal risk and his unwavering devotion to his followers, lessons, Mr. Speaker, for us all.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky.

Government Policies

Mr. Loewen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With apologies to Edgar Allan Poe's The Raven.

Once upon an election morning people woke with dire warning.
What had happened while we slept was NDP with 54.
As we stood there unbelieving, wondering, pondering world was reeling –
Came a shiver. It was quite a feeling, thinking of what would happen more.

"Who are they," we asked ourselves, "who will run this province to its core?"
There were anti-oil activists there who had picketed and protested everywhere.
They'd coauthored books with radical people and had signs they proudly wore.
They wouldn't try those radical taxes like their brothers did next door.
Surely not raising fees here nor carbon tax would be in store.
Quoth the Premier: all and more.

Suddenly we could see it clearly that their views were oh so nearly to their comrades to the east. That did worry us ever more.
Bills they were so proudly passing that were so far encompassing.
I felt for sure they would be pausing from their agenda oh so poor.
“Do you understand this?” we would ask, but their answers were to come no more.
Quoth the Premier: there’s the door.

One look at Bill 6 consulting made the NDP look quite insulting.
Battered, beaten, and downtrodden, farmers never felt so poor.
Now those coal-fired generators
Were feeling like they’d met a gator.
Furthermore, communities that relied on coal were feeling sore.
Carbon tax caused coal contracts turned back to pool by the score.
Quoth the Premier: we’ll sue some more.

They tackled those that fish, and foresters and trappers did wish the Dippers had never looked their way and what they had in store.
Caribou plans were quite extreme,
and they blamed the feds supreme,
causing counties, foresters, and towns to start to lean to war.
“Give it up,” they pleaded as they started to feel the poor.
Quoth the Premier: let them roar.

On and on they did continue, straining Albertans in their quarters,
round and round and back and forth, damaging Alberta to the core.
“Hey,” we asked them, “aren’t you done yet?”
Surely Alberta has too much debt.
Ninety billion dollars and $3 billion interest is the score.
Isn’t that enough?” we yelled as we stood there keeping
score.
Quoth the Premier: billions more.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek.

Schizophrenia Support in Indigenous Communities

Ms Woollard: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I’m honoured today to talk about schizophrenia and its impact on indigenous communities. The Schizophrenia Society of Alberta works tirelessly to support people suffering from schizophrenia to lead independent lives and gain employment. The Schizophrenia Society is aware of the need for support and awareness programs in indigenous communities. They’ve developed an indigenous outreach project to provide support and programs to indigenous communities in Alberta affected by schizophrenia, with a mandate to develop strong, viable, and trusting relationships within indigenous communities.

Employed indigenous helpers and elders will engage community leaders in conversations about schizophrenia and share how services will be made available through indigenous helper support services. They’ll co-ordinate community education presentations for these communities that provide information about the illness, symptoms, support options, and recovery; share real stories and personal experiences of schizophrenia; and challenge common misconceptions. Presenters will be on call to answer questions and provide direct phone support to communities. The presentations will be ongoing to ensure that the message continues to be spread and to provide helpers an opportunity to develop relationships with those in need of support. The Schizophrenia Society will also collaborate with other aboriginal mental health organizations.

This project will provide valuable support for many people in indigenous communities who are suffering without the information and supports they need. Early intervention and awareness helps people who are experiencing symptoms to reach out, receive help, and have a greater chance of recovery. This is a program offering help and hope to people in need of it.

Thank you.

1:50

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Pipeline Approval

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I proposed a straightforward motion demanding that the federal government amend the National Energy Board Act to remove upstream and downstream emissions from its pipeline assessments. I did this because the NEB changes that they have done, at the instruction of the Trudeau Liberals, are directly responsible for the death of the Energy East pipeline, a pipeline that this Premier and this caucus claimed to have supported. I can think of no better message from this House than a unified message from all of us to Ottawa that we stand up for this pipeline. Will the government reconsider and support my motion? Will this Premier and will this NDP government do something to stand up . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I would ask all of the members – I mentioned it yesterday – that as we move forward, please contain your volume. There have been several members, at least one that I mentioned yesterday, so I urge you to keep your volume down and, as always, your comments respectful.

The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned and said yesterday several times, our government fought for Energy East every step of the way. We told the federal government that the downstream emissions should not be a factor in the considerations and the deliberations. Notwithstanding that, our government has done more to promote pipelines in the last two years than the members opposite did in the previous 44. That is why we have two pipelines approved and they got zero pipelines approved, indeed while their current leader was in Ottawa making those decisions. We’re proud of our record, and we’re going to keep going.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Nixon: This Premier and this government have been missing in action all summer on this file. The NDP has claimed that they oppose the federal changes, but their actions don’t back up the words, Mr. Speaker. It’s clear that the NDP just want this issue to go away so they can continue their love affair with the Trudeau Liberals despite Ottawa’s persistent attacks on our great province. This is not just about Energy East. This is about the viability of every future pipeline project that is proposed. I will ask again. Will this government send a clear message to Ottawa by supporting my motion? Will this Premier and will this government stand up for Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Premier and this government have been standing up for Albertans, and in fact we will continue to stand up for Albertans. We will continue to do the work that they have been unsuccessful at doing. We got approval for a pipeline to tidewater. I am very proud of that. We will continue to fight for that pipeline because we know that that's what's best for Alberta's energy industry and what's best for the Canadian economy overall. That's why we won't stop until the job is done.

Mr. Nixon: All this Premier has is two cancelled pipelines. The federal government does not take into account downstream emissions when they cut cheques to Bombardier, whose planes burn oil. They don't take into account downstream emissions when cutting cheques to Ontario auto plants, whose cars burn oil. But Alberta pipelines, which don't burn oil but just move it, are being singled out for special treatment. Will this government finally send a clear message to Ottawa and finally stand up for what they say they believe in, stand up for our pipelines, our largest industry, and the people of Alberta?

Ms Notley: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, in fact, the analogies, or one or two of the analogies, that the member opposite made are exactly the analogies that both our minister and myself used in speaking with the federal government about the issue of downstream emissions. You know, I said this last session about the previous Leader of the Opposition, and now I think it applies to the current leader of the UCP: nothing more than a sheep in sheep's clothing; 20 years in Ottawa and never stood up for Energy East. What we are doing is standing up for a pipeline to tidewater, and we will be successful.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.
Second main question.

Pipeline Approval and Federal-Provincial Relations

Mr. Nixon: We know how insincere the government's objections are to the federal government, including downstream emissions in its pipeline assessments. They won't support a simple motion that all members of this House should be able to get behind. But just as troubling is this government's inability to defend Alberta's constitutional rights, rights fought for and won by Premier Lougheed. The government has not objected to the NEB meddling in upstream emissions, setting an extremely dangerous precedent. Will the government send a clear message to Ottawa and launch a constitutional, legal challenge to the NEB's invasion of our provincial jurisdiction?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, that's certainly a reasonable question to ask, and in fact we have considered that matter as we have also been working in consultation with Kinder Morgan as it relates to the pipeline to the Pacific. As things stand now, we don't have the legal position from which to engage in what the member opposite suggests, but we will take every legal opportunity that is available to argue that downstream emissions should not be considered, and I suspect that members opposite will be pleased to see that outcome as we go forward.

Mr. Nixon: Well, it might have been a reasonable question. That certainly was not a reasonable answer.

This issue should be bigger than partisan politics. Alberta has constitutional, enshrined rights, and we shouldn't sell those just to make friends with the Trudeau Liberals. Upstream emissions are clearly within Alberta's exclusive provincial purview. Can the government tell us what other constitutional rights they are currently willing to dispose of to maintain their alliance with Justin Trudeau? Is education next? Is health care next? What line is the Premier not willing to cross to maintain a relationship with Justin Trudeau?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, it's interesting. The members opposite often talk about issues of being careful with our money. In that spirit, I'm not going to spend legal money grandstanding for the sake of political gain, which is what the members opposite are suggesting. What we will do is that we will stand up for Alberta in the responsible ways that are at our disposal, in a way that ensures that we respect the law and that we move forward in a way that gets us what we need to have at the end of the day, which is a pipeline to tidewater, something that we got approved and they did not.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Nixon: The hundred thousand jobs that have been lost are not political gain.

Again, this NDP government siding with the Trudeau Liberals over our province is disgusting. They're doing it on pipelines, they caved and agreed to Trudeau's 67 per cent carbon tax, and they refuse to speak out against Ottawa's attack on small businesses. Can the Premier tell us one significant issue, just one, where her government has spoken out against Ottawa? And I don't mean a toothless press release. When is she going to speak out against Ottawa, stand up for the people of Alberta, stand up for the province, and do the job that she was elected to do?

Ms Notley: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, I was not actually elected to refight the lost election of these guys' new leader. Okay? I'm really sorry that they're having trouble getting over the fact that their new boss lost an election to the current Prime Minister, but you know what? Live with it. The fact of the matter is that our job is to do the best thing we can for Albertans, which is what we're doing. You know what? It's working. Things are looking up. Jobs are up. Manufacturing is up. Investment is up. We are leading the country because we're focused on the people of Alberta, not past political losses. [interjections]

The Speaker: Order, please. Volume.
Chestermere-Rocky View.

Catholic School Sex Education Curriculum

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A member opposite has proposed a motion on interfaith harmony week, and what irony coming from a party whose leader just defamed Alberta's largest faith community. Last week the Premier attacked the proposed Catholic curriculum by saying, quote: consent is the law in Alberta, and under no circumstances will any child in Alberta be taught that they have to somehow accept illegal behaviour in a sexual relationship. The end. By this she alleged that Catholics support marital rape when the curriculum she attacked says, "Consent is always necessary." Why did the Premier smear Catholic educators?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Actually, there is smearing going on, but it's being done by the member opposite, quite clearly, and I'm surprised to see that kind of thing from that particular member.

But let me be very clear, Mr. Speaker. What happened last week was that a document was FOIPed, and it was in the public realm. It included some very concerning statements, some of which were concerning, some of which were confusing. It was therefore the job of the Premier to clarify the position of the government in response to that document, and that is what I did. Under no circumstances will I apologize for it because it was the right thing to do.

The Speaker: Thank you.

First supplemental.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think confusion should obviously lead to an apology right away. In her drive-by smear of the Catholic educators the Premier went on to say, quote: under no circumstances will we enforce or condone a sexual health curriculum that normalizes the absence of consent. In what world – I don't understand what she was talking about. The proposed curriculum states the opposite, that consent must always be present. Was the Premier misinformed or confused, or was she malicious? In any event, why won't she simply just accept the responsibility by apologizing to the Catholic community for these really outrageous remarks?

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To be clear, the comments that I made were with respect to a particular document. Within that document there were statements that promoted discrimination against sexual minorities and also discouraged safe health practices and also raised questions about the matter of consent. As a result, it was important for me to clarify how our government would respond to the document on the issue about which there was confusion, about the fact that we will not ever tolerate any form of discrimination against sexual minorities, nor will we promote . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Second supplemental.

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is specifically around the idea of consent. It's not just the Premier who claims that Catholics are supporting nonconsensual sexual relationships, but her Education minister also engaged in the same smearing, objecting to the Catholic curriculum, saying that teaching consent is a basic health and safety issue for students in regard to sexuality, obviously. Given that the curriculum clearly states that consent is always necessary, in what world was – we don't understand what the Education minister was talking about. If the Premier won't retract and apologize for this offensive remark . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Once again, there was a document. The document was the subject of my comments. The document contained statements that discouraged safe, healthy practices, that promoted discrimination against sexual minorities and gender minorities, and that raised questions about how one should examine the issue of consent. As a result, we made it very clear that the way in which that document was constructed would not find its way into a publicly funded curriculum, and I retain that position.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Political Action Committees

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this Halloween something very, very scary lurks in the shadows of these halls. Political action committees are subverting Alberta's election finance rules by bleeding dark money into leadership and election campaigns. Alberta Liberals are going to stop this along with the government. Alberta Liberals want to stop this; it's not clear the New Democrats want to stop this. What magic will the Premier work to ensure that Albertans decide elections, not spooky interest groups?

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much to the member for that very, very scary question. In fact, I have to say that I agree completely with the sentiments that are expressed within that question. Our very first bill, once we got elected, Mr. Speaker, was to take big money out of politics and to enhance disclosure of the money that does go in. The member opposite raises an interesting question about the matter of PACs. Many governments across the country have tried in a number of different ways to limit the impact of PACs, and sometimes the courts have pushed back against that. We introduced legislation that we thought would get us there, but we . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Dr. Swann: Groups like Unite Alberta, United Liberty, and Alberta Together are channelling shadowy funds to the parties of my hon. colleagues to the right and to the far right, but it's the NDP's zombielike pace on regulating PACs that is very unsettling. Is the government dragging its feet because dark money flows in your veins?

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm inclined to say boo, but I won't.

The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, you know, as I've said, our government is committed to taking not only big money out of politics but also dark money out of politics, and we are concerned at the rate at which we are able to see enforcement of the legislation that we've got in place right now. We are also looking at whether there are ways to strengthen that legislation within the confines of what the courts have said up to now, and we hope there is. I think you'll hear more from us on that very soon. There is no question that people need to disclose, and I would suggest that the new Leader of the Official Opposition might want to . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Dr. Swann: You heard it, Mr. Speaker: "very soon."

The NDP really wants to bury this issue in the political catacombs, but the Alberta Liberals want to drive a stake into the heart so it cannot suck the lifeblood of our democracy. We'd do that by making PACs follow the same rules as everyone else, which is what my Bill 214 proposes. Will the Premier be Wonder Woman and pledge her government's support? Yes or no?

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, I will commit to the member opposite that you will see from this government the most aggressive legislation against PACs that we can possibly bring in and ensure that it stands up to the courts between now and the next election because that's what Albertans need. They need dark money out of their politics, they need big money out of their politics, and they need a light shone on where the money is coming from, which is why I again suggest that Jason Kenney should disclose his leadership donors.

Indigenous Educational Curriculum Content

Mr. Rosendahl: Mr. Speaker, over 22,000 Albertans speak an indigenous language. In my constituency several schools offer Cree language programming, which is key to creating bridges between communities. To the Minister of Education: given your commitment to combat bullying, address issues of racial discrimination, and take concrete steps towards reconciliation, how will your ministry ensure that all students learn to respect and understand indigenous peoples?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and for the question as well. I'm very pleased to point out that we have put out lesson plans in regard to First Nations, Métis, and Inuit culture and teaching, and we will continue to do so. We saw a very big uptake with these lesson plans, and we're very excited about the appetite that Albertans and teachers and students and parents have to learn more about indigenous culture. All Alberta students will learn about the history and legacy of residential schools and the history of First Nations, Métis, and Inuit in Canada as part of the government's commitment to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. The lesson plans that we have . . .

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Rosendahl: Mr. Speaker, given that programs that provide a greater understanding of indigenous culture are often limited to small groups of students or do not continue beyond the elementary level, to the same minister: how will you ensure that indigenous programming is available to all students throughout their schooling?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As of June of 2016, of course, we are building new curriculum together with thousands of Albertans, and included as an integral part of that building curriculum is to ensure that we have First Nations, Métis, and Inuit culture teachings throughout all grade levels in all subject areas. This is mandatory for all schools, this new curriculum, and I expect that it will help to drive a deeper understanding of First Nations, Métis, and Inuit culture throughout our province.

Mr. Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
Second supplemental.

Mr. Rosendahl: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that people who are exposed to different cultures and languages lead more tolerant and prosperous lives and despite Mr. Kenney's belief that this is social engineering, to the same minister: what further steps will you take to ensure students benefit from greater awareness of indigenous history and culture?

2:10

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. At all points we know that education is the best way to fight against ignorance, against intolerance and to help to edify all of us and bring us closer together as a people. We know that together with the national Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the Alberta Teachers' Association,

First Nations, and postsecondary institutions we're building authentic culture and language, to teach these things along the way. We're teaching indigenous language as well. I'm looking forward to expand Cree and Blackfoot language and other languages, Dene, to ensure that culture is not just preserved in a museum but it is lived, and it is lived together with . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Trans Mountain Pipeline Expansion Opposition

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, Karen Mahon was appointed by this government to the Alberta oil sands advisory group. As a member of Stand.earth, an ill-informed oil sands organization, it is hard to think of a more inappropriate appointment for Alberta. Recently we learned that Ms Mahon was arrested in B.C., protesting against the Trans Mountain pipeline. Ms Mahon now says that this is only the beginning. What gave this government the incredibly foolish idea to appoint her?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, in all our groups when we consult, we consult with a variety of people. We consult with industry, and we consult with environment groups to get the best legislation possible. The person described is no different. She's been involved in different things. We've worked very hard to get our pipelines, and to be clear, our pipelines were approved because of our climate leadership plan. They have federal approval, and they will be built.

Mr. Barnes: Given, Mr. Speaker, that Ms Mahon is a radical who will continue to undermine the confidence in Alberta's oil and gas industry and thousands of jobs for all Canadians and given that Ms Mahon will be starting direct-action training to oppose pipelines, what will this government do to ensure that this pipeline will be built and doesn't just die on the vine like they killed Energy East?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know what? Our plan, including the climate leadership plan, is working. Jobs are up. Wages are up. Drilling is up. Production is up. That's because there's confidence in Alberta's energy industry. We've secured two pipelines. We're working to diversify our economy, something that this opposition has fought us on the whole way. At some point I need the opposition to work with us to support Alberta's energy industry, support Alberta jobs.

Mr. Barnes: Mr. Speaker, given that despite the exposure of the oil sands industry through the panel Ms Mahon declared that this Kinder Morgan pipeline "will never be built," can the government comment on how much of our hard-earned taxpayer money went to work against Alberta's job prosperity and wealth creation, supporting radicals such as Ms Mahon and Ms Berman on this panel? How many of our tax dollars?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, we worked very hard on our climate leadership plan and on the OSAG as part of that. We engaged industry and environment groups to manage the 100-megatonne cap. You know what? In Alberta we just recently celebrated 50 years of the industry learning to take oil out of the sand. And you know? It's going to be innovation that's going to take carbon out of the barrel. We have the best innovators, we have best technicians in Alberta, and we're going to have the best industry going into the 21st century.

Seniors' Housing

Mr. Gotfried: Mr. Speaker, in my meetings with public, private, and nonprofit seniors' housing providers across the province, all have expressed concern over the ever-increasing financial burden being wrought upon them by this government. Minimum wage increased yet again with little consideration for the impact on the care and services for seniors. And now the already devastating impact of the carbon tax will escalate by 50 per cent in just two months. To the minister of seniors: why has your government disregarded the impact of these irresponsible policies on the health, well-being, nutrition, and compassionate care we owe to our seniors?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Sigurdson: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Of course, we work very closely with our housing management bodies. In fact, we've invested $88 million for them to do retrofits – improve furnaces, change windows – creating energy efficiency, so we're working very closely with them.

We know that we're caring for seniors and the opposition would be cutting millions of dollars. We know Kenney's plan would be hurting seniors. We're helping seniors.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You're hurting them. We're not.

Given that the double whammy of the carbon tax and minimum wage increase will further threaten the financial viability of many seniors' housing providers and, indeed, many other Alberta businesses and given that many have told me that their last option is to reduce costs by cutting expenses related to food, care, and recreation given no credible financial relief offered by the NDP government, again to the minister: why do you continue to put your ineffectual ideologies, damaging wage policies, and burdensome carbon tax ... [interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Gotfried: ... ahead of the quality of life of the seniors who built this province?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Sigurdson: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, we're very committed to supporting seniors. Besides the $88 million that we've invested in housing management bodies for retrofitting and supporting them to do energy efficiency plans, we've also given them a grant of $500,000 to look at energy audits. This helps them, again, reduce the costs of carbon. We're caring for seniors and protecting their benefits. Jason Kenney's reckless plan to cut 20 per cent from the province's budget would cut 30,000 seniors off the Alberta seniors' benefit. We're supporting. They're hurting seniors.

The Speaker: Second supplemental. Watch the preambles, hon. member.

Mr. Gotfried: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Maybe if your Premier lets Jason Kenney in the House, he can answer some of your questions.

Given that many seniors' organizations operate both privately funded ... [interjections]

The Speaker: Quiet, please.

Mr. Gotfried: ... and publicly funded facilities and given that many of these facilities are unable to afford much-needed capital maintenance due to escalating costs forced upon them by this government and given that in some instances the government has offered to pay for upgrades in exchange for allowing the government to own and operate the facilities, again to the minister: are you using rapid increases in minimum wage, carbon tax to force providers to transfer ownership of their facilities to the government to remake them under the NDP's ...

The Speaker: Thank you.

Ms Sigurdson: Once again, Mr. Speaker ... [interjections]

The Speaker: Quiet.

Ms Sigurdson: ... we're investing and supporting housing management bodies across this province. Over 110,000 Albertans are supported in provincial affordable housing programs. We're investing significantly in supporting them to be energy efficient. We're investing. They want to cut and hurt seniors and people in the affordable housing public service delivery. We're certainly proud of all the investment we've put in.

Thank you.

Rural Crime Prevention

Dr. Starke: Mr. Speaker, crime in rural Alberta is skyrocketing. At a town hall meeting I hosted in Mannville last week, the RCMP reported that property crimes in one detachment had increased by 68 per cent over the same period last year but the staffing levels were the same or even lower than in previous years. It is not uncommon for the RCMP to take over an hour to respond to a reported crime in progress. To the Solicitor General: what specific actions have you taken to ensure that rural RCMP detachments are assigned more members to address this increase in crime?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Solicitor General.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker and to the member for the important question. Of course, no one likes to see increasing crime rates throughout the province. The RCMP is responsible for specific deployment of officers, but we continue to support them with the highest funding level per capita in any western province. We invest over half a billion dollars in the RCMP.* We also have programs available to municipalities so that they can add additional officers, and I'd be happy if that municipality were to reach out.

Thank you.

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, we'll certainly take the minister up on that because criminals don't work 9 to 5, and they don't take holidays.

Given that some rural detachments are so understaffed that they don't even have enough officers on duty to be around-the-clock and given that this situation would never be tolerated in our larger urban centres, to the minister: what measures have you taken to ensure that rural Albertans have the same 24/7 police protection that is standard for those who live in Alberta's cities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

*See page 1647, left column, paragraph 7

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Of course, I think the most important measure that the government can take at a time like this is to ensure that we're continuing to invest in front-line services. This government is taking those steps to make sure that that money is there, that we're not cutting 20 per cent out of the budget. That would reduce staff even further. In addition, we've been working with the RCMP. They have started a new integrated crime reduction unit, and they are already seeing results.

2:20

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that many perpetrators are repeat offenders who have underlying mental illness and addiction issues and given that the availability of counsellors in our remand centres is limited but that access to drugs is widespread and given that addressing the root causes of criminal activity through counselling and rehabilitation is essential to breaking the cycle of crime, to the minister: why are illegal drugs readily available in remand centres but counselling services are not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The member and I definitely agree that addressing these underlying root causes is absolutely the right way to go about solving this problem. That's why our government is ensuring that we continue to invest in health care, that we invest in mental health supports, that we continue to invest in education so that we can assist people to make better decisions as they go forward.

Mr. Speaker, with respect to the issue of drugs in correctional centres, we have a number of different things that we do. We've announced just recently a new pilot project with respect to body scanners. Those have been very successful in other jurisdictions, and we hope to see that success here.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

The Member for Airdrie.

Mouseland Read in Schools

Mrs. Pitt: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The NDP has told Alberta's parents that there's nothing to worry about when it comes to curriculum reform. Earlier this month the Member for Edmonton-Decore proudly tweeted several disturbing pictures. What was so disturbing? He was reading a book called Mouseland to children in our classrooms. What exactly is Mouseland? Well, it's NDP hero Tommy Douglas's famous socialist story. Can the minister tell us if he thinks Mouseland is an appropriate book for our young children?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I'm delighted to answer another question about curriculum here today. You know, it's important to have Canadian content in our curriculum, and Tommy Douglas is a perfect example of that. Certainly, we are working hard. More than 35,000 Albertans have contributed to the curriculum program so far. If the UCP and Jason Kenney are interested in constructive criticism of the curriculum, then they can join up and actually make submissions about what should be in our curriculum here in the future. I haven't seen them thus far, but the door is always ...

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, given the minister's unwillingness ... [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Advanced Education, keep your voice down.

Mrs. Pitt: ... to give a straight answer about storytime with the Member for Edmonton-Decore and given that the Member for Spruce Grove-St. Albert also has been reading Mouseland to our school kids and given that it's really not just a fairy tale, that it's the story the NDP founder Tommy Douglas used to push his socialist world view and given that the minister's colleagues are pushing this world view in Alberta's classrooms ... [interjections]

The Speaker: Quiet.

Mrs. Pitt: ... can the minister tell us if he thinks reading socialist ...

The Speaker: Hon. members, where are we? Answer to first supplemental?

Mr. Eggen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, I always get confused about these holidays sometimes. I can't see if it's April Fool's Day or if it's Halloween today. I'm choosing to take the question seriously. You know that Tommy Douglas was voted the greatest Canadian by CBC for a long time. I think that reading and learning about the past and the present and the future is a good thing as well. It's important to build curriculum and to develop curriculum over time. If you take $1.6 billion out of the education system, certainly you can find a very interesting metaphor about big fat cats.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister. [interjections]

Hon. members, please, not so loud with the pounding of the desks.

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, this is not a laughing matter. Albertans are sick of having their classrooms politicized.

Mr. Speaker, given the actions of two of his fellow MLAs – it appears that the minister is supportive of reading highly politicized books to young children – and given that Albertans are supposed to believe that the common curriculum reforms don't have an ulterior motive, will the minister denounce the reading of propaganda and demand that his colleagues cease their behaviour immediately?

The Speaker: The Minister of Education.

Mr. Eggen: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, you know, as it happens, I was a teacher for 20 years, and one of the important lessons that I knew is that you do not ban books, you do not burn books, you do not put books on lists because that's a slippery slope to a place where you just don't go. What we are doing, though, is building a transparent curriculum. We're building a curriculum together with Albertans. We have literally engaged tens of thousands of people. I'm very proud of that process. What I'm not proud of is Jason Kenney and the UCP turning that into a political propaganda machine and a circus. That I do not stand for. [interjections]

The Speaker: Well, you must be excited to get out and do some tricks and treats.

The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon.

Carbon Levy Increase

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Christmas is on the way, and once again the NDP have a special present coming for Albertans. What's that? Well, it's a 50 per cent hike to its job-killing carbon tax. The NDP's tax on everything raises the price of everything from fuelling your vehicle to heating your home and even buying groceries. Of course, the NDP never campaigned on this present, and they never even mentioned it during the campaign. Will the government give Albertans a break and put a hold on their massive tax hike?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, we're making life better for Albertans by reducing greenhouse gases, getting emissions down, and investing in green infrastructure and green energy projects. As I mentioned in a previous question, we have a lot of innovation in Alberta, and we expect that innovation and technology to take the place of carbon emissions. We have a made-in-Alberta plan, and we're making sure that this plan works for Albertans and works for our industry. Our plan is working. As I mentioned previously, we have two pipeline approvals because of this plan.

The Speaker: First supplemental.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the minister's refusal I'll change tack just a little bit. Given that the NDP started with a $20-per-tonne carbon tax and given that they're raising it to $30 per tonne in just two months and given that, to make matters worse, the NDP agreed to a $50-per-tonne carbon tax when Justin Trudeau demanded it – true dat – can the minister tell us if there is any limit to how high the price of their carbon tax could eventually go?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, we're taking leadership on this matter of climate change, something that the new Leader of the Opposition did not do when he was in Ottawa. We're making investments in energy efficiency and green technology, something that $9 billion in cuts for infrastructure would kill, something like the Calgary green line. We're focused on creating jobs and making life more affordable for Albertan families. The Kenney government would prefer big tax giveaways to their wealthy friends. We're taking care of Albertans on this side of the benches.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the government's complete unwillingness to stand up to the Trudeau Liberals, how can we believe that they won't simply agree to another massive carbon tax increase should Justin Trudeau demand one? I ask the minister again: how high would the number have to go before the NDP finally says no to Ottawa?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

2:30

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What this side of the House is unwilling to do is listen to an opposition that wants us to not create a made-in-Alberta solution for climate change and wants more Ottawa. They want more NEB, more imposition from Ottawa. On this side of the House we're taking care of Albertans by creating a made-in-Alberta plan for Albertan workers and Alberta families.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Indigenous Economic and Climate Initiatives

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituency of Wetaskiwin-Camrose is the home of the largest indigenous communities in the province, including a significant urban indigenous population as well. This morning we proudly debated Bill 20, about water for First Nations communities. In 2016 our government made a commitment to the principles of the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples. To the Minister of Indigenous Relations: what is being done to support good-paying jobs and economic development for indigenous peoples living in communities like Maskwacis?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for the question. The Indigenous Relations ministry is currently working with all four bands at Maskwacis on economic development projects, and with each project we provide a variety of sources for the community to be able to better themselves and to create new jobs and revenue for their own community. An example for today is the Samson Cree Nation, who used our fund to provide a feasibility study and a business plan for a community-owned truck stop and gas station located near the city of Canmore. I've also been working with Montana First Nation for several years on their solar energy program.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.
First supplemental.

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that indigenous communities often struggle with access to energy, to the same minister: what is being done to ensure that indigenous communities can participate in Alberta's growing market for sustainable, renewable energy and support both their traditional commitment to the land and the goals of our climate leadership plan?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the member for the question. We're very happy to have announced earlier this year seven different programs in the indigenous climate leadership initiative that will allow First Nations to participate fully in the program to restore our land, our air, and our water to its pure form. That includes programs such as the indigenous solar program, that funds rooftop solar, and the Alberta indigenous green energy development program, which supports funding for jobs in the communities.

The Speaker: Second supplemental.

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm quite proud of the leadership our indigenous nations have been making, but given that the 2016 federal census shows that the indigenous population in Alberta is growing rapidly, to the same minister: what steps are you taking to ensure that indigenous voices are included and heard in the discussions on all matters that concern them?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for the question. I'd like to take just a moment to thank the member, who is working very hard with the indigenous communities in his riding as I know that he cares deeply about them.

In answer to his question, we have been inviting indigenous people to the table in a way that they have never experienced before. In fact, some of them tell me that we're almost exhausting them with the amount of opportunity we're giving them to speak to government policy and practice. Right now, for example, we're renewing the First Nations consultation policy, the Métis settlement consultation policy, and the Métis consultation policy for the broader province.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Surgery Wait Times

Mr. Yao: Mr. Speaker, this government continues to fail Albertans. Under this Health minister the first quarter of 2017-2018 shows that Alberta Health Services is failing our constituents. Cataract surgery wait times are at their longest in three years, at over nine months. Open-heart surgery people now have to wait five weeks longer than last year. Does this Minister of Health, who's been at the job for 30 months, realize that her job is to reduce these wait times?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My job is to ensure that all Albertans get access to quality public health care, and I will not apologize for doing that. Obviously, we have work to do, and we are absolutely committed to doing that for all Albertans. We don't want to move forward with Jason Kenney style health care, where only the wealthy, probably the people who donated to his campaign – but we don't even know who those are because he won't tell us – get to access quality health care and the rest of us wait on our own because we have no options. That's the wrong path. I'm glad to stand with a government that's investing in public health care.

Mr. Yao: Mr. Speaker, according to AHS in Calgary you have to wait 35 weeks for a hip surgery. In the north it is a whopping 48 weeks, and in the south zone it is 55 weeks to wait for a hip surgery. To the minister: why is there such a large discrepancy within these regions? What are you doing to identify this and resolve these issues?

Ms Hoffman: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm incredibly proud of the fact that we are investing in long overdue infrastructure throughout our province. Let's talk about the southwest Edmonton hospital. Edmonton hasn't had a new hospital since the 1980s. That's shameful. Under the Official Opposition, were they to have the opportunity, they would cut $9 billion from our infrastructure alone and 20 per cent from the Health operating budget. You know what that would do? That would mean seniors would wait in pain while they're requiring hip surgeries, and only the wealthy would get access. That's not what we're doing. We're moving forward to protect all.

Mr. Yao: Mr. Speaker, they're just practising for the opposition here.

Mr. Speaker, given that in the central region a report from the 2015 needs assessment shows a shortfall, when you're talking about infrastructure, of 96 beds, 18 ER beds, and three OR rooms, there's an infrastructure deficit in central Alberta. Have you identified that, have you looked at those reports, and what are you doing about it?

Ms Hoffman: Mr. Speaker, I'm so proud to be part of a government that's investing in public health care. Just in the first three months of this year we opened 388 new continuing care beds. What would happen under Jason Kenney? Cuts, cuts, and more cuts. On this side of the House we're standing up for Albertans and we're investing in things that matter to them, like health care. The member opposite is delusional if he thinks that they can move $20 billion in cuts, $9 billion in capital, without having an even deeper impact. I am proud of what we're doing on this side of the House, and you won't convince me otherwise. [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. minister. [interjection] Hon. minister, please. The Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Openness and Transparency in Government

Mr. Cooper: Mr. Speaker, under NDP rule the government of Alberta has become the most secretive and least transparent government in our country. Canadian privacy experts have denounced entire departments as rogue agencies, and Alberta's own Information Commissioner has repeatedly called for the NDP to clean up what she has described as "fast approaching a crisis situation." Is the NDP incapable of cleaning up the cesspool of government policies, or is it simply too convenient to operate in the shadows?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Ms McLean: Thank you for the question, Mr. Speaker. We believe the government should be open and transparent. Our government is more open and transparent than the government in the history of Alberta has ever been. We are hiring more FOIP processors to clear the backlog, we're streamlining the FOIP process, and we're proactively disclosing more information than the Alberta government ever has before. We're taking real action on this. It's clear to us that we inherited a mess, and it's taking a long time to clean it up.

Mr. Cooper: Given that the UCP has discovered through access to information what appears to be the deletion of over 800,000 e-mails from government servers and since these e-mails are public record and belong to the people of Alberta, is there anyone on that side of the House that can explain how record retention policies were so deliberately ignored and almost a million e-mails permanently deleted from the public record?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for the opportunity to add some clarity to my friends in the opposition. We certainly welcome the investigation by the Privacy Commissioner, and we are certainly of the view that this is a good opportunity to make clear to our public officials and, clearly, to the opposition that there is a requirement in the act that requires us to keep official records, but we are also required to delete transitory documents because nobody wants my Gap coupons.

2:40

Mr. Cooper: I can assure you that there are not 800,000 transitory records.

Mr. Speaker, given that the Information and Privacy Commissioner has informed us that she is in fact investigating four departments due to this apparent breach and since government officials were offering iTunes gift cards as prizes to see who could delete the most e-mails, Minister, when is your government going to face the music and tackle your terrible, terrible record on transparency?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for the opportunity to answer this question. As I have said, our government is the most transparent that the Alberta government has ever been in the history of freedom of information and access. There is certainly more work to do, and we are constantly ensuring that our senior officials have appropriate training. We encourage them to do so. While that kind of contest is not within our guidelines and we would not encourage that, we do encourage appropriate training so that our officials know which documents need to be saved and which ones need to be deleted.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Minister of Justice has requested that she make a correction to an earlier answer.

The hon. Minister of Justice.

Rural Crime Prevention

(continued)

Ms Ganley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to correct a response I gave to the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster. I had said that we provide half a billion dollars in RCMP funding, which is, of course, incorrect. It's half a billion dollars in police funding, because many of our municipalities have police services that are not the RCMP.*

Thank you.

Dr. Starke: Well, that's fine. It's clarification. It's a good job. Thank you.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Government Policies

Mr. Hunter: Mr. Speaker, I want to take you on a short trip down memory lane. You might remember the flamboyant vampire character Count Floyd, played by Joe Flaherty. You'll remember him in the Canadian TV show SCTV. Count Floyd became famous for the phrase "scary stuff." Seeing as this is Halloween, I want to honour the iconic SCTV Count Floyd by naming the top five scary stuff that this NDP government is engaged in.

In the number 1 spot we have this NDP government jumping at shadows any time they hear the name of our new leader, Jason Kenney. It's kind of like the hyenas in The Lion King movie that kept jumping at the name Mufasa. No wonder the Premier won't call a by-election. She's afraid of facing our leader in this Chamber.

In the number 2 spot: this government's deficit is $10 billion, and its projected debt is going to be over $90 billion by 2020. I can tell you that this is going to be a nightmare for children in Alberta. That is pretty scary stuff indeed.

In the number 3 spot is implying that Catholics condone spousal rape. Now, that's some sick, scary stuff.

In the number 4 spot: the carbon tax, capping oil sands productions, and Bill 6. Yes, there is more than one thing mentioned here, but all these things drive away investment and cost Albertans thousands of jobs. If that isn't scary stuff, Mr. Speaker, I don't know what is.

To cap off the top five scary stuff this NDP government is doing is the F, Mr. Speaker. What I'm talking about is the grade F that they continue to receive from the Canadian Federation of Independent Business on red tape reduction. Did you know that Alberta is the only government in Canada that doesn't have a red tape reduction strategy? Did you know that this government doesn't even know how many regulations they have? Now, that is some very scary stuff.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Johnson MS Bike Tour

Mr. Rosendahl: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My wife, Linda, and I recently had the pleasure of attending the 2017 Johnson MS mountain bike tour. This unique event brings riding enthusiasts to the backcountry trails around Hinton, Brûle, and William A. Switzer park every year. This year over 260 cyclists and 43 teams joined us on our spectacular Rocky Mountain trails. Participants rode 90 kilometres over challenging mountain terrain to raise money and awareness for MS. This event was a huge success. Just over $300,000 was raised to support the work of the MS Society. They provide support to approximately 14,000 Albertans living with MS. While there are other rides for MS around the province, the Johnson MS tour is the only mountain bike event. Linda and I enjoyed meeting participants as we helped to serve a lunch at the Black Cat ranch in the shadow of the Rocky Mountains near Brûle. We were also there at the finish line and celebrated with everyone at the awards dinner in Hinton.

Now we are looking forward to the 2018 Johnson MS Bike Tour. The MS Society is especially excited since this will mark the 20th anniversary of this unique event. I hope that everyone will join me in supporting and congratulating the MS Society for their ongoing success in fundraising to support research and awareness of MS in Alberta.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Catholic School Sex Education Curriculum

Mr. McIver: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the last few days the Premier has essentially accused every Catholic in Alberta of being in favour of marital rape and of wanting to pass this belief on to their children. The Premier, having heard the over-the-top intolerant rhetoric of her Education minister, decided that she would be the head Catholic school punisher in Alberta and took her language and tone to a place all of us in this Legislature should be ashamed of.

Catholic school boards have been working in good faith – pun intended – with the Education ministry in trying to meet the requirements of the minister's ordered curriculum changes. The Education minister chose to take to the media channels to demean, threaten, and intimidate duly elected separate school boards from across this province from his ministerial bully pulpit. Remember, it is Catholic parents from all across Alberta who elected these people. In fact, the Catholic schools made it very clear in writing, in black and white, that consent before sexual activity is an important aspect of Catholic sexual education teachings.

Somehow the Premier chose to overlook this or did not check this key fact and went on a tirade against all Albertans of the Catholic faith. The Premier's words amount to saying that Catholics are teaching their children that consent within marriage is not required. Mr. Speaker, I think we can all agree in this House that sexual activity without consent is illegal, criminal, and wrong.

The Premier has attacked Catholic schools and by extension every Catholic teacher, parent, school board member, and even child in Alberta. These good people are now tainted by the irresponsible, reckless, and hurtful words of their own Premier. The United Nations declaration of human rights under article 26(3) states: "Parents have a prior right to choose the kind of education that shall be given to their children."

Mr. Speaker, it's a sad day in Alberta when a Premier of a province needs to be asked to apologize for such an abhorrent quote, but that's where we are today. It gives me no joy to say what I'm saying, but in the absence of an apology from this Premier it is my duty. Premier, do the right thing and apologize.

*See page 1643, right column, paragraph 12

Introduction of Bills

Bill 21

Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017

The Speaker: The hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Ceci: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce first reading of Bill 21.

Mr. Speaker, provincial government agencies, boards, and commissions play a pivotal role in delivering important programs and services to Albertans. This is why we are committed to continuing the review of Alberta's agencies, boards, and commissions. This review was first announced in November 2015 and looked at the 301 public agencies that existed at the time. Since then our government has reduced the number of ABCs, cut executive salaries and perks, and opened the recruiting process for those ABCs to all Albertans. The ongoing review of agencies, boards, and commissions ensures ABCs are transparent, accountable, and using public dollars effectively and efficiently. There are a number of agencies that are no longer relevant, and it is not prudent to keep them in place. We are combining with others to achieve additional efficiencies.

Bill 21, which we are introducing today, is the second omnibus bill that will implement the dissolution of public agencies that require legislative amendments as well as consequential amendments. Bill 21 proposes to repeal or amend nine pieces of legislation to dissolve 14 public agencies. These changes are intended to address inactive and defunct agencies as well as create administrative efficiencies.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 21 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier and Minister of Health.

2:50

Bill 22

Resident and Family Councils Act

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Resident and Family Councils Act.

Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to introduce this bill. I believe this act will support the establishment of resident and family councils in all long-term care and licensed supportive living facilities that have four or more residents. These councils are an important mechanism for establishing resident and family councils to present requests, concerns, and proposed solutions to facility operators.

I personally attended a couple when my mom was away when my grandmother lived at the Edmonton General and found that it was a very important opportunity for me to learn from facility operators as well as to express my grandmother's hopes, mostly as they related to doing laundry or the food that she was consuming as those were two things that she took great pride in before she lived in a facility, and she wanted them to be held to the same standard. It was certainly beneficial to be able to participate in those formal structures.

Mr. Speaker, this government believes that residents of Alberta's long-term and licensed supportive living facilities should have a say in how care and supports are being delivered and how they can be improved. With this legislation these residents can be assured that regardless of whether their facility is privately or publicly funded, they will have a forum to voice concerns and share feedback to their facility operators.

I look forward to discussions and deliberations with my colleagues on this important initiative. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

Dr. Starke: Well, Mr. Speaker, Albertans deserve thoughtful discussion on a wide range of issues. Given the day and in deference to the efforts of Martin Luther 500 years ago I'd like to table five copies of not 95 theses but 95 questions for debate that should be of concern to Albertans, and I invite the start of debate on these issues.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 19

An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Labour.

Ms Gray: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I rise to begin debate on second reading of Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers.

Standing behind a till or pumping gas should be safe work, Madam Speaker. Our kids do it. Our neighbours do it. Our friends do it. That's how they earn their living, pay for school, or feed their families. When one of these workers is hurt or injured through a gas and dash or a robbery, we are all shocked. We are saddened. We feel that to our core. No one should suffer injury and pain. No family should suffer the loss of a loved one just because someone else was selfish enough to try to drive away with a tankful of stolen gas. Over the last three years violence at fuel stations and convenience stores has killed five workers and seriously injured three others. As Albertans our hearts break when that happens, and our pain is nothing compared to that of the individuals and families involved.

It must stop, so it is with hope that I introduced Bill 19. I believe that these proposed changes before us here today, with the support of all members of this House, can prevent these incidents from happening again. I know we all recognize the pain on the families who were here at introduction yesterday.

Earlier last year I promised that I would address fuel and convenience store worker safety. Over the last 18 months my department has held engagement sessions with industry, labour groups, advocates for convenience store workers. Occupational health and safety officers have proactively conducted store inspections to better understand risks in retail fuel stations and convenience stores. The result is Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers. Bill 19 does this in two ways; first, by making customers prepay for their fuel either at the pump or by prepaying the attendant before fuelling up and, second, by making violence prevention plans mandatory.

I will now take a bit of time to walk us all through both of these areas in Bill 19, starting with prepaying for fuel. Bill 19 amends the occupational health and safety code to make prepayment for fuel mandatory. Right now it is voluntary. Already many retailers across Alberta have voluntarily equipped their stations with pay at the pump technology, and many have implemented prepay policies either at all times or in effect overnight. That will now be in effect for all fuel stations 24 hours a day.

Prepayment doesn't always mean pay at the pump. Prepayment options don't always need expensive pump upgrades. Our goal is to protect workers, not to create hardships for owners. Prepay options can include paying the service attendant ahead of time or going into the store and paying the cashier. Those options will make it easier for small operators to implement prepay quickly.

We know that there is a very small number of pumps in the province that can't be controlled by workers from inside the store. We are going to be working directly with retailers on other solutions to improve safety and potentially reduce fuel theft as well as make sure that worker safety is the priority. Bill 19 has that flexibility built in.

Data from the Alberta Association of Chiefs of Police shows that in 2015 there was an average of 12 fuel thefts per day, 4,000 that year. Every one of those was a potential risk to the attendants, and yesterday Edmonton Police Chief Rod Knecht shared that each incident can take an average of four hours to investigate. We are talking about a huge amount of time from our police services across the province.

When British Columbia implemented similar legislation in 2008 fuel thefts and related violence virtually disappeared. In British Columbia drivers got used to prepay relatively quickly. We expect Alberta drivers will also adjust.

Bill 19 also complements other workplace legislation in Alberta. Alberta's Fair and Family-friendly Workplaces Act clarified that it is illegal for employers to deduct thefts from their employees' wages. Workers should not be held personally responsible for fuel thefts, and this change will reduce confrontations between workers and thieves, seriously reducing the potential for violence. Mandatory prepay provides Alberta workers with even greater protection, and it's a benefit to owners by reducing losses from stolen fuel.

The second way that Bill 19 protects fuel station and convenience store workers is by amending the occupational health and safety code to make violence prevention plans mandatory. We did the research and found that these kinds of programs, along with strong training opportunities, are the most effective way to reduce crime and worker injuries. Again, up till now violence prevention plans have been voluntary, and many fuel stations and convenience stores in Alberta already have some of these methods in place. They have time-lock safes that have no overnight access. They have minimal amounts of cash on hand. They maybe have video monitoring. Bill 19 will make these mandatory and require signs to be posted so that customers know these measures are in place.

We also know that tobacco and lottery tickets are common targets for theft. Bill 19 will require retailers to keep limited amounts of these available overnight.

Good visibility is the enemy of crime. Stores will be required to have good visibility both within and outside the premises. People working alone will need to have personal emergency transmitters, and all workers must have violence prevention training that includes how to deal with difficult or abusive customers.

3:00

I know that some people have called for rules preventing people from working alone at night. We looked at the research and found that using multiple workers showed mixed results. Violence prevention plans and training are the most effective ways to reduce crime and violence at fuel and convenience stores and are appropriate for all stores across Alberta.

That being said, every store must complete a hazard assessment and address any identified challenges. That may mean for some locations that additional safety measures are warranted, and I encourage all owners and operators to work with OH and S, who can advise on safety measures to protect workers.

Again, I know that cost is a concern, and I can say with confidence that the cost of a violence prevention plan is expected to be minimal. Many businesses already have purchased time-locked safes and video monitoring technology, and those are the highest cost components. Personal emergency transmitters can start as low as $3.50 per month per user.

So what happens if Bill 19 passes this fall? Fuel and convenience stores will have six months to adjust. The legislation will come into effect June 1 of next year, and we will be working very closely with store owners across Alberta to communicate changes to them every step of the way. As well, I will work with my ministry to prepare materials to assist owners, operators, and workers. For fuel stations and convenience stores these changes are not onerous. Many already have prepay in place, at least under certain circumstances, and a lot of them already have violence prevention systems and procedures.

Friends, Bill 19 is a response to the tragedies we've seen as Albertans, but it is also thoughtful legislation built on consultation with those who represent the businesses, workers, law enforcement, and the families of victims. It's driven by the conviction that every worker in Alberta should return home safely at the end of the workday. No worker should be injured and no family should lose a loved one because of a stolen tank of gas or other theft. Our government promised to take action and protect those precious lives, and that action starts with Bill 19. I welcome the debate on this bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Devon.

Mr. Smith: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise today with a heavy heart, a heart that is truly in mourning, to address Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers. Ki Yun Jo, the gas station owner killed in Thorsby, Alberta, as a result of a gas and dash, was one of my constituents. I gassed up at this station many times over the past two years, and he was always polite, and he was always willing to be of service. You could tell that this was a family-run gas station and that he was a hard-working immigrant making a life for himself and his family in this adopted country called Canada.

There are times in life when you wish you could just change things, when you ask yourself: why? Too often there is no real answer, no real answer that helps us to understand the tragedies of life. It's at those times that you reach out to your family and to your community and to your God. You surround yourself with love, and eventually, after the grieving process has begun to turn to healing, you begin to ask and you begin to answer the question: how do we make sure that this never happens again?

The day before Jo was killed, I was in a meeting with several people, one of whom was the staff sergeant of the Drayton Valley RCMP detachment. At the end of the meeting he took me aside, and he said, "Mark, I want to talk to you about a problem that I want you to address in the Legislature." To paraphrase him, he said: "Mark, we have a serious problem in this constituency with people stealing vehicles, then gassing up the stolen vehicles, and taking off without paying. If we don't address this soon, someone is going to die.” His recommendation was the introduction of a prepay system for purchasing gas.

So it was with great sadness and with great shock that the very next day I heard about the death of Ki Yun Jo. This death, like all of the other senseless deaths accredited to gas and dash, can be mitigated through a prepay provincial piece of legislation. It has worked in other jurisdictions around North America and in Canada, and it can work here.

Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers, will have my support. Bill 19 can be broken into two parts: part one, the mandatory prepay, and the second part, about a violence protection plan. While we have at times, I’m sure, all grumbled about the inconvenience of prepay when travelling in another province or in places like California, the reality is that prepay has saved lives by effectively addressing the issue of gas and dash.

In the days after Jo’s death, I made a point of stopping at several of the gas stations in my constituency to have a conversation about prepay legislation. Without exception they told me stories about their experiences with gas and dashes. Incredibly, in the small town of Calmar at one gas station there were two gas and dashes in the two days following the death of Jo. There was not only concern about the lost income and worker safety but, just as importantly, the safety of the citizens as the vehicles raced out of the gas station. One of the employees was very concerned that people on the sidewalks and cars on the road were going to get hit as these gas-and-dash vehicles went flying out of the gas station.

Bill 19 has a flexible approach to prepay in that it can allow citizens to prepay at the pump. You can prepay using cash or debit card at the till, and you can leave ID at the till and pay cash in the store. If stores do not have in-store pump control, the gas station can work with occupational health and safety to put together alternative measures that will ensure worker safety.

The second part of Bill 19 is a violence prevention plan. This will implement a series of measures designed to enhance worker safety. It will include employee training on safe cash handling and violence prevention, special safes with time locks or drop safes to take away the incentive for violence, a limited quantity of goods on hand of high-quality items like tobacco or lottery tickets. The flexibility on this issue has been built into the bill with a common-sense approach, whereby specific amounts will be determined by individual employers based on sales, past sales and projected sales. It includes increased high visibility regarding windows and lines of sight that will increase worker safety. It controls access into and out of the workplace, video surveillance, posters that will outline the safety measures that have been taken so that customers will be educated, and it will act as a deterrent to those that have other ideas. Personal safety transmitters will be employed to monitor employees that are working alone.

Madam Speaker, while there will be some cost to this, Bill 19 does provide enough flexibility that the cost does not need to be prohibitive. There are no fines or penalties built into Bill 19, but the plans and the training must be evident to OH and S inspectors on-site if requested.

3:10

Overall, Bill 19 addresses the issue of gas and dash with flexibility and effectiveness, and it will have my support. I realize that there may be some that will decry the inconvenience of prepay or believe that the cost to the gas and convenience store owners is too high, but I believe that the benefits to the community, to the promotion of law and order, to community safety far outweigh any perceived or real negative outcomes.

The week after Jo’s tragic death the community of Thorsby came together to mourn with the family. I watched as people cried and prayed and as they attempted to love the family. I saw a long line of people give their condolences, and those same people would have, if they could have, done anything to reverse the events that took Jo’s life. While we cannot turn back time, in this Legislature we can ensure that we have taken measures to ensure worker safety and to address the tragedy that can happen when there is a gas and dash. It is my fond hope that should we pass this piece of legislation, this will be the last time that we have to mourn because of a death created by a gas and dash.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Mrs. Schreiner: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am proud to speak to you and through you to all of my fellow members in the House as cosponsor on the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods’ Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers. Friends, family is the cornerstone of our great province. Family is there to get you through the tough times and is present to share the triumphs. We are compassionate to their safety and well-being because as Albertans we revere family as the fabric of our great province. We all work hard for our families and cannot negate that it is the fundamental cornerstone that drives us on a daily basis.

Madam Speaker, I wish to offer a moment of silence in the House as a respectful tribute to the families whose loved ones did not make it home because of the reckless actions of fuel thieves. Over the last three years five Albertans’ lives have been taken, and three have sustained serious injury as a result of their occupational vulnerability. This, fellow members, must stop. I rise today in support of Bill 19, an Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers, which serves to strengthen and protect those at risk of the needless consequences of their jobs. Pumping gas and standing behind a till is an essential service in our economy. As Albertans we have built a national, international, and global legacy from our rich resource. As many Albertans have built a life, we must do our best as a government to protect them in all facets.

I am saddened to have read that five lives have been taken as a result of violence arising at gas and convenience store locations, and I encourage Bill 19 as a further prevention to this minimization of our citizens’ lives. These crimes take a toll on Albertan society and threaten the sanctity of our workplaces. Through consultation and proactive store inspections we have learned that we can mitigate risk through legislation and thoughtful preventative measures.

Madam Speaker, it is a great opportunity for this member today and for all members in the House today. Legislation aimed at protecting our workforce is most definitely multifaceted. Reducing negative impact through prepay methods focuses on a strong deterrence to the risk for our gas and convenience workforce. At this point this voluntary mechanism has been adopted by many within the industry, with strong support from advocates and labour groups.

Prepayment need not be viewed as an expense if it enables our gas and convenience workers the liberty they deserve: going home at night. Options are available to support this legislation with minimal overhead costs. Our goal is to protect workers, not create hardship for owners. It is integral to recognize that there is no justice for a life lost, and over the last three years there have been five lost.

Current data supports that there were an average of 12 fuel thefts per day in 2015. Effecting prepayment mechanisms can significantly reduce this number, and this, Madam Speaker, resonates sound governance. The burden of these thefts exasperates our police force, and implementing prepayment further exemplifies mitigating impact.

When we look to our neighbours to the west, in B.C., we can identify the opportunities of effecting Bill 19. Prepayment resulted in the virtual disappearance of fuel thefts and crime-related violence.

Madam Speaker, I firmly believe that the lives of our gas and convenience store workers are well worth the few extra moments it takes to prepay for fuel. As Albertans our ability to be adaptable and resilient can assist in assimilating this legislation with seamless and flawless execution. When we partner Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers, with amendments to our occupational healthy and safety code, we are maintaining our mandate to make life better and safer for all Albertans.

Research supports that coupling prepayment legislation in conjunction with mandatory violence protection plans is an effective way to reduce crime and worker injury. Up until now both have been voluntary, and the aforementioned statistics correlate with a resounding need for change.

Time-lock safes with no overnight access, minimal amounts of on-hand cash, and video monitoring are strong deterrents to criminal activity. Good visibility on targeted premises further enhances the safety of our gas and convenience store workers. Reducing accessibility of commonly targeted commodities such as lottery tickets and tobacco products and personal emergency transmitters also serve to mitigate risk and vulnerability. Madam Speaker, these are viable remedial solutions that serve to protect our Albertans who are just trying to make a living.

Empowerment is attained through training investments that focus on how to deal with difficult and abusive individuals. This further stands to mitigate risk, which, in turn, recognizes profit potential, and this, fellow members, is a win-win.

3:20

Legislating Bill 19 is a call to action that serves to preserve the interests of our industry and its workers. It serves as a message that we as a government can and will respond to the predicating values of our great province. This is our commitment to reducing crime, preserving the safety and sanctity of our Albertans, and redefining the values of the lives and livelihoods of our proud Albertan men and women.

Madam Speaker and fellow members, if Bill 19 is passed, we are resolute in working alongside store owners across Alberta and maintaining the communications that enable these changes with thoughtful regard. But what we cannot misunderstand is the importance of this legislation and the safety mechanisms it serves to effect.

I wish to thank all those organizations who have effected these precautionary measures to preserve the safety of their staff and business. We wholeheartedly open the doors of communication to those who require assistance in implementing the mandate. We stand unified in our efforts to ensure the safe return home of all employees, who are, like everyone, working to make life better for all Albertans.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I will recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. An honour and a pleasure to stand and speak to this very important bill that, yeah, has needed leadership for some time, and it's getting leadership, from my point of view.

Instituting mandatory prepayment for fuel purchases in Alberta will reduce gas-and-dash incidents. It will save lives. It just stands to reason that if a person has to provide payment before filling up with fuel, theft becomes much more difficult. Requiring prepayment for fuel purchases is the next logical step after the government recently amended the Employment Standards Code to prohibit employers from holding staff financially responsible for stolen gas. Since the proposed prepay approach is somewhat flexible and won't actually require gas station operators to install prepay pumps, at a price tag of around $30,000 each, the cost of compliance is also not overly burdensome. Many gas station operators already use prepay systems, so in some respects this is a case of the legislation catching up with the industry trends.

Evidence from other jurisdictions shows that mandatory workplace violence prevention plans can be highly effective in reducing crime at fuel and convenience stores and protect the health and safety of workers. While there are some naysayers, to me the concerns about freedom and choice pale in comparison to the importance of the safety and health of our workers.

I have no amendments to suggest and only full support for this as quickly as possible. Let's facilitate this and, obviously, wait the six months to allow for operators to bring into place these important changes. I applaud the government for its initiative on this.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I will recognize the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mr. Cyr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think it's very admirable to see that we're trying to keep Albertans safe, especially those that are working late at night and during the day. I think that any time we can move a law forward, that shows that we have the best interests of Albertans at heart, especially for those that have an entire vested interest in ensuring that these gas stations work.

Now, as I'm sure many of you in this House are already aware of, my constituency right now is going through some hard times: high vacancy, a lot of businesses struggling. I can tell you that every dollar that goes into a business right now makes a difference. I know that the gentleman that was killed in Thorsby probably was run over for $50. I don't know the total, but it probably wasn't a lot of money. But when you put in perspective – and this is from the cosponsor. She said that 12 of these fuel thefts were happening per day in 2015. That amounts to a lot, and that's only what's been reported. I can only assume that a lot of what is happening right now goes unreported. When we've got a business that's already struggling to make the rent payments or pay their staff or bring merchandise in, it is incredibly bad for business to have your merchandise walk away.

Now, I can tell you that one of those things from the facts that we've done for research is that there are 1,500 gas stations, and about 12 to 15 of those 1,500 gas stations do not have pay at the pump. That seems like we've got a very small percentage of the whole right now that can already do this, so the impact should be low if we bring this legislation in. It should be very low impact, but there is going to be some impact. I do understand that when we're dealing with the fact that we need to make sure the employees aren't put in unsafe conditions, we need to also address other things.

Now, cash handling is definitely something that I think every business should be looking out for and putting a plan forward for. I know that as a past business owner myself we made sure there was never any cash on premises when we closed the business, but a lot of these businesses are 24 hours, and they don't have that ability, so it's important that the staff have training and are able to know that cash is just not on the premises. I think it's great that we're starting to say that there shouldn't be sizable amounts of cash on hand. I also think that we do need to be cautious, though.

Now, I will say that possibly 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. may be a little bit onerous for some businesses. The reason is that some businesses are – in my constituency we've got guys that drive two hours away, so they need to gas up in the morning. That means they're getting to these gas stations at about 4, 4:30 in the morning. We do need to make sure that we have the ability for these gas stations to be able to deal with the high volumes in case there are peak periods, especially when they're close to oil sands projects and other large businesses.

Also, another one of the concerns that I've got here is if you go to the bill and look at 392.2(c), "maintaining good visibility into and out of the work site." It could be that they're going to be needing some significant structure upgrades, which could be very onerous. Again, safety needs to be definitely considered first, because you always want to make sure that safety is put forward first for every one of the employees that are within Alberta. I guess the question here is that if OH and S is going to be willing to work with these struggling gas stations and convenience stations across Alberta to ensure visibility, maybe they could do it with mirrors or something like that, but to actually have to go in there and change foundation – suddenly we're adding several hundred thousand dollars to something that may be something we can explore a little easier.

3:30

Or even making sure that there is video surveillance. I will say – this is another thing – that we have had remarkable gains when it comes to video surveillance, and I think that it's not very cost prohibitive right now. It's something that's accessible. I think that this is great, that we are able to say: this is important, that these groups are starting to look at identifying these people that are running away from a gas station without paying.

Now, I will say that I have a constituent who wrote me. This is a constituent. His name is Gerald Lafond, and I'd like to read the e-mail that he put forward.

[Dear MLA for Bonnyville-Cold Lake,] I am outraged Oil companies are surviving the economic downturn unscathed by maintaining high pump prices and not passing the only advantage of low oil prices down to the consumer. There seems to be an acceptable scam going on and people don't appear to be reacting to this shenanigan.

Please explain why Oil companies are not offering a direct proportional rate at the pumps vs. crude oil prices. I understand a lot has to do with inventories and a wheel barrow full of other excuses but [there's] no justification for inflated prices of $40/[barrel of] oil.

Now, he goes on, but this is relevant because what's happening here is that we're seeing a rapid increase in gasoline prices within our province. Now, in this case I would argue that we have created a high value for this gasoline, and we've done that through taxes. By putting so much tax on this, it is becoming a real strain not only for those without work but for those that have jobs right now.

Now, for those that can't afford it, what we're seeing here is that a carbon tax is directly affecting their lives and the fact that you've got a GST on a carbon tax, a tax on a tax, if you will. Now, that means that what we're looking at here is a commodity that is becoming very valuable because it's very expensive.

Now, there's an article that was put forward by Global News. The article's title is Shot Fired during Attempted Fuel Theft near Red Deer: RCMP. Now, what happens here is that we're not only seeing this fuel theft at gas stations; we're also seeing this fuel theft out in rural Alberta. This is a real problem for rural Alberta because what we're seeing now is that there is an incredible spike in rural crime.

It's not just something we're seeing in the fuel stations; we're also seeing it across Alberta. This is what happens indirectly when you start overtaxing people. We start to see that there's an increase, or a spike, in theft, and what happens is that it puts people's lives at risk.

Now, when we hear that over the last three years five deaths have happened because of this fuel and dash – I'm not attributing these five people to a carbon tax because that's ridiculous, but what I am doing is saying that we're creating a real energy poverty within this province. When we create that, what we're doing is we are putting people in positions that are more or less saying: in order to heat my house, in order to fuel my car, in order to do basic things in life – and I can't afford them – what do I do? I would hope that we back off on some of these other things because in the end we're going to see larger spikes in crime and we're going to see more things like this as we continue to levy more and more taxes on Albertans.

I think this is a great bill. I think that the fact that we put this forward is a protection. I do think we need to be very cautious to ensure that there's not red tape that prevents business from operating, but we also need to make sure that the consumer is protected. I can tell you right now that as I see this carbon tax being implemented, we're going to see more and more energy poverty within our province.

I'd like to say that the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster was very clear when he was talking about a large spike in crime. What we need to start doing is actually going after these criminals that are doing these things because if there is an end result, we start holding people accountable for their crimes, you're going to start seeing a decrease. We won't see shots fired on Red Deer residences. We won't see as many of these gas thefts.

I will tell you that people become more and more creative when it comes to theft. We'll find a way to reduce the amount of risk that comes with paying at the pump, but what's the next step here? Does that mean that these thefts – these thefts are going to happen anyway. Are we shifting these thefts from a gas station to farmers and ranchers inside of Alberta? Are we shifting these thefts? We know that they need gasoline. Are we moving that into a person's personal property? It's important that we bring this forward.

But it also is important that we address the fact that rural crime is out of control in rural Alberta. We need to make sure that our constituents and my constituency are protected. Now, that means that we need to put resources towards our prosecutors to ensure that they start prosecuting these crimes and getting these petty crime convictions ahead of time, before they create something like a death. What we're looking at now is that if we start to shift this out to rural Alberta – we do not want vigilantism to be part of protecting your property. We do not want people to be put in the position where the only thing they can do about ensuring that they have safety on their property is a gun by the door because that is tragic.

I heard from the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster that it takes an hour for people in rural Alberta to hear from the RCMP. Now, I have sat with my local RCMP. They're incredible. Both the detachments are incredible. They work hard. These men and women are incredible. They do an incredible job. I can tell you that I have heard that the frustration is that we have the same group of people committing the same crimes over and over again because we're not getting these people off the streets. Now, it could be, as we heard, again, from the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, that there's a systemic problem. I can tell you that the detachment in Cold Lake specifically identifies drugs as that problem, and they've started to focus on that.

I think that as a province we need to start addressing that we have a real problem when it comes to this, so we need to start dealing with these kinds of problems, like how do we protect the workers, but how do we ensure that that theft doesn't move out and start affecting more and more people?

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, another speaker. I will recognize Calgary-Klein.

Mr. Coolahan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am pleased to rise today to speak to Bill 19, An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers. I am very pleased that this government is introducing Bill 19. It's bills like this that I think all legislators in this Assembly should be proud to pass because it's a bill that will save lives. I'm actually inspired by the tone in here today.

3:40

Madam Speaker, the deaths of gas station and convenience store workers really are the catalyst to this legislation. For me, these deaths are the most heartbreaking and egregious of them all. That's because these deaths occurred while on the job, while people were merely trying to earn a living for themselves and their families. Every Albertan should return home from work. While accidents happen, if we can help reduce deaths at work through legislation, then we should, and we are doing that with Bill 19.

You know, there have been some tragic incidents of gas station employees, including June 2015 in Calgary, October 2015 in Edmonton, and, of course, most recently on October 6, 2017, in Thorsby, in which Mr. Jo, a gas station owner, was struck and killed. It was very emotional to have his family here in the Assembly yesterday, Madam Speaker, as I'm sure you're aware.

As I've stated in this Assembly before, the gas-and-dash death in Calgary in 2015 of Maryam Rashidi occurred in my constituency of Calgary-Klein. In fact, I was taking my daughter to the local hardware store that morning, the morning of Ms Rashidi's death, which is located right beside the gas station where she worked. My daughter and I were minutes away from seeing the incident. I can't imagine if we had. You know, I often used to purchase gas at this gas station, too, and unknowingly had met Ms Rashidi. I just didn't know that it was her. I also spoke at Ms Rashidi's funeral. It was heartbreaking – absolutely heartbreaking – and I never want to have to do it again. When I spoke at her funeral, I committed right then and there to ensuring that it never happened again.

Madam Speaker, after that incident this government committed to making work safer for Alberta's convenience store and gas station employees. That started last session with Bill 17, in which it was legislated that convenience store and gas station employees cannot be held liable for missing money due to theft. This protection will be enhanced with the passing of Bill 19. As the minister said, it will do this in two primary ways. It amends the OH and S act to mandate prepaying for fuel, and it mandates that a violence protection plan be in place.

In regard to prepay options the safest way, of course, is to pay at the pump as there is no interaction between the customer and the employee. But for those operators who don't have pay at the pump technology, they can use the pay before you pump option. We've made this an option, being cognizant of the $30,000 to $35,000 required to upgrade a pump.

Research shows that violence protection plans with strong training components are the most effective way to reduce crime and injury at fuel and convenience stores. This includes security cameras, emergency transmitters when working alone, time-lock safes, and, of course, training to ensure that they are familiar with what safe workspaces are. Now, as we know, B.C. has had these measures in place since 2008 and has virtually eliminated fuel thefts and related violence.

Madam Speaker, this government committed to protecting Alberta's convenience store workers, and we are doing it, but we did want to get it right. That's why we did conduct extensive consultations over 18 months. This included discussions with industry leaders like Husky as well as health and safety associations, academics, labour organizations, families of workers impacted by violence. Also, our OH and S officers conducted focused inspections of over 250 gas stations and convenience stores across the province to get a real understanding of what the risk and safety measures are out there. According to data from the Alberta Association of Chiefs of Police there was an average of 12 fuel thefts per day in 2015. This must stop as every theft has the potential for a violent confrontation.

Through consultation it was also determined that the majority of gas and convenience stores have many of the measures in place, and we will work with those that don't to ensure that they are safe and compliant. This is also why we're providing the six months to allow operators the time needed for compliance. It will also give consumers the time required to adjust as well. It would also be mandatory for these fuel stations to hang signs to say that prepaying or paying at the pump will be mandatory.

I'd just like to close by thanking the minister for bringing this forward. Thank you to everyone that's spoken on this, and thank you for the tone on the other side right now. I'm feeling that this is going to have no problem passing. I think we need this, and I think we all understand that we need this. I am very pleased to be a part of this government and this bill, and I do look forward to further debate and encourage all members on the other side and all members of this Assembly to help us pass this bill.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any questions or comments under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any other members wishing to speak to the bill?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question?

[Motion carried; Bill 19 read a second time]

Cortes-Vargas: I would move that we call it 6 o'clock.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 3:48 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Visitors	1637
Introduction of Guests	1637
Members' Statements
Martin Luther	1638
Government Policies	1638
Schizophrenia Support in Indigenous Communities.....	1639
Government Policies	1647
Johnson MS Bike Tour	1647
Catholic School Sex Education Curriculum	1647
Oral Question Period
Pipeline Approval.....	1639
Pipeline Approval and Federal-Provincial Relations.....	1640
Catholic School Sex Education Curriculum	1640
Political Action Committees.....	1641
Indigenous Educational Curriculum Content.....	1642
Trans Mountain Pipeline Expansion Opposition	1642
Seniors' Housing	1643
Rural Crime Prevention.....	1643, 1647
Mouseland Read in Schools	1644
Carbon Levy Increase.....	1644
Indigenous Economic and Climate Initiatives	1645
Surgery Wait Times.....	1646
Openness and Transparency in Government	1646
Introduction of Bills
Bill 21 Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017	1648
Bill 22 Resident and Family Councils Act	1648
Tabling Returns and Reports	1648
Orders of the Day	1648
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 19 An Act to Protect Gas and Convenience Store Workers.....	1648

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday morning, November 1, 2017

Day 47

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (NDP), Speaker
Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (NDP), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (NDP), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (UCP),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (NDP)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (UCP)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (NDP)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (UCP)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (NDP)
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-Ste. Anne (NDP)
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (NDP)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (NDP)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (NDP)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (NDP)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (UCP)
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (NDP),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (UCP)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (NDP)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (NDP)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (NDP)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (UCP)
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (NDP)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (UCP)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (Ind)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (NDP)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (Ind)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (NDP)
Gotfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (UCP)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (NDP)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (UCP)
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (NDP)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (NDP)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (NDP)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (UCP)
Jansen, Hon. Sandra, Calgary-North West (NDP)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (UCP)
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (NDP)
Kleinstuber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (NDP)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (NDP)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (UCP)
Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (NDP)

Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (NDP)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (UCP)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (NDP)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (NDP)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (UCP),
Official Opposition Whip
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (NDP)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (NDP)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (AP)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (NDP)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (NDP)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (NDP)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (UCP),
Leader of the Official Opposition,
Official Opposition House Leader
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (UCP)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (UCP)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (NDP)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (NDP)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (NDP)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (NDP)
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (NDP)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (NDP)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (NDP)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (UCP)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (NDP)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (NDP)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (NDP)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (UCP)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (UCP)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (UCP)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (NDP)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (UCP)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (NDP)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (UCP)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (NDP),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (NDP)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (UCP)
Vacant, Calgary-Lougheed

Party standings:

New Democratic: 54 United Conservative: 26 Alberta Party: 2 Alberta Liberal: 1 Progressive Conservative: 1 Independent: 2 Vacant: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk
Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of
House Services
Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel
Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services
Nancy Robert, Research Officer
Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms
Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms
Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms
Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Sandra Jansen	Minister of Infrastructure
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

Parliamentary Secretaries

Jessica Littlewood	Economic Development and Trade for Small Business
Annie McKittrick	Education

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Shepherd
Horne	Swann
Jansen	Vacant
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabbour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

9 a.m.

Wednesday, November 1, 2017

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

Prayers

The Acting Speaker: Let us reflect and pray, each in our own way. May we always do the right thing for and unto others as we journey through this maze of life, for we are but servants chosen by others to bear the burdens, the challenges, and the duties of public life. Amen.

Please be seated.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Good morning, everyone. I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 20

Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered in respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud. The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod. I apologize. You've all moved a little bit on me.

Mr. Stier: Well, thank you, Madam Chairman. Good morning, everyone. A pleasure to be here with you all this morning and see all those wonderful, shiny faces first thing.

Today I have a few brief comments with respect to this bill. I'm not going to go over a lot of lengthy stuff about it, but certainly I would like to say that I'm aware of the issue. It seems like the hamlet of Mallaig and the Whitefish Lake First Nation are experiencing problems with their quantity and quality of water from their existing supply and that this bill will authorize the transfer from another river basin to this one, which is the Beaver River basin.

I further understand that Mallaig is a hamlet in the county of St. Paul, and it currently obtains its drinking water from nearby groundwater sources. While there are no immediate concerns with their water source in terms of quality, the drawdown as the supply is taken has seen the levels decrease in recent years, where it's becoming important that they look for a better source.

I also understand that the Whitefish Lake First Nation, on the other hand, is facing a slightly more critical issue and that they currently draw from a nearby lake which has recently seen a measurable and escalating decrease in the level. In my experience in the past it's evident here that there are concerns about possible contaminants, therefore. While it doesn't apparently present a short-term health problem, it's critical that a higher quality source be found as well for that, so the sooner the community switches, the sooner they can get on with getting a good, proper supply of water. I think everybody here would agree that this is so critical in these situations.

As my other colleagues may have mentioned – and I wasn't in the House earlier for this discussion yesterday, but I do understand – we have said that we are supporting this. We think that this is something that needs to be done as soon as possible.

I would like to raise a couple of extra points regarding this procedure in a way that supports this but also gives me a better understanding for myself as to how these things take place within these departments. I see that I don't perhaps have the correct ministers in place for direct questions here, but perhaps there's someone else that can answer what I'm concerned about.

I'd like to say that in the case of southern Alberta we have an awful lot of situations where we're essentially screaming for water. The town of Pincher Creek in my area is an example. The creek is virtually nonexistent currently. The various streams that are supplying Pincher Creek and the small town of Cowley, which is a hamlet, and the hamlet of Lundbreck are essentially out of water as well. On a temporary basis – and I talked to Environment and Parks in Lethbridge just the other day – they are allowing, on an emergency basis, for those municipalities to dip a pump into the Oldman reservoir, which was more or less created for irrigation purposes primarily to get what water they might get to supply. They've also imposed restrictions in their communities to try to help on the drawdown. They realize that that is only a temporary situation, and thank goodness that Environment and Parks is providing that permission and they're allowing that to take place.

But this leaves me to wonder if we're allowing this – and I believe this should go, and I think this is a great idea. We have a lot of other communities, we have a lot of other situations, including a water co-op that has been planned, engineered, designed, the water sources there in the Pine Coulee reservoir that was created years ago west of Claresholm to supply over 180 residents, farms, et cetera, out in the rural area that have had to truck water for the past five years. They've been applying and applying and applying for funding.

I notice that this particular situation that we're dealing with today is partially funded, 50-50, from the federal and provincial ends. My question, if I could ask at this moment before I conclude, is: does anyone there have the ability to respond on why these other systems have not been provided similar treatment? In the south, by the way, I would like to add that the Environment and Parks ministry also suddenly gave approval for a waterline from the hamlet of Cowley all the way up to the Castle resort.

I'm just trying to figure out here how these things work, just trying to figure out if there's a way that we can look at more projects so that we can help people that are currently having to pay for trucking of water southwest of Claresholm. It seems that this is doing a great job today – we certainly support it – but I'm wondering if anyone over there can answer how this works, please.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. Thank you very much for the questions from the hon. member across. We're very happy that you are supporting the water transfer for the Beaver River basin because it is very essential for the communities that are receiving it. You may know that there have been five water transfers, basin transfers, that have happened in the province of Alberta over the last number of years. All of those have occurred in the south because of the particular conditions in the south. This is the first time one has happened in the northern part of the province. So, indeed, the needs of the people in the south have been attended to fairly regularly over time.

However, with climate change occurring, what we're seeing is an increased exacerbation of the aridness in that area. We are going to have to attend to that in a new way because it's not a matter of transferring water in order to provide a cleaner source; it's an issue of there being a lack of the basic amount of water. So it's a slightly different question that's at hand with regard to southern Alberta.

In the north water exists, but it's not drinkable. In the south the water doesn't exist, and you can't simply create water. Every time you take water away from another source to move in the south, then you have to worry about whether or not you're about to cause another problem in another area in the south because of the overall lack of water in the south. A basin transfer may be robbing Peter to pay Paul, so it's a bit of a different process.

I'm afraid I'm not the expert you're looking for, but I have taken extensive notes of your questions, and I will endeavour to inquire with the appropriate ministries about procedures moving forward. I encourage you to speak to the Minister of Environment and Parks to talk about the particular concerns you have with regard to Pincher Creek and, of course, the Pine Coulee reservoir, and I will endeavour to do the same.

Thank you.

9:10

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Stier: Thank you, and thank you for your response, Minister. I appreciate all that you've said. I just want to perhaps be clear on a couple of things that you've just said to ensure that we get the right message through. I have no concerns in the south with regard to the transfer nor the transfer here. My questions with relation to this were more focused towards the funding. I understand the funding model here has been 50-50 from the province and the federal government.

The one particular situation I am concerned about is where people have been up to meet with the Minister of Transportation as late as last year, where the engineering, the licensing, and everything out of the Pine Coulee west of Claresholm has already been done, but they've been refused for years on the funding. How does this funding work for both the waterline to the Castle and the waterline to these good people here that deserve this water? How does that differ, and why have they been granted and these others have not after all those years when it's a shovel-ready program just like this is?

Thank you for your response. As I said earlier, I have talked to the minister before. I will continue to do that, but I wanted to bring this up and be on record at this time with respect to this situation because there are a lot of communities that need water. If there's already a source available and a transfer is not required, if it's already been engineered, I find a lot of difference in how things are working here, and that's a bit of an anomaly I'd like to pursue.

With that, Madam Chair, I'd just like to conclude that we are in support of this bill, as was said earlier, and we look forward to moving on. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 20? The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Ms Babcock: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm pleased to stand today and speak to Bill 20, the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act. You know, this bill is going to allow for the approval of the two interbasin transfers, from the North Saskatchewan River basin to the Beaver River basin, and these interbasin transfers will allow the Whitefish Lake First Nation and the hamlet of Mallaig in St. Paul county to connect to regional waterlines in order to address long-running issues with drinking water in their communities. This is something we see in a lot of our rural areas. I know in my area the WILD project is a huge part of what we deal with. It took 12 years to get phase 1 finished, never mind the other three phases that we'd like to see go forward.

There's nothing more fundamental to life than access to a safe and secure drinking supply. Many of us don't even realize what a privilege it is to have safe, clean water. We don't give much thought to the source of the water coming out of our taps. We only know that it's there every time we need it, which is not always the case in some of our rural communities and some of our reserve communities.

While water quality and quantity are not top-of-mind issues for many of us who live in Alberta's cities and towns, the same cannot be said for those people living in rural and First Nation communities. The communities of Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation have both dealt with drinking water quality and quantity challenges in recent years. Clean drinking water should be seen as a basic human right, and the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act is an important step towards resolving drinking water issues in these two communities.

Interbasin transfers are not to be taken lightly. The Water Act requires any licence which transfers water between major river basins in Alberta to be authorized by a special act of the Legislature, which is what we're debating today. All western provinces have legislation that prohibits transfers between major river basins with some exceptions allowed, and since 2003 five interbasin transfers have been authorized by Alberta by a special act of the Legislature. All five were for potable water extensions to rural communities.

Madam Chair, I will discuss those five just a little bit more. There was the North Red Deer Water Authorization Act, which was to supplement existing sources of reliable potable water for several communities in central Alberta, which happened in 2003, and it came from the South Saskatchewan River basin to the North Saskatchewan River basin.

There was the Stettler Regional Water Authorization Act, which was to address the problems with the quantity and quality of potable water. This happened in 2005, and it was repealed in 2007 by the East Central Regional Water Authorization Act. This came from the South Saskatchewan River to the North Saskatchewan River basin.

The Town of Bashaw and Village of Ferintosh Water Authorization Act, which was to address problems with the shortage of groundwater supply for the village of Ferintosh, happened in 2007. Again, it was repealed in 2007 by the East Central Regional Water Authorization Act. This was again taking water out of the South Saskatchewan River basin to the North Saskatchewan River basin.

There was the East Central Regional Water Authorization Act to address problems with the quantity and quality of potable water. This happened in 2007, and it replaced the previous two acts that I just spoke of. It permitted a larger volume of water to service communities in the area, and it came from the South Saskatchewan River basin to the North Saskatchewan River basin.

There was the County of Westlock Water Authorization Act. This was to address the problems with quality and quantity of potable water for the residents of Westlock. This happened in 2007 as well, and it was from the North Saskatchewan River basin to the Athabasca River basin. This is why our government has introduced Bill 20.

Both St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation explored multiple options, and connecting to the regional waterline was determined to be the best possible solution to address their drinking water challenges. To ensure a safe, reliable supply of drinking water for their residents, both communities have requested that the province approve an interbasin transfer, allowing them to extend existing regional waterlines.

Whitefish Lake First Nation looked at five options prior to pursuing an extension of an existing potable waterline from the highway 28/63 regional water commission in the North Saskatchewan River basin. The county of St. Paul looked at seven different options and came to the same conclusion. Both proposed waterline expansions crossed river basin boundaries, with water being transferred from the North Saskatchewan River basin to the Beaver River basin.

It's important to note that funding has already been in place for both projects, as has been noted earlier this morning. The county has already received $9.5 million in funding from the province and the federal government, and they must spend the federal funding by March 2018, or it will expire, so we are under a bit of a time crunch with this bill going forward. The highway 28/63 regional water commission received $20.66 million from our government's United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples/First Nations regional tie-in project fund. An additional $1.98 million was committed by the federal government to complete the waterline connection to the reservoir on the reserve.

Of course, environmental impacts were considered prior to introducing this bill. Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation are small communities, and the North Saskatchewan River is a reliable source of water, with an average annual volume of approximately 7.5 billion cubic metres flowing through Edmonton. The existing municipal allocation held by EPCOR to provide drinking water throughout the capital region totals close to 200 million cubic metres. The proposed transfers for St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation would total 600,000 cubic metres. Environment and Parks confirms that the additional transfer of drinking water will have no measurable effects on the North Saskatchewan River nor our river basin.

Consultation has been conducted, and both proposed interbasin transfers are widely supported among all stakeholders in the area. St. Paul county has also specifically engaged on water rate policy and the upcoming water rate increase for Mallaig residents prior to engaging on the regional waterline connection project. Water rates in Mallaig are set by the county of St. Paul and reflect the full cost of providing water to residents. Upon completion, the water rates in Mallaig will be the same as the other two hamlets in St. Paul county that already receive EPCOR-treated water via the regional waterline.

Mallaig residents will receive three months' notice that water rates will be increased to match the other two hamlets in St. Paul county that already receive EPCOR-treated water via the regional waterline. This is in addition to the written notice from the county in January 2017 regarding the county's move to full cost recovery water rates that came into effect as of March 2017. Provincial and federal grant funding for the project will help ensure that St. Paul county's water rate is the same as other users on the highway 28/63 regional waterline, and there is no water rate increase anticipated for the residents of the Whitefish Lake First Nation.

Alberta's water for life strategy sets the stage for a new way of working with Albertans to ensure safe, reliable, and quality water supplies for a sustainable environment and growing economy. Water for life is centred on the achievement of three goals: safe, secure drinking water; healthy aquatic ecosystems; and reliable, quality water for sustainable economies throughout our province. Approving the interbasin transfers would support the water for life strategy and be a key priority to help provide safe and reliable drinking water on-reserve as part of the implementation of the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples.

I hope the House will support Bill 20, thereby providing the necessary approval for the interbasin transfers for both communities, and it's important to note that both river basins are open for allocations, so there is no impact to other licence holders, unlike some in the south end of our province like the Bow River basin, which is considered a closed basin.

9:20

Following the approval of the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act two water licences will be issued under the Water Act, one licence to the county of St. Paul and the other to the highway 28/63 regional water commission to provide water to Whitefish Lake First Nation. The Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act includes the maximum amount of water allocated to each community on an annual basis. I hope all members of the House will see the value of allowing these interbasin transfers to secure a reliable source of safe drinking water for residents of Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation.

The solution does have, again, wide stakeholder support, and the environmental impact study identified no concerns regarding the long-term health of the North Saskatchewan River, which is something that we are obviously very concerned about in our province, the long-term sustainability.

Both projects leverage federal funding to be effective, and if approved, the county of St. Paul and the highway 28/63 regional water commission will be responsible for construction, operations, and maintenance following completion of the pipelines.

Madam Chair, I think that, you know, it's a great bill, and I think that it's something that's absolutely necessary for this part of our province. I don't think there's a single one of us in this House that can say that safe and reliable drinking water is not something that every community in Alberta deserves, and this bill helps us move forward on that.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville.

Mrs. Littlewood: Thank you very much, Madam Chair. Thanks for giving me a chance to speak to this bill, Bill 20, the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act. This is a bill that is about something very central to our province and to our communities, the issue of having safe and secure drinking water, something that should be a fundamental need and right for all Albertans. It makes sure that safe drinking water is a top priority and will allow the extension of existing regional waterlines to carry water from the North Saskatchewan River into Mallaig and Whitefish Lake First Nation, which are in the Beaver River basin, necessitating an interbasin transfer, which will be only the sixth in the history of doing this legislation.

I know how important the water for life programs are in this province. In our constituency we were very thankful to the Minister of Transportation for approving water for life funding in the community of St. Michael. It is a community where the licence for their – I'm trying to think of the word – shallow water aquifer is something that has been threatened over time with human development, and it is something that people out in rural communities are quite dependent on. When we know that in rural communities it is more difficult to have easily accessible drinking water, we need to as a province support the measures that allow for that to happen.

There are, of course, many factors that can affect water: agriculture use, oil and gas development, and, really, just growing populations of people drawing on the same amount of water. It's a good thing that we can see that there was a large amount of stakeholder feedback. There was a lot of consultation done. It's also good to see that this is fully funded and that the residents of St. Paul county have been consulted to ensure that life remains affordable for them to be able to access clean drinking water.

Of course, this is especially important to First Nations, and I want to actually thank the Minister of Indigenous Relations for allowing me to wear this Métis scarf today while I deliver my remarks. Of course, it is an obligation to address treaty rights and to be very honest about the economic impacts that clean drinking water has. I've heard from other members of this House, unfortunately, that they would not support a budget that provides $100 million to provide drinking water for First Nations. I was proud to stand in this House and support a budget that allows that fundamental need to be extended to communities that have been under drinking water bans time and again. That is just not acceptable in a province where we have so much.

That is why I'm very proud to be part of a government that is caring and inclusive and keeps these things top of mind. I know that, growing up in Edmonton, it was very rare to think about the availability of clean drinking water, but in getting to know some communities like Bruderheim, where they have a water co-op, people have gotten together without the consistent support of government to ensure that they do have water for their livestock, water for their communities.

Also, you know, even in urban areas we take for granted that firefighting is something where we have access to more water than we often do in rural areas. I know that when I was visiting families in the Skaro area in Lamont county, there was concern over water being returned to cow-calf operations where water had been drawn off people's farms to help fight the blazes that were in the area.

This, of course, is a fundamental need and something that should be a human right, but because it is not a right, we have to do what we can to incrementally make sure that communities that are most affected are supported by our government. Of course, there has been news that there are companies that would like to privatize all water, and that is troubling when we know how necessary water is for human life. I think it's something that is the role of government, to ensure that people have access to clean drinking water.

There has been respectful and thorough consultation with indigenous communities, and I want to thank the Minister of Indigenous Relations for taking a leadership role that is partnering with communities to make sure that people are not just having solutions forced upon them but are actually engaged in thoughtful dialogue to ensure that everybody that comes to the table is well aware of all of the issues and that when solutions are brought forward, there has been actual, real consultation with nations and indigenous peoples, that deserve to have their voice at an equal level at the table.

This does involve $9.5 million coming from the province as part of that $100 million that was in the budget for 2017-18. It helps leverage federal dollars. I know that in rural communities it is incredibly important that when there is money on the table from the federal government, we do everything we can to ensure that those funds are not left. There are sparse resources often in rural communities – I know this is something that came up with Internet connectivity in rural areas – and when there is money that is being offered, we must do everything that we can to make sure that none of it is left on the table. That does expire in 2018, so I'm glad that we are moving forward with this.

The government is ensuring that we move forward with strategies that allow us to have a clean and sustainable environment for all Albertans. This is something that follows in line with the climate leadership plan. I know that this was a huge election issue back in 2015, that people were concerned that there would not be the future for their children and for their grandchildren that they themselves enjoyed growing up. I know that this is something that my constituents absolutely support.

9:30

You know, this is something that I hear from the opposition that we can't afford, and I think that that flies in the face of economic development, that we know can happen more readily when people are healthy, when people have just the basic needs of having clean water. So I'm glad to see that EPCOR is allocating 200 million cubic metres of drinking water to bring to bear on this project and also that there has been extensive consultation with NGOs and the area to ensure that water rates are still comparable with other communities and that no one is being unfairly put upon to be able to afford their own water.

This will affect St. Paul and Mallaig and the Whitefish Lake First Nation, and people out there will quite clearly benefit. This achieves the goals of safe and secure drinking water, healthy aquatic ecosystems, and reliable, quality water for a sustainable economy. It also implements the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples. It is absolutely a vital necessity to have clean drinking water to small rural communities and to First Nations.

I understand that this bill will have no impact on other licence holders, and I think it's a really important thing to make sure that we go ahead and leverage federal funding to make sure that we make the most out of the dollars that we have in such a constrained economy.

So I am proud to support this bill. I know that the residents of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville also support this bill because they know how important it is to have availability of water.

Thank you, Madam Chair, and I'll close my remarks there.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 20? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud.

Dr. Turner: Thank you, Madam Chair, and thank you to all the speakers this morning who have indicated support for this very important bill. I'm really proud to stand in support of the passage of this bill, and I think that the debate this morning has brought forward interesting aspects that I hadn't really realized.

I was particularly pleased to hear how well the town of Bruderheim is doing with important allocations as well as dealing with the bigger picture, I think, than just the Whitefish Lake First Nation's and the hamlet of Mallaig's need for a safe water supply. We need to be thinking about how we can translate this water for life project, which is actually, if my math is correct, 15 years old and, obviously, still in development, and how we can make that project work even better.

The water for life strategy is centred on three goals: a safe, secure drinking water supply; a healthy aquatic ecosystem; and reliable, quality water for a sustainable economy. That third goal, I think, is something that really hasn't been talked about much in this debate so far, and I wanted to spend a little bit of time on that today. A sustainable economy means that the people that have access to water are actually able to create jobs, they're able to create a quality of life, and they're able to maintain their communities. I think that this is one of the major accomplishments of the water for life strategy, and I think that this bill that we're talking about today is going to have some real effects on that.

I was sitting here thinking about, if I lived in the hamlet of Mallaig, what I could do if I had access to a sufficient quantity of a safe water supply. Maybe I'd be able to flood the hockey rink. Or in my case, if I had to choose, I would flood the curling rink, actually. If you've ever flooded a curling rink, you know that using groundwater is a disaster. You need to have the water that comes from EPCOR, actually, as a good source there.

Now, that's not the main use of this water. The main use of this water is going to be for drinking and for other household duties as well as agriculture and maintaining the aquatic ecosystem. But having vibrant recreational opportunities in a community is part of that sustainable economy, and I think that we need to think about these sorts of things when we're discussing this sort of thing.

It isn't just the hockey rinks and the curling sheets that would be helped out with this. There would be a good supply of water in the schools so that they didn't have to pay for bottled water coming in. The churches and the community halls and the other municipal operations presumably are going to be benefiting from this as well. All of this is economy. All of this means jobs. People are going to stay in that community. The people that stay in that community are going to need services. They're going to go to the restaurants, and they're going to buy food. They're going to go to the grocery stores and go to the co-ops to buy supplies.

This is a good source of economic activity in these communities. I think that this may be one of the main reasons that I'm really happy to see this. I think, as the Member for Livingstone-Macleod alluded to, we need to look at this on a province-wide basis, and the Minister of Indigenous Relations in his response talked about this.

I'd like to go back a bit in history. I think all of you know that since I'm one of the older members of this Assembly I love talking about history because I've lived some of it, actually, which some of my colleagues, like the man next to me, have not. I imagine everybody in this Assembly knows about the Palliser expedition. The Palliser expedition was Colonel Palliser from the British army. He was sent out by the government of Upper Canada in, I think, about 1850 to survey the west. This was at a time when Upper Canada was thinking about buying Rupert's Land from the Hudson's Bay Company.

Palliser came to Winnipeg and hired some Métis folks and other local folks who basically took him on a trek throughout what is now Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. He actually described a triangle. The base of the triangle is the Rocky Mountains, and the vertex of it is Winnipeg, and you can actually take the 49th parallel as one of the arms of that triangle. He made a report that is very interesting to read. He actually despaired at whether the government of Canada at the time should actually waste money on buying Rupert's Land because it was so dry. He thought that it would be impossible to raise grains because it was so arid in this area, particularly in the western part of the Palliser Triangle.

Now, as I said yesterday in discussing this, I grew up in southwestern Manitoba, and one of the benefits of growing up in southwestern Manitoba is that we actually have more rainfall in Manitoba than folks here in Alberta do. There's no doubt that there are times in Manitoba when there are actually floods and destruction from too much rain.

But even having said that, it is still a major issue here in Alberta on how we manage our water. The Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, that was a result of the Dirty Thirties, helps. We've got dugouts, and we've got aquifer management, and we make sure we've got irrigation supplies and dams and weirs that help protect that, but there's still a lot of work to be done.

9:40

That's where this water for life strategy comes in. You have to recognize that there is a massive shortage of water, particularly in the southern half of this province, and we have to be very careful how we husband that water. It isn't just for irrigation and for other economic reasons that we need that water.

Basically, I just want to step back for a moment. The other thing that we need to recognize, which I think the opposition is slowly coming to grips with, is climate change. The climate now is a lot different than it was in the Dirty Thirties, and some of that is due to the effects of man-made climate change. When we're talking about water conservation, we have to realize that the glaciers that feed the North Saskatchewan, the Athabasca, the Bow and the Little Bow and the Highwood, all of these major rivers that we depend upon for our water supply in this province, those glaciers are basically melting away, and we don't have the supply of fresh glacial water that we had even 20 years ago.

All one has to do is go up to the Columbia Icefield and, basically, stand on the road and look at the signs. Where was the glacier in 1950, 1960, 1970, all the way up to 2010? The glacier was at the road, by the way, if none of you have been there, and now it's a couple of miles or three kilometres, I guess, from the road. That Columbia Icefield is the source of the North Saskatchewan, which is one of the rivers we're talking about today, and we have to be sure that we're managing that water well.

Anyway, you know, I would advise the folks across the way to take a look at climate change and maybe help us with trying to mitigate the effects of man-made climate change, if you really are interested in water management and really are interested in maintaining a viable economy in this province that we can depend upon for the next three generations, instead of saying: "Oh, well. It doesn't matter. We'll just burn it up, and we'll let somebody else worry about it." I think that's very irresponsible. [interjections] I'm happy that I have some agreement on this side at least for that.

I mean, my advice to the opposition is that they need to be a bit broader in their view of things about: really, how does climate change affect our economy; how does it have an effect; how will it be mitigated, I guess? In my opinion, the way to mitigate it is with some of the things that we've talked about like getting alternate energy going and promoting the installation of solar panels, the solar panels that are going onto the roofs of indigenous communities, community leagues like Leduc and Camrose. A lot of farmers are doing this.

Personally I've put solar panels on my roof, so I'm doing my little bit for that, but there are a whole bunch of things. The auction that's coming up, the auction that the Minister of Energy is supervising for 400 megawatts of alternative energy: I'm really anxious to see the results of that auction because that's going to have a major effect on climate change, and it's going to help water quality directly. You know, from a strictly economic point of view, this is the right thing to do. Strictly on economics, it's the right thing to do.

I want to turn to something else that I probably know more about than the economy, and that is about health care, about what are contributors to health, social determinants of health, things like the quality of water. If you're in a situation where your water supply is not safe, your life expectancy can be 10 to 20, even 30 years lower than otherwise. About 30 years.

Again, it's maybe unfair to say that in the Alberta context. There's no place in Alberta where the quality of water varies so much that you would have that degree of effect on longevity, but all we have to do is look at the Walkerton story. Walkerton was a small rural community, if such exists, in Ontario. They basically didn't do the things that we're talking about doing today. They didn't have a safe water supply. This was largely because of the Conservative government of Ontario basically slashing – slashing – the support for things like water inspections. I know the Member for Banff-Cochrane probably knows this personally. The government of Mike Harris in Ontario fired, just like the Premier of this province fired, folks back in the 1990s out of water inspection, out of infrastructure, out of the public health systems. The upshot in Walkerton was that several people died a horrible death.

Mr. Westhead: Common-sense revolution.

Dr. Turner: Common sense? It was nonsense. That was nonsense.

Several people died. If you don't remember your history, folks, the Walkerton tragedy resulted in several tens of people dying of a very preventable form of disease that I've actually had to treat myself. It's a form of thrombocytopenia. Hemolytic-uremic syndrome is the name of this. It's due to a form of E coli O157:H7 that produces a toxin that actually damages the kidneys, damages the blood vessels. People that get this die of kidney failure or of a horrible type of bleeding. They bleed from all of their orifices. It's like a zombie death if it could happen.

Now, fortunately, we doctors actually, if we get to it soon enough, often can help people through it. Sometimes it takes dialysis, renal dialysis, which is not pleasant to go through. Sometimes it takes a procedure called plasmapheresis, which means inserting a needle in one arm and a needle in the other arm and actually taking the blood out and in a sense washing that blood and replacing what you take out with other forms of blood plasma. I'm happy to say that we now have a voluntary blood plasma donation system that's going to make sure that it's safe.

I could get into a lot of gory details here about this, and I see that I'm not fascinating the folks across the way.

An Hon. Member: Remind us how it happened in the first place.

Dr. Turner: It is a good thing to remind us of what did happen.

Because of that Conservative so-called common-sense revolution – these were PCs, by the way. They're different than these guys, I know, but they were PCs in Ontario that did this. Because of that the Walkerton water supply was not safe. Actually, what happened was that they were getting water supply from wells. Those wells actually were out in farmers' fields. The excrement from some cattle actually found its way into those wells. Pretty simple thing. That happens a lot, I think, on farmers' fields.

This happened because there was, I think, a big rainstorm or something like this, and the contaminated water from the cattle was basically flushed into the wells, and then the Walkerton water system didn't have the systems to test it and make sure that it was going to happen. They didn't have it because that common-sense revolution had resulted in a whole bunch of people being laid off, and the people that remained actually were unqualified. They didn't know what they were doing, unfortunately. I don't think it was their fault personally, but these people were given responsibilities that they weren't up to. Anyway, it's a good example of why we need to have a safe, reliable water supply for all of Alberta but in particular the hamlet of Mallaig and the First Nations.

9:50

Now, I'm going to finish off my comments talking about how important it is that we take this federal money and basically leverage it for the help of this First Nation but actually all the First Nations in this province that don't have a safe – I've heard it's something like 15 communities that are on a boil water supply. Somebody may correct me on that.

An Hon. Member: What are you going to do about it?

Dr. Turner: What am I going to do about it? What we are going to do about it is that with that $100 million dollars that you guys didn't want to support, we are going to build pipelines carrying safe water to the reserve, and we are going to make sure that every Albertan, whether they're on a First Nations reserve or not, has access to a good, safe water supply.

An Hon. Member: What's Harper's record on the water on First Nations reserves?

Dr. Turner: Well, I've been asked what the previous Prime Minister Harper's result on – and possibly his minister of immigration. Was he minister of environment, too, or something? Well, anyway, he doesn't know anything about either. He doesn't know anything about either, but the Conservative Party of Canada government headed by . . .

Mr. Gill: Madam Chair, can you please ask the hon. member to speak to the bill, please?

The Deputy Chair: He's on the bill. It's okay.

Dr. Turner: I am speaking to the bill. I'm talking about how important it is that we get a safe water supply to our First Nations people, and we are doing what the previous government of . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, your time is up. Thank you.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater.

Mr. Piquette: Yes. Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm proud to rise in the House today to support Bill 20, Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act. You know, I concur heartily with my colleagues that no matter where you live in Alberta, we have an obligation to make sure that you have clean and safe drinking water. This is, you know, particularly relevant for rural areas, where that's something that we can't necessarily always take for granted.

An observation is that I notice my new desk here was previously used by Doug Griffiths. Now, I'm sure many members in the House will be familiar with Doug Griffiths. He's a former minister in a previous administration, and he has been touring the province talking to rural communities about how they can develop sustainably. One of the most critical factors in his travels that he's identified for the health, well-being, and, in fact, continued existence of a rural community is the quality of its water and the assuredness of its supply.

Coming from that part of the province, you know, this is something that we can't take for granted. I know that the Member for Edmonton-McClung was talking about his experience, his growing up in the countryside on well water and that the water ran yellow out of his taps. I'm assuming that they were his taps that the water was running out of. Where I grew up, near Plamondon, it was a little bit more orange – I guess a good colour for where we are today – just because of the high iron concentration. The challenges for having to sustain a community on groundwater sources are, first, putting an undue stress on the resource but, secondly, even if the water exists, it might take so much processing and so much in the form of additional treatment that the end product is not something that's desirable, which is my understanding of some of the concerns that these communities were facing.

I also happen to be from Boyle, where we had a very similar situation some years back to the one that's facing Whitefish Lake today. Boyle was getting its water from Skeleton Lake, which actually happens to be just on the very edge of the Beaver River water basin, and with the climatic changes in that part of the province a lot of these lakes, especially ones that have smaller watersheds to draw on, you know, are facing serious stress. I know that in Boyle's situation it brought us into a dispute with the landowners along the lake blaming us for drawing the water levels down to the point where the lake was no longer the beautiful resource that it once was.

Now, what Boyle had to do was actually bring in water from the Athabasca, and there were fairly similar concerns over the risk of interbasin contamination just because, you know, it's a similar situation. In fact, work that's being done by the Skeleton Lake Stewardship Association – it could well be that all along the Beaver River basin and the Athabasca River basin have been in communication. The land is actually pretty flat in some parts, and there's very significant evidence that suggests that these water basins are already in communication. If that is indeed the case, I guess that could also meet at least partway some of the objections that some of our honourable colleagues have raised – or maybe concerns would be a better word – on the possibility of interbasin contamination.

Now, turning particularly to Whitefish Lake First Nation, I have to say that I'm extremely proud of our government. I think it's a very welcome and overdue change from the past. We're taking the needs of First Nations seriously. We're taking their water needs seriously and making positive steps to address them rather than simply passing the buck, which unfortunately has been something that this province has done far too much in the past. I know that Whitefish Lake is not in the same situation as some other aboriginal communities. In fact, they did at least have a water system. I've been to communities where there is no water system. You have the situation where elders, you know, sick people, children had to go outside and do what people had to do maybe a century ago to be able to deal with their sanitation and their washing and their drinking needs without any running water at all.

When these communities would come and talk to the province, the province would say: "Oh, that's a federal matter. That's none of our concern." I have to say that our new indigenous affairs minister has strong insistence that, no, that's not correct. We can't turn our backs on other citizens of Alberta based on their jurisdiction, number one, because it's totally unethical and, number two, because it has a harmful effect not only on the community being impacted but on the communities around them. I think it's a long overdue recognition that these First Nation communities are not islands. They are indeed integrating with the surrounding communities, and the damage or the neglect that's inflicted on those communities doesn't just impact them; it impacts all of us as well.

You know, that is particularly true with the quality of water. As my hon. colleague just mentioned, when you have poor water, you have poor health, and if you have poor health, not only are you causing problems for the people themselves, which is wrong, but you also are causing significant impact on the rest of us because we have to pay for the increased health costs, deal with the loss of employment and loss of opportunities and the loss of all the wonderful things we could get from these individuals who have been impacted by water that's not fit to drink.

I'm very, very happy to see us moving forward with this. I'm also very happy that we have a federal partner that's a bit more forthcoming on these types of issues as well, and that's also a really welcome change. That's an important thing.

10:00

I'm also very glad about the quality of consultation that went on. Now, I represent a lot of the communities that are actually part of the highway 28/63 water commission, and I did do some informal asking of some of the partners who are in my riding about whether they had any concerns over this line extension, over this transfer. It's quite the contrary. They were very positive and very appreciative of the work that the government has done in making sure that, you know, everybody was included as much as possible in discussions and that any concerns that they might have had were answered in a fulsome and appropriate way. So we've got, I think, a very good project.

Now, my understanding is that this is not the first time this has been done, so I guess that's another reason why we don't have to, I think, be overly concerned over the risk of interbasin contamination. This is, in fact, the fifth interbasin transfer that's been authorized since 2003. Okay. I'm seeing six here. This would be the sixth. As far as I'm aware, I think the only other transfer would have been previous to 2003, and it would have been actually to increase the level of a former Premier's lake. I think that was the other one, but many know the cause, you know, in this situation.

Now, this is, of course, not just a credit to our government. There have been people that have been working for a long time, you know, very diligently to make this happen. Of course, that would include Whitefish Lake First Nation itself but also the county of St. Paul. I know that they've been looking at different options for years. They've been trying to find the money to make this a reality. It's wonderful that they've been able to help put this together. St. Paul now has – what? – $9.5 million in funding from us and the federal government. I guess they have to spend it fairly quickly because my understanding is that by March of next year this funding will actually expire. It's a good testament to them and a good testament to the very welcome change in attitude and, I'd say, the evolution of values that we've seen in this province.

Now, I know that our government thinks about not just this particular area when making these types of decisions, but they do consider the concerns of all of us Albertans. When we make mistakes in these types of decisions, we might not be actually around personally to experience the negative outcomes, so I think it is really important that this gets examined very carefully.

I think that, fortunately for the people of Alberta, we have a government that does take the environment and environmental sustainability very seriously, in fact more seriously than other administrations that have come before us, which is really fortunate because, of course, we are reaching a very critical time, well, in our planet's existence. I mean, these are issues that aren't going to become less as we go forward. You know, there have been a lot of years where a lot of us have either debated the fact of climate change or debated just what type of impact it would have on us. I think that we've gone beyond those types of considerations. I see it in talking to people back in my riding, where not many years ago they were very much in the camp that this was a conspiracy by – I don't know – big solar, big wind, Al Gore, or other elements as just a way to grab money and resources, that: yes, this might be happening, but it could be positive for us, and it's probably natural in origin anyway.

Even for these people it's been getting harder and harder as we see climate models being proven with time. I mean, I think that, actually, just recently the first big climate model that was done up by the UN 50 years ago, looking back now in retrospect, is almost frighteningly accurate. But we don't even need to look to those types of climate studies. We can even look to the change in agricultural practices that we've seen in the northeast of the province, where with the change in the growing season there are crops that we can grow now that weren't really imaginable some years ago. We also see it, of course, in the challenges that our forests are facing with this pine beetle infestation, that we used to be able to depend on our harsh winters to take care of, and that just isn't any longer the case. It's the adding up of all these factors that makes doubting the seriousness of climate change and what impact it has something a lot more difficult to argue.

Now, as far as that section of the province, this is something that we've seen in the challenges we've had with many lakes and with them dropping rather precipitously. I know that's the concern that Whitefish Lake itself in particular has. They're not unique in facing that type of situation, so I think that addressing this now by bringing water out from one of the more reliable sources that we have, where I know that the signs show that extending the water out to that community is going to have a negligible impact on the flow for the North Saskatchewan, is something that makes a lot of sense. By having the line out there, I think it's not just going to help these communities right now, but it's setting the stage for future uses, so I'm very happy to see this happen.

Now, the other thing I should say about this is just how well it sits with other government objectives. One of them, of course, is Alberta's water for life strategy, which, just as a reminder to the House, is centred around achieving safe, secure drinking water, preserving healthy aquatic ecosystems, and providing reliable, quality water for a sustainable economy. This project definitely fits within those parameters. It also puts some flesh on the bone of our commitment to the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples, and that's something as well that was long overdue for our province to accede to and another reason to be proud of the work that this government has been doing.

It's for all these reasons that I'm going to support this bill, and I urge other members of the House to do so as well. This bill provides the absolutely necessary clean and safe drinking water for Mallaig and for Whitefish Lake First Nation. It has no impact on other licence holders. The consultation process was done appropriately, and it has widespread support without any significant objections. It shouldn't cause any concerns regarding the health of the North Saskatchewan River and its flow rate. Also, of course, it's always nice when we get help in paying for projects, and the fact that this leverages federal funding is definitely an asset and something that in these fiscally challenged times is really welcome. So I do hope that all members of the House see the value in allowing this interbasin transfer to go forward and that we indeed get unanimous support for this bill.

Thank you very much, Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 20? The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-St. Albert.

10:10

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'll be a bit briefer than many of my colleagues. I am certainly very happy to see this bill come forward. You know, for far too long we have had not just First Nations but communities across, really, the country, let alone Alberta, that have had poor access to clean water, and that's for a variety of reasons.

As many of my colleagues have, I do want to focus on our First Nation community in question here. You know, going back further, really, than Confederation, the Crown made a promise that our First Nations will have access to clean water, and that is not a promise that has been followed up on consistently throughout geography, let alone throughout time. That is one of the very many reasons that I am proud of this government. We recognized that this is an issue, we made a promise to follow through on the Truth and Reconciliation Commission recommendations, and with the last budget we saw money set aside specifically to get clean drinking water to our First Nations. So I see this as a very positive step forward. Really, seeing these two communities working together on the same bill to get clean water to both of these communities is something very positive.

As the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud was saying, there are a lot of economic benefits as well as health benefits of access to clean water. In my community it's not a population, but there's the Villeneuve Airport, that is currently having a hard time expanding because they don't have running water at the moment. This has been an ongoing discussion between the county and the airport for quite a while. Hopefully, we see some movement in the future, and then we can see some growth there. But I see that there are a lot of economic opportunities and a lot of health care opportunities and, ultimately, cost savings for the government because of savings on health care from access to clean drinking water.

I see this as a very positive move. I am very happy to see this bill come forward, and thank you to the minister for it.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 20?

Mr. Rosendahl: Good morning. It's a pleasure to rise and speak on this important bill. There's nothing more fundamental to life than clean drinking water, and it's important that when we look at the essence of this bill, it's to provide that. When we look at the way in which we're going to move ahead with this, you can look at that we need to do an interbasin transfer. When we look at why we need to do that and why we need an act before the Legislature to allow this, we need to approve the interbasin transfer. It helps protect – and think about that: helps protect – Alberta's valuable water resources. It's important to consider that when you look at these interbasin transfers and how important it is when we deal with these kinds of things.

The proposals are reviewed to ensure the sustainability of water use in each basin. That's what's considered when you look at doing these interbasin transfers. Of course, because of that, interbasin transfers are subject to a thorough review and are only considered under unique circumstances such as this, to provide drinking water to Whitefish Lake First Nation and the small hamlet of Mallaig, which require decent drinking water.

We also look at the issue of: why do St. Paul county and Whitefish Lake First Nation need to draw drinking water? Well, both communities are dealing with water quality and quantity challenges that make it difficult to ensure a reliable, safe supply of drinking water for the area residents. Of course, a lot of members have talked about the effects on the economy and, of course, the effects on the health of the residents when they have a decent quality of drinking water.

After considering other options, it was determined that the best solution was to connect the highway 28/63 regional waterline, that carries drinking water from the North Saskatchewan River treated at the EPCOR facility in Edmonton, the best option in moving forward with the supply of water to these communities. Did they look at other options? Yes, they did. A total of seven options were considered to address the drinking water issue, I mean, when you're looking at water quality, quantity for the hamlet of Mallaig, of course, which is in St. Paul county, and a total of five options were considered to address the issues in Whitefish Lake First Nation. When you look at all these considerations, this is how important it is that we looked at all these options to make sure that this decision is one that is certainly arrived at to be the best solution to solve the drinking water issues for these two communities.

We look at the question of how many residents this will affect, right? Two hundred people in the hamlet of Mallaig and 1,500 people on the Whitefish Lake First Nation will benefit from the delivery of safe, reliable drinking water through this project. It's important, when we look at that, that it's going to affect these people in a big way.

Will the demands on the North Saskatchewan River affect the river? I believe no, because the volume of water that's flowing in the North Saskatchewan is sufficient to supply the demand that's needed on that. The additional water is a .3 per cent increase in demand from what is flowing in the river. The average volume in the North Saskatchewan is 7.5 billion cubic metres that flow in the river, so, like I said, there would be no measurable effect on diverting that small amount of water for the project.

When you look at the other part of it, the consultations part of it, St. Paul county was consulted. First Nations, watershed planning and advisory councils, and area residents were consulted when they looked at doing this project. A similar process on the highway 28/63 regional water commission will be followed later this summer for the Whitefish Lake First Nation interbasin transfer. It was important that all these consultations were done, and of course through that consultation process all the options were looked at, and it was determined that the interbasin transfer is the best way to go to provide clean, safe drinking water to these two communities.

When we look at the other side of it, the costs, of course, we had already mentioned that the estimated cost of connecting Mallaig to the regional waterline is $9.5 million. St. Paul county received $4.75 million from the Canada clean water program and $4.75 million from the Alberta water for life program to fund this important work, right? The estimated cost of connecting the Whitefish Lake First Nation is $22.6 million; $20.66 million will be funded through the United Nations declaration on the rights of indigenous peoples/First Nations regional tie-in project funding from the government of Alberta. The remaining $1.98 million has been committed by the federal government to tie the waterline to the reservoir on the reserve. It's important that we work together in providing this important project moving forward.

10:20

I could talk a long time about the water for life strategy as I dealt with it many years ago in looking at making sure that the water for life strategy in Alberta was a good one, a made-for-Alberta solution in dealing with water in Alberta. Like many people have said already, safe, secure drinking water, healthy aquatic ecosystems: those are very important when we look at our environmental issues and climate change and all those issues that are affecting our water today. A big piece of that, too, is reliable, quality water for a sustainable economy. Some members have already talked on that today, about how important it is to have clean, safe, reliable drinking water.

The main outcome of the water for life strategy is to ensure, like I said, a safe, secure drinking water supply while indirectly promoting higher standards of socioeconomic status to residents. To address this, a comprehensive review of all the waterworks systems in Alberta, 550 to be exact, was undertaken in 2003 in a study that identified the short- and long-term solutions to source treatment and, of course, operational challenges in the supply of safe, secure drinking water in the province of Alberta. Regional water systems were identified as the best practical solution in addressing these challenges. Regional water systems avoid expensive upgrades for stand-alone water treatment plants, which are aging, to meet current and future treated water standards. All of these issues fall under the water for life strategy.

The other part of it is to alleviate annual operational costs associated with stand-alone water treatment upgrade plans as well as retaining certified operators, which is also an issue in the fact that people operating these plants now have to be certified to make sure that when they're operating these plants, the water is, in fact, safe for everyone to drink.

Based on all those things, it's important that we support Bill 20, and with that, I thank everyone. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Madam Chair. I'm pleased to get up and speak to this bill this morning. I kind of wanted to pick up on some of the comments from the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud regarding the history of Alberta and how it was settled and how prosperity and economic diversity came to the province.

I'd like to talk a little bit about the Brooks aqueduct. I know that's not quite the same thing as the interbasin transfer that the bill contemplates. Nonetheless, it involves bringing water to arid parts of the province so that . . .

Mr. Loewen: Madam Chair, he just admitted that it was irrelevant.

The Deputy Chair: Are you done, hon. member?

Mr. Westhead: I think he's raising a point of order.

The Deputy Chair: No. He didn't raise a point of order. Please continue.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you.

Mr. Loewen: I just pointed out that it was irrelevant. He admitted it.

Ms Jansen: Why don't you let him speak?

Mr. Westhead: Yes. Thank you very much.

The Brooks aqueduct was made in . . .

Mr. Loewen: I'm not stopping him. Let him go ahead.

Mr. Westhead: Madam Chair, do I have the floor?

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, I realize that we're in Committee of the Whole, so there can be side conversations, but if we could please be respectful so that the speaker can continue speaking.

Mr. Westhead: Thank you, Madam Chair. Like I was saying, the Brooks aqueduct was built in the early 1900s, and it was a project by the CPR to help bring prosperity to agricultural communities in southern Alberta. You know, at the time it was one of the largest construction projects in history and one of the largest man-made structures in the country and, I believe, in the world. The reason that the aqueduct was built was to bring water to parts of the prairies for agricultural purposes.

You know, historical accounts have it that projects like the Brooks aqueduct and the Bassano dam and the Eastern irrigation district are fundamental founding parts of how Alberta came to be such an incredibly prosperous province. When we compare the historical significance of the Brooks aqueduct to the formation of our province, in a parallel way, having this interbasin transfer to the Beaver River water basin is going to be equally important in the history of the communities that the water will be delivered to.

I think it's important. Sometimes we take water for granted, and we forget how central it is to safe, healthy communities and our prosperity. It brings opportunities as well to the communities. You know, the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud was talking about the social determinants of health, and I'd like to expand on that a little bit in terms of Maslow's hierarchy of needs. If we don't have the fundamental elements essential to life, we can't achieve those higher things in the hierarchy, so it's incredibly important that people have safe, clean drinking water. We can avoid catastrophes like what happened in Walkerton.

The thing is that these projects require money. You know, we have committed $100 million to bringing clean, safe drinking water to First Nations communities. That's a commitment that's unique, I think, in Alberta in terms of putting our money where our mouth is. In terms of the reconciliation process, helping First Nations achieve the fundamental human right of having clean, safe drinking water is something that's extremely important to this government. I'm really proud that we're finally making these things happen.

In terms of climate change, you know, climate change has been mentioned here this morning. I like to think of water as: in a future climate water is going to be the new currency. If you don't have water, as the climate changes, your economic and growth opportunities are limited by the amount of water a community has. On the other side they don't believe in climate change, so it's a little bit hypocritical for them to talk about how important water is when they don't even believe in climate change. But that's another issue.

Where we're trying to give economic opportunities and diversify our economy, having these interbasin transfers like this to help a community that's in need of water to expand: this is something that's essential and incredibly important to that community.

I'd like to support the comments that have been made this morning and support the bill. I'm really proud of our government for putting this forward, and I encourage all members to support the bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 20?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question on Bill 20, the Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 20 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Bilous: Yes, Madam Chair. I move that we rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[Ms Sweet in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

10:30

Ms Luff: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 20.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Does the Assembly concur with the report? All those in favour, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 21

Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose on behalf of the hon. President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.

Mr. Hinkley: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am pleased to rise today on behalf of the Minister of Finance to move second reading of Bill 21, Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017.

Madam Speaker, provincial government agencies, boards, and commissions, or ABCs, play a vital role in delivering important programs and services to Albertans as well as providing oversight and advice. This is why our government is committed to continuing the long-overdue review of Alberta's agencies, boards, and commissions. The ongoing review of agencies, boards, and commissions ensures that ABCs are transparent, accountable, and using public dollars effectively and efficiently.

Madam Speaker, I want to start out by sharing some key facts and numbers that have come out of the ABC review to date. You'll recall that when we announced this process back in November 2015, there were 301 public agencies that were being reviewed. As part of Budget 2016 we announced a list of 26 agencies, boards, and commissions that were to be consolidated and dissolved, saving Albertans $33 million over three years.

Phase 1 of the ABC review covered 135 agencies governed by the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act, or APAGA. This review has resulted in the amalgamation or dissolution, now complete or under way, of 56 of those agencies, boards, and commissions.

Phase 2 of the ABC review looked at another 140 agencies that are not subject to APAGA, which includes a large number of professional and regulatory advisory bodies. While non-APAGA ABCs are more arm's length from government, each agency is accountable to the government for carrying on its mandate, meeting its objectives, and serving Albertans, including ensuring public safety, hearing appeals, and providing expert and public advice on important Alberta programs. As a result of phase 2 of the review, another eight agencies, boards, and commissions are proposed to be dissolved or amalgamated.

With that, let us now turn our attention to Bill 21, the Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017. This bill will enable us to implement dissolution where legislative amendments are required for 14 ABCs, 13 under phase 1 and one under phase 2. Some of these are the Access Advisory Council, under the Advanced Education ministry – the Access Advisory Council was established to provide advice to the minister regarding the access to the future fund; however, as payments have been suspended indefinitely, the council is no longer needed – and the Agricultural Operation Practices Act Practice Review Committee, under Agriculture and Forestry. This act is being amended to reflect that committees will be struck on an ad hoc basis rather than through a standing committee.

Another committee, the Alberta Economic Development Authority, under Economic Development and Trade, is no longer active or relevant. Therefore, the recommendation for dissolution was made as part of phase 2 of the ABC review.

For the Alberta Heritage Scholarship Act committees, under Advanced Education, the ministry will simplify programming for the next scholarship application intake, removing the step of applicant selection by the committees, which will remove complexity and improve processing time for student applicants.

There are nine family and community engagement councils under the Ministry of Community and Social Services. These councils have never been established. Repealing the Building Families and Communities Act in its entirety will remove this act, which is no longer necessary, also the Students Finance Board under Advanced Education. It is important to note, Madam Speaker, that almost all of these public agencies are already inactive or defunct.

However, the Alberta Heritage Scholarship Act committees with Advanced Education were stood up when needed. Currently the Alberta heritage scholarship committees select about 70 of the 49,000 scholarship and award recipients supported by the department each year. Selection committees were initially established where the eligibility criteria were complex enough to justify external expertise to adjudicate applications. Most of the scholarships and awards programs administered by Advanced Education no longer use selection committees. They have rigorous processes to determine eligibility criteria and ensure accountability, transparency, and objectivity. These committees only meet when required to adjudicate particular scholarships. Recommendations were made to the department, and finalists were selected. Dissolving these committees essentially saves a step in the selection process. With reviews of scholarship programming leading to efforts to simplify programming, the eligibility complexity that made the selection committees valuable will no longer exist.

Madam Speaker, as I close today, I'd like to say that I'm proud that the review of agencies, boards, and commissions has resulted in numerous important changes to increase transparency, fiscal accountability, and diversity and to ensure better value for Albertans. We have seen significant progress government-wide in several different areas, including fair and appropriate executive compensation at ABCs; effective use of public dollars; transparency and accountability, including salary disclosure; revitalization of board appointment diversity; a diligent and public appointment process, an appointment process that is focused on what you know and not who you know; a compensation framework for 23 designated ABCs; cutting salaries and eliminating bonuses and perks like the golf club memberships for the highest paid top executives of agencies, boards, and commissions. The elimination of agencies that were defunct or whose functions could be better provided through another entity, including a government department, contributes to the efficient and effective use of public dollars.

I look forward to discussion on this bill and would ask that all members of the House support it. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Barnes: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to speak to Bill 21, Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017. At this point in time I'm very pleased with the intent of the bill to limit government, to look for more value for hard-earned tax dollars, and to reduce bureaucracy. It looks like it might be a rare instance where the NDP has actually brought something useful forward. We will see if the devil is in the details.

Madam Speaker, Bill 21 implements phase 3 of the government's agencies, boards, and commissions review by dissolving 14 agencies, boards, and commissions. Five other agencies, boards, and commissions will be eliminated that did not require a statute to effect the change. Nineteen agencies, boards, and commissions were identified by this government as either duplicating work or not functioning. These are in addition to the 26 agencies, boards, and commissions identified in Budget 2016 for further consolidation or dissolution.

Madam Speaker, the United Conservative Party caucus supports reducing red tape and bureaucracy, of course, and finding efficiencies as long as consultation and engagement are maintained. Reducing the number of agencies, boards, and commissions is a common-sense approach to reducing the size of our government.

10:40

Madam Speaker, if anyone here has read Mark Milke's book Barbarians in the Garden City, at the time B.C. NDP Premier Glen Clark swears the NDP was a fiscally conservative party. When the B.C. NDP 1997 party convention adopted a motion condemning the B.C. benefits/welfare reforms package and called for an increase in welfare rates, Clark responded: no; we have a deficit. Sounds a lot like: no; we're broke.

Reducing the number of agencies, boards, and commissions might be one of those cases where the Alberta NDP is channelling Glen Clark. The United Conservative Party also supports arm's-length entities' ability to work without – without – political influence and interference by the government.

Madam Speaker, I'm not sure how the government can call this bill part of the third phase of their ABC review when phase 3 was supposed to tackle executive compensation, roles and mandates, and governance excellence in public postsecondary institutions. Bill 21 does not address any of those issues, leading me to wonder if the government is not going to tackle executive compensation, roles and mandates or if, like we just saw in the previous Committee of the Whole, the government brought us back here before they were ready.

We know that the university presidents and administrators are making exorbitant salaries, and Albertans want to know what we are getting in return when a former U of A president received a $544,000 salary and just over $1.1 million in total compensation in 2014 as well as $930,000 for buying her house. Of course, with known NDP backer Michael Phair guarding the U of A board, I guess we'll never know, Madam Speaker. Again, government has fallen short of truly looking – truly looking – for fair value, value for hard-earned tax dollars, competitive processes to ensure that the right people at the right price are put into rare government positions. At least, it's encouraging to see the NDP getting rid of a little bit of bureaucracy and expenditures.

Madam Speaker, let's take a look at some of these entities the NDP are doing away with. We have three here from the Department of Advanced Education. We have the access to the future fund's Access Advisory Council, the Alberta Heritage Scholarship Act committees, and the Students Finance Board, where, in all, we are told that other entities can handle the work.

Then we have Community and Social Services' family and community engagement councils. These were set up in 2014 but never populated and would require millions of dollars to get going, so no doubt a good saving and a good reduction of bureaucracy.

The one that does concern me, representing a largely rural constituency, is under Agriculture and Forestry. We have the Agricultural Operation Practices Act Practice Review Committee. Madam Speaker, this committee has not been active since 2011. It was called as an ad hoc committee to conduct inquiries under part 1 of the AOPA. Apparently, it will continue to perform an ad hoc function. A change in legislation will clarify that the committee will only form when there is a complaint under the act, an event that apparently has not occurred since 2011. I'm concerned how crucial this could be.

Madam Speaker, we saw last year, with the early snow and frost, particularly in northern and central Alberta, how so many of our farmers and our farm families had to work extra hard, take extra financial risk, and then suffered some losses. This provision was supposed to help that industry, that's weather sensitive and time sensitive, if necessary, if you ran into a concern with an urban neighbour or an urban disagreement over timing and noise and those kinds of things. At this point in time I'll be watching what this government does in this next phase because we have to ensure – we have to ensure – that our agriculture producers have the best opportunity to feed Albertans, to feed the world at a time when it seems like urban movement is infringing on them more and more every day. So I'll be watching this and talking more about it in Committee of the Whole.

Madam Speaker, Economic Development and Trade is getting rid of the Alberta Economic Development Authority. Now, the Premier effectively shut this down in 2015, but I seem to recall that all those employees in AEDA simply got absorbed into the public service in one of the departments: Economic Development and Trade or Treasury Board and Finance or to work for the Premier's Advisory Committee on the Economy. So at the end of the day, if we limit government a bit with Bill 21 and shuffle all the savings to other departments, this is just reshuffling the deck chairs on the you-know-what. AEDA used to produce some excellent reports on the state of the economy and issues we face. I guess the NDP will leave that up to the think tanks like the Canada West Foundation now.

A good search of the government telephone directory tells me that the Premier's Advisory Committee on the Economy doesn't even seem to exist anymore. I wonder where it could be hiding if not in Economic Development and Trade. Has it gone silent? Is it unpaid? Is it volunteer? Or have the employee contracts just run out, the employees let go, and the Premier takes no special advice? Again, my guess is that bigger government still exists everywhere with our NDP government, but we'll see if that can be fleshed out during Committee of the Whole.

Now, the other five agencies, boards, or commissions that will be dissolved through other means include Alberta Health's Alberta Expert Review Panel for Blood Borne Viral Infections in Health Care Workers.

Under Environment and Parks there is the Reclamation Criteria Advisory Group. Yes, you'd think by now we would all know what reclaimed land looks like. Look at the great job that Suncor and other oil sands producers are doing in Fort McMurray to see their reclamation.

Under Economic Development and Trade there is the Alberta Innovation Council. This council provided leadership, advice, and system oversight on $800 million in annual innovation funding in the province. I wonder: why, exactly, is this ABC being dissolved? Has Alberta Innovates taken over this role? Is this information deemed not necessary? I hope to get some answers from the government as we proceed.

The Small Medium Enterprise Export Council provided advice to expand, encourage, and facilitate access of Alberta SMEs to foreign markets. Again, gone.

Under Transportation there is the Strategic Transportation Advisory Council, a committee made up of public- and private-sector transportation representatives who advise Alberta Transportation on transportation issues affecting Alberta's economy. Again, gone. That's too bad. I didn't know the STAC was formalized. I thought of it as a coffee-shop talk of the airports, the railways, the bus and trucking companies all getting together to tell the minister what's right, what's wrong, and what needs to be fixed.

But, again, we've seen a government short on consultation, so I hope that that doesn't continue and this doesn't make that worse.

At the end of the day, we want to ensure that all of the ABCs planned for this dissolution make sense. We also want to ensure that the other avenues for consultation are working before we simply agree to dissolve the latest list of ABCs. The United Conservative Party also wants to make sure that there are no surprises. After all, Madam Speaker, we were expecting phase 3 to involve postsecondaries, and that is clearly not happening. Either the government changed their mind, or once again they were not ready.

At this point it should be noted that the United Conservative Party has seen the NDP have problems in rolling out its plans for ABCs. Case in point, the changes made to AIMCo under the same ABC program. The ministry responsible for AIMCo handled it so poorly that it threatened AIMCo's reputation by alarming clients about the government's apparent attempts to undermine the Crown corporation's independence. Incredible. Independence is critical to AIMCo, handling $97 billion of Alberta's money, including 83,000 pensions of our hard-working civil servants and, of course, our $17 billion heritage savings trust fund. While AIMCo's changes were high stakes, much higher than these ABCs, these ones deserve proper consultation and reflection as well.

10:50

These are some of the reasons that while legislation such as Bill 21 may appear innocuous on the surface, it is our job as legislators to scrutinize any bills carefully. Madam Speaker, while I recognize the chance to reduce bureaucracy and limit government, through Committee of the Whole and further readings we will be watching to ensure that this government got this one right.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to speak to Bill 21.

First of all, I'd like to address something. It bothered me to hear condemnation of Michael Phair from the member opposite because he was named for his talents and his abilities to be the chair of the U of A board of governors. His long-standing reputation is one of excellence in everything he turned his hands to as a city councillor, human rights activist, leader in the LGBTQ community in Edmonton and throughout the province, and it was really disappointing to hear his reputation being maligned by the member who just spoke about him in condescending terms. I was upset about that, and I hope not to hear that type of comment again about somebody who is so well respected in our province.

I do, though, wish to speak further about my agreement to stand in favour of Bill 21, the Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017. Madam Speaker, the provincial government's agencies, boards, and commissions do play an important role in delivering important programs and services to Albertans, and they provide valuable oversight and advice.

Now, this piece of legislation isn't simply a housekeeping bill. It's a matter of looking at significant savings but also improving governance in the province. It was announced last year that 26 agencies, boards, and commissions were to be consolidated or dissolved, and this means big dollars saved. It means a $33 million savings over three years for Albertans.

This isn't something that we're going to be looking at as a one-off. It's something that we need to be doing on an ongoing basis and something that wasn't done for decades under the previous administration. That's why we're faced with a situation right now where there were a number of these agencies, boards, and commissions which were simply not functioning. They weren't operational, and they were left in the dust because of the neglect of the previous administration. So we're looking on an ongoing basis at these reviews and making sure that the remaining agencies, boards, and commissions are actually functioning and providing quality service at reasonable cost.

This government is intent on making sure that the agencies, boards, and commissions that we have now or ones that might be created in the future actually have a job to do and do so within a budget that is realistic and don't waste money, as I said, and that they provide valuable oversight and service and advice to the province. Bill 21 ensures that all ABCs are relevant and serving the best interests of Albertans. The agencies impacted by this bill are all, as had been mentioned before, either no longer operating, or the work they do could be done more effectively elsewhere. Almost all of the public agencies the bill addresses are inactive or defunct.

Some people have some questions that they have asked about the bill and this phase of the review. The intent of the review was to assure Albertans that the functions and services being provided by our agencies, boards, and commissions remain relevant, effective, and make life better for the people of this province. The majority of the public agencies being dissolved are already inactive or rarely meet. Dissolving these agencies means we are eliminating unnecessary processes. What we're doing is taking care of some of the neglect of the past administration in not really keeping an eye on what was going on with those agencies, boards, and commissions. They ended up falling into disuse, and we're now taking care of that.

This review also ensures that public agencies are transparent and accountable and are following good governance practices. I'm sure all of us have heard horror stories about how some of the agencies, boards, and commissions are not really following proper rules of governance, and having oversight of them right now, having this review take a look at governance of agencies, boards, and commissions is long overdue. I know that I've had expressions of relief from people who are on agencies, boards, and commissions that this review is being undertaken so that they feel comfortable in their operation as members of agencies, boards, and commissions that they operate on.

Now, in phase 2 of the review the outcomes can be described in a number of ways, but all three phases of the review were focused on identifying what's working, what can be improved, and what is no longer providing value or relevance to Albertans. Phase 2 reviewed 140 agencies that are not subject to the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act, or APAGA. These agencies are more than arm's length for government and include a large number of self-regulated professional organizations. As a result of phase 2 of the review, an additional eight agencies, boards, and commissions are proposed to be dissolved or amalgamated. Government will work to ensure that all the agencies continue to meet the needs of Albertans effectively.

Now, it was brought to light that there are fewer dollars being saved from phase 2 than phase 1. People had that question. An important focus of the ABC review was to be sure that the agencies, boards, and commissions are using public dollars effectively and efficiently. It's also important that these public agencies are transparent and accountable and are following good governance practices. Last year, in phase 1, 26 ABCs were consolidated or dissolved, saving taxpayers $33 million over three years. The eliminated agencies in phase 2 were no longer functioning and had no board and no staff. The review was thorough and extended to all 140 agencies, boards, and commissions that are not subject to APAGA.

Some have asked why some agencies are still under review. Alberta's agencies, boards, and commissions provide substantial value, and we will continue to ensure that public agencies are relevant, effective, transparent, well governed, and accountable to government and Albertans. Some continuing reviews of agencies are tied in with broader systemic reviews in which the specific agency review cannot be undertaken in isolation. That's why some agencies are still under review.

Once all phases of the review are complete, that doesn't mean that we're going to stop the process. It will be an ongoing process. Our government believes strongly in agency governance, and this means that the reviews of agencies occur regularly so that we don't end up with a situation where we have agencies, boards, or commissions which are dormant, which cost us money, and do nothing. APAGA agencies must be reviewed by the government at least every seven years.

Non-APAGA agencies may also have prescribed review timelines in their enabling legislation. Whether prescribed or not, it's a good practice to regularly evaluate agencies to ensure that Albertans continue to be well served and represented. That is something that we intend to do over time by maintaining oversight over these agencies and on a regular basis reviewing them so that we don't end up with dormant, nonfunctioning, and costly agencies, boards, or commissions in the future.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud.

Dr. Turner: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Actually, I want to thank the Member for Edmonton-McClung for a very good review of why we need this bill and what is going to be accomplished.

I actually want to also congratulate him for calling out the rather poorly chosen wording by the member opposite when that member was referring to Michael Phair. I consider Michael Phair to be one of the heroes of the city of Edmonton and the province of Alberta. Indeed, I have known Michael Phair for 30 years, and I have never seen him do a mean thing in his life. He's always been a leader and always brought credit to whatever organization he works for, and that includes being the chair of the board of the University of Alberta. What a brilliant appointment that was, and I really congratulate the selection committee in doing that.

11:00

In fact, the appointment of Michael Phair as chair of the board of the University of Alberta actually occurred after our election in 2015. I wanted to bring this up because what the member opposite alluded to was the salary and perks of the previous president of the University of Alberta, and that person actually was given that contract about 10 years ago, I believe, or at least well before 2014.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, are you speaking to the speaker that just spoke?

Dr. Turner: Yes, I am.

The Acting Speaker: If you could please speak to the speaker that just spoke. I think you're commenting on comments that actually happened before that speaker.

Dr. Turner: I am referring to the comments that the Member for Edmonton-McClung made about Michael Phair.

I just wanted to point out that the government responsible for the contract for the previous president of the University of Alberta was actually a Progressive Conservative government, and they . . .

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, the previous speaker actually did not speak to the president. He spoke to Michael Phair, the individual. He did not speak about the comment on the prior president. So I would just like you to please comment on what was commented on by the member and not speak to comments that were made by the other member.

Dr. Turner: Well, then, I will basically ask the Member for Edmonton-McClung to give us some further information on who was actually in charge of the board of the University of Alberta at the time that that contract was signed.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Dach: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I won't belabour the point or go too far off into the weeds on this, but my major disappointment was the fact that the reputation of the board chair of the University of Alberta was maligned, that being Mr. Michael Phair. As has been alluded to, I thought it was also a brilliant appointment. I consider Mr. Phair a true friend of mine as well, and his service and reputation are beyond reproach. It was maligned in this House, and I stand to protect that and to oppose anyone who might malign his reputation. That's basically the point of my comment on comments made in this House regarding Mr. Phair.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I will now recognize the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Orr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I appreciate it. I'm pleased to be able to speak to Bill 21, the Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017, this morning. I do hope that the government will make very clear one particular issue for us: whether this bill was intended to implement phase 3 of the government's ABCs review act or, as seems to have been indicated by the Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, whether it's actually just a wrap of phases 1 and 2, bringing forward some of those things that were raised in phases 1 and 2. I think it does make a difference here, and we'll get to that in a moment.

This current bill, though, that we're speaking to, Bill 21, does bring forward 19 ABCs that have either been duplicating work or not functioning or minimally functioning, which is good. The 2016 budget identified that at that time there were 26 other ABCs that needed to be dissolved due to recommendations from various departments either for consolidation or dissolution. They were all identified as being cost-saving measures and duplication-of-work correction measures. Some of those agencies from phases 1 and 2 are obviously just now being dissolved, and I suppose that's partly because some of the consultation work, internal work for those agencies needed to be completed and brought to a good conclusion. So that's good practice.

In general I want to affirm the government's action on this bill. I will be voting in favour of it, pending how things go through Committee of the Whole, but in general I do affirm the government's action on this bill. Every institution, including government, has a tendency to create programs and new ventures in a burst of zeal, but then over time the need for the endeavour changes, situations change, and programs get left to sort of drag on and on and on way past their best-before date. While it's fun to start new ventures, it's more like work to wrap them up. So I congratulate the government on an unglamorous bill that accomplishes much more than some of their more radical adventures which the government has brought forward. This is good management, a bill like this.

I would also encourage the government that if you can do this, then I think you can address some of the red tape snarl of regulations in our government as well. It's clear that we fully support the reduction of red tape. The reality is that red tape and bureaucratic reductions and strategies and all of those kinds of things need to sometimes be reviewed. For that reason, I'll be supporting second reading of Bill 21.

Redundant and costly ABCs are really much like redundant and costly regulations. They tend to build up, and every once in a while the home of government regulation needs a serious housecleaning. I trust that as we try to find efficiencies with regard to the ABCs, we can maybe find some prudent efficiencies as well with regard to some of the regulations that we have. I'm hoping that as we support this one, the government will also find it appropriate to, in a while, support Bill 207 from the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, the Regulatory Burden Reduction Act, that we'll be seeing. All those in this House can safely assume that at least our caucus does appreciate reducing any area of red tape, removing any duplication, and finding all the efficiencies that we can within the government and its various departments.

I do have a couple of questions, though, that I would appreciate the opportunity to have clarified, that I think should be answered. Clearly, is this bill going to address what was originally phase 3 or not? I wonder if the government would clarify where the mandate for phase 3 is. I believe phase 3, as has already been suggested, was intended to examine executive compensation, roles and mandates, and governance excellence in the public postsecondary institutions. That is not here. It's not even mentioned. Has this been forgotten? Is it going to be brought up later? What are the government's intentions on that? I think it's something that the people of Alberta would appreciate being able to know.

Let me move on. One of – actually, I'll save that for Committee of the Whole.

As always, I think there are questions that need to be resolved around clarity regarding some of the decisions that have been made, how they were made. But, at the end of the day, we just need to make sure that the cost savings actually outweigh what this might be costing the province. Some of the decision-making process, some of the protocols, the methods that were used to decide which ones to combine, which ones to dissolve, which ones were valuable, which ones were not, which ones were actually inefficient, which weren't: I think it would be helpful for us to understand some of that, for the people of Alberta to understand that to be able to be supportive of the intent and of the direction this is going, and having the agencies themselves being involved in that.

I know that the government has often said that they consult, but it's pretty skimpy consulting. Have the agencies and the boards and the people involved, maybe even the stakeholders, had the opportunity to actually contribute to these? Is dissolving them always the best solution? Is it the right solution in each particular case? We can get into some of that during Committee of the Whole.

Clearly, as has already been alluded to by the Member for Edmonton-McClung, I think it was, there are other agencies and commissions that have had serious challenges and serious problems. How are these being addressed? There are issues of overpayment. There are issues that I am aware of with conflict of interest. There are issues of management. These are the things that need to be watched and dealt with. How are we, the people of Alberta, to know that all of these have actually been dealt with in ways that create a benefit for the people of Alberta? I think a cost-benefit analysis of some type would be very useful. Has that been done, and will that be presented at some time in the future?

11:10

The 2016 budget, as has already been said, identified $33 million in savings over three years. Have we verification that those savings actually occurred, or is it just a nice public presentation? How do we verify actual savings of $33 million? Along with that, I would say that while I totally applaud greater fiscal responsibility, particularly with this government, I do think that we need much more. That $33 million, compared to a looming $90 billion deficit, is a mere drop in the bucket of what needs to be happening here, so I would really like to affirm that we need to continue in this direction with a little bit more energy.

With every decision that's made in Alberta, though, I think it's important that we offer Albertans stability and that we restore confidence in the process and the management of their province and of government. There shouldn't be unexpected surprises. I hope that all of these, then, are well thought through, that the planning was in place, that it involved the people that are stakeholders, as I've said. I'm actually going to be connecting with some stakeholders this afternoon with regard to some of the specifics to see what their thoughts on this are, and we'll bring that back in Committee of the Whole.

Communication is extremely important to people. It's what gives confidence to the system. Alberta has had a lot of shaking of its confidence lately. It's affected our employment, it's affected people who work here, it's affected our businesses, and it's affected a lot of Alberta and our investment in this province. So we really do need to do this in a way that restores confidence to the people that the process, not just the result but the process, was proper and fulsome and adequate.

Those are some of the concerns that I have, and hopefully the government will be able to give us some indication of some of those things as well.

We support the idea of planning for dissolution of those that make sense. We recognize that there have been a number of problems with these in the past. I won't refer to AIMCo – it's already been brought up – except to say that it is important to maintain, generally with ABCs, the whole concept of arm's-length governance on operation. That's why they have independent boards. Yes, there should be an overall review of objectives and if they are fulfilling their mandate, but beyond that, I think it's extremely important that the government stays out of the operation and the daily decisions that these agencies and boards and commissions are asked to make. The whole question of protecting the concept of arm's length, which I think this government has struggled with in the past, is extremely important and one that I would like to have assurance will be protected as we move forward.

I think I'll leave it at that. I will support the bill at this reading. We will have some questions coming up. Let's do a good job on this one at least, okay?

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I'm glad to hear that the hon. member is supportive of the bill that we're bringing forward. It definitely is our intention to find efficiencies and create opportunities for those. But I can't help but beg the question: how is tying up legal counsel in drafting a bill, how is tying up departments in drafting regulations, how is creating new red tape to reduce red tape actually an effective use of resources? Talking about how they want us to bring forward a bill to reduce red tape but that the bill is red tape and therefore would create red tape, to me, just doesn't actually – I can't square that circle.

I think that what is prudent financial management, including management of human resources, is to ensure that staff are working diligently to reduce inefficiencies, to find redundancies and act on them, as opposed to political grandstanding around bills that have the words "red tape" in them. So I would really find it very helpful for the member opposite to help me understand how tying up all those resources and creating a bill to do exactly what we're doing would be an efficient use of public resources.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Mr. Orr: That is the snarl of red tape. It just never seems to end in government and in institutions. The reality is that I think that in order to address the challenge of – and maybe we should use a different language than just "red tape." It's just old and redundant regulation that sometimes needs to be reviewed, housecleaned, as I've said, and sometimes in order to do that, we have to just get deliberate about it. I fully acknowledge it will take some more work. It will take some doing. But, you know, every jurisdiction in Canada, every province at least in Canada except Alberta, does address that, does take a deliberate look at it. I think that we in the end will end up with significantly less redundant and obsolete regulation that nobody really needs but tends to sort of block the flow in our Alberta economy. Yeah, I think we do need to address it.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much. Again, Madam Speaker, creating regulations and legislation to say that you have to do things on a certain schedule actually creates new red tape. When I came in, there were a set of past practices that said that regulations expired after a certain time limit unless they were intentionally renewed, which meant that we had to spend tons of department resources going through those regulations that we couldn't have expire. We couldn't have public health regulations expire and create health risks for the people of Alberta, so we had to put in tons of lawyers and department content experts just to deal with the renewal of expiry dates.

To me that is an incredible waste of resources, when there are certain pieces of legislation that are important that we have embedded in the safe operations of government and the safety and protection of people, creating new regulations and new legislation. To say that you have to do it every three years otherwise they expire and are no longer in effect, to me, is dangerous and risky and a waste of public resources because you're tying up all of that legal and content policy expertise on just dealing with expiry dates as opposed to actually looking at pieces of legislation that are worthy of the intentional examination and review and updating. You're spending all sorts of time on things like extending expiry dates, which, to me, is ineffective.

Having a piece of legislation to politically grandstand, saying that you're going to reduce red tape is actually a creation of red tape. I agree with the intention that you want to ensure that you're being effective about where you're using your resources, that you're updating things in a timely fashion that should be updated. But just to say across the board, "We're going to be getting rid of red tape as a political gesture rather than actually having thought and understanding around why some of those pieces might require a longer period of extension, why it isn't actually effective to say that every three years everything is invalid unless it's been validated," could actually be a tremendous waste of resources, Madam Speaker.

While I agree with the intention around streamlining, as is evident in the government bill that's being debated here this morning, I think that some of the posturing that has been done in the past and may be done again on this floor in short order isn't an effective use of resources, Madam Speaker. Having lived through the intention of, you know, "We'll have these short-term expiry dates so that everything expires unless it's relevant," it actually did create a ton of red tape. I had to work to create efficiencies so that we wouldn't have either a public health crisis or the department spending all of its time just dealing with expiry dates.

That's a little bit of my learned experience that I wanted to share, and I hope that it will be useful in consideration of this bill and others.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Greenway.

Mr. Gill: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I stand today to speak in support of second reading of Bill 21. I think that any effort, as the speakers before me already mentioned, to reduce red tape is a positive thing, and for that basic reason I support second reading of Bill 21.

I am curious, however. If Bill 21 is a part of phase 3 of the government's ABCs review, it will dissolve 14 ABCs. In that case I'm not really sure how the government can call this bill part of the third phase of the ABC review because phase 3 was supposed to tackle "executive compensation, roles and mandates, and governance excellence in public post-secondary institutions." Bill 21 does not address any of those issues.

11:20

Of course, we all know that that is a big project, and it will involve dicey negotiations with the postsecondaries. We know that this government hasn't performed previous consultations very successfully, and we can talk about that till the cows come home: like Bill 6, the carbon tax, et cetera, et cetera. It appears the key is to provide cover fire by focusing instead on dissolving 14 more agencies, with five others dissolving without the need to do so legislatively. In this way Bill 21 seems more like an addendum to phase 1, which saw 56 agencies amalgamated or dissolved. No word on what'll happen to the postsecondaries. The purported plan for phase 3 perhaps is not going so well. Perhaps the minister can provide an update sometime on that.

Still, the exercise to review ABCs to weed out redundancy and duplication has been a worthwhile one. As the bill moves through committee, the United Conservative Party caucus looks forward to carefully scrutinizing the ABCs targeted in this piece of legislation. Of particular interest is the plan to dissolve the following ABCs up for dissolution. I've picked only a few. I'm not going to go into detail on every ABC. For example, the first one is the Alberta Heritage Scholarship Act committee. It's still active, but its function has been brought back into government to be absorbed by other entities that handle all other scholarship decisions. We want to make sure this makes sense as Albertans are more and more curious about what this NDP is doing with their heritage fund.

The second one is the family and community engagement councils. These councils were created to replace child and family services authorities and persons with development disabilities boards but were never populated. The current government says that they would be too expensive and their functions would be better handled through the department. Perhaps so, but we'll look into that. Maybe they were a good idea that should have been operational. Clearly, the department hasn't taken on these functions, which sound valuable. How do we know it'll happen if this ABC is dissolved? Like, we don't know the outcome of that.

The other one is the Alberta Economic Development Authority. It does indeed seem redundant with the creation of the Premier's Advisory Committee on the Economy, but what is the Premier's advisory council doing? We don't know about that. There are no reports on its website. Does it just report to the Premier in private? We haven't seen anything.

Another agency, the Alberta Innovation Council, provides leadership, advice, and system oversight on $800 million of annual innovation funding. We have received little information on the need to dissolve this particular ABC when this government is so keen about diversifying the economy, you know, so keen on innovation, but we have no information on this, this ABC yet.

The other one is the Small Medium Enterprise Export Council. This agency's mandate has been to provide advice to "expand, encourage and facilitate access of Alberta [small medium enterprises] to foreign markets." Again, this would help to diversify our economy. The latter two councils might still serve a good purpose, but, as we all know, the NDP is not a fan of business, but we do need to do away with everything that might assist entrepreneurs.

Finally, the other one I have is the Strategic Transportation Advisory Council. Public- and private-sector transportation representatives advise Alberta Transportation on transportation issues affecting Alberta's economy. Is this public consultation occurring in another venue? That is an important point. I mean, we don't know anything about that.

There is an opportunity here to expand on red tape reduction. The UCP appreciates that Bill 21 at least purports to reduce red tape. This ties in nicely with my colleague the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner's Bill 207, which is also before this House, Madam Speaker. Since the NDP is suddenly so keen on red tape reduction, as evidenced by this bill, we hope that, you know, we'll get support for Bill 207 as well, a private member's bill.

But, anyway, let's get back to Bill 21. I noticed that you were going to give me warning, so I got back. In reviewing and providing possible amendments to ABCs in coming days, we want to ensure that all board, council, and advisory council plans for dissolution make sense and they don't have any unintended consequences. We want to make sure the government isn't just targeting them to make life easier for ministers who don't want to consult instead of, like, making life better for Albertans, as the government always claims. We have to be sure that the other avenues for consultation must be in place before we simply agree to dissolve this latest list of ABCs. We're also checking to ensure Bill 21 isn't serving up surprises. After all, we were expecting phase 3 to involve the postsecondaries, and that clearly is not happening, so we cannot take what appears to be a simple bill at face value. It is also the job of legislators to examine the government's eventual rollout of statutes.

Should Bill 21 really be what the government says it is, the ABCs to be dissolved have been identified to save costs, reduce duplication of work, then we will continue to support it and we should support it to make government more efficient so we can serve Albertans in a better way. However, we first look forward to fulsome discussion and debate on how it's going impact all these agencies and the end result, how we serve Albertans. We hope that should we offer amendments, our NDP colleagues will accept them in good faith so we can strengthen this bill and serve the intent of this bill, to serve Albertans in a better way.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any members wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any other members wishing to speak to the bill? The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you for the opportunity to speak to Bill 21, the Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017.

Now, if you know me, I am all about being in favour of getting rid of red tape and the bureaucratic process that hampers the people and saps the use of scarce resources that they have, so when I see Bill 21 coming to the Legislature for the people's endorsement, all I can say is: bravo. I'm glad that we see some common-sense solutions coming from the NDP government at this point. The bigger question is: two and a half years into the NDP mandate, what took so long? There must be incredible bureaucratic hurdles and red tape slowing this review down.

Phase 3 is supposed to focus on "executive compensation, roles and mandates, and governance excellence in public post-secondary institutions." When I see the gigantic salaries being paid out over at the University of Alberta and students from all over the world begging to be let in, I have to wonder: what are we getting for those giant salaries in university administration that taxpayers are paying for? Why are we buying million-dollar homes from university presidents when they retire?

11:30

You know, I just might ask the Public Accounts Committee to help this ABC review along by asking them to invite the universities and colleges in to be held to account. After all, we need great thinkers and innovators to be coming out of the universities to fill the jobs and create the jobs of the future.

Now, having read the press release, I understand that although 14 agencies, boards, and commissions are being dissolved here with Bill 21 and five are to be dissolved through other means, "several agencies are undergoing further review to ensure alignment with significant ministry initiatives, broader systems reviews, or [other] legislative reviews." This tells me that there may be yet more ABCs to come for dissolution.

When I take a look at the list of names of the agencies, boards, and commissions that are to be dissolved, I'm struck by why it took so long to make this happen. Are the public servants overworked? Can't they just clean up this bureaucratic mess?

In Advanced Education alone there are three ABCs to be dissolved. The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar must have inherited a real mess of a department over there if he has to dissolve these three ABCs. I mean, look at it. The Students Finance Board, established in the 1950s, set the requirements for the access to student aid. Now the department says that this function is already being performed by quarterly reviews with the various student bodies in the province. In other words, the bureaucrats took it in-house and neutered the board.

Then we go to Community and Social Services. Nine of these family and community engagement councils were set up but never staffed or funded. It is like so much in government. It exists and it will get done as long as it is funded; if it is not being funded, it doesn't exist. Community and Social Services claims that outreach functions would be better handled elsewhere in the department at lower costs. That's excellent. Handle it. I like lower costs. Doesn't everybody?

Remember that NDP Premier who wouldn't raise welfare rates in British Columbia because he was running a deficit? He kept costs low. He was so good at keeping costs low that he was able to get a free $10,000 deck built for him for his house, all for signing over a licence for a casino. Now, if Glen Clark had an ABC like the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission to hand out the casino licence, he wouldn't have had to go to court over the nice new back deck and resign in disgrace.

You see, the point I'm trying to make here is that we conservatives support arm's-length entities' abilities to work without political influence by government. Take, for instance, the Alberta Economic Development Authority. These experts and captains of industry were brought in and kept at arm's length so as not to politicize the importance of the economic crystal ball gazing they were doing. They produced important research on the economy. Some of their studies included Fuel Shortages in Alberta and How to Fix Them; Water Reuse in Alberta: Experiences and Impacts on Economic Growth; Return on Innovation: Opportunities in Alberta's Innovation System; Alberta: A Global Energy Leader; Congestion Management: Vital Component of Today's Infrastructure Planning; Accelerating Broadband Enablement in Rural Alberta. We also know that these think tank or consultant-type reports are readily available or can be produced on an ad hoc basis with a contract.

When the Premier dissolved AEDA, in 2015, the staff came back to the bureaucracy and backstopped the Premier's Advisory Committee on the Economy. Now the website says that this committee exists, the last annual report says that it exists, but the phone seems to say that it has been absorbed by the line areas of the department as there is no separate area anymore.

I was a little surprised to see the STAC, the Strategic Transportation Advisory Council, on the list of ABCs to disappear. The feedback I heard from industry was that they enjoyed these round-tables to hear the issues of each mode of the transportation sector and provide feedback to the minister. I guess the minister did not. Though time-consuming and hosting costs are involved, the minister always has a chance to meet one on one with these stakeholders, and I hope that he does.

With that, Madam Speaker, Bill 21 is a good, positive step in diluting waste and red tape and bureaucratic inefficiencies that exist across the government.

However, I do want to address a point that was made by the Minister of Health – and this is about the idea of reducing red tape; I think she used the word – that this bill would be grandstanding. I find it interesting that she would use that kind of language to describe a bill that has been implemented by B.C., has been implemented by the government of Canada, under the Stephen Harper government, in order to be able to reduce red tape and the burden of red tape. In B.C. over a three-year period they were able to decrease regulatory red tape by 36 per cent.

Now, if that's grandstanding, then we need to get up and grandstand all we can because that kind of burden is what costs Albertan family businesses their livelihood. We need to make sure that we stop this kind of abuse of the people that actually create the jobs in this province. I was actually very disappointed to hear that the Deputy Premier of this government is saying that this is grandstanding. I hope that when this private member's bill, Bill 207, that I have presented to the House, comes forward, she rethinks her position on this so that we have the opportunity to have a fulsome discussion and actually see the real numbers for what they are.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members – oh, 29(2)(a). My apologies. The hon. Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I just wanted to make a few comments regarding the previous speaker's comments. You know, first of all, the Deputy Premier, when she was talking about grandstanding and a bill to reduce red tape, I believe her point, which is one that I share . . .

The Acting Speaker: Minister, please.

Mr. Bilous: This is going back to the bill and will be a question for the member opposite.

The Acting Speaker: I'm standing. Could you please sit down?

I think we deviated a little bit over to the private member's bill, and we are not focusing on actually the bill in front of us, which is Bill 21. I recognize that the Deputy Premier was asking some questions, so I allowed the member to respond in kind. However, I would like us to refocus now, if we could, please, on Bill 21. We can wait till private members' business on Monday to respond to the private member's bill, please.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My comments do go back to this bill. This is just putting my comments into context. If you would allow me a little leeway in these comments, you'll see that it does relate specifically to Bill 21, which I think members opposite – through the debate of this bill, their point has been that what this bill is doing is cleaning up some committees or bodies and previous costs associated with them as well as eliminating certain elements that will actually make it easier for business to be conducted. With those comments regarding Bill 21, not the previous member's bill, I agree.

You know, the point of a bill like this is that the legislation is needed to clean up some of these bodies, but I think my point is that our government, on an ongoing basis, looks at regulations through the lens of business as far as what benefits they provide. If they are creating impediments, then we have a thorough and robust discussion about that as far as: can we make it easier for them and for bodies to operate within the province of Alberta? Now, obviously, there are certain elements of some regs that provide specific benefits, whether environmental, health and safety, et cetera.

But the question, really, to the hon. member is that if there wasn't legislation needed to reduce barriers to doing business and it could be done through regulation – I think this was the Deputy Premier's point – doing it through regulation is more expedient, less costly, and also does not have to go through a longer process. The question to the hon. member is: would he be in favour of regulations being either adopted, amended, or discarded that would support doing business? Would that not be more efficient than bringing everything through the House via legislation?

11:40

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I appreciate the question that was asked by the hon. member. I think that there's a disconnect here for the members opposite. The disconnect is clearly manifested by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business. This government receives an F every single year because they do not have a strategy. They're the only government that does not have a red tape reduction strategy in Canada. They talk about getting in line – I've heard this many times before – with other jurisdictions, getting up to speed with other jurisdictions. Yet with this one thing, where we have seen a real turnaround in the B.C. government in terms of their economy, red tape reduction – from 2001 to 2004 they decreased the regulatory burden by 36 per cent because they created a plan, and then they executed the plan.

What this government is saying is: we don't have a problem; we're already taking care of it. But they're not willing to share with this Assembly what the problem is. They haven't even determined what the baseline of regulation is. They haven't even shared with this group what the baseline of regulatory burden is. If the member opposite really does truly believe that we don't have a problem, that's the problem. The problem is that, first of all, you have to recognize that you've got a problem and then create a plan to be able to work it out. This is what Bill 207 is all about, being able to address the problem, make a plan. We invite the government opposite to support that bill.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any other members wishing to speak to 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, are there any other members wishing to speak to Bill 21?

Seeing none, I will now ask the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose to please close debate.

Mr. Hinkley: Yes. Thank you, Madam Speaker. I will close second reading with just a couple of comments, a thank you to the opposition for their support of Bill 21's intent and letting them know that phase 3 is under way and does indeed focus on government excellence in public and postsecondary institutions.

With that, I would close the debate.

[Motion carried; Bill 21 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Bilous: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. Seeing the good progress we made this morning and that we're very close to noon, I move that we adjourn the House until 1:30 p.m. today.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 11:44 a.m.]

Table of Contents

Prayers..... 1655

Government Bills and Orders

 Committee of the Whole

 Bill 20 Beaver River Basin Water Authorization Act 1655

 Second Reading

 Bill 21 Agencies, Boards and Commissions Review Statutes Amendment Act, 2017 1664

Alberta Hansard is available online at www.assembly.ab.ca

For inquiries contact:

Managing Editor

Alberta Hansard

3rd Floor, 9820 – 107 St

EDMONTON, AB T5K 1E7

Telephone: 780.427.1875

Province of Alberta

The 29th Legislature
Third Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday afternoon, November 1, 2017

Day 47

The Honourable Robert E. Wanner, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta The 29th Legislature

Third Session

Wanner, Hon. Robert E., Medicine Hat (NDP), Speaker
Jabbour, Deborah C., Peace River (NDP), Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Sweet, Heather, Edmonton-Manning (NDP), Deputy Chair of Committees

Aheer, Leela Sharon, Chestermere-Rocky View (UCP),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Anderson, Hon. Shaye, Leduc-Beaumont (NDP)
Anderson, Wayne, Highwood (UCP)
Babcock, Erin D., Stony Plain (NDP)
Barnes, Drew, Cypress-Medicine Hat (UCP)
Bilous, Hon. Deron, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (NDP)
Carlier, Hon. Oneil, Whitecourt-St. Anne (NDP)
Carson, Jonathon, Edmonton-Meadowlark (NDP)
Ceci, Hon. Joe, Calgary-Fort (NDP)
Clark, Greg, Calgary-Elbow (AP)
Connolly, Michael R.D., Calgary-Hawthood (NDP)
Coolahan, Craig, Calgary-Klein (NDP)
Cooper, Nathan, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (UCP)
Cortes-Vargas, Estefania, Strathcona-Sherwood Park (NDP),
Government Whip
Cyr, Scott J., Bonnyville-Cold Lake (UCP)
Dach, Lorne, Edmonton-McClung (NDP)
Dang, Thomas, Edmonton-South West (NDP)
Drever, Deborah, Calgary-Bow (NDP)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (UCP)
Eggen, Hon. David, Edmonton-Calder (NDP)
Ellis, Mike, Calgary-West (UCP)
Feehan, Hon. Richard, Edmonton-Rutherford (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Fildebrandt, Derek Gerhard, Strathmore-Brooks (Ind)
Fitzpatrick, Maria M., Lethbridge-East (NDP)
Fraser, Rick, Calgary-South East (Ind)
Ganley, Hon. Kathleen T., Calgary-Buffalo (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Gill, Prab, Calgary-Greenway (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy Whip
Goehring, Nicole, Edmonton-Castle Downs (NDP)
Gotfried, Richard, Calgary-Fish Creek (UCP)
Gray, Hon. Christina, Edmonton-Mill Woods (NDP)
Hanson, David B., Lac La Biche-St. Paul-Two Hills (UCP)
Hinkley, Bruce, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (NDP)
Hoffman, Hon. Sarah, Edmonton-Glenora (NDP)
Horne, Trevor A.R., Spruce Grove-St. Albert (NDP)
Hunter, Grant R., Cardston-Taber-Warner (UCP)
Jansen, Hon. Sandra, Calgary-North West (NDP)
Jean, Brian Michael, QC, Fort McMurray-Conklin (UCP)
Kazim, Anam, Calgary-Glenmore (NDP)
Kleinstauber, Jamie, Calgary-Northern Hills (NDP)
Larivee, Hon. Danielle, Lesser Slave Lake (NDP),
Deputy Government House Leader
Littlewood, Jessica, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (NDP)
Loewen, Todd, Grande Prairie-Smoky (UCP)
Loyola, Rod, Edmonton-Ellerslie (NDP)

Luff, Robyn, Calgary-East (NDP)
MacIntyre, Donald, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (UCP)
Malkinson, Brian, Calgary-Currie (NDP)
Mason, Hon. Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Government House Leader
McCuaig-Boyd, Hon. Margaret,
Dunvegan-Central Peace-Notley (NDP)
McIver, Ric, Calgary-Hays (UCP),
Official Opposition Whip
McKittrick, Annie, Sherwood Park (NDP)
McLean, Hon. Stephanie V., Calgary-Varsity (NDP)
McPherson, Karen M., Calgary-Mackay-Nose Hill (AP)
Miller, Barb, Red Deer-South (NDP)
Miranda, Hon. Ricardo, Calgary-Cross (NDP)
Nielsen, Christian E., Edmonton-Decore (NDP)
Nixon, Jason, Rimbey-Rocky Mountain House-Sundre (UCP),
Leader of the Official Opposition,
Official Opposition House Leader
Notley, Hon. Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Premier
Orr, Ronald, Lacombe-Ponoka (UCP)
Panda, Prasad, Calgary-Foothills (UCP)
Payne, Hon. Brandy, Calgary-Acadia (NDP)
Phillips, Hon. Shannon, Lethbridge-West (NDP)
Piquette, Colin, Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater (NDP)
Pitt, Angela D., Airdrie (UCP),
Official Opposition Deputy House Leader
Renaud, Marie F., St. Albert (NDP)
Rosendahl, Eric, West Yellowhead (NDP)
Sabir, Hon. Irfan, Calgary-McCall (NDP)
Schmidt, Hon. Marlin, Edmonton-Gold Bar (NDP)
Schneider, David A., Little Bow (UCP)
Schreiner, Kim, Red Deer-North (NDP)
Shepherd, David, Edmonton-Centre (NDP)
Sigurdson, Hon. Lori, Edmonton-Riverview (NDP)
Smith, Mark W., Drayton Valley-Devon (UCP)
Starke, Dr. Richard, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC)
Stier, Pat, Livingstone-Macleod (UCP)
Strankman, Rick, Drumheller-Stettler (UCP)
Sucha, Graham, Calgary-Shaw (NDP)
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL)
Taylor, Wes, Battle River-Wainwright (UCP)
Turner, Dr. A. Robert, Edmonton-Whitemud (NDP)
van Dijken, Glenn, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock (UCP)
Westhead, Cameron, Banff-Cochrane (NDP),
Deputy Government Whip
Woollard, Denise, Edmonton-Mill Creek (NDP)
Yao, Tany, Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (UCP)
Vacant, Calgary-Lougheed

Party standings:

New Democratic: 54 United Conservative: 26 Alberta Party: 2 Alberta Liberal: 1 Progressive Conservative: 1 Independent: 2 Vacant: 1

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Robert H. Reynolds, QC, Clerk
Shannon Dean, Law Clerk and Director of
House Services
Trafton Koenig, Parliamentary Counsel
Stephanie LeBlanc, Parliamentary Counsel

Philip Massolin, Manager of Research and
Committee Services
Nancy Robert, Research Officer
Janet Schwegel, Managing Editor of
Alberta Hansard

Brian G. Hodgson, Sergeant-at-Arms
Chris Caughell, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms
Paul Link, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms
Gareth Scott, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms

Executive Council

Rachel Notley	Premier, President of Executive Council
Sarah Hoffman	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health
Shaye Anderson	Minister of Municipal Affairs
Deron Bilous	Minister of Economic Development and Trade
Oneil Carlier	Minister of Agriculture and Forestry
Joe Ceci	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance
David Eggen	Minister of Education
Richard Feehan	Minister of Indigenous Relations
Kathleen T. Ganley	Minister of Justice and Solicitor General
Christina Gray	Minister of Labour, Minister Responsible for Democratic Renewal
Sandra Jansen	Minister of Infrastructure
Danielle Larivee	Minister of Children's Services
Brian Mason	Minister of Transportation
Margaret McCuaig-Boyd	Minister of Energy
Stephanie V. McLean	Minister of Service Alberta, Minister of Status of Women
Ricardo Miranda	Minister of Culture and Tourism
Brandy Payne	Associate Minister of Health
Shannon Phillips	Minister of Environment and Parks, Minister Responsible for the Climate Change Office
Irfan Sabir	Minister of Community and Social Services
Marlin Schmidt	Minister of Advanced Education
Lori Sigurdson	Minister of Seniors and Housing

Parliamentary Secretaries

Jessica Littlewood	Economic Development and Trade for Small Business
Annie McKittrick	Education

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mr. Coolahan
Deputy Chair: Mrs. Schreiner

Cyr	McKitrick
Dang	Taylor
Ellis	Turner
Horne

Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future

Chair: Mr. Sucha
Deputy Chair: Mr. van Dijken

Carson	McPherson
Connolly	Panda
Coolahan	Piquette
Dach	Schneider
Fitzpatrick	Schreiner
Gill	Taylor
Gotfried

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Cyr	Littlewood
Gill	van Dijken
Horne	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Standing Committee on Families and Communities

Chair: Ms Goehring
Deputy Chair: Mr. Smith

Aheer	Miller
Drever	Orr
Hinkley	Shepherd
Horne	Swann
Jansen	Vacant
Luff	Yao
McKitrick

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Shepherd
Deputy Chair: Mr. Malkinson

Drever	Nixon
Gill	Pitt
Horne	van Dijken
Kleinsteinuber	Woollard
Littlewood

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Wanner
Deputy Chair: Cortes-Vargas

Cooper	Nixon
Dang	Orr
Jabbour	Piquette
Luff	Schreiner
McIver

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Ms McPherson
Deputy Chair: Connolly

Anderson, W.	Kleinsteinuber
Babcock	McKitrick
Drever	Rosendahl
Drysdale	Stier
Fraser	Strankman
Hinkley	Sucha
Kazim

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Ms Fitzpatrick
Deputy Chair: Ms Babcock

Carson	Loyola
Coolahan	McPherson
Cooper	Nielsen
Ellis	Schneider
Goehring	Starke
Hanson	van Dijken
Kazim

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. Cyr
Deputy Chair: Mr. Dach

Barnes	Malkinson
Fildebrandt	Miller
Fraser	Panda
Goehring	Renaud
Gotfried	Turner
Littlewood	Westhead
Luff

Standing Committee on Resource Stewardship

Chair: Loyola
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hunter

Babcock	Loewen
Clark	MacIntyre
Dang	Malkinson
Drysdale	Nielsen
Hanson	Rosendahl
Kazim	Woollard
Kleinsteinuber

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 1, 2017

[The Speaker in the chair]

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education.

Mr. Schmidt: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and make a number of introductions, both my own and on behalf of the Minister of Education. I'd like to start out by introducing to you and to all members of the Assembly the man from whom I inherited my incredible good looks and cheerful disposition, my father, Glen Schmidt. I've learned many things from my dad over the years, not just all of the swear words but also a healthy disrespect for authority and some critical-thinking skills. I ask my father, Glen Schmidt, to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Before going on to the next one, I must let you know that he learned very well not respecting authority.

Mr. Schmidt: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

With him today is a woman who deserves every order of merit that is available to a Canadian citizen, his partner for over 20 years, Judy Wilson. Judy is not only a fantastic, loving woman who cares very deeply for all of our family, but she works very hard to make sure that every family meeting is documented extensively with photographs, and she makes some of the best cabbage rolls in the whole province of Alberta. I ask Judy Wilson to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Also visiting today, Mr. Speaker, is my nephew Jaden Leckie. Jaden is 14 years old and in grade 9 at Ardrossan junior-senior high school. He is shadowing his uncle the Minister of Advanced Education today to learn about what I'm doing to make life better for Alberta students and what our government is doing to make life better for all Albertans. I'm pleased to ask him to now please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

I also would like to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly 35 members of the NAIT radio and television program. Students in this program gain valuable skills in reporting, anchoring, and videography among other things. This program sets students up to fulfill their career options, and the teaching and direction of these individuals ensures that Albertans receive top-of-the-line education. Thank you, all, for your strong commitment to education. I ask them to please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly 30 students, teachers, and parents of the grade 6 class from Scott Robertson elementary school here in Edmonton. Scott Robertson elementary, through collaboration, focuses on developing the leadership potential in all students. Thank you for your hard work supporting Alberta's future leaders. We all look forward to seeing the amazing contributions that these young people, their teachers, and their families will bring to Alberta. I ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Ms Goehring: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you Private (Retired) Stan Edwards, a veteran of the Dieppe Raid, that took place over 75 years ago in World War II. He has received the Canadian volunteer service medal, the defence medal, the 1939-1945 star, and the war medal 1939-1945. He is joined today by his children and grandchildren: Barb Kujala, Ron and Kathy Edwards, Kim Carter, and Bob Edwards. Mr. Edwards, thank you for your service. I would now ask all of my guests to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: Sir, I think you need to know that for individuals like yourself, who have paid such a price, that was a sincere applause. You do not get that very often.

The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Ms Renaud: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on your behalf to introduce to all members of the Assembly Jarryd Oosthuis. Jarryd is the son of Katja Oosthuis, who works in the Speaker's office, and is visiting the Legislature for bring your child to work day. Jarryd is a ninth grade student from Sir George Simpson junior high in St. Albert. He has also attended school in South Africa, the United States, and now Canada. He enjoys soccer, plays on his school's badminton team, and is an honours with distinction student. Jarryd was happy to become a permanent resident of Canada earlier this year.

Katja joined the Speaker's office in August of this year and has already proven herself to be a very friendly and hard-working asset to the team. In her time away from the Leg. Katja is a passionate volunteer with the humane society, fostering kittens and cats before they are adopted. Katja also gained permanent residency this year and is very proud to call Alberta home.

Jarryd and Katja are seated in the Speaker's gallery. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome, and thank you.

The hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Ms Babcock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour today to introduce to you and through you some of the most important people in my life. My partner, Will Gammon, not only supports my work in this House but supports all of us on this side of the House as the director of operations in the Alberta NDP provincial office. He supports me every day as a parent and partner and also supports my son's love of hockey as head coach of our son's hockey team. My father-in-law, Spurgeon Gammon, supports the work Will and I do and always makes time if we need him for anything. He hosts family dinners, which I truly do appreciate, and spends a lot of his time as my son's biggest hockey fan. And my son, Gabriel Babcock, is a grade 9 student at l'école Meridian Heights school in Stony Plain. I'm incredibly proud of the young giant that he is. I'm going to pull a bit of a mom moment and say that he is one of the kindest, smartest, most amazing young people I have ever met even if his sisters wouldn't always agree with me. I ask that my guests now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Hon. members, we have a number of introductions today. I encourage the brevity of introductions as we move forward.

There is a school group, as I understand it. The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Ms Renaud: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm introducing this group for the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie. I would like to ask the students from St. Richard, a green STEM academy, to rise. They are accompanied by their teacher, Daryl Chichak, and their chaperone, Mrs. Marta Van Wachem. Please join me in welcoming these students.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The Minister of Indigenous Relations.

Mr. Feehan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly the members of the Metis Settlements General Council, who are in the gallery behind me here. They are here celebrating the 27th anniversary of the passing of legislation resulting in land and self-governance for those living on Métis settlements and making Alberta the only province in Canada with a recognized Métis land base entrenched in provincial statute, ensuring that Métis people in Alberta will always have a land base to call home.

Today I was pleased to join them all as we raised the Métis settlements flag in front of the Federal building, and I wear the Métis sash today in their honour. I would ask them all to stand as I read their names, beginning with the president of the Metis Settlements General Council, Gerald Cunningham; the vice-president, Darren Calliou; Dorothy Anderson; Sherry Cunningham; Blake Desjarlais; Jacqueline Bellerose; Dan St. Pierre; Arthur Tompkins; Stan Delorme; Harry Supernault; Irene Zimmer; Cory Cardinal; Ken Noskey; Greg Calliou; Herb Lehr. For any other council members who are in attendance today, please rise now, and I'll catch your names later to correct the record.

Thank you.

1:40

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Minister of Health.

Ms Hoffman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My guests today are seated behind me, and it's my pleasure to introduce them. They're a group who are advocates with Diabetes Canada. November is Diabetes Awareness Month, which is a time to focus attention on advocating for people living with diabetes and on prevention, research, and a cure. This year the theme of Diabetes Awareness Month is You Are the Centre of Your Diabetes Care Team. People across Canada are being encouraged to take part in the CanRisk test. Thank you to the dedicated volunteers, like those who are in our gallery today, for making life better for Albertans. I ask that Joan King along with the other staff and volunteers rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-St. Albert.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mr. Derek Adams. Derek is a constituent and a student at Woodhaven middle school in Spruce Grove. He is here today as part of a take your child to work day program and is learning more about democracy and governance in Alberta. I would like him to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. Nielsen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the wonderful students and instructor Clare Lazzar from CDI College, north campus, legal studies program. CDI College offers vocational training and continuing education to adults in pursuit of a new career path in a welcoming, supportive, and collegial environment. CDI believes in giving back to the community through extensive fundraising, and I have even assisted in these fundraising efforts by volunteering to be in the dunk tank in their annual massage-athon. Proceeds from that event went to the Edmonton Firefighters Burn Treatment unit, and I'm happy to say that a cheque for over $12,000 went there. I would now ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The Associate Minister of Health.

Ms Payne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you a group from the Canadian Patient Safety Institute. This week we recognize Canadian Patient Safety Week. You may know that medication incidents are one of the leading causes of patient safety harm in health care, and most of these can be prevented. By placing a spotlight on opioids and medication safety, this campaign seeks to reduce harm related to medication use. Patient safety is an important part of ensuring all Albertans get the care that they need. I ask Chris Power, Cecilia Bloxom, and Sandi Kossey to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Athabasca-Sturgeon-Redwater.

Mr. Piquette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Ms Sherrie Breese. Sherrie is the proprietor of the Lolly Pop Thrift Shop in Athabasca and the subject of my member's statement later this afternoon. I invite Sherrie to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Cooper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you Garry Keller. For over 20 years Garry has had experience delivering strategic communication and political advice on domestic and international issues. Garry's experience in Canada's political landscape includes most recently serving as the chief of staff to Rona Ambrose, the Leader of the Official Opposition and interim leader of the Conservative Party of Canada. He's also served as the chief of staff to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, as chief of staff to the Government House Leader, as chief of staff to the chief government whip, and on and on and on it goes, including serving as a senior policy adviser to the Prime Minister. His work has been recognized by media outlets, who have called him one of the most powerful and respected political staffers on Parliament Hill.

Perhaps, though, Mr. Speaker, his biggest challenge was serving as my chief of staff over the past summer. It was an absolute pleasure to work with him. I couldn't be more proud of the work that we did. He may have spent the last 20 years in Ottawa, but he certainly hasn't been Ottawa-washed. I invite him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Shepherd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you a group of professors from China who are here today with their program lead, Dr. Pamela Young. Every autumn the China Scholarship Council sends a group of professors to the Faculty of Extension at the University of Alberta, where they participate in a three-month professional development program designed to improve teaching and English skills. This year's group has a keen interest to know more about Canadian education, culture, history, and government. I'm so pleased that today they have the opportunity to learn more about Alberta's system of governance. I invite Dr. Young and her group to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Welcome.

Mr. Shepherd: I have an additional introduction, Mr. Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: All right.

Mr. Shepherd: Thank you. I would also like to introduce to you and through you representatives of the Child Friendly Housing Coalition of Alberta. Formed in 2016, they're a nonpartisan coalition of people and organizations from across Alberta advocating for equal housing choices for all members of society, including parents with children under the age of 18. Representing the coalition are Heather MacKenzie, Jodie McKague, who first raised this issue with me in June 2015, her daughter Franka, and Kirsten Goa. They're here today for the introduction of Bill 23, the Alberta Human Rights Amendment Act, 2017. I invite them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Welcome.

The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Hunter: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two constituents of mine from the constituency of Cardston-Taber-Warner. If you like sugar on your table and in your coffee and sweetening all your baked goods in Alberta, you have the sugar beet growers to thank. From the Alberta Sugar Beet Growers we have Melody Garner-Skiba, executive director, and Arnie Bergen-Henengouwen, president. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Community and Social Services.

Family Violence Prevention Month

Mr. Sabir: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize November as Family Violence Prevention Month. This month started in Hinton over 30 years ago as a local community initiative to draw attention to this devastating issue, to encourage victims to come forward, and to encourage all of us to speak out against violence. This year's theme is Reach Out; Speak Out; It Takes All of Us. Today I invite all members of this House to join me and send a powerful message that we stand with the victims and survivors of family violence and will continue to work together across party lines to end it. We all know individuals who have experienced family violence. I know that all of us recognize the tragedy of these crimes, and our hearts are with survivors and families who have been impacted. That is why we are all wearing the purple bow today, to show that we are here for all Albertans who are experiencing family violence.

It is our collective action that will ensure a prosperous future for our province and all those who live here. That is why our government and communities across the province are working together to end family violence. We are working closely with local community agencies, other orders of government, women's shelters, sexual assault services, law enforcement, health services, and others to help Albertans affected by family violence. We are funding women's shelters across the province to provide families a safe place to go to escape violence. We are supporting families to help them recover and break the cycle of violence, and we are reaching out to all Albertans to ensure each and every one of us understands how to stand up for those who are suffering. We have taken action, but there is more to do. November may be the month that is officially recognized for family violence prevention, but our support and our action must continue all year round.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to move that we continue with responses to the ministerial statement followed immediately by the beginning of question period. I'd ask for unanimous consent.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Chestermere-Rocky View.

1:50

Mrs. Aheer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today, on November 1, to speak to all members of the Assembly about Family Violence Prevention Month in Alberta. Today marks the beginning of a month dedicated to the prevention of family violence in our province and to the protection of those who need our support.

Over 20 years ago four bold Albertan women based in Hinton were brave enough to take a stand against family violence at a time when it was considered taboo and never publicly addressed. Katherine Kennedy, Sonja Bennett, Faye Wheeler, and Glenda Carter fought against the norm and set the precedent when they created the Hinton Society for the Prevention of Family Violence and launched a campaign to empower those who faced domestic abuse and to educate society on this critically important issue. These amazing women launched a groundbreaking campaign that targeted all facets of society through school, media, public workshops, churches, and even setting up informal booths at local shopping malls. These women were determined and organized, and through their efforts they started an important discussion that continues on to this day.

Mr. Speaker, family violence destroys lives, and it's still too often wrapped in stigma and secrecy. Victims of domestic violence and abuse of all ages often feel the shame that they're alone in this struggle. That's why having a month dedicated to family violence prevention is so incredibly important. We need to continue to support those who have faced this kind of violence and those who are still healing. We need to ensure that they know they are not alone and that we as elected representatives in this House and their fellow Albertans are behind them one hundred per cent. We need to continue to create awareness about the scale of this issue and to highlight the services available for those who are looking for safety.

To the Albertans who are currently facing family violence, my heart and the hearts of every member in this Assembly go out to you. Know that you are brave, you are valued, and you have people in your corner. I would encourage all of my colleagues to engage with your local communities this month, whether it's wearing purple, attending or hosting a community event, putting up Family Violence Prevention Month posters in your community, or simply collecting supplies for an emergency centre.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank from the bottom of my heart the front-line staff that work tirelessly in emergency centres, counselling facilities, and through community service providers to provide the supports for those facing family violence.

Every man, woman, and child in this province deserves to feel safe and loved in their own home, and I know that I speak for my entire caucus when I say that we will always fight to ensure that the rights of victims are protected and that they have the services that they require and that they have a legal system that will work for them and not against them.

Today, in recognition of Family Violence Prevention Month, I would ask that all members of this Assembly reflect on the amazing work that has already been done on the issues as we look ahead to the vitally important work that still needs to be done.

Thank you.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I would request unanimous consent of the Assembly to allow a representative of the Alberta Party caucus and the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster to respond to the minister's statement.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Ms McPherson: November is Family Violence Prevention Month, and I'm honoured to rise today and recognize such an important initiative.

Hard work by community advocates in 1986 in Hinton led to the creation of Family Violence Prevention Month in our province and helped bring light to a mostly secret issue that is far too pervasive. This issue affects everybody, and it can take many forms: child abuse; incest; spousal, domestic, and sibling abuse; parent and elder abuse. We all know someone who has been impacted even if they haven't spoken up. My heart goes out to those who face violence at home, have grown up in households impacted by it, and those who have watched their friends and loved ones struggle with family violence in their lives. Discussing family violence is deeply personal and can be very painful, and I commend everyone who has sought to heal from family violence and understand that not everyone is at a place where they can heal yet.

I ask myself: what can we do? How can we find ways to work toward healing, toward healthy families and healthy relationships, toward healthy relationships that can empower people rather than constrain them in narrowly defined roles? We can talk about family violence without shame and without reservation, knowing that by sharing our experiences with one another, we can begin to eliminate the secrecy and entrenched inequality that has allowed family violence to exist. We can take a stand that shows people that family violence is unacceptable, and we can support those agencies that do such great work in supporting and educating both survivors and offenders.

I'm reminded of the courageous speech given in this House by the Member for Lethbridge-East, who transformed the conversation about family violence in this Chamber, and I'm grateful for her bravery and for how she is a role model for anyone facing family violence.

We all have a role to play in eliminating family violence from our society, standing beside the survivors, and I'm grateful we're talking about it today.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster.

Dr. Starke: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to my colleagues for allowing me the opportunity to briefly address a few remarks to this issue. I certainly concur with everything that has been said by the previous speakers about the gravity and the seriousness of family violence and that this is a scourge that we must work constantly to erase from our province, but I do want to address one aspect of this that has not been addressed thus far. It is one that is very familiar, sadly, to me, and that is that animal abuse is a part of domestic family violence and that animals are members of our families.

In fact, in many homes animals act as the silent sentinels for a more dangerous situation that exists within our homes, and sadly many people who are experiencing family violence do not flee an abusive situation out of concern for family pets that they can't take with them. That, Mr. Speaker, is a concern. Now, it's a concern that, thankfully, has been recognized by some agencies. For example, the Calgary humane society and the Calgary Police Service are working together already to try to erase some of the problems and to recognize in an early intervention way that animal abuse is an early indicator of a propensity for domestic abuse. This has been known for centuries, and it is time that we included animal abuse in the conversation.

As a veterinarian speaking for the silent, speaking for those who also suffer abuse at the hands of those they are supposed to love, the ones they are supposed to trust, I ask everyone to consider that if we're going to effectively address family violence, let's address the violence and the abuse that is directed at all members of the family, whether they have two legs or four.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Pipeline Approval

Mr. Nixon: The NDP continue to claim that they stand up for energy sector workers. Unfortunately, those in the sector don't seem to agree. The president of the Petroleum Services Association has blasted the NDP and its federal Liberal allies for failing to stand up for our industry. They point to the cancellation of Energy East as another blow to investor confidence. For the last two days we've tried in vain to get agreement on a simple motion that would call for the government of Canada to remove upstream and downstream emissions from pipeline assessments. Will the government finally agree to stand with us and stand for Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do understand that the members opposite are struggling with their staffing resources right now, but I would have thought that we could have not completely recycled our questions from yesterday. That being said, the reality is, as I've said before, that our government has stood against the federal government on the issue of downstream emissions. We actually support the matter of upstream emissions because that's how you move forward on the matter of climate change, which is what we have to do if we're going to secure a market for our stable and sustainable energy industry.

Mr. Nixon: What a shame, Mr. Speaker, to watch the Premier of Alberta out here laugh with her caucus about people's lives and people's livelihoods. What we're talking about right now is hundreds of thousands of jobs. In this case why would a unanimous motion from this House demanding removing upstream and downstream emissions . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: Hon. members.
Keep going.

Mr. Nixon: Why would a unanimous motion from this House demanding the removal of upstream and downstream emissions from pipeline assessments be in any way controversial? Why won't this government do what they say they believe and stand up for this issue, stand up to the Justin Trudeau Liberals, and make . . .

2:00

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Lots of students in the place today, folks. Let's keep the tone on both sides positive, please, everyone.

The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I've said a number of times now in response to this question, the reality is that our government has indicated to the federal government that we don't believe that it is fair for downstream emissions to be part of the calculation, and we are working furiously on means of ensuring that it does not end up being a key part of it.

But, Mr. Speaker, upstream emissions do matter. That's how we say to the world that we are a responsible energy producer. That's how we make sure that we have more markets, not fewer, and that's how we got a pipeline to tidewater, something that the members opposite could not do because they wanted to stick their heads in the sand, pretend there was no problem, deny science, and generally stop the growth of our energy industry.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, let's be clear. This government has got two cancelled pipelines and does not have one built yet. I think it's clear what's happening here. The NDP raised polite objections to Ottawa's invasion of Alberta's provincial jurisdiction so they can tell the voters that they've done all they could. No, they have not. They're simply checking off a box and moving along to happy times with their Trudeau allies as per normal. For once could we finally see some emotion from the NDP when Ottawa attacks our province and our citizens and the people that they are elected to protect? When will the Alberta NDP finally stand with Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Let me just say that what I will not do is have temper tantrums on Twitter in order to politically grandstand. Instead, I will continue with our government's record of getting results. For instance, when you talk about PSAC, we worked with the federal government to leverage $250 million towards orphan well reclamation, creating 1,600 jobs in a sector that was looking for work. That's how you get things done. You work with people, you don't yell at them, and you don't grandstand.

The Speaker: Second main question.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I think the Premier means that she won't have a temper tantrum again on Twitter.

Energy Policies

Mr. Nixon: While our drilling activity is slowly crawling back, it's still 30 per cent lower than 2014 levels. Yes, I know the NDP will try to blame the global oil price, and sure, that has played a role. But if that's the only reason, why have things bounced back much more quickly in places like North Dakota and Texas? PSAC says that drilling growth could be much stronger, but unfortunately the government seems to be doing everything in its power to deter growth through new taxes, more new taxes, more new taxes, and even more regulations. When will this NDP shift strategies so that our energy sector can thrive? Just get out of the way.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What our government did do under the leadership of our Minister of Energy is we brought in a modernized royalty framework which actually stimulated – stimulated – economic growth, particularly in the energy sector. That's why, for instance, in Alberta we have more new wells than we do, say, in our neighbour of Saskatchewan. In addition, we have been working very hard to stimulate the economy. That's why the economy in Alberta is growing by over 4 per cent while next door in Saskatchewan, following their plan, every time you check, the projections are ramped down. We picked the right way . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, over the past two years we've seen tens of billions of energy investment dollars flee this province. Oh, the dollars aren't leaving the energy sector; they're just leaving Alberta as Albertans and investors realize Alberta is increasingly closed for business under this government. Companies are pulling out investments. Instead, they're moving to Texas and North Dakota but also places like Iran and Kazakhstan. Let us use common sense. Isn't it better to have oil from an ethical player like Alberta rather than deplorable dictatorships abroad? When will this NDP government stop driving business out of our province and start standing up for our oil industry?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Is Texas a dictatorship?

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader.
The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, in the last election we made it very clear – and it was in a way that people voted for – that we are not interested in engaging in a race to the bottom with Iran or Kazakhstan or with Donald Trump. That's not what we're here to do. We are here to build Alberta. We are here to support our energy industry as we develop a sustainable and environmentally responsible energy industry that is able to compete world-wide for decades and decades to come because that's what the whole world is looking for. Sometimes it takes leadership to look more than a year or two ahead. I know it's a little hard for those guys. They're looking 10 years behind. But that's why we got elected and they didn't.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, despite what NDP supporters might want to think, oil is not going out of style any time soon. The International Energy Agency shows increased demand for the foreseeable future. That oil is going to come from somewhere; why not Alberta? Unfortunately, the NDP fellow travellers are working to ensure that oil doesn't come from ethical players like Alberta. They are working to land lock our province and our resources. Two pipelines have already been killed under this government, and now a third is in the crosshairs. When will this Premier and this NDP government stop giving the Trudeau Liberals a free pass, start denouncing what they're doing, start denouncing them sabotaging our economy, and stand up for Alberta?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The members opposite are so politically motivated to talk down Alberta that they just get so confused and disrupted by the facts. You know, in October of 2017 the BMO provincial forecast: “Alberta’s economy has returned to growth, and could potentially lead the country this year with 4.1%.” Meanwhile in Saskatchewan the economy is underperforming the national average. In September of 2017 TD Bank’s forecast said that it’s “full steam ahead for Alberta.” Our plan is working. Jobs are up, manufacturing is up, investment is up, and growth is up. That’s because we are standing with Albertans, not cutting our way to some alleged prosperity. This is the right choice.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Premier.
The hon. Member for Airdrie.

Carbon Levy and Pipeline Approvals

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, the NDP promised that its massive new carbon tax would gain us a so-called social licence, but since then we’ve seen two massive pipeline projects die, Northern Gateway and Energy East, and the same environmental zealots are working to kill off Trans Mountain pipeline, too. That makes three. We’ve given an inch, and the opponents of our oil and gas sector have taken a mile. The president of PSAC said it the best, quote: that social licence thing is a myth; it is a set of goalposts that will never stop moving. End quote. Will the NDP admit that social licence is a failure?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What I will admit is that our plan is working. Jobs are up, wages are up, drilling is up, production is up, and it’s because of our climate leadership plan. That was the plan that secured two pipelines. One pipeline is in production and in construction as we speak. Make no mistake. The second pipeline, Trans Mountain, will be built. [interjections]

The Speaker: Folks, I don’t want to stop the clock, so allow me to hear around the rest of you here the answers to the questions and the questions.

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, the NDP’s own allies are actively working to kill the Trans Mountain pipeline. Their friends in the government of B.C. have said that they’ll use every tool available to stop the pipeline, and two of this government’s own appointees are more encouraged than ever. Ms Berman, the NDP’s hand-picked oil sands adviser, has pledged to stand in front of bulldozers to stop the pipeline. Ms Mahon, another NDP star pick, is currently training activists how to physically block the pipeline. Will the NDP at least admit that its social licence plan has failed as far as two of their own appointees are concerned? [interjections]

2:10

The Speaker: Hon. members.
The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, we know that pipelines to tidewater are critical. They’re not just critical for Alberta, but they’re critical for our country. They supply good jobs, they help the economy, and, as I said before, make no mistake: the Trans Mountain pipeline will be built. It has federal approval. The federal approval was because of our climate leadership plan.

Mrs. Pitt: Mr. Speaker, the city of Burnaby is actively working to stop the Trans Mountain pipeline right now. They’re dragging their heels on the issuing of municipal permits for construction. The company has asked that the National Energy Board intervene as the city is clearly overstepping its bounds. A few days ago we asked this government of Alberta if they would back Kinder Morgan’s request, and the government said that they’d check with the company. Has that happened? Is the NDP ready to step up and stand up for pipelines?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Ms McCuaig-Boyd: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I mentioned, pipelines are critical, especially to tidewater. We have one customer which goes south. We need to expand our borders and our access to market. We are doing that, and to be clear, the Trans Mountain pipeline has a permit to be built. It has federal approval. Make no mistake. It is going to be built.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow.

Cannabis Distribution

Mr. Clark: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. One hundred and sixty-eight million dollars: the government could do a lot with $168 million. It could hire a thousand teachers, a thousand nurses, fund a cardiac cath lab in Red Deer, and pay for a few schools, to boot. But this government is seriously thinking about spending $168 million or possibly more to create a brand new government bureaucracy to sell cannabis. To the Premier: will you commit here and now to not establish an expensive, inefficient government retail model that would all but guarantee the black market would continue to thrive?

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, there are a number of very complicated issues that our minister is working through very, very furiously to get resolved as it relates to implementing the directive of the federal government around cannabis. There are a number of complex issues, and there are a number of consequences to each of those decisions. She is working very hard, and she’s working very hard to ensure that we meet the following principles, that we kill the black market or reduce the black market as much as we can, that we keep people safe, and that we keep people’s health and safety uppermost. With that in mind, we are deliberating on how to do that best, and we’ll have more . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, Madam Premier.

Mr. Clark: If safety is important, you’ll go with the private model because the AGLC reports 98 per cent compliance for private liquor distribution.

