Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and join the debate on this important issue. I think it's fairly important here that we make some effort to separate reality from political theatre if we're really going to add something to the debate here. Out there there is a reality. There is an international pandemic going on, and there are a lot of people working very hard to do something about that, to plan and address the situation. In here there's a lot of political theatre going on that I don't know adds to the debate.

I'll give you an example. Since I've stood in this House, every minister of health, including this one and the previous ones, has been accused of not accepting the advice of health care professionals, of ignoring the advice of health care professionals. We've been criticized for cutbacks, which, incidentally, have never happened in the time that I've stood in this House. Nonetheless, we're accused constantly of cutbacks and that we don't heed the advice of our health care professionals. We're accused of privatizing the health care system, which is so far from the truth it's ridiculous. There's no minister in the country that's more supportive of public health care, certainly more so than Liberal governments in B.C. and Quebec. But we're accused of it and that the minister won't listen to his health care professionals.

So here we are today, accused of ignoring the advice of health care professionals in a situation where, very clearly, without dispute the minister has been following the advice of his health care professionals. Today, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Official Opposition and the leader of the third party stand and call for the minister's resignation. The Leader of the Opposition stands and calls for the minister's resignation, and we are supposed to believe in this House or out there that that member, if he was still a public officer of health, would today be criticizing the minister for following the advice of health care professionals. We don't believe that. That's absolute balderdash. That is just political theatre. He's scoring political points.

Today the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, in arguing that this debate should happen, addressed the issue that there's no other place where we could have a debate. How curious, Mr. Speaker, that that party never used all of their members' statements to talk about H1N1. That member used her question in question period to question the Environment minister about carbon. There's lots of opportunity. But here we are having the debate, and that's great because there are a few points that should be gotten out.

Perhaps the biggest criticism that we hear from over there – it came from the third party, the New Democrats – is that we're creating panic, that we're fearmongering. This minister has been the calmest voice in Alberta. There's where the fearmongering is coming from. I'll give you an example. Today in giving an example to his concern that we don't have an ethical framework, which isn't true, by the way, Mr. Speaker, the Member for Edmonton-Riverview used the example: "What if we had 10 people needing ventilators and only five available ventilators? How would the government make that decision?" He could have mentioned that (a) the situation does not exist and that (b) the health minister or this government doesn't make that decision; health care professionals do. That's fearmongering, and it's irresponsible.

It's ridiculousness, Mr. Speaker. The leader of the third party, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, pleads that we should prioritize at-risk populations. Everybody else: sorry, it's at-risk populations. He would have us believe that he would stand by while we turned away seniors who are not at risk from vaccination clinics. Never in a million years, and everybody knows it. It's political theatre.

From the Liberal Party: we should target at-risk people except, well, teachers and then police officers right after them, Mr. Speaker. And they're accusing us? They're not following the advice of health care professionals, pure and simple. Thank goodness we have health care professionals making decisions. They don't even understand that at-risk doesn't relate to whether or not we're at risk to catch H1N1. We all are. It's at risk of getting serious complications from H1N1. No teacher or no police officer, unless they have an underlying health condition, is any more at risk than I am in this House.

Because of some supposed failure that the minister has committed, Mr. Speaker, now they're calling for his resignation despite evidence to the contrary. We have rolled out a vaccination plan early. It just boggles the mind. We're following the advice of the federal Health minister and Canada's chief medical officer of health, but somehow there's a failure. It just boggles the mind. Today, while the NDPs stand and argue that the health minister should resign, the NDP in Saskatchewan argue that maybe the Saskatchewan government should follow Alberta's example and vaccinate a few people. It just boggles the mind, absolutely boggles the mind.

We should talk about a little bit of reality here. Today, Mr. Speaker, there are people out there catching H1N1 or at risk of catching H1N1, and there are public health officials out there planning and adjusting plans to deal with it. There are health care providers out there, thousands of them, providing care to Albertans, saving lives. It's because of people like them that people like me can sleep at night, and I want to offer my heartfelt thanks to all of them for the excellent work they're doing and will continue to do through this crisis.

So let's just overlap for just a moment, Mr. Speaker, where reality meets political theatre. This debate was so important to all of the opposition parties. Of the 13 chairs I see over there, there are four occupied. For a good part of the afternoon there were three occupied. That's the importance of this debate to those parties.

Ms Blakeman: Point of order.

Point of Order Speakers List

Ms Blakeman: I'm sorry. We tried to get people on that list, as you well know, Mr. Speaker, and you've told us that there are not enough on the list. So to say that we were not here and we're not participating: you've taken up the list. They won't even let us on.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. member has called a point of order on this. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre said that she tried to get people on the list and could not get them on the list. That is not correct. As the Speaker advised me when he left here, they were on the list as they showed up. I accommodated a couple of these, and now there's one last one that has come in, and we have – what? – three or four speakers left, three if they go 10 minutes. So it is not a point of order.

Hon. Member for Peace River, are you done?

Mr. Oberle: I'm done, Mr. Speaker, and I thank you for the time in this House and for the opportunity to participate in this debate and recognize our health care workers across this province.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

5:30

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just first of all want to say thank you to all the front-line workers all over Alberta. They are the calming influence when individuals come in for a vaccination or a checkup. I also have the privilege of having one of the immunization clinics in my constituency of Edmonton-Glenora, and that is Westmount, at which the Minister of Health and Wellness was able to drop by. I am very aware of the long lineups in the cold and appreciate the tenacity and patience of Albertans.

I want to speak about the power of the spoken word. I believe it is our job as elected officials to ensure that the right information gets out. Previous ministers have spoken about the multifaceted approach to pandemic planning that began three years ago. This government's H1N1 pandemic plan is responsive, and that is key, especially with the challenge of the vaccine supply. So it is ironic that some view the vaccination of 400,000 Albertans as a negative. We are responsive, and that is indicated by the flu assessment clinics that are operating. This is all about working with all of the stakeholders to stay calm and be effective and flexible in the days ahead.

As a parent of teenagers I am very well aware of the talk at their school and the unfortunate panic that can set in. It is a challenging time for principals and teachers, and we need to ensure that our children know exactly what is happening. I encourage my constituents and all Albertans to stay informed, be prepared, and look after themselves and their families.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I don't have a lot to add to this debate as we've heard a lot from both sides, but there are just a couple of items that I did want to mention to this House. I'm not a medical doctor. I'm also not a health care professional. But I do understand process. I look at the number of people and at the categories of people that are at risk, and I see, number one, pregnant women. Well, you don't necessarily know that somebody is pregnant when you look at them, so you would have to have an individual going through the lineup and saying: "Are you at risk? Are you a pregnant woman? Are you a person under 65 with chronic health conditions?" You would have to be asking people for their children's age, 6 months to 5 years. You'd be asking people: where is your domicile? I don't see lawyers on this list, I guess, so they couldn't have asked me anything. I wouldn't have been on the list.

All kidding aside, Mr. Speaker, the other thing I did want to mention is the hon. Leader of the Opposition today. I listened to his speech. He's a doctor. He's a trained doctor, and I'll tell you this: he is quite an intelligent man. But I have to say that I really question whether or not the Leader of the Opposition understands the gravity of engaging in the type of political rhetoric that he did today. Here we have potentially the largest immunization program probably in my 34 years, and all I hear from him, his biggest issue, is removing somebody from his job, namely the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness. This type of rhetoric is counterproductive to what we're discussing here.

These are my comments. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to engage in this debate. Much like in the words of my colleague from Peace River I would like to start by thanking all of the health care workers who have been working in clinics throughout the province and sometimes under conditions that they are not normally accustomed to, with volumes of patients that they're not normally accustomed to. We are dealing with a very unusual situation, and they are responding to it in a way that I think Albertans can be proud of in all parts of Alberta. Just to put it in perspective, they have been inoculating some 50,000 people per day. That's almost the population of Red Deer, frankly, the population of St. Albert, every single person in St. Albert every day. Those numbers are astonishing. So I think they deserve our gratitude and all Albertans' gratitude for the fine work that they're doing.

Going further with putting things in perspective and avoiding this theatre – Mr. Speaker, I don't mind talking to empty chairs; sometimes they're more receptive to information than the people that actually sit in them – this is only the eighth day of inoculating Canadians. Out there in all of Canada there are some 6 million vaccinations being circulated among clinics; however, up to now 1,046,000 have actually been administered. In all of Canada 1,046,000 have been applied, and of that, 400,000 have been in Alberta, which means that Alberta has inoculated almost 50 per cent of the entire population. So I think that any and all provinces can be looking at us and saying: wow, this province has actually managed to inoculate 400,000 people when the rest of Canada only inoculated 600,000 people among all provinces and territories. Again, this speaks, Mr. Speaker, to both things: (a) our health care workers really stepping up to the challenge, and (b) Albertans are very responsible.

Imagine the alternative. Imagine if we had an epidemic of this nature world-wide and government announced to Albertans and asked them to get inoculated and they scoffed at the message and said: "Nah. Not important. They're overreacting. I'm not going to get this. I'm not going to get sick." Imagine if that was the alternative, and nobody showed up; here we are with 400,000 vials of vaccine and no one lining up to take this. I think the alternative, actually, is quite good, and we are victims of our own success. The communication worked very well. The public health care workers worked very well, and Albertans are very receptive to this important message.

Mr. Speaker, another thing that needs to be highlighted: all First Nations and all members of Métis settlements and bands who wanted to be inoculated by now are inoculated. There is not one province or territory in this country that can claim that. Homeless people in shelters: whoever wanted to be inoculated has been inoculated. There isn't one province or territory in this country that can say that. Now we will be addressing emergency responders because we do believe that they are the next most important group to be inoculated if they are to be helping others in the event that their help is requested. Again, no other province can say that.

Now, this rhetoric coming from the other side of this Chamber, Mr. Speaker, has nothing to do with helping Albertans. It has nothing to do with preventing the spread of illness. All it has to do with is scoring very, very cheap political points. There's almost something despicable about using an epidemic, an epidemic from which some individuals have already died and some more may die, to score cheap political points. If they were sincere, if this was really important for the reasons that they state it is, other than political reasons, we would see much more engagement over here in this Chamber. I don't see any of that. This was an exercise in putting a motion before this Legislature and suspending all important debate that could have taken place in this Chamber just to show Albertans that they are active, that they are doing something about it.

But really – really – it means nothing because this minister of health and our medical advisors, who are micromanaging this process, are doing everything that can possibly be done. Nobody's holding back anything, Mr. Speaker. The fact of the matter is that we're dealing with a moving target. New scientific evidence and information comes flying at us daily, which causes us to shift our plan. Imagine if we didn't shift our plan, if we sort of predetermined that we were going to do it one way, and new evidence was becoming available contradicting our way of doing things, but we said: "No. We already made a plan. We're not changing our mind. We're sticking with the initial plan." What would the opposition then be saying? "You're not listening to evidence. You're not adjusting accordingly."

Mr. Speaker, sadly, this is all about politics. There were times, I understand, not during my political career, when if the country or the province was in a serious situation, actually all political parties would set aside their partisan biases, their hopes of scoring political points, and work together, not talk about purchasing caskets. Having a medical doctor talking about coffins, in my opinion, is not becoming of a practitioner, of a physician. This is not a way of supporting Albertans. This is not a way for us to work together to benefit Albertans. This is a way to try to capitalize on a situation where they think they may score one or two political points, and that's nothing but shameful.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to enter into this debate on the motion put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Obviously, this is a very important issue to all of our constituents, no matter what sort of segment of the population or demographic they comprise. This is something that a lot of the members of our communities have seen and read in the newspapers and in the media, and they have some real concerns.

5:40

I do want to get into some discussion on this whole analogy of quarterbacking. There's been lots of talk about the concept of a Monday morning quarterback, but that's not the only type of quarterback that's out there. I do say this as someone who is an ardent fan of the game of football. There's also this idea of an armchair quarterback, the one who has never been out on the field, who sits there in their armchair, in their La-Z-Boy, and drinks beer and eats peanuts while they watch the game. Mr. Speaker, these types of people don't have to go through the decision-making on the field.

Unfortunately, for whatever reason the Leader of the Official Opposition has decided to be the Monday morning quarterback, who can always second-guess after the game is over, and he also takes the persona of the armchair quarterback, someone who is able to say something, puts statements out there without having to be held accountable for putting those into action on the ground with our health officials and with the general population. In fact, it's actually a sad state because in our democratic system the notion is that the Official Opposition is the government-in-waiting. If that's the case, you would hope that the leader of that particular party would see himself more as the backup quarterback rather than the armchair quarterback. So, Mr. Speaker, I do want to make that comment.

I make that comment with this caveat as I continue on. As said by many, I am not a health care professional. In fact, I probably know very little about the complex nature of not only the H1N1 virus but the ins and outs of public health plans and pandemic planning. In fact, there are probably some of my constituents who know a lot more than I do, Mr. Speaker. I say that because I think what is a shame is that we have a number of members, particularly those in the opposition, who want to stand up in this Legislature and make all sorts of suggestions about what we should or should not be doing, who should be getting the immunizations and who should not be getting the immunizations, should we have chairs in the facilities, what facilities we should be doing them in, how many of the facilities we should be doing them in. Those, quite frankly, are decisions that need to be made by our public health officials.

I believe our minister of health has done a great job of listening to their advice in the interests of making sure that we take this very unfortunate and very unique circumstance and deal with it in a way that's measured, balanced, and appropriate.

I also think that it's important, as we get into this discussion, to realize what the role of the opposition is and the role of the media. I do recognize that the role of the opposition and of the media at times is to question the government in its direction, particularly from a policy standpoint. What I don't believe the role of the opposition and the media is is to create fear within the public. In fact, they should be teaming up with the government to try to provide accurate communications to individuals and our constituents so that they feel comfortable and they know what is going on.

I believe one of the challenges that we have, Mr. Speaker, is that we have always indicated that we are focusing on this initial tranche of vaccinations on those that are at risk. We did tell people that they would not be turned away if they did go to a clinic. What has happened is that in a very short period of time I think people's perceptions have changed as to who is at risk. We have seen a 13-year-old boy in Ontario fall to this particular H1N1 virus, a very healthy 13-year-old boy in all respects who loved to go and play hockey and who participated in lots of different extracurricular activities. I think that scared a lot of people. A lot of people who are for the most part healthy then make their decision based on their own reasoning that they are now at risk, okay? There is no way that any sort of public health or pandemic plan can account for those quick changes in public perception.

I will go back to my football analogy, Mr. Speaker, and that is that any good football team plans for success. They don't plan for failure. I believe that our health officials have planned and put a plan in place that they believed would be successful. But much like in a football game, you have to make adjustments. You get injuries. The wind changes. The opposition does something that you didn't think they would do. What do you have to do? You have to go in at halftime and make adjustments. In fact, the most successful teams are the ones that make the adjustments.

I believe that's what our health minister and our public health officials have done. Over the weekend they have seen the landscape change. Maybe it is that they take a time out, Mr. Speaker. That quite often happens in football as well. The quarterback gets up there, and he sees that it isn't exactly the current situation that they planned for when they were going to call that play, so they call a time out, go back to the sidelines, and talk about that.

Mr. Speaker, it's with that that I very much look forward to the minister's announcement tomorrow on how we're going to move forward, knowing that the landscape has changed around the idea of the volume of vaccines that we're going to have as well as the perceptions that people have out there as to who is and is not at risk. Part of that is that I'm hoping that our communications will be much clearer for people, my constituents as well as everybody else's constituents in this Assembly, as to how they move forward. I just ask for the citizens of Alberta and right across this country to be patient. This is something that we all need to work at together because there are very challenging circumstances. I wish it was just as easy as saying that we already have the 3 and a half million vaccinations that we need in this province and that we can disseminate those.

My final point is this. Even though there are decisions made and there's a plan put in place, some of those decisions in that plan don't necessarily paint a rosy picture. Sometimes there are checks and balances that have to be put in place. One decision might mean that we might take a hit in another area. I do know that when it comes to the immunization of the province, we've talked about thresholds of 60 per cent or 80 per cent or getting those that are the most at risk up first. Sometimes when you have a limited number of vaccines, like we have right now, you would like to do all of it all at once, but you can't. There's a check there that says: okay, we need to do this first and not this.

I think that we would do ourselves a huge disservice if we completely ignored trying to get as many people vaccinated just for the groups that are at risk because, as we've seen, this is a very, very unpredictable virus. It's important for our communities to understand that they do have access to be protected from this, and if that's what makes them feel comfortable, if they're willing to go stand in line for five hours, which I think is a huge sacrifice, then we as a government need to be able to step up and provide that for them.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I think I will end my time speaking by just thanking all the health care professionals and all our public health officials for stepping up to the plate at a time that's very challenging for them. I know that a lot of them are being second-guessed right now, and I just wanted to offer my personal support on behalf of myself and my constituents for taking interest in their well-being.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do appreciate having the opportunity and appreciate your reviewing, perhaps, your original decision. [interjections] Oh. Okay. Well, however this happened, I'm appreciative to the House. Thank you.

5:50

I have a couple of questions. I'm going off on, perhaps, a different tangent to what I've been listening to over the last number of hours. I guess my question is: how did we exactly get into the situation that we're in now? I know that the WHO probably has a definition – I don't have it – and I'm sure that perhaps Canada Health has it as well, which Alberta Health, I'm sure, would follow. What exactly is the definition of a pandemic? What is the percentage of the population that must be affected that would actually create a pandemic, and how do we know they're affected if we don't test? This is the word that has put the fear of God into everyone not only in this province but across the country. How do we know that this is really H1N1 and not the flu?

I listened to one of my legislative colleagues speak this afternoon who, like myself, is a medical professional. He was speaking of going forward. He was speaking of the things that we need to do in a very calm, orderly, medical fashion. I'm seeing an attempt at having this happen, that now we have identified high risk, and they will get the numbers of vaccinations that we have and that sort of thing. But how did we get to this situation? I really think that we have to start doing more testing because I don't want to see this mess next year. I really want to know how many of us really have had H1N1 or how many have just had the ordinary flu.

In time will H1N1 become just one of those ordinary flus that come through every year? People get vaccinated for the flu every year – well, not everybody but a lot – and they get vaccinated for the flu that came through last year, not the one they think is coming. So I just find that a lot of this is nebulous information. Yes, the media was involved in getting the information out, and unfortunately as time went on, the information changed. People got to the point where: who do they trust? Who are they really listening to? What is the data that is backing up the conversations that the media ran with? People listened to their friends, and they did listen to their doctors, that said: go and get the vaccination. Now my understanding is that the doctors will be able to do it in their offices. Fine, but they couldn't do it before. So the message changed on the vaccination.

One of my big concerns is the planning, and I really do think that there is nothing wrong with planning. I don't think that it's fearmongering by saying: this is what we should be doing in case of. I've brought up the instance of what-if in the seniors' facilities in this province. That is not fearmongering. That is asking the question: what do we have planned? I don't care if we ever use the plan, but the plan is there in case of. The fact that we would have the possibility of H1N1 in any seniors' facility, and anyone who has – I'm sure many people in this House have parents or loved ones in seniors' facilities and realize how quickly something can spread through a seniors' facility, particularly when they all eat communally.

Where is the plan to be able to say: please keep these seniors in these facilities. Do not put them in the ambulances. Do not put them in the emergency wards. Do not put them in acute-care beds. It's not where they belong, and they don't have to be there. Even if they have H1N1, an RN, who could be on a temporary basis assigned to a facility, gets on the phone, gets the order from the doctor, and has it delivered accordingly. There is no need for those seniors to leave their home, which is exceptionally disrupting to them. Often, particularly for the older ones that may have a touch of dementia or Alzheimer's, it is so upsetting to them that some of them come back and they're never really quite the same. Keep them where they belong. Have a good RN in there that has a connection with a doctor who understands what's going on – most of them do – can give them, perhaps, the order for Tamiflu or one of the other drugs that help this sort of thing, and keep it contained within that facility.

Also, one of the other things that they would have to do is isolation. When you isolate someone, it's extra laundry, it's extra dishes. They may be fed in their room. There are any number of things that can happen, but the point is good planning. Hopefully, it will never be used, but a good plan is a sure plan, and better safe than sorry. Those are some of my comments.

One of the other questions would be on the exact numbers of who actually will be requiring the vaccinations and how they would be distributed. Certainly, I don't believe that any seniors that are in any facilities should have to go someplace. Those vaccinations should be taken to them. I realize that they are low risk. Most people over the age of 65 have probably been exposed to this, but that's not the point. The point is that should it happen, then those vaccinations should be brought to them.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will take my seat. Thank you very much.

Mr. Doerksen: Mr. Speaker, I realize that the time is getting late this afternoon, but I can make my comments in a very few minutes, and I thank you for the opportunity to engage in this debate this afternoon. I've found a number of the presentations that have been made very interesting with regard to this situation. We have a very broad range of professional experience represented by members of this House, and I think that's a very positive thing for us. Personally, I have had a little bit of experience with a former situation that involved a zoonotic disease.

What we're really facing here today and I think many people here have spoken about is the challenge that we have in terms of accurate communication and appropriate response for Albertans and, really, all Canadians. I think that one of the things that is important for us to do is pull together in the interest of good communication. I found it particularly appalling earlier this afternoon following a good announcement by the minister of health in making a minister's statement and then observing subsequent messages that really exchanged good professional information for political rhetoric in response to that. Really listening to a lot of what has happened and been spoken about in the news in terms of variance of opinion addresses that challenge.

We're at a time where we need to communicate accurately with Albertans. We need to pull together to do that. We need to use good information, and I think there has been some good information presented here this afternoon. I refer particularly to the analysis of the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill with regard to the situation that we're in. I would call on us all to use our influence and our professional experience to help deliver the accurate message to Albertans because I certainly appreciate the challenge that people have across this province and across this country to understand what the situation is and what the appropriate response is.

I would also like to join those who have thanked our medical professionals across this province and across this country who have worked hard to address this situation. I think we've done a good job to this point in Alberta. I only hope and pray that we get the appropriate response and get ahead of this, as I know all members of this House do, but in the context of that also call on everyone, both sides of this House, to engage in accurate and thoughtful communication with Albertans so that at the end of the day we're delivering the message that they need to get.

I want to express a particular compliment to the minister of health, who has, I think, done an excellent job of communicating with Albertans with regard to the H1N1, and to our medical officer of health, who has continued to communicate the situation as it is and what the appropriate response is.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will end my comments and repeat the call for everyone to engage in accurate communication with regard to this situation in the interests of all Albertans.

The Acting Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak?

Hon. members, the time is 6 o'clock. The House stands adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1655, 1668
Ministerial Statements
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1655
Members' Statements
Devon Energy Steward of Excellence President's Award	1657
Calgary Ring Road	1657
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1665
Glenrose Rehabilitation Hospital Fundraiser	1665
Adoption Awareness Month	1665
Anniversary of the Birth of Guru Nanak	1665
Oral Question Period
H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning	1657
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1658, 1659
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for High-risk Albertans	1658, 1662
Medical Tent at Stollery Children's Hospital	1659
Calgary Ring Road	1660
Climate Change	1660
Tourism Marketing	1661
Commercial Vehicle Driver Safety	1661
Edmonton Ring Road	1662
Provincial Marketing Costs	1663
Temporary Foreign Worker Wages	1663
Postsecondary Tuition Fees	1664
English as a Second Language Programs	1664
Presenting Petitions	1666
Notices of Motions	1666
Introduction of Bills
Bill 59 Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009	1666
Bill 61 Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009	1666
Tabling Returns and Reports	1666
Emergency Debate
H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Preparedness	1667, 1668

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Vacant

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao
Vacant

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Denis
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Vacant

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Rogers
Forsyth Sherman
Johnson Taylor
Leskiw Zwozdesky
Liepert Vacant
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Jacobs
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Drysdale
Griffiths
Hehr
Mason
McQueen
Oberle
Vacant

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Tuesday, November 3, 2009

Issue 54

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, November 3, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. Grant us daily awareness of the precious gift of life which has been given to us. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we dedicate our lives anew to the service of our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it gives me great pleasure to rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House visitors from my constituency of Edmonton-Decore. There are 55 wonderful students, our future leaders, from the Edmonton Christian school northeast campus, which also is celebrating its 60th anniversary and 10th year of partnership with Edmonton public schools later this month. Also, this happens to be the alma mater of the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

It gives me distinct pleasure to welcome these students. They're joined by their teachers, Mr. Greg Gurnett, Miss Elaine Junk, Mrs. Melanie Sigrist; parent helpers Mrs. Charlene Stoklosa, Mr. Don Gerdun, Mrs. Karen Vandermeer, Mrs. Colleen Barbe, Mrs. Lori Bourgeois, Mr. Fred Woudstra, and Mrs. Evelyn Wiebe. I would now ask the students and their teachers and parent helpers from Edmonton Christian school northeast campus, who are seated in the members' gallery, to please rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. We have a group of students today in our gallery who are also your guests, Mr. Speaker, as they participated in today's marvellous service for Remembrance Day; that is, two classes from St. Timothy elementary school in Edmonton, which happens to be residing in my riding of Edmonton-Castle Downs. These 44 students are accompanied by Mrs. Leana Perri, Mr. Sheldon Biamonte, and Ms Natalie Onyschuk. I would ask all the students to rise and accept the traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, may I thank you for hosting a very wonderful Remembrance Day service this morning.

I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Ms Hailey Cervo, who is seated in your gallery. Hailey is from Nobleford, Alberta, and was first-place winner of the Alberta-Northwest Territories command and dominion 2009 senior poem competition. We all had the great pleasure of hearing your touching poem today during the Legislature Remembrance Day service. Hailey is joined today by her dad, Lorne, and her grandma, Alice. Unfortunately, her mom, Crystal, had to work and stayed at home today. You may be interested to know that Hailey will be attending the national service in Ottawa on November 11. She along with three other category winners in the seniors competition will be laying wreaths for the youth of Canada. She's going to meet the Governor General, and more significantly her poem is going to be in the national War Museum on display for a year. I would ask that Hailey, her dad, and her grandma please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you. On your behalf I'd like to introduce to you and through you Donna and Herb Kopp, who reside in Barrhead, Alberta. Herb is a fellow Rotarian and past president and treasurer of the Barrhead Rotary Club as well. They have brought with them today two exchange students: Camille Houbaille, Westlock Rotary student from Belgium, and Andrea Suárez Lárraga, Barrhead exchange student from Mexico. Their visit is made possible through the long-term exchange program which is sponsored by Rotary clubs throughout the world. The Barrhead and Westlock Rotary clubs are pleased to welcome Camille and Andrea for a one-year stay in our communities. They're seated in your gallery, Mr. Speaker, this afternoon. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 13 speakers from this morning's Safe Communities Showcase. The showcase took place at the Radisson Hotel in Edmonton, where six presentations highlighted the successes of grassroots crime prevention initiatives and demonstrated the personal commitment and excellent work that is being done at the community level. The presenters joining us today are Sheila Bradley and Leslie Munson from addiction prevention in schools; Serri Lasuik and Paul Hawthorne from the youth diversion project; Deborah Hopkins, Doreen Roy, Nola Smith, and Randee Rurka from the positive parenting program; Cheryl Gardner, Dr. Tanya Boles, and Constable Clayton Okell from the Edmonton and Calgary police and crisis teams; Sharon Steinhauer from the Saddle Lake Boys and Girls Club; and Dr. Pamela Thompson from Pathways to Housing. I'd ask them all to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly and our thanks.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you today to all members of the Assembly three students from my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford: Miss Elizabeth Otto, Miss Rongjia Liu, and Miss Stephanie Bohaichuk. Elizabeth, Rongjia, and Stephanie are students of the Harry Ainlay and Louis St. Laurent schools in my constituency. This summer they participated in a University of Alberta program known as WISEST, designed to encourage excellence in scholarship and research, and all three had the opportunity to come up with some very impressive projects. I'd ask Elizabeth, Rongjia, Stephanie, and the people accompanying them today to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you two people that are near and dear to me that have already been introduced to you: somewhat unusual, perhaps. They are a part of the Edmonton northeast Christian school group, and they are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask them to rise as I mention their names. The first is my favourite sister-in-law, Karen Vandermeer. The second is one of my favourite nephews, Carter Vandermeer. I would ask that you all give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'm frequently impressed with the constituents of Edmonton-Riverview whom I've introduced here, but none impresses me more than the person I'm going to introduce today. His name is Doug Pruden, and he's in the public gallery. I'd ask him to stand. Now, Doug is recognized most recently in the current Guinness Book of World Records for completing – get this – 1,025 one-arm push-ups on the back of the hand in one hour, a feat he completed on November 8, 2008. He's also been declared a grand master of push-ups in the U.K. and in Germany. He has a number of other records, and this is pretty humbling for all of us, I think, including 1,781 back-of-hand push-ups in one hour, 5,557 on-fist push-ups in over three hours, 1,000 – I can't believe this one – on-fist push-ups in just over 18 minutes, and 1,777 one-arm push-ups in an hour, to name only a few of his records. Congratulations on your stamina and dedication, Doug. Please give him a warm welcome.

1:40

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

20th Anniversary of the Fall of the Berlin Wall

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's with great pleasure today that I rise as an Albertan of German descent to acknowledge the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall. Many of us can remember 20 years ago the dramatic television footage from Germany on November 9, 1989, and the subsequent celebration of freedom, but while this was the end of the Iron Curtain for most of us, it was a new beginning for Germany and for Europe. It symbolized the first step in German unification, which formally concluded October 3, 1990. Not only did this event reunite family, friends, and neighbours; it inspired people across the world.

While reading about the upcoming celebrations to commemorate this special anniversary, I learned of an international project called Mauerreise: the Journey of the Wall. Twenty symbolic wall bricks are being sent from Berlin, which started in May 2009. Their destination, Mr. Speaker? Places like Korea, Cyprus, Yemen, and other places where everyday life is characterized by division and a similar border experience. In these places the bricks will become a blank canvas for artists, intellectuals, and young people to tackle the wall phenomenon.

I applaud this international effort in raising awareness for the problems that come with divisions within a nation and look forward to seeing some of the end results. Mr. Speaker, I did see some of the end results this summer, when I had the fortune to visit Berlin. What are the results? Where there was once a wall, there is now a modern, cosmopolitan city. I also had the opportunity to visit East Berlin, where I saw a Stasi prison, which is now a historical site.

This anniversary serves as a reminder to me of how proud I am to be an Albertan and how fortunate we are to live in a country that is free and united, free of oppression of dictatorial regimes inspired by fascism and communism. We must never take our freedom for granted.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Family Violence Prevention Month

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Family Violence Prevention Month started in 1986 as a local initiative in the little town of Hinton, where concerned residents launched a family violence education and prevention campaign. This grassroots effort inspired the Alberta Legislature to support family violence prevention as an ongoing provincial initiative, resulting in the inception of November as Family Violence Prevention Month. For most of us family is who we turn to for support, comfort, and protection, but for some Albertans family can be a source of violence, danger, and fear. Family violence hurts everyone. It touches every group in every community. It knows no socioeconomic, educational, or cultural boundaries.

Family Violence Prevention Month is an opportunity to remind Albertans that we all have a responsibility to help end the cycle of violence because, Mr. Speaker, victims of family violence are often silenced by fear or don't know where to turn for help. As caring friends, families, and neighbours we all must do our part to end the silence and stop the violence.

The government of Alberta is doing its part and continues to be a leader in addressing the issue of family violence. As an example, through the prevention of family violence and bullying initiative nine government ministries are working together to address family violence. We have strengthened legislation to protect victims, established domestic violence courts, increased funding to women's emergency shelters, supported sexual assault centres, and provided funding for community-based programs and victims' services. The government's safe communities initiative also supports several programs to prevent family violence and support its victims, including outreach pilot projects aimed at improving access to resources for aboriginal and immigrant communities.

Albertans who suspect that someone is dealing with family violence are encouraged to call the toll-free family violence info line at 310.1818. The 24-hour, seven-days-a-week info line offers help in more than 170 languages. Additional information and resources are also available on the website, www.familyviolence.alberta.ca.

All Albertans deserve to feel safe and live with respect and dignity in their communities. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Health Care Spending

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is downsizing Alberta Hospital, limiting diagnostic testing, and forcing patients to wait longer and longer for surgeries. This government claims that health care spending is out of control and needs to be curtailed. Well, if anything is out of control and needs curtailing, it's not the public health services Albertans depend on. It's this government's lavish spending on a few lucky, hand-picked friends inside our public health care system.

Jack Davis, for example, is receiving over $22,000 a month from a lavish pension plan. He contributed not one penny to this plan, and he was credited with over 28 years of pensionable service even though he only worked for the health authority for a little over eight years. He's receiving a gold-plated pension based on over 20 years of work that he actually didn't do.

Here's another example of out-of-control spending in the health department. The total cost of paying out severance packages for the transition from nine health boards to the one cost taxpayers $23 million; $18 million of this was shared by a mere 30 senior executives. On top of that, there wasn't even a defined process for handing out these severance payments. In fact, Alberta Health Services overpaid to the tune of $41,000.

On top of all this, the Auditor General's report shows that accounting practices and processes during the transition from nine boards to one were incredibly mismanaged. There was no oversight, no consistency. The 2008-09 budget hasn't even been approved by the minister or the Alberta Health Services Board in a year when the operating deficit is approaching $400 million in Alberta Health Services.

The minister of health has admitted that he bears the ultimate responsibility for all of this. Therefore, it's long past time for this minister to do the right thing, the honourable thing: resign.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Stephen's Backpacks

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently I was honoured to bring greetings from our Premier and our Minister of Children and Youth Services at a thank-you luncheon for foster parents. I was inspired by all in attendance and suggested that someone write a book celebrating the incredible achievements. Immediately thereafter Nancy and Jim McPhee offered me a copy of their book, Dream Out Loud, the proceeds of which assist working families to get off the street.

The book raises awareness of early intervention and the amazing benefits it can bring to set up a child for success, and it draws attention to the great merits of children helping children despite their own challenges. It features the journey of Nancy and Jim's son Stephen. A few years ago, Mr. Speaker, when he was only five years old, Stephen proclaimed: mommy, I need to help them.

That's right, Mr. Speaker. A preschool boy who happens to have autism was pledging to help the homeless. Stephen decided he would make 'packbacks,' as he called them. He packed his newer toys and whatever else he thought appropriate, including mitts, hats, toys, candies, and socks. The McPhees made 15 backpacks, which they gave to those in need on a cold Christmas Eve. Shy little Stephen gave one to a 16-year-old boy with Down's syndrome.

In 2007 the community of Airdrie caught Stephen's passion, and the result was 265 backpacks. In 2008 the province got involved. Over 1,000 backpacks came of that, and they were distributed to homeless children all over the province. In August 2008 Stephen also raised 600 pairs of shoes for schoolchildren who didn't have any, and in 2009 he nearly doubled that. Stephen's Backpacks Society is now a national charity with warehouses, hundreds of volunteers, and corporate sponsors.

Mr. Speaker, when Stephen popped into the lives of the McPhees, they had no idea what direction their journey might take them, and they might never have dreamt that their little one would one day become a recipient of the Alberta Great Kids award and be named a Global 2008 Everyday Hero.

Stephen has taught us all to dream out loud, and anyone who wants to join him in these and other projects can buy a copy of Dream Out Loud at Alberta Safeway stores and visit stephensbackpacks.com.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Pan-Canadian Paralympic School Week

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, the torch has been lit, and the countdown is on to the Vancouver 2010 Winter Olympic and Paralympic Games. With only four months to go, excitement is growing in Canada and around the globe. I'm sure many of my colleagues here in the House remember a similar experience when Calgary hosted the '88 Winter Games.

The period leading up to the Vancouver 2010 Winter Olympic and Paralympic Games presents an unparalleled opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to engage students in an event that will be receiving world-wide attention. In my capacity as deputy chair of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities I'm very pleased to stand today and recognize November 2 through 6, 2009, as Pan-Canadian Paralympic School Week. Paralympic School Week offers a special opportunity for students across the country to explore the values that Paralympians bring to their sport and to recognize and celebrate people with disabilities and their achievements.

All schools in Alberta and across Canada are invited to participate in this week-long program. Teachers can download a resource guide which contains suggestions for planning school-wide and classroom-based activities for a range of grades and subject areas. The guide helps teachers create Paralympic-style events right in their classroom, discusses the values of the Paralympic Games, and showcases people with a disability who are making a difference. Anyone interested in the Paralympic School Week materials or other Olympic education resources can visit the Department of Education website to find out more.

Mr. Speaker, this is an exciting time for Canada. I hope everyone, and particularly all members of this House, finds a way to support and participate in this extraordinary event.

Thank you.

1:50

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Alberta health minister took complete responsibility for Alberta's H1N1 pandemic plan. On Sunday clinics to administer the plan were closed, the only clinics in Canada that were shut down. On Monday it was the same. Today it is the same. Yesterday the federal Health minister indicated that the national plan identified high risk and health workers to get the vaccine first, a plan this minister did not follow. This cannot be regarded as anything but a complete failure. To the Premier. Yesterday the federal minister also said that we have sufficient vaccine for high-risk individuals. Will you now fire the health minister?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, you know, the only response we have from the opposition is: fire this person; fire that person. But this individual has changed position now three times. His first position was: let everyone in the province of Alberta be vaccinated. That was towards the end of last week. Then he changed: no, only high risk. Then back to everyone, and today I really don't know where he is: high risk or no high risk? All of a sudden he's now on the fourth position in about five days.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, Albertans know that is untrue.

Yesterday in this House the minister of health asserted that “every health care worker . . . who wanted to get vaccinated has been vaccinated.” I later spoke to health workers in Drayton Valley and the Royal Alexandra hospital here in Edmonton. They have not been vaccinated despite repeated attempts to do so. For misleading the House the Premier must fire this minister.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, misinformation, and the minister will clarify.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are two areas that have not had a pause in terms of vaccination. One is health care workers, so that is continuing, and at the same time we are also continuing our vaccinations wherever possible with our homeless community. Every Alberta health care worker will have the opportunity to be vaccinated and has the opportunity to be vaccinated right now because that is not part of the pause that’s currently under way.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the minister of health also asserted that the pandemic tent at the Stollery children’s hospital was not planned as a pandemic tent at all. I have documents which I’ll table later that show this is not true. Again to the Premier: will you fire this minister for deliberately misleading the House?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, those are quite serious accusations, and it’ll be up to the minister of health to decide how he will proceed with those allegations. I think it’s getting beyond ridiculous. This is a serious situation in the province of Alberta and the country of Canada, and quite frankly we can play around with this issue in the House, back and forth, but it’s a serious matter. We want to get the correct information out to all Albertans, those at high risk, ensure that we provide the vaccination in a better model than we did last week, and we will do that. In the meantime let cooler heads prevail. This is the largest vaccination program of its kind in recent history at least, if not in the history of the country of Canada or at least in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Vaccine

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister of health is responsible for what happens in his ministry. That’s one fact he cannot spin, he cannot hide from. The confusion, fear, and outrage seen now throughout this province are due to this minister’s conflicting statements, changing plans, and inability to admit his mistakes. Again to the Premier: what is your excuse for holding onto over 180,000 doses of vaccine for three days when you could have been delivering these to high-risk groups and health workers who need it?

Mr. Stelmach: Again, working on information, it’s just like today in the scrum. You know, one reporter on one side: 200,000 doses of vaccine missing. Another reporter from another station said: no, no; it’s only 20,000. You know, even the media are now working on: well, is it 200,000 or 20,000? Now we hear in here 180,000. It just goes back and forth, back and forth. If you want to win political points, go ahead, but I’m not going to do it on the backs of Albertans that are good civic citizens, who want to get the correct information. This minister is working with the medical officer of health and also Alberta Health Services to get the vaccinations out there as quickly as possible to all of the high-risk groups.

Dr. Swann: Why did this minister of health for three days – three days – rejig a plan that finally now corresponds to what other provinces and the federal government had indicated was necessary? Surely it’s clear to this Premier that this minister has to go.

Mr. Stelmach: No, the minister does not have to go. In fact, the minister is working every hour of the day trying to ensure that there is a reasonable process in undertaking the largest vaccination program in the history of this province. Just the other week we heard, again, that the supply of doses from the one manufacturer in Montreal was interrupted. That is different information than we had the week prior. The medical officer of health had to make a change in the plan to deal with the change in the number of doses that were available to the province of Alberta.

Dr. Swann: Well, I’m going to try the Premier again on the first question. What is your excuse for holding on to thousands of doses of vaccine when there are thousands of vulnerable people and health workers that needed those vaccines in these last three days, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe yesterday in the debate this came up, that in Alberta we have 400,000 people that were vaccinated, and in all of the country of Canada the amount is about 1.4 million. So of the 1.4 million in all of the country of Canada that were vaccinated, 400,000 of those are here in the province of Alberta. That’s pretty good.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care Restructuring

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister of health is facing a test of the health care system he shattered 18 months ago, and frankly the public has given him a failing grade. Again to the Premier: under this minister of health’s incompetence the health authority’s deficit has skyrocketed to $1.3 billion. What will it take for you to fire this minister?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the budget in health services, notwithstanding the constant words – let’s put it very mildly – by the opposition in terms of cuts, cuts, cuts, the Alberta Health Services, the department of health have seen an increase in the last budget of $550 million. They will see another increase in the budget that will be introduced here in the House in February. It may not be as large as the budgets that were increased 10 to 12 per cent in years previous, but there will be increases.

Secondly, we’re also looking at the help of all health care professionals to see how we can deliver those services much more effectively and efficiently. We’re looking to those that work in the system to give advice to the minister so that we can put a sustainable health program in place.

Dr. Swann: I don’t need to remind the Premier that this is the most vital service government provides to Albertans. It’s this minister of health’s incompetence and mismanagement that has led to confusion and mixed messages about 246 beds being cut from Alberta Hospital Edmonton. Will the Premier fire this minister?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe he's referring to the Alberta Hospital. We have a situation in the province where many of the community organizations and those that represent mental health organizations have requested this government for years to move people out of institutions and put them in homelike settings in the community, which I think will greatly enhance the quality of life for the people that may be suffering from mental illness and other related issues. We will work with the Alberta Health Services Board. We've put an implementation team in place to make sure that this is done properly to improve the quality of life for those people that are living presently today in institutions.

2:00

Dr. Swann: In 1989 there were 13,300 acute beds in this province, and under this government the total of acute beds now has been cut to 6,800. The minister of health wants to reduce that further when we have the greatest need. Why, then, will this Premier not fire this minister for not protecting our health care system and for future generations?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, that just tells us how misinformed the Leader of the Opposition is. I can tell you that today, given how health services were delivered in the '80s, cardiac – you know, open-heart surgery – patients are up within hours after surgery. People that spent days in hospital for cataract surgery are now operated on in day surgery. They come into the hospital in the morning, and they're released later that afternoon. The health delivery has completely changed, and to say that we need the same number of beds we did in 1989 I think, quite frankly, shows us that the leader has a total misunderstanding of how quickly the health system has changed for the better.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Hockey Teams

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Hockey players are not at high risk for swine flu, yet the Calgary Flames were given preferential treatment with government-supplied vaccine. So were their families and their coaches. This was no doubt a measure taken by the team's owners to protect their investment. Some pregnant women and young children now face a greater risk of very serious disease or even death because millionaire hockey players got a vaccine they did not urgently need. My question is to the Premier. Why is the Premier putting the investment of the Calgary Flames owners before the health and safety of pregnant women and young children?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, that issue is under investigation, and I applaud the member for bringing it forward. Once the investigation is completed by Alberta Health Services, we'll have further information to give. The one thing, though, is that if it has happened, somebody has broken the rules, and we want to find out who it is because it is deplorable.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Albertans want to know why government vaccine was secretly distributed to NHL players by Alberta Health Services while high-risk groups like expectant mothers were left waiting in line. The Calgary Flames owners have an investment to protect and together have donated more than $44,000 to the Progressive Conservative Party since 2004. Why has the Premier permitted millionaire friends of this PC government to receive preferential treatment over vulnerable Albertans like pregnant women and children under five?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, this is an issue that was brought forward as of yesterday. Obviously, upon further investigation we'll have more information, but of course to drag this kind of nonsense, again, just adds to this whipsawing back and forth. Again, part of the group tends to just excite everybody at a time when we need calm. We need the time for our health care professionals to do the work that is absolutely necessary to provide the number of vaccinations that are necessary for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. CNRL chairman and Calgary Flames owner Allan Markin has donated more than $20,000 to the PCs since 2004, team governor Harley Hotchkiss has donated nearly $15,000, chairman N. Murray Edwards has donated $3,500, and owner Alvin Libin has donated $2,000.

Mr. Hancock: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Mason: Why won't the Premier admit that he's allowed his friends to jump the queue for the government flu shot, leaving vulnerable Albertans unvaccinated and risking serious illness or even death?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, many of the people that the member mentioned have contributed greatly to the province of Alberta. Harley Hotchkiss is funding total brain injury research under Dr. Sam Weiss. Every one of those people that have been mentioned has significantly contributed to the wealth of this province. They may have given money to this party. I'm sure they gave it to that party. The member from Calgary is smiling because I know he's received some. I don't know if they did give to the NDs. Probably not, but it doesn't really matter. The thing is that all those names that have been mentioned in the House publicly have contributed tremendously to the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Safe Communities Initiative

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This week we are recognizing the people working to keep our communities and families safe. As part of the second anniversary of Alberta's safe communities initiative I was pleased this morning to attend the Safe Communities Showcase. My first question is for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Could the minister please explain how community programs are contributing to overall crime prevention and reduction in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was pleased today to have the opportunity to meet with a number of community organizations from across this province both in Edmonton and via the web to talk about the work that they have undertaken through the safe communities innovation fund. There were representatives from SuperKids in Brooks, mentor programming from the community of Drayton Valley, and members of the Calgary and Edmonton police services from the police and crisis teams. The one thing that they all had in common is that they understood the importance of providing support, direction, and mentorship to young people who may be at risk of making bad choices in their life. There are a number of opportunities in a child's life where if they do have the right direction and information, they should be able to make the right choices with our help.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is for the same minister. Safe communities supports a variety of projects that address community action and diversion. What kind of progress are we seeing in these areas?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We need to strike a balance between enforcement, intervention, and prevention, and the emphasis on the safe communities innovation fund is around prevention. The youth diversion pilot project based out of Edmonton focuses on youth with mental illness and diverts them from the criminal justice system to appropriate health resources, and the Saddle Lake Boys and Girls Club is providing holistic and culturally appropriate programs and restorative justice programs in the community that it represents. Crime prevention is extremely effective at a grassroots level. We all know that. It's important for us to highlight successes and challenges that community agencies have to ensure that we can think through how we deliver our programming in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you. My final question is again for the same minister. What can we expect as safe communities moves forward?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're now into the second year of our safe communities innovation fund and the safe communities initiative overall. We've had some tremendous success with respect to legislative reform, the gang prevention summit co-hosted by the Solicitor General and I earlier this year. We've also had tremendous support from the community and feedback from the community with respect to how we as government need to support the work that they're doing and how government departments need to work together, and we will continue to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Health and Wellness Executive Search Contract

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. A careful digging into government books shows that a numbered company was paid $135,000 by the Department of Health and Wellness last year. If you dig through a second layer of numbered companies, you'll find that the $135,000 went to a company 50 per cent owned by the election campaign manager for the Minister of Health and Wellness. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: can he tell the people of Alberta why his department paid $135,000 to 1024226 Alberta Ltd., a company half owned by his campaign manager?

Mr. Liepert: I can only assume, Mr. Speaker, that he's referring to the search that took place for the board members for Alberta Health Services, which was an open, tendered competition. My recollection is that the winning search firm that was selected was a search firm out of Calgary called Boyden. One of the partners in that firm is a gentleman named Brent Shervey, who was my campaign manager. It was an open competition. If the member would like to have sent over the documentation that we have, I'd be happy to supply it to him.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'll take the minister up on the offer, so ship me the documents.

Again to the same minister: what was his personal involvement in the decision to have the Department of Health and Wellness hire his campaign manager's numbered company? Is it just coincidence that his campaign manager's company was hired, or was there political influence?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I can say that the competition was conducted by the HR department of Alberta Health and Wellness. At the time they did the search, they asked me about the fact that this particular company had been the successful bidder and, I believe, the lowest bidder, Mr. Speaker, but I'll clarify that because I was not involved in the actual selection process. I was informed. I don't see why any company in this province who does business should be precluded from doing business with this government if they meet all of the guidelines in the RFP.*

2:10

Dr. Taft: In May 2009 the Minister of Health and Wellness told a legislative committee that he wasn't going to have a board of health care professionals running Alberta Health Services. Well, no kidding. The only health professional on the board is a doctor from Toronto. Again to the same minister: did he give direction to his campaign manager to avoid recruiting to the board of Alberta Health Services any health care professionals from Alberta, or is it just coincidence that it turned out that way?

Mr. Liepert: I can't recall the exact documentation that was provided as part of the search, but it was done by our HR department, and I'd be more than happy to give whatever is not privileged information to the member, and then he can go on his witch hunt, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Cattle Price Insurance Program

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our livestock industry has experienced some very challenging times over the last several years, and with the current economic downturn and our strong Canadian dollar the gap between the risk and reward in our cattle markets has become even greater. My question is for the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. With economic challenges like a global recession, a fluctuating Canadian dollar, market access issues, and high feed costs what has the government done to lessen the impact on our livestock producers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

*See page 1731, right column, paragraph 7

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our government certainly recognizes that the cattle market can experience some significant price swings, and the need for livestock insurance certainly was identified by the Alberta livestock and meat strategy. In response, we implemented the cattle price insurance program, the first one in Canada, by the way. CPIP, as it is called, is available through Agriculture Financial Services Corp. CPIP provides the Alberta feed industry with the ability to manage risks such as the exchange rate, which is a real fluctuation barrier right now, so this certainly contributes to a more sustainable industry.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question. I'm pleased that our government has found a way to assist the cattle industry during these challenging times, and I'm proud to hear that it's a made-in-Alberta solution. To the same minister: can you tell us briefly how the cattle price insurance program actually works?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I certainly can because we worked with the industry to develop this program, so we know how CPIP meets their needs. It's market driven, and it's flexible. CPIP provides producers with a guaranteed minimum price where the guaranteed price and the associated premium reflect the current market situation. Producers can customize their coverage levels and policy length to suit their specific needs. The bottom line is that with government funding, administration costs, and producers funding the premium, CPIP is a valuable investment in an operator's long-term success.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: what has the industry's reaction been to the cattle price insurance program?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm very pleased to report that we're off to a great start with CPIP, and the uptake by the industry has been very positive. AFSC was flooded with inquiries when the program was announced, and many eligible participants are taking advantage of it today. More importantly, AFSC is monitoring how well the program is working and gathering feedback from industry to aid in developing programs that we can meet further on for better tools in our industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Alternative Energy Investment

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday, in defending his lack of support for renewable energy in Alberta, the Minister of Environment stated, "This government believes that it's not the role of the government to invest in energy." Well, I'd say that spending $2 billion on carbon capture and storage, $200 million on technologies to improve oil and gas production, and $30 million to clean up abandoned wells, drilling credits, and new well incentives all add up to a government investing in energy. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Why is this government willing to invest only in fossil fuels and not in the wind and solar energy sector?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is referring to an exchange that we had yesterday when she talked about the fact that there was an investment that was ongoing in Ontario that was encouraging the development of renewable energy in Ontario. The difference is that in Ontario all of the power production is owned by a Crown corporation, Ontario Hydro. The same situation doesn't exist in this province. In this province the power production is owned by individual, privately owned companies. Those same privately owned companies that we have operating in Alberta have had significant investment. In fact, the CCS dollars went to an electric generator here in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Well, Alberta enjoys more sunny and windy days than almost anywhere, yet Ontario will be the wind and solar power capital of Canada and will have created 50,000 green technology jobs in doing so, not even to mention what they're doing in Texas. Why is the minister letting our jobs and investment in our province leave the province for Ontario and Texas?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the process that's being used in Ontario is a process that has been broached with the Alberta government. Frankly, as Minister of Environment I'm not entirely opposed to it. It's something that's called feed-in tariffs. Essentially what it means is that all of the consumers of power in a jurisdiction would pay an environmental surcharge on their bill, and then that surcharge, that lump of dollars that is an environmental tax, for lack of a better term, is then reallocated to the producers of environmentally sustainable power. It has some merit, but it's something that I'm not sure the government would arbitrarily impose upon Albertans without first asking them if they are in favour of it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Back to the same minister. This government is willing to compete fiercely with Ontario and with some other places in the States for everything else. So why – why? – is this government willing to let Ontario and Texas walk away with our jobs and walk away with investments in green energy technology?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I remind the member once again that in Ontario the electricity-producing corporation is owned by the government. It's a Crown corporation. They're moving money from one pot to another. It's not the government that is doing it; it's their Crown corporation. We don't have that same situation in Alberta, and frankly I don't think we want that situation in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Trade Mission to Asia

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For two years I had the distinct pleasure of serving as parliamentary assistant to the minister of agriculture. I was always very proud of the minister for his resolute dedication to fiscal restraint. He seemed to manage every taxpayers' dollar as though it was an investment for his grandchildren. I have a question for the minister. He announced last week that he's travelling to Asia for a trade mission. Given the economic circumstances the province is enduring right now and the great need for fiscal restraint, I'm wondering if he can explain why he now needs a trade mission to Asia.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, the government of Alberta has a plan for a strong economic recovery, but it's important that we continue to keep Albertans working by ensuring that our industries are competitive and are attracting investments. Access to the Asian market holds a tremendous potential for Alberta's agriculture and food industry and particularly for the beef industry. On a trip in 2007 I gained a better understanding of what these markets and their consumers wanted for their livestock and for their meat products. Since then the industry has been working to better meet these demands, and I will be providing an update on our progress in identifying more ways to supply these markets.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister mentioned how important these markets are, but right to the south of us we have a market of 250 million people. I'm wondering why we want to focus our attention on markets that are halfway around the world and what sort of benefits they are supposed to provide.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, Asia is a growing market for our export opportunities. People in Asia, as we all know, are now eating more protein, and it's a growing market for the types of products produced here, like our famous Alberta beef. There are also opportunities for industry to tailor products to suit the specific consumer tastes in these regions. Alberta producers depend on exporting, and we have the products here that consumers in Asia want. They're not only interested in our beef. They're interested in pork, canola, honey, and barley; you name it.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This won't be the first time that the minister has travelled to Asia, and I know he believes we are going to get some benefits. Are we building on benefits that came from other trade missions that he went over to Asia for? Did we accomplish some goals already that we're going to build on?

Ms Blakeman: Nice question, but it's still on the website.

Mr. Groeneveld: It's a good question, whether it's on the website or not, Mr. Speaker.

When I visited Asia in 2007, they told me that age verification and traceability are the minimum requirements for market access. To help meet these requirements, we created the Alberta livestock and meat strategy and, indeed, the Alberta Livestock and Meat Agency. Market access is a top priority for ALMA. They are working with Alberta industry, government, and key foreign members to advance access for our Alberta products. As a matter of fact, one of our board members joined federal Minister Ritz on a mission to Hong Kong in January, where an agreement in principle for incremental market access was secured. It was a direct result of our being there the previous year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

H1N1 Preparedness in Seniors' Living Facilities

Ms Pastoor: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I asked the Minister of Health and Wellness about the pandemic planning for seniors' living facilities; however, he only talked about the vaccines and not the care that the residents may require. In Alberta Health Services' pandemic plan it states that "all continuing care facilities . . . are expected to be self-sufficient." My question to the Minister of Health and Wellness would be: could he explain exactly what self-sufficient means?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not part of the delivery system of health care. I will have to ensure that Alberta Health Services has adequate plans in place; I'm confident they do. I'm not exactly certain what self-sufficient means – I can only make some assumptions – but I do know that as part of that pandemic planning our seniors' care has been considered to the fullest.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This minister speaks about the right care in the right place. Would it then not make sense to treat residents in the facility that is their home rather than having to use an ambulance to shuttle them back and forth to ERs if there is H1N1 influenza in that facility? I think this sounds like policy to me, not delivery.

Mr. Liepert: Well, no, it's not, Mr. Speaker, because we don't operate the long-term care centres in this province. Any pandemic planning would have been developed with those operators and would have been done with the ultimate care of the patient in mind. I'm not sure what the member is referring to relative to transferring back and forth by ambulance. I'm assuming that if the facility cannot handle or if the patient gets to a state where they need to go to an acute-care setting, that's the arrangement that's in place.

Ms Pastoor: Well, deregulation rears its head again. Housing care. I'm speaking of care. Care comes under health. Will the minister commit to monitoring and tracking the number of expensive ambulance calls to continuing care facilities as a way of measuring how these facilities are coping with residents who require assessments?

Mr. Liepert: Sure. I'd be happy to get a report for the member from Alberta Health Services.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Aboriginal Albertans

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the government was taking credit for the federal government's success in ensuring that the First Nations were the first to receive the H1N1 vaccination. Unfortunately, when it comes to what the province is actually responsible for, they fall short. While the Calgary Flames were jumping the queue, we're told that this government only started meeting with Métis settlements' reps last Thursday. To the Minister of Aboriginal Relations: why didn't this government take the lead and ensure that all remote Métis settlements got the vaccine first?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Public Health Agency of Canada and, in fact, Health Canada are responsible for delivering the vaccines to First Nations throughout the dominion, including Alberta. However, our role in that respect was to help ensure that the vaccines actually got there, and I personally phoned, oh, about eight reserves from down south all the way up north to make sure that that had happened, and it did occur. In fact, this morning at a special strategies meeting of western Canadian officials Grand Chief Charles Weaselhead complimented both the government of Alberta and the government of Canada for how carefully that was done and indicated to us that it was one of the most successful rollouts in their history.

I'll comment on the Métis later.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the people of the Paddle Prairie settlement are hours away from the care they'll need should they fall ill with H1N1. That's why Health Canada, as you identified, said that they and others in isolated communities should have been first on the list to get the vaccination. In this government's first plan – I don't know how many we've got at this point – they were not going to get their shots until week 2 or week 3, and now that may be delayed even further. To the same minister: why wasn't Paddle Prairie the highest priority last week, as they should have been?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we have eight Métis settlements here. Two of them were prioritized for early delivery. They were in fact provided the vaccination on October 26, day 1. We phoned there as well to ensure that the vaccines had arrived. They had. As part of that vaccination plan a number of others were scheduled. For example, Paddle Prairie, that's being referred to, was scheduled for November 6. I haven't seen the details of the new plan, but I know that as soon as the vaccination supply is increased again by the provider, they will be among the priority groups that will be serviced.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, 400,000 people vaccinated, and they don't have it yet. It's a tale of two governments. Under the feds all 47 First Nation bands in Alberta have received their vaccine. A hundred per cent. A success. Under the provincial government's authority only 3 of 8 Métis settlements have received theirs, 38 per cent. A failing grade. We've known for the past six months that remote communities were among those at highest risk. How could the Alberta government fail to ensure that remote communities received the vaccine the moment it became available? If the feds can do it, why couldn't you?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the federal government's jurisdiction with respect to the reserves in Alberta covers approximately 100,000 people. Our responsibility covers an additional 3.2 million, 3.3 million. There simply was not enough vaccine to go around.

I have spoken with the Minister of Health and Wellness, and he has assured me that Métis settlements, including the five remaining ones, and numerous other category groups are the top priority. They will be provided the vaccine as soon as possible. I remain hopeful that the November 6 plan for that particular Métis settlement as well as the ones that are coming on stream next week will be adhered to.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

High School Completion for High-risk Students

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On October 20 I attended an information session put on by Terra, a centre for pregnant teens, helping teenage mothers to complete high school. I must say that they're doing a wonderful job. My questions are to the Minister of Education. What steps is your ministry taking to help these young women complete high school?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are a number of programs across the province, one of which includes the Terra centre, for example, that work in partnership with school boards. In this case Terra works in partnership with the Edmonton public school board to support teen moms in achieving their academic success, getting their high school completion. The partnership between Terra and Braemar school helps the students achieve their potential both as students and as parents. Many of the Alberta school jurisdictions have developed programs that support pregnant and parenting teens to complete their education. It's a very, very vital part of making sure that every Alberta youth, regardless of their circumstance, has the opportunity to achieve their potential.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that vulnerable students are the most at risk of not completing high school, what initiatives is your ministry taking to help other high-risk and vulnerable students to obtain their high school diploma?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are many reasons why students don't finish high school. There's not one single answer to that. In the spring of 2009 we did launch the high school completion strategic framework, which outlines strategies, including personalized learning, successful transitions, collaborative partnerships, positive connections, and tracking progress. We have the Alberta mentoring partnership, we have a province-wide wraparound research project, we have a provincial protocol framework for success in school for children and youth in care jointly with Children and Youth Services, we have the children's mental health capacity building project jointly with Health, funded out of the former Mental Health Board, and the aboriginal parent and community engagement. There are a number of projects across the province. I think it's fair to say that one of our highest priorities is making sure that every child can get an education.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental to the same minister. In recent years the province's high school completion rate has flatlined. What is the minister doing to improve the rate and ensure that the province is graduating students that are capable and ready to contribute to the workforce or to the postsecondary institutions?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, from the years 2004 to 2007 the five-year high school completion rate has increased steadily and now remains at a constant 79 per cent, so we actually over the five-year term have had good growth in that. It's still not good enough. A lot more needs to be done.

As I said, we launched the high school completion framework at the beginning of this year. Initiatives associated with the framework were either at the research stage, the pilot stage, or the first years of development. Currently departmental staff are meeting with school jurisdictions to help them understand the high school completion framework and get their advice on best practices around the province that can be shared among jurisdictions.

Grizzly Bear Protection

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, last night many members of this honourable House had a presentation from Carl Morrison with the Sierra Club and Dr. Steve Herrero, an expert on grizzly bear conservation, on the need to list the grizzly as a threatened species now. We heard the findings from the best grizzly conservation science in the world. Despite some government members' questioning of this science, I found it very informative. To the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. You passed the grizzly bear recovery plan. What do you think of this plan?

The Speaker: Opinions are not part of the purview of the question period. If the minister wants to comment, go ahead.

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, we've barely heard from the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo this session, so I'm happy to answer his question. Dr. Stephen Herrero is a distinguished alumnus, professor emeritus at the University of Calgary, somebody I've known for over 25 years, so I'm happy to comment on their remarks last night.

We appreciate their concern with the grizzly bears, and we share them. This government has taken more steps than any other jurisdiction in western North America to do that. We've had a five-year DNA study. We've suspended the grizzly hunt. That study is being reviewed by peer review right now. We have our BearSmart program. I challenge the hon. member to find another jurisdiction that's put that much resource into grizzly bears.*

Mr. Hehr: Well, I'm glad the minister feels that the grizzly bear recovery plan is a good plan, but I'd appreciate knowing why he hasn't put any long-term funding in place to pay for this plan.

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member asked me last spring to detail funding on grizzly bears. I sent him a letter in response to his April 9 questions in the House. I'll photocopy the letter and send it back to him again. The Grizzly Bear Recovery Team recommended three years ago that we spend $2.8 million on grizzly bears. We're close to $4 million now.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You should maybe discuss with these experts, who do not believe that the grizzly bear recovery program is now being funded. Why do they continue to say that you're not funding this program, then?

The Speaker: Well, again, how does the minister respond to what somebody else is saying?

If you want to go ahead, try it.

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, let's put the bare facts on the table, okay? Not only is our DNA study cutting-edge science, but it's currently being peer reviewed, scientifically reviewed by some of the participants in the most successful grizzly bear recovery program, which was the one down in Yellowstone park. We have some of the top grizzly experts in North America on the job, working for the government of Alberta and working to protect our grizzlies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Health Care Registration Services

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Six months ago the government changed the way Albertans register for health care. They can now do it through a registry office. My questions are to the Minister of Service Alberta. Has your department maintained proper service levels for Albertans needing to apply for or update their health care registration?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the registration process is the same, but Albertans now have more locations to go get their health care cards. Previously there were only two locations, in Calgary and Edmonton. Now we have 23 different registry offices across Alberta handling this. This is, indeed, a very successful pilot project.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, Minister. To the same minister: with registry agencies being privately owned and operated, Minister, how are you assuming that Albertans' personal health care information is being protected?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Registry agents providing a service have no access to Albertans' personal health information. The transactions they do are similar to the other ones that they do with respect to all of the drivers' licences and things like that. This is one of the requirements under the Health Information Act, so the registry agents do not have access to that information. We also work with Alberta Health and Wellness, and we conduct audits on a regular basis to ensure the information is being handled properly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Finally to the same minister: what are your plans for expanding the pilot program so that all our registry agents across the province can offer health care registration services?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The current pilot project runs until March 2010. At that point we're going to be evaluating and deciding what are next steps. But I can tell you right now that it's going very well. So far we've had 21,000 Albertans come and register for health care through a registry agent. This is just one of the creative and innovative ways that we can provide better service to Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Health Board Senior Executive Contracts

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the minister of health was asked about who was responsible for signing off on senior executive contracts in Alberta Health Services and in the regional health authorities, the minister indicated that the final signature is his. To the minister of health: why under your watch did Jack Davis, leaving Calgary health region, get a $2.3 million severance and a $22,409-a-month pension for life?

*See page 1731, right column, paragraph 2

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, this member is going to have to show me where I said in this House that I was responsible for signing off on contracts for the former regional health authorities. I never said that. I would ask him to retract that statement unless he can show that I said that in this House.

What I have said in this House is that one of the reasons we have moved to one health board that's accountable to this government is because we did not have the ability to approve those contracts that were signed by the previous regional health authorities.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the hon. minister of health's information at the Public Accounts Committee meeting on October 26 the minister indicated: "The final signature is mine."

Mr. Liepert: Where?

Mr. MacDonald: In Public Accounts. Look at the Hansard.

The Speaker: Okay. Through me, continue with your question.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes.

My second question: why under your watch, hon. minister, did Paddy Meade receive a quarter of a million dollar bonus as part of her severance after only nine months of work?

Mr. Liepert: That's a different question, Mr. Speaker, and I'm happy to answer that one. He knows the answer because he asked the chairman of the Alberta Health Services Board at Public Accounts, or one of his colleagues asked it. But I'll repeat the answer that the chairman of the board said. He said that there were actually three phases of this situation. One was the previous regions, one was the interim board, and the third phase is the permanent board. During that interim phase the compensation package was much more tied to what the old regions were involved in. That has been changed – there now no longer are contracts like the member is alluding to – and this minister does have final say on those contracts.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: why under your watch will one terminated chief executive officer remain under the lavish pension program for another two years, costing the taxpayers an additional $290,000?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's very simple. There were several of the former CEOs who the new board determined they did not want to lose from the organization. I would suggest that we should be looking to retain the best people we can. Those two individuals that I can think of – there might be a couple more – had contracts with the previous regional health authorities. In order to keep them, we would have had to pay out the contract and rehire them. Does that make any sense? No, it does not.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Bow Habitat Station

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta government has a mandate to educate the future generation on environmental stewardship. Phase 1 of the Bow Habitat Station was recently completed, and I'm excited about it for two reasons: one, it is in my great constituency of Calgary-Fort, and because I expect it to foster education on the relationship between human activities and the health of aquatic systems and fish populations. My question is to the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. What role will the Bow Habitat Station in Calgary play in providing educational services?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort for taking us to such a happy conclusion today. Yes, it was a fun and happy day last month when we had the grand opening of the Bow Habitat Station. We wouldn't have had that without the good efforts of the hon. member.

The most important renewable resource of this province is our children. That's what the Bow Habitat Station is about: education on stewardship and conservation of Alberta's rivers, lakes, and water. There's a broad array of hands-on exhibits, the big show, four galleries, some aquaria with Alberta fish, some hands-on learning things. When it comes to water, the kids are learning that what's good for fish is good for us.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question is to the same minister. In light of the recent upgrades what is the minister's long-term plan for the Bow Habitat Station?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the primary focus at the moment is a teaching facility for the schoolchildren of Alberta. Currently the programs for grades 1 through 5 align with the Alberta Education curriculum. These include the exhibits, the interpretive wetland, and the Livingston Fish Hatchery. In the coming three years programs will be expanded to include the junior high curriculum as well. Currently we are opening it simply as an educational facility, but by next year it will be open to the general public and also be a tourist facility.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last supplemental question is to the same hon. minister. If a habitat station concept like that is so great, does your ministry intend to build more educational habitat stations across Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me just say that the Bow Habitat Station is unique. It has arisen out of community efforts. The Sam Livingston Fish Hatchery has been there for 30 years and provided the vision and resources. There's been a wonderful volunteer society. The Bow Habitat Station Volunteer Society was formed in 1992. I'll take this opportunity to acknowledge the important work of its president, Mr. Lloyd Horn. In 1995 the volunteer society came up with the idea of expanding the educational outreach component of the hatchery. This is the origin and the genesis of this wonderful facility for the conservation and stewardship education.

Again, Mr. Speaker, when it comes to water, W.C. Fields was wrong. If it's good for fish, it's good for us.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes question period for today. There were 96 questions and responses. In a few seconds from now I'll call on the remaining member to participate in Members' Statements.

Members' Statements

(continued)

Government Accountability

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, during the Calgary-Glenmore by-election I met with thousands of great people in my community, and I have listened. I have heard their concerns about Albertans' economic situation and the lack of fiscal accountability from the Premier and his government. I have heard their concerns about government accountability and their muzzling of MLAs. I have heard their concerns that health care decisions should be returned to local boards in our communities rather than big government superboards. Indeed, I have heard from people all across this province, and they feel that their concerns are not being addressed by this government. I have listened, and it is their concerns that I bring to Edmonton. Their concerns are my priority.

Instead of listening to everyday Albertans, this government, to quote the President of the Treasury Board, continues with the priorities set by the Premier, priorities that have not been in the best interest of Albertans. Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, is but one example.

Most recently the government's mishandling of the H1N1 vaccine program has become a personal crisis for those at highest risk. Mr. Speaker, Albertans want to know why this government has failed to prioritize and distribute the H1N1 vaccine to communities and individuals most at risk, and still we wait for them to act. Albertans no longer trust this government as it continues to centralize power and decision-making instead of empowering local health authorities with the responsibility of distributing the H1N1 vaccine to those most at risk. This government has impeded an efficient and effective local vaccination plan, and the H1N1 vaccine program is only the most recent example of this government's failure to properly prioritize.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans want to know when their priorities will become the priority of the Premier.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Bill 51

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to request leave to introduce Bill 51, the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 51 contains a number of provisions which are noncontentious. I'll briefly list those acts which are affected by this particular bill: the Alberta Evidence Act, the Fatality Inquiries Act, the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act, the Companies Act, the Family Law Act, the Government Organization Act, and the School Act.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 51 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I just wanted to table five copies of a statement on the Liberal website by the Leader of the Opposition urging all Albertans to get your shots as soon as possible: "I'll be getting my shot soon. I encourage you to do the same."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. the Premier and in my capacity as deputy chair of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities I'm pleased to table the appropriate number of copies of the council's 2008-2009 annual report. As you know, the council works to improve the lives of Albertans by advising, reporting, and making recommendations to government and other stakeholders on issues of interest to Albertans with disabilities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of the 2008-2009 annual report for the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta. The council is a vital communication link that works with Albertans and seniors' organizations to share information about the issues that are important to seniors with our government.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday during the debate on immunization that resulted from the Standing Order 30, I quoted from two different e-mails from constituents and promised to table those documents, which I am pleased to do now. The first is from Ann Campbell, who was raising questions about why those at risk were not given priority and a number of other issues that she was concerned about around the immunizations.

The second is from a Victoria Stevens, who wondered why the government change their mind, and why they neglected the vulnerable.

The third e-mail is from another constituent, Julie McGuire, who has been a great advocate on behalf of the grizzly bears. I think this is her second letter to me, which I am happy to table. She lists a number of requests, including listing grizzly bears as a threatened species, reinstating the Grizzly Bear Recovery Team, and dedicating a budget for recovery, which is above and beyond what the minister talked about today.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I see the guest I introduced earlier is still here, and I'm rising on his behalf to table some documents about his achievements. They include photographs from his doing push-ups in various locations around the world; articles, some in more than one language; the rules for competition; and the various Guinness world record certificates. I'm proud to make these part of the official proceedings of the Legislature.

Thank you.

2:50

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon.

Mr. Liepert, Minister of Health and Wellness, pursuant to the Health Disciplines Act the Health Disciplines Board's annual report, January 1 to December 31, 2008.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader on a purported point of order.

Point of Order
Imputing Motives

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the exchange earlier today during question period in the question from the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood directed at the Premier we heard some of the most despicable and scurrilous language that I think we've heard in this House. It really is an affront to the rules of the House and Standing Order 23(h), making an allegation against another member; 23(i), imputing false or unavowed motives to another member; and 23(j), using abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.

If that wasn't bad enough, Mr. Speaker, it also violates, in my view, rule 481(f) in Beauchesne, which states, "make a personal charge against a Member," which mirrors our standing orders, and 491, which refers to: "The Speaker has consistently ruled that language used in the House should be temperate and worthy of the place in which it is spoken." Also, 493(4) in Beauchesne would suggest that "the Speaker has cautioned Members to exercise great care in making statements about persons who are outside the House and unable to reply."

In the exchange the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood brought into it discussion about an issue which is clearly of significant importance to Albertans. We spent all yesterday afternoon on an emergency debate on his motion about the importance of Albertans' understanding what was happening with the H1N1 virus, what was happening, more importantly, with the vaccination program, and how all Albertans needed to be conscious and aware of the need to be vaccinated but also to clearly put a priority on those people at risk. That was the context of yesterday afternoon's debate. That's been the context of questions, some more informative than others, over the course of the last week.

But today the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood stooped to a new low in terms of the level of questioning by bringing into that very important debate a practice which is used in other places, which, quite frankly, I've always found totally offensive, and that is to allege false motives against a member of the government, in this case against the Premier, by suggesting that anything that an hon. member in this House would do and an hon. member of government would do and that the Premier would do would be linked to campaign contributions. It's particularly scurrilous to make that kind of a statement in the context of such an important issue to Albertans with no basis for making that statement.

Mr. Speaker, in looking at Beauchesne's, I've had to really temper what I would say about the statements that were made because a number of the statements that one would be tempted to make have under 488 been ruled unparliamentary. For example, the statement that he's "scarcely entitled to be called gentlemen" was ruled out of order April 17, 1876; "honourable only by courtesy" was ruled out of order on April 30, 1880; "disgracing the House" was ruled out of order January 17, 1896; "a cowardly slanderer and a bully" was ruled out of order February 21, 1907; "stooping to pretty low motives," February 2, 1956; "cheap political way," December 2, 1960; "dishonest insinuations," March 10, 1960.

Now, just because terms have been ruled out of order doesn't mean that they're always out of order. In some cases they may actually be in order if they are appropriate in the context, but I don't want to go there. I don't want to move off the language that was used by the hon. member today by asking you to rule that any of those statements which might otherwise have been entirely inappropriate in the circumstance are in order. Rather, I think we could go to things that have been ruled parliamentary to use, and that would be "spurious charge" and "unscrupulous."

Mr. Speaker, whatever language one uses, it should be clear to every member of this House and every Albertan that it's one thing to bring up political banter. It's one thing to make charges across when you've got evidence to base something on to say that something wrong has happened, but it is absolutely unscrupulous and spurious, when we're supposed to be treating each other as honourable people in this House, to raise in a question that someone, particularly in light of the answer that the Premier gave to the previous question that the incident was under investigation and that there would be serious charges, particularly if it was true, did what the hon. member alleges. That would be something that would surely be investigated for criminal charges. To raise that in the House simply to make cheap political points is the most obnoxious and foul attempt to demean the character of all members of this House, not just the Premier but all members of this House.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member should be asked to apologize and withdraw.

The Speaker: Are there others who would like to participate? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise, of course, to ask that you do not follow the request made by the Government House Leader with respect to his alleged point of order. I think that the issue here that is relevant is that the Government House Leader refers to an alleged situation where allegations were made against another member. The Government House Leader suggests that perhaps there was some type of imputation of false or unavowed motives, and he also suggests that abusive or insulting language likely to create disorder was used.

To start with the last point first, I believe that it was actually at this point now that the hon. Government House Leader just spent five minutes reading through a list of language which has previously been ruled abusive or insulting. A clear review of every word and every bit of language used by the hon. leader of the third party in his question, of course, included not one word that would remotely come close to being abusive or insulting, so I would suggest that that's simply not applicable.

The next question comes: was an allegation made, or was there some claim that false motives drove a particular member? I would suggest that if you look very clearly at the question that was asked by the leader of the third party, what the leader did was that he asserted three facts, all of which are on the public record or which are known to be truths within this Assembly. The first fact is that, unfortunately – and I'm sure that many members on the other side agree with all members of the opposition on this – some citizens received preferential treatment in the access to the much-desired vaccination. We know the Premier acknowledged that that occurred. As well, it was reported in the news that some people got access to the vaccination not in clinics, so clearly they were treated differently. It's a reasonable assumption to suggest that it was preferential because they got access to the vaccine and they were not in clinics, which nobody else had the opportunity to receive.

The next thing that the hon. leader of the third party suggested was that there was a relationship between those people and/or people who had a business interest in the team and the PC government, and that is a matter of public record. It may be an uncomfortable thing for people to hear sometimes, but there is a reason why these things are a matter of public record, Mr. Speaker. There is a reason why campaign donations to successful and unsuccessful people that run for office are a matter of public record, so that the public can have a public discussion about that in the way that that may or may not be a factor in the deliberation of public policy. We're not suggesting it is, but the fact that it's a matter of public record is simply that: it's a matter of public record.

3:00

The third thing that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood stated was that he talked about the Premier permitting a certain thing to happen. Now, I would suggest that that is a reasonable characterization of the principle of ministerial responsibility. When something happens in the government for which the member in question is being questioned and for which that member has responsibility under the tradition of ministerial responsibility, it's reasonable to suggest that it was permitted. It may not have been intentional, and we didn't suggest that it was intentional. It may not have been planned. There may not have been motives. There may have been none of that stuff. But that is not what the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood stated. He simply characterized what I would suggest is a known position within this Assembly about ministerial responsibility. Ultimately, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood did not make an allegation, and he did not describe or articulate a motive. He simply outlined that which is on the public record.

While it's unfortunate, I appreciate that members on the opposite side have been subjected to a great deal of criticism both in this Assembly and in the public sphere over the last 10 days for a number of issues relating to the vaccination program and the way in which it has been laid out. Notwithstanding that that makes them perhaps a bit more sensitive, it's something that's going to be discussed and, throughout the discussion, all other elements of the mistakes that have occurred throughout the rollout of the vaccination program. The government has accepted as a fundamental premise that under the theory of ministerial responsibility it's a reasonable thing to be discussed in this House, and this matter is no different.

I would suggest that notwithstanding the discomfort that members opposite may feel with this, there was no allegation. There was no description of a motive. [interjection] Read the Hansard; it wasn't there. This is all information that has been publicly discussed, publicly posted on the elections website. As a result, I do not believe that the words of the leader of the third party meet the criteria for any of the three items that the Government House Leader referenced in his point of order.

Thank you.

The Speaker: It's a very narrow point of order. A lot of what has been said is totally irrelevant to this point of order.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, do you want in on this point of order?

Mr. Chase: Yes, please.

The Speaker: It's very narrow. Proceed. I'll sit you down if you wander.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I see this as an incident of a government kettle calling an NDP pot black. In complaining about allegations and unparliamentary language, basically the equivalent of suggesting that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood take a bite out of a bar of soap, the Government House Leader used these terms . . .

The Speaker: Okay. Hon. member, please, sit down. Before I recognized you, I clearly made a statement that much of what had been said is totally irrelevant to this point of order. You are now continuing in that same vein. This is not about the Government House Leader or anything else. If you want to participate on the point of order that was raised, do so, but what you just finished saying is totally irrelevant. On the point of order, or I'll sit you down again.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The point of order had to do with an allegation being made of impropriety, and the manner in which the allegation was made, I would suggest, is as improper as the supposed allegation being discussed.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Anybody else?

Okay. Sometimes it's amazing to me how when we get our way, we don't recognize that we actually got our way, and we just keep going. I listened very attentively to a question that was put forward today to the Premier by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. I heard the Premier respond that he thought it was a very serious matter. He took it upon himself that he was going to have an investigation done to find out what this was all about and that when the investigation had concluded, he would report. Well, it seems to me, that's just about where the matter should end. I don't know. We win, but we somehow then just keep going. I guess we have to learn to either have the ability or the agility to understand this and deviate, then, from the script that we have.

Regardless of what was said, I thought everything that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood had wanted was responded to in the first question. But the hon. member goes on:

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. CNRL chairman and Calgary Flames owner Allan Markin has donated more than $20,000 to the PCs since 2004. Team governor Harley Hotchkiss has donated nearly $15,000. Chairman N. Murray Edwards has donated $3,500, and owner Alvin Libin has donated $2,000.

Okay. All, I suppose, statements of fact.

Then at that point the hon. Government House Leader jumps up: "Point of order, Mr. Speaker."

Then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood goes on:

Why won't the Premier admit that he's allowed his friends to jump the queue for the government flu shot, leaving vulnerable Albertans unvaccinated and risking serious illness or even death?

It seems to me that the point of order should have come after that statement because that's the one that basically gave something to somebody else. I just don't understand it.

Okay. It's public record that people make contributions. There's nothing wrong with that. You can use that. That's all part of the public record. We passed laws in this Assembly to basically say that political parties had to admit publicly who they got all of their funds from. I read very diligently every year how much the PCs get, how much the Liberals get, how much the NDs get, and now how much the Wildrose Alliance gets. I mean, the lists are there. I always check to see who, you know, are the biggest contributors. There's one lady on the NDP list that gives 100-plus thousand dollars every year, it seems, out of her estate or something. I'm quite impressed with that. I think that's what she gives.

I don't know why, after the Premier would respond that he's taking this matter seriously and that he's going to review it, an allegation would be made: "Why won't the Premier admit that he's allowed his friends to jump the queue for the government flu shot?"

Okay. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, there may be another forum in which you make your arguments about these not being allegations or anything else, but in this forum it strikes me that it was an allegation. You know, I'm not gifted in terms of the arts that one would find at a certain law faculty or anything else. Just kind of common sense is what sort of runs my way. "Why won't the Premier admit that he's allowed his friends to jump the queue for the government flu shot?"

Then you go further on. Another statement was made here during this discussion by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Quote, some constituents received access to the vaccine. End quote. Whoa. What's all that about? What's all that about?

I don't know why we get into this. You're recognized to raise a question, you win with the response that you get from the leader of the province of Alberta, and then you go on with something else. I mean, what's the purpose of all of this?

I don't like the language. I've got to dig down there hard to find this ability to move and shift. I mean, if you're going to get hit by somebody with a bodycheck, you sort of move so you don't get creamed. In this case you kept going for no reason at all. I think you certainly are more gifted than that, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, and you could have used better phrases. You'd already won, so why would you keep going on and doing that? I don't know. I don't get it.

I'm not going to, you know, dismember you or disembowel you or anything else. Maybe you could just add some clarification here to solve this issue so we can move on, that it was not the best temperate language.

Mr. Mason: I will certainly do that, Mr. Speaker. I was attempting to connect facts together, and perhaps I did that in a way that created a strong impression that I was making an allegation against the Premier when I was asking for him to elaborate on the connections that obviously I saw. It's clear that that's created a great offence on the other side, and I apologize for doing that. I will try and phrase my questions more carefully in the future.

3:10

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 56

Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I'm pleased to spend a few minutes discussing Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009. To refresh everybody's memory, what Bill 56 does is remove the Deputy Minister of Finance and Enterprise from the board of Alberta Investment Management Corporation, or AIMCo. The deputy minister was appointed to AIMCo's board when AIMCo began its transition to a specialized arm's-length organization. AIMCo's roots can be found within Finance and Enterprise as Alberta Investment Management.

This transition period began in 2008, and we felt it was prudent to maintain that link between the department and AIMCo until AIMCo was fully up and running as an independent organization. I'm pleased to say that AIMCo has been fully functional for some time, building a talented base of staff and knowledge to manage our investments. In fact, AIMCo is preparing to move to their new downtown Edmonton location early in 2010, and it will be setting up its own IT department separate from government. As one of the final parts of their transition removing the deputy minister from its board will help to make it clear that AIMCo operates as an arm's-length organization.

Thank you.

Dr. Taft: Did you not want to adjourn?

Ms Evans: I would be quite prepared to adjourn the debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 57

Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today and speak to Bill 57, the Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act. We are always looking for ways to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of our justice system, and this legislation will do exactly that. Right now law enforcement must make applications under part 15 of the Criminal Code to obtain a warrant authorizing the use of a tracking device or a number recorder to a provincial court judge or a justice of the peace. Applications under part 6 of the Criminal Code for other types of warrants, like applications for wiretaps, can only be made to a justice of the Court of Queen's Bench. In some investigations multiple applications must be made because warrants under both parts are needed. In these cases more work is involved on the part of the police, and more court time is needed as two decision-makers must familiarize themselves with the lengthy and complex documentation typically submitted in support of these kinds of applications.

Bill 57 would give Court of Queen's Bench justices the same jurisdictions as justices of the peace in cases where law enforcement is applying for warrants under part 15 of the Criminal Code, authorizing the use of a tracking device or a number recorder, and applying for a warrant under part 6 of the Criminal Code. This will reduce the administrative time needed for law enforcement to apply for warrants. By reducing the number of applications that law enforcement needs to make in complex investigations that involve multiple warrants, court time can be used much more efficiently.

In conclusion, Bill 57 will increase the effectiveness of the justice system by decreasing the amount of court time and police resources needed in cases where complex and multiple applications are required.

I urge all members to support this important legislation and ask that we would now adjourn debate. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I've just been advised that you did not move second reading, so perhaps you should move second reading as part of the discussion.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you. I'd like to move second reading of Bill 57.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 58

Corrections Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move second reading of Bill 58, the Corrections Amendment Act.

This legislation will expand the monitoring and recording of inmate communications and will also allow offenders of provincial statutes and municipal bylaws to earn remission for their sentences. Earned remission, Mr. Speaker, allows the offender to earn reduced time through good behaviour, compliance with facility rules, and program participation. It's an incentive for them to behave well and to participate in programs while they're in custody.

Currently earned remission is available only to individuals serving sentences for offences under federal laws or where the offender's sentence includes convictions for both provincial and federal offences. Individuals serving sentences solely for provincial offences or municipal bylaw offences, which are generally less serious and nonviolent offences, do not currently have the opportunity to earn any remission. Examples of these types of offences, Mr. Speaker, include driving without insurance, gaming and liquor offences such as public intoxication, and petty trespass.

In fact, there have been situations where individuals convicted of much more serious Criminal Code offences have spent less time in jail than provincial statute offenders. In 2007-2008 individuals convicted of provincial statute offences spent an average of 9.9 days in jail. With one-third remission that would decrease to seven days. Now, I know that doesn't sound like a lot, Mr. Speaker, but this decrease in time spent in custody is expected to reduce the number of offenders in our provincial facilities by 40 people per day. Based on that estimate, we're looking at $175,000 in savings per year.

Apart from Yukon, Alberta is the only jurisdiction that does not allow earned remission for provincial statute or municipal bylaw offences. These changes provide several benefits, including encouraging good inmate behaviour, reducing the offender population in our facilities, and making our legislation consistent with other jurisdictions.

The other amendments for the Corrections Act are about inmate communications. Currently recording and electronic monitoring of offender phone calls is permitted. In fact, Mr. Speaker, many legal decisions have recognized that inmates of a correctional facility have a reduced expectation of privacy. That's not going to change. This bill, however, would allow for recording and monitoring of all inmate communications rather than just phone calls.

Rather than labelling specific items, we use "inmate communication" to expand the scope of the communications that can be monitored and recorded to include written, oral, and electronic forms of communication among inmates and between inmates and the public. British Columbia uses the term "inmate communication" in its Correction Act, and making this change will prevent the need to list individual forms of communication. New forms always arise, and we won't have to change it in the act.

Electronic communications would be passively recorded. This means that conversations would be recorded directly into a database with no one monitoring them, no one listening to them. These recordings would be listened to only if there are reasonable grounds to do so, as set out by the act. Communications between an inmate and his or her lawyer or any other privileged communications that an inmate is entitled to would not be recorded or monitored. The practice being proposed is used in British Columbia and by Correctional Service Canada.

These amendments will provide us with greater opportunities to intercept and report active or planned criminal activity, which will make our communities safer, Mr. Speaker. This legislation allows us to address communication technology as it evolves and gives law enforcement another tool to help prevent crime. It also gives offenders an incentive to participate in programs, follow the rules of our facilities, and get back out to be productive members of society faster.

Mr. Speaker, with that, I conclude my comments, and I would move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 59

Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move Bill 59, Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009.

Community treatment orders, which will be issued by two physicians, one of whom is a psychiatrist, will enable individuals to maintain their mental health treatment in the community. These orders will reduce the need for hospitalization and help to keep more hospital beds available for those individuals who need a greater level of care.

Bill 59 includes amendments that support the introduction of community treatment orders which were established by the Mental Health Amendment Act, 2007. It is expected that the provisions in the Mental Health Amendment Act, 2007, relating to community treatment orders will come into effect early in 2010.

Throughout 2008 consultations were conducted with numerous stakeholders, including the Alberta Alliance on Mental Illness and Mental Health, the patient advocate, Alberta Health Services, the Alberta Medical Association, as well as practising psychiatrists. These stakeholders provided input and helped to identify the need for the amendments contained in this bill.

I'd like to provide you with a brief summary of the proposed amendments. The section 9.6 amendments. To support community treatment orders, the 2007 act provided that if a person subject to a community treatment order did not accept the treatment and care outlined in the order, a psychiatrist could issue an apprehension order. This order allows for an examination to determine whether the individual should continue to live in the community. An apprehension order may not be issued until after the psychiatrist has tried to contact the person and re-establish treatment and care.

3:20

This bill also incorporates an amendment that clarifies the role of psychiatrists. The amendment ensures that any psychiatrist, rather than only the psychiatrist that issues the community treatment order, may issue an apprehension order. This amendment is supported by psychiatrists who participated in the consultations.

The section 9.7 amendments. In the 2007 act a provision was also included that permits a physician to be designated to act in the place of a psychiatrist when the psychiatrist is not available. This provision was included so that people living in remote areas that do not have a resident psychiatrist could also have access to community treatment orders. These designated physicians must consult with a psychiatrist before exercising their authority under the act. This bill clarifies that designated physicians, in addition to issuing, amending, and cancelling community treatment orders, may also issue apprehension orders.

Section 42 amendments. This bill also clarifies the criteria a review panel may consider when hearing reviews related to community treatment orders. It also responds to issues raised by review panels.

Section 45 amendments. In addition, Bill 59 clarifies that the authority of the patient advocate to request information on records when conducting investigations applies notwithstanding the Health Information Act. Supporting the role of the Mental Health Patient Advocate is essential to the protection of those with mental disorder.

ders. The patient advocate's role was recently expanded to include the authority to investigate complaints on behalf of persons subject to one mental health certificate. It will also include people subject to community treatment orders. This amendment ensures the patient advocate is able to access records that are vitally important to the advocate's ability to conduct a full and meaningful investigation.

Lastly, section 52 amendments. Section 52 confirms that technical irregularities within the forms required under the act are not sufficient to invalidate actions taken under the act. The amendment to this provision extends this rule to community treatment order forms as well.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, this bill demonstrates our recognition of the important role of the mental health services in our health system and signifies this government's continued commitment to supporting the availability of these services to Albertans in need. I would ask all members of the Assembly to support this bill.

With that, I move to adjourn debate today on Bill 59. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 60 Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Health Professions Act provides the legislative structure that supports the regulation of health professionals by their health profession governing bodies. Bill 60 amendments will keep the regulatory environment current. The amendments in the bill are routine amendments that have been requested by the colleges and reflect the evolution of the Health Professions Act.

First, the bill will amend the practice statements of three health professions. The practice statements contained in each profession's schedule under the act identified the activities of a health professional that are subject to the regulatory control of the college. The respective colleges have requested that the professional practice statements for acupuncturists, schedule 1, dentistry, schedule 7, and midwifery, schedule 13, under the Health Professions Act be expanded to include the activities of teaching, management, and conducting research. In response Bill 60 will amend the practice statements for acupuncturists, dentists, and midwives to allow the respective colleges to regulate the practice of members who are engaged in teaching, management, and research within the profession.

Second, the Health Professions Act reserves certain titles for each profession. This bill updates the titles reserved by three health professions. A reserved title may only be used by qualified and registered health professionals. The Alberta College of Paramedics is developing its regulations under the Health Professions Act. The titles of paramedic, primary care paramedic, critical care paramedic, and several provisional titles along with the respective initials are to be added to the list of reserved titles for this profession.

The College of Pharmacists has begun the process to amend its professional regulation to accommodate pharmacy technicians as regulated members and has indicated that titles for pharmacy technician students and provisionally registered pharmacy technicians are required. The bill will also amend the title of schedule 19 to include pharmacy technician. This will clarify that the Alberta College of Pharmacists regulates both pharmacists and pharmacy technicians.

Lastly, Bill 60 will update the titles reserved for registered nurses in schedule 24 to include graduate nurse and graduate nurse practitioner.

The respective colleges for these health professions have either requested or have been consulted on and support these changes. Mr. Speaker, this bill demonstrates our recognition of the important role health professions have in our health system and signifies this government's continued work with the governing colleges to ensure that legislation meets their needs. I ask all members to support this bill and move this bill to the next stage.

I move second reading of Bill 60 and ask for the debate to be adjourned. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 61 Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As usual, a pleasure to rise in the House. It is my pleasure to speak today to Bill 61, the Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act.

This bill further extends our Premier's commitment to creating safe communities, and as a result of this legislation we will see more police officers actually working on the street and doing the work that they have been trained to do and that they want to do as opposed to spending time in courthouses and other hearings. The amendments in this legislation will help to increase the effectiveness and efficiency of the Alberta justice system as well.

I will touch upon three amendments that will help update this Legislature on this particular bill. The Provincial Offences Procedure Act sets out the rules for prosecuting offences under the Alberta provincial statutes and municipal bylaws. The amendments in Bill 61 include changes that will update the legislation and help decrease pressures on court time and law enforcement. Bill 61 will expand the circumstances under which police officers may submit affidavit evidence if they were not a primary witness to an offence. For example, as something I imagine every member in this House can relate to, in operations like speed traps there is often one officer responsible for operating the radar, who actually witnesses the offence, the speeder, one officer is directing the offenders to the side of the road, and the third officer is actually physically writing the ticket. In some cases when a ticket is disputed by the offender, all three officers are required to attend court when only one of them actually saw the offence. Imagine three police officers in a courthouse and not on the street.

Right now in situations like speed traps the officers who did not witness the actual offence can submit affidavit evidence, meaning they do not physically need to go to court. The amendment in Bill 61 will extend this kind of situation in which police officers can offer this affidavit evidence to situations like stop signs and seat belt violations. This will allow police officers to spend more time on the streets, where they are needed, and less time in our courtrooms. It will also reduce the amount of court time used in these cases.

This won't of course impede the accused's right to cross-examine a witness. In situations where affidavit evidence will be used by police officers, the Crown must give advance notice. The accused would notify the Crown if they would like to cross-examine the officers. If the accused wants to cross-examine the officer, they can. If they do not, the officer can submit their affidavit instead of coming to court.

Another amendment in Bill 61 allows the accused person who currently has to attend court personally or by agent to plead not guilty to do so by registered mail instead of actually taking the time of the court in appearing in person. In some cases an accused will receive a summons to appear in court to enter a plea. Sometimes the court the accused must attend is far away, and appearing may be a hardship or an inconvenience as one would have to appear to plead not guilty and then appear again at the specified trial time. Right now for some offences an accused can plead not guilty by mail, allowing the court to set a trial date and notify the accused of the trial date by mail. These are generally offences that would not result in a warrant being issued if the accused failed to appear. Under the proposed amendments, Mr. Speaker, accused persons could plead not guilty by registered mail if they are charged with an offence that would result in a warrant. By using registered mail, the accused can check to ensure that their plea has reached the designated court.

3:30

Bill 61 will also increase the amount a justice of the court can award as compensation for damages, from $2,000 to $25,000, in cases where the property damage is readily quantifiable. In situations like traffic accidents there is often evidence on the amount of damage of the property such as a damaged vehicle. A presiding justice has the ability to order compensation. Under Bill 61 the maximum the justice can award will increase to $25,000, as I said earlier. This will be applicable in straightforward cases where there is quantifiable damage to property.

Mr. Speaker, the Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act will help increase the effectiveness and efficiency of the justice system. The amendments in Bill 61 will help update the legislation, free up court time and resources, and reduce the amount of time police officers need to spend in court. I urge all members of this House to support and vote in favour of Bill 61.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I would like to adjourn the debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 48

Crown's Right of Recovery Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and move second reading of Bill 48, the Crown's Right of Recovery Act.

This proposed legislation will enhance government's ability to recover health care costs resulting from wrongful acts or omissions. This authority currently exists in part 5 of the Hospitals Act. Issues have arisen within the current legislation which make some cost recoveries difficult or impossible, impacting the effectiveness of existing programs. Clarifying and updating existing provisions increases government's ability to recover health care costs, and this ends up being a benefit for all Albertans.

Cost recovery involves more than just hospital costs, so it makes sense to set out these provisions in stand-alone legislation. Bill 48, the new stand-alone legislation, has been drafted in two substantive parts. Part 1 of the bill will enhance the province's ability to recover health care costs and ensure stakeholders are fulfilling their obligations under the law. The cost-recovery process consists of two components. The first is a specific claim-by-claim recovery. These recoveries can include automobile-related injuries involving at-fault drivers from outside Alberta, medical malpractice injuries, product liability, slips and falls.

The second component of cost recovery is an aggregate assessment established annually by the Minister of Health and Wellness, paid by automobile insurers. The aggregate assessment is the minister's assessment of the cost of health services provided to Albertans injured through the use of an automobile insured in Alberta. If an automobile insurer licensed in Alberta contributes money to Alberta's aggregate assessment, government will not recover costs for that insurer for motor vehicle accidents occurring that year. In addition, we've added new provisions that will allow government to recover health care costs from those convicted of criminal offences if they are injured while committing a crime.

Part 2 of the bill will expand the scope of the Crown's right to recover costs to include the authority to recover health care costs incurred as a result of tobacco-related disease. This authority will mirror legislation passed in British Columbia and other provinces and will enable Alberta to commence an action against tobacco manufacturers if the province chooses. No decision has been made to proceed with legal action at this time.

This bill enhances the province's ability to recover health care costs caused by wrongful actions or omissions and is an important government initiative in our work to improve the sustainability of the health system.

I move second reading of the bill and ask all members to support this bill.

I would move to adjourn debate, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 46

Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move second reading of Bill 46, the Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act.

This bill is an important one because it will make our communities safer as well as provide needed clarity to health practitioners. This legislation will make it mandatory for health practitioners to report gunshot and stab wounds. Similar legislation exists in Ontario, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia, and Manitoba. Under the Health Information Act health care practitioners, including physicians, nurses, and EMT paramedics, have the discretion to report gunshot or knife wounds in limited circumstances, but they are not required to do so. This act will give health practitioners clarity regarding when disclosure of information is required and what information they should supply to police when individuals are treated for gunshot and stab wounds.

Mr. Speaker, law enforcement is not seeking a carte blanche access to medical charts, files, or confidential doctor-patient information. The only information health care professionals will be asked to give is the name of the patient, the name of the facility, and the type of wound. In the case of EMT paramedics, they would have to give the same information and location of where the victim was treated if the person is not transported to hospital.

This bill balances a patient's right to privacy of health information with law enforcement's need for information to help maintain public safety. Health care professionals are already self-regulated, so penalties for noncompliance with this act are not necessary. Patient treatment will also be top priority for health care professionals. They would only make the disclosure to police as soon as they can, without interfering with the patient's treatment or disrupting their activities. This legislation won't create extra paperwork for health facilities because the disclosure is to be made verbally.

Unreported gunshot and stab wounds pose a public safety concern, and this bill identifies and addresses this important public safety matter. The information police receive as a result of this legislation will help police ensure that there isn't a threat of further violence and may even help prevent violence, injury, or death. Reporting gunshot and stab wounds may bring serious incidents to the attention of the police sooner rather than later, so they can assess the threat and take the necessary steps to prevent further violence. By putting police in the position where they can check the situation out, they would also be able to alert other agencies if necessary. Likewise, police could protect the public in the case where the perpetrator returns to the scene or to the victim. This legislation supports our government's commitment to safer communities.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans deserve to live, work, and raise their families in safe and secure communities, and Bill 46 is another step toward that goal. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 49

Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)

[Adjourned debate June 2: Mr. Lukaszuk]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Municipal Government Amendment Act, that has been read a first time, addresses a very important issue. Most members may not be aware of the fact that once firefighters do their work and appear at a fire, put out the fire – most properties in Alberta, you hope, are insured so that the owners of the properties are paid whatever the loss may have been – what happens later is that very often fire departments and municipalities are sued by insurance companies that underwrite the property that has been burnt and allege negligence on behalf of the fire departments and the municipalities, basically stating that more could have been done to save the property.

Mr. Speaker, as we all know, our firefighters in this province don't hold anything back. When people run out of a fire, they run into a fire, and their priorities are such that they save lives first and then property second. It is very unfortunate when following a fire, firefighters have to appear in front of lawyers and in courthouses, having to testify and justify the work that they did and justify how well they have done it, particularly where hired guns are hired by insurance companies, consultants, alleging that they could have done more and questioning decisions that they made in a moment of urgency, doing their best based on their pretrained instincts, and later armchair critics criticize the work that they have done.

3:40

Mr. Speaker, as I'm speaking, the city of Edmonton alone, I understand, has $35 million worth of litigation on the books from past losses. Unfortunately, most of those cases are so difficult and expensive to litigate that municipalities and fire departments simply settle them 10, 15, 20, 30 cents on the dollar. Now, what happens is that it offsets the costs of insurance companies paying out these claims, obviously. But what it also does is create another burden on the taxpayer, who has to foot the bill if a municipality pays for it. Bill 49 will put an end to that. It will basically say that firefighters are working in good faith and are doing everything they possibly can based on their training. Any decisions made by firefighters in good faith, from the moment that the bell rings at the fire station to the moment that they return, will not be questioned and will not be subject to litigation.

Credit has to be given where credit is due, Mr. Speaker. This bill has been endorsed by the Insurance Bureau of Canada, who did see the wisdom in stopping this practice of litigating against fire departments and municipalities and actually were kind enough to assist this province in co-writing this particular legislation. So kudos has to be given to the Insurance Bureau of Canada. Also, kudos has to be given to all the municipalities that have unanimously supported this bill and, last, but definitely not least, to firefighters in Alberta, their union, their association, and their legal department, who have also assisted in drafting this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think I need to speak at length. It is simply the right thing to do. Stop litigating against our firefighters to make sure that they don't second-guess their decisions and that they proceed doing the work that they do best and that, as in the previous piece of legislation I just introduced, they don't spend time in courthouses but actually spend time on the street fighting fires.

I thank all the members of this Legislature, too, for listening to this. I hope that they will support this bill as it is, as I said earlier, the right thing to do for our firefighters.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and join debate on Bill 49, the Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2), in second reading today. I won't take up a lot of the House's time on this one because we are supportive as well of this legislation. I think it goes in the right direction. I think the member opposite was absolutely correct in saying that this is the right thing to do.

The legislation would protect anyone working for or volunteering for a fire service organization from being liable for the loss or damage to anything when they're performing their duties in good faith. Mr. Speaker, I guess that basically what that means is that as long as they are in the process of trying to extinguish a fire, trying to rescue someone from a burning building, or whatever else falls within the scope of their duties and in good faith they feel that it's necessary to perhaps do some damage to some part of the building in order to save the rest of it, for example, they're off the hook for that because they've done what we expect firefighters to do, what they've been trained to do, and what in good faith they should do. If the firefighter were to pick up an axe on his off time and smash down the door of his neighbour's house, this bill would not cover that sort of thing, certainly.

You know, this seems absolutely reasonable with just one proviso. I think I'd like to put this on the record here, and perhaps we can talk about it a little bit more at committee stage. Less liability, I think, Mr. Speaker, means that there needs to be greater responsibility, not on the part of the firefighters themselves but on the part of the system, if you will, to make sure that our firefighters are trained to the best, most current standards and that they're using the best equipment and technology available. In many cases – and this is especially true when we're dealing with volunteer fire departments – some of that equipment is getting creakily old and stands to get a lot older, or a much higher percentage of it, I should say, stands to get creakily old over the course of the next few years. We have to I think address that issue and have to make sure that when we send our firefighters out to do their jobs in good faith, whether they be career firefighters or volunteer firefighters – and it's especially important in the case of volunteer firefighters because we rely on their volunteer efforts to perform a vital service for small communities. There is real concern behind this legislation that it's getting tougher to find volunteer firefighters because they want to fight fires; they don't want to fight lawsuits in court, plain and simple. I think we owe a duty to them to make sure that they're going into a dangerous situation, often a life-threatening situation for them and perhaps for others, with the best training, the best equipment, and the best technology that's available.

One other minor concern. Again, I think we can probably get to this in a bit of a back-and-forth at the committee stage. To me and to us it seems relatively uncontroversial to extend this protection to motor vehicle accidents because the actions of a firefighter can have considerable consequences to occupants in a badly damaged car. Maybe I missed something that the member said – and I'll go back and check the Blues – but I'm not entirely sure why that exception was made, why that wasn't covered in the bill as well. As I said, Mr. Speaker, I'll check the Blues. It may come up again in committee, and we'll talk about it a little more at that point.

In Calgary and in Edmonton a number of lawsuits have been launched by insurance companies in recent years that sought in total almost $60 million in compensation. In one case one significant lawsuit was resolved out of court. I don't think this is what any of us in this House or any of us in this province want to see happen to our firefighters. There may be building code violations to talk about. There may be all kinds of extenuating circumstances to talk about. But when fire breaks out, Mr. Speaker, we want our firefighters to be able to get there in the quickest time possible and do what they need to do to put out that fire and save lives.

In principle we will be supporting Bill 49. We may get into a little more discussion at the committee stage about the specifics of it, but on that basis I'll take my seat, and we'll see where the debate goes from here.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to Bill 49, the Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2). I want to begin by commending the Minister of Municipal Affairs and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs for bringing forward this piece of legislation.

This has been an issue that has concerned municipalities in this province for a long time. I don't think that our municipal governments and particularly our fire departments are there in order to constantly defend whatever they do in court against insurance companies. They're there to put out fires and to prevent fires and to do the best they can. They should not be a reservoir of money for insurance companies to mitigate the payment of claims, and that's really what's happened.

Whether or not municipal governments and fire departments are responsible for worsening a situation, the fact is that they act in good faith to try to protect property and protect lives, and I don't think that they should be spending large amounts of public resources in courts defending their actions and constantly having to look over their shoulders. We know that they work hard. They take risks and face dangers on behalf of Albertans and the property of Albertans.

There's another aspect here, and that has to do with volunteer fire departments, who are very important in rural areas. It's clear that the present situation is a deterrent to individuals getting involved in their local volunteer fire department. It seems to me that we all agree that a policy of encouraging people to be involved with volunteer fire departments is what's in the best public interest.

3:50

Mr. Speaker, I would rather see our firefighters fighting fires than fighting insurance companies. I think that the bill is a reasonable step that supports firefighters in the work that they do and protects municipalities from unreasonable litigation attacks by big insurance companies who use it as a means of recompensing themselves for the payments that they have to make to the people which they insure.

As such, I want to indicate that we'll certainly be supporting this particular piece of legislation, and we urge that it should be passed by this House. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.
Additional speakers?
Call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 49 read a second time]

Bill 46

Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act

[Adjourned debate November 3: Mr. Quest]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to stand and discuss Bill 46, Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act. I will be supporting this bill. It is not uncontroversial, but it will on balance probably be a good thing for Alberta citizens. I would like to discuss the bill in more detail, outline some of the advantages as well as some of the concerns that we may have to monitor here in Alberta and decide, perhaps, at some other time whether this legislation is working. Like I said right now, on balance I believe this is a decent step and one that is needed out there, but at the same time it is with some reservation.

As was noted by the introducer of the bill, other provinces have already gone down this path and introduced mandatory disclosure of gunshot and stab wounds. Those are Ontario, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and I believe one other. It's not that Alberta is the only one who has introduced this type of legislation.

At the nub of the issue is the balance for patients who are going to our emergency wards who have suffered gunshot or stab wounds, who are, first and foremost, primarily patients at the emergency ward. Let's face it. It's not without care or concern that we make laws regarding the mandatory disclosure of medical information. It has been our tradition in Canada and, in fact, it's been reinforced a long time that, generally speaking, we respect a patient and his doctor, his medical adviser's right to sort of keep this information between themselves.

Generally speaking, people have had the right and the privilege to discuss their medical conditions when they're getting medical treatment from their doctor or even other health practitioners in an open and fair manner, discussing all sorts of things that they wouldn't generally otherwise discuss with their neighbour, some things that are very private to them and that they want to keep between themselves and their medical practitioner. Let's be honest. In the case of gunshot and stab wounds most of the time these types of incidents come to the attention of our medical practitioners in the emergency ward through examples of suicide, in particular, when dealing with gunshot wounds. Many of the people who come to our hospitals have tragically decided to make attempts on their life.

In some of the information I read by some of the medical institutions who are not in favour of this legislation is the fact that most of these people are trying to seek help and trying to get healthy and trying to move on with their lives. Sometimes the concern by some of the people who have commented on this bill is that this may actually impede their way to seeking help, to seeking treatment. That is just one of those things that I think we have to continue to monitor with our implementation of this bill, whether we are going to scare away people from coming to our emergency wards, from seeking help, from getting the care from their medical practitioner.

On the other hand, let's face it. People who maybe make an attempt on their life may sometimes have a mental illness difficulty or something like that that may need some alert of the authorities for other protection, whether an incident has happened at home or whether an incident has happened at the neighbour's. You know, there are arguments on both sides of this, but again it'll come down to some careful managing on the Minister of Justice's behalf, hopefully to continue to monitor this situation, and hopefully it will be in the best interests of our society.

If we look at this, the police officers have clearly wanted this legislation. They look at this as being able to respond to some of the gang shootings that have been occurring here in Alberta and have been calling for an ability to get this information quickly and easily and with an ability to go out there and, hopefully, find the perpetrators of these heinous acts. I agree that on balance this bill allows the information to get to the police officers and, hopefully, get to an arrest of these people who have perpetrated these violent acts.

Like I said, in principle I am in favour of this bill going forward but not without some reservations and not without my two-bit advice to the hon. minister to continue to monitor this act going forward. Hopefully, an analysis of this bill in two or three years will lead to the conclusion that it was wise to bring in and that there won't be any changes that are necessary at that time, but if there are, hopefully those changes are made.

The last thing I'd like to sort of bring up is that there are some implications here that may have some Charter scrutiny. If there are some people out there in the community who wish to challenge this, there are opportunities for that to happen. I don't need to advise the hon. minister on what those are. I'm sure she is well aware of that. Hopefully, this bill will survive that scrutiny should it happen. Nevertheless, it's out there, those challenges could be made, and this bill could find itself redundant at some point in time.

Nevertheless, like I said at the beginning of this, at the outset, we're supportive of this legislation with some great reservations on the fact that it does have implications to individuals in our society seeking medical care and on their privacy.

It is with those thoughts in mind that I've appreciated the opportunity to speak to this bill this afternoon. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

4:00

The Speaker: Additional members? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, my reservations with this bill perhaps run a little deeper than for my hon. colleague from Calgary-Buffalo. My concern with this bill is that it appears fraught with a potential for unintended consequences. The premise is very simple. If someone is involved in an altercation where they might be wounded by a weapon, they go to a doctor or they go to an emergency room. That matter needs to be reported to the police, and that will help the police do their job.

On the face of it that would appear to make sense, but I think if you look a little further into this and consider different possibilities, you'll find that it could have a different outcome than what is intended by the bill. One might be that a person who needs care who might be a victim, not necessarily a perpetrator, might not go for the medical care that they need. There are lots of reasons why victims would not necessarily want to go if their injury had to be reported to the police. I think that that's the most obvious of them.

There are a number of concerns as well because it really does provide limits on people's personal freedom. It interferes with the patient and doctor relationship. What concerns me here – and, you know, those things are not absolute. I want to be clear. I don't think that the patient-doctor confidentiality issue is absolute, but I think that we need to intrude on it carefully and for well-founded reasons.

It concerns me that the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the College of Paramedics, and the Alberta Medical Association were not consulted in the drafting of this bill in this respect. I think that's a concern. They have all expressed concern about the difficult position the bill would put health care professionals in in balancing their obligations to their patients and their obligations to the police. The Alberta Medical Association also indicates that it's uncomfortable with the vagueness of the bill and the fact that the information that must be reported is under the control of regulations.

Not only that, but the Information and Privacy Commissioner has expressed concern that this bill will interfere with the provision of emergency medical care. He wants the government to clearly state what information needs to be reported. Mr. Speaker, the bill in its present form doesn't do that.

Other concerns that we have. The law has the potential to needlessly stigmatize the mentally ill and the suicidal. Although stab wounds that appear to be self-inflicted are exempted from the law, it may in fact be extremely difficult to judge that. Self-inflicted gunshots are not exempted, meaning that if a person shoots themselves, the wound must be reported. No good will come of opening up suicidal and ill people to scrutiny from the police through reporting their wounds as though they were due to criminal activity.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, health care providers are not law enforcement officers, and there's a real question as to whether or not they should be given law enforcement duties. We want to retain as much as possible the obligation of health care providers to the patients. The bill has the potential to erode patients' trust in doctors and make people less willing to seek medical attention when they really need it.

Mr. Speaker, I can see the potential for a number of circumstances in which people who require medical attention would not seek it under the provisions of this bill, and I think that would be extremely unfortunate. While the intent of the bill on the face of it is good, I think that it is not sufficiently thought out in its present form to be supported by the Assembly, so I just want to indicate that as it stands in its present form, it's not something which we can support.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. No members wish to participate?

Then the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to continue debate.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I understand where the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood is coming from. I also understand the support in general that my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo is professing. I urge the government – and I'm very pleased that the Minister of Justice is here and attending to the debate because I'm hoping that she will contribute to assure us that potential human rights, civil liberties, privacy concerns will not be violated either intentionally or accidentally with this legislation.

As I say, we need to have a very delicate balance. The intentional wounding of an individual and the victim: that information needs to be reported. Where it becomes unclear is in the case of mental illness. The idea of self-harming is just one of the many factors that are associated with types of mental illness. I'm not wanting to be picky about things here, but to what depth is a stab versus a severe cut? One of the characteristics, again, is of people cutting themselves because of their mental illness. The doctor, I would suggest, or the person treating the individual would probably have a fairly good sense as to how many times this person has shown up in emergency before. They would also have a reasonably good sense if the arm was up and the cuts on the arms were from a defensive circumstance, warding off an attack, or if the angles suggested that they were self-mutilation. That's where the balance has to take place. To what extent is the doctor required to report these incidents?

We're fortunate in Canada that we don't have the same type of gun availability or gun desirability as our southern counterparts, but we still have a number of klutzy people who by uncarefully cleaning their guns or through unsafe storage have the potential of wounding themselves. That's beyond the individuals who do it with deliberate action in the hopes, unfortunately, of ending their lives. It's not a black-and-white issue. That's why we rely on the professionalism of medical experts to do the determinations. We don't want to limit the professional judgment of doctors in these particular circumstances.

4:10

Both the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood and the hon. member representing Calgary-Buffalo, a lawyer, have talked about the delicate nature of doctor-patient privilege. Earlier today in this House when Bill 58 was mentioned, they mentioned that there would not be eavesdropping on the discussions a lawyer had with his incarcerated client. That would not be subject to listening in or overt scrutiny. We have to be careful, as we say. We want the best for society, but we have to balance what's best for society with individual civil liberties.

One of the concerns I have, too, is the changes that are happening with regard to, for example, the closure of approximately 250 beds or thereabouts in the Alberta Hospital here in Edmonton. The police forces, the EMS, the emergency physicians have expressed concerns about releasing individuals into the community without the necessary support and treatment. These individuals who have been under the guidance of medical professionals at the Alberta Hospital are among the most likely to do some self-inflicted damage. That damage to themselves is in the realm of the patient and the doctor. It's not necessarily something that requires the involvement of the police. They need professional psychiatric or psychological treatment, and that fine line as to who has that information passed on and the privacy is, to a degree, a concern.

Now, I appreciated the honourable mover of Bill 46, the MLA for Strathcona, indicating when it would be that the doctor or the medical professional would have to do the reporting. He made it quite clear, Mr. Speaker – and I'm pleased that he did – that the doctor wasn't to drop his scalpel or whatever instruments he was using to remove the bullet to, you know, dial the police force. In other words, his or her recognized professionalism supersedes the need to go from doctor to informant, or information provider, so as there's not any prejudicial language being used here.

Now, when I have had the misfortune of having to show up at the emergency, I cannot remember a time when there weren't police officers there. The police officers were frequently with somebody who had been beaten up or who had been involved in an accident. My sense of things is that there probably is a police officer at each of the emergency hospitals for a fair amount of the time. The police officer, just in the general way of making the rounds, I would think, would be able to access files and see the nature of the patients, specifically those where there was some type of violence involved. They could find out that information without necessarily slowing the treatment of a wounded individual down.

Depending on what day – or it seems that it happens more in the evening – emergency professionals are taxed to the maximum in terms of providing treatment. They're racing to do their professional best from situation to situation. Adding the extra reporting responsibility has to be balanced with, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona mentioned, their first duty, providing the medical support and treatment.

So while we are in agreement with the notion of reporting gunshot and stab wounds, we just urge the Minister of Justice to tread carefully, to not remove the protective nature of a doctor whose primary business is the Hippocratic oath and to do no harm. Combined with those two thoughts, their primary purpose is the treatment of patients as opposed to the reporting to police officers. This is important, but I would just urge caution so that doctors' civil rights and their patients' civil rights are not compromised.

Thank you very much for those considerations.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Additional speakers?

Shall I call on the hon. Member for Strathcona to close the debate?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 46 read a second time]

Bill 48

Crown's Right of Recovery Act

[Adjourned debate November 3: Mr. Liepert]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The way the court systems are set up, judges have the opportunity to decide on compensation for victims of crime. They have an opportunity for the person who perpetrated the crime to make restitution to the individual that was harmed. They have all kinds of legal precedent with which to make these decisions. When we as legislators set out the laws, which judges and lawyers then have to operate under, we have to be very careful that what we're putting forward as a law can be maintained.

Now, a person injuring themselves while committing a crime and then having to pay back whatever the cost of their treatment was sounds fairly reasonable except that we operate in a universal health care belief that, again, going back to the Hippocratic oath, a doctor through his professional oath and commitment is expected to provide that kind of treatment regardless of how the injury occurred. Therefore, there's a degree of concern as to, one, under what circumstances that bill is to be paid. There is the concern of how the person who is potentially incarcerated is going to have the funds to pay their medical bills when the rate which they receive for, say, working in a prison shop or whatever is such a small amount. Part of the decision, then, is: does the person get kept in jail longer in order to pay their bills, or do we try to encourage them to get counselling within the prison system, to develop a skill within the prison system, and then do we release them and garnishee, I think the term is, their wages once they're out?

4:20

This sort of crosses over the victims of crime legislation to a degree because these individuals, particularly the criminals who get caught, aren't the brightest bunch, and the notion that they have managed to save large sums of money and can pay the bills is frequently not the case. The majority of criminals are people who, based on their poor decision-making, have gone to crime. There are obviously a few exceptions, but being able to pay is a concern.

Then there is the extended slippery slope argument with regard to smokers. Because they have an addiction, should they be paying for the complete extent of their treatment? If you take it a step further, individuals who, through their reduced gene pool, have a series of illnesses that are hereditary: to what extent are they responsible for paying their bills? I don't want to take this too far in terms of extending what is the principle of a criminal paying for their own treatment, but we have to be careful how far this gets taken.

Now, with regard to the second part of Bill 48 and the suing of tobacco companies, I'm all in favour of that, except that – we've talked about the Hippocratic oath – we've got to be careful that we're not hypocritical when we launch our suits. Now, hopefully there's someone in this House – I see that the hon. President of the Treasury Board is here. Up until recently we had over $600 million invested in tobacco stocks. It's going to be rather hard for us to sue a tobacco company while still maintaining their stocks. As I say, that is a concern.

Mr. Speaker, I know that there are other members of my caucus who would like to participate further in debate, so if I may, I would like to adjourn debate on Bill 48 at this point.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair shall now call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 31

Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered? The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's my pleasure to rise today in Committee of the Whole to speak to Bill 31, the Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. I recall that earlier in this year we had a bit of debate. I wanted to take the opportunity to thank everybody who has been united in support of this bill.

As I mentioned, the Rules of Court are currently going through some major revisions. These rules, which have not been comprehensively upgraded since 1968, govern the practice and procedure of the Court of Queen's Bench and the Court of Appeal in Alberta. Many may ask why we need major revisions. I've gone through these rules several times throughout my past career. I remember that there are rules such as rule 16.1(1) being for facsimile service of documents. Way back when, apparently, there were no fax machines. It's really important that we take a look at these rules and actually go through them every generation or so. Alberta Justice has been working with the Alberta Law Reform Institute, ALRI, the Rules of Court Committee, and other stakeholders to simplify, update, and implement the Rules of Court.

Mr. Chair, the House amendments being introduced today will implement recommendations made after Bill 31 was introduced and are necessary to make provisions in the statutes consistent with the terminology and procedures used in the new rules. Implementing the new rules requires consequential amendments to many statutes in order to reflect the different procedures and terminology used in the new rules. I'll give you an example. Under the new rules it would not be necessary to specify in an act the kind of application being made to the court. As a result, you'd see phrases in acts such as application by notice of motion, application by originating notice, or many lawyers would refer to it as application by originating notice of motion. This is all being simplified and sent into one, quote, application.

Mr. Chair, terminology will also be updated and be more comprehensive. For example, if an act states that a person may be examined on their affidavit, the word "examined" will be replaced by "questioned."

The Chair: Do you have an amendment?

Mr. Denis: At the end, yes.

Another important feature of this bill is that it limits the number of years a nonjudicial member can serve on the Rules of Court Committee and limits the number of times they can be reappointed. This will encourage a balance between the renewal and experience on the committee, which makes recommendations to the minister on the amendments to the Rules of Court.

Mr. Chair, the bill will also relocate provisions relating to the enforcement of money judgments from the Rules of Court to the Civil Enforcement Act, the end result being that all substantive provisions relating to the enforcement of money judgments will be located in the Civil Enforcement Act and the accompanying regulation.

This bill will also make housekeeping and other consequential amendments to various statutes and add new rules.

Again, this is important legislation for Albertans. The new Rules of Court will contribute to a fair, accessible, timely, and cost-effective civil justice system, which will ultimately increase access to justice for Albertans.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Those are my comments.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I can't imagine anyone being opposed to reforming the Alberta Rules of Court in order to make the litigation process as fair, timely, and cost-effective as possible. I want to point out that I tried to move a motion to accomplish a similar action as Bill 31 puts forward. That was a motion that was accepted unanimously in this House, and that was Motion 511, calling for a unified family court. It was amended to call for a unified family court process.

I have gone to court to understand better the family law process. While the Family Law Amendment Act attempted to speed up the legal process, I have yet to see in the number of individuals who have come into my office, because I am the critic for Children and Youth Services, anything in terms of speed, efficiency, cost-effectiveness, or in the case of children and youth the whole notion of the best interests of the child.

4:30

Possibly Bill 31 will have overreaching ramifications toward justice for children and their families, but I haven't seen it happening. I have concerns that families are being separated from their children. I have concerns that advocates, lawyers who are representing families wishing to be reunited with their children, are prevented from in a timely manner producing evidence and argument that would support their claim for reuniting their family.

A concern I have as well was brought to my attention on October 5 by lawyers who work for children and for families who have had the misfortune of having their children apprehended, who pointed out to me that when a person is alleged to have committed an offence, that offence remains as part of their record although it has been proven in court that the allegations were false. The speedy resolution of a court case should indicate that when a person is falsely charged and proven to be innocent, then there should be a mechanism within the court statutes to erase any evidence of a false allegation rather than having this false allegation follow the individual for the rest of their life and interfere with their seeking a job or the reunite of their children within their families.

If Bill 31 can accomplish what it's intended to do and, as I say, have implications or set precedents for how the justice system works for children and their families, then I'll not only support it; I'll stand up and cheer. As I say, the Family Law Amendment Act didn't accomplish what it was intended to do. We have Court of Queen's Bench, for example, dealing with divorce, and just about every other issue that involves a child is dealt with at the provincial court. I would urge, in terms of creating legislation, moving towards that unified family court process because I believe that what Bill 31 is all about has the same reasoning as to why we, like so many other provinces, need to have a unified family court. It's been established for years in other provinces, and I believe it would lead to a considerably quicker and better resolution of the best interests of the child if this were to be realized in Alberta.

I'm in support of Bill 31. I come at it from an outside observer who has become very involved with trying to champion not only what is in the best interests of the child but what is in the best interests of the child and their families.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. At this time I'd like to move a government amendment to Bill 31, which I will pass to the page.

The Chair: We'll take a few moments while the pages pass out the amendment. Hon. members, this amendment shall be known as amendment A1.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont on amendment A1.

Mr. Denis: I think I made most of my comments earlier, Mr. Chair. Thank you.

The Chair: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on amendment A1?

Seeing none, the chair shall now put the question on amendment A1.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Chair: We shall now get back to Bill 31 with the amendment. Any hon. member wish to speak on Bill 31?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question on Bill 31.

Mr. Hehr: Are you talking about the amendment or the bill?

Mr. Liepert: The bill.

The Chair: On the bill. We already passed the amendment.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo on Bill 31 as amended.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair, for your patience and willingness to put up with, I guess, my inability to hear you three times say that we were going back to discussing the bill. I thank the hon. minister of health for reminding me in the very calm and succinct manner that he is known for. He let me know that, and I thank him.

Just some brief comments on Bill 31, the Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. It is a bill that is very long overdue, one that has probably had many people in the legal community singing this government's praises in that it is finally seeing some changes to it. As indicated, the Rules of Court had been in practice or stayed exactly the same since 1968. No doubt, I have heard from legal practitioners that many of the changes that they have heard about and, in fact, have looked at since the government introduced these bills are going to be welcome additions for the legal community.

I do note that this bill was worked on quite extensively by many members of the legal community under the rules of court project, that was in existence probably for five or six years, that diligently looked over the entire Rules of Court, which is a large, voluminous book with many different sections and many different principles at play, yet they sat down and went to meeting after meeting, long day after long day for many years and came up with rules of court that will no doubt allow for lawyers and practitioners alike to more easily practise their trade. It will also allow things to happen in a more timely and efficient manner.

4:40

Some of the outcomes of this bill are the codification of the rules using a plain-language approach to law and legal terminology. This will also help those self-represented litigants who find themselves in our legal system. This principle will no doubt ease their transition when a lawyer opposite or a judge references a rule or a regulation in the Rules of Court. They will at least be able to understand it. There will also be a major effort to ensure that the rules and their application are isolated from items that are more appropriately addressed in the Judicature Act or the Court of Queen's Bench Act or other acts. This bill ceases to consolidate rule-making powers in the Judicature Act, as I mentioned, as presently there are several acts that provide sufficient authority or contain rule-making power.

Another thing that is now present in the new rules is that the rules will no longer have taxing officers as this has been removed from the act and substituted with the term "review officer" or "assessment officer," which again looks to more plain language. It also codifies the powers and responsibilities associated with the enforcement of money judgment in the rules.

It also makes mandatory that parties to any litigation seek alternative dispute resolution before they're able to obtain a trial date. I believe this is a very good step that will save those people involved in litigation a great many costs, as the most significant costs incurred in a legal suit, of course, are in the trial phase, where both lawyers are present for long and arduous days in front of a judge. If these things can be avoided by going to alternative dispute resolution, well, then, that's a great thing. Making it mandatory may allow for some situations where cooler heads can prevail and a settlement reached before it hits the courtroom floor.

The changes also incorporate some modifications to the workings of the rules committee, specifically concerning employment for nonjudicial members of the committee. The effects of the new rules will be to limit the sitting times for the three nonjudicial members and limit their reappointment to one extra term.

These again, like I said, are welcome changes that the legal community will no doubt be very happy with.

In conclusion, Mr. Chair, I would like to again thank all of the people involved in the rules of court project for their long and diligent process in revising the Rules of Court, which could not have been an easy task. It could not have been easy to agree on all the many changes and amendments that were proposed therein. I would in particular like to make note of a friend of mine, Ms Hilary Stout, with whom I had the pleasure of practising law at Fraser Milner Casgrain some years ago. I believe she is currently practising at a firm in Calgary. I have the pleasure of running into her about the fourth or fifth day of the Calgary Stampede every summer, when the lawyers and the Calgary Bar Association have their Stampede party.

Mr. Denis: I was there.

Mr. Hehr: Yes, hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, I did spot your presence there. I believe the hon. Minister of Justice was also there. We were there discussing the law with people and how our court system could be done better. Most people would not associate that with the Calgary Stampede. But, I tell you, at that one tent on that one afternoon much of that was being discussed on a hot summer day.

Anyway, thank you very much for giving me the time to speak to this in Committee of the Whole phase. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on Bill 31 as amended.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Speaking to Bill 31 as amended. When I first rose, I indicated my support for what Bill 31 purports to do in terms of improving the litigation process in terms of making it more fair, timely, and cost-effective.

I, again, want to bring up a circumstance that arose after meeting with the trial lawyers' association for youth and families. We are very aware of Justice Côté's concerns and contempt of court charges that were filed against an employee of Children and Youth Services, Director Ouellet. Now, Director Ouellet prevented a child being returned to the foster parent for over six months. You'd think that when Justice Côté laid out his concerns over Children and Youth Services defying his recommendations and not returning the child to the foster parent, that would have been the end of it. Unfortunately, Mr. Chair, that wasn't the end of it, and Children and Youth Services continued to appeal the process, to put all kinds of legal impediments in front of that child being returned to the foster parent, who had looked after that child very well, as the justice noted, for the larger number of years of that young child's life.

When that child was returned to the foster parent, the foster parent had none of the rights of a parent reinstated to her. The child was returned in a disheveled, dirty state. The foster parent had no ability to advocate on behalf of the child, to seek medical assistance should the child need assistance. So the lawyer had to go back to court again to gain that small but critical right that a parent has to seek medical services for their child.

Although Justice Côté slammed Director Ouellet and, in slamming Director Ouellet, slammed the way in which Children and Youth Services dealt with this particular case, the case continues to be appealed by Children and Youth Services, making the day-to-day life of that mother hell and compromising what is, and I quote, in the best interests of the child.

If Bill 31 can address these issues, where because a court judgment does not go in favour of a government ministry, the ministry puts every legal blockade in its quiver of opportunities to prevent justice and the best interests of the child happening, then, again, I'll be a large cheerleader for Bill 31.

4:50

When Justice Côté brought out the contempt of court, I had hoped that he had basically fired a rifle into the air that would warn all front-line individuals about following the dictates of a justice when it comes to contact with a child. So many people have come into my office and said that the social worker defied a court order to provide timely access that was given by a judge, where they did not have the child available for a family member or directly interested party at the time which was ordered by the judge, or they basically threatened the parent with further handcuffing circumstances if the parent objected to their ignoring of the court order for access. Again, whatever will help get rid of the convoluted chaos that so many parents and grandparents and children are caught up in within the legal system.

I applaud the member for bringing this bill ahead, and I wish it full speed, and I'll throw in Godspeed.

The Chair: Hon. members on Bill 31 as amended?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[The clauses of Bill 31 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 49

Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I caught a bit of the debate earlier on this particular piece of legislation, and I wanted to get on the record with this because there are a number of my constituents that will be affected, all of my constituents in a way, I suppose, because they all have fire coverage. A number of them specifically are firefighters, and there are a handful of those sorts of facilities as well as police stations in my constituency, so I wanted to make sure that this bill successfully passed through the Legislature. It seems like a pretty obvious thing we should be doing, an important gesture to make to the people who stand on guard for us every day as firefighters and police officers and others.

The effect of the bill will be to protect members of fire service organizations from liability of actions that they are performing in their duties, assuming they are performing them in good faith, and I think we would all agree that's a good thing. We don't want our firefighters racing off to a fire having in the back of their minds that, gee, they're going to be up for a risk of a liability suit of some kind should they cause some damage or injury in the course of pursuing their job. It's a bit surprising to most Albertans, I think, that in fact that is how things stand, that fire services as corporate entities and sometimes firefighters as individuals can be named in lawsuits by insurance companies in particular if the insurance company feels it can squeeze an extra dollar out of that sort of process.

I think everybody in this Assembly and probably just about everybody in Alberta, outside of the property insurance industry, understands that we want a fair situation for our firefighters. We want to treat them with respect because, after all, we are asking an awful lot from them. We're asking them to commit their time and energy and put their health and occasionally their lives at risk. We don't need them to also be putting their financial situations at risk as well, and we don't need our municipal governments or volunteer firefighters at risk either. They need all the resources they have to make sure their equipment is brought up to date and that their training is adequate, not to be out there fighting lawsuits from insurance companies and paying settlements.

I think it's worth noting in here, Mr. Chairman, that there is a fair bit of evidence and concern that the state of equipment and training that firefighters have in Alberta and in Canada needs some attention, that a lot of equipment, particularly in volunteer firefighting forces, is out of date and is rapidly getting further behind date and that a lot of the people who are involved and committing their time out of personal time as volunteers need their training to be constantly upgraded. So I'd much rather that the efforts of our fire chiefs and our local councils and our firefighters and everybody else involved was focused not on issues of liability but on issues of training and equipment and quality of service.

I think this piece of legislation will help achieve that, Mr. Chairman, so I'm glad to see it brought forward. I would hope that we might see further legislation in this same spirit brought forward in the future addressing other related issues such as liability risk for firefighters or police officers at automobile crashes, which I don't believe is adequately addressed even in this legislation. I'm pleased to support this bill. I think it's likely to go through the Assembly quite cleanly, judging from the comments of others, and I think that it'll be a better Alberta because of the work we're doing on this.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The hon. mover of this bill will not be accustomed to the praise I am about to pass on to him, and he may require the services of the fire department to resuscitate him. Hon. member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, you are following in the hallowed fire halls of a predecessor, Richard Magnus. Firemen are extremely grateful for the legislation that your predecessor has brought into this House in terms of recognition of job hazards and a series of cancers. Richard Magnus, the former MLA for Calgary-North Hill, also brought in the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, which recognized the potential dangers for not only firemen but also for police officers and a variety of public service individuals and the dangers they face on the highways.

My best man 40 years ago at my wedding was a firefighter. His name is Rob Tomlinson. Rob recently retired from the Calgary fire department as a captain. In discussions that I had with Rob, he talked about some of the dangers that he faced. One particular circumstance that came to mind was a fire in a restaurant. There were so many false walls because of all the renovations that had taken place that trying to put out that fire was next to impossible. He talked very graphically about the phones literally melting and running off the wall. So protection of our firefighters and allowing them to get on with their work without fear of litigation is absolutely important.

5:00

A point I would like to make with regard to my support for Bill 49 is the need for firefighters who suffer from posttraumatic stress to have their concerns taken seriously by the Workers' Compensation Board. I have had an individual come into my office who lost his family, lost his home, lost every possession he had, and was living out of his car because the Workers' Compensation Board was not recognizing his posttraumatic stress. Well, thanks to the Alberta

Ombudsman, who intervened on his behalf, things have changed. He hasn't got back his family, he hasn't got back his house, but he's got back to a large extent his sense of dignity, which was taken away from him when he was released from the Calgary Fire Department.

In a recent meeting with WCB I asked if they had any statistics on front-line individuals like firemen or policemen whose cases in the WCB of posttraumatic stress were closed because of suicide, and they indicated they had no such statistics.

We have to recognize the valuable job that these front-line workers do intervening, risking their lives for our well-being. Bill 49 takes us that much closer to recognizing the worth of not only the firefighter who is fortunate to be employed by a city but all of those volunteer firefighters in rural communities throughout Alberta who every time they leave the station have the possibility of confronting unknown dangers and who lay their lives on the line for our betterment.

In summation, I thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs for bringing forward Bill 49. I'm pleased to see that his heart has not created such palpitations, that he's not under stress that would require a firefighter to intervene for his personal well-being. But he knows they would be there.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'd just like to speak briefly on this issue as many members have canvassed a number of things, which I will as well. This legislation is good legislation. I, like the Member for Calgary-Varsity, would like to congratulate its mover, the MLA for Edmonton-Castle Downs, who has brought this forward. It's good legislation.

What it does is allow for our firefighters, whether they're employed with a firefighting organization or whether they're volunteer firefighters, to be protected from lawsuits as long as they're doing the good work associated with their responsibilities as firemen. This seems like a reasonable thing for us to be doing. People who are involved in these types of professions should not be subject to lawsuits because of the nature of their job. This is probably legislation that's been somewhat overdue. I'm glad to see that we have moved that and given recognition to the firefighters and the protection they need. Let's face it; it goes without saying that firefighters do honourable and capable work on behalf of all Albertans, and we are in gratitude for the work that they do on a daily basis.

I think the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview was also correct to point out that this type of legislation should also be extended to other incidents for firefighters, perhaps when they're investigating motor vehicle accidents, or when police officers are trying to assist people who have been involved in motor vehicle accidents. This seems like a logical extension of this type of reasoning that should go forward in those instances, and I would encourage possibly the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs to bring forward this type of legislation in the near future as well.

Just as a side note, it looks like lawsuits have been launched in the neighbourhood of $60 million against firefighters with regard to some of their work, so there's no doubt that this type of legislation is necessary. I'm glad we have brought it forward at this time.

I have nothing else to say on this. I appreciate the time given to me to speak to this very commendable legislation. Thank you very much.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Very, very briefly, just to get it on the record, because the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs and I had a conversation outside the House about this, if I could just refer back to a point that I made during second reading debate on Bill 49 on the question of subsection (2) of this bill not applying in the case of an accident involving a motor vehicle. I believe I said something at the time to the effect that it would seem rather uncontroversial to extend it to motor vehicle accidents because the actions of a firefighter can have considerable consequences for the occupants of a badly damaged car. I was thinking at the time in terms of the things that firefighters do when they respond to a car accident: everything from extricating an accident victim from a badly damaged car to providing advanced life support to providing first-responder first aid in very many cases.

What I would like to do, Mr. Chairman, is just give the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs the opportunity for clarification on that point because I think I was reading it wrong, and there may be others in the House that were reading it wrong. I think he can clarify this. Once he does, I'll be quite happy to support this bill.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, first of all, Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank all members of the opposition for fully endorsing the bill. As far as I can tell, based on the speeches, we can perhaps anticipate unanimous support for this piece of legislation, which makes me feel really good.

With respect to the Member for Calgary-Varsity I don't know what to say. You know, when opposition supports my bill, I'm thinking: hmm, maybe I'm doing something wrong. But when he so overtly supports my bill, I'm thinking: "I'm missing something here. There's something in there. I'm definitely doing something wrong." Maybe we'll figure it out later, but in all sincerity I thank all of you for supporting it.

You brought up a name that is well known to many of us here in this Chamber, and that's one of our past members, Mr. Richard Magnus. Indeed, he deserves a large part of the credit for this legislation being on the floor and for many other pieces before because he has, in a sense, as a legislator adopted firefighters in this province and has recognized some of the needs they have and has managed to pass them into legislation. I would want the record to show that, indeed, he has sensitized me to the issues of not only firefighters but all emergency responders, including police. Since I have nothing but respect and admiration for these particular civil servants, I'm sort of picking up the torch and taking it from him. So thank you.

There were comments made relative to the equipment and training of our firefighters. This is not the forum to argue it, but I spend a great deal of time with firefighters, and they tell me that, actually, some of the equipment that is being made available to them in Alberta is some of the best available anywhere else in the world. They were recently showcasing to me heat-sensitive cameras that are now readily available to firefighters. When they go in darkness and smoke into a fire, they can see, almost like in daylight, everything that happens before them. These cameras cost, I understand, some $35,000 a unit, and every fire station has several of them. In some jurisdictions in Canada and the United States none are available. Is there room for improvement? Probably. But I think we're doing quite well both with equipment and training.

5:10

Now, training is very important because when these firefighters arrive at the scene of a fire, very often they rely on their instinct. There isn't time to sit down and plan things out. They are trained, and their instincts are trained. Their instincts most often, if not always, are right. They just instinctually do the right things, so training is very important here. That's where the good faith part comes in. You know, when firefighters arrive at a scene – and it doesn't have to be a fire; we're focusing on fires here, but it could be a car accident because usually they are the first responders – they act in good faith. That means they act based on their training. They don't reserve any effort or any equipment or any resources to accomplish the job that has been given to them, and they definitely don't put themselves before the needs of the victim or the task that is at hand. That, in my mind, is good faith.

If we're to encapsulate the meaning of this bill, if one ever needs to interpret it from Hansard for the purposes of some judicial reviews or judges' considerations, the purpose of this bill is simple. From the moment the bell rings in the fire station and the firefighters take off in their vehicle to the moment they return back to the fire station, as long as they acted in good faith, they ought not to be subject to any litigation for negligence.

Now, there is one exception, and a member of the opposition, Calgary-Currie, identified that perhaps the wording is ambiguous, so it's important that we put it in Hansard as well for the purposes of interpretation. Subsection (3), that he referred to, refers to a motor vehicle accident in the event that firefighters while travelling in their own motor vehicles were in a car accident. Obviously, that would be subject to tort litigation, and if they were, indeed, liable according to the motor vehicle act, then other insurance policies would be involved. It does not pertain to them extracting victims or attending to a car accident as first responders.

Mr. Chairman, I thank everybody for supporting this bill. I think there is something – I'm not sure what term to use – distasteful about suing firefighters or any emergency first responders when they do what they do for us. I don't imagine most of us in this Chamber can imagine the risk that they take from day to day. For someone or some entity to then litigate against them simply for financial gain – because there's no other gain from it – is distasteful, to say the least.

At the same time credit has to be given to insurance companies. As I indicated earlier in second reading, the Insurance Bureau of Canada has actually endorsed this piece of legislation, and they have actually provided their resources in the drafting of this legislation. So insurers that are under the umbrella of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, which we know are not all because the Insurance Bureau of Canada doesn't represent all the insurance companies in Alberta and in Canada, have endorsed it. They saw the wisdom of this particular legislation.

Now we have the support of municipalities, we have the support of firefighters, we have the support of the insurance industry, and I hope to gain the support of you, members of this Legislature. Once we pass it, not only will it result in the benefit of not having firefighters in front of judges and/or lawyers in examinations for discovery, but it will also result in a financial gain. As I indicated earlier, there's about $35 million right now in Edmonton and I imagine some more in Calgary and it's fair to assume that outside of Edmonton and Calgary the numbers would be probably equal. So it's a win-win-win for everybody in Alberta.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman. Unless anybody else wishes to speak to this bill – there is, I see – I would otherwise ask for a vote.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I did not complete my comments with regard to firefighters and posttraumatic stress, and I want to pass on a concern that I have about front-line workers in Alberta, whether they be firemen as this bill deals with, whether they be municipal police, RCMP, or so on. We don't have a program that deals specifically with front-line-worker posttraumatic stress within this province. The federal government has a support program – in fact, it operates out of the Calgary-Varsity constituency – where support is provided to military service personnel coming back from a circumstance that caused them to have posttraumatic stress. To a degree it works for federally employed RCMP, but for police officers, firefighters, EMS who witness horrific circumstances that can terribly undermine their psyche and their mental well-being, we don't have programs to provide them with the psychological assistance provincially that is the equivalent of the federal program.

As I stand to support Bill 49 and recognizing that we're relieving firefighters of a potential part of their stress – that is, concentrating strictly on the rescue and the fighting of fires – I want to fight for those firefighters and for police officers, whether they be municipal or whether they be sheriffs or whether they be RCMP, to have the opportunity to receive the psychological support provincially that is being provided federally.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question on Bill 49.

[The clauses of Bill 49 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 46

Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, discussion? The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased to provide the committee with information about Bill 46, the Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act. This legislation is about the safety of Albertans. Gunshot and stab wounds pose a public safety concern, and this bill identifies and addresses this important matter. Reporting gunshot and stab wounds to police allows them to go to the scene to protect the public from possible escalation of violence or retaliatory measures. Likewise, police can protect the public in cases where the perpetrator returns to the scene or to the victim.

Bill 46 also gives health practitioners the clarity they've asked for regarding when disclosure of information is required and what information they should provide to police when individuals are treated for gunshot or stab wounds. Currently under the Health Information Act health care practitioners, including physicians, nurses, and paramedics, have the discretion to report gunshot or knife wounds in limited circumstances, but they're not required to do so.

Back in 2004 an all-party committee reviewed the Health Information Act and recommended that Alberta consider stand-alone legislation to clarify circumstances under which health care practitioners should disclose such information to police. Hundreds of stakeholders, including health agencies, emergency responders, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, were involved in those consultations. As a result of those consultations the act is a good balance between a patient's right to privacy of health information and law enforcement's need for investigative information with respect to public safety. Police would only be provided with limited information; that is, the patient's name, location of the health facility, and the type of wound, not the health details. Police are then bound by privacy legislation that clearly details how they must handle information they receive during their duties.

Bill 46 clearly lays out what's expected of health care professionals. It defines what type of health facilities will be required to report. The legislation also describes what constitutes a stab wound. For example, in cases where a health care facility or an EMT believes a stab wound to be self-inflicted or unintentionally inflicted, as raised by the Member for Calgary-Varsity in second, there would be no need to report. This would also prevent stigmatizing or criminalizing mentally ill persons and eliminate unnecessary reporting for those who have accidentally cut themselves.

5:20

Mr. Chairman, this bill provides liability protection for health care professionals while ensuring there is no undue burden created for them. There is no extra paperwork as disclosures are to be made orally and only after it's reasonably possible to do so without interfering with the patient's treatment.

During second reading there was some concern raised that health care professionals would be doing police work. Just to reiterate: name, location of the facility, and type of wound. That's it. Other provinces have similar legislation, including Ontario, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, and it's working well in those jurisdictions. There have been no constitutional challenges and no reports of people being afraid to seek treatment in those provinces.

Mr. Chairman, Albertans deserve to live, work, and raise their families in safe and secure communities. This legislation is another step towards that goal.

Thank you.

The Chair: Any hon. member wish to speak on Bill 46? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: All right. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciated the comments from the Member for Strathcona. The background of this bill is actually very interesting. It does raise some kind of serious ethical questions that do need to be treated with care because we over and over are at a phase in our society where we're compromising confidentiality. We're intruding into things like doctor-patient relationships, and there's an incremental effect to this. We take these things along in little steps, and each little step of the way seems sensible in its own right, but when you add them all up, you realize that something bigger is unfolding here, that a larger trend is under way. I think it's that larger trend we need to be alert to.

For example, there are legal requirements for physicians to report suspected cases of child abuse. Now, who's going to argue with that? It seems like a sensible step to take although it does compromise the patient-physician relationship. Now we're looking at another compromise in that relationship, which would be mandatory reporting under some circumstances of information where there is a gunshot wound involved. I suspect that the public doesn't have very much trouble with this legislation, and I think that there are sufficient safeguards in place here that when the chips are down, I'm not going to have trouble with it either and that as a caucus, you know, we'll follow the lead of our esteemed critic in this area, the Member for Calgary-Buffalo. I don't want to speak for him, but I think that we'll probably end up supporting this piece of legislation.

I'm not convinced it's going to have a lot of impact on crime rates. I don't think we're going to see a dramatic increase in the percentage of serious crimes that are solved. The information I have is that the majority of gunshot wounds are actually self-inflicted or accidentally inflicted. In the matter of self-inflicted what we really need isn't police work but psychiatric treatment, most likely, and in the second case, accidental wounds, we probably need better gun training and maybe even stricter gun control. Who's to say? But that, thankfully, is a debate for another time.

Mr. Chairman, I've read some of the background on this. I've read – you know what? – an interesting column by a columnist for the Edmonton Journal, Paula Simons. She takes issue with the bill. There's been some interesting analysis done in the Canadian Medical Association Journal and more widely. I think that when all is said and done, if we proceed prudently, this is a bill that from time to time is going to make police work easier and more successful, and after all I think that's a good idea.

I would like to move adjournment of debate on this bill. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Chair: Shall progress on Bill 46 be reported when the committee rises? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report Bill 31, the Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, and Bill 49, the Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2), along with progress on Bill 46, Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 49. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 31. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 46. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Alberta Capital Bonds

16. Ms Evans moved:

Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

[Debate adjourned October 29: Dr. Brown speaking]

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was commencing some remarks last Thursday, and I will continue with the remarks that I'd intended to give at that time. As I said, Alberta is simply one part of Canada, and Canada is part of an increasingly global world economy. In view of the global economic recession, we have experienced low commodity prices, and our province certainly hasn't been immune to the effects of the recession. Make no mistake about it, governments, no matter how large or how responsive they may be, cannot by themselves control the world-wide economy. However, Albertans can be assured that their government has taken action and will continue to take action to address the financial situation and the needs of Albertans.

The government, led by our Premier, has a plan for the future, and our plan is known as The Way Forward. It will reassure Albertans that their government understands the priorities. It includes a number of points: keeping an eye on spending, using savings to fund critical programs, maintaining low taxes and the business environment, making sure that we're globally competitive, and making sure that infrastructure spending is maintained to encourage jobs and prepare Alberta for the future. Unlike other parties, who rigidly state that they would never allow a deficit, our plan will keep Alberta moving forward by maintaining essential social programs, including health care, education, and help for seniors, disabled persons, and the less fortunate. At the same time it would limit our spending so that we can balance our budget within three years. Mr. Speaker, this is the fiscally responsible way forward.

5:30

One of the most important measures of fiscal responsibility is getting value for taxpayer money. Today, Mr. Speaker, building infrastructure projects provides value for money to an extent that we have not seen in a number of years. Costs for construction projects in Alberta are more competitive and up to 35 per cent less than what had been projected just a year ago. Alberta capital bonds would provide an investment in infrastructure projects that are a priority to Albertans. That is why building infrastructure is a central component of our government's plan, but it is also important to be fiscally responsible in the way that government finances infrastructure projects.

Mr. Speaker, let me iterate a few of the economic benefits which would accrue to investors in Alberta capital bonds and to their province. First of all, these bonds will be backed by the resources of Alberta and Alberta's triple-A credit rating. This credit rating has been earned because of the sound financial management of this Progressive Conservative government. Alberta capital bonds would be among the safest investments in the world. With no net debt, billions in savings, and among the brightest economic forecasts in the world, it has been globally recognized that Alberta is a model for fiscal responsibility. In addition, our low tax regime has made it known world-wide that Alberta is among the best places to invest now and in the future.

Secondly, Alberta bonds would encourage Albertans to save. Albertans and people across North America in recent years have been saving less and spending more. In fact, easy credit policies meant that many consumers overextended themselves and didn't save at all. That was part of the responsibility for the downturn in the economy. Purchasing Alberta capital bonds, with their security and knowing that they will support important public projects, will be an effective method for Albertans to save for the future. The bonds would encourage Albertans to keep their investment money right here in Alberta, where it would be used to benefit Albertans. By keeping money in this province and through the construction of funded capital projects, these bonds will act as an effective economic driver.

Perhaps the most compelling arguments in favour of issuing capital bonds are job creation and building Alberta infrastructure which will support future economic growth. In my view it would be simplistic and economically irresponsible to step on the brakes and stop building capital projects because of a decline in resource revenues. In Alberta we have a pool of highly qualified tradespeople, and by continuing to invest in infrastructure, we will keep those qualified workers here in Alberta and keep Albertans working. The funds from these bonds will become available for public projects immediately, helping with our economic recovery. The funds will create jobs in the construction, engineering, natural resource, and other sectors that are involved in building schools, roads, health care facilities, seniors' facilities, and other infrastructure priorities. Mr. Speaker, Merit Contractors, Canada's largest open shop construction association, has commended this government for their long-term and strategic approach to capital spending. They believe that this alternative financing method will help deal with the backlog of infrastructure projects that have developed during Alberta's rapid growth.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, our Progressive Conservative government has a plan, and this motion for Alberta capital bonds clearly fits into The Way Forward. It is the right plan and the fiscally responsible plan. If we stick to it, we will recover from our economic challenges better than ever. Over the past decade the population of Alberta has grown by 20 per cent, a tribute to the sound policies brought in by your PC government. We expect that Alberta will continue to attract people to move here from other provinces and other countries. With our government's plan we will have infrastructure in place ready for the thousands of people projected to make Alberta their home over the next decade. We will have the schools in place to educate their children, and we will have the hospitals and seniors' care facilities in place when they are needed.

This plan will work, and through initiatives like these and with the impetus of Alberta capital bonds I am confident and optimistic about Alberta's future. I thank the government for introducing this motion, and I urge all members to give it their support.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, I've heard quite a bit of discussion over this motion that talks about how much the interest rate should be and how the bonds should be issued. Quite frankly, I'm not the financial expert that can best decide how that works, so I'm rather indifferent to the way the operation sets up. To me the most important principle we have here is the bonds themselves and the fact that Albertans can buy into Alberta's future.

I'm going to start off by making it very clear to everyone here and anybody who might be listening that I hate debt. I abhor debt for the provincial government, absolutely. When we eliminated the debt and we had surplus dollars, I wasn't even a very big fan of the $400 cheques that went out to Albertans sort of as a dividend to Albertans. Quite frankly, rather than see a cheque go out, we could have issued bonds then. Albertans could have bought bonds from the Alberta government and earned interest on that.

The reason why, Mr. Speaker, is that Alberta is owned by Albertans. It's ours. It's not as though Alberta itself is a separate entity, and Albertans just participate in the greatness of Alberta. They own it. It's theirs. They own the schools and the hospitals and the roads. They own the trees and the forest and the oil. It's theirs. That's because in the last hundred years it has been built by Albertans, by people who moved here a hundred years ago from far-off lands, came here with a sense of adventure and actually built this province out of absolutely nothing. You know the old image of the settlers coming here and building houses out of timber raw off the land. They owned the Alberta that they built, and we still own it today. I think that by issuing bonds, it's an opportunity to help still give the notion to people or maybe reinvigorate the notion for Albertans that they own Alberta. They own this province.

I know I'm far too young to have experienced the idea of war bonds or victory bonds, Mr. Speaker. I don't know if I have this false sense of nostalgia or where it came from. Maybe it's watching too many old movies or something. But I remember the posters about war bonds and victory bonds and the discussion that people had. They bought war bonds, which were called victory bonds, because they bought into the victory that was supposed to come during the war. It was up to them. There was this notion. Again, maybe I'm confusing it with nostalgia, but it seems to me that people of the day bought victory bonds not because they were going to get 8 per cent interest or 6 per cent interest or it was going to be a better deal than over here; they bought them because they were buying into the notion that they had to help with the victory. Maybe they weren't over fighting on the front lines and helping people in hospitals, but they were responsible if their nation was going to be victorious in war.

To me these bonds that we're talking about, the capital bonds, are like that. Maybe one of the most unfortunate things, if I was going to complain about anything to do with these bonds, is that they're called capital bonds. That's the most unsexy term you could ever come up with. It means bricks and mortar.

Mr. Lukaszuk: You want to call them Lukaszuk bonds? James bonds?

Mr. Griffiths: No, but we could call them legacy bonds or something like that that gives the notion that when Albertans are buying these bonds, they're buying into building Alberta's future, not just buying bricks and mortar that we're going to use but actually buying into the future of this province. I hope we come up with a better term. I'm not particularly keen on the James bonds. Something like legacy bonds, I think, would give the notion to Albertans that they're buying into the future of Alberta. It's their responsibility because they have ownership of this province. They don't just take whatever the government gives them or the way things operate; they're responsible for helping to build it as well.

All Albertans have a responsibility for that. I know I'm bound to get heckled a little bit because it's a Democrat in the U.S. I'm about to cite, but I finally came to understand what JFK's words meant when he said, "Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country."

I give a speech all over the place, and when I give the speech about how to make your community successful, I actually look the audience right in the eye, and I tell them: Albertans are spoiled. All western Canadians are spoiled. Canada, North Americans are spoiled. We seem to have this sense of entitlement that gets stronger and stronger every day. What am I going to get from the government? What am I going to get from this program? Who's going to give it to me now? Where am I going to get this from? There's always the what's in it for me factor.

5:40

Western Canada wasn't built by people who came over here and said: "What are you going to do for me? What are you going to build for me? What's in it for me?" They came over here and said: "What am I going to do to help build for the next generation and the generation after that and the one after that?" They asked: "What can I give?"

The notion behind these bonds is not – it's irrelevant, quite frankly, whether we get 3 per cent or 5 per cent or 8 per cent or it's a better investment over here. I bet that when the majority of Albertans – hopefully it's something more like legacy bonds, not capital bonds – get the opportunity to own a piece of Alberta, it doesn't have to be a building where they say: "I own that one." Knowing that they're helping Alberta get through a tough time, the Alberta that they own, might leave them a little bit inspired to say: "Wait a second. This is my responsibility. This is something I can help contribute to." I think that does more to help build a sense of pride, a sense of nationalism, a sense of community, which sometimes I think a lot of jurisdictions around the world, sometimes ours included, lack when we get the what's in it for me mentality. It divides us and doesn't pull us together with unity.

See, I don't know if the guidelines are going to allow this or not, but I really would like the opportunity to buy some Alberta bonds for my sons so that regardless of how long they hold them, when they do cash them in, they see that they owned a piece of Alberta and they helped drive it through some tough times, that they helped create the Alberta that they're going to enjoy. The bond doesn't have to be particularly assigned to a university building that they'll attend. It doesn't matter. They own a piece of Alberta. They're contributors to Alberta. They're Albertans that own Alberta. I don't know. I just think that it would help also instill in them as they grow up a sense of ownership about the future success of this province.

You know what? The future success of this province isn't going to depend on the policies of that party or this party or that party or this government. It's going to depend on 3 and a half million Albertans that decide that this is not a big deal, this little dip in the economy. This is not going to be the end of us. This is just a new beginning, and we have incredible opportunities to fix it ourselves, as 3 and a half million Albertans, together, united. These Alberta bonds are the perfect opportunity to give ownership and responsibility to each of those Albertans.

I fully support this, and I encourage everyone in this House to as well. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes for comments and questions. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much. That was an impassioned speech that not only spoke to some things in the past but looks ahead to, hopefully, our brighter days here in Alberta. Then again, as he's been in this House for quite a while, I believe since 2002 or 2003, in around there, I do have to comment on the fact that this represents some kind of a sea change in thinking for this government, or at least what was evident back there at that time when he first joined the Legislature. You might remember that there were bills passed that said that we will never go into debt again. There were laws passed saying that we won't allow this, that, nor the other thing. In fact, it was stated quite frequently in the last election by candidates, maybe some in here alike and other people. So this has been said. I thought it was an admitted fact that this government wouldn't tolerate debt.

Needless to say, there are arguments that times change, whatever. You do what you have to do when you get there. But is this a recognition of essentially an adoption of Keynesian economics by this government or a throwing of true conservative principles to the wind, an embracement of debt, which I've seen happen not only here but in other governments? I'd just like to hear the hon. member's comments on that and what he thinks about that or what I'm missing on that.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can't say whether it's a wholesale change. I mean, circumstances have changed, so perhaps we have to adapt our prevailing principles and policies to make sure that we account for new circumstances. But I mentioned before that to me this isn't a wholesale change, and this has nothing to do with conservative economic policies. You know, this isn't throwing them out.

I mentioned before that when we had the cheques for $400 that went out to every single Albertan, I was diametrically opposed to them then because there's no ownership. It's just a cheque that comes to you, and great; then you go spend it. There's no ownership. Debt, borrowing from another country or another nation or something to run, especially, program spending: a very poor decision. But any time there is an opportunity for Albertans to take ownership and responsibility for the future of the province, I don't think that's a bad thing. Even when we were running large surpluses, rather than sending out those cheques, I would rather have seen Albertans be able to buy bonds and pay them interest. Then they're still investing in Alberta and reaping the rewards rather than getting a cheque.

This has never been a wholesale change for me. This is exactly what I stand for.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I just want to commend the Member for Battle River-Wainwright. It's obvious that he's a teacher because he's dramatic, he's passionate, and he doesn't require a script. He goes from the heart and from the head, and I thank him for those teacher talents that he has brought to bear in this Assembly.

There was a degree of nostalgia brought back with regard to victory bonds. I will admit that I was born almost two years after the Second World War ended, but my recollection is that as well as victory bonds there were also ration coupons. What I am talking about is the need to balance the notion of living within our means. We have a $16 billion buffer. Before we start going wholesale into the potential of debt as well as the potential of building with bonds, let's use that $16 billion strategically, and let us tie the bonds to very specific projects. I agree with the notion of ownership of Albertans and having pride in this province. In order to continue to have that pride, we need to be specific in the projects we select. Obviously, public works and infrastructure such as schools and hospitals have to be key, of course, closely followed thereafter by roads, that provide our economic opportunities.

To the young member opposite: do you agree, as you began your discussion, on the importance of living within our means?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've always been a fiscal conservative. [Mr. Griffiths' speaking time expired] Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member who wishes to speak on the motion? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today and offer my support for the government motion to issue Alberta capital bonds. The current global recession has been a challenging time for Albertans and our government; however, even during these challenging times our province has many good reasons to be optimistic about our future. One way that our province can further improve our position during and after the global recession is through the Alberta capital bonds. I'd just like to say that there are many benefits to purchasing Alberta capital bonds, and I believe these benefits should strictly be available to Alberta citizens and companies.

I would also like to say that as we were prepared to cope with the recession, we should continue to prepare for Alberta 20 years from now. One way of doing this is through community-based facilities. Calgary-Mackay is a relatively young community as are many other communities in our province. I think that by investing in some of our community-based facilities, we can have facilities that provide immunizations and well-child services along with speech therapy and mental health services. Many of the community health and wellness centres have translated into decreasing emergency room visits in surrounding hospitals, which increases the efficiency of services provided and decreases wait times. I think that these bonds could also be invested in supporting our education system as we need to have a well-educated and skilled workforce to meet the needs of our future economy.

5:50

I'd like to just say in conclusion that my grandparents bought government bonds. It was part of the legacy that they left to us. My grandmother just cashed them shortly before she died last year. I participated in purchasing government bonds in the '70s as a teenager new to this country with money earned from my part-time job, and this money later was used to help with my postsecondary education.

Mr. Speaker, I think that our government's motion to introduce Alberta capital bonds allows Albertans to participate in a safe investment opportunity to invest in our province and the infrastructure that will support core public services. It's just a good thing for all involved.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments, discussion. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. If you'll recall last week when we talked about the potential of restrictions on the use of the Alberta capital bonds and competing for projects, there seemed to be a tremendous resistance to keeping the successes or the engagement, using only Alberta companies, et cetera, in this Alberta capital bond circumstance. I would ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay: if I heard you correctly, are you suggesting that only Alberta citizens and Alberta companies be permitted to purchase these Alberta bonds, or should we be encouraging wider participation in the purchasing of these bonds? If they're sufficiently attractive to Albertans, should we not be extending the opportunities beyond this province?

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, my personal opinion is that, I think, in this initial round we'll focus on Albertans, and I'm certainly very open to considering citizens of Canada to participate.

Mr. Chase: Are there particular projects, hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, that you would like to see prioritized in terms of the public infrastructure that's being built? Did you have a wish list of the types of construction you'd like to see done?

Ms Woo-Paw: I was speaking in somewhat general terms. I think that we have a growing province, and I think that what Mackay is in need of is shared by many communities across our province. I think that having community-based facilities that would meet the needs of our growing population is a good thing, and this is very much what we need as a growing province. Some of the things I mentioned are things that we need in Mackay, but I'm sure that's shared in other parts of the province as well.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm trying to prompt you as the former chair of the Calgary school board to potentially declare your fondness for school construction as part of infrastructure. I don't wish to put words in your mouth, but I want to give you the opportunity to put on the record the importance of school infrastructure.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you for the opportunity. I think that there is a great need in our growing province for more education facilities for young people.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on Motion 16?

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been another invigorating day of debate and great progress. On that note, since it is nearing 6 o'clock, I would move that we in fact do call it 6 o'clock and that the House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:55 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1689
Members' Statements
20th Anniversary of the Fall of the Berlin Wall	1690
Family Violence Prevention Month	1690
Health Care Spending	1690
Stephen's Backpacks	1691
Pan-Canadian Paralympic School Week	1691
Government Accountability	1700
Oral Question Period
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1691
H1N1 Influenza Vaccine	1692
Health Care Restructuring	1692
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Hockey Teams	1693
Safe Communities Initiative	1693
Health and Wellness Executive Search Contract	1694
Cattle Price Insurance Program	1694
Alternative Energy Investment	1695
Trade Mission to Asia	1695
H1N1 Preparedness in Seniors' Living Facilities	1696
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Aboriginal Albertans	1696
High School Completion for High-risk Students	1697
Grizzly Bear Protection	1698
Health Care Registration Services	1698
Health Board Senior Executive Contracts	1698
Bow Habitat Station	1699
Introduction of Bills
Bill 51 Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1700
Tabling Returns and Reports	1700
Tablings to the Clerk	1700
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009	1703
Bill 57 Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009	1703
Bill 58 Corrections Amendment Act, 2009	1703
Bill 59 Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009	1704
Bill 60 Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009	1705
Bill 61 Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009	1705
Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act	1706, 1710
Bill 46 Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act	1706, 1708
Bill 49 Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)	1707
Committee of the Whole
Bill 31 Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1711
Bill 49 Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)	1713
Bill 46 Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act	1716
Government Motions
Alberta Capital Bonds	1717

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Vacant

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao
Vacant

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Denis
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Vacant

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Rogers
Forsyth Sherman
Johnson Taylor
Leskiw Zwozdesky
Liepert Vacant
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Jacobs
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Drysdale
Griffiths
Hehr
Mason
McQueen
Oberle
Vacant

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday, November 4, 2009

Issue 55

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 4, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. Guide us all in our deliberations and debate that we may determine courses of action which will be to the enduring benefit of our province of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure for me this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 58 enthusiastic and inquisitive grade 6 students from Earl Buxton elementary school located in my constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. Accompanying the students are their teachers, Mrs. Johanne Gorgichuk, Mrs. Joanna Rozmus, Mr. Ken Auch, along with parent helper Mrs. Ana Pietucha. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 50 students from the Almadina ESL charter academy located in my constituency, Calgary-East. Almadina charter academy specializes in ESL and houses more than 650 students, with a long waiting list. Under the leadership of the principal, Mr. Jamal El-Rafih, and the vice-principal, Mr. Hammoud, Almadina ESL charter academy has come a long way since its inception. The students are accompanied today by their teachers, Mr. Rabi El-Masri, Mr. Abdullah Elladen, and Mr. Anwar Tarrabain, and they're all seated in the public gallery. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. This is a special introduction for me today because it's the first time I've been able to introduce a class from Grant MacEwan University, and I think that's pretty exciting. The class is from the Jasper Place campus, which is on the northwest corner of my constituency, and it's a class in journalism. I met them beforehand, and they grilled me with rapid-fire questions. I felt right at home. Anyway, they are seated in the public gallery. They are accompanied by their instructor, Mr. Roy Wood. There are 25 of them. I'd ask them to rise and would urge everybody to give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As you are aware, today marks part of a tradition that was established here, I think, in about 1994, where we have Take Our Kids to Work day. Some members would probably know that it's a national annual program, and it gives students an occasion to observe the working environment of their parents or caregivers. It's important for our children to have these opportunities, particularly as it relates to their parents and the work that their parents in this particular case do for the people of the province of Alberta. I would ask that the following people rise as I read out their names: Penny White, parent, and Bill Harding; Debbie Fortin, parent, and Damien Doris; Linda Humeniuk and Christopher Wertz; Glen Gartner and Michael Gartner. I would ask that all members of this Assembly give these folks the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you Breanna Grolway. Breanna has come to the Legislature today to participate in Take Our Kids to Work day as well. She's in grade 9. This is a great program because it allows children to come in and see what the Legislature is all about. It's very exciting for Breanna. She has the rare opportunity of watching her very enthusiastic mother, my scheduling assistant, Cheryl Grolway, easily tackle every task that comes to her on a daily basis. I'd like you to join me in welcoming her to the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly, in the public gallery, Jordan Louise Alberta Johnston, my granddaughter. Jordan is here today job shadowing. She would like to be a page in a couple of years' time, and she wants to go to medical school in the future. She's in grade 9 at Pigeon Lake regional high school. I'd like you to give her the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of very special people from the Smoky Lake area who are organizers of the Great White North Pumpkin Fair and Weigh-off. They are treasurer Pat Palechuk and her executive assistant, husband Ed; secretary Pat Elashuk; directors Will Chaba, Eva Lewicki, Ernie and Joy Prusko, Richard Sadoway. As one of my colleagues pointed out, they've paid me a great tribute by coming dressed the same colour as my hair. They are seated in the members' gallery behind me, and I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: Some members did say: what hair?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm really pleased today to be able to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly a family that lives in my constituency; that's the Zyp family: John, Bettie, and Danielle. First, I want to recognize Bettie, who supports the many endeavours of the other two. Bettie, would you please rise? John, you rise as well. John is a visual artist, of course, living in Edmonton-Centre, and has been very helpful to me in my constituency association. Danielle, their daughter, is also a visual artist, and Danielle has been very generous with her time and advice to help me understand the issues facing people with mental illness. Please welcome to the Assembly the Zyp family.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's great to see so much orange in the gallery today.

I'm pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly a recent nursing graduate from the University of Alberta who is both passionate and committed to her chosen profession. Izabella Cwieklinski is a constituent of Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. She graduated in August of this year only to find that there were no jobs available for her in Alberta. My guest's hope is that the government will show a real commitment to keeping Alberta nurses in Alberta who've received their education here. I'd also like to add that Izabella is currently working on a casual basis with the H1N1 flu campaign program. I would now ask that my guest rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Great White North Pumpkin Fair and Weigh-off

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first weekend of October every year is an exciting time in my constituency, and this year certainly did not disappoint my family and me. The weekend marked the 21st annual Great White North Pumpkin Fair and Weigh-off in Smoky Lake. When the event started over two decades ago, it was simply a group of friends trying to grow big pumpkins, but today it has become much more. It now attracts over 6,000 visitors to a town of only a thousand. The pumpkin weigh-off is just part of a whole weekend that now includes live entertainment, food venues, an amusement park for the kids, a gigantic farmers' market, a petting zoo, and a golf tournament among other things.

Like all great events in Alberta the festival would not be what it is without the commitment and initiative of the great people of Alberta. I would like to acknowledge the Smoky Lake Pumpkin Growers Association and, in particular, one local Smoky Lake family whose continual commitment has helped to make this festival into what it is today: Dr. Fred and Mary Lobay and their sons John and Robert. Fred is the local doctor in Smoky Lake, and his wife, Mary, truly is the driving force behind the pumpkin passion in their family.

1:40

This year their son John grew the prize-winning pumpkin, breaking the site record with an incredible 1,199.2-pound pumpkin. Other record holders are Alan Makarchuck's 825-pound squash, Don Crews' 117-pound watermelon, and Mary Lobay's 92-inch – that's seven feet, eight inches – gourd.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to acknowledge the volunteer committee, all but two of whom I introduced in the Assembly earlier today. Although they can't be here, I'd like to commend the hard work of volunteer president Barry Wood and former Smoky Lake mayor Carole Carpenter.

The committee starts planning in January, and without their 10 months of hard work I'm sure this great weekend would not be what it is. I know this Assembly will join me in congratulating the past achievements of these volunteers and their festival as well as wishing them well into the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Youth Engagement Environmental Grant Recipients

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've devoted most of my life to promoting the interests of children and youth. I strongly believe that our young people can accomplish great things, and I'm constantly witness to the truth in this belief. Students at an Edmonton junior high school have reaffirmed my conviction.

I'd like to acknowledge the hard work and dedication of a group of students at St. Thomas More school. Earlier today my colleague the hon. Minister of Environment participated in an event at the school to acknowledge the first recipients of the youth engagement environmental grant, a province-wide opportunity. This outstanding group of students – and many more are to follow – has shown environmental stewardship in action and the important role that they can play. They saw a need in their school and took action to meet it. Working together, the students created a new paper-sorting and recycling program at their school. The grant they received today is allowing the students to purchase recycling bins for every classroom in the school as well as cover start-up costs for the program. This will benefit the school and the community for years to come.

The youth engagement environmental grant program is the result of a partnership between the Emerald Foundation, a nonprofit organization that engages Albertans in environmental stewardship, and founding sponsor ConocoPhillips. A second sponsor, the Alberta Beverage Container Recycling Corporation, has also joined this program. Clearly, the vision and contribution of these organizations will help foster the environmental leaders of tomorrow.

These students are taking action to make the world a better place. They are providing the important and inspirational leadership roles that children and youth can play in our province, and I encourage others in the future to participate and do the same.

I ask all members of the Assembly to join me in congratulating the students at St. Thomas More school on their initiative and hard work. I hope you will be inspired, as I am, by the knowledge, enthusiasm, and desire to make a difference that these young Albertans are demonstrating.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Calgary Airport Runway

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The citizens and business owners of northeast Calgary are very concerned about the possibility that the Calgary Airport Authority will close Barlow Trail within 69 weeks without having a construction plan in place for traffic and LRT access that includes the Airport Trail tunnel.

I rose to speak on this issue in the spring, and I acknowledged then that the new runway at Calgary's airport is a necessity to meet growing demands. I also pointed out that the Calgary Airport Authority's construction plans would divide northeast Calgary from the airport, severing Barlow Trail north of McKnight Boulevard and, therefore, cutting off the northeast transportation link to the airport.

Calgary International Airport will need the new runway, but the people of northeast Calgary and beyond still need access to the airport. Area businesses and commuters depend on ready access to this vital transportation hub. The Airport Trail Access Committee, composed of a group of concerned Calgarians, is lobbying the Calgary Airport Authority and the city of Calgary to include a tunnel under the new runway so as to keep our vital transportation link open to all.

On behalf of my constituents in Calgary-McCall I'm proud to support their work. On November 9 the Airport Trail Access Committee will meet at the Sheraton Cavalier hotel to discuss the importance of the Airport Trail tunnel. I will attend that meeting, and I invite all affected Calgarians, including my fellow MLAs, to attend as well. It is a very important issue for the people of northeast Calgary, and I encourage all citizens to make their voices heard.

The modern era of commerce, communication, tourism, and environmental standards requires all citizens to have quick, reliable access to our airports. I'm confident that the provincial government will help make the airport tunnel a reality by contributing their financial share of the cost.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo Constituent Concerns

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today and speak on behalf of what my bosses, the citizens of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, are saying and what they've been sharing with me. I am certain that all members of this Assembly agree that they are very proud to represent their constituents in what's going on in every corner of coffee shops across Alberta.

What have citizens been saying to me at our coffee shops? Well, number one, this Assembly, they say – and it's nice to see sometimes – should reflect the discussions that go on in the coffee shop. Inasmuch as much of what is said in here has to be a bit more diplomatic, it's still nice to see. It's the strength of Alberta, the grassroots of our democratic system.

I was also told by my constituents that they never have and never will accept gibberish as a response to Alberta questions because it's far too important. In fact, one of them looked up in Webster's dictionary what gibberish meant, and it says, quote: meaningless, unintelligible talk; also babble, gabble, drivel, and gobbledygook. I don't know how to spell gobbledygook.

Albertans as a whole believe in true accountability, as do members of this House. They ask: "Where does the buck stop? Who is responsible? Is it with elected officials?" I also might add, fairly: is it also with nonelected officials or, in fact, perhaps both?

Someone made a decision in the recent H1N1 fiasco in Calgary, that we're all very aware of. My constituents said to me: if you don't have the answer by now, you will never get it because the more decentralized things are, the closer you are to home versus the more centralized you are, the less chance of ever finding out because more people are involved.

Finally, I want to say today how refreshing it was to hear Ken King say that he is responsible in what happened with the Flames.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Matthew Rice

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is with pride that I rise today to recognize an extraordinary individual in my constituency of Edmonton-Decore and the organization that he has dedicated service to over the years. Five years ago Matthew Rice was awarded the M.G. Griffiths certificate by the Royal Life Saving Society for the bravery and skill he demonstrated at the scene of a car accident near Stettler on August 9, 2003. Matthew, a trained lifeguard, was able to immobilize the semiconscious female driver of one of the vehicles involved, which, paramedics said, saved her life.

The M.G. Griffiths certificate is the second-highest national rescue award the Life Saving Society gives out, and Matthew was recognized in the House by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake and now Minister of Transportation, who was his MLA at the time. Matthew has continued to be deeply involved with the Life Saving Society and was recently awarded the Commonwealth certificate of thanks, recognizing at least two years of significant service in the categories of instructor, examiner, committee or branch member.

The awards Matthew and dozens of others have received pay tribute to individuals who have shown remarkable bravery and perseverance in the rescue of others in all types of extraordinary circumstances, whether it be at a swimming pool, beach, or the scene of a car accident.

In addition to the yearly awards, the Life Saving Society works throughout the year to prevent drowning and water-related injury through a wide variety of training programs such as Water Smart public education campaigns and aquatic safety management services. It is also the Canadian governing body for competitive lifesaving, a sport recognized by the International Olympic Committee. Our own hon. Lieutenant Governor serves as the society's patron, hosting its annual investiture ceremony.

Mr. Speaker, people like Matthew Rice are protecting our citizens and strengthening our communities through the work of the Life Saving Society, which can be and often is the difference between life and death.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday this government finally came up with a new plan for H1N1 immunization. Clinics shut for four days when there was vaccine available. The minister of health finally came up with a plan that should have been in place from the start. To the Premier. The Premier did not answer my question yesterday about wastage of vaccine. Given this criminal waste of potentially life-saving vaccine, will you fire this minister?

1:50

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, rather than continuing this line of questioning, I just want to assure Albertans that the two medical officers of health, Dr. Corriveau and, of course, here in Edmonton Dr. Predy, had a news conference and also rolled out the plan for the next group of people at risk: when the clinics will be held and the locations. We've also had a tremendous offer from the city of Calgary and the city of Edmonton to use the Commonwealth here and the Saddledome in Calgary, so it looks like even municipalities are coming to help and support what is the largest vaccination in Alberta's history.*

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What is the Premier's justification for delaying four days to come up with a plan when this plan is what the federal government has been suggesting all along? This clearly shows a wilful disregard for expert opinion. Will you now fire this minister?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister has been working with the medical officers of health over the weekend and has the information in terms of the expert advice that he received.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that the Leader of the Opposition is not focusing on is the fact that we have limited supply. We have been in conversation with the chief medical officer of health today, and we have embarked on the plan that we announced, but we also have this issue where next week it's going to be very tight in terms of supply. What we don't want to do is stop and start, so it'll be a narrow, focused approach rolled out into next week.

*See page 1724, left column, paragraph 4

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I acknowledge that the Premier has ensured that there are serious consequences for the decision to provide the Calgary Flames with a private vaccine clinic. The Premier fired the most senior bureaucrat. I guess I'm asking the Premier now why he does not fire the most senior person responsible.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, in a previous comment I talked about the Saddledome. It's actually the Grandstand.* I don't want to have everybody going to the wrong place. Please look at the ads; look at the newspapers. Go to the website and get the information.

With respect to the issue with the Flames there's just been a release by the Alberta Health Services Board, by the chair and also the president and chief executive officer. There's information in there in terms of what action they've already taken and what action they will be taking in the very near future.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for High-risk Albertans

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under the new vaccination plan children five and under are receiving the vaccine tomorrow, followed by pregnant women on Friday. People with chronic conditions will not be included in these vaccines, only once there is sufficient supply, but no details are available on this. To the Premier: will a pregnant mother bringing a child under five to a clinic receive the vaccine, or will she have to come back on Friday?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, it depends on the pregnant woman, if she wants to have the vaccine with the adjuvant or without. Without it it'll be offered on Friday. Again, the minister has the information and can expound further.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, somehow the Leader of the Opposition is leaving the impression that only tomorrow we are dealing with children from six months to age five. We have been very clear that we will be through the weekend vaccinating children between the ages of six months and five years. In addition to that, starting Friday, we will be vaccinating pregnant women. If a pregnant woman has a child in that age group, she can come from Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday.

Dr. Swann: When clinics open again tomorrow, they will only be located in Edmonton and Calgary. Yesterday afternoon I received a number of phone calls from areas like Red Deer and Lethbridge on where they figure into the government's plan. Will the Premier provide some details for Albertans outside the metro areas so they will at least know they are more than an afterthought to the Premier?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to answer that question. You know, part of this issue is that when responsible medical people are involved in a pandemic, what they try to do is ensure that the public has the best information and not misinformation. Now, this particular member knows full well that if he went to the Alberta Health Services website, he would see all of the locations of the clinics. They're all the same as they were initially, when the rollout started. For him to stand in this House and try to relay misinformation to the public is irresponsible as a medical practitioner.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The last two weeks have shown disturbing problems with Alberta's pandemic response. Will the Premier both request and support the Auditor General in performing a special investigation into the effectiveness of Alberta's pandemic response?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I know the two political parties are having a debate on who should ask the question because I think the third party raised it this morning in Public Accounts. All I'm asking is – we'll participate in any review by the Auditor General; I have no issue with it – please don't pull anybody off the front lines that are administering the vaccine to do the interview and create an even longer lineup of people in this province.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

H1N1 Pandemic Ethics Framework

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Several times in the last few days I've raised questions about the ethical framework being used for decision-making around the H1N1 flu vaccines. As of last week, at least, the government's ethics framework was not completed, yet decisions with serious ethical consequences were being made. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: when will the ethics framework, that is briefly mentioned in the government's pandemic plan, be completed?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, this particular member seems fixated on dying. We're fixated on ensuring that we have as many Albertans vaccinated as we possibly can to keep Albertans from having to access our system of health care. So he can continue on this "What do we do if and when?" and we're going to focus on keeping people healthy.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm fixated on good decision-making.

When H1N1 first hit, everyone was told that there were four priority groups because of increased risk of serious illness and death. They were young children, pregnant women, people with chronic health problems, and aboriginals. The plan rolled out yesterday gives priority to pregnant women and young children but not to aboriginals or to those with chronic health problems, including cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy. Will the minister of health explain the framework that was used to make these decisions?

Mr. Liepert: Well, first of all, let's ensure that we have it clear because somehow the opposition seems to think that politically we're making these decisions. We are not. These decisions are being made by our chief medical officer of health in consultation with all health professionals, and at the advice of the chief medical officer of health the most susceptible to getting H1N1 and having serious consequences are those children between the ages of six months and five years and, in addition, pregnant women. Mr. Speaker, with limited supplies it was the recommendation that that's the route we go, and unlike the opposition I am not going to question the authority of our medical experts.

*See page 1723, right column, paragraph 10

Dr. Taft: My question is again to the same minister. The 400,000 Albertans who received the vaccine are not the 400,000 who most needed the vaccine. As larger quantities of the vaccine become available, this government needs to ensure that those who need it most get it first. Will the minister of health commit to rolling out the vaccine on the basis of good ethics, and will he make the decision-making framework for those ethics public as soon as possible?

Mr. Liepert: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, it's very interesting. I decided last night to take a look in Hansard as to the response by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview to the ministerial statement in this House a week ago Monday, and I also took a look at the questions from the Leader of the Opposition that same day. Not once in that response to the ministerial statement or in the questions from the Leader of the Opposition was it even mentioned about prioritizing high-risk patients. All of a sudden they come up with this idea. It was this government who suggested in the ministerial statement that all Albertans should get vaccinated but that the priority should be our high-risk patients.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

2:00 H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. We are witnessing a very serious world-wide pandemic. The response of public health officials and the government has been inadequate, to say the least, yet medical experts tell us that the next pandemic may be far deadlier still. My question is to the Premier. What steps does he propose to ensure that the government response to the next pandemic is better planned and better organized?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, we're working with the medical experts in this field, people that have years and years of education and study in this area. We listen to their advice. The advice comes to government. The minister, of course, listens to that advice and rolls out the plan in partnership with the Alberta Health Services Board. That was done the week prior based on the availability of the supply of the vaccine. Since then the availability has diminished. We're getting less of the vaccine compared to what we were told earlier. The doctors, of course, have adjusted that plan, and they're focusing on the most high risk, being children between six months and 60 months and also pregnant women. That is the rollout today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, since the Premier doesn't have an answer to the question of what they'd do better the next time, I'm going to ask him about the Auditor General. Today I asked the Auditor General to conduct a special investigation into the handling of the H1N1 vaccination program by this government once the vaccination program has been concluded. With a view to improving the government's response to the next influenza pandemic, will the Premier support the request that the Auditor General investigate the present vaccination program once it is concluded?

Mr. Stelmach: As I said earlier, we'll participate in whatever investigation the Auditor General wants to do. It's his choice. He makes the decision. All I'm asking is that it's done at the conclusion of the vaccination process so all of the evidence is in place. I also want to see a comparison to other jurisdictions in Canada, what other provinces have done, because my information is that in terms of the size of our population we have vaccinated more people on a population basis than any jurisdiction in Canada.

Mr. Mason: Those are both reasonable suggestions, in my view, Mr. Speaker.

Medical experts tell us that an influenza strain with a mortality rate of up to 20 or 30 per cent is possible, even likely, at some point in the future. Given the stakes involved, will the Premier join me in requesting a comprehensive evaluation of the government's handling of the vaccination program, and will he guarantee this House that there will be no attempts by his government to interfere with the decision of the Auditor General with respect to this investigation?

Mr. Stelmach: You know, once again, in the question there's always this innuendo about some interference. When has government ever interfered with any investigation by the Auditor General? Every day this comes up. We have a huge situation before us, right across the country of Canada and, in fact, right around the world, and he's again claiming there's some sort of interference over and above what all our medical people are shouldered with in terms of delivering the vaccination to as many Albertans as possible in the shortest period of time given the critical supply of the vaccine.

You know what? Maybe sometime they can give us an answer here in this House as to how you can get more vaccine produced so that everybody has an equal chance. We're dealing with a limited supply, and not once will they ever mention: "Why wasn't there more vaccine available? What is the issue?" They always have to blame somebody else. Really, tackle the doggone issue, and that's supply.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Sour Gas Well Licensing

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The court's ruling over the ERCB's protected area zone around a sour gas well has thrown the industry into further chaos. Saskatchewan, under Premier Brad Wall, has experienced record economic surpluses while Alberta, under this Premier, has experienced record economic deficits. Alberta is losing jobs and families to Saskatchewan. Confidence in Alberta as a stable place to do business has been compromised by this government, and this new court ruling has added to that instability. Will the Premier act in a timely manner and ensure that the sour gas industry doesn't go the way that much of the oil and gas industry has and be driven out of this province?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the court has made a decision based on the decision made by the ERCB. The minister has been in contact with the ERCB and will explain to the House the procedure from today on.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the issue, of course, it's not anything that the government did or that the ERCB did, and we are not in any way negatively affecting the opportunity for Albertans to go to work as they always have done relative to this very important industry in Alberta. However, the court has determined that there are two zones, an emergency response zone and a protective alert zone, around these particular installations. They have indicated that the ERCB should consider persons living inside of the larger zone.

Mr. Hinman: Yes, but they've halted the industry. It's more vague words but, as usual, no action.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans deserve better. Our safety record in the oil and gas industry is one of the best in the world. This is about the people who work in the industry that is vital to our province. What actions is the Premier going to take to ensure the winter drilling program is not compromised and that thousands of men and women in the oil and gas industry have work this winter?

Mr. Stelmach: As the minister mentioned, this is with respect to sour gas licensing. Of course, the court has made a decision. I don't think the member wants this Assembly to go against the court decision. We respect the court, and we will work with the court to ensure that the ERCB follows the guidelines established by the court.

Mr. Hinman: That's true, Mr. Speaker, but we need to act quickly. We have a safe, reliable supply of natural gas to heat our homes, businesses, and public institutions. This government must stand up for the oil and gas workers of Alberta, who help provide us with safe, reliable, and certain supplies of clean energy. Is the Premier going to act and rectify this problem, or is he going to add to the instability by letting it drag out in the courts?

Mr. Stelmach: As I said, we're going to work with the court. Safety is a top priority for the ERCB. The court raised this issue. We'll deal with it in the appropriate manner. We can't go against the court, unless the hon. member feels that we should, but that's not what this government does. It doesn't break the law.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government talks about desperately needing to move forward on Bill 50, but the public isn't convinced, and they definitely don't want to see their ability to raise concerns eliminated from the regulatory process. So what's the government's response? Spend taxpayers' dollars to buy advertising promoting the massive transmission construction the government wants to impose on the people of this province. To the Minister of Energy: why are you trying to sell this turkey to Albertans with our own money?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Bill 50 is a piece of legislation that's absolutely critical for the future of Alberta as a province and for the future of all Albertans in this province. What it does not do: it does not remove the rights of any Albertans to have their concerns heard before the Alberta Utilities Commission in open, public, transparent meetings that will be held in a courtlike setting and give everyone that wants to intervene the opportunity to do so.

Mr. Taylor: Maybe so, Mr. Speaker, but what this government is sure trying to do is convince every man, woman, and child in the province of Alberta through this taxpayer-funded propaganda campaign that the sky is about to fall and we're hours away from rolling blackouts if this whole shemuzzle isn't approved. To the minister again: how much taxpayer money has been spent on this pro Bill 50 propaganda campaign?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is very interesting because I think that the member opposite has indicated that he knows what this government is doing. He's never been in government. How would he know what we're doing?

Mr. Taylor: No, Mr. Speaker, but I have been in media, and I know something about the power of advertising.

The Premier has refused to properly refer Bill 50 to committee, stating that the appropriate place for debate is this Legislature. Good enough. If the government believes so strongly that this Assembly is the right place to have discussion on Bill 50 – and I wouldn't even fight you on that – why is he spending thousands upon thousands upon hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars to advertise its stance before debate even begins?

2:10

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, I think that there's a responsibility not only of the government but of other players and stakeholders in this particular issue. It could be individuals like the Alberta Electric System Operator. Perhaps they have a mandate, some authority, and a responsibility to Albertans to tell Albertans what it is that they are going to build in this province for the province's future. That's all that's going out with respect to advertising. AESO have done this on a regular basis over the last number of years and will continue to inform Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Sour Gas Well Licensing (continued)

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Energy. Right now people in my constituency of West Yellowhead are concerned over the ERCB ruling on the suspension of sour gas project licensing. My question is to the minister. Why has the ERCB suspended the issuance of sour gas licences?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, we did have a bit of an introduction into this question although it was much more kind of tangled up. Nevertheless, it's quite clear what this member is asking. The answer to the question is that there is a determination by the Court of Appeal that the ERCB perhaps should have considered additional people inside of a protective alert zone relative to these two or three pieces of infrastructure that are now in place. The ERCB needs to have an opportunity to look at what that means relative to moving forward. It does not stop them from processing any applications. What they cannot do at this point is give out licences; in fact, no threat – no threat – to Alberta's gas supply. We're talking about 69 pieces of infrastructure that are involved at this moment. I would suggest that in a couple of weeks this thing will be dealt with.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the minister answered my first supplementary question.

My second supplement to the same minister. Albertans are being hit hard in the oil and gas industry. I'm just wondering what assurances the minister can give hard-working Albertans who will be affected by this decision that it will be done in a timely manner.

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, the ERCB is taking this very, very seriously. It's an issue that they need to resolve in order to continue to move ahead with licensing and permitting of these types of facilities. As I have said, I believe that within a very short space of time they'll have an opportunity to look at their legal obligation with respect to the issue, deal with it, and then continue to give out the licences and permits, as they always have, in a very timely manner.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Wetlands Policy

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Water Council's recommendations for a new wetlands policy have been on the minister's desk since September '08, and for over a year the minister has promised that the policy will be out shortly. Well, news flash: shortly does not mean more than 14 months later. As we continue to wait for the minister to actually do something, wetlands continue to be destroyed. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. When will the minister finally replace the inadequate, 17-year-old interim policy and start protecting Alberta's wetlands?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is accurate on one count, and that is that we do have an interim policy that has been in place, believe it or not, since 1992. So it is time that we develop a policy that applies to all of Alberta because that interim policy only applies in the white zone, only in the cultivated areas of the province. Everyone knows that there is increasing pressure now coming into the green zone, the rest of the province. It's a very complex, very complicated process. I can assure the member that we are spending an inordinate amount of time ensuring that we get it right before we come forward.

Ms Blakeman: Back to the same minister. Seventeen years. Given that Alberta has lost another 580 square kilometres of wetlands over the past year while the minister has hemmed and hawed over those recommendations, will the minister commit to replacing those wetlands that have now been lost and adopting the Alberta Liberals' no net-loss policy?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I just wish it was so simple, and I wish that that would be something that this government could absolutely commit to. The fact of the matter is that there are wetlands that have tremendous environmental, ecological value, and there are other wetlands that, perhaps, don't have that degree of importance. It's ludicrous to have a policy that applies equally on an acre-for-acre basis across all forms and all classes of wetlands. I think that that is the crux of the issue, and that is where we're spending so much time, to ensure that we have a policy that recognizes that there are very valuable wetlands, that maybe no net loss is inappropriate because it doesn't go far enough.

Ms Blakeman: Dither, dither, dither, and we lose wetlands every time you dither.

The Alberta Water Council does great, great work, but if the minister never acts on their recommendations, what value are Albertans getting for their $1.7 million investment in the council?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the work that the Water Council does is invaluable in helping the government to formulate policy. But the fact of the matter is — and it's something that the opposition members fail to realize — that the government is the policy-setting body, and ultimately this Legislature will deal with any changes in legislation that are required to develop that policy. That is the truth of the matter. It is a complex issue. Like everything else in the environment it's a balancing act: how do we maintain the balance between protecting the environment and ensuring that we continue to have economic growth at the same time?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffer.

Influenza Antiviral Drugs

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Canada has a national stockpile of 55 million doses of two antiviral drugs, Tamiflu and Relenza. Both are effective in treating H1N1 flu virus. This stockpile is enough for all Canadians. Antivirals are recommended for the treatment of moderate to severe illness and for people who are at risk. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister tell me how many antiviral drugs Alberta currently has stockpiled?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I don't have an exact number for the member, but I do know that I asked the chief medical officer of health that question about a week ago. He assures me that we have adequate supplies for all Albertans, that they are dispensed around the province. I do know that there have been situations where people have contacted our office and said that pharmacists did not have them in stock. I think this is a temporary thing as they reorder, but I am assured that we have adequate supply through the winter season.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that doctors currently are the only health care provider who can decide what treatment you get, will Alberta Health Services consider allowing nurses or paramedics to make those decisions so we're not filling up our emergency departments?

Mr. Liepert: Well, that was one of the initiatives behind the influenza assessment centres that have been set up in Calgary and Edmonton and are about to be expanded elsewhere around the province. Within those influenza assessment centres we have provided that nurses can prescribe. We've also taken the initiative that doctors, if they believe that it's an H1N1 situation, can prescribe by phone, and you don't actually have to go see your doctor. We've made some of those initiatives to try to ensure that it's as convenient as possible for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Avenida clinic is in my constituency, and it's dealing with horrendous lineups, parking problems which are causing loss of business to merchants, and no public washrooms. Is there a plan going forward to deal with these problems?

Mr. Liepert: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The plan is clear: no lineups would be the preferred route. All things being equal, if Albertans over the next three or four days who fall into the various categories all don't come at once, we believe that we can serve Albertans throughout the province in the two categories that will be eligible in the next four to five days without having any kind of lineups, because that was not a situation that we enjoyed.

2:20 Charitable Gaming Consultation

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, although Albertans expect restraint during the current economic downturn, the Solicitor General struck a committee comprised of three government backbenchers on September 10 to take a taxpayer-funded jaunt around the province and consult charitable organizations on changes to casino table revenue distributions. To the Solicitor General: in order to save money and protect charities, why didn't you refer this matter to the appropriate standing committee of the Legislature rather than sending these MLAs out, like a Monty Python sketch, in search of the Holy Grail?

Mr. Lindsay: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's quite the preamble. Interestingly, the hon. member talks about economics, and he's willing to send a policy field committee made up of eight or 10 members instead of an MLA committee made up of three members.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, I've spoken to many charity organizations from Calgary and Edmonton, and these charities are worried that their portion of gaming table revenue will be dramatically cut to favour charities in rural communities. To the Solicitor General: despite this flying circus travelling around the province, has the decision already been made to transfer funds from urban to rural communities?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, the only decision that's been made is that we would go out and consult with those who are doing great work in our charities around the province and get their input on how we can balance this problem out.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite the Solicitor General's protestations a lot of charities think the fix is already in. On that note, I wonder if the Solicitor General can provide the rationale behind what are potentially devastating changes for Alberta's larger municipal charities.

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, the only fix that's in is that the charities are giving feedback and indicating that they all want to work together to make sure we have a great model in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Employment Standards for Sick Leave

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week, when the minister of employment was asked about sick leave and an impending pandemic, he referred us to workers' collective agreements. Now, while I agree that more Albertans should enjoy the benefits of union membership, this government's archaic, antiworker labour laws ensure that most do not. Instead, workers are covered only by the Employment Standards Code, which, as we've said before, does not protect their jobs if they get sick. I ask again: why won't the minister amend the code to bring Alberta in line with much of the rest of Canada and protect workers from being fired when they're sick?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware that there are a lot of other jurisdictions across Canada that do have that type of protection in their legislation. As I indicated last week, there is no reason why workers or employers should wait till people get sick to talk about these issues and determine their possible individual solutions if and when the issue should arise.

Ms Notley: Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, the solution when there are no rights in legislation is that you're fired if you take a day off. The fact of the matter is that most other jurisdictions do have that kind of protection.

Now, with your own health officials predicting that up to 35 per cent of Albertans will fall ill, liaising with and advising employers would be a prudent part of any pandemic plan. To the minister: in addition to bringing our employment laws into this century, why won't the minister, in the meantime at least, publicly call on all employers to honour the right of employees to take sick leave in the event that they fall ill?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we do encourage employees to protect each other and to stay home if they are ill. But that's not only specific to H1N1. That's specific to any type of sickness at any time during the year. You know, additionally, if employers feel that they cannot deal with the employees and the employees feel that they've been mistreated or not properly dealt with, I encourage them to call our employment standards contact centre. There probably are other avenues that will be available or could be available to them.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's the problem. They'll call your contact centre, and they'll be told that there is nothing protecting them in our legislation. Meanwhile Albertans are told to stay home if they're sick, but they could lose their jobs if they do so. Employers are told not to ask for sick notes, but the government and AHS itself continue to ask their own employees for sick notes. They're told to stay away from other people so they don't spread the virus, and then they're forced into crowded waiting rooms full of sick people to get proof that they're sick. To the minister of employment. Alberta's workers need this government to display some common sense when it comes to their employment rights. Why won't you?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I want to reiterate that there are very few jurisdictions, if any, in Canada that address specifically paid sick leave. You know, certainly, we again encourage individuals to sort it out before they get themselves into a difficult situation.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Support for the Homeless

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Undiagnosed or untreated mental illness can lead to unhealthy behaviours, including addiction and in some cases criminal activities. These behaviours impact the individual and the community. My questions are to the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs. What is being done in your ministry to help the homeless who have a mental illness?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the strategies in our 10-year plan, as you know, is to no longer discharge people from public institutions like hospitals or correctional facilities to live back on the streets. Two years ago we did establish the Pathways to Housing program. It has a hospital discharge team, and their responsibility is to provide housing first and then the supports that people need to stay successfully housed. This team, as I've told you before, is highly specialized and provides service on a 24-hour basis. In June we added a second team, and that team houses people who are leaving a correctional facility who have a mental illness. They no longer, then, have to go back to live on the street.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister: what concrete steps are being taken to ensure that this program is effective?

Mrs. Fritz: You know, Mr. Speaker, I have had this discussion with this member before. I can tell you, hon. member, that this program is very effective. In fact, it has a 100 per cent success rate because all clients have remained housed, they continue to work toward their goals, and the individuals are no longer required to be in a corrections system at all. I can tell you that the Pathways correction team works closely with the police, the courts, the correctional agencies to deliver the program. And the community is not at risk. I know that's one of your concerns, hon. member, but they're not at risk. Also, safety and stability is essential for clients so that they can recover and, as I said, so that they're no longer living on the streets.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental to the same minister: would the program which is being done in Calgary be brought to Edmonton?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think this question is arising, hon. member, from your being at the Hope Mission launching of Immigration Hall this past week. I know that you have a keen interest in this program coming to Edmonton as the people from the homeless community here in Edmonton have been asking you that. I have been working with the Minister of Justice, who is doing excellent work through SafeCom. We're working with the Pathways to Housing team in Calgary, and we are in discussions as to whether or not that program can be extended to Edmonton, hon. member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Grade 12 Diploma Exams

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Education recently removed the written portion from grade 12 math and science departmental exams. Parents and teachers are concerned that this decision won't allow students to demonstrate that they understand the reasoning process behind the questions they're answering. Last Thursday in the House the minister argued that the student scores in both the written and multiple-choice sections of the exam were relatively identical. To the minister: if this is the case, then why not eliminate the multiple-choice portion and leave the written portion?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I should indicate that in the department we have experts in assessment, and they work with teachers across the province to develop valid and reliable exams. Test questions are created. They're tested. They're field tested. We're very confident that the exams that we have are, in fact, valid and reliable, that they test knowledge. You can't guess and succeed. It's about a 1 in a billion chance of passing an exam by guessing. Multiple-choice and numeric response exams are a time-honoured way of testing. They are valid and reliable, and they're easy to make, to administer, and to mark. So it makes sense to use that form. Now, that doesn't mean that literacy in math and science is not important.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm not sure where out of the air the minister pulled that 1 in a billion statistic on multiple-choice exams.

The decision to strip the exams of written material appears to be purely a cost-saving rather than an educationally sound measure. If the minister is really looking to reduce costs, why doesn't he simply scrap the provincial exams altogether, as the Calgary board of education has recently recommended doing for grades 3, 6, and 9?

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The reason we do achievement tests at grades 3, 6, and 9 is so that we can report to the public about the efficacy, the value of the education system, whether we're succeeding or not. So we have provincial achievement tests. They serve a different purpose. They also can be used very well within the school system as one of the educational tools. But it's important to have that kind of assessment to understand where we're going. Now, can we change that? Absolutely we can change that. We're always open to discussion about more effective ways of doing things and more effective ways of using our resources.

It's not a question simply of saving money. It's a question of getting the best result and investing the resources you have in the most appropriate way to get that result. Going back to the diploma exams, if you're doing two exams and getting the same result, then perhaps one exam would be appropriate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The minister knows very well and has spoken about the importance of diagnostic testing, with diagnostic testing done at the beginning of the year as opposed to when the students have left and don't get their results until three months later, when they're in a different division. I hope you'll consider this.

In the interest of reducing student anxiety while claiming to monitor student progress, will the minister at least consider reducing the 50 per cent value of these one-shot, two-hour grade 12 multiple-choice tests?

Mr. Hancock: Well, I think I heard the word "consider" in there, and so I'd have to say: of course. I've indicated to the system that we're prepared to consider anything. It's only appropriate to consider whether anything can be improved from time to time. The question that then has to be asked in terms of whether you should reduce from 50 per cent to some other number would be a question of how much weight should be placed on a provincial diploma examination in order to ensure that you have a consistent method of assessment across the province so that the marks that go on the diploma and that are used for scholarships and postsecondary application, et cetera, are fair to all students.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Grade 3 Achievement Tests

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last spring I brought forth private member's Motion 503, which urged the government to "eliminate provincial achievement tests for grade 3 students and consider alternative assessments for learning." On March 16, 2009, Motion 503 was carried. Teachers and parents across Alberta are wondering what action the government has taken pertaining to the elimination of grade 3 PATs. Mr. Speaker, my question is the to Minister of Education. What has this government done in re-evaluating the grade 3 PATs since Motion 503 was passed?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again an important question. We do have concerns from across the province, particularly at the grade 3 level, with parents and teachers saying that there's a high degree of stress placed on students. Firstly, I would say that there's absolutely no need for that stress. The assessment that we're doing in grade 3 is about reporting the results of the system. It has no effect on the students' ability to pass or fail, and it plays no part in the assessment of the teacher. It's a valuable tool. The question, then, is: if you're going to give up that valuable tool, what are you replacing it with? What are you going to use to get the type of information you need to assess the system and to help in the assessment of the students?

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary question is to the same minister. The grade 3 PATs cost the government approximately $5 million each year. With the recent cutbacks in education could this not be a way to save money without affecting the learning of grade 3 students in this province?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, the entire program of provincial achievement tests for grades 3, 6, and 9 actually costs us approximately $4 million. The grade 3 achievement tests account for approximately $600,000 per year of that. Now, if you moved to diagnostic assessment as a tool or to some other tool for formative and summative assessment, one of the things that you'd know is that that will actually cost more money, not less. So while we are interested in designing better tools to do formative and summative assessment, we also have to be cognizant of the fact that doing it that way will actually cost more, not less.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you. My final supplemental is to the same minister. Mr. Speaker, when can Albertans expect a definite answer regarding the status of grade 3 PATs? Will the grade 3s this year be expected to write them in June?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. We have had discussions with the ATA and with other stakeholders about the role of PATs at the grade 3 level and moving to a better tool for formative and summative assessment. That discussion is ongoing. We're looking at the various tools that could be used for that. It's important not to move, I believe, to cancel the existing tests, which do have value for the system, until we know that we've got something to move to. The question really can only be answered by saying that if and when we have the new tool in place and are ready to engage in it, then we'll be in a position to cancel the old tests, or if we're certain that we're going to be able to move there, we can cancel the old tests. Will that happen by June? I don't know.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Cabinet Policy Committees

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has five cabinet policy committees: on the economy, on health, on community services, on resources and the environment, and on public safety and services. Committee membership is reserved for PC MLAs only. Last year $1.1 million was spent by these committees, an overexpenditure of 77 per cent from the budget. My first question is to the minister of finance. Is the cabinet policy committee system, which cost taxpayers $1.1 million, ever used for partisan political purposes?

Ms Evans: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. It's against the law. We wouldn't operate that way.

Mr. MacDonald: Again to the same minister: then if that's against the law, why is the PC Party convention resolution booklet divided along the lines of those five cabinet policy committees?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, a good part of what we do in development of policy is consult Albertans. They're not just PC Albertans. They're PCs, but they're also people that have written to their MLAs or spoken to their MLAs. It's only logical that if people are going to consider some of those things at the convention, there would be some discussion, but it is not the primary reason for the business. Our primary reason is to get the information, look at the information from whatever source. We do not sit and function in a CPC for the pure purpose of discussing PC resolutions.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: does the hon. minister consider it wrong that the taxpayers are funding $1.1 million in total for these five committees, and they are being used this weekend at the convention in Red Deer to filter Progressive Conservative Party policy?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, what an enormous distortion of the truth. Absolutely ridiculous to listen to this.

In fact, the kind of discussion that will happen this weekend is absolutely a partisan event, and if people have discussed at a CPC anything that deals with what's going to happen there, it's ancillary to the kinds of discussions that happen at CPCs. The thing that I find most offensive – the people of Alberta expect us to develop and refine policy. This is an opportunity for us to do this. But more than that, we have now got all-party committees that focus on a number of things, members' services, looking at regular and different issues. There's never been a Premier that has had such outreach to gather in the members of the opposition. Then they criticize the development of a policy at any one of our committees. I don't understand it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

PDD Funding for Community Agencies

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In its 2009-2010 budget Seniors and Community Supports had originally allocated $24 million to help the community agencies who are funded by the Persons with Developmental Disabilities with staff recruitment and retention. However, this amount has been reduced to a one-time bonus payment of $14.4 million. I have many constituents who are disappointed by this change. They are concerned that already underpaid employees are going to take their bonuses and look for work elsewhere, that this extra money will not help with staff retention. To the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports: why have you reduced this funding for staff recruitment?

2:40

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I'm very proud to say that with this $14.4 million my ministry has invested more than $74 million to help contracted agencies hire and keep staff since '05-06. We are being responsible by balancing our commitment to staffing resources with managing the program's finances in light of the current economic situation. That is why we are retaining the rest of the funds until later, when we can reassess the situation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is for the same minister, and it also relates to staffing. Minister, what has your ministry done to assist community agencies with their staffing challenges?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the PDD program has and continues to support the community disability services sector on their human resource strategy. This includes activities to support recruitment and retention of agency staff. As I mentioned before, an investment of $74 million since 2005-06 supports the fact that we do appreciate the good work and efforts of our agencies and their dedicated staff.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is also for the same minister. It's obvious that agency staff are crucial to supporting persons with developmental disabilities, who are a vulnerable group of Albertans. However, some of these Albertans require an even higher level of support because of their complex needs. Question: what is the PDD program doing to keep up with the unique needs of these vulnerable Albertans?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, PDD is a well-funded program. Funding for the program has more than doubled since 1999, while the number of individuals served has increased by about 21 per cent. As part of this funding this year's budget includes an increase to address the increasing complexity of clients' needs and caseload growth. Close to $12 million is budgeted this year, with $5 million for complex cases and $6.8 million for caseload growth.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 94 questions and responses today. Two ministers have indicated their desire to add supplementary information to answers they gave yesterday. I'll recognize first the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, and as all know, once I recognize the minister, the individual who was raising the question with the minister yesterday is eligible to raise an additional supplement.

The hon. minister.

Grizzly Bear Protection

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to clarify comments I made in response to the Member for Calgary-Buffalo's questions on grizzly bears yesterday. Yesterday I indicated that our DNA study is currently being peer reviewed by some participants from the successful Yellowstone park study. I'd like to correct that record to indicate that the peer review by grizzly bear experts, including a researcher from the Yellowstone team, was conducted on our entire grizzly bear recovery plan in 2007. A summary of that review is posted on our department's website. It is a different independent scientist who is currently undertaking a review of the results of the DNA study and other material as part of the review on the status of grizzly bears.*

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much for those comments. I only caught some of them, but I guess that a question that's been on my mind and some other people's who study the grizzly bear issue here in Alberta would be: why aren't we listing them right now as a threatened species or a species at risk?

Dr. Morton: Well, the answer is: because they're not a threatened species and because we have half a dozen different initiatives, including something I forgot to mention yesterday, and that is the mapping of the primary core, primary and secondary grizzly habitats, which in conjunction with regulations that will be brought in under the amended Public Lands Act as part of the Alberta Land Stewardship Act will give greater protection from unregulated motorized access into those core grizzly habitat areas. So we're moving forward a very substantive policy change on this file. It doesn't require the type of action that he's suggesting.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Health and Wellness Executive Search Contract

Mr. Liepert: Yes. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Member for Edmonton-Riverview asked me about a contract with a certain executive search firm relative to the search for the Alberta Health Services Board members. In my answer I said that the department had done an RFP. It shows you how unattached I was to what they were doing, because there was not a full RFP. What there was, which is not uncommon in these situations because of time sensitivity, was a request for submissions from about I think it's five or six executive search firms. I will at the appropriate time table the letter and the appendices that go with that letter, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview if you wish.

Dr. Taft: Yeah. Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the minister being forthcoming. My concerns around this are somewhat related to the track record a previous minister of health had with a consultant named Kelley Charlebois and a series of violations of government regulation at that point. So I'd look to the minister of health of today to reassure us and back it up with documentation that all the rules as laid out in government procedures as well as recommended by the Auditor General were actually met in this particular case.

Thank you.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge they certainly were. As I said, I'll table at the appropriate time the copy of the letter and the appendices, and the member can have a look for himself. I also would suggest that if the member somehow doesn't believe what is in these documents, he has the ability to FOIP additional documentation. We are somewhat restricted as to what we can supply unless a submission has been made for freedom of information, and we'd be happy to abide by that.

*See page 1698, left column, paragraph 6

See page 1694, right column, paragraph 5

The Speaker: Hon. members, that will now raise the total, then, of questions and responses to 100 for today.

We'll continue the Routine in just a few seconds from now, when I'll call on an additional member for Members' Statements.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Agri-Trade 2009

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every November for the past 25 years agricultural producers, exhibitors, and people from all over western Canada meet in Red Deer to showcase the ever-changing world of agriculture at Agri-Trade, and this year is no exception.

Agri-Trade is a partnership project between the Red Deer Chamber of Commerce and the Westerner Exposition society. This year the trade show is themed What's New in Agriculture and will run from November 11 to the 14 at Westerner Park. This year over 500 exhibitors will reveal the latest in research and development as well as improved production models and systems to help our ag industry with the crop year ahead. It will be a great opportunity to learn about the latest in GPS technology in addition to practical rural applications for green energy alternative power generation.

Organizers know the importance of keeping Agri-Trade fresh, meaningful, and practical for today's ag producers. Exhibitors are encouraged and rewarded for bringing new ideas and practical applications to the show with the prestigious ag innovation awards. The 2009 Agri-Trade ag innovation award winners and finalists will be recognized on November 11 at the Red Deer Lodge for their excellence in bringing innovative agriculture ideas to fruition.

I'd like to invite all members of this Assembly to attend the 26th annual Agri-Trade and join me in recognizing the farmers and exhibitors for their commitment, hard work, and dedication to this very important industry.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today on behalf of the Member for Highwood to present a petition signed by 20 concerned Albertans from the High River area urging the government to grandfather all currently practising registered massage therapists to enable them to continue practising while upgrading their skills.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to present a petition to this Assembly of 122 names. The petition reads: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government to maintain the current policy for distribution of charitable gaming proceeds." Most of the signatures are from the Calgary area.

2:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am presenting a petition today signed by 295 people from Lethbridge, Glenwood, Magrath, Raymond, Fort Macleod, Grande Prairie, Shaughnessy, Medicine Hat, Coalhurst, Warner, Stand Off, Picture Butte, and New Dayton in which they ask the government of Alberta to grandfather the rights and status of currently practising registered massage therapists and to ensure that their clients will be able to use their insurance in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, did I hear you correctly? A tabling?

Mr. Liepert: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I want to table five copies of a letter I referenced earlier.

The Speaker: Additional tablings? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two letters that I would like to table today. The first is a letter dated July 16, 2009, from our office in Edmonton-Gold Bar to the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness asking for details on the accumulated deficit by Alberta Health Services of $342 million and how this money will be paid back according to Alberta Regulation 15/95 of the Regional Health Authorities Act.

The second tabling that I have today is information. It's a letter dated July 16, 2009. It is a letter to our office from the hon. minister of employment and immigration in Ottawa, and it has to do with EI programs.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a letter I'd like to table plus the appropriate number of copies. It was received at our offices, and it is from Ms Katie Rogers, a board member of Child and Youth Friendly Calgary who is very concerned about the changes that may be occurring to the charitable model as the casino funds could be changed in the upcoming months here in Alberta.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Renner, Minister of Environment, pursuant to the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act the Environmental Protection Security Fund annual report, April 1, 2008, to March 31, 2009.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Danyluk, the Minister of Municipal Affairs, pursuant to the Safety Codes Act the Safety Codes Council 2008 annual report; pursuant to the Government Organization Act the Alberta Boilers Safety Association annual report 2008, the Alberta Elevating Devices and Amusement Rides Safety Association annual report, April 1, 2008, to March 31, 2009, the Petroleum Tank Management Association of Alberta annual report 2008, and authorized accredited agencies activity summary 2006-2007 and 2007-2008.

Calendar of Special Events

The Speaker: Hon. members, this is my first opportunity to advise all members of what November is, what month it is and what day it is, what days there are and what weeks there are.

November is Adoption Awareness Month, Amaryliss Month – that's Huntington syndrome – the Christmas Seal Campaign, Diabetes Awareness Month, Family Violence Prevention Month. It's Prostate Cancer Month. It's the National Community Safety and Crime Prevention Campaign, National Health Food Month, Osteoporosis Month.

Then specific days in November. November 1 is World Vegan Day. November 1 to 7 is Down Syndrome Awareness Week, as it is National Pain Awareness Week. November 2 to 6 is Skilled Trades Week, as it is Pan-Canadian Paralympic School Week, as it is Media Literacy Week, as it is National Technology Week. November 2 to 8 is Canada Career Week. November 4 was Take Our Kids to Work.

November 5 is the International Volunteer Managers Appreciation Day. November 5 to 11 is Veterans' Week. November 6 is International Day for Preventing the Exploitation of the Environment in War and Armed Conflict. November 8 is World Town Planning Day. November 9 is International Day against Fascism and Anti-Semitism. November 11 is Remembrance Day. November 12 is International Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease Day. November 12 is also World Usability Day. November 14 is World Diabetes Day.

November 15 is International PEN Day of the Imprisoned Writer, as it is World Day of Remembrance for Road Traffic Victims. November 15 to 21 is Bullying Awareness Week. November 16 to 20 is Geography Awareness Week. November 15 to 21 is also National Addictions Awareness Week, as it is National Marfan Awareness Week, as it is Restorative Justice Week. November 16 is International Day for Tolerance. November 18 is National Day of Remembrance for Road Crash Victims. November 19 is World Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease Day, as it is World Toilet Day.

November 20 is Africa Industrialization Day, as it is Universal Children's Day, as it is National Child Day, as it is the 20th anniversary of the adoption by the United Nations General Assembly of the convention on the rights of the child, as it is Sir Wilfrid Laurier Day. November 21 is World Hello Day, as it is World Television Day. November 21 to 28 is YMCA World Peace Week. November 22 to December 6 is Opération Tendre la main. November 24 to 30 is National Home Fire Safety Week. November 24 to December 1 is National AIDS Awareness Week.

November 25 is International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women. November 25 to December 6 is the White Ribbon Campaign. November 28, an interesting day, is Buy Nothing Day. November 29 is International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. November 30 is Computer Security Day.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, please, Mr. Speaker. I rise under Standing Order 13(2). That was quite a long list. Did the hon. Speaker miss a very important 30th anniversary date that's going to occur in November in the constituency of Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock?

The Speaker: Oh, well. We'll move on to Orders of the Day.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 49

Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. What an immense pleasure to be able to rise and bring to third reading Bill 49. I have to start by thanking all members of this Legislature on both sides of the aisle for supporting this bill through both readings and Committee of the Whole. Also, I would like to extend my sincere gratitude to the community of firefighters, in particular their association, the Fire Chiefs Association, the Insurance Bureau of Canada, and, of course, any and all employees of Municipal Affairs Alberta who have collaborated in drafting this particular piece of legislation.

I need not describe this legislation in detail as it has been debated at length through the readings. But now, as of today, Mr. Speaker, and upon proclamation of this bill our firefighters will have the peace of mind knowing that they can do what they do best in goodwill without having to question their decisions, without having to worry about having litigation filed against them stemming from the work that they do in goodwill, saving our lives and saving our property. So once again I encourage everybody in this House to vote in favour of this bill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure and certainly an honour to be able to stand up and speak to this bill. I attend the firefighters remembrance day every year. We roll through the names, and as each name is read, the bell sounds. It is a very emotional ceremony, but it also points out that our firefighters don't just die from accidents; they also die from diseases that they can actually catch while in service. This bill doesn't have particularly anything to do with that, but I just wanted to mention how much we owe to our firefighters, who put their lives on the line for us every day.

Under the bill firefighters, fire departments, and municipalities will not be liable for damages caused by responding to a fire emergency. I guess my question is: how on earth did we ever get to this point? How did we really lose our sense of any common sense when we send people out to fight on our behalf, and then we have to worry about insurance companies fighting in the background?

Insurance companies appear to be running our lives. I think of mothers who would just love to throw a pile of kids in the back of their van and go down to a park and either have a picnic or whatever. They're terrified in case something happens because they might not have the right kind of liability insurance to take their kids down the road. How did we get to this situation? One of my hon. colleagues has mentioned lawyers. Isn't that funny? That's my next point. Really, the only ones that win in any of these kinds of situations are definitely the lawyers.

3:00

If insurance companies want to waste their money fighting each other – and we all know that insurance companies have many stables of lawyers on retainers – that's fine. Good for them. But I don't believe that public taxpayer dollars should be used to defend them in these insurance claims or however people are trying to claim against the municipalities. These are municipal dollars. These are taxpayer dollars. This is the money that could well be spent on upgrading equipment, upgrading the skill levels, hiring extra firefighters, and retaining these very invaluable public servants that put their lives on the line for us. One of the amounts that appeared – I think it's Calgary and Edmonton. The lawsuits were seeking $60 million in compensation. That's $60 million that comes out of the taxpayer's pocket. I think it is, from that point of view, absolutely wrong.

It stipulates that someone is not liable so long as they're acting in good faith. Well, the cynic in me comes out when I hear that sort of stuff. What on earth would make us think that we have highly trained people, i.e. the firefighters, that would actually want to go out and harm people? That is not their training. That is not why they're there. I think that the average person in the human race actually wants to pay it forward. They want to go and help their fellow man because – you know what? – maybe further down the road they are going to need help.

I think this is a good bill. I think it's time that we protected those that give their lives to protect us.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. I appreciate this opportunity to say a few words about Bill 49. The first thing I would like to express is my gratitude to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs for bringing this forward. I know he worked well in advance of the drafting of this legislation on the whole idea. I think firefighters certainly should be in the fire hall, hopefully responding to calls as they come in and spending less time with various legal teams going over what should or should not have been done on the last call. I appreciate the hon. member's efforts.

I also would like say on the record that another individual, a former fire chief in the city, Randy Wolsey, has worked very, very hard to bring this legislation forward. Certainly, it's been discussed at the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association among various other levels of government. Hopefully, this will resolve all the issues that have been discussed.

I would just like to particularly stand up and thank those individuals, the hon. member, and also the former fire chief of the city of Edmonton for the work that they have done on this bill. I certainly would agree with the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East that this is sort of a confusing issue, why firefighters aren't just being left alone to do their jobs and not have to worry about the legal implications. Surely, the insurance industry is getting by, and they don't need to second-guess our first line defenders that protect us all from fire.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that being the third speaker, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, then.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to be able to rise and speak to this bill. I think a number of participants have already spoken about the many benefits of the bill and the apparent craziness, of course, of firefighters having to go in and recount the reasonability of an action they took in the course of trying to deal with an emergency in very stressful situations. That whole process, of course, does strike one as being quite inappropriate, so to the extent that this negates that, that's a good thing.

I know it's a late date for a question, so I'm going to simply talk about it a little bit and hope that maybe the members opposite might find some way to include an answer in the course of their ultimate statements on it. My only concern that I guess I have about this bill – I hope I'm wrong, and alternatively if I'm not, I hope there's a willingness on the other side to look at returning to it if it becomes a problem – is that by limiting the liability to the body, so saying that where there is good-faith action, all that kind of stuff, the firefighters will not be liable, what you don't do is negate somebody's liability for actions of the firefighters.

This wasn't actually, I think, necessarily something that lawyers generated; I think it was insurance companies that generated it. Insurance companies that didn't want to pay out would turn around and go after the firefighters in a way to say, "Wait a minute; you know, we paid for this, but it wasn't our decision to dump X amount of water onto this," and all that kind of stuff. They try to limit their liability by mischaracterizing the actions of the firefighter. That's not good, so I certainly appreciate that the firefighter ought not to be drawn into this.

The concern becomes whether what happens is that the litigation then ends up being between the insurance company and the homeowner, let's say, for example, where the insurance company says: "Well, in fact, we would pay it, but this damage arose because the firefighters went nuts. They were doing it all in good faith, but it really wasn't the best course of action, so for that reason we are not going to pay out X or Y percentage, because of the firefighters' enthusiasm in terms of fixing the problem." Then what happens is that it actually turns into litigation between the consumer, the insurance purchaser, and the insurance company, and actually, interestingly, the firefighters still get called into it to give evidence one way or the other. They're not liable, but ultimately the people who shoulder it are the consumers who have bought insurance.

I would have thought that maybe the better way to craft the act would have been to have said that damages that arise from the good-faith efforts, blah, blah, blah, are not subject to lawsuit or whatever, that kind of thing. You identify the damages as opposed to the perpetrator so that you don't still have different parties fighting over the same thing. That is my concern. I absolutely appreciate much of the best intentions behind the bill, but I worry that we may inadvertently be shortchanging the consumers of insurance, the homeowner, the person who has the fire, for instance. I would have preferred to have seen the liability eliminated as opposed to the holder of the liability being limited, if that makes sense.

Anyway, those are my concerns, and I look forward to hearing maybe some comments back on that issue from members opposite. Notwithstanding that, I believe the hon. leader of the third party has already suggested that our caucus will be supporting it, and we will be, but I certainly hope that there will be some attention paid to this additional issue in the future and some consideration given to remedying that problem if it should arise.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I won't be rising again on this bill as I will be asking for the question at the end of this debate, but just to address the comments by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, individual firefighters under the Alberta Municipal Government Act are already protected. Any employees of the government of Alberta and/or any municipality who are performing any duties that are relevant to their employment are not subject to any litigation; the employer is. In this case we are sheltering the employers, being the fire departments. No fireman or firewoman out there should have to be concerned that now they individually will be litigated against as opposed to the fire department or the municipality. Those loops now are effectively closed.

3:10

Now, what insurance companies choose or choose not to do relative to the actual policyholder or homeowner is something that we cannot address through the Municipal Government Act. That act is not relevant to it. Obviously, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona knows, being trained in law herself, that under tort litigation if there are grounds under which a statement of claim can be laid, obviously insurance companies can still proceed against other parties. My goal in this bill, Mr. Speaker, was to protect firefighters, fire departments, and municipalities so that taxpayers don't pay out and they can peacefully do their work.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. Additional speakers?

Shall I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs to close the debate?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will ask for the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 49 read a third time]

Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

19. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that a Select Special Auditor General Search Committee of the Legislative Assembly be appointed consisting of the following members, namely Mr. Mitzel, chair; Mr. Lund, deputy chair; Ms Blakeman; Mr. Campbell; Mr. Lukaszuk; Mr. MacDonald; Mr. Marz; Ms Notley; and Mr. Rogers, for the purpose of inviting applications for the position of Auditor General and to recommend to the Assembly the applicant it considers most suitable to this position.

- (1) The chair and members of the committee shall be paid in accordance with the schedule of category A committees provided in the most current Members' Services Committee allowances order.
- (2) Reasonable disbursements by the committee for advertising, staff assistance, equipment and supplies, rent, travel, and other expenditures necessary for the effective conduct of its responsibilities shall be paid subject to the approval of the chair.
- (3) In carrying out its responsibilities, the committee may with the concurrence of the head of the department utilize the services of members of the public service employed in that department and of the staff employed by the Assembly.
- (4) The committee may without leave of the Assembly sit during a period when the Assembly is adjourned.
- (5) When its work has been completed, the committee shall report to the Assembly if it is sitting. During a period when the Assembly is adjourned, the committee may release its report by depositing a copy with the Clerk and forwarding a copy to each member of the Assembly.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, we have had an indication from the Auditor General that he would be retiring, and it's appropriate to move forward now to set up a committee. The members that are being put forward are members who sit already on the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices.

The Speaker: Additional comment from anyone?

[Government Motion 19 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Evening Sittings

20. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 4(1) the Assembly shall meet on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings for consideration of government business for the remainder of the 2009 fall sitting unless, on motion by the Government House Leader made before 6 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned to the following sitting day.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have a considerable amount of business on the agenda. We know that Bill 50 is of significant interest to people and are anticipating that there will be a lot of members who will want to speak to that. We had more members than I anticipated that wanted to speak to Government Motion 16. It's prudent to plan to have the time available so that the business of the House can be properly dealt with.

The Speaker: Hon. members, under Standing Order 4(1) this is a nondebatable motion.

[Government Motion 20 carried]

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act

[Adjourned debate November 3: Mr. Chase]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak in second reading to Bill 48, the Crown's Right of Recovery Act. I find this bill really frustrating because here was a really good idea that had a lot of support and a lot of support outside of this Chamber; that is, specifically parts 2, 3, and 4, which would have enabled the province to go after third parties. It's called third-party liability. Specifically, this was around tobacco products. We had something that people in the House and outside of the House were really interested in. For some reason, well, certainly unknown to this member – I sure hope it makes sense to the other side – they decided to marry an additional piece to it. That is part 1 of this act, which is about chasing down criminals to make them pay for a right to recover health costs.

I don't know why they would put these two things together, but they did. I don't know if they were trying to be cute – I hope not – but I think that they tied something that is important and credible to a piece of political theatre. Certainly, in reviewing the media reaction to the proposals when this bill came out from the minister of health, that's what it is. It's political theatre. It's playing into a Conservative agenda to look tough on crime. You know what? I'm supportive of a number of measures to actually be tough on crime, but I'm not very supportive of political theatre to appear to be tough on crime, and that's what we've now got in this bill.

You know, when I had a call from a community member who runs one of the agencies that is trying to stop smoking and stop the effects of smoking and a number of other things, here he is going: "Please, please, please, will you support this bill? We understand it's got this part 1 to it, and we're not too keen on that, but please don't let that stop you." Well, he understood immediately the problems that were created by this little piece of political theatre.

Let me go specifically into the background here. You know, let me talk about some stuff that could be done and that has been proven to be effective if we want to actually cut down on crime. We can talk on the social justice side, and then we can talk on the punishment side of things as well. I know my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo is going to speak to this as well. He has a keen interest in being tough on crime, and he's got some things to add to this discussion.

Here are some of the things that can be done that we know work. It's things like literacy. It's things like housing. It's things like drug treatment. Here's an example of where the government did do something right, where they instituted the drug treatment courts, where someone who's appearing before the courts – and it's really around drug use which is contributing to an individual's participation in a number of crimes, generally petty but very time consuming to the system. You know, diverting into a drug treatment court is very effective: very cost-effective, very effective for the individual, very effective for society.

If you actually want to do something that's going to cut down on crime, get involved in something like that. But to get us involved in something where we're now going to try and chase down somebody that has been, first of all, convicted of a crime, and then we're going to try and chase them down and get court costs from them for whatever health costs this crime incurred in the health system – you know, the minister has made the point that not all criminals are poor. Fair enough. Not all of them are, but a lot of them are. How much money are we going to be willing to spend for our Crown prosecutors to chase down a bunch of low-lives who don't have that much money so that we can extricate what little bit of money they do have from them? What is the point of that?

Secondly, we want to chase down people who do have some money that we can extricate from them. Again, where is the systems audit on this? Where is the business case that actually shows me that this is worth while doing aside from some sort of, well, political theatre, some sort of gimmick to show the world, to wave the flag that this is a government that's tough on crime?

3:20

What I see here is a government that wants to spend taxpayers' money in order to make people believe that they're tough on crime, but how is chasing down a criminal – make sure that they've been convicted – for costs that they incurred in the health care system actually going to change anything except for some sort of after-the-fact punishment? The likelihood that significant monies would be recovered to actually be worth the expenditure of monies to obtain that money to me seems to be very small, but I welcome the business case if the government can produce one. Frankly, I haven't seen it so far, and this bill has been on the Order Paper since the spring, so there's been plenty of time to produce that evidence.

Legal aid is another issue that's in here. It would be truly a stroke of genius from the government if we end up with the government spending money through the Crown prosecutors to chase people for this money and then end up with people qualifying for legal aid to be able to fight the Crown prosecutor's case back again. The taxpayers of Alberta will end up paying both sides of the same case in which we're trying to extricate money from someone who may or may not have it.

You know, it's one thing to go after drug barons who demonstrably have yachts and houses and jewellery dripping off of them, but who are the preponderance of people that are involved in crime?

They get caught because they're stupid, and if they're stupid, what is the likelihood that they are really effective businesspeople and are racking up a lot of money through their particular crimes that we can then obtain when they somehow end up in hospital as a result of this crime?

Not too keen on part 1, as you can tell, Mr. Speaker. Parts 2, 3, and 4, on the other hand, are something that we had all been looking forward to, actually. The idea that we can enable legislation that gives the province the ability to launch a lawsuit against a tobacco company and recover the cost of health services for treating tobacco-related illnesses and disease is a good one. We have seen that there is a business case for that one. It has played out in a number of other places.

We'd in fact be joining seven other provinces in legislating this ability to recover costs. We've got British Columbia, Ontario, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador, and New Brunswick. Out of those, we already have two that have launched lawsuits against the tobacco companies, and that's British Columbia and New Brunswick. We've had the constitutionality of this tested, and it appears to be holding up whereas I have severe reservations that the constitutionality of part 1, in fact, would be able to make it through a Charter challenge or a constitutional challenge.

How do we benefit? How do Albertans benefit from something like this suit against tobacco companies to recover the cost of health services? I think there's an argument about justice, to be able to hold them accountable for the wrongful behaviour; there's a disclosure argument, to be able to get at internal documents; there's a possible compensation argument, compensation for those health costs, which again come back to the taxpayers; and I think also an argument that would encourage companies to change their behaviour through an incentive or a disincentive program – one would argue this is a disincentive program – through getting them to stop acting in a way and promoting people purchasing their products. You know, we've got some good ideas to be doing the sections around the third-party liability.

One of the interesting parts of this is retroactivity. It looks to me that in section 50 of the bill – and I know that in second reading I'm not supposed to be going and doing a sectional analysis – there is no limitation to the retroactivity of this legislation, which is an interesting point because if this applies to both part 1 and parts 2, 3, and 4, we've opened quite a Pandora's box there. I'm interested in hearing from the sponsor of the bill if they can clarify that one.

I'd really like to support this bill.

Mr. MacDonald: But you're reluctant.

Ms Blakeman: Well, I don't know why the government chooses to do this. There must be method in their madness, but truly all I can see is the madness of this. Other than the theme of chasing down someone who's done something wrong in order to get costs, the difference between a third-party liability situation with multinational tobacco companies and chasing down crooks to try and recoup some kind of cost to the health care system, I think, are worlds apart. For me the likelihood and the scale of what we are talking about here makes the argument.

I'll be looking to see how others are reacting to this legislation. I mean, clearly, the government has enough votes to pass this bill, but I'm interested in that business case. I'm interested in what kind of policy documents, what kind of background information, what kind of commission studies they looked at – and maybe they can table them so that we can all see them – to decide that this was a good idea. It looks to me like something that came fairly off the cuff. They thought it would look good and they would just throw it in. As a result, they've now created a less than optimum situation.

I know that my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo does want to speak to this, so I'm going to make way for that, but just one final observation. We do end up with a number of people in our system who are either committing crimes as a result of drug addiction, which, frankly, doesn't make them a great person – it makes them a drug addict and kind of stupid, in my opinion – but also people who have mental illness. I would argue that I think there would be a disincentive here for pleading guilty to those crimes if they know that with that guilty plea they are then going to be pursued for some sort of cost repayment. There's a disincentive there.

I was speaking earlier about incentives and disincentives to change behaviour. There's been a lot of work done in the court systems to try to get people to plead guilty and save us the cost of a court trial, and here we've created a situation which is a disincentive to pleading guilty to a particular crime because as soon as they do, assuming that there have been health-related costs here, they're going to get nailed with somebody chasing them for a payback of those costs. So there's another example of where we've created more money, or at least not saved it, in order to pursue this fairly narrow avenue with the fairly unlikely outcome of being able to recoup the amount of money that was spent on those original health costs.

A couple of observations. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Did the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona catch my eye on this matter? Then the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I appreciate the opportunity to rise and speak to this bill in second reading, the Crown's Right of Recovery Act.

As has already been stated, this is a bill that is sort of like a poison pill. There's a good piece in the bill, but then there's a piece within the bill which is very, very problematic. You know, I don't actually think it was accidental; I think it was done on purpose. It's really quite frustrating because there's one very good policy objective which is reflected in this bill and one very, very bad one.

3:30

To speak about the good policy objective first, the whole question of having the ability to sue tobacco companies for the costs of health care that are incurred by our health care system in treating people who suffer from smoking-related illness and disease, I can say that I was actually very privileged, in fact, to have been part of the Attorney General's office staff in B.C. in the late '90s, when we were first sitting around the table there talking about whether this piece of legislation ought to be introduced and whether this type of thing ought to be pursued. In fact, it was the B.C. government that first initiated this process across the country. It was very interesting sitting behind the first row of people at the table and taking notes, listening to these very thoughtful legal minds talking about the degree to which this issue would fly in Canada. Ultimately it was determined that we could proceed with it, and we did. Then, of course, years and years and years of litigation by the tobacco companies have resulted in only a relatively recent decision of the Supreme Court of Canada to pursue the matter or to at least give governments the opportunity to pursue the matter.

We know that hundreds of millions and indeed billions of dollars have been recovered from tobacco companies in the U.S., so we know that it is a worthwhile project to pursue this avenue of recovery. Let's be clear: tobacco companies are not themselves the patients. They are simply the companies which profit off the sale of an addictive and very, very unhealthy substance, so it makes perfect sense that at this point we might start looking to them to help defray the many, many costs which we experience within our system as a result of people becoming addicted to tobacco.

That's why, of course, we completely agree with this piece of legislation and, in fact, have called on this government in the past repeatedly to bring in this type of legislation, so that part of the legislation is very good. The problem, of course, is that it's tied to another piece of legislation or another initiative which is deeply, deeply disturbing. It's all very sort of easy and convenient to take yet another swipe at criminals in one of those superficial, populist attempts at making political points.

What, in fact, is happening with this piece of legislation represents a very, very significant attack on some very, very important principles, both legislative as well as political, not only in this province but across the country. The idea that we can introduce into what should be a universal system of health care the notion of fault-based responsibility on the part of the patient is fundamentally the top of a very, very slippery slope because that's what this legislation would do. Patients who have through a criminal act incurred health care costs will now have to pay back the system, and that is, in essence, a fault-based assessment of their entitlement to universal health care. Once you start down that road, you know, today it's criminals; tomorrow it's drinkers; the day after it's obese people. I mean, who knows? Right? It's a fundamental principle.

Ms Blakeman: Skiers.

Ms Notley: Absolutely. Skiers, mountain climbers. There's a spectrum, and once you decide it's okay to examine that spectrum, then there's really no clear limit that's placed on it. All you need is to have the public sufficiently concerned about that particular group of people at that particular given time, and then, yay, you've got the ability to add them to the list of people who may not be entitled to public health care or universal public health care.

The other point that needs to be made, which has already been made but which is really important, is that if you look at the profile of criminals in Canada, if you look at the profile of people who currently occupy our remand centre and our prisons, we know that they are disproportionately aboriginal. We know that they are poor. We know that they have a disproportionate connection to a dysfunctional child welfare system. We know that about a third of them suffer from untreated, undiagnosed, unidentified mental illness. This is the profile of the people that this government wants to spend a bunch of money going after.

It doesn't surprise me. It doesn't actually fall too far outside of the general sort of approach to issue management that this government adopts. You know, we stand up for the poor put-upon oil company, and if we can find a way to go after someone that doesn't have any money yet another time, we'll do it. Nonetheless, it just don't make sense. It doesn't make sense from a pragmatic point of view because, of course, most of these people don't have the money, and I would suggest that most people understand the nature of our justice system and our criminal system well enough to know that the simplistic, reactive "Oh, chain them up and throw them behind bars and also hit them with a bill" kind of approach to managing justice issues is absolutely not the effective way to go.

It's interesting. I heard the hon. Attorney General on the radio this morning talking about some very progressive initiatives that the government is undertaking, the underlying assumption of which is that criminals aren't born, they're made, and that if we're really going to really reduce crime and criminal activity, we need to get into the communities and we need to support the families and the criminal before they become a criminal. Then if they do actually engage in a criminal act, we need to come up with less punitive and more rehabilitative mechanisms to change their course so that they can become contributing members of society. These were very progressive, well-thought-out points that were being made, yet, you know, good luck doing that while we're also mailing them a bill for their broken arm or their surgery or their stab wound or whatever it is. I mean, it just doesn't really all seem to come together in a very well-thought-out kind of way. It's this particular piece of legislation that, I would say, represents a very unfortunate wrong turn off a path that otherwise might actually bring about some good results.

Those are sort of our general comments on this bill as they stand now. We'll get into it in more detail. We absolutely cannot support a bill that would fundamentally undermine universality and which adopts such an ineffective, punitive response to the issue of trying to reduce criminal activity and making our communities safer and, ultimately, which also appears to be, at the very least, a cost driver, something that incurs costs as opposed to saving costs.

Anyway, those will be all our comments at this point. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Comments, questions under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: My questions are to the member who spoke last here. How successful will the government be in suing the tobacco companies when they are taxing cigarettes? You know, how long will the lawsuit take? There's a precedent in the U.S. — the governor won — but how many years will it take and what kind of money will it cost, in your opinion, to sue the tobacco companies?

3:40

The Speaker: Hon. member, do you choose to respond?

Ms Notley: Only to say that I haven't done all the research on that, but I do believe there's tremendous potential to recover great amounts of money notwithstanding the important points made by the member, which I'm sure the tobacco companies themselves might also raise. But I still think there is merit to that element of the bill.

The Speaker: Additional questions or comments under 29(2)(a)? Then the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo to continue the debate.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and speak on Bill 48, Crown's Right of Recovery Act. It is particularly advantageous to me to go after two very well-thought-out speakers prior to me, who have given me much to think about and had many good arguments as to why this bill has both positives and negatives attached to it. I, too, will start with what I see as the positive in this bill.

If we look at the part of this bill which is directed towards suing tobacco companies for recovery of tobacco-related health costs, this is one of those things that has been long awaited, I believe, in Alberta both by people who have watched the litigation happen in other provinces as well as in neighbourhoods south of the border.

There is no doubt that tobacco companies have made a great deal of profit basically selling an insidious product that gets people addicted and has significant consequences for them. Yes, there is a choice element to that. However, at the end of the day if you're in business, the government has put you in business. You still have costs associated with doing business, and the costs associated with being in the tobacco business are paying for the health-related costs that they incur. This is going to be a way for our government to get its hands on a recovery of some dollars that they've expended on both trying to keep Albertans alive and in some cases, in many cases, trying to keep people comfortable as they die from tobacco-related illnesses.

Going back — and this is some time — both my grandparents on my father's side passed away from what I believe were most likely tobacco-related incidents. My grandfather passed away at about 72 of cancer and my grandmother at about 65 from a massive heart attack. Both of them, as well as loving me, loved cigarettes immensely, and they'd smoke a couple of packs a day. There is no doubt there was a certain amount of choice to it, but at the same time when they were growing up, they were addicted and maybe not aware of some of the challenges and difficulties of, I guess, getting off those products. Needless to say, I think it's long overdue that our province should go back and get some of those health care costs afforded by an industry that has, I guess, to a certain extent preyed on people's weaknesses. Like I said, this is long overdue.

If we look at the other part of the bill, that I have more trouble with, it is the argument that people who are charged with a criminal act or found guilty under an act and have incurred medical expenditures to someone else are going to be liable for paying these services. At first blush, second blush, third blush I think anyone who looks at this bill will no doubt recognize it for what is, political grandstanding. When people hear it without thinking about the consequences, they'll say: yeah, this is great; a criminal shouldn't get away with that. They may say that at first blush. When they think more about the ramifications for, I guess, society, for the betterment of our province, for the betterment of us going forward as a collective people and as neighbours and friends with children, or whatever the deal is, this doesn't appear to be very good legislation.

It flies in the face of what many of our forebears and many people in Canada still believe, that the greatest thing about Canada is the universality of our health care system. It doesn't matter whether you're a smoker or a drinker or if you're a young criminal or an old criminal; somehow, if you need health care, it's going to be available to you. I think this legislation before us infringes on this principle of universality.

I guess it is very easy for us to say: yeah, criminals are the people who we are going after; they don't deserve this type of treatment; they don't deserve getting health care. I tell you what. If we take a long look in the mirror, maybe sometimes there are some of us in this room that may not deserve health care on some days. Nevertheless, you know, but for the grace of God there go I, and right now I can get some health care. Everyone in this room I think can get health care, but there may be a day and a time when — you never know — the shoe may be on the other foot.

Many of the people who find themselves in front of the criminal justice system are not only poor but young, maybe 18 to 25. They find themselves involved in a racket or a situation where they've done something wrong. After spending some time in jail, after doing a five- or six-year stint for something they did while drunk or high or just being stupid, the next thing you know, they come out. They went to prison. We try to do all these decent things for them in prison. We talk about, you know, giving them some opportunities to go back to school and all that stuff. The guy comes out at 25 or 26 and, lo and behold, there we are with another half million dollar fee for them to pay off. How does that really lead to that person getting on with his life?

I know these are difficult things, and it's not always black and white. But I think that in this case we're better off thinking about those things and thinking about the ramifications of what the greater principle is towards the universality of things and why they came into effect in the first place. We weren't casting judgment, so we weren't castigating people who are poor or rich, black or white, who are walking this way or walking that way from being refused health care.

There are a few other points I would like to make, adding onto that general theme. Not only are people more subject to being involved in the criminal justice system when they're young but also when they've had a mental illness, when they've had a drug addiction, when they've come from broken homes, yada yada yada. Let's face it. It's easy for us to pick out, you know, some of the more high-profile cases of people who, I guess, we always think of when we make this kind of legislation. But if we think about the fact that a lot of these people do have problems and that by coming out of a system – is our society going to be better off or worse off because of it? Well, I'd suggest that in this case we'd probably be worse off.

3:50

Furthermore, I really appreciate the comments of my colleague from Edmonton-Centre. Where's the business case? If there was a business case that this would actually save taxpayers some dollars and not be political theatre, well, hey, that's another thing.

Hey, I'll support this government. If they want to get tough on crime and hire as many police officers as they want, fair enough. Tell you what, dude: go nuts. Let's prioritize. Let's do things. Let's catch up our policing numbers to what they are in Toronto, Vancouver, Montreal, places like that, to a population per capita number that's reasonable. Let's face it, guys. If you're worried that you're looking soft on crime, that's where you really do it. Yeah, you can get some headlines with this for a couple of days, and you can flog it out to whoever you want, but it appears to me to be bad legislation and not well thought out.

Those are some of the things. I'll support you all the way in your wanting to go nuts on crime by hiring the correct police officers, by keeping people in jail, lobbying for long offences, and all that stuff. Anyway, that's where I am.

Now that I got sort of done with that part, I do have some other news to bring to the forefront here, whether it's news or a procedure. It is an amendment. If it is possible, sir, I'd like to have that distributed. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Just wait a second, sir, while the pages distribute this amendment, including one up here so that I know what you're talking about.

Mr. Hehr: Do you mind if I read that into the record, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: You can proceed.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much. For those following along at home, my amendment reads that "Crown's Right of Recovery Act be not now read a second time but that the subject matter of the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Health in accordance with Standing Order 74.2."

The Speaker: You're on the amendment. Do you have anything further to say on it?

Mr. Hehr: Yes, I do.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Mr. Hehr: Right now the Standing Committee on Health has no legislation before it. With this proposed legislation I think there's been an admission by the Minister of Justice – and she may wish to comment on this amendment – that this could be fraught with legal challenges, that this could be an expense to Alberta citizens and may in fact delay things going forward if we don't send this to the committee on health to really discuss it, to vet whether this is the right thing to do for Albertans.

I think it really would allow us to discuss whether recovering the costs from criminals would violate the Canada Health Act. We could maybe spend some time, bring in some people with knowledge on that who would be able to discuss it. We could also bring in some groups in the community to see whether that's really where we want to go here in Alberta with fighting crime and to hear from them whether this is a way for us to fight crime or whether we should concentrate on other more traditional methods. I think it would be an excellent opportunity to put the all-party committees to work, which is what they're meant to do, and it would be a great discussion piece. It looks like the rest of the bill, that everyone here spoke positively of so far, would sail through, and we could go from there.

I invite other members to support this legislation, and I invite some other members to say why or why not they would find this amendment appropriate.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're now dealing with an amendment. The amendment document says June 2 on it. That's incorrect. The amendment was moved on November 4, 2009. That's a minor matter of bookkeeping, so that's appropriate.

We're now on the very fine line of the amendment, which is a referral amendment.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising to support the Member for Calgary-Buffalo in his amendment to refer Bill 48, Crown's Right of Recovery Act, to the Standing Committee on Health. For a couple of reasons I'm willing to support this. I'll admit that this creates somewhat of the same dilemma we had earlier in that it will slow down the passage of this bill, which I think a number of us are unhappy to see. Nonetheless, in order for me to be able to support the bill in the state that it's in, with part 1 attached to it, I need some information that's not forthcoming from the members in the Chamber. So I would be looking for it to be referred to the Standing Committee on Health with the hopes that they would invite certain stakeholder groups in to present to us on the feasibility of part 1.

[Mr. Lund in the chair]

I mean, I would be interested in hearing from John Howard Society, for example, or Elizabeth Fry Society on how likely this part 1 would be to be successful given their particular knowledge of people who end up being incarcerated. Of course, John Howard works with people both inside and outside of the corrections system, but they certainly have a very specific expertise, as does Elizabeth Fry.

I would like to hear from the experts that work with our aboriginal populations, which is another group, as my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona mentioned, you know, that is overrepresented in the inmate population and in the remand centres as well in Canada.

I'd like to hear from advocates for the mentally ill about how likely this is to be successful. Are we dealing with, perhaps unbeknownst to me, people that end up being convicted and serving time, that have a mental illness and have a whole pile of money that I haven't been aware of, having served many of those same people as my constituents for a number of years? Maybe they've all been sleeping on mattresses stuffed with hundred dollar bills all this time that I didn't know about.

I think it would also be useful to hear from someone that's working with the drug treatment courts for what their take on this particular proposal would be.

I think there's an opportunity for us to hear from experts in the community that may be able to advise us on the feasibility of this. You know, if it's going to work, then I might be willing to go there, but without trying too hard, I can see a whole bunch of reasons why it's not going to work, and I have to figure out what I'm going to do if this legislation goes forward with part 1 in it. That's the problematic part. I've got no problem supporting parts 2, 3, and 4, but part 1 is hugely problematic.

Therefore, I appreciate my colleague's attempt to try and shine some light on this by bringing forward an amendment to refer the bill to that standing committee for possible input. I mean, the committee can take a reference of a bill and from there work a number of ways on how to gather information and report back to the House. There is a time limit on it that has been established. There is a requirement that within a certain period of time there be a report back to the House.

4:00

There are a number of ways of working through that committee and getting certain tests met, which have not, unfortunately, been able to be met by the government when they have taken this on by themselves. But because of what the standing orders offer us and that we could take advantage of through this referral motion, I think it's a possibility of finding a way to work with this particular piece of legislation. I sure wish that the government hadn't decided to create this particular bog, but they did, so I appreciate my colleague's attempt to try and give us a way out of the bog.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I urge all of my colleagues to vote in favour of the amendment.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any other speakers on the amendment? We will recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise in favour of the amendment from the Member for Calgary-Buffalo. Right now the Standing Committee on Health has no legislation before it. With the proposed legislation, that could be in violation of the Canada Health Act, there is a necessity for greater scrutiny of this bill, which would be accomplished by referring the bill to the committee.

The reason this bill should be referred to the Standing Committee on Health is directly tied to the recovery of health services costs incurred during the commission of a crime. However, it is important as to when the bill is referred to the committee. If this legislation passes second reading and then is referred, the principle of the bill is fixed, and it is questionable whether the offending sections would be able to be extracted. So this bill must be referred before the vote on the bill has taken place in second reading.

There have been several experts that have suggested that provisions that would allow the recovery of costs from criminals would violate the Canada Health Act, so there comes the universality of the Canada Health Act. Even the Minister of Justice stated one time that she believes the government is confident that the legislation could resist a court challenge, so the government expects a court challenge as well. An issue that has the government anticipating a court challenge most definitely needs further assessment and consultation. This would be best accomplished through referring this to the committee, where there will be enough time for a serious cost-benefit analysis of this bill and for stakeholder consultation as well. The fact that the government already seems to be anticipating a legal challenge to this legislation is enough to suggest referring this bill to the committee.

I believe the government is playing a political game with health care. The reason for this is that the government feels Albertans do not believe the government is tough enough on crime. To counter this, they most likely proposed this legislation and piggybacked this onto the other legislation.

At first reading and hearing of the ability to recover health care costs from criminals, many Albertans could be very supportive of this, but, Mr. Speaker, the point is: how are the criminals going to pay it back? They don't have the money to begin with. If the criminals were well off, I don't think they would be committing the crimes. The majority of criminals will not be able to pay the funds for the health care service they receive, so the benefit that can be obtained from this legislation may be negligible with respect to the criminal aspects.

To reinforce the point, they could very well endanger Canada Health transfers. Under the universality of health care this will endanger the transfer of payments from the federal government. This is especially important considering that after the budget was raised this year, the government was saying that they feel they are entitled to $700 million that was withheld, that they didn't receive from the federal government.

Also worth mentioning is: how much money is the government willing to spend defending the constitutionality of this legislation? One of the main reasons why collecting funds from criminals will not be a success is the fact that the majority of them will not have the ability to actually pay back whatever amount their health care cost was. This entirely removes any incentive from the rehabilitative aspect of our criminal justice system. Why would an individual plead guilty to an offence if they knew that they would be culpable for a sizable amount of money? What would be the cost of legal aid when every individual who is charged with a criminal offence is not only going to fight their charge but also the government attempting to collect funds from them?

This is also a problem with the criminal offender who may have mental health or drug addition problems. Would these individuals, who received treatment for their respective illness, when found guilty be responsible for the entire cost of what is often long-term treatment? This creates a disincentive for the rehabilitation of these populations to enter back into society as contributing members when they know that they will be responsible for what most likely will be a sizable amount of money.

For these reasons I support this amendment brought by the Member for Calgary-Buffalo. I think we should all support this amendment and scrutinize this bill further.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) applies. Does anyone have any questions or comments?

Seeing none, on the amendment the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As has been mentioned – and I think it's quite true – certainly sections 2, 3, and 4 are necessary and part of a good bill, but then they slip something sort of really silly in. Section 1 is kind of silly. One of the things that I note – and I totally approve of this – is that we actually could sue tobacco companies in terms of getting money back for people that are often costing the health care system large amounts of money. These types of laws are in other provinces and certainly in the States. However, here in Alberta it's very interesting that if we sue the tobacco companies, we actually are suing ourselves because we are shareholders in the tobacco companies through the heritage trust fund. So I'm not quite sure how we end up suing ourselves on that one.

Then the other part in section 1 about collection of health care costs. It really is, I think, quite silly when you think about the people that we actually would have a chance of getting at because surely we know that the criminals who can afford to pay for this, if we ever catch up with them, can clearly afford lawyers that will make sure that they never pay it. So those aren't the people that we're probably going to go after.

What I can envision here is something like Dog the bounty hunter. We can hire someone who will then create a reality show, and they can go and collect from these people. I mean, heaven knows where they would find them. The price of the reality show – I mean we would have to totally rename it. We couldn't possibly call it Dog the bounty hunter. I mean, surely we can come up with a better name in Alberta. But that reality show could pay the price of the collector; i.e., that bounty hunter. You know, I'm sure that there would be no shortage of candidates for that job, especially if they could – well, let's hope that maybe we could clean up the show a little bit better than the actual original Dog the Bounty Hunter. This could create a totally cost-neutral way of collecting these dollars from these people that probably don't have them in the first place. There isn't a business plan in the world that isn't delighted to be able to have part of their bottom line that is a totally neutral collection system.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

4:10

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) applies. Are there any questions or comments?

Seeing none, then we shall recognize Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise in support of the motion that this bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Health. This bill does include very complex issues. As we've stated already, the precedent set by this bill is unmatched, as far as I can tell, throughout the country. The threat that it represents to the provision of universal health care is significant, and the lack of information that has been provided to all members of the House in that regard is something that we should be concerned about. As members of the Assembly we should all be seeking more information before moving forward with such a radical and ill-advised proposal.

In particular, as has already been mentioned, we've not yet been provided with any information to suggest that presenting criminals with hospital bills, whether they are incarcerated at the time, struggling with probation at the time, or even still in the hospital at the time, will have any impact in terms of crime reduction and, in fact, whether or not it will not actually result in increased crime in that, ultimately, people will be compelled to commit more crimes in order to pay off these bills that they have incurred. Who knows? Really, truly, it seems like a completely irrational mechanism for crime prevention. That particular purpose seems unclear or disconnected from the legislation in question.

In terms of whether it's a good financial management strategy on the part of the government to somehow reduce their health care costs and that would somehow benefit taxpayers that way, again, we've been provided with no information about how it is we might possibly benefit as taxpayers just concerned about nothing other than dollars and cents. We have no idea what amount of income this would generate for taxpayers, and I suspect that's the case because the government has no idea. Certainly, for the committee itself that would be something that would be reasonable for it to pursue. We have no idea what the cost to taxpayers would be on the flip side of actually pursuing these bills from criminals, again something that I think Albertans have a right to know about and learn about before embarking on such a radical project.

Finally, as we've said before, I think it's really important for us to have a clear understanding of who it is we're dealing with here. I mean, we're talking about undermining the universality of our health care system. As I said, it's all easy on a very superficial basis to imagine the worst-case kingpin drug dealer driving around in his black-tinted Hummer, you know, handing out drugs to small children. Of course, not only do we want to give that guy a bill for his health care; we want to do a whole bunch of other things to him, too, because as members of the community we're so offended that that person even exists. However, the fact of the matter is that we really need to have a much more informed assessment of who it is we're actually dealing with, who it is we're actually planning to bill for their health care costs, whether we are picking on those people or whether we are for the most part picking on very underprivileged groups in large degrees. You know, we need to hear about that.

We need to hear from the police. We'd like to hear from the police to find out if they think this would be anything other than an opportunity for more crime to be committed, for them to be dragged into more ridiculous processes where, you know, criminal A, after being put either on probation or maybe through some community diversion project or whatever, is out there in a process of controlled rehabilitation, and suddenly they get nailed with a bill for $15,000, and then they don't pay it. At what point do the police get drawn in to actually help the government recover this ridiculous amount of money? So back in they go, and the police, in fact, are finding that the number of sort of criminal incidents are going up because we've decided to start adding this extra form of penalty, slash, billing people for their criminal activity, slash, whatever we can do we'll do to penetrate the principle of universal health care with some type of public support kind of ill-advised strategies.

There's a lot of information that needs to be gotten, I think. As I say, as far as I understand – and I'm certainly quite prepared to be corrected – I don't believe there is a similar piece of legislation anywhere else in the country. Does anyone know? And if there even is a similar piece of legislation in other parts of the country, well, then I'd like to know how it's working and what people think about it and whether it's actually been implemented or not or whether it's been not proclaimed because the people that passed it in a fit of political fury, looking like they were being tough on crime, then realized that the administration of it would be so onerous and so ridiculous that they didn't bother. Who knows? But this is the kind of information that all members of the Assembly should seek to have before them before they vote on something as radical as this.

For this reason I completely support the notion of having the matter referred to the Health Committee for a more considered and thoughtful and responsible and informed review of such an important issue.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) applies. Are there any questions or comments?

Does anyone else care to speak on the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo for his amendment and his suggestion. I hope the Assembly agrees with the suggestion that we refer this bill to the Standing Committee on Health for further study in accordance with our standing orders. I've heard from many hon. members this afternoon in the course of the debate at second reading, and there were a lot of good issues brought up during the discussion. Certainly, the Standing Committee on Health would have the time.

We all know that there was another committee struck outside the field policy committee process that is looking at some of the issues around health care or the management or the delivery of health care and what's going on with Alberta Health Services and how all this is going to work. I can't understand why that committee is necessary. After all, the consultants that appear through the public accounts blue books were hired by Alberta Health to do the same thing. Anyway, Mr. Speaker, there certainly is time available for the Standing Committee on Health to have a second look at this bill.

4:20

I know that some members of the public may be confused between cabinet policy committees and the field policy committees. I would like to remind hon. members that only government members or PC caucus members can belong to the cabinet policy committees. To my knowledge they don't meet in public. Their minutes are not available to the taxpayers, who fund the whole process. Last year, as we know, it was well over budget, 77 per cent over, incredibly, the total sum that the five cabinet policy committees spent. The total sum, of course, was $1.1 million. I certainly know that the field policy committee would have it within their budget. They wouldn't be breaking their budget if they were to have some more meetings and have a good second look at this bill.

I don't know whether the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre is on that field policy committee on health or not. Now, I should, but I don't. But if she's not on it, she could make an appearance – the standing orders certainly allow that – to make some of the suggestions to the committee, if this amendment is passed, that she made to the House in general this afternoon.

Certainly, when we look at the field policy committees and how important they are to the Legislature – I know they're very important – I'm surprised that there are not more bills or more issues or other matters referred to them. Certainly, that's allowed by the standing orders.

It was interesting, Mr. Speaker, to see on Alberta Justice's website a document. It's a year old. It's dated November 2008. It's A Guide to the Legislative Process: Acts and Regulations. One only has to look at the table of contents here. It's a very hands-on document that explains the roles and responsibilities in the preparation of legislation, the client department, the client's lawyer, the Legislative Counsel office, the legislative process, statutes, passing a bill. In passing a bill, in the Legislature portion, of course, we break it down into first reading, second reading, and policy field committees before we proceed to the Committee of the Whole.

Certainly, I would urge all hon. members to have a look at this, the Guide to the Legislative Process: Acts and Regulations, and reference specifically the field policy committees, like the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo is doing with his amendment. The field policy committees are a part of the legislative process. Let's put the hon. members who are sitting on that committee to work and have them have a second look at Bill 48 and address some of the issues that have been discussed here this afternoon.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon members, section 29(2)(a) is available. Any questions or comments?

Other speakers on the amendment?

Seeing none, I shall call the question.

[Motion on amendment to second reading of Bill 48 lost]

The Acting Speaker: Any members prepared to speak on Bill 48?

Seeing none, then we will close debate on Bill 48.

[Motion carried; Bill 48 read a second time]

Bill 53

Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Weadick: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise and move second reading of Bill 53, the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

Since being elected in March 2008, a number of Lethbridge professionals have approached me and asked: when is this coming? I always respond that it's being discussed and is on the table, that they should just stay tuned, and I'll try to get back to them as soon as I can. Well, today I'm really pleased to be sending a message back to my Lethbridge constituents and to people around the province to say that it's on the table, and discussion is officially under way.

I appreciate the work that the ministers of Finance and Enterprise, Employment and Immigration, Justice and Attorney General, and Health and Wellness along with their policy advisers and legal teams have done to get us where we are today. To them I say that this is a phenomenal piece of legislation; congratulations, and job well done.

Before us today we have proposed legislative revisions to four acts involving three ministries. If passed, these changes will extend nonvoting share ownership of professional corporations to immediate family members. These professions include doctors, dentists, chiropractors, optometrists under the Health Professions Act and the Medical Profession Act; lawyers under the Legal Profession Act; chartered accountants, certified management accountants, and certified general accountants under the Regulated Accounting Profession Act.

The proposed legislation deals with the extension of share ownership and does not change the professional corporation structure. Professionals will continue to maintain full responsibility for the services of their corporation, and of course they will continue to be held personally liable for the professional services they provide.

If passed, family members eligible to own nonvoting shares will include spouses, children, and common-law partners. Same-sex couples are also covered in this legislation. The proposed changes do not extend share ownership quite as broadly as in British Columbia; however, they will allow professionals to pay dividends to immediate family members, which will improve the professionals' ability to income-split with their families. Restricting share ownership to immediate family members limits Alberta's exposure to aggressive tax planning, which increases as more individuals become eligible to hold nonvoting shares.

Mr. Speaker, the revisions before us will bring the share ownership of these professions more in line with professional corporations in other western provinces. Let us not kid ourselves. Every profession looks at their counterparts in other jurisdictions and asks: what about us?

This isn't just about levelling the playing field among provinces; it's also about levelling the playing field right here in our own backyard. These revisions will also bring doctors, lawyers, accountants, dentists, optometrists, and chiropractors more in line with other Alberta corporations. Family members can already own shares in other corporations, including engineers, architects, and veterinarians. This change will simply allow professionals and their families to enjoy the same benefits.

You know, when I read over any proposed legislation, whether I'm sponsoring a bill or even before my time as an MLA, I always ask myself: who would be against this, and who would have a beef with what's being proposed? Mr. Speaker, I suppose some Albertans could be concerned with Bill 53 since they might think this is a case of the rich getting richer at a time when government revenues are down. I have no reservation in tackling the argument head-on. Government has determined that the benefits associated with extending share ownership to nonprofessional family members outweighs the estimated $1 million in reduced personal income tax revenues. These changes will better align Alberta's professional corporations with neighbouring provinces and with other corporations operating within Alberta. This will improve the attractiveness of Alberta and help encourage professionals to practise and do business in our province.

Mr. Speaker, these proposed legislative revisions are about being fair. They're about levelling the playing field among other corporations within Alberta, and they're about levelling the playing field between Alberta professional corporations and their counterparts throughout western Canada.

I am proud to carry Bill 53 and encourage all of my legislative colleagues to support it. Thank you very much.

4:30

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I listened with interest to the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West's remarks regarding Bill 53, the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. Certainly, he's right: we are amending the Health Professions Act, the Legal Profession Act, the Medical Profession Act, and the Regulated Accounting Profession Act. Essentially, this bill will allow income-sharing with their spouse and children by members who have a registered professional corporation.

In the first look at this bill I thought it was a good idea, a very good idea. We are in the process of contacting each of the respective professional bodies that this act will affect, but we haven't heard back from them all yet. It has been very difficult to get a meeting teed up. We have been phoning back and forth and e-mailing back and forth with the hon. member to get this set up. We did finally have one of our representatives, one of our representatives from the research department, talk directly to the sponsor of the bill, and I appreciate the hon. member's time.

When we are considering through this legislation allowing income-sharing with their spouse and children by members who have a registered professional corporation, we have to have a good look at this and at what exactly it means for the bottom line of the province. But before we do that, Mr. Speaker, if we look at a doctor, for example, who has registered as a professional corporation, that individual can transfer shares, if this bill becomes law, to a spouse or child and, as I understand it, reduce the income tax that is required to be paid.

The amendments also clarify that nonvoting shareholders – for example, a spouse or a child of a registered member of the professional corporation that has had shares transferred to them – have no liability in the business of the corporation. The registered member of the professional corporation still has full liability and must carry liability insurance for his or her business. That's noteworthy, and that is important.

Now, as I understand it, this bill will allow Alberta to be competitive with British Columbia, I'm told, in light of TILMA and with Ontario, both of which have similar tax perks in their legislation governing professional corporations. I looked at that, and I'm going to get to that in a moment here, Mr. Speaker.

According to the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West, as I understand it, the estimated average tax savings for each professional corporation in Alberta as a result of these changes will be $12,000. I would like clarification on that because the hon. member in his opening remarks on this legislation indicated that we would lose $1 million or thereabouts in lost revenue. That just doesn't add up. Certainly, there are a lot more than 100 professional corporations registered in this province. One of these two figures is wrong. If we did not get an accurate number when the bill brief was provided, I would certainly like a correction on that.

There are a lot of professional corporations. I would like to know precisely how many in each discipline would be affected by this. We could be looking at a significant loss in tax revenue collected by the government. I don't know if this legislation will mean that more professional corporations register elsewhere, outside this province.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if we look at the amount of money that's collected in income taxes in this province, if we look at the consolidated financial statements from last year, it's $12.9 billion, the same as it was the year before, in 2008. If we look at the government's fiscal plan for this current year, we will see under tax revenue for 2009-10 that there is an anticipated tax collection of $14.7 billion, and of course 58 per cent of that is personal income tax, and 16 per cent of that, or $2.4 billion, is corporate income tax.

Now, if we go over a couple of more pages in the fiscal plan and we have a look at the major provincial tax rates for 2009 – and the hon. member can clarify this for not only myself but members of the House – it is my view that professional corporations would be under the general rate for corporate income tax.

Mr. Denis: It's not necessarily true.

Mr. MacDonald: It's not the general rate, hon. member?

Mr. Denis: It's not necessarily true.

Mr. MacDonald: It's not necessarily true. Okay. I'm going to have a great deal of interest when the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont speaks because hopefully he can clarify this.

If we look at the general corporate income tax rate for Alberta, it's 10 per cent. If we look at Ontario's, it's significantly higher, at 14 per cent. Again, if we compare it to B.C.'s, our rate is slightly less than B.C.'s. B.C.'s is 11 per cent. So I think we're competitive already – that is my point – with or without this legislation at this time.

Now, if we look at the small-business rate, B.C.'s is lower. Ours is 3 per cent, B.C.'s is 2.5 per cent, but Ontario's is almost double ours. Theirs is 5.5 per cent. The threshold for B.C. is a hundred grand less than our small-business rate, and Ontario's threshold is the same as ours, a half million dollars.

Those are the tax rates, and how this amendment will affect our bottom line at a time when there are scarce financial resources is the question that I have at this time, Mr. Speaker, for the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West. I'm not necessarily saying that I would vote against this bill, but certainly we need to know how many professional corporations there are – I'm sure the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West has that information – in this province and how many of these corporations would be affected by this legislation. Again, I have to question whether it will be a million dollars in light of the information that we have received during the bill brief.

I can see where the hon. member wants to present these amendments and allow Alberta to remain competitive, but as I pointed out in the tax plan here from Budget 2009, we are, I'm glad to say – and hopefully we will continue to be – very competitive with our neighbours. I never thought of comparing where we are to Manitoba or Saskatchewan, like the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore suggested in question period earlier today. He was questioning the government on why Saskatchewan seems to be more attractive than Alberta today for some certain specific industries. But Manitoba's tax rates are slightly higher than in our province.

Mr. Denis: An NDP government.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, it is an NDP government, hon. member. You know, I'm amazed, Mr. Speaker, at the hon. member's knowledge of political history in western Canada. Particularly, he used to be a member of the Liberal Party in Saskatchewan, and he knows everything that's going on here west of Kenora. I'm certainly impressed with his political knowledge.

Mr. Denis: Like the B.C. Liberals?

4:40

Mr. MacDonald: Some of them, hon. member, are very, very competent, yes, just like any other government.

Now, this bill will allow for Alberta, as I said, to be more competitive with B.C. and Ontario, but I want to get some more details from the hon. member regarding that competitiveness.

Certainly, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, there's a need for caution. We need to exercise caution on this bill as it will impact Alberta's tax revenue. If I could get some questions answered through the course of debate, perhaps in committee, I would be very grateful.

I would like to thank the House for their time.

The Acting Speaker: We acknowledge Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I must apologize to you. I don't have a face cloth for you in this role.

All kidding aside, Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to rise today to speak to Bill 53, the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, being carried forward by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West. Before I begin, I also want to thank all of the other members that have had a hand in this important piece of legislation.

Of course, this would introduce changes to several current acts, most notably the Regulated Accounting Profession Act, the Legal Profession Act, the Health Professions Act, and the Medical Profession Act, Mr. Speaker.

Essentially, Bill 53 stipulates that immediate family members of professionals within a professional corporation could be eligible to hold nonvoting shares in that corporation. Let's think about what exactly this means. I start up a corporation with somebody else. I can decide how the share distribution goes. There are, however, restrictions on professional corporations. This seeks to limit some of these restrictions. As it stands right now, there is a restriction that only the principal can own it: the lawyer, the doctor, the accountant, or what have you. Simply put, what the change would do here is it would give the husband, wife, partner, or child of a professional the ability to own shares in that professional's corporation. However, they would not be able to vote on any decision being made by that corporation. Strictly nonvoting shares, Mr. Speaker.

Now, going back a little way here, professional corporations, or PCs as people have mentioned them, not referring to the political party, Mr. Speaker, were created in the late 1970s to allow some professional groups to take advantage of tax benefits. Now, in turn, these tax benefits made Alberta a more attractive choice for needed professional groups, most notably chartered accountants, certified management accountants, certified general accountants, doctors, dentists, chiropractors, optometrists, and, yes, even lawyers. I can say from personal experience that lawyers are not necessarily a bad thing.

Bill 53 would further enhance Alberta's business climate for these professionals and could possibly prompt more professionals to establish themselves in Alberta. This could mean more doctors helping to deliver patient care and reduce wait times. This could also mean more accountants, ensuring that Alberta corporations remain competitive on the world stage, and again all three accounting designations apply. This could also mean more lawyers supporting the legal process and providing counsel to Albertans. After all, Mr. Speaker, this would mean that a professional could rest assured knowing that their family could benefit from investment in this particular professional corporation, as is the case with any other corporation, as I mentioned.

To be clear, family in this bill refers to spouses, children, common-law partners, and does include same-sex partners, as the Member for Lethbridge-West noted.

Mr. Speaker, not only would the amendments in Bill 53 create an environment for professional recruitment; it would also bring us more in line with other western provinces and make us more competitive. Currently under our trade agreement with British Columbia, TILMA, there is no obligation for us to change our PCs' ownership policies. However, this is only because tax measures are exempt from this agreement. It has been determined that lifting the professional corporations' share ownership is not a TILMA matter, but it deals with tax planning.

Now, changes to Alberta's tax system, Mr. Speaker, most notably the implementation of a single rate of personal income tax, the only one in Canada, and the integration of small-business dividend income have eliminated most tax planning concerns in this province but not all. As a result of these changes we are now able to shift our professional corporations' share structure to be much more closely aligned with the rest of our neighbouring provinces. Again, it's about competition, about being competitive with our professionals here.

In addition to matching more closely with other provinces' legislation, Bill 53 also brings professional corporations closer in line with other private corporations, as I mentioned earlier. To give you an example, the family of an individual working in a corporation like an investing firm or an oil company are certainly allowed to own shares in that corporation. Why should it be any different with a professional corporation? Bill 53 would extend this allowance to professional corporations on a fair and a competitive basis. It's true that changes made by Bill 53 will result in a decrease of tax revenue by about $1 million. I'd argue for the aforementioned reasons that this is arguably money well forgone.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do want to respond to a couple of the comments made by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. He incorrectly stated, as he often does, that a professional corporation wouldn't apply for a small-business income. I've actually confirmed just by e-mail with a tax lawyer who works at the tax firm of Felesky Flynn in Edmonton that it is, in fact, active business income. It does get the small-business deduction. This does apply up to $500,000.

This member is incorrect about many things, such as earlier on the last bill when he mentioned to me about someone who had been charged with drug possession. I welcome him to mention this outside the House.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) applies. Are there any questions or comments?

If not, then we'll move to Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that my colleague from Lethbridge-West has explained this bill very clearly and that my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar has asked the appropriate questions, to which I would also like the answers. I think that this is a bill that certainly should go forward if for no other reason than it keeps us competitive with the other provinces in this country. I would suspect that as we go forward with this, many of the other provinces will try to catch up, which then levels the entire country, and then TILMA, of course, would be irrelevant in that conversation.

The sectional analysis on this bill is that it really is the same for every profession that has been mentioned, which is the health profession, the legal profession, the medical profession, and the regulated accounting profession. Even within these professions some others have been mentioned that would fall under these. Clearly, this is a bill to enhance the tax advantage in this province. Part of the reasoning, of course, was to attract and keep. One of the areas that I think we have to work on in this province is to attract and keep our physicians. This bill may come forward, particularly in that area.

We have, I think, probably enough – I probably shouldn't say that – lawyers and accountants in this province. Always welcome more, of course. It's more the Medical Profession Act and the Health Professions Act that I am particularly interested in. Clearly, we are at a disadvantage in this province when we don't have the number of health professionals that we actually need.

Now, the sectional analysis on this one is basically the same for each profession that I've already mentioned. As has been mentioned, it allows spouses, common-law partners, and children of registered active members of corporations to be considered shareholders or beneficiaries of that professional corporation. The shareholder status is also extended to trusts held for children.

The addition of the word "voting" before the word "shareholder" is one word, I believe, that turns this entire bill with this amendment, that moves it into an entirely different realm of how the taxes are going to be applied and how the money can be changed from the corporation and create the shareholder designation for members of the family. The children will be recognized as anybody under the age of 18, and then at that point they would of course be transferred in and become the adult shareholder.

I can see a number of advantages, clearly, to having these tax breaks for the children of these professional corporations. One of them is the fact that it would help them all, hopefully, to go to university and give them dollars, which would perhaps keep them from having to get loans, so there would be more money for others who really would need the loans to be able to go to school. I think that that's a positive way of looking at this. Perhaps they wouldn't be paying as much income tax, but being able to go to school and actually pay your way through really does help society as a whole.

4:50

I would wait to hear the answers to the questions that were put forward by my colleague from Edmonton-Gold Bar in terms of the tax implications. I'm not an accountant. All I know is that I have to pay taxes, and that's about as far as it goes. My accountant tells me what I have to pay, I write the cheque, and I'm on my way. I would be interested in those answers.

With that, I'll take my seat but do compliment the Member for Lethbridge-West because I do feel that overall this is certainly a good step forward for the province of Alberta.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Any questions or comments?

If not, we will recognize the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm also pleased to rise in support of Bill 53, the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. I had the pleasure of listening to the Member for Lethbridge-West, the sponsor of this bill, and I agree that this is a tremendous step forward in creating a level playing field for professional corporations in Alberta. It's only fair that professional corporations enjoy similar tax-planning opportunities – and I heard other members say that – as other corporations in this province, and it's fair that the people in Alberta's professional corporations enjoy similar tax-planning opportunities as their colleagues in every other western province.

The Member for Lethbridge-West acknowledged the efforts of our policy staff not just in my ministry but at Health and Wellness, Justice and Attorney General, and Finance and Enterprise. I know it's not every day that an omnibus bill is debated in the House. This bill encompasses four acts and three ministries, and it required significant discussion and co-ordination across government to get to this point. I would also like to acknowledge the stakeholders who have been involved in the consultation process from an early stage, Mr. Speaker. Doctors, dentists, lawyers, accountants, chiropractors, and optometrists were all represented and were made aware of the proposed legislative revisions during their development. I'm pleased to say that all of the professional regulatory organizations that provided comments have applauded the government of Alberta for bringing these changes forward.

I agree as well with the Member for Lethbridge-West that it is important to provide a level playing field for professional corporations and that the playing field is consistent across professional corporations. I'm confident that these proposed legislative revisions accomplish this. These revisions extend nonvoting share ownership to immediate family members. This will allow professionals to pay dividends to family members, which will improve the professionals' ability to split income with their families.

Mr. Speaker, as Minister of Employment and Immigration I am responsible for the Regulated Accounting Profession Act, which oversees three of the eight groups affected by Bill 53: the chartered accountants, the certified management accountants, and the certified general accountants. I'm assured that the accounting profession is very much looking forward to these revisions taking hold.

Bill 53 comes, no doubt, with a price tag. There are tax revenue implications associated with the implementation of Bill 53, and those are estimated to be around $1 million per year. Mr. Speaker, I believe this is a price worth paying as it creates the level playing field along with tax-planning benefits that many others can currently access.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Any questions or comments?

Any other members want to join in the debate? I'll acknowledge the Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise and speak on Bill 53, sponsored by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-

West. As I heard the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar and the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, they have raised concerns about the lost revenue, $1 million. To me the number seems small.

As we know, the intent of the bill is to amend the Health Professions Act, the Legal Profession Act, the Medical Profession Act, and the Regulated Accounting Profession Act to allow spouses, common-law partners, and children of registered active members to be the beneficiary or the shareholders of their professional corporations. This amendment will extend nonvoting share ownership of a professional corporation to family members. If passed, our province's accountants, lawyers, doctors, dentists, chiropractors, and optometrists will have the ability to access some of the benefits of being incorporated, including some tax benefits. It's about time that we have the same level playing field, you know, as other provinces. I commend the member for bringing this bill forward as these benefits are currently enjoyed by the same professions in other western provinces.

The impact of the bill. This will allow income-sharing by members who have registered professional corporations with their spouses and children. For example, a doctor who has a registered professional corporation can transfer shares to his spouse or child and thus reduce the income tax that is required to be paid. This amendment also clarifies that nonvoting shareholders, for example a spouse or child of a registered member of the professional corporation that has had shares transferred to them, have no liability in the business of the corporation. The registered member of the professional corporation still has the full liability and must carry liability insurance for his or her business.

As I said before, this bill will also allow Alberta to be compared to British Columbia, especially in light of TILMA, and Ontario, both of which have similar tax benefits in their legislation governing professional corporations. According to the Member for Lethbridge-West the estimated average tax saving for each professional corporation in Alberta as a result of these changes will be about $12,000. That will be income tax lost to the government. As I said before, it has been brought out that it will be only $1 million. The minister is hoping that more professional corporations will register in Alberta and that more will decide to stay here to offset that income tax loss.

This is a good bill. The amendments will allow Alberta to remain competitive with British Columbia, particularly in light of TILMA, and with Ontario. Without this first step in allowing more flexibility of tax planning for professional corporations, these corporations could move their business to other provinces to take advantage of these tax perks allowed there. So this will benefit lots of corporations, and they will probably stay in Alberta because we are creating an environment where they don't have to move.

Specifically mentioned in the bill briefing session by the Member for Lethbridge-West was the fact that Ontario and British Columbia allow similar income-sharing by their professional corporations, but they go much further in areas such as allowing grandchildren or the parents to be shareholders or allowing trusts to be set up as a means to channel money and thus reduce the income tax paid. Alberta didn't want to go that far by allowing the most generous tax planning tools that other provinces allow, so this bill will allow Alberta to be somewhat compatible with B.C. and Ontario while not allowing for too many more ways for professional corporations to reduce the income tax that they pay. Maybe at some point in time the Member for Lethbridge-West will go that far. Who knows? There's a need for caution on these amendments. They will impact the tax revenue for the government.

5:00

There's the argument that this will encourage more corporations to register here in Alberta as well. That remains to be seen. That will increase long-term revenue for the government when we are compared with British Columbia and Ontario.

With those comments, I will support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I move to adjourn the debate on this bill.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 54

Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 54, the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009.

Just a bit of background, Mr. Speaker. In 2004, when the Personal Information Protection Act came into force, private-sector privacy was a relatively new concept in Canada. The act established a set of sound, common-sense rules for the collection, usage, disclosure, and protection of personal information by way of organizations. In order to ensure that this act was effective and practical, it was determined that this act had to be reviewed by a special committee of the Legislative Assembly soon after its implementation. In May 2006 the Select Special PIPA Review Committee was appointed to undertake a comprehensive review of this act. In November 2007 the review committee's final report came out, and it detailed 39 recommended changes to the act.

Mr. Speaker, the proposed bill incorporates the majority of the review committee's recommendations as well as some of the departmental recommendations, with the goal of enhancing protection of personal information for Albertans.

[Dr. Brown in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to highlight some of the key amendments to this act that we're proposing here. A number of the amendments are being made to reflect normal business practices, which would make it easier for organizations to comply with the act. The process of obtaining consent from individuals will be simplified by allowing an organization to obtain consent through an intermediary or third party. As well, it would be easier to enrol groups or families into insurance and benefit programs with the reforms that we are proposing. Organizations will be able to provide a position name or title for individuals to contact if they have privacy questions, so organizations will not have to update forms or websites due to staff changes. Organizations will be able to use personal information without consent when identifiable information is needed for audits that are required for business purposes.

The act clarifies that employers can use the information of former employees without consent to administer pension and other benefit programs. These rules concerning the handling of information of prospective, current, and former employees will be more consistent. Obligations concerning the retention of records will also be clearer. Organizations will be required to dispose of personal information that they no longer need for legal or business purposes within a reasonable period of time. Organizations need to retain records relating to a commissioner's investigation for one year after the investigation.

Mr. Speaker, two new provisions will provide new information to individuals so that they can make informed choices to protect their privacy. Organizations will be required to report significant security breaches to the Information and Privacy Commissioner. Where there is a real risk of harm, financial or otherwise, the commissioner will be able to ensure that individuals receive adequate notification. To ensure that this provision is effective, it will be an offence for an organization to fail to report a significant security breach to the commissioner.

Mr. Speaker, when organizations send personal information of customers or clients outside of Canada, they will be required to advise these individuals that personal information is transferred elsewhere for processing. This includes, of course, the United States, for which the PATRIOT Act applies. An individual will be able to ask for more information about the transfer or restrictions that the organization has placed on the data processor with respect to the use or disclosure of personal information.

Several changes will be made to the Information Commissioner's processes and powers. For one, the investigation process will be streamlined, which will allow the commissioner to discontinue investigations into complaints that lack merit or sufficient evidence. The act will now allow for up to one year for the completion of an investigation or inquiry, recognizing that the current three-month period is too short and in most cases needs to be extended. The act will also specify that the information protected by solicitor-client privilege can be disclosed to the commissioner without affecting the said privilege. The act clarifies that the commissioner may disclose the information related to the commission of an offence to the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to decide whether a prosecution should proceed.

Also, Mr. Speaker, several changes are being made to the offence provisions under the act, one of which I mentioned. The new offence provisions will enable the Crown to prosecute a person who violates the act's, quote, whistle-blower protection provisions or who conceals evidence during a commissioner's investigation or inquiry. A more appropriate standard would be established for prosecuting offences, whereby proof of intent to violate the act will no longer be necessary; rather, the standard will be whether the organization has acted reasonably in carrying out these responsibilities under the act. The time limit to prosecute an offence will be increased from six months to two years, consistent with other types of legislation, recognizing that it often takes time before a breach of privacy becomes known to affected individuals.

Other amendments are being made to the act to make it easier to understand. For example, definitions that are used currently in the regulation will be removed as part of the act. I'm sure the opposition will be happy with this. There will also be some housekeeping amendments.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, the act will also address future reviews of the act. The next review will begin by 2015, with ongoing reviews thereafter. These reviews will consider the act and its regulation and what has happened during that time.

I look forward to further debate and would like to thank the House for considering this bill. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The chair will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Having sat on half of this committee, it originally started meeting in the summer or spring of 2006, and it had a mandate for 18 months, and in fact in kind of a big rush it ended up concluding its activities in the late fall of 2007. Of course, then we went into an election immediately following the new year in 2008, and now we're in the next Legislature. I have been frantically trying to read back through all my binders of notes, trying to remember what the issues of great concern were for us.

The membership on the committee changed quite a bit. There was a cabinet shuffle in the middle of that, so we ended up with I think three different . . .

Mr. MacDonald: Is there another cabinet shuffle coming?

Ms Blakeman: Oh, I don't know.

We ended up with I think three different chairpeople over the life of that particular committee.

Just for folks that are following along with this here, we have sort of four different pieces of legislation that cover protection of personal privacy information in Alberta and in Canada. We have the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, which covers governments and then, implemented in an incremental way, also included what was originally called the MUSH sector, which was particularly unattractive, later called the MASH sector, which covered municipalities, academic institutions, schools, and hospitals. So FOIP covered all personal information that's held by governments and the ability of people to ask for that information.

This was followed by the Health Information Act. The Health Information Act covers peoples' personal health information.

We had the federal PIPEDA, which is the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act, I think. The deal was that if a province came up with its own legislation that met the test of PIPEDA or exceeded it, then they could have their own legislation. If they didn't do anything by a certain drop-dead date, they had to conform to the federal PIPEDA. Alberta, of course, never likes to conform, so they came up with their own act, so we have PIPA.

5:10

Of course, what we looked at in the review did not include any item that was covered under any of the first three that I mentioned: under FOIP, under the Health Information Act, or under PIPEDA. We were only looking at what was covered under PIPA.

What exactly are we talking about here? I'm quoting from the overview that was given to us on June 28, 2006. For anyone following in Hansard, it's under PI-6, Personal Information Protection Act Review.

PIPA is about protecting the personal information held by the private-sector organizations in Alberta. The act governs how those organizations may collect, use, and disclose personal information about their customers, clients, and employees.

It does allow organizations to collect, use, and disclose personal information for reasonable business purposes.

What exactly is personal information? Okay.

Personal information is information that identifies an individual, such as a name, an address, a telephone number, an e-mail address with a user password, a unique identifying number such as a [social insurance number] or an account number, an employee number, a photograph, or biometric information. Personal information is also information about that individual; for example, birthdate, gender, race, religion, education, employment history, financial history, medical history.

You can tell from that list why a driver's licence is so important, because it captures a lot of the information that I just mentioned in that list.

Okay. That gives you what the act is and what the personal information is, and we were to review whether the act was actually working or not because we were a couple of years into the act, enough to know whether it was working or not. We reviewed a number of different issues and made decisions on those.

One of the things, most interestingly, that caused us a lot of discussion – yes, the Member for Rocky Mountain House and I are looking at each other and remembering that there was a lot of discussion about this – was how to deal with not-for-profit organizations. Well, there was a decision not to include them, and we've since heard in fairly strong language from the Privacy Commissioner his disappointment that the act does not respond to that inclusion. The definition that we were looking at of NGOs, nongovernment organizations, or not-for-profits included anyone that was registered under the Societies Act, anyone under the Agricultural Societies Act, or anyone under part 9.

The not-for-profits that came in to see us, some of them on my request, like the community league organization and the United Way and some of those, what they said to us was, "Look, we can deal with anything; just tell us very clearly what's in and what's not, what you expect us to do and what not." More than half of them have no paid staff, so they are dealing with volunteers that would have to adhere to the requirements of how they would come under the act. This became a significant point of discussion for us, and they're not, in the end, included in what we see before us in Bill 54.

So who cares? I mean, why should we be the least bit concerned about the way the private sector – and this is essentially covering the private sector – deals with personal information? I just want to give you a couple of examples of where this can go really wrong. I'm actually quoting from the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner annual report '07-08. Here is an example of something that was investigated. Ticketmaster was investigated under the PIPA Act. The complainant had tried to purchase tickets through Ticketmaster, and during the transaction they were told that they couldn't proceed unless they provided and consented to Ticketmaster's use of personal information privacy statement. Of course, the individual who was trying to purchase tickets was concerned that in signing this, Ticketmaster would then have the authority to share his e-mail address with event providers for marketing purposes.

In fact, the investigator did find that Ticketmaster had contravened PIPA by requiring online customers to consent to the use of personal information for the event provider's marketing purposes as a condition of a transaction to purchase tickets. It was also determined that the online opt-out process did not allow customers to make an informed decision about consent, and it didn't offer them a reasonable opportunity to decline or to object to what was being asked of them. Very reasonable. You know, we should be able to just engage in a business transaction without being mined and all of our personal information being mined and kept on record to be used later to market other products back to us. We have a right to say: "That's enough. All I want to do is buy a ticket from you. I don't want to have you in my life for the rest of my life."

How personal information is collected, how it is used, who it's disclosed to, and how much they have to come back to you and say, "We're going to do something else with your personal information; do we have your consent to do it?" so that seeking of the consent – one of the issues that I've always had with this process in FOIP, in health information, and in PIPA is the use of blanket consent forms. I don't feel that that is informed consent. It's often used as, I would call it, a form of coercion: if you don't give us this blanket information, we can't provide you with the service that you're seeking. A minor example of that is with Ticketmaster, but in a lot of other cases it is allowed, and I don't feel it's fair game. I'll have to continue advocating to have my point of view included in legislation there.

I mean, that's why we care about this. We want to have rules in place that allow business to operate without being unnecessarily encumbered by this process. At the same time we want to be able to protect individuals from having their information inappropriately collected and used and disclosed to others. That's the balance that you're trying to seek through this legislation. Did we hit that balance in the review that was done here?

I'm trying not to repeat what the sponsoring member has already put on the record, so forgive me if I do. I just couldn't write fast enough to take all the notes. We are looking at this amending act allowing employers to use information of former employees without consent in order to administer pension and other benefit programs. This is going to give a process of obtaining consent from clients to be simplified to allow an organization to obtain consent through an intermediary. That one I'm not so keen on, but I'll come back and talk about that when we're in the Committee of the Whole process on this.

The act will have organizations able to provide a position name or a title for individuals to contact if they have privacy questions. The individual's name isn't there, but their title is there. So you would phone up and ask for the director of such and such. Organizations are not required to continually update their forms and business cards and their online website and things like that. You can just list the title of the organization.

Organizations can use personal information without consent when identifiable information is needed for audits that are required for business purposes. That's our fault because we the legislators put requirements in as a test, as a way of clarifying, especially around audit processes, and therefore businesses have to meet that test. This is part of what they need to do.

5:20

There are a couple of new provisions in here for individuals, to allow them to make informed choices. This was mentioned by the member, that organizations will now be required to report security breaches to the Information and Privacy Commissioner. Included in that is that it will be an offence for an organization to fail to report.

When organizations send the personal information of customers – this is what we call the PATRIOT Act amendment, which was actually originally brought up by the predecessor to my colleague the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. He was the one that identified that we were going to have to adjust some of our legislation in order to protect Albertans from the effect of the PATRIOT Act, which basically flowed from 9/11 in 2001, saying that any information that U.S.-based companies had, they could use and take it. So any time that someone in Alberta had their information collected by a subsidiary that then reported back to a mother corp, our information was now used and was into the U.S. system, and they could keep that information on us and use that information on us. We as legislators think we have the right to protect Albertans, and we set out to do so. That's what's included in this.

Organizations that are sending personal information of customers or clients outside of Canada are required to advise those same people that that information is being transferred somewhere else, the idea being that it allows people to say: no, I don't want you to send that information, and as a result I'm going to not order your product or not be involved with whatever you're doing. The individual can ask for more information about the transfer and any restrictions that the organization has placed on the data processor with respect to the use and disclosure of their information. And there were some administrative changes that were made at the request of the Information and Privacy Commissioner that happened and some changes to the offence provisions.

At this point, because really what I want to do is get into the detail of some of the discussions that we had around certain sections and a more in-depth discussion of that is not appropriate in second reading, I am willing to vote in favour of second reading, which acknowledges the principle of the bill. I am certainly in support of protecting Albertans' personal information but also having them as involved in the process as possible. Some of the provisions that we were able to do here I'm very much in favour of, but I think others merit more discussion.

At this point I will conclude my remarks on second reading, having stated that I would be supportive, and I will look forward to a more in-depth debate during Committee of the Whole.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to join in on second reading debate on Bill 54, Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009. This is certainly a very complicated piece of legislation. I don't refer necessarily to the amending legislation, although it's not exactly without substance either, but to the original piece of information outlining the protection of the private information of individuals held by private bodies.

You know, it's an important piece of legislation that we have. Obviously, nationally it was recognized that we had a huge gap in terms of protecting the rights of people to have their information be protected in terms of not being shared with other organizations without their knowledge and also in terms of giving people access to information held by private bodies, especially for those people to know what exactly certain private bodies have on their files about individuals. We know in today's electronic age that this is a growing problem. So the principle of the legislation is not a bad one.

Now, as has already been mentioned, the federal government engaged in an analysis of this problem and adopted PIPEDA, and it's sort of the gold standard in terms of privacy protection. The government ultimately concluded that Alberta's legislation – I believe they concluded, anyway – was sufficiently similar to PIPEDA that it would be allowed to stand. I'm assuming that that's the case. I'm not sure if there was a formal conclusion in that regard. I'm still trying to figure that out. But there's no question that PIPA does have, generally speaking, less rigorous requirements than the federal legislation. It's grey – it's grey – and the language is different, and ultimately the feds decided that as long as it was substantially similar, I think, they'd let it go. Ultimately, the purpose behind this piece of legislation is a good one.

Now, as has already been mentioned, the amendments that we're seeing now arise from a rather considered review by a group of MLAs prior to the last election. Of course, I was not here then, and I haven't had a chance to review those recommendations at great length, but I will assume that most of them were fairly well considered and arose from fairly extensive consultation with interested stakeholders. As has probably been noted already, the Privacy Commissioner has indicated that most of what is found in this bill is quite appropriate, with the exception of the failure of this bill to include reference to or a greater inclusion of nonprofit agencies under its authority.

You know, that's an interesting question, and I look forward, actually, to hearing debate on that and more information on that from government members. Clearly, the committee had recommended that these nonprofits be fully included under the authority of the act. They noted that it provided consistency and clarity. They noted that it provided for a more effective reciprocal relationship between nonprofits and other organizations that did have a statutory obligation to protect private information. They also noted, of course, that nonprofits deal with a grand scope of information of individuals and that, therefore, there's a need to ensure that they're globally covered. All those arguments were included in the report of the committee to support a more substantive inclusion of nonprofit organizations within the scheme of PIPA.

Now, there were, however, at the time also concerns raised by some of the nonprofits, who said: "Whoa. We can't even begin to meet the requirements of this act, so it's going to put an onerous responsibility onto us in order to meet the requirements of this act." At the time the committee seemed to think that those concerns could be remediated, and in their report they suggested that they could be remediated by phasing in coverage over the course of a year and also – what was the phrase? – that there would be some support and that the administrative burden of complying with PIPA could be mitigated by the provision of resources and support to the organizations during a one-year period. Now, I think that's probably true, but then this raises the question: where would that support have come from? Probably from the Privacy Commissioner's office. So is it the case that we're now dealing with the fact that this particular recommendation is not included in the legislation because the Privacy Commissioner's office simply does not have the resources to provide the support necessary to these nonprofit organizations to bring them into compliance with PIPA?

5:30

I had – I wouldn't necessarily call it the privilege – the experience of spending a bit of time as a consultant assisting organizations with their efforts to come into compliance with PIPA, and I will say that it's a very strenuous task. It does require some fairly significant administrative resources to be in compliance with the act. While that's worth while and while the objects of the act are worth while, there's no question that there are some very significant demands on organizations to meet the obligations of the act. So the question becomes: can we or can we not find the resources to assist these nonprofits? Is it or is it not ultimately worth while in terms of achieving the overall objectives of the act? That's something we need to talk about.

The only other point that I'll raise at this point is that notwithstanding that I wasn't around when the committee made its recommendations, I do have, certainly, a very significant concern about recommendation 10, which is reflected in Bill 54, which talks about deemed consent where people are buying insurance policies and looking to have an interest in or derive a benefit from those plans. There are some significant concerns I have around that issue. They relate in particular to the linkage between that and certain changes that have been made with respect to the Health Information Act and information that doctors can now have and the degree to which that, then, is considered personal information that's held by the organization and how that information is shared.

Insurance companies hold excruciatingly detailed and personal information about people, and the idea that they can do that and collect it, use it, and disclose it at their discretion on the basis of a deemed consent is very concerning – very concerning – to me because I believe that that's one of the major consumer issues that probably originally generated the desire to bring in pieces of legislation like this.

Anyway, those are our starting comments about this piece of legislation. Again, in general we support the principle of protecting people's access and protection of their personal information. I'm not sure if there is anyone else speaking at this point. I believe there is, so with that, I will close my remarks at this point.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any members who wish to contribute questions or comments pursuant to Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I'll call on the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure also to lend support to Bill 54, the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009. This bill is the result of a review by the Select Special Personal Information Protection Act Review Committee, whose report was tabled in November 2007.

Given the increasingly global nature of business today it is very common for Alberta organizations to transfer clients' personal data to a service provider outside of Canada, quite often right off the continent, for processing or storage. It may be a retailer that sends information on a credit card application to India for processing, or it might be a business consulting firm that sends customer information to the United States or some other country for storage or processing.

Now, this is a legitimate business need, so the committee believes that Albertans who have concerns about their personal information being sent outside of Canada should be able to find out where their information is going. To achieve this, the bill requires an organization to inform customers that their personal information may be leaving Canada for processing. This allows individuals to ask for further information on the company's policies on this and to make an informed choice whether or not to disclose their personal information. The amendment shows that the government takes the privacy of Albertans' personal information very seriously and that Albertans also value being informed about the use of their information. I feel that this amendment is necessary to continue to increase public confidence in the protection of their personal information.

I look forward, Mr. Speaker, to further debate on this bill. Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Are there any members who wish to contribute questions or comments pursuant to Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I'll call upon the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the previous speaker said, in a global economy it becomes much more important to protect the personal information of Albertans. We hear, indeed, in the news every day about credit card thefts, drivers' licences, duplicate passports, false passports being issued, duplicate cards, false cards, so it becomes much more important to protect the information of Albertans.

Bill 54 is a step in the right direction towards protecting personal information with the amendments to the Personal Information Protection Act, Alberta's legislative framework for the collection, use, and disclosure of personal information by private organizations. A review of this act is required every three years to ensure it is consistent with the standard business practices, changing technology, and developing needs of the citizens. Bill 54 introduces a number of amendments to the act that were recommended by the all-party committee in November 2007.

As practically every Albertan interacts with private-sector organizations that may at one time or another need to collect, use, or disclose personal information about individuals, the consequences for the average citizen when their information is misused or mishandled can be very, very severe such as in the case of identity theft, fraud, or the divulging of highly sensitive information. As a result, any substantial alteration of provincial privacy laws can have quite an impact.

With Bill 54 some of the most significant outcomes would be new standards for organizations intended to make compliance easier. Rules for the handling of current, former, and prospective employee information will be standard. Consent from clients can be obtained through intermediaries. Businesses will be able to use position titles as contacts for privacy-related questions. Organizations will also be able to use personal information without consent when required to do so in the completion of audits.

There will be new notification standards for organizations. Two major new notification standards for organizations are the requirement to notify the individual when an organization is intending to transfer personal information to a service provider outside of Canada and, number two, a requirement to notify the individual if a security breach has occurred that may significantly affect them.

This is also going to change the timelines. The time permitted for an inquiry or an investigation will increase from three months to one year, and the time permitted to prosecute an offence will increase from six months to two years. A review of the act will take place every six years rather than every three years. I think six years is a little bit too long a time with the changing technology.

The Information and Privacy Commissioner will be permitted to cease investigations he or she considers to be of little merit. New offence categories will also allow the commissioner to enforce other additions to this act as well.

5:40

Overall, Bill 54 will assist organizations in complying with the act while providing individuals new rights to be notified in instances where the security of their personal information may be compromised.

A number of changes made to PIPA by Bill 54 are contained in the Select Special Personal Information Protection Act Review Committee final report, tabled in the Assembly in November 2007. In fact, the comparison between Bill 54 and the key recommendations section of the all-party committee report shows considerable correspondence, and out of nine key PIPA-related recommendations all but one was incorporated into Bill 54.

However, there are some aspects of Bill 54 that deserve critical attention. The report urged that all nonprofit organizations be subject to the act currently, and certain organizations are exempt depending on their classification and the degree to which their activities are commercial in nature. The commissioner has publicly expressed the disappointment that not-for-profits were not brought under the act. Certain sections that could be highlighted as in need of greater discussion could be an exceptionally wide latitude given to the commissioner to not proceed with an investigation, the greatly extended timelines for review of the act, and the fact that the Lieutenant Governor in Council can by regulation exempt organizations from notification requirements involving service providers outside of Canada.

Several amendments are being made to reflect standard business practices of organizations, and it is expected that the changes will make it easier for organizations to comply with the act. Employers will be able to use the information of former employees, without consent, to administer pension and other benefit programs. The rules concerning the handling of the information of prospective, current, and former employees will be more consistent. The process for obtaining consent from clients will be simplified by allowing an organization to obtain consent through an intermediary. Also, it will be easier to enrol groups or families into insurance or benefit programs. Organizations will be able to provide the position, name, or title for individuals to contact if they have privacy questions. Organizations will not have to update forms or websites due to staff changes.

The two new provisions will also provide new information to individuals so that they can make informed choices to protect their privacy. The organizations will be required to report significant security breaches to the Information and Privacy Commissioner where there's a real risk of harm, financial or otherwise. The commissioner will be able to ensure that individuals receive adequate notification. To ensure that this new provision is effective, it will be an offence for an organization to fail to report a significant security breach to the commissioner.

When organizations send the personal information of customers or clients outside of Canada, they will be required to advise these individuals that their personal information is transferred elsewhere for processing. An individual will be able to ask for information about the transfer and the restrictions that the organization has placed on the data processor with respect to use and disclosure.

Several changes will be made to the Information and Privacy Commissioner's processes and powers. The investigation process will be streamlined by allowing the commissioner to discontinue an investigation of complaints that lack merit or sufficient evidence. The act will now allow up to one year for the completion of an investigation and inquiry, recognizing that the current three-month period is too short in most cases and needs to be extended. The act will specify that information protected by solicitor-client privilege can be disclosed to the commissioner without affecting that privilege. The act will also clarify that the commissioner may disclose information related to the commission of an offence to the Minister of Justice so that prosecution can proceed.

There are several changes being made to the offence provisions in the act. New offence provisions will enable the Crown to prosecute a person who violates the act's whistle-blower protection provision or who conceals evidence during a commissioner's investigation or inquiry.

There are very good provisions in the amendments here, Mr. Speaker. I think I will be supporting PIPA with some reservations.

With that, I would like to adjourn the debate on this bill.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 55

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's with great personal pleasure that I rise for second reading of Bill 55, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act. Albertans have long supported the concept of a democratic Senate, one that's equal, elected, and effective, the triple-E model pioneered by Albertans 25 years ago. In 1985 all parties of this Assembly – I remind the Liberals of that – endorsed this view. On two further occasions, in 1987 and in 2002, the Legislative Assembly reiterated its commitment to a democratic Canadian Senate. To respond to the will of Albertans, the government of Alberta passed the Senatorial Selection Act in 1989 to govern the election of Alberta Senators.

Since then, Mr. Speaker, Alberta was successful in having two elected Senate nominees appointed to the Senate. Stan Waters in 1989 won the first Alberta Senate election and received an appointment to the Senate by Prime Minister Mulroney in 1990. In 2007 Prime Minister Harper appointed Bert Brown, the recipient of the most votes in the 2004 Alberta Senate election. These appointments were historic events that Albertans should be proud of. The late Senator Waters and Senator Brown represent the only Senators in Canada that have a democratic foundation. Their election by Albertans and their appointment sow the seeds of reform, an example of democratic representation that other provinces can follow.

Mr. Speaker, the current Senatorial Selection Act expires on December 31, 2010. The government initially included an expiry date in the act, hoping the act would be a temporary measure in advance of national Senate reform. The national reform has not yet occurred, unfortunately, so I am proposing that the Senatorial Selection Act be extended to December 31, 2016. This is the sole change to the act, and it is consistent with its previous renewal. It's a mechanism in place to hold provincial Senate elections if we decide to do so and nominate elected individuals to represent Albertans.

Over the past year the Prime Minister has appointed a number of unelected individuals to the Senate. However, he has indicated that where a provincial democratic process exists, he will respect the results. It's important that Alberta maintain its democratic process so that the voice of our province is heard in the Senate. For over a quarter of a century Alberta has strongly supported the reform of the Senate. With the Senatorial Selection Act the government is honouring this basic democratic principle. We remain committed to the idea that our national institutions can better serve all Canadians.

5:50

An appointed Senate is a relic of the 19th century. It's time to bring it into the 21st century. Albertans have a right to choose those who represent them in Parliament. All Canadians have a right to choose those who represent them in Parliament.

Therefore, I encourage all members to support Bill 55, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A pleasure to stand up and speak to this. If you see the actual bill in your hand, I think it's about a sentence and a half. So clearly the whole object is to be able to extend this sunset clause. No problem with actually extending it, but I think that just because it's only a sentence and a half, it doesn't mean that we shouldn't discuss it.

As has been pointed out by my hon. colleague across the way, the Liberals had voted in favour of the electoral process. However, due to some concerns and various provisions the Liberals at the time voted against the bill in later stages. I'm not sure that I personally am necessarily in favour of an elected Senate. I'm not sure that I'm opposed to the fact that the Prime Minister can appoint. What I have a problem with is the fact that you might appoint political persons. A lot of the people that have been appointed to the Senate lately are really people that are at the top of their game, and I think that they bring a totally different perspective as the second voice, the second eyes for the House of Commons. I'm not sure that that's a bad thing. I think the perspective, possibly, from unelected people often is different.

I'm not sure that what we need are more elections and more elected people that would break off into party lines. Although they are appointed by different governments and it looks like the House is balanced one way or the other, with the proper change of government as we've had, the House balances itself out. In the old days, if you'll go back and read some of the Hansard from the Senate, it truly was well debated. People worked together, and the partisan lines were not as clear as they are today, which is unfortunate because that's not what the Senate is supposed to be.

I would like to at this point in time adjourn this debate. I believe that there will be more conversation around this bill. As I've already mentioned, it's really just extending the sunset clause, but it does deserve further debate.

I adjourn Bill 55. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would move that pursuant to Government Motion 20, that was passed earlier today, the House not sit this evening and that we now call it 6 o'clock and adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:54 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1721
Members' Statements
Great White North Pumpkin Fair and Weigh-off	1722
Youth Engagement Environmental Grant Recipients	1722
Calgary Airport Runway	1722
Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo Constituent Concerns	1723
Matthew Rice	1723
Agri-Trade 2009	1732
Oral Question Period
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1723
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for High-risk Albertans	1724
H1N1 Pandemic Ethics Framework	1724
H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning	1725
Sour Gas Well Licensing	1725, 1726
Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure	1726
Wetlands Policy	1727
Influenza Antiviral Drugs	1727
Charitable Gaming Consultation	1728
Employment Standards for Sick Leave	1728
Support for the Homeless	1728
Grade 12 Diploma Exams	1729
Grade 3 Achievement Tests	1730
Cabinet Policy Committees	1730
PDD Funding for Community Agencies	1731
Grizzly Bear Protection	1731
Health and Wellness Executive Search Contract	1731
Presenting Petitions	1732
Tabling Returns and Reports	1732
Tablings to the Clerk	1732
Calendar of Special Events	1733
Government Bills and Orders
Third Reading
Bill 49 Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)	1733
Government Motions
Select Special Auditor General Search Committee	1735
Evening Sitzings	1735
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act	1735
Bill 53 Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1742
Bill 54 Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009	1746
Bill 55 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009	1751

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Thursday, November 5, 2009

Issue 56

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, November 5, 2009

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Deputy Speaker: Let us pray. We give thanks for Your abundant blessings to our province and to ourselves. We ask for Your guidance in our deliberations in our Chamber and the will to follow it. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's with great pleasure that I rise to introduce to you some very special guests seated in both galleries who during this past weekend spearheaded another incredibly successful fundraiser and food raiser for Edmonton's Food Bank. In three short days this group, with significant help from the community, helped raise over $61,000 in cash along with three truckloads of food, all of it to help feed the needy in Edmonton and area.

I'm going to ask each of them to rise as I call their names and to remain standing until all have been introduced. We have two groups. First, from the Punjabi Media Association we have President Gursharan Singh Buttar, Gurbhalinder Singh Sandhu, Gurnam Dodd, Amarjit Singh Purewal, Laat Bhinder, Dr. P.R. Kalia, Harjit Singh Sandhu, Kamal Layal, Rajwinder Kaur, Harjinder Ahluwalia, Vattandeep Singh Grewal. Representing the four gurdwaras in our area are Paramjit Singh Ubhi, Surinder Singh Hunjan, Darshan Gill, Gurdial Virdee, Avtar Thind, Gurcharan Sangha. If I've missed anyone, please join us and rise as well. I think that's our guests. Mr. Speaker, this group of individuals, which represents primarily the Sikh community, has done an incredible job for the third year in a row. They did it in honour of Guru Nanak Dev Ji, the founder of Sikhism, who was born over 500 years ago and believed that food should be provided to those in need.

In conclusion, I want to thank my colleagues from Edmonton-Manning, Edmonton-Ellerslie, Edmonton-Mill Woods, Calgary-Montrose, and Calgary-McCall for their tremendous support of this group and their efforts. [Remarks in Punjabi] Many thanks. Thank you for coming.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I also would like to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly five additional very special guests who just launched a North American first from right here in Edmonton, Alberta, earlier this week. The people I'm about to introduce to you are extremely passionate about education and health care, particularly for our children, and it is in that vein that they have created an educational resource animation tool called IBERA, a software package, as it were, for use in schools throughout the world, with a particular focus on but not restricted to aboriginal children. It has already been introduced in Australia, where it was born, and now it's coming to North America through our province.

I would ask that these promoters and issuers and caretakers of IBERA please rise as I call their names, and we will then applaud them together. First is the CEO of Native Counselling Services of Alberta in Edmonton, Dr. Allen Benson, who now hold the rights for North America. He's joined by four guests from Australia, including Leigh Hughes, project director of IBERA; Shaun Tatipata, an aboriginal health worker and clinician from the Australia area; Mr. Anthony Castro, an aboriginal islander; and Kane Ellis, who is also from the Northern Territory. Gentlemen, your product, IBERA, will revolutionize the knowledge of health and the human body, and it will help in the delivery of that understanding to our children. We are very grateful, and we wish you much success with IBERA.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Premier it's my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through to all Members of the Legislative Assembly a group of young folks from the Vegreville Composite school. I believe they are seated in the members' gallery. They are accompanied by teacher Ms Tracy Cook. I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very special constituent of mine named Shirley Johnston. She and I can relate to each other because she's long suffering. She has been following her husband around the world. Now she lives in Calgary-Shaw, but she has also called home the Canadian Forces bases in Baden, Germany; Gagetown, New Brunswick; and Calgary. She is the mother of four sons: Ed, Eric, Don, and Darcy. I also know that her mother and her three sisters are very special to her, as is her pet schnauzer. As I said, she is very long suffering. She is married and is the wife of the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, and next week they'll be celebrating their 36th wedding anniversary. I would ask Shirley if she would rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to make two introductions. My first introduction is 33 students and staff from the Coralwood academy in Edmonton-Calder. The Coralwood Adventist Academy features a Christian education program, offering both in-classroom and home-schooling support. With us today are teachers Mrs. Marian Rochford, Mr. Colin Forde, and Pastor Dan Rochford. I'd ask you all to please rise and receive the traditional greeting of the Assembly.

My second introduction this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, is a family from St. Albert who is involved with the Chrysalis organization in my constituency. They're here with us today to help us raise the awareness for National Down Syndrome Awareness Week. It's my pleasure to introduce to you today Miss Alyssa Garstad, Miss Taylor Garstad, and parents Kevin and Alanna Garstad. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 11 very distinguished Albertans. They are members of the Petrolia 60 Plus seniors' group. They are President Nick Malychuk, Past President Betty Mullen, Secretary-treasurer Grace Smith, and members Mrs. Joyce Coen, Mrs. Jacqueline Moulden, Mrs. Nellie Shymko, Mr. Ernie Smith, Mrs. Marie Sandford, Mrs. Shirley Sorobey, Mrs. Mildred Malychuk, and Mrs. Joyce Williamson. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank them all for their dedicated service to the community. I'd ask them to rise and receive our very warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an extreme pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to this Assembly three extraordinary guests sitting in your gallery from my constituency, Edmonton-Glenora: Tanya and Michelle Ponich and their mom, Rosalind Mosychuk. I'd like to mention quickly that some of the members may recognize Tanya and Michelle's last name from Mr. Michael Ponich, who served as a Social Credit member for the Vegreville constituency from 1944 to 1955, and was their grandfather. Michael Ponich served this province greatly in this Legislature, and his family continues to make a profound impact on those around them.

His granddaughter Tanya is a shining example of this. When Tanya was born, she was diagnosed with Down's syndrome and leukemia, not expected to live more than a month. When she continued to recover, the doctors realized they had misdiagnosed her leukemia and that Tanya had defied the odds, only the first time of many. Throughout her life Tanya has continued to prove that Down's syndrome makes life difficult but will not hold her back. She became a part of an early childhood intervention pilot program at Mayfield elementary school, which integrated her into the regular classroom until the end of high school. Mr. Speaker, Tanya also partakes in an extensive exercise program. She remains an advocate for people with disabilities, giving speeches in the United States and Canada. Tanya has even written a 20-minute pilot for her own soap opera, entitled Murder, Madness and Mayhem. It has taken sheer determination not only by Tanya but by her entire family to give her the support she has needed to get to where she is today. Please join me, all members here today, to give her the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

1:40

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Rick Fraser. Rick is in the members' gallery. He's a constituent of Calgary-Hays. He was born and raised in Calgary. He's a proud husband to Mishelle and father to Carson and Thaine Fraser. He's an advanced life support paramedic in the city of Calgary for Alberta Health Services. He also represents over 500 paramedics as president of the Calgary Paramedics CUPE local 3421. He has worked in EMS in Alberta since 2001. He is also a paramedic instructor at the University of Alberta Augustana Faculty in Camrose. He's also a director in Calgary-Hays, and he's a strong advocate for a strong and sustainable health care system for Albertans through empowering allied health care professionals. I'd like you to give him the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly 12 nursing students at the University of Alberta. They're here today representing Alberta's nursing students who feel frustrated that the job opportunities that were available when they began their training have gone, but the shortage of nurses in Alberta remains. They are among 80 per cent of the current graduating class who may have to leave Alberta to find work in provinces which still acknowledge that they need to hire nurses. My guests will be standing together tomorrow with hundreds of other nursing students on the steps of the Legislature to show unity in opposing the restructuring of Alberta Health Services. They have a common goal of quality public health care for all Albertans. I would now ask that my guests, who are seated in the public gallery, rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. They are Shannon Harrington, Natalie Cloutier, Emily Caird, Aneta Chodorski, Amy Walczak, Ashley McEwen, Stacie Heck, Molly Ryks, Jenna Tiedmann, Kristine Torres, Catherine Turner, and Carly Burdziuk. Please give them a warm welcome.

Members' Statements

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Remembrance Day

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Wednesday morning at 11 this great nation will fall silent. Canadians from coast to coast will pause to remember and revere the momentous sacrifices our men and women in uniform have made to safeguard our shores, defend our freedoms, protect human life, and keep peace around the globe. In Europe, Asia, the Middle East, and Africa Canadians have risked and sometimes lost everything to protect human life and human rights from warlords, rogues, and tyrants. Their sacrifices have ended wars and prevented wars from the birth of this nation to this very afternoon.

While we in this Assembly often quarrel about the issues of the day here in Alberta, I know we all share at least one common trait: the enormous respect and gratitude we feel for every Canadian who puts on a uniform to keep the peace and defend our country. Here's to the men and women, past and present, who have put their lives on the line for our freedoms, our way of life, and for many innocents around the globe. Here's to the families and friends of our soldiers, sailors, and airmen. Without their support and sacrifice our armed forces could not function. On November 11 we will remember. Your valour fills our hearts with pride and eternal thanks.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary – Edmonton-Calder.

Tanya Ponich

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm glad we're north.

I'm truly honoured today to rise again to speak about National Down Syndrome Awareness Week and the outstanding visitors that we have here today, with both Tanya and Alyssa, their terrific sisters, and their great parents.

Tanya was born with Down's syndrome and over the years has become a real advocate of hope and support for individuals with Down's syndrome in Canada. She is a voice of strength and courage for each person that is labelled disabled and seeks to provide support to those in need.

Tanya's accomplishments are very impressive. In 2008 she was selected as Global Edmonton's woman of vision because of the support and leadership that she provides to others in the community. She has been featured in books and has made presentations to audiences across Canada and the United States. One of the most interesting connections between this Assembly and Tanya, of course, is her grandfather, who we heard about earlier, Mr. Michael Ponich, who was the MLA for Vegreville from 1944 to 1955. During that time he also served as party whip.

It is a pleasure to have Tanya here today to celebrate her accomplishments in the community, just like her grandfather's so many years ago. I would like to thank both Tanya and Alyssa and their families for taking the time to join us here this afternoon. It's the perseverance, strength, and energy that allows them to tell their stories that will motivate others in their community to raise awareness and support for individuals with Down's syndrome.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Vancouver 2010 Olympic Torch Relay

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to join Albertans and all Canadians as we celebrate the countdown to the biggest show on earth, the Vancouver 2010 Olympic Winter Games. One of the greatest symbols of the games, the Olympic flame, will arrive in Alberta tomorrow, reigniting our Olympic spirit and reminding us of the tremendous legacy we created in Calgary in 1988. The flame will arrive in Alberta for a quick but memorable one-day visit to Grande Prairie, Fort McMurray, and Cold Lake before heading into Saskatchewan.

Along with my constituents I am honoured that Grande Prairie will be the first stop on this epic two-stage trip across our province. We will welcome the torch relay back to Alberta on January 13 for eight unforgettable days. All Albertans will have a wonderful opportunity to experience the Olympic spirit in action. By the time the flame returns to B.C. on January 21, it will have travelled to 76 Alberta communities and covered nearly 3,400 kilometres of our province, carried by a thousand Albertans. Most Albertans will be within a one-hour drive of our extensive torch relay route.

I encourage all Albertans to visit alberta.ca/vancouver2010 to find a map of the torch relay route and the celebration site nearest you. Let's show Canada our Olympic spirit and celebrate the 2010 Winter Olympic Games.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Civic Participation

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had the opportunity to deliver my fifth civic participation presentation during Canada's Citizenship Week, which is intended to encourage all Canadians to reflect on the value of citizenship. Through these presentations, organized by groups such as immigrant-serving and community-based organizations, I had the opportunity to talk about civic participation and Canadian citizenship, to encourage people who do not yet feel that they are full members of society that not only is it never too early to be engaged in society but that it's critical that they find ways to impact positive change and to model for their children active citizenship.

These candid sessions offer all participants speaking different languages opportunities to dialogue beyond the spectrum of civic participation, from volunteering to political participation, but also to examine barriers to meaningful and full participation in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to share some encouraging trends that I have observed from these recent encounters. The participants are diverse in terms of ethnicity, age, and professions. Most are skilled workers or trained professionals. The youth group I presented to on Saturday afternoon was attended by about 25 young people from different parts of the world. Similar to other sessions these are newcomers who have only been here between a few months to a few years.

1:50

Mr. Speaker, I want to recognize the collective, more strategic focus on integration in our society versus the traditional focus on recruitment and settlement of immigrants from community groups, governments, and funding bodies alike. With greater acknowledgement of the important role institutions in society need to play in communicating the importance of engagement, community groups have the support to provide people the tools to participate, and participants are motivated by understanding the significance and benefits of active participation. I believe we are heading in the right direction in creating the kind of dynamic and active citizenship that our public policies intend.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Deputy Speaker: First question for the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The last two weeks have shown that not only is this health minister incapable of managing the health care system, but we have a Premier who is unwilling to admit mistakes and take real action that would protect the interests of Albertans. To whichever minister is responsible for health care in this pandemic we are in today: what is the explanation for this government policy to delay regularly scheduled immunizations for serious diseases, including meningitis, diphtheria, measles, mumps, and rubella until December or January?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Health and Wellness I want to make a couple of comments. First of all, let us remember that we're not just dealing with an Alberta situation here; we're dealing with a world situation. This is a pandemic. In short, what that means is that the supplier, in this case GlaxoSmith-Kline, is obligated to try and help the entire world with the amount of vaccine that's required. We have responded as best we can, and I think our health care workers deserve some applause for the good job that they're doing.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Is it the policy of this government to make scapegoats of bureaucrats rather than have an inept minister do the honourable thing and resign?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, again, on behalf of the Minister of Health and Wellness let me just indicate that as soon as issues were found out pertaining to what I assume the member is driving at, action was taken. A full investigation has been launched, and it's going to be completed as soon as we finish the next round or two of vaccinations. We hope to have that done before Christmastime, so let's be patient. Let's deal with the priority today, and that is those people most at risk. That's what we're focused on doing.

Dr. Swann: Let me ask it in a different way. Is it the policy of this government to deny responsibility for the minister of a ministry and let a bureaucrat fall for a minister's problems?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the policy of this government is to look after the needs of all Albertans, in a priority order in this case. That is clearly what we are doing. We were fortunate to have received the immunization packages a little in advance. Media got the message out. We got the message out. Unfortunately, there was not enough vaccine at that time. There is more vaccine now available to us, and we're dealing with those priority issues right now. Our policy is to help those people who are at highest risk, and that's why today the program started to help out those children who are between six months and less than five years of age. Tomorrow we'll deal with part 2, which will be pregnant women, and then we'll go on down the line to help out everyone that needs the help before Christmastime.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition. Second question.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Aboriginal Albertans

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, two months ago we in the opposition sent a letter to the Minister of Aboriginal Relations stressing the need to have plans in place to deal with First Nations, one of the risk populations. A focused response clearly is needed, and the federal government has affirmed this, putting it in the highest risk category for H1N1 immunization. To the Minister of Aboriginal Relations: were you consulted on the decision to delist high priority immunization for First Nations for this week? Were you consulted?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, if this is dealing with First Nations on reserve, then clearly that is a matter under the purview of the government of Canada. We have worked with the Public Health Agency of Canada. Our officials have also worked with Health Canada. We've worked with Alberta Health Services. We've worked with the Ministry of Health and Wellness. To my knowledge, the vaccines were provided.

Now, they, too, might be following in the footsteps of others in that there might be a shortage of vaccines. It's a world-wide problem, Mr. Speaker. It's not just First Nations; it's not just other Albertans; it's a world-wide problem. It's a national shortage in our country. We're dealing with it with very capable health care providers doing the best job that they can.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, this minister doesn't seem to want to answer questions today.

Were you consulted before the decision was made to remove First Nations from this week's high-risk vaccination program? Were you consulted on this? Yes or no.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, that's a different question. The first question was about First Nations, and that's under the purview of the government of Canada. They don't necessarily have to consult with me. Did they personally phone me? No, they didn't. Did I personally phone several reserves to make sure they got the vaccines? Yes, I did.

Now, in terms of high-risk groups I spoke with the Minister of Health and Wellness every day for the past number of days. In fact, as early as yesterday I have been assured that we will be providing the vaccine on an as-scheduled basis as quickly as possible to the Métis settlements, which do come under the jurisdiction of Alberta Health Services, and to other high-risk priority groups.

Dr. Swann: As of today, Mr. Speaker, 439 people have been admitted to hospital with H1N1. Can the minister tell this Assembly how many aboriginal and Métis people are among those in hospital due to H1N1?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, that's a very difficult question to even attempt to answer because not everyone who is of aboriginal extraction self-identifies. It's up to them if they wish to do that. So it's almost an impossible question to answer. Let me take that question under advisement and see if I can find some statistics for the hon. member.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite what this government claims, the case for massive transmission development is anything but proven. Two professors of economics and engineering at the University of Calgary yesterday put out a scholarly paper stating that the power lines between Edmonton and Calgary, the ones that the government wants to force on Alberta consumers, the ones that the government wants to call critical transmission infrastructure, are "an overbuild that is not warranted by its economics." In a proper regulatory system, of course, these opinions would be heard by the regulator and would influence the regulator's decision. To the Minister of Energy: why do you want to cut experts such as these out of the regulatory process?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to be clear about one thing, and that is that the government of Alberta did not proclaim anything about critical infrastructure. It's AESO. AESO is an independent group of about 250 technicians and engineers that have the ability and the resources to determine what is necessary for the electrical transmission system and the electrical system, generally speaking, in the province of Alberta. I didn't determine this; AESO determined it.

Relative to the situation with the HVDC, Mr. Speaker, what I will say is that there are many people with differing opinions relative to what technology should be employed.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Which would make a good case for continuing to have those experts express their opinions in front of the regulator that this minister wants to do away with.

You know, this government isn't willing to hear experts who disagree. Its favoured approach is instead to spend taxpayer money to manipulate public opinion. Yesterday this minister doggedly refused to answer my very simple question about the government's pro Bill 50 propaganda campaign. The government is spending taxpayers' dollars trying to convince Albertans that they just have to pay billions of dollars for new transmission lines. It's time to answer the question, Mr. Minister. How much is this costing?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, I'm not exactly sure what it is that the hon. member would like me to answer. If he wants me to answer the question around how much of AESO's budget is expended giving Albertans information that they desire and need relative to this system, I guess I could make some attempt to find out what number that would be. But I have to tell you that as far as the whole business is concerned about who is putting information in front of the public and who isn't, I think that at this point in time it'd be fair to say that almost every stakeholder is putting information in front of consumers.

2:00

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Geez, this is funny. Not every stakeholder is spending hundreds of thousands of taxpayers' dollars advertising on radio, on television, and in the newspaper. The minister dodged my question yesterday when he would not state in this Assembly how much this propaganda campaign is costing. To the minister: how many taxpayer dollars are you spending on advertising on this pro Bill 50 campaign? Simple enough for you?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, I don't know what constitutes advertising. Apparently, he's an expert in the field. So if he would like to send me a letter that indicates which pieces of this stuff he considers to be information for consumers and which pieces he considers to be advertising, perhaps what we could do for him then – you know, he's the expert on advertising. He told me that yesterday. That's fine. If he's the expert, let him tell me which pieces are advertising and which pieces are distributing information that Albertans want.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

(continued)

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, there are so many empty seats on the other side today, you'd think the next election had already happened.

The government has made a scapegoat of the bureaucrat who let the Calgary Flames jump the queue for the H1N1 vaccine. Albertans want to know why this government repeatedly encouraged masses of low-risk people to get vaccinated when the clinics first opened and why the vaccine wasn't exclusively targeted for high-risk groups from the start. If a bureaucrat was fired for letting a hundred people get ahead of the vulnerable, will the Deputy Government House Leader tell us who's going to be fired for encouraging a few hundred thousand people to go ahead of the high-risk people who needed the flu shot first?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think what we need to stay focused on is the fact that today is the beginning of a revamped immunization program which, by and from all reports so far – I know it's early in the day – is going quite well. I have already indicated in an earlier question what is going to happen with respect to the issue in Calgary, and I've also indicated that that will be done as soon as the immunization program is completed. We hope to have that done by Christmastime.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much. Mr. Speaker, the bureaucrat who was fired was operating in a leadership vacuum where nobody knew what was right, what was wrong, who was supposed to be getting priority, and who wasn't. Why won't the Deputy Government House Leader admit that the people who were responsible for this vaccine were operating in a leadership vacuum where anything could've gone wrong and often did?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there's only one thing that went wrong, if at all, and that is the shortage of vaccine. We just have to explain that very carefully. That particular supplier has now guaranteed an additional number of doses. Those doses are being rolled out on a priority basis, as I have indicated. We will continue doing that until the needs of the most vulnerable are met, and then we'll deal with those who are not as high at risk.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the minister is right. There's only one thing that went wrong, and that was that the wrong party is in the government of Alberta at this time. From where I sit, the leadership vacuum that is crippling the government is obvious. I look across the way, and no one is here to answer for Albertans.

Instead of scapegoating one individual, a low-level bureaucrat, why won't the Deputy Government House Leader admit that the chaos and confusion surrounding this entire vaccination program ultimately comes down to a total failure of leadership at the highest level?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we have the priorities, we have outlined them, and I resent the hon. leader of the third party referring to me, who's providing good, solid information, as somebody who's not here. You know, here we are. You're asking questions, and we're providing you answers. The fact that you don't want to believe the truth: that's up to you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Government Accountability

Mr. Boutilier: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. MLAs from all political parties bring great ideas to this Assembly because we're connected to the elected bosses who elect us and who we follow. My question to the acting Premier today would be simply this: is this government being run by elected people or by nonelected, politically appointed people based on the contradictions we've been seeing in the last seven days?

Mr. Horner: The hon. member well knows that this province is being run by a Premier with vision, with leadership, and with a very strong team of elected officials backing him from across this great province.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, ideas that are brought to this administration are either heard or not heard. I know there is much frustration on that side from people stopping their ideas from coming forward. The minister of health in this very Assembly said that there would not be a long-term care in Fort McMurray to 2012. He has contradicted the Premier when the Premier was in my city council three weeks ago and said in front of hundreds of people that it would be done. Can you explain the contradiction of the minister of health and the Premier of this province, who promised my constituents it would be done?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is bringing up a conversation which I wasn't privy to, so I can't say what the Premier said. I can't say what the minister of health said. The hon. member is obviously saying that he believes that this was said and that he believes a commitment was made. We'll take it under advisement and advise the Premier.

Mr. Boutilier: I have to really ask the question: who is running this asylum? Is it elected people or is it nonelected people? There are great ideas over there, listening to Albertans at coffee shops, bringing them here, but they fell on deaf ears. This weekend the question will be: will you be listening to the people of Alberta or to people that are nonelected in politically appointed positions? My question is: when will the listening start for MLAs in terms of the ideas they bring falling on deaf ears in this administration?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member obviously feels that he's not being heard from where he's at. I would encourage the hon. member to come over to any one of the ministers who are on this bench. Come and have a chat with us. We have an open-door policy. I would suggest to all of the hon. members here: are you being listened to by this government? I think the answer would be a very solid yes.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Condominium Property Act Consultation

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Shoddy construction practices continue to leave condo boards and owners burdened with large repair bills after the developer is out of the picture. Albertans are still expecting action from this government on new legislation to protect condominium owners. To the Minister of Service Alberta. This is yet another example of inaction from your department. Why has Service Alberta still not completed a review of Alberta's condominium legislation?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the Condominium Property Act we are right now working with Municipal Affairs and a number of other ministries, moving into a consultation process beginning early next spring. The Condominium Property Act was last revised in 2001, so it's indeed time to look at it. There are letters that come across my desk and the Minister of Municipal Affairs' every day, so there are a number of concerns out there that we need to deal with.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's what the minister has been promising all along. Can the minister provide us with an actual timeline with actual deadlines for when she will bring forward this stronger legislation for Alberta's condominium owners?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, with respect to the Condominium Property Act you have to take into account the building code as well, which is with Municipal Affairs. Part of a really good consultation is making sure we hear from all stakeholders and respect the opinions of everyone who's at the table. Being that it was last reviewed in 2001, we knew it was a very lengthy process. That's why we are beginning it next spring. As a matter of fact, the letters that we are getting are already being funneled into the department and being looked at as we speak.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again: will the minister commit to including in the legislation tough new sanctions against shoddy residential construction practices?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, that would be with the Minister of Municipal Affairs, but it's important to note that in the letters that are coming across our desks, there are a lot of concerns out there, as the hon. member has raised. That is something we want to look at with respect to when individuals purchase property, that they know what they're getting into, whether it's a condo or whether it's a home. That's really important to myself in my role as minister of consumers.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

2:10 Vancouver 2010 Olympic Torch Relay

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great day today to be an Albertan and a Canadian. [Mrs. Leskiw sported red Olympic mittens]

My constituents are really excited about welcoming the torch relay to Cold Lake tomorrow as it makes its first trip through our great province. A local community committee has been working extremely hard to organize this celebration in my constituency. My first question is to the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. How are Albertans involved with the torch relay as it travels through our great province?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, we are feeling the love. We're feeling the spirit. [Mrs. Ady sported red Olympic mittens]

It's been 20 years since the torch came through the province of Alberta, and tomorrow that torch is re-entering this province, first going to Grande Prairie, then going to Fort McMurray, and then to Cold Lake, and you know, we're excited. As you heard earlier, a thousand Albertans are going to carry the torch through some 76 communities. A recent Travel Alberta guide that was put out shows where all those torch relays are going, where the celebrations are going to be. I would encourage all members to look, and I'll be tabling this.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplement is to the same minister. What else is being done to shine some of the international spotlights on Alberta around the games?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're going to be promoting Alberta business, culture, and tourism because we know the world is watching. We announced already seven world cups that will give us a little taste of what to expect in 2010 as well as 450 hours of international TV coverage reaching 150 million viewers. This is a wonderful moment for Alberta, and we're going to take advantage of it.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplement is to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. Can you please tell me about how Alberta artists and performers are involved in the torch relay?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd say that my hands feel somewhat naked.

Mr. Speaker, of the 18 communities that are participating in these celebrations, they'll all involve local artists who will showcase the diversity, people, and cultural flavour of their regions. The arts are an integral part of our cultural identity and our strength. These celebrations provide our province with the opportunity to showcase who we are and what we're made of. It gives them the freedom to create and the spirit to achieve. They will show the rest of the world what we here in Alberta already know, and that is that we have among the most astonishing level of artistic talent and accomplishment within our borders. The government of Alberta, through the Alberta Foundation for the Arts, is providing each of these 18 communities with up to $10,000 for these celebrations.

Charitable Gaming Consultation

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I asked the Solicitor General why he was sending Huey, Dewey, and Louie – I mean, three backbench MLAs – out on a taxpayer-funded junket to various places around Alberta to have meetings on casino table revenues. In my estimation this is a complete waste of money. Given that a standing committee of the Legislative Assembly is already in place and their members are already paid, why did this minister not have Alberta charities consult this all-party forum instead of wasting taxpayer money on sending these backbenchers out to attend closed-door meetings?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thought I addressed that question yesterday. While the hon. member is referring to a circus, the only circus is in the tone of the question that the hon. member is asking.

It's pretty simple mathematics when you look at sending 10 to 12 members across the province through consultation instead of three government members who are doing it basically on expenses because they're already maxed out on their committee pay. So it's a savings; it's not an extra expense.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, I find that answer quite amazing because we have these all-party committees, and people come in and present to us. It really is amazing. So my question to the minister: do you know how these all-party committee meetings work?

Mr. Lindsay: As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, I know exactly how the all-party committees work, and they do great work in the mandate that they're set up for.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I guess then he knows how they work, and he chose not to use them, and he chose to waste taxpayer dollars.

Nevertheless, a resolution from the 2008 Progressive Conservative Association AGM proposed by the constituency association of Drayton Valley-Calmar stated: Provincial Pooling of Casino Slot Proceeds. To the same minister: is the Alberta government now instituting this motion that has the apparent goal of taking revenue raised in Calgary and Edmonton and Lethbridge and other major centres and spreading it throughout the province?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, what I can say is that the information I've got back from the great committee that's doing some great work in the province, meeting with all of the charitable organizations across this province, is that they're all committed to working together to ensure that there's fairness in the gaming model. At the end of the day I'm sure the report that'll come back from the three MLAs will indicate that, and we'll move forward.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

(continued)

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. A new study released by the University of Calgary's School of Public Policy yesterday concluded that the proposed Calgary-Edmonton HVDC – that's high-voltage direct current – lines are an overbuild. To the Minister of Energy: are the conclusions reached by this study correct? Is this a case of overbuild, or is it a staged prebuild?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, there has been a tremendous amount of interest relative to the build-out of transmission in the province of Alberta. The most contentious piece at the moment seems to be this idea that we should or should not build high-voltage direct current lines in the province of Alberta. I believe that the School of Public Policy at the University of Calgary was looking at this from the point of view of: what is this HVDC system's eventual capacity? It is a lot. What I can tell you is that this will be a staged development. Once we have the linear pieces of this infrastructure in place – and, by the way, the linear pieces are less expensive to build than AC lines – we can build onto them and work for the future of Alberta.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question to the same minister. My constituents continue to be lobbied by various interest groups who state that there has been no public engagement with respect to these lines. Can the minister shed some light on what public consultation has actually occurred on this matter?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, of course, you know, the situation relative to transmission reinforcement in the province of Alberta is something that's been worked on for a number of years. What I can tell you and what I can tell all Albertans is that, number one, since 2007 relative to this issue of transmission there have been over 300 public open house meetings where any and all Albertans were invited to come and share their opinion with respect to what it is we're doing. I don't think that there's any other piece of public policy that's been moving on the landscape here in that period of time that has had anywhere near that amount of public scrutiny. If they want to come, please do.

Mr. Speaker, the Department of Energy alone has held more than 20 meetings on this piece of legislation in the past couple of months.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you. My final question is to the same minister. Given what the AESO has heard in landowner consultations, why is it so important to build these HVDC lines as opposed to AC lines?

Mr. Knight: Well, there are a number of reasons, of course, Mr. Speaker. The first one would be, as I have indicated, that we can stage the development of these lines, start off with a thousand megawatts on each of these lines, and then it's plug and play after that. When we need to reinforce the system further, you could put a thousand megawatts at each end by adding AC/DC conversion on the ends of the line. You don't have to go back and trouble landowners. You don't have to go back and build new infrastructure. You don't have to go back and create a situation where you put Band-aids on the system every 10 years. This is built for the future.

It can be staged and developed in a manner that best suits Albertans in the long run.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Grade 12 Diploma Exams

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Because of my inability to interpret educational baffle-gab, I have prepared a translation test to help the Minister of Education qualify and quantify his responses from yesterday, upon which he will be graded, with his results published by the Fraser Institute. HB pencil ready, Mr. Minister. Multiple-choice tests (a) assume that there's only one correct response, (b) emphasize the final product over process, (c) are easy and inexpensive to mark, (d) any or all of the above. Letter only, please.

2:20

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, being a slow learner, I missed the first part of the question, so I can't answer the (a), (b), (c), or (d) part.

Mr. Chase: Grade 12 students don't have those options.

Question 2. The Ministry of Education's justification for giving equal value for an entire year's work to a two-hour multiple-choice test is (a) students who have slacked off throughout the year deserve one last chance to redeem themselves, (b) primarily designed to justify the Ministry of Education's existence, (c) teachers' professionally varied and cumulative evaluations of standardized curriculum aren't to be trusted, (d) all of the above. (A), (b), (c), or (d)?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, this is precisely the type of problem we try to avoid by having experts design exam questions which are valid and reliable and actually test functional knowledge and ability to calculate, all of those things, the six things that I mentioned in the House the other day that are necessary to test in a reliable manner. This particular teacher should go back and learn assessment qualities.

Mr. Chase: Well, I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker, but due to budget cuts we had to remove the written rationale portion of the multiple-choice test.

Question 3. When selecting a successful college or university applicant, a variety of factors are taken into consideration including (a) the student's academic record throughout their high school experience, (b) a singular focus on their departmental exam mark, (c) their extracurricular interests, including community involvement, (d) both (a) and (c). Would the minister like a lifeline?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, most of us would know that colleges and universities, postsecondary institutions across this province, first of all, put a great deal of reliance on the Alberta diploma because the Alberta diploma is based on a standardized assessment, which gives a reliable indication of a student's ability. Not only in Alberta but institutions across North America accept the Alberta diploma. In fact, other places want the Alberta diploma because it has such a strong standard. Other jurisdictions don't have that kind of reliability, so their marks get degraded. The fact of the matter is that most postsecondaries look beyond the actual marks now. They understand that internationalization, community service: all of those things are important. Depending on the faculty and depending on the purpose, they look beyond the marks.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

PDD Funding for Community Agencies

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Seniors and Community Supports likes to throw out the occasional platitude about support to people with developmental disabilities. Yet, as usual, when cuts happen, those who can least afford it are first on the chopping block. The minister has in the past admitted that front-line community agency workers aren't paid anywhere near what they should be and that this interferes with disabled Albertans getting the help that they need. Why, then, would the minister allow the PDD board to roll back plans to deliver already-budgeted modest wage increases to these same workers?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that the member opposite is speaking about the $14.4 million that we released to the board to be paid to the front-line workers as a one-time bonus. In our budget this year we did budget a larger number, but as everyone here is aware, there is an economic downturn. Instead of disappointing the front-line workers by giving them something that we didn't have, we made sure that they got something that we did have. Since 2005-06 we've added $74 million to this program, with an increase of clients of about 2 per cent.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the needs of people with disabilities don't change just because we're going through an economic crisis. Funding that was in place was already sadly lacking. PDD has told community agencies to expect 10 to 15 per cent cuts next year, which has forced them to cancel the wage increase, and it's also forcing them to cut other essential programs. How can this minister suggest that the already meagre budgets for agencies that support the developmentally disabled have any room for further cuts?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of any cuts of 10 to 15 per cent. I'm assuming that the member opposite must have got this information from the same source that was incorrect last time when they made other announcements that were highly incorrect. Once again, I'm not aware of any cuts of that nature to the PDD program.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is what community agencies are hearing from PDD.

Now, just a year ago the minister said: "We fully recognize that adult Albertans with developmental disabilities who have behavioural, mental health, or other complex needs require specialized supports." You can't attract the workers who provide these specialized supports if all you offer them is minimum wage or just a little bit above. How can this minister claim to care about people with disabilities while not ensuring that we maintain the funding for the supports that she admits they need?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, this year we did give $14.4 million to the agencies. We had another $6 million that we produced for the increase in clients for the agencies and, besides that, another $5 million for complex-needs residents. There is no doubt in my mind that I care about our PDD clients. I've proved it in many ways.

Mr. Speaker, one more point that I'd like to make. The member opposite forgets to mention that at the beginning of this year we did give a hundred dollar per month increase to 95 per cent of our PDD clients through the AISH program as well.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

WorldSkills Calgary 2009

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As we're all aware, the 2009 WorldSkills competition was held in Calgary during the week of September 1 through 7. I recognize the importance of providing opportunities for Alberta's youth to foster these important life skills. My questions are to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. What was the cost of the 2009 WorldSkills competition, and what benefits did it provide to the competitors?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, obviously the event was a tremendous success. For any of us who were able to attend to see what happened, Calgary certainly enjoyed the benefits of that. We invested $24 million into the WorldSkills competition as well as $1.7 million to transport thousands of Alberta students to that.

Having had the opportunity to speak to some of the students and some of the teachers who attended, they thought it was a tremendous, life-changing experience for many of their students. More than 59,000 students attended WorldSkills, Mr. Speaker, and had a first-hand opportunity to avail themselves of different trades of some of the best and brightest of the world. More than 151,000 visitors from across Canada, across Alberta, and across the world came to Calgary, where two distinguished Albertans received medallions of excellence for their achievements.

On top of that, Mr. Speaker, Alberta decided to give $16 million in state-of-the-art equipment from the competition, part of our investment, to the schools and the postsecondaries in this province. I think that's a tremendous benefit.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister. Mr. Minister, there's talk about the WorldSkills legacy, donating new equipment to Alberta schools. What schools benefited from this program, and what criteria were used as to where the equipment went?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, all 45 school jurisdictions and postsecondary institutions that applied received equipment, and the school boards were responsible for deciding the type of equipment they were looking for, the type of equipment that would fit best in their high schools in their jurisdictions. As well, the postsecondaries submitted their applications, and they were ranked based on the priorities that we have within the department as to the areas of expertise that each of these colleges and postsecondary institutions wanted to put into their high-demand programs. Again, it was all done in the spirit of co-operation and collaboration from both departments and from all of the school jurisdictions that applied.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental to the same minister: how are programs like the registered apprenticeship program benefited by the WorldSkills legacy?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the RAP apprentices are enrolled in CTS courses throughout this province in postsecondary and in high schools, and the high schools and postsecondary institutions now have flexibility given the new equipment. This was state-of-the-art equipment, so our students are now working on equipment that they will see in industry when they leave our postsecondary and high school institutions. I think that's a tremendous benefit not only for our RAP apprentices but also for high school students, who may just decide to stay within the K to 12 system and get the training that they need to further their careers and further their education once they leave those institutions.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

2:30 Employment and Immigration Spending

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The public accounts of Alberta list many examples of this government's out-of-control and wasteful spending. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: why did the minister waste $2.6 million on bonuses to senior management last year when other necessary programs for people in the ministry ran short of cash?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we certainly have contractual obligations. We set targets and we set certain objectives that have to be met, and if those targets are met and the objectives are achieved, then we will pay the bonuses, as we've done in the past.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. minister knows that the targets were not met, the objectives were not met, but the bonuses were paid anyway, and other people who needed services did without.

Now, again to the minister: why did the minister waste $565,000 last year advertising in the New York Times, the Houston Chronicle, the Washington Post, and the Minneapolis Star Tribune when other needed programs for people in the ministry ran out of money?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of mandates that we have as a ministry, and one is to be ready to have the right people with the right skills at the right places for the future operation of the province of Alberta. We all know that we will be short of people in the very near future, as we were up until a few months ago, in the province of Alberta. We still need to be ready when the pendulum swings the other way. We need to be able to maintain our presence around the world to be able to attract the types of people that are required in this province.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: why did the minister waste $1.1 million last year hiring Geneva Health International to recruit nurses from overseas when this very government now refuses to hire the nurses that were recruited in the first place? That's a complete waste of money and a very stupid policy.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, a lot of that work was done when we did have a high demand for individuals, professionals of all types, including those that have trades. We target certain demographics across the world, and we are spending our money in areas of the world that we feel will benefit Albertans the most.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Charitable Gaming Consultation (continued)

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Charities in my constituency have expressed concerns about the amount of money they receive from holding a casino event, how the proceeds are pooled, the length of time it takes in between their casino events, and the number of volunteers required to work at these casino events. To the Solicitor General: what are you doing to address these very important concerns?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many rural and urban Albertans told this government that they are unhappy with the issues that the hon. member has referred to. We listened and formed a three-member committee to look at these issues. This cost-efficient committee has heard from 862 eligible charities during 13 meetings to date to gather input and ideas. Two more meetings will be held in northern Alberta next week.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. My constituents say that this review is pitting Calgary charities against rural charities and that cities will lose out. Mr. Minister, is this the case?

Mr. Lindsay: Well, from the chirping across the bench, Mr. Speaker, I guess the hon. member is right. Let me be very clear. Our government does not believe in pitting one region against the other. The MLA committee has formed to respond to specific concerns from charities about how casino events are scheduled, how gaming proceeds are distributed, and the number of volunteers that are required. This process is about this government's commitment to help ensure that Alberta's charities can earn revenue to support their many worthwhile projects and services. In 2008-2009 roughly 3,500 licensed charities raised $252 million in proceeds from casino events, $252 million.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the same minister. There's been a little bit of criticism from across the way that the consultation process is done in secret and that the process is flawed by having participants work in round-table discussion instead of making formal presentations. Would the minister please inform all members of this House why this particular method was chosen?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, information on the MLA committee meetings and processes has been publicly available since I first announced this committee in September. Possibly if some members opposite would have taken the time, they could have added some valuable input to this committee. The round-table format of these meetings allows eligible charities to share perspectives and work together to try to find potential solutions on the issues raised. Participants have said that they appreciated the opportunity to participate in this process. Charities that can't make the meetings can still participate by sending in written submissions. This government is looking to find the most equitable solution to the concerns raised by these charities, and that's why we're asking them for their thoughts and their ideas.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Continuing Care Fee Structure

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A concern that has been brought to my attention is the lack of information that is available regarding changes to continuing care. Hopefully the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports can clarify some of the concerns that I have. Is the minister considering changing the fee structure for accommodation rates for continuing care facilities?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, there are no plans at this time to change any of the fee structures for continuing care, for long-term care, or for designated assisted living. Just so that the member knows, last year about this time an increase of 7 per cent was allowed for long-term care accommodations, and we helped to support about 8,700 seniors who were in long-term care at that time.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for that, Madam Minister. The next time that this may come up, would you have public consultations to ensure – let me put my two questions together, and then I'm down to one. Actually, would you have public consultation, and would you ensure that the rate for the seniors would never be above inflation?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, public consultation and consultation with our stakeholders is a very good thing, something I would consider for making any serious move in continuing care. As far as any predictions about what the increases may be and if they would never go above the cost of living, I can't promise anything at this time, but I know that at this time no increases are being decided on or considered.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Identity Theft

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With today's technologies it's possible to be a victim of theft without ever seeing the thief. Identity theft, in particular, is one of the fast-growing crimes that can devastate a person's finances and entire life. The criminals are getting smarter with the use of technology and always seem to be one step ahead of the police. My questions are for the Minister of Service Alberta. Given that your ministry is responsible for consumer protection, my constituents are asking: why aren't you doing more to educate Albertans about the dangers of identity theft and how to prevent it?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, identity theft is one of the fastest growing types of fraud in Alberta today. Service Alberta works with the Solicitor General, local police and law enforcement agencies, and other groups to help prevent identity theft, and certainly it's highlighted during the anniversary of safe communities week. We have a number of resources in place to educate Albertans about how to prevent identity theft, including presentations to seniors. There's a lot of information out there. The award-winning DVD video called Changing Faces teaches Albertans how to protect themselves from identity theft.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Identifications such as drivers' licences and birth certificates contain valuable information that can easily be used to steal someone's identity. To the same minister: given that identity thieves adapt so quickly, what is your ministry doing to ensure that drivers' licences and birth certificates are as current and secure as possible?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's drivers' licences and birth certificates are one of the most secure documents in North America. We introduced a new, secure, state-of-the-art licence in 2008. As a matter of fact, some of the latest security features were just updated earlier this year. It's really important that we try to stay ahead of the counterfeiters and always, always update our technology.

2:40

Mr. Benito: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: what does your department do to prevent, investigate, and prosecute people who try to get false information or identification through a registry office?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the registry offices and the excellent work all of the agents do across Alberta, we have a special investigations unit and front-line staff to watch out when criminal action is taking place. We use facial recognition technology to verify the identity of people applying for drivers' licences or ID cards. As well, the information is in the vehicle system, which is reviewed by Service Alberta for irregularities. When staff do uncover these situations, we act quickly and get the police to investigate, charge, and prosecute. Last year alone our department investigations resulted in 133 criminal and 36 regulatory charges being laid against 56 individuals.

The Deputy Speaker: We have concluded question period. We will continue with Members' Statements in 35 seconds.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Centennial of Grouard

Ms Calahasen: Thank you. On September 27, 1909, the community of Grouard was officially incorporated as a village in the new province of Alberta, and the residents honoured Bishop Grouard by naming the new village after him. After all, a year after his consecration as a bishop, in 1891, he visited the St. Bernard Mission in Grouard. A hundred years later many people gathered in the small village to commemorate Grouard's 100th birthday.

Grouard's history is rich and fascinating. In 1912 Grouard became a hub for many people. By 1914, five short years after its founding, over 1,000 residents called Grouard home and enjoyed the services of two schools, a dentist, four doctors, an eye specialist, three churches, a steamship company, a local newspaper, an active board of trade, 20 general stores, two department stores, a hardware store, two bakeries, two butcher shops, a tire shop, two jewellers, three implement agencies, a flour and feed store, two laundromats, six livery barns, a harness shop, three blacksmith shops, two motor garages, five real estate offices, five poolrooms, a motion picture theatre, a skating rink, tennis, baseball, and hockey clubs, a dominion lands office, a government telegraph office, a Royal North-West Mounted Police headquarters, a public health officer, an immigration hall, a hospital, a fire engine brigade, two sawmills, a bowling alley, a 24-piece brass band, two law offices, two drugstores, a post office, numerous restaurants, a rural telephone system, and a 16-kilometre-long main street named Bouillion Street. In other words, Grouard was growing to be a well-established community, on its way to being recognized as the capital of the north and the first city in the last great west.

However, Mr. Speaker, the confidence in the future of Grouard as a major bustling metropolis would not be sustained. Economic development at the time relied heavily on railway development, and in 1915 it was decided that the newly developed Edmonton, Dunvegan, and British Columbia Railway would bypass the town of Grouard to the south by a mere 12 miles. This established the railway towns of High Prairie and McLennan, causing Grouard's population to drop by two-thirds, and the portage/water routes died.

Mr. Speaker, I would like all members of the Assembly to join me in commemorating a remarkable 100 years of history for my hometown, Grouard.

Education Funding

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, Alberta's education system is on the brink of a government-inspired crisis. We need to protect funding for public education, not cut it. With an anticipated $340 million expected to be cut from the 2010 budget, school boards, teachers, and parent councils have united in their recognition of the dire consequences should these cuts go ahead. Moreover, the uncertainty and fear arising from the prospect of these cuts is creating chaos in a system that is already struggling to meet surprise mid-year budget clawbacks.

If that's not enough, the province has given education stakeholders a brief opportunity to have any impact on revisions to the School Act, which many believe have already been drafted. Vague requests for stakeholders to weigh in on questions of governance are issued while straightforward discussions with the school boards this would affect are avoided.

In the midst of talk of restructuring and profound funding cuts the government is also reviewing its provision of special-needs supports to Alberta kids. One of the items on the chopping block: coding, one of the few mechanisms of certainty in a system that has been increasingly destabilized by the actions of this government.

Finally, while these very significant changes are being discussed behind either partially or completely closed doors, the government has spent unnecessary dollars consulting experts, only to invite the public stakeholders to draw pictures of what they think the future of Alberta's education should look like. The title of this initiative? Inspiring Education. Where is the inspiration in threatening transformative cuts to the public system while maintaining an increased level of funding to the private schools? Where is the inspiration in having parents fund raise for their schools by working casinos to meet the basic instructional needs of the classroom? Where is the inspiration in driving school boards to increase class sizes, limit special-needs and literacy funding, and close community schools? This government is not inspiring education for our children at all. Rather, it is stifling the very future of this province with short-sighted and uninspired solutions offered up in the middle of self-generated chaos. Stop the cuts. The future of Alberta's children depends on it.

Thank you.

Presenting Petitions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to present a petition signed by 74 Calgarians. The petition reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to:

- Grandfather the rights and status of all currently-practicing Registered Massage Therapists . . . in Alberta in a manner that they may continue their practice undisturbed and, when necessary, gradually upgrade to newly-proclaimed standards of training, so as not to force current therapists to lose their ongoing income whilst upgrading and so to ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first set of tablings are copies of correspondence from Calgary-Varsity constituents Neil Thurber, Habib Syed, Nasser Hamid, Janet and Gary Moore, and Aldred Epp, all of whom have asked to have me voice their opposition to Bill 50 for reasons including, and I quote: trying to circumvent the public's view; planning is not benefiting Albertans; pushed through and decided upon behind closed doors; alternatives must be explored, but Bill 50 would prevent them from being identified and debated publicly; and a proper public and industry review can result in a more realistic solution.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker. I have the requisite number of copies of correspondence from Calgarians Gabrielle Enns, Isabell Emery, Jennifer Reddy, Jenny Regal, Kelly Russell, Kelly Waterman, Antonella Fanella, Dave Roseke, Michelle Coolidge, Sarah Clarke, Marlies Sargent, Brenda Herring, Ken Yasenchuk, Meghann Springett, Alicia Motuz, Tim Kitchen, and Patricia Paterson that was sent to the Minister of Education and the Premier urging them not to cut funding for education because it is more important in these times than ever to invest in our children's futures.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the requisite number of copies of a research paper from the University of Calgary School of Public Policy done by Jeffrey Church of the department of economics and William Rosehart and John MacCormack of the department of electrical engineering at the U of C entitled Transmission Policy in Alberta and Bill 50, worthwhile reading for the Minister of Energy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to table five copies of the Travel Alberta festival and event guide that features the Olympic torch relay and the Alberta World Cup events.

2:50

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table for information, please, a letter that I wrote on July 27, 2009, to the board chair at that time of the Edmonton public school board regarding the whole issue of school closures and the demographics that are used to make those decisions regarding school closures.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table five copies of the annual report of Alberta Education's Speak Out student engagement initiative. The report, entitled We're Listening, outlines what thousands of high school students have said about their education in online forums around the province and at the annual student conference held in Edmonton this May. The input these students offer has informed many department initiatives, including Inspiring Education, and I encourage all members to read it and learn what Alberta students had to say.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Lindsay, Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security, responses to questions raised by Mr. Hehr, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo; Dr. Brown, hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill; Ms Woo-Paw, hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay; Mr. Mason, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood; and Mr. Kang, hon. Member for Calgary-McCall on May 6, 2009, in the Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Stelmach, Premier, return to order of the Assembly MR 4, asked for by Ms Notley on behalf of Mr. Mason on April 20, 2009.

Projected Government Business

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that next week is the constituency week, at this time I would ask the hon. Government House Leader to please share with us the projected government business for the week commencing on the 16th, which is government business on the 17th. I understand there may be a need for night sittings by then.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Monday, November 16, in the afternoon, of course, is private members' business. In the evening we would anticipate second reading of Bill 51, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 53, Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009; Committee of the Whole on Bill 48, Crown's Right of Recovery Act; Bill 54, Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 55, Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 56, Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009; and for third reading Bill 46, Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act, of course depending on progress on some of those bills this afternoon.

On Tuesday, November 17, in the afternoon for second reading we would anticipate dealing with Bill 50, Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, and in the evening second reading of Bill 57 and Bill 58 as well as Committee of the Whole on bills 51 and 53, third reading on 48, 54, 55, and 56, and as per the Order Paper.

On Wednesday, November 18, in the afternoon second reading on Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, and in the evening second reading on Bill 59, Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 60, Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 61, Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009; Committee of the Whole on Bill 57, Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 58, Corrections Amendment Act, 2009; and third reading on Bill 51 and Bill 53; and as per the Order Paper depending on progress.

On Thursday, November 19, in the afternoon Committee of the Whole on Bill 50, Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 55

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 4: Ms Pastoor]

The Deputy Speaker: Does any hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The leader of the third party on Bill 55.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009. Now, this act simply extends the expiry date of the existing act from 2010 to 2016. It has the effect of extending a bill that would provide for the election of nominees, I guess you could call it, for the Canadian Senate. Of course, the Constitution of the country reserves the appointment of Senators to the Crown on the advice of the Prime Minister of Canada, so that's how the Senate is currently appointed.

What the government has put in place is that in the earlier days, when they were under, you know, a lot of pressure from the Reform Party, which proposed that we have a triple-E Senate – let me think if I can recall what all the Es stood for; elected was one, effective, and equal – of course, this provincial government bought into that American-style constitutional amendment and created a fiction, which is that we elect our Senators in this province, and the bill that we're extending provides a mechanism to do that.

I want to say that the New Democratic Party in this country was the forerunner of senatorial reform. Far before the Reform Party was created, the NDP was actively campaigning for a triple-A Senate, not a triple-E Senate. Abolish, annihilate, and abandon is the position that we took and still take today. The Senate in this country is a fundamentally undemocratic institution, and it's, moreover, a redundant and an unnecessary institution.

Attempting to reform it so that it looks like the American Senate really doesn't speak to the basic issues, the differences between the Canadian and the American Constitution. In the United States it's possible for federal, state, and even municipal jurisdictions all to legislate in the same area. So that means that the states, particularly, need to be protected from the intrusion of the American federal government into areas where they traditionally have jurisdiction. Now, the 10th amendment to the American Constitution also protects states by saying that "powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

What I want to say is that in the United States, because of the powers of the federal government and the lack of a clear division of powers which we have in Canada, the states need some protection from intrusions by the federal government. So the Senate, which represents the states in Washington, has a purpose. But here in Canada the provinces have their own areas of jurisdiction under the Constitution, and those can be protected from federal jurisdiction by appeal to the courts.

So the argument in favour of an equal Senate doesn't hold. It remains an undemocratic institution. It's modelled, incidentally, on the British House of Lords. It was originally intended as a House for the privileged, for people with property, and for 1867 the property requirement was very, very substantial. Now, that's not changed. It's rather modest in today's money, but at the time it was designed to be an unelected institution appointed by the federal government in order to provide a check on the passions of the mob, or the people, in those days.

We think that the Constitution of the country should be changed so that we eliminate the Senate. A number of provinces used to have upper Chambers in this country, and they have abolished them all because they're unnecessary. I believe that the Senate of Canada is unnecessary as well. So for the government to continue an act which essentially is a charade – that is to say, creates the fiction that we're electing Senators when, in fact, they're appointed by the Prime Minister – you know, is disingenuous and dishonest. I think we ought not to pursue this direction anymore.

3:00

Further, these elections are foisted on Alberta municipalities, who have to conduct senatorial elections in the October elections, and there are additional costs to the municipalities for doing so. To the best of my knowledge the government has never compensated municipalities for adding this cost. There are, of course, extra costs to administer, count, tabulate, record, and pass on to the provincial government who, in fact, is elected.

Mr. Speaker, we think that the bill has outlived the current legislation, has outlived any purpose that it might once have had. The time when Albertans were all excited by the idea of a triple-E Senate has passed, and I think that the government should let the senatorial act expire, as was originally intended. I think the Senatorial Selection Act was passed in 1989. That's 20 years ago. We don't need it anymore. We should stop beating our heads against this wall and stop pretending that we have the right to elect Senators and, instead, acknowledge that the Constitution is as it is and will not be changed.

The current amending formula of the Constitution of Canada means that provinces that have an interest in retaining the unbalanced membership in the Senate can block any attempt to reform it, and they will. Ontario and Quebec will block it. Perhaps the Atlantic provinces will block it because they get more seats even than the western provinces. I think we should just call a spade a spade and say: "Listen, this Senate is fundamentally flawed. It's undemocratic. It was created on a model of the House of Lords. It's reserved for people with privilege." What it's become, of course, is the ultimate patronage reward in the country. You can't get better than being made a Senator if you're a Tory bagman or if you're a Liberal bagman. That's where you go.

Ms Blakeman: It could be a bagwoman.

Mr. Mason: I'll correct the language.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you.

Mr. Mason: That's the heaven that you're rewarded with for being a bagperson. That's where you go. That's the heaven you get to go to if you've worked really hard for your – pick one – political party.

Ms Blakeman: Are there no ND Senators? Wasn't Broadbent appointed?

Mr. Mason: No.

Mr. Speaker, you know, it's filled with Tories and Liberals who've raised millions and millions of dollars for their political parties, and they are then supported until they're 75 more than adequately – let me put it that way – by the taxpayers while many of them continue to do political organizing and fundraising for the political parties that appointed them in the first place.

Mr. Speaker, we will not reform that place by electing or pretending to elect Senators from this province. They're not actually elected; we just pretend. We go through the motions and pretend that we are actually picking a Senator. I think this act is actually very dishonest with the people of Alberta. I don't think the government should continue the charade of saying that we're actually picking Senators because, you know, we're not. We're just picking people whom we hope the federal government, the Prime Minister, will recommend to the Queen to be appointed to the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, I certainly think there are many reforms that we can make to our political institutions. One of them is to eliminate the first past the post system. That means, you know, for example, that with 52 per cent of the vote the Progressive Conservative Party occupies 80 per cent of the seats in this Assembly. That's just wrong. You know, if you're looking for democratic change, for things that are wrong, that are unbalanced and undemocratic that you want to change, let's start with the electoral system we have in this province.

Mr. Speaker, we can look a little bit at electoral financing. You know, in Manitoba they got rid of corporate and union donations to political parties, which skew the decision-making process because, as much as some hon. members on the other side find this concept offensive, money is given to political parties in exchange for the hope that when they're the government, they're going to do things for the people that gave them the money.

Mr. Hancock: Never.

Mr. Mason: The hon. Government House Leader says, "Never." You know, in many ways the Government House Leader is a bit Pollyannaish. I think it's quite clear, for example, in this province that the oil companies fund the Conservative Party, have funded the Conservative Party at least until now, because they want a favourable royalty regime and favourable protection from environmentalists and all of that sort of thing. They've got it to a large degree, but they want a little bit more, so now they're funding the Wildrose Party because they want to put pressure on the Progressive Conservative government to move a little more to the right and give the oil companies even more than they already get. The amount of money that the oil companies give to both the PC Party and the Wildrose Alliance is very, very large.

We should look at the financing of our political process – money buys power – and we ought to extend the current disclosure requirements to cover leadership conventions, even nomination contests within parties. They're part of the political process in this province. We know that the Premier and the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development still have significant donations that they haven't revealed from their leadership race, and we know that in the Wildrose Alliance their new leader, Danielle Smith, has refused to reveal where she got her money from. I think that that's wrong.

There are lots of areas, Mr. Speaker, where we could bring about some significant democratic reform to the system that we have: how we elect people, how we pay for elections. We might even pass some legislation ensuring some government accountability or enshrining ministerial responsibility in law. That might be most useful in dealing with this latest H1N1 vaccination fiasco because the government has abandoned the long-standing parliamentary tradition of ministerial accountability.

There are lots of things, if the government is really interested in reforming and democratizing our political system, that they could do. But pretending to elect Senators, making municipalities pay for the elections, and creating these silly Senator-in-waiting positions, where they wait for years and years to be appointed, hoping that the Conservatives will win the federal election so that they have a chance of being appointed because the Liberals certainly will never appoint them, is a farce, and it should be discontinued.

I urge all hon. members to join us in voting against Bill 55. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: There are five minutes for questions and comments.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I'm wondering if the member is interested in expanding on his last point.

Mr. Mason: I thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, but, you know, I think I covered all of the aspects of this. I think that in practice this has been a farce, and it doesn't tackle the basic question before us of how to make our political institutions more democratic.

3:10

The Deputy Speaker: There are five minutes for comment and question.

Mr. Berger: Just a couple of quick questions. Judging from the comments made by the hon. member across the floor, I'm just wondering if he's actually offended by democracy in electing a Senator, if that's the offensive part, or if the offensive part is actually that his party has never been in power and never got anybody to that level, if that was the offensive part. I just want to clarify those two things.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. That's a rather insulting question. I think the hon. member, you know, pretends he didn't hear what I said. I said that the Senate in Canada is unnecessary and undemocratic and that there are a number of steps we can take to make our existing parliamentary system and its financing more democratic. I think that the government should do that. I assume that he heard that and just ignored it in order to score some cheap point.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations under this five minutes?

Mr. Webber: No, Mr. Speaker, not under the five minutes. I would like to speak on this bill, though. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member who wishes to speak on the bill?

Ms Blakeman: On the bill? Yes.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In January of 1992 I was one of the people that was selected from many across Canada to participate in one of the five Shaping Canada constitutional forums that were sponsored by the then Progressive Conservative federal government. I attended the conference in Calgary which was charged with exploring alternatives for institutions, including the Senate.

The five conferences were the federal-provincial division of powers, which was held in Halifax; the Senate, which was held in Calgary; the economic union, held in Montreal; the distinct society, the Canada clause, and the Charter, which was in Toronto; and a concluding conference in Ontario. I had actually wanted to attend one of the other ones, but now many years later I am actually very grateful that I was able to attend the one on the Senate because I think that more than anything it has continued to stay alive.

When I'd gone back and looked at some of the proposals that we were examining at the time, one of the examples in front of me, an article written by David Elkins from a magazine called The Network, which was a newsletter of the Network on the Constitution, talks about Australia having a triple-E Senate that was elected, equal, and effective and had been since the country's official creation in 1901 and about what experiences we could draw from that. But the method of electing the Senators was incredibly important, and what was put before us was that the first past the post system used for a senatorial election is not effective. All it does, actually, is entrench a particular kind of partisanship, and it very much affects the kinds of interests that get represented, and that ultimately affects the functioning of the Senate. So the single transferable vote was the preferred method there.

What's written in here is that the moral is that if you favour quick, decisive action by government, then abolish the Senate. But if you value compromise enough to endure the conflicts between House and Senate which this new legitimacy will bring, then reform the Senate [partly] by making it elected.

We look at: what are the key elements of this? One of my frustrations with this government's approach toward the Senate is in choosing simply one piece of Senate reform. It entrenches a whole series of things that are really quite unpalatable and which I find it surprising the government would be supportive of. In fact, it entrenches these very things by simply taking the system that is in place and electing members over top of that.

What we need to look at is a whole package of things. I spent five days in Calgary in 1992 looking at what this package needs to contain. It needs to look, particularly, at the distribution of the number of Senate seats. It needs to look at the process to change, which is the constitutional amending formula. It needs to look at the equality of the Senate. What is the purpose of the Senate seats? We have Members of Parliament who are elected on a geographic basis to represent the interests of the people that live in a geographic boundary. The idea of the Senate seats was always meant to work with a much larger constituency or issue base or interest base. Originally it started out with a sort of regional flavour to it, but if we are going to reform the Senate, it brought into play a number of other, more modern concepts that were open for us.

When I look at Bill 55, the government's bill to open up their Senate bill again – and, really, all it's doing is extending the dates so that they don't have to deal with this right now – I'm disappointed because I've always seen Senate reform as a huge opportunity for which there is no uptake right now. That's disappointing because there are lots of possibilities that we could work with in Canada to help refresh our democracy and to possibly do some pretty interesting things.

The current amending formula that was being worked with at that time – it's actually still in place – was unanimous consent for the provisions referred to in section 41, the consent of Parliament for certain provisions relating to the national government, consent of the provincial Legislature for those provisions relating to the provinces, and consent of Parliament and the provinces relating to provisions applicable to more than one province, et cetera, et cetera.

The Meech Lake accord would have made two changes. The unanimous support of Parliament and the Legislative Assemblies of all the provinces would have been required for amendment of a number of additional matters such as Senate reform and the creation of new provinces, which currently require the consent of Parliament and two-thirds of the Legislative Assemblies for amendment. Compensation would have been provided to a province opting out of any amendment transferring provincial legislative power to the Parliament. None of this is simple stuff. It all requires a fair amount of hard work.

What were the pieces that we were looking at? Well, number one was that the Senate should not replicate the patterns of representation that were already present in the House of Commons. Another point of real contention was whether the Senate would be allowed to deal with what's called money bills. We deal with that issue in this Assembly because, essentially, a private member's bill, which covers anyone that's not in Executive Council and not a minister – we can't bring forward any private bill that has anything to do with money. Essentially, the question was around the Senate: would a money bill category be immune from Senate scrutiny? Really, when you look at it, money bills account for between one-half and three-quarters of the House of Commons business, so not allowing the Senate to consider money bills actually gave them not very much to be dealing with. That was another big piece of what we were looking at.

Those powers came into play in a number of ways. We were looking at Senate powers regarding normal legislation, regarding money bills, on ratifying appointments, on constitutional amendments, on the role of language and culture legislation. Could the Senate introduce money bills, never mind commenting on them but actually introduce a money bill, and could the Senate defeat the government? Those were the issues that we were contemplating.

3:20

Where it really started to come home to me was when we looked at what would be entrenched. When I hear the talk about a triple-E Senate, which was very big at the time, what really frustrated me was that I looked at where we were, and I thought: boy, if this is all we did, all we do is entrench an unfairness to my province; why on earth would we willingly do that? Here's the distribution that we have: P.E.I. has four Senate seats, Newfoundland has six, New Brunswick has 10, Nova Scotia has 10, Saskatchewan has six, Manitoba has six, Alberta has six, B.C. has six, Quebec has 24, and Ontario has 24. If we just went with what's in front of us with the government's proposal for electing Senators, we're forever entrenched with six Senators. Why on earth would we do that to ourselves?

A big piece of senatorial reform, which is the larger picture, is trying to figure out what should be the distribution of seats. We spent a long time on this. We looked at all kinds of possible distributions. The elected and effective, the triple-E Senate that you hear people talk about, would have basically assigned 10 seats to every single province, so we would have had P.E.I. having 10 seats and Alberta having 10 seats. Well, make that one work for me. Or if you came from Ontario or Quebec or B.C., imagine how you'd feel knowing that you had 10 seats, so did Alberta, and so did P.E.I. I don't believe that the idea of absolute, equal seats as a distribution was a very realistic or helpful way of looking at Senate reform considering all the other possibilities.

You know, folks, this information is available from me if you want to see it. But there were all kinds of possibilities that were considered, going from sort of six seats each for everybody except for Quebec and Ontario, who got 10, to a sort of six, 12, 18, and 24 formula, that moved from the smallest to the largest with that allocation, or one that had six for P.E.I., 12 for everybody except for 24 for Quebec and Ontario. You can see that there are all kinds of possibilities, depending on how you're trying to sort that out.

If you start with the idea that you're expecting Senators to not represent people on a geographic basis, that you're trying to get them to represent either on regional issues – or what I was interested in was representation from other constituency groups. One of the other things that we kept looking at was a certain number of the seats that were set aside and designated for aboriginal representation. I'm pretty sure we were looking at 5 per cent. Of course, the discussion that went along with that is, "Okay, if it's 5 per cent for aboriginals and that's representative of their population base in Canada at the time, we should be saying 50 per cent for women," which, of course, I was very much in favour of.

You also start to work in some of those other mixes like new Canadians or representation from particular cultural groups that are heavily invested in Alberta. You could be very creative and imaginative. This is a huge opportunity to bring other voices into our chambers of decision, to have those voices represented at the table or at the Senate desk to be able to comment on the legislation that was proceeding through those two Houses. To me, I saw it as a huge opportunity to engage more of our population in this and to have those voices amplified and represented in the House. I was really excited by this concept, and clearly I still am. But you're not going to get that until you deal with how the seats are distributed, and just saying 10, 10, 10 across the board doesn't work, as far as I'm concerned.

While I was in favour of elected Senates – fine by me – you have to deal with a system that is not a first past the post system, or you just entrench everything. If you're going to elect, you need to look at your electoral system. You absolutely have to deal with how the Senate seat distribution goes. In order to do that, you must change the amending formula for the Constitution about who gets to weigh in on this. There was quite a good formula that was looked at. I think it was a 7-50, so it had seven of the provinces representing 50 per cent of the population. The idea was that you couldn't just have Ontario and Quebec gang up together and amend the Constitution and leave everybody else out. It had to be seven provinces representing 50 per cent of the population, which I thought was a pretty good formula. I was willing to sign on to that one. Clearly, I still am.

The scope of the Senate power, which I talked about earlier. Would they be able to comment or debate on money bills? Could they even introduce money bills? Could they be involved in ratification of appointments and that kind of thing? What would be the scope of what they did? There were lots of possibilities here, but the triple-E just didn't do that. Triple-E is really the most basic approach to senatorial reform and, forgive me for saying, the one with the least amount of flair and creativity to it. Canada is a creative country. We are an innovative country. I'd like to see more innovation brought to this debate than that triple-E.

This is the one that I'm referring to, the one that was developed by McCormick, Manning, and Gibson in their book Regional Representation and then reiterated by Alberta's select committee on senatorial reform in 1985. "Strict equality of the provinces in the form of identical numbers of Senators . . . The Senate should represent . . . populations . . . purely and single-mindedly." [Ms Blakeman's speaking time expired] I'm out of time.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, we have five minutes for questions.

Dr. Taft: Yes. I was absolutely intrigued by the member's comments, and I'm wondering if she had anything else to say.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Well, clearly I did, so thank you for that.

I was just talking about the triple-E Senate. I wanted to close off on that because I think it was the most basic approach to senatorial reform. It just looked at absolute, identical numbers of Senators. It looked at an election but did not comment on any kind of electoral reform, so it would end up using a first past the post system. In fact, we have had, I think, one set or two sets of senatorial elections in Alberta, and that's exactly what they did. They just dumped it onto the municipalities and said: go ahead and run it exactly the same way. We had no innovation there.

For the scope of it they actually moved back a step because once again it was to be done on an absolute representation of the provincial population. The criticism that was brought forward during the debates that I attended was in the way it would be applied to the ratios. I've already pointed out the differences between Ontario, Quebec, and Prince Edward Island. Really, that's brought home by the fact that there are probably a dozen Ontario municipalities that have more population than Prince Edward Island in its entirety. We have to have buy-in from the population when we do things like this, and that kind of ratio just does not get buy-in. It becomes laughable to people.

I think there's great possibility in senatorial reform. There's lots to talk about inside of all those categories that I outlined for you. It was a very exciting opportunity to go and spend five days with a diversity of people from across the country talking about Senate reform. I'm disappointed that it never went any further because I think it should, but I don't see that creativity or anything else involved in the bill that's before us.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there other hon. members who wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the bill.

3:30

Dr. Taft: On the bill, yes. Thank you. I realize it's a brief bill, but it does open, I think, an opportunity to reflect a little bit on the nature of the Senate, which this bill, ultimately, is trying to address; that is, to bring in elected members for the Senate. I've got mixed feelings about the whole business of elected members. Frankly, I can't remember the last time I had a constituent talk to me about this issue; it's way down on the public agenda. It doesn't mean it isn't significant.

I just wanted to bring to the attention of the members of the Assembly an interesting bit of history that I think is worth thinking about in terms of how the Senate is arranged. I am holding in my hands right now a copy of a map from the book called Canada: An Encyclopedia of the Country, volume 1, page 17, printed in 1898. The member for Edmonton-Centre described the number of seats in the Senate per province. What this particular map does is propose what was considered to be the correct boundaries for provinces in 1898. It's quite a different map than what we've ended up with, and it would have quite a different impact on the Senate.

There are a total, in fact, of 18 provinces and territories proposed in this map of the dominion of Canada, and it's quite interesting how different the west and the north would have been and how different the Senate for the west and the north would have been if this had been fulfilled. Atlantic Canada remains the same, except Labrador is broken off and treated on its own. Ontario and Quebec are geographically much smaller and would have smaller populations and, therefore, would have less claim on the Senate. Northern Quebec is actually carved off into a separate territory called Labrador Ungava. British Columbia remains the same, but the prairies are dramatically different. You have a province called Athabasca right across the top from the B.C. border halfway into what's currently Manitoba, and it comes south to an area that's about 100 miles north of Edmonton. Alberta is cut and basically loses its top third. Saskatchewan loses both its top third and bottom third and ends up as quite a small province, and the southern part of Saskatchewan would have been a province called Assiniboia. Manitoba loses all of its north to a new province called Keewatin.

It's an interesting time to reflect on the history of our Senate and the history of the country and how this is allocated. The fact, for example, as the member for Edmonton-Centre talked about, that Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick currently have more seats in the Senate than Alberta seems way out of whack. Maybe instead of just electing Senators, we should actually open up a debate to rethink the entire Senate. The New Democrats want to abolish it. I think there's actually merit in that perspective. I also think there's merit in considering other ways to make the Senate more meaningful.

I think this bill actually falls really short of doing something significant. It's like the easiest way out. There's no obligation on the federal government to appoint elected Senators. It's expensive, it takes up time, and it seems very low on the public radar. So I think this is kind of the lazy way through this particular issue. It's not bold. It's not very interesting. It's not very productive. I guess that's maybe where we're at these days with the government. But I think we can aim higher, so I would suggest that we have the sponsoring member take this bill back and throw it wide open to see where the people of Alberta really are because I don't think they're aware of where this bill is proposing to take them.

So with those comments, Mr. Speaker, I'll take my seat. If anybody wants to have a look at this map, I've got it right here, and I'd be happy to pass it around. It's really pretty interesting.

Thanks.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions. The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I for one would be interested in seeing that map, hon. member. I don't know of what interest it would have been at that time with senatorial elections or whether they were appointed. Interestingly enough, my great grandfather came to this province two years before that map, and I'm quite sure that when he was trying to eke out a living south of Pincher Creek raising horses for the North West Mounted Police, he couldn't have cared less about who and what in the process for the Senate. I guess the point that I'm trying to make is that five generations later, or six with my kids, it probably is an issue, and they probably are interested in having elected, responsible, accountable Senators rather than having somebody that is politically appointed till the age of 75 and really has no responsibility to any electorate except an allegiance to the person who appointed them. So I'd be interested in seeing the map.

Thank you very much.

Dr. Taft: I'll send it right over. I'm interested to hear the personal history of the member's family. I'm just not convinced, as we debate here right now, that the ranchers around Pincher Creek are going out tonight to discuss whether Senate reform really matters or not. I just don't think that they are. Maybe they are. I don't think the constituents of Edmonton-Riverview are, but, hey, maybe we should give them the chance. I think that was the spirit that the member was suggesting. Maybe we should throw this debate open broadly and see where the public is. Perhaps next session one of the members from the government can come forward with a process to revisit the issue of Senate reform. In the meantime, I'll shoot a copy of this map right over.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to use the five minutes?

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, do you wish to speak on the bill?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, please, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, when we look at Bill 55, we see the amendment from December 31, 2010, through to December 31, 2016. I certainly can support this bill. I don't see anything the matter with it whatsoever. Other members have expressed a view, but I hope that at some point we will have an elected Senate, not an appointed Senate. I don't know if I would be around. I'm not holding my breath.

I listened with interest to a previous speaker talk about the Reform Party and what they thought of the Senate and what is going on now with Mr. Harper's government in Ottawa. I was trying to remember the names of all those who have been appointed recently to the Senate. I was trying to remember what the balance is between the Liberals and the Conservatives in the Senate. I should know that. I apologize; I do not. But I do know that there were many people appointed recently from the Conservative Party from all different walks of life and from all different regions of the country.

I think we would be better served not only if the Senate was elected but also if there were term limits put on those elections, if one could only sit for a certain number of years. For instance, if you were elected once, you could maybe be elected twice. I think that for some of these appointments that are being made now, individuals can in some cases sit in the Senate for up to 20, 25 years. In some cases it may be longer.

3:40

I do know that Senators do very, very good work. I had the opportunity two years ago to attend an event where the Liberal Senator from southern Alberta, Senator Joyce Fairbairn, was in attendance. She had organized an event around adult literacy, a cause that she has worked for all her life and has really championed since she has been in the Senate. She has done a lot of fine work to improve the literacy rate for adults in this country. Unfortunately, 1 in 5 individuals has either reading difficulties or cannot read at all. Not only does she work in Alberta, but Senator Fairbairn works across the country trying to make a difference and reduce that statistic.

I think that if we picked a Senator and looked at the work they do, the majority of them have our fine country in mind whenever they do their work, and they do valuable work. The idea that they can be appointed – I would agree with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood regarding the appointments. In the past there was a perception, and I believe it was true, that only the political elite were appointed, and political insiders were appointed. In all fairness, I don't believe that to be the case now with some of the latest . . .

Dr. Taft: Isn't one of those that Stephen Harper appointed one of the political elite?

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Harper certainly appointed members of his own political party. I could be wrong, but I assumed that some of the individuals that he appointed were not affiliated with any party. Now, I could be wrong. I find it very difficult to keep up these days, obviously, like everyone else, with so much going on.

Certainly, Bill 55 extends the sunset clause for Alberta's senatorial elections through another six years, so 2016, after the current clause would have expired next Christmas, in 2010.

I would be of the view that Senate reform is a very slow process, a very, very slow process. This is a step, a slow process to change how Senators are selected. I worked on the 1989 Senate race for the Liberal Party, of course. Our candidate didn't win, but it was a lot of fun. It was a lot of fun to work on that campaign. Mr. Waters was the eventual winner, and we all know the difficulties he had after he was elected. Again, it's a slow process. Let's see what happens. Hopefully, at some point Senators will be elected and there will be limits on their stay in the upper House.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, does any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, I'll recognize the hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations to speak and close the debate.

Mr. Webber: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Foothills-Rocky View for moving Bill 55 for second reading yesterday. Unfortunately, I was not able to be here, but I understand that the member did quite an admirable job in stressing the importance of this bill, and I thank him for that.

Mr. Speaker, section 54 of the current act states that this act does expire on December 31, 2010. As we all know here in the Assembly, this amendment would change the wording to: this act expires on December 31, 2016. This is the sole change to the act, and it is consistent with the previous renewal.

As is evident, Mr. Speaker, this is a very straightforward bill. You know, it's a simple bill, and it sends an important message, that Albertans remain committed to the effort of reforming Canada's Senate and we will do our part to ensure that our representatives in the Senate have a democratic mandate. Even if it's much to the dismay of the opposition, we will fight to have Senators have a democratic mandate.

To date we have seen two democratically elected Senators appointed from Alberta. Thanks to our past Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and to our current Prime Minister, Stephen Harper, for appointing these two individuals. We would like to see more in the future, Mr. Speaker. Albertans hold their democratic values dear, and the passage of this bill will ensure that those values continue to guide our approach to this national institution.

Mr. Speaker, that's all I have to say, and I'd like to end it here. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 55 read a second time]

Bill 51

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General I'd like to move Bill 51, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, for second reading.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

The chair shall now call the question on Bill 51.

[Motion carried; Bill 51 read a second time]

Bill 54

Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 4: Mr. Kang]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 54, the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009. This is, certainly, one of the latest reviews of the PIPA legislation. I've been involved in a couple of these all-party legislative reviews in the past. This bill would be the result of the review that recently took place. A review is mandated every three years. This update is almost as slow as Senate reform in Canada. It goes back to November 2007. I thought we had already dealt with that review.

Now, there are a number of changes to the act that are technical in nature and involve either the clarification of certain terms or the transfer of certain regulations to legislation. Some of the major changes to the act involve service providers outside of Canada, notification requirements for security breaches and timelines, and, as I understand it, the streamlined processes for the Information and Privacy Commissioner.

3:50

The Privacy Commissioner and his staff had reacted to changes to the Personal Information Protection Act. That office, the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner, indicates here in the documents that I have that most of the amendments to the act which have been introduced and we are debating at this time in the Assembly are in the best interests of Albertans. But they do note that it's disappointing to see the nonprofit organizations and agencies not under the act. Now, the reason for this disappointment is evident. We have had discussions in our caucus about this, but we need to be careful here. There has to be this balance. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre certainly talked about that. I'm not going to bore the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud with any more remarks regarding that discussion.

We need to continually update this legislation. It's not that long since the initial bill was presented in this Assembly. We need always to think of individuals, persons who rely on this act for the protection of their personal information. The world is changing. Everyone knows there are huge databases whenever all this information is put together. The consequences can be enormous. There are commercial applications for this information. There are also applications that are less than savoury, to say the least. Criminals, unfortunately, can profit if they have access to that information.

When we look at this legislation and we look at the recommendations from the all-party committee, when we look at the concerns or the issues that are raised by the commissioner and we put the whole thing in balance, I think this is – I'm not going to call it a compromise, Mr. Speaker, but certainly it is the best way to proceed at this time.

Now, there are those that say it should be a complete free-for-all with personal information, and everyone should have access to everyone's information at any time. I certainly disagree with that. Hopefully as this legislation unfolds and in another few years it's back before the Assembly, there will be no violations of this act and people's personal information will not be used for inappropriate circumstances.

With that, I would like to conclude my remarks. Hopefully Bill 54 will pass, and hopefully it's what's needed at this time in the province.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the bill.

Dr. Taft: On the bill, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising to speak in favour of the bill. I am glad that the initial legislation had a mandatory review process built into it, and I'm glad, as I understand it, that that's going to continue because the issues around protection of privacy are evolving so quickly as technology itself evolves so quickly. I think all of us probably have stories on both sides of this issue, where on one side freedom of information and protection of privacy laws have probably got in the way of common sense, where you can't share or obtain information that really is entirely innocent, and on the other hand we've certainly read of cases where people's personal information has been abused. So this is a piece of legislation that's trying its best to navigate that difficult path to balance the interests of all sides as technology sometimes shoots ahead in unanticipated ways.

I notice in this bill that the Privacy Commissioner for Alberta has generally supported it although he has expressed some concerns, and I think it's worth reading that right into the record here. I'm quoting from a news release of the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner of Alberta dated October 28, 2009. It quotes the commissioner himself, Frank Work, saying:

I am extremely disappointed that a recommendation to bring all not-for-profit organizations fully under the scope of PIPA is no longer going forward. All this does is create confusion about which non-profits are in and which are out.

His job is to advocate for protection of privacy, but there is more than one side to that issue, and given that the commissioner otherwise supports the legislation, I do take some reassurance from that. So, Mr. Speaker, I think we should as an Assembly move this piece of legislation forward.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments and questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question on the bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 54 read a second time]

Bill 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 3: Ms Evans]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I believe that because it was just this past week when we talked about the AIMCo amendment relative to the removal of the Deputy Minister of Finance and Enterprise from the board of Alberta Investment Management Corporation, it's likely not necessary to go into any further debate or discussion on it. I think that we're very satisfied that the talented staff at AIMCo are beyond transition now and functioning as a fully arm's-length organization. So I would propose to adjourn debate on second reading.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, you already adjourned once before, so we will continue the debate.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. I appreciate the time to get to discuss Bill 56, the amendment to the AIMCo Act. I received in my mailbox over at the Annex earlier this morning the annual report, a separate annual report, from AIMCo, and I have to admit to the caucus members that I was guilty of reading it during our caucus meeting this morning, and the House leader didn't catch me. I was having a close look at that, and I didn't, unfortunately, finish reading it. I regret not having it here this afternoon.

4:00

When we look at this bill, which removes the requirement that the deputy minister of finance be a board member of AIMCo, I'm not sold on the idea entirely that we should remove the gentleman, Mr. Wiles, at this time. He was before us at Public Accounts the other day. I was sitting there, thinking about this proposal to remove the deputy minister from all activities at AIMCo, and I thought that maybe now is not the time. It may be appropriate at some time in the future to do this, but at this time I really think we need to have a representative from Alberta finance directly on the board.

Mr. Speaker, the Auditor General this fall had a number of issues that he outlined about AIMCo and how it works since it's been set up. Certainly, one of the recommendations that he suggested was that there be more co-ordination between Alberta finance and, of course, the management at AIMCo. That is one reason and one reason only why we should perhaps reconsider and leave the deputy minister, at least for a period of time, not on guard but certainly representing the interests of the government directly.

If you look at other portions of the Auditor General's report, he has a lot to say about AIMCo and some of the directions that they have made. Now, we do know that AIMCo was established on January 1, 2008, and that, of course, it was to provide investment management services to various Alberta public-sector pension, endowment, and special-purpose funds through a corporate structure. We do know that prior to that investments were managed by the department of finance. AIMCo's pool of investments is close to $70 billion. The Auditor audits AIMCo's internal controls.

Now, the Auditor points out many interesting things besides what I referred to earlier; that is, how we should have more of a co-ordinated effort between Alberta finance and AIMCo. But there are other recommendations as well that we should look at. One of them, it's interesting to note, is that AIMCo should "improve its processes and internal controls to achieve completeness, accuracy and increased efficiency in financial reporting." Well, if we left the deputy minister in an active role, I think we could have greater assurance that this would be done.

There were some errors not corrected by AIMCo, and I think we need to point this out, Mr. Speaker. This is on page 236 of the Auditor General's report.

While reviewing the financial statements of the Heritage Fund's third quarter, which ended December 31, 2008, [the audit] found that adjustments in four equity pools and the timberland investment pool had not been recorded in the investments general ledger for more than a year. These unrecorded adjustments were the result of incorrect income allocation, accrual of derivative income, discontinuance of hedge accounting and accumulated miscellaneous errors.

The Auditor is pointing this out.

It's like you would have one of your children, Mr. Speaker, and you would give them an allowance, and you would give them a bigger allowance as they get older. That's fine, but you have to have some control on it.

This is a big step for this province to put all the money into one basket, give one group of individuals authority to invest it on our behalf and hope that things work out. I'm confident that they will work out in the future, but let's do it a step at a time. Let's leave the deputy minister exactly where he belongs for the next couple of years, on the board keeping an eye on things. Regardless of what we do and what we say and hear, there are a lot of issues that are beyond the control of this Assembly. There are market forces. There are ups and downs in the market, of course, that no one – no one – has any influence on nor control of. But in order to keep our eye on things for the next couple of years, I would urge the deputy minister of finance and the Assembly to reconsider and just have that individual in a watchdog position just in case.

We do know, unfortunately, that other fine recommendations of the Auditor General have been in some cases totally ignored by this government. I'm not suggesting here for a minute that none of these recommendations would be ignored, but I can't say for sure. I'm just uncomfortable with the whole idea of giving so much scope, so much range, to the AIMCo board so quickly. I think that is a natural check and balance by the government. We'll see. AIMCo certainly has received a baptism of fire because of financial conditions in the markets. I'm confident that things will recover.

I would also point out that other jurisdictions have board members that represent certain interests. They appoint board members from certain parties. I would like to know – and, hopefully, we can get this answered during the course of debate – will anyone on the board of directors be representing the local authorities pension plan? There are other public-sector pension plans that are involved. Will they have any direct representation or say in the board? Of course, many individuals across this province that are looking forward to a local authorities pension plan when they retire would have an interest in this. They certainly would have more than a passing interest in the investment patterns of this organization. What kind of consideration is going forward to place certain individuals on the board representing the interests in these pools of money?

Also, if I could ask at this time if there will be any representatives from the general public on the board. I looked at the board . . .

Ms Evans: That's what there are. That's all the rest of them. They're all from the public.

4:10

Mr. MacDonald: They're all from the public. So which individual – and I should know, but I don't have that annual report with me – on that board represents the interests of the LAPP, the local authorities pension plan, now? Which individual represents the interests of the other pension pools? I don't believe that's how it's set up at the moment. Other jurisdictions have a few checks and balances on that because people have interests in this. If that could be clarified, I would be grateful. We'll see how this works out, Mr. Speaker, but certainly those are some of the comments that I would make.

Before I conclude, I would also like to remind the House that in the hon. minister's annual report is the breakdown of exactly how the deferred incentive pay will work for the senior executives of AIMCo. It was quite interesting. We asked for more details. We're going to look forward to receiving them from the officials of the department through the clerk of Public Accounts to all the members. For instance, the senior executive, the CEO, I believe, was to receive – and it's all deferred payments – half a million dollars from last year. These amounts are determined by two quite complicated formulas that are based on investment strategy, and these, of course, are listed as a liability in the finance department's annual report, as I recall. There were members of the management team and key select senior managers I think is how it was phrased in the annual report. I would like to know how much money eventually would accumulate in this deferred system, that is to be paid to these individuals.

I would like to make that as my final point, that that is one of the reasons why we need to keep our eye on this organization as its governance structure develops further from its implementation last year.

I would like to adjourn debate on Bill 56 at this time. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Dallas in the chair]

The Acting Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 46

Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act

The Acting Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill?

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity to speak in Committee of the Whole to Bill 46, Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act. I think this is the third time I'm seeing this baby come around. It first came up in connection with the Health Information Act review. It was one of the considerations that we were making. I thought that there'd been a private member's bill that had been introduced by the Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs. I really, really hated that amendment coming forward under the Health Information Act. I think that it should have come forward as we now have it.

I'm willing to support a stand-alone bill that talks about reporting of gunshot and stab wounds. This is what we should have done from the get-go. If the HIA didn't actually get changed as a result of the member's bill – and, you know, maybe it died on the Order Paper; I just can't remember. But this is the appropriate way to do this, and this is the way they've done it in other provinces.

There are a number of arguments for and against it, but the ones that I'm paying attention to are what you're trying to balance here: the safety of society, the safety of the medical professionals that are dealing with someone, balanced against a reasonable protection of personal health information. What was happening before, putting it in the Health Information Act, which was requiring health professionals to basically make a subjective and unsubstantiated guess at something and basically tattle on a patient because they may or may not have received this wound in a particular way, was really inappropriate. I think that since then we've now discovered that it's a very faulty way of being able to deal with this issue. This is the proper way to deal with this issue.

As always with an act, you've got all the definitions up front.

Then you've got what it doesn't apply to, which clearly is anything that's self-inflicted or unintentional. The attempt there is to shield people who may be under mental duress or mental illness to try to protect them from sort of undue scrutiny given the situation. Then it goes on to the mandatory disclosure, that emergency medical personnel or the facility have to disclose to the local police service the person's name; what it is, a gunshot or a stab wound; the location of the health care facility; if it was reported by an ambulance driver, for example, where the location was that they attended the individual. Then, of course, the always included and never appropriate catch-all phrase: other information that may be required by the regs. Then the disclosure can be made orally and some other sort of practical parts of this.

I think this works better. I mean, to someone that wasn't used to the intricacies of this, having somebody do this kind of disclosure under a stand-alone act versus under the Health Information Act: who cares? It's about reporting somebody that's got a gunshot or a stab wound. But the way it's done, I think, is very important.

4:20

Now, one of the things we always need to be careful of: have we produced legislation that's Charter proof? Of course, whenever you're talking about disclosing information about someone or reporting them to the authorities in any way, have you made it Charter proof? I think what comes into play here are sections 7 and 8. Section 8 is the right to be secure against unreasonable search or seizure and the reasonable expectation of privacy. I think that even if mandatory gunshot reporting legislation did permit unreasonable seizure of health information, the legislation could be justified under section 1 of the Charter. I mean, we're just trying to be common sense here. This is not about getting incredibly fancy about anything. You know, if somebody comes into a medical establishment and they have an injury that's clearly as a result of a crime or an accident, both of those things come into play here, and that's appropriate. That needs to be reported to the authorities, and nobody should be surprised about this.

Actually, anybody that watches any kind of American crime television will be very familiar with this one because this kind of stuff is in place in a number of other jurisdictions. Actually, in Canada my memory is that it was – yeah; here we go. Four other provinces – Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Ontario, and Nova Scotia – all have this kind of legislation in place. So we're not the first, but we're not the last on this one.

The compelling arguments for this are that it should increase the security for the personnel within and without the hospital, the medical facility. It should allow police to move quickly enough to preserve any kind of evidence that's available. You know, they're not going to interfere with medical personnel attending to someone, clearly, and you can lose evidence that way but as soon as possible to be able to get access to the individuals. That's part of what's considered here, and I think it is considered a reasonable restriction on personal freedom and disclosure of personal information.

With the Oakes test, which is commonly used to justify a Charter breach, it has to be sufficiently important to override the right. Well, I think there are a number of arguments for that one around the safety of the medical personnel and whoever else was out there because there could be someone else that wasn't found at the same time that could be at the other end of that exchange, for example. And the means chosen to achieve the objective must be proportional to both the objectives and the law. All this is saying is that they have to report it or disclose it, but beyond that, it doesn't say anything else.

I'm usually pretty vigilant about the Charter of Rights and health information disclosures, but to me this seems to be reasonable. I think we have enough expectations on our health personnel that we have to be giving them clarity. They don't like being in the middle of something, where they're not sure what they're supposed to be doing. So nice, clean legislation is a help to them. It allows them to know when to do their job, what exactly is expected of them. It's pretty clear in here.

I hope that the regulations don't get unnecessarily complicated and complex because, again, that makes it difficult for them to figure that stuff out. Even just all the information that you're carrying around in your head. I mean, there are days, I swear, if I have to understand one more thing or there's one more bill tabled in this House, I'll forget how to walk. I'm very sympathetic to medical personnel who are dealing with all kinds of procedures and treatments and other patients that are on the particular ward, and then they've got to remember a whole list of rules about how they're going to have to disclose something. So as simple and straightforward and uncomplicated as possible while protecting somebody and being reasonable about somebody's health information and their Charter rights.

I'm very willing to support this bill. I think this is far in preference to what was done before, if it was done, and I'm happy to support Bill 46 in Committee of the Whole. Thank you.

The Acting Chair: Are you ready for the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 46 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Acting Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'd move that the committee rise and report Bill 46.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Dallas in the chair]

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 46.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 31

Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move Bill 31, the Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, for third reading.

The Acting Speaker: Does anyone wish to speak, or shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 31 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. on November 16.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:29 p.m. to Monday, November 16, at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1753
Members' Statements
Remembrance Day	1754
Tanya Ponich	1754
Vancouver 2010 Olympic Torch Relay	1755
Civic Participation	1755
Centennial of Grouard	1763
Education Funding	1763
Oral Question Period
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1755, 1757
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Aboriginal Albertans	1756
Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure	1756, 1759
Government Accountability	1757
Condominium Property Act Consultation	1758
Vancouver 2010 Olympic Torch Relay	1758
Charitable Gaming Consultation	1759, 1762
Grade 12 Diploma Exams	1760
PDD Funding for Community Agencies	1760
WorldSkills Calgary 2009	1761
Employment and Immigration Spending	1761
Continuing Care Fee Structure	1762
Identity Theft	1762
Presenting Petitions	1764
Tabling Returns and Reports	1764
Tablings to the Clerk	1764
Projected Government Business	1764
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 55 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009	1765
Bill 51 Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1770
Bill 54 Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009	1770
Bill 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009	1771
Committee of the Whole
Bill 46 Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act	1772
Third Reading
Bill 31 Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1773

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 2nd Session (2009)

Activity to November 05, 2009

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

1 Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009 (Stelmach)

First Reading -- 6 (Feb. 10 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 90-93 (Feb. 17 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 503-4 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 583-84 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c4]

2 Lobbyists Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)

First Reading -- 9 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 93-94 (Feb. 17 aft.), 121-23 (Feb. 18 aft.), 212-14 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 575-79 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 609 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c5]

3 Credit Union Amendment Act, 2009 (Berger)

First Reading -- 17 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 123-24 (Feb. 18 aft.), 202-03 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 579-80 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 609-10 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 1, 2009; SA 2009 c3]

4 Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2009 (Bhullar)

First Reading -- 17 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 124 (Feb. 18 aft.), 353-56 (Mar. 11 aft.), 585-86 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 680-83 (Apr. 16 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 912-15 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c11]

5 Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (Griffiths)

First Reading -- 17 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 125 (Feb. 18 aft.), 214-15 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 506-07 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 585 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c6]

6 Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Amendment Act, 2009 (Forsyth)

First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 356-60 (Mar. 11 aft.), 586 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 633-38 (Apr. 14 aft.), 861-65 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 899-900 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c12]

- 7 Public Health Amendment Act, 2009 (Liepert)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 437-38 (Mar. 17 aft.), 439-40 (Mar. 17 aft.), 586-87 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 865-70 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 900 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c13]
- 8 Feeder Associations Guarantee Act ($) (Groeneveld)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 203-08 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 580-83 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 610 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cF-11.1]
- 9 Government Organization Amendment Act, 2009 (Campbell)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 360-61 (Mar. 11 aft.), 587-88 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 895-97 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 915-17 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c9]
- 10 Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act (Dallas)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 361-62 (Mar. 11 aft.), 588 (Apr. 8 aft.), 889-91 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 920-21 (Apr. 30 aft.), 980-83 (May 5 aft.), 1118-20 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1407-08 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cS-23.5]
- 11 Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2009 (VanderBurg)
First Reading -- 19 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 362-63 (Mar. 11 aft.), 891-92 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 983 (May 5 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1408-09 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c22]
- 12 Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009 (Berger)
First Reading -- 19 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 383-85 (Mar. 12 aft.), 892-95 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1120-21 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1409 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c31]
- 13 Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)
First Reading -- 19 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 385 (Mar. 12 aft.), 895 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1121-22 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1409 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c27]
- 14 Carbon Capture and Storage Funding Act ($) (Knight)
First Reading -- 138 (Feb. 19 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 208-10 (Mar. 3 aft.), 884-89 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 921-22 (Apr. 30 aft.), 1114-18 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1409-11 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 cC-2.5]
- 15 Dunvegan Hydro Development Act (Oberle)
First Reading -- 105-06 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 210-11 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 504-06 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 584-85 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 20, 2009; SA 2009 cD-18]

- 16 Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009 (Lindsay)
First Reading -- 106 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 385-86 (Mar. 12 aft.), 919-20 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1122 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1411 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 1, 2009; SA 2009 c30]
- 17 Securities Amendment Act, 2009 (Fawcett)
First Reading -- 106 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 386-87 (Mar. 12 aft.), 622-26 (Apr. 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 737 (Apr. 21 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 917-19 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c14]
- 18* Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Stevens)
First Reading -- 161 (Mar. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 211-12 (Mar. 3 aft.), 349-52 (Mar. 11 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 381-83 (Mar. 12 aft.), 446-54 (Mar. 17 aft., amendments agreed to), 472--81 (Mar. 18 aft.), 482-83 (Mar. 18 aft.), 574-75 (Apr. 8 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 604-09 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 20, 2009; SA 2009 c7]
- 19* Land Assembly Project Area Act (Hayden)
First Reading -- 161 (Mar. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 438-39 (Mar. 17 aft.), 626-33 (Apr. 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 683-90 (Apr. 16 aft.), 737-53 (Apr. 21 aft., amendments agreed to), 770-84 (Apr. 22 aft.), 797-806 (Apr. 23 aft.), 857-61 (Apr. 28 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 897-99 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cL-2.5]
- 20 Civil Enforcement Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 161 (Mar. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 767 (Apr. 22 aft.), 1265 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1329 (May 26 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1412 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c18]
- 21 Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009 ($) (Snelgrove)
First Reading -- 283 (Mar. 9 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 377-80 (Mar. 12 aft.), 386 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 440-43, 454 (Mar. 17 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 468-71 (Mar. 18 aft.), 481 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Mar. 23 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force March 23, 2009; SA 2009 c2]
- 22 Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009 ($) (Snelgrove)
First Reading -- 344 (Mar. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 380-81 (Mar. 12 aft.), 386 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 443-46, 454 (Mar. 17 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 471-72 (Mar. 18 aft.), 481-82 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Mar. 23 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force March 23, 2009; SA 2009 c1]
- 23* Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (Danyluk)
First Reading -- 401 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 735 (Apr. 21 aft.), 1195 (May 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1329-30 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1527-28 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force January 1, 2010; SA 2009 c29]
- 24 Animal Health Amendment Act, 2009 (Griffiths)
First Reading -- 303 (Mar. 10 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 735-36 (Apr. 21 aft.), 969-70 (May 5 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1246 (May 25 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1412 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c17]

- 25 Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2009 ($) (Evans)
First Reading -- 283 (Mar. 9 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 767 (Apr. 22 aft.), 970-72 (May 5 aft.), 1105-06 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1167-69 (May 13 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1447-49 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force September 1, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c32]
- 26* Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009 (Mitzel)
First Reading -- 303 (Mar. 10 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 736 (Apr. 21 aft.), 1265-68 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1330-31 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1412-13 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c36]
- 27* Alberta Research and Innovation Act ($) (Horner)
First Reading -- 466 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 767-69 (Apr. 22 aft.), 1003-06 (May 6 aft.), 1094-98 (May 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1170-73 (May 13 eve.), 1229-40 (May 25 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1507-10 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cA-31.7]
- 28 Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (McFarland)
First Reading -- 467 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 769-70 (Apr. 22 aft.), 1006-07 (May 6 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1246-49 (May 25 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1413 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c20]
- 29 Family Law Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 401 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 851-52 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1268-69 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1358-60 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1528 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c21]
- 30 Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009 (Drysdale)
First Reading -- 401 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 736-37 (Apr. 21 aft.), 1269-73 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1360-63 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1528-30 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c35]
- 31* Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 402 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 852-53 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1273-75 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1711-13 (Nov. 3 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1773-74 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
- 32 Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act (Horne)
First Reading -- 467 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 853 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1275-80 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1365 (May 27 eve.), 1449-55 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1524 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cA-31.5]
- 33 Fiscal Responsibility Act (Evans)
First Reading -- 545 (Apr. 7 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 853-54 (Apr. 28 aft.), 972-79 (May 5 aft., passed on division)
Committee of the Whole -- 998-1003 (May 6 aft.), 1109-14 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1526-27 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 1, 2009; SA 2009 cF-15.1]

- 34 Drug Program Act ($) (Liepert)
First Reading -- 882 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 979-80 (May 5 aft.), 1014-15 (May 6 aft.), 1194-95 (May 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1384-87 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1524 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation, with exceptions; SA 2009 cD-17.5]
- 35 Gas Utilities Amendment Act, 2009 (McFarland)
First Reading -- 591 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 854 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1280-81 (May 26 aft.), 1344-45 (May 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1387 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1524-25 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c24]
- 36* Alberta Land Stewardship Act ($) (Morton)
First Reading -- 818-19 (Apr. 27 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 882 (Apr. 29 aft.), 1134-40 (May 13 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1371-84 (May 27 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1503-07 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cA-26.8]
- 37 Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2009 ($) (Evans)
First Reading -- 701 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 854-55 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1106 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1187 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1406 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c15]
- 38 Tourism Levy Amendment Act, 2009 (Evans)
First Reading -- 702 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 855 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1106 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1187-88 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1406 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c34]
- 39 Tobacco Tax Amendment Act, 2009 (Evans)
First Reading -- 702 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 855-56 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1107-08 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1188-90 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1406-07 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c33]
- 40 Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2009 (Brown)
First Reading -- 702 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 856 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1108 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1190 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1407 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c16]
- 41 Protection for Persons in Care Act (Brown)
First Reading -- 766 (Apr. 22 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 856 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1345-50 (May 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1387-90 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1525-26 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cP-29.1]
- 42 Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009 (Anderson)
First Reading -- 734 (Apr. 21 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 857 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1350-58 (May 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1455-60 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1525 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c23]

- 43 Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2) (Griffiths)
First Reading -- 850 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 883 (Apr. 29 aft.), 1149-53 (May 13 aft.), 1155-61 (May 13 eve., passed on division)
Committee of the Whole -- 1365-71 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1497-99 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c28]
- 44* Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009 (Blackett)
First Reading -- 850 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 883-84 (Apr. 29 aft.), 1007-14 (May 6 aft.), 1036-38 (May 7 aft.), 1140-47 (May 13 aft.), 1161-66 (May 13 eve.), 1173-74 (May 13 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1283-84, 1294-1329 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1460-80 (Jun. 1 eve., passed on division)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c26]
- 45 Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)
First Reading -- 933-34 (May 4 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1098-1103 (May 12 aft.), 1147-49 (May 13 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1240-46 (May 25 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1510 (Jun. 2 aft.), 1523 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c19]
- 46 Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act (Quest)
First Reading -- 966 (May 5 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1706-07 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1708-10 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1716-17 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1772-73 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
- 47 Appropriation Act, 2009 ($) (Snelgrove)
First Reading -- 1049 (May 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1085-94 (May 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1166-67 (May 13 eve.), 1169 (May 13 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1190-94 (May 14 aft.), 1195 (May 14 aft., passed on division)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c8]
- 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act (Liepert)
First Reading -- 1049 (May 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1706 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1710-11 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1735-42 (Nov. 4 aft., passed)
- 49 Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2) (Lukaszuk)
First Reading -- 1426 (Jun. 1 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1500-01 (Jun. 2 aft.), 1707-08 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1713-16 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1733-35 (Nov. 4 aft., passed)
- 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Knight)
First Reading -- 1426 (Jun. 1 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1501-02 (Jun. 2 aft., adjourned)
- 51 Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)
First Reading -- 1700 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1770 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
- 52* Health Information Amendment Act, 2009 (Rogers)
First Reading -- 436 (Mar. 17 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 436 (Mar. 17 aft., reinstated), 437 (Mar. 17 aft., referred to Standing Committee on Health), (May 25 aft., reported to Assembly)
Committee of the Whole -- 1284-94 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1526 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c25]
- 53 Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Weadick)
First Reading -- 1546 (Oct. 26 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1742-46 (Nov. 4 aft., adjourned)

- 54 Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 1569 (Oct. 27 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1746-51 (Nov. 4 aft.), 1770-71 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
- 55 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009 (Webber)
First Reading -- 1546 (Oct. 26 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1751 (Nov. 4 aft.), 1765-70 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
- 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009 (Evans)
First Reading -- 1633 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1703 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1771-72 (Nov. 5 aft., adjourned)
- 57 Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009 (Weadick)
First Reading -- 1633 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1703 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned)
- 58 Corrections Amendment Act, 2009 (Griffiths)
First Reading -- 1642 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1703-04 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned)
- 59 Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009 (Sherman)
First Reading -- 1666 (Nov. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1704-05 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned)
- 60 Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009 (Quest)
First Reading -- 1642 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1705 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned)
- 61 Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009 (Lukaszuk)
First Reading -- 1666 (Nov. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1705-06 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned)
- 201 Traffic Safety (Vehicles with Unlawfully Possessed Firearms) Amendment Act, 2009 (Hehr)
First Reading -- 106 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 165-76 (Mar. 2 aft.), 284-86 (Mar. 9 aft., defeated on division)
- 202 Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009 (Johnston)
First Reading -- 138 (Feb. 19 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 286-96 (Mar. 9 aft.), 406-08 (Mar. 16 aft., referred to Standing Committee on Community Services)
- 203* Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009 (Johnson)
First Reading -- 251-52 (Mar. 5 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 408-16 (Mar. 16 aft.), 829-31 (Apr. 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1053-64 (May 11 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1209-15 (May 25 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c10]
- 204 Provincial-Municipal Tax Sharing Act (Blakeman)
First Reading -- 498 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 831-32 (Apr. 27 aft.), 934-41 (May 4 aft., defeated on division)
- 205 Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009 (Anderson)
First Reading -- 649-50 (Apr. 15 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 941-46 (May 4 aft., passed on division)
Committee of the Whole -- 1215-22 (May 25 aft.), 1427-33 (Jun. 1 aft., passed on division)
- 206 School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009 (Forsyth)
First Reading -- 621 (Apr. 14 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1433-38 (Jun. 1 aft.), 1547-55 (Oct. 26 aft., passed)
- 208 Life Leases Act (Mitzel)
First Reading -- 1208 (May 25 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1555-59 (Oct. 26 aft., adjourned)

209 Children's Services Review Committee Act (Chase)

First Reading -- 1610 (Oct. 28 aft., passed)

Pr1 Beverly Anne Cormier Adoption Termination Act (Anderson)

First Reading -- 376 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 1480 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 1502 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 1532 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c37]

Pr2* Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Elniski)

First Reading -- 376 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 1480 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 1530-31 (Jun. 3 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading -- 1532 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 1, 2009; SA 2009 c38]

Pr3* Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act (Dallas)

First Reading -- 376 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 1480 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 1502 (Jun. 2 aft., passed with amendments)

Third Reading -- 1532 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c39]

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Monday, November 16, 2009

Issue 57

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, November 16, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. We give further thanks for the gifts of culture and heritage which we share. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we rededicate ourselves to the valued traditions of parliamentary democracy as a means of serving our province and our country. Amen.

Today we'll be led in the singing of our national anthem by Mr. Paul Lorieau, and I would invite all here to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Hon. members, I'd like to draw your attention to a new face at the table in front of me. Stephanie LeBlanc joined the Legislative Assembly Office in August of 2008 in the position of legal research officer. She was born and raised in Regina, Saskatchewan, and received her law degree with great distinction from the University of Saskatchewan in 2006. In addition to her role in providing legal research to committees, she will now also be assisting Parliamentary Counsel at the table as part of our commitment to training and development. I'd ask all members to note Ms LeBlanc and welcome her to this Assembly.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's with pleasure that I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly His Excellency Margers Krams, the ambassador of the Republic of Latvia. Alberta has a long-standing tradition of co-operation and collaboration with countries around the world, including those throughout the European Union, of which Latvia is a member. I had the pleasure of hosting the ambassador at a luncheon at Government House earlier today. He joins us in the Legislature this afternoon to observe our debate. I ask the ambassador to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly 76 enthusiastic and inquisitive grade 6 students from the George P. Nicholson elementary school, more affectionately known as GPN school, located in my constituency of Edmonton-Whitemud. I've had the privilege of joining them for reading week earlier in October. I can tell you that they're indeed an exceptional group of students, full of very good questions when I was out to the school. They are accompanied today by their teachers, Ms Jan Antoniuk, Mrs. Maxine Sprague, Mrs. Dawn Schmitz, and education assistant Mrs. Gail Stannard along with parent helpers Mrs. Bernie Lassu, Mrs. Lisa Ladd, Mrs. Julie Brooks, Mrs. Lina Kebbi, and Mrs. Verle McConkey. They're seated in both the members' gallery and the public gallery, and I ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 27 students from my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods, St. Elizabeth elementary school. The group is led by their teacher, Mrs. Sherri Zimmermann, and language interpreter Miss Hilda Schroeder. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of introductions today. My first is a group from Malmo elementary school, who I met with and spoke to before our session today and who I hope to speak with again at greater length in their classroom. There are 23 visitors, very bright students, and they are accompanied by a teacher and two parent helpers. I believe they're seated in the public gallery, but wherever they are, I'd ask them to rise and to receive the warm welcome of the Assembly. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, my second introduction is of three concerned citizens from Parkland county and that area. They're here to observe question period and the tabling of their petition regarding the construction of a new care centre in Stony Plain that is very badly needed. Later on we'll be tabling the first of 1,500 names on that petition today. I'd ask them to rise as I read their names. One is Jo Szady, who is the chair of the resident family council of the Good Samaritan care centre. The second is Zig Szady, who helped collect the names for the petition. I must say that these two people are also very active in environmental and energy efficiency issues. The third is Iolanda Duke, who is the secretary of the resident family council of the Good Samaritan care centre. You're welcome. Please give them a warm reception.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly Agriculture and Rural Development staff from the Agricultural Products Marketing Council. They're here today as part of their public service orientation tour. Dave Burdek, Maryann Urbanowski, Tunde Vari, Mike Pearson, and Rachid El Hafid are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask them to now rise and receive the usual warm reception of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly very special guests from my constituency of Edmonton-Manning. They are all sitting in the public gallery. They are Mr. Stan Fisher, president and CEO, Paul Teterenko, Wendy King, Kay Willekes, Lucas Gelink, Christine Teterenko, and Sharon Cohen. These visitors are from St. Michael's Extended Care Centre Society. I will be speaking more about the group in my member's statement later on. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

1:40

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly, seated in the members' gallery, two bright students who I met in the past year. One is Janet LeBlanc. I had the honour of meeting Janet during a French course we took at the Faculty of Extension. The other one is her daughter Rémi LeBlanc. I had the pleasure of meeting Rémi in the constituency of Edmonton-Meadowlark at the St. Francis Xavier high school awards ceremony. Unfortunately, her name wasn't called. I said: why don't you come down to the Legislature, meet my friends, and we'll introduce you as a Rutherford scholarship winner in the Legislative Assembly? She also happens to be a political science student, and we'll be seeing more of her in the future. To Rémi, I'd like to congratulate her on all of her academic achievements and wish her the best for the future. I would ask my guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

National Philanthropy Day

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today, November 16, we celebrate National Philanthropy Day. Whether it's volunteering for a local nonprofit organization or donating money to a charity or helping someone in need, Albertans of all ages, all walks of life, and throughout our province work to better the lives of others every day. It is with this attitude and the belief in goodwill that we recognize National Philanthropy Day.

Philanthropists come in many forms, from a neighbour or friend who gives up their weekends to volunteer at a homeless shelter to the child selling summer lemonade to support a local cause, the musician who lends his or her talents for a benefit concert, the person who donates $20 or $20 million. Each of these people may be doing different things, but they are all working towards the same goal.

I want to take this opportunity to thank everyone who helps support their community and especially those that are most vulnerable. In this time of economic uncertainty supporting charities and the work they do is more important than ever. It is at such times that we act on those values that have built this province, looking out for one another and helping those in need and the least fortunate.

Albertans are some of the most generous people anywhere, donating $1.4 billion in 2007 alone. Our province also has one of the highest charitable tax credits in Canada, meaning that there's a benefit to donating more to your favourite charity or not-for-profit organization. Including the federal tax credit, Albertans receive a 50 per cent nonrefundable tax credit for every dollar donated over the $200 threshold. Mr. Speaker, that program is endorsed by none other than our Auditor General. The enhanced charitable tax credit will help our dollars work even harder to support these organizations. Just remember: donate often and keep your receipts. It will make a difference for you at tax time, and it helps to build strong and healthy communities.

Mr. Speaker, as we recognize National Philanthropy Day, let us all take a moment and ask ourselves one question: what can we do to make our neighbourhood, our community, our city, and our province a better place?

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I join the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit in thanking those citizens who donate their time, talents, and money to our charities and nonprofits. The generosity of these people deserves celebration. I feel blessed to have known some wonderful philanthropists.

That being said, I believe that we must also recognize the challenges facing Alberta's nonprofit sector. As baby boomers age, they are volunteering less, and so far younger generations have not yet stepped up in great enough numbers to take their place.

The sector is also being challenged by this administration's constant failure to provide stable public funding. Our charities and nonprofits are consistently being asked to do more with less. With this administration cutting millions from core services, the problem can only be expected to get worse.

One of the primary responsibilities of government is to provide protection and leadership in those areas where private enterprise and charitable institutions cannot. Perhaps they could look to the Muttart Foundation for inspiration and ideas. This Edmonton-based philanthropic foundation does amazing work, dispensing funds to many causes, including NGO management development. One of their programs provides funding for not-for-profit managers to take a one-year educational sabbatical, a program that has kept many experienced, talented managers here in Alberta working in a vital sector.

Albertans are remarkably generous, but our philanthropy should not be mistaken as an endorsement for another round of massive cuts to the public sector. Government has a role to play, and it's time for this administration to stop off-loading their responsibilities to a sector that's already being pushed to the limit.

In recognition of that and on behalf of my colleagues in the Official Opposition I would like to thank again all those who donate time and money to make our society a better place. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, I trust you're requesting an opportunity for one of your members to participate in this?

Mr. Mason: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The other one.

The Speaker: That will require unanimous consent of the Assembly, so I'll ask the question: is the Assembly prepared to hear from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona?

[Unanimous consent denied]

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

St. Michael's Extended Care Centre Society

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm proud to say that St. Michael's Extended Care Centre Society operates in my constituency of Edmonton-Manning. St. Michael's was created in 1974 to fill a need for care for people from Ukrainian and other Slavic backgrounds in the city of Edmonton. As the health sector has changed over time, St. Michael's has redeveloped and adapted to fill these needs. St. Michael's has an excellent reputation. They are known for the wonderful, quality care they provide to their residents.

St. Michael's is probably best known for Baba's Own perogies, which you can purchase from their main office or some stores around Edmonton. I must say that they are the best perogies I have ever had, and I'm sure many members, including yourself, Mr. Speaker, and the hon. Premier himself, would agree with me.

St. Michael's is currently running their long-term care capital campaign. The centre is almost 30 years old, and many renovations need to be made to upgrade it to current standards. This campaign is called There's a Little Angel in Each of Us. They had a fundraising dinner, called the Blue Angel Dinner, which I was very pleased to attend last Thursday with you, Mr. Speaker. I am proud to support St. Michael's in this and all of their other fundraising efforts.

I would like to thank the capital campaign cabinet members for their hard work on this project and all of the staff at St. Michael's for making it a great place and a true gem in our community. May God bless all those involved with this wonderful organization.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: All members will be glad to know that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning and I attended an event for the St. Michael's extended care 25th anniversary celebration, and true to form, when I asked the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning what his three favourite foods were, he quickly responded: perogies, cabbage rolls, and nalysnyky. He got a hundred per cent for the response.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

International Education Week

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today marks Alberta's sixth year of participation in Canada's celebration of International Education Week from November 16 to 20. This year's theme is Promoting Global Citizenship. This is a wonderful way for Alberta's education system to promote the benefits of cross-cultural understanding in today's rapidly changing world. International education activities expose teachers and students to social and cultural differences, new educational methods, and diverse global perspectives. These activities include student and teacher exchanges, school partnerships, visiting teacher programs, foreign language consultants, and international student programs.

Mr. Speaker, 2009 marks the 30th anniversary that Alberta Education has been co-ordinating teacher exchanges in the province. Today the Alberta teacher exchange program has partners in Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, Germany, Denmark, and Switzerland. For several years now many Alberta teachers have taken on the challenge of leaving their homes and classrooms to live and teach in communities right across the world. Last year there were a total of 19 teachers that participated in full-year exchanges to Australia, New Zealand, the U.K., and Switzerland. Nine more participated in short-term exchanges to Denmark and to Germany. Not only have these teachers and their families changed and grown from their experiences. So, too, have the members of the communities they visited.

I would like to congratulate past and present participants alike, who recognize the value of international education in our schools, Mr. Speaker, and who have made this program such a wonderful success. What a wonderful opportunity to share Alberta with the international community and promote global citizenship.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

1:50

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning

Dr. Swann: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week the Premier publicly admitted that there were mistakes in the H1N1 rollout this past month. To the Premier: will the Premier explain what mistakes were made?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the comment last week with respect to the rollout of H1N1 flu vaccination said that, yes, that first week we could have accommodated people in buildings so that they didn't have to wait outside. Although it wasn't that cold, it certainly could have been a lot colder at this time of the year. We've learned from the situation. I called a meeting last Monday with Alberta Emergency Management, with Health Services, the minister of health, the Minister of Municipal Affairs, and the Solicitor General and put a plan into place. That plan is working very effectively because we don't have any waiting lists whatsoever.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, again to the Premier: was it the Premier's decision or the health minister's decision to send an ambiguous message about who qualified for the vaccine in the first week?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, all advice on medical matters comes from the medical officer of health. I have great faith in and support the medical officer of health. He's doing a good job in spite of the circumstances in terms of interruption of supply of vaccine. I have tremendous faith in his advice. That's the advice the minister of health follows, and that's how the policy is set.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are many documents relating to pandemic planning in the province that outline what the priority groups for vaccination would be in the event of a pandemic, and there are the four categories we've heard so much about. Will the Premier explain why plans that were laid out years ago were thrown out the window? Was this a political decision or a medical decision?

Mr. Stelmach: Once again, a medical decision.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Hospital Admissions

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The CEO of Alberta Health Services has stated that now is when we will see the largest strain on the acute-care system and intensive care beds. Today there are a total of 830 Albertans who have been hospitalized for H1N1 this year. Again to the Premier: what proportion of the 6,800 acute-care beds in Alberta are being occupied today by H1N1 patients who were high risk and didn't receive their vaccine?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't have that information in front of my fingertips. I don't follow every day's admissions into the hospitals throughout Alberta, but we can certainly get some more information on it. If it's relevant, we'll provide that information to the House.

Dr. Swann: Well, it's clearly relevant, Mr. Speaker, the number of people who should have had the vaccine and didn't and therefore ended up in hospital with H1N1. Will the Premier present that information, table it in the House?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, let's put this into perspective. Just a number of months ago Canadian public health officials were unable to identify the virus. They had to identify the virus. They had to start production of the vaccine and distribute that vaccine across Canada. From a Canadian point of view a lot of effort was put into ensuring that there was enough vaccine available for the very remote communities in northern Canada, so that was done.

We, of course, heard from the minister, heard from the medical officer of health in terms of what vaccine would be available, and the plans were built on that availability. That availability was interrupted without any warning to the federal government or to any of the provincial ministers, and as a result we had to change our plan.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For months we have been asking the Premier to ensure that our hospitals are properly prepared for H1N1 patients, yet we've received no evidence that this has happened. Will the Premier table the intensive care unit surge capacity plan, which is still not available, and show Albertans that we really are prepared to cope with the extra demands in intensive care units in this province?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister of health has all the detail.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I had a lengthy discussion with the CEO of Alberta Health Services today. As we stand here on the 16th of November, our health system is coping extremely well. There are some areas where at times pressure has been applied, but there is a contingency plan in place. As I said at the outset, the system is coping extremely well and not out of the ordinary for the flu season.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The people of Alberta don't like this government's attempt to cut them out of the process of determining whether the multibillion-dollar high-voltage transmission lines that it's about to foist upon us and make us pay for are needed. The government is already letting ATCO and AltaLink move ahead with the planning of the lines between Edmonton and Calgary before Bill 50 has even been debated in this House. Then when the PC Association was setting up its conference the weekend before last, it took sponsorship money from AltaLink. To the Premier. This bill is so obviously contentious. It so obviously matters to Albertans. Doesn't he see that this looks as though AltaLink gets access to government in exchange for cash?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the legislation will be before the House, I believe, tomorrow for second reading, and there'll be opportunity for active debate. But as I said before, there's a critical need for new transmission infrastructure in the province of Alberta. We will not be able to achieve all of our economic goals if we don't have new infrastructure in place, and that's the purpose of the bill.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's why they call it question period, not answer period.

Given that AltaLink has already been picked by the government to build one of the lines at the heart of the controversy over Bill 50, given that the line in question will cost $1.5 billion or more, and given that the electricity users of Alberta are going to get stuck with the bill for that, how can this Premier assure Albertans that his government's transmission policy isn't being impacted by these corporate sponsorship donations?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, over 30 public meetings were held across the province. Hundreds of people came forward to deliver evidence based on the need for new transmission. We are working on that. We want to of course do everything possible to tie all of the green energy sources that we have available to us, ensure that we are competitive in terms of our electricity rates, and move badly needed electricity from one end of the province to another. That is critical to Alberta's economic goals.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, earlier this session I asked the Premier which lobbyists he and the other members of cabinet were meeting with behind closed doors on Bill 50. I'm still waiting for that information. The people of Alberta and this House are still waiting for that information. Albertans, who are going to be paying for these lines for the next 40 years, have a right to know what the companies that'll profit from them are saying to cabinet. To the Premier: when can Albertans expect to find out who's been trying to influence this government on Bill 50, or are you just waiting until after the debate is all over?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'm glad that the opposition supported this government's position on legislation that was passed in this House – of course, that's the lobbyist registry – that provides the transparency and openness that this government is all about. He can go to the registry and get that information any time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Strathcona.

Health Care Reform

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Last weekend the Premier responded to falling support among Albertans and even his own party by promising to correct mistakes his government has been making. Perhaps the most serious mistake has been this government's handling of changes to the health care system. Massive changes to health care delivery without a mandate, without a plan, and without public consultation have Albertans angry from one corner of the province to the other. My question is to the Premier. Will you direct the Minister of Health and Wellness to stop the overhaul of the health care system until a comprehensive plan is placed before Albertans and public input is sought?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister is doing all of the above that the hon. member mentioned. He does have a committee in place to look at whether there are legislative changes that are necessary in the future. He has also consulted with Albertans through various organizations. But at the end of the day we've seen the cost of health care delivery in this province increase over 180 per cent in the last 10 years. All Albertans know it's not sustainable, and all I'm asking is for all Albertans to come together, especially our health care professionals in this province, to work on a plan together so that we can sustain it for the next generation because it is our duty.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, Albertans have neither been informed nor consulted. The Premier said that change is coming, but he won't say what it is or when it will be. That's not good enough. Albertans are increasingly skeptical about this Premier's promises. Will the Premier tell his health minister to lay off until Albertans are both informed and consulted about government health care plans? Yes or no?

2:00

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, well, at least he's not asking for his resignation today. He's just asking to lay off, I guess. [interjections] Oh, that's what he means: lay off now. Okay.

Mr. Speaker, we will continue to consult with Albertans. Recently having travelled to a number of communities in Alberta, we've heard a lot from medical/ health care professionals – doctors, nurses, other allied health care professionals – that are working together in communities to see how they can improve access, improve quality of care, keep costs reasonable but at the same time, again, ensure that we have this really good system, that all Albertans enjoy, for the next generation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Premier suggested that it's not his policies but his communication that's flawed. Albertans are very unhappy with the Premier's health care policy. The best spin doctors in the world won't change that. You can put lipstick on a pig, but it's still a pig. My question is to the Premier. Will you change direction on health care as Albertans demand, or is your promise of change just more spin?

Mr. Stelmach: I'll take your direction, Mr. Speaker. We'll keep consulting with Albertans. This is actually a very good discussion that we're having because many people are coming forward and coming forward with good ideas on how we can change the way we deliver health services for the positive, how we can also deliver more seniors' accommodation in the province of Alberta. That is one part of our population that has gone through some difficulty this last number of months with the downturn in the economy, losing some of their savings, and, of course, not getting very much in the bank in terms of what they have saved. We're all working together, and I know that Albertans will come together and find a resolution to some of the challenges we're facing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this month the mass H1N1 immunization clinics were temporarily suspended due to long lineups at clinics and a short supply of the vaccine. Since then the province has rolled out a more targeted campaign for priority groups eligible to get the vaccine. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: now that everyone deemed a top priority for immunization is able to get it, what is the plan for making the vaccine available to the general public?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our chief medical officer of health later this afternoon will be outlining plans for the remainder of this week, but in a nutshell we are at the point now where 1 in every 6 Albertans has been vaccinated, and that is a very significant achievement. We will be, starting I believe tomorrow, offering vaccine to seniors in this province who are over the age of 75 and to their partner or spouse. Then, in addition to that, we'll be later in the week rolling it out to additional seniors, and those details will be provided this afternoon.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the program does open up to the general public, will people continue to have to go to these mass clinics, or will there be other options available to them for getting this vaccine?

Mr. Liepert: Well, that's something we're going to continue to monitor as the week wears on, but we believe that by the end of this week we will be in a position where we can probably start to distribute the vaccine across the province to physicians, to pharmacists, and to other providers. It has been a careful calculation of ensuring that we have the appropriate amount of vaccine, so as we move through the next four or five days and we see the take-up with the general population, it will give us a better sense of whether we'll be able the following week to distribute on a broader basis.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what is being done to ensure that supply issues don't create another scenario in which people are going to get the vaccine, only to be turned away at the door?

Mr. Liepert: Well, that's one of the reasons why we plan to roll it out in a staged way yet even this week. The last thing we want to see is seniors standing in line behind others who may be able to cope better than our seniors population. Starting with those who are over 75 and their spouses or partners I think will work well, but again we want to manage it in a way to make sure that we don't get into the situation that we had earlier in the week. All indications of the past week are that the panic has subsided, but Albertans are still aware that the vaccine is necessary.

I just want to take this opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to thank all of those who have been involved in this program over the past three weeks through the health care system. As I say, a tremendous achievement, probably the best on a per capita basis anywhere in Canada, when at least half a million people in this province now are vaccinated.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Pastoral Care in Health Facilities

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Health and Wellness and the CEO of Alberta Health Services have shown that they're not concerned with real people but only with what can be measured and put on a chart or a graph. Caring, empathy, comfort, and dignity are neglected. To the minister of health: can the minister explain why pastoral care is being cut across this province?*

Mr. Liepert: Well, I asked that same question of the CEO of Alberta Health Services, and he assures me – because I had someone, when I was in Lacombe recently, ask that same question. I've been given the assurance that that is not happening. I'd be happy to inquire further as a result of the member's question, and if there's something that's different, I'll answer the House later in the week.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. I'll look forward to that answer.

A nationally and internationally recognized and respected pastoral care clergyman who devoted 23 years of his life at the Royal Alex hospital was terminated and escorted out of the hospital by security guards like a common criminal. Mr. Minister, what on earth is going on in this province?

Mr. Liepert: Well, one of the things I have learned in the short time in this House, Mr. Speaker, is not to take very much of the preamble of the opposition's questions as fact, so I will inquire into that and report back along with my earlier commitment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am more than convinced that the minister will find that, in fact, that is a fact.

Will the minister agree that the priceless value return from the people who do chaplaincy work is worth the meagre amount that they take out of the health care budget?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, I'm not familiar with what part of the health care budget we would be talking about. I will endeavour to get the answer to the member, as I promised earlier in question period, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

International Trade

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Way Forward is Alberta's four-point economic recovery plan, and one of the points in the plan is ensuring that Alberta's energy sector and other industries are globally competitive and continue to attract investment. This point is especially important to my constituency in the Alberta Industrial Heartland. My first question is to the new and able Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. Can the minister tell us how his ministry is helping to ensure Alberta's industry remains internationally profiled and competitive in the midst of this global recession?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Webber: Well, thank you, and thank you, hon. member. My first question. I'm honoured that I take my first question from such an honourable person, so thank you very much.

I'd have to say that, yes, absolutely, Mr. Speaker, my ministry is focused on maintaining a strong presence on the world stage even through these tough economic times. We will continue to defend our export markets. We do have numerous trade missions as well throughout the globe, and we will continue to do so in order to build our opportunity for this province. We also have nine international offices. I won't name them all, but I will tell you that through these offices we will continue to promote Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every year the Alberta Industrial Heartland associations and local municipalities do a great job to send a trade mission to Texas to encourage investment in this growing region of Alberta. They are planning their next one for March of 2010. To the same minister: what is his government doing to help this important group of community and business leaders build stronger relationships with our neighbours to the south and help to attract new business and value-add to the Industrial Heartland?

Mr. Webber: Oh, boy, that was a long question, Mr. Speaker, and I will try to answer everything that was asked. Our offices do work in DC with respect to providing essential services to help Alberta companies compete south of the border, including Texas, as the hon. member alluded to. My department does not, though, provide funding to these organizations to cover their costs. We do, however, have department staff that can promote and provide advice and facilitate meetings with senior officials across the United States, not only in Texas. We do have a very strong relationship with governments and businesses in Texas. In fact, our Premier just recently went on a trade mission himself down to Texas. I would encourage any Alberta business or community member to contact my department if they are looking for information on trade missions.

Thank you.

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: in our current economic situation are we getting good results from our investment in these international offices, and does it make sense to continue to invest in these international offices?

Mr. Webber: That was a great question as well, Mr. Speaker. During these tough economic times the specialized knowledge of local markets and the advocacy efforts of our international offices are critical. As I mentioned, we do have nine international offices in trade.

An Hon. Member: Where are they all?

Mr. Webber: Please, please. I can't even hear myself think in this room. It's getting so busy here. Thank you very much. I've been trying to answer questions.

Anyway, we are facilitating a number of networking opportunities throughout the world. We have 200 trade shows, Mr. Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Unfortunately, hon. minister, doing this doesn't give you more time.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Homeless People

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. After questions in this House about vaccine clinics for the homeless in the inner city a flurry of phone calls erupted from the minister's office, and on October 30 a clinic opened at the Hope Mission and was then cancelled. Other clinics for the Boyle McCauley health centre, Operation Friendship, and Boyle Street Community Services centre never opened. The agencies who serve the inner-city population were surprised they were not provided with vaccine to distribute as part of last week's expansion to include vulnerable people. To the minister of health: what can the minister tell these agencies about timelines now?

*See page 1815, left column, paragraph 10

Mr. Liepert: Well, I don't want to sound like someone who's going to take another question under advisement, but I have to. It is my understanding, in consultation with the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, that the vaccine had been provided to the homeless. Now, I don't have where exactly it was provided to the homeless, but I will check into it and get an answer by tomorrow for the member.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thank you. Yes, if the minister can confirm that government will release vaccine supplies to these agencies to administer for the inner-city population of vulnerable people, which, of course, includes the homeless and those who are immune compromised, we would appreciate it.

Mr. Liepert: I can give the member that assurance.

I'm going to ask the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs to supplement the answer, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you. I'm pleased to let you know, Mr. Speaker, that at Hope Mission we did vaccinate 289 people. With the change in the priority plan that has occurred most recently, the homeless are very much in the high-priority area. I can also assure this member that the Boyle health centre will be receiving the vaccine very shortly, I think tomorrow or the next day, and they will be out vaccinating more of the homeless.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Back to the Minister of Health and Wellness: given that the Edmonton Police Service requested special treatment for its front-line officers and was turned down the same day that a special clinic was held for friends, family, and team members of a hockey club, when will the minister release the ethical guidelines that established the priority ranking for vulnerable people and allowed for these two groups to be treated in the order that they were?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've dealt with the issue in Calgary relative to what the member raises. I am pleased to say that effective today any of the first responders – firefighters, police – can get vaccinated. They are in that group. They can go to a mass clinic any time today and going forward. In addition to that, we will be making arrangements today with the various municipalities around the province to provide the vaccine. In most cases the municipalities are wanting to do the vaccination themselves. If they choose to do it that way, we will provide them the vaccine, and those arrangements are being made today by Alberta Health Services.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Sour Gas Well Licensing

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many of my constituents work within the sour gas industry and have expressed concerns regarding the recent ERCB suspensions on issuing sour gas licences. My questions are all to the Minister of Energy. Can you please elaborate on why the ERCB suspended the licensing in the first place?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Of course, I'll preface my comment and answer here with the statement that the province of Alberta under the direction of our regulator, the ERCB, for about 60 years has had a very, very solid record with respect to developing these resources in the province.

What had happened, Mr. Speaker, was that there was an inconsistency in the area description of emergency preparedness zones and a protective action zone. The courts rightly noticed the discrepancy and asked the ERCB to take corrective action.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Minister. Back to you again. I do agree that the ERCB has had a great working record in this province, working with the oil and gas industry and helping to develop it. But I'm concerned that this may have a negative effect upon the ability of the sour gas industry to get back to work and to business as usual. Can the minister comment on that?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Yes, Mr. Speaker. People are very concerned across the province with respect to this issue. I can tell the member, the House, and all Albertans that the issue has been recognized and dealt with. I believe that the 69 licences that were affected by this decision have now been released.

Mr. VanderBurg: Again to the same minister, and thank you for those comments. The resizing of these protective action zones is more than industry; there are people that live within these regions. What impact on the safety of Albertans who reside in these zones will occur now?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, of course, as you would know, the number one mandate that the ERCB has is the protection of Albertans relative to development of industry in the province of Alberta. What's happened here is that the clarification of protective action zones has absolutely no effect on the health and safety of Albertans. As a matter of fact, the clarification will in fact enhance the protection and safety of Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Fine Arts Education Curriculum Review

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The fine arts contribute so much to our society, economy, and the development of our young people. However, this government is using a curriculum review to deliberately weaken valuable fine arts programs in our schools. Students, parents, and teachers are outraged. My questions are to the Minister of Education. If the government truly believes in the importance of our fine arts programs, why is this minister dramatically cutting the amount of student instructional time for fine arts in the K to 12 curriculum?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, the short answer is that this member couldn't be further from what actually is going on than he is in that statement. First of all, the arts are not peripheral to education. The arts are fundamental to education in this province, and they will remain so.

What the hon. member is referring to is the fact that we are doing a review of the arts curriculum, which hasn't been done in 20 or 25 years in the province. In September a draft of a framework for the preparation of a new curriculum was posted on the website and sent out to stakeholders for comment. It was put up specifically so that people can comment on it, get back to us, and let us know what they like about it and what they don't like about it. We're hearing back from lots of people. It's part of the public process of consultation before you do anything with the arts. Nothing could be more fundamental than arts to education.

Mr. Chase: Well, unfortunately, the ministry is putting out mixed messages; for example, cutting down five credits to one credit and limiting the amount of time.

The minister talked about consultation, so here is the question with regard to consultation. Given that the government failed to properly consult with Albertans prior to this review, will the minister commit to extending the January deadline for feedback on these proposed changes?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, these are not proposed changes. This is a proposed draft for a framework to discuss what the curriculum should look like. In that draft framework what they've put up is one process which would suggest that modules for the arts could be set up. There's no intention at all to move away from intensive arts courses for those who want to take intensive arts courses. What it's really trying to accomplish is to move arts right into the curriculum and right across the curriculum because, as we know, moving forward, innovation and creativity are going to be fundamental skills for 21st century Albertans.

2:20

Mr. Chase: This daft draft that you have put out is causing confusion. This government has already damaged any kind of discussion of religion and sexuality with Bill 44, and now it's targeting the fine arts. Will the minister tell Albertans which aspect of the K to 12 curriculum he intends to undermine next?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I won't comment on what is daft. I'll only say this, and I'll say it again. We've been talking about Inspiring Education. We've been talking about what education looks like 20 years from now, what we need so that Albertans can be prepared to trade out into the world. We know that as part of that, innovation and creativity are fundamental. The arts is fundamental and core to our curriculum. It will remain core to our curriculum. We will continue the discussion with Albertans as we have for the past year – going out with focus groups, going out with discussion groups – in the way that curriculum is normally developed. We've put up a framework for discussion. That framework is open for discussion until the end of January, and once all the feedback comes in, there'll be more opportunities for everyone interested to participate.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Nothing has changed in the way Tories do business since their much-anticipated convention.

Half of their party's most faithful told them that they wanted Bill 50 scrapped, but this government says it won't even listen to them. To the Minister of Energy: why do you insist on eliminating public input into the proposed transmission lines? What are you afraid of?

Mr. Snelgrove: The big bad wolf.

Mr. Knight: No, not the big bad wolf.

Mr. Speaker, the truth of the matter is that since 2007 there have been 300 open, public meetings . . .

An Hon. Member: How many?

Mr. Knight: Three hundred.

. . . with respect to the transmission system in Alberta and how we should move forward with it. I'm not sure what part of that is not understandable, but we've done a lot of public consultation. We will continue to do that, and the AUC will still direct at the end of the day a public and open meeting with respect to siting and the other issues around transmission.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's not good enough. Experts are telling us that the Premier and the minister are exaggerating the true need for the massive transmission expansion that's being proposed; meanwhile, the government's spin doctors warn of apocalyptic power outages and crumbling infrastructure. This dichotomy of opinion is the very thing that public hearings are meant to sort through. Why is the minister so afraid to test his arguments in public? Is your spin really that thin?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, I don't know how many times that I would have to actually repeat this. However, I will do it one more time and perhaps more. The Alberta Utilities Commission has a mandate to work in the public interest, and their mandate includes – includes – the fact that there will be open, public hearings where intervention is not only allowed but encouraged to make sure that at the end of the day, in the public interest, the decisions they make are the right decisions for all Albertans.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government is proposing to allow the power companies to spend billions of dollars to overbuild capacity completely at the expense of the consumer and without giving them the chance to voice their opinion. Power companies are looking at massive profits, and you're asking the general public to finance it. Why won't you withdraw this antidemocratic and unnecessary legislation that railroads Albertans into paying more for power they don't need?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased, actually, to engage with the electrical engineers that she has used, obviously, to indicate that we're doing something that is not in the public interest. If they have more engineers than AESO that have a better idea of what we should do, I would be very pleased to engage with them. The 200-plus – 200-plus – professional electrical engineers and technicians are the people that plan the system for Albertans. I think that that speaks for itself.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Employment Insurance Benefit Program

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like many other jurisdictions Alberta is facing higher than normal unemployment numbers. Some must rely on the federal EI program for temporary support.

However, Albertans are subject to different criteria due to regional variations in eligibility requirements. An applicant in my constituency of Calgary-East, for example, must work at least 665 hours to qualify, compared to the lower extreme of 420 hours in Newfoundland. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: what is being done to ensure that Albertans are treated fairly in the EI system?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We recognize that it is very difficult when somebody becomes unemployed, and we are concerned that benefits vary based on local unemployment rates. We've raised this particular issue at several federal-provincial-territorial meetings of first ministers. Our view is that EI should provide Canadians with equitable support regardless of where they live. But besides reforming EI, our top priority is getting Albertans back to work.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a result of the minister raising this issue, what has resulted from Alberta's lobbying efforts to reform the EI program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta and the other western provinces are in general agreement when it comes to EI reforms. The federal government announced it would provide additional EI benefits to unemployed long-tenured workers. While we support those changes to employment insurance, we still feel it does not address the issue of access to EI benefits regardless of where individuals live.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Employment and Immigration: what measures are in place for Albertans who cannot find work and cannot qualify for EI in their region?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've got two major federal funding agreements to support those who do not qualify for EI. These agreements support a wide range of training, employment, and career development opportunities. This week, for example, my staff are organizing job fairs for recruiting employers like Momentum, Southland Transportation, Blockbuster, and Sun Life Financial. This year we plan to help over 155,000 Albertans through a range of provincial and federally funded employment and training services.

Electoral Reform

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, Alberta's former Chief Electoral Officer provided this government with a wealth of material to improve electoral practices before being unceremoniously shown the door. Research from the 2008 election revealed that 61 per cent of those who didn't vote would have been more likely to cast a ballot if they could vote at any polling station. Will the Minister of Justice commit to amending the Election Act to change these outdated residency requirements?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The former Chief Electoral Officer did provide a number of recommendations that we are currently reviewing and will bring to the Legislature in due course.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, on that, what about allowing advance polling stations to be placed in high-traffic areas such as malls and universities to improve voter participation? This was also in the Chief Electoral Officer's report. I was wondering if the minister will be committing to this any time soon.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's a second recommendation from the former Chief Electoral Officer. I don't know if the hon. member has ever had an opportunity to be involved in administering an election. What I will tell you is that in a province of this size, with 3 and a half million people, if you start to remove residency requirements, you run into a number of incredibly problematic situations with respect to how you actually calculate the ballots on a constituency-by-constituency basis.

The recommendations will be reviewed. The legislation will be tabled. He can introduce those issues at that time.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. minister is correct. There were numerous problems with the last election, and the former Chief Electoral Officer was trying to comment on those through his 85 recommendations.

Really, you know, I guess the next election is probably only two years away. Do you think we could have some legislation drafted by your department that maybe implements one or two of these things by the time that election comes?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that in my first two questions I did suggest that there would be legislation coming forward. I would also suggest respectfully that those two particular recommendations would not help to resolve problems but would add problems.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

2:30 Geothermal Energy for Home Heating

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are for the ministers of Energy and Environment. As we move toward a clean energy future, Albertans in their efforts to be part of the green energy solution are researching alternatives for heating their homes. I know that in my constituency alone more and more residents are examining the advantages of using geothermal energy as a sustainable heating source. My first question to the Minister of Energy: what are the practicalities for Alberta homeowners wanting to switch to geothermal energy as a means of keeping warm during our frigid winters?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, first of all, of course, what the member is talking about is solar energy that's stored in the earth's surface. There are opportunities with heat pumps to recover that energy, but switching becomes a bit problematic because of the economics of switching. However, most certainly, a lot of interest is being paid to and a lot of development being done on new build using a geothermal heat source for home heating.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A supplemental to the same minister: have subsurface studies been conducted in Alberta to determine the capability of Alberta's soils to make effective use of this energy source?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, yes. The answer to that is that the ERCB have the Alberta Geological Survey residing in the ERCB, and they are currently doing mapping of the province of Alberta relative to our geothermal capacity, the deep geothermal capacity. Again, they have already I think identified some very positive news for Albertans. There are opportunities where we could have things such as electrical power provided by deep geothermal heat and also things like district heating. It is doable, and there are places in Alberta where that exists.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental is to the Minister of Environment. Does the Department of Environment anticipate developing any programs to encourage the development of private geothermal systems in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, clearly, there's no doubt that the government and Environment support the concept of geothermal. It really would be a strong plank in our commitment to our climate change strategy, that talks about reducing the overall carbon footprint through energy efficiency.

There are two areas, Mr. Speaker. One is for the residential side. On the residential side we do have an existing program right now where consumers can apply for up to $10,000 for investments that will significantly increase efficiency in home heating, and I would suggest that there are certain geothermal projects that would or could qualify under the EnerGuide rating. On the industrial side I think that there is promise that industry is showing interest in the area as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

All-terrain Vehicle Safety

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government seems content to be the least responsible jurisdiction in the country when it comes to ATV safety. Yet another province, this time British Columbia, is moving ahead with safety laws for ATVs while in Alberta this government sits and does nothing. To the Minister of Transportation: why are you sitting around doing nothing while other provincial governments are acting to protect their citizens?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I absolutely disagree with the hon. member. This government is always up and moving. We're never sitting around doing nothing. But I'll tell you: we really, honestly believe in safety. There are all kinds of things that we do for safety on ATVs. We have learn-to-ride education on it. That's the biggest thing. If you don't educate people on what the machine is, how they should ride it, what it's capable of, you can put on all the gear in the world, and it isn't going to help you. We're saying: teach yourself all the safety features of the equipment that you could possibly wear, also all the safety equipment that's there on the machine, what size of machine you should have for the weight of the rider, and make sure that if they're under age, you supervise them properly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This minister talks a lot about developing helmet laws, but actually doing something is another matter, and while he was standing, he was still doing nothing. When can Albertans expect to see action rather than talk from this minister with the introduction of a law to require helmet use on ATVs?

Mr. Ouellette: Everyone that I know that rides ATVs that uses their common sense puts on a helmet. I've had ATVs my whole life, and I've had lots of people come over and enjoy the use of them. I've had people bring their children over. You know what, Mr. Speaker? If you brought your children over, I wouldn't let them ride my machines unless you put helmets on their heads. That's just common sense.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now we're going to talk about common sense. When asked about this issue, this Minister of Transportation talks a lot about how he feels that we need to rely on common sense, not laws. Well, helmet use on ATVs is as important as seat belts are in motor vehicles. Could the minister then explain why it is the government's policy to enforce the wearing of seat belts in vehicle law rather than relying on common sense? Why is it a law?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, as things evolve, so do regulations, so do laws, so does everything. With ATVs we're working on a whole bunch of different issues. There's a difference with seat belts. The highways are all public. The roads are all public. But 95 per cent of the people that ride ATVs ride them on private land. We don't have jurisdiction on that private land. Therefore, we're looking at how we can make this work so it works everywhere. If you can't make it effective, if you can't police it, and if you can't enforce it, there's no sense having the law.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Postsecondary Tuition Fees

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Students across Alberta are expressing concerns about the prospect of having their tuition dramatically increased to help carry the load for postsecondary institutes having operating deficits. Three years ago the government limited tuition increases to the rate of inflation. Can the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology tell us if removing the tuition cap is being considered?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like any organization, when institutions are looking at tightening their belts, they look at almost all of the things around the bottom line. I can tell you that the tuition fee policy still governs how tuition rates are increased in the province. For 2010-11, as an example, we know that that limit will be at about 1.5 per cent. There is no discussion in this ministry right now about removing that tuition cap, if you will, the CPI. Some institutions have indicated to us that when we did the cap, as an example, I believe we rolled tuition fees back to 2004 levels, and when you look at other jurisdictions and across the country in terms of Canada, perhaps some of these programs need to be looked at. However, we've made it extremely clear to the postsecondaries that we're only going to be looking at something that's fair and equitable for the three clients we serve, and one of those clients is the student.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, my second question is to the same minister. Recently the University of Alberta discussed implementing what they described as market modifiers. Can the minister explain market modifiers?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, one of the things that Campus Alberta has discussed, and I alluded to it briefly in my first answer, is: are we comparable and competitive across the country in terms of tuition rates? Is it affordable? Is it accessible? With those three principles, if you will, in mind we have said that everything is open and on the table. We're in very interesting times when you have jurisdictions like the University of California, Berkeley, slashing their budgets by 20 per cent. We're not looking at anything like that. We do need to make sure that nothing is off the table when it comes to achieving efficiencies, when it comes to adjustments in the system. But the institutions cannot apply a blanket tuition increase. Whatever proposal they bring forward to the department has to be fair, has to be equitable, and has to have a proper case behind it.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, my third question to the same minister: do I understand that to mean that the minister is endorsing the use of these market modifiers on certain programs?

2:40

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, what I've suggested to the institutions is that we are open to whatever proposals they might want to bring forward; however, I am extremely concerned that those proposals have to be fair. They have to show a very solid reason as to why we would look at adjusting the base of a particular program or a particular tuition. It has to be fair not only to the institution but, for sure, to the student, the taxpayer, and society. Those are the three clients that we serve in Campus Alberta, and we'll continue to do so.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today.

In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine. We're still on members' statements, but in the interim might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to introduce to you and through you some guests that are here to witness the tabling of a petition regarding the construction of a badly needed new care centre in Stony Plain. These students heard about the petition and have been studying this issue as a project for their school. I'm very encouraged by the interest that these students have taken in their community. As I say their names, I would ask them to rise: Kyla Dobson, Brianna Dechaine,* Shelby Elder, and Shelby's mother, Lynette Elder. Please join me in giving them the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly an old colleague and friend of many of us, Mr. Denis Ducharme, former MLA for Bonnyville-Cold Lake. Denis and his wife, Rose, were good friends of a lot of us in caucus. As a former seatmate I am still looking to renew acquaintances with you, and I welcome you back to the Assembly. Next time bring the Road Runner.

Thank you.

Members' Statements (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Public Health Care in Alberta

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Our public health system is Alberta's most cherished institution. More than that, public health care forms part of our core identity as Canadians. As Canadians we value universal access as a human right. There is nothing of greater value than the life of a human being, and as a society Canadians have chosen to take care of each other by creating a publicly funded health care system accessible to all, rich and poor. The ministry of health, therefore, is the most important department in government, charged with protecting and carefully managing the public institution that protects and nourishes life itself. It's a ministry that demands thoughtful, compassionate, and knowledgeable leadership.

Alberta's ministry of health today lacks this kind of leadership. From the beginning the Member for Calgary-West's tenure as minister of health has been disastrous, especially in light of a predicted, planned pandemic. He has proven his incompetence time and again: disbanding the health regions, AADAC, and the Cancer Board without a plan; dismissing top-level public health physicians before the pandemic; giving out millions in bonuses and severance packages for work left undone; running up massive deficits; opening new beds only to close old ones, with no net gain; downsizing Alberta Hospital Edmonton; spending tens of millions on new facilities only to let them stand empty due to a lack of doctors and nurses; allowing public long-term care to disintegrate; and failing Albertans with his botched H1N1 vaccine rollout.

Through it all this minister has refused to admit mistakes. His arrogance and lack of compassion for the thousands of lives that his decisions have affected are unacceptable. His refusal to give straight answers to this Legislature and firing staff instead of taking responsibility himself shows incredible disrespect for the status and tradition as a minister of the Crown. Surely, the Premier must realize by now that Albertans are sick of this minister and his ignorance of public health.

One last time on behalf of all Albertans I implore the Premier: remove this minister.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

*This spelling could not be verified at the time of publication.

National Bullying Awareness Week

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Too often bullying is dismissed as a harmless and normal part of growing up, but bullying can have devastating consequences, especially on children and youth who may be kept from reaching their full potential by the hurtful words and actions of others. Something that can deeply scar so many lives should not be dismissed as just normal kids' stuff. Bullying must not be tolerated any time, anywhere.

During national Bullying Awareness Week, from November 15 to 21, Albertans are reminded to think about the harmful impacts of bullying and to take steps to prevent it from happening in their homes, their schools, and their neighbourhoods. Alberta has shown tremendous leadership in creating safe and caring schools and promoting the prevention of bullying across the province. Through the bullying prevention strategy government ministries work closely with community groups and schools to prevent bullying at the local level. Preventing bullying isn't just a job for government or schools. As caring Albertans we all have a role to play in ensuring that people feel safe, supported, and respected in their communities.

Albertans who would like more information about how to address bullying are encouraged to call the toll-free, 24-hour, seven-days-a-week bullying hotline at 1.888.456.2323. This helpline, Mr. Speaker, which I established when I was minister of children's services, has received 1,200 calls since it was established three years ago. Additional information and resources are also available at www.bullyfreealberta.ca. The website features fact sheets, prevention strategies, and links to other interactive websites designed to raise awareness about bullying. I encourage all Albertans to make use of these resources and become part of the solution to bullying. Together we can create brighter futures and safer communities for all Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

National 4-H Month

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you. I rise to recognize and wish you all a happy National 4-H Month. Today I want to acknowledge this incredibly valuable organization. Throughout the month of November we will be celebrating this organization.

Mr. Speaker, 4-H is one of the longest running youth organizations in our province, shaping the lives of youth and adults for more than 90 years. With over 250,000 alumni 4-H is one of the most respected and admired youth programs in Canada. This is a reputation that is well deserved. By following the 4-H motto, Learn To Do by Doing, 4-H helps build communities by developing leadership and interpersonal and technical skills of members, giving youth the skills they need to succeed in life, and creating a network of friends across the entire country.

Agriculture is vital to our province, and 4-H plays an important role in developing tomorrow's leaders in the agricultural industry and rural communities. Our youth want to be involved, accepted, valued, and heard. In 4-H they run the show. That's what makes it so successful.

None of this, Mr. Speaker, would be possible without the support of family and the terrific volunteer leadership from adults in the community. In honour of National 4-H Month I want to acknowledge the outstanding work of Alberta's 4-H clubs and extend a warm thank you to the volunteers and applaud our young people.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Louis Riel

Ms Calahasen: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, 124 years ago today, November 16, 1885, the leader of the Métis people, Louis Riel, was executed in Regina by the Canadian government for his part in the Northwest Rebellion. A commemoration held here in the Legislature for the beginning of Métis Week, attended by our Premier, the Minister of Aboriginal Relations, leaders of the opposition parties, and Métis leaders, was to honour Louis Riel, a man who believed in his people, the Métis.

Today was not only significant of his death but signified the challenges that he experienced, like acceptance of being Métis, acceptance of the Michif language, acceptance of his culture and his heritage. He fought hard and stood steadfast in having Métis rights recognized. It is a rare act, indeed, to stand up for what you believe in. In Métis circles today everyone knows Riel died for what he believed, and present-day Métis continue to work towards that belief.

Riel predicted his legacy before his hanging as he said, "I will perhaps be one day acknowledged as more than a leader of the half-breeds, and if I am I will have an opportunity of being acknowledged as a leader of good in this great country." His dream of the recognition of Métis and being recognized as a leader doing good in this country continues to be awakened in the Métis people of this province and has occurred in a number of ways: the establishment of Métis settlements, the first in Canada; the recognition of the Métis Nation of Alberta and the agreements with this province; the Michif language development, which is occurring by Métis; most of all, the awakening of pride in the music and dance of the Métis, like the young people who performed today.

Of course, there are still many challenges. However, like Riel, I believe in the Métis. I know they will thrive and will continue to fight for what's rightfully theirs. Yes, Riel's dream and prediction is awakening.

2:50

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm proud to rise today to present on behalf of my colleague a petition signed by almost 1,500 Albertans, several of whom are joining us in the public gallery today. The petition reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to free up the allocated construction money for the Good Samaritan Care Centre and start building the facility immediately.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to present a petition from 44 Albertans who have signed following the format prescribed by our Legislative Assembly out of 326 who have signed a petition to the same call. The petition reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government . . . to:

- Grandfather the rights and status of currently-practicing Registered Massage Therapists . . . in Alberta in a manner that they may continue their practice undisturbed and, when necessary, gradually upgrade to newly-proclaimed standards of training, so as not to force current therapists to lose their ongoing income whilst upgrading and so to ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

This is the proper number of copies.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, do you have a tabling?

Mr. Cao: I do have a tabling here. This is the petition to the minister of health by the same group, physical therapists, and it's signed by 282 members and to the same cause that I just said in my petition.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. It's a letter dated November 2, 2009, from the Alberta Children and Youth Services minister, and it is an answer to a question that I raised in this House on October 27.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, I have two tablings today. The first is another wonderful festival in my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre and elsewhere in Edmonton. This is the Exposure festival, which is Edmonton's Queer Arts and Culture Festival, running for the rest of this week, so I'm tabling the listing of events and locations.

The second tabling I have is from a constituent, Cara Kane, who is writing to indicate her support for parts 2, 3, and 4 of Bill 48 but not with part 1, which is the punitive part of that. Parts 2, 3, and 4 are around tobacco litigation.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling an information package from a group known as Save Our Fine Arts. I attended a meeting on Monday just north of Beaverbrook high school, which is a fine arts program. The connected material indicates two ways of connecting to the organization. One is at www.saveourfinearts.ca, and the second is a Facebook site entitled Petition Against New Alberta Fine Arts Curriculum.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I want to table five copies of a letter that last week I tabled in response to a question from the Member for Edmonton-Riverview. Unfortunately, the tabling last week was an unsigned letter, so I now would like to table five letters that are signed.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk pursuant to the Legislative Assembly Act and the Government Accountability Act, the 2008-2009 annual reports for the following departments: Aboriginal Relations; Advanced Education and Technology; Agriculture and Rural Development; Children and Youth Services; Culture and Community Spirit; Education; Employment and Immigration; Energy; Environment; Executive Council; Finance and Enterprise; Health and Wellness; Housing and Urban Affairs; Infrastructure; International and Intergovernmental Relations; Justice; Municipal Affairs; Seniors and Community Supports; Service Alberta; Solicitor General and Public Security; Sustainable Resource Development; Tourism, Parks and Recreation; Transportation; and Treasury Board.

On behalf of the hon. Ms Evans, Minister of Finance and Enterprise, pursuant to the Government Accountability Act the consolidated financial statements of the government of Alberta, annual report 2008-2009; and Measuring Up: Progress Report on the Government of Alberta Business Plan, annual report 2008-2009.

Orders of the Day

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 205

Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my sincere pleasure to rise today and lead off third-reading debate on Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act. Bill 205 is a made-in-Alberta bill that addresses third-party finances and contributions disclosure. It places clear parameters around third-party advertising during provincial elections in a way that advances free speech and the right of people to express their views during an election period.

The concept of this bill is not a new idea. In fact, Mr. Speaker, across North America many jurisdictions have laws governing third-party financing. Some jurisdictions place spending limits, which would limit the amount that a third party could spend on election advertising, while other jurisdictions ban third-party advertising altogether. For example, the federal government and British Columbia have capped the amount that a third party can spend on election advertising.

That is not the case with Bill 205. We do not want to ban, cap, or limit the ability of third parties to spend on advertising during provincial elections. Rather, what Bill 205 aims to achieve is a hybrid of many different approaches where the overall goal is to place third parties on the same level playing field as political parties. The logic behind this is clear. For example, if we were to put a cap of a certain amount of money that a third party could spend on election advertising, then basically we'd be giving political parties a monopoly on speech during an election. Instead, Bill 205 is fair for all those participating in election advertising. Bill 205 finds the balance between respecting the rights of free speech with the need to keep our democratic playing field fair and level.

I would like to highlight some of the provisions of this legislation which would exemplify this balance. Bill 205 establishes a mechanism called the third-party election advertising account. All third parties would be required to establish such an account in order to run political advertising during a provincial election, much like political parties must do as well. In addition, contributions by donors to this account would be set at a fair limit of $30,000 during an election year and $15,000 in a nonelection year. This also correlates with the contribution limits currently imposed on political parties.

Mr. Speaker, all of the funds placed in these accounts could be spent by the third party during a provincial election. In other words, if a third party can raise millions of dollars from many different donors, they are free to spend every last cent of that during an election. This concept limits the influence that can be brought about by large contributions without preventing the participation of large amounts of donors. Essentially, if a few wealthy organizations or individuals are proponents of an idea, although they are free to advocate that idea, their ability to use their large wealth to dominate the media during an election will be reasonably limited under this legislation.

These measures provide for the advancement of interests and ideas based not on the wealth of a few but upon that idea's ability to attract popular support among many. I want to be clear that in no way does this legislation control, stifle, or restrict free speech. In fact, freedom of speech will be enhanced by this bill by giving all ideas and viewpoints a more equal opportunity to flourish within our open and democratic society, and this is essential in a place like Alberta, where we believe so adamantly in the right of free speech.

3:00

Another important aspect of this bill relates to the transparency of third parties. One part of transparency in an open democracy is identifying who is supporting which idea and/or party so that voters can determine the intentions behind certain proposed ideas and legislation. Bill 205 enhances transparency in this regard by requiring third parties to identify themselves on all advertising and promotional materials. Identification is important in ensuring accurate communication between a third party and its targeted audience.

Bill 205 will also require a third party whose political advertising expenditures exceed $1,000 in an election year to submit a financial report to the Chief Electoral Officer, which would then disclose all advertising spending. Furthermore, this report would identify the donors who contributed more than $375 to a party's election advertising account. Again, these measures would be similar to the rules governing political parties.

Ultimately, these steps will achieve greater clarity and accountability surrounding third-party advertising and provide the electorate with more information about who is financially supporting an idea. Mr. Speaker, we believe in transparency and accountability and in freedom of speech. These fundamental principles are clearly protected throughout Bill 205. This bill strikes the balance between enhancing democratic fundamentals while achieving a more equitable and level playing field for third-party political advertising during elections. I believe this bill will strengthen transparency and democracy for all Albertans, and I encourage all members here today to stand in support of Bill 205.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. This Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009, suffers from a similar circumstance to Janus on a two-faced Roman coin. On one side it talks about transparency, accountability, and freedom of speech, yet on the other side it talks about limitations.

The side of the bill I support is the notion of accountability and transparency in terms of where the funding is coming from, who the donors are, and the size of the donation. Unfortunately, this type of transparency and accountability is lacking from our own government in terms of how it conducts its own leadership races. The Premier, for example, has yet to disclose where $163,000 came from in terms of support, and the hon. minister of sustainable resources refuses to provide any information in terms of donors who supported his failed leadership bid. Therefore, the notion that this government is putting forward of transparency and accountability is at best questionable.

This government uses taxpayers' money through its Public Affairs Bureau with over 100 full-time employees to put out what can best be described on a regular basis as either pabulum or propaganda designed to support the Progressive Conservative Party, which is the governing party of this province. So the accountability and transparency that Bill 205 purports to promote in terms of transparency and accountability and freedom of speech in reality seeks to limit those opportunities, to limit them specifically during an election period to the sum of $30,000. During a nonelection period it wants to further limit it to $15,000.

Now, I would have no trouble with the clauses that talk about: where does the money come from and which organizations are behind it? It's very similar to the very limited offerings in our lobbyists registry, where basically a name is all you get and maybe a topic that was being discussed, but it doesn't seem to go beyond that. If we want to be truly transparent and accountable, then eliminating the fear that some third party because of its pockets is going to influence the outcome of an election is rather ludicrous.

We saw what happened in the last election, where negative advertising, although very expensive negative advertising, had at best a limited effect and probably actually resulted in some sympathy vote for the government because it appeared that the leader of the government was being singled out for attack in terms of sort of fading black-and-white advertising, voice-overs, and so on. Obviously, Albertans don't respond to negativity on a large scale. They're looking for solutions alternatives.

If the third-party advertising is talking about what needs to be done, what should be done, and how we as a province could improve our transparency and our accountability and utilize our freedom of speech to put forward alternatives and concerns, then I would suggest that I could support Bill 205, but in its current unfortunate, schizophrenic circumstance the government has to decide whether transparency and accountability trump freedom of speech or whether they're equally important. Mr. Speaker, I am hoping that members will realize that if you have a good product, as it seems has been the case for 38 years according to Alberta voters, you shouldn't be threatened by another party attempting to express an opposition point of view.

No campaign that I'm aware of these days can operate successfully under $30,000. That's an unfortunate situation that only individuals who are capable of raising beyond that amount are likely to have an opportunity to get elected. It narrows the possibility and rules out the democratic experience for a number of Albertans who have good ideas but, unfortunately, shallow pockets. This is just one more method for Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009, to limit the voice of third parties who may not agree with the direction the government is heading.

Premier Klein had a way of singling out individuals that he disagreed with. For example, he would throw members of Friends of Medicare in a lump with the Raging Grannies and any other group that opposed what his view of the right direction of the world was. It was hardly a subtle way of attempting to squash opposition, and I must admit, Mr. Speaker, that I proudly wore my left-wing nut pin that the Premier used to castigate and denounce anyone who didn't follow his far right agenda.

At least he was straightforward. What Bill 205 is doing is more of a subtle gag. It's not nearly as subtle as what happened with the superboard in terms of Dr. Duckett saying to all Alberta health care employees that they would not be allowed to blow the whistle. If they didn't like what was happening or if they didn't appreciate Dr. Duckett's comments, for example, on nurses apparently being the highest paid in Canada or taking inordinately lengthy coffee breaks, they were told basically to shut up.

Alberta has amongst its legislation a blockage of freedom of speech. Whistle-blower legislation is not only frowned upon; there's an attempt to extend that gag. That's exactly what Bill 205, Election

Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009, is doing. It talks about transparency and accountability. It talks about freedom of speech, but in fact it is attempting to limit freedom of speech. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, as I began, it's a two-faced bill, and I can only support one of the faces. Therefore, I'll have to vote against it.

3:10

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I was pleased moments ago to hear the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere move third reading of Bill 205, and I just have some comments to add.

I do want to thank this member for his work on this issue. It's one that's important to me as well, and this aspect of the election process that he has talked about, about adhering to ideals that we've come to associate with democracy – namely, fairness, equity, and honesty – is also quite important to me as well. Mr. Speaker, I do believe that through this legislation this member has helped not only to highlight the need for consistency across jurisdictions but also to shed light on the necessity of ensuring an equal and level playing field during elections.

Bill 205 also recognizes that we need to know certain things such as where and from whom our influences are coming. To this end, the purpose of this bill is to specify rules around third-party election advertising in the province, specifically related to contributions. Mr. Speaker, this is to be achieved in part by clarifying the definition of what constitutes political advertising. Within Bill 205 political advertising is defined as that which promotes or opposes registered political parties in the province or the election of candidates in the Alberta Legislature. This would also include any advertising that may be more issue specific, wherein voters are encouraged to vote for or to not vote for parties or particular individual candidates in a constituency that supports or opposes a particular cause or point of view. It may seem somewhat convoluted, but just follow with me here.

Establishing the core definitions is necessary to help determine what falls within the contribution rules to be established by Bill 205. One such rule, Mr. Speaker, includes the regulation of spending on political advertising by requiring that funds relating to that advertising operate through an established third-party election advertising account. Contributions to these accounts could be made by either the sponsor or by eligible donors, all of whom would be required to follow rules similar to those for registered political parties as found within the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act.

In this case eligible Alberta donors and third parties would include individuals, corporations, nonprofit groups, and trade unions. All around it's not a self-serving exercise, Mr. Speaker. However, they cannot be charitable organizations, nor can they be those with political affiliations such as a candidate, as every member of this Assembly has been, a constituency association, or a registered political party.

Mr. Speaker, some may suggest that these rules, if implemented, could limit or control the flow of information, ultimately restricting free speech. Now, this argument is based, I would submit to you, on the flawed premise that in order for society to have free speech, we must only have two choices: allowing all free speech or allowing no free speech at the same time, all speech at all times by all people. Fortunately, the choice isn't between allowing everything or nothing. It's about determining where the measured and appropriate boundaries do exist and where we want them to exist and what's in the best interest of our democracy in this province.

The simple fact is that we do place limits on freedom of speech and expression for many reasons, Mr. Speaker. One case is to limit cases of libel and slander, another is to eliminate the abuse of power, and another one is to ensure some measure, mode of decorum, professionalism, and good taste, which, of course, we have in this Assembly. Indeed, every society acknowledges that some limits need to be placed on free speech in order to achieve a balance between rights and responsibility. This is consistent with section 1 of our Charter. Whether it's in workplaces, public venues, or political debates, some limits in society are necessary to ensure that we balance appropriately the rights and freedoms with personal responsibility and, of course, good governance.

In the end we're always making assessments and judgments about how much to allow and how much to limit. Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, it is this common-sense approach that best serves this province, and it is the one that would help guide the implementation of Bill 205 and ensure a more measured mindset in political speech.

Besides, Mr. Speaker, the problem is not that there are too many restrictions or the kind of advertising that may actually take place but, rather, that sufficient rules do not exist to keep the playing field level. Without a level playing field advertising may allow certain political interests or agendas to monopolize the political dialogue, particularly during elections. In this way, far from being an attack on freedom of speech, Bill 205 would enhance it. How? By implementing a simple, fair, and transparent set of rules. Allowing them to donate and to support third parties that reflect their opinions and concerns allows for more direct voter participation from an individual basis. For the voter these rules help better identify who is trying to influence their vote through advertising. It also puts third parties on an equal footing with political parties, making advertising and rules more consistent across the board and preventing one third party from having an unfair advantage over another third party.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is also consistent with the example set by the Premier over the last few years. This Premier has brought in a lobbyist registry since he came in. This Premier also has brought in all-party committees. This is consistent with accountability that's been set from the top here.

Earlier, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transportation talked about ATVs. You may ask me: what do ATVs have to do with accountability? Well, the distinction that the Minister of Transportation issued was that ATVs are usually on private land whereas vehicles like the one I drive are usually on public land. Likewise, there also is a distinction in accountability. The distinction is that this would apply to public elections.

The previous speaker, the Member for Calgary-Varsity, talked about how this should also apply to private elections. I disagree. I don't feel that for the last leadership race that happened, the leader of the Wildrose Alliance Party should have to go and disclose her donations. Why? Because that's a private election. Neither should anyone who actually ran for a political party in this province. It's a clear distinction between public and private. Obviously, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona disagrees with me. Again, I'm quoting a Vue Weekly from October 22, 2009.

Again I say, Mr. Speaker, that there's a distinction between public and private elections. This deals with public accountability. A private election: it's none of my business what happens in another party, who contributes to another leadership candidate's coffers or war chest. That's how they run their own business. This is about public accountability.

I would ask, therefore, just in conclusion that we should be supporting Bill 205 to the fullest degree. I'm happy it has made it to third reading, and I look forward to the rest of the debate.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise in order to speak in a very cautious and limited way in favour of this bill, and that is because it is a bill which moves us in a very, very halting and substandard and inadequate way towards the right destination, which, unfortunately, is too far off in the distance to see, but at least we're going in that general direction. That is about ensuring and enhancing transparency and accountability when it comes to election financing and also structuring our election financing in a way where the value of an individual's dollar does not overtake the value of their vote, which, unfortunately, is a little bit of a question mark in Alberta at this point.

We are moving towards having third parties governed by the same legislation that governs the political parties and candidates in Alberta, and that's a good thing for all the reasons that proponents of the bill have identified. The difficulty, unfortunately, is that the rules in Alberta which govern political parties and candidates are themselves inadequate. We have in Alberta what I would suggest are the most freewheeling election financing laws in the country, and it creates a number of problems.

I'll start first by just mentioning one shortfall which the previous speaker ended his comments on, which is the failure of our election laws to require candidates, either for leadership or for nomination, to disclose the sources of their funding. I suggest that the argument is that these are private organizations, so why should we know how much they raise and from whom as they go about selecting their leader? That's an interesting argument. However, I would have loved to have seen them or members of the government use that argument during their leadership contest for the current Premier because I'm pretty sure they ran around telling people that if they wanted to have a say on who the Premier should be, they ought to buy a Tory membership and use that Tory membership to select the Premier. I'm quite sure that that was the exact language that people were subjected to.

3:20

You know, there was certainly some merit to that position, and that is why, of course, those same people who buy those memberships have a right to know who supports and funds different leadership campaigns. I find it interesting that to this date we have still not heard who financed the Premier's successful leadership campaign, nor have we heard about who financed the unsuccessful leadership bid of the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. I suspect we might find that there are some similarities between that donor list and those who financed the new leader of the Wildrose Alliance Party, but there again we don't know.

This is politics. This is politics, and I think that to the extent that you can open that up for people to see it, then that's what should happen. You know, I suggest that that should also be the case for people who run for nomination because, again, in many cases that nomination battle in some parts of the province ultimately amounts to the decision around who is going to be elected in that area. In my own nomination – very, very small scale, of course, compared to the huge dollars that the members opposite engage in – I made a commitment that all those who donated to my nomination would have their names disclosed to the public because we felt that that was an important part of the political process. When one particular donor asked that their name not be disclosed to the public, I simply sent the money back to that person. I would suggest that that is the approach that all members of this Assembly should take.

Now, with respect overall to the funding and the rules around funding elections in Alberta the bottom line is this: we have a very inadequate set of rules. We allow for a maximum of $30,000 in election time. We allow for a maximum of $15,000 in other years. Depending on who you're getting your money from, that can add up pretty quickly if people actually take advantage of those maximums.

It was interesting to me. Last Sunday I happened to be listening to the radio and heard an interesting political discussion on CKUA radio, and one of the people speaking there was the former Minister of Energy for this government, who is now a private citizen, Rick Orman. They were talking about the royalty rate issue, and they were talking about whether or not the apparent ascent of the Wildrose Alliance would result in yet even more cuts to the royalty rates enjoyed by oil companies in Alberta. The discussion was around whether there was a political desire for it on the part of the people of Alberta or not.

Interestingly – and I paraphrase here – one of the conclusions that Mr. Orman talked about was, well, whether it is or isn't something that the people of Alberta want. The political power base in this province is in Calgary because that's where the money to fund politics comes from. It comes from the oil industry. They fund politicians whether it's the Conservatives or the Wildrose Alliance or, to a lesser extent, the Liberal Party. This is what he said. He said: for that reason, we could expect to see more movement towards reducing royalty rates even more because that's what the political power brokers in Alberta want.

That, my friends, is what is wrong with election financing in Alberta, and I would suggest that in the long run what we need to do is have third parties subjected to election financing rules. But we should then adopt the election financing rules used by the federal government, used by the province of Quebec, used by the province of Manitoba, where donors are individuals. The end. Corporations don't get to donate. Unions don't get to donate. Voters get to donate. So voters remain the people who ultimately control the outcomes within our democratic system and are not, instead, the innocent observers on the sidelines.

It is for that reason that we will give reluctant support to this bill but with the very strong proviso that there is a tremendous need for the province to overhaul the election financing rules overall. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak in third reading to Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009. You know, when I see situations that develop such as the one that led to the impetus for this bill, I'm always really curious about what started that. Why did this whole situation create itself?

If I may hazard a little hypothesis here, I think there's an immense amount of voter and active citizen frustration out there with the political system that we have. People feel that they cannot influence the political parties. They cannot influence or move the party that has been in power for so many years in Alberta. They can get involved with other parties, but it doesn't help to sort of shift or move that monolith that's in place, so we end up with these splinter groups developing which are not political parties, but they may have come out of a special interest or they may have set themselves up as an alternative to the process.

We end up with groups like Public Interest Alberta, Parkland, Pembina. That right there is a mix of sort of very specific focuses,

Pembina, obviously, on environmental and natural resource issues. Then there's a whole other group in there that are the sort of traditional think tanks that tend to come out with a particular political bias like Canada West and the Fraser Institute, the centre for public policy, and a few other ones like that. I'm talking about the homegrown ones. I am talking about ones like the Greater Edmonton Alliance, Public Interest Alberta because I do see them as flowing from that active citizen frustration that they could not either get entry to or kind of move the system that they were in.

Interestingly, I think it has actually served to in some ways entrench the system that we're in because it certainly has syphoned money off of people who may have otherwise supported a political party, particularly political parties that were not the governing party. Those donations now tend to go to those groups, and of course they are active around election time. So these are the groups that now the attempt is being made to capture. Of course, we have the very famous one from the recent election, which was a coalition of various unions and trade associations and worker associations that were specifically trying to make a point about the last government.

Out of a particular set of circumstances we have citizens moving in a particular direction and creating a certain entity in order to explore something that suits them better than what we're currently offering them. That I take as a statement and an encouragement to work harder on how we're offering up our individual access points to political parties. Certainly, in a younger demographic it seems they're not very interested in joining political parties, and they say they never will be. It just doesn't work the way they want it to.

So who's going to be captured under this legislation? That's what we're looking at in third reading. What's the anticipated effect of this bill when it comes into place? Well, I wonder if the sponsor of the bill anticipated that it would likely capture groups, possibly, like Public Interest Alberta, where it would now be having to disclose its finances, but in fact it raises money for a number of other activities that it gets involved in. So how do we divide up that transparency? Do they have a right to say: well, we spent this amount of money during the election campaign or during the prescribed period, and that's what you may have access to and look at, but the rest of our activities have taken place over a number of years and have involved policy development and conventions and all kinds of other activities. They did a series of seniors' workshops, for example. You don't get access to that because it's not specifically directed to third-party advertising around an election campaign. I don't think that has been anticipated or explored by the sponsor of the bill, and I wonder if we have not created a rather large can of worms as a result of that.

3:30

The second thing for me that is a deciding factor in support or nonsupport of the bill is what I call the YISBYs, which is: yes, great idea, but not in my political party, or not in my backyard is another way of looking at it, so support for the general idea but not to apply to us, thank you very much. And here we have it. In fact, it was illustrated by a couple of the speakers supporting the bill. Great idea; love transparency; everybody should have to admit to this, well, except not for leadership campaigns and not for nominations. That is where you create the problem. As soon as you start to have exceptions to transparency, you create that problem.

There are some people that do not have to admit to this now – there's a curtain they can stand behind; there's a half-open door that they are looking through or that we can look through – and that's where the problems are created. So it is that sort of YISBY. I have to, I think, give credit to someone else for coining that particular term. I won't name them at this point, but it's not me, so I can't take the credit for it.

But that to me is the problem with what's anticipated here. If we had said, "Yes, we're going to throw this open, and we are going to deal with everybody that gets involved in third-party advertising in an election campaign," and had a really clear and fairly wide-reaching definition around that but also around the rest of the political process – if we're going to talk about it, then let's do it.

It should be around nominations. It should be, in particular, around leadership. Where do we have a dividing line there? Well, I would argue that there shouldn't be one. You know, here we had the Wildrose Alliance. Well, they refused to give us, to make public, who donated to their leadership campaign or supported any given leadership candidate. But we had exactly the same thing when we had a leadership campaign in the governing party, and indeed that was what people were being approached with: you, too, can buy a membership and vote for your choice of the next Premier.

That's exactly what they were selling, and I was horrified at the time that people that I knew and loved in the community could be enticed to buy a membership in a political party that they told me they did not support – why? – because they were going to get to vote for their choice of the next Premier. That entire contest is not covered under what this legislation would cover, and that to me is the fatal flaw in the bill because as soon as you start to create those YISBY moments – yes but not in my political party – that's where the problem starts. People fail to be convinced that there's credibility in the process when they can see immediately that well-publicized and well-known opportunities to hide behind that curtain or hide behind that door out in the hallway are within recent memory. So I appreciate what the member was trying to do in throwing open that transparency; I think he's failed to do it.

I have been fortunate to attend twice the COGEL conferences, which are the Council on Governmental Ethics Laws, and they have been great opportunities for me, and I've learned a lot. I went to one a long time ago in Texas and more recently to one in Chicago, and both times I was really struck by what happens in the U.S., where there are no spending limits, but the trick is that everybody has to fess up.

Even in that system they have people that go to great lengths not to be seen donating the money. So they donate it through the names of their children, and companies donate it through the names of their executives who they give bonuses to – I'm moving my fingers in little air quotation marks there – with the expectation and the directive that those bonuses are funneled through to a political party. So even in a system where there are no limits – anybody can donate any amount of money, but you must fess up to it; you must put your name on it – there is a certain reluctance to have your name attached to a political donation, to be seen supporting a particular candidate. I think that even if we got this far, it still wouldn't solve the problem.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak to Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. By clearly defining the parameters around third-party spending on election advertising, the proposed legislation would help level the political playing field. Indeed, Bill 205 recognizes the importance of political advertising and seeks to ensure that all Albertans, be they third-party sponsors or eligible donors, are more fully aware of the range of views that their donations may support. This helps safeguard free speech for Albertans and limits the ability of individual interests alone to direct a political dialogue and perhaps outcomes. At the same time, it enhances the ability of third parties to bring more ideas to the forefront, whereas in the past they may have been unable to do so.

To achieve this, Bill 205 would put in place a number of guidelines helping to bring a greater degree of structure to election advertising as well as a greater transparency over sponsorship. Third parties would be required to register an election advertising account and could only maintain one of these at a time. Furthermore, if they spend more than a thousand dollars on election advertising, third parties are required to disclose this spending to the Chief Electoral Officer. They must also disclose the identity of those eligible donors which contributed more than $375. An eligible donor would include Alberta residents as well as nonprofit and not-for-profit organizations and corporations, provided they conduct their activities within the province, as well as trade unions.

Mr. Speaker, the proposed legislation would also bring greater consistency and continuity to election laws in Alberta, an important element that helps the legislation integrate more easily into the rules and regulations that currently exist by specifying who can contribute to these accounts. For example, Bill 205 would bring third parties under similar contribution and disclosure requirements that political parties in Alberta must adhere to.

The bill would also limit the amount that donors may contribute, again, similar to political parties. Eligible donors would have their contributions to election advertising accounts capped at $15,000 per year and up to a maximum of $30,000 during a campaign period. But, Mr. Speaker, it's important to point out that while there's a limit on how much each donor may contribute to third-party accounts, Bill 205 does not limit the amount that a third party can spend on political advertising. Doing so would place an unnecessary boundary on the actions of third parties and inhibit free speech.

In addition, limiting the amount that may be spent on election advertising implies that the greater amount that one spends, the more likely it is that their ideas will be supported. However, this is less often the case. Greater wealth does not necessarily equate to more worthwhile political ideas. Instead, it's allowing discussion to take place, and the exercise of free speech allows the ideas to develop. Besides, in cases where a third party may have done an exemplary job of raising funds from a great number of individual donors, even to their individual maximums, they should be entitled to spend these funds as they see fit.

In this way Bill 205 is more targeted, addressing and resolving only those gaps and inconsistencies that exist in the current legislation that need to be corrected. As the saying goes, it's not trying to reinvent the wheel. In fact, I find this to be one of the selling points, Mr. Speaker. This is because there's a role to be played by third parties in the political process and the opportunity that election advertising can play in the exercise of free speech.

For one thing, it helps voters in their ability to make an informed choice. Election advertising allows third parties to contribute to the election dialogue by providing other points of view on election issues or on a candidate's platform. This allows the voter to consider issues in greater depth, and the ensuing discussion helps to clarify aspects of an election platform, allowing voters to look at issues that they may not have considered. Oftentimes third-party advocates may be more informed on the intricacies and substances of more complex issues. They can therefore ask more direct questions, challenging election candidates to deepen their positions. In the end, helping voters to become more informed allows them to be more confident that their choice most closely reflects their sensibilities.

3:40

This also strikes at the heart of something deeper; namely, the rights of citizens, either as individuals or within associations, to have the freedom to discuss with each other the issues that they believe matter most. While there are certainly other methods such as public forums, it is most often through mass communication avenues that we convey many of these ideas. Particularly in the modern age, when electronic communication is overtaking print, the ability of third parties to use political advertising is key to conveying political critique and fostering a continuing dialogue. Although face-to-face discussions on political issues still exist, we're not always able to have these dialogues in person and with as diverse an audience as we may like. Therefore, we often rely on political advertising and the ideas promoted by third parties to bring matters of public interest forward to ensure that the concerns of all Albertans are raised and answered, Mr. Speaker, particularly during elections, when this often matters the most.

Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, the extent to which we respect the plurality of ideas and support freedom of speech on political discussion signals our respect for democracy, which is fundamentally based on these concepts. Therefore, I would support Bill 205, and I encourage all members of the House to do so as well.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to participate in the debate on Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009. I would like to commend the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere for bringing forth this bill. Currently third parties in Alberta are not subject to any rules regarding their conduct with respect to election advertising. Bill 205 would establish rules to create legislative definitions of third parties and election advertising. Further, it would establish a process that these bodies would have to lawfully follow when conducting election advertising in Alberta.

By establishing a process, Bill 205 is designed to support third parties in their election advertising endeavors while enhancing the transparency of communications during the election period. This would ensure a greater consistency of transparency-related rules across all politically motivated bodies in our province. Mr. Speaker, currently political parties and candidates must follow a comprehensive process that guides the collection and disclosure of their finances. They use these finances to fuel their campaigns and opinions, to communicate their messages to the public.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Despite the fact that third parties do not have political candidates who are running for office, they too are political bodies, and like political parties, they also seek to inform the public of certain issues or promote or oppose a certain platform or candidate. Mr. Speaker, it would therefore make sense that they should follow a similar process in terms of the acquisition of funds as well as disclosure of contributions and expenses made for election advertising. Bill 205 seeks to accomplish this.

Under Bill 205 an individual or entity that wishes to run an election advertising campaign that promoted or opposed a particular candidate or political party either directly or indirectly would be known as a third-party sponsor. Their advertising would be known as third-party election advertising, and all funds used to fuel any political advertising would have to be paid out of a third-party advertising account, which would be registered to the third-party sponsor.

In addition, any and all third-party election advertising accounts would have to be registered with the Chief Electoral Officer. Third-party sponsors would have to submit financial statements, including disclosure of contributions and expenditures from this third-party election advertising account, to the Chief Electoral Officer for examination and public disclosure.

Bill 205 would also establish a process for the collection of funds placed into a third-party election advertising account. Under Bill 205 donations would be limited by source and amount. For example, Mr. Speaker, to contribute any money to an election advertising account, the contributor would have to satisfy the rules of being an eligible donor. This entails that individual donors would have to be residents of Alberta. Organizations that are eligible donors would be trade unions, registered not-for-profit organizations, or corporations so long as they hold an office and carry a business in Alberta. All of these elements of Bill 205 set out to establish a clear, defined, and transparent process for third parties to follow when engaging in political advertising. This process would aid third parties in organizing their activities.

Mr. Speaker, in light of Bill 205 I believe it is important to examine the process of third-party election advertising on the federal level to see its success in enabling, not inhibiting, third parties in the political system. In the year 2000 the federal government in passing Bill C-2 established a newly defined process for third parties to advertise during political campaigns. The new process requires third parties to register with the Chief Electoral Officer during an election and places a spending limit of $150,000 on political advertising per third party per election.

I believe this process assists third parties in their political advertising endeavours. This belief is based on the fact that since the federal legislation was enacted and a clear process for third-party advertising was defined, there has been an increase with every election in the total number of third parties that have registered. For example, in the November 2000 federal election, shortly after the enactment of this legislation, a total of 48 third parties registered with Elections Canada. In the election held in June 2004 there were 63 third parties that registered. In the election held in January 2006 there were 80 third parties that registered. Mr. Speaker, the fact that more third parties registered with the Chief Electoral Officer is indicative that establishing a clear process is facilitative for third parties.

In addition to an increase in third parties registered across these three elections, there has been an increase in the amount of money spent on political advertising. In 2000 there was just over $675,000 spent collectively. In 2004 the number jumped to over $710,000. In the 2006 election the total amount spent on third-party election advertising was well over a million dollars.

Mr. Speaker, these trends suggest that a definite process would further enable third parties rather than inhibit them. Ultimately, Bill 205 would establish a clear process to facilitate third parties in coordinating funding and running advertising campaigns during an election. Furthermore, because under Bill 205 a third party would follow similar rules as political parties, they would adhere to a greater level of transparency and accountability.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I stand before the Assembly in support of Bill 205. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to participate in the debate on Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009. Bill 205 works to establish definitions of third-party sponsors and to legislate guidelines for these groups to raise funds and run election advertising campaigns. Currently there are no formal definitions or rules that third parties must adhere to when engaging in political advertising during provincial elections.

Bill 205 would change this by establishing a clearly defined, fair, and transparent process. For example, Mr. Speaker, it would define political advertising as advertising that either directly or indirectly promotes or opposes the election of a political party or candidate to the Alberta Legislature. It would require third parties to identify themselves on all advertising and promotional material.

3:50

Further, Bill 205 would ensure that funds used to run an election advertising campaign originated from a third-party advertising account. In this way all third-party spending used for advertising would be required to originate from the advertising fund. Fundraising would also be regulated in that only eligible donors could contribute to this fund. This would mean that only Alberta residents, registered corporations, nonprofit organizations, and trade unions that hold bargaining rights for employees in Alberta could make contributions to the third-party advertising account.

Under Bill 205 donors would be required to adhere to similar contributions and disclosure rules as those that govern political parties. That would entail that eligible donors could contribute as much as $15,000 to a third-party advertising account in a given year and a maximum of $30,000 to aggregate to a third-party advertising account.

Mr. Speaker, time has run out, but I will let my hon. colleague know that I support third reading. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I hesitate to interrupt, but Standing Order 8(7)(a)(iii) provides up to five minutes for the sponsor of the bill to close the debate. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased today to move third reading of Bill 205 and would like to thank all members for their contribution to the third reading debate on this bill. This bill sets these parameters in a way that levels the playing field for third parties while at the same time advancing free speech and the rights of people to express their views during an election period. This is important to me and my colleagues, who believe strongly in the advancement of free speech.

Again, I would like to thank all the members who have participated throughout this Bill 205 debate, and I would encourage all members to support this important bill. With that, I close debate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 205 read a third time]

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 206 School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It's my pleasure to begin committee stage for Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. I want to start by thanking my colleagues for their input during second reading. Their comments were very helpful to me as I moved forward with this bill. I've had feedback from some of my colleagues and from some other stakeholders about the intent of this legislation, and I want to make one thing very clear. This bill is about protecting students and staff in our schools; it's not about usurping the power of the school boards or the principals or the teachers. The students who are bullied frequently live in a constant state of torment. This bill aims to protect them.

As I mentioned during second reading, I've done a lot of work with stakeholders to make sure I got this bill right. I've talked with parents, I've talked with police, I've talked with principals, and I've also talked with the Alberta Teachers' Association. The ATA expressed some concerns that section 5 of Bill 206 could take away the power of principals to suspend students whose conduct is detrimental to school safety. This was completely inadvertent and not consistent with the bill's intent. I fully appreciate that suspending a student is sometimes necessary.

To ensure that there is no conflict between the intent of this bill and its provisions, Mr. Chairman, I would like to table an amendment to Bill 206. This amendment deals with section 5 of the bill, which impacts section 24 of the School Act.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, we'll pause while the amendment is being passed out. This will be amendment A1.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This amendment proposes to strike out section 5 of the bill and substitute the following. Section 24 is amended (a) in subsection (1) under (i) in clause (a) by striking out "section 12, or" and substituting "section 12, 12.1 or 12.2," and under (ii) by adding the following after clause (a): "(a.1) the student has failed to participate in an educational measures program, as directed under section 23.1, or"; and (b) in subsection (7) by striking out "section 12" and substituting "section 12, 12.1 or 12.2".

With this issue cleared up, I'd like to make a couple of points about Bill 206. Some have asked if I would include more provisions to define certain behaviours as illegal. I've been asked if I would include a specific section on hazing or to protect those who are bullied because their family is poor. There certainly is some merit to this position. At the same time, defining behaviours too narrowly leaves room for the offender to argue that their behaviour is not covered under the act. I don't think anyone wants to get into that kind of debate. The bill in its current form will outlaw all behaviours which harass or intimidate other students.

The provision in this bill which deals with bullying has sparked a lot of interest. My phone has rung off the hook with people asking questions and offering feedback. This is very positive, Mr. Chairman. It's high time that we have this discussion.

There is another part of the bill, though, that I want to highlight. Bill 206 would make it illegal to have drugs, drug paraphernalia, or weapons in our schools. Period. No more wrangling about the student's intent or whether that billy club was really going to be used to harm another student. It would be illegal to have these things, and the bill would give our police officers and school staff the ability to deal with it.

It's also going to tackle the problem of cyberbullying head-on. We know that being bullied on Facebook or your cellphone or Twitter or any one of the myriad of other technologies out there can turn a student's life into a living hell. Mr. Chair, sticks and stones will break my bones, but words will never hurt me. Or will they? Ugly. Faggot. Slut. Fatso. I hate you. You are sad and disgusting, and you will never amount to anything.

Mr. Chair, I just finished a book, which was given to me by a mom whose son was tormented. He eventually took his own life. This book is about other kids who were bullied in school and ended up committing suicide. The name-calling was the start of many more things to come.

Mr. Chair, Bill 206 is a positive trend for our schools, and I'm asking my colleagues to assist in helping me pass Bill 206. Thank you.

4:00

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, are you ready for the question on the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, may we interrupt for a moment to have Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek mentioned a book that was given to her by a very concerned parent, and if I'm correct, that book is Bullycide. It talks about children who were driven to suicide. Today in this House we have with us the lady who provided the hon. member with that book. Mrs. Betty Wedman, if you wouldn't mind standing up. Betty knows all too well the importance of this particular bill and prevention. Can we give Betty recognition and a round of applause for being here.

Bill 206

School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers)

Amendment Act, 2009

(continued)

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the bill as amended.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. Speaking to the bill as amended, in order to be successful, the bill has to have two things behind it. One is funding, and the other is teeth, or strong language, in order to make sure that the honourable intentions of the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek can be realized.

Now, as part of the parliamentary procedures we realize that private members' bills cannot ask specifically for funding. For this bill to be successful, there has to be funding to develop curriculum programs for use throughout Alberta schools. There has to be funding for in-services for teachers who are currently teaching, including principals, administrators, so that they can recognize bullying in all its aspects. There has to also be funding for curriculum development at the university level for students entering the Education faculty. This is absolutely essential for this to happen, and hopefully it will follow in order to make Bill 206 the success that both the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek and I would like to see happen.

I would like to also talk about successful programs that have been piloted in this province. I'd like to share with the members a letter that I received from a lady by the name of Lisa Dixon-Wells. She's the founder of a nationally recognized bully prevention program called Dare To Care. Dare To Care, thanks to funding from EnCana, has operated in a number of schools throughout Alberta and has raised the profile of the importance of being proactive in preventing bullying.

I'd like to share with the members some of the concerns that Lisa Dixon-Wells brought up. She says:

I read with great interest, the article in the Calgary Herald on Sept 20th.

That article was written by Sarah McGinnis, an education writer with the Herald, on the subject of Bill 206.

The provincial legislators are looking to implement a plan that will mandate that schools report all bullying and weapons-related incidents to Alberta Education annually (Bill 206). This letter is to support your stand that the Bill itself will do very little to reduce or even address the horrible stories of bullying and violence in our schools. Through years of experience working in schools around this province, I absolutely agree that the only solution is to implement a comprehensive and proven bully prevention program in all schools in Alberta. If everyone would start speaking the same language around bullying, start defining bullying consistently and correctly, and if everyone had the tools to recognize the problem early and intervene effectively, then, and only then, will we start making significant progress in helping the 15% of students in every school that are the vicious targets of daily physical and emotional assaults.

And that 15 per cent, Mr. Chair, is just the extremes of bullying. Lisa Dixon-Wells goes on to say:

It is my strong belief that a school can have the most committed staff, the most solid discipline policy, and the most supportive parent community available to them, but if the school fails to mobilize the students themselves nothing is going to change. Only 4% of bullying is ever reported by students so a Bill alone will not change the pervasive, hidden nature of bullying. Almost 80% of every school community is made up of a silent majority of students. These students are the eyes and ears of our schools. They know what's going on in the locker rooms, the bus, the gym and the hallways. These are very caring students who are very capable of dealing with normal, day to day conflict. But when it escalates into bullying, these students become almost debilitated . . . much like adults in the community. They are fearful of making the situation worse, fearful of retaliation, fearful of being seen as a "rat", and fearful that adults will not take it seriously. Bill 206 is going to do nothing to dispel this fear. Education and support will.

Now, Mr. Chair, I would like to talk about the second part of my consideration, beyond the funding that is necessary to implement a successful bullying program for children, for their teachers, and for curriculum instruction. In order to do that, I have an amendment that I would like to have distributed, and when that has been done, I'll talk about the need for strong language.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we'll pause while this amendment is distributed.

Hon. members, we will call this amendment A2. I'd ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to continue, please.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. As I pointed out in speaking to the previously amended Bill 206, we don't have the option as private members to lay out the types of funding that we believe would be necessary to accomplish the ends of the legislation that we are putting forward. What we can, however, do is strengthen the wording, provide a degree of teeth to the legislation. We can change may to musts in order to ensure that the action actually takes place, and that is the gist of amendment A2, that the members have before them.

4:10

The amendment states that Mr. Chase is to move that Bill 206, School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, be amended in section 4 by striking out the proposed section 23.1(3) and (4) and substituting the following.

Now, if hon. members wish to follow along with the original bill, I'd just like to highlight some key changes. Section (3) remains basically as it was indicated with the exception that if the principal believes on reasonable and probable grounds that a student may have contravened section 12.1 or 12.2, the principal . . .

And here's a key word: must. Members, you might want to circle that key word because it's at the heart of our discussions. "The principal must." It allows the principal discretion on whether or not he believes bullying has occurred, but once he has recognized the fact that the bullying has occurred, then there is a compulsion on the part of the principal to do something about it.

The rest of the wording continues, but instead of the principal "may meet and consult," it says that the principal must meet and consult with the student and the student's parent and, if a peace officer has been consulted under subsection (2), that peace officer.

So the key part of (3) is changing "may" to "must."

In section (4), similarly, the idea of may is turned into must.

If the peace officer after having been consulted under subsection (3) believes on reasonable and probable grounds that a student has contravened section 12.1 or 12.2, the principal and the peace officer must.

That's the difference. Instead of may, it's must. It's a requirement that action be taken.

Now, going beyond the may to musts is (4.1), where it says: "Where the peace officer and principal deem it appropriate." In other words, the decision is still being left in the principal's hands as the administrator of how many thousands or, in a small elementary school, hundreds of children. So the principal still has that option of taking appropriate action. It's not binding the principal in this case to take appropriate action, but it says:

Where the peace officer and principal deem it appropriate, other persons belonging to the school community may be directed to participate in an educational measures program under subsection (4).

There is not just simply an aggressor in a bullying situation. There are also all the children that that bully has impacted the lives of. So simply developing a program for the bully as though it were a singular inoculation and not dealing with bullying as a major disease, so to speak, that not only affects the bully but the victims of the bully – and after the fact every other child and every other teacher in that school needs to be brought into the creation of the solution. Unless that happens, then we're dealing with one-offs, one bully at a time, and that is an incoherent attempt.

In putting forward amendment A2, the key factors I pointed out are the musts and the (4.1) section. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek on amendment A2.

Mrs. Forsyth: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chair. I've listened to the hon. member very intently, and quite frankly I'm not opposed to changing it from "may" to "must." He made some valid points, so I am prepared to accept his amendments.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak on amendment A2?

Hearing none, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

The Deputy Chair: Back to the bill as amended.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I very much appreciate the collaborative process that has just been demonstrated in this House. We're doing what we've been elected to do, and that's to put forward legislation that is going to improve the lives of Albertans, in this case Alberta children. Mrs. Wedman is here today to see that what happened to her son Alex is not repeated. That is the intention of the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, and that is what we all have to be directed toward accomplishing, the well-being of children.

As I pointed out in arguing amendment A2, it's not just the bully whose attitude has to be changed, but it's the climate of fear that surrounds the school, that ripples out from that bullying. We have to address the factors that turned the bully into the bully, that continue to make victims of everyone who stands by and does nothing to intervene to prevent bullying from happening. That is why I support the hon. member's intent, and I am hoping that a government bill that has the funding requirements necessary to make Bill 206 realized will follow in subsequent legislation.

I thank the hon. members of this House for collaboratively working together to improve the bill through the discussion process, through the amendment process. I would suggest that democracy is alive and well and operating in this House at this time.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to rise today and join in the discussion in committee stage on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. I believe that establishing definitions for what constitutes banned items and bullying would enhance the foundation for effective conflict resolution and ensure a safe learning environment for both students and teachers. In light of this, I'd like to speak to section 2 subsection (1.1). This section states that bullying includes all actions outlined in clause (b.1) which are conducted through electronic media. In turn, subsection (ii)(b.1) of Bill 206 defines what constitutes bullying. It states that bullying includes written abuse directed at an individual and threats of physical and sexual assault on an individual.

Mr. Chairman, due to the prevalence and popularity of electronic media outlets, bullying can now be conducted without face-to-face interaction both on and off the school grounds. Electronic media sources include text messaging, instant messaging, e-mail, and websites such as Facebook, Twitter, and MySpace. Text messaging along with websites such as Facebook, MySpace, and Twitter have provided students with the opportunity to share information and network with friends.

The speed at which information travels through the Internet and cellphones is an attractive feature to users; however, these electronic media outlets can have serious drawbacks when students use them to intimidate and bully fellow classmates. The issue of electronic bullying affects students of all ages, from elementary school to postsecondary and continuing education programs. Bullying through electronic media sources has an equally damaging effect on students' academic lives, social lives along with the students' mental and physical health. The legislation is clear that bullying in the forms described is equally as intolerable when issued over the Internet or through cellular phones.

Mr. Chairman, we're all well aware that bullying takes place in our schools, and we know the emotional and physical distress it causes its victims. In fact, we've witnessed the tragic effects that bullying can have on students. Delivery of threatening or abusive messages through electronic media sources is no exception. Students subjected to these threats and abuse may fear entering the school just like students who are subject to more conventional bullying.

Furthermore, electronic media can be used not only for students to bully or threaten fellow classmates but also to humiliate the individual on a public stage. An example of this is the numerous social media outlets that allow users to post status updates on their personal page and post comments on their other friends' pages. When these updates and comments are threats or demeaning remarks directed at a particular individual, all the user's friends have the opportunity to view the exchange. This type of repetitive harassment, which works to maintain an imbalance of power over another student, is unacceptable. This behaviour cannot be tolerated through electronic media sources inside or outside the school walls.

A student's time outside of school should generally consist of leisure activities, homework, and time spent with family and friends. These activities coupled with the student's time in the classroom provide the basis for a healthy social relationship both at school and at home. Many students who are bullied see their home as a refuge from the harassment they encounter while at school. However, now with the use of cellphones and computers verbal abuse and threats can be issued at any time.

4:20

Bill 206 recognizes that electronic media sources can be used to foster a culture of fear and intimidation by stating: "bullying includes any of the actions outlined in clause (b.1) that are conducted through electronic media." Section 2 subsection (1.1) ensures that Bill 206 is inclusive of bullying that occurs through these harmful mechanisms.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that under certain circumstances it is important to change our approach. Bill 206 acknowledges how conventional bullying has evolved and how important it is to be inclusive of electronic media within our legislation. This approach will continue to protect the teachers and students in Alberta from harassment and bullying. It's true that preventing bullying inside school walls is necessary to ensure that students can achieve their full academic potential.

Alberta schools should be a place where both students and teachers feel safe and comfortable, a place of learning and healthy social interactions. Mr. Chairman, section 2 subsection (1.1) enhances our ability to effectively achieve this environment. This is the basis for future academic pursuits and career ambitions, therefore creating a comprehensive approach to protect individuals from bullying that's crucial to the development and success of our students.

Mr. Chairman, just to draw a parallel, numerous electronic media outlets provide a forum that is similar to a school assembly. We would not tolerate a student being verbally abused in front of the entire school while other students watched. This is why the inclusion of an electronic media clause is so important. Our students cannot be expected to perform at their peak if they fear physical assault or have been repeatedly slandered and demeaned regardless of how the comments are issued.

Countless studies on electronic bullying have concluded similar negative effects on students as the bullying that occurs in the schoolyard or the classrooms. The prevalence of electronic media has transformed the issue of bullying beyond a simple schoolyard issue. By focusing on electronic media sources in addition to bullying inside our schools, we take a comprehensive approach to a very serious problem.

I believe that Bill 206 is a step forward in eliminating bullying and intimidation in our schools and in further promoting a safe learning environment for both students and teachers. That being said, I urge all members to vote in favour of Bill 206 at this stage.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to get up and speak again to this bill in committee stage. This bill obviously has a very, very worthwhile intent to it. When I spoke to this bill – I think it was in the spring – in second reading, I outlined my concerns with how it was perhaps a little bit incongruent with decisions made by this Assembly with respect to Bill 44. But separate and apart from that issue, I would like to talk about the rest of the bill and what it's attempting to do.

I think there are some good elements to the bill in terms of dealing with the problem that I think exists in almost every school, probably, across the province. One of the things that I do like about the bill is sort of the notion of setting out a clear process of response and setting out some mechanisms of accountability in terms of how bullying is identified as well as how it's responded to once it's raised by the student or friends of the student or parents or whomever.

Certainly, in that sense it's very good because as things stand now, I have to say that there's not really a consistent response in many of our schools. It's often subject to the discretion of teachers and principals, and while there's something to be said for that, the fact of the matter is that from the perspective of students and from the perspective of parents they need to know what the process is, and they need to know what they can expect to have happen and what they should be able to ask their teacher or principal to deal with. The reality is that there is inconsistency on the part of teachers and on the part of principals in terms of their relative skills in dealing with these kinds of issues when they arise.

I'm not, as I think I said before, a huge fan of the role of the peace officer in this particular legislation although, again, I do understand that it's trying to raise the level of seriousness that is directed towards the assessment of the activities or the behaviour in question. I appreciate the value of that. Again, I think that when you get into issues of trying to change behaviour, the punitive aspects of changing that behaviour, ultimately you're almost at the last. You're at the end of the line on that at that point if you have to start engaging in punitive action because that's probably your least effective mechanism of changing behaviour, in changing the culture within the school setting. I understand that it was not the intent to take away a teacher's or a principal's ability to suspend a student. I'm sorry if I missed if that was part of the amendments that were put into place. I'm going to assume that they were – I'm not sure – and then I'll check before I go forward to vote on this.

The other point that I'd like to make with respect to all of this, though, which I think is really important for all of us as members of the Assembly who are working on this problem to consider, goes back to the point that I was making about how if you're at a point when you're engaging in punitive actions and you're taking someone out of the school or you're bringing in a peace officer, in many respects you're at the end of the process. You're not likely to get a change in behaviour from the bullying student, nor, frankly, are you very likely to make a fundamental change to the culture within that school setting.

Most people who engage in behaviour modification strategies with children at risk know that the better mechanism for changing behaviour is through basically changing the behaviour when the child is motivated to do it simply by offering them other alternatives and other options rather than through punitive options. For instance, the fact of the matter is that you can find relatively simple mechanisms to change the dynamic on the school ground so as to negate the potential of bullying. So rather than having 15 kids go run to a part of the school ground that's not supervised, where it's partially hidden from supervision, you actually have more staff time dedicated to organized activities, to intramurals, to staff on the playground who can intervene and actually establish more positive behaviour by all the students on the playground by organizing activities or whatever.

What this links into, of course, is the fact that many of our schools are suffering from a shortage of staffing, and much of that work right now on the playground is being done by volunteers, usually by parents and relatives of children. They are the ones that are on the school ground, often, trying to manage the behaviour of students. They either do it on a volunteer basis or on an honorarium basis, which works out to much less than hourly wages. These are the people that our system has essentially invited to engage in this behaviour management. Now, obviously, the better approach would be for there to be trained staff there on the playground, in the gyms, in the lunchrooms, behind the bushes, wherever, ensuring that negative behaviours don't ever start, and part of the reason that doesn't happen is because there simply isn't the capacity in the school system.

4:30

In one sense this bill goes towards this broader issue; you know, do you simply put all your efforts into punitive actions, or do you try and prevent the crime from happening in advance by providing the kinds of supports that would negate it or discourage it from happening? I'm not saying that my solution is the only solution, and I'm not saying that there aren't elements of this bill which are worth while because there are.

What I'm saying is that it's not the only answer and that if you are going to control the playground and control the school grounds and control those places where bullying occurs, you need to have the resources to do it. If you can do it there and build productive, positive, mature relationships amongst and between your students, you're less likely to have bullying in that setting as well as off the school grounds through cyberbullying, through people walking home, whichever. It really comes down to whether you're going to invest in the resources and the supports to really try to reduce and limit incidents of that sort.

At this point those are the primary observations that I'd like to make on this bill. I will review it in more detail before we get to third reading to assess the implications of the amendments that were made earlier this afternoon.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's an honour to rise today and join debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by my colleague the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. This debate is particularly timely in view of the fact that this is National Bullying Awareness Week. This legislation will provide a novel mechanism to deal with acts of intimidation or bullying in Alberta schools. Furthermore, it will prohibit the possession of weapons and drug paraphernalia on school grounds.

Currently, Mr. Chairman, section 24(1) of the School Act provides a teacher or principal with the authority to suspend a student if their conduct is injurious to the physical or mental well-being of others in the school. Bill 206 will enhance this provision by mandating all schools to address and document all incidents that involve bullying or possession of any drug paraphernalia, tool, or device that may inflict harm on others. This will ensure that all circumstances of bullying and possession of weapons are acknowledged and dealt with.

Mr. Chairman, it is important to understand what may be deemed a weapon or drug paraphernalia under Bill 206. To this end I would like to draw the attention of the Assembly to section 2, provision (a.1). That section defines a banned item as “a weapon as defined in the Criminal Code” of Canada or “a controlled substance and offence-related property as defined in the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act,” again of Canada, and “any item listed in the regulations as a banned item for the purposes of this Act.” Essentially, section 2, provision (a.1), speaks to banned items, including weapons and controlled substances, that under Bill 206 will be prohibited from schools.

Mr. Chairman, Bill 206 refers to Canada’s Criminal Code for the definition of a weapon. The Criminal Code states that a weapon consists of

- any thing used, designed to be used or intended for use
 - (a) in causing death or injury to any person, or
 - (b) for the purpose of threatening or intimidating any person
- and, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, includes a firearm.

This means that any object used by one student against another student to inflict or threaten harm against a fellow student would constitute a weapon.

Such items could include the use of common school or personal property such as scissors. Furthermore, it could include items we traditionally associate with being weapons such as knives or, in a worst-case scenario, a firearm. Through preventative measures Bill 206 hopes to avoid circumstances where the weapons are used to harm other students. By effectively confronting bullying when it occurs and leaving no doubt that it is unacceptable behaviour, students may be encouraged to cease and desist from carrying on in these objectionable actions.

Mr. Chairman, as mentioned earlier, Bill 206 also prohibits drug paraphernalia on school property. To this end it defines such banned items as a controlled substance and offence-related property as defined in the controlled substances act of Canada. The prohibited substances outlined under the controlled substances act are too numerous to name in this speech. However, a few include cannabis, amphetamines, and methamphetamines.

Furthermore, offence-related property means, with the exception of a controlled substance,

- any property, within or outside Canada,
 - (a) by means of or in respect of which a designated substance offence is committed,
 - (b) that is used in any manner in connection with the commission of a designated substance offence, or
 - (c) that is intended for use for the purpose of committing a designated substance offence.

These provisions clarify what constitutes offence-related property when substance-related offences are committed. When such an offence is committed, these definitions provide important clarity for all parties who may be involved, including students, teachers, parents, and the police. Ultimately, Mr. Chairman, the clarity provided by these provisions will ensure the effectiveness of this legislation. Bill 206 reaffirms the fundamental value that we share as Albertans that weapons and drugs have no place on school property and that every child deserves a safe, world-class education.

I believe that the provisions I have described today, which clarify what constitutes a weapon as well as controlled substances and offence-related property, are key elements to this legislation. Mr. Chairman, there is simply no place for weapons on school property. The physical and emotional harm that they are capable of need not take place, in fact must not take place. That is why Bill 206 unequivocally states that regardless of intent the mere possession of these weapons is unacceptable and constitutes a serious offence.

For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, every instance of weapons possession must be documented, and police intervention may be called for when dealing with a student who commits such an offence. This intervention would take the form of meeting with the offending student, the parent or guardian, and school administration to discuss appropriate consequences and the next steps for the student. In addition, police would have the authority to lay a mandatory court summons, or they could provide recommendations to courts that would be appropriate for the offender. I believe that these measures offer a constructive alternative or perhaps complement a suspension when addressing serious offences, thereby helping to prevent future instances and the escalation of these activities in our schools.

Bill 206 will help to provide greater safety for all of our children in schools across Alberta; therefore, I would like to throw my enthusiastic support behind this well-intentioned and constructive piece of legislation. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It’s a great honour and a pleasure to speak in favour of Bill 206, sponsored by the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. I’d like to thank the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing in an amendment to strike out section 5 and to amend it. I’d also like to thank her for accepting an amendment from my colleague the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

I want to congratulate the member for bringing in this bill because bullying has no borders. The last time I spoke, I said, you know, that I was a victim of bullying, too. This bill will go a long way to address this bullying problem in the school system. This legislation will improve the quality of life not only of the students but also of the parents and families affected by the problem of bullying. I know there are so many students who don’t want to go to school. They will just skip school because they are afraid of bullies. They will just, you know, wander around in the shopping malls, go to movies.

4:40

Bullying doesn’t start in high school or in junior high school. Bullies, I think, start at a younger age. We had a meeting with the Calgary police chief, and then we started talking about bullying. They said: you know, this problem has to be nipped in the bud in the earlier years. I think this bill will strengthen the hands of the school boards and principals, and we will be able to tackle this problem with teeth in the law. I’m glad to support this bill, too, because this bill goes a long way in addressing bullying in gender, sexual orientation, ethnicity, cultural background, and you name it. I think this will almost cover it all.

I congratulate the member again for bringing in the bill and accepting all the amendments we were hoping to have put in. I think this bill has come pretty close to a perfect bill. You know, maybe in the future we will not have to tinker too much with this. I congratulate you on that, Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. Thank you very much.

I fully support this bill, sir. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to rise today to join the debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, as brought forward by my friend, the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. I would like to thank the hon. member for bringing forward this well-thought-out piece of legislation.

Mr. Chairman, Bill 206 will help to ensure the safety of all children and staff on school property, including school buses and school-sponsored activity. Additionally, this bill clearly defines what constitutes a bully. This definition is important in order for the goal of this bill to be achieved. The full definition of bullying is referenced in many sections of Bill 206. However, I would like to specifically discuss section 2, subsection (b.1), sub (i), and sub (ii).

In section 2, subsections (b.1) and (b.1)(i) state that to "bully" means to repetitively harass an individual to maintain an imbalance of power over that individual by

- (i) gestures, verbal abuse or written abuse directed at that individual, including gestures and abuse that are based on the individual's race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, mental or physical disability.

As well, in section 2, subsections (b.1) and (b.1)(ii) include the stealing of possessions of that individual in the definition of bullying.

Mr. Chairman, these sections explain in detail what it means to bully. In order to properly discuss these sections, each one needs to be examined and addressed in greater detail. First, as referenced in section 2, subsection (b.1), a bully is someone who repetitively harasses an individual to maintain an imbalance of power over that person. This means a bully would be someone who continually harms or threatens another person. If the word "repetitively" was not included in this definition, some behaviours may be incorrectly defined as bullying, which would ultimately reduce the effectiveness of the legislation.

It is pivotal that the definition of bullying be accurate and not too far reaching as we do not want to inadvertently suggest that all acts, in fact, result in bullying. This definition has to be specific and clear in order to address the behaviour of those individuals who are regularly cruel or overbearing and not the person who may have gotten into an argument with another individual at one point in time. In this way Bill 206 achieves the balance.

Mr. Chairman, that being said, it is necessary to use broad language when protecting others. An example of this is how section 2, subsection (b.1) uses the word "individual" rather than the term "youth" or "child." I can appreciate this because a bully may harass a teacher or another person on school property who may not be a youth or child. This wording, therefore, ensures that Bill 206 would protect everyone on school property.

As mentioned previously, section 2, subsection (b.1) says that bullying means to "repetitively harass an individual to maintain an imbalance of power over that individual." Mr. Chairman, an imbalance of power creates inequity. Section 2, subsection (b.1) addresses this imbalance in order to ensure that everyone is treated as equals.

Second, Mr. Chairman, section 2, subsection (b.1)(i) goes on to provide ways in which this imbalance of power could be maintained. Some of these ways include gestures, verbal and/or written abuse directed at someone. The language used in this part of the bill is general enough to include many different types of harassment. Words and gestures can be very hurtful, which is why it is critical to have these terms included in the definition of bullying. The subsection affirms that any gestures, verbal or written abuse directed at someone are not permitted. This alone covers many different types of abuse. However, in case of confusion this definition provides even more clarification by including specifics such as gestures and abuse that are based upon the individual's race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, mental or physical disability. Therefore, this would ensure protection against any sort of discrimination.

Third, section 2, subsection (b.1)(ii) is another part of Bill 206 worth mentioning. It addresses how an imbalance of power could be maintained through bullying by stealing another person's possessions. Mr. Chairman, students bring valuable items with them to school. Some are sentimental, some are religious, and some are necessary medications, for example. That being said, stealing a person's nonvaluable items can be another form of bullying as well. An example of this could be as simple as someone's pencil constantly being stolen. Something as small as this could be frustrating for an individual and may affect that person's performance at school. Stealing in general is cruel and can severely affect the individual's well-being or self-esteem, which is why the subsection is necessary in the definition of bullying.

Overall, Mr. Chairman, this definition of bullying protects everyone on school property and does not wrongly accuse an individual of being a bully. In short, section 2, subsection (b.1)(i) and (ii) provide clarity, and as a result there would be no confusion around what constitutes bullying. Ultimately, these sections would ensure that Bill 206 is effective.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for allowing me to rise and speak on these important sections.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to stand and join the Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to commend the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward a piece of legislation that endeavours to make our schools a safer place for students by providing administrators and teachers with more tools to fight bullying.

This afternoon I'd like to discuss section 2 of the bill, specifically provision (b.1), clauses (iii) and (iv). Mr. Chairman, this bill would be incomplete if it did not clearly define what bullying is, and defining "bully" is the sole purpose of provision (b.1) and its four clauses. The provision defines someone as bullying when he or she repetitively harasses someone else, maintaining an imbalance of power over that person. The ways of harassing and maintaining this imbalance are then described in the four clauses that follow.

Gestures, verbal and written abuse, and theft are outlined in clauses (i) and (ii). Gestures and abuse include those based on a person's race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, and mental or physical disability. Much of the bullying seen on a playground is of this nature, and it can have lasting psychological ramifications for its recipients. But bullying can and sometimes does escalate into violence or the threat of violence. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, clauses (iii) and (iv) further define the ways a bully can repetitively harass and gain an imbalance of power over a peer by

- (iii) physical or sexual assault or threats of physical or sexual assault on that individual, or
- (iv) threats of death to that individual.

4:50

We can all recognize physical assault as being part of bullying. Probably many in this House have either seen it first-hand or experienced it first-hand. Movies and television are rife with images of bullying, being a tough kid looking to meet his victim after school on the baseball diamond or in the alleyway. But, Mr. Chairman, I think we can all agree that reality is not like the movies, where a bullying victim often prevails as a hero. If anything, the prevalence of these images in popular entertainment trivializes the suffering of those who find themselves as a bully's target. Still, physical assault is widely recognized as a tool that bullies use to retain power over their victims.

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to also take a moment to highlight the importance of the second portion of clause (iii), sexual assault, as it's written into the bill, as a bullying tactic. Like physical assault, sexual assault can also be used to maintain an imbalance of power. The fear of an assault can also terrorize a victim.

Mr. Chairman, this brings me to the last portion of clause (iii) and to clause (iv), where the threat of violence is included as a bullying tactic. The threat of violence is outlined in the bill as threats of physical or sexual assault on that individual or threats of death to that individual. It doesn't matter how plausible the threat seems to an outside observer for the threat to work. The bully's intended victim must believe that the bully is both capable and willing to act out that threat.

In today's information age and with technology, delivering a threat has become much easier. Kids who might not have had the nerve to threaten a peer with harm in person can feel empowered behind the anonymity of a keyboard or the distance of a cellphone text message. Again, I think we've all experienced that with e-mail in our own offices. People are much braver when they're using that technology than they are face to face.

Threats, however they're delivered, can torment their target even if they aren't carried out. No child deserves to live in fear. This fear can be debilitating and as equally detrimental as the act itself. Therefore, threats should be included among the harassing behaviours that bullies can use.

The clear definition of the verb "bully" provided in Bill 206 is an important tool that can be used if the bill is passed because it empowers teachers and administrators to define a tool in identifying a bullying student and provides them further tools to respond accordingly.

For these reasons I wholeheartedly support the intent and the wording of the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, and I encourage my colleagues in the Legislature to do the same and help stop bullying. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to rise and join the Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. As a former teacher of 36 years I would like to sincerely thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this timely and well-crafted piece of legislation.

As this Assembly heard during second reading last spring, Bill 206 intends to prohibit acts of intimidation or bullying in Alberta's schools and will provide a mechanism for dealing with these unfortunate events when they occur. It would require all schools to address and document cases of bullying, possession of drug paraphernalia, tools, or devices that may cause harm to other students. In short, this piece of legislation seeks to ensure that Alberta's children can learn and grow in an environment that is free of detrimental activities associated with bullying.

I would like to specifically address section 12.2, which reads:

No student shall bully another [person]

- (a) in a school, on school grounds, on a school bus or at an activity sponsored or approved by a board,
- (b) by means of a school computer or the Internet accessed through a school computer, or
- (c) at any other time where such activity may reasonably be expected to cause a substantial and material disruption at school.

Mr. Chairman, I believe the strength of this bill is in how it recognizes that acts of bullying are not only limited to such things as name-calling. Bullying in today's schools can be perpetrated in many different forms using various media. As such, we have to ensure that we give school officials the necessary tools to effectively mitigate the ever-evolving forms of bullying.

Mr. Chairman, cyberbullying has become more prevalent as the Internet has become more accessible to students. We hear of situations time and again where popular social network sites such as Facebook and MySpace are used as a tool to bully. Students who bully may create fake social networking profiles as well as groups with the intent to inflict serious mental harm on their victims. Indeed, these new tools may create more mental anguish as their actions can be witnessed by a larger audience. Section 12.2(b) recognizes this reality and effectively bans a student from using a school computer as a tool to bully.

The Deputy Chair: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, but pursuant to Standing Order 8(6), which provides for consideration of motions other than government motions at 5 p.m. on Monday afternoons, the committee will now rise and report.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 206. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Motions Other than Government Motions

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Canadian Forces Training and Service Recognition

516. Mr. Cao moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to recognize the qualifications, skills, knowledge, and personal development that military personnel gain from training and service while in the Canadian Forces as equivalent to civilian qualifications.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great pleasure to rise today to introduce and open debate on Motion 516, military personnel qualification recognition. The Canadian Forces are highly respected by Albertans, Canadians, and our international partners. They are there to protect and help us both domestically and internationally, at home and abroad. The Canadian Forces seek to bring peace and stability in conflicts around the world in places such as Afghanistan, Bosnia, Croatia, and Haiti.

Canadian Forces personnel receive a high level of training while employed as both regular force members and as reserve force members. The qualifications and skills they learn and the education they receive is first class. Mr. Speaker, Motion 516 builds on the good work that this government has already implemented in Bill 1, Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009. We can build on this by recognizing the skills that are learned when one is a member of the Canadian Forces.

This government has already made strides in recognition of skills with the implementation of their prior learning assessment and recognition, or PLAR. PLAR is a powerful tool that can be used by many, including those in the Canadian Forces. PLAR is a process that identifies, assesses, and recognizes skills learned in informal, nonformal, experiential, or formal means. In addition, the Apprenticeship and Industry Training Act recognizes certain skills and trades that are learned in the Canadian Forces. However, I believe that it is essential that all trades and skills are recognized. This is why I have brought Motion 516 forward, urging the government to continue to work with professional organizations, the Canadian Forces, and Canada's ministry of defence to ensure that more skills and qualifications are recognized.

5:00

Mr. Speaker, the catalyst for bringing this motion forward was hearing from my constituent, a lifelong Canadian Forces member, a Mr. Andrew Downey of the Erin Woods community in Calgary. Upon leaving the forces, he was unable to have the skills that he had learned and practised transferred over to the civilian world. It cost him time and money to go through training repetition and recertification of the skills he had practised for many long years in the military.

Now, at this point I recognize that the Canadian Forces are currently working on the red seal trades to standardize skills. This is a step in the right direction. The red seal trades are vital to our economy. Additionally, the Canadian Forces offer assistance with achieving accreditation for military experience through civilian training accreditation programs. Mr. Speaker, as I have said, there has been considerable work done by the Canadian Forces and the Alberta government. However, this motion encourages that this commitment continues and that more qualifications and skills are recognized. By recognizing the qualifications and skills learned in the Canadian Forces, we can have forces members re-entering civilian life having marketable assets they can use to their advantage.

Our Canadian Forces should be respected. They defend this country, bring peace to troubled areas around the world. Mr. Speaker, Alberta can take the lead and encourage the rest of the Canadian provinces to recognize the valuable qualifications and skills learned by our Canadian Forces. I encourage the hon. members to support this motion, and I look forward to further debate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I'm hoping that at some point in the debate the definition of "recognize" will come out because at this point "to recognize" is vague. Is it just a symbolic recognition, or will there be policy changes to reflect the equatability between military and civilian qualifications? This is extremely important.

I'm the product and I would suggest that I'm the proud product of military families. My grandfather Edward Arthur Chase was a British cavalry officer during the First World War. While he was gassed at Ypres, he managed to survive, and for that I am eternally grateful because I'm here and speaking on this important motion today. My father, Edward Bryce Chase, had a proud military career. During the Second World War he was a pilot flying in Burma, and I have previously recounted some of the experiences that he had where his major enemy was the monsoon-like weather that occurred in the Burma area.

I fully support the notion of recognizing the value of not only military service but the training that takes place while one is in the military. My father did his training as a pilot both here in Alberta and then in Britain before shipping out to Burma, where he flew Wellingtons. Much of the work he did was evacuation of injured individuals, casualties of war. My father had an opportunity to upgrade his qualifications because he enlisted directly out of grade 12. He had to take his grade 12 by correspondence because in the small town where he was from, Meota, Saskatchewan, the opportunities for grade 12 were limited. So, father, after surviving the Second World War, had an opportunity to attend the University of Saskatchewan at the Saskatoon campus, and there he received his degree in psychology. So he had both the military training of being a pilot and the civilian training required in psychology.

When father was finished his university education, he re-enlisted, and we were sent out to Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, Quebec, where he worked in the personnel selection unit intaking individuals who were coming into the service and recognizing the skills that they had and how they could best be put to use within the military circumstance.

While father was in the military, he went through a series of courses with regard to instrumentation on a variety of planes he flew, such as the Otter. The plane that he finished up on out of Namao air base just outside town was the C-119, or the Flying Boxcar. In terms of military transferability father spent a lot of time on instrumentation. He logged a considerable number of flight hours. He served as a mentor to junior officers, and father rose through the ranks based on not only his civvy qualifications but his military qualifications.

As part of his military training, for example, in addition to instrumentation he took courses in survival. That was part of his experience. Also, although he was in the air force, there was weaponry training. When he was in Burma, for example, there was training on how to escape, and he's just recently donated to the military museum a silk map indicating escape routes from Burma in the event that he would be shot down or behind enemy lines. So the military training is of significant importance.

In 1959 we were transferred from the base at Namao to Toronto, where my father went to a military staff college. He rose in the ranks from a flight lieutenant, going into staff college, to a squadron leader, leaving staff college. We then went on to Ottawa, where again my father served in a more civil service end of the air force. Finally, in 1966 my father was the commanding officer of the personnel selection unit, which was responsible for transferring individuals out of the military into successful civilian postmilitary careers. Throughout the experience, I must admit, I was a guinea pig for psychological testing, for ROTC and a whole variety of other testing in terms of suitability and the quality of testing and so on.

There is no doubt that there are skills that are transferable from the military towards the civilian experience, and there are very few military individuals who, when their military service is completed, can afford to simply retire because, unfortunately, military pay, while it has improved, is not the be-all and end-all. I think even generals might find that they had to be considered for consulting.

The transference of the skills acquired in the military is extremely important. However, how we qualify those services has to be taken into account. Obviously, some training is less adaptable to a civilian experience. I mean, for example, firing a series of munitions doesn't completely translate. So it will be important and I look forward to further discussion as to how it is that we, in quotes, recognize the qualities and attributes acquired during military service. Beyond a doubt it's important that we recognize these attributes, that we recognize the contributions of individuals who have undergone military service, whether it be in the reserve or whether it be in the active services.

With that, I look forward to further qualifications and discussions of this interesting motion. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

5:10

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to rise today and speak to Motion 516 as proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort. Many things make me proud to be an Albertan and proud to be a Canadian, but one thing distinguishes itself above others, and that is the sacrifices made by the Canadian Forces. From their victories in the two world wars to their courageous efforts in Afghanistan today the men and the women of the Canadian Forces have always been a source of pride which all Canadians share. Across this province thousands of Albertans have accepted the call to duty in the Canadian Forces with honour. Today, whether it's Afghanistan or elsewhere in the world, our men and women in uniform are defending freedom and standing up for the values that we take for granted in this country.

There are currently about 90,000 individuals enlisted in either the Canadian Forces or the reserve forces. In carrying out their duties, Mr. Speaker, these men and women are being trained to carry out many activities that involve great skill and education. In the military, as I am sure many Albertans can attest to, you learn a different set of skills, skills that are not taught in our public school system or in our colleges and our universities. I believe these skills should be acknowledged. This is why I strongly support the direction of Motion 516.

This motion specifically moves to recognize the qualifications, the skills, the knowledge, and the personal development that military personnel gain from training and service in the Canadian Forces as equivalent to civilian qualifications. Currently, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Forces, the federal government, and the province of Alberta have already introduced the recognition of certain skills and are working on furthering this with suitable industries by working with both the Canadian Forces and Alberta's professional association for further skill recognition. For example, Alberta Advanced Education and Technology has implemented the advancing prior learning assessment and recognition. The advancing prior learning assessment and recognition is a process of identifying, assessing, and recognizing skills, competencies, and knowledge of individuals learned by informal, nonformal, experimental, or formal means.

In fact, the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board already recognizes military credentials as being equivalent to a trade certificate in several occupations. These include automotive service technicians, carpenter, cook, heavy equipment technician, refrigeration and air conditioning mechanic, and parts technician. In addition, individuals may receive advanced standing in other trades through a prior learning assessment. Mr. Speaker, these are crucial steps forward in supporting our Canadian Forces so that after these men and women have carried out their duties, they can move back into their communities and work to support their families without having to be retrained and re-educated in a field where they have sufficient knowledge.

As a government I believe it is our duty to continue to do everything we can in showing our support for our military personnel. By recognizing the knowledge and skills that our heroes are able to gain while serving their country and risking their lives, we are one step closer to truly showing our appreciation for all they do. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I support Motion 516 and urge all my colleagues in the Assembly to do the same.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to speak in favour of Motion 516, military personnel qualification recognition. I would first like to commend the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort for bringing this motion forward. Motion 516 encourages the government "to recognize the qualifications, skills, knowledge, and personal development that military personnel gain from [their] training and service while in the Canadian Forces as equivalent to civilian qualifications."

Mr. Speaker, this motion is extremely important to me because many of my constituents, especially the Cold Lake residents, are active in the forces. The 4 Wing air base, located in Cold Lake, is one of the largest Canadian Forces air bases in Canada. Fifty-three hundred people live on the base in my constituency, which comprises approximately 45 per cent of our local population in Cold Lake.

Recently I have received calls from many of these constituents with concerns about transferring their military accreditations over to civilian jobs once they finish their service in the military. Many of these individuals don't stay in the Canadian Forces for their entire careers. Many would like to pursue other opportunities in Alberta, often in the trades, but feel that they will not be able to get the qualification recognition that they require. By increasing the credentials that can be transferred over to civilian jobs, military tradespeople would be more confident in pursuing this lifestyle and career choice. They would know that if they ever decide to leave the forces, they have the experience and the skills to fall back on when looking for an alternative career.

The Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board already recognizes military credentials for automotive service technicians, carpenters, cooks, heavy equipment technicians, refrigeration and air conditioning mechanics, and parts technicians. Why can't we extend that to include other occupations in the Canadian Forces? The skills that the military personnel develop during their time in the forces are truly world class and, as such, should be recognized as equivalent to civilian qualifications.

Mr. Speaker, many individuals in my constituency and others across Alberta will benefit immensely if Motion 516 is passed. It is a great way to show respect to our troops and give them a chance to succeed in civilian life, just as they have in their commitment to the Canadian Forces.

Again, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort for introducing Motion 516 and encourage all members to vote in its favour. Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour today to rise to speak in favour of Motion 516, brought forth by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort. Motion 516 seeks to encourage the government of Alberta to recognize the skills and qualifications of military personnel as being equivalent to civilian qualifications. If we pass Motion 516, it will create more opportunities for Albertans. It will allow military personnel to have an easier transition to a career outside of the Canadian Forces. In addition, it would help instill confidence in those joining the Canadian Forces because it would give them an opportunity to pursue other interests once they have finished their service.

Mr. Speaker, approximately 66 per cent of the industrial land in Edmonton is found in the constituency of Edmonton-Calder. As a result of this, many of my constituents work in the trades because there is such a high demand for the type of work that they do. Edmonton-Calder is also home to many senior citizens' homes, and some of those seniors living in these homes are veterans. If they'd had the opportunity to receive this type of accreditation back when they were finished serving in the Canadian armed forces, I imagine it would have helped them considerably. It would have acted to increase the availability of skilled workers in Alberta in the past and also in the present day. In addition to this, it would give our troops the marketable skills that they need to pursue a career outside of the military.

The Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board already recognizes military credentials as being the equivalent of trade certifications in certain occupations, and while I am not in favour of watering down the qualifications, I would like to see expansion to other trades. The schooling that military personnel receive while serving the Canadian Forces is, indeed, very similar to the training that they would receive in civilian certifications. So why not make it equivalent?

Mr. Speaker, our troops are providing a great service to this country. They are dedicating their time and putting their lives on the line for us. Motion 516 simply helps us to honour the sacrifice that these people have made for us and will help raise the awareness of military service in Canada and the skills that individuals learn while they are employed there.

I would again like to commend the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort for bringing this motion forward. If passed, this motion will benefit many of the constituents of Edmonton-Calder as well as troops all over Alberta.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

5:20

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just very briefly. As a past reservist I wanted to put a few comments on the record as the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. Many members have already mentioned the fact that our department through the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board does actually cross-qualify many of the trades that our Canadian Forces do, the automotive, carpentry, heavy-duty mechanic as a few examples. The quality of the students that we have in our postsecondary of reservists and Canadian Forces personnel, the quality of the tradesmen that are coming to us from those disciplines is second to none, Mr. Speaker.

We will continue to work with DND, the Department of National Defence, on trying to ensure where there are easy crossovers or crossovers that we can identify that would, as my hon. colleague mentioned, not water down the trade certificate, because these are in many cases national trade certificates, but certainly work with the forces to identify where we can change them so that when a member leaves the service of the Canadian Forces, they can easily transfer into whatever trade they were trained in in the military.

If this motion is passed – and I would urge acceptance of this motion – we will instruct our department to redouble their efforts in working with the Department of National Defence so that we can get more of those trades cross-qualified.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would certainly urge my colleagues to pass the motion.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and speak to this motion and to thank the Member for Calgary-Fort for bringing it forward. I think it's entirely consistent with the support this government or, indeed, this Legislature has shown for our armed forces in our province, and it's certainly worthy of every consideration.

I'm just fearful, Mr. Speaker, that this is beyond a provincial level. Any recognition of certification that we provide to a member of the armed forces based on equivalence or anything else, once we've granted that person a tradesman status, automatically means they have tradesman status in other provinces by trading agreements, certainly with some of the agreements that we have with British Columbia. So that would mean that British Columbia would have to be in agreement with our approach. It goes beyond provincial certifications for such things, for example, as pilots' licences.

I began my career in forestry as a helitack firefighter in British Columbia, and we worked almost exclusively with military pilots. The hill they have to climb after hundreds or thousands of hours of helicopter experience in the military is that in some cases they just about have to start over for civilian certification, and that's a federal jurisdiction.

So it's a fantastic effort and a discussion that has to happen, in fact, a discussion that's long overdue, but it's a discussion that has to involve other provinces and the federal government as well as the Department of National Defence. I think it's a fantastic effort. I again congratulate the member for bringing it forward.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

Then I would invite the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort to close.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank all my hon. colleagues who have spoken on this motion. I would like to thank my many constituents, in particular Mr. Andrew Downey, for having brought this public issue to my attention.

Mr. Speaker, I would like once again to emphasize that Alberta is a province that values our Canadian Forces. Many of us recently had an opportunity to experience first-hand the skills that our Canadian Forces have. This government has already taken steps to honour our forces members with job-protected leave for the reservists. I believe that by recognizing the training, skills qualifications learned in the forces as equal to civilian qualifications, we further honour and respect our forces members.

With Motion 516 I really call on the Alberta Ministry of Advanced Education and Technology and the Alberta Ministry of Employment and Immigration to continue to work further with the Canadian armed forces and the Canadian ministry of defence in training programs and skills so that they can be seamlessly transferable.

Over this past hour there were many, many interesting topics discussed, and while there may be some concern on the wording of the motion and many details need to be worked out, I believe that any of this can be overcome and that recognizing the skills and qualifications of our Canadian Forces is the right thing to do. I ask my hon. colleagues for their favourable consideration of Motion 516. Motion 516 is really a small contribution to last week's Remembrance Day, when we honoured our veterans and armed forces.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 516 carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that we have concluded the business on the Order Paper for today, I would move that we call it 6 o'clock and adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:26 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Visitors	1775
Introduction of Guests	1775, 1785, 1794
Ministerial Statements
National Philanthropy Day	1776
Members' Statements
St. Michael's Extended Care Centre Society	1777
International Education Week	1777
Public Health Care in Alberta	1785
National Bullying Awareness Week	1786
National 4-H Month	1786
Louis Riel	1786
Oral Question Period
H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning	1777
H1N1 Influenza Hospital Admissions	1777
Electricity Transmission Lines	1778
Health Care Reform	1778
H1N1 Influenza Immunization	1779
Pastoral Care in Health Facilities	1779
International Trade	1780
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Homeless People	1780
Sour Gas Well Licensing	1781
Fine Arts Education Curriculum Review	1781
Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure	1782
Employment Insurance Benefit Program	1782
Electoral Reform	1783
Geothermal Energy for Home Heating	1783
All-terrain Vehicle Safety	1784
Postsecondary Tuition Fees	1784
Presenting Petitions	1786
Tabling Returns and Reports	1787
Tablings to the Clerk	1787
Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders
Third Reading
Bill 205 Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009	1787
Committee of the Whole
Bill 206 School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009	1793
Motions Other than Government Motions
Canadian Forces Training and Service Recognition	1800

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Tuesday afternoon, November 17, 2009

Issue 58

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, November 17, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. We give thanks for the bounty of our province, our land, our resources, and our people. We pledge ourselves to act as good stewards on behalf of all Albertans. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to welcome students from John Barnett school from my riding of Edmonton-Manning. I was very happy to attend the school's 40th anniversary back in June and meet several students and staff members. These 22 bright young grade 6 students along with their teacher, Mr. Glenn Newby, have toured our Legislature and learned a lot about our building and the provincial government. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real privilege and a pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly and all Albertans a large group from the Lacombe Christian Reformed Church Seniors Club. There are 50 of them here along with four tour guides. A group of seniors this size are like a bunch of junior high kids. They run around, and you need to have tour guides to keep them together. The tour guides are Cindy Prins, a cousin of mine; Judy Van Haren, my sister; Eleanor Drost, my sister; and Lynn Richardson, my cousin. Among these seniors, I want to introduce to you and to all members the senior of all seniors, my father, Mr. Ralph Prins. You might want to stand up.

I have a number of uncles and aunts, and they've all come out to see me. They are Uncle Klass and Aunt Jenny Brink; my aunt, Helena Kits; Gerrit and Dorothy Meindersma, uncle and aunt; Jake and Agnes Prins; and my uncle, Simon Swier. There are about 14 of them, I think, that are related to me. I also have with me today my wife, Pauline Prins.

An Hon. Member: Did they vote for you?

Mr. Prins: Yeah, most of them voted for me.

Another one I want to introduce to you is my new legislative assistant, Renee Reitsma. Her grandmother is a part of this group but was unable to travel today, so she's not here.

I would ask all these wonderful seniors from Lacombe to stand up and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: I can't top that, Mr. Speaker.

It's my pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly four representatives from the Department of Culture and Community Spirit, who are here on a public service orientation tour. I'd like to commend them for the excellent work they do in our department. We have with us today, seated in the members' gallery, Mechelle Silveira, Eileen Daskoch, Tanya Davies, and Joyce Zilinski. I would ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly another group of hard-working, dedicated staff members from Alberta Environment, who are joining us today to get a little bit of flavour for what the legislative side of the workings of government is all about. They are 27 hard-working employees from across the province. I know that all members will share my view that we're very, very pleased that we have an opportunity to share what we do on a day-to-day basis with all of the folks that support us in a very meaningful way to ensure that we can do our job properly. I'd ask that they rise and receive the recognition of all members of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have eight members of the department here, who are equally as hard working as the other members of our civil service.

An Hon. Member: They probably have to work a little harder.

Mr. Liepert: They probably work harder – you're right, member – just to deal with that member.

Mr. Speaker, they too are on a public service orientation tour, and in the interests of time I won't introduce each one. I would just ask all eight to stand and be recognized by the members of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature Mr. Pol Ngeth. Pol is in Edmonton to present at the ninth annual Diverse Voices 2009 family violence conference on how to deal with cultural gaps around issues of family violence. Pol is a registered social worker with a master's degree in education and a master's in social work from the University of Calgary. He has held positions with Alberta Health Services, child and family services, and he is a multicultural counsellor for the men's group at Immigrant Services Calgary. Accompanying him today is Mr. Kimpeou, who is a member of the Khmer-Canadian Buddhist temple, Calgary. My guests are seated in the public gallery, and I would like to ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you Mr. Ken Knowles, president and CEO of Northlands, sitting in the members' gallery. Northlands is one of the oldest and most historic nonprofit, volunteer organizations in Edmonton, having been founded in 1879. Every year Northlands attracts over 4 million visitors to more than 2,500 events, which help to put Edmonton and Alberta on the map. At this time I would like to ask Ken Knowles to please rise and accept the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Then join me today in wishing the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung a happy birthday.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Edmonton Northlands

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. From November 11 to 15 83,904 fans kicked up their heels at the 36th annual Canadian Finals Rodeo at Rexall Place. I want to congratulate Northlands for all their success this year at the CFR and also recognize the incredible impact they make in our great city.

Mr. Speaker, Northlands rocks Edmonton with 2,500 events each year, that attract over 4 million visitors to Alberta's capital city. Aside from the CFR there are also Farmfair International, Capital EX, Rexall Edmonton Indy, the best of horse racing, headliner concerts, international events, trade shows, conferences, and more. That number is expected to grow with the unveiling of the Edmonton Expo Centre on December 1, which will contain a total of 522,000 square feet, effectively doubling the size of Northlands' existing trade show and conference space and increasing its international reputation.

Mr. Speaker, an example of Northlands' influence on the world stage can be seen in a recent article from Venues Today ranking Rexall Place 10th in the world and second in Canada as determined by gross ticket sales at all ticketed concerts and events in arenas with a capacity of over 15,000. It is interesting to note that Rexall Place is used 240 event days in a year and will once again be on the world stage from December 6 to 13 with the Roar of the Rings Canadian curling trials.

Once again, congratulations to team Northlands and Ken Knowles for doing such a wonderful job for our city.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

1:40 Intermunicipal Cost-sharing Agreements

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today and bring to the attention of this House a major achievement in my constituency. The neighbouring municipalities of Northern Sunrise county and the town of Peace River signed two important intermunicipal co-operation agreements recently. One is an operational cost-sharing agreement, which provides compensation for the provision of regional services, and the other is a capital cost-sharing agreement, which builds a capital reserve by mutual contributions and provides a process for establishing future expenditures.

Mr. Speaker, I could stand here as an MLA and say all kinds of things about how far-reaching or visionary these agreements are – and they truly are – but today I'd sooner stand here as a resident of one of these municipalities and say thank you. You've acted as neighbours should act, and you've acted to make our communities better places to live.

I would like to thank the councils of each municipality for their hard work in bringing forward these agreements: from Northern Sunrise county Reeve Agnes Knudsen, Deputy Reeve Evens Lavoie, councillors Ricky Boucher, Ed Dziengielewski, Carolyn Kolebaba, and Darlene Cardinal; from the town of Peace River Mayor Iris Callioux, Deputy Mayor Berry Heinen, councillors Leslie Ayre-Jaschke, Don Good, Wanda Laurin, Neil Martin, and Geoff Milligan.

Mr. Speaker, great work to all involved and congratulations. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Public Education

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this afternoon I had the pleasure of meeting with university students enrolled in the Education program at the University of Alberta. Like thousands of other Albertans they are gravely concerned by this administration's plans to cut education funding to the bone. We should all be worried because Conservative administrations keep proving that they don't value public education. It's always among the first programs cut whenever Tory governments get themselves into fiscal problems.

Public education is a core service, one of the fundamental investments that should never be cut. Education is vital to our economy. Where will our skilled workforce come from if not from our schools? Where will our writers, poets, and artists come from? What about Alberta culture? With Bill 44 this administration has already damaged free speech in science education in our schools. Now they're looking at watering down the fine arts curriculum. They've already seized tens of millions of dollars from school boards, money that should have been used to lower class sizes, fund full-day kindergarten and half-day junior kindergarten.

This administration likes to brag about the foresight it used to set up its sustainability fund, originally, I might add, an Alberta Liberal idea. But isn't the sustainability fund supposed to protect core services? Why leave this money sitting almost interestless in a bank account when it should be used to prevent costly cuts that will hurt public education now and into the future?

Already Alberta suffers from the highest dropout rate in the nation and the lowest enrolment in postsecondary programs. The minister of advanced education is considering eliminating tuition caps, which will reduce enrolment further. These are shameful statistics that reflect this administration's contempt for the importance of public education.

Albertans will not tolerate a return to the bad old days of the 1990s. This government must stop the cuts, or Albertans will just stop the government. Simply stated, Mr. Speaker, education equals economy.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Médiathèque French Multimedia Library

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 17, 2009, I had the pleasure of attending the opening of Médiathèque, a newly renovated and expanded French multimedia library in Calgary. Along with the Minister of Employment and Immigration I had the honour of speaking with many students and francophone authors attending the opening. I'd like to acknowledge M. Thomas Chaurin and M. Pierre-Yves Mocquais, who were key to conceiving and creating this new library.

Located in the historical Memorial Park Building, a site that remains the home of Calgary's first public library, Médiathèque provides Albertans of all ages access to more than 6,000 resources in French, including magazines, books, DVDs, audio CDs, and children's materials. What makes this collection even more special is that contemporary and mainstream works acquired by the library have been created by francophones living across the globe. Many works come from parts of French-speaking Africa.

Partners from the Calgary francophone community came together to create the new Médiathèque library. They are the Calgary Foundation, Alliance Française, the government of France, and the provincial government.

The new library promises to be a great support not only for Alberta's multicultural francophone community but also for the more than 150,000 students learning French across our province. Through Médiathèque Calgary residents can connect with their community and fellow francophones around the world. I encourage everyone to visit the Médiathèque library when you are in Calgary.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Inspiring Education Public Consultation

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has a world-class education system, but Albertans are telling us that it can be even better. Let me tell you one of the great things the government is doing about education in Alberta. Over the last 12 months the Inspiring Education initiative has reached out to thousands of Albertans to learn what they think Alberta's education system needs to focus on to best prepare our kids for their future.

One very special aspect of Inspiring Education is that all Albertans, whether they are members of the business community, nonprofits, FNMI, seniors, those incarcerated, have a stake in education and are all being engaged to help inform education policy recommendations. The public input aspect of Inspiring Education culminated with a groundbreaking three-day forum for more than a thousand Albertans who joined us in person and more than 350 who joined us online.

Mr. Speaker, Inspiring Education is not about demanding that more money and resources be put into education in Alberta. It is about developing a policy vision for the future of learning that will serve us just as well in good fiscal times as in bad and help inform how we can most strategically and effectively allocate the resources that we do have.

Inspiring Education is also about the example that we set for young Albertans. To teach about creativity, innovation, perseverance, and adaptability, our system also needs to constantly look for new, positive ways of doing business. Mr. Speaker, very soon our steering committee will have a report for the minister, but one of the most valuable outcomes of Inspiring Education has been the broad, forward-looking dialogue itself that we have begun with all Albertans on the future of our most important investment.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to close with a quote from one of those Albertans.

I can now live with myself, knowing I had a say in my future's future. Our First Nations peoples had a chance to have a voice in their future, and I wasn't going to pass up that opportunity, even if I had to sleep in my vehicle. At least we had a chance to voice our thoughts without repercussions to us, our children, or children's children. Thank you for hearing us.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Tara-Jean Popowich University of Lethbridge Women's Pronghorns

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and speak to this House about some exceptional young women who have made myself and Lethbridge exceptionally proud. On October 25 Tara-Jean Popowich was named the winner of the second season of the popular CTV reality show So You Think You Can Dance Canada. She beat out thousands of other contestants to earn the top spot last summer, and then she went on to shine week after week until Canadians voted to name her as the season's champion.

Tara-Jean was born and raised in Lethbridge and began her formal dance training at Joy's dance academy, a local dance studio. Tara-Jean tried out for So You Think You Can Dance last year but was eliminated before reaching the top 20. This year she was obviously better prepared and wowed the judges. Amazingly, Mr. Speaker, she did all this with injured ribs. Now Tara-Jean and her fellow finalists are on a cross-country dance tour, and Lethbridge can't wait for her to come back home for her performance in her hometown November 29.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to take this opportunity to congratulate one of the most amazing sports teams my hometown has ever produced. On November 9 the University of Lethbridge women's Pronghorns rugby team brought home its third straight national championship after beating St. Francis Xavier 20 to 3 in Vancouver. In addition to the win, five Pronghorns were named to the tournament all-star team, and another was named MVP. That was Andrea Letal. They achieved this under the watchful eye of Neil Langevin, the reigning Canadian Interuniversity Sport coach of the year. The national title came on the heels of winning the Canadian finals, with an 86 to 0 win over the University of Victoria. I think it's safe to say that with numbers like that, these young women are not only the best female rugby players in Canada; they're a force to be reckoned with anywhere in the world.

I would ask my fellow members to join me in congratulating the U of L women's rugby Pronghorns and Tara-Jean Popowich for their monumental achievements this year.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Emergency Hospital Services

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Sheldon M. Chumir health centre is the only facility in downtown Calgary that provides 24-hour urgent care to one of Calgary's most populated areas. To the Premier: will the Premier immediately release the proposed plans that would stop the Sheldon Chumir clinic from being open for 24 hours?

1:50

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister of health can answer that question specifically with respect to the operation of facilities.

Mr. Liepert: Well, I wish I could, Mr. Speaker. I don't know the operational hours of every health care facility in this province, but I will endeavour to get the answer to the member, maybe as soon as before the end of question period.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans have lost trust in this Premier and this minister of health. The Premier has still not answered for the fact that the new East Edmonton primary health care centre will not be providing family doctors and urgent care services that were promised. What is the Premier's explanation for this new facility standing half empty?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said yesterday and many times in the House, we're focusing on ensuring that the health care system that we enjoy in this province is sustainable. We also want to improve access, and we're doing that through training more nurses and doctors in the province and ensuring that we ensure a quality of care in the province as well. We're continuing down that path, obviously under some difficult circumstances in terms of the revenue flow to the province, but we're going to do the best we can.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, how can this Premier justify in a pandemic situation – in a pandemic situation, Mr. Premier – that we're adding greater load on emergency departments in our major cities?

Mr. Stelmach: Because it's a pandemic. But I'll have the minister of health respond.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I answered that question pretty much yesterday. I check on a daily basis with Alberta Health Services, and their answer to me today is consistent with what it has been. There are occasional hot spots in the province where there are surges in emergency, but overall the system is coping well. We always have, during seasonal flu, surges in emergency, but I'm told it isn't anything out of the ordinary, so I'm not sure where the member is getting his information from.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Public Education Funding

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government seems content to leave wasteful spending on everything from executive bonuses and slick public advertising untouched. Instead, again they turn to health care and education as the first targets for cuts. My question is to the Premier. Will the Premier make a firm and unshakeable commitment to Albertans and to future teachers who were demonstrating on the steps today that he will protect public education from short-sighted cutbacks?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the bonuses that the member has referred to, those have been eliminated. That will provide a saving this year of something around $44 million.

With respect to the secondary and postsecondary, in terms of secondary, K to 12, the minister has met with the individuals that were here to talk about some of what they think was the correct information in terms of how the minister is proceeding. He had an opportunity to talk with them, and I'm certain that on the second question he'd be able to respond in terms of the dialogue that he had.

Dr. Swann: Well, we've been here before, Mr. Speaker. Our schools are barely recovering from the 20 per cent cuts inflicted in the governments of the 1990s. We've still got the lowest high school graduation rate in the country. Will the Premier at least acknowledge here and now that these extreme cuts have damaged our credibility and our graduating and should never be repeated?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, the only people that are talking about extreme cuts are the ATA in their advertising campaign. What I've been talking about with school boards and superintendents is understanding that we're in a fiscal situation, using that fiscal situation to its best advantage in examining everything we're doing to determine whether we're doing the right things and whether we're doing them in the right way. That's what we're up to. It's not a question of massive cuts or destroying the system. We've got the best education system in North America and certainly one of the best in the world, and we're going to continue to provide the proper educational opportunities for every child in this province.

Dr. Swann: Our schools have ridden this government's boom-and-bust fiscal roller coaster for far too long. When is this Premier going to start treating education as an investment by delivering a plan for sustainable funding to our children and teachers? When?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we do have a sustainable plan. It's one of the reasons we've saved $17 billion in what we call a sustainability fund. We're going to use that $17 billion to cushion the rapid drop in the revenue stream to the province. That will cover about three-quarters of the perceived revenue loss over the next few years, and the other quarter will come from adjustments in our budget. We'll be working through those over the next number of weeks, and we will deliver a budget that's going to reflect the priorities of Albertans.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Lobbying Government

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday our Energy critic asked the Premier about donations made by AltaLink to a recent Progressive Conservative convention. The Premier dodged every one of the questions. Albertans deserve answers, Mr. Premier, especially when it's regarding decisions to foist multibillion-dollar transmission lines on the public. So I'll ask again. To the Premier. The issue is obviously contentious; it matters to Albertans. Doesn't he see that this looks as though AltaLink gets access to government in exchange for cash?

Mr. Stelmach: No. That is absolutely wrong. All I can say is that all those that are lobbying on behalf of any company in this province have to be registered. We finally do have a lobbyist registry. We got here after a lot of work. The purpose of it is to ensure that we're open and transparent with the Alberta public.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, all Albertans know that AltaLink has already been picked by the government to build one of the lines, a line that will cost about $1.5 billion, and the electricity users of Alberta are going to get stuck with the bill. How, then, can the Premier assure Albertans that this government's transmission policy is not being impacted by these sponsorship donations?

Mr. Stelmach: The bill that the member is referring to I think is before the House today. It simply says that we are in bad need of ensuring that we have a more modern, efficient transmission system in the province of Alberta to ensure that we can connect different parts of the province to not only coal-fired electricity generation but biomass and wind and many of the other forms, the gas powered, that are coming on stream. That is the purpose of the plan. We don't want to get left behind because we will never be able to grow our economy unless we have a good, efficient transmission system in the province.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, will the Premier, then, guarantee that all those sponsors listed on the brochure will be included in the lobbyist registry? Yes or no, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: I'm sure that those that are lobbyists in this province are now fully aware of the new law and will follow the law. I can't walk around and say: you must register; you must register. They know if they're lobbyists, and they'll do what is right, and that is follow the law of the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Long-term and Continuing Care

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, since public support for this Premier and this government has started to tank, the Premier has talked a lot about change. So far it's just talk, and he continues to steer Alberta in a direction that 6 out of 10 Albertans think is wrong. While the Premier promised 600 more long-term care beds during the election, a government report proves they're planning just the opposite. My question is to the Premier. Will the Premier tell Albertans what, if anything, has changed about this government's plan to close long-term care beds?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're not closing long-term care beds. In fact, we want to add to the current inventory, and we'll do that. I also want to see the model that we deliver in this province change so that we actually improve the quality of life for our seniors. Rather than splitting our seniors up after 60 years of marriage and sending one to one community and one to the other, our plan is to ensure that every senior in this province has an opportunity to retire in the community that they helped build.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's interesting because the government's report says that the continuing care strategy targets a significant reduction in long-term care beds. This is what senior officials of many departments are working from, so I don't know whether to believe this document or whether to believe the Premier. Far from being a change, this is more of the same: deception, secrecy, and spin. These are the hallmarks of this PC government. Nothing has changed; nothing will change as long as this government is in power. Will the Premier do something really different for a change and tell Alberta seniors exactly what his plan is for their care?

Mr. Stelmach: I can tell you that we're not going to follow the traditional model of putting our seniors in institutions, and that is exactly what the NDP want to do in this province. We're not going down that path. We're going to offer housing that reflects the needs of the senior. Rather than moving that senior from a lodge, then to a nursing home, and then to a long-term care institution, why cannot we keep them in one facility and just add the services that are necessary? What he's got is an age-old issue. That is how we improve the quality of life for all of our seniors – they deserve it – not that antiquated idea that the ND Party has.

2:00

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the Premier has said that they're not going to cut long-term care beds, but in fact his own report says the opposite. This is just more spin. It's evident that the promise of change is just that, just spin. This is a government that can't distinguish fact from fiction and where the truth comes in a plain brown envelope. Since the Premier will not spell out his plans for seniors' care in Alberta, will he at least admit that as far as this government is concerned, nothing has changed?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're going to continue with our plan to change the model of delivering housing and homes for our seniors in retirement. As I said before, no matter how hard they push against that plan and don't improve the quality of life for seniors in this province, I can tell you that with every breath of energy I have, I'm going to oppose what they want to do. They want to keep people in institutions. They don't deserve to be in institutions. They deserve to be in homes, and that's what we're going to do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Seniors' Issues and Concerns

Mr. Prins: Well thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm just very, very encouraged by the answers that I've heard from the Premier just now related to seniors' issues, but there is more to it than that. Apparently, the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta tabled their 2008-09 annual report on November 3, which was just last week. The report outlines challenges, needs, and ideas with respect to seniors as heard by council members as they toured across the province. My question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. What is the Alberta government doing to address the challenges and needs outlined in this report?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, seniors are a priority of this government, as we just heard our Premier speak about. We value the information and advice that we get from the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta, and we consider their advice in the programs and services that we develop for our seniors. An example of this is that when we read the report, what we did in our last budget was that we increased the Alberta seniors' benefit for our low-income seniors. That was thanks to advice from the report. That was so that low-income seniors in Alberta continued to qualify for one of the most comprehensive benefit packages in this country.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is for the same minister. One of the challenges expressed by seniors in the council's report was the delivery of health care services in their own communities, where they live. What is this government doing to address these concerns?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, as I tour around the province, I hear about these challenges from seniors all the time as well. I know that we're working hard to build a system, a sustainable health care system and a continuing care system, that will provide the right service in the right place at the right time for all Albertans. This includes the new continuing care strategy, Aging in the Right Place, which includes four levels of supportive living. These four levels allow seniors to live as independently as possible within their own homes and in their communities, the communities that they helped build.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thanks again, Mr. Speaker. My last question is for the same minister. We also know that our province's population is aging, with more and more Albertans becoming seniors every year. How does this government know if its plans for continuing care will meet the needs of this aging population in Alberta?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, in May 2008 I established the Demographic Planning Commission, which received feedback from over 10,000 Albertans. This is a great example of how this government seeks input from Albertans. Respondents clearly expressed that they want sustainable programs and services, and they want to stay in their communities. We are aware that by 2016 there will be more than half a million seniors in Alberta alone. Under the continuing care strategy the government supports a variety of supportive living or assisted living options so that seniors will have more choices to best meet their needs when the time comes.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Sour Gas Levels at Mildred Lake

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The levels of hydrogen sulphide, or sour gas, at Mildred Lake are alarming. By the end of September sour gas levels already surpassed last year's record, exceeding the standard 376 times. Now, strangely, the Wood Buffalo Environmental Association is reporting that the increase is possibly due to malfunctioning analyzers and may not be due to extreme sour gas levels. To the Minister of Environment: these abnormalities have been publicly reported for over two months, so what is it? Is it faulty equipment, or is it high sour gas levels?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to the hon. member that it is not faulty equipment, but it is a misrepresentation or interpretation of the results. The fact of the matter is that there are times when there are exceedances, and when those exceedances occur, it is imperative that the company take appropriate steps to resolve the issue. Where we become concerned to the extreme – and that's where the member should become concerned to the extreme – is when those exceedances occur on an ongoing, regular basis.

Ms Blakeman: I would have said that 376 times in nine months is ongoing.

Given that the air monitors in Wood Buffalo have been found with their hydrogen sulphide samplers disconnected and were only serviced after receiving notice of an upcoming audit, has the minister increased inspections of Wood Buffalo's air monitors?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of the circumstance that the member refers to. I'll happily check it out and advise her accordingly.

Ms Blakeman: Good. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, coincidentally, the same year that Saskatchewan accuses Alberta of exporting our acid rain to them, the minister slashes his air monitoring budget. So to the Minister of Environment: why is the minister compromising Alberta's air quality and reputation by deliberately underfunding air monitoring?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, it's not so much the amount of monitoring that is important; it's what is done to ensure that we maintain quality of air, ambient air quality. Doubling the monitoring isn't going to improve the air. I would suggest to the hon. member that she's got her priorities a little bit mixed up. We should be focusing on ensuring that we have the necessary plan in place to assure Albertans and those who live downwind of Alberta that we're doing everything we can to protect the air.

Trade Mission to Asia

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development has just returned from a trade mission trip to Asia with the federal agriculture minister. Can the minister tell this House what was the objective of the trip?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, the focus of this mission was to further promote Alberta's agriculture and food industry and advocate for market access in both Japan and Hong Kong. We all know that Japan and Hong Kong are two of our high-priority markets for our agriculture and food industries. Japan recently had a change in government. It was more than important; it was critical that we not lose the momentum and the ground that we had gained with their previous government and the industry.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. You mentioned that these markets have great potential to benefit the agricultural industry in Alberta. Can you give us an update on the market situation?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, I certainly was able to promote a variety of agricultural trade and investment opportunities, but more important, probably, I could promote the safety and quality of our agrifood products. We also met with numerous government officials about market access for our products. The mission provided face-to-face opportunities to follow up on previous trade discussions, so we were able to update key decisions on the development of our traceability programs both provincially and nationally.

Mr. Drysdale: My final question to the same minister: can you tell us what is now being done to follow up on this mission?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, we heard again, of course, how important traceability is to our customers, and I'm more than pleased that the livestock industry is delivering on that important issue. They were very clear that if we want to be a serious player in that global market, traceability programs have to be in place. This is already mandatory in Alberta. We're further encouraged by the recent announcement by the federal government that a national traceability program will be launched in 2012.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

2:10 Investments in Tobacco Companies

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has refused to implement an ethical investment strategy and continues to allow investments in tobacco companies. A new policy initiative would allow this government to recoup health care costs from the tobacco industry. However, the hypocrisy is a little bit hard to ignore on this one. To the minister of finance – this appears to be the semiannual question – how much does this government invest in tobacco companies through the heritage trust fund?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I can get that information. It's a difficult thing to provide because many times tobacco companies or corporations are part of conglomerates where the investment is done on a larger scale, so it might be one of 80 different companies that's part of a single investment that might be made by Alberta Investment Management Corporation. What I can tell the hon. member is that anything that has been invested on behalf of the cancer legacy project has been done exclusive of any investment in tobacco companies.

Earlier, I believe, when one of the hon. member's colleagues asked this question and we looked at what potentially was the answer, it may have been about 1.8 per cent, but I'd like to seek clarity on that, Mr. Speaker, before I went further.*

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would appreciate that clarity as well.

Would the minister table a listing of all the companies in which the government invests money through the heritage trust fund? I understand the difficulty of separating it, but it can be done. We would send messages: please don't invest in porn companies, arms, or tobacco.

Ms Evans: Well, I hope there's no suggestion in this House that we are investing in porn companies. Please. I mean, I hope that's not the suggestion. If I've misheard and it's "foreign," then obviously we're investing in companies that have a multinational context. But I would be very pleased to get what is provided.

Note, Mr. Speaker, that we do have, with the hon. chair from Calgary-Fish Creek, a meeting scheduled annually, a public meeting on the subject of our investments. We had one in Calgary very recently, and the hon. member's own colleagues asked some questions, none of which related to a complete listing. I know that if they'd asked for that at the committee, it would have been available.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Further to that, how much does the minister expect to save through recouping medical costs from the tobacco companies? Will these savings then be reinvested back into the same companies? If that happens, we're suing ourselves.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, as the member knows, that bill is before the House. We have made no decision whether there will be any legal action launched against tobacco companies, so that question is somewhat premature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Underground Electricity Transmission Lines

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have received hundreds of letters and e-mails in my office from many concerned constituents and community groups who attended several public meetings about a very important issue. My constituents have asked me to raise in this Assembly their issues with the proposed Heartland transmission project power lines along the west end TUC. My constituents aren't questioning the need for transmission infrastructure. Rather, they're asking for consideration of their request for the power lines to be built in a safe and responsible manner. My question is to the Minister of Energy. What is the minister doing to address the concerns of my constituents regarding the siting of high-voltage power lines in highly populated areas?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to make it very clear that the government is not involved in the siting of transmission in the province of Alberta. That rests solely with the Alberta Utilities Commission, a quasi-judicial body that holds open, public hearings with respect to the siting of transmission lines. That will continue whether it's in the Heartland area, in the Edmonton region, or anywhere in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental question is to the same minister. Many of my constituents feel strongly that burying this line would significantly reduce the health, property value, and aesthetic impacts of the overhead 500-kilovolt lines. What is the status of the study commissioned by the minister on the feasibility of burying transmission lines, and when can we expect the outcomes of that study to be made public?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, actually there are two studies that are under way. My department has commissioned a study by Stantec. They're an international engineering firm based here in Alberta, and they will look at the options of underground transmission as they relate generally to the province of Alberta. They have expertise and have been looking at the options here and in other places in North America and around the world, I believe. I'm expecting that I would have a report from them before the end of this year.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, AESO, the Alberta Electric System Operator, is also doing a study relative to underground transmission as it would relate to the heartland region.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Sherman: Again, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental question is to the same minister. Will the minister support the burial of transmission lines through highly populated areas, some of which include schools, homes, daycare centres, and hospitals?

Mr. Knight: First off, Mr. Speaker, again, I think I should make it clear here that Health Canada has found that there is no significant link between overhead transmission lines and human health. I know that the hon. member is a doctor and would be aware of the information, I'm sure. Also, I would like to point out that burying lines does not necessarily eliminate all of the things like electromagnetic fields. Even though the levels are safe, the issue will remain. Any time that you transmit electricity through wires, you will have this issue.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for First Responders

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's delivery platform for H1N1 vaccination was said to receive a shot in the arm this week. However, I have some questions, or shall I say concerns, regarding its rollout. My questions are for the Solicitor General. Across the nation other sensible jurisdictions chose to vaccinate first responders, including police officers, earlier this month. What was your rationale for waiting until now?

Mr. Lindsay: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the health minister spoke to this a number of times. I don't know of any police officer in this province who would want to jump to the head of the line in front of pregnant women and children between six months and five years.

*See page 1815, right column, paragraph 9

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Solicitor General: given the significant delay in vaccination availability, haven't you failed in your duty to advocate for the health and safety of front-line police officers and corrections personnel in this province?

Mr. Lindsay: Not at all, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the very nature of the work of first responders indicates that they would obviously be at a higher risk to contract the virus. But, again, these people are generally very healthy, and they don't get associated with the severe reactions that those who are most vulnerable do.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first responders want to help this government fix the vaccination problems. They have offered to do the vaccinations themselves. I guess now the question to the minister of health is: why are you making police officers and other first responders who have offered to do this themselves take up space in the main vaccination process?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure if that particular member was here yesterday or he just simply was not paying attention, but what I said yesterday was that starting yesterday, if any first responders wanted to go to a mass clinic and get vaccinated, they were eligible to do so. I said at the same time that Alberta Health Services was making arrangements to get the vaccine to the various municipal authorities around the province so that they could do exactly what this member is suggesting today. So I'm saying to the member that if he would contact those municipalities, he would probably find out that they are doing today exactly what he is suggesting they should be doing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Income Support

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. According to Food Banks Canada 24,000 more Albertans are going hungry this year. These are numbers that even this government can't ignore. Clearly, the government's response to the economic crisis is yet another example of how they are leading Alberta in the wrong direction. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: why is it that in this province, the richest province in Canada, so many more people are going hungry?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we had negotiated with the federal government and added some additional money within our budget to take care of our most vulnerable people, those who might have lost their jobs through no fault of their own. Our intent is to try to provide a helping hand to get individuals back into the mainstream, into the workforce as soon as possible.

2:20

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, it clearly hasn't worked.

According to this report the number of children who don't have enough to eat in Alberta is amongst the highest in the country. Now, we know that children who grow up in poverty face even greater challenges to break the cycle once they are adults. How can the minister justify his ongoing failure to address our growing poverty when we know that we will be paying for this for generations to come?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the number of people that have approached our office has increased quite dramatically over the last four or five months. There's no doubt, if the hon. member would remember, that we increased our income support benefits last November in response to some of the rising challenges that Albertans have. I can say that those added supports have helped thousands of people to meet their needs.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, they clearly didn't help the 24,000 additional people going to food banks.

The government's job loss projections were way off the mark. As a result, as you noted, we're seeing the number of families forced to rely on the government's paltry income support programs up by over 10,000. Now, the people who are lining up for food charity are a direct result of this government sticking its head in the sand and ignoring the problem. What does the minister have to say to the thousands of Albertans who are unable to feed their families because of their failure to take action?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of approaches that we've used for that. First is that income support will always be available for those that are unable to support themselves. We added considerably more money last year to address those that require additional income support. But what people really need is the type of help that will get them back on their feet, so we've spent on the other side a lot of effort to retrain people and help them to find a job and to be able to provide for themselves and for their families.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Southwest Calgary Ring Road

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently, along with many other hon. members, I was honoured to attend the extremely successful grand opening of the northern half of the Calgary ring road. And the great news continues. Plans indicate there will be a complete ring road around the entire city of Edmonton by the year 2015. However, there is a large gap in southwest Calgary's ring road plans. My first question is to the Minister of Transportation. What is your ministry doing to ensure that Calgary has a complete ring road in the future, just like Edmonton?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, as this hon. member likely knows, the Tsuu T'ina Nation voted against a deal putting the ring road through their lands. We respect that decision, and we have to look at other options. I can tell this hon. member that we're working very closely with the city of Calgary on those options, and it's going very, very well. We hope to sign a memorandum of understanding by the end of the month, and when that happens, I think we'll be moving forward. I encourage the hon. member to stay tuned and pay attention to what's going on in his city.

Mr. Rodney: We've certainly got our finger on the pulse, and I'm very glad that the minister does as well. I commend him for the portion of the ring road which is set to be completed in Edmonton by 2011, but I am concerned, as you know, about the planning phase for Calgary's ring road. What details can you give us on the timeline for the Calgary ring road?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I'm very pleased to inform the member that a much bigger section of the Calgary ring road is beyond the planning phase than was mentioned in his question. We opened the entire northern section, 45 per cent of the ring road, just a couple of weeks ago. We're going to start building the southeast section this spring, and it'll be finished by the fall of 2013. So by the fall of 2013 roughly 70 per cent of Calgary's ring road will be done and all free flow. As I mentioned in the House before, we may not be able to complete a little part of the southwest by 2015, but we're working as fast as we can to get it done.

Mr. Rodney: My final question is to the same minister, who has suggested that one of the options for the southwest portion of the ring road in Calgary is that this section would have an 80 kilometre an hour speed limit and be two lanes, instead of four or six, which would of course limit the amount of open land required. We're very concerned in the southwest about this little section he referred to. Why would the minister consider this section of the ring road to be the only section of the Alberta ring roads for Edmonton or Calgary that would have lower speed limits and fewer lanes?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know where he got that kind of information from, that there might only be two lanes or something, because it's absolutely false. Our goal is to build the highest standard of road that we can. The planning is being done right now. We're trying to find a balance between building the very, very best road possible with the least disruption to people's lives and the least impact on the environment. We'll go for the highest standard of road that we can get. All I've been saying to my own officials in engineering is: don't be so rigid, let's look at all the scenarios, and let's make sure we can get the job done and have free-flow traffic all around Calgary.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Lobbying Government (continued)

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our research indicates that AltaLink is not registered as a lobbyist in this province under the new legislation. My first question is to the acting Premier. Why is AltaLink allowed to sponsor part of the political convention that occurred and was organized by the PC Party in Red Deer in November? Why are you allowing this outfit to sponsor a portion of your convention?

Thank you.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it probably won't come as a great surprise to the hon. member and to most Albertans that there are a lot of companies in Alberta that support this government and have for decades. There is legislation. We try very hard to separate the party business, which really has no purview in this House, and government business. There is a lobbyists registries act that's in place, and if the hon. member wants to take time to learn it and understand, everyone who wants to lobby government will need to register. That's the law.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, there are only a few companies that will benefit directly from the new transmission and distribution policy that this government is anticipated to bring forward. My second question again to whoever is acting Premier: is Capital Power, who also sponsored part of the PC convention in Red Deer, registered under the Lobbyists Act?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it would probably just be simpler if the hon. member could find any indication at any time where sponsoring a political event has given them an inside track or personal gain from this government. If he's got any indication of that, anything rather than inference, just stand up and say so. Go out on the steps and talk about the companies that he's making accusations about, or give us an example of any kind where they can show that being a member of our political party has given them an inside track or influence in this government.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to whoever is acting Premier over across the way: how much money was spent by AltaLink and by Capital Power sponsoring the PC convention in Red Deer in November?

Mr. Snelgrove: Well, to whoever is acting as a critic for this particular thing, I have no idea, and it's really none of my business.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Notre Dame High School Expansion

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Notre Dame is the only high school within the constituency of Calgary-Mackay, which has a population of over 60,000 people. This school was built for $17 million, at half of the original budget. When I visited the school, students were trying to have a music lesson on the stage, where they do not have adequate space to possibly play the instruments, and it is the only high school built without a theatre recently. My questions are to the Minister of Education. The Calgary Catholic school board has identified the expansion of Notre Dame high school as its number one priority capital project for several consecutive years. What is taking the ministry so long to address the identified facility inadequacy at Notre Dame high school?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, Notre Dame high school is the top capital priority for Calgary Catholic this year, but I think it's worth noting that in the ASAP 1 program we are building 18 schools, including nine in Calgary, six of those for Calgary public and three for Calgary Catholic. In ASAP 2 another six schools are being built in Calgary and two in the neighbouring area. So Calgary has been well served by capital for schools in the last couple of years, and the programs are ongoing. Those schools will be open in 2010 and 2012, I believe. Significant progress is being made with respect to school capital in Calgary, but there's no question that the Notre Dame school is high on our priority list and will get addressed when we have the capital budget to do it.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Okay. My second question is to the same minister. Are there design standards set for high schools in Alberta? If not, why not?

Mr. Hancock: Well, yes, Mr. Speaker, there are standards for high school facilities. They're outlined in the School Capital Manual, which is available on the Education and Infrastructure websites. The manual specifies standards based on school capacity for classroom sizes, science spaces, gymnasiums, libraries, music and art spaces, career and technology studies, ancillary spaces, et cetera.

There are also environmental design standards. Infrastructure requires that all school capital projects, in fact, I believe, all public buildings now built, achieve a LEED silver standard, which is the leadership in energy and environmental design standard agreed building rating system. Those standards are in place, but within those standards jurisdictions do have the flexibility to reconfigure their school design.

Ms Woo-Paw: My last question is: would the minister have a personal visit at the school the next time you're in the Calgary area?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I would be delighted to visit that school the next time I'm in Calgary. I'll be in touch with her. If it's in her constituency, she'll know when I'm coming to Calgary, and she'll be able to arrange that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

U of A Sustainable Development Campus

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, this October an international team of planners with the Urban Land Institute pored over the opportunities for the U of A to achieve landmark environmental standards as it develops its south campus. The planning results were pretty exciting, actually, and I want to congratulate the ministers of Environment and Energy for showing leadership on environmental design. My question, the first one, is to the Minister of Environment. What is the status of the plan that came out of that week-long exercise?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to acknowledge that I, too, believe that the work that was accomplished in this week-long exercise will be invaluable as we begin to understand what sustainable development is all about. As I understand, the group that was here, the Urban Land Institute, prepared a preliminary report, which they have presented to the university and to those that were involved on the Friday of the event, and they're preparing a more detailed final report, which we will anticipate receiving shortly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks. The Alberta departments of Environment and Energy were very involved in this process, as was the U of A, but the Department of Advanced Education and Technology didn't seem to be. So I guess I'll go back to the Minister of Environment for the moment. Are all government departments involved in this working together, or are there conflicting views between the departments on this planning process?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think we should be clear that the emphasis of this program was twofold. One was to assist the University of Alberta in the development of a plan that they want to put in place for a sustainable developed campus. The reason why Alberta Environment and Alberta Energy were involved is because it's in our interest to meet the core business that we are responsible for, to more fully understand what opportunities are available for us for not only this project but any sustainable development project in Alberta. That's the reason why Alberta Environment and Energy were involved. I would say that Advanced Education was involved in that they are one of the prime sources of funding for the University of Alberta, who were substantially involved.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Okay. Mr. Speaker, I think I'll go to the minister of advanced education for my last question. The members of the panel included some of the top urban planners, designers, and developers on the continent. They proposed what I think is a pretty inspiring goal for the south campus for the year 2035: "If everyone on Earth lived like the [proposed] community at the University of Alberta's South Campus, we'd arrest climate change and live sustainably within the limited resources of our . . . planet." My question to the minister: will this government consider making it a condition on any development funding for the south campus that the university's development plans meet this target?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, officials from our department were at this planning session, and I would like to commend both the departments of Energy and Environment for working with us as a cross-government initiative. We're doing that more and more in this government, and it holds great promise for a number of issues.

I would also point out to the hon. member – and he has been well advised of this over the course of the year and a half, two years that we've been talking about it in this House – that Campus Alberta looks at the capital projects around the province and prioritizes those capital projects through the Alberta access planning framework document that we produce every year. This will be encapsulated in that. It is also my hope, Mr. Speaker, that when the report is fully vetted and we've had an opportunity to look through the entire part of it, this report would also go to the Campus Alberta Strategic Directions Committee, which is all of the chairs of the boards of governors of Campus Alberta, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Provincial Tax Incentives

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In August furniture manufacturer Haworth Inc. announced that they were transferring their operations from Calgary to a plant in Michigan. Their rationale: because the Michigan state government had just passed a tax incentive program. My question is to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. What is the minister doing to ensure that Alberta's tax structure is the most competitive in North America so that we don't see more of these transfers of jobs?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, that's actually an excellent question. There have been recent reports from Ontario and other provinces that many of the places south of the border have been looking at incentives plus bonuses to get people to come and take their industry there. So on a regular basis we judge and take a look at not only a Canadian scan but a North American scan.

Certainly in Canada I can tell you that even with the proposed changes to the small-business tax in British Columbia, for the overall tax package, for the overall tax advantage Alberta certainly still leads Canada. You will find some select states who have made changes, and you will find some select cities in states who have made changes, but if you look at the overall tax basket and what is offered here in Alberta, we do believe that we're not only leading in Canada for an advantage but in most of America.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just last month the School of Public Policy from the University of Calgary authored a report by Jack Mintz that suggested Alberta was losing its tax advantage and suggested a proposal that it start shifting its taxes away from investment and savings towards a consumption tax, a concept similarly endorsed by this Assembly last year in a motion brought forward by the Member for Battle River-Wainwright. To the same minister: can the minister tell this Assembly if she's looking at these proposed changes as outlined in this report?

Ms Evans: No. Quite simply, no. We would, if we were to ever consider a sales or a consumption tax, by our own laws have to bring a referendum forward. Our Premier has spoken very eloquently both last summer and last fall: no tax increases, no new taxes. A consumption tax would be a new tax.

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Speaker, the current economic global recession has created a real restructuring within the global economic climate both in Canada and across the world, and I think that as a government we ought to be looking at where our place is. My question to the minister is: what is she doing to ensure that Alberta's industry and Albertans are consulted in regard to any potential changes in tax structure that may assist our province to recover from the economic recession?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, because we have no plans to change tax structure, we're working with Alberta economic development authorities throughout the province to take a look not at taxes per se but at the regulatory framework and in conjunction with all MLAs and ministers to look at any barriers to doing business, look at more cost-effective ways of sharing our efforts, and look at principles of overall cost, user fees, and the many mixes of things that go into making us truly competitive. Along with that, there are things that labour and the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology are looking at. Many of the ministries currently, I think, will be talking about those in the business plans and in the plans that we have to create more awareness of what we can do in the weeks and months ahead.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today. There will be four more.

The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness wanted to supplement an answer given yesterday in response to a question from the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, which will allow an additional question and an additional response. The hon. minister.

2:40 Pastoral Care in Health Facilities

Mr. Liepert: Yes. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Member for Lethbridge-East asked me to explain why pastoral care is being cut across the province.* I did some checking with Alberta Health Services, and what I can tell the member is that at the Royal Alexandra hospital four supervisory positions have been eliminated. However, two staff chaplain positions were created in addition to provide direct high-quality patient care. A clinical pastoral care teaching position was also created and offered to one of the staff members whose position had been eliminated. I am assured by Alberta Health Services that there are no plans to eliminate spiritual care and will continue to value the important contribution.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition on behalf of?

Dr. Swann: Yes.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the widespread perception, including those in the spiritual community, is that you do have plans, Mr. Minister, to reduce spiritual supports. Can you say that there is or there is not any plan to reduce spiritual support in the latter time of life?

Mr. Liepert: I will repeat what I just said, Mr. Speaker, because like the Member for Calgary-Buffalo I guess the Leader of the Opposition was not listening to what I just said. I've been assured by the CEO of Alberta Health Services that there are no plans to eliminate spiritual care, and we'll continue to value the important contribution.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise would also like to supplement an answer also as a result of a question from the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Investments in Tobacco Companies (continued)

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to be clear and to put this on the record relative to the question of overall investment of heritage fund dollars in any tobacco-related company.* Point two seven per cent is actually invested in the amount of $42,073,239.29. Of that, $36,839,582.04 is part of a passive investment through an index product, S&P 500 or MSCI EAFE, and actively, externally through external investors $5,329,968.59 is part of investments that may contain tobacco products. Relative to the listing, I'll come back with that at a later date.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks on behalf, Mr. Speaker. The minister made it clear in her responses earlier this afternoon that the cancer legacy fund explicitly does not invest in tobacco products. Why in the world wouldn't you extend that same limitation to all government investments? After all, tobacco kills, and we all know that. So why don't you just do the right thing?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, the heritage fund by its very nature is considerate of longer term investments. Many of these investments are long-term strategies that are in longer term products. We have had this conversation in the House before. I will go back and find out the details of it, but I believed it was important to give the numbers today.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that is a number of 102 questions and responses today.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today with two separate petitions I'd like to present, the first one signed by 182 residents in Lethbridge and area. The petition reads:

*See page 1780, left column, paragraph 1

*See page 1811, left column, paragraph 2

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to:

Grandfather the rights and status of all currently-practicing Registered Massage Therapists . . . in Alberta in a manner that they may continue their practice undisturbed and ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

A second one, Mr. Speaker, very similar but worded differently, signed by 319 residents in Lethbridge and area, reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to:

Grandfather the rights and status of all currently-practicing Registered Massage Therapists . . . in Alberta in a manner that they may continue their practice undisturbed and, when necessary, gradually upgrade to newly-proclaimed standards of training, so as not to force current therapists to lose their ongoing income whilst upgrading and so to ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of tablings, the first of which is a program. Last night the hon. members for Calgary-Buffalo, Edmonton-Gold Bar, Edmonton-Whitemud, and I had the pleasure of attending the new teacher induction ceremony at Barnett House. A particularly memorable moment came when a 40-year teaching veteran, Sherry Robbins, observed that children do not care how much a teacher knows but, rather, want to know how much a teacher cares.

My second tabling consists of the requisite number of collated copies of e-mails from concerned Calgarians Marli Nichol, Laura Anderson, Leslie Chapman, Jacqueline Christensen, David Fettes, Jean Gaucher, Carmen Giancarlo, Tara Growden, Kellie Jackson, Catherine Marshall, Meaghan McInnis, Michelle McRorie, Philip Sarsons, Marion Stahr-Elaschuk, Hailey Taylor, Holly Theriault, John Whidden, and Adine Whitfield, all urging the Minister of Education and the Premier not to cut funding to education because the future prosperity of Alberta depends on the knowledge and skills of its children and because it's even more important to invest in education now.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Calgary-Currie I want to table two letters: one from Roger Gagné, a citizen of Grande Prairie, who quotes from the Calgary School of Public Policy, "showing that the proposed $3.1-billion power line between Calgary and Edmonton, in particular, would be inefficient and overkill for provincial electricity and generation needs," the other from Bill Partridge of the Building Owners and Managers Association of the Greater Calgary Region indicating the same, that "we are not convinced that Bill 50 is a good initiative."

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. First, I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a report prepared for Alberta Seniors and Community Supports in May '09 titled Long-Term Care Accommodations Variable Fee Structure Advisory Team Session Summary. I referred to this report in my questions earlier today. The report shows that the committee was directed to look at targets for reducing long-term care beds.

The second report, Mr. Speaker, was referred to by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in her questions today. It's the appropriate number of copies of a report by Food Banks Canada titled HungerCount 2009, which shows that the greatest increase in food bank usage by far is in the province of Alberta.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Liepert, Minister of Health and Wellness, pursuant to the Health Professions Act the College of Dietitians of Alberta annual report 2008-2009, the College of Registered Dental Hygienists of Alberta 2008 annual report, the Alberta College and Association of Chiropractors annual report to government 2008-2009; pursuant to the Opticians Act the Alberta Opticians Association annual report 2008; pursuant to the Regional Health Authorities Act the Health Quality Council of Alberta 2008-2009 annual report; pursuant to the Mental Health Act the Alberta Mental Health Patient Advocate office 2008-2009 annual report.

On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Jablonski, Minister of Seniors and Community Supports, pursuant to the Persons with Developmental Disabilities Community Governance Act the persons with developmental disabilities community boards consolidated annual report 2008-2009.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Horner, Minister of Advanced Education and Technology, pursuant to the Apprenticeship and Industry Training Act the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board annual report 2008-2009.

The Speaker: Hon. members, if you want to see a happy man, look at the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. Today he and his young bride are celebrating their 44th wedding anniversary.

2:50

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 50

Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate June 2: Mr. Blackett]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to participate in today's second reading of Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. On October 14 Premier Stelmach laid out our government's . . .

The Speaker: No, no, no.

Mr. Campbell: Oh, sorry. Our Premier laid out our government's way forward position for a strong economy in our province in a province-wide televised address. This four-point economic plan included a commitment to invest in Alberta's infrastructure. Along with roads, schools, and hospitals, this includes investing in our electricity transmission system, infrastructure that's critical to all Albertans who use electricity to power their homes and businesses.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 50 plays an important role in our way forward. As with roads, schools, and hospitals Bill 50 gives government the responsibility to approve the need for such critical infrastructure. I'll speak today about how Bill 50 is crucial to Alberta's long-term success and prosperity, and I'll speak about how it doesn't take away the voices of Albertans in the decision-making process. We're all aware of the tremendous debate surrounding Bill 50. Detractors say that we don't need new infrastructure, that the cost of projects would fall heavily onto the shoulders of Albertans, that government will push through projects behind closed doors, and that concerned Albertans will lose their say.

I appreciate the opportunity to address these fears with the facts. Mr. Speaker, there's been much talk about the cost to Albertans if Bill 50 is passed. I would suggest that the cost to Albertans would ultimately be much higher if we do not pass this bill and if we don't act immediately. Rumours abound about the cost for the critical transmission infrastructure projects included in Bill 50. The price seems to increase daily, depending on what you're reading or who you're talking to.

The fact is that Bill 50 approves the need for four critical transmission infrastructure projects. The estimated cost for the four projects is $5.6 billion. But what does this mean to Albertans? It means that the average residential customer will see an increase of less than $6 on their monthly bill, or less than $72 a year, once all four projects are in service. We expect that to be around 2017. The cost will be addressed in increments starting around 2012 and increase over time as the projects are completed.

Another fact is that the amount that Albertans pay for transmission has always been based on the amount of power they consume. Let me say again that Albertans will pay a higher price in the long run if we maintain the status quo. Today there are generators who cannot connect to the system because there's not adequate transmission in place. If we don't correct this situation, we will lose some of our investors, creating a lack of competition, followed by an increase in energy costs. There's a very real threat of power outages, blackouts, and brownouts, and the costs to society would be very high. As a government we cannot accept this, and as a government we will not accept this.

As a government we know that public input is crucial to the democratic process. Mr. Speaker, the simple fact is that Bill 50 does not take away the public's right to be heard. Bill 50 speaks to needs only. The Alberta Utilities Commission will continue to be responsible for making decisions on the siting of transmission facilities. This includes determining a specific location for individual power lines. In doing so, the Alberta Utilities Commission will continue to ensure that Albertans whose rights may be directly and adversely affected by a proposed transmission development are informed of the application. These Albertans will continue to have the opportunity to voice their concerns in the review process. We strongly encourage affected Albertans to do so.

Mr. Speaker, the claim that the planning of transmission projects is happening behind closed doors is unwarranted and untrue. In fact, the AESO, the Alberta Electric System Operator, carried out extensive public consultations on various proposals to develop or expand the transmission system. The AESO developed their long-term transmission system plan after 92 open houses, attended by more than 2,500 attendees, 48 meetings with small groups, 148 presentations to municipalities, and distribution of more than 1 million copies of Powering Alberta magazine.

Let's be very clear about the AESO, Mr. Speaker. The AESO does not own any generation facilities, it does not own any transmission lines, nor does it construct any transmission facilities. In short, the AESO has no vested interest in recommending that building certain infrastructure is critical.

Following the approval of Bill 50, which approves the four critical transmission infrastructure projects, the AUC will conduct public hearings to determine the specific route for a transmission line and locations for substations. A number of things are considered at the facility hearing, including the specific location of proposed substations and the route of proposed transmission lines; impact on residents, the environment, and agricultural operations; visual impacts; technical issues; and safety matters. Make no mistake, Mr. Speaker: Albertans have been heard and will continue to be heard. The public's participation will remain an important part in the development and siting of all transmission infrastructure projects in Alberta.

When it comes down to it, Bill 50 is about ensuring Alberta's future remains bright, and I mean that both figuratively and literally. Mr. Speaker, Bill 50 means keeping the lights on in Alberta homes and businesses well into the future. It means facilitating continued growth in the province by making sure we have the necessary transmission infrastructure in place so that more power is added to the grid as needed. It will be needed not in 10 years, not in five years but this year, and we need to take action now. Bill 50 prepares us for the future today. It addresses the issues of inadequate and inefficient transmission systems immediately, making sure we have a reliable and competitively priced supply of electricity.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to participate in this debate.

The Speaker: I have a very short speakers list so far: the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, then the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I indicated the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore after the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Hinman: Under 29(2)(a) could I ask questions?

The Speaker: This being the second person, there's no question available on the second. It starts on the third. You can ask one of the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Go ahead.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, now that we have that sorted out, I can't help but notice that the sky has not yet fallen, that since Bill 50 was introduced in this House, the lights have not gone out. Well, they did go out briefly last week, apparently, in my apartment here in Edmonton and in the building where I have an apartment, but that was strictly a building problem. The lights have not gone out, yet government members opposite and the AESO, which we've heard described by the Member for West Yellowhead as having no vested interest in this at all – and technically he's right – and various others continue to present this issue of Bill 50 and the need to pass this legislation as though we are hours away from rolling brownouts. They've been presenting it that way long enough, and the rolling brownouts have yet to occur, so I'm just a little bit skeptical myself.

Bill 50 is a bad bill in principle which seeks to do something that – you'll get no argument from me – we actually do need to do in the province of Alberta, and that is to upgrade an electricity transmission grid that has not had substantial upgrades to it in quite a number of years. We do need to upgrade it; it's getting old. That doesn't necessarily mean that it's going to break down any time soon, but it's getting old. The province certainly has grown. The population of this province has grown, the industrial and commercial base of this province has grown, and the consumption of power has gone up. Maybe not so much this year – and I hear tell that the AESO is about to go back and revisit its projections in light of the economic downturn – but certainly we had for a number of years there quite a run on electricity. Interestingly enough, the vast majority of that increased electrical consumption was done by industrial users who built their own generating capacity and cogenerating capacity, and a relatively small percentage of that was an increase in demand by the general population.

Now, I think, Mr. Speaker, it's probably a good time to point out that the general population of the province of Alberta really isn't responsible for all that much of the power that is consumed, the electricity that's consumed in the run of a day, week, month, or year in this province. In fact, according to the Department of Energy's own data residential use of electricity amounts to 17 per cent, or did in 2008 – the numbers will not be dramatically different this year – farm use was 3 per cent, and the rest was industrial and commercial: 54 per cent industrial, 26 per cent commercial. Now, the biggest of the big industrial users are tending to generate their own power, and often in cogeneration situations, granted, there's a need on the part of those users, those generators to be able to dump their excess power when they have it onto the grid and have it go somewhere.

Essentially, Mr. Speaker, when a generator generates electricity, that generator, no matter who it is, whether it's a company engaged in a manufacturing or industrial enterprise, whether it is a company like TransAlta or EPCOR or Capital Power or Enmax, is generating power to provide to electricity users. Once that company generates the power, that company really doesn't care where the electricity ends up. All that company is concerned about, and rightly so, is having the ability to put that realized generating capacity onto the grid and have somebody else deliver it somewhere where it's needed. This is really key in the case of coal-fired generators, and I'll come back to that in a second.

3:00

The point here, though, that I was making in terms of consumption of electricity in Alberta by sector is that there has been much talk about the impact that building this gold-plated Lexus of a transmission system will have on individual homeowners' electricity bills, whether it's $8 a month or $2,000 a year or anything in between. I'm not even going to stand here and argue the numbers at this point. We can get that specific, if we need to, at committee stage. What we're forgetting when we talk about that is the impact that paying for this grid, paying for the package of upgrades to this grid will have on industrial users, will have on commercial users, will have on institutional users, will have on employers. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that there's a risk here that we're going to make some of them uncompetitive. We're going to make some of them pick up and move to Saskatchewan if we go through with this whole thing hook, line, and sinker as has been proposed or even if we go through it in stages.

There are a few things to take into consideration here. Number one, Bill 50 does remove the right of public input at the needs-assessment stage. Yes, it still provides for the AUC to hold hearings on siting and things like that, but if a high-voltage 500-kilovolt direct current transmission line or two have already been declared critical transmission infrastructure by this government – and correct me if I'm wrong, Mr. Speaker, but I don't know of any electrical engineers or, for that matter, even electricians sitting in cabinet, so I don't know where the expertise comes from for the minister or the Premier or the cabinet to make the decision as to whether this is critical transmission infrastructure or not – if that declaration under Bill 50 were to be made, then there is no choice, really, but to go ahead with holding the siting hearings.

What kind of extra pressure does that put on the AUC to approve whatever siting, you know, within reason, has been already spelled out by the AESO? I mean, there's going to be a lot of added pressure on the AUC to just roll through with this thing. We have to remember that whether they're industrial, commercial, institutional, residential, or farm consumers, consumers are getting stuck with a hundred per cent of this bill. Therefore, consumers, in my view, Mr. Speaker, have the right to challenge the need for the expenditure and the right to an impartial laying of the facts by the AUC.

Politicians, as I mentioned, are not experts at electricity. We should not be making decisions about critical infrastructure, and neither should AESO because AESO's credibility on this score is suspect, too. It's not because AESO are bad people. They're good people. They're well-meaning people. Indeed, as I think the Minister of Energy pointed out yesterday in question period, they may have 200 electrical engineers working for them, on call to them, that they can consult for their opinion as to where you need to put these lines. But, you know, they could have 200 or 2,000 or 2 million, for that matter, and it wouldn't make a difference so long as AESO is restricted by the mandate this government gave AESO to consider one and only one remedy for every problem that AESO encounters. That remedy is: build more transmission lines. That's the only thing they can consider. So what other answer are they going to come up with?

Well, Mr. Speaker, if you don't go down the route of approving Bill 50, there are other options because under the Electric Utilities Act as it exists now, there are opportunities and requirements. The AESO is required to submit a needs identification document for every line it wants to build. The others who are involved in that situation, the actual owners of the transmission facility, have the means to object if they believe that AESO's proposal is stupid or dangerous or ill-informed. These sorts of things are the things that the minister and cabinet and government want to punt, and I don't think there's any justification for that.

You know, it doesn't matter, as far as the general public is concerned, that AUC will still be holding siting hearings, because the general public still doesn't get a public hearing around the need for the line in the first place. This public hearing, Mr. Speaker, is called a public interest hearing. A public interest hearing. The AUC holds these hearings, which I understand the Department of Energy thinks take far too long, slows the process down by two years. As I referenced earlier, we're mere hours away from rolling brownouts, according to the proponents of this thing. They hold these public interest hearings to determine and to allow you, Mr. Speaker, and me and the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose if he wants and independent experts, most importantly, to weigh in as to whether the social, economic, and environmental impacts of building said transmission line are in the public interest or not. History is full of absolute rulers with absolute power who got the trains to run on time, but it turns out that none of them was so hot at acting in the public interest on an ongoing basis, and I think that's worth keeping in mind.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 50 would be something that I would be very happy with if I was the operator of coal-fired generating facilities because coal-fired generating facilities are really hard to start up if they shut down. Of course, you have to shut them down periodically for planned maintenance, and every once in a while one of them goes down for unplanned maintenance. Then you have to start them up again. These are not facilities that you turn off and on with the flick of a switch. It takes awhile to power these things up. They are difficult to power up. It is much better if you've got a big old smoke-belching coal-fired generating station, once you've got that thing on, to keep it running 24/7, 365 with, you know, the scheduled maintenance intervals.

That power, Mr. Speaker, that electricity that that big old coal-fired generating plant is producing: well, it has to go somewhere. Interestingly, the coal-fired generating stations are mostly located west of the city of Edmonton, and the load, the people who need the power: well, they're in Edmonton; they're in the Industrial Heartland. They're also in the south, in and around Calgary and down in southern Alberta. These lines will function very well at getting coal-fired generating capacity, coal-fired generated electricity from Wabamun or wherever down to the people in Calgary, as an example.

Okay. That's great. The people in Calgary need power. Everybody knows we Calgarians, although we do try, could try a little harder to be better conservationists when it comes to using electricity. That's a fact. But, you see, it kind of hooks us on the dirtiest power that there is. Parenthetically, one of the things that really galls me about some in the environmental movement is that they're trying so hard to tar the oil sands with this tar sands, dirty-oil label, brand. They've succeeded to some extent. Interestingly, all the oil sands developments currently in operation generate 36 per cent of our greenhouse gas emissions, and the handful of coal-fired generating stations generates 44 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, we could flip those relatively easily because, after all, the infrastructure, the building infrastructure and the related infrastructure, is in place. We could switch those existing coal-fired plants to gas reasonably easily and reduce our carbon footprint from the production of electricity to 40 per cent of what it is today. I think that would be significant. Plus we're missing a golden opportunity here by imposing an old-school solution on a problem that actually presents a raft of new opportunities that we're on the cusp of: distributed generation; building the generating capacity close to where it's going to be consumed; things like the ability, which is not that far away, of individual homeowners to engage in a little bit of cogeneration on their own behalf, taking the waste heat off their furnace and using it to generate the power that is going to provide much of their home-based consumption needs, might even power their car when they plug it in at night once they've got an electric car. We've got gas-fired generators versus coal. I spoke about that.

3:10

So there's a raft of opportunities here, some of them pretty exciting, for greening our grid. One of the things, Mr. Speaker, that is key here is that we do need to take a sustained, sustainable, predictable, logical, sensible approach to expanding and modernizing our grid so as to make it possible for an individual homeowner to dump excess power that he has generated onto the grid for somebody else to use or to make all kinds of things possible: the generation of more wind power, et cetera, more renewables. Those things do require a more modernized grid but a greener grid.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood under 29(2)(a).

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the hon. member if he could elaborate further on prospects for greening the production of electricity in our province.

Mr. Taylor: Well, thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Yeah, to an extent I will. I'm not an expert in it, just like I suspect you're not an expert and just like I suspect nobody else in this House is really an expert in electricity. There is great potential for generating electricity via the use of wind power. It may even be not only confined to southern Alberta. We generally think the greatest generating capacity for wind is in southern Alberta, in that corridor from the Crowsnest Pass sort of over to Lethbridge, but there may be capacity to build wind-generation facilities in other parts of the province because wind does not necessarily blow across Alberta on a consistent basis, like it does under this dome sometimes. So if the wind isn't blowing in Lethbridge, but it is blowing east of Red Deer, why shouldn't we have wind turbines there to generate power, for instance?

There is biomass as well, which we have started to work with but which we could do much more with, in my opinion.

There's solar, which we basically haven't started to work with. If you look in Europe, if you look in Germany especially – and, granted, this has involved heavy government subsidies, and this is not something that I or anyone else in this House can recommend without this House having a discussion on whether they want to go down the route of subsidization. In Germany the government there has subsidized whole solar farms where, literally, farmers' fields have been turned over to, you know, a combination of growing crops and arrays of solar panels that generate a fair amount of electricity.

Now, none of these situations, none of these examples is the ideal solution to all our electrical woes or our environmental woes. It's going to take a combination of strategies, but there is real potential there. There is real potential, hon. member, for you to have what is called a Stirling engine fitted on your furnace in a couple of years' time probably, once they've been properly tested, and with the waste heat from your furnace generate some of the electricity that you use in your house. If you decide to trade in – well, it's not a New Yorker that you're driving – some kind of Chrysler on a plug-in hybrid or a plug-in electrical vehicle on down the road, maybe it will recharge your car's batteries overnight.

There are some very, very interesting possibilities here. We're on the cusp of those possibilities, Mr. Speaker, and we're not likely as a province to take a world leadership, state-of-the-art, leading-edge role in developing those possibilities and creating the jobs surrounding that if we build this gold-plated transmission system that works best to keep the coal-fired plant rolling and the coal fires burning.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available.

Mr. Hinman: I'd like to ask the hon. member – he referred a little bit to the CO₂ emissions in the province: 38 per cent coming from the oil sands, 44 per cent from the coal-fired plants. I'm wondering if he has any more data on if, in fact, we were to replace that. Not that I'm a CO₂ skeptic, because I have questions on whether that should even be driving our economy, but we are subject to a tax that could be coming from foreign countries on exporting our electricity if we have the coal-fired areas there. I'm wondering if he knows what the actual reduction would be. He talked about 40 per cent on that versus coal. Does he have any idea on the megatons, on what that reduction would be in the province and the overall percentages and whether or not – I know he's been an advocate and spoken a lot on the Kyoto protocol – if in fact we were to convert that, we would meet the Kyoto protocol by converting to gas-fired as opposed to coal-fired plants?

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I don't have those particular figures at my fingertips, and I would have to go back and do some research on that to come up with a specific answer to that question. Having said that, would it meet our Kyoto targets all by itself? I don't know. Would it get us a lot closer? Well, obviously. If tomorrow with gas you're producing 40 per cent of the emissions that you produce with coal . . . [Mr. Taylor's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. member; we must now forge ahead.

We'll recognize the following speakers in this order: the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the Leader of the Official Opposition and the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and to speak to this bill as it currently is becoming the number one issue for the taxpayers of Alberta. It's been brought up several times already, and I'm sure as the other speakers rise, they'll also be referring to this. The job of the government is to ensure that the taxpayers' money is used wisely. It's amazing to me, as I've done some research on this, trying to find out why the government is saying that we're in a crisis situation. Why are they allowing AESO to circumvent our system, that we've had in place for years and has served us well, to declare a crisis when my understanding of the legislation is that one must submit a report if, in fact, there is a crisis or a problem anywhere in the system? There's been no report submitted to AESO, to the AUC, so I wonder why they bring that up when, in fact, they haven't been following their own legislation.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The root of the problem, that I understand in talking to several experts in the field – there are some out there, and why they're not referring them, I don't understand – is that AESO is bound by a horribly flawed transmission policy. The problem is that if you are a repairman and all you're given to repair with is a hammer, you're not going to have a very elegant job of repairing something. You'll have more dents than repairing. Their policy is about transmissions. It's a flawed plan because basically what the policy states is that any cost isn't the question. It's unconstrained transmission of electricity.

Albertans, if they're frustrated with anything about constraint problems, it's on our highways. In Calgary-Glenmore a major concern is that the ring road is not passed. It's got a problem, and there is no plan B to address it. It's going to be 2013 or longer before the ring road is addressed there. The local traffic is terrible. It needs to be addressed immediately. That would be a crisis to many people every morning and every evening in Calgary-Glenmore.

But to have a fear that we're not going to have electricity in Calgary-Glenmore is not a crisis. It hasn't happened. It has been said for years that it's going to happen. Yet this government wants to put in Bill 50, declare that there's a crisis and that these power lines must be built at a tune of an expected overnight cost, they figure right now, projected $14.9 billion. That's an extreme amount of money.

We have a huge deficit, and I believe the government will be revealing here later this month or early in December that we're going to see the projected deficit escalate, I would suspect, to over $10 billion even though the price of gas and oil has gone up. Yet they say that we need to spend up to $14 billion to upgrade our electrical lines.

It's interesting that they always talk to and refer to that these lines haven't had any upgrades in 20 years. Yet when you look at the depreciation factor on these companies that own these power lines, their assets are increasing. Obviously, if the assets are increasing, there has been maintenance work, there has been expansion, and it's going there. It's a concern that why would Albertans need to foot a bill for $14 billion when, in fact, it isn't a crisis. The brownouts haven't been arriving.

The world basically has changed significantly since these proposals were brought forward. It's interesting if we go back and look at some of the AESO reports. In 2002 they put out a report, and they said there was a need of $1 billion in transmission upgrades. In 2004 they put out a report. Again, we're all familiar, I believe, in this Assembly with the 2004 report and the need to spend $600 million in today's dollars – it was $300 million back in 2004 – to upgrade a line from Edmonton to Calgary, that 500-kV line. It's interesting that that was challenged in the courts. The courts actually ruled on that – I'm trying to see where I've got that document – but the court overturned that application when it was going through a needs basis and said that AESO was biased in their presentation. So that transmission line was defeated.

3:20

Now, in 2007 AESO came out and said that $3.5 billion was needed, and the provincial energy strategy was saying about the gas prices going up through the roof: we need to do this immediately. Gas prices have since collapsed, and it's changed the entire outlook going forward of that industry and also the generation of electricity. It's a major concern.

The southern Alberta transmission reinforcement project under AESO, in 2008 they were talking about $1.8 billion, but actually reports are coming out now saying there's going to be a $3.4 billion expected cost. Again, Alberta taxpayers are wondering: why are we doing this?

Another interesting part of all of this and the question that comes up: AESO has put out this latest report saying they need two direct current high-voltage lines, one on the east and one on the west, to, I guess, give us security of the system and ensure that it is viable when, in fact, that's a huge overbuilding of it. The good member earlier referred to the cost of building a Cadillac or a Lexus or something else when, in fact, we don't need it. Albertans that are speaking to myself are highly suspicious when they look at the NorthernLights line from Fort McMurray going down to California, that all this is is a link in that line for Capital Power, I believe. Or is that the Canadian? Gosh, I'm getting my companies mixed up here now. Anyway, the bottom line is that the taxpayers are going to foot thousands of kilometres of transmission lines for a company in order to export down to the States.

It's also interesting when they talk about the crisis needs in that we have this constraint. When you actually look on the AESO website, you see that that constraint starts at 10 or 11 o'clock at night, but it peaks at 2 or 3 in the morning. There isn't a constraint on Alberta infrastructure here. It's because all this generation is going on, and there's no use for it, so they want to export it down to the States. We need to look at it and say: is that a crisis at 2 in the morning because we can produce electricity but have no place to ship it? What's interesting is that you pursue the idea of exporting. I'm all for it. If we can produce electricity and export it and Albertans can benefit from that, that's great. But if, in fact, we're exporting it and we're subsidizing those companies and the transmission companies, we have to question that.

My understanding is – and we'll be checking the data to ensure that it's correct – that when they're shipping the electricity out through the night, they get a much better rate for the transmission line, saying: well, it's not being used, so we'll give you a reduced rate in order to export your electricity. The companies say: well, let's build up more generation because we can ship it out; we don't have to pay the full transmission cost. My understanding is that only one-third of the actual line cost is being paid, with the thinking that, well, because it's not being used, one-third is better than nothing for the traditional line costs. Again, that's what's creating the constraint in the system. It's at 2 in the morning, not at 6 in the evening, when we're supposedly hitting our peak time. Or at 7 or 8 in the morning there isn't a constraint inside the transmission lines here serving industry and the people of Alberta.

So we need to go back and ask that question: who really is going to benefit from building these transmission lines? Is it the Alberta taxpayers, or is it going to be the generators or the transmission people that use taxpayers' money to build these lines? It looks to me that it's pretty much staring us in the face that this is for the generators and for the transmission companies, not for the Alberta taxpayers. We truly do need to question that and to bring that part of the process.

Again, the most disappointing part and the concerning part for those people that are following this and realizing what this government is trying to scare Albertans into buying – and they're spending a lot of money in advertising as well as those companies that will benefit – is that we're in a crisis situation, such a crisis situation that we need to empower the minister to make that decision rather than go through the needs process that has served this province so well for 50 years.

I might again repeat that in 2004, when AESO wanted to put that line through there, it was challenged by an individual in the Lavesta area group, Joe Anglin, who took that right through to the courts. That line was defeated. It said that it didn't meet the needs test and that there was a bias in that.

I want to go back, though, and repeat what the problem is. I've asked some of these engineers, "Why are we messing up so bad at AESO? Why are they saying we need to have these things?" and they say, "Well, it's because of their policy, their mandate that they're given." Their mandate is to build unconstrained power lines for the transmission of electricity through the province. We need to change that. We need to have a mandate for AESO – and they are very capable engineers. They do understand the big problem. It's just that their mandate is constrained to transmission lines when what their mandate should be is to develop an energy policy, not a transmission policy. Therein lies the crux of the problem. Are we going to have an energy policy or a transmission policy?

It's also interesting, talking to some of these engineers, that the rates – it depends on the different companies that are very much involved in the economics of power and energy. They say that one 36-inch pipeline, which we have several of, transmits as much power as six 500-kV power lines. More interesting, the line loss and the efficiency is much greater with that. We have a huge potential here to push the gas through pipelines to local production of electricity versus trying to push it through power lines and having the loss, the overhead, the magnetic concerns that many residents have as those power lines go through.

The good member here from Edmonton-Meadowlark earlier asked the question: could we bury these power lines? All of these areas are not being pursued and thought of – why? – because of a policy that says we need transmission lines. But what we need to do is be able to transmit power. Even on that, let's look at the NorthernLights line from Fort McMurray down to California, that has been talked about so much for almost 10 years now. If we put in the pipeline rather than the power line, how much more efficient is that?

As I say, there are just so many areas here that one has to ask: why is the minister insisting that we pass this new Bill 50 so that we can declare that there is a crisis, the sky is falling, we need to immediately address this and build these lines when, in fact, nothing may happen?

It reminds me of 1977. There are a few in here that will remember that. The U.S. was talking about converting to the metric system. Canada at that point says: oh, we're going to jump on that and be ahead of them and be there. It cost industry a lot of money to retool our cars and all those things to metric, and the cost to our economy was immense by pre-empting and saying: oh, we're leading the pack in doing that. To put these overhead high-voltage direct current lines is false thinking.

Another analogy an engineer gave me. He says we have $14 billion, that he believes will end up being $20 billion, that we're going to put into power lines. He says, "That's the equivalent, Paul, of going and actually buying copper lines because we want to be able to have a good communication system here in the province when, in fact, what we are now is wireless and fibre optics." Why would we do that?

If Edison were alive today, he would recognize and understand our grid system because we haven't moved forward to a smart grid. We're not making those decisions. The most important thing that we need to do is realize that we need to discuss and debate and look at taxpayers' money. We have $14 billion to $20 billion that they're saying we need to spend immediately in order to prevent brownouts and crises and in order to attract industry here to the province. It's not true. I see the Minister of Energy shaking his head and his finger and saying that this isn't true, but once you give that mandate, if they're going to build a high-voltage line, they're not going to build a little one. It's going to be a big one. The power isn't here. It's going to go ahead.

3:30

Another part of the flawed system is, though, that if we compare to the U.S. and FERC, their plan there for power, it actually would be illegal to follow the U.S. policy here in Alberta because of our mandate to AESO saying that this is about unconstrained movement of electricity. So we could have someone like Bruce Power come in and put up a plant in northern Alberta somewhere, and then the taxpayers are responsible for building those lines so they can get the power out. That isn't in our best interest.

The system is wrong. It needs to look at the costs and the benefit of local generation versus long transmission lines. It's not in the policy to address that, and we need to change those things. I would urge this government to recognize these shortfalls in Bill 50. It's not going to serve the interests of Albertans. We don't have the $14 billion to invest now or in the next couple of years on these major transmission lines. We need to focus and realize that electrical generation has changed a great deal. The cost of gas has changed dramatically from 2006, 2007.

I'll look forward to continuing the debate on Bill 50.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology under Standing Order 29(2)(a), five minutes for comments or questions.

Mr. Horner: Yes, Mr. Speaker, please. Just a couple of questions. I was wondering. The hon. member mentioned several times, actually, that there was an immediate cash cost to this program of $14 billion to $20 billion. He tossed a lot of numbers around there. I'm just curious if the hon. member could answer what the cash-flow timelines are that he knows of as to what this expenditure is going to be. Is it $14 billion in 2011? Is it $14 billion over two years? Is it three years? He could probably enlighten the House with his knowledge of that.

The other thing is that he kept talking about the AESO having a mandate for unconstrained power transmission. I'm curious where he got that from because as I recall, reading the mandate of AESO, it doesn't say that specifically. I'm curious.

The other thing is that he's mentioned that we're building a bunch of power lines for export to the United States. I'd be curious to know if he has any documentation or evidence that that might be the case, that AESO is somehow involved in that, because AESO is really for the people of Alberta as a not-for-profit. There may be some for-profit guys doing it.

Also, when power is exported late at night, I think he said: well, they pay nothing. I'm understanding that they pay a tariff. I'm curious if he could clarify that for us.

Mr. Hinman: Well, I thank the hon. member for those questions. It's quite obvious that he wasn't paying close attention. I'll start with the last one, where he says that they pay nothing. I actually said that they only pay about one-third of a dollar to export because the lines are there. I didn't say that they paid nothing. I said that they paid a subsidized rate of 66 per cent.

If we look at the Powering Albertans into the Future put out by AESO, on the front page – this time they've conveniently not put the year of the report, but I believe it's 2008. When you turn to page 12 – and I'd be happy to get these copies over to the hon. member – they talk about the critical transmission infrastructure: Edmonton to Calgary, $3.1 billion; heartland, $300 million; Fort McMurray, $2 billion; southern Alberta, $2 billion; south Calgary, $100 million; total, $8.1 billion. Additional critical transmission infrastructure, CTI tier 2: the northwest $500 million; the northeast, $1.4 billion; total, $1.9 billion. Then transmission infrastructure under development: bulk transmission system infrastructure currently under way, $570 million. Then we have the cost estimate in 2008 dollars, long-term regional transmission system plan, a total of $3.8 billion. When you add those all up, hon. member, it comes to a little over $14 billion, I believe. I'm taking that directly from the AESO website. The time frame when they're doing that I don't believe is in this report.

You asked the question, saying that I said that this was for export. What I said was that many people have asked me to build these huge transmission lines. Again, as human beings we're supposed to have deductive reasoning. We were able to look and say: well, if we do this, what's the result? A former Premier often referred to that, unintended consequences. Or are they intended consequences? To build these huge power lines, it's obvious that it's for sending somewhere else.

We don't need that much power here in the province. We're meeting our current needs. Seventy per cent of all of the growth in the last six years that we've been talking about have been met by backyard generation. If AESO was to open up or the Alberta Utilities Commission to become more user friendly and competitive, you would find that local generation would come forward at a much quicker rate.

We also have to look at the reality of where our energy comes from. It is coming from carbon fuel, and if we look at that – you asked four questions, so I'm trying to answer them all for you – it's transmitting and moving gas that is far more efficient than electricity. Yet the AESO only focuses and looks at transmitting electricity, which isn't an energy plan on how we're going to reach – and, again, I am going to say that what's really important if we want Alberta to return to the Alberta advantage is the cost of energy. If energy is reasonable and competitive on a world basis and on a North American basis, then our industry will be. But if we're going to add $14 billion to the infrastructure for transmission lines when local generation can bring it forward, we have to question that.

There's a report that I've got here. [Mr. Hinman's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise in the House today to speak to Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. This is an important piece of legislation, and the public discussion is also important. I believe that it represents how our government is continuously forward thinking and working hard for Albertans not just for today but for the province's future prosperity as well. I would like to take this opportunity to comment on the importance of this bill by highlighting what it will ensure for Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta's population has grown and will continue to grow in the years to come. Due to our province's resources, prosperous economy, which, by the way, is the envy of other economic situations across the world, our competitive tax scheme, and the beautiful scenery that we have in our province, to name a few things, our population will endure and enjoy these assets that our province has.

Every home requires electricity, so as our population increases and as our cities and communities expand, there is a mounting demand for this electricity. As a fact, no major additions to the transmission system in our province have been built for more than 20 years. Mr. Speaker, our transmission system today, however, is aging, is congested and inefficient, and the grid system is nearing its capacity. When this happens, we begin to lose energy along the lines during transfer. This is known as line loss and comes at a cost. For example, in 2008 the cost of the line loss was approximately $220 million. In addition to this, because the grid is reaching capacity, we will not be able to add to it, and our electricity system could become less reliable.

Mr. Speaker, it is estimated that Alberta will need to increase its generating capacity by 50 per cent over the next 10 years. By investing in new transmission infrastructure, we are ensuring minimal line loss and the reliability of transmission, thereby effectively planning for population growth within our province. Furthermore, with efficient transmission in place investors are more likely to sponsor generation, which will ensure a competitive market for this public good. Bill 50 will create opportunities to secure competitiveness for Albertans, reliability, and cost-effectiveness.

3:40

Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Electric System Operator, also known as AESO, initially determines the need for transmission infrastructure projects. AESO is a not-for-profit electricity system planner. It is independent from the electricity industry and operates in the public interest through a statutory mandate. AESO has technical expertise to prepare long-term plans, and in June 2009 they posted on their website that long-term plan.

Currently, once they have determined the project to be necessary in our province, the Alberta Utilities Commission undertakes open and transparent hearings with the public on the siting of the transmission facilities and locations. Bill 50 will effect change in these processes for the development of critical, and only critical, transmission infrastructure. This means that the government of Alberta will be responsible for proving the need for the critical major transmission lines, just like it does and accepts responsibility for the infrastructure that is in the public good. Some examples are hospitals, schools, and roads.

Projects that are not considered critical will continue to follow the same step-by-step approval process that involves the Alberta Utilities Commission. However, under Bill 50 projects that are urgent will be managed expeditiously through an approval process that involves the government of Alberta. This does not alter AESO's role. They will continue to determine the need for the projects.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to be very clear in saying that despite the changes in the approval process of the projects themselves Bill 50 maintains the ability of Albertans to participate in the consultation process that is undertaken when evaluating and determining where to site these infrastructure projects. As such, Bill 50 upholds the opportunity for dialogue regarding the location of critical infrastructure. To that effect, Bill 50 provides the government of Alberta the authority to approve four critical – and I repeat critical – transmission infrastructure projects, which include the development of transmission lines between Edmonton and Fort McMurray, Edmonton and the Heartlands region, Edmonton and Calgary, and then within the city of Calgary. However, it is not a formal decision on where the lines will be placed. Following the passing of Bill 50, Albertans will have the opportunity to advise on the siting of these transmission lines.

Mr. Speaker, it is for these reasons that I believe that this bill is integral for Albertans and our electricity system infrastructure. I therefore stand before the Assembly and would hope that colleagues of the Assembly support Bill 50 and any other considerations that may come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie. Five minutes.

Mr. Taylor: On Standing Order 29(2)(a), yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question to the member around this notion that should Bill 50 be passed in this House, the people of Alberta would still have all the rights that they currently have to enjoy these open and fair hearings in front of the AUC around the issue of siting of the transmission lines. I would point out that the government of Alberta has already given AltaLink and ATCO permission to plan the two high-voltage DC lines between Edmonton and Calgary. You know, that seems a little bit like putting the cart before the horse or least getting a jump on the whole siting hearing process since we haven't even passed a bill that allows the minister or the government to declare these two lines to be critical transmission infrastructure and avoid the needs hearing.

Here's the question, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. member: why should the people of Alberta take comfort and confidence in the notion that these siting hearings are going to be available to them going forward for all time when up until we started debating this bill, they had every reason to think that the needs hearings before the AUC were going to be before them for all time, and now the government is proposing under Bill 50 to take those needs hearings, those public interest hearings, away? In other words, hon. member, if the needs hearings, which have been there for decades, are suddenly to disappear, what comfort and confidence can the ordinary Joe or Jane in the province of Alberta take that you're not going to do the same thing to the siting hearings this time next year?

Mrs. Sarich: Mr. Speaker, it's my understanding that the Alberta Utilities Commission is responsible for making decisions on the siting of the transmission facilities, which includes the determination of the specific locations. They've been provided that mandate, and Albertans should be assured of that mandate. It is the expectation that they would follow through with that mandate.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While, yes, that's true – they have been provided with that mandate – I would remind the hon.

member that they actually today and until such time as this bill actually passes this House, if it does, have the mandate to hold the needs identification hearings for all high-voltage transmission lines that are proposed in the province, not just for the ones that aren't currently defined as critical transmission infrastructure. So you take away the AUC's mandate on the one hand. How am I or anybody else in this province to believe that you're not going to do that on the other hand later on? I mean, what's the assurance? There's nothing here that says that you can't do that. There's nothing here that said that you would do what you're proposing to do with this bill to the other part of the AUC's mandate.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me reiterate a couple of finer points. Bill 50 provides the government with the authority to approve the need for critical transmission and the transmission infrastructure. This means that the government of Alberta is responsible for approving the need for the major transmission lines, just like it does for the infrastructure, and accepts the responsibility for hospitals, roads, and schools because it is defined as a public good.

Bill 50 does not change the province's commitment to ensuring open and transparent processes for the public to participate in. That responsibility for the siting lies with the Alberta Utilities Commission. I am confident that they've been exercising and will exercise in the future the mandate that has been provided to them, and Albertans should be assured of that as well.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Under the five minutes, hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore?

Mr. Hinman: Yeah. Is the hon. member aware of the court case of the Lavesta group against the 500-kV line in 2004? You keep saying that there's input, but there isn't any input on the needs basis, and that's the most critical part. For anybody to be able to say, "Oh, I'm going to be able to produce this" and for Albertans to have to pay for it, I mean, that's a wonderful business. The whole purpose of the Energy and Utilities Board and now the Alberta Utilities Commission . . . [Mr. Hinman's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the hon. leader of the third party.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to stand and speak to Bill 50, Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. You know, electricity is kind of like water. We depend on it as an essential service for human life, and we take it for granted, understanding little about where it comes from and what it takes to preserve it in amounts and timing and locations that are needed. It's an essential service powering our lights, our interaction as individuals on the planet. We work through computers, we use it in our heating system, and increasingly it's important in our transportation systems, in fact.

Historically we've depended fundamentally on fossil fuels for generation of electricity and coal, in particular, from central and northern Alberta. Increasingly we are seeing a demand for a shift in the 21st century to new forms of energy, and I think that's in the context of climate change the most serious crisis affecting the planet in our lifetime. The question is whether we're going to move into the challenge and embrace the responsibility not only to our own citizens but to the rest of the planet to reduce our carbon footprint, to reduce demand, to improve efficiencies, to improve conservation, to increase renewable energy development in this province in a way that will be timely and significant to the global need for change.

3:50

We have some significant hydro, and there may be some real opportunities to do more there. That will also reduce our greenhouse gas emissions. The natural gas supplies are clearly going to be a consistent contributor to our electricity generation in this province for decades to come.

The real challenge, I guess, for us is to think differently about both the types of energy we're creating, where we're producing it, and its proximity to use. Clearly, the urban centres, industrial centres like the heartland, and to some extent the oil sands are the greatest areas of demand. I guess the question for us is: are we going to continue to produce power centrally and transmit it throughout the province, or are we going to look at some innovative alternatives that would move us both towards less waste and to greater dependence on renewable sources?

Currently the demand for electricity in the province is still well below supply, but there is much evidence that we continue to squander our electricity, and we could be saving both the cost of electricity and the generation of emissions if we looked at much more innovative and higher investments in some of the demand reduction scenarios that have been used in Europe and elsewhere to reduce, as I say, both cost and emissions.

Currently we produce virtually all the power we need, though at times we import some electricity from B.C. and in concert export back power to B.C. at times when that's appropriate. It's like with other commodities: we want as Albertans a fair, competitive market that ensures the lowest prices and stability of supply. As I've indicated, some people's very lives depend on a consistent supply of electricity, and all of us want to see that endure. Stability, then, and diversity of supply are critical to us thinking about what's before us in Bill 50.

The distribution has until early in the 2000s been incorporated into the costs of the power producers, but this administration has shifted the cost of transmission now to the public. Since 1996 and deregulation we are seeing significant increases in costs that, frankly, Albertans have some legitimate questions about. What would have been the costs today if we had continued on a regulated rate system? Are we providing the best longer term options for the public in the long term, or are we acquiescing to corporate and other interests over the longer term costs and reducing our emissions?

The Alberta Electric System Operator has the responsibility for fairness in the operation and management of the electrical system, and as has been indicated, the Utilities Commission is responsible to site and establish some of the needs. We are looking, again in a climate of distrust in this province, at trying to build people's sense in this province that they participate in a democratic process, that they are going to be presented with the best evidence, that we are going to use forward thinking about both generation and transmission, that we're going to try to reduce demand at the same time as ensure consistent supply. Albertans want to know that we're providing the best of evidence and having the best of debates around this issue, that was established over time and as recently as the last year and a half segmented off into what's called the Alberta Utilities Commission to review these issues and provide objective, debated considerations around how the decision will be made about both siting and transmission.

On the face of it the need for either new transmission lines or upgraded transmission is clear. The question is: what is the best way forward? I think that with many Albertans the Alberta Utilities Commission is best suited to help us determine some of those conditions, including the siting, which has to do with efficiencies, has to do with cost, and has to do with reliability. The decision to subvert that process smacks of self-interest. It smacks of centralizing power and decision-making at a time when Albertans are already suspicious of a government that hasn't managed the electricity system in a way that serves the greatest efficiency and the greatest savings for Albertans. We need public engagement. We absolutely depend on people paying attention to what we do as legislators to ensure that we reduce both demand and wasteful use and that we ensure the most optimal generation and distribution.

We criticized the conduct of the regulators, to be sure, in 2007, when concerned citizens who raised some similar questions were spied upon and marginalized in relation to Bill 46. This appears to be a reaction to that Bill 46 fiasco, and it appears to be taking it out of the hands of the public, out of the visibility and out of the debate that people are looking for, and it does not present a solution. It actually aggravates a situation in which Albertans do not trust this government to produce a thoughtful, evidence-based plan that is going to serve the long-term public interest in the most cost-effective way.

Mr. Speaker, some of our key questions will be raised and some amendments suggested over the course of time, but I'd just highlight some of the key questions that we have around this bill. Two high-voltage lines, direct current, are being planned between Edmonton and Calgary. These would be DC overhead lines. I guess a basic question that could be asked is: why are we opting for DC lines when AESO's own document states that longer distances, in the range of 700 kilometres, are the most cost-effective use of DC technology? I'm not an expert. I don't know the answer to that question, but it seems to me that that's part of what the Alberta Utilities Commission is charged with doing and ensuring that we understand why some of these decisions are being made.

Another has to do with the building of one high-voltage alternating current line going from south Edmonton to the new substation in the Industrial Heartland. Probably needed, but is the government planning to bury this line? Are we satisfied that we've allayed some of the concerns of Albertans in that area about the siting, and are we going to have a full debate about who benefits and who pays for that particular line?

Another commitment of Bill 50 is two high-voltage lines from Edmonton to Fort McMurray, one from Genesee-Wabamun and one from the Industrial Heartland. Again, legitimate questions can be asked by those most affected.

These are extremely costly projects. Some have indicated that, based on available data, the costs could soar up to $20 billion. If the costs are being transferred from industry and commercial operations on to customers, we have estimated that charges on electricity bills could triple over the next 10 years. That includes $300 a year for a typical 2,000-square-foot single-family home and up to $400 a year for the average small-business customer consuming 1,600 kilowatt hours a month. Clearly, the cost to Albertans is only part of the issue, but it's one that is at the forefront, particularly with a government that has gone from multibillion-dollar surpluses to now the largest deficit in our history. There is serious question about the capacity of this government to manage our economy and to manage such things as the health care system and the electricity system in the public interest.

If Bill 50 is passed through the provincial Legislature, Albertans will no longer have a say in the need for these costly projects or whether they are being developed in the most cost-effective way. I guess the question that I have along with many Albertans is: why are we pushing through this bill in such haste? Is industry screaming for relief? Are individuals, commercial operations, industry included, pressing for this change? These companies also deserve to have clear, open, evidence-based decision-making that they can have input into.

4:00

Mr. Speaker, that pretty much summarizes some of the key concerns that I have and that some of my constituents have. It appears to many of us that this may be a gold-plate option that requires some constraints, debate, discussion. We have a forum for this in the Alberta Utilities Commission. There are serious questions about why it should not be allowed, in fact facilitated, to carry on with this role. We will continue on behalf of Albertans to call on the government to renew its commitment to a commission that they themselves established for this very purpose.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Under 29(2)(a) the hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of questions that I would like to ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition relative to this issue. The first one is if you would please advise us as to what would be the first stage of southern transmission rebuild relative to its timing and cost.

You talked about alternates and so on. I wonder if he would just inform us of how much hydro capacity the province of Alberta has and where it's located and how much of the current generation in the province of Alberta is gas fired.

Mr. Speaker, another couple of things. He'd indicated that at some point in time someone else besides consumers paid for transmission. I'd like him to explain to me and indicate to the House if historically the cost of transmission did not end up on a consumer's bill.

Mr. Speaker, one more thing. There's some suggestion here that there's been no opportunity for public engagement and that we've taken away the opportunity for public engagement relative to the issue of transmission and particularly these pieces of critical transmission that are before us in this bill today. I wonder if the hon. leader would enlighten the House as to how many open, public meetings have been held on transmission refurbishment in the province of Alberta since 2007.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to some of these questions. I'm sure the Energy minister has much deeper knowledge than I have. In fact, that's what we pay him for.

The question, I guess, in relation to various forms of electricity generation is well established and well published, and fossil fuels continue to be the primary form of electricity generation in this province. We have benefited from that. There's no question that we will continue to be dependent on fossil fuels for decades to come. I guess what we're looking for is leadership to both reduce demand and to enhance the renewable elements of our portfolio for electricity production. When companies like Enmax raise questions about the possibility of generation closer to use, as it has in Calgary, I want to know that that has been discussed.

Mr. Knight: Fossil fuel is fossil fuel.

Dr. Swann: Yes. I want to know that that's been discussed, why the decision for transmission which is much closer to source, much less wastage, would not be a consideration in this particular discussion. I don't know the answer. I think the Alberta Utilities Commission and some of the experts from universities and from producers need to be heard from. We need to be making decisions in the best long-term interest of Albertans, and if we're not hearing from those people and basing our decisions on those kinds of expert advice, then I think we are missing the boat. What this bill does is take it out of the hands of the Utilities Commission and put it into cabinet, that has, I would argue, variable understanding of electricity generation and transmission. I don't think that that serves the public interest long term, and I don't think most Albertans believe it does.

On the other question, public engagement, I've met no one that was aware of some of the summer consultations that occurred in the last year around this particular issue. Yes, we've had many consultations across the province on various upgrades, but I don't believe we've had anything like the kinds of expert advice and debate around these particular lines, these high-kV lines between Calgary-Edmonton, Edmonton-Wabamun, Edmonton-heartland, and Fort McMurray. There is clearly a need for this. Albertans are not confident in a decision that would come out of a cabinet decision, and it's clear that we need to clear the air. Albertans will not be satisfied and will not be confident and you will have much more backlash if you push this through. It's very clear to us that people are not confident in rural or urban areas that this is an honest, evidence-based approach to making such an important long-term investment.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party on the bill.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to rise to speak to Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. There are a number of issues that need to be addressed with respect to this bill. There's the need for the transmission that is contained in the bill, and there's the question of the process by which this transmission will be approved, of which the bill is a significant point.

I think that this comes back, Mr. Speaker, to the previous hearings that were conducted by the ERCB with respect to the 500-kV line through central Alberta and the strong opposition that it engendered, the scandal of how those hearings were conducted, which really undermined the whole process that was there. That is to say that the ERCB was spying on the proponents participating in their meetings and so on, and this was all brought to light, which caused basically the whole process to be overturned. What the government has done, instead of going through the proper process again in a clean way, is they've decided to eliminate this untidy democracy and the objections of landowners.

It's interesting, Mr. Speaker, that if you actually look at the bill, you'll see that the regulatory body no longer has the authority to determine if the bill is necessary, if it's in the public interest, if it's environmentally sound, if it's in the interests of the economy. Its role is simply reduced to siting it. That's the first problem with this particular piece of legislation.

Then there's the question of the four projects that are outlined in the bill and whether or not they are necessary. Now, government members have made a great deal of the fact that we have an old infrastructure that may not be adequate for our needs as we go forward. I don't dispute that, Mr. Speaker. I think it's clear that, in fact, we do have an aging infrastructure, and it needs to be upgraded and modernized. The question is: how much, and how do we know how much? This is the problem that people are having real trouble with, deciding whether they believe the government that nearly $8 billion or over $8 billion worth of infrastructure in total is actually necessary or whether something a little more modest would do because, as we know, this is going to be paid for on the bills of electricity consumers.

Now, I had the opportunity to get a briefing from the minister's department and also by one of the senior strategic planning engineers of AESO. He took me through the transmission plan. You know, sometimes when this happens, Mr. Speaker, a little light bulb goes on in your head, and you begin to see what the problem is. The problem, of course, the root of this problem comes back to the government's misguided plan some years ago for electricity deregulation. What they've done is create a strange hybrid system where the retail of electricity is deregulated and privatized and generation is also deregulated and privatized. In the middle is a transmission system which is still a publicly regulated body, which is AESO.

There's no longer system-wide planning for electricity generation and transmission because of the privatization on the generation side. You have dozens and dozens of potential sites for electricity generation, whether it's wind power or more coal power or more hydro power, but they don't know which ones are going to go ahead and which ones are not going to go ahead, so they have to build a transmission system that's capable of transmitting power from any one of those plants or whatever combination to the markets. They build what the AESO people call a robust transmission system. Well, Mr. Speaker, I call it a redundant, excessive, overbuilt, and far too expensive electrical system. That's a direct result of this crazy, irrational, deregulated scheme that this government brought in. It's following the logic of the government's deregulation.

4:10

The second thing. We talked also with some former employees of the electricity consumer advocate's office. It's very interesting. One of the points, I think, that was made there and confirmed with other people that we talked to in the industry was that the decision of the government to place the entire cost on the electricity consumer removed the incentive on the part of power companies and AESO to make sure that the transmission system was built on the most economical basis possible. Mr. Speaker, it's a bit like if you're going to buy a car. If you have to pay for it, you will choose a very different car than if the government tells you that your neighbour will be forced to pay for whatever car you choose to buy. You might be happy with a Ford Focus if you have to pay the shot, but if your next-door neighbour has to pay for it and you get to choose the car, you'll get a Lexus or a Maserati or something that you don't need and is way too expensive. That's the system that the government has put in place.

Now, the minister, in his question to the Leader of the Official Opposition, talked that traditionally consumers paid all the costs of transmission, and that's true. Under the regulated system ultimately the costs of generation and transmission were rolled into a cost, the money was borrowed over a period of time, 20 years or more, and the repayment was added to everybody's bill. That was the system. The difference here is that there was a system to make sure that the transmission and the generation were built in the most economical way, that it was necessary, and that it was in the public interest. That is the very same process that Bill 50 is eliminating, Mr. Speaker.

Yes, historically transmission was paid for by electricity consumers, as was generation, but that was part of a regulated system in which people were allowed to scrutinize the claims that were being made by the power companies and were allowed to challenge their costs. They couldn't just pass their costs directly on to the consumer. They had to show that, in fact, it was a necessary cost and that it was being built in the most economical way. This bill and this minister are taking that away from the people of Alberta. We will never know if $8 billion is enough, Mr. Speaker. They could come forward with a $12 billion or a $16 billion cost, and we will never know because we can't scrutinize it in a public forum. The government has taken that away. There is no opportunity for someone who wishes to oppose it to be funded by the proponents in order to provide evidence that the transmission facility is too expensive or is unnecessary.

Now, Mr. Speaker, take a look at some of the stuff that they're going to build. They're going to build a DC line. Normally DC lines are used to transmit electricity very long distances, and they're very expensive. They can be double the cost, even more, of AC transmission. The distance between Edmonton and Calgary isn't normally the length where a DC line is required. It's a very, very short distance for a DC line. So this raises the question of what the ultimate plan is. Are they going to continue with this DC line right down into Montana? Are we going to have power companies building generation with their transmission paid for by other people so that they can sell power for profit into the United States? How does that benefit consumers? It simply doesn't, but that's the kind of system that this government is setting up with Bill 50.

I think we need to be very skeptical of the government's and AESO's claims that $8 billion of infrastructure is actually necessary to solve the problem. The government has tried and AESO has tried to scare people into believing that the towers that transmit our electricity are about to fall down at any time, that we're going to be plunged into darkness, in fact, that we're going to freeze in the dark. Mr. Speaker, you know, I know enough about these kinds of things to tell you that, in fact, what happens with old and obsolete infrastructure is your maintenance curve, your cost of maintenance, steadily rises to the point where it's no longer economical to maintain. It does not mean that the system is unsafe or that it's about to collapse. It means that maintenance costs are eating up more and more of the budget to maintain an older infrastructure, and it needs to be replaced.

And it does, Mr. Speaker, but not $8 billion. The total value of our existing infrastructure for transmission in the province is a little over a billion dollars. They want to build a new transmission core to that that's worth eight times the total current value of the transmission infrastructure. It's absurd, and they're doing it because they're going to make the ratepayers pay all of the shot. So we're building at our cost a transmission infrastructure that allows anybody in Alberta to build a plant to make a profit and hook in, and the cost of getting their product to market is picked up by us, by the electricity consumer.

Mr. Speaker, I really think that this is not a bill that this Legislature ought to pass, by any means. The greatest problem here is that we can't sort out these issues. We have to take the Minister of Energy's word for it. We have to take AESO's word for it that we need this and we have to pay, rather than having it scrutinized through a proper regulatory process. I think that's the biggest flaw in the bill.

So, Mr. Speaker, in order to deal with that basic flaw in this bill, I have an amendment. If we could maybe just stop the clock, I will provide this amendment to the table and the chair.

The Deputy Speaker: We have an amendment. Let's pause.

Hon. leader of the third party, we have your amendment, so please continue with your amendment.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I move that second reading of Bill 50, Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be amended by striking out all words after "that" and substituting the following: “Bill 50, Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a second time because the bill fails to provide for public consultation prior to the approval of critical transmission infrastructure.”

If I can just speak to that, Mr. Speaker, what we are referring to is changes that are contained in the bill to existing language which requires the regulator to take into account whether or not this is in the public interest, whether it's necessary, and whether it meets environmental and economic requirements of the province of Alberta. That's what Bill 50 takes out of existing legislation with respect to the four projects that are contained in the act, and I just want to indicate to the House that I don't believe there's any justification for this.

4:20

I do not understand what's wrong with a regulator looking at the public interest. I don't understand what's wrong with a regulator asking, “Is this actually necessary?” and then hearing evidence from both sides or from all interested parties as to whether or not it's necessary and it's the most economic option available because they're there to protect the ratepayers. We can't count on this government to protect ratepayers. In fact, they do quite the opposite. They love to gouge us. They gouged us throughout the whole deregulation of electricity, and that's not their interest. But the regulator at least is supposed to take into account the pocketbooks of Albertans, who have to pay these electrical bills, and whether or not the infrastructure is actually affordable and necessary.

Why is the government taking that out? I don't understand it. I'd like to hear from members opposite why they think we shouldn't do that, why we shouldn't look at the economic viability of the project, why we shouldn't look at whether it's environmentally responsible. Why shouldn't we look at those things? Why is the government taking that away from us? I think it's wrong, Mr. Speaker, and I think that we ought to not pass this bill until the government has fixed that problem.

You know, I'm really concerned, Mr. Speaker, that the government, because it understands – and I agree with this – that there is a need for some upgrading and modernizing of our infrastructure, is going overboard. They're going way over the top. They're doing away with a regulatory process, and they're imposing four projects without proper scrutiny. You know, it wouldn't be the first government to do that, but I think we should take it out.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising to speak to the amending motion that's before us.

The Deputy Speaker: To the amendment?

Mr. Renner: Yes.

The Deputy Speaker: You don't want to use the five minutes?

Mr. Renner: No.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay. Continue on with the amendment.

Mr. Renner: In speaking to the amendment, Mr. Speaker, I understand that the member has raised a number of concerns, and I understand that he is using a procedure that is available to all members of this House to introduce an amendment at second reading, but I think that he's premature in bringing this amendment forward. It doesn't give members of the House ample opportunity to even debate the merits of the bill beyond second reading.

Clearly, there have been members that have expressed issues around this bill. I've heard in some of the speeches before and I anticipate in other speeches that may come forward at second reading that there may well be members proposing amendments at committee stage. I think that to proceed with this amendment at this point in time precludes members from even having the opportunity to introduce amendments and discuss some of the more detailed concerns that they may have with this bill. So I interpret what the hon. member has done here as really taking an opportunity to use the rules to actually remove the ability of members to continue to have debate.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I too would like to take an opportunity to use the rules that are available to us to extend the debate. I would like to move pursuant to Standing Order 43(d) that the question now be put. My understanding is that would allow any member who wishes to speak to this motion to do so, and at the conclusion of that we would then proceed to carry on the necessary votes to allow us to determine whether or not this bill should go to committee.

Mr. Knight: If I might, Mr. Speaker, you know, we do have an opportunity here now to continue this debate, and if I do understand correctly, I still have an opportunity to make some suggestions or comments here relative to the amendment before us. I stand corrected if that's not the case. But I understand that I do have that privilege at the moment. Would that be correct?

The Deputy Speaker: If the chair could pause for some advice.

Well, the chair has advice that we will continue on with the amendment, and then when we have further advice, we will make a decision on the amendment.

Please proceed on the amendment.

Mr. Mason: So the Deputy Government House Leader's motion is then out of order? Is that what you are saying?

The Deputy Speaker: We will hold off on that.

Mr. Mason: Okay. I have a point of order with respect to it, Mr. Speaker, when you're ready for it.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay.

The hon. minister on the amendment.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At this point, then, I would like to make some comments relative to the amendment. The wording of the amendment is, I think, a bit important here to understand what's being said. The premise for this is that the bill fails to provide for public consultation prior to approval. In some of the comments that have been made earlier in discussion on the bill itself, there most certainly has been evidence put on the floor of the number of open, public, transparent meetings and opportunities available to the public to have input. Members of the public would include any stakeholders involved.

Speaker's Ruling

Moving the Previous Question

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. minister, just some advice here regarding the motion by the hon. Deputy Government House Leader. Beauchesne 527 says that “the previous question has been moved upon the various stages of a bill, but it cannot be moved upon an amendment.” So the motion by the hon. Deputy Government House Leader is not in order.

Minister, continue on with the amendment.

Debate Continued

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I was saying, you know, it's been stated here, but I'd like to clarify something relative to this because there appears to be some suggestion by some members opposite, as a matter of fact a number of them, that there has been no opportunity for public input relative to the four pieces of transmission that we're talking about here. For that matter, there is a fifth piece of transmission infrastructure that is, actually, in the bill – and that's the southern fortification – that's gone through all manner of public meetings, including the AUC's needs hearings. I can tell you that with respect to these pieces of transmission, just what we have in Bill 50 – we introduced this bill in the spring. We carried it over the summer for the specific reason – the specific reason – of having an opportunity for all Albertans, including all stakeholders, to bring forward their suggestions relative to this legislation and their comments and questions.

4:30

Mr. Speaker, AESO held with respect to this over 40 open, public meetings. The Department of Energy across the province of Alberta held an additional 20 open, public meetings where we encouraged Albertans and encouraged stakeholders to come forward with their comments, suggestions, and questions relative to this piece of legislation. I would suggest to you that I cannot think of anything since I've been elected here, certainly, which is not very long, any single piece of legislation that's been in front of this body that has had as much opportunity for public input as this piece of legislation has had. For that reason I would encourage all members to oppose this particular amendment.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party under Standing Order 29(2)(a), five minutes.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Well, Mr. Speaker, what the hon. Minister of Energy neglects is that there's a difference between consultation, which the government can ignore, and a proper process of regulation in which people who wish to intervene can do so and often can have some of their costs met by the proponents so that they can do research and hire lawyers and consultants in order to make the very best possible case and that there's a legal requirement on behalf of the regulator to take those things into account. That's very different than holding public hearings around the province. It may be that they had 200 public meetings around the province where people were allowed to have their say, but there's no requirement for them to actually listen to the people, and, I would submit, in the most basic way they ignored them.

I'd have to ask what the value of doing that is if people come and they're angry and they don't want the power line and they don't believe that power lines are necessary and they think they're too expensive or whatever it is they say, and the government simply says, “Well, we'll make a note of that,” and nothing fundamentally changes. How is that a valid regulatory process? It's not. You know, I'd like to ask the minister this question. As a result of those 200 public meetings around the province what about these major projects did you actually change?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, certainly valid points that the hon. member makes relative to the process. There is nothing – absolutely nothing – in Bill 50 that removes the mandate of the Alberta Utilities Commission to work in the public interest. The Alberta Utilities Commission has to make decisions on all of the hearings and all of the issues that they address, and they have to make those decisions in the public interest.

When you move into the permit and licensing stage of any of these pieces of development, it's very clear that all of the issues that the member brings up will be – will be – addressed by the AUC. They do have the opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to look at issues such as health, safety, the technology employed, the cost, the proximity to individuals and certain people, be they landowners or renters or people living in congested areas or businesses. What effects these pieces of infrastructure would have on them are considered by the Alberta Utilities Commission before they render a decision on the permit and licensing of these facilities.

Mr. Speaker, you know, there was a question put at the end of a ramble, and by the way that ramble has been heard now, I think, just since I've been sitting here, for two hours, I suppose, and a bit. I don't know. But I think it's the fourth time, the same stuff repeated over and over and over and over again. That's fine because, of course, I guess if they want to hear themselves talk, it's good. It's good.

The question is: what was done with the information that was provided to AESO and to the Department of Energy with respect to these particular pieces of infrastructure? I would suggest to you that all of the members in the House, you know, will want to have an opportunity to engage in the debate and see at the end of the day what differences have been made from perhaps an initial thought that we had 10 years ago, eight years ago, five years ago, three years ago, and now with respect to how we should move this province forward in the development of the resource base, the development of living space, the development of the health care system. Mr. Speaker, they all require a robust transmission system, and this is what we're going to provide for Albertans.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie on the amendment.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I want to rise and take issue with something that the minister said as he replied to the amendment introduced by the leader of the third party because as I read this amendment, it says in part that “Bill 50, Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a second time because the bill fails to provide for public consultation prior to the approval of critical transmission infrastructure.” The response in debate that the minister gave to the leader of the third party's amendment was not focused on what the amendment talks about. This is not about the public consultations that have taken place about the bill. This is about the future public consultations that will not be able to take place, that will be prohibited from taking place by the passage of Bill 50.

[The Speaker in the chair]

I think that's a very, very important distinction to get on the record because the minister would have you believe that anyone and everyone on this side of the House who has risen to speak against Bill 50 so far today has somehow denied the efforts made by this caring, compassionate, want to do the right thing government to make sure that, oh, 3,475,000 of us or however many there are today in the province of Alberta get our chance to speak to Bill 50 before it's debated here in the Legislature. You know, I applaud the minister's efforts and the Department of Energy's efforts and the AESO's efforts and anybody else who's made the effort. I mean, it's just been an awesome sight to behold. It begs the question of, if they'd been so darn good at consultation and getting everybody's opinion, why it is that they have proceeded with this bill when they should know darn well that the more the people of Alberta learn about this bill, the more upset they are with it.

One of the things – it's not the only thing – they're upset about, obviously, is the impact that it's going to have on their electricity bill. One of the things that they're upset about is the idea that that minister over there and his cabinet colleagues can go behind closed doors and in some kind of star chamber arrangement, having perhaps taken the advice of the AESO – maybe not; we don't really know – having perhaps taken the advice of TransAlta Utilities . . .

Mr. Mason: Some of the sponsors of their convention.

Mr. Taylor: Yeah.

. . . or AltaLink or TransCanada. I doubt that they'd take Enmax's advice from the way the debate outside the House has gone so far, but EPCOR or Capital Power or anybody else who comes down the pike. Certainly not Enron anymore, but if they were still around, they might take Enron's advice. They can decide that this particular high-voltage transmission line is a critical piece of transmission infrastructure, and there's not one of us outside that room, whether we're elected representatives or just ordinary civilians, who can challenge that. Oh, sure, we can go to the AUC hearing and say: well, you know, can you move the pylon 25 feet to the left or the east or the west? But we can't do anything about getting in on the discussion of whether this really is a piece of critical transmission infrastructure.

4:40

You know, I'm really torn about whether to support this amendment or not because if the amendment passes, that's the end of this bill. On the one hand, that is a good thing. On the other hand, it means that this bill will go down to ignominious, inglorious defeat without any of us having actually gotten the chance to get from these guys on the government benches a clear definition of what constitutes critical transmission infrastructure and how they're going to determine that.

Mr. Mason: You've got to get your priorities straight.

Mr. Taylor: Yeah. The leader of the third party just muttered that you've got to pick your priorities. You know, priority one is stopping a bad bill, and priority two is satisfying my curiosity. I can satisfy my curiosity on my own time, so frankly I'm pleased to support this motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Proceed.

Mr. Knight: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, there was one thing very clear and that I certainly do agree with, and that is that the member opposite indicated that he's not an expert with respect to these matters. But there are some other questions that arise. One of them for me would be that given the fact that the member is not an expert, it makes me wonder why he would be so vociferous about the fact that probably somewhere in the neighbourhood of 200 – well, I know there are 300 and some people in the AESO, but more than 200 of them would be engineers and technical experts that have been hired to do a specific job for Albertans. They are experts. They are able to work their way through the requirements for a proper transmission grid to be in place.

Mr. Speaker, on the idea that somehow or another these people are fools and that they do not understand and don't know the difference between an ordinary piece of wire that's strung across somebody's yard for Christmas lights and a situation where there are critical pieces required for the movement of this commodity throughout the province, what I can say is that I'd like to ask the individual across the way, the hon. member, if he could tell me what the grid reliability standards are that we must operate under in western Canada because we're connected to a grid system in the northwest. There are reliability standards that we must meet.

Mr. Speaker, the people that we have hired there are experts. They understand the grid reliability requirements, and they're telling us that to meet grid reliability requirements, these pieces of infrastructure are critical to move forward in a timely fashion. I may be biased, and I would admit that, but I have to tell you that rather than listening to the member across the way tell me that these people don't know, I would rather listen to the individuals that are there, that are hired, that are working on behalf of all Albertans to make sure that this system does work. I would most prefer to listen to them.

I would like the member opposite to explain to me how the grid reliability standards were determined and whether or not AESO understands them.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie if you wish.

Mr. Taylor: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, it's interesting. We were talking about rambling a few minutes ago, and it's interesting that in this latest ramble the minister has accused me of saying that the 200 to 250 to 300 electrical engineers who work for the AESO don't know what they're talking about, that they're stupid, that they're uninformed. I'd advise the minister to go back and read the Blues, read what I said in Hansard in second reading debate, reread what I just said in speaking to this amendment, and find anywhere in there that I questioned these people's intelligence, their expertise, their parentage, anything. Because I didn't. I said that it doesn't matter whether the AESO has 200 or 2,000 or 2 million experts on its payroll as long as the AESO is operating under a mandate that's as restricted as the one that it's been handed by this government, which is essentially to address transmission issues with one answer and one answer only, as I understand it.

Again I will agree with the minister, perhaps the only point we will agree on this session, that I am not an expert, and I don't think he is either on this sort of stuff. You know, it comes down to this: that mandate basically says that the only recourse AESO has to solve any of its problems is to build more transmission infrastructure. Okay. That's fine. If the minister wants to go back and reread my words from earlier, he will discover that I said that, obviously, there is the need for some upgrade to the transmission system. In fact, I don't think I'm the only one on this side of the House who has said that. What I will say right now in response to the minister is that I don't care how expert we are . . . [Mr. Taylor's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. member.

We are speaking on an amendment. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. What I find interesting about this debate is that the dark knight of the electric horseman of the apocalypse opposite frequently accuses members of the opposition of fearmongering. Now, I'm sure this minister, based on his energy background, is able in the dark of night to find the light switch and turn it on. And if it fails, as the government has suggested, because of imminent brownouts, then he's going to have a little bit of difficulty, and he's going to have to go back to the kerosene lamps that possibly he has as hand-me-downs from his grandparents.

The point of this is not to question the expert advice but to realize, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie pointed out, who those experts are working for and the shortness of the arm in terms of the arm's-length distance from the government, by whom they are paid to provide the advice.

Now, the difference between the hearings that the minister has talked about where selective note-taking was undergone: if the information provided appealed to the government, it was recorded, and if that was not the case, well, it just sort of disappeared. Now, when the hon. Minister of Energy was talking about the hundreds of hearings, I'm wondering whether those were the hearings that were with the spies present or whether they were hearings that resulted after the fact. The first set of hearings were declared null and void because of the underhanded manner in which they were conducted, with people listening in on conversations, the equivalent of wire-tapping, that got, I gather, an 80-year-old grandmother so incensed that she was prepared to take a shot at one of the government representatives.

What is very disconcerting to me, speaking specifically to the amendment, of course, is the lack of valid public consultation. A good example of public consultation – and it was a very lengthy process of public consultation – was the Compton hearings with regard to allowing more sour gas wells to be drilled at the edge of southeast Calgary, within a kilometre of the southeast hospital. Now, I had been an intervenor in that process, and I was somewhat discouraged that it took almost two and a half years from the time I gained intervenor status to the time when I had the final say as an intervenor in that process, but I would much rather have a two-and-a-half-year process to get it right than to be pushing it, as the government has done.

What the government has done has taken public consultation and turned it into selective invitation. We have seen a series of acts preceding Bill 50 take away the diplomatic, democratic opportunity for discussion and debate and put it into the hands of the cabinet. In other words, things have been taken out of legislation and put into regulation. We're seeing, basically, the bodies of democracy leading all the way up to this particular bill. We've seen Bill 46, and we've seen Bill 39 and Bill 19, where the government has taken more and more of the public consultation opportunities, the opportunities for debate and pushed it into a cabinet decision.

4:50

Now, the hon. Minister of Energy talked about the role of the Alberta Utilities Commission. Basically, what Bill 50 is about is cutting the power lines, cutting the connection between the Alberta Utilities Commission to make an independent decision and the dictates of this government. That's why this particular amendment is so important. People are incensed, and part of the reason they're incensed is because they don't have the information that, apparently, the Minister of Energy claims the 200 experts have. Well, I would suggest that that's what public consultation is about. Like the Compton hearing, present your evidence. Give Albertans reason for confidence and trust that what you're proposing is evidence based, that there is a science underlining the proposal.

I don't claim to be an electrical expert. I manage without the help of four colleagues to screw in a light bulb, usually successfully. What I have heard in terms of doing research on electricity is that, for example, the company 3M has come up with a type of wire that is so improved in its capability and its ability to carry power that by just the restringing of the current lines, you would get triple the power-carrying capacity that currently exists. It's this type of scientific research that we need to be hearing in a public consultation/hearing process such as, again, the Compton hearing.

We've had opportunities in the past, before the door of democracy started closing closer and closer and closer to being absolutely shut, where experts were gathered, where legal experts, engineering experts, and scientists had an opportunity to present an argument, and then the panel of experts gave reasons for their ruling. In the case of Compton both the city of Calgary and what was then the Alberta health region indicated that the evacuation possibilities for 350,000 southeast Calgarians were compromised. We've had similar hearings shut down the possibility, at least temporarily, of hearings on sour gas because people in the immediate vicinity weren't included as part of the hearing process.

What the hon. leader of the third party is saying is that if critical transmission infrastructure is indeed necessary, as the government suggests, then let's have those hearings. Let's have that information provided to the public, and let's also have a justification of the need to control that information only in the hands of the Minister of Energy. Asking for more time to get it right seems to me to be the wise way to go. In terms of if timing is of the essence, I would suggest, going back to the mid-90s, that Murray Smith and the undermining of the regulatory process was the beginning of what we're now seeing in terms of the end of democratic discussion and debate.

I appreciate the opportunity to speak on what I believe is a sincere attempt to allow the experts the opportunity to share their knowledge. Those experts are not limited to those on the payroll of this government.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to make a couple of comments. I appreciate what the hon. member has said about the bill and about the amendment, and I'd just like to take a look at one of the pieces here that is in the bill. It says that section 19 is amended by adding the following after subsection (1):

(1.1) Notwithstanding subsection (1), the Commission shall not refuse an approval of a transmission line or part of a transmission line designated as critical transmission infrastructure as defined in the Electric Utilities Act on the basis that, in its opinion, it does not meet the needs of Alberta or is not in the public interest.

In this bill before us the commission will no longer be able to withhold its approval of a piece of transmission infrastructure that's been designated as critical because it does not, in its opinion, meet the needs of Alberta or is not in the public interest. The question I have for the hon. member is: why would such a provision be necessary? Why would the government through legislation prevent the commission from opposing some infrastructure brought forward to it because it wasn't in the interest of Alberta? Is there any possible reason?

Mr. Chase: I'm afraid that what is happening is that we're seeing a growing arrogance, a growing disconnect, a singular attitude where the government in a patriarchal fashion knows what's best. The government, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, has defined public interest according to what they believe. What they have done: any type of arm's-length connection between the Alberta Utilities Commission and the Minister of Energy has been severed. It's been amputated. In the place of the Alberta Utilities Commission we have a dictatorial expression from behind the closed cabinet door of what the public interest is. Any notion of public interest has been lost in that particular clause that you referenced and in the whole notion of: "We know best. We'll move ahead. We'll expropriate your land. We'll run the wire where we wish, over ground, underground. We know best." This omniscient attitude that the government has put forward is sticking in the craw of regular Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore. Under 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Hinman: Correct. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity referred to Murray Smith and the undermining. I'm just wondering if he is referring back to, I think, 2002-099. The EUB released a decision transferring – well, it was about the congestion in the lines. The board found that it was appropriate to allocate some of the cost to the generators. That, to my understanding, wasn't acceptable to many of the generators, and Murray Smith, actually, at that time as the Energy minister tossed that out. Were you referring to that, and could you expand a little bit more on the change in regulations and how the government started to step in and overlook the needs process even at that early stage?

Mr. Chase: I'd be glad to expand. It actually goes back to the mid-90s, where Mr. Put On a Sweater, Murray Smith, the solution for freezing in the dark and cold or not having a light, determined that the solution for Albertans was simply to buck up and dress up. It didn't matter whether you were a senior huddling in front of the imagined warmth of a candle. He undermined the whole system in the mid-90s. He created such instability in the market that no power generators were prepared to go ahead and create the type of power and transmission that we're now short of. What Murray Smith did in that time period that you're referring to is held two failed power auctions. The reason I say two is because there were so few bidders in the first auction that basically he reduced the price and had a second auction. In those dual auctions Albertans were on the hook . . .

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. member. We're going to continue the discussion on the amendment.

The next four speakers will be the hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, then the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, and then the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

The hon. Member for St. Albert. We are on the amendment.

5:00

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Speaking on the amendment, firstly, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie for clarifying the intent of the amendment.

Secondly, I would suggest that this is not the time nor the place to be debating this amendment. Bill 50, as the hon. minister indicated, was very clearly tabled in the spring session with the intent of getting public input over the summer, and I think we all agree there has been a lot of public input over the summer. So I think we owe it to the hon. minister to see if he's prepared to table any amendments in Committee of the Whole based on that input that he has received over the summer. I think we should therefore continue debate on second reading, and hopefully we'll all come out of this a lot smarter after hearing everybody's opinion. But I think we should hold this type of amendment until we get into Committee of the Whole and see what the hon. minister is proposing, and we can go from there.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the hon. Member for St. Albert if he's aware if there have been summaries prepared of the input that was received and whether or not that has been made public. It seems to me that having undertaken what we hear is 200 or so public meetings with respect to Bill 50, there ought to be some conclusions that could be drawn that might be made available to all members of the House. I'd certainly ask him if he's aware if the views of Albertans who did attend these meetings have been summarized and made available publicly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No, I'm not aware of any summaries. I've probably had the same pile of information that all members of the House have received from various bodies concerning Bill 50, but I don't have any summary, if that's what you're asking for. No.

The Speaker: Any further discussion under 29(2)(a)? Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The fact that a member of the government, and an esteemed member, I might add, doesn't have a package of information upon which to make an evidence-based decision or is not aware of any extra information, given your insider status, if you don't have it and you're not aware of where it is, you can imagine how we feel as members of the opposition that distant from whatever scientific evidence the government purports to have.

Now, in terms of consultation and collaboration keep in mind that this government spent over a year and a half with its environmental all-party policy committee debating whether or not we should have a return on milk cartons. Yet there seems to be over spring to fall a push to do transmission lines and put the tab on the backs of the taxpayers. I'm just wondering how the hon. Member for St. Albert feels about the speed at which we appear to be rushing towards a commitment of up to $20 billion without the sober-second-thought process that a standing policy committee might provide.

The Speaker: Hon. member, do you wish to participate?

Mr. Allred: Well, Mr. Speaker, certainly, there have been questions asked. I've asked many questions myself. But the question that was asked by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood was if I had a summary document. I don't have a summary document. I have the AESO documents and several other documents that are public information off the web or wherever as well as a lot of the documents that were sent by special-interest groups, but I don't have a summary document.

The Speaker: Additional questions under 29(2)(a)? Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yeah. I'd like to ask the hon. member, being from the government side, one of the things that so many people come and approach me on and that seems to be kind of missing in the discussion. Yes, there's been lots of public consultation, but to the government member: do you know if there's been a needs test? Before Bill 50, if it stays the way it is, when you apply to the board, then those interested groups can go and have a needs test on whether it's needed. But under section (3) section 19(1) is notwithstanding now. The needs process will no longer be brought forward, and there's no appealing. I just wonder if, in fact, the whole purpose of this is the fact that last time the line was challenged and it went to the courts. The court said that there wasn't the need there, so it was thrown out. Does this hon. government member have any comment about the need that needs to be there, not just public consultation but the actual process of showing AESO that the need is necessary?

Mr. Allred: Well, Mr. Speaker, I thank you for that question. As the hon. minister indicated, there have been several consultations, going back, I believe he said, since 2004-2005 and again this summer. There have been several reports as well that have been issued by the department and by AESO that have established the need. Very clearly, the AESO report establishes the need, and I believe that is what the minister has based the intent of this bill upon.

The Speaker: Additional questions?

Hon. members, we're on the amendment. Hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, did you want to speak on the amendment, or did you want to speak on the debate?

Mr. Kang: I want to speak on the debate, sir, but I'll speak on the amendment.

The Speaker: Okay. Then, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, are you on the amendment or the debate?

Mr. Hehr: The amendment.

The Speaker: Then proceed.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour and a privilege to rise and speak to the amendment raised by my hon. colleague from the third party. I think this amendment really provides almost a look at what is wrong with the bill as well as gives us an opportunity to stop and reassess as to what actually public consultation is, for in fact we here as a democratic body, that's what we are about: public consultation.

Right now the way Bill 50 reads is that what is coming down the pike is that the government is taking away a citizen's ability to apply to the Alberta Utilities Commission and make a presentation to them regarding the needs of the system, whether electricity is warranted, whether a whole host of things are actually wanted by people in the area. What is currently happening under the bill is it takes away from individuals – both experts and, I guess, just simple Joe and Jane Albertans – the opportunity to go before the Alberta Utilities Commission and lay out the evidence as they see it before them and provide reason and rationale as to why an electrical system should or should not be placed in a certain area.

This system has seemingly worked. It was seemingly set up by the government at one time to almost take the political decision-making ability out of the hands of the government. That's why the Alberta Utilities Commission was set up, to take the political decision-making out of it, out of the government's hands. At least, that's what I fully believe was the reason for it.

5:10

It recognized that the Premier, that the Minister of Energy, the Member for Calgary-Buffalo, the Member for Lethbridge-East were not going to be experts in the distribution of power lines or the provision of power. What it did was set up an Alberta Utilities

Commission. It allowed, then, for people to go forward and say with their arguments, "Hey, we think this is what happened," or even hire an expert. Maybe there are some people out there who claim to be experts, and they go up and they say: "Hey, we're experts in this. We don't think this is right. We don't think our area needs this much power. We don't think consumers need to be saddled with a bill on X, Y, and Z project. We think we're good for right now."

At the end of the day the Alberta Utilities Commission, which was made up of appointees who are presumed to have knowledge and I assume are experts and I assume have a department behind them with great knowledge and great skill, take all of this evidence, they balance it out, and they say: well, here's what Alberta needs or that this area of Alberta needs. That's what it was set up to do because we realized at one time in this House, when we set up the Alberta Utilities Commission, that we weren't experts and that also – guess what? – politicians are subject to pressure from various organizations, various constituents, various, shall we say, bodies around that may influence the political decision, rightly or wrongly.

Okay. That's what happens, guys. Whether it's companies, whether it's individuals, whether it's whoever you have that come to the government, throw their weight around, for whatever reason, you know, a government may actually bend to those decision-makings, not suggesting anyone has here, by all means, but saying that that's what happens. That's why you set up an Alberta Utilities Commission: "Hey, guys. Sorry; it's not a political decision. This is a decision that we set up one-off so that you couldn't come here and toss your weight around and tell us which way to go and we'd have to go do it or else there would be repercussions." That for better or for worse is what we did.

What we're now doing here – here's what I think, anyway. What's happening is that you guys know this is going to be hard. Giving Albertans a voice is going to be hard. You know as to doing this, or whatever it is, that there are going to be people going to the Utilities Commission making all sorts of pronouncements, valid or otherwise, and it's not going to be easy. But guess what? That's why you set it up. That's why it's there, and it's not supposed to be easy. It's supposed to be to allow people to go there and do their thing. You guys simply have put this bill through to get it off the front page by Christmastime and move on, to simply take away from average Joe and Jane Albertan the right to go ahead and speak their mind at this commission. That's why you've done it, and I think that even when you look yourselves in the mirror in the morning, that's why it's happening. I don't think it's fooling anybody.

Anyway, I think this would be a good bill, that would still allow us to go through with the valid reasons for a good amendment in that it would go for the valid reasons for the setting up of the Alberta Utilities Commission in the first place: to take the decision out of the politicians' hands and into the experts, or the experts as we deem them in Alberta.

Thank you very much for allowing me to speak in support of this very good amendment by the member of the third party.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Back in '99-2000 and leading up to the failed power auctions, the Minister of Energy of that time, Murray Smith, sold through an auction process approximately $8 billion to $9 billion of Alberta taxpayer purchased and supported transmission lines for under $3 billion. Now, compared to the bill that this set of transmission lines could be running up, all at the taxpayer's foot, though the residential areas are only taking up 20 per cent of the power or less that's being utilized, do you have concerns about the monetary expenses that are being foisted on taxpayers? First, we had the giveaway of our existing circumstance under regulation and deregulation, and now they're talking about taking that process even further and again sticking taxpayers with a considerably larger bill.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you for that question. You're hearkening back some time period. But I do remember the call to arms of deregulation actually was, "Hey, Albertans are going to get so much choice," which has not really turned out to be the case, and "Albertans are going to get provided power much cheaper," and that has not been the case. On that point I think those two things have fallen on deaf ears.

Am I worried that the transmission capability is maybe built up by influences and is maybe extending power to other jurisdictions, not necessarily for Albertans, and that it's going to be paid for by Albertans, who are actually being dragged into a business of exporting power to lend profits to private companies? Yes, my spider sense is tingling on that issue. And it's not only me who says that; this is other so-called experts in the area. I'm sure many people would call Mr. Holden from Calgary an expert. I'm sure many other people would call the two professors from the University of Calgary, who issued papers on this saying that this is a bad deal for Alberta taxpayers, experts on this.

What I'm worried about is that the experts are not given an opportunity to go to a regulator designed to hear these positions and these different arguments and make a decision on behalf of Albertans. It's made behind closed doors. Those are some fundamental worries for me.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) remains open. The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to speak in favour of the amendment.

The Speaker: No. Hon. member, we're still on the question-and-answer side.

Mr. Kang: Sorry. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, my questions are on amending section 17 with this bill. It goes on to add 17(2) onto section 17. This subsection is important for infrastructure deemed as critical by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. The existing provision for a public interest hearing is cancelled. So how important is this amendment, you know, to not have this added on to the bill?

Mr. Hehr: Well, that's a very good question. We've seen continued, I guess, decision-making powers go behind the cabinet wall, and this is a continuation of this with this bill. I actually liked the way the government had previously set this up, with an Alberta Utilities Commission designed with experts to hear other experts and individuals with legitimate or even illegitimate concerns, whatever it is, the right to be heard and allowing them a place to go and explain themselves. This process has now been cancelled, null and void, in order to get this off the press pages and to say that it's done in an expedient fashion. That's the only rationale for it.

The Speaker: The last speaker that I have on my list to participate on the amendment, unless others will advise, is the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak in favour of the amendment from the hon. leader of the third party. The reason why I feel it's so important that we pass this amendment is because this isn't a crisis situation. If we have any crisis here in the province, it is the deficit this government is running. It's out of control. To increase the deficit to the Alberta taxpayers by saying that we need to have these power lines is not looking out for the best interests of Alberta taxpayers, as they mention and seem to think is what is critical and what we're trying to do.

5:20

More importantly, I guess, if we're looking at this amendment and why we should be turning this Bill 50 down, saying that we don't have the needs process, the amendment says that, "the bill fails to provide for public consultation prior to the approval of critical transmission infrastructure." Now, if I was making this amendment, I would say that it fails to provide for the need for the approval of critical infrastructure. That to me is key, that the bill sets up and empowers the minister to be able to decide that there's a need. Many people have referred to it. I do not believe that the minister is the expert to say, "We need this," yet he's in a position over and above the AESO that when he says, "This is what we need," the power lines go forward. In fact, the process needs to go back to as it was in the old days.

I believe the true reason why this bill has come forward goes back to a challenge in the courts between the Lavesta area group and the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board. In that situation, where they were trying to pass a 500-kV line from Edmonton to Calgary, the board gave the approval. It was appealed in the courts, where the process was appealable. Bill 50 will take that appeal ability away from the people and industry here in the province. So it's critical that Bill 50 be amended as brought forward in this amendment, that it be not now read a second time because there is no urgency.

The amount of money that's going to be spent to make this decision is somewhat, as I said earlier, like going back and saying that we're going to invest in copper lines. This isn't the proper investment going forward for Albertans, especially not Alberta taxpayers. If private industry wants to put these lines forward and raise the money in the open market, I wouldn't have a problem with that. But the fact is that they're asking the Alberta taxpayers to do that, and that's not in our best interests.

It's just interesting that when you read the results of the Court of Appeal on the Lavesta group, it says, "The Board's counsel will be instructed to invite the Court of Appeal, notwithstanding this decision, to provide an interpretation of those sections." And to go down a little bit further: "As a result of concessions made, we are allowing the appeals and the appellants are receiving the remedy to which they are entitled." Then it goes on to say, "In summary, we allow the appeals on the basis of apprehension of bias. We vacate all of the decisions and orders under appeal." They said that there was a bias going forward. That bias comes forward in the mandate that this government has given to the AESO and the Alberta Utilities Commission in saying: here are the restrictions you must operate under and that we need to have transmission lines. We don't look at any other solutions to it. We say that the transmission lines are needed; therefore, you rule and give these corporations the permission to do it. It's interesting that the government has already given these two corporations the go-ahead to do the engineering for these lines when, again, there is no need.

The Minister of Energy spoke earlier, asking the Leader of the Official Opposition: do you know about the reliability of the grid system and whether or not that reliability is being met? My understanding is that under Alberta legislation if there's a reliability problem and a corporation knows about it, in its line or in its generation, it's obligated under Alberta law to make application and to make the AESO aware of that reliability problem. There is no application, to my knowledge, in front of the board saying that there is a reliability issue.

Again, the reliability problem is that at 2 o'clock in the morning there's congestion of the electricity in this province. It's not Albertans that need that electricity. Again, we see that what we're doing is using the false pretense of saying: well, we have the lines; they're available, so we should be exporting our electricity, and we won't make them pay for the full cost of the lines. If, in fact, we had a congestion problem during our peak periods, I could see the thought process in that, that we need to upgrade our electrical lines because of the congestion. But that isn't true. So we can't use that line of thinking, saying that we need to have these lines because of the congestion. The congestion is at 2 to 3 in the morning, when we have more production and not enough use in the province. So they want to export it.

Again, the mandate to the AESO and to the Alberta Utilities Commission is to see that there's an unrestrained flow of electricity throughout the province, and that, I guess, spills over to the fact: export any excess that we have because that will be in the best interests of Albertans.

Another thing on why this amendment needs to go forward. It was interesting when I was door-knocking in Calgary-Glenmore. The wonderful seniors that I came upon that were still living in their houses that they bought new in 1960, 1962, 1963. I just couldn't help but ask them: what did you pay for those houses? The lowest priced house was $11,700. The highest price in that time period was $16,700. Now, for the minister of housing to come in and say, "You know, this is old infrastructure; we need to replace it," and tell those seniors that they now have to pay $450,000 for a home because, well, it's aged, isn't so. The debate that keeps being brought up is that our infrastructure is old and needs to be replaced. No, it can be maintained. Those houses are still sound; they're solid. They're 50 years old. Our lines are only 20 years old.

It's interesting about AltaLink. I believe the S&P put out a report showing – now, where did I place that report? – the value of AltaLink and saying that the infrastructure is in great shape. Here it is. A 2008 the Standard & Poor's report says:

AltaLink's monopoly transmission assets have inherently low operating risk and have demonstrated good reliability performance. Furthermore, 60% of the existing asset base is less than 20 years old. As the company expands its transmission infrastructure during the next several years, the age profile will improve further, as will AltaLink's operating efficiency.

There isn't this old infrastructure that people keep referring to. Telling all the people that have houses in the province that are over 20 years old that we now have to rebuild them at today's cost: those houses are fine. We'll maintain them. They're there for the people of Alberta, and that's what's critical.

Is there a crisis? No, there isn't a crisis. The most important thing that we can do – again, the minister keeps referring to and saying that we've had over 200 open houses. Yes, but we've never gone through a needs requirement, and that's the key in this. Do we need it? The experts will say no. Are we mandated to build transmission lines? The experts will say: yes, that's our mandate; that's what we need to do. This province is running a horrendous deficit. We do not need to put a burden on the taxpayers of another $8 billion or $10 billion or $15 billion. It could escalate more if we're not careful.

We need to accept this amendment, to vote in favour of the Bill 50 amendment, so the people of Alberta will not be burned by this government in its desire to build transmission lines. For who? That's the real question. Why is the needs process being bypassed? We need to have that because we'll find out who really will benefit from the building of these transmission lines and why the government is giving the go-ahead.

I understand that it was open season down in Las Vegas on the 17th of October. They've started to put bids on power, and they're already looking at that, to be able to hook in to the new Alberta transmission lines that are coming forward. That's the real smoke behind all of this.

We need to accept this amendment, and I hope that all members will vote in favour of this amendment.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. First of all, the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Wow. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, that was a very interesting piece of information that you shared with us there, that Standard & Poor's report.

The Speaker: Well, you know, hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, you're a fine man, but please speak through the chair so the chair can follow.

Mr. Taylor: Yes. My apologies, Mr. Speaker. I've gotten a little careless at this late hour.

That was a very interesting piece of information that the Member for Calgary-Glenmore shared with us because it seems to suggest that one of the fundamental arguments that the government has put forward in favour of Bill 50, at least in the public arena, is maybe based on a fallacy or based on some erroneous information. Could I possibly get the Member for Calgary-Glenmore to speak a little bit more about that S&P report to answer this question? If we've been told and if one of the underlining reasons for Bill 50 is allegedly that we have this very old and creaky, 20-year-plus transmission infrastructure and if, in fact, an objective analysis of AltaLink has shown that 60 per cent of that infrastructure is less than 20 years old, is it the member's opinion that that in and of itself is reason enough to support this reasoned amendment?

5:30

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you. To the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie. The fact of the matter is that there's a lot of smoke and mirrors around this bill. They're saying that we're in a crisis. So many people, the seniors, have been talking to me and saying: you know, this is a Chicken Little story. The fact is that the sky isn't falling; it's not critical. If you look at the AESO reports that have come out in 2002, 2004, 2007, and 2008, they're all changing, and why? Because the mandate and their operating instructions have been changed to say: "We need to do this; we need to do that. We need to accommodate for high gas prices."

Two years ago we were in a situation where gas prices were going through the roof. It's interesting in that policy paper put out by the University of Calgary that they say that in order to justify generation and the transmission lines, the price of gas would have to go up to $65 a kilojoule. The S&P report really does reflect that. Companies, when it comes to the S&P report, need to put on their best front. The bottom line is that they have an excellent bottom line. Their infrastructure is good, no different than someone who's living in a 20-year-old home. We need to address this idea that it isn't critical, that it isn't crumbling. I hope that answers the hon. member's question.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore to elaborate a little bit more about the bid process that took place in Las Vegas, I think he said, for applicants who are going to be building connecting transmission infrastructure to southern Alberta.

The Speaker: This has to do with the amendment, does it?

Mr. Mason: Yeah. I think so. It has to do with his speech.

The Speaker: Okay. I'm looking forward to getting the answer.

Mr. Hinman: I've got so many papers here on my desk to find, to pull out each one. My understanding is – and I'm going to have to just go off the top of my head on this because I can't find the paper right now – a Canadian company has opened up bids on a transmission line going through to Las Vegas. I could bring you more information tomorrow on that or later this evening. The bottom line is that they are opening it up to see if they can sell the electricity, and if they can get the bids and the demand is there, then they will be able to hook up and go through the connections. Again, that's my understanding as to why these high-voltage DC lines are coming into place.

Many members have spoken to the fact that you need to transmit over long distances, so if that link gets put in from the north down to Calgary, it's a much shorter distance to go forward. The bids are going forward for electricity. It started on the 17th of October down in Las Vegas, and I'd be happy to get more information to you at a later date on that.

The Speaker: Others to participate under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Member for Calgary-Glenmore. Does he have any information about what kind of shape our present transmission system is in? Is it in worse shape, is it in good shape, or is it in fair shape? Why is there so big a rush to . . . [Mr. Kang's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. member, but the time for this section has now left us.

Hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, do you wish to participate in the debate on the amendment?

Mr. Kang: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to speak on the amendment. This amendment is about the changes being made to the Alberta Utilities Commission, but right now as the act stands, when the Commission conducts a hearing or other proceeding on an application to construct or operate a hydro development, power plant or transmission line under the Hydro and Electric Energy Act or a gas utility pipeline under the Gas Utilities Act, it shall, in addition to any other matters it may or must consider in conducting a hearing or other proceeding, give consideration to whether construction or operation of the proposed hydro development, power plant, transmission line or gas utility pipeline is in the public interest, having regard to the social and economic effects of the development, plant, line or pipeline and the effects of the development, plant, line or pipeline on the environment.

This section is being amended by adding section 17(2), and this subsection is important, it goes on to say, for infrastructure deemed as critical by the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

The existing provision for a public interest hearing is cancelled. It is not made optional but is, instead, explicitly bypassed. The act currently states that the AUC shall, in addition to any other matters it may or must consider in conducting a hearing or other proceeding, give consideration to whether construction or operation of the proposed hydro development, power plant, transmission line or gas utility pipeline is in the public interest, having regard to the social and economic effects, as I said before. That hearing no longer takes place for this particular infrastructure. The government is portraying this move in different ways. One relates to the critical denomination; namely, that this move will streamline the approval process, thereby allowing for those vital projects to be expedited and free from unnecessary hassles of the regulatory process.

Another argument the government is using is that the determination of the public interest in affected property rests in the elected government, not in the regulator. This line of argument is based on appropriate accountability, as indicated by this line from the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit on second reading of the bill: "The provincial government, elected by the people of Alberta, will now be responsible for determining when and which lines are needed." This argument, however, is kind of tenuous.

We have this regulatory process system precisely because the government interest is not necessarily the same as the public interest. To have the public interest heard, we need to have the hearing process in place. This amendment deals with that, and for that reason I support this amendment.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, did you move?

Mr. Mason: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. member. The motion basically says that the bill fails to provide for public consultation prior to the approval of critical transmission infrastructure. I guess I'd just like to make a few comments with respect to that and then perhaps a question. It seems to me that the minister has told the House that, in fact, there was a great deal of public consultation on this bill, and it's true. The government did introduce this bill in the previous sitting of this Assembly, and then it was available for public consideration in the meantime, and I think that that's commendable. I think, you know, that does provide a little bit more opportunity for the public to get to know what's really before us, but it hasn't stopped the public concern and that's, I guess, my concern. In fact, we had all of these meetings, but we don't really know what the consensus was if there was, in fact, a consensus.

5:40

Now, we're further informed by the minister and other members here that based on that, we're going to see some amendments, so the motion is premature. But they haven't told the House what that is, what they heard. The comments that I observed – and there was some coverage of some of these meetings – were that there was a lot of hostility towards this bill. It's based on a number of different things. It's based on people not wanting power lines through their backyard or across their property for a number of reasons. It interferes with people doing their farming work and so on. There's a lot of concern about the electromagnetic radiation as it affects people, as it affects the health, and there's a lot of controversy about that. I think that that's a question that probably came out in the public consultation, but we don't know to what degree it was an issue.

So there are land-use issues, and there are questions about public health, but also, Mr. Speaker, there's a lot of concern about, you know, the cost of this infrastructure and whether or not we really need this very expensive package that's envisaged in Bill 50. In fact, it's unprecedented, in my experience, for the government to specify specific projects and exempt them from regulatory scrutiny and say that these are the ones that you're going to build, and you can decide where they're going to go, but you can't decide whether or not they're in the public interest. Specifically, the bill says – and I read this before – that “the Commission shall not refuse an approval of a transmission line . . . on the basis that, in its opinion, it does not meet the needs of Alberta or is not in the public interest.” Clearly, the government has already decided that these transmission projects are in Alberta's interest and are in the public interest, but we can't find out, you know, specifically why and what the government has based that on or what the public has actually had to say about that.

It really strikes me that the hon. member in his comments with respect to Bill 50 and the amendment that I put forward puts his finger on the issue, and that is that not only are there questions about the necessity of all of these projects, not only is there a question of the cost, but in fact there is a real question about the validity of the consultation that has actually been taken into account. I'd like to ask the hon. member if he could just expand a little bit on those comments because I thought they were quite valuable and hope that all members of the House have a chance to speak to them.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Well, hon. member, that was really kind of neat. We have five minutes under Standing Order 29(2)(a). Your question took four minutes and 58 seconds to raise. Now, you know, this chair has stated on previous occasions that he was not going to apply the 35-second, 35-second guideline, but it's amazing that perhaps the chair will have to start applying that if we want to have this going back and forth because this certainly removed an opportunity for the distinguished Member for Calgary-McCall to make a comment in response to the question that took four minutes and 58 seconds.

Hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, do you want to participate on the amendment?

Ms Pastoor: On the amendment, yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much. I think that this is a good amendment for a couple of reasons because I'm looking at what the intent of this actual amendment is. All they're asking is that it not be read a second time, which is, in fact, asking that we put some more time between this bill being pushed through and before the public actually having a chance to hear and be able to continue the conversations that are going on out there.

Clearly, the citizenry in this province, those who have been paying attention, are absolutely divided. We have those that are saying it's great, and we have those that are saying: not under my watch do I want this to be happening. Each side does have significant numbers and arguments to prove their case. I think that because this bill has created such controversy in the public now that it's finally getting out there, it is flawed. I think the fact that the government is probably going to have its own amendments would lead one to believe that, yes, it does have to be fixed up, so I think all this amendment is asking for is some time to be able to do that.

More and more people are beginning to question how they, in fact, are going to be affected. Clearly, anybody on a fixed income – seniors, people on AISH, people on low incomes – who works from paycheque to paycheque is going to be very apprehensive about a bill being pushed through without them really understanding how it's going to affect them. Yes, this was introduced in the early summer, and there was time in the summer for us to speak to people. However, we all know that during the summer people are more distracted and that some of the meetings, certainly, were more the invited persons that would be sitting around that table, and as has been mentioned, we have no idea what was said around that table. I certainly know what I'm hearing out in my community, and as I say, it is very divided.

As I mentioned, more and more citizens are starting to ask: “What is really going on out there? How is this going to affect me? I was promised that deregulation would lower my electrical bill, and clearly that did not happen.” It became a very important bill that seniors and anyone on a fixed income had to look at on how they were actually going to pay that. I think that as MLAs we all have had people come to our offices who simply cannot meet their utility bills, and we've had to help them in some fashion.

One of the other questions, too, is that I think they think that they're losing their voice. The other question, I think, is that if we're going to be a part of this, why couldn't we be a part of the profits? The other question that has been posed to me has been: when those transmission lines – and certainly it is a huge possibility. Those transmission lines could be sold to China, India, Saudi Arabia, or the United States, and Albertans will still be sending their utility dollars out of the province and even, of course, possibly out of the country. If this is going to go on for 40 years, I'm not sure that those figures are correct. Is it 40 years? Is it going to be even longer? In that 40 years how many times will those transmission lines be sold? I think it's pretty clear, if we watch what goes on in the world today, how businesses and commodities are bundled. These will be bundled, and they will be sold, and Albertans will still be on the hook for the costs.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I would like to move adjournment of the debate on the amendment.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we now adjourn until 7:30 this evening.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:49 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1805
Members' Statements
Edmonton Northlands	1806
Intermunicipal Cost-sharing Agreements	1806
Public Education	1806
Médiathèque French Multimedia Library	1806
Inspiring Education Public Consultation	1807
Tara-Jean Popowich, University of Lethbridge Women's Pronghorns	1807
Oral Question Period
Emergency Hospital Services	1807
Public Education Funding	1808
Lobbying Government	1808, 1813
Long-term and Continuing Care	1809
Seniors' Issues and Concerns	1809
Sour Gas Levels at Mildred Lake	1810
Trade Mission to Asia	1810
Investments in Tobacco Companies	1810, 1815
Underground Electricity Transmission Lines	1811
H1N1 Influenza Immunization for First Responders	1811
Income Support	1812
Southwest Calgary Ring Road	1812
Notre Dame High School Expansion	1813
U of A Sustainable Development Campus	1814
Provincial Tax Incentives	1814
Pastoral Care in Health Facilities	1815
Presenting Petitions	1815
Tabling Returns and Reports	1816
Tablings to the Clerk	1816
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1816

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Tuesday evening, November 17, 2009

Issue 59e

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, November 17, 2009

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 53

Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 4: Mr. Kang]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise and speak to Bill 53 in second reading, that being the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. I listened fairly carefully to the sponsor of the bill and his outline of what he was expecting this amendment act to produce, but I've heard from a couple of people who are raising some concerns about where the bill fails to address something or it goes too far and where it doesn't go far enough.

I'll admit that I don't always agree with these comments because, let's face it, part of what's being anticipated here is that in allowing family members to fall under the professional corporation that the professional sets up to support their business, there are choices that are then made available to those concerned that are essentially about making use of different tax rates. Ultimately, what we end up looking at here is a way for people who are doing pretty well to be able to take advantage of lower tax rates or to avoid paying taxes at all. In my mind that's always called "forgone revenue" because other than for the legislation in front of us, we would have been collecting a certain amount of tax.

It's a tool that government can use. There are always incentives and disincentives, and for public policy the incentives and disincentives that are most readily available to government are taxation schemes. My question in these situations is always: what do we get for the forgone revenue? You make a decision that you are going to accept less tax or no tax because you're trying to encourage people to do something or not do something. So I say: all right, if we're going to be accepting less tax into the coffers, into the general revenue of Alberta, and have less money available to pay for health or environmental protection or culture, what are we getting for it? What behaviour are we trying to change? What are we trying to achieve here? That is what I'm missing out of the explanation from the member, and I think it's something that we need to consider when we look at schemes like this.

Aside from this, it'd be a great idea for people that are professionals – accountants, lawyers, dentists – who can set up a professional corporation and then decide to put these shares amongst their family members. What do we as a society gain from that? Or is the purpose to enable these individuals to pay a lesser rate of tax or to share their good fortune with their family members or those they choose? How do we as a society benefit from that?

So a couple questions here. My understanding is that part of the incentive behind this was to bring Alberta into line in the TILMA agreement with B.C. around how they handle their professional corporations. What we have right now is that you can't have a professional corporation in B.C. and transfer it straight through into Alberta. You'd actually have to shut it down in B.C., move to Alberta, start it over in Alberta. So if my understanding is correct and part of this is to make a transition according to the TILMA agreement that the government has signed, to make that transition straight across so you don't have to do that, then this bill did not accomplish that because it doesn't put in place what we need for those companies to operate in both provinces or to move from province to province.

This is specific to the professional corporations. Obviously, standard corporations are able to do that between B.C. and Alberta and vice versa, but we're talking about professional corporations in this particular instance. So it doesn't comply with TILMA. Why? Why did you do this and bring it before this Assembly when it doesn't comply with TILMA if that's what we were trying to do here? A first question.

Two, the classes of people that are allowed to be involved with these nonvoting shares, some point out to me, are unnecessarily restrictive. On some of these I agree, and on some of them I don't. If we stay with the status quo of what we have, we have a situation where people involved in professional corporations are required to essentially take their excess cash out periodically by way of what I'm told is called a butterfly transaction and then put it back in again. If you have a holding company, which could be created, but this bill does not create those holding companies, you wouldn't be required to do that. It's pointed out to me by people involved in professional corporations that, you know, it's not cheap to be able to sort of do this butterfly transaction every three to five years as is currently required. So why couldn't they make use of a holding company? It's very common in other places for small businesses but is not anticipated in this legislation.

There is limited use of family trusts. It appears that you can only have a family trust that has minor children as beneficiaries. That does ignore the sandwich generation. It does ignore having the possibility of having parents as a nonvoting shareholder. Again, that gives you the opportunity to choose what tax rate you'd be using, and of course someone that was a senior would be operating under a lower tax rate, so it is opening up that possibility. Maybe you intended to do that; maybe you didn't. But it does not allow for and recognize that sandwich generation. I'm a sandwich generation. A lot of my friends are currently caring for their aged parents, and they're still looking after their kids who are in school or in university. This act doesn't let them do anything except for minor children.

The point was also made to me – and I'm not sure what to make of this – that adult children perhaps should not have access to their parents' business and that you could have a family trust holding shares instead of the adult child directly, so you could prevent a situation where you had an adult child having influence on a corporation. The second point that's made around that – and this one, frankly, is one that I flat out disagree with, but the point is well made – is that if you have an adult child who's involved in that family trust and they are married and get divorced, then that parent's professional corporation has to find a way to compensate the departing spouse, for which I would say: "Yes. That's entirely appropriate. That's why we have a Matrimonial Property Act." But perhaps others would argue the other, which is that they don't want to be able to have those ex-spouses having access to the professional corporation's assets.

This also ignores the fact that there are adult children who are disabled and can't hold property in their own name because it would affect their AISH benefits, but having it in a family trust would allow that disabled child, whether adult or not, to benefit from being a member of that professional corporation and perhaps gain some assistance that they wouldn't be eligible for otherwise.

The last point that was made to me was that it ignores others in the family that may be in need of assistance from time to time. For example, an adult sibling or an aunt and uncle who may be in need of some additional help from which the professional corporation could gain a tax advantage by giving them that assistance could take advantage themselves of a lower tax rate if they were dealing with someone who was, for example, dependent for an extended period of time, a disabled person for example. That is not available under this bill either. So a number of points have been raised about things that were – I'm not sure – either deliberately or inadvertently left out of the act.

7:40

Some of the points, as I said, I agree with, and some I most definitely do not agree with. I don't think that using a family trust to get out of having to compensate an ex-spouse is what we intended when we wrote legislation like that. But I can understand that if you were a parent who was a lawyer or a physician who had set up a professional corporation and you'd given a nonvoting share to your adult child whose family now breaks up, yes, you would be in a position where you would be expected, out of that professional corporation, because your adult child has a nonvoting share, their spouse is entitled to some of that money, and maybe that's not what you intended when you worked so hard all those years. Those kinds of things need to be taken into consideration, and maybe that was considered by the sponsor of the bill and that option was deliberately not made available as a result of that. I don't know, but I am interested in hearing it.

I understand the concept behind what is in Bill 53. I'm not sure if there was any kind of consultation in the wider public. I had people contacting me looking for an opportunity to speak to a committee or to a public hearing on this bill, and they couldn't find one. At that point I had to tell them: no, it's already in debate, so you're not going to find one now. But I incorporated some of their comments into the ones that I've raised tonight, so they're on the record.

In the end I'm undecided about whether to support this bill in principle or not because I'm curious as to why certain things have been left out and other things have been put in. According to what I heard the sponsor say they wanted to do, I think they fall short in doing it in this bill, and I'm wondering why. But I also never heard the sponsoring member say anything about TILMA, yet clearly that is – I mean, definitely people in the sector understand that that's what's behind this bill, an expectation that it is going to, you know, mesh the two provinces together under that agreement. So why wasn't that mentioned?

I'm struggling to support something when I still have so many unanswered questions. Given the composition of the House I'm sure the bill will pass second reading, and my one little vote is not going to stop that, but I'm still interested in getting the answers to those questions. I look forward to Committee of the Whole and to getting some answers back from the sponsoring member at that time. We can proceed from there.

Thank you for the opportunity to put those concerns on the record. I appreciate it.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Do any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The hon. member, my colleague from Edmonton-Centre, did a very good job of explaining the yin and yang, the pros and cons and concerns of the bill. Like my colleague from Edmonton-Centre, I look forward to further qualifications and explanations that were raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

In terms of the so-called pros of this particular act, one thing it will do is bring us into line with existing legislation, to a degree, in both British Columbia and Ontario, although as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre noted, it won't provide the same degree of tax relief – some might say tax evasion – that the other provinces allow. But what it will do is encourage professionals, whether they be health, legal, medical, accountants, and so on, to do well in the province of Alberta. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre pointed out, in their doing well are we benefiting from their financial wellness? I think it could be argued that if we are able to attract more professionals, whether they be doctors, lawyers, dentists, et cetera, then the chances of our quality of life improving would be noted and of value.

One of the concerns I have, though, is that with the tendency towards delisting, some of the benefits that would potentially be derived from these services will no longer be available. For example, this amendment will extend nonvoting share ownership of professional corporations to family members. If passed, our province's accountants, lawyers, doctors, dentists, chiropractors, and optometrists will have the ability to access some of the benefits of being incorporated, including some tax benefits. These benefits are currently enjoyed by the same professions in other western provinces, as has been previously noted, as well as in Ontario. However, in Ontario and B.C. chiropractic services are part of the health services funded under universal health care. The government has recently pulled the plug on chiropractors, so the encouragement for chiropractors to continue practising in this province has been considerably undermined by cutting them from the list of covered services.

Likewise, when it comes to optometrists, the government has cut back on, for example, paying for eye exams. It used to be that the cost of an eye exam – in other words, being proactive and promoting good eyesight and good eye care – was something to be considered under our universal health care coverage. That coverage no longer exists. On top of that the number of surgeries – for example, for glaucoma – has been reduced. So, again, optometrists may literally be looking elsewhere. These are concerns that we have to take into account.

Now, as for encouraging lawyers to incorporate, my brother is in that position and my son-in-law, who has recently become a partner with Bennett Jones, has part of that potential ahead if he so chooses. I hope that my son-in-law together with my daughter will keep me in the style that I have been accustomed to. Therefore, if they choose to incorporate, I think this would be of value.

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Mr. Chase: Now, was that relevance or relatives? I'm sorry. I didn't quite hear the comment. Possibly the Speaker can interpret the comment for me. He may have heard it better from his position than I did from mine.

I'm willing to believe that by having these professionals supported to a greater extent in this province, the potential of their practice and our benefit from their practice will be increased. So I go into this with a degree of naïveté but a desire to increase the number of professionals in this province and support them. In this case we're providing them with tax incentives. Hopefully, they're going to spend their savings in terms of building this wonderful province we find ourselves in. If that's the case and that money is returned, then the bill will have achieved at least part of its goal.

Now, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre also pointed out the limitations on dependants in terms of who can be a part of the so-called family corporation, and the thought of the dear aunt or the dear uncle or cousin James not being able to be covered as part of the corporate status does create a bit of concern, but I would hope that the increased wealth and earning potential that incorporation brings will also bring with it a degree of mercy and consideration for other family members.

7:50

The Member for Edmonton-Centre also pointed out what happens when the so-called corporation starts to disincorporate in terms of divorce and breakups of families, family feuds. We all know what happened in New Brunswick with the McCain brothers and their corporations and the bitterness that resulted. Of course, I'm sure there were families of lawyers incorporated that did rather well by their arguments and falling apart, from a corporate point of view.

I look forward to further clarification. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre indicated, we're looking to be further educated on the benefits of this particular legislation. We do understand that it brings us in line with other western provinces and Ontario, and if this will have some degree of restoring what used to be referred to as the Alberta advantage, then it has potential.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Section 29(2)(a) is available for those who wish to Q and A.

Seeing none, any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a couple of comments that I'd like to make on this. I believe that when this first came forward, the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar had asked a number of questions regarding how much work had been done on the anticipated loss of revenue as a result of not collecting these taxes and how they were planning on recouping that tax that they would lose, which, of course, is revenue to the taxpayers of Alberta. The concept itself, I think, brings the rest of our professionals in line with the rest of the country, but I do think that that question on the numbers – I think that the average tax savings for each professional corporation in Alberta as a result of the changes was estimated at approximately $12,000, and it could mean an initial loss in tax revenue collected by the government. I know that there were further numbers that they had talked about in terms of getting that back and the anticipated number of people that this would help to retain. I think it's very important that we retain particularly our professional doctors.

Although it isn't mentioned here, I can see perhaps other medical organizations/people becoming incorporated. I'm thinking of, perhaps, nurse practitioners, who would then in fact have their own practices and would not necessarily be tied to a doctor's office, but even if they were tied to a doctor's office, they still could be incorporated. I can see benefits for perhaps other people, coming down the road.

I think that, clearly, in time this bill will be opened again, should it pass at this point in time, to include grandparents and other parents and perhaps disabled children, who would also be able to have their care looked after under this kind of an arrangement, so that it would fall in line and meet the TILMA regulations or the obligations that have been set up under TILMA.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would look forward to some of the answers when this is passed into committee.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to rise and speak briefly on this interesting bill, Bill 53, Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, maybe not so briefly if people are actually listening. I think that the sponsor of the bill, when he introduced it a few days ago, actually did a very good job of summarizing the competing policy considerations and probably the crux of the issue that one would have to measure in terms of deciding whether or not to support the bill.

In essence, he talked about providing what is in effect a tax cut for professionals as a means of attracting them and keeping them in the province. He identified, however, that that would probably be contested by those who might suggest that now is not the time to be offering tax cuts in Alberta, a time when we're hearing about the need to tighten our belts and to cut our funding and to be responsible and for everybody to pitch in and all that kind of great stuff that the government likes to roll out when they get into financial trouble. I think, actually, that that was a really nice summary of the dichotomy of issues that we need to address in considering this bill.

Do we need this particular change in order to maintain a level playing field with professionals in other jurisdictions and in order to promote equity among professionals within Alberta? Well, I think it's certainly true that there are some professionals already within Alberta who get the benefit of this while others don't. But I would also suggest that for some professionals, if this is passed, there will be additional inequity caused because for every lawyer that works in a private corporation, in an incorporated professional office, there's another one that works on staff, some even for the government, heaven forbid. They do the same job, yet one gets this tax break, and the other doesn't.

For every doctor who sets up their own little private clinic and maybe even starts doing a little private, delisted stuff on the side, they get to income split and enhance their tax outcomes, while the doctor who just out of the goodness of their heart might choose to work in one of the very few primary care centres where doctors are salaried will have yet another impediment to making that decision, even though we know that decision is, ultimately, probably the best decision for the provision of health care across the province. So there's inequity no matter what you do. You're going to pass this legislation to fix one form of inequity only to create another form of inequity amongst the same group of professionals. I'm not convinced that the inequity issue amongst professionals within Alberta is a particularly compelling argument.

Now, if you look at the issue of whether there's equity across jurisdictions, that too is an interesting question. Yes, there's no question that some professionals who have the opportunity to engage in this income splitting in other jurisdictions don't currently have that opportunity here. Let's also look at other things that happen in Alberta. For instance, the blended tax rate in Alberta for people who earn over $126,000 a year, which is, of course, the group to which this would apply primarily, is 39 per cent, whereas in B.C., for instance, the blended income tax rate for that same income group is about 45 per cent. So the fact of the matter is that these professionals in Alberta are already gaining an income tax bonus by being here.

So what are some of the other things that compel professionals to stay in Alberta, to invest in Alberta, to want to set up their business here and grow our economy and grow our communities? Well, I would suggest that there are other issues above and beyond tax cuts, and I would suggest that they relate to quality of life, whether you're talking about the fact that we have a sort of an Alabama-esque approach to the environment versus the more progressive approach that once existed in B.C. and to some limited extent still does, whether you're talking about issues of child care, and I speak for myself, as prior to being elected, I could have been characterized as a professional. Issues around affordable child care are extremely compelling, issues around where you ultimately decide to settle and to live, because child care may or may not cost you $1,500 a month, depending on the jurisdiction that you live in. Certainly, we know that in Alberta we have the lowest per capita funding for child care in the country.

8:00

Another issue, of course, is having a robust system of public education. How big are our class sizes? What kind of access to special services do our kids have? How committed are we in Alberta to public education? This is the kind of thing that would impact my decision on where to locate.

Even more connected to professionals is the issue of tuition and the issue of tuition for professionals. We just heard that the government is actually thinking about removing the cap on tuition in order to significantly bump up the cost of tuition for the very professionals that we purport to want to keep here through this tax cut. This is an interesting irony. We're saying to the students that they're going to have to spend $40,000 to $50,000 a year on their education costs. I've heard from dentistry students, for instance, who tell me that that's roughly what they spend right now.

What that means, basically, is that low- and middle-income very smart students don't have access to become these professionals. The only people that get to go to school and become these professionals are the wealthy. Then once they exercise the privilege that comes to them from being from a wealthy family and they become these professionals, we'll keep them here by giving them a tax break. Wouldn't it be a better way to grow our professional pool by actually increasing access to these professional programs to all members of the population rather than just the wealthy few and that we do that, rather, not through tax cuts but by ensuring an ongoing commitment to investing in equitable public services, including advanced education, and equitable access to professional degree programs throughout the province? That's what we're not doing right now. Those are some things that I think are equally compelling when it comes to determining what would make professionals want to stay in Alberta, what would make Alberta attractive to those professionals.

I also want to talk about a different form of equity, and that's equity with respect to people who are earning this general amount of money. Why is it that a lawyer who earns $150,000 a year and has a spouse who stays home should be able to income split, but a boilermaker who earns $150,000 a year working just as many and probably many, many more hours than the lawyer, in much less enjoyable working situations and working environments, does not get to income split? Well, the difference is that one is a professional in a professional corporation and the other is an employee. Again, we're looking at inequity being established through this particular piece of legislation.

So when it comes to tax cuts and increasing taxes and that whole thing, my view is that there needs to be a progressive tax system, one that ensures enhanced and equitable access to the public system that we build and that there needs to be equity amongst all types of professionals and all types of workers in Alberta, whether they be neurosurgeons, whether they be exceptionally lucky floor cleaners. Whatever the case is, it should be on the basis of the income they earn, not the job they do.

Generally speaking, that is sort of a summary of the concerns we have about this bill.

There was a really interesting point made by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar when this bill was first introduced a couple of days ago wherein the sponsor of the bill talked about how this bill, if passed, would represent about a million dollars of foregone income tax revenue. Conversely, that member was told in a briefing that we're actually looking at it being worth about $12,000 per professional corporation. Obviously, there's a huge disparity. I don't know if one number included federal taxes while the other one didn't. I'm not sure. But I certainly would want to hear from the sponsor of the bill very clearly what the expected foregone revenue is to provincial coffers as well as to federal coffers. Quite frankly, we receive money from the federal government, so we ought to maybe think about what it is we're planning to forgo when we go about suggesting that they should receive less.

Those are the questions that I have, and I'm looking forward to receiving information in that regard from the sponsor of the bill as discussion of the bill moves forward. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, any other members wish to speak?

Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 53 read a second time]

Bill 56

Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 5: Mr. MacDonald]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. Bill 56 is an interesting piece of legislation because, on the one hand, it seeks to give the Alberta Investment Management Corporation, AIMCo for short, greater autonomy. It achieves that by removing the requirement that the deputy minister of finance be a board member of AIMCo.

Again I'm using those terms "yin and yang" and "pro and con." On the pro side it would allow the government to divest itself, to a degree, of decisions made by AIMCo. Now, for example, decisions made by AIMCo this past year saw a reduction of about $3 billion in our heritage savings trust fund and an overall loss of investment through some unwise practices such as asset-backed commercial paper, accounting for about an 18 per cent loss in investments. That being said, there were a number of jurisdictions whose losses were in the 30 per cent category.

In one sense it allows the government off the hook to a degree. It can't necessarily be accused of meddling in the affairs of AIMCo, being an independent investment management corporation which still has to report to the minister of finance. After a fashion the minister of finance could say: well, yes, they are arm's-length independent, but they still have to report what they are doing back to me as the minister of finance.

We have the good fortune right now of having Leo de Bever, I believe the gentleman's name is, who was very successful with the Ontario teachers' fundraising arm. Obviously, this individual has quite a degree of credentials behind him, so one would assume, based on the fact that we didn't suffer as great losses as we might have during this recessionary period, that allowing him and other members of AIMCo a freer rein, less of an oversight leash to do the economic investments to the best of their ability, could potentially be a good thing, but at the same time, on the other side of that coin, is the notion that leaving in AIMCo's hands the corporate well-being of this province, which is $70 billion plus, is a tremendous responsibility for an organization such as this even given the credentials of the person who is currently the head of AIMCo. At whatever point that Mr. de Bever decides to move away to greener pastures, as in the notion of greenback pastures, then, you know, obviously, the search begins again.

So I'm conflicted, as I so frequently am in this Assembly, as to whether this further independence of AIMCo is a positive thing in terms of the oversight for Albertans in general in terms of the accountability and the transparency, or should there be representation on the board such that the ongoing day-to-day activities are being monitored? I'm hoping that the minister of finance, when speaking to this bill, will be able to provide me a degree of sort of fiscal security in that AIMCo will still have a sufficient tether and connection to the ministry of finance so that risky-type ventures will not occur.

8:10

While saying this, I recognize the fact that right now in Alberta we have a deficit approaching $7 billion. Also, the government has trumpeted the fact that we have between $16 billion and $17 billion in our combined capital and sustainability fund, money that, as I mentioned in my member's statement this afternoon, appears not necessarily to be utilized to the extent that it should be; in other words, being used as a buffer to provide continued investment in education and health care and children and youth services.

I guess if we're going to compare the track record of AIMCo versus the track record of the Treasury Board or the finance ministry, we would suggest that AIMCo is scoring higher marks and, therefore, deserves a greater freedom in its choice of investments. As I say, I remain in a quandary, Mr. Speaker. Hopefully, members from the government side will be able to provide me a degree of calmness with regard to: have we struck the right balance by removing the deputy minister of finance and that direct oversight as is proposed in Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009?

I look forward to further debate, Mr. Speaker, and hopefully those answers will be provided. I'm sure further questions will be raised as I note my colleague the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo wishes to participate.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a privilege to be able to rise and speak generally in favour of this bill as it seeks to remove the requirement that the deputy minister of finance be a board member of AIMCo. I guess it goes back to sort of a general philosophy that I think governments should have. I think governments have a job to do; that is, to try and maximize what they see as being in the best interests of both society as well as individuals and to make rules and regulations accordingly. One of those things right now that we have set up to be managed by our government is the many pension plans and investments and a heritage trust fund that we at one time actually believed in putting money away into and is under our financial management.

I think what we have set up here with AIMCo is a good thing. It's a body of experts that are involved in the field of finance and enterprise and maximization of capital dollars that takes a very strategic bunch and a very committed group who have developed expertise in these financial instruments in order to maximize profits for Alberta. This is a good thing that the government has set up. It's a good thing that they've set it up because I don't believe governments or even us as a body would have the same expertise the members of AIMCo have. Simply put, our backgrounds are too diverse. We are pushed and pulled in too many directions to have the ability to manage funds in the nature of $70 billion, that we trust AIMCo to do. So AIMCo is in itself a good thing. I believe that over the long run it will serve the Alberta people well.

I also recognize that the Deputy Minister of Finance and Enterprise would like from time to time not to be a member or required to be a board member of AIMCo, so this is a good amendment, I think, to put in. It allows for opportunities to reduce conflicts of interest that can occur from time to time. We saw that happen just recently when there was some concern over the purchase of some natural gas outfits in Alberta. I think it's a good thing that the minister of finance and the deputy minister don't have the obligation of being there on that type of basis to alleviate those conflicts of interest when they arise and the necessity for them to take part. Like I said, I think this bill makes a sort of amount of sense from that point.

I think we will be calling for an amendment at some point in time on this legislation, but that's more into allowing more of the pension groups who are involved in providing AIMCo with their money maybe getting some representation in the AIMCo board so they have some care and control over the direction that they see their group's money invested in. I think that would be a fair and reasonable thing for the government to consider.

But at this time I'm generally happy with the direction the government has set with AIMCo. I believe that their setting up experts to handle our money is a wise and prudent thing despite the fact of the recent ups and downs in the marketplace. I believe they're going to be able to handle those better than we in this Legislature could even dream of handling.

Nevertheless, that's my story, and I'm sticking to it for now. It was a privilege to be able to speak to this tonight.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise – really, this time it is briefly – to speak to Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act. This is an act that at least at first glance we do have some concerns with. We're not entirely sure why it is that the government wants to remove the deputy minister, which is, of course, the primary purpose of this act. Perhaps I've missed it. I've been trying to look for the comments by the bill's sponsor when it was first introduced. I know we've received correspondence from the minister of finance, but at that time it simply said that it would now be appropriate to remove the deputy minister from the board. I'm not entirely sure why exactly it's appropriate to remove the deputy minister from the board.

It's my understanding that at this point AIMCo manages roughly $70 billion of public assets. Obviously, then, that work is extremely important to the people of Alberta. I don't question – at this point I certainly have no reason to, generally – the skill level of those people that the government has put in place. I appreciate that as the only shareholder in AIMCo the government remains in a position of some authority with respect to the body and also, of course, that they have the regulatory authority to set or manage investment strategies or practices or procedures through the legislation. But it seems to me that the Auditor General has identified a bit of a concern around the co-ordination of work between the ministry of finance and AIMCo. I'm not entirely sure why it is that it wouldn't make sense, then, to keep the deputy minister on the board in order to ensure that that particular recommendation of the Auditor General can be addressed.

8:20

Although the overall act governing and establishing AIMCo allows for the minister to inquire into the activities of AIMCo and to ask for information and to have that information provided, it seems to me that without having a representative who reports directly to the minister about the activities of AIMCo at the board level, the minister would not necessarily be in a position to know when to ask, when to inquire, and when to exert the authority that is effectively given to her through the legislation setting up AIMCo.

It seems to me, then, that this is more about sort of symbolically crystallizing the arm's-length nature of AIMCo so that in the event that things don't go so well with AIMCo, there's an opportunity, I suppose, for the government to try and move away from responsibility associated with anything that might go wrong. We certainly saw that with respect to the decision to invest in Precision Drilling that was raised last spring, I believe it was, when in response to that the minister of finance, I believe, but it may have been the Premier, suggested that the government had no direct involvement in that decision and that we were simply going to defer to the good judgment of the board. Then, subsequently, we determined that, no, in fact the deputy minister of finance was part of that decision. Now, that may or may not make the decision right or wrong, but what it does do is that it ensures that there is a mechanism through which Albertans can hold the government accountable.

Let's remember, I mean, that we have endowment funds in that $70 billion. We have pension funds in that $70 billion. I mean, this is money which is extremely important to the people of Alberta. It would seem to me that there ought to be some mechanism of accountability, if only were the minister wanting to be sure that they have complete knowledge and oversight of everything that is occurring with that board.

We know, for instance, that the board did allow itself rather generous compensation packages very recently. The two top AIMCo executives received roughly $5 million in compensation. Now, to me that's something that I think the minister should remain knowledgeable about and should be prepared to answer Albertans for. She may well want to answer Albertans by saying that the only way you're going to get someone of this calibre is to pay them that amount of money. That may be a completely legitimate – a completely legitimate – answer. I don't know. But what I do know is that there should be enough of a relationship between those people who are accountable to the electorate and to the public of Alberta and those people that are making those kinds of decisions that an answer must be given rather than simply a position taken that: well, it's a decision made by an arm's-length board, and I have no capacity to take responsibility for any of it.

There's no question that you always have a bit of that conflict: do you want arm's length to reduce government intervention, or do you want a closer relationship to enhance accountability? It's a common concern, but I think that at this point I've not seen a compelling argument for why it is we would reduce that accountability and the need to take responsibility on the part of the government. At this point, then, we will not be supporting this bill.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise, do you wish to close the debate?

[Motion carried; Bill 56 read a second time]

Bill 57

Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 3: Mr. Weadick]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. At first look this bill attempts to achieve to a degree what I was putting forward with my Motion 511 calling for a unified court, which was amended by the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright to a unified court process. What it's attempting to do is streamline the process and give similar powers. It harmonizes the process of warrant applications for telecommunications warrants, which at present may only be heard by a provincial court judge or a justice of the peace. Now these warrant applications can be made to a justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, so in theory and hopefully in practice there are more opportunities for a warrant application to be heard, which promotes the idea of a faster and more expedient form of justice.

Not being a lawyer, I do not have the understanding of some of the downsides of potentially adding another layer or level of approval. What I see at this point is that this is, as I say, attempting to achieve a more fluid justice system by granting the authority to individuals and considering that a judge is a judge is a judge regardless of which court they're overseeing.

At this point I'm stating that I believe it's a step in the right direction, and I look forward to hearing from other members of this House such as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, who has the legal background to be able to analyze this agreement to a greater extent. Obviously, my honoured colleague from Calgary-Buffalo, having had his background and training in law, will be able to provide greater insight either in second reading or the committee stage, and the hon. Minister of Education, for example. The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill obviously has background and can further add explanation as to the importance of passing Bill 57. I look forward to hearing from my esteemed colleagues who have the legal background to provide the evidence necessary for further support for this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: I am rising to support this bill primarily for two reasons, I suppose. This is a bill, which others probably have mentioned already, that will give Queen's Bench judges the authority to hear applications for the introduction of tracking devices or number recorders, and this will add to what is their current authority over wiretaps. Obviously, this would result in increased efficiency if the same adjudicator could hear all three applications as they often occur simultaneously. It doesn't make sense for them to have to go to a Queen's Bench judge in one case and a justice of the peace for the other two instances.

I'm told that the courts have been consulted on this change and, in fact, support it. I think that in most legislative amendments that govern the administration of our courts and our judiciary, that ought to be the primary measure of whether the legislation is appropriate or not. Obviously, through it having the support of the courts, it's difficult to suggest that it ought not to be supported. In addition, this would bring Alberta in line, I understand, with Ontario, B.C., Quebec, and Saskatchewan. Again, it seems to be working in other jurisdictions, so why not do it here?

It is with those comments that we will be supporting this bill. Thank you.

8:30

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I appreciate the further sort of legal clarification that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona provided. I would ask: do you have any concerns about court hierarchy? In other words – I don't know why it would occur – in theory could a justice of the Court of Queen's Bench quash a warrant that was heard by a justice of the peace? Is there the potential for conflict instead of co-operation in terms of applying and quashing? I don't have the legal background to know this and would appreciate your interpretation.

Ms Notley: I really have to say that I do not purport to be an expert in this area. Not speaking as a lawyer, I suspect it's not actually the case that that would be a problem. I think they already can overturn it. This is really more about making sure they can make all the applications in the same forum, I believe, like all other members of the Assembly are reading the legislation. I don't think that would be a concern, hon. member.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. Any other members wish to speak?

[Motion carried; Bill 57 read a second time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Just a couple of additional points that I wanted to make during this at-bat in Committee of the Whole on Bill 48, Crown's Right of Recovery Act. One of the things that I believe I heard either by the sponsor of the bill or one of the first speakers to this bill was that some of the local antitobacco groups were in favour of part 1. In fact, I had a telephone conversation with Action on Smoking and Health, and that was followed up with an e-mail in which he clarified that his organization has not offered an opinion on part 1 of this bill because, as he rightly points out, criminal justice is not his mandate. Their mandate is, you know, to eradicate smoking and the use of tobacco products in our fair province. So to have said that they were supportive of part 1 is not correct, and I now have it in writing to support that.

Of course, they at the same time supplied me and, I'm sure, every member of the House with lots of information on how everybody else is doing. British Columbia has currently got an appeal going on a court case that they, in fact, started in I think 2005 on tobacco damages and the Health Care Costs Recovery Act. You know, they were proven right when that went to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court denied permission to appeal on August 5, 2007. New Brunswick has also gone through a similar series and in September of 2007 announced that it had lawyers that were being brought together to sue for tobacco-related illnesses on a contingency fee basis. That was filed March 13, 2008, and is ongoing. So far there are Ontario, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland and Labrador who have commenced actions.

I fail to understand and have also failed to get a satisfactory explanation from the government proponents of this bill as to why they included part 1 because it was going to make what should have been clear sailing for a bill, you know, in any number of sports metaphors, a slam dunk to pass with parts 2, 3, and 4 in it. Whatever possessed them and what was the compelling argument to include part 1? We have failed to hear that argument put on this floor in a way that's at all convincing to me, anyway. Why they had to make it that difficult I don't know. I mean, fair enough; Albertans saw fit to put 70 of you people in here. I'm sure you're going to pass your own act, but the number of problems it creates, I would argue, far outweighs any solution that it was actually presenting here.

The second and related question to this is: where is the government going with this? Now, the minister of health was quoted in some newspaper articles as saying: no, no, no; it stops here. You know, we're not going to go any further than sort of chasing down criminals to recover health-related court costs. He swears that it's not going to go any further than that, and I go: well, yeah, you said that about a lot of other things that weren't going to go further, and we saw them go further. You know, there were going to be a limited number of private clinics, and there'd only be so many health care procedures that would be contracted out, and it would save us money instead of costing us 10 per cent more. There are all kinds of promises that I've heard from this government that have just turned out to be absolutely specious. Where are they going with this?

The obvious conclusion is that it's being put in place so that the government can start to pursue people for medical conditions in their life over which they may or may not have any control; you know, chasing down overeating people to pay for diabetes, denying smokers any kind of surgery or treatment for pneumonia or making them pay for the costs of that. I just think: oh, yeah; go to court and try to prove that this person's pneumonia was caused by the fact that they smoked for X number of years. What if the person has quit smoking? I mean, all I can see are a huge number of complications and an awful lot of taxpayer money being paid out to lawyers to argue this in court. Even if it's lawyers that are on the government payroll, taxpayers are still paying for this, so to me this defies logic.

The government has failed to make a compelling argument about why it would stop there. It seems very clearly to have started on a progression of things and has given me no compelling argument, other than the minister saying that it won't happen, as to why it's not going to continue on. I would like to see the business case for this. I would like to see some evidence from other jurisdictions where they have pursued this kind of thing, that this actually pays off for Albertans, that it actually doesn't cost Alberta taxpayers more money in trying to implement this than whatever costs they think they might be able to recover.

8:40

Now, the minister has made the point that, yes, of course they'll be able to recover money from criminals for health-related costs because not all criminals are poor. True, but I tend to argue – and I bet you we could find some evidence that would tend to say that – that the smart ones are also the rich ones, and they're probably not the ones that got caught. On the other hand, the ones that weren't quite so bright are the ones that got caught, and they're probably the ones that don't have a lot of money on them. So I think there are other things at play there rather than whether they actually have money or not.

I am still waiting to hear some compelling arguments from the government as to why it has chosen to take this particular route. I think it has just created a huge mess for itself, and I don't understand why they did it, why they attached this to this particular bill and made something that should have been very straightforward and easy incredibly complicated and now, I think, slower moving.

I'll take my seat, and hopefully I will hear something from government members as to why these choices were made that would encourage me to support this bill wholeheartedly rather than with a great deal of trepidation.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I'm pleased to be able to get up and speak again on this bill, which is a very, very unfortunate bill. It's a bill, as has already been mentioned, that includes some good things, but it includes such entirely, horrifically ill-advised things that the good things are really, truly overwhelmed.

Basically, this act would amend the Hospitals Act. It would remove certain things from the Hospitals Act and move them into the Crown's Right of Recovery Act. That's including, of course, the provision for the right of the Crown to recover costs of health care services for personal injuries that are the result of wrongful acts or omissions around negligence, medical malpractice, that kind of thing – that's already there – and a provision for the right of the Crown to charge automobile insurers for a portion of the money they make on third-party liability insurance. That's fairly simple as well.

But the other two provisions that this would add that are not in the Hospitals Act, of course, are the right to recover health care costs for injuries received in the commission of a criminal offence, section 34, and the right to recover health care costs for the wrongful acts of tobacco companies. Now, as we said more generally when we had the conversation about this in second reading, the issue of the tobacco company thing is a good one, and it's one that we fully, fully support. We absolutely support the general aim of the bill to establish a separate piece of legislation regarding the Crown's right to recover health care costs, and we would in most cases support any provision which would allow the province to sue tobacco companies.

Tobacco companies perpetrate tremendous levels of ill health on populations, and they profit from it. The degree to which our health care system is strained right now as a result of people's addiction to tobacco is quite unacceptable. One of the quickest ways to cut health care costs in our province would of course be to have tobacco no longer available to people and to reduce all of the negative implications that arise from tobacco consumption. Unfortunately, we have this very laissez-faire sort of scenario. We have people who smoke, and of course we have companies who sell to them in a way that is specifically designed to enhance the addictive nature of that particular habit. They enhance the addictive nature of smoking, and people struggle to get off the smoking, and then people are sicker, and then all people pay the costs of health care.

That is why jurisdictions across North America, at least, have pursued with varying levels of success the notion of going after tobacco companies to take some of those profits and put them back into the health care industry, as well, of course, hopefully to also discourage those very companies from engaging in a lot of the practices which enhance people's inability to stop smoking, whether it be their advertising, whether it be the enhancement of the addictive qualities of the tobacco agent regardless of how exactly people ultimately consume it. As a result we see that British Columbia, New Brunswick, Ontario have launched lawsuits against tobacco companies, and Quebec, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland and Labrador have introduced legislation such as this.

This is all, as I've noted before, a result of the 2005 Supreme Court ruling that unanimously upheld the constitutionality of the first legislation in this regard, which originated in B.C. under the then NDP government. We've already talked about the reasons for this. The provisions around suing the tobacco companies have been supported by the Canadian Cancer Society and the Edmonton tobacco reduction network. We know that this is an exceptionally – exceptionally – worthwhile piece of legislation. I would desperately like to be able to vote in favour of it.

The problem is that this government has seen to attach it to a desperately offensive additional section of the legislation. It is the penultimate poison pill. They're using motherhood legislation to hide or camouflage or to otherwise sneak through this Assembly a different provision, which is as negative, I think, ultimately, to our health care system as the tobacco component of this bill is positive. That is, of course, that element of the bill that would give the government the ability to recover health care costs from criminals. I'm going to talk about that in more detail, but suffice to say I'm not a big fan of that component of the bill. It's for that reason that at this point I'd like to introduce an amendment to Bill 48.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we will pause for a moment while the amendment is being distributed.

We'll call this amendment A1, moved by Edmonton-Strathcona on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Ms Notley: Thank you. What my amendment proposes to do is to strike out sections 34, 35, 36, and 37 of the bill as it currently exists. In so doing, the amendment would strike out all sections that deal with the Crown's right to make criminals pay for any health services they receive because of injuries received in the commission of a crime. We are proposing this because we object to this element of the bill.

8:50

Just to go back a little bit, the government, I suspect, has proposed this element of the bill on one part as part of their typical sort of republican approach to politics, where we all pile on and sing very loudly about our efforts to be, quote, tough on crime. This is one of a series of pieces of legislation that follows along that line.

Nonetheless, this is not a piece of legislation that will bring about that outcome. Rather, it will probably have no impact on the commission of crimes. It might in fact increase crimes, and it will of course perpetuate a much bigger crime, which is the continuation of the government's efforts to undermine our public health care system. We know that the Criminal Trial Lawyers Association has come out against this provision, but we also know that others who are engaged in the business of trying to reduce crime have suggested that this piece of legislation will have no impact on crime reduction, and it may in fact result in an increase in crime.

This bill, as I believe we've stated before, effectively infringes on the principle of universality in health care. Our health care system is premised on universality. It always has been. It is one of the principles of the Canada Health Act that medically necessary services must be provided to everyone at no cost, and the bill as it currently reads infringes that fundamental principle in a significant way.

As I have suggested before, the bill will not reduce crime. There is no reason to believe that the threat of having to pay health care bills will deter criminals from committing crimes. Indeed, we've heard absolutely nothing, not anything, from this government to suggest that this is the case. They are bringing forward this very radical piece of legislation without an iota of research, without an inkling of policy considerations that would merit it. There is actually no stated rationale, and there is nothing to support the implied rationale behind this element of the bill. So it is, I would suggest, an extremely ill-thought-out section of legislation that is simply designed to constitute political pandering, and I would suggest that ultimately it's a very amateur attempt at political pandering.

The bill will also, I would suggest, interfere quite significantly with the role of the judiciary and the long-term historical practices that we have developed in this country around how it is you assess criminal behaviour and establish appropriate penalties. In essence, what we're going to do is that once a criminal is convicted of a crime, not only are they subject to the penalty that a judge, using their expertise and their reliance on the common law, will assess based on the specific elements of the crime and the relationship of those elements of the crime to what the law says is a reasonable penalty, but in addition to doing that, we are also going to have this surprise fine, punitive fine, that gets dumped on the criminal.

For instance, we could have a criminal that marches into somebody's house and brutally assaults three or four people and in the course of doing that injures his finger, and as a result of it, when all is said and done, he is presented with a $2,000 physiotherapy bill. Conversely, we could end up with a young person who is addicted to crack cocaine who commits their first theft of an item under $300, and in the course of that they trip down the stairs in the house that they are breaking and entering into and become paralyzed from the neck down. Suddenly, that 19-year-old first-time offender, who's also very addicted to a substance, is going to be presented with a multimillion dollar fine on top of the penalty that the judge might otherwise impose. There is absolutely no rational linkage between the penalty which this criminal must pay and the crime that they have committed.

What we do, then, is we take this whole process out of the judiciary, and we subject it to the irrationality of fate, and we just go on our merry way. It is truly one of the silliest ideas I have ever seen. It really, really defies common sense, not only of people with a legal background but the common sense of people with any common sense. It's surprising to me that they would suggest moving forward on something like this.

The final issue that we have with respect to this piece of legislation, of course, is that it opens the door to a fault-based fee structure for health care services. Right now we get to recover because somebody is a criminal. Next we'll recover because somebody has been convicted of a provincial offence or a summary conviction. Next we'll recover because somebody has been fined. Next we'll recover because somebody smokes. Next we'll recover because somebody is obese. You know, it just will never end. There is no way to justify this provision without effectively accepting a presumption which automatically would lead to other fault-based allocations of health care costs to patients.

It is for this reason that I urge members of this Assembly to support our amendment and to fix what is an otherwise excellent piece of legislation, an otherwise excellent initiative on the part of the government, to accept this amendment and to subsequently remove this one small piece of intense, intense stupidity. I pause there, but I have to say it. It just is stupid from so many different angles.

So I certainly hope that members will consider supporting my very politely asked for amendment.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. It is a privilege to rise and speak to the amendment moved by my friend from the third party and to comment. Just at the outset, this is a really good amendment in that what it leaves is a very good bill, the first two parts of it, in place and allows us to move ahead on being able to sue tobacco companies as well as harmonizing some legislation with our motor vehicle accident claims and situations like that. But I must also pick up where the hon. member left off, that this is really a stupid bill if we look at the part that we're really trying to pass here.

I understand the mentality of the government wishing to in fact be hard on crime or at least appear to be hard on crime. I say this as a person who has been a victim of crime. I guess at one time this may have had even some sort of appeal to me. As some of you are aware, I was injured some 18 years ago through a drive-by shooting, which is an illegal act. At some point in time, maybe briefly – this was no easy thing to go through, Mr. Chair, just to be perfectly honest. It hasn't been easy.

9:00

When I look back and I think about this legislation and what's it's trying to do, I think: does this legislation have anything to do with preventing crimes like this? I say that no, it has no bearing at all on whether it's going to impact crime. No one can point me to a study where when criminals go out and do bad things, it resonates in their minds that maybe they're going to have some added health care costs tacked on after they're out of the slammer or after they serve a term in jail or after they get caught. That has never been shown to me, and I don't think it's been shown to me because it doesn't exist.

Also, then, as a disabled person who was a victim of crime, I'd like to comment on the fact that, yeah, maybe for a short period of time this might have had some sort of appeal to me in the fact that, jeppers creepers, this guy is going to have to pay for these medical costs, which, no doubt, for an individual like me were quite extraordinary to the state, probably in excess of, when you add it all up, when everything is said and done, over a million dollars. It's probably going to be a million more by the end of the day, before I go to my eternal reward. Probably just the complications of the whole matter are going to make it vastly expensive to the state. So I think about this myself. Well, jeppers creepers, this guy who did this heinous act, this crime – and we're getting tough on it – by golly, he's going to pay for this for the rest of his life. I think about that.

Really, what are the ramifications? I have to move from myself as the individual. Well, I might see some minor personal satisfaction even though I'd hope I'd moved on from whatever bitterness occurred in that moment some 18 years ago to: what are the broader implications on society? So there I look at what bargains our society has struck. On that matter, under the Canada Health Act we have struck the bargain that no matter how rich or how poor you are, how good you are, how bad you are, how in between you are, how much you smoke, how much you drink, how much you do good on one day, how much you do bad on the next day, how well you treat your neighbour, or how well you don't treat your neighbour, you are going to get medically necessary health care. For good or bad that is the bargain we have struck, and I think it's a fair bargain.

The other part of that bargain for society is that if you break the rules, you're going to go to jail. Okay? And if you break the rules, you will serve your time back to society by spending a time either in our provincial jail cells or in our federal jail cells. That to me has been the way we have wiped the slate clean and said: "All right. From here we're going to go on, and we're going to try to do better next time. We're going to build a society."

What we're doing right now is complicating those two principles, the first one in particular. We're starting to move down that slippery slope where it is that you, sir, are not good enough to get medical care; you, ma'am, are not good enough to get medical care. It simply interferes with things that are Canadian, that we base our values and principles on.

The second thing that I look at in this is: how about the offender? How about that gentleman who some 18 years ago shot me? How would this legislation affect him? Well, to be honest with you, like I said, I don't think anyone can point to the fact that this legislation would do anything to stop him from committing that crime. I tell you what. If anyone could point me to that, I'd get onboard this bill. I'd sign up. I'd go tell those criminal trial lawyers how necessary this is. I'd be the first one. However, we can't because we know it's nothing but rhetoric to take out and say that we're getting tough on crime with.

What we have to look at is: would this person who perpetrated the crime on me actually have stuck around in Alberta to have paid off his debt to society? Or are we maybe creating an underground economy? Maybe this guy would've said: "Well, you know, a million, 2 million bucks. That's quite a bit to pay. I feel bad for what I did, but I've kind of moved on. I've done my two years. I tell you what. I might work under the table here, or I might move to another province. I might go here, or I might go there. But this doesn't seem like something I'm going to deal with." That's one example. Another example is: what are we going to do? Have our lawyers set up a whole bureaucracy dedicated to tracking down these people, which people are going to pay back the health care costs? The bureaucracy in the keeping track of this mess; it's just bad legislation.

If this bill does pass without taking this section out, I think what will happen is the government will put it out in their flyers and say: we're getting tough on crime. I don't ever envision that this thing would take place. It simply would be ridiculous to the advancement, I think, of a decent Alberta or, actually, even a better Alberta. I'm hoping they're just using it as window dressing to say that we're getting tough on crime, because that would actually be somewhat refreshing. In a way if it makes you feel better, go ahead; go nuts and all that.

Whether we're putting this dramatically into play, I think it has serious implications for our society. First, that bargain we have struck is that health care is for everyone despite how good we are or despite how bad we are, whether we get caught doing a crime today, whether we get caught speeding tomorrow and accidentally run someone over in a crosswalk. Well, those are some difficult things. I think we're playing with fire on this legislation, I believe, for some of those reasons contained herein and some of those basic values that we've based Canada and Alberta on up to this time. I think they're worth standing up for, and I think they make us a better community and a better government and an example to other jurisdictions that tend to look to the betterment of humanity and the rebuilding of lives and that sort of stuff other than what this bill attempts to achieve.

I thank you very much for allowing me speak to this bill this evening, Mr. Chair. We'll go from there.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will be very brief, but I did want to get my comments on the record. I think I've already spoken before on how absolutely silly part of a section of this is, and the section that is being addressed under this amendment, I think, was the part that I thought was the silliest. In fact, I was sort of convinced it had been put in for comedy relief.

A couple of the points have been made by the previous speaker. I certainly support this amendment because I think it's almost impossible to enforce. It would cost heaven knows what to actually collect. It would create another very costly bureaucracy to administer this. It would undoubtedly have many high-priced lawyers on consulting contracts. I think that is certainly not what this province needs: another whole bureaucratic department.

I think that some of this looks like a bit of political pandering, so it would be really interesting to know who they had to appease in the government caucus to come up with this amazing idea.

I would just really like to encourage and ask the members of this House to support this amendment, which would then make Bill 48 a very, very good bill that this Legislature could be proud to pass. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was just wondering if the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, in view of his objections to the bill, which he articulated, would have a similar difficulty with the long-standing practice of the province of Alberta for subrogated claims for hospitals when someone has caused a motor vehicle accident?

9:10

Mr. Hehr: I understand the question, and generally there's insurance involved in those things. That's why it has been set up there. Through the insurance company and through insurance practices it has been set up that way. Right now our criminal justice system as well as our Canada Health Act is not set up that way. What you're doing is two different things. I believe, you know, it's easy to draw that comparison, but they're not. They're based on an insurance principle that we have on subrogated claims, and it's not the other way around. So I would say that messing with this principle is something we should not be doing.

Dr. Brown: In essence, you're requiring the guilty party – in this case the one that is guilty of a tort in having caused, you know, an accident – to pay the hospital claim.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, through the chair.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. In speaking in support of the amendment, what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona is trying to do is separate the Dr. Jekyll from the Mr. Hyde part of this particular bill. She has also pointed out – and several other people have used adjectives talking about it – the hypocrisy that is associated with this bill. What's she's trying to do is save the baby and toss out the bathwater.

The concern that just very briefly I want to say is that suing tobacco companies makes absolute sense except as the minister of finance pointed out during question period, when in an answer she indicated that Alberta has small investments in tobacco. Well, to that, Mr. Chair, I would say that's like being a little bit pregnant. If you have interests in tobacco, then, as was pointed out earlier, you're suing yourself. That part of the legislation won't be cured by this amendment, but the amendment does remove the portion that is strictly based on getting tough on crime, being vindictive. The person is already injured, so let's hit him a couple of times with a shovel or the take-no-prisoners attitude. As the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo pointed out, we have universal laws, a universal-access right to treatment.

I know, Mr. Chair, that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview has a keen desire to participate in the debate on Bill 48. I'm sure he would find this amendment intriguing; therefore, I would like to at this time adjourn debate on the amendment of Bill 48.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 51

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments that are offered with respect to this bill?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 51 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.

Bill 54

Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity to continue debate in Committee of the Whole for Bill 54, the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009. I've gone back and tried to read the notes that I took and the Hansard of the committee meetings because I sat on the review committee from which flowed these changes. As I look at it, it appears that out of the various particular issues that we dealt with – that actually were kind of prechosen because there was a workbook that was distributed, and it had particular questions that people were encouraged to answer, and they did, of course. So the agenda is somewhat set by the choices that are made in preparing the discussion document, or discussion guide, I think they call it.

Nonetheless, we dealt with a number of things, like the idea of the business product or the work product, which, in fact, is reflected here in the legislation; some clarifications on behalf of the Privacy Commissioner which would allow him to not have to do a complete investigation. You know, he could refuse to investigate something. You need to allow that kind of administrative discretion in some cases. We have to believe we've hired good people who have good legislation to work with to help them make those decisions.

We needed to deal with the PATRIOT Act in the U.S. and the fact that any time a multinational corporation received personal information from Canadians or from Albertans, more specifically, it went into their parent company in the States, and they could then use that information the way they wanted to, not subject to our laws. There's a requirement now that if you are collecting personal information and you know that it could end up in a U.S. multinational office, the Alberta recipient of the personal information takes the steps to make sure that the information is not passed on or that the individual knows that it will be passed on, whichever is appropriate there.

In fact, the one area that seems not to have come out in any way, shape, or form in the amending act was bringing the not-for-profit, voluntary, charitable sector completely under the scope of PIPA. I remember we had a number of discussions about this because they were half in and half out. If they had a commercial product or a commercial venture, the NGO sector – let me call it that as a shorter way – would get captured under PIPA because the part of it that operated as a commercial venture would be covered or would have to adhere to the regulations, but the rest of the organization may not. So you could have a church that ran a brunch on Sundays in its basement and charged money for it. Well, that part of it and personal information around that would be included, but the rest of the activities would not.

We were very concerned as a committee that we not tax the capacity of not-for-profits in having to adhere to the requirements of PIPA, knowing that there were a lot of not-for-profits in Alberta. I think there are, like, 19,000 of them, and probably 8,000 of them operate without full-time staff. Expecting that somehow a volunteer-based organization is going to be able to understand and adhere to all of this can be a bit of a stretch. Nonetheless, as we look at the fact that that very organization, even though it may have no staff, may be collecting personal information about Albertans, would we expect that it will adhere to how it treats that personal information? The bottom line is yes. The Privacy Commissioner has also indicated his expectation that the not-for-profits would be brought under PIPA and his displeasure that they were not.

9:20

I had asked specifically that certain not-for-profits would be brought in to speak to the committee, so we had groups like the chamber of voluntary organizations, the community leagues, and a few other groups like that come in. Really, what they said to us was: "Either way, just make it consistent because right now it's really hard for us to know whether we're in or whether we're out and to figure that out. Again, we're just trying to provide our service. We're just trying to put on, you know, yoga for kids and skating for adults. We're trying to do our activity, not worry about all these other things. So just be clear. Either tell us we're in, we're consistently in, or tell us we're out, and we're all out. But this, 'Well, you're in if you engage in this kind of activity but not in that kind of activity' is, frankly, really confusing."

The committee in the end – and we wrestled with this a lot – had recommended that they all be brought in just to provide that greater clarity and consistency. In recognizing that capacity issue, we had recommended that there be a phase-in of this and that there should be some monetary assistance available to organizations to ease their way into that compliance.

Maybe that's the reason why the government decided not to include it as they weren't interested in offering the financial assistance to build the capacity in these organizations to do this. As a result we have maintained an inconsistent application to the not-for-profits, we have maintained a confusion for them on how they are supposed to be behaving, and we've left a lot of employees and volunteers and other Albertans that have an interaction with those organizations also with their personal information and the protection of it not covered under this legislation. I think that continues to be an issue, and I think it's something that we need to hear from the government as to why that choice was made in a more thorough way than what we've heard thus far. I look forward to the sponsor being able to give some explanation on that.

Another question that I had as I started to go through this. This is sort of a technical question, but as I look at the beginning of the bill, under the definitions section – and, of course, that's at the front of every bill; it's an important part of every bill because it tells us how we understand the rest of the bill – there's a part that is confusing me. Usually you would have something flow logically. I found something that doesn't flow logically to me.

When you look at the definitions, under section 1(m) in the existing act, which appear on pages 4 and 5 of the printed version, you have a discussion there about record and the definition of a record, meaning "a record of information in any form or in any medium, whether in written, printed, photographic or electronic form or any other form," et cetera, et cetera. But under the act what's being added under that section which starts talking about a record is something that is, to my eye, unrelated. I'd like an explanation of that.

What it starts talking about adding under this clause that talks about a record is (m.1) "regulation of Alberta," meaning a regulation as defined in the Regulations Act, (m.2) would be a regulation of Canada, and (m.3) a service provider. What does that have to do with records? It has nothing to do with records. You're amalgamating two things together that are totally unrelated in a definitions section, which I think is creating confusion. I'd like an explanation as to why that's happened because (m.3) as proposed in the amending act, appearing on page 3 – and for the purposes of people following along, this is actually section 2(vi) – still under the record section, adds in:

"Service provider" means any organization, including, without limitation, a parent corporation, subsidiary, affiliate, contractor or subcontractor, that, directly or indirectly, provides a service for or on behalf of another organization.

Are we somehow supposed to link that this is about records coming from regulations of Alberta, regulations of Canada, and service providers? This is not logical to me, and I'm just wondering if this was meant to be created in a different area, that it was meant to create a completely different section, or if it was meant to flow under the records section. If I could get that answered, I'd appreciate it.

Everything else under that section looks fine to me. Then it just flows on through the rest of the amending act, essentially incorporating the details of what's needed to implement the decisions that were made by the committee. As I say, the decisions were arrived at after a great deal of discussion, and they're all pretty necessary, I believe. I talked about the PATRIOT Act already. There was also a section to deal with administration of pensions without having to chase the person down and find out about them and deal with them directly. That would be an issue where the notification clause or the disclosure clause is being exempted to allow someone to get the work done.

There were also some small things like allowing the business title to be attached. This was around that whole work product discussion. The organization could give the position name or the title when communicating with a person about whom they have a privacy concern. They'd be saying, "Please, you need to speak to the district manager" rather than giving the individual's name, and that wasn't a possibility before.

The preparation of audits and audit-related amendments, really, to allow organizations to collect personal information without consent in the case of former employees as well as current and prospective employees. I never liked those sections because doing it without consent, I think, flies in the face of protection of personal information, but you can see that at a certain point it is very difficult to get that consent if you're trying to, you know, deal with old files from former employees and things like that. If you can't find them, you've stuck that business in an untenable position because they can't get rid of this stuff. They can't do anything with it because they can't get the permission to do it from a long-gone employee. So you can see that, you know, in trying to kind of take the red tape out of this and make it possible to implement it, we've had to forgo some of the protections that people like me would prefer to see in there, but I recognize the sort of reality of getting the work done.

Some of the other things you've heard other people talk about, the security breaches and the requirement to disclose a number of things, as I've said, for the commissioner. I was okay with everything else that was included in this act, and I spent a lot of time on it.

Those were really my biggest concerns around it, the reasons for not including the not-for-profit organizations and that very strange section where we're including a whole bunch of disparate elements under that definition of records, which simply did not make sense to me.

Having sort of done that on a word-by-word, clause-by-clause basis, I appreciate the opportunity to do that in Committee of the Whole on Bill 54. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I just wanted to offer my thanks to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre and to the all-party standing policy committee that has done so much of the work in preparation for Bill 54. That goes to show the functionality and the importance of the all-party committee. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre pointed out that all but one of the nine recommendations were accepted by the mover and organizer of this bill. She also pointed out the need to bring all not-for-profit organizations under the same umbrella.

9:30

I recall a circumstance which, I believe, is related to this particular bill, where the War Amps were prevented for a period of almost two years from receiving the information from the drivers' registries. The War Amps, we all know, do wonderful work, and their main fundraiser is through the key tag promotion. I would hate to think that these very worthwhile not-for-profit organizations would be denied this type of information. They're not into information sharing. They're into the notion of doing good work for children and adults who have suffered amputations.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre also pointed out some of the discrepancies with regard to parts of the bill; for example, the records with regard to service providers and nonprofit organizations somehow being thrown into the mix and not flowing logically. Again, without going into too much detail, she expressed a desire for clarification, which I hope the hon. mover of this bill will provide or possibly a committee member who had second thoughts about the ninth of the nine recommendations that were put forward.

With regard to the protection of information there are all kinds of self-checks, to a degree, that we can look after ourselves. For example, we get into sort of a holidayish mood when we're going to a boat show or a home renovation show, and we fill out the little free draw form for that wonderful basket of jellies. What happens? Three weeks later we're getting calls for time shares or, you know, some Fabutan product that is going to make us that more attractive to our constituents. To a degree a little bit of self-awareness can protect us.

When it comes to larger issues of information protection and information sharing, that's where we have to be careful. Sometimes that information sharing is based on a criminal circumstance, where a computer has been hacked or an uncoded, unencrypted health record circumstance has found its way into the wrong hands. That's a different matter, but it does lend credence to the fact that we have to believe that our personal information is being protected, and that's part of what's happening within this bill, recognizing that every three years it goes back to an all-party committee for further improvements. This would be the sixth opportunity for a revision.

Again, I think the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has pointed out the primarily positive aspects and intents of this bill, and we look forward to the clarifications surrounding those areas that have not been fully explained.

With that, Mr. Chair, I'll take my seat and look forward to further qualification.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It is a pleasure to rise to speak in more detail about this rather extensive bill. Unfortunately, I was not around when the committee reviewed this bill, so I'm not as familiar with it as some. I have to say that I did struggle somewhat trying to plow through this rather extensive bill with a limited amount of time at my disposal to do that. Nonetheless, I'm going to mostly work off the bill itself, having just gone through it to try to figure out what it says. Because we didn't actually ultimately get a whole sort of three-column document or anything in our briefing, I'm just going through that now.

Of course, the sponsor of the bill did indicate when introducing the bill that although it included some elements that had been recommended through the committee that reviewed the act, it also included some additional elements. I'm going to try to cross-reference between them, but if I don't quite do that, I apologize.

There are many things within the bill which are worth while, and I'll try to point those out as I go. There are some others about which I have some concerns and then still others about which I have some questions. I suppose that, just to start, one key point which everyone probably has mentioned, because I think it was identified as a deficiency by the Privacy Commissioner, is the failure of this bill to bring nonprofit organizations into its scope, so they are still not compelled to adhere to the privacy and protection of privacy provisions and protection which this bill attempts to give to regular citizens in their private dealings throughout the province.

Of course, it is difficult. I appreciate that there are a lot of nonprofits that will struggle to bring themselves into compliance with this piece of legislation. Conversely, however, we have a government that has really excelled in downloading very significant, impactful services onto the nonprofit sector. While they say that they can do that without compromising service, to then suggest that we can't provide to the recipients of those services the kinds of protection that a bill like this would provide because those nonprofits are too stretched kind of runs against the notion that it's okay to download so many services onto the nonprofit sector.

You know, either the nonprofits are properly funded to provide the kinds of services that they do or they're not. Then the question becomes: at what point ought these important objectives that are being performed by some of these nonprofits, which remain outside the scope of this act, be performed by those particular groups? While I, too, see the concern that they would have about complying with the act, I think that if the government truly thinks that this bill and the protection it provides are important, then we ought to be considering providing the resources necessary to allow those nonprofits to come into compliance with the act and to provide adequate protection to the people whom they come into contact with.

Another concern that I have that is included in this act but which does not appear to have been covered in the review that was conducted by the committee is the way the act proposes to treat information that employers hold about employees once that employment contract is terminated. I didn't see any mention of that in the committee recommendations. I may have misread it. I will say that I have some very, very significant concerns that the employee remains in a position of having fewer rights to control the employers' collection, use, and disclosure of their private information once that relationship has terminated.

That's particularly the case because often the employer will be using that information in matters where the employee and the employer are at loggerheads, or alternatively they'll be using it with respect to the administration of benefit plans or the administration of long-term disability or disability plans. I will talk about that later on, but I have a very serious concern about that because I've spent far too much time watching how insurance companies as well as employers expand the scope of the information, that they believe they are entitled to, in order to advance a certain position.

9:40

There are, frankly, incidents in the system where employees are exploited or they have their rights compromised by the actions of either the employer or the insurance company as a result of them exploiting their access to personal information that ought to be within the control of the employee. This change, by changing the definition of employee and extending it to that posttermination relationship, is something I have a very major concern with.

Section 5 in this bill enhances that concern as it assumes that there will be deemed consent for insurance purposes. Well, for insurance purposes includes contesting a claim. For insurance purposes includes challenging medical information and rustling up information that ought not to be used for that in a way that the applicant would never consent to or that the recipient of the benefits would never consent to. I have a tremendous concern that we are once again creating a second-class citizen. If you're a contractor, when that contract ends, the exchange of information needs to be managed in accordance with this piece of legislation, but if you're an employee, your employer has, apparently, an unending access or certainly an enhanced access to your private information as a result of the way this legislation is crafted.

I appreciate that those who were sitting on the committee identified that it's "business practice" of insurance companies, but I also appreciate that the regular business practice of insurance companies is often simply not acceptable and is often challenged in the courts and then has to change. I don't know that we necessarily should use insurance company regular business practice as a guide for developing legislation which is otherwise supposed to protect the rights of individuals against inappropriate collection, use, and disclosure of their personal information.

Section 8 of the bill is a bit of a concern as well. It expands the ability of an organization to collect, use, and disclose information without consent beyond that situation where a statute or regulation requires that collection, use, or disclosure to a situation where municipal bylaws and professional regulatory instruments would also require that disclosure. I'm not exactly sure where that came from. That didn't appear to come from the committee although maybe it did, but again it does just expand, generally speaking, the opportunities for information to be collected without asking the person for consent. Of course, every time you expand that, we have concerns because the idea is that people are supposed to be able to consent to the collection, use, and disclosure of their personal information.

The amendments under section 17 of the bill. I'm not sure what this means, to be quite honest. It appears that when a person is asking for an organization to provide to them personal information held by the organization about the person asking, now instead of saying, "I'd like you to provide me with copies of this information that you have," you now have to say to them, "I'd like you to provide me with all information that you have in this record or that record." I'm not entirely sure whether this will end up being another barrier to a person being able to get access to the information that an organization holds about them if they are unable to specifically identify the record in which the information exists. That's simply a question.

Section 19(a) in the bill I think is a good change. That's where an organization refuses to respond to a request by somebody looking for information. At a certain point that refusal to respond is deemed to be a refusal overall as opposed to making a person wait forever and ever and ever only to have the person say: no, we don't want to give you this information. So that's a good thing.

I'm less excited about section 19(b), which seems to limit the ability of a person to request a review of an organization's refusal to excuse access fees in the event that the person cannot afford them or whatever the circumstances are where they've requested that the fees for getting access to the information be waived. So that's a bit of a not-as-good thing. I'm not sure what the rationale for that was.

Section 15. This is really a question that I have. It appears to me that section 24 of the current act is amended to limit an organization's obligation to provide information about the use or the purpose of the information that's collected where it's not in the custody and control of the organization. While I can see that it would be difficult to give access, it would seem to me that you would still have to know the use and the purpose for that information. So I am curious about what the rationale is behind that.

Section 23 of the bill is a good thing because it does limit slightly the types of items where fees can be charged, in particular if a person contacts an organization and asks, "Can you please tell me who has looked at my personal information?" It used to be that the organization could charge for that. Under this amendment they can't. That's a good thing.

Section 24. A little concerned about that one. Section 24 of the bill qualifies what was previously an unqualified obligation to maintain the accuracy of the information relating to a person. That obligation, of course, existed on the part of the organization that held the personal information. Now that obligation has been qualified with the use of "reasonable" effort to keep that information accurate. Again, this is something that was identified when PIPA was first brought in. One of the reasons many people suggested that PIPA was not actually an adequate replacement for the federal PIPEDA was because it was overflowing with the use of qualifiers like "reasonable" and things like that so that it seemed that there was a lot of wiggle room for organizations to get out of their obligations under the act.

Section 25 is a good thing, and I know that it was promoted as such by the government with respect to this bill. That's the section of the act which requires notification of unauthorized access to personal information that's held by an organization. The concern I have about that: while that is excellent, again, the qualifying language in this provision is really quite something. They have to give notification of "unauthorized access" but only where a "reasonable person" would conclude that there was a "real risk of significant harm." So you've got three qualifiers there, which probably is going to reduce the amount of notification by a good 50 per cent, if not more.

I'm not entirely sure why it is that if there was an unauthorized access to somebody's personal information, it just wouldn't be a no-brainer that you would give notice to that person that their personal information had been breached, that their privacy had been breached. I'm not sure why we have to assess whether the harm that would come to them is significant, and I'm not sure why we would have to assess whether the risk was real or superficial or delusional. I don't even know how exactly you would assess what "real risk" means.

Section 26 is a good thing. It appears to actually require organizations to dispose of information at a certain point, and that is good.

9:50

Section 34 is a provision which I have great concerns with. It's a provision which actually looks a lot like what we have seen in other pieces of legislation that this government has brought forward where there is any kind of internal review, investigation, and complaint process. It seems to be standard now that the government wants to give the administrative body the complete discretion to simply decide that the person filing the complaint is vexatious or frivolous or a whack job or taking up too much of their time or annoying or whatever, so they don't have to investigate. They don't have to receive the complaint. They don't need to review it. I have a real problem with that. I have a problem with that in the context of the adult guardianship act, and I believe there was another act that's been through here in the last year and a half where that same provision was put in place. I think that that's really quite arbitrary.

If you're going to put in place a complaints and investigation process, then the person should be able to make the complaint and the investigation, and then it should be adjudicated accordingly. Particularly, in this case it's not simply limited to where the commissioner thinks it's vexatious or frivolous; it's also where "circumstances warrant." Well, I would really love to know what that means. Does that mean, "I don't have enough people on staff to investigate this, and therefore the circumstances warrant that I will not pursue your complaint; I will not investigate your complaint"? I mean, that language is, in my view, quite unacceptable because we don't know what the criteria are for where circumstances warrant and where the complaint procedure under this legislation would then be stopped and withheld from citizens of the province. So that is a concern.

I think that's pretty much most of it, again, having really just flipped through the bill as quickly as I could this afternoon to figure out what was going on in it. As I said, some good additions to the bill but also some areas that we are concerned about, some omissions that we are concerned about, and also the addition of qualifiers to rights within a piece of legislation which, relative to its federal counterpart, is already quite qualified and already allows for a tremendous amount of flexibility on the part of most organizations relative to the federal standards.

I look forward to hearing from the sponsor of the bill with respect to some of the questions that I've put forward. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for the opportunity to say a few words about the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009. In earlier comments we spoke about the importance of informing customers when their personal information may be processed outside of Canada. I would like to now move to another privacy protection point which is new to the act, specifically the notification of individuals when a significant security breach has occurred.

The loss of customer or employee data can have serious consequences for individuals, ranging from humiliation and anxiety to financial loss, identity fraud, and other criminal acts. Requiring businesses to disclose a significant security breach will allow affected individuals to take steps to protect themselves from further harm. This amendment demonstrates to Albertans that protection of personal information is a matter of great concern to this government.

The Personal Information Protection Amendment Act will strike a really great balance between the protection of individuals from harm and protection for businesses from undue economic burdens. The requirement to report is not automatic. Only a breach that meets a certain threshold will have to be reported to the commissioner. Then the commissioner will decide whether affected individuals have received adequate notification and also can order remedial measures if needed. More importantly, reporting is mandatory. Failing to report to the commissioner a breach that meets the threshold is an offence under the act.

I feel that this amendment would go a long way to increase public confidence in doing business within Alberta organizations, and I appreciate the opportunity to put forward additional comments on this matter. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 54 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried

Bill 55

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thank you to all the hon. members for their comments and suggestions and debate on Bill 55. Now, I heard voices of support for the bill, and I am certainly pleased about that. As well, I heard voices of disagreement, which I would like to address today.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview both suggested that what Canada really needs is comprehensive Senate reform, and I absolutely agree. Alberta has been committed to comprehensive Senate reform for over a quarter of a century. We want a Senate that is elected, we want a Senate with equal provincial representation, and we want a Senate with effective powers to fulfill its mandate of representing provincial interests.

We recognize that Alberta cannot accomplish these changes alone. These are fundamental reforms that would impact the lives of all Canadians. But abandoning the democratic principle because change will be difficult is not the Alberta way. Alberta is proud to do our part and continue the efforts to reform the Canadian Senate so that all Canadians can benefit from a democratic upper Chamber.

It has been mentioned several times now that our legislation has been making an impact. So far two elected Senate nominees from Alberta have been appointed to the Senate. In addition, the federal government has expressed support for our provincial Senate nominee process and affirmed the Prime Minister's commitment to continue appointing Alberta's elected nominees. As well, our legislation has served as a model for Senate reform efforts in other provinces, including Saskatchewan, which has already passed its Senate Nominee Election Act.

Further, I'd like to address the comments made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, who suggested that we should advocate for abolishing the Senate altogether. Mr. Chairman, the Senate is an important part of our parliamentary democracy and an important part of our country's heritage. Appropriately reformed, it could serve a vital role in representing provincial interests within the federal legislative system. Rather than giving up on the Senate, we strive to improve it so it can better serve all Canadians. I'll repeat again: Albertans want Senators who are accountable, and Alberta wants a Senate that appropriately reflects the federal character of our country.

The hon. member also raised a concern regarding the costs of Senate nominee elections held concurrently with municipal elections. I would like to emphasize that the legislation in question simply provides the legal framework to enable Senate nominee elections. The legislation does not mandate the timing of the future elections. However, in response to the hon. member's concern, I would refer him to Alberta regulation 118/98, which governs grants to municipalities to pay the costs of conducting a vote. Also, I would refer the hon. member to the report of the Chief Electoral Officer on the Senate nominee election held in 1998, the last Senate nominee election held concurrently with a municipal election. Page 79 notes that grants to municipalities totalled nearly $3.2 million to cover election expenses.

Mr. Chairman, we recognize that Senate reform will not come overnight. Although some members across the floor suggest that with the Senatorial Selection Act we have somehow trimmed the sails and are riding the wave, quite the opposite is true, and I think the progress we have seen so far with our legislation speaks for itself.

Again, we stand firm on our commitments to defend Albertans' democratic rights and to ensure the voice of our province is heard in the Senate. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

10:00

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'll just be very brief. I think that the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations was quite clear in what he was trying to achieve with this bill. I might point out that it's his first bill as a minister, so congratulations to him for that.

This bill as it stands, really, is quite innocuous. All this bill is asking for: it just simply extends the life of the Senatorial Selection Act. It doesn't curtail any further discussions on what people think should happen to the Senate: Senate, no Senate; elect, not elect. It has nothing to do with that. All it is is buying time for when and if those solid discussions would take place because, as the minister has clearly pointed out, part of this is constitutional. It would take forever to change unless they do it within certain ways in each province.

I'm asking for the support of the House for this bill, and we can save the discussions on the other items for another day.

The Deputy Chair: Does anyone else wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise to speak to this rather entertaining bill. Not surprisingly, I'll be parroting the general opinion previously offered by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood in that this is a piece of legislation that we can't support because, quite frankly, it just provides a foundation to continue with what is currently a very ineffective system on the federal level.

As has been previously stated, our view is simply that the Senate should be abolished. It is not something that reflects the democratic makeup of our country. The historical rationale behind appointing a Senate has long since dissipated in terms of sort of the historical political concerns that underlay the initial construction of the Senate. The current elements of the Senate that we would effectively be promoting and encouraging the continuation of are, in my view, quite unacceptable.

Whether we elect our Senators or whether we have elections where the government chooses to appoint our Senators, we're still dealing with the current situation, which is that the Senate itself does not reflect the national population distribution in that, you know, Alberta has six Senate seats, and New Brunswick, with about one-fifth of Alberta's population, has 10 seats. Eligibility for appointment in the Senate is still based in part on property ownership, and once appointed, Senators just get to hang around there until 75. Whether we have this legislation or do not have this legislation, that's exactly what's going to happen.

Having had this legislation, we've actually, if anything, encouraged the continuation of the Senate. We've encouraged buy-in to what is a fundamentally antidemocratic institution.

You know, this was something that came up originally as a means to make a political point when there were substantive discussions around Senate reform a long, long time ago. There have been no meaningful discussions around Senate reform for, I would suggest, about a decade at least. This piece of legislation will simply give credence to what continues to be a dysfunctional system and one that is costly and one that has long since outlived its purpose. The bill has outlived the purpose, the process in Alberta has outlived the purpose, and frankly the Senate has outlived its purpose. For that reason, we cannot support the bill.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 55 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.
The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee now rise and report bills 51, 54, and 55 and report progress on 48.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 51, Bill 54, and Bill 55. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 48. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 46

Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to provide a brief summary of Bill 46, the Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act. This act makes it mandatory for health care facilities or emergency medical technicians who treat gunshot or stab wounds to disclose to police the injured person's name, type of injury, and location of treatment.

Mr. Speaker, I move third reading of Bill 46, the Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pride to stand up in support of this bill here tonight. It is one of those bills that really is a little bit contentious as it's never an easy balance when we infringe sometimes on some of those privileges that we've had here in Canada, I guess. Some of those that we have taken for granted are, for instance, when we tell our doctor something or when we tell emergency staff. But Bill 46, notwithstanding those reservations, tries to strike a balance in the situation where the general public could be in fear of someone who has perhaps shot a person or may be out at large or whatever the deal may be. It strikes a balance in that only a limited amount of privileged information is shared with the officer, and that officer can go about his business.

As mentioned in both second reading and Committee of the Whole stage, I asked the Minister of Justice and possibly the minister of health to monitor this for possibly whether it is interfering with health care treatment and whether there are problems in the bill going forward. Right now I think it does strike that balance on a fair basis going forward on what we'll continue to monitor in Alberta.

I thank you for allowing me to speak on the bill, and with that, we'll hear some other speakers.

10:10

The Acting Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise to speak to this piece of legislation. Fulfilling my title as opposition member, of course, I think I'll have to get up and be the opposing voice on this one. I say that with some hesitance because I do appreciate that there are some worthwhile objectives that are being pursued in this bill, and I also understand the degree to which there is already a situation where health care professionals are often required to report things by law which would otherwise violate patient-doctor privilege. For instance, child abuse is one example, but there are other examples. I appreciate that there is merit to that. In this case were the bill constructed a little bit differently, I might even be convinced to support this bill. Unfortunately, I'm not convinced that this bill has been constructed in quite the best way that it could have been.

Basically, the bill suggests that the health care professional must report any other information that may be required by the regulations. This reflects a common practice of this government to move everything out of legislation and into regulation. This is a significant thing because we don't know exactly what kind of additional information might have to be reported to the police about a particular person.

Of course, the thing of it is that we're often talking about victims here, so we are looking at victims and we're saying we must automatically contact the police here, we must provide them with this information, and we're also going to require health care professionals to provide other information about the victim to the police that we're not going to talk about in the Assembly. So that is a concern. This government, when it comes to anticrime legislation – because it's so popular to be anticrime, we sometimes take a great big huge mallet to hammer in the little tack, and we don't figure out whether there might be a slightly less blunt tool to get to the same objective, an objective which, I've stated before, has merit but one that has to be addressed carefully because we are balancing very important rights against each other.

It's also a concern, frankly, that this bill appears to have been brought into play without adequate consultation with the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the College of Paramedics, or the AMA, and we've heard them express concerns about this bill and the position that this would put them in. Again, I would be much more inclined to support this bill if I knew that it had gone through consultation with those organizations and it had their endorsement.

The Information and Privacy Commissioner has also expressed concerns about the bill and the degree to which it might interfere with the provision of emergency medical care and, again, wanting the government's piece of legislation to clearly state what information would be provided because we are talking about impinging on a fundamental right, the right to have the relationship between the doctor and the patient compromised for a larger public purpose.

When you're going to do that, you should stipulate very clearly how broadly that right will be compromised and in what circumstances and, specifically, how it will be compromised. To say, "Oh, we're going to compromise it depending on how we write the regulation at some point in the future that you're never going to know about," well, is just not responsible governance when you're balancing those two sets of rights. We just had a government member get up and talk about how much this government values protecting people's privacy, yet now what we're doing is moving into a situation like this, where we've not really thought out very clearly how to balance these competing and both worthwhile objectives.

So, finally, I do have a concern about what this law might do to the mentally ill and, particularly, those who may have attempted suicide. I appreciate that the legislation tries to deal with that with respect to stab wounds, but it does not deal with that with respect to gun wounds. Once again, that whole thing there – the mental illness, the attempted suicide, the treatment that came before and after that – potentially may be reported to the police at great length because, again, exactly what is reported to the police is not clearly limited in this piece of legislation.

So I appreciate the objectives, and I'm not opposed to the objectives. I just think that the tool in this case is not a very refined one and that we could do better. Until such time as we do, we can't support this bill.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I was in on part of the development of this, unfortunately, because it flowed out of the health information review that was done in the early part of this decade, let me put it that way. I don't remember the exact date. Maybe 2003. At the time there was a presentation from several of the large urban police forces that they wanted a clause inserted into the Health Information Act. They felt that it was urgent that they be able to compel medical personnel to alert the police force and, actually, to allow the police force to sort of troll through the hospital wards looking for people. I really objected to that at the time because I felt it wasn't the job of health professionals to enable the police officers who, you know, hadn't hit their quota for the month to wander up and down the halls looking for people who would match outstanding warrants for particular problems.

It was put to us that, you know, there was urgency for this. I said: what urgency? They're not in hot pursuit. If they were, there's legislation to allow them to take certain actions. They're clearly not looking for children that are at risk, because there's legislation that would cover that. They're also not looking for seniors who are at risk, because, again, there was legislation that would cover that. The argument was: well, you know, we get these bad guys, and they end up in the hospital, and we need to be able to find out whether they've committed crimes, and there are other people, perhaps, who might be in need to track this down. And I said: well, then do what other jurisdictions have done and actually bring in a gunshot and stab wound act which would give clear direction as to what was expected of medical personnel because you are changing their relationship. Frankly, we don't train our medical personnel with a cop's checklist of what kind of information and observations they're supposed to be making about people. We train them to identify and triage the difficulty of a particular medical problem and to pursue treatment for that.

The Member for Edmonton-Strathcona is correct. The bill did go partway towards what I had expected it to do but fails to give us the clarity that we were seeking. You know, if we're going to start crossing and blurring those lines between what we expect our professionals to do, you need to be addressing that through some sort of college or professional association, not doing it through some kind of legislation. I expect that clarity in there. If you are going to be messing around with people's personal information, particularly personal health information, you'd better be pretty clear about exactly what the parameters are. This bill has failed to accomplish that to the degree that I expected it to address this particular problem.

I can give some inkling to the previous speaker of what kind of information they'll be looking for because some of it was the information they were trying to get under the Health Information Act. They wanted to know the location of the individual, their current home address, their social insurance number, their health care card, their appearance, obviously their contact information, location information, but also a lot of details about the medical condition that the person was in, which I feel is inappropriate. If you're trying to chase down a bad guy for some reason, you know, you may well be able to present an argument to me about why you need their location information, but their medical information, I would argue, should not be part of that.

10:20

You know, it's so frustrating to me that this government, with all of the resources that it has, having been in power for as long as it's been, having control over everything it's got control over, still manages to give us half-assed bills. Sorry. I'm not supposed to use language like that, and I apologize for that.

It's not well done. It's disappointing, but you know what? It's also a cost factor. When you don't give clarity in legislation, you wind up with a big old mess, and big old messes cost money. It costs money for somebody to clean it up, or it costs money for someone to fix it. That's what bugs me. We have this government that proclaims that it's, you know, fiscally responsible, yet every time I look up, we've got another piece of legislation in front of us that either cannot explain how it is spending taxpayers' money, cannot explain what benefit it is expecting to get from foregone revenue, or just creates a big old mess that costs money for taxpayers to clean up. That's why I get annoyed with you. You should be able to do better with the resources that you've got.

Thanks.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?
Does the Member for Strathcona wish to close?

Mr. Quest: I'd just ask to call the question, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 46 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Having completed the business for this evening, I move that the House do now stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 10:22 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 53 Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1837
Bill 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009	1840
Bill 57 Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009	1842

Committee of the Whole

Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act	1843
Bill 51 Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1847
Bill 54 Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009	1847
Bill 55 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009	1851

Third Reading

Bill 46 Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act	1852
---	------

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday afternoon, November 18, 2009

Issue 59a

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 18, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. We give thanks for our abundant blessings to our province and ourselves. We ask for guidance and the will to follow it. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my distinct honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 87 students and six teachers from Edith Rogers school from my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. The group is led by their teachers, Mr. David Hunt, Ms Candace Gordon, Mrs. Leigh Oswin, Ms Erin Johnson, Mr. Marek Ziomko, Ms Susan Smyth. They are seated in the members' gallery, and some of them are seated in the public gallery. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions to do today. I'm feeling very lucky, very special. The first introduction I would like to do is that of 16 visitors from NorQuest College, Capital Centre. I think they're in both galleries today. With them are their teachers or group leaders, Mr. Herb Waller and Mrs. Ruschell Moorhouse. I would ask them, if they are in the galleries, to please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly. There they are. Thank you so much.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker. I'm very, very pleased and honoured to be able to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very special woman that I'm honouring today, and that is Barb Dacks. Barb is the owner-publisher of Legacy magazine. I'm doing a member's statement later to honour her. Legacy magazine was first published in 1996 and in fact was a finalist for Alberta magazine of the year in 2006. She's here with her husband today, Gurston, and I think Gurston is going to be introduced by someone else. Also joining her is her son Joel and her daughter-in-law, Lesley Dacks. With her as well is Mark Dutton, who has worked with Barb for Legacy magazine as the art director and designer. I would ask if they would all please rise and accept the welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a number of visitors from Lebanon as well as their local mission co-ordinator, who's an old friend: Mr. Fouad Makhzoumi, founder of the Makhzoumi Foundation and chairman of the National Dialogue Party; Mrs. May Makhzoumi, pharmacist by profession and chair of the Makhzoumi Foundation; Mr. Saba Zreick, vice-chair, National Dialogue Party, and general secretary of the Makhzoumi Foundation; Mrs. Huda Kaskas, director of the Makhzoumi Foundation; Mr.

Samer El Safah, director of the Makhzoumi Foundation; and Mr. Joe Hak, a good friend, as I said, a proud Albertan, mission co-ordinator, and the president of the World Lebanese Cultural Union.

Mr. Speaker, the Makhzoumis are ardent promoters of democracy and human rights in Lebanon. They are visiting Alberta today to celebrate the launch of the Makhzoumi Lebanese studies endowment fund at the U of A in the Faculty of Arts. The Makhzoumis generously contributed $250,000 to the development of this new academic endowment in the hopes that it will eventually reach $1 million through the joint effort of the Lebanese community in Alberta and the university. The proceeds of the endowment will be used for a variety of initiatives with the ultimate purpose of promoting an understanding of Lebanese culture and history and its contribution to world civilization.

I met with the delegation earlier this afternoon. Our guests have also met with the Premier and, I understand, will be meeting with the Speaker, the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations, and the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology to discuss the positive political, cultural, and economic ties between Lebanon and Alberta. I would ask that our guests rise and please accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly the Professional Arts Coalition of Edmonton. Today PACE hosted an Arts at the Assembly luncheon in the pedway for all MLAs to promote and celebrate ongoing support for the arts. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I'd like to ask each of them to rise as I introduce them: Daniel Cournoyer, president of PACE; Lorna Thomas, chair, Arts at the Assembly committee; Candace Makowichuk, PACE administrator; Kelly Jerrott, event co-ordinator, Arts at the Assembly; and committee members Heidi Bunting, Karen Brown Fournell, Will Cramer, and Alison Turner. They've done a fantastic job of trying to communicate with other MLAs on the importance of arts and culture and get more government support. Please join me in giving them the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure for me to see an old – or should I say former? – professor of mine, who is in the gallery today. His name is Gurston Dacks. When I look back over my many, many years as a student, there are only a handful of teachers who really stand out. One of them is Professor Dacks. He taught in the department of political science for many years at the U of A. He established the Canadian studies program. He's very interested in aboriginal issues and Alberta public policy. He also spent time as an administrator. Throughout his career I'm sure he has inspired many students in addition to me and has been a real academic leader in this province. I'd ask Gurston to stand and receive the reception of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Yes. We should start avoiding the use of the word "old." I'm getting rather sensitive.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Daniel Lessard. Daniel is a grade 11 student at Jasper Place high school. He's a constituent of Edmonton-McClung but studies in Edmonton-

Meadowlark. Daniel is a bright, inquisitive young man. He wants to be a police officer, and he wants to contribute to this society. He's interested in politics and how decisions are made, so he's here to job shadow not only myself but every member here. He's going to keep a close eye on us. Daniel, I hope you enjoy the day. I'd like all my colleagues to welcome my guest. I'd like Daniel to stand and please receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you today to all members Mr. Zsolt Zombor. Mr. Zombor is a teacher at Louis St. Laurent high school in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford. This year Mr. Zombor participated in a project with BP Canada called the A+ for Energy program. The program awards grants and scholarships to schools for teachers to implement innovative energy and energy conservation projects in their classrooms. I'm delighted to report that Mr. Zombor and his project were awarded $10,000. The title of the project was Energy Efficient Tailings Pond Clean-up. I'm sure that in doing so, Mr. Zombor has made a great contribution both to his students and to our education system as a whole. I'd ask Mr. Zombor to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't see my guests in the members' gallery, but perhaps they're in the public gallery. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly some of our councillors from the municipal district of Provost who are up here this week for the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties convention. They are Lenard Kjos, who is the deputy reeve; Jack Roworth, Thomas Schneider, and Barrie Tripp, who are all councillors for the MD. They are accompanied by Tyler Lawrason, who is the CAO for the MD, who used to be an executive assistant right here in this building and now is one of my great constituents. I'd ask them, if they're in the public gallery, to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

1:40

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Edmonton-Mill Woods Constituency Awards

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The 2008 provincial election campaign opened my eyes to the extraordinary people who live in my corner of the city. It was my second run at political life, and I met mothers and fathers, grandmothers and grandfathers, students and young professionals, new Canadians and long-time citizens. They came from different backgrounds, but they shared three common qualities: a desire to become better, a love for their families, and a passion for their community.

I made a promise during the campaign that if I became the MLA, I would start an annual tradition of recognizing these tremendous community-minded individuals with awards and recognition. Thanks to a lot of hard work from supporters and groups in my constituency like the Friends of Edmonton Millwoods Multicultural Association that tradition has begun. On Saturday, Mr. Speaker, I had the pleasure of hosting the first annual Carl Benito awards of excellence. These awards recognized a mother, a father, a youth, and one particularly exceptional individual for improving the quality of life for the people of Edmonton-Mill Woods through their home, work, community service, volunteer efforts, or a combination thereof. I'd like to mention the 2009 Edmonton-Mill Woods mother of the year, Mrs. Sofia Yaqub; father of the year, Mr. Buzz Baizley; youth of the year, Anuj Gupta; and citizen of the year, Elizabeth Barter.

Mr. Speaker, I also believe that our youth truly are the future of this province. This is why I decided to incorporate outstanding student awards as part of the annual awards of excellence. On Saturday outstanding student awards were handed out to a total of 177 students who have demonstrated academic excellence, outstanding educational achievement, and the will to pursue postsecondary education.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member knows that he violated one of the principal rules of the Assembly.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Alberta Tourism Awards

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today to congratulate the finalists and the winners of the 2009 Alberta tourism awards. The Altos were presented in Banff recently during Travel Alberta's annual conference.

The awards celebrate excellence in our $5 billion tourism industry. From the unique Sweet 16 partnership in central Alberta, in which communities are working together to promote summer events, to establishing more environmentally friendly practices in our accommodations sector, the nominees represented the very best that Alberta has to offer our guests from around the world. They also demonstrate Alberta's tremendous creativity and can-do spirit. Just one of the many examples includes one award winner who attracted more than 3,500 visitors to an event with a budget of less than $1,000.

Mr. Speaker, I invite all of our colleagues to join us in congratulating all associated with the Alto awards, including our Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, and in thanking industry leaders for their exemplary work in building an even stronger tourism sector in Alberta in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Legacy Magazine

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the mid-90s eight magazines produced by the department of culture had their funding cut and ceased publication, but Barb Dacks saw an opportunity and a need. She felt strongly that there were stories to be told and emerging artists to be nurtured in celebrating built heritage, arts and culture, and multiculturalism.

To honour what we have received from the past and what new creations would be carried forward into the future, she named her publication Legacy. For 14 years Barb Dacks has produced a visually stunning magazine filled with stories, feature articles, photos, submissions from new and emerging artists and writers, reviews, and information of all the possibilities to see, hear, and experience Alberta arts, architecture, and culture.

To meet Barb is to meet a stylish, enthusiastic whirlwind of energy and ideas. She's fun, aware, and involved, and she is everywhere. She is also the first person to wax enthusiastic about her staff and collaborators at Legacy, and I must particularly recognize long-time graphic god Mark Dutton, associate editors Eva Radford and Naomi Lewis, and writer Ron Chalmers. I think a special thank you is in order for her husband, Gurston, who has supported her in the magazine from the start. I also recognize the creative, imaginative people who inspired Barb. With them she shares that impulse to create and to share.

This is my thank you to you, Barb. With the most recent issue, winter 2009, Barb is ceasing publication of Legacy and moving on, moving on to plan a book or two and to welcome her first, not one but two, grandchildren, expected this February.

You have left us a great gift, a legacy indeed, which will still be available online. You have been a joy to watch and to get to know. Many, many, many thanks from me and, I'm sure, my colleagues in the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Canadian Patient Safety Week

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about Canadian Patient Safety Week, which was recognized November 2 to November 6. Now in its fifth year, the goal of Canadian Patient Safety Week is to increase awareness of patient safety issues and share information about best practices in patient safety.

This year's theme was Ask, Listen, Talk. Each year Albertans experience an estimated 7,000 adverse events out of the millions of patient interactions they have with health care providers. Some of these events include medication and procedure errors while receiving care in our hospitals. Adverse events not only affect the patient's health but are an additional burden to the health system in terms of longer hospital stays, greater use of resources, and delay of care for others.

The Canadian Patient Safety Institute relies on the efforts of thousands of health care professionals and their professional colleges as well as private and public health care organizations and health facility operators to help spread the message that good health care starts with good communication.

Patients have the right to receive clear information about the care they are receiving. Earlier this year the Health Quality Council of Alberta released a useful guide to help Albertans get the most out of their health care experience, and this is called It's Ok to Ask. The guide encourages patients to be open and honest with their health care provider and ask questions when they don't understand their health condition and treatment options. This practical guide can be found on the council's website at www.hqca.ca.

Canadian Patient Safety Week reminds us that we all have a responsibility in patient care. To mark this important week, I encourage everyone to take an active role in advocating for our health and the health of our loved ones. By taking time to ask, listen, and talk, we can do our part to ensure that our health care system provides the best in safe and effective care possible.

Mr. Speaker, I'd also like to take this opportunity to thank all the good, hard-working front-line staff for all that they do to make this system what it is today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Alberta Rhodiola Rosea Growers Organization

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 30 I was joined by the hon. the Premier and the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development; Blaine Calkins, the MP for Wetaskiwin;

His Worship the mayor of Thorsby, Mr. Allen Gee; and several other industry representatives. We were in Thorsby in my constituency of Drayton Valley-Calmar to celebrate the opening of the Alberta Rhodiola Rosea Growers Organization facility, which is the first of its kind.

The opening of this impressive 6,000-square-foot primary processing facility could not have come at a better time to give our economy and agriculture a much-needed boost. Job creations from plants like the one in Thorsby help keep rural Albertans in their communities, and this facility will have an incredible impact on Thorsby and the surrounding area.

Rhodiola rosea, which is also known as roseroot or golden root, is a herbal remedy that helps the body to adapt to stress by strengthening the immune, nervous, and glandular systems. This plant is well suited to grow in Alberta as it can only germinate when it is very cold. There is a high demand for this crop, and Alberta production has already been sold through 2012 to German and Alberta natural supplement firms. The plant takes about four to five years until it is ready to harvest, but it is hoped that through continued research into roseroot we will produce a three-year growing cycle.

I want to thank the hon. the Premier and the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for their support of rural Alberta and projects that will stimulate economic development, especially in the agriculture sector, and the village of Thorsby for all of their work on this project. I look forward to seeing the progress of this facility and the economic benefits that Thorsby will see in the years to come. I also look forward to hearing more about the uses of the Rhodiola rosea plant, and I am confident that ARRG will continue in their creation and development of innovative technologies from this plant in years to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

1:50

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Facility Administrative Cost Savings

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta Health Services created a $1.3 billion deficit for themselves and yesterday announced how they were going to trim their budgets this year, supposedly without affecting patient care. Almost half the savings, $252 million, will be through cuts to facilities management. Cuts to facilities management. To the Premier: will the Premier explain what the facility management cuts actually are?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health Services yesterday announced a roughly $650 million reduction in the administration, nonclinical services like finance, human resources, information technology, et cetera. This is part of an ongoing process to trim down the administrative expenses, especially following the number of regions we had consolidated into one. This is part of their longer term goal of reducing not only their operating deficit but to ensure that we do sustain our health care system and put every available dollar into front-line services.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Does cutting facilities management mean actually reducing hours or services, eliminating facility maintenance perhaps indefinitely? Are those included in facility management cuts?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I don't have the details in front of me of the announcement yesterday, but clearly if the hon. leader will go on the website, I saw where it had the entire list of where the dollars were coming from. That information is public information.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, how can this government argue that their cuts to health care aren't affecting patient care when they've eliminated 290 general acute beds from Edmonton and Calgary and another 246 beds planned for Alberta Hospital Edmonton? How is this not affecting patient care?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. leader is only telling half the story. The other half of the story relative to the beds in Edmonton and Calgary is that 800 spaces are being created in these two centres so that we can ensure that the patient is being cared for in the right environment, and the member knows this. We have far too many patients in acute-care facilities who can be better cared for in alternate facilities.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Lobbying Government

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The list of sponsors for the Progressive Conservative Association convention this month makes for intriguing reading. I've got a copy of it here, actually. Among the sponsors are nonprofit agricultural organizations established by government legislation, and they receive taxpayer dollars through government. My questions are to the Premier. Is there a law in Alberta prohibiting nonprofit organizations established under government statute from receiving donations to political parties – from giving donations to political parties?

Mr. Stelmach: I don't know if they're receiving – I think that was the question, whether they're receiving political donations. I don't think they do. But, you know, in the spirit of transparency and openness the Leader of the Opposition has the full list. Would he be able to tell this House how many of those companies on that list have actually given money to the Liberal Party?

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it's interesting that the Premier is unwilling to say whether or not this is appropriate. I can tell you that Albertans do not think it's appropriate for public funds to be handed to nonprofit organizations and used to sponsor a political party. Why does this Premier, why does this government not clearly indicate that this is not appropriate? Are you willing to stand and say so?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what organizations he's referring to, but like I said, you know, they brought this up last week, and they're bringing it up again. I said, you know: openness. They brought in I think it was AltaLink yesterday in terms of what they contributed to the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta. Tell us what the same company contributed to the Liberals. Look, everybody is here. It's open, transparent.

Dr. Swann: To the Premier: what action are you prepared to take to stop this kind of sponsorship from happening in Alberta? This offends Albertans.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, first of all, let's identify what the hon. leader is talking about. He has a pamphlet that he got from the convention. I don't know what groups he's referring to. Anyway, if there is something in legislation that prevents anyone from contributing to any political party, then let's identify it. If it's groups that can legitimately contribute in some small part or a big part to any political party being part of the democratic purpose, then it's fine, but if you're breaking the law, then let's identify the groups.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a recognized fact by all but the most naive that special-interest groups and money can and do have influence on political decisions. It is also recognized by all but the most naive that rules and regulations are needed to protect the public interest from the power and access that money and special-interest groups have. That's why we supported the Lobbyists Act. To the Minister of Justice. AltaLink is in one business and one business only, the building of transmission lines. Now, can the Minister of Justice explain how the purchased sponsorship by AltaLink of a political party's convention, that has access to cabinet ministers, is not an act of lobbying?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this House did unanimously, I believe, support the lobbyist registry act. A part of that act is that for people who feel that they're in a position where they need to be registered, they should register. I'd turn the question back to people that have to make that decision, and that's not us.

Mr. Hehr: But I guess Albertans see this as a clear case of lobbying, so I was just wondering. If they haven't already registered and if they don't already do so, will you explain to Albertans right now why the Lobbyists Act isn't covering these types of situations?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there's a law in place. There's a set of rules. The reason we put those rules in place is to ensure that there is transparency. We also have the opportunity for public comment and discussion. There is an act in place. There are people responsible, who will take the right decisions that they need to take under that act, and I presume that they will do so.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that there at least appears to be some confusion as to whether a paid sponsorship of a political party's convention by AltaLink, a company in the business of building transmission lines, could be perceived as unregistered lobbying, will the minister do the right thing and investigate this situation or maybe, better yet, appoint a special prosecutor to investigate this?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think there's someone who's confused here, and I wouldn't want to suggest who that might be. There is a Lobbyists Act in place. There is an Ethics Commissioner, who is responsible for that act. It sets out what everyone's obligations are, and I expect that people will observe the act. It's the law of Alberta, and appropriate actions will be taken and steps followed.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Bitumen Exports

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Premier has proclaimed that change is coming. One of the changes this Premier promised a long time ago now was to reduce the flow of unprocessed bitumen to the United States. The opposite has occurred, and thousands of Alberta jobs have gone south. Will the Premier please tell Albertans whether or not the change he is now promising includes keeping his original promise to reduce exports of bitumen to U.S. refineries?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the policy that we have in place in terms of adding as much value as we can to forestry, of course to agriculture products, and to bitumen stays in place. We now presently have a request for proposal that's out there, that will be replied to, I believe, by the end of January or mid-January. It's for the first 100,000 barrels. We'll see the results of that RFP, and we'll continue to build on that process.

But, you know, this thing about thousands of jobs going south: I wonder where they went. The Americans just shed over 20 million jobs, the highest unemployment ever, well, since the Depression at least, so let's just stick to the facts. We're doing what we can to increase value-added in the province, but let's not misrepresent the facts.

Mr. Mason: Well, misrepresenting the facts, Mr. Speaker, is an interesting concept because this Premier knows that there are tens of thousands of current jobs at refineries and upgraders in the United States that are being built in anticipation of pipelines that are now under construction to take Alberta unprocessed bitumen to the United States. So the Premier needs to be very careful when he accuses other people of misrepresenting the facts.

The new oil sands projects that have been rekindled – Firebag, Kearn oil, and Jackfish Lake – are all bitumen export only, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier admit that nothing has changed when it comes to breaking commitments or failing to protect Alberta jobs? There is no change. It's business as usual.

2:00

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we are focused, as I said, on adding more value. Part of adding value is to look at new markets. This government is supporting a pipeline to the west coast as well. We can't tie ourselves just to one market, that being the United States. We need other markets, emerging markets in China, in India. That's where we have to get to. So we have a lot of work ahead of ourselves, and we're working very hard with the neighbouring provinces and the federal government to bring that plan into place.

Mr. Mason: More pipelines to export unprocessed bitumen, Mr. Speaker, is exactly what we don't need.

This Premier sits back while jobs go south and down the pipeline and welfare rolls and food bank use in Alberta soar. Thousands of Albertans face unemployment while U.S. workers take their jobs. It's unacceptable, even more so because the Premier got elected on a promise to stop this. If Albertans want change, Mr. Speaker, they will have to look past this PC government.

Mr. Stelmach: I don't know if there was a question. All I know is that if he was that concerned about the pipelines being built – if you don't have a pipeline, how can you send synthetic crude anywhere? So he's kind of up in the air there. If the hon. member is that concerned, you know . . . [interjections] I sat quietly when he asked a question. I hope he does the same when I'm giving him an answer even though he didn't have a question.

If he is that concerned, why was it, then, that a former staff member of that party was hanging from the roof of the Shaw Conference Centre on behalf of Greenpeace and saying that we should shut everything down in the province of Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Provincial Spending

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The people of Calgary-Glenmore along with thousands of Albertans across this province want to send the Premier a message: the projected $8 billion deficit is unacceptable and hurting Albertans. The Premier has stated there will be no new taxes and he'll make cuts to his budget while at the same time proposing new and unnecessary pieces of legislation estimated to cost Albertans billions more. The Premier cannot expect Albertans to accept major deficit spending when he won't even cut his own wage. When will the Premier be honest with Albertans, lead by example, and give back all of his 30 per cent pay raise, not just a token 15 per cent of the raise?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, percentages. I was very clear in the news release on showing leadership in terms of trimming spending of government. All I have influence on, of course, is my salary and that of cabinet. All cabinet ministers took a reduction of over $6,000, and my reduction was 12,000 and some-odd dollars a year.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, the raise was unwarranted and undeserved, and the gap continues to widen.

The Premier has jeopardized our health care through the centralization of power and decision-making via the superboard and has further insulted Albertans by handing out exorbitant wage contracts to unelected government appointees. Will the Premier do the right thing and listen to Albertans and renegotiate these exorbitant wages?

Mr. Stelmach: I'm not quite sure who he's referring to, so he'll have to clarify and be very specific. There are quasi-judicial authorities in the province of Alberta – ERCB, AUC, AESO, AFSC, a whole number of them – that do work on behalf of the province of Alberta. They are quasi-judicial in authority, making decisions on applications, whether it be for development or environment. But, you know, if he can be more specific.

Mr. Hinman: Therein lies the problem. He has no realization. The wages have been exorbitant, Albertans have been insulted with the golden handshakes. He knows exactly who he's made these contracts with.

The Premier has stated that he'll make $470 million in cuts to this year's budget while proposing billions of dollars of new spending on two lines of unneeded infrastructure. Will the Premier be honest with Albertans and admit that additional deficit spending is additional taxes on Alberta's families, workers, and children?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I think he's referring to a bill that's before this House, and that is Bill 50. Of course, I can't comment on it because it's before the House.

With respect to spending on infrastructure, I can tell you that we are going to continue to build the infrastructure that's absolutely necessary in this province. We need more highways. We need more roads. We need more schools. We need more seniors' facilities to ensure that we can move the seniors from acute-care hospitals into accommodations at least into those communities that they helped build. So we will continue to invest public dollars in infrastructure. It's keeping people employed, and we also need the infrastructure.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Support for the Horse-racing Industry

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With the closure of Stampede Park and the indefinite postponement of the Balzac track, we are now down to one class A horse-racing track, located at Northlands in Edmonton. My questions are to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. What is the justification for allocating the same amount of money to Horse Racing Alberta when it has one-third as much racing activity as before?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's pretty simple. We entered into a 10-year agreement with Horse Racing Alberta. It's a legal contract, and we believe in honouring our obligations.

Ms Blakeman: So the minister is telling us that even if there is no horse racing going on, because I'm told that horse races are costing Edmonton Northlands money, and they would like to get out of that particular business, they will continue to put money into Horse Racing Alberta when there are no horse races going on in Alberta?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, everybody in this Legislature should know that the government is undergoing the budget process right now. We have said, our Premier has said that all things that we have in this government are on the table. We are taking a look at those in terms of spending, so we will take a look at that.

Ms Blakeman: Well, let me make a suggestion. How about if the minister pulls the plug and reallocates this money to some sectors that are growing, unlike horse racing, sectors like arts, culture, cultural industries, sport, or recreation?

Mr. Blackett: I should tell the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, the people from PACE have already left here.

The hon. member knows full well that the money that comes through Horse Racing Alberta is derived out of slot revenue that is located at the racetracks. It's a flow through where 15 per cent of the net proceeds are allocated to the track operators, and 51 and two-thirds per cent of the net proceeds are returned to the horse-racing industry, and they're used for breeding programs, marketing, and purse enhancement.

Right now, as I said before, Mr. Speaker, we are re-evaluating. If she has any further questions, she may want to direct them to the Solicitor General.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Submetering for Energy Use

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Years ago large apartments across the province were built with no unit utility meters. You know, at the time maybe it was the right decision, but with utility costs on the rise, in many of these older apartments the landlords are using heat submeters to try to capture the cost of the electricity, of the heat, of the hot water. But we have a little bit of a problem on the units that have hot-water heat. They've used these submeters, and the submetering isn't accurate. There are some real concerns. I've had problems. The Minister of Service Alberta has had some problems. I wonder if the minister can tell me what she has done to make sure that these sometimes vulnerable Albertans are protected.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, today I did announce a regulation with respect to heat submetering in that landlords can no longer use uncertified heat submeters to bill tenants. I firmly believe that renters, especially those with lower fixed incomes, deserve to be billed fairly and to have clear and understandable information on what they're paying for, and that's what this regulation is doing. Having this regulation in place will assist renters, and they'll be able to know full well what they're paying for with respect to their utility costs.

2:10

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, again to the same minister – and thank you for that regulation – I'd like to know who you consulted with for that regulation and how this regulation will limit how much landlords can bill the existing tenants through a different process.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This consultation that we did was with the landlords, the tenants, the Alberta Utilities Commission, Measurement Canada, and with RTAC, the Alberta Residential Tenancy Advisory Committee. This committee gave excellent advice. The regulation today only allows heat submeters to be used to bill tenants, and there are not any heat submeters certified by Measurement Canada at this time. In the event a heat submeter does become certified by Measurement Canada, we will address this regulation again, but in the meantime this regulation takes effect.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, I thank the minister for protecting Albertans and sometimes vulnerable Albertans. But those same buildings did not have electricity or gas metering as well, and I understand the submetering was installed to protect the rising costs of utilities in those buildings. What's the minister doing to make sure that we're protected from submetering issues with natural gas and electricity?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Measurement Canada regulates electricity and natural gas meters, and there are no issues with those. It's the heat submeters that we're looking at, and they've been in place in Alberta since about 2007. This is a principle about tenants actually paying for the energy they're using, and renters deserve to have the confidence to know that they are paying for the right amount of energy. That's exactly what this regulation is doing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

PDD Funding

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the spring budget the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports promised $24 million to PDD service providers for recruitment and retention of staff. That promise to underpaid PDD staff and to those who cannot live in dignity without their support has been broken. To the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports: will the minister admit that by cutting $10 million of their funding, front-line PDD staff will fall further behind government workers who do the same job?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, PDD and other vulnerable citizens in Alberta are very important to this government. In fact, they're a priority. We did have a $24 million line item for PDD funding. The economic situation has changed. I wanted to make sure that our PDD front-line staff received some funding, so we were able to extend $14.4 million for them. In the last four years we've extended $74 million altogether for recruitment and retention of our staff in PDD.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The remaining retention funding can only be used for a one-time bonus. Does the minister believe that a one-time bonus will actually keep staff rather than overdue permanent wage increases?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I visited with lots of groups in PDD, and I've seen the great work that our front-line staff do. It's very important to me that we can keep them. I felt that this was the best way to extend money that we were able to extend from our budget to show them our appreciation. It was a one-time bonus that I hope at this time of the year they could appreciate. Once again, it's the economic situation that has created this situation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. That's sort of akin to a Klein buck that was spent instantly.

The eligibility requirements for PDD have changed, which will decrease the number of new PDD recipients. How much money does the minister expect to save in the future from both the funding cuts and by changing the eligibility?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, we have put the eligibility requirements into regulation, but they're the same requirements that we were using in policy all the way along, so I don't expect that there will be a decrease of clients. We'll be able to ensure that through the eligibility requirements we have a fair assessment policy for all of our clients throughout Alberta. Those who need help most will receive help most, and we'll keep this program sustainable.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Municipal Franchise Fees

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to address the issue of local access fees. These local access fees are costing Albertans many hundreds of dollars, and many of my constituents feel that this is simply a hidden tax on their utility bill. I tend to agree. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: would you please tell me what's up with these fees?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's an interesting and clever question. I do want to say that I'm going to attempt to answer it. I want to say, first of all, that transparency is very important to consumers and for them to understand their utility bills, but local access fees are charged by municipalities and passed on directly to consumers. These fees vary in the province. The city of Medicine Hat doesn't charge a fee. The city of Edmonton has a mid-low fee at $3.70 a month, average. The city of Calgary, in answering the question, is in the highest range at $12.85. This fee goes directly to the municipality, and it is up to the municipality to justify the fee for their ratepayers and explain its use.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm quite happy that the minister mentioned Calgary. But that aside, on this issue the Canadian Federation of Independent Business in 2007 indicated that "the City of Calgary is charging itself to use City land, but then passing the charge along to citizens." A significant portion of this franchise fee revenue comes from Enmax. To the same minister: why is this allowed?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Municipal Government Act does allow municipalities to levy fees related to the use of municipal land. It's up to the municipalities if they determine that they need to or should do this. In the case of municipalities that own their own utility company, it is a transfer of funds. I guess some municipalities such as Calgary charge this as a percentage of the whole bill plus a fee based on consumption. This is a local decision.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the Minister of Service Alberta. In light of the concerns about local franchise fees and the previous minister's comments will this minister commit to an investigation of these fees to help reduce electricity fees for the average Albertan?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Service Alberta would be very happy to work with Municipal Affairs on this issue of local franchise fees. It is so important for consumers to have clear and understandable information on their bills, and we know that there are a lot of questions out there. The Utilities Consumer Advocate gets calls on a number of these and other issues, and this is something that consumers need to do. Consumers always need to ask questions when they look at the bills, and that's what the UCA is here for.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Postsecondary Education Costs

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Providing affordable education leads to diversification within the economy and will soften the blows of the boom-and-bust cycles that plague our province. Sadly, this government is again failing to recognize the widespread implications of its short-sighted and ill-conceived budgeting process. It is shameful that in a province with such a wealth of resources we have such a dismal postsecondary participation rate. The rate will only get worse as the government allows the cost of education to continue to rise. How can the minister be allowing postsecondary education to become even less accessible to many Albertans who will no longer be able to afford the higher tuition rates? Where is the Alberta advantage?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not exactly sure what the hon. member is talking about. Our CPI cap is in place. This year I think it's running at about 1.5 per cent as the maximum that tuition rates across the board would be able to rise. In fact, over the last six years our postsecondaries have received an increase in their base operating grant of well over 40 per cent. That is second to none in any jurisdiction in Canada and, I would add, the United States.

Mr. Chase: That's cold comfort for this year and the next two years, where zero per cent is projected.

Tuition hikes will ultimately lead to a decline in our already bottom level postsecondary attendance rate. Does the minister not understand that by further limiting the number of people who can pursue advanced education, he is greatly impacting the ability of our economy to forge forward with trained individuals? Education equals economy.

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the comments that the hon. member made were true, I would agree with him, but they're not true. The tuition rates that we have in terms of the CPI cap have been set. The CPI cap is still there and I would suggest is a very warm comfort when you look at other jurisdictions that are experiencing 20 per cent cuts to their faculties and staff. The University of California, Berkeley, I think is on their second round. Across Canada postsecondaries are experiencing a great deal of difficulty. In fact, I know of two provinces who have removed the freeze on tuition increases. That's not happening in this province.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister of advanced education realizes that enrolment in other postsecondary institutions in other provinces is as much as double our 17 per cent.

Given that many students in Alberta already have to rely on food banks and due to an ever-declining standard of living are forced to choose between education and eating, how will the minister determine which punitive proposals for tuition hikes will be accepted?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've not received any proposals at this point in time, so it's very difficult for me to answer a hypothetical question. The hon. member likes to throw a lot of rhetoric out there, he likes to do a lot of that sort of grandstanding, but at this point in time I've received no proposals for those types of increases. I would add that we have a fabulous working relationship with the students and the institutions of Campus Alberta, one that this hon. member might want to avail himself of.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This set of questions may seem a bit familiar, but since we didn't get a clear answer on the last round, I'll go at it again. No matter what terminology the minister of advanced education uses, this government is inviting proposals from universities to allow students to be asked to pay more for their education. That's the bottom line. Now, a better educated population will diversify our economy and should be encouraged, not squelched. Why would the minister consider adding to the burden of students rather than investing in them so that our province can actually recover from this recession?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government and this Premier have invested heavily in our postsecondary system over the last several years. In fact, I would say that we lead the nation in terms of the support that we provide not only to our postsecondary institutions but also to our students. We have the most generous scholarship and student finance package in the country. We have the best postsecondary institutions in the country. We have a new framework for our postsecondaries that allows for students to move as freely as possible within the system of Campus Alberta.

Today, Mr. Speaker, we even announced, hosted by yourself, the Athabasca University legislative drafting proposal that goes global. We have a world-recognized postsecondary system that is the best for students, taxpayers, and society.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, a typical dentistry student already pays more than $40,000 a year for tuition and supplies, and that's before living expenses. Ordinary Albertans pay taxes that support these programs, but this government's plan will make sure that their kids will never be able to afford to enrol in them. Why is this minister even considering proposals that would make entrance into the professions possible only for children of the wealthy?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, our student financial assistance programs are designed exactly for that type of a situation: to help all students in the province of Alberta achieve their dreams. Having said that, I must also point out, again, that I've received no proposal on dentistry, on welding, on anything that the hon. member is talking about, so it's a hypothetical situation at this point in time.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the minister has invited just those kinds of proposals.

Now, the government's new marketing slogan, Freedom to Create, Spirit to Achieve, needs a caveat: bring lots of cash. Mr. Speaker, making tuition fees for professional programs even more inaccessible for all but the rich is neither fair nor equitable. Instead, it's elitist, and it will limit opportunities. To the same minister: why won't you admit that in the midst of a recession creating further barriers to higher education simply makes no economic sense?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I believe that if you were to canvass the postsecondary institutions in our province today, you would hear from them that they have the most supportive government of the provinces of Canada. You would find that the students have had the most access to their minister that they've had in any other jurisdiction of this country. You would find that they believe that they have the best postsecondary system in North America. It's unfortunate that this hon. member doesn't believe so.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Pharmaceutical Strategy

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A number of weeks ago the Minister of Health and Wellness announced the second phase of Alberta's pharmaceutical strategy. I'm more concerned and interested in the plan to increase bulk buying of pharmaceutical drugs; however, in the constituency of Edmonton-Decore there are still constituents who are voicing some concern that the new plan will only help the companies who develop and sell pharmaceutical products. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: how will this plan ensure that patients will see a reduction in the cost of their prescription drugs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The member is correct. Earlier this summer we did bring forward the second phase of a pharmaceutical strategy, and it dealt primarily with the price of generic drugs. Immediately prices for new generic drugs are being reduced from 75 per cent of brand name price to 45 per cent. Starting next April the existing generic prices will be reduced to somewhere in that same range.

Now, with respect to brand name drugs the prices are set internationally. We have the ability to negotiate product listing agreements with manufacturers, and sometimes there are volume rebates. We are going to work hard at doing that on behalf of customers in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness. It's my understanding that Alberta has agreements with the federal government regarding patents and licensing. How will this new strategy impact our co-operation with the federal government?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as I mentioned, the federal government is responsible for monitoring the internationally set drug prices. I think what's more important in our relationship with the federal government – and we've been pushing for this as provincial ministers for some time now – is to have a national pharmaceutical strategy, not to be confused with the NDP's pharmanplan, that would deal with such things as the high cost of drugs for situations where there are special cases. Despite the fact that the federal government hasn't moved on that, Alberta has. We're proud to be one of the few provinces that have done that, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question to the same minister. Everyone understands that drug prices increase each year. If there are no formal discussions with the federal government, then what has the government done to address concerns regarding the lack of co-ordination amongst the provinces?

Mr. Liepert: Well, the member is correct that setting of pharmaceutical policy is a provincial responsibility. That being said, we have had discussions with our western counterparts, especially B.C. and Saskatchewan because of the like-minded thinking governments of the three provinces, to look at how we can better co-ordinate our pharmaceutical strategies. One of the things that has happened, as an example, is that Alberta Health Services in conjunction with the regional health authorities in British Columbia have worked out an arrangement for bulk purchasing of drugs for within their systems. I think that ultimately will be good for the taxpayers of Alberta, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization Costs

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Fighting the H1N1 pandemic is costing money, which, as long as it's properly spent, is certainly well worth it. The cost of things like vaccines and clinics and staffing, hospitalization, public education are over and above the normal expenses of a health care system. It's reported that these costs could hit a hundred million dollars. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister actually tell us what the costs of fighting the H1N1 pandemic are expected to be? Are they in the range of the hundred million dollars that has been reported?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, earlier on this summer when we were anticipating the vaccine program, I did say that the cost could be as high as a hundred million dollars. Now, I think it's fair to say at this stage that we've revised those numbers. We don't have anything concrete yet. As an example, initially it was thought that the majority of people would have to have two doses of vaccine. That's been revised to one dose pretty much across the board. Obviously, there are significant cost savings there. All I can say is that we will ensure that we have a full costing of the program, and it will be significant.

Dr. Taft: I appreciate the answer. Given that Alberta Health Services is already facing a huge deficit, it would be unfair if the one-time pandemic costs were added to that deficit. That would, I think, simply fuel further cuts to the health budget, cuts that would be unjustified. To the same minister: can he tell us if the pandemic costs will be added to the already $1.3 billion deficit of Alberta Health Services?

2:30

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, as we move through the winter season, we'll have a better sense of the exact cost. It would be my intention to go to Treasury Board. That is my intention. I can't promise what Treasury Board is going to say or do, but it would be my intention to go to Treasury Board because I think this particular pandemic is an unusual expense. I look at it in the same way as how we fund forest fires. Those are the things that are not expected, not budgeted for. That would be the plan but a little further down the road.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Well, let me help the minister with his pitch. My question, then, I guess, will go to the President of the Treasury Board. The pandemic does seem to be in the category of an actual disaster like a bad forest fire season or a tornado or a flood, and these costs are covered normally through extraordinary expenses through the sustainability fund or some special allocation. To the President of the Treasury Board: will this government ensure that the costs of the pandemic are not drained from the health care system but are covered as an extraordinary, one-time event in the same manner as any other natural disaster?

Mr. Snelgrove: I want to thank the hon. member for the question because it is a serious question, and it's something that we need to develop a policy around as we go forward. I would hope that it's the last time that something like this would happen, but it's probably not going to be. We had discussions with the minister of health over a month ago, six weeks ago, about the importance of keeping track of all of the effects of this, even to include hospitalization. The benefit of that is that it will help us track our system, the costs and the most effective use of the resources around it. I take the hon. member's question as good intentioned, and we will do what we can to work with the minister of health and address the exact issue he has talked about.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Didsbury Hospital Helipad Closure

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again it has been announced by Alberta Health Services that they've closed the helipad at Didsbury hospital, and once again the fingers of blame are being pointed at Transport Canada, but once again Transport Canada is hesitating to accept any responsibility in this matter. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Could the minister clarify who is ultimately responsible for the closure of this helipad at Didsbury?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member and I have had several conversations over the summer, and the one thing we have concluded is that they're appropriately named. They're a helipad. We've had a summer where it has been – I won't go there. We've had, I think, a communication issue. There have been issues with Transport Canada and Alberta Health Services, and I guess that at the end of the day, with respect to the most recent decision, Transport Canada and Alberta Health Services have jointly agreed that this particular helipad will be closed. Alberta Health Services has promised to provide Transport Canada with a remediation plan, and that's in the works right now.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since there have been no changes with this helipad since it was originally opened, why is it being now closed? What has changed?

Mr. Liepert: Well, that's one of the issues. My understanding is that this particular helipad is in an unapproved, developed area, and that's what was giving Transport Canada concern. We have several others in the area. I know there's one in the Member for Rocky Mountain House constituency; in that particular case it's a different issue. As I say, Alberta Health Services has undertaken to do a remediation plan, and we'll work with Transport Canada in an attempt to get these facilities operational, and we'll wait for those plans to come forward.

Mr. Marz: Could the minister detail the process of getting this helipad reopened, and when will that happen?

Mr. Liepert: Well, what has to happen through this process is to sit down and take a look and see what the cost is to have this particular helipad and some of the others operational. In some of these situations, Mr. Speaker, other things have to be taken into account: how far away from the health facility is the airport, or are there other alternatives that could be used, and is it justified to spend the money to ensure that these are upgraded to meet Transport Canada regulations? That's exactly the work that's going on now. I believe that the commitment by Alberta Health Services was: before the end of the year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Executive Salaries and Travel Expenses

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the acting Premier: what is the justification for the $2 million increase in the total salary and wages for senior executives in the Premier's office over the last six years?

Mr. Snelgrove: I would guess that's what their salaries added up to at the end of the five or six years. It's pretty simple.

Mr. MacDonald: That cavalier attitude is one of the reasons why we have such a huge deficit.

Again to the acting Premier: what is the justification for the $60 million increase in travel and communications expenses by this government as reported in the government of Alberta's consolidated financial statements?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, we in Alberta are sitting on one of the most important energy developments in the world, and it's got to be done right. The people around the world that are looking to us for secure energy supplies, amongst other things the stuff we do in our universities, the stuff we're doing in health care research – we've got a great story here in Alberta, and we're committed to spreading it around the world. They talk about wanting to grow the economy, but we can't talk to people. They talk about getting development or diversifying our economic pie, but we should stay home in a dark little cave and not learn anything. The responsibility of this government is to get our message to the world and to Albertans about what we've got and where we're going.

Mr. MacDonald: I could say something about the minister's cave, but I won't.

Would the President of the Treasury Board commit to scaling back the $2 million increase in salaries in the Premier's office and the $60 million increase in travel and communications budgets before you slash public services in this province?

Mr. Snelgrove: I think that if you were to ask anyone in these rows here and there, I'm an equal opportunity axer. The Premier's office has been asked to live up to the same commitments that every other department has had. The Premier has made it very clear to us that our priorities as a government are going to be health and education. We're going to continue to build the infrastructure Albertans need to grow the economic pie. From that point everything is on the table; everything is being looked at. It's a process that started three years ago next month when this gentleman became Premier, and it's one we're committed to.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Provincial Spending (continued)

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's program spending over the past decade or so has become somewhat unsustainable. Program spending has increased by more than 159 per cent since 1997. During that same period our inflation and population growth rates have increased by only 72 per cent. In other words, our program spending increases have been more than double our inflation and population growth rates. To the President of the Treasury Board: is our government committed to capping increases in program spending to the rate of inflation plus population growth?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, what I guess I would say I've learned in my past business and in government is that we learn from the past here; we don't live in it. We've taken a new approach, like I said, starting three years ago, understanding not what can we spend but what we need to spend on these very important issues that face Alberta. It's also needed to be understood that the growth that happened in the last 10 years was primarily on health, education, and advanced education. If the hon. member wants to tell us what 2,000 or 3,000 nurses we shouldn't have hired, what 3,000 or 4,000 teachers we shouldn't have hired, what schools shouldn't have been built, and what roads shouldn't have been built so we can have an extra $40 billion or $50 billion in the bank, then I'm open to that. The money was well spent, well invested in Alberta.

Mr. Anderson: We can be responsible with our spending and still build the infrastructure that we need, Mr. Speaker.

Multiple studies examining U.S. states clearly show that spending limitation laws tied to inflation plus population growth have been effective where implemented. Unlegislated policies to the same effect, however, have had little impact on actually controlling spending. To the same minister: will our government be open to examining the option of legislating a cap on government program spending increases to the rate of inflation plus population growth?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity to attend a conference in Kansas City this summer with the states. Many of them are committed to different kinds of taxation limitations, spending restrictions, mostly taxing. I don't think anyone in this House wants to get in a position where our hands are tied to make the appropriate decisions for Albertans.

California is a perfect example of where people have been afraid to tackle the decisions head-on: so we'll put it out to a referendum; we don't want to make the tough decision, so we'll just ask them, and then we'll have to live with it while the thing goes down the drain.

We've made responsible decisions here in the past three years. We're going forward. This year we used the number of population plus inflation, and we will spend what we need to, not necessarily what we're able to or what some other people think we should.

2:40

Mr. Anderson: California, actually, does not have a spending limitation law, which is one of the reasons why they are in so much trouble right now.

The chambers of commerce, the Canadian Bankers Association, the Fraser Institute, the Taxpayers Federation, CFIB, and many others have extensively studied and recommended capping government spending increases to the rate of inflation plus population growth. The Premier has also publicly endorsed this policy. To the minister: with such widespread agreement for this principle, why would our government only make this a policy rather than enshrining it in legislation as a cornerstone of a long-term fiscal framework?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, I can't be sure, but of the groups he mentioned, not one of them delivers health care in this province, and not one of them delivers the education in this province. It's very difficult to go to Albertans and say: "Guess what? Your kid needs to wait" – and he's got a class size of 63 – "but we've got $35 billion more in the bank." The people of Alberta have the opportunity on a regular basis to vote for a government. They give that government in this province a four-year mandate to do what they think is right with their resources. Albertans in the past have supported overwhelmingly the direction this government has taken.

Have we made strides to try and limit our program spending? Absolutely, but we're going to do it responsibly. We have been asked conclusively from across: don't do what we did in the '90s; across-the-board cuts don't work. Thoughtful allocation is far better than having to deal with unintended consequences. We've been given direction by the Premier. All cabinet is buying into it. It's on a go-forward, not a look backwards, and I'm looking forward to the next five or six years of Alberta's future.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today.

We will go back to the Routine in just a few seconds from now. We'll continue with the last member in Members' Statements in about 15 seconds.

Before I recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to members of the Assembly. I'm honoured to rise and introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly a very special guest who is seated in the public gallery today. Raju Tuladhar is a professional tapestry artist who lives in Kathmandu, Nepal, which is a city of 1.2 million and the capital of one of the poorest countries in the world. Raju studied from the age of 12 at Kala Guthi, Kathmandu Style and Design Institute. His creations are now exhibited and sold in North America as well as in Nepal. He's visited Canada twice so far, in 2007 and again this year. Raju returns to Nepal this Saturday after spending six months in Alberta creating and exhibiting his incredible tapestries and spending time with his many Canadian mums. I would ask all members of the Assembly to please join me in welcoming Raju today and wishing him a safe journey back home to his family and friends, who are eagerly awaiting in Kathmandu.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

International Day for Tolerance

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1995, the United Nations Year for Tolerance, the United Nations General Assembly passed a resolution that designated November 16 as the International Day for Tolerance. For more than 100 years Albertans have worked together to build a stronger, more tolerant society. Today Alberta is recognized around the world as a welcoming home to individuals and families of all origins, faiths, and cultures. With our world-class education and health care system all Albertans have the opportunity and the tools to succeed.

Mr. Speaker, the International Day for Tolerance is an opportunity to reflect on the progress we have made together, and I can think of no better reflection of that progress than my colleagues in this Assembly. I'm very proud to be part of one of the most diverse Legislatures in the history of this province, indeed this country. However, we also acknowledge that work needs to be done. Discrimination continues to affect Albertans across our province, from schools to the workplace, and as in other provinces and countries we are working to educate and build awareness of discrimination so that all Albertans may live in a province of mutual respect and tolerance. We must all do our part as Albertans to ensure that such hatred and intolerance has no place in this province that we all call home.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, a petition?

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm presenting a petition with 862 names representing southern Alberta communities, 22 in total, and they stretch from Milk River, Taber, Lethbridge, Fort Macleod, Claresholm, and all of the communities in between. They ask that the government of Alberta grandfather the rights and status of registered massage therapists to ensure that the clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from these current therapists.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two petitions. The first petition I'd like to present reads: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to urge the Government to maintain the current number of acute care mental health beds at Alberta Hospital Edmonton." The petition has 317 signatures.

The second petition, which I'd like to present on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, reads: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to urge the Government to include Complex Decongestive Therapy in the list of accepted therapeutic procedures covered by Alberta Health Care." The petition has 37 signatures.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Bill 62

Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Liepert: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and request leave to introduce first reading of Bill 62, the Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009.

Bill 62, Mr. Speaker, will allow and maintain the ability of ambulance attendants to share information which they observe or collect when they are dispatched to an incident with police investigators.

With that, I'd like to move first reading of Bill 62.

[Motion carried; Bill 62 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a set of retablings and tablings. My first set of retablings is copies of correspondence from Calgary-Varsity constituents Neil Thurber, Habib Syed, Nasser Hamid, Janet and Gary Moore, and Aldred Epp, all of whom have asked to have me voice their opposition to Bill 50 for reasons including trying to circumvent the public's view; the plan is not benefiting Albertans; for being pushed through and decided upon behind closed doors; alternatives must be explored, but Bill 50 would prevent them from being identified and debated publicly; and a proper public and industry review can result in a more realistic solution.

My second retabing is the requisite number of copies of correspondence from Calgarians Gabrielle Enns, Isabelle Emery, Jennifer Reddy, Jenny Regal, Kelly Russell, Kelly Waterman, Antonella Fanella, Dave Roseke, Michelle Cooledge, Sarah Clarke, Marlies Sargent, Brenda Herring, Ken Yasenchuk, Meghann Springett, Alicia Motuz, Tim Kitchen, and Patricia Paterson. They were sent to the Minister of Education and the Premier, urging them not to cut funding for education because it is more important in these times than ever to invest in our children's futures.

2:50

My next set of tablings is on an educational theme. It's the report to the community that President Harvey Weingarten gave on behalf of the University of Calgary – it's entitled A Strong Idea – as well as a magazine entitled U, University of Calgary, Fall 2009. As I'm sure many members know, the president is leaving the university this year and over his nine years has contributed greatly to the growth of the University of Calgary, and it's been my honour to work with him since the fall of 2004.

I'm tabling the program of Opportunity Knocks, which was the National Housing Day fifth annual breakfast, that took place in the Stampede grounds this past constituency week.

I'm also tabling a program entitled Rich Man Poor Man: Healing the Gap, a fundraiser for the Calgary drop-in centre, a student-run medical clinic, which is currently being run by Dr. Hurley. The donations from the dinner will help to establish the clinic.

Lastly, I'm tabling the Diwali Show 2009 program of the Hindu Society of Calgary. It was a delightful program, that many members were able to enjoy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. members, I'm tabling copies of a memorandum from the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek requesting that Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, be given early consideration for third reading.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 50

Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Mason moved that the motion for second reading be amended to read that Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a second time because the bill fails to provide for public consultation prior to the approval of critical transmission infrastructure.

[Adjourned debate November 17: Ms Pastoor]

The Speaker: All right. Hon. members, when we left yesterday afternoon, I advised that the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East was to be in the House to deal with the 29(2)(a) provision, and that hasn't happened, so I may not recognize her when it comes to debate on second reading.

Additional speakers on the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I listened yesterday afternoon to this reasoned amendment as proposed regarding Bill 50, and I'm happy at this time to have an opportunity to speak. Certainly, the public is not sold on the need for Bill 50. Interested parties across the province have had a look at this bill. It was initially presented to the House here in June. Actually, on June 1, I believe, the hon. Minister of Energy laid the bill before the House. We had all summer and the fall to have a look at it, and the more and more people looked at this bill, the more and more concerned they got. This is why I would urge the Assembly, with all due respect, to pass this amendment.

Now, when we look at the bill and we look at the need for critical transmission infrastructure, there is enough legislation already in place to fulfill the requests or the wish list or whatever you want to call it of the AESO and their long-term transmission system plan. We need to have transmission routes – there's no doubt about that – but we have to maintain an open, public, and transparent process. The idea that the cabinet may designate as critical transmission infrastructure a proposed transmission facility, as is indicated on page 5, certainly is interesting. The cabinet is going to override here any what I would consider assessment that is necessary to ensure that the transmission needs to be built in the first place.

Now, I can see why the government, particularly this government, is panicking again whenever it looks at its electricity and transmission policies because the electricity policy and the transmission policy, of course, are linked. When we look at deregulation – and we're essentially, Mr. Speaker, 10 years into the whole process of deregulation – we were promised in this House time and time again that if we were patient and we waited, we would see the economic benefit of deregulation. It hasn't happened. Bills keep going up.

The argument across the way, Mr. Speaker, it's interesting to note, was that once natural gas prices come down, well, we're going to see power prices come down because natural gas is used as a fuel for many of the peaking plants. Natural gas has diminished in price. It's probably in some markets one-third of what it was two years ago. Has the price of power come down? The price of wholesale electricity? Certainly not. So there is one argument that the government can't say is working.

They said that we would have all this competition, of course, and that competition would drive down prices. That hasn't happened either. Now, what we do know is that with energy deregulation the long-term planning function – and this is where the transmission system has come into such a state of neglect – of the transmission system was just set aside, and as a result of that we have no major upgrades. We've had no major upgrades in I think it's 16 years, but what we have seen is certainly an increase in the energy emergency alerts, whether it's the summer or the winter. It is routine now for there to be emergency alerts, and in some cases people are actually requested by the system operator to scale back their use of electricity. Now, we have seen blackouts in this province. Oddly enough, they have occurred in the summer, during air conditioning season, and not during winter at 30 below, but I'm not sure that that's not going to happen here in the near future.

If we look at the reserve that is needed and the reserve margin that we now have on the Power Pool, we can see that as electricity generation has become scarcer and less reliable, the reserve margin is going down and down. I'm surprised that this government hasn't enthusiastically embraced the Enmax proposal, Mr. Speaker, to build up to 800 megawatts of natural gas generation on the edge of Calgary. Not only would it reduce some of the need for the 500-kV transmission between Lake Wabamun and Langdon, I believe, in Calgary – and the hon. member may laugh. But I would really ask the hon. member – and he has his computer there – just to check in with the Power Pool of Alberta and see exactly what kind of reserve margin we're even dealing with now and what they anticipate the reserve margin in this province will be, for instance, in 2010 and 2011.

If we had given the Enmax proposal the go-ahead, at least part of that power plant would be commissioned when we need the power the most. Calgary and the Calgary area is the area of the province that is affected most by the folly of deregulation. There are shortages there of baseload generation capacity, and Enmax is trying to fix that. It's quite odd that we were talking earlier in question period about this policy resolution booklet, or whatever it was that was at the PC convention, and these corporate sponsors were involved. Certainly, there was corporate sponsorship from Trans-Alta, from Capital Power, and from AltaLink, but I didn't see – and I could have been wrong – Enmax. Enmax wasn't a sponsor of that convention. Now, hon. members can correct me. I don't have a copy of this policy booklet, or whatever it was, with the sponsorship on it in the front there. If I'm wrong and hon. members could correct me, I would appreciate that. But I didn't see sponsorship from Enmax on the copy I looked at, and that tells me a lot about this bill or what we shouldn't have in this bill.

3:00

The Speaker: Actually, hon. member, we're talking about the amendment.

Mr. MacDonald: You're absolutely right, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. MacDonald: I appreciate your guidance.

The Speaker: You're welcome.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I don't know how, Mr. Speaker, I neglected that.

The reasoned amendment is going to give additional time for organizations or corporations like Enmax to convince this government that they have a solution to part of the transmission bill.

Now, we have heard many different estimates of what that cost would be. I have correspondence here from government members that was provided to their constituents – and the constituents provided it to me over the summer and the fall – that said that the bill would be, like, $8 a month. Some had the bill as high as $14 billion.

Enmax, if we were to follow their proposal, that bill would be reduced at least by some amount. When you consider this bill and you see what this bill is going to do through cabinet order, force transmission lines wherever cabinet decides, there doesn't seem to me to be any economic consideration in this. It's what cabinet wishes to do. I don't think that's fair to just have this behind-the-closed-doors decision and present the bill, Mr. Speaker, to the consumers. The ratepayers of this province are going to be stuck with the bill.

We already know that this cabinet made a flawed decision when they enthusiastically supported deregulation and forced it upon the consumers. Consumers had no say in this. The only thing that they can do is pay the bigger and bigger bills each and every month. They got no benefit from this.

We could do that, but, Mr. Speaker, with this amendment, if this amendment was passed, we could have a series of public meetings across this province. I know there are public meetings going on. Joe Anglin, he's having public meetings. I'm told that some government MLAs are having public meetings. There was a public meeting out in the west end of Edmonton, and I believe there's going to be another one at the AgriCom on transmission infrastructure. There was a public meeting in Sherwood Park earlier in the summer.

Citizens, certainly, before they're going to be stuck with this bill, want to know, first and foremost, what's going on and why they have to pay. Many, Mr. Speaker, consumers are astonished to learn that at one time the regulatory process in this province decided that the bill, the tab, whether it's $2 billion, $4 billion, or $14 billion, would be equally shared between the generators of the electricity and the consumers of the electricity.

What happened, again with no public consultation, is that a former Minister of Energy, Mr. Smith, in a ballroom in Banff stood up and made an announcement that: no, we're shifting all the costs onto the bills of consumers regardless; that's how it is. The EUB made a ruling that it should be shared equally, but, no, the Minister of Energy in this government, the same political party that still governs, decided that it was consumers who should foot the bill. We asked at the time how much that bill would be, and we were scoffed, we were jeered, and the bill . . . [interjection] Yes, it's true, hon. minister; it's true. This bill has grown from $2 billion to $4 billion to, astonishingly enough, $14 billion and even higher. Consumers are going to have to pay this. It's not a laughing matter.

Some industries with high electricity costs and no electricity-generating capacity of their own are contemplating leaving this province and going to places like Saskatchewan or Manitoba.

Mr. Liepert: Who?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, they certainly are, hon. minister of health.

Mr. Liepert: Name them.

Mr. MacDonald: Name them? AT Plastics, for one. That's one.

Now, when you look at the commercial, the industrial, and the residential users and break them down, if industrial users because of the high cost of electricity, a direct consequence of electricity deregulation, decide that they're going to have their own behind-the-fence generation, which is how they're going to operate because they can generate electricity a lot cheaper than what this crowd across the way can deliver it to them for, Mr. Speaker, I'm afraid that more of these transmission costs will wind up on the bills of consumers because we're going to have a smaller pool of consumers paying a bigger portion of the transmission bill.

Hopefully there are going to be a lot of industrial sites that are developed in this province. I would suggest to the hon. members across the way that one of the unintended consequences of this bill, unless we support this reasoned amendment, is that industrial sites will have their own generating capacity, and they will be exempt or they will be outside the grid. They will be connected for convenience purposes, but they will essentially be on their own, and we will stick residential consumers, who already have high bills, with even more of this 14-plus billion dollar tab for transmission if this bill goes forward.

That's one point at this time that I would like to make. In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would certainly like to remind hon. members that the public is not sold on the need for this bill. This amendment gives the government another chance, and they should take it.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Speaker's Ruling Question-and-comment Period

The Speaker: Just a second before we set the clock for this. Yesterday we had the situation – and we've been having this situation for some period of time now during this 29(2)(a) – where a member stood up and spoke for four minutes and 58 seconds before arriving at a question. In other words, he filibustered somebody else's time frame. The rule clearly says that this is to provide for members to participate, and they should be brief, and they should provide for a response. The guideline that I tend to follow under question period is approximately 35 seconds. I intend now on following such a guideline under 29(2)(a). The intent of 29(2)(a) is to maximize the number of questions and maximize the number of responses. So that is how we will now proceed. There will be no more filibustering of this section.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, you know the time frame.

Debate Continued

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate your direction on that.

The hon. member referred to Enmax, saying that maybe they could get the message to this government. But perhaps he could expound a little bit more on his experience in the needs process that used to go on in order to build power lines and how that's been changed in this bill and, so, why this amendment is important to be accepted so that we can look at the needs process that is exempted from the AUC if this bill passes. Would you expound on that a little bit?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I and others feel that Bill 50 is unnecessary. There are existing laws, as I said before, regarding the acquisition of rights of way for the benefit of the public at large and giving landowners the rights that they deserve. What we're missing with this and are going to continue to miss unless we give it this second chance that the reasoned amendment is going to provide is an analysis of the true needs of Alberta's electricity system.

Now, I will remind the hon. member that we had a spy scandal happen down in Rimbey in the community hall.

3:10

The Speaker: Okay. Thank you very much, hon. member.

Additional questions? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm wondering if the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar has a percentage of what percentage of the bill residential homeowners will have to pick up. In other words, if residential owners receive 20 per cent of the electricity from these new transmission lines, what amount on a population basis are they going to have to pay? My concern is that it seems that taxpayers are being heavily affected by these new bills, and I'm just wondering if you have percentages.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, if you wish.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I'm disappointed I didn't get a chance, but I will in committee get a chance to discuss the situation in Rimbey.

My big issue here is the transmission charges: 61 per cent are picked up by industrial consumers, 19 per cent by commercial, 16 per cent by residential, 4 per cent by farms. If the industrial consumers decide to go on their own with behind-the-fence generation, the 16 per cent of residential consumers are going to be stuck with a larger portion of this tab. I want the government right now, before we go any further with this bill, to tell me what they're going to do about this. This is a real concern.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Additional questions? The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise. I just have a question for the member. At the beginning of the member's comments he discussed the emergency situation, a couple of instances of the lack of power, cases when emergency orders were issued, people were asked to scale back, and he went towards the end of it where there's actually no need for additional transmission. Without getting into the Bill 50 thing – there's much debate to come here – could the member just tell us whether he thinks there's a need or is not a need for additional transmission in the province? It wasn't real clear in his speech, and I'd like to know where he stands.

Mr. MacDonald: No. It's clear to me that the hon. Member for Peace River was not listening. What I did say was: there is not a need for all this transmission upgrade. If we follow through with the Enmax proposal to add more generation on the edge of the load in Calgary, there will be less need to stick consumers across the province with the total bill for the upgrades between Wabamun and Langdon. Clearly, if the hon. member – I would ask him to now, if he has a computer there, go to the Power Pool, the Alberta Electric System Operator, and he can see for himself, if he can understand it, the reserve margin and the capacity that we direly need in this province.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Oberle: One additional question, then, Mr. Speaker. I wonder what the member would propose to say to the power users in Calgary or, for that matter, the rest of the province when natural gas rates go back to $9 or $10. What's going to happen in the Calgary power market?

Mr. MacDonald: I wish I had a crystal ball to know where natural gas prices are going. I'm sure the minister of finance and the Treasury Board president would also like to know. Now, if the hon. member has some insight into natural gas prices in the future, you should share them with your colleagues.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Well, that worked well.

Is there further discussion or debate on the amendment? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to step up after that lively and well-interspersed exchange. I rise to speak in favour of the amendment put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, that Bill 50 not be read a second time because of the bill's failure to provide for public consultation prior to the approval of the critical transmission infrastructure.

This element of the bill that we are identifying at this point as being such a problem resides in that part of the bill that would change the process around the consideration of the needs identification document such that the needs identification document need not be required to be submitted to the AUC should the government designate a particular project as a critical infrastructure transmission. As a result, then, the matter is not considered through the public hearings that would otherwise be provided through the AUC.

We raise this amendment because, of course, among other things, while we have some very serious concerns about the merits of the transmission lines that are being proposed, there is value simply to the issue of whether or not Albertans are going to be given the opportunity to be fully consulted, as they would be through a public hearing process, that would be negated as a result of Bill 50 in its current form.

I'd like to talk just a little bit about why it is that we believe standing up for the public hearing process is so important and why we think it's a matter that's important to Albertans across the province regardless of their view, ultimately, on whether or not these transmission lines ought to be approved. Basically, we need to ensure that this is a matter that is not left simply to cabinet to assess; rather, it needs to be considered through a public, transparent process that is governed by an independent regulator.

Now, we appreciate that the government is a little uncomfortable with this because, of course, the last time this issue was considered by a theoretically independent regulator, we had a little problem with that theoretically independent regulator engaging in inappropriate practices vis-à-vis their supervision, shall we say, of stakeholders who were appearing before that so-called independent public regulator. So I understand that the government is a little bit nervous about this. Nonetheless, where independent public regulators actually work functionally in a way where they actually engage in their business in accordance with the laws and common law that outlines the way they are expected to function, the independence of that regulator adds, ultimately, to the quality of the decision that is made as a result of the independence and as a result of reducing the political interference.

Flowing from that, then, we know that when you go through a public hearing process, it is less likely that approval or conditions or denial of same would be driven by merely short-term political interests. They would be more likely to focus on long-term, long-run benefits and the consideration of whether the costs associated with the particular application can be maintained.

That's something, again, that we think Albertans need to know about. At this point there are a lot of different suggestions out there in the public about what this particular critical infrastructure process is really designed to do. Is it designed to deal with a so-called problem with respect to our domestic electricity transmission, or is it really designed to allow for future export opportunities, the capital infrastructure costs of which would be borne disproportionately by consumers, who would not get the benefit of the profits arising from those power export opportunities?

In this particular case there is an issue around the long-term implications of this project. We know that it is through an independent public hearing process that we are most likely to get a dispassionate assessment of what the long-term benefits and consequences are of this project.

3:20

As well, with all due respect to members of cabinet, who would consider the issue of regulations ultimately adopted by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, the regulatory agencies that oversee these public hearing processes typically have expertise, historic awareness, and background knowledge to understand and evaluate and adjudicate the issues which are being considered. I would suggest that it's unlikely that the members of cabinet who would be consulted in the process of determining whether regulatory exceptions would be allowed for this particular project would have the same level of expertise, historic awareness, and background knowledge to understand, evaluate, and adjudicate this complex issue.

Now, the regulatory processes that this bill in its current form would remove, that we are objecting to in the course of this amendment, are designed to take the interested parties' positions and subject them to public scrutiny, to test the arguments that are put forward, and to ensure that people and parties and stakeholders with interests – some vested, some not vested; it doesn't really matter – are able in a transparent, open forum to see what everybody else's argument is, and they can evaluate it, and they can determine how the decision is being made. Those arguments are best tested in that kind of forum. When you remove access to that forum, you are far more likely to undermine the quality of the decision that's being made because you simply haven't tested it against opposing views. You haven't tested it against the implications of the project in question for citizens across the province, all citizens.

We need to have a full and transparent discussion particularly on the issue of the needs identification because we know already, even without this project and the projects that are identified in this bill being subjected to the full public hearing process, simply through certain parties having an opportunity to get access to the media and to talk amongst themselves in a rather haphazard and disorganized kind of way, that there is certainly more than one set of expert opinions, I would suggest, out there about the need for these projects. We know that certain experts are suggesting that these projects are not necessary, that they are not needed, that the doom and gloom that's proposed by the government is not actually something that's about to come to pass.

Now, I'm not going to get into the merits of that because that's not what this amendment is about. What I will say is that there is enough difference of opinion out there that it makes no sense at all to not test that difference of opinion in the most transparent and objective and independent setting possible. To do that, of course, would be in the best interests of all Albertans.

Now, another reason why we want to ensure that that process is maintained and why it's so important to allow for that kind of public hearing process is because when we do that, we also guard against the whole issue, the whole potential, whether it's perceived or whether it's real, of private interest having an undue influence on the decision-making process. Quite frankly, there has been an interesting discussion within this Assembly over the course of the last few days about the fact that one particular party that stands to benefit from this bill going forward unamended has also been able to donate significant amounts of money to the governing political party. Now, that may or may not be of relevance. There may or may not be an association between the two. We really don't know. But the best way to ensure the confidence of Albertans in the objectivity and the merits of the decision we're discussing is to take that decision and test it in a public and independent forum. Why would we, then, go forward on a bill, a significant component of which is to take that very process away from Albertans, to take the decision about what constitutes critical infrastructure and put it behind the closed doors of cabinet?

Public regulatory processes also go through a process, and the public regulatory process does not currently exist in the bill where the alternatives are made available and the regulator is required to consider the alternatives and explain why they may or may not be the appropriate course in this particular case. That continues, again, to be a very sort of important constraint on any real or perceived collusion between decision-makers and various organizations with vested private interests.

You know, I think it's really important to have a really well-thought-out explanation of the rationale. At this point, when we've had debate on it in this House, people who ask questions about it are primarily met with rather surly denials that there's any issue at all, that any of the complaints or the legitimate concerns that have been raised by vested interests and nonvested interests across the province that happen to oppose this bill are simply wrong. We don't get into any sort of well-thought-out, well-supported, well-researched rationale for why it is that they're wrong. We're just told in this rather surly way that they're wrong and that we should just close our eyes and trust the government and move on. I simply don't think that that's an appropriate way to move forward on something that could cost this province or its consumers upwards of $8 billion. I mean, that's just a grossly irresponsible way to move forward.

The final point that I would make around the merits of a regulatory process of having a public hearing is that it allows, of course, for public participation, and through that we contribute to the public's understanding, the public's sense of the government being accountable to them and of the legitimacy of the process as a whole. I think that because in this case there have been a number of concerns raised about what the plans identified in Bill 50 will cost the public and what they will cost consumers, the public needs the opportunity to know what they would be paying for and why they would be paying for it. At this point they're not getting that opportunity. They're not being given that information clearly by the government.

Again, for the reasons I've identified before, a public hearing process is the forum within which that information would be most clearly communicated, most objectively communicated, and most effectively communicated in that the public would be invited to participate, and we would have ongoing discussions that would hopefully engage the public in order for them to be aware of what it is we're talking about and what the consequences are.

The public really does need to know what the consequences are of this bill, and I would suggest that they can't simply rely on the government. I look, for instance, at one piece of communication that came from the government that talks about what kind of changes we would see under Bill 50 . . .

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the hon. member of the third party what she thinks the rationale for setting up the Alberta Utilities Commission was by politicians in the first place.

The Speaker: We're on the amendment now, remember? That's the subject matter of our debate. Go ahead.

Ms Notley: The amendment itself talks about the need to reject this bill because it negates the transparent public hearing process that would otherwise be associated with the consideration of the needs identification document. That relates to the member's question because, of course, the Alberta Utilities Commission was created because of a very failed public hearing and consultation process. We have a problem in this province, where we previously had an EUB that was supposed to be engaging in neutral, objective, independent . . .

3:30

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've just got a couple of questions for the member opposite with respect to the amendment. The amendment, of course, being a hoist, removes Bill 50 totally.

The Speaker: No, it's not a hoist amendment.

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, excuse me. The amendment would remove the ability for this piece of legislation to do some other things as well. I'm wondering if the member would mind sharing with this Assembly whether or not she would suggest that things like . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

Hon. member, if you wish to respond.

Ms Notley: Well, I have to say that I'm not entirely sure where the question was going. In this particular case the amendment is premised on the fact that beyond the other merits that may or may not exist within the bill, the bill itself takes away a critical public consultation component to something which could potentially cost Albertans upwards of $8 billion. So regardless of the merits of moving forward and all the other kinds of stuff that the government may have good reason to pursue – and I'm not suggesting that you don't; maybe you do; maybe you don't – the fact of the matter is that a fundamental principle is that we ought not to be taking away from Albertans the ability . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With the amendment it says, you know, that it fails to provide public consultation prior to the approval of the critical transmission infrastructure, and I support this amendment. My question to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. In the old process, if we don't change this bill, there's the needs requirement hearing, and the document has to be served. What would be the power, do you feel, of actually having a needs hearing in front of the AUC versus the minister making a declaration saying, "Oh, I already know that we don't need to have a needs hearing"?

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, if you wish.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Well, I think you've really hit the nail on the head about why it is that we believe so strongly in the importance of this amendment, because what we're talking about, as I was saying before, is something that could potentially cost Alberta taxpayers $8 billion. That kind of decision needs to be tested in an independent setting that is transparent, where the public hears the submissions made by everybody that's got a vested or an unvested, whatever you want to call it, interest and where they can evaluate all the people that come forward. Whether they can sit and watch or they can participate doesn't really matter. When you're talking about that kind of money in the future, that's the process that should be in place.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.
Minister of Energy, did you have an additional question?

Mr. Knight: Yes, Mr. Speaker, if I might. The business about public consultation. I'd just like to ask the member opposite if she would consider that 300 open, public meetings that have been held respective to this particular piece of business since 2007 would not be considered public consultation.

Ms Notley: No, I wouldn't because what we need is to have public meetings that are managed by an independent regulator, where all the public knows about every meeting and everybody gets to go to every meeting should they want and where we don't have selected groups in one place listening to selected submissions in other places. The fact of the matter is that the public hearing process with the EUB previously has been seriously undermined in the eyes of Albertans. To then move away from a public hearing process when the former chair of the EUB promised that they'd go back to the drawing board because they messed it up so much last time . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there additional members who would like to participate in this debate on the amendment?

There being none, then I'll call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on the amendment to second reading lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 3:34 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

For the motion:

Blakeman	Kang	Swann
Chase	MacDonald	Taft
Hehr	Notley	Taylor
Hinman	Pastoor

Against the motion:

Allred	Griffiths	McQueen
Brown	Groeneveld	Mitzel
Calahasen	Hancock	Olson
Campbell	Horne	Quest
Cao	Jablonski	Rogers
Dallas	Klimchuk	Sherman
Denis	Knight	Tarchuk
Drysdale	Leskiw	VanderBurg
Evans	Liepert	Vandermeer
Fawcett	Lindsay	Woo-Paw
Forsyth	Marz	Zwozdesky
Goudreau

Totals:	For – 11	Against – 34
---------	----------	--------------

[Motion on amendment to second reading of Bill 50 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 49 I would move that this question be now put.

Speaker's Ruling Moving the Previous Question

The Speaker: If all hon. members would look at their Standing Orders, you'll see Previous Question, 49(1), (2), and (3). In essence, what this procedure now does is put us on a path for continued debate on the second reading of this bill. At the conclusion of all those who want to participate in the debate, a vote will be taken, and if it's found to be in the affirmative, then we will go immediately to the vote on second reading. This now provides all members an opportunity to participate once again in the debate on Bill 50.

The time constraints are as they always have been: 15 minutes for individual members, with Standing Order 29(2)(a) availing itself for five minutes, and an opportunity for the leader of the government and the Leader of the Official Opposition to speak for up to 90 minutes on this. So, in essence, if all 82 members in the Assembly were to participate, we would be looking at approximately – what? – 327, 328 hours. If it's three hours a day, it could be nine days. So there is opportunity here to participate in the debate. Even those who have already participated have an opportunity to participate again.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Point of Order

Explanation of Speaker's Ruling

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under 13(2) if I could ask for clarification for members of the House then. The motion that we are currently speaking to, then, is the motion that the previous question be put. It is not, in fact, speaking to the general principle of the bill as we understand it in a usual debate for second reading. Is that correct?

The Speaker: No. My interpretation and interpretations of the past have been very, very wide: participation on the bill rather than simply the words of the question. So you have free rein to participate in continuing second reading of this bill, and you begin afresh. Even if you've participated before, you may participate again. I can give you all the statements that I've given in the past, and you might refer to this. Essentially, you have wide range of debate even if you participated before.

3:50

Ms Blakeman: Under 13(2). We are indeed speaking to "that this question be now put," but the Speaker has indicated that he'll give us very wide latitude. This, of course, would also preclude any other amendments being put on the floor.

The Speaker: That's one of the rules under 49 and the tradition with respect to this. There are no further amendments. We're now dealing with the second reading of Bill 50. Wide ranging. Every member has an opportunity once. No amendments.

Ms Blakeman: It is a form of closure, although we no longer have closure available to us in the standing orders in this House, in that members may only now speak once. Whether they've spoken before or not, they may now only speak once, and they are restricted to that. Correct?

The Speaker: Well, I'm not going to carry on a continuing debate with respect to this. It was quite clear, which I've already given. In fact, members will have two opportunities. If some members have already spoken, have already participated on Bill 50 at second reading, they'll now be given a second opportunity to speak on second reading. This is very wide open. You've got up to 20 minutes each with Standing Order 29(2)(a).

You may now continue, whoever wishes to participate on Bill 50. None?

Ms Blakeman: It's closure.

The Speaker: You'll all have a chance. Over the next nine days there will be all kinds of opportunity.

The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti, please.

Debate Continued

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to participate today in the second reading of Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. Bill 50 plays an important role in Alberta's way forward. Like with roads, schools, and hospitals Bill 50 gives government the responsibility to approve the need for critical electricity infrastructure. Make no mistake; the need for transmission infrastructure is critical. I know there's been plenty of debate about the need for new and upgraded infrastructure. Some of our detractors say that new transmission is unnecessary, but certainly the facts speak for themselves. It's a fact that Alberta's population has grown by 32 per cent in the last 20 years. We're now home to 3.65 million people compared to 2.49 million people in 1989.

It's pretty obvious that we have a lot more business and industry than we had 20 years ago. In fact, our business, industry, and retail sectors have quadrupled, yet in the last 20 years we haven't seen any significant upgrades to the transmission system. Mr. Speaker, it seems pretty clear that Alberta has outgrown its transmission system, yet we're continuing to rely on electricity transmission infrastructure that was built to meet the needs of an Alberta that looked much different than it does today.

While it did serve us well, Alberta's transmission system now is aging, congested, and inefficient. Many of our existing generators are nearing the end of their useful life. In fact, over the next 20 years more than 2,000 megawatts of generation will be retired from service, and it's predicted that we'll need another 11,500 megawatts of new generation.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Bill 50 will allow Alberta to continue moving forward. The projects included in Bill 50 will provide the necessary infrastructure to keep electricity flowing across the province. These projects will ensure that Albertans continue to have light when they flick the switch and ensure that businesses can continue to operate and grow, adding more jobs to the province and contributing more revenue to our economy.

Bill 50 is for Alberta. It's not, as some people have suggested, a money-making scheme for power generators to export electricity out of our province. Alberta is and always has been a net importer of electricity. That means we currently have to bring in more power than we export so we can meet the needs of Albertans during peak hours of demand. In fact, some days the transmission lines within the province are so congested that we can't even move our own power to some parts of Alberta, and we have to import instead. The fact is that projects included in Bill 50 are for Albertans, for power for Alberta.

Improving our transmission system also means we'll be better able to use low-emission electricity and renewable resources. Alberta has hydroelectric resources in the north, we have wind power in the south, and we have biomass in the northwest. What we don't have is efficient means to bring this power to where it's needed. Bill 50 will help us do that. Improved transmission infrastructure will allow us to optimize the use of these natural resources, enabling us to connect more renewable resources to the grid and providing Albertans with more clean energy choices.

A more efficient, less congested grid also ensures that Albertans get access to competitively priced electricity any time of the day. Yes, Mr. Speaker, despite the misconceptions being perpetrated about the sky-high cost to Albertans if Bill 50 is passed, there are economic advantages to improving transmission infrastructure. In fact, the cost to Albertans would ultimately be much higher if we did not pass this bill and if we don't act immediately.

Bill 50 approves the need for four critical transmission infrastructure projects. The estimated cost for the four projects is $5.6 billion. That means the average residential consumer will see an increase of less than $6 on their monthly bill, or less than $72 a year, once all four projects are in service, and we expect that to be around 2017. The cost will be added in increments, starting around 2012 and increasing over time as the projects are completed.

I'd also like to speak to the misconceptions about Bill 50 taking away from the public's right to be heard. Bill 50 speaks to need only. The Alberta Utilities Commission will continue to be responsible for making decisions on the siting of transmission facilities. This includes determining the specific location for individual power lines. In doing so, the Alberta Utilities Commission will continue to ensure that Albertans whose rights may be directly or adversely affected by a proposed utility development are informed of the application. These Albertans will continue to have the opportunity to voice their concerns during the review process. We strongly encourage affected Albertans to do so.

Alberta's transmission infrastructure plays an essential role in the well-being of our province, our economy, and our high quality of life. Mr. Speaker, Bill 50 facilitates continued growth in the province by making sure that we have the necessary transmission infrastructure in place so that more power is added to the grid as needed. Bill 50 sustains Alberta's success and prosperity well into the future by taking action now. Bill 50 prepares us for the future today.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for the opportunity to participate in this debate.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: The hon. member was next.

Mr. Hinman: Under 29(2)(a).

The Deputy Speaker: All right. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The good member who spoke about Bill 50 speaks to need only and says that this is good to move in there, but for the last 50 years we've had a regulatory body that has always taken the needs process in order for all interested parties – those that generate, those that transmit, the consumers, and experts – to step in and determine the needs. Do you really and sincerely feel that Bill 50 and putting that power in the position of the Minister of Energy is going to be good for Albertans and Alberta businesses and ensure not just an efficient but an effective . . . [Mr. Hinman's speaking time expired]

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, there's been lots of debate about the need. Lots of people say that there's no need, but I'm not sure if they're qualified to say that. I take my advice from the AESO. They're an independent body of experts in the province that say that there is a need, and I suggest there is. I don't want to be sitting in this House four years from now when the power goes off in people's homes when it's 45 below and they're freezing and they're looking at us and saying: why did you let this happen? That's why today I'm supporting this.

Mr. Chase: Under 29(2)(a) I'd like to ask the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti if he plans to be around in the next election after his constituents receive their increased power bills. [interjection]

My second question, if not interrupted by the hon. minister of health, is the consideration: do you believe what you've said, that we're going to have blackouts and power outages, or is this just more of the fearmongering that the opposition is so frequently accused of?

4:00

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, I don't know about fearmongering. I believe in AESO, and they're the ones that have said that we've been reaching critical points lately. Building this kind of infrastructure takes years, so I don't want to wait till the lights go off before we start.

As far as being around at the next election, I think I have a pretty good chance at being there. But there's not going to be an increase on the power bill by 2012 anyway, so it won't be an issue then.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Yes. I would like to ask the hon. member what he will say to the seniors, to those that do not have jobs, that are increasingly becoming jobless in this province, and certainly to low-income. Many people are working two jobs and struggling. How will he explain any kind of an increase in their utility bills?

Mr. Drysdale: Well, Mr. Speaker, we could go on forever, but seniors will be the ones most affected if their heat goes off. I'd hate to be 70 years old with no power. The bills: I mean, they can speculate all they want, but maybe with more transmission, the rate of electricity will drop down, so their bill may be lower.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member said that he's relying on AESO. Would the hon. member please explain why the 2007-2008 AESO report said that we only needed one small line, about $570 million, and now the '09 report says that we need $5.6 billion? There's a huge gap, and the only thing that's changed in the market in that time is the fact that the people that have been taken off of the . . .

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Hinman: You're not the Speaker. Your rhetoric is just so appreciated. There was a question.

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure what the question was there, but I still believe what AESO says. AESO says that today that's exactly what we need, so I believe them, and I support the bill.

Mr. Hinman: I'd appreciate being able to finish the question. AESO in a 2007-08 report said that it wasn't necessary. We had three prominent members that got off the board. Then Bill 50 has come forward. This is about a needs test. They're usurping the power of the AUC to have a needs test. So how can you say that AESO supports this when the previous four reports from AESO said that we don't need it? Only the current one does. How do you explain the change in the reports from AESO?

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, we could go on forever. He just said that AESO's last report says that we need it. Well, times change. The economy changes. They've changed their opinion, and I agree with what they say.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on the bill.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, there's going to be a lot of time, I suspect, spent addressing the questions around this bill. I hope debate progresses quickly, and I anticipate all members of the House getting their views and the views of their constituents and their respective communities on the record regarding Bill 50 before we are expected as consumers to pick up the tab.

You know, in this case we have a bill where the government, the Minister of Energy is going to call the shots, and the consumers are going to pay the bills. There's no way around this. It's clear that cabinet will have the final say on any transmission improvements or significant upgrades.

People can tell me that, you know, this bill has nothing to do with electricity exports, but that simply is not true. If you look at the bill and you look at the definitions that are included, we're talking about interties. Interties are included in this bill. A previous speaker had indicated that we are importers of electricity, not exporters, but we're both. With our shortage of electricity here now, we are at certain times of the day importing significant amounts of electricity, as much as the interties have capacity for. Other times, at night, late at night we are exporting electricity. The British Columbia Powerex Corp. is drawing our baseload generating capacity as we sleep, and they're building up their hydraulic capacity, opening their dams at peak times, and selling us back the power at a real handsome return for themselves.

This was another consequence of deregulation that this government has not thought out. But I do not want to stray from Bill 50. Hopefully, during the course of the debate I'm going to get an explanation from government members across the way. I can't remember who is the Provincial Secretary these days.

Mr. Hancock: It would be the Attorney General.

Mr. MacDonald: The Attorney General. Okay. I'm going to leave it in the hands of the Attorney General. I almost said eternity general, like this is some sort of Tory dynasty.

Mr. Liepert: It is.

Mr. MacDonald: It is. See, that's the problem. That's what you think. That's exactly what part of the problem is here. It's that attitude.

Now, earlier this summer there was an Order in Council 311/2009, which was an amendment to transmission regulation that was put forward in 2007. That transmission regulation, to be precise, is Alberta regulation 86/2007. This transmission regulation this summer autocratically, regardless of the cost to consumers, allows the minister to call the shots and then get it rubber-stamped by his cabinet colleagues. Now, it's interesting to note what this transmission regulation now considers critical transmission infrastructure, and I'm going to quote.

24.1(1) In this section, "critical transmission infrastructure" means a transmission facility that, in the Minister's opinion, is critical to the safe, reliable and economic operation of the interconnected electric system.

(2) The Minister may determine

- (a) who is eligible to apply for the construction or operation, or both, of a critical transmission infrastructure.

So the minister may determine who is eligible. He may pick one person, one corporation. Who knows? But we have with a stroke of the pen given the minister this authority already, before we have dealt with the matters that are in Bill 50.

Now, the minister may determine also who is responsible for upgrades or enhancements to critical transmission infrastructure.

The ISO, Independent System Operator, has a role to play in this.

(3) The ISO must have regard to a determination made by the Minister under subsection 2 . . .

which I just quoted,

. . . when carrying out the ISO's functions under the Act and regulations, including

- (a) taking into account, when preparing a needs identification document under section 34 of the Act, that the Minister has under section 24.1(2) determined the person who is eligible to apply to construct or operate, or who is responsible for upgrades or enhancements to, a critical . . . infrastructure.

So it looks like you've quietly given yourselves the authority and the scope to do this already in the middle of the summer.

I read this with interest. I brought it up at a couple of public meetings that I had the pleasure of attending, and people were astonished. They wanted copies. They were downloading this amendment to the transmission regulation. The consumers, the folks who were at this meeting, couldn't understand, if this was the process that the government wanted to follow, why we needed Bill 50. I couldn't understand why we were giving the Minister of Energy additional powers when in the past, regardless of which respective individual is in the department as minister, we can't seem to fix deregulation.

4:10

A previous speaker spoke about a competitive price for electricity in this province. Well, there is no competitive price for electricity in this province. We had some of the lowest cost electricity, Mr. Speaker, before deregulation. Now we have some of the highest in North America. We weren't blessed with a lot of hydraulic capacity like other jurisdictions. We rely on coal-fired generation for most of our base load and, of course, natural gas.

It is interesting to note that the hon. Member for Peace River spoke earlier about his interpretation of where natural gas prices were going to go, but at this point I would like to remind the House that Medicine Hat, the fine citizens of Medicine Hat, had the common sense and the good fortune of staying clear of deregulation. No one would know that more than the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat because I'm sure he enjoys some of the lowest cost electricity on his residential power bill of any member in this Assembly. The only guy that might have a lower power bill would be the hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Denis: Calgary because of the fees.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, Calgary has fees, and hon. member, it was this government that initiated the whole franchise. It's not a fee. It's a tax. I appreciated your questions on this matter earlier. See, Mr. Speaker, he's distracting me again, that rascal.

I would get back to comparing Medicine Hat's power bills to the consumers' in the rest of the province. They're significantly lower. One of the reasons why they're lower – and perhaps instead of debating Bill 50 here, we should consider giving Enmax some of the same authority or scope that the city of Medicine Hat now has, and that is to acquire for themselves natural gas production rights so that they can produce electricity for their citizens and also sell the natural gas for heating purposes in the winter. Medicine Hat, my research indicates, has drilling rights throughout Alberta, north of the city of Medicine Hat now, around the Suffield range. They have some nice producing wells there. They also go to Saskatchewan, southwestern Saskatchewan. They have some drilling rights there as well to supply themselves with affordable, reliable supplies of fuel for their needs. Perhaps instead of ramming this bill down the throats of consumers and just ignoring the presentation of Enmax, we should consider giving Enmax and other outfits that are interested the same deal that we provide to Medicine Hat.

Members across the way should be interested to note that not only does Enmax have a difference of opinion from others on Bill 50, but I received as one of the Edmonton region MLAs a letter from the Capital Region Board: regional action, global opportunity. This letter is dated November 12, 2009, and it's to the hon. Minister of Energy and also to the chair of the Alberta Utilities Commission. This is regarding the heartland transmission project. This is a group, the Capital Region Board, that's comprised of 25 municipalities in our region, and they are writing to advise the Minister of Energy and the chair of the Alberta Utilities Commission of the position recently taken by their board regarding the heartland transmission project proposed by EPCOR and AltaLink.

Now, I'm not going to bore the minister of health with all the contents of this letter, but specifically I would like to point out that the capital region municipalities are writing to request, and they wish to ensure, that before any approval is given to the heartland transmission project, a comprehensive evaluation is completed that addresses need as well as economic, social, and environmental impacts on the capital region and its residents. They go on to make some other suggestions, but that's very important because it clearly indicates to me as one of the individuals that was copied on this letter that this group is not convinced, nor are they satisfied with the direction that Bill 50 is going to take this whole transmission and distribution of the electricity system in the province. They, too, have questions just like folks in other parts of the province have. I'm clear in my understanding that they are concerned about who is finally going to pay for these upgrades. If we can reduce the cost of the upgrades that have been forced on us because of the lack of long-term planning resulting directly from this government's misguided and mismanaged electricity deregulation program, then so be it. We've got to have some upgrades. Do we need $14 billion worth? Do we need to site generation, baseload generation capacity on the edge of the load, as the electrical engineers would say? Yes, I think we have to do that.

With Bill 50 who will benefit if this is built? Clearly, the individuals with their joint-venture projects out at Keephills will benefit. Will consumers benefit? I'm not so sure. The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti talked about his confidence in this bill and what it will mean to consumers. I don't share that confidence. I think consumers have been duped. They have been tricked by this government into thinking that electricity deregulation would improve competition and reduce costs. That has not happened.

I don't want to get off subject or get accused of being off subject, but how bad is energy deregulation? Well, a constituent came in this summer to our office and showed me his natural gas bill. He had been away for a period of a month, Mr. Speaker, and he had no energy consumed; not one lick of natural gas went through the meter. He didn't even have a pilot light turned on, but his bill was over $30. It was the D and T, distribution and transmission, costs. It was a gas bill, but it's also a reflection of our power bills.

Consumers tell me, Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, that they feel cheated because they don't understand all the line items on their power bill. Why has this person got their hand out and why has that person got their hand out at the end of each and every month wanting more and more of my money – that's scarce as it is – when I have to pay my power bill? The only thing we know for certain with Bill 50 is that they're going to see additional charges.

Now, the hon. member, I believe, said that it was going to be six bucks a month as the tab for consumers. I read in correspondence provided by other members of this House – and I'm going to get some copies and table it – that it was eight bucks.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of questions or comments. The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. If my memory serves me correctly, this hon. member in 2006 stood up in the House and questioned why we were proposing a power line from Edmonton to Calgary, suggesting that all the power was going to be exported to the United States. Then after a brownout or close to a brownout condition in Calgary in '07, he stood up and accused the government of poor planning on building lines. Just to be clear, I wonder if the hon. member could let us know, in 50 words or less, where he stands today.

Mr. MacDonald: I certainly would. Now, as the hon. minister knows, it has been our party's policy long before even the spying scandal in Rimbey happened – and I don't know if you were Solicitor General at the time, hon. minister, or not, but what happened was that we were encouraging generation to be built on the edge of the load. If the hon. minister could understand the power system in this province, he would realize that Calgary has been chronically short of electricity because of economic expansion and population growth for some time. We suggested that you don't have to go ahead with this cadillac line between Lake Wabamun and Langdon like the government wants to build. It's going to benefit AltaLink and TransAlta. I don't know whether TransAlta gave that hon. gentleman money during the election, but I know they didn't give this side any money, and he'd better be careful.

Thank you.

4:20

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member under 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to ask the hon. member. He's been doing a lot of research and looking at the purpose of these lines. In your estimation, because of the size of these high-voltage lines that they're wanting to put in on a short-distance span here in the province, do you believe that what they're really doing is planning and giving the go-ahead for a nuclear facility in the Grande Prairie area and, therefore, need that large line for export? Would you expand on that a little bit?

Mr. MacDonald: Well, certainly, hon. member. I thank you for that question. There's no doubt in my mind. You only have to look at the volumes of reports that have been put out by various organizations supporting this government's long-term economic plan, which is to export electricity from this province to markets as far away as California and Las Vegas. If we're not careful and we allow them, they will turn Alberta into the ashtray of North America. So we have to be very, very careful.

I'm not convinced that any nuclear reactors will ever be built, whether it's 1,000 or 2,000 megawatts, in Peace River, but I understand the proposal has been changed. If you look at the Alberta Electric System Operator's website, you will see in the anticipated projects page that they are talking about some nuclear reactors, significant in size, being built. I think they're going to be built over in Saskatchewan, east of Fort McMurray, because if you look at the latest long-term transmission systems plan . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, answer the questions within the time limit.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Yes. In terms of this north-south transmission my understanding is that two of the large coal-fired generators at the Wabamun plants are going to be shut down in the near future. Does it make sense to continue this north-south transmission, particularly when coal is becoming a less desirable way of generating power?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you. My recollection is, I believe, that the next coal-fired baseload generating station in Wabamun to be decommissioned is number 4. I think it's about 150 or 140 megawatts; I'm not quite sure. It is going to be decommissioned. Others have already been decommissioned. It's interesting to note that when we're talking about decommissioning costs, some of those costs, not around Wabamun, at least not yet, in other areas of the province have been transferred from the previous owners or operators of those facilities to the consumers. So that's interesting. I'm straying off the question that you did ask, but we have to watch for that as well.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to participate?

May I have your unanimous consent to revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly members of the MD of Pincher Creek council and their support staff, who are seated in the members' gallery. It's great that they ended up here for another meeting today because if we could only have them down on the floor to talk to this bill, they would tell you how much wind power is locked in. Their particular MD supplies 43 per cent of the wind power in Alberta at this time. Thank you for coming out. It's an apropos time to have you here. Please rise and receive the warm welcome.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (continued)

The Deputy Speaker: We now get back to Bill 50. The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and join the debate on Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. Bill 50 will introduce amendments that streamline the approval process for critical transmission infrastructure. "Critical" is the key word here. Bill 50 will not alter the standard approval process for all transmission lines. To be clear, there will still be a requirement for all transmission projects to go through extensive public consultation as part of the Alberta Utilities Commission's process. Rather, Bill 50 will identify critical projects that are necessary for the continued reliability of electrical transmission in this province. After all, Alberta's transmission system has not been upgraded for over 20 years. That is what is alarming. But there's no point on dwelling on this; rather, we must move forward.

Specifically, Bill 50 lists four critical key projects that will be needed by our transmission system. First, there's a need for high-voltage lines between Edmonton and Calgary. Second, there's a need for a new line between Edmonton and the heartland region.

Third, lines are needed between Edmonton and Fort McMurray. Finally, there's a need for the creation of a substation in south Calgary to help reinforce the southern half of the province.

Mr. Speaker, it's important to point out that these projects were identified as being critical by the Alberta Electric System Operator, or AESO. I believe that in Alberta we need a stable power system that will serve our needs now and well into the future. We don't need Band-aid solutions like small local systems or regional generation. Rather, we need a robust province-wide system that not only connects the north with the south but connects Alberta more closely with our neighbours, specifically through our expanded intertie system along our borders. We need a system that ensures reliability while positioning Alberta for future population growth, and we need a system that connects all Albertans with their choice of power provider, be it coal, natural gas, or increasingly green energy like solar and wind power.

I'm sure many of the members of this House are aware that my constituency of Cypress-Medicine Hat has the potential to hold some of the largest wind farms in Alberta. Southwest Alberta has already proven itself with the wind farms located there, and many companies in southeast Alberta are standing in line waiting for approval so that they can move forward as well. Wind energy is an affordable, renewable source of energy that should play a prominent role in Alberta's overall electricity and environmental strategies.

In addition, because Alberta is a deregulated power generation jurisdiction, all Albertans should have the choice to purchase this type of green energy. However, without a developed and expanded transmission system, consumers in the northern half of our province are unable to make that choice. This green power would simply be stuck near its generation sources and only available to a small portion of the population. Really, Mr. Speaker, that's not my idea of how a grid should officially operate.

Expanded transmission lines also have the potential to green Alberta's electrical grid by reducing line loss. Line loss is a significant concern plaguing our provincial grid. In fact, it's estimated that in 2008 alone over $220 million worth of energy was lost due to line loss. Of course, I'm speaking of our existing overloaded HVAC transmission lines. If you work the figures out, this is enough power to support 350,000 homes for one year. Essentially, upgrading our transmission lines system would reduce these losses and make sure that more of the electricity generated by our power plants – be they coal, natural gas, or wind – actually reach our homes and businesses.

Mr. Speaker, an expanded transmission system also has the advantage of increasing the reliability of our system, specifically through cross-provincial interties. As we all know, an intertie is a connection point linking our transmission system with the transmission system of another jurisdiction. Currently in Alberta we have only two interties, one with Saskatchewan and one with British Columbia. The Saskatchewan intertie is quite small, and the British Columbia intertie is old and overloaded. These interties are intended to help even out the spikes in our electricity needs. For example, in recent years Alberta has had several occasions where it needed more power than it could generate. In order to make up this shortage, Alberta purchased power from its neighbour to the west, British Columbia.

Really, to answer the point made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar earlier, expanding our transmission system would help to ensure that Alberta would have the power it needed without having to buy it from other jurisdictions. In addition, an expanded transmission system could also provide for expanding the amount of interties into our province to ensure that if we did need to buy power, the connections would be there.

4:30

Mr. Speaker, Bill 50 paves the way for a much-needed transmission system upgrade. It will streamline the bureaucracy around critical infrastructure needs while at the same time ensuring that there's adequate public consultation. Ultimately, I believe that Bill 50 will create an electrical system that is more efficient, more robust, and more environmentally friendly.

With that I'd like to extend my full support to Bill 50 and urge all my colleagues to do so with me. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a), hon. members. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member mentioned the needs process, and I just wonder if the hon. member is aware that under the current legislation AESO is obligated, as are the companies that operate in this province, if there's a critical situation to report that to the AUC. As of yesterday – I don't know about today – there have never been any documents filed to the AUC saying that there is a critical need to go forward. If in fact there was a critical need, are you saying that AESO is not in compliance with Alberta legislation that currently exists? Or are the needs really not there, and they're just wanting to bypass this so that they don't have to have a needs document anymore, and they're waiting for that and using that false pretense?

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, with regard to needs, I know the hon. member spoke earlier about the 2007 report that suggested that there was not a need there. Also, I had an opportunity to look at that report. I read it, and it was a Band-aid solution and certainly wasn't what Alberta needs in order to have a full gridded transmission system for the province.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On November 2 there was a field policy committee meeting where we heard some issues regarding transmission. One of the presenters name was Dan Balaban of Greengate Power, who indicated that three years from now and in the future a more integrated system will promote more wind power. I'm wondering if this member could comment on his views on that topic.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. An integrated system allows for this because, as everyone knows, wind power generation doesn't peak at 100 per cent at all times. It is variable. Even within the province you'll find a peak time in one area of the province, where perhaps it may be another day before the peak times in another area. If you have an integrated system that has transmission all across the province, you will not only have an opportunity when there are peaks in the southwest; you'll have the peaks in the southeast. Certainly, in other areas like Stettler and in the Provost area there are times when the wind hits there. There are opportunities and also companies who are standing there to put wind farms in so that all of these can be put into the system. You have to have a line in order to move the power someplace, and that's where the integration comes in.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat: exactly how does Medicine Hat keep their utilities costs so low at this present time, and how is this going to hit them because their jump is going to be huge?

Mr. Mitzel: I'd like to answer that for the hon. member. I think that if you look back in history, certainly because Medicine Hat has had their own system, it has been low, but it has been subsidized by taxes from the province. For the last few years they've been moving to market-based pricing, and that has increased now, so it's going to be market based. So there's not going to be that advantage at all.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Under 29(2)(a). I forget – and the hon. member can help me out – whether it was Mark Twain or Rudyard Kipling who talked about Medicine Hat having all hell for a basement. [interjection] It was Mark Twain. The point is that Medicine Hat has had a wonderful ride based on its geographic basement for some time, and the power costs and the ability to raise revenue locally, whether it's the school board or the hospital, has been considerably greater than any other district within the province. My concern is: are you not somewhat insulated within your own power production?

Mr. Mitzel: I think, Mr. Speaker, that you would call it fiscal responsibility.

In fact, it was Rudyard Kipling; it was not Mark Twain.

As far as the costs, the city of Medicine Hat certainly has its own power generation. It also has its own gas wells. In fact, that's why Medicine Hat is there. When they were drilling a water well, they found gas, and that's what prompted the first industry, that is still going in Alberta. The longest-standing industry in Alberta is still there, and that's a brick plant. That is because of the gas that was there.

It's a bit of geographics. That's the reason it happened for them. A lot happens because of geographics, whether it's water, whether it's where there are resources. We talk about the oil sands or whatever. Geographics determine the profitability, the prosperity of any particular area.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to speak on Bill 50. Bill 50 would bypass regulatory need identification hearings for transmission lines deemed critical by cabinet, and it will impose billions of dollars of costs on consumers without ensuring that the projects are even needed.

According to the Minister of Energy, the sponsor, the intent of the bill is that the bill will address major challenges of how to add critical transmission infrastructure facilities to meet the needs of Albertans and the needs of our province's economy. This bill will enhance the approval process for the projects. Under Bill 50 the government will approve the need for critical transmission infrastructure and the need for, not the actual routing or siting of, those issues. This bill will set out locations for a number of required electricity transmission projects. These include 500-kilowatt direct current lines between Edmonton and Calgary and 500-kV AC lines to the Industrial Heartland region. This bill will also remove the time limit for the winding up of the Balancing Pool.

Mr. Speaker, there are regulatory processes in place for a reason, and we need to enable the public's engagement – we need the public input; we need the public consultation – before we proceed with any big projects. Public input, public consultation is just not an inconvenience. There are consumers out there, there are stakeholders out there who are opposing this unnecessary, undemocratic, and unaccountable change to the regulatory system.

Maybe the regulatory system is a long way from being perfect, particularly regarding transmission hearings, but we shouldn't pretend that simply holding public needs hearings will make everything fine. We do not think the regulators are strong enough. We have criticized the regulators and the government in the recent past for spying on concerned citizens – this occurred in 2007 in central Alberta – and for limiting the ability of consumer advocates to participate in hearings. Nevertheless, ending public interest hearings for transmission lines does absolutely nothing to address these concerns. The solution to the problem is not to avoid it altogether. We should be making the regulatory system better and having good, effective needs hearings, not bypassing the system.

Prior to the deregulation, which started in 1996, Alberta's electrical system consisted of integrated companies, which generated, transmitted, and distributed electricity to consumers. These companies were monopolies in their particular areas, in northern Alberta, Alberta Power, ATCO; in southern Alberta, TransAlta; and a number of municipalities: Calgary, Edmonton, and Medicine Hat. The Energy and Utilities Board regulated these arrangements, managing them to ensure that the prices charged to the consumers by these monopolies were fair. With the advent of deregulation companies in Alberta were required to break their operations and to separate generation, distribution, and transmission functions.

4:40

Today's electricity transmission grid in Alberta is managed by the Alberta Electric System Operator, AESO, an independent, nonprofit body. The transmission system is managed in the public interest as a natural monopoly and within the wider context of the deregulated electricity system, with private companies generating power and private companies selling it to the consumers.

AESO develops a long-term plan for our transmission system, which currently forms a key part of the regulatory process and needs hearings. In 2007 AESO put together a 10-year transmission plan, which listed that 3 and a half billion dollars in transmission needs were for the entire 10-year period. As we hit 2009, all of a sudden it's $14 billion to $20 billion. This projection is dramatically different from the projected needs from 2007.

Sure, Mr. Speaker, the transmission lines are required to get electricity from generation facilities to consumers, and demand tends to be located in the urban areas along with key industrial facilities. Although the largest facilities such as the oil sands, upgraders, and processing plants tend to have their own generation on-site, that demand is projected to increase steadily over the coming years.

Mr. Speaker, as the provincial population expands, energy and intense industry drive the economy. Over time the mix of generation sources, the location of demand, and the amount of demand changes. The electrical grid will need to be expanded and replaced. We know that there has been no significant addition to the transmission grid for over 10 years, so the grid we have, certainly, is not built probably for the current demand.

But the debate is not about the aging transmission lines or our rotting wire poles or the system in shambles. We're not going to have blackouts and brownouts. We haven't had any, and if there were any blackouts or brownouts, you know, that was just the mismanagement of the government, not because of the system. So all this fearmongering that we're freezing in the dark and we're freezing in the cold I think is too far-fetched.

The key point here is the cost, the money we're going to spend on these transmission systems. Sure, there is a naturally aging system that needs to be addressed, but with the new transmission coming online, that needs to be connected to a demand, particularly when it comes to wind power. The uncertainty is around where the lines should be built, how many there should be, and when we should build them.

Perhaps the key factor is the cost. Under Alberta law transmission costs are entirely borne by the consumer, and the generators do not pay their share of the cost. So if the generators were to pay their share of the cost, you know, maybe things would be different. Here they want to have a gold-plated transmission system because they don't have to pay. Thus, it is not a surprise when generators are strong supporters of these transmission lines because it's not going to cost them any money. It will be the Alberta consumer who will be paying, but it allows the same generators to get their product, electricity, to more markets.

Those transmission lines are paid for by Albertans. Residential consumers will bear 17 per cent of the costs, farmers 3 per cent, commercial 26 per cent, and industrial 54. So while we will pay the residential share right away – and this is about $8 that the government is stating will be on every monthly bill – all the other segments will pass their costs on to consumers, too: the restaurants, the hockey rinks, car washes. The money for these lines has to come from somewhere, and that somewhere will eventually be the consumer. The consumer will be paying more at the restaurant, will be paying more at the hockey rinks, will be paying more at the car washes.

This bill sets out three sets of transmission lines that it deems to be critical infrastructure. There would be no public interest hearing on these lines and the process that would normally take place under the Alberta Utilities Commission's regulatory system. This is because the government deems these lines to be so critical that they feel there's no doubt about the fact that the lines are in the public interest, but we have to hear it from the public if they are in the public interest or not.

The two high-voltage direct current lines between Edmonton and Calgary, one to the west of the cities and the other to the east, would create a massive backbone of electrical system between the two main centres of the province, but current transmission between the two cities would be troubled by the construction of these lines, and according to the briefing by AESO most power will be flowing south from large coal-fired generators around Edmonton to Calgary. AESO's explanation of the construction of two new lines rather than just one is that the rating of transmission capacity is based on the capacity of the second-highest line, the backup in case of transmission failure in the biggest line. If the second one isn't big as well, the system rating will be lower.

Another issue here is that high-voltage direct current is a relatively new technology, and it's not clear whether it is even the most appropriate technology for this particular use. For example, AESO's planning document says that DC for overhead lines is generally more economic than AC when the transmission distance is greater than 700 kilometres. If the DC technology is more economic only over 700 kilometres, then it is unclear why the 300-kilometre distance between Edmonton and Calgary is economically appropriate currently for DC lines. So why are we spending money on DC lines when AC lines are cheaper? Why is the government forcing through these DC lines when AESO's own document states that longer distances are required for DC technology to be economical?

It should also be noted that the government has already given two companies direction to apply for construction approval for these two lines between Edmonton and Calgary. On August 25, 2009, Alberta Energy released a news release stating that two companies had been cleared to apply for approval to construct and operate new critical electrical transmission lines between Edmonton and Calgary.

The government appears to be trying to get a head start on the part of the AUC hearing process that would remain even if Bill 50 passes such as specific siting and environmental assessment for transmission lines on a high-voltage alternating current line going from the south of Edmonton to the new substation in the Industrial Heartland. This particular line is controversial above and beyond the approval process issues discussed in this bill.

Residents now in Edmonton who live near the proposed line route have been exceedingly outspoken in their opposition to the lines as currently designed. These residents would like to see any new transmission lines buried rather than running above ground in the transportation utility corridor. They are concerned about the health issues that may arise and also the impact on their property values. So is the government planning to bury this line underground? We don't have long before the timeline in the AESO planning document, so the government must have a decision on this. How much is it going to cost? Will it be done underground, or will it be above ground? Those are the questions I think should be answered.

4:50

AESO predicts that these projects will cost $5.7 billion. When adding already approved transmission lines to the new wind power developments in southern Alberta, the total cost will be $8.1 billion. With the second phase of critical infrastructure that AESO is looking at within the next 10 years, the lines into northern and northwest Alberta, interties with B.C. and northern Saskatchewan, under this bill would automatically be considered as critical infrastructure.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, we have 29(2)(a). The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the last part of the hon. member's speech I heard him ask questions about decisions on whether the lines would be built above ground or underground and what the cost implications of that would be and the need for a quick decision on that piece. I'm just wondering if the hon. member could advise whether he understands that those sorts of decisions are still subject to public hearings by the Alberta Utilities Commission with respect to routing of lines, with respect to whether they're built above ground or underground and those sorts of decision-making. Is he aware that it's still in the purview of the Alberta Utilities Commission to have public hearings and make those decisions?

Mr. Kang: How long, you know, will that process last, the public hearings? Is there a time frame put on that? That's the question I ask, Minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm supposed to be asking him the questions. But I'm more than happy to indicate that the Alberta Utilities Commission sets its own time frames with respect to the public hearings process. Perhaps that would help him understand, then, the need for moving ahead quickly now with the critical infrastructure decision so that the Alberta Utilities Commission can get on with its process and that all the other public consultation processes can happen before a build actually starts, some two or three or perhaps four years out, that it's very necessary to start the process now by dispensing with the need for even more public consultation than the 374 meetings that the Minister of Energy referred to earlier and get on with making that decision on critical need that Bill 50 does so that the Utilities Commission can get on with its siting and cost and above ground and below ground and all those other things that are the Utilities Commission's purview.

The Deputy Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to use 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Kang: Well, I think that under Bill 19 the government already has the power to acquire those lands for the utility corridors. My concern is: will this erode the power of the Alberta Utilities Commission to hold hearings, you know, when we put the word "critical" in there? That's the concern I have, sir.

The Deputy Speaker: You still have two and a half minutes, hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would submit to the hon. member that the clear reading of the bill – there's a question of being the determination with respect to what's critical infrastructure. Making that determination, anywhere in the bill that I read, doesn't detract at all from the power and the mandate that the Alberta Utilities Commission has to have public hearings to determine siting. Once the siting is determined, of course you have to assemble land, and Bill 19 might come into effect then. But there's nothing here that I see that detracts from the power and the mandate. The purpose of the Alberta Utilities Commission, with respect, is to determine the best route and what goes into the build, whether it's above ground or below ground, for example.

Mr. Kang: Well, section 17(2), when we change section 17 and add (2), gives the power to the government to do away with that hearing process. That's plain and clear in this, sir.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to use 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod on the bill.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to rise today in the Assembly today to speak on second reading of Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act. As we've been discussing today, Alberta's electricity transmission system is aging, congested, inefficient, and undersized. In addition, our transmission system is working at or near its capacity for extended periods of time. In fact, due to inefficiencies within Alberta's transmission system, as was mentioned earlier, $220 million worth of electricity was lost in 2008. We've already heard that that's enough to power 350,000 homes a year. For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Electric System Operator, or AESO, has determined that there is a need for new transmission facilities across the province. Let me repeat that. They've determined that there is a need.

This is a good thing. It is good because it reflects the economic prospects of this province. We all know that today we are still in the midst of an economic downturn. However, it is recognized that Alberta's future is strong and that we will recover from this economic slowdown in the most enviable position in North America. Strong economic recovery does not happen by accident. This government had a plan in years past which led to the elimination of our provincial debt, put billions in savings, and substantially built up our financial assets. In addition, our low tax regime has made it known world-wide that Alberta is among the best places to invest and live. It is because of the planning and the vision of this government in years past that we are in a position today to prosper now and into the future.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Because of this economic growth projected over the next few decades, we need to make sure that we have the electrical infrastructure in place to allow for our economy to continue to prosper and expand. Bill 50, Mr. Speaker, does just that by determining the future need – let's be clear again: the future need – for the development of specific electrical infrastructure, which is of particular importance in my own constituency of Livingstone-Macleod. My constituency and most of southwestern Alberta enjoy the warm chinook winds that compress and collect energy as they rush down the eastern slopes. This natural process is a huge advantage to the wind energy industry as it provides an ideal geographic location for wind energy developments.

Wind energy developments are developed where the wind is. You can't develop them where there isn't any wind. It won't do much for you. In fact, the Canada Wind Energy Association regards this area as one of the nation's strongest wind power regions in the country. This has led to the development of numerous wind energy projects across the southwest region of Alberta. For example, McBride Lake wind farm south of Fort Macleod is one of the largest wind farms in Canada, containing 114 turbines, which provide approximately 75 megawatts of electricity. In total this wind farm will produce about 235,000 megawatt hours per year of electricity, enough energy to power more than 32,000 homes annually. Also, Mr. Speaker, the Pincher Creek area in my constituency is known as the wind energy capital of Canada due to the significant wind energy developments around that location. All across southwestern Alberta wind energy has been providing green jobs and green power.

In the past 15 years, Mr. Speaker, we have seen a fivefold increase in wind power capacity in southern Alberta. One key element for this increase is the open market that has allowed for these sectors to grow. This open market has allowed for the most modern and technically advanced wind farms in the world. For example, the 300 kilowatt wind turbines that used to be visible on the skyline 15 years ago are now being replaced by much larger three megawatt turbines. Within a short time we have seen one windmill being able to produce 10 times more energy than in the past.

5:00

The open market in Alberta has also attracted many new suppliers to the market. Fifteen years ago we had three utility companies dominating that market. Today there are dozens of new suppliers, and the market itself has over 200 participants, many of which focus on wind power and other forms of green energy. It has become a stable added source of income for landowners as well as municipalities. An example of some quarter sections that I was familiar with in the MD of Willow Creek at a time in the past were taxed at less than $100 per quarter per year. Now that municipality is receiving 20 times to 30 times that per tower on the quarter section along with the quarter section tax. In some cases there are up to two or three towers on a quarter section. That's quite a significant difference, and with that come the related jobs.

However, Mr. Speaker, the transmission lines in southwestern Alberta are at capacity, which has prevented the development of further wind energy projects. We heard about two weeks ago at a policy field committee meeting that one of the most vocal opponents to Bill 50 had also intervened to block the 240-kilovolt line currently under construction in southern Alberta. This was clearly done in a self-interest or to block wind power from reaching the market, not in the interest of a competitive marketplace for electricity or in the interest of utilizing more green power or providing the best-cost electricity to the consumers. Creating more transmission capacity will encourage new suppliers that can deliver power to Albertans.

The projects outlined in Bill 50, such as the proposed south reinforcement project, would allow for new suppliers to enter this market. The south reinforcement project would create two new double-circuit 240-kilovolt lines along with a new 500-kilovolt substation in southern Alberta. That reinforcement would increase the ability for wind farms to connect to the provincial power system. We currently have the Piikani Nation lands, with vast wind power development potential and with that creation of good, stable jobs, plus new power generation stream for their people, but sadly there is no capacity on the transmission system without more reinforcement of the southern grid.

Mr. Speaker, we need to be able to introduce new power support, new participants, and encourage efficiencies. However, in order to achieve these objectives, we need to pass Bill 50. Bill 50 will allow the Alberta government to approve the need – once again: the need – for critical transmission infrastructure that AESO has determined. Bill 50 will also still allow for the AUC to conduct more public consultation. In fact, between 2007 and 2009 AESO carried out over 300 public consultations and open houses on various proposals to develop and expand the transmission system. These consultations saw over 2,000 landowners, stakeholders, and members of the general public participate. The public consultations are crucial in developing new transmission lines, and they will continue. Bill 50 will also support the future prosperity of Alberta as well as the current prosperity of Alberta.

For these reasons I support this important bill, and I urge all members of the Assembly here to stand in support of the future power supply for all Albertans and Bill 50. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod mentioned that there was a $250 million line loss. I'm just wondering if he's aware that the standard line loss is around 7 per cent in even new constructed AC lines, which we are going to continue to run. How is spending and putting in these expensive HVDC lines going to help us in the fact that we're running right now less than 4 per cent line loss in actuality when you look backwards? I do agree with the hon. member that with the south reinforcement line, yes, there is a need there, but we still have a process under the AUC to bring forward those needs, and AESO hasn't made that application to AUC.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. Thank you to the member across the floor. First off, I would point out to him that I said $220 million worth of line loss, not $250 million. In that correction I would also say that I guess we would need more cost analysis studies brought forward from your perspective to show me that and prove that fact that you're mentioning.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just two quick questions. I note that old plans by the AESO and other things already showed the south substation being built without the cadillac upgrades to the backbone of the system. I was wondering if you could comment on these additional costs that the cadillac system provides.

Another thing. I was wondering, since you've had your members here today from Pincher Creek, whether you've had a chance to discuss with them sort of incentives like Texas is doing to incent the wind market and like Ontario is doing and how you're going to incorporate those existing incentives with what's been happening.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. That's an interesting question. It has a couple of points. I'll go to the second one first. Now, I can't quote exactly how much is approved that is not able to get built to the transmission lines currently, but there's a significant amount of wind power generation that has been approved throughout my constituency of Livingstone-Macleod. It needs no incentive, hon. member. The wind is where it is. To take advantage of it, you have to build in that area. There are permitted operations that are not able to be built because there's no capacity to move that. Now, does that take a cadillac system? I don't know. Moving power is moving power.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Additional questions? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm just wondering if you can talk to me about the rationale of bringing coal-fired power down to your wind-rich area and the loss of power in the process. Does it not make sense for your wind energy to connect to your local towns and cities such as Lethbridge rather than bringing it all the way down from Wabamun and the line loss associated with it?

Mr. Berger: Well, that's an interesting perspective, once again, because I was trying to move wind power north. I guess that in your estimation we would only be moving coal power south. It takes a mixture to have a balanced power pool to draw on so that we do not suffer any brownouts. Wind power is not one hundred per cent consistent. You do have to have backup. I think you would understand that.

I would say that in Alberta right now, out of all the power that is generated by wind, 72 per cent of it comes from the two municipalities within my Livingstone-Macleod constituency. Just for the . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. We're going to move forward.

Mr. Hinman: The hon. member started off his speech by saying that our system was aged. I was wondering if he could bring forward some documents on the age. Many of the houses in this province are over 20 years old, and it's not critical to replace them. I'm wondering if he could bring some documents forward on the age.

I'll be happy to provide the documents showing the line loss to him later on.

Mr. Berger: Apparently, I probably could. I don't have those with me right now, obviously. But I would like to ask the member across the floor who now represents Calgary-Glenmore: does he know how much wind power is actually generated in his former constituency? I'm sure he doesn't, but I'd like to know that because it's locked in as well.

Mr. Hinman: I'd appreciate answering that. The actual numbers aren't at the tip of my hand, but I know that those lines – and I already said to you, sir, that the southern reinforcement lines are needed. That's a totally different idea than putting two high-voltage direct current lines in the middle of this province, where there is no need. To spend billions of dollars on that and declare it a critical situation isn't appropriate, and it's not in the Alberta taxpayers' best interest, and we need to realize that. Where do we need to build it? Yes, where the power is, and then bring it forward from there. Those high-voltage lines are excessive. The university of . . .

The Speaker: Unfortunately and alas, the time has expired for this little exchange.

Now, the next speaker that I have on my list is the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, who must explain – you want to sub? Okay. Calgary-Buffalo, then.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and sorry about the little bit of confusion.

It is again, as always, an honour and a privilege to get up and speak in this House, and today it's about this contentious Bill 50. I believe it's contentious for a reason. You know, although some people aren't as appreciative of the fact that the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity has a teaching background, I am because today I learned another interesting fact from him, which was that under Alberta law the costs of putting up transmission things are entirely borne by the consumer. This decision was made, apparently, in the '90s by a former member of this House, Mr. Murray Smith, who contravened an EUB decision which said something to the effect of: some of it should be borne by the producer, and some of it should be borne by the user. I didn't know that, so I appreciate the fact that I learned this today from the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity because it helps me with where I'm going in today's debate.

5:10

Since all of the costs are now borne by the consumer, we in this House should be concerned with what the consumer has to say. This should not only go to where we can put these transmission lines, whether we can have a hearing to hear whether we can move a transmission line 25 metres around a barn or perhaps a Quonset or perhaps a settlement nearby or something like that. Since the consumers are bearing the costs of this, they should have an opportunity to speak on whether they actually need this power.

Guess what? We had a perfect system that decided this, and this was called the Alberta Utilities Commission. At the Alberta Utilities Commission I believe what this government set up was a tribunal or a panel that dealt with hearing complaints made by both individuals and experts, where they could look at all the submissions made and hear the information presented in a reasonable fashion and make a decision on whether the taxpayer, the end consumer, actually needs the power and whether or not the power generator actually needed that market to be provided. I think it was a fair balance that recognized both the need, if there was, for producing power and the need, then, for the consumer to pay for it. It was a balance that we had struck between these two groups as to hearing the complaint.

What has happened now is that under Bill 50, or what is being put before this House, the Alberta Utilities Commission are no longer deemed the experts. You know who's deemed the experts? It's the cabinet. It's Premier Stelmach. It's the minister of health, it's the Minister of Education, it's the minister of finance who have deemed themselves experts in what Alberta's citizens need and the amount of transportation need and the amount of system-to-be-built need. I don't know. It hasn't been proven to me. Despite cabinet's credentials I don't necessarily see them as being experts on transmission lines. Maybe I'm being short-sighted in this, but I would hazard a guess that even the minister of health would grant me that they are not experts on transmission lines.

With that being the rationale, I can't help but be a little bit worried that this body is now taking away the power from the Alberta Utilities Commission and the power from Alberta citizens to voice their opinions to that body and is making the decision behind closed doors. I just can't help but say that it seems a little bit wonky or a little bit backwards that we are doing it in this fashion.

Let's take a look. I think one of the reasons we set up the Alberta Utilities Commission was to remove the political influence from this decision-making because we all know that governments can be influenced by special-interest groups, by big business, by whomever out there, and they can be strong-armed into maybe making decisions that might not be in the public interest.

We had a bit of a discussion here today in question period on that, on some of this influence. We had AltaLink, who was a sponsor of a recent Progressive Conservative convention, and EPCOR, you know, and some of these other companies. I'm not saying that it happened, but, you know, it leads the average Joe and Jane Albertan to say that, well, the timing of this and given that this Bill 50 is out there and given that the government is all of a sudden changing the rules in the middle of the game – it leads people to maybe think that something is up. I'm not suggesting that anything is, but it just leads people to believe that. I don't like it when politicians change the rules in the middle of the game. It appears like this is what is happening here. I would have preferred to have seen this go through the process that was set up. It would have allowed us to go forward with both expert and lay opinions alike and hear the opinions.

I'd also like to comment on some of the changes that are going to be coming to the Alberta landscape. These have to do with a smart grid. It's my understanding that in the very near future a smart grid is going to enable the end consumer to deal with a lot less power than they are currently using. It's by technologies that are right around the corner that can be implemented in the grid and can be put into place. Estimates are that the average household will be using at least one-half to two-thirds of the power they're currently using. Then with this technology out there – and it comes from some fairly credible sources, some scientific sources out of the United States that have been published in journals that say that this is going to be out there – it begs the question: why do we need this cadillac model?

I think that the reason for this cadillac model is because producers or generators of power, possibly people like some of the people involved, like AltaLink, like ATCO, who I believe have some shares in certain power arrangements that are going to be going up in the process and all of this stuff, want to get these transmission lines built to export power. Why not? The cost of this is being borne by the taxpayer. It's not being borne by the business unit, the people who are going to derive the profits from this. So why not? It's a great opportunity.

AltaLink: "Yeah, let's build the cadillac system. Yeah, let's do that. Of course we want this to happen because – guess what? – we don't have to pay for it. Guess what? You know, we'll tell the Alberta taxpayer their bill might only go up $8 a month from this, but when it's all said and done, it could go up more. We've heard estimates that it could be $200. Really, who cares? By then the transmission line is built, we're going to be exporting our power, our shareholders will be happy, and all of that stuff. Really, that's the taxpayers' problem."

Now, I'm hopeful that that doesn't happen, but I'm thinking that if I'm AltaLink and these other organizations, I'm going to be pretty excited to have these things going on and to have the government or the cabinet make this decision for me. Again, I think big business is going to be happy with this decision, but I don't know if the Alberta taxpayer is going to be happy with this decision at the end of the day. I go back to the fact that that's why we had the Alberta Utilities Commission there in the first place: to guard whether it's big-business interests or Joe and Jane Albertan's interests as to what is happening here in Alberta.

I think that process is being undermined here, the traditional voice where people can go and say what they want at these hearings and hire experts. I'm telling you that it wouldn't be easy to host all these hearings on when power plants were going in or whether they were needed or not. It wouldn't be easy, but at least people would have a voice. Sure, this process may get it off the books by Christmas and say that you had your opportunity and that it was a decision that was made and yada yada yada, and we move on. But is the easier decision always the correct one? In this instance I don't think so. I think that the people of Alberta are not going to be well served by it.

I thank you for giving me the opportunity to speak to this bill, and we'll move on from here.

5:20

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. There being no activity, then the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been an interesting topic in my constituency. I have a pretty large load with the newsprint mill, the pulp mills, the sawmills, and medium-density fibreboard mills and a lot of concerns because all of those forest industries right now are operating on tight margins and are having difficulty staying in business. So a lot of concerns have come to me, specifically from Ron Stern, the CEO and president of Alberta Newsprint, located just outside of Whitecourt within Woodlands county. He asked some very pointed questions, and I need the help of the minister to get some clarification on some of those statements. Maybe later on in the minister's statements or in Committee of the Whole he can clarify what Mr. Stern asked me.

Before I ask the question, I want to read to you part of a letter that Mr. Stern wrote. He states:

Energy is our single largest cost. In 2008, [Alberta Newsprint] consumed 825,000 MWH of electricity. The increase would mean an additional cost of over $12,000,000 per year or $50 per tonne [to the] newsprint production . . . These electricity rate increases would transform us from a low cost producer to a high cost producer.

This huge increase will imperil Alberta Newsprint's viability and that of numerous other industrial firms that utilize large amounts of energy . . .

While we can speak with certainty about the impact of such a cost increase for the viability of our business, we can only raise very serious questions about the wisdom of the proposed massive expenditure. While we accept that some transmission enhancements are required . . .

And he states that he's not against transmission enhancements, that they are required.

. . . based on the advice we have received and reviewing AESO publications we are, among other matters, not satisfied that . . . the lowest long-term cost solutions have been properly evaluated and selected.

He asked me: will a ratepayer oversight committee have an opportunity or role in going forward? So I'd like some clarification from the minister on that.

The other point that Mr. Stern makes, and he offers a suggestion:

The single circuit 500 kV AC transmission facility between the Edmonton and Calgary regions [could] be built with direct current towers and wired to allow for future DC operation. Any reconfiguration to DC operation will be linked to key milestones and will provide for inverter stations to be added on an as needed basis.

So he's talking about a staged idea. Again, if the minister can clarify whether a staging of Mr. Stern's suggestion would make sense or could be considered through this bill.

I think, secondly, like most issues, Mr. Speaker, it comes down to dollars and cents and who pays. Mr. Stern and others in my constituency are concerned: who pays? He writes again:

If the undertaking contemplated by Bill 50 is to proceed, then preserving a multitude of jobs across a variety of industries in Alberta must be an important factor in defining who pays for the $14 billion cost of that undertaking. Alberta's industrial users simply cannot afford . . . and should not be required to pay for transmission capacity that may not be needed until decades from now.

He asks: can a more equitable sharing of costs and benefits be developed if the economic base of Alberta is to be preserved and broadened?

I guess that's the issue that I struggle with. I want to make sure that the vision premium in this bill – you know, can we build for a decade, or can we build for two decades? – is something that we can do while ensuring that Alberta's only newsprint mill remains open and competitive. Companies like Millar Western in Whitecourt, that has been a family business since 1921: can they continue to be competitive? West Fraser, an operation just outside of my community and within Woodlands county, a massive investment in a modern sawmill, medium-density fibreboard, are competing against companies all over the world, and some of those companies that they're competing with have very low-cost energy.

I guess the concerns from my constituents are simple. We know that if the transmission system wasn't upgraded and wasn't built back in the '60s and '70s to allow these companies to locate, we wouldn't have had the prosperity that we do in my constituency. They understand the need to plan the system; they understand the need to have a good, robust transmission policy and a grid, a grid that's intertwined into neighbouring provinces, maybe even intertwined, like the Member for Livingstone-Macleod talked about, into the U.S. so we can get some of their power up into Alberta. Nobody is arguing those points.

I think it comes down to the simple question of who pays? Can we keep that Alberta advantage going within my constituency, within an industry that's very tight today? I hope that the minister can cover off those points so I can go home this weekend and give them the assurance that, yes, the lights will remain on, yes, we'll remain competitive, and this bill will allow them to keep operating with a profit margin, which is good, and will allow them to make the necessary investments in their mills to remain competitive over the next decade or two.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. member, before we go to 29(2)(a), there were several quotations from a document, that I hope the member will be prepared to table in the House tomorrow at the appropriate time.

Mr. VanderBurg: I have the necessary copies.

The Speaker: Okay. You can do that tomorrow, then.
Standing Order 29(2)(a) now.

Mr. Chase: Very quickly, a comment rather than a question. I appreciate the questions that you asked, and I, too, and members of this caucus are looking for those answers. I think Albertans in general are looking for that sort of assurance that there is some thought behind this.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, do you wish to participate?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, it was a comment. I can tell the member that, you know, I had the opportunity to work on pieces of the transmission policy. I do understand that we are one of the poorest interconnected jurisdictions in North America as far as being able to rely on our neighbours' strengths and weaknesses so we can share generation and share time and maybe shave some of the peak. I do understand his concerns, and I think I made my points very clearly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne for bringing to the House here an actual situation where things are put in jeopardy if things aren't done correctly. I think that's exactly what everybody in this House that has been speaking against this bill has been trying to address. Under the old system the Alberta Utilities Commission would go through a needs process and such advocates of that can go forward and show that and balance it out. I believe we're making a major error, and I don't want to compromise the good member's situation, but by taking that needs process out and putting it into the minister's decision, we've bypassed a system that has worked and served well, as you said, to develop your own area years ago. Would you be able to comment on that at all?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, I understand the comment that the member has made, but I also understand that we've had lots of consultation with Albertans. We've had hearings all over this great province about the need to expand our transmission system, about the need to talk about local distribution, and the need to tie in wind power and tie in all forms of energy. But it's time to get to work. You know, we can have hearing over hearing over hearing. We've created a cottage industry that goes to hearings and fills out a form for expenses. I don't think that's what we ever envisioned when we talked about a well-communicated system that moves on and allows us to build.

Thank you, sir.

5:30

Mr. Hinman: I guess I'd have to agree that we don't want the cottage industry, but to take away that needs process, Mr. Speaker, takes the experts out of the situation. Not just public consultation – that's fine – but to actually have a process where people can appeal if, in fact, they haven't been able to put forth their needs and applications. That's the problem with this bill. It's basically taking it out, it's centralizing the power and the decision-making into the minister's office, and it isn't going to serve the best needs, necessarily, of Albertans. But it may be for those companies that want to have the ability to expand their power lines.

The Speaker: Hon. member, would you like to comment?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, given the time that we have, I can say that I believe the need has been discussed very thoroughly in the province of Alberta: the need for a robust transmission system, the need for the system to be able to accommodate growth. I think this year alone we've had 50,000 new Albertans come to our province. You know, they'll come here looking for work, looking to turn their lights on when they go home at night, looking for an industry that has the surety that the power will remain on. I think all that need has been determined.

The Speaker: Others to participate?

Then I'll call on the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East with some degree of reluctance.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes. Certainly, I owe you an apology and an apology to the House because I did not ensure that I was available for 29(2)(a), which followed up from yesterday afternoon. So I do apologize for that.

The other time that I actually missed by not being in the House was when the Minister of Health and Wellness and the minister of finance got back to me so quickly with answers to my questions. I guess I'm going to have to pay a little more attention to what I'm doing.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I assume that I may go forward?

The Speaker: Proceed.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. This is a very interesting bill. I sat on municipal council when the deregulation went through the first time around for electricity, and it was very, very confusing. We thought we understood what was happening, and the next thing we knew, the rules were all changed again. I think it took years – I'm going to say at least two years – before it finally ironed itself out where, in fact, not only the people like me, who are certainly not electrical engineers, really understood what was happening. We have very knowledgeable people at the city of Lethbridge, and they struggled with how this was actually shaking down. But in the end the prices went up.

Deregulation is not good for taxpayers. One of the areas in deregulation was, as I say, the deregulation of electricity. I think that, clearly, we have to know that wasn't very successful. The deregulation of long-term care has been less than successful. The deregulation that allowed asset-backed commercial paper into this province I think was exceptionally not successful.

Having said that about deregulation, probably whether we like it or not, it is here. I'd like to perhaps go back and wish that we were in the past because when I speak to people in Manitoba, my family in Quebec, they are appalled at what we pay for electricity, and they're appalled at the fact that we don't own our own utilities and that we will get no return as a citizen of this province when we have to start paying the full cost. There was nothing wrong with half-and-half. There was nothing wrong with companies getting half and us getting half.

One of the other things that we could think about is that I believe that in the future – in fact, it might only be a matter of time – these lines will be bundled and sold, and who will buy them? Will they be people from China, India, Saudi Arabia, the U.S.A.? Who knows who will own these lines that we, the citizens of Alberta, will continue to pay for? I don't have problems if those lines are bundled and sold although I think we have to look at the mess that the subprime mortgage in the States created by bundling things to sell to other groups. I don't have a problem if the lines are sold, but I do have a problem that as a citizen of Alberta I'm not going to get some return. I believe that I should. I think that we could go to the table and be a shareholder and run it as a business. There's no reason that we as citizens of this province should not be shareholders in what's going on in our own province.

We will be getting electricity. Yes, we will. We will be getting heat, which will be based on the electricity that has to blow the fans to get the heat through our houses. But at what cost? What cost to the citizens of this province will these transmission lines be? Will we lose companies to Saskatchewan? Yes, we will lose companies to Saskatchewan. Will we lose people to Saskatchewan or B.C., or will people return to some of the other provinces that they came from? I believe that they will.

The other deep concern I have is that we do see the joblessness going up in this province. We do see people who have marginal jobs, people who often could live at least a decent lifestyle by working in telephone centres. They did the collections for local companies. They may be doing classifieds for newspapers. They may, in fact, even be selling insurance for someone like perhaps Sun Life. Those jobs, Mr. Speaker, are disappearing rapidly. They are disappearing to the Philippines, they are going to India, and they are going to Taiwan. Where are these people going to find jobs? My concern is that if they don't have a job and they are struggling, when their electricity bills go up, they're going to be struggling even more.

Seniors. We are encouraging seniors to stay in their homes as long as possible. As Murray Smith pointed out in his, I thought, very arrogant and condescending manner where he said, "Wear sweaters," trust me; the seniors are now wearing sweaters. They are wearing them already. Is the next question, the next remark, "Wear two sweaters and long johns"? No. That is not what we should be saying to our seniors, people on fixed incomes, or those that work in marginal jobs that often have to work two jobs just to be able to exist. So I think there's a number of social questions that are around these transmission lines.

I've basically spoken about the residential side of things, and I don't think it's only a serious concern for the residential. I think that we're looking at industry. I think that we're looking at, as the speaker ahead of me has pointed out, small business. Our businesses are going to suffer, especially those that have very, very tight margins at this point in time. I think we can probably extrapolate that to some of our farm operations as well. It's going to weigh heavily on industry. It's increasing their operating costs.

5:40

The following that I'm going to quote is from a white paper by the Industrial Power Consumers Association of Alberta, a group that uses approximately 35 per cent of the province's electricity in different sections, including gas and oil.

As it is currently established, Bill 50 will result in power costs that limit new oil and gas project viability and force other industries to relocate to jurisdictions where electricity is much more cost-competitive. If Bill 50 passes without modifications, large-scale Alberta industry will look to self-generate electricity, leaving residential and commercial consumers to pay for a considerably larger portion of this new and largely unnecessary transmission infrastructure.

I think that for people in Manitoba, Ontario, and certainly in Nelson, B.C., their dream is to get off the grid: please, let us get off the grid. I think we are going to see more and more of this kind of thinking. All we have to do is look to Ontario where the fellow has taken his farm – and I don't remember the exact number of acres that he has taken out of creating food to make a solar farm. He lives off the grid, on top of which he sells back to the grid. I think we're going to see more and more of these innovative, local kinds of ability to make electricity. In California many, many people have solar panels on their garages. The idea is to get off the grid, and now we are trying to make this huge monster grid. And I think it's pretty clear that what we're doing is creating a grid for export.

One of the things where perhaps I got the idea that these lines, of course, will be bundled and sold in time is the MATL line that is running from Lethbridge to Great Falls, where, in fact, they say the electricity created by wind farms in both Canada and the United States will go back and forth. I don't think that's probably true for a minute. I think it'll all be going south. But the point is that that line was sold three times before a shovel even hit the ground. In fact, it's still before the courts whether they're going to go ahead. There's a new wrinkle in how the people are trying to fight that MATL line. [interjection] As my hon. colleague has pointed out, it's in the hands of the lawyers, so I'm sure that it will not be simple. I'm sure that once we've got the lawyers in there, it'll become so complex that they can probably hash around this for a long time.

One of the interesting things that they have brought forward, the argument that was used, is that this is for the public good; therefore, we should be able to go in and take your land for the public good. But the argument is that the profit is not to the public. The profit is to a private company. So the question is: does a private company, whose profits will go straight to them, have the right to take public land and call it the public good?

Mr. Liepert: Shame.

Ms Pastoor: That's right. I totally agree with the Minister of Health and Wellness. It is a shame. Shame, shame, shame. [interjection]

I didn't hear that, but by the way one of my other colleagues is laughing, I have to assume it was clever.

One of the examples that I could use from the last deregulation fiasco, in my mind, is my electrical bill from my cabin. Prior to deregulation if I didn't use any electricity – i.e., I turned it off at the pole – I wasn't charged for it. I still turn the electricity off at the pole – I'm not using electricity – and my bill is now $30 a month. So thank you for deregulation. My bill went up, and I'm not really getting anything. However, the nice young lady at the end of the telephone, when I complained about that, said that I was paying for the poles and the wires. I wanted to explain to her, but I realized that she was far too young to understand that, in fact, I owned the pole and I owned the wires, which I put in 40 years ago. That argument didn't stand. However, I'm still paying the $30.

When I look at my own bill, my city bill, I'm paying $4 for electricity, and I'm paying another $22 for the three companies that have been created through deregulation that all need a profit, which is why these bills have gone up.

I'm not sure just where this is all going to end up. I think that, clearly, the numbers are here and that this will pass through. They've assured us that we'll be having public hearings. I'm not sure, after some of the other things that have happened in public hearings, that I particularly trust that process.

Some of the other questions I think deserve to be answered. AESO has said that, yes, we need it right now. I'm not sure that I totally agree with that. Because I'm not an electrical engineer, of course, I can't sit at the table with the electrical engineers and necessarily argue that with any sort of scientific degree of credibility. The question is: is this really going to be a smart grid? I think there are other, smarter ways.

The Speaker: Hon member, thank you. The time has now expired.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to ask the hon. member a couple of questions. First of all, she mentioned Ontario and Quebec. Of course, I came from Ontario, so I'm quite familiar with the province. I'm just curious if she's aware of the tax structure that's in Quebec and Ontario as compared to the tax structure in Alberta for citizens.

I'd also like to know if she's aware of the debt that's been accumulated by the Crown corporations in both Ontario and Quebec that deal with the hydro situations of both of those provinces.

Ms Pastoor: Well, I think that the citizens in Ontario and Quebec are very aware of the debt that they're paying for, and they are also very aware that they have cheaper electricity. But I think the thing that's important to them is, yes, they have a debt, but they also own their utilities. I think that sometimes when you own it, you aren't afraid to take the debt. Clearly, this province is going into debt. We are going into debt to put these transmission lines up, so we're not going to be any different. We will have a debt, but we won't own the utility. I think that may be the difference.

Mr. Griffiths: I'm wondering if the hon. member would clarify where we're going into debt when there's $17 billion put away to cover off the surplus. Where does she figure this debt is coming from?

Ms Pastoor: I think there's a lot of personal debt that's going to come up. The personal debt in this province already is quite high, and I think that this is going to push people into – if all of our citizens are in debt, it does reflect over the whole society.

Yes, we do have the $17 billion, but I think we've pretty much spent that if we look at some of the other things that we're doing. We will be going into debt when we start selling the capital bonds. That is a debt.

The Speaker: Others? Hon. Government House Leader, were you getting involved in 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Hancock: Only from the sidelines.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, are you getting involved in 29(2)(a)?

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Ms Blakeman: The member was talking just before she stopped on a subject I was particularly interested in. Now I've been distracted by the other folks. I'm sorry. Was it on . . .

Ms Pastoor: Smart grid?

Ms Blakeman: The smart grid. Can you just expand on that, please?

5:50

Ms Pastoor: I think that using the term "smart grid" is something that should be looked at. Is this really going to be smarter, or are we actually using old technology? I mean, clearly, part of this is old technology when we are going to lose so much because of the transmission over the great distances that both the east and west lines will be having.

There are better ways. I think there are better ways, and clearly there are people in my area who don't necessarily think they need it – I'm not speaking about the wind people – because they're going to go along the same lines as what Enmax is proposing. Now, however, they want a small nuclear generator to be able to push the electricity for southern Alberta, which is another whole question unto itself. But I do think there's a smarter way.

The Speaker: Maybe we'll get to it in the next answer should you be asked another question.

Section 29(2)(a) is still available. No further participants?

Then I'll recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to participate in second reading debate on Bill 50. There are any number of points that I could choose to reply to that have been made so far in debate this afternoon, and I will get to some clarification that I think is needed for the benefit of members opposite a little later in the speech.

In particular to the question of the determination of need for critical transmission infrastructure, I think what many members opposite fail to appreciate is that, in fact, the determination of need is actually a function of government. For example, in the case of the education system or our transportation infrastructure or our health care infrastructure I have yet to hear members opposite question or do anything but gratefully accept when government determines the need to provide for these and, in fact, to look beyond the term of our individual mandates as members and look to the future and plan accordingly for anticipated needs in the province to support growth, to support the livelihood and an improved quality of life for our own people. That is, I think, Mr. Speaker, the higher principle that's involved in this debate.

I want to talk for a few minutes about some features of the bill that appear to have been overlooked by our hon. colleagues opposite. First of all, Mr. Speaker, the bill does not remove the requirement for the Alberta Utilities Commission, or AUC, to approve the siting of critical transmission lines. Therefore, directly impacted landowners would still have the opportunity to present their concerns during a fair and open hearing conducted by the AUC.

Secondly, the Alberta Electrical System Operator has determined a need for critical transmission infrastructure, as has been pointed out by members on this side of the House, and Bill 50 would assist in ensuring that this need is met.

Also, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to remind the House that AESO is a not-for-profit entity. It is independent of any industry affiliations, and it owns no transmission or market assets. Therefore, the allegations of vested interest or potential bias on the part of AESO are clearly unsubstantiated. Furthermore, AESO is governed by an independent board which provides advice and direction for market participants. It has a diverse background in finance, business, electricity, oil and gas, energy management, regulatory affairs, and technology, all very important spheres of expertise which this government has drawn on and would continue to draw upon in the future in making determinations of need under this proposed legislation.

AESO has the statutory mandate, the resources, and the technical expertise to prepare long-term transmission system plans for this province. I think I would agree with hon. members opposite who have suggested that as individuals members, notwithstanding the impressive professional backgrounds represented in the House, none of us really have the expertise to do that on our own. Mr. Speaker, we can second-guess and we can question the need. However, that is a huge risk since electricity is so intricately linked to our province's economic growth as well as our daily lives.

Thirdly, Mr. Speaker, electricity is, quite simply, a need. It is not a want. The government has a serious responsibility to ensure that critical transmission infrastructure is in place, and this bill would help us to carry out that responsibility. All Albertans require transmission lines. As I pointed out earlier, they are as necessary as hospitals, schools, and roads. The obligation on the part of government to determine current and future needs beyond the electoral mandate of any of us is just as justified. In fact, as many of my colleagues have pointed out, if there is no electricity to power these buildings, and if we cannot light our roads and highways, then they are of consequently no use to Albertans. Transmission lines are vital for the province's economic growth, and Bill 50 would help ensure that Alberta has the transmission in place to support and sustain our future prosperity.

The provincial policy of an energy-only market requires transmission to lead generation, not the other way around. This means that without transmission lines there are no incentives, Mr. Speaker, for companies to build generation plants, which ultimately leads to less competition and freedom of choice for Albertans. I ask members of this House: is this something we should risk? Is this an oversight we are elected to tolerate at the whim of the individual agendas of a minority of stakeholders when the majority clearly supports this government's intent to build more transmission capacity? Some of these stakeholders include the Alberta Federation of Rural Electrification Associations, the Independent Power Producers Society of Alberta, and the Capital Power Corporation.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta is currently a net importer of electricity. We have been so since 2002. The province does not produce enough power on a continual basis to meet the needs of our industries, business, residents, and farms. This is unacceptable, and it is unbecoming of this House to pass up the opportunity to provide legislation that will anticipate and meet those needs into the future.

The 2009 long-term transmission system plan states that existing transmission facilities in the northeast were near or at capacity as recently as 2008. This is not good for our economy or our future. Bill 50 would address this issue by ensuring that critical transmission infrastructure is in place ahead of increased demand and planned generation, allowing for future growth. Mr. Speaker, quite clearly, the debate and the ultimate passage of this legislation is our responsibility as members of this House. We cannot ignore the facts.

This brings me to my fourth and final point. The proposed Edmonton to Calgary project addresses reliability issues for consumers in south and central Alberta. The lines have the potential to incorporate biomass from the forestry and waste industries in western Alberta and Grande Prairie and large hydroelectric facilities in northern Alberta. The Edmonton to Calgary project also has the potential to provide capacity for the connection of wind power, as pointed out by my hon. colleague, in southern Alberta so that all Albertans can benefit from competitively priced, clean energy.

Lastly, the power that exporters pay for the use of the transmission system is for when they export power. The rates paid by exporters are included in AESO's tariff, which is approved by the AUC. The payments made by power exporters for the use of transmission lines offsets the cost to Alberta customers for the transmission system. The rate the exporters pay for the use of the transmission system is very similar, Mr. Speaker, to the rate Alberta customers pay for similar levels of service across the province.

Mr. Speaker, our province is not the same today as it was 20 years ago. We will not be the same 20 years hence. The population and our economy continue to grow. This has continued to put a strain on our transmission system. We need to rely on facts to determine the need for new transmission lines. I do not, like my hon. colleagues, want the future of this province to be at the mercy of a 20-year-old transmission system.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I'd like to ask the hon. member. You mentioned the expertise of the people on AESO and their background, and then you compared that to the cabinet and their credentials. My question is: are you saying that we're better off to put the needs process – because they're going to say the direction, the amount, and everything else at AESO, yet we're going to have cabinet determine whether or not the needs are necessary. Do you really believe that that is going to be in the best interest of Albertans?

The Speaker: Hon. members, the clock will quickly turn to 6 o'clock, and I must advise that the House will now adjourn until 7:30 this evening. However, I'd ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, recognizing there's still some time left under 29(2)(a), to be in his position tomorrow as we kick off further debate on Bill 50 – or tonight, whenever it is – to fulfill that obligation to the House.

The House stands adjourned until 7:30 this evening.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1855, 1865, 1876
Members' Statements
Edmonton-Mill Woods Constituency Awards	1856
Alberta Tourism Awards	1856
Legacy Magazine	1856
Canadian Patient Safety Week	1857
Alberta Rhodiola Rosea Growers Organization	1857
International Day for Tolerance	1865
Oral Question Period
Health Facility Administrative Cost Savings	1857
Lobbying Government	1858
Bitumen Exports	1859
Provincial Spending	1859, 1864
Support for the Horse-racing Industry	1860
Submetering for Energy Use	1860
PDD Funding	1860
Municipal Franchise Fees	1861
Postsecondary Education Costs	1861
Pharmaceutical Strategy	1862
H1N1 Influenza Immunization Costs	1863
Didsbury Hospital Helipad Closure	1864
Executive Salaries and Travel Expenses	1864
Presenting Petitions	1865
Introduction of Bills
Bill 62 Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009	1866
Tabling Returns and Reports	1866
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1866
Division	1871

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Wednesday evening, November 18, 2009

Issue 60e

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 18, 2009

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 50

Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

[Debate adjourned November 18: Mr. Horne speaking]

The Deputy Speaker: We still have four minutes under 29(2)(a) for question and comment.

Mr. Hehr: Who was it that spoke before?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford was the speaker, and whoever can use that four minutes now.

Mr. Hinman: I asked a question that he didn't have time to reply to, I believe.

The Deputy Speaker: All right. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, reply to the question.

Mr. Horne: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. member for his question a little while earlier, just prior to adjournment. I believe the hon. member's question dealt with how under the proposed legislation government would seek expert advice in the determination of need for critical transmission infrastructure. I believe, hon. member, you were looking for clarification as to whether I thought that expertise was within us as individual members and within cabinet, and I think you perhaps misunderstood my remarks.

My point was that the responsibility for assurance that Alberta has the necessary infrastructure to move forward and to prosper under future economic conditions lies with elected Members of the Legislative Assembly and, in this particular case, with members of government. Obviously, part of that role and that responsibility involves seeking as necessary the required expertise from some of the professionals that you mentioned in order to make that determination of need.

My point, nonetheless, was that this is really not dissimilar to government's determination of need with respect to transportation infrastructure, infrastructure to support the education system, the health care system, none of which seem to have come under question in the current debate. I have every confidence that the government would seek that advice when exercising their authority under the proposed bill.

Thank you.

Mr. Hinman: I'd just like to respond to the hon. member, and I appreciate his forthrightness in coming forward. My question is whether or not he's aware – they've talked about being biased and whether there's bias present. He says that they're competent in doing that and that the AESO is competent in bringing forth its expertise. But we've had two rulings, one in 2007 in the Court of Queen's Bench, where the courts ruled AESO as being biased.

The most recent paper put out, the transmission upgrade discussion paper, by the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate says that the EDC analyzes many different aspects. Basically, they say in there that the AESO is unconvincing and overstates the sense of urgency and has a case of bias. So we want to take that from their words over the courts?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I suppose that if the hon. member wants to discuss the question of bias, we could probably have that in a broader context at some other time. I'm, frankly, not familiar with the information that the hon. member has presented. If he'd care to table it, I'd consider myself enlightened by that, but in the absence of that, in this debate, you know, I simply can't respond.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have 54 seconds. The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I guess I just want to make a comment on what I just heard. The whole idea that there is a body of appointed officials whom you simply have to trust regardless of their qualifications, their experience, and so on: you know, the history of government in Canada is replete with examples of highly qualified professional people that have made tremendous errors. The fact that we should take their word for it on an $8 billion expenditure beggars the imagination. You know, I can hardly wait for the Minister of Health and Wellness to . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, we go back to the motion on the previous question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to frame tonight's participation in discussion with a line from a poem by Welsh poet Dylan Thomas: "Do not go gentle into that [dark] night. Rage, rage against the dying of the light." Considering that our discussion tonight has to do with rage and night and light, I'll break this discussion down.

Mr. Speaker, what I would like to do to begin with is suggest that this particular bill, Bill 50, is all about trust. We have a circumstance in this parliament where trust is lacking. It's lacking on both sides, so lack of confidence in our colleagues, whether they be on the government side, or their lack of confidence in us as members of the opposition. But because Hansard is an historical record and because a number of people don't have the understanding that underlies the democratic process, I want to begin by reviewing what happened today and link it to what's happened in previous days.

This afternoon, by a parliamentary sleight of hand, the equivalent of closure was invoked. It was a legal circumstance. As to whether it was an ethical one, that will be judged by future readers and participants. Basically, what happened was that any effort, whether it was from a government member or from a member of the opposition, to provide an alternative to Bill 50 in terms of providing extra time, as was the case introduced by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood – that opportunity to provide alternatives was lost. So we find ourselves now in a debate circumstance where no ability to discuss alternatives in terms of an amendment exists. We had an amendment that we would have appreciated having the opportunity to discuss. Unfortunately, that will not take place.

It hearkens back, Mr. Speaker, to Bill 46. Bill 46 was such a flawed piece of legislation that it took the government 24 amendments to try and get it right, and unfortunately not one single amendment was allowed from members of the opposition. Again, by a parliamentary sleight of hand in that case, closure was used. So we find ourselves tonight with limited options. We can use our 15 minutes to express our concerns to the best of our ability, but we know that at some point tonight the opportunity to discuss further, to provide alternatives in second reading will have evaporated.

What I want to talk about tonight is trust. I want to talk about confidence, and I want to talk about competence because that's at the basis of our discussions on Bill 50. Unfortunately, the general public, Albertans, will not get a chance to vote on something that is going to cost them billions of dollars. The only say they have is through their elected representative, and that's about trust. Now, when the individuals in constituencies throughout this province start receiving the increased electric bills, I would suggest that the trust they have in their elected representatives is going to be severely tarnished and diminished.

7:40

In the quote that I began, "Do not go gentle into that [dark] night," I want to start off with the word "gentle." This government for 38 years has had a very gentle ride. In the last election 72 MLAs from the government side were elected, and that is a cause for celebration among government MLAs, beyond a doubt. But when you look at what is happening with democracy in this province, the fact that less than 40 per cent of eligible voters for whatever reason chose to participate shows a lack of trust in the process. Twenty-one per cent of those eligible voters chose a government and 72 members.

An Hon. Member: How many chose you?

Mr. Chase: Well, a significant number chose me, more the second time than the first time, so obviously I offered something that they bought into. They trusted me, and that's the basis of tonight's conversation.

What we have seen is an erosion of the faith, of the trust in the government at this time. We have a wonderful example from Calgary-Glenmore of the lack of trust that the citizens and constituents of Calgary-Glenmore had in the current government, and that is just a sign of things to come. The hon. member's party has one person championing their cause. [interjections]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity has the floor.

Mr. Chase: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore has one person championing the cause of the Wildrose Alliance Party.

Mr. Liepert: How well did the Liberals do?

Mr. Chase: We did considerably better in Calgary-Glenmore, sir, than your party representative.

The point is that faith is being lost, and it's being lost rapidly. If you look at the latest polling results, your party is sitting at 34. Yes, ours is only at 21. We've got work to do. But the point is . . .

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, please address the chair and make it relevant to Bill 50.

Mr. Chase: Yes.

Speaking on Bill 50 and speaking on trust, I will continue where I began: "Do not go gentle into that [dark] night." We're now talking about darkness; we're talking about night. Bill 50 suggests that it's going to get a lot darker sooner than later because Bill 50 suggests that we don't have the transmission lines to provide the light and the heat and the energy necessary for this province to be successful.

Dark also suggests to me a relatively important fact, that 85 per cent plus of our current electricity is through coal power. That coal power continues to be a concern in terms of the number of respiratory ailments in this province, that outnumber any other province's. Our dependency on coal has to be changed, and that is what Bill 50 is talking about. Bill 50 is talking about continuing to do it the old way, continuing a heavy reliance on coal, continuing to put it up the stack and not worrying about the consequences as long as the lights stay on. Well, there are better ways to do things.

One of those better ways. We've had some discussion about natural gas and what happens if natural gas goes up to $9 or $10 a gigajoule. Well, guess what? That's where our coal comes into play. Coal, when gasified, is a much more efficient fuel in terms of the power it provides. It is a much cleaner burning fuel. These are the types of innovations that we need to be looking at.

Right now we have a gas glut, and it would seem to make tremendous sense to use that gas to generate electricity currently. There have been tremendous exploratory discoveries both in Alberta in terms of coal-bed methane – again the word "coal" – and there have been several discoveries in the United States about shale, which is loosely related to coal and the coal-bed methane process. So the notion that we continue to fire up inefficient coal-fired generators and then ship that polluted energy all the way down to the southern parts of Alberta makes no sense. The idea of long-distance transmission makes no sense unless the government has it in its mind to put that transmission into the States.

Now, I want to move on to the word "rage." "Do not go gentle into that [dark] night. Rage, rage against the dying of the light." Rage is what Alberta consumers are experiencing. Murray Smith in the late '90s, my predecessor in Calgary-Varsity – and notice the fact that I said predecessor – was given the plum posting down to Washington. He was rewarded for betraying Albertans by undermining the subsidies on transmission systems. Instead of it being shared with the transmission line companies, the whole cost of transmission lines was borne by the consumer.

Now, Murray's blunder cost us about $9 billion. This particular blunder is going to cost us anywhere between $14 billion and potentially $20 billion. What will we have to show for it? We're going to have very expensive power bills to show for it. We are not going to own the utility. We're not going to share in the profits, that we have paid for to build the transmission, but we are going to pay the bills. We'll never own that right. It won't be a public utility as it was under a regulated system.

This afternoon we had people saying: well, Ontario and Quebec are paying for those utilities. In the case of Ontario, a large part of that bill deals with failed nuclear. In the case of Quebec, Quebec has just recently made a deal to purchase the transmission grids and the power generators in New Brunswick. So poor old Quebec and poor taxpayers, who are on the hook for, primarily, generated, cheap, nonpolluting hydroelectricity. I don't feel sorry for the citizens of Quebec or Ontario, who own their utility and, therefore, derive the direct benefit rather than turning it over to transmission companies who will profit from what should be our utility.

In terms of raging against the dying of the light, part of the light that is dying is the light, the flicker, the last flame of democracy in this province. With Bill 50 what we're seeing is the opportunity to have an independent hearing quashed. The Alberta Utilities Commission, at least a semi-independent body, has lost its opportunity to rule on behalf of the Albertans it was appointed to serve. Instead, what we have is a dictatorial circumstance where the Lieutenant Governor in Council/cabinet/Minister of Energy is going to tell Albertans what they can expect. And what can they expect? They can expect large towers of inefficient, long-distance energy ranging from the north of Alberta to the south because that's the way it was always done.

7:50

Now, the Member for Livingstone-Macleod talked about wind energy. We've got over 1,800 gigajoules, I think is the correct term, of wind power waiting to be brought on line.

Mr. Berger: Kilowatt.

Mr. Chase: Thank you.

It would make absolute sense to connect that wind energy and put it on the grid. It would directly benefit the southern portion of Alberta.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments and questions. The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm just curious to know if the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity recognizes that the majority of power that goes to Calgary today is a benefit of the power purchase arrangement that comes from the Keephills power plant. I'd just let this member know that the coal in that particular area has the lowest sulphur content of coal in North America, one-quarter of 1 per cent, and he refers to it as dirty power. Maybe Calgary wants to give the power back and use gas-fired.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. There is such a thing as cleaner coal, Mr. Speaker. There's no such thing as clean coal.

Calgary through Enmax is creating a locally generated gas plant to augment the existing gas plants in the area, so it is creating efficiency. It is creating the power where it is required to light up and heat the homes of the million-plus Calgarians. The idea of transporting it from the north just because that was historically the way it was done does not make sense. Neither, I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, does it make sense for Medicine Hat to not use the gas they have but to draw power from the northern regions of Alberta. Localized power generation with less line loss is the way to go, and the gasification of coal will allow that to happen. Transport the gas as opposed to the lines of power.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to read the actual quote from Dylan Thomas's poem, the last verse.

And you, my father, there on the sad height,
Curse, bless, me now with your fierce tears, I pray.
Do not go gentle into that good night.
Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

I wonder if the hon. member would like to talk about that for a few minutes.

The Deputy Speaker: Thirty-five seconds to talk on it.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I appreciate being corrected. Earlier this afternoon I was not sure about the comment with regard to all hell for a basement in Medicine Hat. I wasn't sure whether it was Rudyard Kipling or Mark Twain. So I appreciate that.

I think what's happened, hon. leader of the third party, is that I took out "good" and accidentally or maybe psychologically inserted "dark" because that's what I am seeing. That good night that Dylan

Thomas experienced years ago in Wales no longer exists in the province of Alberta. We are getting exceedingly darker nights.

I apologize for my misquoting Dylan Thomas, and I appreciate the opportunity to have that clarified: good night.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Yes. Just one quick question. I'm wondering if the Member for Calgary-Varsity could comment on the price of gas if it were to get around $9, $10, $11, as it has been in the past, sometimes unexpectedly, how that would fit in with the price of energy and his proposal that we should have more local gas generation in Calgary.

Mr. Chase: Actually, I already answered that question, but I'd gladly repeat my answer. At that point we have the option of the gasification of coal. We have 200 years of coal that, if used properly, would provide us energy at a cheaper rate than what you're suggesting gas prices may rise to.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the hon. member if he could talk a little bit more about the advantages of electricity that's either generated by cogeneration or by renewable sources such as wind.

The Deputy Speaker: Thirty-eight seconds.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The benefit is instant. You fire up your generators because you have your gas, and you don't suffer the consequences of a coal-fired generation circumstance that can take up to two and a half months to turn on. The coal-fired generators are being decommissioned, two of them up north, so let's get on with the decommissioning of the other areas and gasify our coal and burn it efficiently, produce power that's cheap and does not require lengthy, expensive transmission lines.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, you wish to speak?

Mr. Hinman: When everyone else is done.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. On the bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This, as we all know, is a pretty complex issue. One of the things that I learned about 10 years ago when I spent some time examining issues around power deregulation and some related issues is that the electrical industry is an incredibly complex industry. It's a very strange product, electricity, as I'm sure people have noted in here in the debate. It's something that cannot be stored. Unlike just about any other product, it has to be used the moment it's produced. There's very inelastic demand for it. In other words, we are very dependent on power, whatever the price is. It requires a very, very sophisticated, complex system to generate and deliver. So it's a complex business we're looking at here, and I'm sure that's contributed to the confusion around the debate with Bill 50.

I think it's worth reflecting for a moment on the roots of this matter. I think the roots of this go back to the whole decision to deregulate Alberta's power industry. Alberta, before deregulation, had some of the lowest cost power actually in the world if you really stacked it up, and it was also some of the most reliable. We had a system where the utility companies, the generators, and the delivery companies were profitable, and everybody was really happy. It's beyond me, other than the interests of some well-connected lobbyists who stood to make a lot of money from this and some hard-core ideologists or ideologues, why we ever deregulated, but we did. And when we deregulated, it's worth remembering what we were promised. We were promised that deregulation would give lower costs, more choice, and higher reliability. In fact, we've gotten the opposite. We've got higher costs, a very restricted choice, and worse reliability. So on all measures, for the great majority of Albertans deregulation has been a failure.

Something else that occurred with deregulation is that the whole planning system that had so effectively worked for Alberta was disbanded. Very little planning occurred, very little investment occurred in things like transmission lines for years and years and years, and now we're desperately short. We feel like we're in a crisis. These are the kinds of issues that would not have arisen and never did arise when we had a regulated power system.

I think it's worth hammering home one more time that the reason that we're facing this kind of turbulent debate and potential crisis with our power system all goes back to the decision made by this government 12 years ago or so to deregulate the power system. Bad move. It cost us billions of dollars. It may be the most expensive policy blunder by any provincial government in Canadian history. I think it's worth noting that the whole trend towards deregulation, which seemed to be getting a bit of momentum around North America eight or 10 years ago, has stalled. Anyways, we should never forget that all these messes are because of very bad policy decisions made in the 1990s and implemented since the year 2000.

8:00

We're in a situation here where it feels to me like we're planning for the future by looking in the rear-view mirror, that we are planning for what lies ahead by what occurred several years ago. That's human nature, isn't it? I mean, we remember what occurred in the past, and we want to make sure that if it wasn't a happy outcome, we avoid that. So we make corrections in our future plans for problems that occurred in the past, and that's what we're doing here.

Ten years ago, almost exactly, Mr. Speaker – the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood might remember the date – there was a very heated debate in the city of Edmonton about selling EPCOR, and that came down to a very close vote. I was involved closely in looking at the case for and against selling. I know the proponents of selling EPCOR used various ways to try to urge the city council of Edmonton to proceed with the sale. One of the things they said was that the power industry was on the brink of a revolution, and they were saying this 10 years ago.

What did they mean by that? Well, they said things like if we don't sell EPCOR right away, it's going to lose value because we're moving to a system of distributed generation in which there will be small generating units throughout the system rather than a handful of big ones with transmission lines. They talked about micro-generation, in which people would actually generate power in their own homes. They talked about solar and wind. They used all of these ideas to try to convince the Edmonton city council that, in fact, 10 years ago EPCOR would have been on the brink of being obsolete. In fact, they were wrong. Ten years ago, wisely, city council said: no, we're not going to buy that; we're going to hang onto EPCOR.

Well, let's move forward 10 years, and let's revisit some of those arguments. I know this is going to circulate around in various ways, but in fact some of the advances in technologies that were used as a sort of bogeyman 10 years ago are actually now beginning to occur at long last. So we're seeing things like distributed generation – certainly, that has been proposed by Enmax – where you have many more generation plants distributed through the whole system rather than a handful of giant plants out at Lake Wabamun and in that vicinity. That could easily happen, and Enmax wants to proceed with that.

There are also dramatic increases in wind generation, and I think we're all aware of that. More importantly, I think, in the long term will be the development of solar power. That is actually beginning to play out in real life in Edmonton and around Alberta right now. We're seeing very significant decreases in the cost of photovoltaic panels. There are major factories being built and in production in China where they're producing massive volumes of photovoltaic panels at rapidly falling costs. I was just speaking to an electrical engineer yesterday, I guess, who is forecasting that within two or three years photovoltaic power will be directly competitive, without any subsidies, to the existing power base that we have today.

I only have a few more minutes. My point here, Mr. Speaker, is that this bill is going to facilitate and impose a massive, massive investment in a power system that looks very much like it's going to be obsolete, and it's going to be obsolete because of new technologies, because of greater efficiencies. We're going to discover in five or 10 years that billions of dollars have been spent at no cost to the companies, I might add, for something that we don't need. It's going to be left behind. We're solving a problem that existed years ago but will not exist in the foreseeable future.

Now, I'm just going to wrap up briefly, I think, at this round of the debate by talking about some recent developments in Edmonton and in Red Deer as well around net zero energy housing. It's hard to believe, Mr. Speaker, but actually houses are being built in Edmonton right now without furnaces, and these are houses that people live in year-round, perfectly comfortable. How are they doing that? Well, they're doing it through better design. They're doing it through superinsulated building envelopes – foundation walls that are 16 inches thick, ceilings that have a metre of insulation in them – tightly, tightly sealed building envelopes with air exchangers.

These buildings, if they're oriented to the sun to capture passive solar energy, which isn't very difficult – one of the things we have in great volume in this province is sunshine – absorb the sun through the day, allow the sun into the interior of the building. There are concrete floors or other thermal mass that absorb the sun's energy through the day and then radiate it through the house at night. Even in the depths of a January night in Edmonton you can heat an entire house with the equivalent power of a couple of toasters, okay?

This isn't fantasy. These houses exist. There's actually a duplex built like this in Edmonton Riverdale. There's another house just moved into in the last month in Mill Creek. There's another one under construction in my neighbourhood. Mr. Speaker, I'm hoping to build one myself, beginning within the next year. These things are moving along quickly. I can tell you that it's going from the fringe to the mainstream very, very rapidly. At this moment one of Edmonton's largest housing builders is looking seriously at getting into net zero energy housing in a big way – in a big way.

This is the kind of innovation that is occurring. We are on the brink of this kind of innovation, and my concern is that by committing billions and billions and billions of dollars to this old technology, we're going to find that we've done like the French did after World War I and before World War II. They built a huge defence system to defend against trench warfare, and it was completely useless against the new technologies of World War II. This is going to play out over and over. We can see it occurring. You can actually go down and feel these buildings and walk through them and study the plans and talk to the people who live in them.

That's all being done, Mr. Speaker, without any subsidies, okay? We're not talking about $700 million in subsidies to these kinds of buildings like is going to CO₂ sequestration. This is occurring without subsidy. In fact, if you had a level cost base, you would find that net zero buildings would be extremely competitive with the existing power system.

This government has ever so reluctantly made some of the right moves. They've allowed, finally, net metering. With these net zero homes, actually, throughout the summer months the power meter runs in reverse, and they generate power and put it on the grid, and that offsets the requirement for further generation at the coal-fired plants. You combine that with superefficient lighting systems, light-emitting diodes, solar tubes, superefficient appliances, and the demand for electricity is going to flatten out and could easily, particularly if this government showed some leadership, begin to diminish.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am not a fan of this legislation. I think that it is the wrong approach. It's an outdated approach. It facilitates coal-fired power, which is contrary to all the evidence we have on greenhouse gas emissions. The Member for Stony Plain spoke about the low sulphur content of coal in the Wabamun area. Fair enough. I think it's also got relatively low mercury content. That's not the issue. The issue is that it's releasing vast amounts of carbon dioxide, and even if we recaptured that, if we were to bill the cost of recapturing that in a real manner back to the consumers, that power would not be affordable. It will not be affordable. This is obsolete. This is a misguided piece of legislation, a failure of leadership, a failure to adapt.

8:10

I'll finish, since we're into quotes tonight – I'm not going to quote Dylan Thomas, but I will paraphrase Charles Darwin, who was born 200 years ago this year. Darwin, actually, did not speak about survival of the fittest. He said that survival does not go to the strongest or the fastest or the smartest; it goes to those who adapt. What this bill is doing is failing to adapt. It's committing us to an old, obsolete way at enormous cost. That's why I think it's a bad bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you again, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview talked about deregulation of the electrical industry, but I'm not sure if the hon. member is aware – and I guess I would ask him that question – that really the only thing that was deregulated was generation and marketing, and that's been reasonably successful in that since deregulation there are over 2,000 to 3,000 megawatts of new electricity. Again, the bottleneck is transmission. That's why we're talking about Bill 50. So the question is: does the hon. member know that transmission/distribution in this province is still regulated?

Dr. Taft: I am aware of that, but it is a completely different regulatory system than it used to be. I'll just speak ever so briefly about two functions that were disbanded or dramatically changed under deregulation that directly affect us. One was the whole planning system for the power industry. The theory under deregulation is that the market will determine investment, but before that under the regulated system there was actually a planning board or a whole electrical planning branch, I think it was called, that employed engineers and mathematicians and so on, and they planned what transmission was going to be needed, and they planned where generation was going to be needed and what the likely consumption was going to be, and they ensured that things occurred on an orderly basis. That kind of function and that kind of investment has not occurred.

The other thing that was deregulated was the pricing structure. Rather than having a pricing system like we used to have, which blended the costs of coal and hydro and gas and so on into one price, we now have a system in which pricing is at the highest margin, and that's been a real problem.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the Solicitor General brazenly exceeds 15 seconds, and the health minister is mute.

I would like to ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview if, with respect to the regulatory process, it doesn't make sense to plan transmission and generation together.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thank you. I appreciate the question from the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Yes, it does make sense to plan generation and transmission together because if you're generating power, you need to have a transmission system. When under deregulation you turn the construction of generation over to the marketplace, then it becomes much more difficult to plan transmission, and hence you get the kind of mess that we have now. So, yeah, that's one of the things that was lost when we dismantled what was an outstanding electrical system.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: This is under 29(2)(a)?

The Deputy Speaker: Yes, 29(2)(a).

Mr. Hinman: Super. I'd just like the knowledgeable member with his experience to expand a little bit on the ruling by the AEUB back in, I think, 1992 on the shared 50-50 on the operator versus the load and zone pricing that they tried to initiate, that Murray Smith vacated and said that we're not going to do that. Do you feel that zone pricing would help in locating new generation electricity?

Dr. Taft: It might. It might. I think that one of the real losses that occurred when Murray Smith unilaterally made his decision and overruled all the advisers is that all responsibility was taken off the corporations for the costs of building this transmission. Essentially, they got a free pass.

In the system that used to exist, where they were responsible for a significant portion of the cost of transmission, they had to raise the capital. Sure, eventually that got paid by the consumer, but they had to raise the capital, and that immediately acted as a kind of governor or limiter on how much they were prepared to go for. If they didn't need to go for a gold-plated Cadillac, they weren't going to. Well, now, when they're not responsible for any of that investment, they're going to go for everything.

Thanks.

The Deputy Speaker: Going to the motion on the previous question, the hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to – well, I'm not so happy to rise to speak to this closure motion of the government. You know, here we are making a $14 billion decision, and the government uses a motion which is merely a cloaked version of closure. I think it's a travesty that the government would actually engage in this kind of undemocratic behaviour when we're talking about a $14 billion decision.

Not only are we talking about a $14 billion decision, Mr. Speaker; we're talking about a $14 billion decision that many people in the industry are objecting to. They are saying that this is the wrong decision, that it's not necessary to build this infrastructure, yet here we are late into the night, when normal people are watching TV, watching the game on TV, or even going to bed. Here we are being forced into silence on this outrageous bill.

Having said that, you know, I want to address the question of the bill again because I think this is perhaps one of the most expensive mistakes that this government has ever made. I want to say that that is saying a lot, Mr. Speaker, a $14 billion mistake.

I just want to indicate that people that have looked at this – and I want to quote from a report from the University of Calgary, from the School of Public Policy. This is an academic paper done by Jeffrey Church from the department of economics, and secondary authors are William Rosehart and John MacCormack from the department of electrical engineering at the University of Calgary. They have taken a look at Bill 50. The title is Transmission Policy in Alberta and Bill 50. Here are a couple of the things that they included in their summary of conclusions, Mr. Speaker.

Our results, showing that the two large [high-voltage DC] lines that are proposed are economically inefficient and unwarranted given the AESO's assumptions and forecasts, point to the benefit of a regulatory process, and raise doubts that the state of reliability and supply adequacy indicate the need for an emergency response.

They also say:

Our conclusion is that the large cost and capacity of the two [high-voltage DC] lines, 4,000 megawatts, is an overbuild that is not warranted by its economics.

This a report that was made by economists and electrical engineers at the University of Calgary.

8:20

They go on to say that even if all line losses were eliminated if the two HVDC lines were added, raising the benefit of the reduction in line losses by another $880 million, the net benefit of the two high-voltage DC lines would still be between ($852 million) and ($1.06 billion).

They go on to say that

Bill 50 raises an interesting question involving the regulatory approval process for electrical transmission lines: does it warrant suspension of the needs assessment? There are a number of advantages associated with using an independent regulator to assess whether a transmission project is in the public interest. These advantages include the following:

- (a) It is easier for an independent regulator to commit to regulatory policy, therefore reducing political and regulatory risk and encouraging investment.
- (b) It is less likely that the project approval and conditions will be driven by short-term political interests . . .

I'll repeat that: "less likely that the project approval and conditions will be driven by short-term political interests."

. . . and more likely that a focus on long-run benefits and costs can be maintained.

- (c) Regulatory agencies typically have relevant expertise, historic awareness and background knowledge to understand, evaluate and adjudicate complex issues.
- (d) Regulatory processes are designed to subject interested parties' positions to public scrutiny and evaluation. They provide a forum for a public debate and record that reduces the issues and problems caused by asymmetric information and strategic behaviour.

- (e) Regulatory processes guard against private interests having an undue influence, perhaps like subsidizing political parties' conventions.

- (f) Public regulatory processes make explicit the alternatives available and require the regulator, through written decisions, to explain their rationale. This is an important constraint on any political collusion between the decision maker and private interests.

And finally,

- (g) Regulatory processes allow for public participation and monitoring, contributing to accountability, understanding and legitimacy.

Mr. Speaker, I submit that what's happened here is the short-circuiting of a very valuable step in the evaluation of very expensive infrastructure that has been proposed. I think that the whole process has been short-circuited. I think that there's a short over there on the other side.

Yes, I do think, Mr. Speaker, that we need to evaluate and scrutinize the arguments on both sides for this massive expenditure. I'm looking at the proposal that AESO gave to me. For the interties that they're proposing to go with for this, there's $2 billion. For the additional transmission there's nearly $4 billion, so that's $6 billion. And then for the actual projects envisaged in this act that we're going to approve and mandate if we pass this bill tonight, it's over $8 billion. By my math that's a $14 billion expenditure provided that none of these projects go over cost, and that's always a distinct possibility.

What are we doing here? Well, I think it's very clear what we're doing. We are building a massive, overbuilt electrical transmission infrastructure so that any entrepreneur who wants to build a plant anywhere in the province can plug into it and make money. That infrastructure is also designed so that it can be added to in the future to extend the transmission of large amounts of electricity into markets outside of this province for a profit and not necessarily benefit the people of Alberta in any way other than to perhaps produce coal pollution and CO₂ in our province. That infrastructure that's being provided for the profit of the companies that may want to build generation and plug into that transmission is being paid for entirely by the electricity consumers of this province. Mr. Speaker, I can't think of a worse decision that we could possibly make than to proceed with this bill.

There's no question that some additional transmission infrastructure may be needed, and certainly older transmission infrastructure may need to be upgraded. But the government and AESO have produced no evidence whatsoever that we are going to be facing brownouts or shortages of electricity in the province, that there are going to be failures in the transmission system. They say that, they try to scare people, but they haven't produced any proof. Knowledgeable people in the industry will tell you and have told me and I'm sure they've told the government that what really happens is that your maintenance costs on an older system tend to rise until you reach a point where it's more economical to replace that infrastructure. We may be at that point, but there's absolutely no evidence of that.

Mr. Speaker, I have to say that I'm very disappointed about the government's decision to short-circuit the regulatory process. They've decided that these particular projects are too important to be scrutinized, particularly to be scrutinized by the people who will have to pay the bills. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview suggested, this is an extension of the logic of deregulation. When the government went down the road of deregulation, they deregulated and privatized the generation side of the equation. Normally, that had been planned in conjunction with the transmission. So you'd look at what the increase in demand or in load was going to be and where it was going to be in the province. You'd make projections, and you'd approve generation where it was needed in a timely fashion. You would at the same time approve the appropriate transmission facilities to get that power to where it was needed.

There was system planning. It was efficient because you didn't overbuild. You didn't build more generation than you needed. That has been lost. We have now a transmission administration which is the one regulated component left in the system between the retail marketing of electricity, which is a for-profit, competitive business, and generation, which is also a for-profit business. But there's no way of telling who's going to build which plant and where they're going to build it and when they're going to build it, so you need to provide an infrastructure that is, as they say, robust enough to be able to pick up any generation that might reasonably be built. That's part of the free-enterprise model.

Now, I want to suggest. I know there's a group of folks in our Legislature who've been taking to wearing black, the Prefab Four. I'm not sure what the name is exactly, but they have set themselves a task – a crusade, if you will – to force this government to be more accountable financially. That's a good goal because, you know, we also believe that there are certain things that the government is wasting the public's money on. We have different priorities, but we sure don't think that the government should be wasting the taxpayers' money. It's not their money; it's the taxpayers' money.

8:30

Here we have a massive expenditure. Now, it's not taxpayers, but it's ratepayers. They're a lot of the same people – a lot of the same people, mostly the same people – who are going to have to pay $14 billion on a massive expenditure that may in fact not be necessary, but we'll never know because we can only take the Minister of Energy's word for it.

Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, I don't think that passes the fiscal conservative smell test. I would encourage the Prefab Four to get up in question period and get up in this debate and seriously challenge this massive waste of ratepayers' money because that's exactly what it is. There are lots of people who have considerable expertise in this field who have said exactly what I'm saying today, Mr. Speaker. So I invite the four of them to take a leaf out of our book and actually stand up for the people who pay the bills in this province, the ordinary families of this province, who, in fact, are going to be on the hook for this expenditure. They have no right under this process to challenge what's happening. They have no right to say: "You know, you can't tax me for this project. I don't agree with it. I'm not going to pay."

Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments and questions. The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would invite the hon. leader of the third party to join our group of four except I do know his politics, and over a period of time he has mentioned that he's very critical of people who want people to pay more as opposed to businesses.

I'm not going to get into that argument, but I do have a quote here, and I have a question for him. On Saturday, November 14, 2009, the Calgary Herald page C3 talks about game players.

Who pays for transmission?

- Farm: 4 per cent
- Residential: 16 per cent
- Commercial: 19 per cent
- Industry: 61 per cent

That means that over 80 per cent is being paid for by some sort of business through this plan. You should be happy with this, should you not?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. I don't think that we should be burdening big business in this province with unnecessary costs, and I would expect you to stand up on behalf of those power consumers, because that's what they are, who are going to be charged billions of dollars for this boondoggle. Get up and stand up for those companies because they need somebody in their corner. You know, it should be you more than me, but I'm prepared to do it.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, that's a hard act to follow. Actually, though, it's worth making the point that very high power costs have driven some businesses out of Alberta, and more are threatening to leave because of the high power costs.

But my question was to the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. You talk about the burden on ratepayers. Do you have any experience or any knowledge of the burden on the public sector or nonprofit groups from higher power rates? I'm thinking of universities or school boards or municipalities because I know they get hit really hard as well.

Mr. Mason: Thanks to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview for the question. Of course, municipalities, school boards, universities, health regions, whether there are 16 or one, pay massive amounts of money for their electricity, and when the costs of a $14 billion infrastructure are added to the rate base and charged back to the consumers based on how much power they use, those institutions are going to have major financial problems. This is coming at the same time as the government is cutting back on some of the funding for those organizations, so it will create a more difficult situation for them. It will make a difficult situation worse, and I think it's a good point.

Now, in terms of the nonprofit sector, which does yeoman's work in this province trying to assist communities and individuals who need help, they're very close to the margin in terms of what they can afford, so these additional utility costs have a negative effect on them as well.

Mr. Speaker, it's right across the board. It's businesses, it's individuals, it's the nonprofit sector, and it's the public sector.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member and leader of the third party made some comments that I think require me to ask a question of him. First of all, you know, he was citing from a document that he obviously has with him. Not a bad reader, actually, but I'm not exactly sure of the understanding behind what it was he was reading. I would just ask the member opposite, the leader of the third party, if he would confirm the co-author of the report that his quotes came from, if he could confirm for me if that same individual was hired by Enmax or the city of Calgary to intervene negatively on transmission upgrades that were being heard at the public hearings that were conducted by the AUC.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I think that if the hon. Minister of Energy wants to bring some allegations against the academic objectivity of this author, he should step outside the Chamber and make those statements.

The Deputy Speaker: Any others? Standing Order 29(2)(a) is out for some seconds.

Next speaker on the previous question motion. Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, do you wish to speak?

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's important that we stand and speak to this question, and I'll have to concur with the previous hon. members in the opposition that it's disappointing that we're not going to be able to continue this debate, but we'll go on into committee, and it will go forward there.

There's much more that needs to be said, and time is probably the most important thing because there are a lot of articles and papers that the experts throughout the province are doing research on. They're coming out almost daily right now, and it seems like the government members are not privy to them. I found one that the government members seem to have left behind out back. It's a memorandum to members of the Alberta government caucus from the Consumers for Competitive Transmission. I urge all of the caucus members, that obviously got this, to read it because it's important information in here.

Mr. Mason: Are you digging through the trash cans, Paul?

Mr. Hinman: No. They're just handing things out there, and they don't recognize people in suits.

In this memorandum from the Consumers for Competitive Transmission they basically represent 80 per cent of the power demand for Alberta. I think that that's significant and something that we should look at. They refer in here that the CCT represents four consumer groups: the Alberta Direct Connect Consumer Association, the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association, the Consumers' Coalition of Alberta, and the Industrial Power Consumers Association of Alberta. Basically, to paraphrase the report – and like I say, I'm sure that perhaps some of the members were interested, and they've read it – it just goes on to say that this is not in the best interest. This is an overbuild. The best analogy that I can think of is that we've got some hyped-up individuals that want to build a monster truck, and they've gone out and they've bought a 2,000 horsepower engine only to realize that they have no axles, no body, no transmission to hook it up to.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood brought forward the report from the University of Calgary. It points out in many areas the bias of the information that's being brought forward and being proposed by the government. It's not acceptable. We're not in a panic situation where the lights are going to go out. That was over two years ago that Chicken Little started running around and said that the sky is falling, the sky is falling. We've gone into a recession since then. Times have changed.

More importantly, let's go back to the AESO and their report from 2007 to 2008 because back then – again, some of the hon. members have said: oh, that was just a Band-aid. It wasn't a Band-aid. All that was necessary was one 500-kVa line to upgrade between Wabamun and Calgary to ensure the reliability.

8:40

The hon. minister talks about the reliability. Well, I guess I've kind of thought of a new acronym for these high-voltage DC lines. I think that really what they are are high-voltage PC lines, PC standing for those that are politically connected to this government. We'll have a high-voltage, politically connected line that will benefit a few, but it'll be at the cost of the consumers of Alberta. That concerns me. It concerns the residents of Calgary-Glenmore. They're upset when they were talking about the possibility of the bills going up.

There's no question that the AESO has said that, you know, the out-bill is going to cost $14 billion. Just to do some simple math, 10 per cent of $14 billion is $1.4 billion. When this government thought that it had excess money, rather than paying off some of its debt or paying money to the teachers' pension fund or getting rid of some of those, they gave out $400 to every Albertan, about $1.4 billion. If we have $14 billion, that's equivalent to about $4,000 for every Albertan.

The other thing that seems to get missed in all of this is that we're running a deficit, and if we put another $14 billion debt on the consumers of Alberta, the interest rate is interesting. I believe that the Alberta Utilities Commission allows a rate of return of about 9 per cent plus taxes. We're actually looking at this $14 billion that we're going to spend as we develop this huge, massive electrical grid that isn't even functional in many ways, and it's going to be exorbitant. That interest at 9 to 14 per cent as we extrapolate that out over 60 years is mind-boggling. Albertans and businesses in Alberta can't afford that.

One of the hon. government members referred to the pulp and paper industry and what the costs would do, possibly losing the competitiveness of that industry. That's not the only one. I'm sure that many members have received concerns from their residents, from businesses of those residents, realizing that they can't afford this. I've talked to many restaurant owners and other ones that say that the cost of power makes it a give or go every month on whether or not they should keep their business open. If this new rate jumps in, we're going to continue to lose more businesses. That converts to job losses, and we just can't afford to go down here.

The most important thing and often the wisest thing that we need to do in a crisis situation is to sit down and think and reflect on what we're going to do rather than react because when you react, often you increase the problems of the crisis and the damage that's being done.

That's what this is. This is a reaction of this government to a needs application put out in 2004 that was defeated in the Court of Queen's Bench. What they looked at is: "We don't want to have to go through this all again. It's expensive. It's messy." My goodness, democracy is. That's the one thing that I love to paraphrase from old Churchill: democracy is the worst form of government, except for all others. Albertans love their democracy. They want to enshrine it and keep it here, but it seems like with this government, with their centralization of power and decision-making inside the cabinet, we're losing the democratic process. But more important: how are they to be held accountable? There's nothing we can do.

It's interesting. I believe that it was on the 8th of June this year that the order in council gave this authority to the minister already to declare the crisis and to move it forward, and Bill 50 just kind of enshrines and protects that on an ongoing basis. It just is not in the best interest of Albertans. We need to look at it.

Again, I want to go back to the root of the problem, and that, I believe, is the mandate that was given to AESO in how to operate. That mandate says that we are to build transmission lines and to ensure that the flow of electricity is unconstrained. We've had members get up, and they've talked about that we have a shortage or that we're pushing the limits on our power and we don't have the lines to do it. But it's interesting that if you look at AESO's reports, that occurs at 2 o'clock in the morning when we're exporting. We don't hit that peak during our own peak hours. We need to analyze that and realize that that is the essence, and the mandate needs to be changed.

Right now with the unconstrained, it doesn't matter what the cost is of building power lines. It's saying that it's unconstrained. I can assure you that if there's anything the constituents that I represent want unconstrained, it's 14th Street to 90th Avenue. They get up in the morning, and they're bogged down. This government says: well, we can't afford to spend, you know, the billions of dollars to build those overpasses and that we're going to have to just live with that constraint. Well, I don't think the electrical system is in the same crisis as the traffic in Calgary. If they want to declare it a crisis and they need to spend more money on infrastructure, maybe getting the flow of traffic going in southwest Calgary would be appreciated there.

Mr. Mason: They'll just have to go as electrons.

Mr. Hinman: The heat would be immense. When it just sits there idling, it's not good.

Anyway, there are just multiple problems with this that we're not addressing. Another interesting scenario was when I was talking to one electrical engineer who called me up, you know, and said: nothing has happened since the AESO report, the '07-08 plan, and implementation of Bill 50, that there's been no change, no massive difference. We have a recession. Generation has been announced in the south since then, which will alleviate the problem of constraint on that line, yet now we're in a crisis situation. Again, I want to repeat: we are not in a crisis situation. That's a fallacy. It's fearmongering. Have we got heads in a snowstorm or something, that they can't see? They're acting like we're in all these problems when we're not.

I'd also like to mention and go back, you know, to the needs document that needs to be filed with the AUC when there's a crisis situation or there's a problem known in the electrical grid. There has been no document filed to the AUC saying: there's a need for these upgrades; let's have AESO file that. But AESO's recent history hasn't been that squeaky clean. I've talked a couple of times of the reports that have come out and the court order saying that these people are biased. Again, I believe that the bias, though, really is because of the mandate which they've been constrained to work under, saying that we're supposed to have power lines that are unconstrained for generators. That just doesn't work. We need to back up and realize what the real problems are going forward.

It's also interesting because our own mandate and the laws here in Alberta – I've forgotten the acronym for the U.S. It's FERC. Basically, it looks for the cheapest way possible. We don't do that. A few of the hon. members in the opposition have talked about piping the gas and having local generation. We don't look at the cost.

It's also interesting, though, that report put out by the University of Calgary. There have been several members ask: well, what if gas goes to $9 or $12 a gigajoule? In that report from the U of C they actually say that with the cost of this overbuild, this $14 billion, and the increase that's going to go, gas would have to hit $65 a gigajoule in order to make this line economically viable. We haven't been there for a while, but the whole dynamic of the gas industry has changed completely in the last two years. Two years ago I was in that same boat, worried: what are we going to do when we run out of natural gas? Now that the U.S. is actually decreasing imports – they figure up to 3.1 tcf per year – we're going to have an abundance of gas because of the technology that's been developed here in Alberta on how to extract tight gas. We're not in the same situation. It could go forward. That's why I believe that we need an open and competitive market.

If a coal generation plant can come on stream and get up and running and they're competitive and they want to bid in there, that's great. But I don't think you're going to see any coal plants come forward because we're in such political instability throughout the world right now. We don't know what they're going to try to implement for a tax on the coal industry. Those people that have been wanting to try to develop and use clean coal are afraid because they don't know what new tax they're going to get hit with. Again, with the instability of government and changing things, like they did with the new royalty framework, it destroys the confidence of business. Investment is pulled.

I'd have to perhaps debate the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood in that he says that this is the biggest bungle. The $14 billion is a lot, but I think the new royalty framework may have cost Albertans a lot more as we go forward. But we can't afford to. So there are two mistakes that the people of Alberta can't afford. We need to look forward, not backwards. Again, in doing that, we realize that we do have time, and we have choice. We just can't all of a sudden declare a crisis when there isn't one and then push this through.

8:50

I want to talk again a little bit about the process that the AEUB used to go through and the Alberta Utilities Commission. What is the power of an actual needs hearing in front of the AUC? I think it's incredible. I think there are a lot of experts that would come forward. In the hearing, though, it's a semijudicial court. They have to follow those things, and it's appealable. It's not just listening. We get caught up on this idea of: "Oh, we've spoken to the public. We've heard from industry. Isn't that wonderful? We've had 327 open hearings." Experts don't always come forward in those areas.

Also interesting is the change and move to the crisis situation since three prominent individuals left the AESO. I'd be very interested that if, in fact, we went to a needs hearing, I think we would see those prominent individuals come back and say that there isn't a need, that we're not in a panic situation. And we should be looking for that. If anything, what we should be doing is looking for an inquiry on what has happened between 2008 and 2009, when this crisis developed, because if we had an inquiry, I really believe we'd find that there has been no crisis. Therefore, we wouldn't need to put in these two high-voltage PC – or is it DC? – lines. I can't remember now.

Again, who is it for? We really want to go back and realize that Alberta is an export province. What we need to look at is the efficiency of our system, the increased costs, increased taxes, losing our efficiency, our competitiveness in order to export our industry. We really do need to address it.

Is my time approximately up? Well, I guess I'll wrap up and see if there are any questions. I appreciate the time to address the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments and questions. The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. For the listening viewers at home, that was quite a rapid-fire, shotgun approach to talking about a piece of legislation. Most of the comments I don't believe had a whole lot to do with what it is we're talking about. However, the individual did mention or tried to mention something to do with the export business in the province. He somehow thinks that there's something derogatory or negative about exporting a commodity. I would like to ask the member, relative to his discussion, if he wouldn't mind explaining to us and to the public and to the House about the export of wheat, beef, oil and gas, petrochemical products. What has that done to disadvantage Albertans, generally, and would he agree or disagree that electricity is a commodity?

Mr. Hinman: Well, I thank the hon. minister for that question, but I'm not going to answer all the ones on the first one. I'm just going to answer the importance of exporting as a general thing. I'm not against export. I'm excited about it. We have a lot of carbon here in the province that we can generate. We can cogenerate up in Fort McMurray. We can possibly go to hydro electricity. But the problem is that right now the ratepayers in Alberta subsidize exported electricity. Merchant lines. Has the minister ever heard of or is he even familiar with the Montana-Alberta tie-line? That is a merchant line, and people want to put that in and pay for it. We don't need more government intervention and building things for industry if, in fact, the cogeneration is great.

If the government is going to be honest with Albertans and say whether or not they're going to have – it just leads to the question, it begs the question: have they said yes to Bruce Power to put in a nuclear facility, and in order to entice them here, they're saying that we're putting in these high-voltage DC lines, or PC lines, because they're politically connected to you, so that they come in? The problem is that subsidizing industry doesn't work. It hasn't worked in the auto industry. It hasn't worked in other industries. Merchant lines: they can put them in. They can export. I'm all for export. We do it with gas, wheat.

Oh, my goodness. Mr. Speaker, he spent more time on the question than I'm getting for the answer. The problem isn't the export. It's the fact that we don't subsidize industry to do that. We want them to be competitive and to choose to be here because of the great tax system that we have and the low costs.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, as a true fiscal conservative – you know, it's notable and noticeable the silence of the Prefab Four on this incredible boondoggle waste of taxpayers' money, which is going to hurt not only individual consumers but businesses as well. Does he think that what they're doing represents true fiscal conservatism in this province?

Mr. Hinman: Well, I thank the hon. member for that question. I was even more thankful to see him get up and realize that he needs to stand in place for businesses when they get overtaxed. That was a huge move forward.

Mr. Mason: Always have. Always have.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. We're obviously winning.

The true conservatives are slowly bringing people onboard, and I feel that as a true fiscal one, we will make great moves forward here as the budget comes forward in other areas. And why? Because the good people of Calgary-Glenmore say that we need to send Ed a message. We need to be fiscally responsible. We need local health care choices going on, and we don't need a centralized government with that power and decision being put into the cabinet and the Premier's office.

The Deputy Speaker: We have 56 seconds. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: I'm wondering if the Member for Calgary-Glenmore would agree that one of the hazards in exporting electricity is that we end up, through the process of exporting, integrating our transmission system into the same system that California and all the high-cost markets of the U.S. use. The only way that we can actually make that work is if we pay the same price the people of California pay. Does he realize that the advantage Alberta used to have with low-cost electricity was because we were self-contained? What's the benefit of exporting for the people of Alberta?

Mr. Hinman: That's an excellent question. I guess I'd start with backing up and referring to gas. You know how cheap gas was, natural gas, and everything else. If we didn't export anything, we'd have a massive surplus here in the province of Alberta, and it would be extremely cheap for all commodities. I understand your concern, and that's why we need merchant lines instead of public lines if, in fact, some company wants to set up for electricity.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there any other hon. members who wish to speak on the previous question?

Seeing none, the chair shall now put the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on the previous question carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 8:58 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

For the motion:

Calahasen	Jablonski	Prins
Campbell	Knight	Quest
Dallas	Leskiw	Rogers
Denis	Liepert	Sherman
Elniski	Lindsay	Tarchuk
Evans	Marz	VanderBurg
Fawcett	McQueen	Vandermeer
Forsyth	Mitzel	Woo-Paw
Hancock	Olson	Xiao
Horne

9:10

Against the motion:

Hinman	Mason	Taft
Kang	Pastoor	Taylor
MacDonald

Totals: For – 28 Against – 7

[Motion on previous question on Bill 50 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 49(3) and Beauchesne 521(2), I must now call the vote on the original question.

[Motion carried; Bill 50 read a second time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair shall call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 48
Crown's Right of Recovery Act

The Chair: We adjourned the debate on the amendment to it, so now we can continue on. Are there any questions? The hon. Member for Calgary – the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview. Sorry. It's a late night.

Dr. Taft: It's a late night. Maybe we should just all go home.

Mr. Denis: Is that a motion?

Dr. Taft: Would you support it?

Thanks, Mr. Chairman. This is the first chance I've had to rise on Bill 48, and I am aware that there is an amendment. At least, I should confirm. Yes, I'm sure there's an amendment still on the floor, an amendment moved by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. If that member hadn't proposed this amendment, we would have proposed the same thing because I think it gets to the heart of the problem with this bill. I think it's a good amendment, and I'd like to see it supported.

I need to check through Hansard from last night, but the amendment effectively proposes to strike the first part of the bill. The amendment proposes to strike out sections 34, 35, 36, and 37 of the bill. I think some of the arguments made last night by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona were pretty much right on the money, and I think it's worth repeating them.

I want to start with a broader point here, Mr. Speaker, which is that the way this bill is presented is very unfortunate. I think there's an attempt here at a sort of trickery that is unbecoming to a Legislature. It's the kind of thing we saw in Bill 44 in the spring. What we have here, effectively, is a bill that tries to do something quite sensible and reasonable and then folds into it something that is quite foolish and unreasonable. The sensible and reasonable thing is to empower the government to take tobacco companies to court to recover damages that tobacco use has caused to people's health and, therefore, added cost to the health care system. The sensible part of this is that this would enable the provincial government to recover the costs of treating Albertans who become sick from the use of tobacco. It's hard to argue against that. I think that part of it's good.

The part that's added on and probably uses the good idea as cover is the part that this amendment proposes to strike, and that's sections 34, 35, 36, and 37. Those portions speak specifically to recovering the health care costs that may result as a result of the commission of a criminal offence. I think it's a mistake to combine that with the tobacco recovery component. I think that the whole notion of empowering the government through this particular means to recover the costs from people who cause health care damages through the commission of a criminal offence is poorly thought through. I cannot see that it's going to be helpful, I cannot imagine that this is somehow going to reduce crime, and I think it is a misguided reaction to addressing a criminal issue.

I think there are lots of examples that we can easily think of. I believe the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona spoke of, say, a teenager breaking into a house, maybe a young drug addict who is breaking into a house to steal a television set or money to pay for the drug dose and injures himself and ends up in the hospital. Is the idea – and, presumably, it is for this government – that the government is then going to take this kid to court or take his family to court to try to recover the costs of that health care treatment? Think this through for a minute. How likely is it that we're going to recover anything from that person? Pretty unlikely. What are the cost-benefit analyses of this? How much is it going to cost to go after somebody like that in court? What are the likelihoods of benefits?

What are the unintended consequences of this? I mean, what is the impact, for example, on the person's family if it's a person on whom other people depend for income? Let's imagine it's a father of children or a mother of children who is caught in this situation. Committing a crime: we all agree that crime should be punished, but if there are significant health costs as a result of some activity from that crime, if there are children of the criminal who is involved in the crime and their parent is hauled up in front of a court to have their assets stripped, what are the consequences of this? What's going to happen to those kids?

Is this even the right approach to crime? Is it the sort of thing that is realistically going to diminish crime rates? I can't imagine that it is, Mr. Chairman. In fact, I think there's a possibility that it will inadvertently make crime problems worse. It will encourage people to fight criminal charges more aggressively. It will discourage them from plea bargaining. It will discourage them from pleading guilty and getting treatment if they've committed their crime because of a drug addiction. I just can't see the rationale in this.

Now, if the Minister of Health and Wellness or the Minister of Justice or anybody else can put forward a compelling case of how this is going to work, I'd be interested.

Mr. Liepert: I'd be happy to.

9:20

Dr. Taft: Okay. The minister has promised he will, so I will look forward to him engaging in this debate.

I think that the notion of this amendment makes sense. I think that there's also a risk from some of the analyses we've read that the constitutionality of this could be challenged, or it could be challenged as violating the Canada Health Act. So I'll look forward to the Minister of Health and Wellness debating on this and explaining why their position makes sense. I welcome him to take the floor.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, I was unable to be here last night, and I don't have the privilege of Hansard or the Blues in front of me, but I do have the Hansard of second reading debate of last week. I read with some interest. It's late at night, so I'm not sure that I have the right words to describe it, but, you know, the hypocrisy of our friends across the way. I'm suggesting that it is all right to go after tobacco companies, but it's a legal product that is being sold, and we're going to go after them if we so choose. That's all right. That's okay for them. It is not all right in their eyes, Mr. Chairman, if someone commits a criminal offence. Somehow that person or that individual is less guilty than the tobacco companies. That is complete hypocrisy.

Let me give you an example, a purely hypothetical example. You have an individual who decides in the middle of the night to break into the Calgary Zoo. He goes one step further and decides he's going to break into the tiger cage and challenge the tiger. Purely hypothetical, Mr. Chairman. Guess what happens? The tiger takes on the character, and he's hospitalized for quite some time. Who's paying his hospital bill? All of us as taxpayers. Because some hypothetical individual decided to take on a tiger in the middle of the night. He's charged, and he's convicted of a criminal offence. Is that any less of a reason to go after an individual for health care costs than it is to go after tobacco companies? I don't think so. Well, why is it?

An Hon. Member: Bleeding hearts.

Mr. Liepert: That's right. Bleeding hearts. That's what we've got over there, Mr. Chairman.

You know what? This amendment – the Member for Edmonton-Centre stands up and says that they'd like to delay this so they could hear from independent thinkers like the John Howard Society. I cannot believe that's who we're going to hear from and get an unbiased opinion on whether what we're doing is right or wrong.

An Hon. Member: How about zookeepers?

Mr. Liepert: You know what the zookeeper would say? The zookeeper would say: go after that guy for his health care costs.

Now, the Member for Edmonton-Riverview just talked about: how is this going to be a deterrent to criminal activity? Well, let me tell you, Mr. Chairman. Let's talk to Mothers Against Drunk Driving. That is a criminal offence, and when someone gets behind that wheel, decides to drive that vehicle, ends up in an accident, ends up in our health care system, and costs the system hundreds of thousands of dollars, that's not necessarily a poor individual. That individual may be very wealthy, and if we have the ability to go after that individual for those health care costs because he or she has created a criminal offence, I think we owe it to the taxpayers of Alberta to have that right to make that decision.

I promised the Member for Edmonton-Riverview I'd give him a couple of examples. I have. I don't want to delay it too long. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that we should defeat this amendment, get it over with, pass this particular piece of legislation, and get on with it.

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Well, I think the hon. minister of health is kind of making a zoo out of this proceeding. I think there's a complete disconnect between his approach and what I think is sensible and reasonable to do. This minister is a master of the Trojan Horse to get in the door on what's obviously, you know, an unpopular case. I'll give you an example: the transgender surgery issue. It was a way of introducing delisting of existing services by picking on a vulnerable group that didn't have much political support. Chiropractors might by some be considered to be in the same boat.

Now, no politician has ever lost votes by picking on convicted criminals. You know, they've refined this to a fine art in the United States, but the fact remains that there is criminal law, which prescribes penalties for criminals, and it involves the loss of your personal freedom. It does not take away all of your basic human rights, but it prescribes specifically what the penalties are. What this minister is doing and what's clear from his comments is to turn the health care system into a means of punishment for those individuals who he thinks are not responsible or criminals or whatever. What this looks like to me, Mr. Chairman, is the first step to charging people for their health care costs not based on their medical needs but based on other factors, in this case behaviour.

Now, I think that you could extend this, I suppose. You could say that a government that makes major mistakes in the delivery of health care, for example, is – well, it's not a good example because they're financially irresponsible anyway. [interjections] You could say, yeah. Thanks very much, hon. members. I think there are lots of stupid behaviours. Let me just put it this way: lots of stupid behaviours that might make someone liable, if we took this logic to extreme, for their health care. If somebody graduates from a university and then turns out to be not too bright and makes a bad mistake, maybe the government will be looking to get them to pay back their costs of their education.

This is really going down the wrong road, Mr. Chairman. What we're really seeing here is the thin edge of the wedge, the first attempt to say that the government is not responsible, that the health care system is not responsible for provision of health care to those who need it, that if their behaviour is inadequate in some way that doesn't satisfy the government's sense of what is acceptable behaviour, they can then be charged for their health care costs. I would strongly suspect that if this is passed, there are going to be other examples.

Based on the minister's comments, I think it's clear that he has in mind recovering health care costs from people and eliminating the basic principle that we have, which is one payer. We have a one-payer system. The Premier and the health minister have repeatedly said in the House when we ask them about private health care – they dodge it by saying that it is going to be publicly funded, but this is an exception to that principle. This is not publicly funded. This is charging people, sending them the bill like they do in the United States for their health care. To me this is nothing but a very sneaky way to begin undermining the principle of a single-payer health care system.

I don't think it has anything to do with criminals at all, Mr. Chairman. I think they wanted to bring forward a bill. The camouflage of this bill is charging tobacco companies, which consistently work to produce products that everyone knows are damaging to their health, and it's generally accepted that they have some liabilities. This has been established in the courts, certainly in the United States, and there have been some major settlements. So on the basis of that camouflage, they're slipping in something much more insidious, and that is that we're going to take a category of person and start charging them for their health care.

9:30

Is the next step then, Mr. Chairman, to charge people for other reckless behaviour? Are we going to start charging smokers? Are we going to start charging other people who engage in somewhat risky health behaviors? If someone gets a sexually transmitted disease, are they going to start charging them for their treatment? Where will this lead us? I think that this is a very, very dangerous, slippery slope, and I think this amendment is absolutely essential to preserving the principles upon which our health care system is based, and that is that there is a single payer. Without that principle, Mr. Chairman, we're opening the door to a very, very serious undermining of our public health care system.

I think that people need to look at this not as, you know, punishing criminals, who have already been punished by the courts – and there's legislation to provide for that – but, in fact, to establish a principle that in certain instances people are responsible for their own health care. The minister has used the case of some individuals in the Calgary Zoo who – and I don't know if they were drinking or what the problem was – got into a very, very bad situation. If someone speeds and gets into an accident, are they responsible for their health care? Are they responsible for the health care of the people that they were involved in the accident with? Or what about other people that were in the vehicle? I think this is a dangerous precedent, and I think that all hon. members really need to think very carefully about what is actually intended here.

Maybe some members get this and this is a direction that they'd like to see, but then I think they should just say so. They should stand up and say: "We're Progressive Conservative MLAs, and we don't believe that the health care system is responsible for the cost of necessary medical treatment. We think that depending on your case, either we'll pay for your medical treatment or we won't, depending on our judgment about your behaviour and whether or not it's acceptable to us." If that's what they want to say, I think that they should stand up and say it and let the people of Alberta judge whether or not that is, in fact, the kind of government that they want to see, the kind of MLAs that they want to see responsible for their health care system because that's exactly what it is.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge all members of the Assembly to support the amendment to Bill 48, the Crown's Right of Recovery Act. I think that the people of Alberta will benefit very significantly if we stop this pernicious and insidious section of this legislation.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I'll keep my comments brief. I want to say on the record that I appreciate the minister of health wading in and debating. I thought there were good responses there, and I also need to respond. Fundamentally, what we have here are two different approaches. It sort of feels like an Old Testament, New Testament sort of difference; you know, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. If somebody does something wrong, you punish them versus an approach in which you try to solve a problem. I feel like on this side in the Official Opposition and the third party we're more interested in solving the problem than just handing out moral judgment.

The example of the drunk driver, I think, gets exactly to the point that I was trying to make about unintended consequences. Let's imagine for a moment, with the Christmas season coming up, at the end of an office day a woman working in the office goes out with some of her friends for a few drinks and makes a terrible mistake in judgment, gets in a bad accident on the way home, which leads to serious health costs. She's on her way home to see her kids and her husband. If the family is bankrupt because of the health costs, who's really paying? The kids and the husband. I think that's exactly the kind of misguided or unintended consequence that's going to too easily happen if this legislation passes.

I also think, just building on what the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood said, that this is a slippery slope. If we start going after criminals for health care costs, who's next? Are we going to go after the obese for health care costs? Are we going to go after smokers for health care costs? Are we going to go after the elderly for health care costs? Where does it stop? This goes against the whole philosophy of sensible health care. It'll be a big win for the lawyers and maybe someday for insurance companies, but it's not good public policy.

I will finish my comments by just saying that there's a clear difference, at least in my mind, between going after big tobacco corporations versus going after individuals. Large tobacco corporations, who make billions of dollars, exist as corporate entities. Totally different legally than going after an individual. There is a big difference there in my mind, Mr. Chairman.

Obviously the minister and I disagree on this one; that's what these debates are about. But I will repeat that I appreciated his getting up and putting his cards on the table.

Thank you.

The Chair: On the amendment, the hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: I want to add one last category to my previous comments. You know, what about people who take risks in a recreational sense, for example? What about extreme athletes? What if somebody, you know, goes flying down a steep ski slope and breaks their leg? What about a parachutist who falls and injures himself? There are lots of people whose behaviour costs the health care system money. Is it the government's intention, is it this minister's intention that we will eventually get to the point where all of those people are having to pay for their health care? That's what they do in the United States. That's not what the people of Alberta want to see.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Let's be clear, Mr. Chairman. And this member knows exactly what's in the legislation. The legislation is very clear: convicted of a criminal offence. I don't recall any skiers going down a hill who have been charged and convicted of a criminal offence. So as is typical with this particular leader, he's – well, we'll just leave it at that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Mason: You know, we're talking here about the extension of the principle that the minister is establishing in this legislation, and he knows that.

The Chair: Any other hon. members wish to speak on the amendment?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

[The clauses of Bill 48 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

9:40

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd move that the Committee of the Whole rise and report Bill 48.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 48. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act

Mr. Liepert: I move third reading of Bill 48.

I think there's been adequate debate on this bill, and I would encourage all members to support Bill 48 in third reading.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak to third reading of Bill 48, the Crown's Right of Recovery Act. I want to just indicate that I think there are some positive things in this bill. Certainly, the role of tobacco companies in promoting products which are known to kill has been a very, very serious problem for the health care system. Governments in Canada and the United States have tried to deal with this situation. In British Columbia, New Brunswick, and Ontario they have already launched lawsuits against tobacco companies, and Quebec, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland and Labrador have also introduced legislation allowing them to sue tobacco companies. In 2005 a Supreme Court of Canada ruling unanimously upheld the constitutionality of the B.C. legislation. So, you know, other provinces have gone down this path ahead of Alberta, and I think that there is real merit in doing so.

Provisions regarding tobacco companies have received the support of the Canadian Cancer Society and the Edmonton tobacco reduction network. Mr. Speaker, I do make a very clear and strong distinction between suing tobacco companies, who make their business and make their profits by producing and marketing products that are known to cause cancer and death and all manner of other diseases, many of which are fatal. These companies are not being charged for their care. They're being charged in civil court for liabilities that they incur and costs that they impose on the health care system, that has to take care of the people who have consumed their products, but they are not being charged for their health care. That is a fundamental difference that the minister doesn't see.

When we get into the other provisions of the act, that we tried to amend just now, we have the government deciding to attempt to recover health care costs from individuals based on their behaviour. Of course, they've picked convicted criminals because, you know, who in their right mind would stand up and defend convicted criminals? They are the perfect victim, as far as this government is concerned, because they have almost no social status, and no one is prepared to stand up for them. In fact, what the government is doing is charging them for health care. That's something that we have always opposed in this country. This is a fundamental question which underlies our entire approach to health care in this country. I dare say that we may find that this provision of the act would be challenged and found wanting. I just want to raise that question, that I'm not convinced at all that this legislation will stand up in the courts.

It's unfortunate that the government has chosen to include these provisions because it amounts to, in my view, a poison pill, which makes the act impossible to support. I regret saying that because I strongly support the ability to recover costs from very profitable corporations that market tobacco, but I wouldn't support taking away or charging the CEO or the board members of those companies for their health care. That would be crossing a line and making something entirely different out of a situation.

It's extremely unfortunate that this government has not done what the other provincial governments have done and just given us a straight-up piece of legislation that allows us to sue tobacco companies for the costs that they impose on our health care system. That's what was done in other provinces. But, no, this government and this minister had to mix it up, had to combine a legitimate exercise of the legislative authority of the province of Alberta with another misguided attempt to undermine our health care system. That's what we've seen from this minister time and time again. We saw it when they started to take away things that were funded under the health care system. We've seen it repeatedly when this minister gets into the health care system. We see that it is consistently being undermined and turned into something very different from what most Albertans, I think, want.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, because he's combined two things here that ought not to have been combined, one of which I strongly support and another which I strongly oppose, I'm unable to support this bill, and I would urge all other members to do the same.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I haven't had a chance to speak to the parts of this legislation that I like yet, so I want to speak to them briefly now. Our caucus, actually, strongly supports the idea of suing tobacco companies for the damages that they have created. I think people are widely aware that the tobacco industry has for decades practised enormously deceitful marketing on the public, and I think evidence continues to come out from the archives of the tobacco industry that they knew long, long ago that tobacco smoking was causing illness and death. They knew that in the '60s, in the '50s. They had solid scientific evidence, and they kept it buried. They denied it, they lied, they misled, and they profited off death. I don't think there's any other way of putting it. So I have no compunction at all about going after those corporations, and I encourage the government to do so aggressively and squeeze them as hard as possible.

9:50

I want to acknowledge the good efforts of the many antismoking and tobacco-reduction organizations who have put in for many, many years hard hours of effort and countless amounts of time and commitment to fight back against the tobacco industry. We're seeing the results of that. This government has done some of the right things in raising taxes on tobacco and taking other steps to discourage tobacco use. This is one more step in that direction.

But as the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood said, taking all that good stuff and then folding in the other components that we tried to take out through the amendment in committee just taints what otherwise was a really good idea. It's kind of shameful. It feels like it's underhanded and unbecoming. If the government wanted to deal with that issue concerning recovering costs from criminals, then why not do it in its own piece of legislation? Why sneak it through undercover? I think that reflects badly on this government. It's unnecessary and poorly managed, and I think that for that reason, frankly, I don't feel like I can support this legislation. It's too deep a betrayal of what to me would be good and responsible government, so we will be opposing it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 48 read a third time]

Bill 51

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move Bill 51, Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, for third reading.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

The chair shall now call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 51 read a third time]

Bill 54Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I hereby move Bill 54 for third reading, the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009.

I had some further comments prepared, but most of them have been repeated in past readings, and I will conclude my comments with that.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. It's a pleasure to rise and get another opportunity to speak on Bill 54. There has been a lot of discussion on this bill. Certainly, a lot of the legislative framework that's presented in this bill is reflective of the all-party committee that was struck. If this bill were to be adopted – and I'm sure it will be – there will be new standards for organizations intended to make compliance easier. There will be new notification standards for organizations. Also, there are some timelines that will be changed, and there will be changed processes for the commissioner as well.

I think, certainly, that when one looks at this, it is at least a step in the right direction. We on this side of the House are pleased that the government has finally gotten around – it's almost two years later – to incorporating some of the suggestions of the all-party committee. But we have to be wary and mindful of some of the discussions that occurred around this bill, and I'm sure all members of the Assembly are.

We have to note the views of the Information and Privacy Commissioner, I believe, before we conclude debate at third reading. We talked about this earlier in debate, but the Information and Privacy Commissioner released a statement near the end of October declaring that his office was extremely disappointed that the government at this time, through this bill had not opted to bring all nonprofits under the scope of PIPA. The commissioner argued that the limitations of the act would create confusion and allow certain nonprofits to operate with very little, if any, supervision. I hope that at some point we can take heed of the concern by the Privacy Commissioner and make sure that his view and his opinion is respected, and hopefully in this case it won't be a serious matter. It could be, but hopefully it won't.

While there is a lot in this bill that is very reasonable, a lot has changed when it comes to the way businesses and nonprofits collect and use personal information. We need to make sure that the debate on this bill is not rushed through the Assembly. I don't think it has been in this case.

In conclusion, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont for his work on this bill. Hopefully, this will make our information laws sounder in this province, and hopefully the concerns or the cautions that were expressed by the Privacy Commissioner will not turn out to be a significant barrier for our information and privacy laws.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak on this bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 54 read a third time]

Bill 55Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move Bill 55, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009, for third reading.

This very straightforward bill simply extends the life of the act from 2010 to 2016 but is very important for Albertans. It's very important for Albertans because it keeps in place the mechanism which allows us to decide to hold another provincial Senate selection election in order to make sure that we have elected Senate candidates available for the federal government to appoint if and when a vacancy should come open. Very important for Albertans because we still await the movement by the federal government in reforming the Senate in the way it should be reformed so that we can have an equal, effective, and elected Parliament which represents not only the population basis of the country but also the regional interests of the country.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask for support for this bill.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

10:00

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise in third reading to debate this incredibly thin bill. There's really not much to object to in this bill since, as the hon. Government House Leader said just a moment ago, it simply extends the sunset clause for the senatorial elections until December 31, 2016.

I'm of a couple of minds about this. I can't help but notice that we seem to manage fine here in the province of Alberta with just one house of parliament, and all provinces except Quebec manage with just one Legislative Assembly, one legislative body. If one wanted to, I think you could extend that into an argument that, well, you know, we've been watching this triple-E proposal – elected, equal, effective Senate – limp along that now Senator Bert Brown first proposed back in the last century. Just nothing substantial yet, in my view, has come of it, so you could make the point of view that maybe we should just do away with the Senate, or maybe the federal government should just do away with the Senate since, obviously, it's not our job.

To those of us – and I count myself as one – who think that the concept of a triple-E Senate is a darn fine idea, all I would like to say is that I would like to urge the government of the province of Alberta to do within its power whatever it can to cajole, coerce, lean on, persuade the federal government to get going on this. You know, I suppose having Senators-in-waiting – and the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development was a Senator-in-waiting for a number of years and got left at the altar . . .

Mr. MacDonald: I didn't know he was a Senator-in-waiting.

Mr. Taylor: Yes, he was. He was. His period of waiting expired in 2004 if I remember correctly, hon. member. Yeah. September 20, 2004, he sort of lost the gig that he never got, but he got one in here, so I don't suppose it mattered too much to him.

The notion of having Senators-in-waiting that were elected by the people of Alberta is a bit of an improvement, but it's a theoretical improvement, really, in many respects if you don't have a government – we've seen times when we did have a federal government that would appoint an elected Senator from Alberta to a Senate vacancy, and we've seen times when governments wouldn't. When they don't, you know, it doesn't really do much good to have an elected Senator-in-waiting waiting for an appointment that never comes.

Even if every Senator that we elected was appointed to fill Senate vacancies in the federal Senate, even if the other provinces decided to follow our model and start electing their Senators, we still have two very fundamental problems here, that the Senate is not equal and not as effective as it could be. You know, the rationale behind the triple-E Senate has to be the American model, the bicameral houses of Congress, where you have the House of Representatives, which is representative by population, and you have the Senate, where you have an equal number of Senators from every state, and it's a counterbalance on the rep-by-pop approach. Makes sense. California has the same population as Canada, 34 million. Montana has fewer people than cows, you know? It does.

Dr. Taft: So does Alberta, actually.

Mr. Taylor: Well, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview might be right. We might have more cows than people, too.

But the point is that having two Senators from Montana gives the people of Montana the ability to balance off the disadvantage that they have in the House of Representatives when, you know, their representatives are overwhelmed by the number of representatives from the state of California, for instance.

There's some wisdom behind this. I know that from conversations I've had with Senator Brown going back many years, he is a firm believer and a firm proponent of the entire triple-E concept. One E out of three is not good enough.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge the Government House Leader and all members of the government to start a massive lobbying effort, even if you have to register, to talk the federal government into taking further action on this so that the concept of the triple-E Senate can come to full fruition.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question on the bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 55 read a third time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that the House adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 10:06 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1887
Division	1896

Committee of the Whole

Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act	1897
---	------

Third Reading

Bill 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act	1899
Bill 51 Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1900
Bill 54 Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009	1901
Bill 55 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009	1901

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Thursday, November 19, 2009

Issue 60

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, November 19, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure for me this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 72 enthusiastic and inquisitive grade 6 students from St. Basil Catholic school, located in my constituency of Calgary-North West in my home community of Tuscany. I get to know many of these students personally because I've had a chance to be a parent volunteer in their classes over the years, a soccer coach, and a hockey coach, and I have one special student in that group, my daughter Jasmine Blackett. Accompanying the students are their teachers, Anil Dolan, Marianne Murray, Carolyn Krahn, and teacher's aide Julia Reynolds as well as 13 parent volunteers. I won't go through the whole list. They are seated in the members' and public galleries. I'd ask that they would please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to recognize and celebrate two people who are involved with Concrete Theatre, which is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year. As you know from hearing me in this Assembly, being able to keep a theatre alive and thriving for 20 years is not an easy feat. Concrete Theatre was formed and has carried on a long-standing tradition in Edmonton of social action theatre and has also come to specialize in theatre for young audiences and actually produces a theatre of new plays for young audiences, called the Sprouts Festival. Today I would like to welcome to the Assembly – and would you please rise – Mieko Ouchi, who was a cofounder and is still artistic director of the theatre. With her today is Debbie Giesbrecht, who is the general manager of the theatre. Please welcome them and congratulate them.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of Alberta's registered nursing students, who are in the members' gallery up behind me today. I'd ask them to rise as I introduce them. These students are here because they're concerned about this government's plan to cut beds and services and restrict the hiring of nurses. They have spent four years getting educated as nurses. They want to work, and Alberta needs them. They're here to make sure that we get that message. Please give these bright students, the future of Alberta's health care system, a warm welcome and some real encouragement.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you Helen Cashman, a constituent who attends Avalon junior high school. Helen is an avid dancer and volunteer with the Ceilidh Dance Academy, and she's also the co-president of the Avalon junior high school student council. Helen is very interested in politics and had her father contact my office to acquire a seat in the Legislature to view question period. I'd now like Helen and her father, Paul Cashman, who are both seated in the public gallery, to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real honour and privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly a very special young lady in my life, who has been a great example. She's caring, loving, very compassionate, always wants to help her fellow beings. She's currently going to school at NAIT to become a respiratory therapist. I'd like to introduce my daughter Janna Hinman, who's here to see the proceedings of this Assembly today.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a real privilege for me today to introduce a local businessman and entrepreneur, who just happens to be an amazing father, and he is going to soon be the father of the bride, who is my scheduling assistant, Mr. Doug Hoffman and his daughter Lindsay. She's never seen the House in motion. Glad to have you here. Please join me in welcoming them to the Leg. Assembly.

Statement by the Speaker

Fifth Anniversary of Elected Members

The Speaker: Hon. members, five years ago this Sunday will mark the anniversary of an election in the province of Alberta. On November 22, 2004, the following members were elected to this Assembly for the first time: the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, the hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration, the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, the hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security, the hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations, the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, the hon. Member for Peace River, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, and the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie. It is their fifth anniversary this Sunday, and if this Assembly had a pension plan for MLAs, they would now be vested.*

Congratulations to all of them.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Recognition of 30 Years of Service

Hon. Ken Kowalski, Speaker

Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. A very important milestone will come to pass over the weekend, and I think it is only fitting that the members of this Assembly take a moment to recognize and pay tribute to this historic occasion. Saturday, November 21, 2009, marks the 30th anniversary of the Speaker's service as a member of this Assembly. [Standing ovation] More than a third of that time has been spent in the Speaker's chair, presiding over the proceedings of this House.

*See page 1905, left column, para. 8, and page 1913, right column, para. 7

Mr. Speaker, they say that leadership is born of great character, which confirms my personal belief that you are quite a character. It is your fairness and objectivity that underline your effectiveness as Speaker of the Legislature of this great province, it is your spirit and commitment that make you an effective representative for your constituents, and it is your humour and your vision that make you a respected colleague and friend to all of us in the House.

Mr. Speaker, you have seen a lot of changes in the last 30 years. In fact, you have been the driving force, really, behind all of these changes over the 30 years, changes that benefit all Albertans. Having occupied many different offices during your political career, you were dubbed by the press at one time as Mr. Everything and Minister of Everything. Wear these titles proudly as they reflect the diverse experience that has shaped your term of service. From the Oldman dam in southern Alberta to the Alberta Special Waste Management Corporation in northern Alberta to the reflecting pools right here on the Legislature Grounds, these lasting monuments to your energy and to your enthusiasm stand throughout this province, paying tribute to your dedication and commitment to public service for the betterment of all citizens. Once a teacher of history, Mr. Speaker, your many accomplishments are now a treasured part of Alberta's history.

I speak on behalf of all members of the Assembly when I say: thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is truly an honour and privilege to serve with you. Happy 30th anniversary. [applause]

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a privilege to stand and recognize you as the Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock and add that at the AAMD and C lunch today I had the privilege of sitting in for you at your table and speaking on your behalf to your constituents.

Dr. Taft: Did you announce new funding?

Dr. Swann: I announced no new funding.

Very few parliamentarians have the privilege of serving for 30 years, and, Mr. Speaker, you should be very proud of this accomplishment. You've established an unusual degree of trust and respect from your constituents and some level of decorum in the Legislature in the province of Alberta.

Even if I weren't a member in the Legislature, I would still be grateful to the Speaker for stepping forward and accepting the challenges of public, political life. As every member here knows, it's not the easiest nor the least stressful calling in the world, but the Speaker has managed it for three decades, and that with a full head of hair, I might add. However long the Speaker serves as MLA, I trust that he continues to serve his constituents with diligence and enjoys peace, health, and happiness in his personal life.

Congratulations on 30 years of service, Mr. Speaker. While our ideologies may differ, I think we can agree that serving the public and upholding the principles of a free and democratic society are both a vital and a special privilege. Whether we've served in this Assembly for 30 years or three, we all have a duty to be true to our values to help the citizens of this great province enjoy a happier, healthier, fuller life. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms. Notley: Yes. I rise to seek the consent of the House to allow the leader of the third party to respond to this statement.

The Speaker: On this occasion may I humbly implore the Assembly to give unanimous consent?

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Proceed, hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much. You use your discretion judiciously, I have to say, Mr. Speaker.

On behalf of the NDP opposition I echo the comments of my colleagues and add our congratulations on your three decades of service as a Member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta. It is a rare thing, indeed, for all members of the House to agree on anything, but we do agree that your 30 years of service are something to be recognized and that your accomplishments in those 30 years should be applauded.

Mr. Speaker, you balance the qualities of firmness and flexibility while allowing differences of opinion, at the same time reining in acrimony and hostility. Free speech is the hallmark of our parliamentary system, and the Speaker is its guardian. It is a job that is in good hands with you in the chair, Mr. Speaker.

Congratulations on your anniversary. [applause]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, do you seek unanimous consent as well?

Mr. Hinman: I was going to ask for unanimous consent for the hon. independent member of the House.

The Speaker: Would the Assembly agree to such a request?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Mr. Boutilier: It's a beautiful day.

Mr. Speaker, indeed, you have a full head of hair.

Second of all, from all the comments that have been made here today, I recall visiting your constituency and speaking at one of your constituency dinners. I remember the constituents in Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock saying: he cares. What more can be said of one who serves in public service but that he cares? I know you continue to view this honour and privilege to serve as Speaker and a member for the constituency of Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, and on behalf of the members and the constituents of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo we say thank you for your public service and continued public service for the many, many years to come.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, I would ask for unanimous consent for the member of the Wildrose party to offer comments.

The Speaker: Shall such a request be granted?

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker and all members of this Assembly. It truly is an honour to be here today as we celebrate your 30th anniversary. It's an awesome milestone. I just regret that I took off 18 months, that I wasn't able to be recognized with five years. It's been a privilege.

There are a few things that have been mentioned about the hon. Speaker that I'd like to reiterate. Being from southern Alberta, it's just been a major accomplishment to have the Oldman River dam. It's added life to southern Alberta. That was a very controversial and tough and hard-fought battle, and on behalf of all those people in southern Alberta I wish to thank the Speaker for that.

He mentioned earlier the five-year pension plan. Many of the good people that I've known over the years have loved their work so well that they've never retired to go on. I wish the best to the Speaker that he might wish to do that and save Alberta taxpayers any transition money that would be going, that he'll continue in his seat.

It's an honour and a privilege. I've always appreciated the open door and the advice he has given. Though I haven't always agreed with it, it's been beneficial, and like I say, it's always been there, and the expertise was there. I wish you all the best going forward. May you have many more years.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you all very, very much for your kind words and your kindness. I've always viewed it as a privilege to be an elected representative in the province of Alberta. I've been very fortunate. I've been very fortunate to have the constituents that I have and to be able to represent the three different constituencies that I've been able to represent.

As importantly, I've met a lot of outstanding individuals who have chosen to serve in their very unselfish manner as a Member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta. You are all part of that, and I think Alberta is well served by your commitment. I'm just a mirror of what you are, and I am just humbled by the fact that I've been able to do this now for 30 years. It's been a choice, a desire, and there still is fire in the belly. Hopefully, there will be good health into the future.

I also want to recognize the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, who was elected five years ago this weekend as well.*

Thank you all very much.

[The Speaker was presented with a gold Mace pin by the Premier, the Leader of the Official Opposition, and the leader of the third party] [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: Thank you very much. This is a Mace pin with the number 30 on it. Many of you should be here for 30 years as well.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Education Leadership Recognition Awards

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's kindergarten to grade 12 education system is recognized as one of the best in the world. High curriculum standards, excellent learning resources, well-trained teachers, and strong assessment programs all contribute to its excellent reputation. And students along with the teachers and principals are recognized for this success through various initiatives and events.

School board trustees and superintendents are cornerstones for Alberta's students, teachers, and principals to ensure that they soar to great heights. Without their due diligence and hard work we would have very little to celebrate. That is why the minister's education leadership recognition awards, also known as the MEL-RAs, are so important. Each year school board trustees and superintendents throughout the province are recognized for the positive impact they have in the lives of students each and every day. These awards recognize jurisdiction leadership teams for significant improvements and/or very high achievement in a number of categories within their jurisdictions.

1:50

Alberta Education is honouring award recipients at five events across the province throughout the month of November. The Alberta School Boards Association, the Alberta School Councils' Association, the Association of School Business Officials of Alberta, the College of Alberta School Superintendents, and the Alberta Teachers' Association, Mr. Speaker, have played a significant role in creating these awards.

I am pleased and honoured to rise today to recognize all the jurisdiction leadership teams for their continued hard work and dedication to advance all of the passion, talents of the students and youth in Alberta's K to 12 education system and to acknowledge the continued support of education stakeholders within the province. Heartfelt congratulations.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health System Reform

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The entire October '09 Auditor General's report shows that the transition to one provincial health authority was an utter financial disaster: budgets not being approved, millions of dollars being misreported, and the final result a $1.3 billion deficit. It's no wonder the minister has no clear idea what is happening in his ministry with the lack of communication during this long transition. This minister takes no accountability for what has happened in this ministry. To the Premier: how can the Premier defend the minister of health's negligence in not ensuring that a board with billions of dollars would have an approved budget and business plan?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I stand by the decision on amalgamating nine regions and two of the other affiliated boards into one rather than doing nine year-end statements, nine budgets. We're all the same taxpayers in the province of Alberta. We now have one board serving all constituents of this province with one financial report and one budget. It does mean that every jurisdiction has to, you know, print their own cheques for their own staff and move staff around and account for the pension and some of the holiday pay, et cetera. They all work within the province of Alberta. It was a good move, and it saved $650 million in administrative expenses.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. But how can Albertans trust this Premier to deal with a $1.3 billion deficit in health when his minister of health failed to ensure the Health Services budget even got approved?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there is an operating deficit within the Alberta Health Services Board. That is why I've said many times in this House that we're a province of 3 and a half million people spending close to $13 billion. All Albertans are telling me that there is enough money in the system, to just make sure that we get more value for the dollars that we have invested in health, and that's what we're doing.

*See page 1903, right column, paragraph 9

Dr. Swann: Well, the complete disconnect between what Alberta Health and Wellness is saying and Alberta Health Services is providing was shown on Tuesday when neither the minister nor the Premier knew what Health Services' plans were for the Sheldon Chumir centre in Calgary. Can the Premier today tell downtown Calgarians what will happen to their 24-hour urgent care service?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure what the member is referring to because he threw out a rumour the other day. We checked on the rumour. It has no fact. The Sheldon Chumir centre is operating 24/7, is going to continue to operate 24/7. Does he know something that we don't know? He's accusing us of not being honest and truthful. Those are the facts.

The Speaker: The hon. leader. Second Official Opposition main question.

Nursing Recruitment

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the lack of a proper business plan and budget by Alberta Health Services Board has led to uncertainty for nurses and nursing students in Alberta. On the Alberta Health Services website there are roughly 195 nursing positions posted, mostly temporary, casual, and part-time. There are nursing students in the gallery that are here to find out some answers to questions they've been asking. To the minister: what does the minister have to say to nursing students graduating this December when they have no jobs in Alberta due to the fiscal mismanagement at Alberta Health Services?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, this member is trying to leave an impression. He used the term: there are no jobs in Alberta. That is factually incorrect. Hiring will continue through Alberta Health Services as required, and yes, Mr. Speaker, this particular administration has taken a look at the requirements in ensuring that all of our professionals are working to their full capacity. But we also have a situation within Alberta Health Services today where a year ago many of our nurses were working part-time. Now, all of a sudden with the change in the economy many of these nurses have moved to a full-time position, thereby using up some of that gap that was there earlier, the shortage for nurses.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the minister is driving nursing graduates out of the province to find work because the few nursing positions available are limited to internal hires. Yes or no, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Liepert: Well, one of the things that the new CEO had to do was to get control of the organization and ensure that there was an appropriate process in place for hiring because we had different hiring practices in the various regions around the province. That process is ongoing, and as the hiring initiatives take place, there will be plenty of opportunities for our graduates in this province, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Swann: Again to the minister: can the minister tell Albertans how much money Alberta Health Services is wasting on full-page advertisements in national nursing publications when Health Services is concentrating on internal hiring?

Mr. Liepert: I'm not aware of any particular advertisements, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Postsecondary Tuition Fees

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister of advanced education continues to dodge questions on hefty tuition increases by claiming that no proposal has crossed his desk. Clearly a newspaper hasn't crossed his desk either as proposals from NAIT and from the universities of Calgary and Alberta are being widely discussed, frightening students and affecting their future enrolment decisions. The time for platitudes is over. Will the minister of advanced education continue to dodge this question, or will he clearly state that he intends to allow postsecondary institutions to break his own government's tuition caps?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a darn good thing that this government doesn't base its policy and its decisions on the research of newspaper articles. This government has put more money per capita into their postsecondary than many jurisdictions in North America this year. In fact, on November 2, if he'd care to go back in Hansard and read on November 2, I answered the question as it related to proposals that would come from me to postsecondaries, that we would look at them. They had to be real. They had to be fair. They had to be equitable. They had to have a very strong argument on a case by case basis. Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is wrong. There has been no proposal cross my desk.

Mr. Chase: Well, I guess my comment would be: University of Calgary, University of Alberta, NAIT, get the minister's address.

The slowdown in this construction industry is squeezing the employment prospects of Alberta's tradesmen and -women. Why would the minister want to place more pressure on Alberta's supply of skilled labour by contemplating significant tuition increases at NAIT? Say it ain't so.

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not contemplating significant tuition increases at NAIT. The hon. member is referring to a newspaper report of across-the-board 40 per cent increases in tuition at NAIT. That's a rumour. I would encourage the hon. member to perhaps pick up a phone and call the president of NAIT and ask him what he thinks.

Mr. Chase: As the advanced education minister you have the ultimate say in the approval of a tuition cap being removed. It comes to your desk, and if it hasn't come as of now, I'm sure it'll be arriving shortly.

This government's boom and bust fiscal roller coaster style of management is an abject failure. Will the minister admit that a dedicated postsecondary endowment fund would have protected our postsecondary system from the staff cuts and tuition increases we're now facing?

Mr. Horner: Actually, let me help the hon. member out a little bit because if he's using newspapers for his research, there was a quote that I made in the newspaper that said – and I don't remember the exact quote, but I can kind of give you what the idea was – that this government is not removing the CPI cap on tuition across the board, that under my watch there will not be an across-the-board increase to tuition. If the hon. member wants to go back to the Calgary

Herald or the Edmonton Journal and find those particular quotes, I'm sure they're available, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

2:00 Electricity Transmission System

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, change is coming, says the Premier. One change Albertans would love to see is for the government to stop wasting their money on multibillion dollar boondoggles. This government has been trying to scare Albertans with claims that our electricity transmission grid is so old, it's about to fall down, leaving us all sitting in the dark. But a report prepared for the Utilities Consumer Advocate, which I have here today, states that the AESO and government demand forecasts are wrong. Given this, will the Premier reconsider the government's position that $14 billion of new transmission infrastructure is urgently needed?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister responsible for the UCA will respond to that question.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to make it very clear that neither the UCA board nor I agree with the conclusions reached in that report. There are many reports that are prepared on a regular basis for government. This is just an example of a report that has a particular opinion. What is clear here is getting the facts out and advocating for consumers, which I will continue to do.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. By repressing reports, I guess.

Albertans want real change, and this government won't give it to them. The report says, "This section will show that there is really no such emergency for load and what little congestion there is for generation is manageable." Will the Premier admit that his government has been trying to frighten Albertans into accepting an unnecessary $14 billion hit on their power bills?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, he's referring to a bill that's before the House. Again, if that member puts his trust in that report, vote accordingly. But if we don't get electricity to every Albertan in a few years, have him take the responsibility and the blame.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The government has tried to scare Albertans by suggesting that electricity demand will soon outstrip transmission capacity, but the report contradicts this. It says, "Much of the data and logic presented by the AESO is unconvincing and overstates the sense of urgency." Will the Premier finally level with Albertans and admit that this $14 billion boondoggle is unjustified and a waste of Albertans' hard-earned money?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before in the House, it's our duty to ensure that we have a transmission system that will move electricity to all electricity consumers in the province of Alberta. The transmission lines are congested. They're aging. This is an issue that not only faces Alberta but faces the rest of Canada and also the United States. The Americans will be making a huge move towards building new transmission, and we're going to have to do that same thing across Canada. We might as well face up to the fact that we sat back and didn't do anything in this area for the last 30, 40 years. We've got to ensure that we don't put the tab on future generations for getting the electricity there.

Again, these people want to burn more coal, create more carbon, and get less electricity to every consumer in this province: absolute nonsense.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Government Spending

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday in this House some very good questions were asked to members of the government. One of them was in fact from the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. I'd like to follow up today with the minister of the Treasury relative to his comment that his hands would be tied if he had to keep government spending to the rate of inflation with population growth. I'd like to ask the hon. minister if he could give me an example of where his hands would be tied with this conservative principle of keeping spending under control.

Mr. Snelgrove: If we had to do that as a government, it would probably mean the billion and a half dollars we've spent at Fort McMurray in the last three years would certainly be curtailed. You have to wonder, Mr. Speaker. We're faced in Alberta right now with the pandemic costs that we talked about yesterday. Serious questions. Where would you get the $100 million to deal with the pandemic if you don't have funds at your disposal to do the right thing at the right time for Albertans? To the hon. member: what roads, what infrastructure in Fort McMurray doesn't he want for them? What support that we've given to that community did he think isn't necessary? Just tell us, and I'll try to get them to stop.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess to the opposite side, conservative principles talk about putting a framework around spending. Again, my question is posed to the minister of Treasury. How are your hands tied relative to singling out the constituency of Fort McMurray when royalties continue to be poured into the revenue and to the general revenue of the government? That actually could create another problem for you, meaning less revenue based on the royalties if you're trying to stop. My question is: give me another example, not regarding nurses or teachers but actual examples of where greater value can be achieved.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, I think the Assembly would recognize that we have started to do things differently. Three years ago next month the government set up ministerial working groups that meet with their deputies. The Premier allowed us to establish an issue-based fund for crime and safe communities, where we make departments come and work together because issues like crime don't stop with Justice or Solicitor General or Health and Wellness. It affects all the departments, and it affects all Albertans. So it's about doing more with less. There is a three-way win. The staff that work on our behalf are more engaged and more effective, the taxpayer has saved money, and the issue, particularly on safe communities, gets dealt with. So we have put in place effective tools of cross-government management.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, my final question. In the Hansard it says that the Premier agrees with this conservative value relative to controlling spending, which I think members of this Assembly applaud. Again, my question to the minister of Treasury: can he give me an example why he could not go forward with this population growth and inflation and how he feels that his hands are tied? I believe this can be achieved relative to how we go forward with the flexibility to serve Albertans on important initiatives.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it's not about needing legislative guidelines to be fiscally prudent. We set our budget out last year based on the premise of a maximum of the population plus inflation. We have also put into place value reviews and re-engineering government to make sure that – you've got to be clear. It's not about putting a cap on spending if our spending is at unrealistic levels. We need to decide not how much we can spend on education or health care. What do we need to spend to have effective, sustainable health care and education systems when we get there? When this House is comfortable and Albertans are comfortable that we've got the right amount going into health care, going into education, then we can use this House to put the restrictions around what we spend, and we use Albertans to determine that.

I'm not against fiscal conservative principles, Mr. Speaker. As a matter of fact, I think most would agree that I believe in them. But I believe you do the work in the House, and if you need legislation, so be it. I don't think we do. I'm open to any suggestions from any member in this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Ms Blakeman: Did you say Centre?

The Speaker: Yes.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Sorry. I should have said Gold Bar.

Ms Blakeman: I will cede the floor to my hon. colleague.

Employment Strategies

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, on this day I certainly could have waited, but that's fine.

The minister of finance originally predicted an overall job loss of only 15,000 individuals for the entire year. But we've seen in the month of October an additional 14,900 jobs lost, and we have an unemployment rate in this province of 7 and a half per cent. My first question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Given that $60 million has been earmarked as training-for-work funds this year, how much of this money will be used to train unemployed Albertans aged 15 to 24, who are experiencing an unemployment rate that is almost double the provincial average?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't track the numbers of individuals according to age. I know individuals come to us with particular needs. They come to us with particular backgrounds. We do their assessment, and if they qualify for retraining support, we provide them with those retraining supports.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the record his department tracks the number of young people who are unemployed not only in Alberta, but they break it down by region.

Again to the same minister: why is it necessary to spend millions of dollars recruiting health care professionals from overseas when we could be using the $45 million health workforce development fund to train unemployed Albertans of all ages right here in this province?

2:10

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we certainly do both of those. We've, first and foremost, put a priority on Albertans. For those individuals that want to enter the health workforce areas, we will support and provide additional assistance to them. Having said that, we know that there is a shortage in particular sectors in the health workforce, and we will continue to recruit to fill those particular positions.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister knows that he's wasting millions and millions of dollars on outfits like Geneva International, recruiting health care professionals when there are people in this province that are ready and willing and able to work. Again to the same minister: given that the Peace Country area, an area the minister represents, has an unemployment rate of 9.1 per cent, does the minister agree with the Premier's claim that some Albertans are unemployed as a result of their own poor attitudes?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I think we all need to recognize that the labour conditions out there have changed. We've come from a period of having a huge shortage of workers to one where we've had a surplus of workers. Individuals must recognize that in order to participate fully in the workforce, they have to look at additional training possibilities or upgrading their skills. I truly believe that individuals have to take those types of initiatives on their own to be able to eventually help themselves in the long run.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Family Violence

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A recent Stats Canada survey reported that in 2007 Alberta had the second-highest rate of spousal violence in the country. Whether it's due to economic downturn or other factors, the fact remains that many women and children are in danger of violence in their own homes. My question is to the Minister of Children and Youth Services. Given the fact that SafeCom recommended expanding programs for those affected by domestic violence, can the minister tell us what steps the government is taking to help reduce and prevent family violence?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is taking a lead role in addressing the serious issue of family violence. In fact, several of my colleagues and I this week were able to attend a family violence conference here in Edmonton with 650 individuals very committed to ending the silence and stopping the violence. We have nine ministries that are working on an initiative that have spent nearly $60 million this past year on raising awareness, on prevention, on supporting victims. Our efforts have included enhanced legislation, increased funding for women's shelters, enhanced services for immigrant and aboriginal communities, and as well providing our 24-hour family violence line, now in more than 170 languages.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security: what is your ministry doing to address this serious issue?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My ministry has been actively involved in family violence training for police since 1991. We ensure that our front-line police officers are properly trained. They must complete a family violence investigative report when responding to domestic violence calls. This report not only helps them gather critical information in the first 12 hours of attending a family violence complaint, but it also alerts them to situations that may require specific follow-up.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental to the same minister: what help does the government provide to the victims of domestic violence?

Mr. Lindsay: Well, Mr. Speaker, in addition to our front-line police officers and ITRAC, which focuses on domestic violence, our victims' services units provide much-needed support to victims of crimes such as domestic violence. They help ensure that these victims are treated with compassion and respect and help them rebuild their lives. Last year we provided $25 million in funding for programs and financial benefits that support victims of crime.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Rent Supplement Program

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs has said time and time again that changes to the homeless and eviction prevention fund and the direct-to-tenant rent supplement programs were merely administrative and that people were going to have more and not less support, but the reality is that rent supplements are no longer available for families not already in the program, that there hasn't been money available to support new applicants since the summertime. The fund has dried up, and now families are having to make a hard choice between eating their next meal or keeping a roof over their heads. To the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs: now that families are unable to access rent subsidies and are having to wait over two years to get into affordable housing in many cases, just what are they supposed to do?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to respond to this question. As you know, the rent supplement program is working. It's working very well, in fact. It's helping our most vulnerable people, and that's whether it's paid directly to them or to the landlord. The member is right: given the current economy the demand for all our housing programs is high. But I can tell you that this year we are providing $140 million to assist 85,000 people that are low income through rent subsidies and social housing.

I can also tell you this, Mr. Speaker, that the waiting list for rent supplements is not growing. That's incorrect. The information you have is incorrect. That wait-list has not grown. In fact, we are assisting . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, the fact remains that since summertime all of us on this side of the House have been hearing from people in our respective constituencies that people cannot access the money if they're not already in the program. So the program may be working fine for people who got in springtime or earlier, but for people who are falling on hard times now, they're in trouble, and your fund is not supporting them. With the need for Alberta's food banks up a staggering 61 per cent because of the economic downturn, how can the minister justify this failure to adequately fund the direct-to-tenant rent supplement program at this crucial time?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, I really would have liked you to have been there at the luncheon that I had today with the Edmonton Coalition on Housing and Homelessness because this is the very issue that we talked about, and this member would have benefited from that meeting. The rent supplement program, I can tell you, has increased significantly over the past three years. It was $18 million assisting 7,500 people three years ago. Today we have $90 million assisting 40,000 people, and there are 800 people supported, new people and families – that includes families, individuals – each month with this program.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, she is playing with the figures here. She's playing with the figures. Sure, there's been all kinds of money spent over the last three years, and that's precisely why the ministry has turned off the taps or turned them down to drip from flow, because they're trying to stem the amount of money that they're spending. Social workers are getting fed up with this government saying one thing and doing another. How can the minister reconcile . . .

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Taylor: Wait for it; I'll get to it.

. . . her well-advertised commitment to end homelessness with her failure to adequately support rent subsidies that would actually keep families from becoming homeless?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, to talk about the ending homelessness area, that we've really worked extremely hard on with our 10-year plan, it's a $400 million commitment over three years for capital dollars to build housing for the homeless. That's the first time in Canada that money has ever been committed, and it's a significant contribution. As well, we are assisting a thousand people this year that are homeless with a $32 million commitment, and that is significant.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Gangs and Organized Crime

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know that gangs of various natures are active throughout our province, and most do not limit their operations to a single community. They're highly mobile, and they threaten the safety and security of Albertans. My questions are for the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. I have constituents who want to know what is being done to combat these increasingly sophisticated gangs.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the primary ways we are tackling this issue is through integrated policing, ALERT, which is the Alberta law enforcement response team. It's a perfect example of how this model works. It brings together Alberta's most sophisticated law enforcement resources to strategically target serious and organized crime. There are more than 30 teams in seven regions around Alberta dedicated to disrupting and dismantling organized crime. We're sharing intelligence and operational information also across provincial boundaries.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. To the same minister: how do you know this strategy is actually making a difference?

Mr. Lindsay: ALERT is making it increasingly difficult for criminals to operate in this province, Mr. Speaker. In fact, in the last few months alone ALERT's integrated teams have put four large drug operations out of business in this province. Since it was established in 2006, ALERT units have arrested more than 2,300 individuals on 5,600 charges relating to drugs, weapons, and violent crime. These units have seized nearly $4 million in cash and have been responsible for taking approximately 600 kilograms of drugs and more than 300 firearms off our streets. Last year alone they contributed to taking $85 million of illegal drugs off the streets of this province.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. Well, we know gangs aren't the only issues that cross jurisdictional lines and threaten the safety of our communities. What is being done to deal with these other complex problems?

Mr. Lindsay: Again, Mr. Speaker, ALERT continues to target and arrest those who have no respect for our laws and who use violence and intimidation. While it may be the big drug busts that hit the news, ALERT is involved in other activities, including the ICE teams, that target online child pornography; the Integrated Threat and Risk Assessment Centre, which helps reduce and prevent domestic violence and stalking. ALERT also includes SCAN teams, that target problem properties, and the FASST teams, that target criminals who are wanted on outstanding warrants.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Agricultural Assistance

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the last decade this government has handed millions of dollars in grants to multinational agricultural corporations not based in Alberta. Taxpayer dollars that could have gone to help sustain our local family-owned and operated farms instead went to fund massive corporate farms. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. This government has awarded Cargill over $10 million in direct grants in just the last six years. Would the minister tell us what these grants were for?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, the challenges faced by the agriculture industry certainly are not just limited to one sector. Operations of all sizes are impacted, including Cargill. It would be very interesting to note that all companies that receive any funds from this government are taxpayers in Alberta.

Ms Pastoor: Will the minister provide documentation that proves that this money was used solely for initiatives in Alberta and not to fund corporate farms in other provinces or countries?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, under the system the compensation programs are usually on a per-head basis, so it's no surprise that the larger operations receive larger support under the programs. I will tell the hon. member that the programs do have a maximum cap for larger operations.

Ms Pastoor: That may well be the crux of part of this matter, that we should perhaps be looking at a different way to get those grants out and not just on a per head.

What process and regulations are used to determine whether a corporation not based in Alberta is eligible for Alberta taxpayer funded agricultural grants?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, once again, Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of any corporation that's not based in Alberta receiving these programs, so I don't understand exactly where she's coming from.

Ms Blakeman: Cargill.

Mr. Groeneveld: Cargill is in my constituency, Mr. Speaker.

You know, let it be clear that our payment programs are often structured with other national programs. We work very closely with our federal counterparts and provincial counterparts on eligibility criteria. I'm proud to say that no other jurisdiction in Canada has provided the level of support to the producers in Alberta that the province of Alberta has.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Postsecondary Tuition Fees

(continued)

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Advanced Education and Technology is continuing to stress out students and their families by fudging his answers about increasing tuition costs. At the same time that he says that he'll not remove caps on tuition, administrators at the U of A are saying that they will be seeking government approval for increases of $3,000 or $4,000 per year for certain professional programs. To the minister: why won't the minister clarify this discrepancy by stating clearly that the government will not allow any university program to increase fees by more than the cost of living?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, continually we get these comments about "Well, the rumour is" or "The administration says that they're going to seek approval," that they're going to come and talk to me. The hon. member is asking for an answer that I can't give because they haven't come to talk to me yet.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly within the ability of this minister to state now that he will not agree to a request to increase fees. He just doesn't want to say it. Now, I don't care if you call it a market modifier, an increase to the tuition base, or simply what it is, an increase in fees to students, ultimately students will be asked to pay more. Why won't the minister admit right now that if he considers this, he will be breaking his promise to keep increases to what students pay in line with the cost of living?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I'm not hiding anything. I said in this House on November 2, I said in April after we put the budget out there, and we've said during our meetings with the council of chairs and with the presidents and with the students that if a valid, reasonable, fair, and equitable case is made on a case-by-case basis for programs, we will take a look at that. That means we may approve it; we may not approve it. I'm not about to preclude that decision here in the House today.

Ms Notley: What that says to me is that the minister is finally saying that he is considering going around the cost-of-living cap.

So now these proposed hikes will put advanced education out of the reach of many Albertan families regardless of whether they want to send their kids into professional programs or the trades. Why won't the minister admit that this government's broken promise and the resulting 40 to 60 per cent fee hikes will mean that even fewer Albertans will have the chance at a postsecondary education?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the only one that's raising a lot of concern and fear in the students' minds across the board in Alberta today is the hon. member because as of today the rule is that the CPI cap is in place at 1 and a half per cent for the 2010-11 student year for tuition increases. That's the maximum allowable across the board. We have always said that if there is a situation where we have to adjust the base on a fair and equitable position, with consultation with the students – we've always made that commitment as well – then we will look at it. Does that mean that I'm going to say yes just because the hon. member says that the Edmonton Journal has reported it? Absolutely not.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Immigrant Investor Program

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our provincial immigration system needs to attract, in addition to employees, employers to our province, people who bring with them the entrepreneurial spirit, know-how, and resources to create jobs and prosperity in our province. Many provinces have an entrepreneur stream in their provincial nominee programs. My question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Where is our stream?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our Ministry of Employment and Immigration is reviewing the Alberta immigrant nominee program, and part of this review includes looking at the viability of such a stream. We know that some other provinces do have a similar stream, and we're using the opportunity to learn from them, to see what their challenges and successes have been. We've found out that one such challenge is ensuring that people commit to building their businesses right here in Alberta for the long term and are not perceived to be buying their way into our country. Our goal is to attract individuals with the expertise and capital to add to Alberta's workforce and the economy.

Mr. Bhullar: My first supplemental, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. Mr. Minister, now is the time to lay the seeds for an even more robust economy and prepare for when it's firing on all cylinders again. If this stream is being considered, when do you propose we can actually have it start?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We need to first make sure that this stream would provide real benefits to Albertans. Developing a new stream, that is being proposed, takes time and involves a lot of market research and business decisions. Since our budget process has yet to be resolved, we're considering whether or not it's feasible to move forward at this time. It should also be noted that we would need to consult with our federal counterpart at Citizenship and Immigration Canada to ensure that any changes are consistent with the federal Immigration and Refugee Protection Act.

Mr. Bhullar: My final question, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: Minister, are we participating in the federal government immigrant investor program? If not, why not?

2:30

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the federal government's immigrant investor program remains a viable option for potential investors that are destined for Alberta, but Alberta differs from other provinces in its decision to not participate in the financial side of the program. Alberta would need to set up a Crown corporation to administer the program. In addition, the investments must be returned after five years. The use of investor funds is complicated. It's time consuming and resource intensive, and it's unclear if the benefits at this time would justify the cost. This decision, though, has not compromised our ability at all to track investment in the province as we speak.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Film and Television Support

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. B.C. is enjoying a recession-proof $1.2 billion film industry that employs over 40,000 people. Compared to B.C.'s tax incentives and funding initiatives, Alberta can't compete. With Alberta having only 3 per cent of Canada's total production in film, we need a lot more than one Calgary film studio and tinkering done to the film development program to be competitive. My questions are to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. When will the minister make Alberta competitive and match B.C.'s tax credit model?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, funny enough, the hon. member hasn't quite got it correct. Actually, Alberta is one of the most competitive regimes for film and television in Canada. We have a labour rate at 29 per cent. That is higher than B.C. That is higher than Ontario and higher than Quebec. We have a film development grant that is a leader in the industry, that Saskatchewan is looking at as a model. We don't care about tax credits here in this particular government. We're not in a race to the bottom. We're not in a race to compete with other jurisdictions which are going in the wrong direction. I think we're going in the right direction.

Ms Blakeman: Back to the same minister. If the city of Calgary is providing the seed money for this new film studio, why was the minister making the project announcement? What is this government's budget for this project?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, the reason that this minister, representing this government, was making the announcement was because we took the initiative to work with three levels of government and the private sector and Calgary Economic Development. We took the initiative to go and find an area that we could build a purpose-built television, film, and digital studio. We negotiated with WinSport Canada to get 10 acres of land in Calgary. They gave them $30,000 of seed money to start this project. We gave them $75,000 last year to do a feasibility study, which we moved forward today. We haven't yet finalized the funding levels for all three levels of government, and we haven't finalized the commitment for the private sector. We're doing our due diligence and making sure that we have a governance model and a not-for-profit entity that will be able to manage this facility.

Ms Blakeman: Back to the same minister. Why is this special deal made to subsidize the declining horse-racing industry, but the minister won't entertain a tax credit model for the film industry, an industry which has real growth potential and supports green economy sustainable jobs? You should be able to do better than 3 per cent.

Mr. Blackett: Well, funny enough, I had a meeting, Mr. Speaker, with the Canadian Film and Television Production Association along with the president of CBC and some other production companies. I asked a simple question. Do you want cash, or do you want a tax credit? Do you want to get paid out in cash two months after production, or do you want to wait 12 to 18 months after you've finished production? Their answer was: we'll take the cash two months after production.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Underground Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A great number of my constituents have sent me e-mails and letters regarding the proposed transmission line. My first question is for the hon. Minister of Energy. Can the minister elaborate on the possibility of burying certain segments of the proposed transmission line in the densely populated areas?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I won't make comments relative to specific pieces that may be the subject of debate in this House, but generally I would suggest that what has been done – there are two studies initiated in Alberta currently: one that looks at the Edmonton region and one that looks, I think, a bit broader, across the province of Alberta. We haven't got the results of those studies yet, but what I would say is that underground cable is in the city of Edmonton now. It's not as if it can't be done. Depending on the size, depending on the capacity and that sort of thing, it's done, and we have it here now.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary is to the same minister. Can the minister advise what consultation is occurring with respect to the location of the transmission lines?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, of course, I've alluded to this a number of times in the House and in public many times. The consultation process that's in place that goes ahead of any decisions that are made relative to these issues, I think, is relatively well understood. The AESO and the transmission facility operators go out in front of any of these things and propose a number of options and have consultation around the options. That continues to take place today on an ongoing basis with respect to the issues in and around the city of Edmonton.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you. Many of my constituents, while recognizing the importance of new transmission lines, would like to bring forward additional concerns and input. My final supplementary to the same minister: can he advise what avenues are available to my constituents to provide their input?

Mr. Knight: Well, yes, Mr. Speaker, I certainly can. The situation as it unfolds, of course, with any transmission development in the province of Alberta is consistent with what's going to happen in this area, and that is that at the correct point in time, when we get to a permit and licensing stage with respect to any of these pieces of infrastructure, the Alberta Utilities Commission holds an open public hearing at which any Albertans at their choice can go and intervene and have their concerns and requests and requirements heard by the Alberta Utilities Commission in a quasi-judicial setting.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Métis Settlements Ombudsman

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The annual report of the Métis settlements ombudsman raises concerns regarding declining working relationships, legal challenges that stall and undermine the ombudsman's role, and unease with the ombudsman's connection to the minister's office. Calls that we've received in our office from settlements confirm these concerns. My question is to the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. What actions has the minister taken to address the concerns raised in the Métis settlements ombudsman's most recent annual report?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's true that there were some unavoidable delays in some of the processing and some of the administrative matters in the Métis settlements ombudsman's office over the past several years, partly due to the complexity and partly due to staffing issues and a few other internal things. However, we have a new Métis settlements ombudsman that has taken over after the good work done by the previous one, and some of those streamlines have now taken place. I think you'll see some improvements coming over the next few months.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. That doesn't fit with the calls we're getting to our office. The problems continue. The friction continues. My question again to the same minister: will the minister review the regulations governing the office of the Métis settlements ombudsman now rather than waiting four years until the regulations expire?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, in fact, I've had several meetings with the Métis Settlements General Council on this matter, and we have agreed to taking a look at what we call a parallel process. As part of that parallel process we'll be probing fairly deeply into the functions and purpose and nature of the Métis settlements ombudsman, who, according to the Métis Settlements Act, carries the investigatory powers of the minister.

Dr. Taft: Okay. It sounds like the minister is already conducting a review. I'm going to give him a suggestion. As it stands now, the minister appoints and effectively delegates authority to the ombudsman. Will the minister consider establishing legislation enshrining the Métis settlements ombudsman as an entity separate from the minister to remove the politics from that position?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I can assure this member and the House that there are no politics with respect to that appointment. The fact is that the Métis Settlements General Council suggests one member to sit on a tribunal. I as minister suggest one person with that background to sit on a tribunal council. The two of them together choose a third person. They review potential applicants. Then they make a recommendation to me, and then the appointment is made. In this most recent case I was very convinced that Mr. John Brosseau had the skills and the experience and the integrity necessary to fill that position. The issue is one of competency, and he certainly has it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Aboriginal Education and Employment

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Aboriginal Relations recently attended a federal-provincial-territorial meeting of aboriginal affairs ministers and national aboriginal leaders. I'm sure there were a lot of important issues that were discussed. One of the biggest issues for the aboriginal people in my constituency is unemployment. My question for the minister: of what benefit was this meeting for aboriginals in Alberta who are facing tough times and in particular for the aboriginals in my constituency?

2:40

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, this was a very important meeting because it was the first meeting of its kind in more than four years. To bring together federal, provincial, and territorial ministers as well as the five national aboriginal leaders was a feat in itself. Its purpose, really, was to address several issues such as aboriginal economic development – read into that employment, if you like – as well as postsecondary and skills-training opportunities for aboriginals. These are issues that are important to all aboriginals, particularly here in Alberta, of course, from my point of view, but everywhere else. Let me just conclude by saying that the meeting was held partly at the behest of the first ministers and the Prime Minister, who requested we get together and deal with some of these important issues of education, economic development, and others.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before we can get to the higher education levels and skills training he speaks of, I'd submit that there needs to be more done to help the aboriginals with their basic education needs. I'd like to ask the minister: could the minister please clarify for me what this meeting may have accomplished in terms of narrowing that gap between aboriginal and nonaboriginal educational outcomes?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it was a very productive meeting with respect to narrowing the gap that exists between aboriginal and nonaboriginal learners. I looked at it from the Alberta perspective. I need to explain, first of all, that the delivery of education on reserves, of course, is a federal responsibility. I'm pleased that the federal minister, the Hon. Chuck Strahl, was there with us, and he heard the concerns that we took forward. As part of our group, nonetheless, we agreed to address matters of education gaps and other gaps with our provincial counterparts: the two ministers in this case, advanced education and basic education in Alberta.

Also, here in Alberta we recently established an aboriginal education partnership council, and among its primary objectives is, in fact, what the member is asking about; that is, narrowing the educational gap that seems to persistently exist between aboriginal learners and nonaboriginal learners.

Mr. Berger: My final question to the same minister would be: what mechanisms will you be able to put in place to measure these outcomes, and what kind of follow-up can be done to ensure that these issues will be addressed and acted upon and achieve some real results?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, very good questions. Besides the aforementioned educational council I want to indicate, too, that we as well as federal, provincial, and territorial ministers and aboriginal leaders agreed to establishing an aboriginal affairs working group, the first of its kind. Its purpose will be, in fact, to track these issues. We will again meet in April of 2010, and as soon as possible thereafter we will provide our recommendations and our results to the Prime Minister and to all of the provincial and territorial Premiers. So there are a few mechanisms in place that will keep the system's checks and balances in place.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today.

Earlier in the afternoon in a blurry-eyed moment I made an error by congratulating the hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration for his fifth anniversary as an elected person. That was an error. He was actually elected in 2001.*

Might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and introduce a number of very special guests today. To begin with, to you and through you I'd like to introduce to the Assembly Guy Smith, president-elect of the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. AUPE is the largest union in the province, with over 76,000 members serving Albertans in every corner of the province every day of the year.

Guy is here in support of the ongoing campaign to save Alberta Hospital Edmonton and to show his support for the public services and programs that Albertans count on in their everyday lives. With Guy today are nine AUPE members from Alberta Hospital Edmonton, six from the U of A hospital, one more member from Fort Saskatchewan, and we also have two AUPE employees who have assisted these members in their effort to stop the bed closures at Alberta Hospital Edmonton. This group from AUPE is looking forward to seeing a number of their petitions to save Alberta Hospital Edmonton tabled in the House later this afternoon. I would now ask that Guy Smith along with my other guests rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

*See page 1903, right column, paragraph 9

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great pleasure for me to introduce to you and to the members of the House the deputy mayor of Sundre, Annette Clews. Annette is the mother of a very accomplished teenager, who represented the Alberta branch of the Royal Canadian Legion in Quebec last year at the summer games and came in second in Canada. Allan came in second in his competition in track and field. I would ask Annette to rise and the House to give her the traditional warm welcome.

Members' Statements

(continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Concrete Theatre

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to recognize and celebrate the 20th anniversary of Concrete Theatre and, in doing so, to focus on their longest running project, Are We There Yet?

Now, Concrete Theatre was formed to carry on the long-standing tradition in Edmonton theatre of social action theatre. Are We There Yet? was created by Jane Heather and is an innovative piece of theatre that works in important ways as a teaching tool on sexual health for kids. Thanks to Jane Heather for creating it and to the many actors and directors, stage managers, and designers who have toured the show across Alberta to grade 9 students over the last 11 years.

Are We There Yet? is a successful learning tool for young people as they grapple with a bewildering buffet of sexual images in magazines, online, TV, video games, bus shelter ads, you name it. The Edmonton public school board has done a large research project on this show, and it reinforces that in quantitative and qualitative measures positive, measurable change occurs for both male and female students.

The play's messages about the importance of setting personal boundaries are welcomed by young people. Students reported that they learned to be aware of their own limits, to be cognizant of their partner's boundaries, and to give importance to communication. This has been a very successful and long-running project because it honours kids and gives them information to make good decisions.

I'll give the final words to them. "It helped me realize that people have to respect my body and boundaries." "It made me know to stand up for myself and my limits are my limits and if I don't want to go further, I don't have to." Finally, "Yeah it changed things I would do. It made me more knowledgeable of what to do in those types of situations."

Are We There Yet? is a great example of your success, Concrete Theatre, and I hope more Alberta kids have the opportunity to see the show and learn those valuable life lessons. You've made a very, very positive change in Edmonton and in Alberta. Thank you so much, Concrete Theatre.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Stella Calahasen

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 28 I had the real pleasure of being invited to attend a book launch at Audreys Books in Edmonton. It was a pleasure to meet Ms Stella Calahasen, the sister of the wonderful Member for Lesser Slave Lake and the author of the book Dream Catcher.

This book is a wonderful and unique interpretation of the aboriginal culture and, in particular, the story of the origin of the dream catcher. This book is a creative tool to learn more about the Cree culture and to help future generations of Cree children retain their language and their culture.

Ms Calahasen was raised as part of the Woodland Cree First Nation, in northern Alberta on the shores of Lesser Slave Lake. With a household of 10 children, six of them girls, her parents were firm believers in the use of storytelling to calm the excitement in the household. This age-old tradition was a favourite of the children and, as her sister, our colleague, says, brought a sense of calmness to the otherwise busy home. Stella Calahasen also believes strongly in passing along these stories to her children about the way of life and language of the Cree people and has captured one of these stories in her book, Dream Catcher.

It is great to see a fellow Albertan succeed in writing and publishing her work, and it is especially inspiring to see an aboriginal woman publish a book about her heritage and about the beliefs she holds so dear. It is truly a remarkable feat. Congratulations, Stella, and I look forward to more successes like this one in the future.

Hai, hai, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

2:50

CASA House

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to rise to acknowledge the official opening of CASA House, which I was privileged enough to attend on November 2, 2009. CASA does tremendous work in providing mental health services and is a valued partner to the Alberta government. The new CASA House is located in Sherwood Park, in the hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise's constituency, and is a state of the art facility that expands adolescent treatment beds from 12 to 20. The new CASA House is owned by Alberta Health Services and is leased to CASA to provide the services.

CASA is a major community-based provider of mental health services for infants, children, adolescents, and their families within the Edmonton zone and from central and northern Alberta. The classroom space is expanded from the current two to four on-site classrooms with the addition of an on-site library provided by Edmonton public schools. Three pods, each with its own living area, will serve as the home environment for adolescents after a day of therapy and school. There is also a full-size gymnasium and a games room.

CASA is staffed by professional and highly skilled teams representing many disciplines, including psychiatrists, psychologists, nurses, social workers, occupational therapists, child care counsellors, teachers, and administrative support staff. CASA provides assessment and treatment services for approximately 3,000 infants, children, and adolescents, from birth to age 18, each year through a continuum ranging from consultation in community outreach settings to very intensive treatment programs. These children, youth, and their families are well served, and indeed our whole society is stronger because of the compassionate intervention of CASA staff.

On behalf of Albertans, I extend our deepest appreciation. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Livestock Traceability Program

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to highlight the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development's trade mission to Japan and Asia last week and the important work being accomplished under Alberta's livestock traceability program. The BSE crisis in the beef industry and, more recently, the pork industry's experience with 2009 H1N1 influenza A underline the need for traceability. During the minister's federal-provincial trade mission our trading partners once again emphasized that traceability and age verification are the minimum requirements needed to regain access to these important markets. As many of my colleagues know, Alberta's agriculture industry is export oriented. Our ability to compete in the global market is critical to our success. May I congratulate the minister of agriculture on his recent trade mission.

International missions are critical to building relationships. It is a customary protocol to visit the countries you expect to do business with. The opportunity to update our trade partners on the significant progress of our traceability programs and other industry activity is invaluable. We need to make clear that Alberta has safe, high-quality products for Asia's consumers. Alberta's producers are adapting to changing market conditions so that we will be able to take advantage of opportunities to fulfill the growing global demand for traceability and age-verified products.

Mr. Speaker, may I encourage our livestock and meat industry and all of my colleagues to continue supporting traceability. It is essential to the future success and sustainability of the livestock industry in our province.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Government Policies

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. This government's drop in support is a reflection of the anger and frustration felt by so many Albertans. They are angry because this Premier didn't level with them in the election about plans to drastically alter the health care system. He didn't mention hospital closures, he didn't talk about laying off nurses, he didn't bring up his plans to close mental health beds, and he broke his promise to provide more long-term care beds for Alberta seniors. To top it all off, this government has conducted the most chaotic and disorganized H1N1 vaccination program in the country by far. And the list goes on: bitumen exports, royalties, tuition, child care, and homelessness are all steps along the trail of broken promises. We have seen dramatic jumps in welfare cases and increases in food bank use, the highest increase in the country.

This government is planning on spending $14 billion on unneeded electricity lines with 100 per cent of the cost borne by power consumers. This move will significantly raise electricity rates, hurting businesses, homeowners, and leaving seniors in the dark. But we're all in the dark, Mr. Speaker, if we think this government will change. While this Premier promised change, he has delivered more of the same. This is a government that consistently gives us smoke and spin and where the truth comes in a brown paper envelope. It remains the most secretive government in Canada. Despite the fact that we have challenged the Premier this week on four different areas of needed change – health care reform, long-term care beds, bitumen exports, and electricity deregulation – we have received more of the same.

If Albertans truly want change, Mr. Speaker, they must start with changing this PC government.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm presenting a petition today with 54 signatures representing residents of Brooks and area. They ask that the government of Alberta grandfather the rights and status of all currently practising registered massage therapists in Alberta so that they may continue to practise while, when necessary, upgrading to meet newly proclaimed standards of training and to ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage to pay for massage services from current massage therapists.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I also rise to present a petition today. The petition has roughly 1,000 names from mostly the Calgary area. It says: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government to maintain the current policy for distribution of charitable gaming proceeds."

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition to urge the government of Alberta grandfather the rights and status of all currently-practicing Registered Massage Therapists . . . in Alberta in a manner that they may continue their practice undisturbed and, when necessary, gradually upgrade to newly-proclaimed standards of training, so as not to force current therapists to lose their ongoing income whilst upgrading and so to ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to present a petition which reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government to redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital, Edmonton.

Mr. Speaker, this petition has 983 signatures.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings and the requisite number of copies for each. My first tabling is for the minister's education leadership recognition awards, also known as the MELRA, presentations held for school boards in zone 1 on November 5, 2009.

My second tabling is for the MELRA presentations for zone 5, held on November 6, 2009.

My third and last tabling is for the MELRA presentations held for schools boards in zone 6 on November 9, 2009.

Heartfelt congratulations to all of the leadership teams in the school boards represented by zones 1, 5, and 6.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table five copies of a letter that I received from the Trico Centre, which is located in the beautiful constituency of Calgary-Egmont. It also deals with charitable casino funding and advocates that the current model be maintained. I'll pass five copies to the Clerk.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am presenting five copies of three different documents today. First, I have the Fusion Canada preliminary research report for Fusion North East Edmonton.

Second, I have five copies of the program from the North Edmonton Seniors Association Remembrance Day tea and tribute, that was held on November 10, 2009.

Finally, I have five copies of the program for the Unity Centre of Northeast Edmonton 15th annual silent auction and pub night.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 7(7) states: "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly."

Mr. Mason: I beg unanimous consent to finish the Orders of the Day, Mr. Speaker.

3:00

The Speaker: A request has been made for unanimous consent to waive the standing orders.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: We are going to proceed. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Four tablings today plus one for a colleague. The first is from constituent Sandra Norton, who's commenting on the closure of beds at Alberta Hospital Edmonton and notes that "community mental health care options are needed, but not at the expense of acute care beds." She notes that she works at the Stanley Milner library and sees every day the struggle of some people with little or no help.

The second is from constituent Melissa Dumenko, who's also concerned about the closure of beds at Alberta Hospital Edmonton and says: "The promise of putting into place additional community supports is not enough, additional community supports are required just to meet the existing demand, never mind the additional demand after closing acute care beds."

A letter from Jazz Alcock and Brian Alcock, asking that there be no funding cuts to schools.

An e-mail from Kelsey Gill, also a constituent – sorry, the previous people were as well – noting that he's a 24-year-old university student with huge concerns about the future of this province, which he loves dearly, as well as his own future as a human being with human needs for food and water.

Finally, on behalf of my colleague the Member for Calgary-Currie a tabling from a constituent of his, Lesley Washington. This is a letter directed towards the minister and signed by Lesley Washington, noting that they have been advised since summertime that "the direct to tenant rent supplement has no funds in it to support new applicants."

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a paper I referred to today in question period prepared for the office of the Utilities Consumer Advocate, which indicates that Bill 50 would result in an overbuild of the transmission system, that AESO's demand forecast is wrong, that Bill 50 will allow critical transmission infrastructure to be built without proper stakeholder involvement, that there's no emergency for load and what little congestion there is for generation is manageable, and that Bill 50 will allow the cabinet to bypass current long-established landowner claims procedures.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have the requisite number of copies of correspondence from Dr. Robert Dickson, Vanessa D'Souza, Evan Goian, Stephen Gordon, Laurel Jackson, Diane Myshchysyn, Carole Jones, Marianna Pankalla, Anne Paul, Reg Paul, Betty Stewart, Jennifer Wicks, and Alysia Yuck, all expressing their concern to the Premier and the Minister of Education and urging the Premier and the minister not to cut funding for schools because Alberta's prosperity depends on knowledge.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacDonald: Good afternoon, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table for the benefit of the House information regarding questions that I asked yesterday during question period. This is a spreadsheet with the total salary and benefits of senior executives in Executive Council from the year 2002-03 through to 2008-09. There's almost a doubling of the salary and benefits. Of particular note is the last three fiscal years, where we see a 50 per cent increase in salaries and benefits.

Thank you.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd ask the Deputy Government House Leader to please share with those in the Chamber the projected government business for the week commencing November 23.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On Monday, November 23, in the afternoon we will proceed with private members' business, and then in the evening and otherwise as per the Order Paper we'll be in second reading on Bill 58, the Corrections Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 59, the Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 60, the Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 61, the Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 62, the Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009. Following that, we hope to go to Committee of the Whole on Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 53, the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009; as well as bills 58, 59, 60, 61, and 62.

On Tuesday afternoon we hope to be in Committee of the Whole on Bill 50 and otherwise as per the Order Paper. In the evening we will be in Committee of the Whole on bills 50, 53, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, and then third reading on Bill 53; Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 57, the Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009; and bills 58, 59, 60, 61, 62; and otherwise as per the Order Paper.

On Wednesday, November 25, in the afternoon we'll be proceeding with third reading of bills 53, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, and 62 and otherwise as per the Order Paper. In the evening we hope to be in third reading on Bill 50 and otherwise as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, November 26, in the afternoon we anticipate Royal Assent being given to a number of bills here in the Assembly and otherwise as per the Order Paper.

I will table four copies of this for the Assembly's pleasure as well as copies for the two other parties.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Bill 62

Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Liepert: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to move second reading of Bill 62, the Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes when government does the right thing, there ends up being some unintended consequences or some clarification that needs to be made, and that's precisely what this particular bill attempts to do. When we moved our ground ambulance system, emergency medical services, from municipal jurisdiction under the jurisdiction of Alberta Health Services, it then brought these particular employees under the Health Information Act. We have had some situations over the period of time since April 1 where our employees, our paramedics primarily, who are typically the first on scene, are uncertain as to whether or not they can divulge information to police authorities to do an investigation without contravening the Health Information Act.

Really, they are not going to be doing anything differently than they currently are doing. It's just that they now fall under a different act. So what this particular amendment will do is that it will clarify that, in essence, our paramedics should continue to do what they've always done. They should ensure that the information that is sought by our police investigators relative to that incident is not compromised. This is a particular piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, which I think is very important to ensure that public safety continues to be conducted unimpeded.

I would ask that all members of the House support this particular bill as we move it through the House. With those few comments, Mr. Speaker, I would adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like call the committee to order.

Bill 50

Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to rise today to introduce a series of amendments to Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. As you know, over the last several months we've been listening to Albertans and considering the feedback that they've provided to us with respect to Bill 50. Most people we have heard from understand the need to upgrade our transmission grid across the province. Most of the people we have heard from understand the need to continue this important work.

Mr. Chairman, am I allowed to continue as the amendments are being distributed?

3:10

The Deputy Chair: Let's pause for a moment while the amendments are being distributed. You proposed the amendments?

Mr. Knight: Yes.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Just pause for a moment.

Hon. minister, please proceed.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I will continue. It's clear that the province has grown tremendously since we last had major upgrades to our grid. Again, I think that most Albertans understand that some work is necessary relative to that very important infrastructure.

But we've also heard, Mr. Chairman, a number of concerns about the magnitude of the projects and costs to consumers. There has been some misunderstanding around the full cost of AESO's long-term plan, which is something that they propose may be done over a large area of the province over a longer term. It includes about $14 billion worth of work over many years. There's confusion around that and the actual costs of the critical infrastructure that's identified in Bill 50. These amendments, Mr. Chairman, should make it very clear to all Albertans how this critical infrastructure needs to be built, how much it will cost, and what type of infrastructure needs to be built.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, these changes that we propose would also make it clear that there is a role for consumers in monitoring the cost of these projects, and we will also address a concern about the role of the Alberta Utilities Commission in the permit and licensing process.

Mr. Chairman, amendment A makes it clear that the Alberta Utilities Commission is no longer required to do a needs assessment on the critical infrastructure projects identified in Bill 50; B refers to our plan to build these projects in stages as they are needed to meet demand; C establishes the consumer oversight committee that will provide a role for consumers in monitoring the cost of these projects; D refers to staging of specific projects identified in the legislation; and finally, E is linked to A and ensures that the Alberta Utilities Commission will be required to consider the siting of these projects and consider whether the siting of these projects is in the public interest when the AUC is in hearings and the hearing process commences.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 56
Alberta Investment Management Corporation
Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate this opportunity to get involved again in the debate on Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009. Certainly, we had an opportunity at second reading to get some issues on the record. Even though it's been classified as just some minor changes, I think it's significant that we are removing from AIMCo the direct advice of the deputy minister of finance. If this bill was to become law, say, three years from now or five years from now, I certainly would support it. In second reading I referred to the Alberta Investment Management Corporation's annual report for 2008-09, but I unfortunately neglected to bring it along to the House. It's quite an interesting read. There are messages from the chair, messages from the CEO. There's a list of the board of directors, which is a very interesting list, very accomplished people. We can, I think, be confident that they are going to do their very best to ensure that our $69 billion in assets are prudently invested.

Now, whenever AIMCo was created, I believe the hon. minister of finance at the time was a gentleman who's retired now from this House, Dr. Oberg, and there was one report that was tabled before the Assembly to justify creating AIMCo. There were naturally comparisons made to what was going on in other jurisdictions. We had a little discussion on this in second reading, but we need to have another careful examination in committee of what exactly we are proceeding to do here, Mr. Chairman.

Now, when we look at the assets under management, we clearly see that there are endowment funds here, there are pension plans, there are short-term government funds and special-purpose government funds, but it's the pension plans that I would like to specifically address now. We look at other jurisdictions; I'm thinking of Ontario, and I'm thinking of British Columbia. I think it's time to look at perhaps making a suggestion through an amendment to Bill 56 to see if the House would be agreeable to amending this bill to give individuals who have an investment or are planning on retiring at some point and are relying on income, hopefully, for a very long time from one of the pension plans, whether it be the local authorities plan, the public service plan, management employees, special forces, members of the judiciary are in here, the management supplementary retirement plan – there are quite a few plans involved in this. I would like to propose that these plans have some direct influence on who is selected to provide investment advice for them and on their behalf, of course, to and through the board.

Now, other provinces have a similar system. I still feel that we should leave the deputy minister directly involved in this operation for up to a five-year period, and then we can cut those ties formally. But my sense of this: the minister of finance obviously doesn't agree, but we really need to just keep an eye on things very closely until this group gets their legs underneath them.

I know that in the last year and a half for everyone with a financial investment there have been some difficult moments. I look forward with anticipation to I believe it's the 30th of November. Monday, November 30, is the day I'm told that the second-quarter fiscal update will come from the minister of finance, and we can see for ourselves just sort of the recovery that has been made with not only the investments under AIMCo but other financial interests that our government holds.

Mr. Chairman, I would like, if you don't mind, please, to have the pages circulate this proposed amendment to Bill 56. I will finish my remarks after the distribution of this amendment.

Thank you.

3:20

The Deputy Chair: We'll pause for a moment while the pages distribute that amendment. This will be amendment A1.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar to continue.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Now, the amendment that has been circulated for all members reads that Bill 56, Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009, be amended in section 2 by adding the following after section 4(1).

- (1.1) Of the individuals appointed under subsection (1)
 - (a) one must have had experience with the Local Authorities Pension Plan Board,
 - (b) one must have had experience with the Public Service Pension Plan Board,
 - (c) one must have had experience with the Special Forces Pension Plan Board, and
 - (d) one must have had experience with the Management Employees Pension Plan Board.

Now, of course, the market value of the pension plans discussed here, Mr. Chairman. For the Local Authorities Pension Plan Board it is $13.2 billion, for the Public Service Pension Plan Board it is $4.5 billion, for the Special Forces Pension Plan Board it is $1.1 billion, and for the Management Employees Pension Plan Board it is $51 million. Those are four boards that have various amounts of money pooled into AIMCo, and I think it would be prudent to legislate or have a mechanism in place where they could have a direct interest and an eye, naturally, on their investment.

Now, Alberta's pension plans are administered by the Alberta Pensions Services Corporation. The seven statutory pension plans are under the direction of these four pension boards, as I mentioned, and of course the government of the province. Currently the Lieutenant Governor in Council appoints the 11 members of AIMCo's board, who are responsible for the investment decisions of the funds under management. Board members must meet specific qualifications as set out in the regulations as noted below.

It's interesting, Mr. Chairman. The Alberta Investment Management Corporation regulation states that individuals appointed to the board must have proven and demonstrable experience and expertise in investment management, finance, accounting or law or experience as an executive or a director in a senior publicly traded issuer.

Now, someone may be interested to note that this is quite a distinguished group. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre would described them as august, I think, but I'm just going to say that they're very distinguished because they certainly are, this group. The regulations also state that a member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta cannot – cannot – be a member of AIMCo's board.

This amendment as circulated calls for the pension groups under management by AIMCo to be involved in the process of appointing AIMCo's board members. Specifically, this amendment would require the appointment of four board members to AIMCo who have experience with the local authorities pension plan, the public sector pension plan, special forces pension plan, and the management employees pension plan.

A stand-alone provincial corporation to manage Alberta's money is consistent with other jurisdictions such as the British Columbia Investment Management Corporation and the Ontario Teachers'

Pension Plan. There is a difference between how board members are selected, as is highlighted here. Now, there's no requirement for the Deputy Minister of Finance to be a board member of the British Columbia Investment Management Corporation or the Ontario Teachers' Pension Plan, both of which have the same objectives as independent investment companies such as AIMCo, although, you see, these corporations do have requirements to allow pension groups and other interested parties to be involved in the board appointment process.

It is from this jurisdictional comparison that this amendment to this bill originates, and I think it's a good idea. I talk frequently to retired individuals who live in our constituency, and they have issues, whether retired for five years or 15 years, with their pensions and the administration of their pensions. I think these are important matters. I think they should be addressed through this amendment.

Now, the British Columbia Investment Management Corporation has close to $75 billion in assets under management. Its clients include public-sector pension plans, the province of British Columbia, publicly administered trust funds, and public bodies. The British Columbia Investment Management Corporation has more specific requirements for who is involved in appointing board members. The board is made up of seven members, four of which are appointed by the four statutory pension plans under management. In British Columbia it's the college pension plan, the public service pension plan, the municipal pension plan, and the teachers' pension plan. The other three are appointed by the Minister of Finance to represent the British Columbia Investment Corporation and other clients.

Now, the following, Mr. Chairman, is from section 19(3) and 19(4) of the British Columbia public-sector pension plan, under which the British Columbia Investment Management Corporation is legislated. As I said, there are seven directors,

- (a) one director appointed by the college board from among its members;
- (b) one director appointed by the municipal board from among its members;
- (c) one director appointed by the public service board from among its members;
- (d) one director appointed by the teachers' board from among its members.

You can see where they're doing things slightly differently than what we had originally started in this province, but I think it would be in the interests of many individuals across this province who at some point are going to rely, if they are not already doing so, on one of our pension plans that I had mentioned earlier.

With that, I would certainly encourage this amendment, for hon. members to give it consideration. I think it's a good amendment to this bill. We've outlined our concerns. This is something that I think we can do to ensure that people as they retire and those who already are retired can have confidence in the investment proceeds of the sometimes significant pools of money that are available. We need to ensure that these pools of money grow and that there are pension and pension benefits for those who are eligible.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, to amendment A1.

Dr. Taft: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I think this is a really good amendment. I think this is an amendment that rises above partisan considerations. I would ask all of the government members here to have a read because this amendment would bring AIMCo in line with the practice in other provinces. It would improve accountability because it would connect some of the management board of AIMCo more directly to the mandates of some of the funds they're managing. There's nothing here unreasonable; there's nothing here out of line. This is a good idea.

3:30

I think it's worth repeating the point that the British Columbia Investment Management Corporation, which is their equivalent of AIMCo, has almost $75 billion in assets, so it's actually quite similar to AIMCo. Its board is comprised of representatives of various pension plans that are connected to the fund, and they have a mechanism that allows a diversity of appointments to the board of the B.C. Investment Management Corporation. I won't go into the details of that; I think the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, who sponsored this amendment, has spoken to that. As well, the Ontario Teachers' Pension Plan has a number of members from various interests on their board. So they're not just appointed unilaterally at the whim of cabinet or a minister. They're appointed because they are representing a specific pension fund and have got an interest and roots in a specific pension fund.

One of the concerns I have with the AIMCo board is the same concern I have with all kinds of these government boards that this particular government sets up. All the board members are appointed at the whim of the minister and the cabinet, and we end up with the same people getting appointed to the board. [interjection] I'm getting distracted by one of my colleagues here.

Mr. Liepert: Tell him to behave.

Dr. Taft: Yeah. He's misbehaving here.

I think there's a real problem when we have such centralized control of all of the boards. I think that, in fact, it increases our risks of mismanagement. It doesn't diversify decision-making. It doesn't bring in multiple views, which we tend to think is a good idea on this perspective, and in this particular case it doesn't enhance accountability. In fact, the people on the board don't necessarily have any commitment, other than their paycheque, to the performance of the funds that they are managing.

So I'd urge government members to take a serious look at this amendment. This is eminently reasonable. It's a way to improve the governance of AIMCo and make sure that the assets of the people whose retirement depends on how this fund is managed are actually looked after. With those supportive comments, Mr. Chairman, I'll cede the floor to somebody else.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It's an honour and a privilege to rise and speak to this amendment, an amendment that I also feel is very good for many of the reasons that have already been given. So I shall be relatively brief here.

If we look at the way the current AIMCo board is set up, it is made up of 11 members, all of very high stature in the investment community. They have achieved certain levels of expertise and, I believe, are qualified for those roles in a very good way that's referenced by their qualifications. Where I think this amendment will add to a balance of this board is that some of the people with some skin in the game, shall we say, will also be represented at the table. And by "skin in the game" I mean people who have worked long and hard and contributed pension dollars to this fund. By adding, as I believe the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar has suggested, a member from the local authorities pension plan, a member from the public service pension plan, a member from the special forces pension plan, and a member with the experience of the Management Employees Pension Plan Board, I believe you do have people with skin in the game, people who will be having an extra eye on the ball, shall we say, in looking after their members' investments going forward for they've put their hard work, blood, sweat, and tears into saving this money. That's why I think this is a great amendment.

It also brings us in line with what some other provinces are doing in the country, mainly British Columbia and Ontario, which appear to have successful models that recognize that multiple viewpoints are a good thing to have, with multiple levels of checks and balances put into place that allow for additional accountability. Like I said, I think it's important for people with skin in the game, so to speak, to be at the table to see what their money is doing, to hold their investment advisors to account and ask those difficult questions.

Hey, I think the 11 people that we've appointed to the board are excellent people. Just having some extra accountability there would be a good thing. I believe this would be not too difficult a thing to accomplish.

I commend the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar for making this amendment and thinking of what could make our AIMCo board more accountable and run in a better fashion, especially for those people who have put their money and their assets into that pool of money along with the government.

I thank you for allowing these comments to be made. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, on the amendment.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise and make a few comments with respect to the amendment to Bill 56. The amendment I think does a good thing in the sense that it adds a number of positions on the board or focuses the positions on the board on people who have experience with managing the investments relative to public pensions. I think that pensions are a good example of the kind of investment approach we need for the government's assets of billions of dollars of money. In other words, with very large amounts of money you take a long-term view, you're cautious, and you're prudent. That model is used for the investment of pensions, and it's the appropriate model, I think, for the government's investments.

I have a lot of problems with how AIMCo has been established, Mr. Chairman, because, you know, I'm very concerned that the government seems to think that if you get high-rolling, high-risk investors involved in the management of the government's finances, you're going to do a lot better. They have this, I guess, orientation towards high-risk capitalism, that I don't think is appropriate for the public investments and the magnitude that we've seen under the responsibility of AIMCo.

The big problem, I think, is that the act as a whole eliminates the deputy minister as a participant on the board. Now, this is not addressed by this amendment. Maybe it should be, or maybe it's just so contrary to the intent of the act that it might not be in order. Nevertheless, I think it's critical because the minister will now have the same reporting relationship with the AIMCo board that she does with her deputy minister. There will be no opportunity for the finance administration to provide the minister with oversight and information. Now, this may be partly compensated by putting some good board members with pension experience on it. It may compensate for that basic problem or basic flaw. I think that the minister without the support of her department and the senior officials is ill equipped to oversee the AIMCo board. I think that in that sense the bill is a mistake. I'm not sure that the amendment deals with that particular flaw in the bill, or perhaps it couldn't, but it would strengthen the board, in my view, to do this.

3:40

One of the things that I have experienced in my time in municipal government, Mr. Chairman, is that whenever you appoint a bunch of businesspeople, executives and so on, to manage something that was previously part of the public service, they take a different view of how things are managed. I know a lot of the Conservatives over here in this House think that, you know, if you could just put businesspeople in charge of the operations of government, it would all be run more efficiently, and the taxpayer would get more bang for their buck.

I don't think that that's actually true. In my experience one of the first things that happens when you appoint a bunch of businesspeople to a board to take over a function of government is that you immediately lose control of your compensation costs. In fact, we've already seen this. The top two AIMCo executives have received $5 million in compensation, and that is in the same year that they lost 17 per cent on the investments. That's a problem. So I have a fundamental issue with the approach.

I would prefer to see investment people who are responsible to a board that has more input and control from the department of finance than we have. But I do think, Mr. Chairman, that in the sense that we can strengthen the board by adding people who have previous experience managing pensions, it's a good thing.

So I'm prepared to support this amendment, and I urge all other members to do so as well.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Chairman, I think that if you look at Bill 56 and the discussion about the 11 members, it doesn't preclude any of the people that they're talking about or individuals that may have had experience with the local authorities pension plan. It doesn't preclude any of those people. I think we need to keep in mind that AIMCo needs to be independent, needs to have the opportunity to make investments based on sound financial management practices. I think that if you start to load up a board – and I can accept some of the arguments, some of the discussion about people with skin in the game, but you also don't want to have conflicting skin in the game. I mean, if you make an investment that's good, does that become special forces pension? I mean, I've been around an auction market, and I know that when you buy a bad pen of calves, you don't take them home. So let's not put people in positions where they are in a conflict.

Now, the simple fact is that you have to have a board that has a sole objective ahead of it. I don't want to get into great philosophical differences, but they're there for one reason. They're there to manage your investments; they're there to make you money for your retirement. That's what it's all about. That's it in a nutshell. So pick the best people you can get, put them on the board, and let them do their job. That's what the intent of the bill is. I've said that it doesn't preclude any of the people they've described in the amendment, but the amendment isn't necessary.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Certainly, I appreciate the remarks and the participation of the hon. President of the Treasury Board. I understand what he's stating, but if we compare ourselves to B.C., the fact that we have a $69 billion or a $70 billion fund here that we're talking about, all told, and B.C. has a $75 billion fund, there's not much difference. They started their fund in this way before we did. We were sort of modelled off them, from what I can remember of what Dr. Oberg had said in this House. But I'm specifically thinking of an individual who lives in our constituency and who has been retired for some time with a public-sector pension plan. This gentleman has some issues around that plan, its governance, its direction. In fact, in some parts of this city and across this province there are groups of retired individuals who are seeking relief through legal action for some of the outstanding issues that they have.

I have, as I said before, confidence in the individuals. We have the chairman of this board, a gentleman named Charles Baillie from the Toronto-Dominion Bank, and he's currently chancellor of Queen's University, president of the Art Gallery of Ontario.

Dr. Taft: A big supporter of public health care.

Mr. MacDonald: Someone said he is a big supporter of public health care, which is just an excellent thing to hear.

The vice-chair is George Gosbee from Calgary, president and the CEO of Tristone Capital. We have Clive Beddoe, chief executive officer of WestJet, a fine airline, very well managed, in my opinion. It's my airline of choice if I can get a ticket on it. David Bissett is the founder of Bissett Investment Management, which is now a division of Franklin Templeton Investments. This individual has a law degree from Dalhousie University. Virginia Holmes is a former chief executive officer of AXA Investment Managers Limited in London, United Kingdom. International experience.

We have Daryl Katz, the founder and chief executive officer and chairman of the Katz Group. He's also a member of the Canadian Council of Chief Executives, has a law degree from the local University of Alberta, and, I'm proud to say, is the owner of the Oilers. I wish him well. He's no different than anyone else. He's always looking for those big power forwards. They're hard to find, and whenever you do find one, you've got to pay them a lot. Frank Layton, QC, currently is counsel with Bennett Jones, again is a graduate of the University of Alberta. Andrea S. Rosen, vice-chair of the TD Bank Financial Group; Mac Van Wieringen, ARC Financial Corp.; and, of course, a board member who I think would be coming off, Mr. Tim Wiles, Deputy Minister of Alberta Finance and Enterprise. We deal as Public Accounts members with Mr. Wiles frequently, and he is an able and capable individual.

When we look at this group and we look at the suggestion we are making and we look at the amount of money that some of the retired individuals have, what's at stake for them, to have their interests at the table I don't think is unreasonable, nor is it unusual, Mr. Chairman. When we look at AIMCo to date and we have a look at what the Auditor General has to say, yes, you look surprised, but the Auditor General devoted considerable attention to the governance of AIMCo in his report that he released in October.

We all know that the corporation started in 2008, the first day of the year, and it was to provide investment management services to various Alberta public-sector pensions and endowment funds and special purpose funds, as I said earlier. But it's the public-sector pensions and those that are planning on or are using those pensions now that we have to consider, and hopefully that's what we're going to do with this amendment.

Now, the Auditor had a lot to say about risk management and the new management's new approach. I'm going to quote directly here from the Auditor's report, Mr. Chairman. This is quite relevant, with due respect to the chair. We're talking about control on AIMCo, and we are talking about increasing the control through this amendment and making the board even more responsive to those who are going to benefit from this, not just the taxpayers but individuals, as I said before, who are planning on retiring and are relying on that money or who are already retired from the public sector.

3:50

When we look at that, Mr. Chairman, we look at what Mr. Dunn has to say.

As we were auditing internal control systems in the latter part of 2008-2009, the new management at AIMCo was assessing the quality of those systems and by means of a new business plan, identifying the areas of its business that needed a new approach in terms of management and control. By the spring of 2009, subsequent our audit, AIMCo began to introduce new risk management processes. In our opinion, the improvements under way will significantly strengthen the controls that AIMCo needs to manage its business.

That's very good. That is a form of control, and that is an improvement. This amendment is an improvement, and it's control as well because the public-sector pensions have a lot at stake here.

Now, the Auditor goes on with other areas of improvement that he notes in his report. He talks about enterprise risk management, derivative risk management, derivative credit risk monitoring, the corporate bond credit screening process, the internal audit, the recommendations. The Auditor is suggesting: "We recommend that AIMCo re-establish an Internal Audit [committee]." The word "re-establish" certainly caught my eye when I initially read this report. There is nothing the matter with scrutiny and openness and transparency, and I'm not suggesting for a minute that AIMCo won't have openness and transparency.

The first annual report is titled The Start of Something Big. We've got a ginger-haired young man here with a tree. I can only assume that this photograph is taken in Alberta, I think down by Canmore somewhere. It's the start of something big. What we can do with this amendment, this small change to the bill, is provide a form of control for public-sector employees who are now retired or who are going to retire in the future. They can have a direct say in the operations of their pension money. I don't think it's unusual, nor is it an unreasonable request.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak on the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair, for allowing me to speak again on the amendment, and I do appreciate the hon. minister of the Treasury Board adding his participation to the debate. I understand a little bit of his reason and rationale for trying to get the 11 best people who are talented in the area of investments, hiring them, and letting them to do the best they can with making your money. It does hold some rationale to it.

I guess, you know, a comparison can be made to the early '90s, when Ed Johnston was the coach and general manager of the Pittsburgh Penguins. He had Jaromír Jágr, Mario Lemieux, Kevin Stevens, Larry Murphy, and Paul Coffey on his power play, and he'd put them on the ice. I remember an interview after a game when they didn't do very well. They said, "Coach, are you going to tell them to go practise the power play?" Coach Eddie Johnston said: "Those are five of maybe the seven or eight best players in the world out there. If they don't know how to score a goal on the power play, how the heck am I going to teach them?"

I understand that sort of rationale. It's sort of the rationale that the hon. minister of the Treasury Board was using. You find your 11 best players, give them a puck, and tell them to go out there and score a goal for the Alberta people. I understand that. But what this amendment is trying to do here is have a little bit more substance and control. Sometimes your 11 best players can get so concentrated on scoring that goal and so hell-bent on winning that game that they maybe forget some of the principles of why they're there. I'm not saying that that would necessarily happen in this case. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar said, the amendment adds some people there – the local authorities pension plan, the Public Service Pension Plan Board, the Special Forces Pension Plan Board, and the Management Employees Pension Plan Board – some people with some additional experience who have run pensions, who have some skin in the game, like I mentioned earlier, who can sort of be an additional tool or a resource or a sounding board, shall we say, to some of the investment ideas put forward by the 11 members.

I, too, like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, know they're tremendously talented individuals. I know I was at the MAX awards recently, awards by the University of Calgary recognizing entrepreneurship and leadership in the financial markets. George Gosbee was the winner of that award. Interestingly, George and I actually went to school with each other from grade 3 on, so I know of the tremendous talent and success he has had and of both the competence and ability he has.

You know, we're not challenging the credibility of the people who are on the board. We just think that this is an additional layer of a sort of scrutiny, almost a sober second thought that allows for some other people with some other ideas and some people who have worked very hard or people who have knowledge of what their people have done to get the money into a position to be invested.

Those are my comments, and I thank you again. I encourage all members of this House to support this very good amendment by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak on amendment A1?

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

The Deputy Chair: On the bill, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes, specifically on the bill, Mr. Chairman. I think it's worth noting that this piece of legislation follows on the heels of the controversy concerning AIMCo's investment in Precision Drilling and the concern that there is perceived to be government meddling in that decision. Whether there was or not, this is about dealing with a perception. I think this is a way, in a manner of speaking, of the government distancing itself from the board of AIMCo. There are pros and cons to that. I think we need to be careful that the government doesn't distance itself so far that it stops being responsible and accountable, but at the same time we do all agree that we don't want political meddling.

I think it is regrettable that the amendment brought forward by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar didn't get any serious attention from the government because that was another way of ensuring accountability in AIMCo, of ensuring that decisions were made for the right reasons, and, frankly, of putting in place the mechanisms that separated the political connections from AIMCo. When you look at the board of directors of AIMCo now, if this piece of legislation moves through, the deputy minister won't be there. How many of those members of the board of directors are active supporters of the PC Party? Certainly, some of them are. Some of them are donors. Some of them have donated quite a lot of money. I think it's very regrettable for everybody concerned that the perception is going to be there that, you know, one of the ways to get on the board of AIMCo is to be well connected politically. That's not what we want for AIMCo. What we want is a formula for bringing forward members of the board that makes them completely independent of political meddling.

4:00

I think this bill should go a lot farther. I think it's a modest step. I think it's probably motivated purely by political butt-covering. But sometimes the right things happen for questionable reasons, so I'll leave it at that and wish AIMCo management and the board all the best because they've got an enormous responsibility.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Are you ready for the question on Bill 56?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 56 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.

Bill 57

Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It's a pleasure today to stand up and speak to Bill 57, the Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009. I'm pleased and encouraged by the debate so far, and I look forward to this discussion during Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Chair, Bill 57 is legislation that will help increase the efficiency of the justice system. Through the amendments of this bill Court of Queen's Bench justices will be able to hear some of the same applications that justices of the peace and provincial court judges can hear now, reducing the amount of time needed for law enforcement to apply for warrants to two different justices.

Right now for warrants authorizing the use of a tracking device or a number recorded under part 15 of the Criminal Code, law enforcement must make application to a provincial court judge or a justice of the peace. But certain applications under part 6 of the Criminal Code for other types of warrants, like applications for wiretaps, can only be made to a justice of the Court of Queen's Bench. In some cases warrants are needed under both parts of the Criminal Code, so law enforcement must make multiple applications to different courts. When this happens, more court time is used, more man-hours are used by law enforcement, two different decision-makers must become familiar with the documentation, which is typically lengthy and complex in these kinds of applications.

Mr. Chair, Bill 57 would give Court of Queen's Bench justices the same jurisdiction as justices of the peace in the cases I've described. Reducing the number of applications law enforcement need to make in complex investigations that involve multiple warrants saves court time, saves law enforcement time, and allows warrants in these cases to be obtained, where appropriate, in a more timely fashion. The Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act will help to increase the effectiveness and the efficiency of our already very busy justice system, ensuring that more resources are available for Albertans.

I thank all the hon. members for their support so far and urge all members to support this important legislation. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'd like to thank the sponsor of the bill, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West, for bringing this forward as it looks like it will both ease the administration of justice and streamline the process in order for justice to be served more readily and speedily on Alberta's streets. This will likely have an almost entirely positive effect on the administration of warrant applications. Allowing members of the Court of Queen's Bench to hear these applications will undoubtedly streamline the current process.

It's important to note that this change was made after careful consultation within the judiciary, who are supportive of the proposed changes to the warrant application process. In addition, similar measures have been used to harmonize the warrant application process in British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, and Saskatchewan. Like I said, as the government has done a good job here in communicating with the judiciary, who have given their blessing to these amendments, who am I to stand in their way?

I'd like to again commend the government for moving on streamlining these applications. Hopefully, this will go to better serve the administration of justice.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak?

[The clauses of Bill 57 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report progress on Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, and report Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009, and Bill 57, the Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 56, Bill 57. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 50. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading (continued)

Bill 58 Corrections Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 3: Mr. Griffiths]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour and a privilege to rise and speak to Bill 58 as proposed by the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright. This bill follows initial changes to the act that permit correctional facilities in Alberta to monitor inmate communications, which were previously only telephone based, which passed third reading on December 4, 2007.

This bill will further enhance law enforcement's capability to enable passive recording of inmate communication, which will be stored in a database, not to be listened to unless there are reasonable grounds to do so. Information that appears to threaten an individual or the safety of the facility staff or that is related to a crime or potential crime would be included in these reasonable grounds. Otherwise, privileged conversations will remain privileged; for example, conversations between an inmate and an attorney.

If we look at this bill in its entirety, it is not without, again, some pushes and pulls to where the debate goes. I think the bill does do a decent job of trying to balance public security while recognizing both a person's right to have some personal time with their lawyer as well as a right to communications which shouldn't be listened to. You can see that the amendment allows for the ability of our justice system to listen in on the communications of prisoners. It has been established by the Supreme Court that prisoners already have a lowered expectation of privacy. This being the case, I think this bill genuinely balances public concern for inmates, people who have had difficulty with the law and are continuing to have them, I guess, through informants or otherwise, or for people who are coming into communication with them to continue nefarious deeds.

4:10

Now, I don't know how prevalent this is, but I'm assuming that since other jurisdictions in the province have done so – and the Supreme Court did make that ruling that there is a lessened expectation of privacy by prisoners – that this is somewhat to be expected.

I am somewhat concerned – and I wasn't able to fit an amendment into the language – that some people who may be caught by this bill are people who are going to be spending time in our facilities and are not actually guilty of a crime yet. That is worrisome for me. It is worrisome for me from the standpoint of the basis of innocent till proven guilty, that these people, until such time as they are guilty, should not have their conversations recorded.

Now, that being said, I am in favour, once that has passed, of inmates having their conversations at least passively recorded so that if there are situations where there's a reasonable suspicion of them, then if necessary to stop a crime or to stop the planning of a crime, these tapes can be played to find out if those suspicions were warranted. Again, we're dealing with a very delicate balance here between, I guess, protection of society as well as the ability for people to listen in on what are private communications. I know that some others have some opinions on this.

However, at this point in time I'm prepared to support this bill. I wish there was a mechanism to hive out those people who haven't been found guilty of a crime, and maybe there's a way that the government could look at doing this. But right now, in order to err on the side of safety, I'm willing to say that this bill for me represents at least a moderate step that tries to balance these difficult issues in the name of public safety.

I thank you very much for allowing me to have the opportunity to speak. I'm certain we'll hear from others on this bill. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Thank you to my colleague, who as the official critic for this area in our caucus sort of sets the tone and the direction that caucus would go in. It's very kind of him to allow me to contradict him, well, at least to push back a little bit.

I have spent a lot of time becoming familiar, or at least trying to, with the amount of surveillance that we have in our society now. Generally, that sort of monitoring, let's call it, tends to fall into two areas. One is marketing, and one is surveillance. You know, they've now got those chips that they put in your clothing when you buy them, and when you go out and you walk by the store that sells that kind of apparel next time, they know that you're walking by in one of their outfits, and they can phone your cellphone and ask you to pop in because there's a sale on that kind of jacket that you like. Those are called radio frequency identifiers. That's right: RFIDs. So there are lots of ways for sort of putting something on somebody and monitoring their activities or their movement.

As I say, some of it's used for marketing. You know, you have a choice as an individual to say, "No, I'm not going to pop in and buy that jacket because I have another one like it" although it can be pretty persuasive, and there are lots of studies out there and many PhDs have been earned on advertising and the effect of it. Let's face it: it's successful.

The second kind of monitoring you get is surveillance, and I have a lot more trouble with this. I prefer to think of most of our citizens as pretty law abiding, pretty decent people who are just trying to get about their own lives. I understand that there are people that are not law abiding and are not trying to get on with their lives; they're trying to take something from mine. But I think that when we have a technology that is advancing so fast on us that we cannot keep up with it, we've got to be very careful when we pass legislation that gives pretty unfettered control to any government or any body of authority to be able to use monitoring methods on parts of our population. It can get away from us pretty quickly and move far beyond what the legislation anticipated before we could even get in here in some cases and get the legislation back up to deal with it. This is an ongoing argument, but most of us have not lost the right to privacy.

I would argue that even going about your life in a public place should not make you subject to surveillance by authority figures. I don't think it's right that there are cameras in some areas. It's not the taking of the image. See, people always say: well, if you've done nothing wrong, you've got nothing to be afraid of; what's your problem with it? Well, you may well have done nothing wrong, but you may not be in the room when that information is interpreted. You may not have the opportunity to pop up and say: actually, my boss knew that I was out on the street at 2 o'clock in the afternoon going for a coffee at Tim Hortons. The person's wife may not know why they were out in the afternoon going to Tim Hortons at 2 o'clock, and there could be problems there. That individual doesn't get to be in the room when that data is interpreted, and that's a big part of the problem.

I think we've had a couple of changes here. To me they look like they're interlocking or they could interlock. We've had a change in the way our new remand centre is being built, the new remand centre that's in north Edmonton in which, in fact, there will be no direct, face-to-face meetings between inmates and anyone except for their legal representatives. All communication – and I'm making those finger quotation marks again – all of that communication will fall under this bill. Their MLA could go out to visit somebody that's an inmate in a remand centre and will now be also included, also captured, in that monitoring of whatever that inmate is doing because they're not a legal representative, and the only one that's cut out of this or set aside is their legal representative. We're now setting up a remand centre in Edmonton in which all of that communication could be and I'm sure will be captured under this bill, and I think that's problematic.

I think the fact that you're dealing with people who are in a remand centre who are not convicted in a court of law – and that's the dividing line we make. I will point out yet again that a very high proportion of the people that we have in remand centres are people who are dealing with a mental illness and did not have an address. That is why they end up in the remand centre, because one of the criteria is: do you have a fixed address where we can come and find you?

If you're homeless or you're out on the streets for a mental illness . . . [interjection] Well, it will get much worse with Alberta Hospital releasing a number of people, and they're trying to move them into the community because as soon as they go off their meds, they don't return home to their group home, et cetera, et cetera. They're out in the street. They get picked up for vagrancy. Guess what? No fixed address. Yahoo. You're in the remand centre, and any communication that you have with your social worker, with your family member, all of that now is going to be done by video conferencing, where they can monitor it, all of which is subject to this act.

Right there that technology has already moved ahead of what I see being talked about in the debate around this bill. Now, maybe the government is very aware of it. Maybe they planned this. Okay. Fair enough. But fess up that you intended to do this. I think it's wrong that the taping of family members that are visiting people that are not convicted – they are remanded; they're not an offender – are subject to this taping.

4:20

As well, we have to be very careful with the implementation of something like this that we don't subject 90 per cent of the people in order to catch 10 per cent of them. And we do that a lot, where we put in legislation that is going to cover a whole bunch of people. We're just trying to get at a smaller percentage that we're trying to catch, but we cast that net wide enough to catch everybody. I think that's wrong of government to be treating their citizens as though they've done something wrong and subjecting them to that kind of surveillance. And it's surveillance.

There are no limits in this act on how long that surveillance can go on, how long the information is kept, and who is going to look at the information. When I say information, I'm covering what they call communication in this act. A number of these clauses are exactly the same as what we had before, but they were specific to telephone calls. Now "telephone calls" has been removed. Let me give you an example:

that the telephone calls are or will be made to a victim as defined in section 14.3(1) or to another person who would be likely to consider the telephone calls intimidating or threatening.

Okay. That same section reappears as:

that the inmate communication is or will be made to a victim as defined in section 14.3(1) or to another person who would be likely to consider the inmate communication intimidating or threatening.

So the telephone call stuff has been taken out. It's identical except for now we call it communication, and that's repeated in almost all of the clauses that are in this bill. All of the old stuff, telephone calls out, communication in. That covers everything. That covers e-mails. That covers video conferencing. It covers Skype. It covers voice over Internet protocol. It covers every kind of communication that that person's involved with. I mean, an argument could be made that it covers your tattoos because that's a form of communication in saying who you are and what you do. I know I'm getting some funny looks, but it's true. Communication: tattoos would cover for that in some places.

There are no limitations put on how much of this information is going to be collected on an individual, how long it's kept, for whom, who looks at it, who gets to interpret it. Can this pop up 25 years from now in a different trial being used out of context for somebody? Don't know. I have trouble with this bill as a result of that.

I understand that we have a huge problem with gangs now and that we are struggling, casting about trying to find ways to control gang activity and that gang culture inside of our prisons from operating inside of our prisons and remand centres the same way it operates outside. I understand that, and I agree that we need to test a lot of different models to try and find what is the best thing for that. But I'm not sure that this bill does this. I think that in trying to deal with the gang problem, we've thrown a net way too wide and captured far too many other people with a technology that we can't control and that is moving so fast that limitations we fail to put in this act could cause us deep problems down the road. I think it was probably a good idea at the time, but there wasn't enough scrutiny and thought that went into this.

I appreciate what the member for Calgary-Buffalo has said and his comments on it. He is the lawyer; I'm not. You know, he has signalled to our caucus that we should be supportive of this bill, but I want to put my concerns on the record while we are talking about the principle of this bill because I think the principle may be all right, but the implementation of it as described in this act is deeply flawed.

There were a couple of criteria that were in place previously that don't appear anymore. Before what we had was: "Subject to the regulations, the director of a correctional institution may direct . . . where the director believed on reasonable grounds." Those three have now disappeared and don't appear as a trio together again, where all three criteria must be met. It's down to two in most cases and one in some cases. I think we are creating some problems here for ourselves. We're disrespecting our public, and we need to put some limitations on that kind of surveillance.

Thank you for the opportunity to talk to that. I appreciate it very much. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak?

[Motion carried; Bill 58 read a second time]

Bill 59

Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 3: Dr. Sherman]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'll keep my comments ever so brief in light of the time of day. This piece of legislation is an adjustment that I think is part of a very important process for helping us as a society come to terms with how we manage people with mental illness. It's a complicated issue. There's not going to be any final, perfect solution to how we deal with it. But it's, in my view, a bill that's taking steps that need to be taken and that are worth considering, so I think we should move this bill along.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Ms Blakeman: I don't. But I didn't the first time, so I'm just being consistent. I will take the opportunity of this bill in Committee in the Whole to be able to draw out some of the concerns that I see repeated here and allow it to go through second reading today. But I hope that it stays in Committee of the Whole without being rushed through with unseemly haste next week so that I do get an opportunity to speak to it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 59 read a second time]

Bill 60

Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate November 3: Mr. Quest]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, we considered filibustering on this one, but I don't think we will.

I think this is, again, part of a larger process that we're aware of, expanding the role of health professions, recognizing that the nature of health care delivery is rapidly evolving with midwifery, acupuncture, and so on. I'll keep my comments to that because I think we want to move this along before we run out of time this afternoon.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 60 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been another invigorating afternoon of great debate and great ideas and suggestions. In that mode and in that vein, I would therefore move that we call it 4:30 and adjourn the House until 1:30 p.m. on Monday.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:28 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Table of Contents

Introduction of Guests	1903, 1913
Statement by the Speaker
Fifth Anniversary of Elected Members	1903
Ministerial Statements
Recognition of 30 Years of Service, Hon. Ken Kowalski, Speaker, Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock	1903
Members' Statements
Education Leadership Recognition Awards	1905
Concrete Theatre	1914
Stella Calahasen	1914
CASA House	1914
Livestock Traceability Program	1915
Government Policies	1915
Oral Question Period
Health System Reform	1905
Nursing Recruitment	1906
Postsecondary Tuition Fees	1906, 1910
Electricity Transmission System	1907
Government Spending	1907
Employment Strategies	1908
Family Violence	1908
Rent Supplement Program	1909
Gangs and Organized Crime	1909
Agricultural Assistance	1910
Immigrant Investor Program	1911
Film and Television Support	1911
Underground Electricity Transmission Lines	1912
Métis Settlements Ombudsman	1912
Aboriginal Education and Employment	1913
Presenting Petitions	1915
Tabling Returns and Reports	1915
Projected Government Business	1916
Government Bills and Orders
Second Reading
Bill 62 Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009	1917
Bill 58 Corrections Amendment Act, 2009	1923
Bill 59 Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009	1925
Bill 60 Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009	1925
Committee of the Whole
Bill 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	1917
Bill 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation	1918
Bill 57 Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009	1922

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 2nd Session (2009)

Activity to November 19, 2009

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

1 Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009 (Stelmach)

First Reading -- 6 (Feb. 10 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 90-93 (Feb. 17 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 503-4 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 583-84 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c4]

2 Lobbyists Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)

First Reading -- 9 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 93-94 (Feb. 17 aft.), 121-23 (Feb. 18 aft.), 212-14 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 575-79 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 609 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c5]

3 Credit Union Amendment Act, 2009 (Berger)

First Reading -- 17 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 123-24 (Feb. 18 aft.), 202-03 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 579-80 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 609-10 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 1, 2009; SA 2009 c3]

4 Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2009 (Bhullar)

First Reading -- 17 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 124 (Feb. 18 aft.), 353-56 (Mar. 11 aft.), 585-86 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 680-83 (Apr. 16 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 912-15 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c11]

5 Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (Griffiths)

First Reading -- 17 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 125 (Feb. 18 aft.), 214-15 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 506-07 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 585 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c6]

6 Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Amendment Act, 2009 (Forsyth)

First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)

Second Reading -- 356-60 (Mar. 11 aft.), 586 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)

Committee of the Whole -- 633-38 (Apr. 14 aft.), 861-65 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)

Third Reading -- 899-900 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)

Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c12]

- 7 Public Health Amendment Act, 2009 (Liepert)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 437-38 (Mar. 17 aft.), 439-40 (Mar. 17 aft.), 586-87 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 865-70 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 900 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c13]
- 8 Feeder Associations Guarantee Act ($) (Groeneveld)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 203-08 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 580-83 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 610 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cF-11.1]
- 9 Government Organization Amendment Act, 2009 (Campbell)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 360-61 (Mar. 11 aft.), 587-88 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 895-97 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 915-17 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c9]
- 10 Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act (Dallas)
First Reading -- 18 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 361-62 (Mar. 11 aft.), 588 (Apr. 8 aft.), 889-91 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 920-21 (Apr. 30 aft.), 980-83 (May 5 aft.), 1118-20 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1407-08 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cS-23.5]
- 11 Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2009 (VanderBurg)
First Reading -- 19 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 362-63 (Mar. 11 aft.), 891-92 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 983 (May 5 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1408-09 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c22]
- 12 Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009 (Berger)
First Reading -- 19 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 383-85 (Mar. 12 aft.), 892-95 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1120-21 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1409 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c31]
- 13 Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)
First Reading -- 19 (Feb. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 385 (Mar. 12 aft.), 895 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1121-22 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1409 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c27]
- 14 Carbon Capture and Storage Funding Act ($) (Knight)
First Reading -- 138 (Feb. 19 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 208-10 (Mar. 3 aft.), 884-89 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 921-22 (Apr. 30 aft.), 1114-18 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1409-11 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 cC-2.5]
- 15 Dunvegan Hydro Development Act (Oberle)
First Reading -- 105-06 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 210-11 (Mar. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 504-06 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 584-85 (Apr. 8 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 20, 2009; SA 2009 cD-18]

- 16 Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009 (Lindsay)
First Reading -- 106 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 385-86 (Mar. 12 aft.), 919-20 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1122 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1411 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 1, 2009; SA 2009 c30]
- 17 Securities Amendment Act, 2009 (Fawcett)
First Reading -- 106 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 386-87 (Mar. 12 aft.), 622-26 (Apr. 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 737 (Apr. 21 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 917-19 (Apr. 30 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c14]
- 18* Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Stevens)
First Reading -- 161 (Mar. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 211-12 (Mar. 3 aft.), 349-52 (Mar. 11 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 381-83 (Mar. 12 aft.), 446-54 (Mar. 17 aft., amendments agreed to), 472--81 (Mar. 18 aft.), 482-83 (Mar. 18 aft.), 574-75 (Apr. 8 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 604-09 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Apr. 20 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 20, 2009; SA 2009 c7]
- 19* Land Assembly Project Area Act (Hayden)
First Reading -- 161 (Mar. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 438-39 (Mar. 17 aft.), 626-33 (Apr. 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 683-90 (Apr. 16 aft.), 737-53 (Apr. 21 aft., amendments agreed to), 770-84 (Apr. 22 aft.), 797-806 (Apr. 23 aft.), 857-61 (Apr. 28 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 897-99 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cL-2.5]
- 20 Civil Enforcement Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 161 (Mar. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 767 (Apr. 22 aft.), 1265 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1329 (May 26 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1412 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c18]
- 21 Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009 ($) (Snelgrove)
First Reading -- 283 (Mar. 9 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 377-80 (Mar. 12 aft.), 386 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 440-43, 454 (Mar. 17 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 468-71 (Mar. 18 aft.), 481 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Mar. 23 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force March 23, 2009; SA 2009 c2]
- 22 Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009 ($) (Snelgrove)
First Reading -- 344 (Mar. 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 380-81 (Mar. 12 aft.), 386 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 443-46, 454 (Mar. 17 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 471-72 (Mar. 18 aft.), 481-82 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Mar. 23 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force March 23, 2009; SA 2009 c1]
- 23* Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (Danyluk)
First Reading -- 401 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 735 (Apr. 21 aft.), 1195 (May 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1329-30 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1527-28 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force January 1, 2010; SA 2009 c29]
- 24 Animal Health Amendment Act, 2009 (Griffiths)
First Reading -- 303 (Mar. 10 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 735-36 (Apr. 21 aft.), 969-70 (May 5 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1246 (May 25 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1412 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c17]

- 25 Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2009 ($) (Evans)
First Reading -- 283 (Mar. 9 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 767 (Apr. 22 aft.), 970-72 (May 5 aft.), 1105-06 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1167-69 (May 13 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1447-49 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force September 1, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c32]
- 26* Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009 (Mitzel)
First Reading -- 303 (Mar. 10 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 736 (Apr. 21 aft.), 1265-68 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1330-31 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1412-13 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c36]
- 27* Alberta Research and Innovation Act ($) (Horner)
First Reading -- 466 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 767-69 (Apr. 22 aft.), 1003-06 (May 6 aft.), 1094-98 (May 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1170-73 (May 13 eve.), 1229-40 (May 25 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1507-10 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cA-31.7]
- 28 Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (McFarland)
First Reading -- 467 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 769-70 (Apr. 22 aft.), 1006-07 (May 6 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1246-49 (May 25 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1413 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c20]
- 29 Family Law Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 401 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 851-52 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1268-69 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1358-60 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1528 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c21]
- 30 Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009 (Drysdale)
First Reading -- 401 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 736-37 (Apr. 21 aft.), 1269-73 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1360-63 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1528-30 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c35]
- 31* Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 402 (Mar. 16 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 852-53 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1273-75 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1711-13 (Nov. 3 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1773-74 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
- 32 Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act (Horne)
First Reading -- 467 (Mar. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 853 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1275-80 (May 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1365 (May 27 eve.), 1449-55 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1524 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cA-31.5]
- 33 Fiscal Responsibility Act (Evans)
First Reading -- 545 (Apr. 7 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 853-54 (Apr. 28 aft.), 972-79 (May 5 aft., passed on division)
Committee of the Whole -- 998-1003 (May 6 aft.), 1109-14 (May 12 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1526-27 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 1, 2009; SA 2009 cF-15.1]

- 34 Drug Program Act ($) (Liepert)
First Reading -- 882 (Apr. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 979-80 (May 5 aft.), 1014-15 (May 6 aft.), 1194-95 (May 14 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1384-87 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1524 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation, with exceptions; SA 2009 cD-17.5]
- 35 Gas Utilities Amendment Act, 2009 (McFarland)
First Reading -- 591 (Apr. 9 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 854 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1280-81 (May 26 aft.), 1344-45 (May 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1387 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1524-25 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c24]
- 36* Alberta Land Stewardship Act ($) (Morton)
First Reading -- 818-19 (Apr. 27 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 882 (Apr. 29 aft.), 1134-40 (May 13 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1371-84 (May 27 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1503-07 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cA-26.8]
- 37 Alberta Corporate Tax Amendment Act, 2009 ($) (Evans)
First Reading -- 701 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 854-55 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1106 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1187 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1406 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c15]
- 38 Tourism Levy Amendment Act, 2009 (Evans)
First Reading -- 702 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 855 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1106 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1187-88 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1406 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c34]
- 39 Tobacco Tax Amendment Act, 2009 (Evans)
First Reading -- 702 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 855-56 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1107-08 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1188-90 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1406-07 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c33]
- 40 Alberta Personal Income Tax Amendment Act, 2009 (Brown)
First Reading -- 702 (Apr. 20 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 856 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1108 (May 12 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1190 (May 14 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1407 (May 28 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009, with exceptions; SA 2009 c16]
- 41 Protection for Persons in Care Act (Brown)
First Reading -- 766 (Apr. 22 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 856 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1345-50 (May 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1387-90 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1525-26 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 cP-29.1]
- 42 Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009 (Anderson)
First Reading -- 734 (Apr. 21 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 857 (Apr. 28 aft.), 1350-58 (May 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1455-60 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1525 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c23]

- 43 Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2) (Griffiths)
First Reading -- 850 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 883 (Apr. 29 aft.), 1149-53 (May 13 aft.), 1155-61 (May 13 eve., passed on division)
Committee of the Whole -- 1365-71 (May 27 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1497-99 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c28]
- 44* Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009 (Blackett)
First Reading -- 850 (Apr. 28 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 883-84 (Apr. 29 aft.), 1007-14 (May 6 aft.), 1036-38 (May 7 aft.), 1140-47 (May 13 aft.), 1161-66 (May 13 eve.), 1173-74 (May 13 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1283-84, 1294-1329 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1460-80 (Jun. 1 eve., passed on division)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c26]
- 45 Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)
First Reading -- 933-34 (May 4 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1098-1103 (May 12 aft.), 1147-49 (May 13 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1240-46 (May 25 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1510 (Jun. 2 aft.), 1523 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c19]
- 46 Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act (Quest)
First Reading -- 966 (May 5 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1706-07 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1708-10 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1716-17 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1772-73 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1852-54 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
- 47 Appropriation Act, 2009 ($) (Snelgrove)
First Reading -- 1049 (May 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1085-94 (May 12 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1166-67 (May 13 eve.), 1169 (May 13 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1190-94 (May 14 aft.), 1195 (May 14 aft., passed on division)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force May 26, 2009; SA 2009 c8]
- 48 Crown's Right of Recovery Act (Liepert)
First Reading -- 1049 (May 11 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1706 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1710-11 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1735-42 (Nov. 4 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1843-47 (Nov. 17 eve.), 1897-99 (Nov. 18 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1899-1900 (Nov. 18 eve., passed)
- 49 Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2) (Lukaszuk)
First Reading -- 1426 (Jun. 1 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1500-01 (Jun. 2 aft.), 1707-08 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1713-16 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1733-35 (Nov. 4 aft., passed)
- 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Knight)
First Reading -- 1426 (Jun. 1 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1501-02 (Jun. 2 aft.), 1816-36 (Nov. 17 aft.), 1866-86 (Nov. 18 aft.), 1887-96 (Nov. 18 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1917 (Nov. 19 aft., adjourned, amendments introduced)
- 51 Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Redford)
First Reading -- 1700 (Nov. 3 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1770 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1847 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1900 (Nov. 18 eve., passed)

- 52* Health Information Amendment Act, 2009 (Rogers)
First Reading -- 436 (Mar. 17 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 436 (Mar. 17 aft., reinstated), 437 (Mar. 17 aft., referred to Standing Committee on Health), (May 25 aft., reported to Assembly)
Committee of the Whole -- 1284-94 (May 26 eve., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1526 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c25]
- 53 Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Weadick)
First Reading -- 1546 (Oct. 26 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1742-46 (Nov. 4 aft.), 1837-40 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
- 54 Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009 (Denis)
First Reading -- 1569 (Oct. 27 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1746-51 (Nov. 4 aft.), 1770-71 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1847-51 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1901 (Nov. 18 eve., passed)
- 55 Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009 (Webber)
First Reading -- 1546 (Oct. 26 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1751 (Nov. 4 aft.), 1765-70 (Nov. 5 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1851-52 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
Third Reading -- 1901-02 (Nov. 18 eve., passed)
- 56 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009 (Evans)
First Reading -- 1633 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1703 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1771-72 (Nov. 5 aft.), 1840-42 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1918-22 (Nov. 19 aft., passed)
- 57 Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009 (Weadick)
First Reading -- 1633 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1703 (Nov. 3 aft.), 1842-43 (Nov. 17 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1922-23 (Nov. 19 aft., passed)
- 58 Corrections Amendment Act, 2009 (Griffiths)
First Reading -- 1642 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1703-04 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned), 1923-25 (Nov. 19 aft., passed)
- 59 Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009 (Sherman)
First Reading -- 1666 (Nov. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1704-05 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned), 1925 (Nov. 19 aft., passed)
- 60 Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009 (Quest)
First Reading -- 1642 (Oct. 29 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1705 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned), 1925 (Nov. 19 aft., passed)
- 61 Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009 (Lukaszuk)
First Reading -- 1666 (Nov. 2 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1705-06 (Nov. 3 aft., adjourned)
- 62 Emergency Health Services Amendment Act, 2009 (Liepert)
First Reading -- 1866 (Nov. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1917 (Nov. 19 aft., adjourned)
- 201 Traffic Safety (Vehicles with Unlawfully Possessed Firearms) Amendment Act, 2009 (Hehr)
First Reading -- 106 (Feb. 18 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 165-76 (Mar. 2 aft.), 284-86 (Mar. 9 aft., defeated on division)
- 202 Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009 (Johnston)
First Reading -- 138 (Feb. 19 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 286-96 (Mar. 9 aft.), 406-08 (Mar. 16 aft., referred to Standing Committee on Community Services)

203* Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009 (Johnson)

First Reading -- 251-52 (Mar. 5 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 408-16 (Mar. 16 aft.), 829-31 (Apr. 27 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1053-64 (May 11 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1209-15 (May 25 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (May 26 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force on proclamation; SA 2009 c10]

204 Provincial-Municipal Tax Sharing Act (Blakeman)

First Reading -- 498 (Mar. 19 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 831-32 (Apr. 27 aft.), 934-41 (May 4 aft., defeated on division)

205 Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009 (Anderson)

First Reading -- 649-50 (Apr. 15 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 941-46 (May 4 aft., passed on division)
Committee of the Whole -- 1215-22 (May 25 aft.), 1427-33 (Jun. 1 aft., passed on division)
Third Reading -- 1787-93 (Nov. 16 aft., passed)

206* School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009 (Forsyth)

First Reading -- 621 (Apr. 14 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1433-38 (Jun. 1 aft.), 1547-55 (Oct. 26 aft., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1793-1800 (Nov. 16 aft., adjourned, amendments agreed to)

208 Life Leases Act (Mitzel)

First Reading -- 1208 (May 25 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1555-59 (Oct. 26 aft., adjourned)

209 Children's Services Review Committee Act (Chase)

First Reading -- 1610 (Oct. 28 aft., passed)

Pr1 Beverly Anne Cormier Adoption Termination Act (Anderson)

First Reading -- 376 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1480 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1502 (Jun. 2 aft., passed)
Third Reading -- 1532 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c37]

Pr2* Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (Elniski)

First Reading -- 376 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1480 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1530-31 (Jun. 3 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1532 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force April 1, 2009; SA 2009 c38]

Pr3* Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act (Dallas)

First Reading -- 376 (Mar. 12 aft., passed)
Second Reading -- 1480 (Jun. 1 eve., passed)
Committee of the Whole -- 1502 (Jun. 2 aft., passed with amendments)
Third Reading -- 1532 (Jun. 3 aft., passed)
Royal Assent -- (Jun. 4 outside of House sitting) [Comes into force June 4, 2009; SA 2009 c39]

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Select Special Auditor General Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Blakeman
Campbell
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Mrs. Forsyth
Deputy Chair: Mr. Elniski
Blakeman
Campbell
DeLong
Denis
Johnston
Kang
MacDonald

Standing Committee on Community Services

Chair: Mr. Doerksen
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hehr
Benito
Bhardwaj
Chase
Johnson
Johnston
Lukaszuk
Notley
Rodney
Sarich

Standing Committee on the Economy

Chair: Mr. Campbell
Deputy Chair: Mr. Taylor
Allred
Amery
Bhullar
Hinman
Marz
McFarland
Taft
Weadick
Xiao

Standing Committee on Health

Chair: Mr. Horne
Deputy Chair: Ms Pastoor
Dallas
Fawcett
Notley
Olson
Quest
Sherman
Taft
Vandermeer
Vacant

Standing Committee on Legislative Offices

Chair: Mr. Mitzel
Deputy Chair: Mr. Lund
Bhullar
Blakeman
Campbell
Horne
Lukaszuk
MacDonald
Marz
Notley
Rogers

Special Standing Committee on Members' Services

Chair: Mr. Kowalski
Deputy Chair: Mr. Oberle
Elniski
Fawcett
Hehr
Leskiw
Mason
Rogers
Taylor
VanderBurg
Weadick

Standing Committee on Private Bills

Chair: Dr. Brown
Deputy Chair: Ms Woo-Paw
Allred Jacobs
Amery MacDonald
Anderson McQueen
Benito Olson
Bhardwaj Quest
Boutilier Rodney
Calahasen Sandhu
Dallas Sarich
Doerksen Taft
Forsyth

Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Mr. Hancock
Amery Mitzel
Berger Notley
Calahasen Oberle
DeLong Pastoor
Doerksen Redford
Forsyth Rogers
Johnson Sherman
Leskiw Taylor
Liepert Zwozdesky
McFarland

Standing Committee on Public Accounts

Chair: Mr. MacDonald
Deputy Chair: Mr. Quest
Benito Johnson
Bhardwaj Kang
Chase Mason
Dallas Olson
Denis Sandhu
Drysdale Vandermeer
Fawcett Woo-Paw
Jacobs

Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services

Chair: Mr. VanderBurg
Deputy Chair: Mr. Kang
Anderson
Brown
Calahasen
Cao
Griffiths
MacDonald
Sandhu
Woo-Paw
Vacant

Standing Committee on Resources and Environment

Chair: Mr. Prins
Deputy Chair: Ms Blakeman
Berger
Boutilier
Denis
Drysdale
Hehr
Jacobs
Mason
McQueen
Oberle

If your address is incorrect, please clip on the dotted line, make any changes, and return to the address listed below. To facilitate the update, please attach the last mailing label along with your account number.

Subscriptions
Legislative Assembly Office
1001 Legislature Annex
9718 - 107 Street
EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4

.....

Last mailing label:

Account # _____

New information:

Name _____

Address _____

.....

Subscription information:

Annual subscriptions to the paper copy of Alberta Hansard (including annual index) are $127.50 including GST if mailed once a week or $94.92 including GST if picked up at the subscription address below or if mailed through the provincial government interdepartmental mail system. Bound volumes are $121.70 including GST if mailed. Cheques should be made payable to the Minister of Finance.

Price per issue is $0.75 including GST.

On-line access to Alberta Hansard is available through the Internet at www.assembly.ab.ca

Address subscription inquiries to Subscriptions, Legislative Assembly Office, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1302.

Address other inquiries to Managing Editor, Alberta Hansard, 1001 Legislature Annex, 9718 - 107 St., EDMONTON AB T5K 1E4, telephone 780.427.1875.

Province of Alberta

The 27th Legislature
Second Session

Alberta Hansard

Monday afternoon, November 23, 2009

Issue 61

The Honourable Kenneth R. Kowalski, Speaker

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

The 27th Legislature

Second Session

Kowalski, Hon. Ken, Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock, Speaker
Cao, Wayne C.N., Calgary-Fort, Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees
Mitzel, Len, Cypress-Medicine Hat, Deputy Chair of Committees

Ady, Hon. Cindy, Calgary-Shaw (PC),
Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation
Allred, Ken, St. Albert (PC)
Amery, Moe, Calgary-East (PC)
Anderson, Rob, Airdrie-Chestermere (PC)
Benito, Carl, Edmonton-Mill Woods (PC)
Berger, Evan, Livingstone-Macleod (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Sustainable Resource Development
Bhardwaj, Naresh, Edmonton-Ellerslie (PC)
Bhullar, Manmeet Singh, Calgary-Montrose (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Advanced Education
and Technology
Blackett, Hon. Lindsay, Calgary-North West (PC),
Minister of Culture and Community Spirit
Blakeman, Laurie, Edmonton-Centre (AL),
Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition
Official Opposition House Leader
Boutilier, Guy C., Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo (Ind)
Brown, Dr. Neil, QC, Calgary-Nose Hill (PC)
Calahasen, Pearl, Lesser Slave Lake (PC)
Campbell, Robin, West Yellowhead (PC),
Deputy Government Whip
Chase, Harry B., Calgary-Varsity (AL),
Official Opposition Whip
Dallas, Cal, Red Deer-South (PC)
Danyluk, Hon. Ray, Lac La Biche-St. Paul (PC),
Minister of Municipal Affairs
DeLong, Alana, Calgary-Bow (PC)
Denis, Jonathan, Calgary-Egmont (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Energy
Doerksen, Arno, Strathmore-Brooks (PC)
Drysdale, Wayne, Grande Prairie-Wapiti (PC)
Elniski, Doug, Edmonton-Calder (PC)
Evans, Hon. Iris, Sherwood Park (PC),
Minister of Finance and Enterprise
Fawcett, Kyle, Calgary-North Hill (PC)
Forsyth, Heather, Calgary-Fish Creek (PC)
Fritz, Hon. Yvonne, Calgary-Cross (PC),
Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs
Goudreau, Hon. Hector G., Dunvegan-Central Peace (PC),
Minister of Employment and Immigration,
Deputy Government House Leader
Griffiths, Doug, Battle River-Wainwright (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Solicitor General and Public Security
Groeneveld, Hon. George, Highwood (PC),
Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development
Hancock, Hon. Dave, QC, Edmonton-Whitemud (PC),
Minister of Education, Government House Leader
Hayden, Hon. Jack, Drumheller-Stettler (PC),
Minister of Infrastructure
Hehr, Kent, Calgary-Buffalo (AL)
Hinman, Paul, Calgary-Glenmore (WA)
Horne, Fred, Edmonton-Rutherford (PC)
Horner, Hon. Doug, Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert (PC),
Minister of Advanced Education and Technology
Jablonski, Hon. Mary Anne, Red Deer-North (PC),
Minister of Seniors and Community Supports
Jacobs, Broyce, Cardston-Taber-Warner (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Agriculture and Rural Development
Johnson, Jeff, Athabasca-Redwater (PC)
Johnston, Art, Calgary-Hays (PC)
Kang, Darshan S., Calgary-McCall (AL)
Klimchuk, Hon. Heather, Edmonton-Glenora (PC),
Minister of Service Alberta

Knight, Hon. Mel, Grande Prairie-Smoky (PC),
Minister of Energy
Leskiw, Genia, Bonnyville-Cold Lake (PC)
Liepert, Hon. Ron, Calgary-West (PC),
Minister of Health and Wellness
Lindsay, Hon. Fred, Stony Plain (PC),
Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security
Lukaszuk, Thomas A., Edmonton-Castle Downs (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Municipal Affairs
Lund, Ty, Rocky Mountain House (PC)
MacDonald, Hugh, Edmonton-Gold Bar (AL)
Marz, Richard, Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills (PC)
Mason, Brian, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood (NDP),
Leader of the NDP Opposition
McFarland, Barry, Little Bow (PC)
McQueen, Diana, Drayton Valley-Calmar (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Environment
Morton, Hon. F.L., Foothills-Rocky View (PC),
Minister of Sustainable Resource Development
Notley, Rachel, Edmonton-Strathcona (NDP),
Deputy Leader of the NDP Opposition,
NDP Opposition House Leader
Oberle, Frank, Peace River (PC),
Government Whip
Olson, Verlyn, QC, Wetaskiwin-Camrose (PC)
Ouellette, Hon. Luke, Innisfail-Sylvan Lake (PC),
Minister of Transportation
Pastoor, Bridget Brennan, Lethbridge-East (AL),
Deputy Official Opposition Whip
Prins, Ray, Lacombe-Ponoka (PC)
Quest, Dave, Strathcona (PC)
Redford, Hon. Alison M., QC, Calgary-Elbow (PC),
Minister of Justice and Attorney General,
Deputy Government House Leader
Renner, Hon. Rob, Medicine Hat (PC),
Minister of Environment, Deputy Government House Leader
Rodney, Dave, Calgary-Lougheed (PC)
Rogers, George, Leduc-Beaumont-Devon (PC)
Sandhu, Peter, Edmonton-Manning (PC)
Sarich, Janice, Edmonton-Decore (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Education
Sherman, Dr. Raj, Edmonton-Meadowlark (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Health and Wellness
Snelgrove, Hon. Lloyd, Vermilion-Lloydminster (PC),
President of the Treasury Board
Stelmach, Hon. Ed, Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville (PC),
Premier, President of Executive Council
Swann, Dr. David, Calgary-Mountain View (AL),
Leader of the Official Opposition
Taft, Dr. Kevin, Edmonton-Riverview (AL)
Tarchuk, Hon. Janis, Banff-Cochrane (PC),
Minister of Children and Youth Services
Taylor, Dave, Calgary-Currie (AL)
VanderBurg, George, Whitecourt-St. Anne (PC)
Vandermeer, Tony, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview (PC)
Weadick, Greg, Lethbridge-West (PC)
Webber, Len, Calgary-Foothills (PC),
Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations
Woo-Paw, Teresa, Calgary-Mackay (PC)
Xiao, David H., Edmonton-McClung (PC),
Parliamentary Assistant, Employment and Immigration
Zwozdesky, Hon. Gene, Edmonton-Mill Creek (PC),
Minister of Aboriginal Relations,
Deputy Government House Leader

Officers and Officials of the Legislative Assembly

Clerk	W.J. David McNeil	Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Shannon Dean
Clerk Assistant/ Director of House Services	Louise J. Kamuchik	Sergeant-at-Arms	Brian G. Hodgson
Clerk of Journals /Table Research	Micheline S. Gravel	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	J. Ed Richard
Senior Parliamentary Counsel	Robert H. Reynolds, QC	Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms	Gordon H. Munk
		Managing Editor of Alberta Hansard	Liz Sim

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, November 23, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Welcome.

Let us pray. Guide us so that we may use the privilege given us as elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. Give us the strength to labour diligently, the courage to think and to speak with clarity and conviction and without prejudice or pride. Amen.

Hon. members and to the guests in the galleries, we'll be led now in the singing of our national anthem. We'll be led today by Mr. Paul Lorieau. Please join in in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour and a privilege to introduce to you some very special guests who are here to commemorate the one-year anniversary of the Ukrainian Famine and Genocide (Holodomor) Memorial Day Act, which was passed unanimously by this Assembly one year ago. Its purpose, as we will all recall, is to commemorate the 7 million to 10 million Ukrainians who were exterminated by starvation during the Ukrainian famine of 1932-33.

I'll ask each of these guests to stand as I announce their names and to remain standing, and then we can applaud them all together. I'll begin with His Excellency Bishop David; president of the Ukrainian Canadian Congress Alberta Provincial Council Daria Luci; vice-president of the League of Ukrainian Canadians Jaroslaw Szewczuk; president of the League of Ukrainian Canadian Women, Edmonton branch, Ivanna Szewczuk; Dr. Peter Savaryn, Order of Canada; and another guest who is seated in one of our other galleries, Mr. Andy Hladyshevsky from the Taras Shevchenko Foundation. Finally, I would like to introduce three of the remaining survivors who thankfully and mercifully are here with us today. Already standing is Dr. Yar Slavutych; next to him, Mrs. Natalia Talanchuk; and the man who spoke so eloquently at your ceremony at noon hour, Mr. Speaker, survivor Mr. Leonid Korownyk. [Remarks in Ukrainian] Thank you very much for coming, and may God bless you for many years. [As submitted] Please let's welcome them with a warm round of applause.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On your behalf I'd like to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 30 grade 6 students from Swan Hills school, which is located, of course, in the Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock constituency. They are accompanied this afternoon by teachers Kara King, Shawna Greenstien, program assistant Alicia Dyck, and vice-principal Angie Bachand. They are seated in the public gallery this afternoon, and I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 27 students from St. Elizabeth elementary school. The group is led by their teachers, Miss Melissa Guzzo, Mrs. Vicki Robertson, and parent helpers Mrs. Loida Mcleod and Mrs. Suzanne Howard. They are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have two school groups today that I'd like to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly. The first is from a school in my constituency named Stratford school. There are 46 students from that class. They stand out because they wear uniforms at Stratford. They are accompanied by three adults: Mr. Soldan, the assistant principal at Stratford; Ms Sitter; and Mrs. Friesen. I would ask them all to rise and receive the welcome of the Assembly. Thank you.

My second school group is from a terrific school in my constituency called Our Lady of Victories school. It's under the Edmonton Catholic school district. There are 35 visitors from that school. They have several teachers and parents with them. I'll quickly go through their names: Mrs. Gall, Ms Sokoloski, Miss Hebert, Miss Mosby, Mrs. Savard, Mrs. Despins, Mrs. Van Horn, and Mrs. Vale. I would ask all of them to rise and receive the welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly seven very special guests from the claims and recoveries group in Alberta Justice who are joining us as part of their public service orientation tour. I had an opportunity to speak to them earlier about some of the work that they do, and I'm very proud of the fact that some of the work that they do has to do with the legislation that was passed unanimously in this House in December on civil forfeiture. They are Shauna Wing, Jaime Tremblay, Will Woudstra, Jason Ewert, Lloyd Roesler, Marilyn Herget, and Steve Jackson. It's a pleasure for me to be able to ask them to rise today to receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly today a group of five Camrosians who represent the Camrose Sport Development Society and the Royal Bank Cup steering committee. The society is the owner of the Camrose Kodiaks and is host of the 2011 Royal Bank Cup. I'm going to introduce these folks individually and ask them to stay standing as I call out all their names. They are Barry Fossen, who is the president of the society; Kevin Gurr, who is a director of the society; Kevin Pratt, a director of the society; Ray McIsaac, who is a Kodiaks volunteer and a Camrose alderman; and Shirley Damburger, who is responsible for tournament marketing. Sir, I'd ask that you and all my colleagues offer these folks the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you eight representatives from Arch Enterprises seated today in the public gallery. Arch Enterprises is located in my constituency of Edmonton-Ellerslie and works to deliver support and services at the ground level for adults with developmental disabilities. This work is crucial in helping to ensure that there are equal opportunities for all Albertans. On October 23 Arch Enterprises celebrated their 30th anniversary, a celebration I was proud to be part of. I would ask all of my guests to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

1:40

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of local seniors who were taken advantage of by a home builder who ignored accepted building standards and codes and provided highly misleading information. My guests are Yvonne Byer, Connie Whiteley, Brian Johnson, Beata Wagner, Doris Smith, and Bernice Veitch. I would like my guests to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through to all hon. members of this Legislative Assembly a long-time resident and author of Edmonton, Mr. Harvey Deutschendorf. Harvey is the author of a book called The Other Kind of Smart: Simple Ways to Boost Your Emotional Intelligence for Greater Personal Effectiveness and Success. This book has been endorsed by Lee Iacocca, Robin Sharma, and Brian Tracy. It's Harvey's second book, and he tells me that he's already contemplating a third one as well. He's in the public gallery, and I would now ask him to rise and receive the warm and traditional welcome of the Assembly. If anyone is interested, they can have a look at this book over at Audreys or at Chapters.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly, in the members' gallery, Qassim Tejpar. Qassim's parents emigrated from Tanzania to England and finally to Peace River in 1976. Qassim was born in Edmonton in 1986, interestingly enough, the same year I entered medical school. He graduated from Old Scona high school and is currently one of our bright lights in the U of A second-year medical school class. Qassim also is a student leader who is on General Faculties Council at the U of A, and he hopes to graduate from the U of A med school to serve Albertans. I'd like to ask Qassim to rise and all of our members to welcome him to the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, today is the anniversary of the arrival of his presence on planet Earth 30 years ago, the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill. Interestingly enough – and I'm not sure what this means, frankly – he has been on Earth for two days less than I have been a member of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Camrose Hosting of 2011 Royal Bank Cup

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All successful communities need movers and shakers, people who will roll up their sleeves and get things done. Camrose is really lucky to have an abundance of these kinds of people, and some of them I've just introduced.

Camrose is also very lucky to have played host to a number of high-profile national and international sporting events over the years. As recently as nine days ago the Augustana Faculty of the U of A hosted the national collegiate cross-country running championships. Just under a year ago it was the Continental Cup of Curling, and just a month before that was the World Junior A Hockey Challenge. Of course, there have been the 25 years of the Viking Cup, which in a lot of ways has paved the way for many of these other events.

Just recently Camrose was awarded the right to host the 2011 Royal Bank Cup, which is the national junior A hockey championship. The volunteer machine led by these folks in the gallery today is already in high gear, working at getting us ready for May of 2011.

Now, our hometown Kodiaks will be the host team. Interestingly, in their 12 years of existence, which is a pretty short time, they've had five appearances in the national championship. They've won one gold medal, and they've won two silver medals. That's an achievement that's not even approached by any other franchise. The vast majority of these young men are boys from Alberta, many of them from rural Alberta, and they've been given wonderful opportunities through hockey.

The Kodiaks and the Sport Development Society along with all of their volunteers, supporters, and fans have put Camrose and, more significantly, Alberta on the national and international stage. For that reason, when the Royal Bank Cup 2011 rolls around, I hope that they will have the support of all Albertans.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Crimes against Humanity

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Holodomor. Just a few days ago Calgarians were disgusted by the spectacle of racist, anti-Semitic propaganda. It's appalling that such hatred can still be spewed by the ignorant, especially as Albertans prepare to memorialize the Holodomor, the terrible Ukrainian famine and genocide. During the dark years of the 1930s and '40s Jews and Ukrainians suffered two superficially different holocausts, but the impacts and the root causes were essentially the same. Fear, ignorance, and outright hatred drove people with power to murder innocents. The Nazis used guns and gas chambers. The Stalinists used starvation. Millions of Jews died. Millions of Ukrainians died. The loss to humanity is immeasurable.

One would hope that such acts are in the past, that they were so terrible that surely they could never be allowed to happen again, but last week's hateful graffiti really makes you stop and think: how far have we really come? In recent memory there has been genocidal violence in Rwanda, the Sudan, and the collection of nations that used to be Yugoslavia. Much of that violence continues to this day or could break out again at any moment.

Last year the Official Opposition supported the government's Bill 37, the Ukrainian Famine and Genocide (Holodomor) Memorial Day Act, to mark the fourth Saturday in November as a memorial day to remember the Holodomor. During the bill debate I quoted John Donne.

No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main; if a clod be washed away by the sea, Europe is the less, as well as if a promontory were, as well as if a manor of thy friend's or of thine own were; any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind, and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee.

I quoted Donne because his words remind us that no matter where or when human atrocities such as genocide are committed, we are all affected by the loss. We all have a stake in preventing these crimes against humanity.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Northern Student Teacher Bursary

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. School divisions across this province are facing some significant workforce planning challenges over the next few years. A high number of teacher retirements, growing high student enrolment, and a decreasing supply of qualified teachers in specialized subject areas as well as in certain areas in the province are all leading to the need to plan for our teaching workforce. In northern Alberta these challenges are magnified 10-fold.

Earlier this year Alberta Education announced a new northern student teacher bursary to help address these challenges, Mr. Speaker. The province is working with the Northern Alberta Development Council to sponsor the bursary program, which will provide financial support for up to 55 postsecondary students who are interested in teaching in northern Alberta communities. To qualify, students must be in their last two years of teacher preparation studies, and students who receive two years of bursary funding must upon graduation teach in one of Alberta's northern school jurisdictions for three years.

As many of my colleagues know, northern Alberta communities have a great quality of life to offer. I am so pleased that this bursary program will provide new teachers with an extra incentive to teach in these communities, and I have no doubt that three years will be more than enough time for these communities to become home for the bursary recipients. More information on the northern student teacher bursary is available on the Northern Alberta Development Council's bursaries website at www.benorth.ca.

Mr. Speaker, I'm so pleased to rise today to acknowledge the excellent collaboration between the government of Alberta and education stakeholders in this province and encourage students to take advantage of all the financial support available to them for postsecondary studies.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Hospital Admissions

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. According to the most up-to-date information given by the Public Health Agency of Canada, both Alberta's hospitalization rates and death rates are significantly higher than the Canadian average. Alberta, as of November 14, had 242 hospitalizations per million, 50 per cent higher than the average of 160 hospitalizations across the country. To the Premier: how can the Premier explain the large differences between Alberta's number of hospitalizations for H1N1 and that compared to the Canadian average?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'm not a medical doctor nor a medical health professional. I'll ask the minister to respond.

1:50

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't want to leave any impression by that intro that I am, but I don't have the particular statistics in front of me that the leader is referring to. Until I have them, I'm not going to assume that they are correct. I will say this, as we've said consistently right along: every death is tragic, but on an annual basis some 400 Albertans die of seasonal flu, and we've had some 40 deaths thus far of the H1N1.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the Alberta death rate from H1N1, again to November 14, was 11 per million, while the Canadian average was six per million. What is the Premier's explanation for Alberta having nearly twice the death rate of the rest of the country?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, I don't have those numbers in front of me. I think this morning was a major corner that we turned in this province because starting this morning all Albertans are eligible to receive the vaccination in this province. You know, we can continue to drag up all of the statistics and all of the negative comments we want, but the key thing is that some 650,000 Albertans have now been vaccinated, and by Christmas we anticipate every Albertan that wants to be vaccinated can be vaccinated.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, this minister is not going to duck responsibility that easily. How can he deny that there's a direct relationship between his role in a poorly planned health restructuring and Alberta's obviously flawed pandemic response?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, clearly, the Alberta Health Services responded when emergencies were starting to see an increase in the number of patients with flu-like symptoms, set up the assessment clinics in four cities in this province. They were of tremendous assistance to ensure that our emergency rooms were not overcrowded. The take-up has subsided to the point where they've closed those four assessment clinics because the number of patients no longer required them. So I think we've reacted appropriately.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Alberta Hospital Edmonton

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. This government changed its plans for Alberta Hospital Edmonton three times in two months, then announced an implementation advisory team, and then had to wade in to clear up confusion about that team. The confusion around Alberta Hospital is one more sign that Alberta Health Services is in turmoil. My question is to the Premier. Does the mandate of the implementation team allow them to recommend that Alberta Hospital's programs and services remain in place and untouched? Are they able to make that recommendation?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I've asked the team to ensure that we provide the best quality program for those in the care of either the Alberta Hospital or any mental illness program that we have available in Alberta. As I said before, I'm of the opinion, shared by many advocates for those that are suffering from mental illness, that they would have a better quality of life in the community. That is the goal, but we want to make sure that the services are in place for those that may choose to live in community-based care because I really do believe they will see a better quality of life.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. It sounds like the Premier has made up his mind before he's got the advice.

Later today we'll be tabling a petition with thousands of names on it defending the role and services of Alberta Hospital Edmonton. In light of all the criticism and opposition this plan has created throughout the province from average citizens right up to all kinds of medical experts and psychiatrists, will the Premier cancel plans to cut beds and services at Alberta Hospital Edmonton and provide the funding that's necessary to keep the important programs at that institution?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, nobody is reducing the number of beds. Those beds may be in a different location. They may be in community-based care. They won't be in an institution. It seems that that is what the opposition wants, to keep people forever and ever in an institution even though they would see a better quality of life in the community.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, some people do need long-term care in an institution. Alberta Hospital Edmonton provides programs and services that aren't just vital to the patients; they're vital to public safety. One of these is the Phoenix program, which treats pedophiles, including some of the worst of the worst. Will the Premier guarantee the public that the Phoenix program, which treats predatory pedophiles, will not be cut from Alberta Hospital Edmonton?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, what I was referring to earlier was to those individuals that can be rightfully placed in community care, those suffering from mental illness that can be treated. In this particular case, safety of Albertans is of utmost importance, and that is the purpose of the committee, to make sure that nobody is moved unless there is appropriate care in the community.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

New Home Construction and Inspection

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to advocate on behalf of a group of homeowners from Stony Plain seated in the members' gallery who've been victimized as a result as poor home building practices in Alberta. This battle has saddled them with tens of thousands of dollars in costs and an incalculable amount of stress and anxiety. To the Premier. The Official Opposition has been trying to address the government's poor track record on residential construction for years. When is the Premier going to get serious about protecting Albertans from shoddy home and condominium builders?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'll be briefed further on the issue of the particular homeowners in the community that the hon. member is mentioning, but overall there are rules and regulations in place in terms of construction. It's up to not only municipal inspectors to ensure that proper construction is followed. It doesn't matter if it's an individual home or a condominium. We spend a lot of money supporting municipal inspection. We want to make sure that they're doing their job and doing what they're being paid for.

Dr. Swann: Well, that's exactly the question, Mr. Speaker. They're not doing their job.

Again to the Premier. In the case of the group present in the gallery today, municipal inspectors signed off on construction that independent inspectors found glaringly deficient. How can the Premier or any other minister defend our building codes when the inspection system is so obviously flawed?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister responsible, the Minister of Municipal Affairs, is undertaking a review of inspection. All I have to say is that the people that sign on as municipal building inspectors have a responsibility. They just can't simply bill for something that they haven't done. So that means that if they weren't on-site and if they haven't inspected the building properly, they are in breach of their contract, the contract that is given by the municipality.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. In an e-mail response to our guests from Folkstone Place, that we will table, we note that you intend to meet with stakeholders as part of the review of residential construction practices. Will you commit to meeting with these residents of Folkstone Place who are present in the Assembly today?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is essential that new homes are being built to the quality that Albertans expect and deserve. We have proactively looked into the concerns. We have consulted with stakeholders to discuss accountability, consumer protection and recourse, worker certification, as well as inspection and enforcement processes. We've examined different ways to ensure that the quality of construction of new homes is what Albertans expect. We want to ensure that Albertans have confidence in the construction, and we will take the necessary action to ensure that that takes place.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Health Care Reform

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The health minister has recently been floating the idea of a new health fee and linking it to the end of the single-payer system of medicine. This, no doubt, is part of the PC government's plan to create more private health care in Alberta. Can the Premier please lift the veil of secrecy surrounding his government's plans for health care and tell us what specifically the government has planned for a health care fee? How much, what for, and when?

2:00

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member is referring to health care premiums, which I think he wants this government to bring back. We will not – it was an unfair tax – especially now that we've eliminated it and had an opportunity to speak to Albertans like single moms with a couple of children that had to pay another tax over and above what they already paid to the government in provincial taxes. That is not coming back. I'll repeat: there will be no new taxes or health care premiums. We will find a way of ensuring a sustainable health system for future generations without creating any new taxes.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, perhaps the Premier should check with his health minister because the health minister is talking about new ways of Albertans paying for health care. You know, that sounds to me like a fee. Albertans know that health care is expensive. They don't need a patronizing minister to impose a new fee to realize that. My question is to the Premier. Once again: how much, what for, and when?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't know where the member is going. We do as the ministry of health spend almost $13 billion on 3 and a half million people. Albertans are telling us: you know, we feel there is enough money in the system; just make sure that we get value for the dollar. That's what we're doing. We're meeting with a committee that's chaired by a member of our caucus to ensure that we bring physicians, nurses, the union together to look at how we can work towards a sustainable health care system, a health care system that is very good in this province, but we also want to ensure that the next generation enjoys the same benefits.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, the minister said, and I quote: can it continue to be a one-payer system forever? The single-payer system protects individuals from being charged for health care. This government is planning to force people to pay, leaving most of us with second-class health care and longer waits. Once more to the Premier: will you tell Albertans here and now that you will not impose new fees and promise that no Albertan will have to personally pay for the health care that they need?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, it's typical with this particular member. He takes a portion of a quote, and that's what he focuses on.

If the member had been with me at the meeting of the AAMD and C, my comments were this: at some point in time we as Canadians and Albertans are going to have to have the discussion. There was no secret plan. There was no intent to introduce anything. I said we should have the discussion. I know they don't like to discuss these sorts of things, but that's all I'm suggesting, that we should have the discussion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Water Management

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has experienced rapid growth in recent years. Population growth, an expanding industrial base, and a growing agriculture sector all come with pressures for water availability. Future growth will be dependent on prudent water management. Three reports were released today with recommendations that address water allocation and management in Alberta. My first question is to the Minister of Environment. How will the recommendations from the reports released today lead to improvement in the water allocation and transfer system in Alberta?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, what we released today was documentation that we received from three different groups in response to our request for some recommendations on how we can improve the water allocation system. Those reports will be used as the basis for us to formulate a broader discussion with the public, first, this fall and target stakeholder discussions with some of the significant water users and consumer groups, and that will then lead to a much broader public discussion in the spring and summer of 2010.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Alberta's Water Act was established more than a hundred years ago at a time when few Albertans were competing for water. First in time, first in right is still an important principle to water users in Alberta. Will long-standing water rights continue to be protected in Alberta's Water Act?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the intent of this review is to determine what is the best system for all water users, not only those who have existing licences but those who find themselves in need of water but without a licence. What I envision and what is envisioned from these recommendations is that we need to be able to facilitate a process for transfers to take place from those users who have water to those users who need water. What that process is will I think constitute the majority of the discussion.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Many jurisdictions around the world have incorporated innovative solutions to manage water shortages, often in a reactionary mode. I'm of the belief that Alberta has an opportunity to take a proactive approach to future growth, facilitated by good water management. Water availability will be a determining factor for where Alberta's future growth takes place. How is this government intending to lead the way in terms of water management to take advantage of the opportunity water availability provides this province, particularly in southern Alberta?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, this government recognizes that while we have cause for concern in the future, the pressures that we face today are nowhere near the kinds of pressures that other jurisdictions faced prior to taking action. What we intend to do by moving forward on this process is to be proactive, to make the decisions, to make the policy that will prevent us from ever getting into what a lot of these other jurisdictions found themselves in the past.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Building Construction Review

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The northern Alberta Better Business Bureau ranks home builders as an industry with the third-highest amount of inquiries from consumers. We have with us today six Albertans from Folkstone Place who have evidence of these poor home building practices. To the Minister of Service Alberta. Your ministry has been endlessly studying condo legislation for the past year. What is being done to protect homeowners from poor construction practices now?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I've said previously about the review of the Condominium Property Act, the last time it was reviewed was 2000, so we put the wheels in motion to continue reviewing this act. It's really important, and I'm happy to hear that there are people in the House to hear what I have to say. When we do an effective consultation, we need to hear from everyone. There are a number of issues out there besides the issues of the building deficiencies as well as the amount in the reserve fund. Those are some of the many issues that we need input on.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the wheels have been in motion for too long, and it's about time to do something. To the minister again. Service Alberta brought in new condo legislation nine years ago that was supposed to solve a lot of problems we are seeing today. Why should Albertans believe that this government is serious about addressing the shoddy builder issue at all?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will speak about the Condominium Property Act, but the building codes act is with the Minister of Municipal Affairs. It's really important to note that the issues have changed so much during these last nine years, especially with all the new buildings that have been built in these last two or three years. So we are looking at any issues of construction deficiencies, reserve funds, and board governance – I've had a number of letters on that, on how individuals can access their boards and get decisions – and it's about the rights of the unit owners, as well, with the Condominium Property Act.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again. Albertans making a consumer transaction are supposed to be protected by the Fair Trading Act, but homebuyers like those in the gallery are not getting straight answers from your department about whether the act applies to them or not. Will the minister commit to reviewing Service Alberta's enforcement of the Fair Trading Act?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Fair Trading Act is a very comprehensive act that covers many, many different acts that affect consumers. Consequently, we are always looking at that act to make sure it is stronger for consumers, and part of the Condominium Property Act will look at that as it relates to the Fair Trading Act because, ultimately, it's about helping consumers make the best decisions, especially when they are making a major purchase of a home.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Pharmaceutical Strategy

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently I met with rural pharmacists in my constituency who have questions and concerns about the government's policy changes in phase 2 of the pharmaceutical strategy. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Rural independent pharmacists have indicated that they did not have any meaningful input into the strategy. They are aware of the pilot sites, but they say they were left out of the discussions. How are pharmacists, especially rural independent pharmacists, included in the development of the second phase of the pharmaceutical strategy?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

2:10

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, first off, pharmacists play an important role, especially in smaller communities, rural and remote communities, in the delivery of health care. That being said, as we move towards developing our second phase of the pharmaceutical strategy, it's not possible to involve every pharmacist on an individual basis. So what we did was work with the Pharmacists Association, the chain drugstores, and the College of Pharmacists. Those consultations took place over the course of about a year. In fact, they're still continuing because there are still some areas that need revision.

We've attempted to do our best. Certainly, I have listened to MLAs that pharmacists have been in contact with. That would be pretty comprehensive consultation, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, like me, many rural MLAs were contacted by their respective rural pharmacists after the news release announcing phase 2. Pharmacists in my area are concerned that the lost revenue will have a severe negative impact on their business. Over the years they've come to rely on the existing arrangements they have with the companies that manufacture generic drugs. I realize the government has recognized this reduction with the transition fund. Does the minister have any details on how the transition fund helps rural independent pharmacists?

Mr. Liepert: Well, the member is absolutely correct. Over the years our pharmacies have relied too much on side deals with the various drug companies. That's what we want to get around. Mr. Speaker, it doesn't really matter if you're a pharmacist and you are today consulting and working with your customers. You get the same kind of side deal as someone who is just simply filling prescriptions. What we want to do is ensure that pharmacists are compensated for delivering health care and working with patients. We have some programs in place to assist with this transition fund, and I'd be happy to elaborate on those in a few minutes.

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, the news release also mentioned the compensation that will roll out in July of next year. What's the policy rationale for the compensation for pharmacists? Does the minister have any details regarding this compensation?

Mr. Liepert: Well, the compensation that will come into effect in July of 2010 is based on trials that are going on right now with the Pharmacists Association, to be concluded at the end of this calendar year. That will set up the model of how we will compensate pharmacists for delivering health care in a direct way to the communities.

In the interim, however, we recognize that there is going to be a transition period, so we've put in two transition plans. One is relative to a phasing out over three years of an enhancement of the prescription dispensing fee, and the other one, specifically for rural and remote communities, is modelled after the rural physicians action plan, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government clearly is not listening to Albertans on transmission policy. I suppose all the Minister of Energy can hear is his own pro Bill 50 mega-advertising propaganda campaign. Albertans know that the core failing of this bill is that it cuts those Albertans out of official independent hearings, regulatory hearings into the need for these lines that have the power to tell the government to back down on billion-dollar transmission spending. To the Minister of Energy: why is the minister failing to address the actual failings of Bill 50?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, the process that's in place relative to transmission development in the province of Alberta is quite clear. Bill 50 does nothing to interfere with the normal course of events in transmission construction in the province of Alberta. Our Utilities Commission has a mandate to act in the public interest and will continue to do that. There is an opportunity for open, transparent hearings, quasi-judicial hearings, that will take place relative to any of these pieces of infrastructure.

Mr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's an interesting admission. The minister, then, I guess, is bringing forward a bill that isn't needed if it doesn't make any changes or interfere in any way with the status quo.

The Speaker: Hon. member, remember that our tradition is that if the bill is going to be up for debate on a particular day, we don't use the question period to debate it. If I look at the Order Paper, this bill is scheduled for tonight. So let's get on to something that . . .

Mr. Taylor: I shall get down to the matter at hand.

Does the minister really think that the kinds of cosmetic changes he tabled on Thursday are fixing the core problems that Albertans have with Bill 50, or is he just trying to give the impression that he's acting while he's not actually taking any action?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, it's very difficult to answer the question without referring to the piece of legislation, so I'll have to just say that what we will do is . . .

The Speaker: Yeah. We'll all come back tonight and debate it.
The hon. member. Third question.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Why won't the Minister of Energy, then, just admit that he doesn't really care about the public's concerns on transmission lines and he doesn't care about forcing Albertans to pay billions of dollars without having a say?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, as I said, there is a process in place in the province of Alberta to deal with all of these issues; it doesn't matter if we happen to be talking about building a pipeline, siting a plant, or putting a drilling rig in some location in the province of Alberta. There is a very, very good process in the province of Alberta. As a matter of fact, people from around the world come to see how our regulatory processes take place. What happens with transmission in the province of Alberta is exactly the same as with the other infrastructure that we build.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Persons with Developmental Disabilities Program

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm fortunate to have several agencies in my constituency that provide supports to Albertans through the persons with developmental disabilities, or PDD, program. Some of these agencies such as Arch have long service records as part of the PDD. My questions are to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Although I've seen the difference this program can make in the lives of Albertans, how is the PDD program different from other provincial programs?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the PDD program in Alberta is among the very best in Canada. The Alberta government provided almost $604 million this year to support adult Albertans with developmental disabilities, and that is on top of the payments they receive each month through the AISH program. The PDD program supports about 9,200 people in three key areas: home living supports, involvement in community activities, and involvement in employment and training, including volunteering. The support helps Albertans with developmental disabilities to be as independent as possible and to be included in their communities.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhardwaj: I haven't asked the question yet.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. It's obvious that PDD makes a big difference in the lives of many people with developmental disabilities. Can the minister share any details of her future policy plans for this particular program?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, our government remains committed to supporting those most in need, including those with developmental disabilities. The PDD program is a good program, but I'm committed to making it even better. Five goals that I have for the PDD program are clarity, consistency, effectiveness, efficiency, and sustainability. I asked the PDD community boards to meet with funded individuals, their families, service providers, and stakeholders last year, and I also met with many people and visited programs in eastern Canada and in Massachusetts. This input helped me to establish some priority directions for the PDD program to make it more responsive to individual needs, more focused on achieving positive outcomes for the people it supports, and more sustainable.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final supplementary is to the same minister. Some of the PDD community boards are making changes to the funding allocated to service providers. My question is to the minister. What is this about, and what does it mean for the coming year?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I'm aware that some community boards are making in-year adjustments to their service provider contracts in order to meet their budget targets for this year. This is a regular part of business as all community boards must balance their budgets. As for next year the 2010-11 budget has not been finalized; however, like all government departments we will continue to work through the budget process with an eye to protecting those most in need.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Electoral Reform

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week I asked the Justice minister about bringing in legislation to improve how we conduct elections in this province. The minister said that the government was looking into the matter but would not give any details. Well, today I'd like to ask about an improvement to our electoral system that I think all Albertans overwhelmingly support: bringing in fixed election dates. To the Minister of Justice: will the minister be including fixed election dates in proposed changes to the current election legislation?

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciated the questions from the hon. member last week with respect to ways that we might be able to encourage more people to participate in the electoral process. As I said last week, the former Chief Electoral Officer and his operation have provided us with over 140 recommendations. Justice is currently in the process of reviewing those and, when appropriate, will be tabling necessary legislation to amend the act.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week I brought up some of those changes that were recommended in the Chief Electoral Officer's report. One of them was more polling stations. Another one was updating residency requirements. At that time the minister didn't seem to be in favour of those. Now what I'm saying is: what kind of substantive change is the minister looking at importing into these changes that will be forthcoming?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we bring forward the legislation, the member will see what substantive changes we're suggesting.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I guess that's one answer, but she could also say that another way to look at this is that the election is, I guess, relatively soon, somewhat inside of two years. Can we see a date when you say this legislation will be coming in? Can we see it next session or sometime in the remote future? Can you put sort of a timetable on it? Will it be out before the next election?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the hon. member's concern with respect to how we set the legislative agenda. We're fully cognizant of when our deadlines are, and we'll introduce our legislation at the appropriate time.

Opt-out Clause for Electricity Contracts

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, Albertans who were duped into signing fixed-term electricity contracts are getting gouged, and this government doesn't seem to care. The recession has temporarily pushed average electricity prices in Alberta to about half what they were last year, but contract consumers, who couldn't risk rolling the dice in this government's utility rate crapshoot, are still paying up to 30 per cent more and face expensive penalties if they want to opt out. My question is for the Minister of Service Alberta. Why have you failed to protect Albertans from such price discrepancies by not forcing all electricity providers to include no-penalty opt-out clauses in these contracts?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to this whole issue there are a number of different agencies in place that are selling these contracts. Again, it's the power of the consumer and the choices they have to make. Some contractors have different rules for letting people out of a contract. It's really, really important for consumers to do their research and read about the contracts before they sign them. That's what I would encourage consumers to do.

On the UCA website we update on a regular basis what all the companies are offering so that consumers can look at that information.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's also really, really important for the minister in charge of consumer protection to actually think about protecting consumers.

Now, by the time the contract consumers realize that they're paying way more than their neighbours to keep their lights on, the 10-day grace period to cancel their contract has expired, and they face massive penalties to get out. The minister's buyer-beware approach just isn't good enough. Why won't the minister force all electricity marketers to replace their contract exit fees with a 30-day opt-out clause?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, there are different exit fees and different rules that each of the companies have. It's been really important to me, when we've been monitoring many of these companies, to make sure that they are giving the consumer the right information. On many occasions we have intervened and have been able to protect the consumer and get the contracts that have been signed and those contract fees waived as well.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the marketing used by these electricity companies is deliberately confusing. They talk about fixed rates, flex rates, regulated rates, deregulated rates, rate riders, distribution fees, transmission fees, and somewhere in the finest of fine print, penalties. You need a law degree to make sense of it. Why won't the minister stop protecting the electricity marketers and, instead, start protecting consumers by banning these exit penalties and replacing them with 30-day opt-out clauses?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that, indeed, this ministry and the Utilities Consumer Advocate do a great job of protecting the consumer. It's unfortunate that we can't protect every consumer because we know people are being taken advantage of. We know there are some overzealous individuals selling contracts at the door, and we investigate those and take those very seriously. It's absolutely shameful that people are being taken advantage of. As minister I am very happy to investigate all of those. We need to keep making sure that consumers have the information they need to make the right decisions.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Queen's Printer

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is also for the minister responsible for Service Alberta. A fundamental rule of law is that citizens are presumed to know the law. In Alberta we have in excess of 600 acts and over a thousand regulations. It is absurd to suggest that we should know all of these laws, but the Queen's Printer conveniently has all the acts and regulations included on their website for public viewing. This is a great service to allow Albertans to access this vital information. The same fee, however, is charged to Albertans to download copies of these laws as to have a printed copy sent to them. These acts and regulations are necessary for the operation of government, and little or no further cost is generated to provide this public information electronically to the public. My question to the hon. minister is: why should Albertans have to pay a fee to download public information from a government website?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Queen's Printer has operated for many years on a cost-neutral basis and does an excellent job of making legislation available to all Albertans who want it. There is a fee if someone wants to make a hard copy of the legislation or to download a copy of the legislation, and the fee is the same for both because of the manpower and associated technical support required to support that service.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you for that answer, Madam Minister. How much revenue is generated on an annual basis from the downloading of acts and regulations from the Queen's Printer website? What are the costs to your department in providing this information to the public?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the last fiscal year the Queen's Printer spent about $1.5 million. Its revenue from downloaded items was about $25,000, only a fraction of the cost of making legislation available to Albertans. It's worth noting that Queen's Printer prices have not increased since the mid-1990s.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that emphasized my point. What is the justification, then, for charging the public for accessing this public information which they have, in fact, already paid for through taxation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans can access any piece of legislation for free through the Queen's Printer. Statutes can be viewed online in the HTML version – and they will soon be available in the PDF version – for free. They can also be viewed for free at libraries across the province. Fees are only charged if someone wants a hard copy or to download a copy.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Agriculture Supply Management Sponsors

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The list of sponsors at the Progressive Conservative Party's annual general meeting this month included a handful of supply management organizations, created under the Marketing of Agricultural Products Act, that are subject to ongoing government regulations. These same organizations receive millions of taxpayer dollars every year in funding. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: as the minister responsible for this act do you consider this an appropriate use of taxpayer money by these organizations?

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, it's a very strange question. I wonder if the hon. member understands how supply management is funded. Supply management, for one thing, is under the direction of the government of Canada. Supply management does not get money from my department. They can apply for the odd grant here and there, very small grants, the same as any other free enterprise operation can. So I just wonder if the hon. member understands how supply management is structured.

Ms Pastoor: Well, I think probably the clear question is: should taxpayers' dollars be given to a political party? Should these be partisan dollars?

My next question would be, though: can the minister please explain why funds intended to assist the livestock and meat industry in Alberta to, quote, become an internationally respected, competitive, and profitable industry, unquote, are being used to give money to political parties? Is that a good use of taxpayers' dollars?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know how best to explain this, but I think I can understand the frustration. It's unfortunate that the hon. member calls into question the supply management organizations. The frustration I can probably see; if it's taxpayers' dollars, it could be there. If the hon. member has bought any dairy, chicken, turkey, or eggs in the last while, some of her valuable dollars and her colleagues' probably ended up in the PC coffers if they did indeed make a donation.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Okay. Will the minister introduce legislation to ensure that this type of expenditure, sponsorship dollars, which are taxpayers' dollars, does not happen in the future?

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, once again, I guess I have to explain that these are not taxpayer dollars for supply management, in no way, shape, or form. They run their own business. Their monies come through how they structured their own organization. I'm sure you don't understand any better because you don't understand a whole heck of a lot of anything.

The Speaker: I think we'll just go to the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Drilling Rig Activity

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has considerable energy resources, and as a result the prosperity of many Albertans, including many constituents of Calgary-Mackay, is tied to the health of our oil and gas sector. My questions are for the hon. Minister of Energy. Can the minister please update me on the state of the province's drilling activity in comparison to Saskatchewan and B.C.?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The fact is that activity across the three western provinces has certainly declined from a year ago, and we think, of course, that lower commodity prices have probably been the largest contributor to those declines. I can, however, say that, on the positive side, the evidence is that the three-point stimulus package that we've introduced has assisted to put things back to work on the ground in Alberta. Since the spring the number of active rigs in Alberta has increased by 110 rigs, and over the same period of time, in comparison with Saskatchewan and British Columbia, Saskatchewan has added 39 rigs and B.C. has added nine, respectively.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. I have constituents who want to know when the three-point incentive program was implemented and if the minister can comment on how effective it has been to date.

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, the programs were announced in March as a response to the crisis that we had, caused mostly by a global economic slowdown. The goal of the program, of course, was to have a healthier oil and gas industry in the province of Alberta. Drilling counts, of course, have increased, and we do believe that because of the incentive programs that we put in place, certainly a percentage of that is due to those programs. We can indicate, when this program is concluded, the amount of dollars that were actually involved in the royalty structure relative to the incentive programs. At this point in time that's not possible.

Ms Woo-Paw: My final supplemental is: what other measures would the minister consider in order to ensure that our oil and gas sector remains strong?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, of course, the message that we're going out with is extremely important. We all know that this is probably one of the most important industry players in western Canada. In the way forward, that we're working with, Alberta energy should remain competitive and attractive to investors. Our intention with the competitiveness study is to take a look at the regulatory and fiscal sides of this sector relative to Alberta and compare it to other jurisdictions in Canada and North America to be sure that we maintain our competitive advantage.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Homeless Children

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Children and Youth Services seems oblivious to the reality that her ministry is in crisis. There are 2,500 new children in the system, yet there are fewer places to house them and less money to support them. We have seen closures at Bosco Homes, an overall decrease in foster placements by 24 homes, and the minister has stated that you are finally down to virtually no use of hotels as placements. To the Minister of Children and Youth Services. The numbers just don't add up. Where are you putting all those vulnerable children?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the first thing I'd like to address is that comment about the system being in crisis. The system is not in crisis. It deals with crisis on a daily basis. Our workers are just like police, firefighters, paramedics. They respond to crisis. They respond to emergencies. They make the best decisions they can with the information that they have.

With respect to the member's comments about placements I have said in this House before and I'm pleased to say again that the campaign for foster homes and kinship homes is going quite well. The last time I looked, our numbers were getting close to 800. At the end of the day that's what we need: more placements so that we have more options for these kids.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm hoping the hon. minister will table where the beds that were lost from the YMCA and Bosco Homes have been replaced.

What is being done to ensure that homeless youth, arguably the most vulnerable children in the system, are properly placed and cared for?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, the member does raise a very important issue, and it is the homeless. I did internally do some work with the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs last winter and took a look at the services that are out there for the homeless: whether we had gaps, what the inventory was. We collected some pretty good information. The two ministries are working with that. As well, that information is going to the child intervention panel, that is under way, that's taking a look at our capacity to deal with societal issues like the homeless.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm hoping that at some point the minister will table the actual figures because children are being displaced and living on the streets.

Apart from what the minister is unable to provide due to privacy restrictions, will the minister table documents that account for these kids having proper placements? Where are they going? How do we know that they're being cared for?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can tell this member that between the increased options that we have for placements – that is awfully good news – as well, when it comes to the homeless and going into winter, I have asked all of our regions for their plans on how they're considering the homeless that they might have on the streets. They have been coming back. They are working with community organizations. It is a community issue. I do think that everyone is aware of the issue, and I think we have all the stakeholders properly addressing it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Family Violence

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. November is Family Violence Prevention Month. Currently in Alberta we have the second-highest rate of spousal violence in the country. I'd like to draw attention to the concerns many Albertans have about what is being done to address family violence in this province. It often seems that silence surrounds the issue and that we are not engaging in effective dialogue to confront it. My first question is for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. What is your ministry doing to confront family violence?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We had the opportunity here in Alberta last week to host Diverse Voices, which was a western Canadian conference dealing with family violence and domestic violence. One of the things that both myself and my colleague the Minister of Children and Youth Services were able to talk about was the fact that this is an issue that needs to be publicly discussed. There needs to be much more awareness made of it. But, more importantly, we have to understand that the people that are victims of this act and these crimes are all members of the family.

Under the safe communities innovation fund, Mr. Speaker, we have funded the Red Path Living without Violence pilot project and the integrated domestic violence treatment program, based in Lethbridge, to the tune of over $1 million. It's to deal not only with the direct victims of family violence but also with the perpetrators.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I'm really pleased you mentioned the integrated domestic violence treatment program in Lethbridge, with an investment of $600,000.

My next question is to the same minister. Why do you think these new projects will make an impact?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, the reason that these will first make an impact is because they have been developed by the community. They've been developed by organizations in the community, such as in Lethbridge, where they've identified where they needed extra support to have wraparound approaches that deal with family violence.

Mr. Speaker, there's been a tremendous change in the discussion lately, within the last two years, as to how we talk about family violence and domestic violence. I think the work that communities are doing and communities' understanding really needs to be supported by government to ensure that we take a holistic approach to this and support both victims and perpetrators.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

2:40

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. What else is your ministry doing to combat family violence across this province?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, just as in many parts of what we do around safe communities, we know that there's a spectrum. We need to deal with education, awareness, intervention. We also then have to deal with the reality that there are sometimes very serious consequences in these cases. Within the Department of Justice and under safe communities we're supporting initiatives such as the diversion court in Calgary, the HomeFront court, where we try to deal with the entire situation that a family might be facing when these situations arise. We try to understand, through the work that we're doing in domestic violence courts in eight communities, exactly how to fast-track resolutions to family violence and address it through court proceedings where necessary.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today. In 30 seconds from now we will continue with the Routine.

Hon. members, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly a group of visitors from the Northern Alberta Pioneers and Descendants Association, who are seated in the members' gallery. I had the privilege of attending their harvest celebration recently. Also, prior to question period along with the Minister of Finance and Enterprise, the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, the Member for Edmonton-Decore, and the Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview we were pleased to take a picture with this group.

We are joined today by their president and someone very familiar to this Chamber, Mr. Bob Maskell, a former MLA; council members Fred Stephenson, Irene Moir, Earl Anderson, Lois Thomas, Olive Sydor, Elsie Lupul, and John and Laura Walter. Of course, the Walter name is synonymous with the Walterdale Bridge, the John Walter Museum, and they were the family responsible for the first ferry across the North Saskatchewan River. I'd ask our guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I was just going to introduce the previous hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, who was Bob Maskell, and was going to mention the amount of work that he has done and the commitment and dedication that he has given the province of Alberta in the aspect of education. I wanted to thank him at the same time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to introduce to you and to all the members of the Assembly a group of employees from Alberta Hospital as well as staff from the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. They are here today to witness our discussion earlier on Alberta Hospital as well as to watch the tabling of a very, very substantial petition, that will happen in a few minutes. I would ask them all to rise. They're very concerned about the negative consequences that closing Alberta Hospital may have on Alberta's mental health system, and they're wanting us to hear their concerns. Please give them a warm welcome.

Thank you.

Members' Statements (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Water for Life Strategy

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Water is not only a valuable resource; it is a life source. Albertans' quality of life depends on having enough water to meet all of our competing needs. This includes everything from water in our taps to the water we use for development, energy, and recreation. Last year the government of Alberta released the renewed water for life strategy, a 10-year plan to manage our water resources. It builds on the original water for life strategy, released in 2003, and last week we took another step forward and released the water for life action plan. The action plan sets out clear water management activities and actions. It includes short-, medium-, and long-term actions to be achieved over the next 10 years. The plan will help ensure that we deliver on the goals outlined in the renewed water for life action strategy and continue to build upon Alberta's robust water framework.

Our renewed strategy and action plan exemplify the benefits of taking a partnership approach to protecting our water resources. To achieve a meaningful and fully informed strategy and action plan, the Minister of Environment asked the Water Council to provide recommendations to renew water for life. The council acknowledged that water for life is making good progress and provided some excellent recommendations to help ensure we achieve our three main water for life goals: a safe, secure drinking water supply; healthy aquatic ecosystems; and reliable, quality water supplies for a sustainable economy. Based on the council's recommendations, the action plan emphasizes conservation and education activities, which will continue to involve the efforts of many partners, including the council.

On that note, I would like to recognize the Alberta Water Council for their ongoing hard work and dedication to safeguarding our water resources. The work of the council is critical to ensure the relevance of our water management policy now and for the future.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Cold Lake Heavy Oil Operations Milestone

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In October the Imperial Oil Cold Lake heavy oil operations facility reached its billion barrel mark. The Cold Lake facility joins three other facilities in Canada who have also reached this milestone. However, it is the first in situ operation in the country to accomplish this. To put this into perspective, a billion barrels of oil would supply all of Canada's oil needs for one year. This operation has been producing oil for four decades and averages approximately 145,000 barrels each day.

In September Imperial Oil introduced the Cold Lake Nabiye project, which will help to reduce its environmental footprint with the development of new technology while increasing its daily output by 30,000 barrels. Many of my colleagues had the opportunity to tour this facility in October, and I would encourage all members to visit the various oil and gas operations in my constituency to learn about the technology, operation, and development of these industry powerhouses.

Mr. Speaker, many Bonnyville-Cold Lake residents work in the Alberta oil and gas industry, and many of these are employed by Imperial Oil. My constituents rely on the growth and success of major companies like Imperial Oil for not only employment but sustainability. The growth of this company has contributed immensely to the growth of my constituency and the communities in it.

I would like to congratulate Cold Lake Imperial Oil and their staff on this tremendous milestone and look forward to the many accomplishments that are yet to come.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Underground Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituency of Edmonton-McClung lies in the southwest corner of Edmonton, and it could therefore be impacted by the proposed heartland transmission project. I have received a great number of e-mails and letters from my constituents and also many Edmontonians expressing their concerns about the potential impact of the transmission lines on their health, on the environment, and on the value of their properties. In a moment I will table 1,784 letters and e-mails I have received.

My constituents do recognize that Alberta's transmission network needs to be modernized. My constituents are urging their government, the AESO, Alberta Electric System Operator, and the AUC, Alberta Utilities Commission, to consider the possibility of burying certain segments of the transmission lines in the densely populated areas. AESO has established a comprehensive consultation process through hearings, open houses, and information sessions across our province to ensure that all Albertans are able to have input into this project; that is, to provide secure electricity transmission for the future growth of our province.

Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the tremendous time and effort many of my constituents and volunteers are taking to ensure that their voices are heard in this Legislature. I very much value the input that my constituents have contributed to the consultation process and encourage all Albertans to do so.

Thank you.

2:50

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee I'd like to table the committee's report recommending the appointment of Mr. Olaf Brian Fjeldheim as the Chief Electoral Officer for the province of Alberta. Copies of the report are being distributed to all members of the Assembly today.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two petitions today, both dealing with Alberta Hospital. The first one says:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government to redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.

This petition has 1,000 signatures.

The second petition reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly of Alberta to urge the Government to maintain the current number of acute care mental health beds at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.

This petition has 672 signatures, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to join a number of my colleagues in the Assembly today in tabling a petition with 1,000 names on it. The prayer is that they're petitioning the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to “redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.”

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to join my colleagues and present a petition with another 910 signatures on it, undersigned residents of Alberta petitioning the Assembly to urge the government to “redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.”

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am pleased to present 962 signatures, which are part of a package of 5,725 signatures. The prayer reads that they ask the Legislative Assembly to “redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.”

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling 962 signatures urging the Legislative Assembly to urge the government to “redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.”

Mr. Speaker, by the time all petitions are tabled, there will be almost 40,000 signatures in total.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, have a petition to present to the Legislative Assembly this afternoon. This is a petition organized by the Save Alberta Hospital Edmonton group. They can be reached at savealbertahospital.com. This petition has 903 names on it. They're from Medicine Hat, Spruce Grove, Sherwood Park, Edmonton, St. Albert, Stony Plain. They're from all over the province. The petition is to the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, in Legislature assembled, and reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly . . . to redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.

I would just like to say thank you to the AUPE for organizing this.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Like my colleagues, I'm tabling a petition. This particular one has 988 signatures, and it brings the total to nearly 6,000 for today alone. The prayer reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government to redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating as of September 1, 2009 at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.

The impressive thing about this, aside from its numbers, is that it covers Lethbridge, Camrose, Calgary, Milk River, Grande Prairie, High River, Fort McMurray, and many, many other communities all around Alberta. There's a very broad base here.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table 1,784 letters and e-mails I have received from my constituents and also many Edmontonians expressing their concerns about the potential impact of the proposed transmission lines on their health, the environment, and the value of their properties.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. member, there will be some difficulties with those because of the format and the earlier ruling that I gave with respect to those. They may very well be returned to you so that you might do some better sorting out.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table five copies of my e-mail to Pat Cochrane and members of the Calgary board of trustees on Bill 206.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of tablings today. The first two are with permission from constituents Kenneth A. Mills and Doug MacEachern. They have issues with Alberta Hospital Edmonton, and they cannot understand why our government would consider downgrading it and closing a portion of it.

The second group of tablings I have this afternoon are also from constituents of Edmonton-Gold Bar. They're all very concerned about education funding, and they are urging the government not to cut funding for our public schools. The first one is from Fran Lucas, the second one is from Mr. Keith Wilson, and the third is from Lorraine Wilson on 56th Street. They all have given me permission to table those documents in the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling the requisite number of copies of the letter that I sent to yourself and to key members of this House. The first paragraph states . . .

The Speaker: That's not required. It's the Speaker's job to table that, not yours.

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've got a number of tablings to make here today. The first one is copies of a letter to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and all other MLAs by CC from Ms Yvonne Byer and Ms Connie Whiteley outlining their situation. Also included are photos of Ms Byer's house that indicate some of the true concerns outlined by the residents regarding their homes.

The second one is copies of a letter to the Alberta Liberal caucus, also with photographs included, from Mr. Brian Johnson outlining his issue.

The third one is copies of a letter to the Alberta Liberal caucus, with photos included, outlining the situation of Ms Doris Smith and Ms Beate Wagner regarding their parents' home.

Number four is copies of an e-mail response dated June 12, '09, from the Minister of Municipal Affairs to a letter from Ms Yvonne Byer.

The fifth one is recommendations from five residents of Folkstone Place for legislative changes regarding home inspections and building safety codes.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd like to table the 2008 annual report of the Legislative Assembly Office for the calendar year ended December 31, 2008. The report represents the audited financial statements for the fiscal year 2007-2008 and the 2008 annual report of the Alberta branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

I'm also tabling the appropriate copies of a memorandum from the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity requesting that Bill 209, Children's Services Review Committee Act, be given early consideration for second reading.

3:00

Now, we're at 3 o'clock, and we have a standing order that says that we can't continue unless we have unanimous consent to conclude the Routine. I need unanimous consent. The Clerk has a number of tablings that are probably appropriate, so would the Assembly be prepared to give unanimous consent?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Goudreau, Minister of Employment and Immigration, pursuant to the Regulated Accounting Profession Act the Certified General Accountants' Association of Alberta annual report 2008-2009.

Statement by the Speaker

Private Members' Public Bills

The Speaker: Hon. members, the chair has to make some comments with respect to the procedure for the remainder of the afternoon because of some interesting requests made of the chair; that is, I need to make some comments about the order of private members' public bills.

As is often the case when session appears to be coming to an end, members become anxious about having their private members' bills considered prior to the end of session. In that vein, on November 18, 2009, the chair tabled a letter from the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek dated that same day, requesting that Bill 206 receive early consideration at third reading if it passed committee stage. The letter is recorded as Sessional Paper 638/2009.

The next day, Thursday, November 19, 2009, the chair received a letter from Calgary-Varsity, which was tabled today, asking that Bill 209, which he is sponsoring, receive some consideration today.

The issue about the early consideration of private members' bills has been the subject of several Speakers' rulings over the years. I would refer members to the May 8, 2006, ruling at pages 1356 and 1357 of Alberta Hansard for that day and the December 1, 2003, ruling found at page 1968 of Alberta Hansard for that day. One feature of both rulings is the chair's request to members and House leaders to have the situation reviewed and clarified.

In 2003 the chair stated the view that "a member should not be able to request early consideration of his or her bill at the next stage until it has passed the previous stage." However, that is not the rule, for reasons that the chair will elaborate upon.

The Speaker's role in determining the order of business for private members' bills stems from Standing Order 9(1), which states that "all items standing on the Order Paper, except Government Bills and Orders, shall be taken up according to the precedence assigned to each on the Order Paper." The issue for the chair is to determine how to interpret "precedence assigned to each."

As indicated in previous rulings, this issue precedes this Speaker. In his February 11, 1997, ruling, Speaker Schumacher outlined a procedure whereby members could request early consideration of their bills. The ruling is found at page 16 of the Journals for that date. As the chair believes this is such an important issue, he will repeat part of that ruling:

- (3) If a Member wants his or her Bill to be considered before the due date, then that Member must make a written request to the Speaker prior to the opening of the House the day before the Member wants the Bill to be considered. For example, if a Member wants a Bill to be considered on a Wednesday . . .

Now, when this ruling was given, private members' business was considered on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, and that's the reason I refer to that.

- . . . the letter must be received by the Speaker before the opening of the House on Tuesday on which day the Chair will table the letter.

Well, we now have a situation where we have private members' on Monday, so you have to have it in by Thursday.

- (4) When a Member requests that his or her Bill be considered before its due date, the Bill will be called after debate has concluded on the Private Members' Public Bill that is then before the House or Committee of the Whole assuming that no other Bills have reached their due dates.

So in keeping with previous practices, the business for today will start with Committee of the Whole consideration of Bill 206. If this bill is reported by the committee and the report is accepted by the Assembly, then the Assembly will move to third reading consideration of Bill 206 for one hour. If there is time remaining, the Assembly will resume its consideration of Bill 208 at second reading stage. Once that is completed, Bill 209 may be moved for second reading.

As the chair indicated, there is some sympathy for members who feel that their bills have been "bumped" by requests for early consideration. On December 1, 2003, the chair noted that the request for early consideration of Bill 208, which had not passed committee stage when the request for early consideration of the bill at third reading stage was made, might work a hardship on the member who was sponsoring Bill 209 at second reading. The chair – and I quote myself, I guess – noted the procedure for early consideration but stated:

- In an effort to ensure that the system is fair and equitable to all members, the chair would welcome suggestions by members and their House leaders over the winter on this issue of early consideration of private members' public bills so that a procedural policy could be put in place for the spring 2004 session, one that would be very clear at the initiation of the session.

No recommendations were forthcoming, and no changes were made despite the chair's invitation.

The chair renewed that invitation in 2006, but despite an extensive review of the standing orders since then, no changes have been made. The chair sincerely hopes that this issue will be resolved or at least considered by House leaders and members in the near future.

So back to where we are. We're going to go to Committee of the Whole in just a second for consideration of Bill 206. At the conclusion of the consideration of Bill 206 and if the report is accepted, then the Assembly will move to third reading consideration of Bill 206 for one hour. If there's time remaining, we'll then proceed to consideration of Bill 208 at second reading, and if that's completed, then we'll go to Bill 209. But at 5 o'clock we'll adjourn, of course, for motions.

Orders of the Day
Public Bills and Orders Other than
Government Bills and Orders
Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair would like to call the committee to order.

Bill 206
School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers)
Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I want to begin by repeating my appreciation to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for attempting to address the issue of bullying. I give her full credit because she's tried to wrestle with this issue twice, first in Bill 210, and then she took the comments that were directed towards Bill 210 and attempted to refine them further in Bill 206. Having said that, she further attempted refinement on Bill 206 with amendments, and I was grateful to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for accepting an amendment that I proposed as well.

The problem, Mr. Chair, is a problem that I have pointed out since the beginning of our discussion, that a private member's bill has no ability to ask for funding, and without funding, unfortunately, this bill is doomed to failure.

Today the Alberta School Boards Association heard the following emergent motion:

That the ASBA believes that the proposed amendments to the School Act as detailed in Bill 206, School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, should not be supported.

The background provided is as follows:

As of November 16, 2009, Bill 206 has passed second reading in the Legislature and is currently at the Committee of the Whole stage.

As per the ASBA's review of Bill 206, outlined in an April 29, 2009 Memorandum, the proposed amendments to the School Act detailed in Bill 206 are detrimental to the ability of school administrations to fulfill a school board's statutory duty to provide a safe and caring environment for its students and staff.

- The mandatory protocols provided by these amendments:
- do not provide principals with the discretion to progressively discipline students or take into consideration mitigating factors, especially for special needs or disabled students;
 - removes the principals' current authority to issue student suspensions, especially to immediately remove a student who threatens the safety of staff and students;
 - impacts students' rights to procedural fairness if the student fails to participate in the mandated educational measures program;
 - creates onerous, potentially unworkable tracking and reporting requirements to determine when "bullying" as defined occurs;
 - fails to require parental notification and involvement; and
 - does not provide any guidance or meaning as to what an educational measures program consists of or is meant to do.

Given the above concerns and the short timeline to passage of the Bill, the ASBA should communicate immediately with the Premier, the Minister of Education and all MLAs regarding the lack of support for the passage of Bill 206.

3:10

The vote was taken today. It was taken early on in the ASBA's AGM procedures this morning. The vote, Mr. Chair, was 97 per cent against this particular piece of legislation, and that 97 per cent of school boards who voted represents 97.6 per cent of students.

Now, I say this with all sincerity. The hon. mover of this bill must feel that she's climbing a mountain with several pounds' worth of pack on her back. I completely understand, Mr. Chair – and, again, I hope my integrity and sincerity come through in what I am attempting to express – that the member put forward this piece of legislation with the best of intentions, but as I pointed out at several stages of discussion, the best of intentions cannot be addressed within the bill in its current state. The only way Bill 206 in a reframed manner could be accepted is if it came forward as a government bill.

What I am encouraging the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek to do is to gain the confidence of all her caucus members and sponsor the bill through a government-endorsed procedure because that will solve one of the major problems associated with this, the underlying problem, and that's funding. If it comes as a government-funded bill, there is no problem because the funding will follow. But right now, without the funding for the program to which Bill 206 purports to send students, the educational measures program, without that funding you cannot have the program. The program does not currently exist. How do you send a student who has misbehaved, bullied, to a nonexistent program? Also, the funding does not exist to provide teachers' in-servicing in a nonexistent bullying program. Take it one step further, Mr. Chair. There is no funding for curriculum development at the postsecondary level for students seeking a master of education or for individuals training to be teachers' aides at our local colleges. So while the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has a vision, that vision, unfortunately, is impaired by the reality that without funding this cannot go forward.

School boards were concerned on a variety of issues. I highlighted the memorandum, the emergent motion, that went forward today, but their concerns are magnified by the reality of what's happened so far with the Ministry of Education. Mr. Chair, $80 million of educational cuts have come forward. A significant percentage of those cuts came as clawbacks from the existing school boards. School boards are concerned that because the government is projected to be cutting as much as $300 million for the 2010 budgeting process, they'll be left with a bill for a nonexistent bullying program. Now, they're concerned about the funding, but they're also concerned about the quasi-judicial relationship that teachers and principals find themselves placed in.

Now, Mr. Chair, that alone should be sufficient; 97 per cent of locally elected, semiautonomous school board representatives, trustees, have voted almost a hundred per cent to bring this to a close. That should be sufficient. But I want to share with you an interpretation by the Calgary Association of Parents and School Councils. This comes under Critics' Concerns.

Though the spirit and intention behind this bill are indisputably positive, critics of this bill have several concerns.

The bill contains no provisions for any kind of teacher and administration training in the identification of bullying, and no anti-bullying education for students. According to Calgary-Varsity Liberal MLA . . . education programs are the only effective way to stop bullying. Calgary Police Services concur: "Focusing resources on addressing the root causes of youth crime and violence will make a significant difference in the long run."

The bill may run into trouble in relation to Bill 44, which passed this spring. Bill 44 allows parents to remove their children from any class that explicitly teaches about sexuality, sexual orientation, or religion. As much of the bullying that occurs in a school setting relates to real or imagined issues surrounding these three topics, the new potential restrictions regarding educating bullies about sexuality, sexual orientation, and religion may make an “educational measures program” impossible. If a parent chooses to not allow their child to participate in an anti-bullying discussion because of its content, schools may have no other avenue of discipline.

Should the proposed legislation come into effect, critics are concerned that it would result in a mountain of paperwork for school administrators. They believe that administrators will have far less time to effectively administrate their schools because they will spend so much time completing reports and documentation on the smallest of issues.

I look forward to other opportunities, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Livingstone-MacLeod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Chair, for the opportunity to rise today and participate in the Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 206, School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. I applaud the member for sponsoring this groundbreaking legislation that seeks to address the problem of bullying, drugs, and violence in our schools. Most importantly, Bill 206 approaches the problem of bullying in a modern context, where the Internet and gangs are part of the question.

We know full well that kids from time to time do have a tendency to pick on one another. However, there is a point where it becomes a problem: when it is unrelenting and, in some cases, threatening. In these cases, bullying can have severe repercussions for the victims. Aside from physical harm, a victim’s ability to learn is compromised, and their mental health may suffer as well. It is necessary, then, to have in place an appropriate intervention process that can identify and correct these types of situations.

It is also important, Mr. Chairman, that there be a thorough record of severe bullying cases. This valuable information will help school administrators, teachers, parents, students, and government understand the nature of severe bullying. While Bill 206 calls for each case to be specifically documented and dealt with individually, it is important to also consider the big picture for the purposes of analysis and monitoring, and this is the intention of section 7.

Section 7 would require that school boards submit a comprehensive report detailing all cases of bullying and infractions each year. Specifically, Section 7(a) states that “a board shall, within 30 days of the end of a school year, submit a report to the Minister respecting all alleged contraventions of sections 12.1 and 12.2 of which the board is aware . . . [as prescribed] under section 23.1.” These contraventions, as specified in sections 12.1 and 12.2, include possession of banned items, weapons, drug paraphernalia, for example, and bullying at school, on school buses, at school events, online or over the Internet, and any other instances reasonably expected to cause substantial and material disruption at the school. Any such instances, Mr. Chairman, will be forwarded to the board, as outlined in section 23.1, which requires that the school principal advise the board of the possible contraventions of sections 12.1 or 12.2.

3:20

The process of documenting these issues, as specified in section 23.1, is quite simple. The year-end reporting essentially involves compiling the individual reports. Considering this, we can be sure that the year-end reports represent a thorough account of bullying cases in our schools. Moreover, school boards would have ample time to compile the year-end reports as specified within the bill as it clearly states in section 7(a) that the report shall be filed within 30 days of the end of each school year. I am happy to see this amount of time specified between the end of the school year and the date that the year-end report would be due. We do not want to burden school administrators when they are busy teaching our children, so it is appropriate that year-end reports be collected within a reasonable time frame after the conclusion of classes.

Mr. Chairman, there would be valuable information contained within these reports. These year-end reports can assist relevant government departments and agencies as well as the school board itself in assessing outcomes and possible new trends in bullying and school violence. For example, the information can offer a perspective on successful mediation by law enforcement officers as well as best practices within schools for resolving bullying situations. Additionally, taken together, these reports can offer insight into the specific cause surrounding bullying and destructive behaviour both in and out of the classroom.

Knowledge gained from the year-end reports may be used in conjunction with research on social development amongst youth to further understand the complexities that confront teachers, school administrators, and legislators alike in the field of education. Ultimately, Mr. Chairman, the increased understanding promoted by these year-end reports can help us sustain a world-class education system in Alberta that all students can be part of. I think we can all agree that no student deserves to be sidelined in education because their school has become a place of fear. Bill 206 clearly outlines a practical and reasonable framework for addressing the problem of bullying in our schools, and the provision for the year-end reports in section 7 of the bill is an important piece of that strategy.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this important piece of legislation. Today I stand in support of Bill 206 and urge all of my fellow members to do so as well.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I appreciate this opportunity to speak again. I just want to give a little bit of a quick historical perspective on why I’ve changed my mind about supporting this bill.

I wrote a letter to the hon. member, the proposer of this bill, and at that point I said – and it’s important to have this on the record – that while I support the desire of the MLA for Calgary-Fish Creek to see Bill 206 fast-tracked and passed into law, I hope you will give some consideration to my Bill 209 getting minimal time for debate in second reading.

An Hon. Member: What’s that got to do with it?

Mr. Chase: Mr. Chair, I’ll gladly explain what it has to do. Since this weekend, when I had an opportunity to chat – a lengthy chat, I might add – with a member of the Calgary school board and then again spoke not only with this member but also the chair, there were large holes that I had only spoken to with regard to funding, but they clarified a series of other concerns.

Mr. Chair, so far, in terms of providing this House with information, I have provided you with the Alberta School Boards Association’s 97 per cent report, I have referenced the parent councils’ concerns, and now I’d like to reference the Alberta Teachers’ Association’s concerns because they are the ones directly on the line, having to administer to the best of their ability Bill 206. The Alberta Teachers’ Association’s position on Bill 206:

The Alberta Teachers’ Association was pleased to [be] able to work with [the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek] to address one aspect of Bill 206 that posed particular difficulty to schools in dealing with bullying. The bill, as originally worded, would have prevented principals from suspending students for bullying and so would have compromised their ability to protect victims and also ensure that appropriate measures were in place before a bully returned to school.

[The hon. member's] amendment addressed this particular issue to the Association's satisfaction.

Nonetheless, the Association continues to be concerned that the Bill as it stands continues to characterize as "bullying" actions and behaviours that are clearly criminal in nature and that should be addressed through the criminal and youth justice processes.

The Association is also concerned that the bill conflates the role of principal and peace officer. Roles should be clearly delineated so that principals and teachers, not peace officers, are making decisions concerning educational matters. Peace officers have a role in making decisions about what measures may be taken to hold bullies accountable for their actions and protect the peace when those actions violate the law.

Such clear delineation of roles does not preclude, and would actually enhance, the ability of educators to work collaboratively with peace officers, social services, health authorities and others to address the problem of bullying generally or in specific situations.

The Association appreciates [the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek's] efforts to bring attention to bullying and would welcome an opportunity for all stakeholder groups to work collaboratively with government to develop approaches to bullying that more effectively address this serious problem in advance of new legislative measures being introduced.

Now, the point I'm making, Mr. Chair, is that everyone understands that bullying is a major concern in this province. Everyone understands and appreciates the efforts of the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek to put forward legislation to address these concerns. But the Alberta School Boards Association by a 97 per cent vote, the parent councils' considerations, the concerns that I've just raised from the Alberta Teachers' Association – these are the people directly involved with the bullies. The parents are the parents in some cases of the bullies and in some cases of the child being bullied. Their concerns are the ones that we need to be addressing. The teachers, who are on the front line, reinforced by the school boards and trustees, need to have legislation that will work on those front lines.

The confusion that the parents association, the ASBA, and the ATA all raised was the mixed roles that were being put upon teachers versus officers of the peace or the police.

Mrs. Forsyth: Peace officers.

Mr. Chase: Peace officers. Thank you. I appreciate that qualification.

With that muddying existing, there are concerns.

Now, when I began the debate on Bill 206 and throughout the debate on Bill 206, I have lauded the hon. member for her efforts, and I'm taking nothing away from those efforts. But, as I say, I believe the answer to this problem is a government bill solution.

3:30

Now, I would like to share with the hon. members a portion of an article written by Scott McKeen of the Edmonton Journal surrounding Alex Wedman, whose mother, Betty Wedman, was introduced last week to this House. Alex was the unfortunate young man who was bullied to the point where he committed suicide. This is some of the background that Scott McKeen noted in his November 22, 2009, article.

Bullying thrives in silence. But so does suicide. Consciously and unconsciously we've taught our children that suicide is too taboo, too scary, to even mention.

We fear that talking about a person's suicide will inspire copy cats. If we talk about it, the thinking goes, other kids, our kids, might see it as a chance to go out in a blaze of glory.

Yet the hush perpetuates the shame and isolation. How can we expect a suicidal kid to reach out when the over-riding message from us is that suicide is too shameful to talk about?

We have come to believe a lie: That suicide is a failing of character in dysfunctional people or their families. Mental illness is still the subject of so much stigma, though depression is a near epidemic in North America.

Alberta leads the country in suicides, with 473 recorded in 2007.

The statistics are believed to be greatly under-reported for a number of reasons, including stigma.

But why does Alberta lead the country? One theory is that it might have something to do with our can-do attitude.

We are self-reliant achievers, don't you know? We pull ourselves up by the bootstraps and create wealth for ourselves and our communities.

That's a lot of pressure for anyone to handle, but especially a kid.

Now, I have no doubt that the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek is aware of the statistics. She's aware that bullying in its most extreme forms leads to not only physical scars and psychological scars but leads to death, and it was those concerns that prompted the hon. member to stand up and try and do something about it. Again, in all sincerity, I appreciate the efforts. Parents appreciate the efforts.

Mr. Denis: What are you willing to do about it?

Mr. Chase: What I am willing to do about it, hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, is make sure that a bill gets passed through this Legislature that has government support with the appropriate funding. Right now I am saying that this was a wonderful effort with the greatest intent possible, but it has failed because it lacks funding. It also, as a lawyer, has quasi-judicial muddying of roles of peace officers and teachers. I look forward to your defense of this bill, which 97 per cent of school boards this morning spoke against.

Mrs. Forsyth: And it's appalling that they don't know how to read.

Mr. Chase: I hope that was recorded in Hansard from the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek with regard to Alberta school boards. "It's appalling that they don't know how to read." Those are our locally elected, used to be semi-autonomous representatives until 1994, when the ability to account for half of their funding through the . . . [Mr. Chase's speaking time expired]

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Just a comment that this hon. member who is bringing forward this bill has a history in this House of bringing forward motions that have come to protect child prostitutes. She has a history of being successful in terms of taking her bills and making sure that they are successful in the end. So it is a pleasure for me to rise and join debate in Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009.

Alberta has one of the greatest public education systems in the world, and part of its success is attributed to providing healthy learning environments for students. These environments help cultivate students' creativity and enable them to achieve their potential. As a government we are taking measures to foster these productive educational environments, where students feel safe and secure.

Unfortunately, however, for some students school may not be a place where they feel comfortable and respected. In fact, it can be a distressing place due to bullying and repetitive teasing. For these students school can actually become a place of fear rather than a place of inspiration, and this is why I'm pleased to acknowledge the valuable intent of Bill 206 as well as an important provision within it. Section 12.2 of Bill 206 details the places and activities where schools will enforce a bullying ban. More specifically, section 12.2(c) enables school administrators to take actions to impede bullying at any time when it may reasonably cause a substantial and material disruption at school. This is an important clause within Bill 206 because it recognizes that bullying can be perpetrated in many different circumstances.

Some of us in this Assembly may be able to recall instances in which we've observed bullying. I'm sure we can all acknowledge that sometimes these harmful acts occur outside of institutionalized or supervised settings. However, regardless of location the acts of bullying are nonetheless harmful for the victims who bear the ridiculing or physical threats. Bullying in all its forms is a truly serious issue for our school system, whether it occurs in a school or off-site.

Mr. Chairman, parents and teachers know that even with every precaution they take, sometimes students are not within their immediate supervision, and the reality is that those individuals who bully often take advantage of these unsupervised situations. For example, it's not uncommon for some students to walk home from school. The time between leaving a school and reaching the front door of the student's home may only be a matter of minutes, but this represents an opportunity for bullying. This opportunity may allow a bully to intimidate, harass, or abuse their victim. These bullying acts can harm a child physically as well as psychologically. When these children get home, they may have temporary reprieve. But the next day they return to school, and as they walk down the hallway or sit in the classroom, they're reminded of the behaviour that they have been subjected to, often realizing that more bullying may await them.

Teachers and administrators may notice the victimized student as now disengaged or depressed. While the behaviour causing these symptoms may not be happening in the view of the teacher, they can through this legislation take appropriate measures with the administration to help the student who is being victimized. Such a possible situation exemplifies the need for a clause to ban bullying which results in substantial or material disruption.

Mr. Chairman, statistics show that those who are affected by these types of torment are sometimes reluctant to come forward out of fear or the false belief that nothing can be done. Implementing an effective course of action to deter bullying will help to empower victims. If they know that there's something that can be done, they will feel more comfortable coming forward. We want these students to understand that there are supports in place and that help is available. The consequences of inactions are sometimes severe and in any case always harmful.

One parent's testimonial, which was articulated on an antibullying website, speaks with candid conviction to this issue. The parent wrote of her regret of not acting when her child came to express her troubles from bullying. In this case the child, who could no longer withstand the constant ridiculing, took her own life. This story emphasizes how serious this issue is.

While there is no easy solution to this complex social problem, we must be vigilant in our efforts as a government to work towards reducing bullying in our schools and in our society. This involves educating students, parents, and school administrators about the consequences of bullying and the impact it has on students' well-being and learning experiences. Students must be encouraged to speak out. Through Bill 206 and sections such as 12.2(c) we're setting in place a framework to ensure that if concerns are raised, something will be done.

3:40

Education is the foundation of a productive and prosperous society. As a component of our government's efforts to stop bullying, we are working to inform Albertans of its negative impacts by providing educational resources to build awareness. This initiative will be strengthened through antibullying legislation and will work to ensure that bullying in our school systems is not tolerated or ignored. We know that these are important measures to reducing the instances of bullying in educational settings and society overall. For Alberta students we want schools to be safe and secure learning environments.

I commend the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for her steadfast dedication to raising awareness on this challenging social issue. I believe that our government is well served to look at any measures we can to work towards the reduction of bullying in our school systems. Therefore, I will be voting in support of this legislation, and I do urge all my hon. colleagues to do so as well.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: On my list here, the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to rise today and contribute to Committee of the Whole on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. This act is being brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, and I'd like to take the time to applaud her for both the intent and wording of this valuable piece of legislation.

Mr. Chairman, as discussed in second reading, the goal of Bill 206 is to ensure the safety of both students and teachers by providing new direction for addressing cases of bullying. In addition, this legislation would require mandatory reporting of all cases of bullying and allow police officers to order mandatory court summonses in severe cases of bullying.

In order to have comprehensive antibullying legislation, there needs to be a comprehensive understanding of the issue of bullying. Mr. Chairman, this brings me to section 12.2 of the bill. This section reads:

No student shall bully another individual

- (a) in a school, on school grounds, on a school bus or at an activity sponsored or approved by a board,
- (b) by means of a school computer or the Internet accessed through a school computer, or
- (c) at any other time where such activity may reasonably be expected to cause a substantial and material disruption at school.

Mr. Chairman, within this section I find that part (b) may require some additional debate. In essence, this section addresses the growing issue of cyberbullying. Cyberbullying is a new phenomenon that has come about as a side effect from the information and electronic age. Simply put, cyberbullying is any bullying performed using an electronic medium. This could range from hate e-mails to website chat rooms and social media networks, such as Twitter and Facebook and MySpace and any other ones that exist out there. While it is true that cyberbullying does not result in direct physical assault in many cases, I would argue that the effects of this type of harassment are equally as harmful.

Mr. Chairman, emotional injuries can last a lifetime and can lead to feelings of sadness and helplessness, which can contribute to an overall state of depression. In turn, these negative feelings can lead to aggression and violence. One only needs to look at the chilling examples of Columbine, Taber, and Virginia Tech to understand that violence, hate, and suffering cannot be allowed in our schools.

Bill 206 is a testament to our commitment to keeping our classrooms safe and free from bullying and intolerance. Further, section 12.2(b) recognizes that bullying has evolved with modern technology in that classrooms are no longer being confined to schools. Rather, students can learn how to interact with one another across the globe. A child in Edmonton could be instructed alongside a child in Peace River, in turn could be taught by a teacher in Red Deer. Mr. Chairman, the children in these virtual classrooms need to have the same level of protection as students learning in conventional environments. While these virtual classrooms are protected by this legislation, I feel as though cyberbullying should perhaps be addressed as if it were an extension of conventional bullying.

Bullying no longer stops when a child leaves for home. Now bullies can harass their victims in the classroom and on the playground and then continue this negative behaviour over the Internet. In addition, the Internet allows bullies to remain anonymous. Users can log on to chat rooms or post on websites using an alias, enabling them to harass their target without fear or reprisal. Unfortunately, the protection of being anonymous is not extended to the victims.

Mr. Chairman, not only are cyberbullying targets harassed by anonymous individuals, they are attacked openly in public in the view of the entire world. For example, bullies using an alias can write a harmful or threatening message on a victim's Facebook wall, which can in turn be viewed by all individual friends and peers.

In the past bullying was isolated to schoolyards and local neighbourhoods, but with the global reach of the Internet a child could be harassed by people from across the province. Section 12.2(b) recognizes this unfortunate reality and acts by placing restrictions on the use of school computers. Specifically, this bill gives teachers, principals, and school resource officers direction to help them confront bullies who engage in cyberbullying when using school property.

In turn, addressing cyberbullying at school may help to prevent cyberbullying at home as well. After all, a student who engages in cyberbullying at school is probably more likely to commit the same offence while at home. Furthermore, if school officials are given the powers proposed by Bill 206, it would enable them to address the issue at hand and, hopefully, end the harmful bullying relationship. In my mind the strength of this bill rests in the way it clearly defines bullying, thereby enabling school personnel to actively intervene and engage in cases of bullying.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the easiest and most effective way to end bullying is to get an authority figure involved. Essentially the parameters of section 12.2(b) enable authority figures to become involved in cases of cyberbullying. This section is just one example of the well-thought-out planning that went into this draft legislation, and this is commendable.

I am particularly impressed by how the inclusion of section 12.2(b) recognizes that bullying is continually evolving as a problem as technology does. Cyberbullying is simply the latest link in this evolution, but I believe it has the potential to be one of the most common forms of bullying as we move forward. I do applaud the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for the courage and conviction it took to address such an important issue, and I thank her for the commitment she has shown to Alberta's children, youth, and students.

I just want to add, Mr. Chairman, that as chair of the Youth Secretariat for the province I had the great distinction of meeting with this year's Youth Advisory Panel for the first time this past weekend and came away quite impressed with the number of youth that have been selected from across this province to sit on the panel and provide feedback to government on policies and programs that affect youth in our province.

3:50

As I sat around that table this weekend, I realized how important this issue is. A number of the comments provided to me from the members that sit on this panel expressed real concern about the types of bullying and interactions that youth have amongst their peers and the long-term effects that they have in the lives of these individuals that are bullied. I really do applaud the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek in tackling this issue.

It's really unfortunate that we have a member in this Assembly that has deemed this not too long ago to be a bill worth supporting and, because a group of people for whatever reasons they have do not want to support that, then flip-flops on the issue. Mr. Chairman, this issue is way, way, way too important to have that sort of flip-flopping happen.

It's really bothersome, Mr. Chairman, to see that type of thing. There may be challenges in implementing some of this legislation because it's new and because it's innovative. There is no doubt about that. I don't want to speak for the hon. Minister of Education, but I'm pretty sure that he's very much open, if this bill does pass, to working with school boards on how it is implemented at the board level and within the specific schools. For those reasons I would just hope that that hon. member changes his opinion.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo indicated he wanted to speak.

Mr. Chase: Yes, and he's ceded the spot to me.

The Chair: All right. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, then.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. If I correctly understand the Member for Calgary-North Hill, he would like me to flip-flop back to my original position. Now, it's interesting that the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill is a former trustee with the Calgary board of education. So quickly we forget our former allegiances and the concerns presented.

Now, to the hon. member's credit, he brought forward the modern face of bullying, cyberbullying. It is as real and it has the same emotional effect and destruction of character in a lot of ways that physical violence has. Cyberbullying is more the realm of the female than it is of the male in terms of undermining and assassinating character, but it is an important form of bullying that has to be dealt with. Unfortunately, Bill 206 comes short.

It's very important that not only the Member for Calgary-North Hill but all members read the Hansard. When they bring up an accusation such as I'm flip-flopping . . .

Mr. Anderson: It's pretty self-evident.

Mr. Chase: The word "self-evident" is used. When further evidence is provided which adds clarification, do we simply put our hand over our mouth, our hands over our eyes, and our hands over our ears and reject that because it's new and relevant current information, or do we stay stuck in our past commitment and go blindly ahead regardless of the consequences? Ninety-seven per cent of Alberta school boards' representatives said that this is not the vehicle. Yet some members are so attached to this vehicle, which is now wheel-less, that they're continuing to fight for it.

Bullying is a problem beyond a doubt. Where I left off before, the point I was trying to make was that in 1994 when school boards lost the ability to collect the local portion of the education property tax, they surrendered half of their autonomy. We've had examples with this government who actually stepped in and fired school boards. We've had examples from this government where they did external audits of the Calgary board of education, much like Bill 202 was suggesting for cities, and found nothing wrong, and this was the school board that they fired. It is important that all levels of government—federal, provincial, municipal, and in this case, school boards—work together and support each other for the common good of Albertans.

I would like to return the floor to the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo and appreciate his giving me this opportunity to stand up for my integrity.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm honoured to stand today and participate in the Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. First of all, I would like to thank the sponsor of this bill, the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, who has worked hard to bring this legislation forward.

Mr. Chairman, just the fact that we're having this conversation. I really wish that we didn't have to talk about this. I'll tell you why: the number one cause of death for young Albertans and young Canadians under the age of 44 is suicide. And not only suicide. We have 60,000 to maybe 100,000 of our young people seeking mental health services every year. Young women attempt suicide three times more often than young men. Young men complete the act of suicide three times more often than young women. Usually they try harsher methods, more violent methods. Despite what we have done to deal with mental health issues over the decades—despite what we have done—this number has not come down.

The causes of children's mental health issues are multiple and many. One of the biggest difficult times in a young person's life, especially a teenage person's life, are those vulnerable teenage years and the years leading up to those years. Working families go through difficult times. One of the most difficult times for hard-working families is what happens to the children when they leave their home. Most of the time they spend in school or in the community with their friends.

Now, bullying is an issue that is very important because school is a place where you should come to learn and grow and aspire to greater heights. But when you have to go to school and worry about whether you're going to get a black eye or get your nose broken and constantly be threatened, the last thing young people are able to do is concentrate on their studies and on the task at hand, which is to learn and to gain knowledge, when really they have to wonder what's the safest way to get home because they want to know if the bully is going to be on this route to home or that route to home or whether they can eat their lunch inside or outside safely. I believe that there has been a lot of good work to address this issue. However, I do believe that there is more work to be done.

Now, this very important bill, Mr. Chairman, would not only protect students and teachers but would also help to ensure that the schools are as safe as possible, making certain that weapons, drugs, and bullying do not have a place in our schools. In our era it was just bullying. Now we're talking about weapons and drugs.

Growing up, I confess to being bullied when I was young, but weapons and drugs weren't an issue in our school at that time. My children are teenagers in school right now, and it concerns me that my children have to possibly contend with somebody bringing a weapon to school.

Schools must be safe in order to foster an environment of learning. Bill 206 intends to enhance this safety by providing school staff, administration, and law enforcement with the tools and the ability to effectively manage situations that involve weapons, drug paraphernalia, and bullying. Specifically, I would like to address the procedures that educators and law enforcement can take when there is a contravention of this act as described in section 23.1. Mr. Chairman, it's vital that proper guidelines are established and that a procedure is in place to deal with bullying, weapons, and drug-related infractions. In the real world when our young people become adults, these are criminal acts. If anyone does this in the real world, you would be going to jail, or you would be going to court.

4:00

The first part of section 23.1 outlines the procedures for teachers to take after becoming aware of bullying. Mr. Chairman, teachers are the ones who know the students best and are often the first line of support for students. Also, they thoroughly understand how bullying can negatively affect not only particular students but an entire learning environment. Teachers know that these kinds of aggressive and threatening behaviours can render a learning environment very toxic. This bill specifies that if a teacher becomes aware that a student may be involved in bullying, the teacher must advise the principal, who, ultimately, is responsible for the environment of that whole school. This first step sets out a clear reporting procedure for notification so that teachers will know who to consult upon becoming aware of bullying situations.

In addition, this bill also gives direction for principals who are made aware of bullying. Under section 23.1 it is stated that once a principal becomes aware that a student may be involved in bullying, he or she must consult with the school board, thereby ensuring their awareness, and may at his or her discretion consult with a peace officer. This is a crucial part, Mr. Chairman. It's at their discretion. These procedures provide flexibility in handling varying bullying situations. If a bullying situation is deemed serious enough to involve law enforcement, this section permits a principal to do so.

This bill also sets out procedures for how a peace officer may go about dealing with these situations. It is clarified under section 23.1 that if the peace officer, after having been consulted by a principal, believes that the student has been involved in a bullying situation that contravenes the act, the principal and the peace officer may determine an educational measures program for the student to participate in. Mr. Chairman, this section strikes a balance that ensures school principals and boards are aware of instances of bullying while also providing them with additional tools they can use to manage a situation when it is merited. These educational measures programs can take many forms such as counselling or therapy. Presently schools are predominantly using school suspension as a means of addressing bullying behaviour.

Mr. Chairman, many teachers and educators would tell you that suspensions and expulsions may not necessarily be a suitable consequence to help the offending youth in all situations. This bill recognizes the complexity of bullying situations and provides the protocols and direction to school administration that allow them to effectively address and manage these issues. Furthermore, section 23.1 of this bill directs a principal to advise school boards of any direction that they have given. Therefore, this bill continues to involve the entire school system, from the teacher to the principal to the school resource officer and the school board.

Bill 206 works to assist schools by both providing them direction for managing bullying situations as well as providing additional tools for dealing with youths involved in committing acts of bullying. With the passage of this bill I believe that learning environments in Alberta schools will benefit. In a world where sound education can assist in economic prosperity, it's imperative that all students receive the best education possible.

Mr. Chairman, I'd also like to speak on behalf of the bully. Hurting people usually hurt people. These bullies are young people. They themselves have many issues, which may be an issue at home with a dysfunctional home environment. The person doing the bullying may have an emotional or mental health issue. Part of this is addressing getting the bully some help. After all, even the young people doing the bullying are still our children. I think we need to take a balanced approach not only to protect one group of children but also to help another group of children. I believe these measures are not here to punish the kids; we need to get them some help.

At the end of the day, Mr. Chairman, all evidence points to the fact that those who bully when they're young end up bullying when they're older, and when they become adults, many of these bullies end up having many visits with the judicial system or the penal system. I can say first-hand that as an inner-city emergency doctor I've seen a lot of violence and the end result of a lot of violence.

Mr. Chairman, I think this will go a long way in ensuring that our educational system can be the best in the world, and I thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for introducing this bill.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's a privilege to rise and speak to Bill 206 this afternoon. I was listening intently to many of the speakers beforehand as well as following this a little bit in the papers and some other places of note. I'll make my comments sort of based upon what people have said and what, I guess, people who are in a position of knowledge on what is happening in our school system think should be done to best handle bullying.

I appreciate the comments of the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark in that school is often a very difficult place to be, and we should do our best to not only protect children from bullying behaviours but to get the people who are bullies some of the help they may need to live better lives and become better, participating members of the community. In the words of Rodney King: can't we all get along? I think that is essentially what we're trying to do here. There's no doubt that our school system has to be part of that leadership and part of educating our youth and trying to lead them into behaviours that are most productive for our society.

On that note, I can say that the intent of this bill in trying to eliminate or, in fact, reduce bullying behaviours in the school system is an honourable one. The Member for Calgary-Fish Creek should be applauded for going through the channels, for working on such a bill, for coming up with some remedies that she believes will add some more teeth, shall we say, to legislation, making bullying not a crime but something that can be followed up by police officer, parent, and teacher alike by combining a lot of resources in your community to deal with an issue that happens at your local school.

It's on that note where we look at some of the merits, and I'll continue on there. The intent of Bill 206 would be to amend the Alberta School Act to provide protections for teachers and students from those students who choose to bring a weapon or a controlled substance or other item identified by the Minister of Education onto school property. It is also meant to prohibit bullying behaviours. Bullying is quite broadly defined to mean repetitive harassment of an individual to maintain an imbalance of power over that individual through such methods as gestures, verbal or written abuse, stealing the possessions of that individual, threats of actual physical or sexual assault to that individual, or death threats. The bill specifies that no student is to either possess a banned item or to bully another individual in a school, on school grounds, on a school bus, or at an activity sponsored or approved by a board. Use of a school computer or the Internet accessed through a school computer to bully another is also prohibited.

We can see that this legislation is tailored towards stopping the bullying at school. You know, let's face it. The education system is even broader than that in trying to stop bullying behaviour throughout one's life through the education process and making people more accountable both to themselves and to each other.

4:10

If we continue on, the balance of Bill 206 outlines the consequences for engaging in a prohibited act. Essentially, a student who is suspected of having engaged in a prohibited act may possibly be referred to what is called an educational measures program. While that term is not defined in Bill 206, the assumed intention is that such a program would educate a student on the harms that can be caused by engaging in a prohibited act and the consequences for the student in doing so. The bill states that "the board must provide for educational measures programs" – and here's where some of this stuff comes in – presumably at its own cost.

The bill further provides that the community's police officers potentially become involved in the matter and work with the school on assessing and referring a student to an educational measures program. I think that where some of the problem emerges here is: what is this educational measures program? Is it after school? Is it on weekends? Is it taught by teachers? Is it taught by principals? Is it taught by police officers? And, I guess, at the end of the day, who pays for it? That's a question.

I think the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has brought a decent bill to the front, but with this being one of the remedies that she provides in the bill, to refer someone to an educational measures program, she is referring to a money bill.

The Chair: The chair hesitates to interrupt the hon. member, but pursuant to standing orders 8(7)(a)(ii) and 8(7)(b), which state that all questions must be decided to conclude the debate on a private member's public bill which has received 120 minutes of debate in Committee of the Whole, the chair must now put the following question to conclude the debate.

[The clauses of Bill 206 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee rise and report Bill 206.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill 206.

The Deputy Speaker: Having heard the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Public Bills and Orders Other than
Government Bills and Orders
Third Reading

Bill 206

School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers)
Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek to move third reading of Bill 206.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move third reading of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009.

This bill will deal with a problem that has a very human side. There is the kindergarten student who is beaten up in the schoolyard, the elementary student who is afraid to ride the school bus because they will be tormented with vicious name-calling, the junior high student who is embarrassed and ostracized when lewd photos are posted on Facebook, and the high school student who is brutally assaulted during a hazing incident. These incidents would be serious enough if they were just a one-off, Mr. Speaker, but the reality is that they are often just a piece of an organized campaign of terror, a cruel pattern of behaviour that rapidly turns the victim's life into a living hell, a cycle from one moment of anguish and fear to another.

I've talked before about some of the victims, and I want to remind my colleagues about their stories. There is the seven-year-old child who lives in my constituency that has seen a psychiatrist, and he is suicidal. There is a boy in Edmonton who committed suicide after a series of gruesome attacks, attacks that left him with injuries like an eight-centimetre blood clot in his testicles. When I hear the stories of these victims and their physical and psychological wounds, it seems like something from a conflict in a far-off land. These are the types of injuries that you expect refugees to have, and in a sad way that is what many of these children have become. Refugees in their own schools, they're forced to hide on the playground and alter their walks home. Eventually they have to flee the school and find somewhere else where they can live and learn in peace, but this often doesn't work. The bullies sometimes follow them to a new school, or a whole new set of children bully them, and it's time to stop this.

Bill 206 will go a long way to stopping the problem. It's going to ensure that each and every incident is dealt with, that we have adequate documentation when cases escalate, and that statistics are available to identify trends and allow policy-makers to act.

The second piece of this bill, as I have talked about, deals with drug paraphernalia and weapons. It's going to make it so that simple possession is illegal; no more having to prove intent. The problems of drugs, weapons, and bullying really go hand in hand, Mr. Speaker. We know that hazing incidents, especially, often involve weapons. There are hockey sticks and there are baseball bats, canoe paddles, and all sorts of other stuff modified to commit assault, and right now it's not illegal to have one of these things at school. Why would you want to have a goalie stick with the blade cut off and holes drilled in it in your locker? We know that the reasons students do this is to commit assault, so let's stop that problem before it happens. And the same goes for drugs. Crack pipes, as far as I know, have nothing to do with the curriculum, but they are part of the problem and part of a culture that can make our schools unsafe and violent places.

I want to end by sharing yet another story by a mom. This story is just one example of the many that I've been inundated with. Her son went to a local school. He was beaten repeatedly. One day in a school class he's surrounded by five students in a corner. They are armed with a metal pipe. They threaten to shove that pipe somewhere not very nice. Fortunately, he had some training in martial arts and was able to defend himself. But our children should not have to defend themselves, Mr. Speaker. We should be defending them.

Bill 206 will defend our children and our teachers and everyone else who works in our schools from the mean-spirited behaviour of bullies, and I urge my colleagues to support this bill in third reading.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, you wish to join the debate?

Mr. Hehr: Sure. Yes.

The Deputy Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me to rise and continue on here in third reading. For those following along, I was cut short on my comments in Committee of the Whole, so I'll try and just get to the point where I was relatively quickly and move on from there.

I think, basically, I can agree with those comments the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has said. Our schools shouldn't be places where children go to be tormented, bullied, or the like. Oftentimes some of the things we see at school are difficult to understand. What I'm getting to is that I think the intent of her bill is fabulous. It's something we should all aspire to, and a school system is actually trying by educating its children to take the bullying out of bullies and, I guess, to protect, then, people who are being bullied and give them the internal strength to stand up for themselves and at the same point in time have the two communities come together, work together, play together, and share together in a better way in the future. I think this bill, the intent of it, would be that, to try and lead to a more productive, more helpful, more caring, more sharing society, which I essentially agree with.

4:20

While I do agree with the intent of the bill, what it comes down to, where I sort of left off, is that the bill states that the board – and I'm assuming those are the various boards around this province – must provide an educational measures program, presumably – and here's where it comes in – at its own cost. This educational measures program is where you would send the bully on whatever recommendation it is to where they can go get some, I guess, behaviour modification class, for lack of a better term, or they can learn more about how their actions are affecting another individual, whatever you may have.

But let's be clear here. This educational measures program does not exist right now in the school system. At least, that's what individuals at various school boards are under. They recently had their meeting, where 97.6 or 97.8 or 97.4 per cent, anyway at least 97 per cent plus, said that they aren't in favour of this, and one of the reasons was that they don't currently have an educational measures program.

Mrs. Forsyth: Why not?

Mr. Hehr: Exactly. The Member for Calgary-Fish Creek asks a very important question: why not? I couldn't agree with her more, that maybe this does have to come in.

But let's also make it clear, then, that this is a money bill. It's going to have an effect of having more costs associated either to a board or the provincial Legislature. If the hon. member is doing it with the intent of passing along these costs to the board, well, then that's something that, you know, the boards are having a difficult time with right now, and I think it should go back. Like the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity states, if this Legislature truly, honestly believes that this is something that is needed, some day it can be implemented. Let's rework it and send it back as a money bill. I think the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity was pretty clear on that, supporting those intents of reworking through some of the bugs and alleviating some of these fears that the school boards have.

I think there are, honestly, also some other things at play here. There are some recommendations here. First, if a teacher or board is aware that a student may have committed a prohibited act, the board or teacher must advise the principal. Secondly, once a principal is aware that a student may have committed a prohibited act, the principal must consult the board and may consult with a police officer. The bill does not provide guidance to a principal as to when a police officer should be consulted, but it should be noted that in order for a referral to be made to an educational measures program, that decision must be jointly made by both the principal and the police officer.

Well, you know, are there provisions in the School Act? Maybe the hon. Minister of Education wants to add his comments to this as to how he sees this provision being worked on, or maybe you guys already have a plan in place on how the police officers are going to be brought in to advise the school system and set up a time that the principal can make in his day to have a weekly meeting with this police officer. It can be addressed in further going through school acts, I guess, in how schools are going to be maintained, but it doesn't seem to be something that can be easily worked out at this time without some money being put into it, let's face it. I'm assuming that most of our principals are pretty busy through the day and that this will be an additional job for them to do.

Thirdly, if a principal determines on reasonable and probable grounds that a student may have committed a prohibited act, the principal may meet and consult with the student and the student's parents and the police officer that the principal may have involved. It should be noted that the bill does not require that the student's parent or guardian be notified before a principal consults with a police officer on the matter. Well, look at this term: reasonable and probable grounds. I know we educate some of our legal practitioners on that. I know we advise our police officers on that. I hope we're going to maybe have a course for our teachers to take to know that criteria and what that criteria in law sort of means.

Fourthly, should a police officer that has been engaged believe on reasonable and probable grounds – they at least will know this – that a student has committed a prohibited act, the police officer and the principal may determine that the student participate in an educational measures program, in which event the principal must direct the student to participate. There is that educational measures program again. Where is it to fit in the curriculum? What time is it supposed to happen? Is this after school, before school, lunch hour, weekends? Who's supervising it, who's teaching it, who's paying for it, all those things? It seems to me that those should be answered, and we shouldn't just be blindly going along here without having those questions answered. I think that's fair.

I think we bring up some valid concerns. It's not that we don't support, necessarily, that this would be a good thing for school boards to go down. It just looks like there are a lot of unanswered questions, primarily on the funding front of things. What's going to happen?

You can also look at this. There are some concerns brought up by many school boards that a legal interpretation of the bill, should it become law in its current wording, can only be given by the courts, and several potential concerns are noted. There is a concern about the implications of involving police officers and, by extension, the criminal justice system in a board's decision-making process on how to address student behavioural issues.

At one end of the spectrum, where such behaviours may not be traditionally regarded as a particular threat to other students or to operations, such involvement may tend to criminalize behaviours that have previously been effectively addressed through the school working with the students, parents, or guardians. At the other end of the spectrum, Bill 206 may introduce a response process that prevents a board from promptly addressing more serious behavioural issues, that would typically result in immediate suspension from school, in order to ensure that the offending student is withdrawn from the school environment. You see that question emerge because of the "may," "might," and "must" language in the bill that's being proposed: you must enrol in one of these programs that are going on. Significant questions may arise with respect to the capacity of administrators to apply judicial or quasi-judicial tests such as determining reasonable and probable grounds in ways that are fairer from an administrative law perspective.

Thirdly, reference to weapons and controlled substances that are tied to the Criminal Code and the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act may be problematic in terms of administrators appropriately being able to discuss this.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've listened with interest to my colleagues in the debate on Bill 206. What all of the speakers have in common and a view I share is that bullying and violence, whether it's actual or threatened, whether it's written or verbal or communicated electronically, are certainly an unacceptable part of our education system, have no part whatsoever in our education system. Where there is a difference of opinion, however, is whether this bill is the correct means of addressing these issues. As MLAs we don't have all of the answers. My own teaching experience is limited to university students, so I don't have any direct experience with bullying in the classroom, and we never had any weapons or drugs, to my knowledge, in our classrooms or in our hallways.

4:30

I have to rely on the information and opinions not only of my colleagues here in the Legislature but also, and perhaps more importantly, on the views and opinions of those who are presently charged with the administration of the School Act. I'm referring, in particular, to the communications that my hon. colleague from Calgary-Varsity pointed out from the Teachers' Association and the school boards. Those individuals are, certainly, most familiar with the operations of the schools as they presently exist and with the measures that are now in place to deal with bullying and weapons and drugs in the schools. They are also in a position to determine what the implications of the present bill might be to their operations, should it be passed.

I did have a long conversation, Mr. Speaker, with my school trustee from the Calgary board of education, the largest school board in the province of Alberta, who shared with me some of the concerns that she and the other trustees from the Calgary board of education have, both from a practical and a legal standpoint, resulting from this bill.

I also have some hesitation as a result of the communication of the results of the vote this morning from the Alberta School Boards Association, which, according to my information, had voted overwhelmingly, by a percentage of 97 per cent, to oppose the bill. So with the greatest of respect for the intentions of the sponsor of the bill, Mr. Speaker, I'm not prepared to support Bill 206 on third reading. I must defer to the views of those who are charged with the administration of the School Act and with its operations and with the implications that this bill has for the conduct of their operations in Alberta schools.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to participate in third reading of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to commend the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this legislation. This bill would have an immense impact on the lives of many in the province. By strengthening the protection in schools from bullying, Bill 206 would ensure students and staff are even safer on school property.

While we often focus on protecting students that are being bullied, it is also important to understand that bullies are also in need of attention. To this end and in addition to protecting victims of bullying, Bill 206 works with bullies through a new tool such as the educational measures program. Specifically, Bill 206 further compels bullies to participate in such programs.

This brings me to section 23.2, which addresses what happens when a student wilfully ignores the measure that he or she has been instructed to take to help address the problems at hand. Section 23.2 states that "a student who fails to participate in an educational measures program, as directed under section 23.1, is guilty of an offence." To completely understand the wording and meaning of this section, section 23 needs to be examined in further detail.

Essentially, section 23.1 states the course of action that a principal and peace officer must take when an individual has a banned item or bullies another person on school property. In particular, subsection (4) of section 23.1 states that "the principal and the peace officer may determine an educational measures program for the student to participate in, and if such a determination is made, the principal must direct the student to participate in that program." This subsection is crucial to the understanding of section 23.2 as it may compel a student to be enrolled in an educational measures program.

Oftentimes incidents such as bullying can result in suspensions or expulsions. Bill 206 offers an alternative. Mr. Speaker, in my previous career I was never a supporter of suspensions or expulsions as this would have the youth at home by themselves or getting involved in gangs or other antisocial behaviour or even criminal activity. The alternative is an educational measures program. This is used in a broad term so that such a program can be tailored to the student's individual needs. Educational measures programs can get to the core of the behavioural issue whereas suspension may not. In fact, some would say that simply sending a student home without any additional measures or penalties may further exacerbate the problem. When a student is sent home on a suspension or expulsion, often the parent is not there to supervise. They may be working or unable to effectively parent.

Furthermore, bullying is not limited to a school setting, so removing them from the school may not be the best way to help them control their aggressive behaviour towards others. This is the purpose of an educational measures program, to address the student's issue in a safe, supportive environment. Mr. Speaker, section 23.2 complements this initiative by compelling students to engage in these programs, which are designed to help them. This section accomplishes this through clear and concise wording. The words "fails to participate" are used. This is a strong statement, however. Failing to participate not only means actually showing up but actively participating. Just showing up is not good enough.

The goal of Bill 206 is to address the issues of bullying, and if a student ignores the program set out for them, then the problem cannot be addressed. By failing to comply with an educational measures program, the legislation is clear that the student is guilty of an offence. Mr. Speaker, 23.2 compels the offender to follow the program set out for them or face severe, life-impacting consequences. By using the phrase "guilty of an offence," there can be no question that there are consequences for not participating in the program deemed appropriate for the student. By these means the student cannot ignore the program. The reality is that the principal and the peace officer are looking out for the best interests of all their students and even the bullies.

It is essential that bullying tactics are stopped so as to prevent them from carrying on throughout the student's life. This section ensures that the measures taken to address bullying are enforced. I therefore feel as though it's integral to the overall meaning and impact of the bill. Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 is clear and concise, and it's important that it is given careful consideration.

Thank you again to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing such an important piece of legislation forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to further debate.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, I noticed previously that the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity stood up and then the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere and then the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont. Thank you.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, who by previous practice is a lawyer, introduced some of the concerns with regard to legal implications of the enforcement of the bill. He also made the comment that everyone in this House – I may be paraphrasing, and I hope I'm not straying too far – is concerned about bullying.

There's no doubt that bullying has no place in schools. As the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays noted, we need to act and we need to act immediately. It's extremely important that we do act. But the more I review Bill 206, that doesn't have any funding, that does not have an educational measures program to refer students to, this is doomed to failure.

I'm going to use the expression of putting the cart before the horse. I'm going to quote from an article published today in the Calgary Herald by Sarah McGinnis, the title of which is CBE Urges Boards to Speak Out against Anti-bullying Bill. We already know the results of that CBE vote. It was 97 per cent in opposition to this bill, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill indicated, lest anyone think that it's just my own interpretation of the vote.

This is what is attributed to the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek: "As for the educational programs to be offered bullies, [the member] said those have to be developed in conjunction with education stakeholders before her bill – should it receive third reading – is made law.”

Mrs. Forsyth: No, I didn't say that.

Mr. Chase: Well, I'll go on. I'll read the quote, and if it's incorrect, we'll deal with that. It says, and this is in quotes: “The education program has to go into consultations with the people on the ground, the principal and teachers working with these kids. They know the types of educational programs that need to be given to these kids far better than I do.” [interjection] That's accurate. Thank you, Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, for recognizing the accuracy.

4:40

Mrs. Forsyth: And then I said: before it becomes law.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Okay. And then adds: before it becomes law.

The point I'm making is that this all should have been done before we're talking about the legislation. In other words, the consultation, the development of the program, the funding: all of these measures should have been in place, and then the law basically ensured that all this research and development, funded development, is now a law, and it's ready to be delivered at the school level because the educational measures programs have been developed. There will be some, I'm assuming, opportunity with funding provided for teachers to be trained and then the in-servicing of this educational measures program, which is to be developed.

The point I'm making is that all this consultation and collaboration and creation should have preceded the legislation. What we're doing is saying: “Okay. Yes. We still have to do this, we still have to do that, and we still have to do the other thing before it becomes law. But, you know, I'm going to be out there, and I'm going to consult. I'm going to take all these necessary measures.” My point is that these necessary measures should have been taken beforehand so that this thing could quickly get passed into law. Without those measures being taken, we're still in this twilight zone of uncreated programs.

Now, I just want to contrast that with the manner in which the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek approached the Crime Reduction and Safe Communities Task Force. To her credit she and her task force toured the entire province. She gave up days of her life. She was so thorough with the Crime Reduction and Safe Communities Task Force that it met twice in Calgary.

I had an opportunity at both meetings, the University of Calgary and at a hotel approximately on 19th Street and 16th Avenue, that used to be called the Crossroads – I forget what the name of it is now – to talk about the importance of school resource officers and the need to have school resource officers involved in creating relationships with kids so that the perception of peace officers was enhanced. Beyond a doubt, having resource officers in the schools would definitely be an asset with regard to bullying because you'd have both sides of the matter. You'd have the principal enforcing the School Act, and you would have the resource officer, with considerably greater availability, dealing with the Criminal Code issues, so it would be a partnership. But that has not happened. We're saying that will come at some undetermined point in the future. I want this thing to go through successfully, with funding and with consultation and collaboration. The faster we get it right, the better.

Now, further on in Sarah McGinnis's article it says, “Calgary-Varsity Liberal MLA . . . also presented an amendment calling for principals to take action if, in their opinion, bullying is taking place.”

Like the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, I want action. I want it to take place. I don't want it to be may. I want the action to be must. But the action has to be based on a premise that is supported. There has to be a bullying program. There has to be funding for teacher in-service. There has to be curriculum development at the university.

The quote that's attributed to me, which is accurate, is: “Without funding to create a bullying curriculum, to provide teacher in-servicing and curriculum instruction courses at the education faculty for student teachers, nothing will change.” It's not going to change unless we have some active programming with in-servicing and curriculum instruction to implement the program. Right now we have some potential rules that could work towards improving the current state of bullying, but we've got no program, and we've got no funding for the program.

The article goes on to say, “Aside from these changes, the proposed legislation still does not take into account the anti-bullying efforts currently in place in Alberta schools, or assess how well they are working.” The background information is attributed to Lynn Ferguson. “Bullying is an important issue to be addressed in our schools,” said Ferguson. We all agree. Everybody agrees that we have to address bullying. Then she goes on to say, as quoted, “We have many programs within the CBE to address bullying in a much more preventive manner.”

Basically, what Trustee Ferguson is saying is that we don't have to reinvent the wheel, but we have to consult, we have to collaborate, and we have to evaluate what we currently have and use that as the building blocks, as the starting position. As the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek noted, we have to do that consultation. I'm not suggesting, hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, that it's too late to do that. I agree that it has to be done. I just believe that it would have been better done up front, before bringing in the legislation that lacks the tools or the funding to see the process through.

I am very interested in a bullying bill succeeding. It's absolutely necessary. It is, literally, as we have discussed, a matter between life and death. But when it actually gets into law, let's have it be the best possible bill it can be. Let's have teachers cognizant of bullying aspects that were sort of subtly flying under the radar. Maybe they hadn't realized that there was cyberbullying taking place at home.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to have the opportunity today to speak to Bill 206. I want to applaud the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. I don't think there is anyone in this House who has done more, who has spent more time working on initiatives that work to protect our children, whether it be from bullying or preventing child exploitation or combating child pornography. This hon. member, I think, deserves the thanks of this House for all of her work in this area.

I personally want to thank her. I have four little boys. One of them is now in public school, and three more are closely following behind. I have to say that as a parent it means a lot to me that this House is considering this bill. I just believe that as parents we should never have to be put in a position where instead of worrying about whether our children are learning about, you know, math, science, language arts, et cetera, we're worrying about bullying, drugs, weapons, violence, and all those things that are sometimes, unfortunately, a part of our schools at this time.

I would suggest that this is a bill that does need to be passed. We can't wait any longer. I don't want to berate, by any means, the Member for Calgary-Varsity for his comments today. It's a good debate to have. It's a good thing to talk about in this Legislature.

But I would say that it is very last minute. My view is that with something coming at this late stage, with this type of last-minute opposition to a bill that is so needed – parents agree that it's needed. Most, if not all, of the teachers that I've spoken to have said that it's needed. I don't know what the political agenda could possibly be from these people that they would come in at the last second and try to scuttle this very important bill. At the end of the day, as politicians and as representatives of the people, the parents and kids that we represent, I don't think that there is any good excuse to not pass this bill as is.

I think that we might need to make some changes in the future. Perhaps we will, but the content of the bill is solid. It addresses a need that is there and problems that exist today, and I truly feel that it would be a big mistake to once again delay passage of this bill. If there were issues that needed to be brought up, they should have been brought up previously, sometime during this year, not at the last second, right before this bill is about to hopefully be passed.

4:50

Mr. Speaker, I think we all know the tragic stories that have happened because of bullying in our schools. I think of Columbine. I think of Taber. I think that in both those cases there was lots of proof that the shooters, the people that performed these heinous acts, were bullied extensively for long periods of time prior to that. It is a terrible thing for a child to have to undergo.

Unfortunately, children, probably because they don't have that filter quite built in yet and don't quite understand the consequences of their actions, sometimes can be very, very cruel. Sometimes totally unknowingly they can be cruel, and that is why it's so important, as many of the hon. members have said today, to educate our kids at home as parents. That's the first line of defence. We need to understand what our kids are doing online so that not only are we protecting them from bullying, but we are making sure that they never, ever participate in bullying, because a lot of kids do so without understanding the consequences of their actions. As parents and as teachers we need to help them understand those consequences. I believe that this bill does that. We cannot continue to cater to the lowest common denominator in our schools. Our schools need to be free from weapons, bullying, and drugs, and we need to do everything that we can to make sure that that is the case.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I do want to again say that I do not feel that we need to wait another minute before voting on this bill and, hopefully, passing it. I think it would be a big mistake to delay it any longer. Our children who are in school right now, at this moment, are waiting for us to pass this bill. I think many teachers and parents are waiting for it, so I would ask every member of this House to make the decision to start toward a final solution, a final successful outcome on this issue by passing this bill into law at this time.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: I would like to congratulate and thank the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for all the hard work she has done on this bill. All the spirit and intent behind this bill are indisputably positive. There are some issues which arose with the passing of the bill. We all know that bullying is a serious problem, and 15 per cent of students in every school are vicious targets of daily physical and emotional assaults. It is a big problem. Only 4 per cent of students report the bullying.

This bill alone will not change the pervasive hidden nature of bullying. Almost 80 per cent of every school community is made up of a silent majority of students, and these students are the eyes and ears of the school. They know what is going on in the locker rooms, the bus, the gym, and the hallways and on the weekends. These are very caring students who are very capable of dealing with normal day-to-day conflict, but when it escalates into bullying, these students become almost debilitated. Much like adults in the community they are fearful of making the situation worse, fearful of retaliation, fearful of being seen as a rat, and fearful that other adults will not take it seriously. Bill 206 is going to do nothing to dispel this fear. Education and support will.

This bill may run into trouble in relation to Bill 44, which was passed this spring. Bill 44 allows parents to remove their children from any class that explicitly teaches about sexuality, sexual orientation, or religion. As much of the bullying that occurs in the school setting relates to real or imagined issues surrounding these topics, the new potential restrictions regarding educating bullies about sexuality, sexual orientation, and religion may make educational measures programs impossible. So if parents choose to not allow their children to participate in antibullying discussion because of its contents, the school may have no other avenue of discipline.

Should the proposed legislation come into effect, critics are concerned that it will result in a mountain of paperwork for school administrators. They believe that administrators will have far less time to effectively administrate their school because they will spend so much time completing reports and documentation on the smallest issue. According to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, the intent of this legislation is not to create paperwork. She believes that there is currently lots of inefficiency when dealing with assault and violence cases because police reports often lack proper documentation. The Member for Calgary-Fish Creek hopes that mandating accurate reporting from all these stages will decrease the workload at the back end. She urged that the paperwork process will not be particularly onerous or bureaucratic, just accurate and adequate.

The problem is coming with the funding part of it. It's a good bill; there is no doubt. You know, I congratulate the member. I thank her for all the hard work she has done. According to the Alberta School Boards Association at their fall general meeting, they said:

The mandatory protocols provided by these amendments:

- do not provide principals with the discretion to progressively discipline students or take into consideration mitigating factors, especially for special needs or disabled students;
- removes the principals' current authority to issue student suspensions, especially to immediately remove a student who threatens the safety of staff and students;
- impacts students' rights to procedural fairness if the student fails to participate in the mandated educational measures program;
- creates onerous, potentially unworkable tracking and reporting requirements to determine when "bullying" as defined occurs;
- fails to require parental notification and involvement; and
- does not provide any guidance or meaning as to what an educational measures program consists of or is meant to do.

Given the above concerns and the short time to pass the bill . . .

An Hon. Member: Let's have a vote.

Mr. Kang: Well, I think we should look into what exactly an educational measures program is. Are these programs already in place? For school boards that do not currently have these programs, where is the funding going to come from? Do these programs have to be expanded if the legislation passes? What if the peace officer and the principal disagree? Who has the authority? Does this section mean that a principal alone cannot determine whether the student must take part in an educational measures program? So what is the motivation behind requiring the involvement of a peace officer in these infractions, and should there be a peace officer . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, I hesitate to interrupt. It's 5 o'clock. The matter of Bill 206 has ended for today.

We'll go on to the next item.

5:00 Motions Other than Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Seniors' Property Taxes

518. Mr. Weadick moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to consider exempting seniors from paying the education portion of property taxes.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today on the Monday towards the end of this session. Private members' business is that unique opportunity where we as private members get to come forward with ideas or recommendations from our communities that represent the fabric and the fibre of our communities. It's a real pleasure for me to rise today on an issue that has been brought to me many times in my community and that I feel is very important. I rise to open debate on Motion 518.

Mr. Speaker, this motion proposes that the government consider exempting seniors from having to pay education property taxes. Now, when I brought this idea forward over a year ago, we hadn't seen the downturn in the economy. Things were humming along quite nicely in Alberta. Since then we have seen some impact, so I am going to preface my opening remarks by saying that I believe that if we bring this in – I'm hoping everyone will support it – we bring it in at the time when we're back in the black and we've moved the province forward through this recessionary time and we're again showing the kind of surpluses within our province.

Alberta's seniors' community has a very, very strong and proud history in this province. This motion is the result of many discussions with seniors and seniors' organizations in Lethbridge, and I wanted to make a special note of two of those, Mr. Speaker. Lethbridge Senior Citizens Organization represents about 4,000 people in Lethbridge. Nord-Bridge seniors' centre has, I believe, around 2,000 members. These are organizations that work very, very hard night and day to represent and provide services to the seniors in our community. They have met with me and talked to me about how important it is to try to help seniors stay in their own homes.

Our seniors today have experienced a great deal of change in the past few years. Many of our seniors are facing financial hardship today, and I believe this deserves our attention. Mr. Speaker, impacts from the markets as they went down reduced returns on our seniors' investments, and fixed incomes have created significant challenges for the seniors in our communities. As Alberta seniors continue to enrich our communities as our parents and our grandparents, as our neighbours and so forth, it is timely that we look at ways to ensure that our Alberta seniors are able to make the most of their retirement years.

Seniors are also some of our most active and valuable volunteers. They help maintain the fabulous quality of life we enjoy in Alberta,

Mr. Speaker, and we need to help them stay in their own homes. Seventy-one per cent of Alberta's seniors live in their own homes. I can honestly tell you that home is where the heart is, and it's where the heart is for our seniors. I don't want to see our seniors have to leave their own homes due to financial hardship. Motion 518 is aimed at helping alleviate the financial pressures that our senior homeowners are facing. This is about fairness to our seniors. Living in lodges, they do not pay property taxes, so this would be an opportunity to level the playing field.

As the hon. members likely know, property taxes have been a source of education funding since Alberta became a province in 1905. While municipalities are currently in control of their property tax structure and assessment, the province sets its requirement for collecting property tax revenue for education in terms of amounts deposited into the Alberta school foundation. Because of their ability to provide a large and stable resource for education, property taxes have helped ensure that young Albertans receive a quality education and are prepared to lead the province as our previous generations have so capably done.

Interestingly enough, Mr. Speaker, over time the general revenue fund has provided an increasing portion of education funding. Over the past 16 years education property taxes themselves have been either reduced or frozen and are now 40 per cent lower than they were in 1993. Currently about 21 per cent of education spending is funded by the education property tax while the remainder comes from general revenue. Although it has been suggested that the education portion of property taxes be abolished altogether, Motion 518 simply proposes we alleviate the burden on our seniors, who in many cases need it the most, Mr. Speaker.

As baby boomers continue to age, Alberta is currently seeing a rapid shift in our seniors' demographics. Seniors now make up just over 10 per cent of our total population, but it's estimated that in the next 20 years that will grow to 20 per cent of our population. This accounts for a sector of the population that is growing at a faster rate than any other in Alberta, and we are committed to helping them maintain the quality of life they deserve. Mr. Speaker, this means helping our seniors age in place. Seniors should be able to remain at home in the communities they know and love. We have committed to this principle through our continuing care strategy. Part of this is helping seniors with home care when they're able to remain at home, alleviating the pressure on seniors' facilities. We must help seniors to age in the right place, and for many of our seniors that right place is right in their own homes.

Although seniors are by no means the only group facing financial challenges due to the high cost of living and of maintaining their properties, they certainly share some unique challenges, including potential expenses for medical assistance and services. By eliminating this portion of the property taxes for seniors, we can ensure that our senior homeowners can retain some extra money, helping them remain in their homes longer and maintain a suitable quality of life.

Mr. Speaker, I would encourage all members to join me in supporting Motion 518 in an effort to address the financial pressure of some of our most valuable friends, parents, and grandparents: our seniors. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I speak in favour of Motion 518. What Motion 518 will cause to happen is finally the promise that Premier Klein made back in 1994, 15 years ago, that when we were back in a position of having the debt paid off – well, of course, he didn't anticipate that we were going to go back into debt again. That being said, the promise was made to seniors 15 years ago that the education portion of the property tax, that they're currently suffering, would finally be removed as it was prior to the harsh treatment they received along with every other member of society and social service back in the 1990s.

This is finally providing that promise. It may be 15 years late, and a number of fixed-income seniors may have had to move from their current dwellings into either continuing care or long-term care, but the notion of keeping seniors in place and aging in place is absolutely wonderful. It's not only ethically and morally defensible, but from an economic standpoint if we can keep a senior in their home with some visiting nurse, whether it be the old-style VON, for example, or through support from the health regions, this is wonderful.

Now, there are programs that currently exist which would make Motion 518 realizable when it comes to aging in place. For example, the Meals on Wheels program is now approaching its 43rd year. It started out operating out of church basements, and it has expanded to deal with the ever-increasing aging population, of which the Member for Lethbridge-East, being a little younger than myself—I can truly appreciate that we're part of that generation, the baby boomers, who are certainly soon going to be requiring that support.

Meals on Wheels provides a series of supports. It not only delivers meals; it delivers the opportunity for seniors to actually do a little bit of stockpiling if they have sufficient independence to be able to warm up their own foods. For those who don't have that type of independence or are nervous about cooking, they can provide the warmed meals right there on the spot.

5:10

Now, to the government's credit they have provided grants. I would suggest that within the last five years, I think, the total of grants for Meals on Wheels is approaching approximately $6 million, and I stand to be corrected if I've lowballed that amount. But I know that Meals on Wheels has currently purchased a large property which would suit their purpose, but they have not sufficient funding to have the kitchens developed in this large warehouse that was once a sports store. Alderman John Mar has recommended to his city council aldermen that they consider providing some millions of dollars of support in terms of bridge funding so that if that facility isn't actually going to be where the new Meals on Wheels is set up, they could at least either use the money that they've accumulated from the acquisition of the property to purchase another property or use the money that Alderman Mar has suggested to provide the equipment for the existing facility.

Bringing the Meals on Wheels out of their current small location on Macleod Trail and moving it further to the northeast would be of great aid to what Motion 518 from the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West is proposing because, obviously, in order to keep seniors in their homes, they're going to need supports. When you consider the economic argument of having a senior take up an acute-care bed at a cost of $1,900 a day, think of how much farther and how much more humanely we could deal with seniors by supporting programs like Meals on Wheels, supporting programs of visiting home care, visiting services, for example, for cleaning and so on.

Now, the unfortunate part for a senior who lives in the inner city, because at that point it might have been sort of a suburban circumstance when they first bought their home for under $10,000, is that the property taxes are absolutely undermining their quality of life, yet they're afraid of the costs associated with a continuing care facility, where they're nickel and dimed for every piece of toilet paper, for every Depend, for every kind of service that they need as opposed to the long-term care potential. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East has brought up so many questions over the years about the importance of aging in place, and there's no better place within the possibilities of living at home.

I lost my mother two years ago January. My dad had tried very much to accommodate the aging-in-place scenario. My dad, incidentally, is 86. He did everything in his power to keep my mom in that place on 37th Avenue S.W., as much as he could. Then my dad's own well-being was starting to suffer after he had done as much as he could. I helped, my brother helped, my sister helped, our spouses helped, but it was getting to the point where that aging in the house could no longer take place. At that point, regrettably, father sought out some care facility. To their credit, Cedars Villa did the best they could until, unfortunately, my mother passed away.

Given the fact that so many of us are in that sort of squeeze generation, where we have grandchildren, on the one hand, and aging parents, on the other, anything that can be done to support our parents—as I noted, three years from this past Sunday I'm going to be at that pensionable circumstance, and I'd like to think that there was support for me. Mind you, I'm fortunate because I have the benefit of a teacher's pension, and I will have the benefit at the point that I retire of having the allowance that's provided for retiring MLAs. But the majority of fixed-income seniors don't have those benefits. As I say, their properties, while taxed highly, don't have the actual value. It's their location, not their physical structure, that accounts for the cost, and they don't have the money to fix it up. We do have little programs like Snow Angels and so on to assist them, but if Motion 518 goes from the initial stage that's being proposed and actually turns into law, then seniors are going to benefit.

I thank the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West for finally keeping Premier Klein's promise, 15 years late, but for those seniors who still can benefit from it, better late than never.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to address Motion 518, and I want to commend the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West—I would never want to call you the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East—for bringing this forward because I know where that pressure point is coming from. I understand that seniors are very, very vulnerable to changes in the economic climate because they are on fixed incomes, and they're very vulnerable to changes in taxation because they are on fixed incomes. I don't in any way with my comments here today want to undermine the very serious issues that seniors, especially today's seniors, are dealing with in regard to increasing costs of living and fixed incomes, even decreasing incomes if you take into account the problems in the stock market of late.

I don't think that solving this issue by essentially exempting them from property tax is the right move going forward. I think that education, the education of our youth, the education of children, is important to society as a whole, not just to the parents who have their kids in school, not just to nonseniors. It's important to seniors that our children are properly educated and that there is sufficient funding for our public schools to appropriately educate our kids. I don't think that it's fair to exempt them from education taxes.

However, having said that, realizing the pressure that they're under—you know, there's a book that I read last year. No, it would have been two years ago, during the summer. It is called The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People by Stephen Covey, a very good book. I suggest that if you haven't read it, if anybody in the House hasn't read it, by all means take a look at it. It's very, very profound advice and a very good read. One of the seven habits that he talks about in that book is synergy. He talks about how we often think of things in society and debates and issues in society as win-lose, how there's always a winner and there's always a loser. So we either tax seniors through property taxes, and then they're the loser, or we don't, and they're the winner. There are a hundred different examples of that that we see every day.

What synergy means is that you find win-win situations or win-win-win situations. There are ways, there are solutions that are out there that allow everybody to win if we're willing to work together and be innovative and get away from the status quo that sometimes we as policy-makers or as people in general fall into.

5:20

I hope that maybe we can find a more synergistic way to deal with this problem. I think everyone in this House understands fully the need to assist our seniors with the escalating costs that they're facing. We also see the need to continue to have property taxes or school education portions of the property taxes paid for the benefit of our kids, for the benefit of schools and education.

Is there a solution? Well, one of the solutions that I think many people in this party have been talking about for some time – I know the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, who's not here today, has done a lot of work on this issue – and others believe we might want look at is something like the program they have in British Columbia where they allow seniors to defer their property taxes as a lien, basically, against their home. In other words, they don't pay the property taxes to the government. That amount that they owe the government in that year: they still owe the government that amount, but it is placed as a lien against the title of their home so that when they sell the home or they pass on and dispose of the home, that asset, to their heirs, the government then collects at that time the outstanding lien, the outstanding property taxes that were due on that home.

It's a fascinating program to look at because I think it accomplishes the synergy that I was talking about. It's a cost-neutral program for the government. They still get the property taxes for education. They might, for the first little bit, have to wait a little longer for it, but it's also cost-neutral in that there is a very respectable rate of interest. It's not too much, but it's enough to cover the costs of inflation and of administering the program. It is cost-neutral to government, so they can continue to make the investments in education that are needed. At the same time, it allows seniors to defer, in some cases, hundreds of dollars in property taxes that they would have otherwise had to pay. They still do have to pay those taxes. It's just that it's when they sell their home or their home is disposed of upon their passing away.

It's a win-win situation there. Of course, by lowering the property tax for them, by essentially allowing them to go several decades in their senior years without paying their property taxes if they so choose – it's a totally optional program, obviously – it frees up a lot of income for them or takes away an expense, I guess you could say. That makes a big, big difference for seniors, especially when housing prices escalate and property taxes, of course, escalate with those housing prices. My understanding of the B.C. program is that it doesn't just apply to the education portion of property taxes, which we've frozen anyway as far as my understanding is right now in Alberta; it also applies to their entire property taxes.

It really is, I think, a win-win scenario for all people involved, especially seniors. I hope that instead of looking at a win-lose proposition that we should have seniors' education portion of property taxes or we should cut those, maybe we should look at a way that all sides can benefit and we can get the same benefits as a society that we do now from payment of those education property taxes.

Again, I admire and thank the hon. member for bringing this motion forward. It addresses a very key and important issue that seniors are dealing with right now. Although I will be voting against this specific motion, I think that the debate and discussion that he has caused by bringing this motion forward was worth while.

I appreciate the House's attention while I spoke of this. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, want to commend the Member for Lethbridge-West for bringing this forward. I have a large number of seniors in my constituency, and as was mentioned by the Member for Calgary-Varsity, my constituency is primarily made up of what you would call inner-city neighborhoods now that 50 years ago, when many of the houses were built, were what would typically be known as suburban communities. Particularly over the last, say, decade those properties have seen exponential increases in their property taxes. When I was door-knocking during the campaign, and when I go around and talk to seniors in my constituency, a number of them brought this particular issue up as a huge concern for them as to how they were going to make ends meet being on a fixed income and seeing these exponential year-over-year increases on their property.

There's no doubt that living in these communities has a distinct advantage and that many of these properties are sought after because of their close proximity to downtown, Mr. Speaker. I know that to get from my place to downtown even in rush hour only takes me about eight to 10 minutes, and that's something that we put a premium on, but that's done a lot to increase the property values in the area, and many of the seniors just can't, with their current financial situations, deal with this. So I do commend the Member for Lethbridge-West for bringing this forward because it does recognize a huge issue in my constituency.

I want to also applaud the comments of the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere because as I remember going around and talking to seniors during the election campaign over a year and a half ago, it kind of dawned on me that the education portion of the property tax was a tax base where I thought that the government could use some creativity to try to help seniors a little bit better with their financial picture, particularly those that are really struggling with exponential cost increases on their property tax bills. One of the things that I know was discussed in talking with seniors in my area was the thought of: well, if you're going to collect the tax revenue, why isn't it dedicated specifically towards seniors' programs instead of education, or why don't you just cut the tax altogether?

Then, as the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere indicated earlier in his comments, the B.C. government has its own model of how they provide some relief to seniors that are in these difficult positions. Not only do they talk about the education portion of the property tax but the whole entire aspect of property taxes. So these are all good discussions that I think are important to have.

Obviously, as the demographics in our province shift and we have more and more seniors, the programs and benefits that are offered to seniors are going to come under considerable financial constraints, so the thought of dedicating that tax revenue specifically to seniors' programming such as pharmaceuticals or assisted living or long-term care is also another option.

On the other hand, there was a lot of mention leading up to the last election about what to do with this portion of the property tax. I know the mayor from Calgary had a certain proposal out there as to how the province should forgive this area of property taxes and hand it over to municipalities. Again, I believe that that's probably not needed as our province, our government, has provided municipalities an unprecedented amount of money through the municipal sustainability initiative.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, that this is an area where I think we can do some considerable work. I certainly will be supporting this motion because I think it would go to assist those seniors in my area that are just having a hard time in paying their financial obligations. I know that when I get my property tax bills every month, I shake my head. I know that I have to pay it, but it's a tough pill to swallow, Mr. Speaker. I can just imagine what it's like to have lived in those communities your whole, entire life, raise your family and live in that house, and feel like you might have to move out because the property taxes are just too high for you to meet.

5:30

That being said, obviously education is something that's a priority of our government. It's certainly key to our economic recovery moving forward. I don't want this to be construed as the government not supporting education. The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that with the funding framework that we have in education today, this money is collected and is put into general revenue. I know that there are some technicalities amongst that, but I believe that the education portion of the property tax – and I can't remember if this is an exact number – only pays for about 20 per cent of the money that we spend on education anyway, and about 80 per cent of it, in fact, comes from general revenue.

The other fact is that it doesn't matter whether you indicate on your property tax bill or your census whether you support the public system or the separate system. The funding flow is based on the students that are enrolled. In fact, I know of many examples where, you know, someone has indicated on their census that they support the separate school system. They have one child in the separate school system, another in the public, and in fact that tax money, that public money, still flows to the appropriate school board where that child is getting their education. Really, this issue around the education portion of the property tax is not really linked to any sort of education funding, Mr. Speaker.

I just wanted to make it clear, in supporting this motion, that I still strongly support the commitment that this government has made in making education a priority in this province. I believe that on a per capita basis, right from K to our postsecondary institutions, we do provide some of the largest funding blocks in all of Canada.

With that, Mr. Speaker, this is certainly a motion that would go a long way to help the seniors in my area. If not implemented, I would at least urge the government and the minister – I see the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports there, who's been a great advocate for seniors; I know the Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne has been a huge advocate for seniors and chairs our seniors advisory panel – to look at some innovative ways that might assist seniors, whether it's keeping the tax in place and dedicating it specifically to seniors' programming or whether it's a deferral program, from the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, or whether the government just has that revenue that it could forgo by getting rid of the tax altogether.

I know that the Member for Lethbridge-West mentioned at the beginning of his remarks that the financial picture in this province has certainly changed greatly over the last year, from where it looked like, you know, this revenue might be something that the province could forgo. That might not be an option, Mr. Speaker, but I think that the issue and the intent behind the Member for Lethbridge-West was to really help those seniors that have built our communities, that still want to live in our communities continue to be contributing members by living in their own homes.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I'm open to listening to debate from other members.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

The chair received notes indicating those who want to speak here: the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports, the Member for Strathcona, the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. Any others?

Okay. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a privilege to rise and talk on Motion 518, the education property tax exemption for seniors. I'd like to start by thanking the Member for Lethbridge-West for making this motion. I do recognize that the intent of the motion is really on noble grounds in that many of our seniors, in particular, right now are having a difficult time making ends meet. This would serve to reduce some of the expenditures that some of those seniors are facing at this time.

That being said, I do look at things in an overall picture. Education is very important to our province, very important to most people, including most seniors, and they would recognize the need for some collection of taxation to go towards the provision of a publicly funded education system. So it's definitely a bill that has pluses and minuses.

I must say that my comments are very similar to those of the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. I want to point that out because it's rare that I find myself at times in this Legislature echoing the comments of the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, but on this, essentially, my comments are on all fours with him.

Right now we could tailor this legislation better than the way it is currently crafted. There are many seniors in our province who have done very well over the last number of years and who are able to contribute to the running of the public education of our youth. Accordingly, I think some of the models could be, I guess, switched a little bit to be targeted towards more lower income seniors, people who are having a more difficult time, maybe extending limits of where currently the support needs are. You know, some seniors, who are extremely wealthy, I think could and should continue to pay the tax.

I really like the idea of possibly deferring these taxes as in the B.C. models. Couldn't the Public Affairs Bureau, when they're done with advertising that rolling brownouts may occur, get on the "wouldn't it be nice?" sort of refrain that you hear on TV, where they're selling those deferred mortgage payments? We can roll out that advertisement to our seniors that they don't have to pay their education property taxes for a number of years, that they can essentially be deferred for a long time, and that they're paid back when they eventually leave their homes. I think those are much better ways to run a tax system. I think they're more targeted than an outright, blanket revision of seniors from paying into the system, shall we say.

Like I said, I support the intent of Motion 518, which is to assist seniors who are being squeezed by fixed incomes and rising costs, but those people whom we should help are those people who are truly on fixed incomes who are being squeezed. Some seniors may be on fixed incomes. However, they're not necessarily under the definition of being squeezed.

In conclusion, again I'd like to thank the Member for Lethbridge-West for recognizing that many seniors are out there in a difficult time and for bringing this motion forward to highlight that fact.

However, I think there are just better ways, both within our tax system and in the way we've set up things, that are available in other jurisdictions, like B.C. and others, that we could learn from.

I thank you very much for allowing me speak on this motion, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A quality education system benefits everyone. Just as the Member for Calgary-Buffalo suggested, this bill has pluses and this bill has minuses. Alberta students become our future doctors, engineers, teachers, tradespeople, police officers. They perform valuable roles in our society, and their roles include caring for and serving our seniors. All Alberta property owners support the system by paying the education portion of their property taxes. Currently there are almost 400,000 seniors in this province, with about 70 per cent owning their own homes and paying property taxes. We do have the education property tax assistance program for seniors to help senior homeowners with their property taxes.

For the 2008 tax year approximately 72,000 seniors' households benefited from the program with an average rebate of $85. In addition, municipalities such as Edmonton, Strathcona county, St. Albert, Brooks, and Grande Prairie have rebate programs to help with property taxes for low-income seniors. Calgary also has a program to waive increases to municipal property taxes for low-income homeowners.

5:40

We have to keep in mind, Mr. Speaker, that our population is aging. Within 20 years about 1 in 5 Albertans will be a senior. With the focus on keeping our assistance for seniors sustainable, which the Demographic Planning Commission heard is important to Albertans, we need to ensure we continue to assist those seniors who are most in need. It's also important to keep in mind the full picture of government assistance for seniors and not just look at one program.

Across all ministries this government has budgeted more than $2.5 billion to seniors alone this year through income supplements and assistance with a variety of expenses, including prescription drugs, long-term care, housing, dental work, special needs, and the aids to daily living program as well as eyeglasses. Together these programs and benefits provide seniors in Alberta with one of the most comprehensive benefit packages in the country. These programs are essential in relieving the burden on low-income seniors.

With the current level of assistance available to seniors combined with the benefits of receiving quality and essential services from Albertans educated in our schools, I am not supportive of Motion 518 at this time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to commend the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West for bringing forward this motion. I appreciate the opportunity to rise and add to the debate on Motion 518, which urges the government to consider exempting seniors from paying the education portion of property taxes.

There's a long history of funding education in Alberta, and property tax has been a source of this education funding since 1905. As many of you are already aware, the Alberta school foundation fund was established in '94. Property tax revenue for education is collected from municipalities four times a year and is deposited in the ASFF for reallocation to school boards. The education property tax funds about 21 per cent of education expenditures, not including capital, while the remainder comes out of general revenues. Currently, in '09, property assessed at $400,000 has an annual education property tax of $1,356 for the same year, or $339 per $100,000 of the assessed value.

Mr. Speaker, I think it's important to note that education property tax has been lowered or frozen every year for the past 16 years. Reductions for 2009 and 2008 were 16 per cent and 10 per cent respectively. Further, I believe you must consider the assistance that's already been put in place for seniors under the education property tax assistance for seniors program, already in place since 2004. The program is not based on income. It protects all seniors, 65 and homeowners, from increases in the education property tax by providing a refund. In 2006 nearly all seniors in Alberta received some income from government transfer payments.

I think it's also important that we examine the demographics of our seniors population in this province. In 1972 there were a total of 123,000 seniors compared to 361,000 in '07, a nearly 300 per cent increase compared to a 200 per cent increase in the population overall. By 2031 it's projected there will be more than 880,000 seniors in Alberta, amounting to 20 per cent of the total population.

Most seniors live in private households. In 2006 about 71 per cent of seniors in Alberta lived in homes which they owned. Of the seniors that owned homes, 20 per cent had a mortgage; the remaining 80 per cent had no mortgage. Such an amendment would exempt seniors from the education property tax and would help senior homeowners who depend on fixed incomes. With additional income some seniors could potentially keep their homes longer, aging in place, and as such it is possible to improve the quality of life of senior homeowners.

Mr. Speaker, everyone benefits from and should support education in their communities. Many seniors are grandparents, and it may be justified that they are supporting the educational well-being of children in Alberta. Other demographics could also benefit from not having to pay the education property tax on a needs-based justification. Essentially, since 2004 seniors have been protected from increases in the education property tax. I think the ideas that were discussed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere earlier definitely have merit. We need to do something to keep our seniors in their own homes.

