I thank the hon. sponsor of this bill for bringing it forward. Obviously, protecting our wildlife, whether they be in streams or in the forest, is absolutely essential. And I thank the minister of sustainable resources for the monitoring that his ministry does.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question

Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise this afternoon to move third reading of Bill 12, the Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to speak in favour of Bill 12, brought forward by the Member for Livingstone-Macleod. The intent of the bill is to simplify the processes the board uses to resolve disputes and to implement more informal, flexible forms of dispute resolution. Amendments are included to allow the board to have a more efficient process to manage its workload. As the workload with the board has been going up, I think this bill will go a long way to addressing that concern, and I think the board will be able to speed up the hearing process.

This bill is intended to deal with administration procedures and effectively streamline them in order to more expeditiously resolve surface rights disputes. This is a very important bill as it relates to the compensation for landowners who have resource activity on their land. Any changes to it must be carefully considered and must achieve an optimal balance between the rights of landowners and the rights of operators.

I think this bill is a step in the right direction, and for those reasons I think I'm going to be supporting this bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional members to participate?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 12 read a third time]

Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to support Bill 13, the Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2009. Bill 13 will improve the judicial system and the court efficiency by providing justices of the peace with more flexibility and options. The Justice of the Peace Amendment Act will permit a sitting or presiding justice of the peace to serve past age 70 up to a maximum age of 75 or until his or her original 10-year appointment expires, whichever occurs first.

Currently the Justice of the Peace Amendment Act authorizes justices of the peace to be appointed for a 10-year term. The act also contains a provision for mandatory retirement at age 70. Bill 13 will change this and will ensure that experienced justices of the peace who want to and are capable of serving part-time or full-time in their capacity for their full 10-year term are not prevented from doing so because they've reached the age of 70. It will also ensure consistency with similar provisions pursuant to the Provincial Court Act, applicable to judges and the Court of Queen's Bench Act, applicable to masters in chambers.

The amendments in Bill 13 will improve the efficiency of Alberta courts and, most importantly, increase Alberta's access to justice.

It is now my pleasure on behalf of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General to move third reading of Bill 13, the Justice of the Peace Amendment Act.

Thank you.

3:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to speak in support of Bill 13, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow. Under the current act justices of the peace are appointed for a term of 10 years but cannot sit past age 70 even if their appointment hasn't expired. With this bill I think the proposed amendments would allow a justice of the peace to sit past age 70, up to a maximum age of 75 or until his or her appointment expires, whichever occurs first. The proposed amendments would be consistent with provisions of the Provincial Court Act applicable to judges and with provisions in the Court of Queen's Bench Act applicable to masters in chambers.

This bill will likely have an almost entirely positive effect on the administration of the courts. Similar amendments, as mentioned above, were used to overhaul the rules of appointment terms of masters in chambers last sitting. For those reasons, we support this effort to ensure the smooth operation of the courts and career security for Alberta's justices of the peace. This problem was, you know, known for some time, and I'm glad the government is moving to address this problem.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional participants?

Bill 14
Carbon Capture and Storage Funding Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, it's a pleasure for me to move third reading this afternoon of Bill 14, the Carbon Capture and Storage Funding Act.

As we have all come to understand, this $2 billion investment by the government, the province of Alberta on behalf of all of the people of Alberta and most certainly, I think, people of Canada, is a very clear signal of our commitment to the responsible development of Alberta's resources. Mr. Speaker, CCS, of course, is a technology that has been proven in places around the world, most particularly in Canada, and I would like to again reiterate that this is our support of the science of solutions.

Carbon dioxide is not just created by industry. We also know that our normal course of daily living generates a certain amount of CO₂ emissions and perhaps, in some circumstances, Mr. Speaker, the largest amount. They're not the sole responsibility, these CO₂ emissions, of industry alone. We believe that everyone must do their part to reduce emissions. This particular piece of legislation of the province of Alberta and our support for carbon capture and storage funding is done, I think, on behalf of Albertans to indicate, of course, that we realize that each Albertan needs to play a role. By this support, we are doing so.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I just want to share our support for this particular bill. We do realize that the government has to take the first step in terms of initiating exploration and improvement of carbon sequestration technology. I'm extremely pleased that the government has seen fit to support the University of Calgary's Institute for Sustainable Energy, Environment and Economy, which does a tremendous amount of the postsecondary research on carbon sequestration. As the hon. Minister of Energy noted, we have examples such as the Weyburn field in our neighbouring province of Saskatchewan, which sequesters CO₂ through a pipeline from North Dakota.

We know that the technology is one of the tools in terms of a cleaner atmosphere. We're going to be in a position where, hopefully, the Alberta government, our federal government, and the governments of the United States will be able to figure out what is best individually and collectively for us. There will be discussions in the future about carbon capture, and then comes the somewhat muddying of the waters, where it's not only carbon capture, but it's trade as well.

I want to put it on the record that I am hoping that the trading that is done is of an internal Alberta nature, in the same way that I'm hoping that bitumen upgrading will primarily be done in the province of Alberta so that we can get the best advantage from the risk that we are taking. I just want to put it on the Hansard record that we are supportive of the sustainable development of the oil sands – we see the advantages to Alberta for years to come – but we want there to be a very measured balance between the economy and the environment. The economy can be sort of a short-gain circumstance, but if it causes long-term pain in the form of reclamation or water pollution, then we have to re-evaluate the methodology we use for our exploration, and now we have to look at sequestration.

I mentioned sort of lining up with our national government and lining up with the States, but we also have a responsibility to line up with the world. Currently Alberta's cost per tonne is valued at $15, and the European average is $30. I know that the hon. Minister of Energy will be representing Alberta's interests. But in protecting Alberta's interests, we also have to work in a collegial, collaborative, global fashion to make sure that Alberta is not only a leader in terms of the technology associated with carbon sequestration but is working in concert with the rest of Canada, the United States, our neighbour and major trade partner, and also the world in general. We realize that we have to eventually move beyond our nonrenewable resource dependency on oil, in its various forms, and natural gas and that what happens now in terms of our planning and our preparation will be key to Alberta's success and sustainability.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is on the debate, not 29(2)(a), right?

The Speaker: This is on the debate.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you. I just want to, very briefly, Mr. Speaker, get back on the record, you know, comments that echo, I think, what I said at second reading stage. Carbon capture and storage is a good idea. It is the centrepiece of the government's attempt to avoid the consequence of carbon pricing on a national or international level. That in and of itself may or may not be a bad thing. I'm not sure that it is a bad thing.

However, I still have concerns about all of our eggs or far too many of our eggs being in this one carbon capture and storage basket in terms of how we're going to tackle climate change and carbon emissions in the province of Alberta. Whether we get the chance, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity is hoping, to do an internal cap and trade arrangement or whether we get caught up, advisably or otherwise, in a North America-wide cap and trade arrangement, I think that we are going to find ourselves dragged to a position where we have to have more tools in our box than just carbon capture and storage. There are other opportunities in terms of encouraging energy conservation, which I think is the single biggest one that we should be going hard on.

With that in mind, I would reiterate that while there is this commitment in principle to the original $2 billion that was going to be put towards the Green TRIP initiative, we are not at $5 million in the budget this year. We're not in practical terms acting on that commitment to nearly enough of an extent. I think that we need to work hard on the issues of public transportation, improved rapid transportation, energy conservation, some good strategies to retrofit – I gather the Member for Edmonton-Centre was laughing about something else.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Totally.

Mr. Taylor: Yes, she was. Because I was serious.

Ms Blakeman: Absolutely.

Mr. Taylor: You know, on some good strategies around retrofitting houses, especially, because there's a tremendous amount of energy wastage and contribution to the carbon footprint there, on conservation strategies across the board: I think that's where this government really should be focusing in addition to the carbon capture and storage. I believe that there's more that we can do to encourage the development of alternative energy forms as well. Even though I recognize that we're not going to replace oil and gas or anywhere near that in the short term with renewables, with alternative energy sources, we must be starting down that road and working on the technology now.

I firmly believe that we achieved a status before the economy went south on us as an oil and gas superpower in this province. I firmly believe that going forward we need to establish and reaffirm our status in Alberta for the rest of the world as an energy superpower. We need to be good at all forms of energy: at the technology, at the knowledge, at the ability to sell that technology and sell that knowledge around the world, at the ability to sell other forms of energy around the world as well. Energy is our lifeblood. It has been conventional energy up until now and, increasingly, nonconventional oil and nonconventional gas. We need to ensure as we go forward that we continue to have energy in some form or other, in many forms, as our lifeblood, and we need to be producing it in an environmentally responsible way. We need to be leaders. We need to be leaders at all times in all forms of energy and energy conservation.

I would simply urge that the government not stop here at carbon capture and storage as the one magic trick that they have for dealing with global warming. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Calgary-McCall, do you want to participate under Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Kang: No, I don't.

The Speaker: Any questions or comments?

Then the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall to participate in the debate.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Two billion dollars is a big investment. I don't think any jurisdiction in the world is putting that kind of money towards carbon capture and storage, and I think we could be the leaders in this. Environment and energy development go hand in hand, and we could be the leaders if we balanced the two.

I think the flip side right now is that the government is entirely relying on this technology to provide not as much as GHG reductions. They're just in the planning stages. I think much more needs to be done. We should spread it around to have the efficiency savings. Maybe we should commit to retrofit homes with new windows, new furnaces, public transit initiatives, and incentives for green energy development. I think we can only be the leaders if we do all that.

I think the world is looking at us. Like the Member for Calgary-Currie said, we are an energy superpower, and when the economies of the world come back – India and China, all those countries – they will be looking to us for energy, and I think we should be ready and prepared to cash in on that boom. If our environment suffers at the cost of energy development, I don't think that would be good, sensible long-term planning. We should be leaders in this technology, and we can sell this technology to every other country in the world.

I will give you the example of New Delhi. Things were really getting way out of hand because, you know, it was very, very polluted, and the government decided to do something about it. They banned all the diesel vehicles from certain areas of the city, and they banned all those small autorickshaws. Because the government had the will, they cleaned up the environment in no time in New Delhi. Before, it was very hard to breathe. People were using dust masks. They were using bandanas. They were covering their noses and mouths. You know, when one got home, the dust mask was all black outside. When you go out now, that problem is not there anymore. I think that with that kind of money going towards cleaning up the GHG, we should go further to be leaders in the world on saving the environment.

You know, I think those concerns should all be addressed. I think we could be a leader in the technology. We can sell that, and we can all benefit. Our coming generations will benefit from this. It's a very good step in the right direction.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Additional speakers? Should I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 14 read a third time]

Bill 16 Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move third reading and provide a brief summary of Bill 16, the Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009.

Section 25(3) of the Peace Officer Act ensures that only fully sworn police officers can call themselves constable or special constable. Auxiliary constables are not fully sworn police members. They have limited authority granted to them under the Peace Officer Act. The intent is to establish clear, distinct identities for sworn officers and auxiliary constables and keep the term "constable" exclusively for sworn officers. However, complying with section 25(3) would require police services with auxiliary programs to change their auxiliary constables' uniforms and insignia, creating extra costs for those services.

Mr. Speaker, this was never the intent of the Peace Officer Act, and these extra costs would be especially burdensome in these uncertain economic times. This proposed amendment would allow police services to ask the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security for an exception to this section of the act. They could then use similar but not identical uniforms and titles for both sworn and auxiliary constables, who attend scenes together. Passing this amendment will ensure that police services with auxiliary police programs do not have to use limited budget dollars to make changes to the uniforms and insignia. There are no costs to government related to this amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I move third reading of Bill 16, the Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In support of Bill 16, the Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009, yesterday I put on the record how pleased I was with the co-ordination between conservation officers, Sustainable Resource personnel, sheriffs, RCMP, and I need to include in that list the peace officers/special constables because what I am seeing, to my great delight, is a greater co-ordination of services. I had asked previous questions of the Solicitor General about how individuals could potentially transfer from force to force and what type of training would be required to do that transferring.

Under the auspices of Bill 16, if you'll permit, Mr. Speaker, I want to send out a large bouquet of congratulations and good wishes to Rick Gardner, who is based, I believe, out of Red Deer, and he is in charge of the sheriffs program for southern Alberta. Rick Gardner has got to be the greatest advocate for the sheriffs department possible. He spent a tremendous amount of time with me over the phone clarifying a ticket that a constituent of mine had received, and he has had a tremendous amount of previous policing experience with the Calgary police force, just an absolute great fellow doing a wonderful job. He assured me that while it appeared that the sheriffs' training in the first hand was somewhat limited, when that training is combined with on-the-job mentorship with RCMP officers and senior officers, that combination is a tremendous asset both on the highways and in the wilderness areas.

I am supportive of Bill 16 and its intent of clarification of special constables and their designation as peace officers. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional comments?
Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 16 read a third time]

The Speaker: Just a comment. Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, seek some advice with respect to a comment you made just a few minutes ago when you said that you called a police officer in this province to seek advice on behalf of a ticket that had been received by a constituent of yours. Get some advice with respect to that matter, please.

Bill 20 Civil Enforcement Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've listened over the course of the debate on Bill 20, the Civil Enforcement Amendment Act, 2009, to some of the input received during second reading and Committee of the Whole. I'm confident this legislation will further help Albertans to provide for themselves during their senior years.

A lot of people don't understand exactly how the Civil Enforcement Act works. The Civil Enforcement Act actually provides for relatively few exemptions if there is a judgment against someone. For example, if I had a second vehicle, say a blue van, at my place, that could easily be seized. The proposed amendments would change the law so that creditors don't have access to funds in a noninsurance RRSP, a deferred profit savings plan, known as a DPSP, or a registered retirement income fund, known as an RRIF. It would also exempt RDSPs from creditors, encouraging families of persons with disabilities to plan for the future needs of a disabled family member. Mr. Speaker, this bill also provides opportunities to increase the individual's independence, which is consistent with this government's goal of independence for all Albertans.

It's now my pleasure, therefore, to move third reading of Bill 20, the Civil Enforcement Amendment Act, 2009. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I hadn't, I'll admit quietly, been paying an incredible amount of attention to this bill, but I'm paying a lot more attention to things that have to do with RRSPs these days, so that kind of caught my attention. I started to go through the bill, and indeed I have learned a few things recently.

Therefore, I and my colleagues have been supportive of this bill as it's moved through the various stages and will continue to be supportive of it in third reading. It does help us harmonize with the rest of Canada. I think this is one of the suggestions that has flowed from the Uniform Law Commission. They've recommended a redefinition of the scope of garnishment and moving away from the sort of old definitions and concepts of debts and accruing due and substitutions. I mean, you get into a lot of legal-beagle language here, but essentially it's recommending that a debtor's property, subject to specific and principled exceptions, be left alone.

What we need here, what I need here desperately – this provides creditor protection of retirement savings to noninsurable registered retirement savings plans. My understanding is that the federal legislation, the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, excludes certain classes and types of property that could be claimed by a trustee through a litigation process. So under the auspices of the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act those properties that are exempt under provincial statutes are taken by the federal statute.

Prior to this the only forms of retirement savings plan that were generally exempted from execution by creditors under Alberta law were pension plans or insurable RRSPs. The life-insured forms of RRSP insurance products that were previously exempt in that they're essentially life insurance contracts have been addressed through the Insurance Act.

We've got a Uniform Law Commission that's recommending this. When we look across the country, we're looking at Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and Newfoundland that have similar legislation. I think that as we as legislators look at the ability of government to provide for people in retirement years, we can clearly see a need for individuals to be having more of their own savings to be able to use for retirement. Fair is fair here. We need to try and enable that and encourage it as much as possible. So when you see legislation like this, you understand that it is signalling to people: please, you know, save your own money in RRSPs, and we'll do our best to make sure that that isn't swept away from you except under truly exceptional circumstances. That's what I'm seeing in this legislation, so I'm happy to support it today.

There are a number of other sort of administrative parts to this, but essentially it's creditor protection for the noninsurable kinds of registered retirement savings plans. So it sounds good to me.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Other participants?
Shall I call the vote?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 20 read a third time]

Bill 24 Animal Health Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today on behalf of the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright to move third reading of Bill 24, the Animal Health Amendment Act, 2009.

Provisions in Bill 24 will allow Alberta to better prepare for an outbreak of a highly contagious livestock disease and respond to emergency situations quicker and more effectively to protect both animal and human health.

There's been vigorous debate in second and Committee of the Whole, and I look forward to the support of members of this bill.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This is a major stretch, but because you had concerns with regard to me contacting a sheriff with regard to a ticket, I was not arguing the nature of the ticket. I was asking for clarification of the laws around the physical condition of a driver's licence. That information was provided, and I was appreciative of that information.

[Motion carried; Bill 24 read a third time]

4:20 Bill 26 Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to rise today to move third reading of Bill 26, the Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009.

The amendments contained within the bill address certain challenges in enforcing and administering the Wildlife Act. Since this bill was introduced on March 10, we've had good opportunity for constituents to contact us on the amendments. I heard their input, answered their questions, and I thank them for their input.

Bill 26 is important to everyone who cares about wildlife. The amendments also allow us to address some of the challenges associated with ensuring wildlife are secure.

I ask the Assembly to support Bill 26, the Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009.

Ms Blakeman: I'm remembering this one now. This is the bill about: if you have captive wildlife and they get away from you, this allows the Crown, I think, to charge back the costs of capturing them and euthanizing them. No. He's shaking his head.

An Hon. Member: That was pulled.

Ms Blakeman: That was pulled. I'm not reading all the amendments. Oh, dear. I'm so sorry.

We have been supportive of this act. I'm remembering my colleague talking about this. The purpose of the Wildlife Act was to strengthen the provisions relating to possession of and commerce in animals. Yes. I've got that right. Does that still include recovering costs from owners on Crown actions? No, that was the part that was pulled. Okay. [interjection] Say it again.

Mr. Hancock: Section 4 was deleted.

Ms Blakeman: Oh, yes. Okay. That's the section I was talking about. Okay. Good.

We're certainly supportive of enhancing powers of wildlife officers and enforcement provisions and giving the courts more authority to order compensation to property victims stemming from damages as a result of offences under this act. Yes, indeed. I'm tracking this one. Good.

I actually have no notes on any real concerns that we had raised. There are certainly more punitive measures that the court can impose, so we expect it should be more of a deterrent on activities such as poaching and illegal exporting of wildlife and wildlife parts. I mean, I think what we're interested in is that there's protection for the staff that we have out there and that they have the tools, both statutory and physical, that they need to do their jobs but also that we are doing everything we can to discourage poaching. I think there are always two parts to poaching: one is just sort of stripping off the prize parts that you want and leaving the carcass there, which is appalling on its own, but then also the sort of exporting of those parts. Anything that we can do to give our wildlife officers better tools on that and to be able to deter illegal hunting I am very keen on.

At this point on behalf of my colleague the Member for Calgary-Buffalo, who is our SRD critic, I am very happy to support third reading of Bill 26, the Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009.

[Motion carried; Bill 26 read a third time]

Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure for me to rise this afternoon and move third reading of Bill 28, the Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

Thank you.

Ms Blakeman: Loquacious in his explanations as always. Thank you to the Minister of Energy.

The Official Opposition had been supportive of this, particularly because we were seeking clarification around regulatory powers and orphaned facilities and wells. But this, essentially, is around facilitating bitumen royalties in kind. Surely, we do not refer to this by the acronym BRIK. I hope not.

Two impacts of the bill: one is changing impacts of the Oil and Gas Conservation Act with regard to the orphan well fund, and the second is facilitating the taking of bitumen royalties in kind, which then requires changes to a number of other acts, so we end up with an omnibus bill that actually then has to go forward and make adjustments in a number of other bills. So we're into a number of things like the Natural Gas Pricing Agreement Act and several others, according to a quick read-through that I've had of this bill.

My colleague the Member for Edmonton-Riverview and our critic on energy has been on the record a number of times talking about our support for the bitumen royalty in kind program and process. We think we should be passing legislation that facilitates that system coming into play.

I'm never happy about omnibus bills because it's always possible as you go through these things that you can make a mistake. It just gets more complex when they're an omnibus bill, and we no longer are allocated the additional time in debate to talk about them. But we did put a number of our concerns on the record and received some responses back.

The instruction that I have from my colleague is to be supportive of this bill in third reading. It's possible some of my other colleagues have some additional comments. If not, thank you very much for the opportunity to indicate our support for Bill 28 at this point.

The Speaker: Others to participate, or should I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 28 read a third time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. on Monday, June 1.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: Just my final reminder to members that at 12:15 in the rotunda on Monday there'll be a special little event with respect to aboriginal month in Alberta.

Have a great weekend. Get some rest.

[The Assembly adjourned at 4:28 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 2nd Session (2009)

Activity to May 28, 2009

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Welcome.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. As Canadians and as Albertans we give further thanks for the precious gifts of culture and heritage which we share. Amen.

Hon. members, in the Speaker's gallery is a young lady named Akina Shirt, and she will lead us today in the singing of our national anthem in Cree. It was several months ago that she sang the national anthem in Cree at a hockey game televised nationally, across this country. For many Canadians it was the first time that they heard their national anthem sung in Cree. Today this will go across the province of Alberta, and it may very well be the first time for many people in Alberta that they will hear their national anthem sung in Cree.

[O Canada was sung in Cree] [applause]

The Speaker: Thank you, Akina. All the best in your singing career as you go forward.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is such a privilege and an extra pleasure today to introduce some special guests, who are seated in your gallery, who are here to help celebrate Alberta's first-ever Aboriginal History and Culture Month, ushered in and prompted by the sponsorship of a motion by that name as brought in by our honourable and esteemed colleague from Lesser Slave Lake. Thank you, Honorary Chief, for doing that for us today.

Mr. Speaker, our guests include – I'll ask those that are here to rise, and if they're not here yet, they will be acknowledged later – from Treaty 8 the grand chief, Rose Laboucan; from the Métis Settlements General Council the president, Mr. Gerald Cunningham; from the Métis Nation of Alberta Association Mrs. Audrey Poitras and Vice-President Muriel Stanley Venne; and, on their way in, Regional Chief Wilton Littlechild from the Assembly of First Nations, Chief Allen Paul from the Alexander First Nation. I believe Vice Grand Chief Carolyn Buffalo from Treaty 6, as well, will be joining us. Please, hon. members, on this very special and historic first-ever Alberta Aboriginal History and Culture Month, welcome our guests with the enthusiasm they deserve.

Thank you.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce Akina Shirt. You've already introduced her. She's with her mother, Jean Cardinal. In February 2007, as you indicated, Akina sang the Canadian national anthem at a Calgary hockey game. She made history that day. She sang the anthem in Cree, as you indicated. This talented young woman was also asked to perform the anthem at a Government House francophone event. Of course, she wowed the attendees by singing in three languages: Cree, English, and French. She also graced us with her talent today as she sang for us just moments ago, and she also opened our celebration of aboriginal history and culture earlier this afternoon.

Aside from being immensely talented, Akina is also actively involved with the community. She has become a public speaker, delving into topics such as education, what it means to be a role model, the importance of having supportive parents, and, of course, the perseverance to develop a talent or a skill. Mr. Speaker, I'd ask that Akina stand and get the recognition that she so deserves because she has one heck of a beautiful voice.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's a great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all the members of the Assembly a very successful and talented young Albertan, Rosie Templeton of Coaldale. Rosie, a grade 11 student in Kate Andrews high school in Coaldale, was chosen from among 90 of the province's top 4-H members as the 2009 Premier's award winner, the most prestigious accolade in the 4-H program.

Rosie is currently a member of the Readymade 4-H Beef Club and the South Country Judging Club. During her seven years in 4-H Rosie has held many executive positions, including her present tenure as president and previously as secretary, historian, and club reporter. Her exceptional skills, Mr. Speaker, have earned her this great honour.

In addition to her duties as the Premier's award recipient Rosie will serve as youth ambassador, representing 4-H events throughout North America and promoting the opportunities 4-H offers. Rosie is starting off her year in fine style, visiting us today and meeting with the Premier a little later.

Mr. Speaker, Rosie is seated in your gallery with her parents, Carolyn and Byron, and her sisters, Roberta and Jocelyn. I ask that they now rise to receive a very warm welcome from the Assembly. Rosie, by the way, is the blond one.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports I wish to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of 53 students from Red Deer-North's Gateway Christian school accompanied by two teachers and their five chaperones: Mr. Jim Driedger, Mrs. Klaaske DeKoning, Mrs. Rolanda Huizenga, Mrs. Connie Kloss, Mrs. Colleen Dilallo, Mrs. Melanie Boorse, and Mrs. Christine Hopkins.

Mr. Speaker, I'm proud to see these exceptional students from Red Deer here today. As our future leaders in Red Deer they're up here learning about Alberta's legislative process. I believe they're seated in both the members' and the public galleries, and I would now ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our House.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House the Ogden House Senior Citizens Club and their kitchen band, the Railroad Rascals. Today the Railroad Rascals are celebrating their 25th anniversary at the Alberta Legislature Grounds, and we experienced a lively, energetic performance earlier this morning helping to launch Alberta's Seniors' Week.

Mr. Speaker, since they are 80-plus years young, I wish to read the names of the band here: Terri Gorieu, Gail Sanderson, Marg Heggart, Bob Heggart, Marianne Wilkat, Hazel Hudson, Dot Rennie, Roberta Labute, Omer Labute, Janet Faulkner, Millie McPhedran, Marion Headley, Betty Larkin, George Stagg, Bill Redding, Bev Craswell, Diane Dmytryshyn, Ed Cooper, Ivy Cooper. These are the majority of the members. But there's one member that I need to point out. She is now 106 years old. She could not take the bus up here with them, but she plays well with the band in Calgary. With that, I want to ask them to rise and receive recognition from our Assembly.

The Speaker: And you call them the rascals?

Mr. Cao: They call themselves the Railroad Rascals.

The Speaker: That's what they call themselves. That's better.
The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly four hard-working staff members from our Department of Health and Wellness. We have Daphnee-Lyne Carrie, who serves as a public affairs officer in the communications branch and is currently working on our pharmaceutical strategy. Morgan Heard is an interim communications assistant in the communications branch and a bachelor of communication student majoring in public relations at Mount Royal College in Calgary, we believe soon to be Mount Royal university. Zahra Upal is a bachelor of arts student majoring in sociology at the University of Alberta. Sameer Premji is a pharmacist completing his master's in business administration at the University of Alberta. They are seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask all four individuals to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise before the Assembly to introduce staff members from the international qualifications assessment service, or IQAS, branch. Today is their 15th anniversary. IQAS staff work with immigrants, employers, professional regulatory associations, and postsecondary institutions to provide information, resources, and assessment services. Since 1994 IQAS has issued over 37,000 assessment certificates and evaluated credentials from over 10,000 educational institutions from around the world. I'm proud to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly several staff members from the IQAS branch. They are Kathleen Morrow, Jeff Stull, Darlene Fisher, Grace Waszkiewicz, Sandra Zarate, Suzanne Smith, Colette Shannon, Haichen Sun, Nadiya Soroka, and Stefan Sokolowski. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. First, if I might, I see that Chief Buffalo has now joined us in the Speaker's gallery. She wasn't here when earlier introductions were made. Chief Carolyn Buffalo is the chief of the Montana band in my constituency. I'm very pleased that she could be with us today. She actually coaxed her daughter and a friend out of school to come and join us. They're in the members' gallery: Chloe

Buffalo-Jackson and Alysha Raine. They thought that they could get as much of an education here today as they might have had back at school. We're very pleased to have them with us. If they would please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

I have another introduction. I have a lot of pride in introducing you to 10 great young Albertans and their leaders. They along with hundreds of their friends form the Hobbema cadet corps. They have brought great credit to their families, their community, their province, and, indeed, their nation. Some 30 of them have just returned recently from a trip to Jamaica. There's going to be a group of Jamaican young people coming to visit them over the summer. They're here with their leaders – Captain Salty Lee, Captain Trent Young, and two RCMP officers, Sergeant Mark Linnell and Constable Richard Huculiak – who deserve a hatful of medals for the work that they've done volunteering with this group. If they would all please rise and receive the welcome of the Assembly as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature representatives from both the Insurance Bureau of Canada and Alberta's fire and emergency services. They are here today because they share the passion for strengthening Alberta's fire and emergency management systems. With us today – and I'll ask them to rise as I introduce them – are Fire Chief Brian McEvoy from Bonnyville Regional Fire Authority and immediate past president of the Alberta Fire Chiefs Association; Fire Chief Bob Galloway from the county of Leduc; Fire Chief Terry Senecal from St. Paul; Deputy Fire Chief John Lamb from the city of Edmonton; retired Fire Chief Randy Wolsey from the city of Edmonton; Randy Siemens, emergency service co-ordinator from Lamont county. Also joining us today from the Insurance Bureau of Canada are Mr. Don Forgeron, president and CEO, and Mr. Jim Rivait, vice-president, Alberta and north. Also joining us today in the public gallery are Brad Hoekstra, secretary of the Alberta Firefighters Association and the Canadian firefighters' association, and Greg Holubowich, president of Edmonton Firefighters Union. I'd ask them all to rise and accept the welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two very special people from the Calgary-Mackay constituency office. Seated in the members' gallery is Ms Krista Taldorf, my constituency assistant, who very capably manages my office in Calgary. She has a diploma in nonprofit management, and she herself is a very active volunteer in Calgary. Next to Krista is Mr. Tudor Dinca, a third-year policy studies student at Mount Royal College, a very enthusiastic, very polite young man who would never call me by my first name. He is spending his summer working as a STEP student in my office. Please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all the members of the Assembly Meghan Melnyk and her mother, Karen Melnyk. Meghan is my STEP student and works out of my constituency office. She offers excellent service to the constituents of Calgary-Fish Creek, and I'm very grateful for her help. I'll ask that Meghan and Karen rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you. Two guests have met with me today to talk about some of the insurance issues. Jim Rivait has been pleased to present, newly on the job, on a particular job, a person who is returning to Alberta for a visit but who actually spent time in his community of Vegreville, Don Forgeron. I'd ask them to please rise and get the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Aboriginal History and Culture Month

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today my heart soars like an eagle because my people's history and my people's culture were celebrated this afternoon here in the Legislature. Hundreds and hundreds of years ago and still today indigenous people of this country celebrated the beginning and all the month of June as a time to carry out their ceremonies such as tea dances, sun dances, naming ceremonies. In fact, the chicken dance was just completed this morning. What this does is send out the people, once they have thanked the Creator for life, and pray for the best for future generations.

My heart soars like an eagle today because after many, many years my people are being given the recognition they deserve. On behalf of all the elders, grand chiefs, chiefs, Métis presidents, Métis leaders, and aboriginal people in this province I have many thanks to give. First, to you, Mr. Speaker, for hosting this wonderful day, for making sure that it went off the way it should, thank you very much. Your staff are some of the best in this Legislature, and they did an exemplary job to make sure that it went off well. Thank you to them. To the Minister of Aboriginal Relations, for his support and always being there for the aboriginal community, we thank him. To my friend President Dr. Sam Shaw from NAIT and his staff and the culinary team who were so wonderful with the food they prepared for us downstairs. I know that we all enjoyed the wonderful taste of the aboriginal cuisine. To Akina Shirt for her beautiful rendition of O Canada in Cree. To the dancers, the musicians, to Dreamspeakers for their constant co-ordination, and to my colleagues, all of you here, for all your support as we pass the motion for June to be recognized as Aboriginal History and Culture Month. My heart soars for the people who were involved.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Laser Surgery in Calgary

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Events that played out this weekend in Calgary displayed the chaos and inconsistency that are plaguing Alberta's health system. One day Alberta Health Services will not accept funds from a donor; the next day they will. The impact that the uncertainty of this laser surgery has had on patients who are waiting and on professionals has not been positive. To the Premier: how can the Premier justify two laser suites in Edmonton while Calgary is forced through neglect to go hat in hand to private donors?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the board of Alberta Health Services made decisions based on evidence brought forward by medical professionals. Since then I believe there has been a corporate donor that has stepped forward that is willing not only to cover the cost of the laser machine but also the operating costs for the next year. This will give the board time to review many of the other difficult decisions that they have to make over the next 12 months.

Dr. Swann: Well, how can the Premier defend the absolute incompetence this situation has revealed in Calgary regarding keeping prostate surgery available in that city?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, the board has delegated the responsibility and the authority to make decisions based on the provision of health services across the province of Alberta. Again, the board listens to the input from the health professionals that bring forward their opinions on the best delivery, and they made the decisions based on that evidence.

Dr. Swann: Well, let's try the health minister, then. How does this minister defend this incompetence threatening the very program of laser surgery that would reduce complications and wait times: the quality of care in the city of Calgary?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've made no apologies for the fact that we have a situation that the Alberta Health Services Board is going through in terms of analyzing and assessing all of the different procedures and programs that were in place in the various regions in the province. Alberta Health Services is about to produce their budget to their health board in the very near future, and within that budget will be a number of funding requirements, and this may very well be one of them.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Bitumen Upgrading

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of all the many decisions we make in the province that affect our future, a local bitumen upgrading industry is just about as important as it gets. A recent article in the Financial Post by Wilf Gobert makes the point very clearly. "The upgrading of bitumen in Canada is possibly the greatest economic challenge for policy makers in our history." Local businesses, unions, and Albertans who are looking to make a decision on their future need clear information from this government. To the Premier: what are you going to do to ensure more upgrading happens in Alberta?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, a few days ago in the House, we're working through a very intense policy discussion. This is, of course, one that involves so many different things: of course, environment because of load on various airsheds if we add all of the upgrading at the same time. It also means transmission, ensuring that there's the pipeline capacity to move all of the finished product either to the United States or, quite frankly, even to the coast so that we can ship it to other markets. The other is that there are energy requirements, huge requirements for electrical energy into the Industrial Heartland. Those corridors have to be identified, and those transmission lines have to be built. So there's a lot of input into the overall decision. Do we want to add more value to bitumen? Yes, and that is the plan.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the Premier and the Energy minister talk a lot about bitumen royalty in kind as being the saviour here, but very little action has happened. Again to the Premier: when will we see a bitumen royalty in kind program? How long are we going to have to wait?

Mr. Stelmach: Very soon. I know that the Minister of Energy, the Minister of Environment, the Minister of Finance and Enterprise are all working together collectively on a policy that will answer all of the issues that come forward, to make sure that all of the various issues are considered and that all input comes to make a good policy decision, and that'll be done very, very shortly.

Dr. Swann: Well, again to the Premier: if the royalty in kind program does not do enough to bring bitumen back to Alberta, will the Premier force companies to upgrade here? Yes or no?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're adding, I think, to about 1.3 million barrels of production; about 700,000 barrels of bitumen are upgraded here. First of all, we have to of course produce more barrels of bitumen and move the upgrading in conjunction with the increase in the production. There have been a few projects just recently announced that will increase bitumen production, and now we're following up with a policy to ensure that more and more of the bitumen is upgraded here.

In terms of working with industry and working with, you know, the federal government, it is a complex issue, and we just want to do it right. We will do it without – I don't know what the hon. member refers to as forcing because I know that that was something the opposition didn't want to do before. We will work with all industry to make sure that we reach our goal.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Government Aircraft

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week I tabled documents regarding flights back to Calgary on government planes after the Premier's dinner here in Edmonton. These flights were signed off by the Executive Council, for which the minister responsible is the Premier. To the Premier: what was the news conference or event listed as the reason for the flight that left Edmonton at 10 p.m. on April 30 this year, the same night as the Premier's dinner?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, since the session started, every Monday, or Tuesday in the case of a holiday, the airplane picks MLAs up from Calgary and flies them to Edmonton. Every Thursday night, at the time that's most appropriate for the majority, it flies back to Calgary. On the night of the Premier's dinner in Edmonton it was decided that the plane would fly later. It costs not $1 more to leave at 9:20 or 5:20.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That was not the appropriate reason to delay the planes. Before, the planes left at 5:30. Clearly, there was a connection between the dinner and the planes back to Calgary.

To the Premier again: what were the meetings with government officials that had the other flight leaving at 10 p.m. the same night as the Premier's dinner?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, there were no flights leaving at 5:30.

The flights have all been dedicated from day one, if the hon. member wanted to go on the Internet and see the logs, to attending meetings with government officials. I guess that if they would like us to write a story about what some of these folks have to do all week, we could. The simple fact is that we use the government air services to ensure that the people that do the work here can get to and from Calgary or other parts of the constituency. The only Thursday that there were absolutely no government airplanes in the air was the night of the Premier's supper in Calgary, April 2, when no government planes were needed and, therefore, were not flying.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We just want to know what the news conferences or meetings going on with government officials at midnight, after the Premier's dinner, were.

To the Premier again: given that flight crews and ground crews are working until almost midnight deadheading back to Edmonton, what are the additional operating costs to flying to Calgary and back this late at night?

Mr. Snelgrove: You know, I guess it was just foresight, Mr. Speaker. When we bought the airplanes, we got headlights on them so they can fly at night. Thankfully, the air service crew that works for this government really goes out of their way to make sure that whether it's getting to a northern community, to Lethbridge, to Medicine Hat, anywhere in this province, they're there so that we can accommodate these trips. I would wonder what the hon. member would expect that the people that were flying back to their families at 10 o'clock on Thursday night were going to do. I would suggest that after a week up here listening to this, they wanted to go home for some sanity.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Government Accountability

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The list of this government's broken promises is growing fast. The Premier promised to create 600 long-term care beds, and he hasn't. He promised more bitumen would be upgraded in Alberta, and it's not. He promised to get more money for our oil and gas, but he's given away nearly half a billion dollars in royalties. My question is to the Premier. What value does the Premier think Albertans should place on this government's promises given that track record?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, he raised a number of topics in his preamble. With respect to royalties we did announce a royalty incentive program a few months ago. This is to assist the gas industry, that is seeing some unbelievably low prices. This is all about, of course, creating jobs, and it's not only creating jobs in the bigger centres of Edmonton and Calgary, but it's moving those jobs out into rural Alberta. It's not only the drilling activity; it's the tire shop that repairs the tires, the restaurants, the motels, jobs right across the province. I believe that the decision made by this government was the right one. Gas prices are still depressed, and with the unusually large finds in Louisiana and Texas, we're going to be suffering through some low prices for a while.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, while this government is giving out half a billion dollars in oil patch welfare, they're cutting health care, delisting services, and letting emergency wait times soar. The priorities of this Conservative government couldn't be more clear. To the Premier: why won't you admit that your priorities lie with your friends around the boardroom table and not with those waiting hour after hour in hospital emergency rooms?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, of course, another error in the preamble. The health budget has been increased by $550 million. It's not a cut; it's an increase of $550 million. We're one of the few jurisdictions to do that, especially during such difficult economic circumstances.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the Premier can say that, but we all know that they're cutting services. Wait times are getting longer. They've cut out gender reassignment surgery. They've cut out chiropractic care. There's, you know, a real drop in the level of service. How can he justify cutting the services in health care that Albertans receive when he's giving the oil patch a half billion dollar royalty break?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, one thing the hon. member doesn't realize: those people that are out working, that actually have a job, pay taxes. They pay taxes to the provincial government, which supports a lot of the programs we hold dear, which are health and education and social services and infrastructure. People working pay more tax. That is a very simple equation, and that is what we're promoting in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Fire Safety in Seniors' Facilities

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Shortly after 3 a.m. on Sunday approximately 160 seniors were evacuated from a private assisted living facility, Lifestyle Options, in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford. Fortunately, no one was seriously injured, and all residents have been temporarily relocated. As you can imagine, my constituents are very concerned about fire safety in similar living settings. My questions are for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. As the minister responsible for fire safety in this province how can he assure my constituents that similar buildings are safe?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I do want to say that the seniors' residences are very safe. Seniors' residences are built to code, and they must have emergency plans. It is unfortunate what happened this past weekend, but I will say that the emergency plans and the codes did work. I would very much like to commend the firefighters, some of them that are here today and the firefighters that continually protect our communities, and the staff and all of the community for all of the efforts that they do in supporting these individuals.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister. I look forward to echoing that appreciation later in a member's statement.

As the minister has mentioned, he has introduced changes to building codes in the recent past. My constituents would like to know whether the new or amended fire safety codes could have prevented this fire.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can't tell you at this particular time if the new codes could have prevented this fire because we haven't yet determined the cause of the fire, but I do want to say what the new codes do. The new codes were designed to buy time for people to get out of their homes and for firefighters to respond. In this particular case it did work.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A final question to the minister. Lifestyle Options is a multilevel assisted living facility, and there are many of them throughout the city. My constituents would very much like to know whether there are different codes that provide special protection for apartment living facilities.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, Alberta has some of the strongest building codes in the country. Yes, there are different types of codes for different buildings. The larger and taller the building is, the greater the safety requirements because of the increased risk to lives and property. The use of the building will also determine the requirements. Again, we have very strong building codes for all buildings, whether they be single- or multifamily. The safety of Albertans is this government's top priority.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Affordable Housing

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since the minister's claim that the changes to the homeless eviction and prevention fund and the elimination of all new rent top-up supplements was just an administrative change, the awful truth has become clear: a lot fewer people qualify now for housing assistance, and there's a lot less money for the few who do. The minister knows it costs $600 a month to provide someone with a rent top-up and $1,200 a month to keep them homeless in a shelter. To the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs: why, then, given the math, won't the minister recognize that her efforts to stop the bleeding in her own budget are effectively negating the progress towards ending homelessness in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let's be clear. This actually is a very good program change we've made with EI and this ministry for individuals who do require rent supplement. Yes, there are waiting lists for rent supplements. There always have been; there will continue to be. But we are working very hard as a ministry through our affordable housing program and through our homeless program for capital dollars that we've had, which we've talked about in this Assembly. There is over $800 million over the next three years for housing of this type, and that will provide units for people so that they are no longer on the rent supplement program.

Mr. Taylor: By that time the people who are on the waiting list now might actually be at the top of it.

If the minister still contends – and it sounds as though she does – that all the help they need is there for all the people who need it, then why is virtually every social agency reporting that their clients cannot access the housing help they need?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, actually, Mr. Speaker, if the member is referring to people that are in need that require a first month's rent, that require help with arrears or require help with eviction, then that's with the Minister of EI, and I'll ask that he respond.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the major obstacle for many people to get their own apartment is coming up with the damage deposit, why is the amount available for the damage deposit now limited to $350? Where is that enough to get an apartment?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to respond. Albertans, whether they've received a notice of eviction or they need an emergency damage deposit, can apply to our ministry for income support. We determine the criteria. We look at the assets and the income and expenses of that particular individual. They do talk about $350, but that is for singles or those without children. Others and families with children can qualify for up to a thousand dollars.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the Leader of the Official Opposition.

2:10 Milk and Liquid Cream Container Recycling

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a mother I can empathize with families who contact me with their concerns about the addition of milk containers to the deposit system. This change may have an adverse effect on many families, seniors, and others living on a fixed income. My question is for the Minister of Environment. Doesn't this change cause undue hardship for families with young children?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, clearly, this is a program, with respect to the myriad of other beverages that are available to consumers in Alberta, that has worked extremely well in the past. In the consultations that we engaged in with Albertans leading up to this change, there was a very clear message that the vast majority of Albertans wanted us to proceed with milk containers in the same way that we do with soft-drink containers. I'd remind the member that it is a refundable deposit, and if the containers end up at the bottle depot, they'll get their money back.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary is to the same minister. Many communities already have an effective voluntary recycling program in place. In fact, Calgary just introduced curbside recycling this spring. So why make this change now?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we have a voluntary system in place right now, and it does reasonably well with respect to the plastic jugs that milk is sold in, about a 60 per cent return rate, but a deplorable 22 per cent return rate for paper milk containers. Clearly, that's not good enough. The kind of results that we're looking for is 85 per cent across the board, and we believe that with the refundable deposits in place we'll be able to achieve that return rate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary is to the same minister. The province announced it would introduce this deposit on new jugs last fall, and I know many families who have saved up their milk jugs. Will Albertans receive a refund on containers purchased before June 1 if they take them to a bottle depot?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, we made it very clear at the time that we made this announcement that there would not be refunds paid on containers that had not had deposits paid. So the short answer is no. They will not be able to get a refund for containers that they've saved. The containers will be clearly marked: Alberta deposit. They'll have red expiry date stamps rather than black, so it'll be very clear which ones are refundable. However, the bottle depots, to their credit, have agreed that they will accept all milk containers. They will, however, only pay you for the ones with red.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Nursing Shortage

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now that summer is here, there is a fresh group of nursing graduates available to Alberta Health and Alberta Health Services. There are nearly a thousand graduates who would most likely love to stay and work here in the province. The problem is, however, that there is in effect a hiring freeze. To the minister: will the minister tell Albertans how many positions are available to new nursing graduates?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Official Opposition is not quite correct. There is not a hiring freeze. What there is is a determination by the Alberta Health Services Board as to the right numbers. The various facilities are not permitted at this time to simply go out and hire nurses whenever they feel like they should, so it is going to be for the first time in quite some time a more orderly process in how we fill some of these positions.

Dr. Swann: Well, the fact is that Alberta Health Services' website states that there are only 30 positions needed in Alberta. I think the minister needs to explain. A month ago there was a shortage of 1,400 nurses in the province; now, according to the website, only 30. How does the minister explain this math?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I would say that the Alberta Health Services Board is doing exactly what the opposition leader suggested on several occasions in this House. They are working smarter, Mr. Speaker. If he'd take the opportunity to meet with the college of registered nurses, they would probably tell him exactly what they're telling me, and that is that 27 per cent of a nurse's day is spent doing nonnurse work. So we'd better ensure that within our health system we have the right people doing the right thing.

The other thing, Mr. Speaker, that is clear is that projections of a year ago of the number of nurses retiring have certainly changed in the last year due to economic circumstances. So there are a whole bunch of factors involved. Surely the Leader of the Opposition wouldn't be asking us to go out and hire nurses that we don't need and then lay them off in the next few months.

Dr. Swann: Well, we have in fact heard from such groups as the association, and they are pretty upset. This minister needs to explain why he's prepared to compromise quality of care for the bottom line. With the massive expenses that have gone into increasing enrolment and looking around the world for these health professionals, how is it the minister can say that less staff are needed now?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, nobody has said that less staff are needed. What we have said is that we need to ensure that those who are trained are doing what they're trained to do. The college of registered nurses: yeah, I'd challenge them. Phone them up. Have a meeting with them. See if they tell him the same thing they told me: 27 per cent of what a nurse does on a daily basis is nonnurse work. If he wants us to be paying registered nurses' salaries to be changing bedpans, then have him stand up and say so.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Energy stated last week that the Alberta Utilities Commission is responsible for setting compensation rates for transmission lines. Many landowners tell me these rates have been significantly lower and basically not in the market. What can this government do so the AUC gets the message that their rates are totally out of sync with reality and adjusts them accordingly?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just for clarification, the AUC is not responsible for setting the compensation rates, but they are responsible to approve the rates. The opportunities for transmission facility operators and landowners to get together and negotiate what they feel is a fair compensation is available to every landowner or person affected by these pieces of infrastructure. Of course, if they cannot reach an agreement, there's an opportunity at the Surface Rights Board for them to seek appeal.

Mr. Marz: To the same minister: what other avenues are available to landowners to get fair compensation from the AUC compared to other types of installations?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, I think what needs to be understood here is that there is nothing that has been taken away from landowners with respect to their ability to negotiate with the transmission facility operator, the same way that they may negotiate with other enterprises that may want to come and do something that affects their rights and surface rights on the land that they own. Again, I must emphasize that every landowner has the ability to negotiate what he thinks is a fair settlement, and if they are not able to do that, there are avenues of appeal.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My third question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. This Assembly passed a motion last fall to review surface rights compensation rates. Given that such a review may give some direction to entities such as the Surface Rights Board as well as AUC, has any consideration been given to this motion at this time?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, that was Motion 512. I want to assure the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills that we've not forgotten that motion but that in discussion with stakeholders it was agreed that there are a number of procedural issues dealing with the Surface Rights Board that should be addressed first.

That's basically what we've done. My parliamentary assistant, the Member for Livingstone-Macleod, introduced legislation in this session, Bill 12, that addresses those issues. Those amendments will streamline procedures and save time and money for all parties involved.

We've also introduced alternative dispute resolution and mediation, that, again, is in the interest of all parties involved, and of course we introduced the Alberta Land Stewardship Act, implementing the land-use framework. I can assure the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills that one of the next steps will be to review the issue of landowner compensation. I'm looking forward to that, just as he is.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm sure that my questions today are somewhat predictable. With more and more seniors being reassessed from long-term care to only needing supportive or designated assisted living, more seniors who have mobility and cognitive issues will be housed in DAL and AL facilities. To the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports: will the minister answer to whether the Lifestyle Options of Whitemud retirement community had a fire safety plan in place that was in accordance with the present Alberta fire code?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would really like to express my concern for the seniors who lost their homes this weekend. I'm very happy to hear that the injuries were very minor and that we had no loss of life. I'd like to also express my appreciation for the emergency response teams that did such a good job of containing the fire.

Mr. Speaker, in the continuing care system we have three streams. The first stream is home living, or independent living; the second stream is supportive living; and the third stream is long-term care. Both of these streams were in the independent living stream.

Ms Pastoor: Okay. If neighbours who happened to have been awakened at 3 o'clock in the morning needed to be volunteers so that the residents could be safely evacuated, does the minister consider these plans to be sufficient for resident safety? If it isn't your portfolio, perhaps the minister whose portfolio it is would answer.

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, I will say that there are plans, whether they be evacuation plans or emergency plans, on all residential facilities. When the question was asked: is there a plan? Yes, there is a plan. Is there supposed to be a plan? Yes, there's supposed to be a plan. Do we have different codes that apply to facilities that have different types of individuals that live in those facilities? Yes, there are.

Thank you.

Ms Pastoor: Perhaps I will direct my question to the same minister and perhaps ask him to elaborate a bit more on that. I wanted to know: during the provincial review on the fire codes were these continuing care facilities reviewed as separate entities, and are there actually evacuation standards that go with those fire codes for these particular facilities?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, the review that we did on safety codes had a lot to do with residential, multiresidential, multidwelling buildings. The codes that were changed had a lot to do with single-dwelling residences and bringing some of those codes to a standard that is already in place for multiresident buildings or for, let's say, seniors' residences.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Children's Services Reports

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. When a foster child died last year, the minister of children's services refused to share details of a special case review, but after a child in care was traumatically injured this year, she promised to make that review public. However, when I asked the minister for an update during budget estimates, she didn't have one. Today I am asking: when will the minister quit stalling, cut the red tape, and make the special case review public?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The member is right that we did commit to making our special case review public. At this point, like I said a couple weeks ago, I'm not sure when that day will be that we can release that information, but I will as soon as I can.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, last year the ministry of children's services also agreed to review the role of the child advocate. When I asked her about that a few weeks ago, she admitted to having the report but refused to release it until her communications staff could put her spin on it. My question to the minister is: why won't the minister release her report about the children's advocate before the end of this session instead of waiting for the cover of summer recess?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to just correct. What I did say is that I had received the report – it's a very well done report; it was written by experts both internally and externally as well as it involves some youth in care – and that I was working on a government response. I do expect both to be coming forward shortly.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, these reports have been coming shortly for months and months and months now.

Case reviews of injured foster children in overcrowded foster homes are crucial to protecting the safety of children in need. The minister's strategy to delay, delay, delay is the wrong choice when children in care are at risk. These children need help now, and the minister is ignoring the problem. When will the minister stop delaying and commit to a date for making the special case review and the report on the role of the children's advocate public?

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would just like to point out that, first of all, we're not sitting on anything. Just a reminder that the commitment to go through with a review of the advocacy system and compare with other systems across the country, that decision was only made at the end of November and the work started in December and January. So I would suggest that, actually, they did work rather quickly, and we will have a government response rather quickly. The first report she's talking about was just committed to a couple of months ago.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Air Quality Monitoring

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, our province benefits from important industrial growth and development. Albertans expect that our environment will not be unnecessarily sacrificed. An important part of this is the quality of the air that we breathe. My questions are all for the Minister of the Environment. With industrial development and also natural events, such as the recent grass fires near Edmonton, what's the government doing to monitor air quality?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I can assure the member and all members that we are in fact monitoring air quality in this province 24/7, 365 days a year. Now, the Alberta air quality index monitors for five pollutants, and that includes ozone, nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide, carbon monoxide, and particulate matter, PM_{2.5}. That's tiny, tiny particles that are in the air that are so small that they could be ingested into the lungs. Those are the ones that cause the most harm. Can we do better? Of course we can, and we're working with the Clean Air Strategic Alliance to develop a new policy.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've heard in this House that Alberta uses a different measure for air quality than the federal government and other jurisdictions. Can the minister explain: why isn't Alberta using the federal index?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're very confident that Alberta's air quality index is the right index system for this province. Our index is much more sensitive to short-term events. It's based on near real-time hourly pollutant concentrations. The federal index is based on three-hour averages and concentrations and only covers three pollutants as opposed to the five that we have in the Alberta index. The federal only has the particulate matter, the ozone, and the nitrogen dioxide.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister mentioned the development of a new provincial clean air strategy. When can Albertans expect to see this strategy and provide input?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, CASA has had this matter under discussion for some time, and I'm expecting to receive the recommendations from them later on this summer. We'll take those recommendations as the basis to develop a new strategy. I expect that we'll begin some public consultations in early 2010.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Electricity Transmission System Upgrades

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. Albertans face a staggering increase in their electricity bills because of this government's policies. It was a decision by former Minister of Energy Murray Smith to override the EUB and transfer 100 per cent of the cost of upgrades to the electrical grid from industry to the consumer. That cost is now expected to be a staggering $10 billion to $14 billion. To the Minister of Energy: will this minister reverse Murray Smith's arbitrary move to burden consumers with the entire cost of the transmission system and go back to the recommendation of the EUB?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, as has been the custom, the issue that we're speaking about here has been simplified beyond all reason. There has never been a point in time in the province of Alberta where consumers did not pay the bill. Whether you charge it on the generating side, charge it intermediately, charge it in the transmission system, charge it on the regulated part of distribution, consumers – consumers – in the province of Alberta have always paid for electrical generation and the means to distribute it to where consumers require it.

Dr. Taft: Yeah, well, we could debate that and bring the EUB into it if he wanted.

Secrecy is the order of the day with this government. Credible industry reports peg the cost of upgrading Alberta's electricity grid at $14 billion. To the Minister of Energy: Albertans need to know just how much they're going to be fleeced because of this government's bad decisions, so what are the full costs of the transmission upgrade?

Mr. Knight: Again, Mr. Speaker, there's an hon. member here that's talking about something that happened I don't know when ago, but the EUB doesn't exist anymore. It's just not here, so it's not relevant, whatever that is.

What we're talking about are the short-term upgrades to the transmission, critical infrastructure in the province of Alberta. The bill as we see it today, the estimates that have been made by AESO and others in the energy industry, is about $8.1 billion.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Albertans used to have far cheaper electricity than the U.S., but the more integrated we've become with the American market, the higher our power prices get. We're ending up having to outbid California for our own electricity. Can the minister guarantee that Alberta's electric system and this grid upgrade are not being done to rearrange the system to export power to the U.S.?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, simplifying a system that's very complicated – and I understand the reasons why some individuals here may want to ask simple questions; perhaps that's all they understand. But I can tell you that for consumption and generation infrastructure the size that we have in the province of Alberta, we are the least integrated and interconnected with any of our jurisdictions around us. It's absolutely critical. Anybody that's in the business would suggest to you that we need to increase our intertie in order to bring power into Alberta as well as move power out of Alberta at times when it's beneficial.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Passport Requirements

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A new American law came into effect today, the western hemisphere travel initiative, which requires all travellers crossing our borders, both U.S. and Canadian citizens, to possess a valid passport or other approved document. My first question is to the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. With our busiest tourist season rapidly approaching, won't this initiative put a huge dent in our multibillion dollar tourist industry, and if so, what does your ministry plan to do to counteract this?

The Speaker: It's speculative, but go along.

Mrs. Ady: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, U.S. visitors don't need these additional documents to enter Canada, but to get back home, they are going to need these documents starting today. The industry has been anticipating this for some time, and Travel Alberta has been working with the Canadian Tourism Commission to get information out to U.S. visitors and encourage them to get this documentation. Travel Alberta has also got a website that was set up that referred U.S. visitors to the U.S. passport website when they were considering trips to Alberta.

Mr. Rodney: My only supplemental question is to the same minister. With all that is going on in today's global economy, I can't imagine the timing for this could be much worse. Could the minister tell us what the Alberta tourism industry itself is doing to deal with this?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, most of the U.S. visitors that arrive in Alberta, fortunately, I suppose, for us, arrive by air, not by land. For the last year they've already had to have passports, so they've been prepared. Our most recent statistics show that we have had small increases in U.S. visitors over the last year whereas other parts of the country have seen a decline.

Mr. Speaker, if it is a hassle for us to get passports to go on holidays, I'd like to suggest that all Albertans stay in the province this year. We've got some great values. You could go to the Travel Alberta site and get one of those traveller cards that give you all the discounts. So stay in the province. It's not a hassle.

The Speaker: The hon. member? Fine.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Livingstone-MacLeod.

Investments in Tobacco Companies

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday was World No Tobacco Day. While this government has taken steps to reduce tobacco use in Alberta, it also has a history of investing in the tobacco industry. So we have a situation where there is legislation to reduce tobacco use, a bill to allow the government to recoup health care costs from the tobacco industry, yet as far as we know, this government still invests in tobacco companies. That's kind of hypocritical, I think, investing in an industry on one hand and then suing it on the other. It shows the government's continued wavering on the issue. To the minister of finance: does the government still invest in tobacco companies, and if so, can the minister tell me how much?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, certainly in the conglomeration of vehicles in which Alberta Investment Management Corporation invests to manage the government funds, there may still be some dollars in tobacco. However, in the area of the cancer legacy fund there's a directive not to have any investment relative to the $500 million that was originally set aside to generate dollars for that. This question has been asked in the House a number of times. Quantifying exactly how much may be a part of any investment configuration would be difficult to do. I can determine with the chair of the Alberta Investment Management Corporation whether or not we can ascertain that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister for that. I would appreciate if she would do that, and I wonder if she would consider extending the directive that the cancer legacy fund operates under to other investment vehicles and instruments that we have in our provincial portfolio. As Norway publicizes decisions made through its ethical investment strategy, would the minister follow suit and make public specific ethical investment decisions made by AIMCo at the time or after the time that they are made?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Evans: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, there may be some of the investments in companies that have interests in tobacco-related industries that have been long-term investments locked in for a period of time. I will however undertake to answer that question. I would indicate that I met with the ethics committee in Norway relative to their investment management influences. They interview a number of companies. They provide advice before work is done. Although we haven't implemented that type of ethical investment management committee, it is something that perhaps in the future we could look at. We haven't closed the door to that, but we haven't implemented anything as yet.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If I may, one more supplemental question to the Minister of Health and Wellness this time. Could the minister tell the House what the estimated cost of tobacco use, direct and indirect, to the health care system in Alberta is?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, we don't have in front of us an exact number, but I can assure the member that we're somewhere in the billions. I guess it depends on how narrowly defined you might want to go.

I will say this, though. Our Tobacco Reduction Act, which was proclaimed in I guess it was January 1, 2008, is one of the strongest pieces of legislation in this area in Canada. We proclaimed it in 2008 because, unfortunately, some of the statistics in 2007 weren't very good. As an example, the number of youth between 15 and 19 that smoked increased from 15 per cent in 2006 to 20 per cent in 2007. So we have to continue to do things to ensure that we deal with this issue, especially at a young age.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Municipal Sustainability Initiative

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The municipal sustainability initiative has provided support to keep projects in Alberta's communities and is a very successful program. I understand that recently changes have been made to the program. My question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. What changes have been made to the municipal sustainability initiative?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The government has implemented some changes to ensure that MSI continues to meet Albertans' needs. Municipalities have more flexibility to accelerate projects. They can use up to 75 per cent of their projected funding. Interest costs are now eligible costs to help accelerate projects. We are ensuring that the funds are used for projects with a strategic value. Projects must be at least 10 per cent of the community's funding, except for not-for-profits and liabilities. These changes will increase the effectiveness of MSI.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. My second question is to the same minister. My municipalities in Livingstone-Macleod are asking us why these changes were made.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first let me say that the program has had great success. We are continuing to evaluate MSI and the program. These changes improve the program's accountability to Albertans and ensure long-term planning. We are committed to maintaining the tremendous success of this valuable program.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. My third and final question for the same minister: can the minister please provide details on how these changes benefit Albertans?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, we made these changes to ensure that MSI projects continue to build stronger communities. These changes encourage the best use of infrastructure dollars. They let municipalities take advantage of low construction costs to accelerate projects. This will also create new jobs and stimulate Alberta's economy. MSI has a positive impact on our communities and will continue to have. The MSI initiative is an initiative that is very important to Albertans.

The Speaker: That was 94 questions and responses today. In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine.

Fire in Edmonton-Rutherford Assisted Living Facility

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, the fire that occurred in my constituency yesterday was not the only fire that occurred over the weekend affecting a seniors' residential facility. Soderberg House in High River was the site of a major fire in which 22 of 87 residents were affected. Again, very fortunately only five were injured in a minor way and were subsequently transported to hospital. In my own constituency, as we mentioned earlier, a fire at Lifestyle Options, a private assisted living facility, resulted in the evacuation of all 154 residents, two of whom were taken to hospital, again with non life-threatening injuries.

I had the opportunity yesterday to be both on the site of the fire in my constituency and, as well, on the site where the residents were moved at approximately 5 a.m. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, and would like to report to the House that the plans that are in place to support people so unfortunately affected worked very, very well. Staff of the Edmonton fire department, EMS of the city of Edmonton, the Edmonton Police Service, the Canadian Red Cross Society, the community care access team of Alberta Health Services, and the Alberta Emergency Management Agency all worked very well together in close co-operation to ensure the quick transfer of residents. In the case of those who were receiving designated assisted living or other types of health support, alternate placements were made within a matter of two to three hours to provide for the needs of these residents in other locations around the city.

As well, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to extend the appreciation of my constituency to the neighbours around the Lifestyle Options facility, the staff of that facility, and neighbouring residences in Edmonton that came to assist residents in the difficult time that they faced.

On behalf of the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development and myself, thank you to all of these stakeholders who helped.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Environment Week

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Environment Week is an annual tradition in Alberta during the first week of June, and it coincides with the United Nations' World Environment Day on June 5. This year Alberta is celebrating its 20th Environment Week. This milestone presents an excellent opportunity to reflect on our personal actions and reaffirm our commitment to take action for a healthier environment every week and every day because everyday actions do make a difference.

For example, Mr. Speaker, last year during Environment Week the government launched the one simple act campaign. Since that launch Albertans have pledged to take action, and collectively those simple actions have potentially saved as much carbon dioxide as almost 400 trips by car across Canada, over 260,000 bathtubs of water, and over a quarter of a million kilograms of waste.

Communities are also promoting healthy environmental behaviour, and many are hosting special events in celebration of Environment Week. At green stops throughout the province Albertans will be celebrating the environment through nature walks, community cleanups, waste awareness activities, green fairs, photography contests to name just a few. These activities not only encourage environmental action; they educate Albertans about why this action is necessary.

I encourage everyone to visit the Alberta Environment website and click on the Environment Week icon to find out about the activities in their home communities. It is my hope, Mr. Speaker, that the changes in behaviour we explore during Environment Week will continue to grow throughout the year. As we all know, one simple act can collectively make a tremendous difference.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Neil Kennedy

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On April 23 I had the pleasure of attending the annual general meeting of the Bissell

Centre. The Bissell Centre cares for many people. The centre could not do this without its many partnerships with community agencies and its big volunteer base; 1,823 people volunteered nearly 14,662 hours of service in 2008 alone. This support through volunteerism assists the agency to provide many essential supports to many people. Every person is always welcome at the agency.

Neil Kennedy is one volunteer among many who make certain everyone feels welcome at the Bissell Centre. Neil Kennedy, a long-time community member and volunteer at the centre, was the recipient of the 2008 individual human rights award from the human rights city Edmonton project for his volunteer work over the past 10 years.

Described as a community leader, Neil goes out of his way to make things better for people around him. He has volunteered with the Bissell Centre for 10 years in a number of programs as well as spoken out on behalf of the Bissell Centre at functions and events. Neil is well known within the inner city as a man who is respected for his hard work and ability to bring people together. His work has been an inspiration to many and embodies all the great qualities of an outstanding volunteer. He is one of many outstanding volunteers that make the Bissell Centre the place that it is today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

Seniors' Week

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to invite all Albertans to join me in celebrating Seniors' Week 2009, which runs from June 1 to 7. The theme of Seniors' Week 2009 is Seniors: A Strength of Alberta, which reflects the positive impact seniors have in strengthening our communities and our families.

I encourage all members of this Assembly and all Albertans to recognize the contributions seniors make across the province. There are many examples of how families, individuals, and organizations depend on our seniors. These include such things as grandchildren learning about their culture and history from their grandparents, new employees benefiting from having senior colleagues as mentors, and, of course, the countless hours that seniors spend with helping community groups and functions. You see this pretty well everywhere you go within the province.

This annual celebration of seniors is sponsored by the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta, which is currently chaired by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne. This morning the Seniors' Week kickoff event took place at the Calgary Zoo, where seniors and Albertans of all ages took in the festivities. The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports and the chair of the seniors' council as well as other dignitaries joined in the tribute to older Albertans.

To continue making this a special week, numerous events are being held by various organizations across the province to celebrate Seniors' Week. A complete list of events is on the Seniors and Community Supports website by following the Seniors' Week link. I hope all members have an opportunity to attend an event in their community. Your participation will show Alberta seniors how much you appreciate everything that they do for our communities and our families.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Ronald David Woodward

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the retirement of Mr. Ronald David Woodward, the president of Red Deer College. Ron Woodward is an exceptional individual that I have had the honour of working with from the time of his appointment in 1998.

A leader, a mentor, a connector, a builder are a few of the words that can best describe Ron Woodward. He is respected within central Alberta but is also well known all over this country for his work, commitment, and advocacy for the community college system and his strong belief in the value of learning and the important role that community colleges have within our society. He is learner focused and has a special talent for developing strong and complementary relationships between the colleges and groups within the community.

Mr. Woodward has nurtured effective partnerships with a number of different groups and people, but one that particularly stands out in my mind is his work with the chairman of the Red Deer College board of governors, Herb Der. Herb's term as chairman of the board is also coming to an end in the next few months. Together these two gentlemen have provided exemplary service to the college and the surrounding community. As a result of their complementary skills Red Deer College has matured and flourished.

Mr. Speaker, after 35 years of serving the college community system in different capacities, Mr. Woodward is going to retire. With all the contributions that Ron and his wife, Donna, have made to both the community college system and the community, I am thrilled that they are going to call Red Deer their home.

As such, I would like all members of this Assembly to join me in recognizing the accomplishments of Mr. Ron Woodward.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to present a petition which reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta believe that public education should be balanced, scientific and encourage critical thought, and petition the Legislative Assembly to amend Bill 44, Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009 by striking out section 9 to remove (a) the onus on school boards and teachers to enforce "parental choice" regarding teaching related to sexuality, sexual orientation and religion; and (b) the ability for school boards and teachers to be subjected to complaints before the human rights commission for discussing these matters in class.

The petition has 903 signatures.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure and honour to be able to introduce today to this House Bill 49, otherwise known as the Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2).

Mr. Speaker, this bill comes before us as a result of extensive work and collaboration between the government of Alberta, in particular our Minister of Municipal Affairs and the entire department, our firefighters and leaders in the firefighting industry, and also the Insurance Bureau of Canada. This bill will give firefighters the assurance that when they respond to alarms and when they go to save lives and property, they don't have to second-guess their decisions, they don't have to worry about litigating later, but they can focus on what it is that they're trained to do the best, and that is saving lives and property.

Mr. Speaker, we will engage in some more extensive debate in second reading, but I would ask all members of this Assembly right now to support the introduction of the bill in first reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 49 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 49 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today and request leave to introduce Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, the bill addresses a major challenge of how to add critical transmission infrastructure facilities to meet the needs of Albertans and the needs of our province's economy. This bill will enhance the approval process for projects. Under Bill 50 the government will approve the need for critical transmission infrastructure, and I underline "the need for," not the actual routing or siting or those issues. Specific siting remains an open, public, and transparent process under the regulatory authority of the Alberta Utilities Commission. That process is not affected by Bill 50.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 50 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the requisite number of copies of the program from the 2009 excellence in teaching awards dinner, that transpired this past weekend, celebrating 23 finalists from across Alberta. This event was in recognition of the tremendous contributions that teachers make to the education of our children and youth from across the province. A heartfelt thanks from both the hon. Minister of Education and myself.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table a petition signed by 820 Alberta parents, compiled over roughly a 72-hour period, which reads as follows. This petition urges the Government of Alberta to follow through with its proposal to enshrine in Alberta's Human Rights Legislation the right of parents to be notified when school curriculum or materials include the explicit teaching of religion, sexuality or sexual orientation, as well as the right of parents to opt their children out of participation in such curriculum or materials without academic penalty to the child.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to also table a document with the names of 800 residents collected over the last 72 hours. The document reads as follows:

We, the undersigned, urge the Government of Alberta to follow through with its proposal to enshrine in Alberta's Human Rights Legislation the right of parents to be notified when school curriculum or materials include the explicit teaching of religion, sexuality or sexual orientation, as well as the right of parents to opt their children out of participation in such curriculum or materials without academic penalty to the child.

I will therefore table five copies of these documents.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to be able to table a petition today on behalf of the Minister of Transportation regarding the issue of banning hand-held cellphones while driving. This petition was presented to the minister this morning at Crawford Plains school by a grade 6 class in my constituency of Edmonton-Ellerslie. The petition reads: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta respectfully support the proposal to ban the use of hand-held cell phones while driving." The petition has 449 signatures from Albertans, and I have the appropriate number of copies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have four sets of tablings today all relating to Bill 44 and all, I think, generated since 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The first is letters from three members of the GLBT community – Tamara Gorzalka, Tyler Gschaid, and Lawrence Porter – all asking for Bill 44 to be defeated and noting, they're telling me: Bill 44, not in our name. The government's proposed changes are unacceptable to them despite sexual orientation being in.

The second set of tablings is from parents, educators, and the general public, eight letters expressing their opposition to Bill 44 from Helen Sadowski, Kevin Elias, Scott Rowed, Norman Gall, Sue Huff, Tracey Braun, Michelle Houston, and Dave Cournoyer.

Then a series of letters from 84 junior high, high school, and postsecondary students in Alberta. They want to assert their right to learn in an open-minded, compassionate, and tolerant environment and protest the measures in Bill 44 that would limit that right. A number of these students have included personal stories of their reaction to Bill 44.

Finally, a really passionate letter from Linda Hunter, the minister of the Wild Rose United Church in Calgary, signed by 75 members of that congregation, expressing their views that Bill 44 opens the door to censorship of public classrooms. It precludes learning to respect the right of each to be at the table. They feel it's anti-intellectual and regressive and oppressive.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Members, I must advise that under Standing Order 7(7) the daily Routine has now concluded.

Orders of the Day

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, I'd like to call the committee to order.

Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: We are speaking to amendment A1. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I just wanted to stand again in this House and speak to this amendment really quickly. Whenever you're dealing with essentially putting restrictions of any kind on free speech, it's a sensitive topic. It's a topic that can stir a lot of emotions in people because, frankly, people are usually very passionate about their right to say what they want when they want. So when writing this legislation, pains were taken to make sure that the restrictions that we placed on free speech were ones that not only the majority of Albertans would find appropriate but were the least restrictive possible given the sensitivity to free speech.

The biggest underlying premise of the bill is that we said: look, if we're going to limit free speech, if we're going to limit third-party election advertising in any way, we're going to make sure that third parties are under no more restrictive rules than political parties. The reason we did that is because the feeling, the feeling that I have anyway, is that we need to have a level playing field. We need to make sure that we can't say to one group: okay, you can advertise, but you can't advertise in certain ways or in certain amounts, but we over here as political parties can do whatever the heck we want as long as we can raise the money.

That is why I do not support the amendment of the hon. member although the hon. member's intent is very good. His intent, of course, is that we shouldn't have these what in the United States are known as political action committees able to target certain ridings unfairly and target certain individuals that may be vulnerable. That's all well and good, and that's a laudable goal. The problem is that to do it in this way makes things uneven. Political parties can target any riding they want. They can put $2 million, $3 million, $4 million into one riding, attacking a specific candidate. So what's good for the goose is good for the gander. I think that it's important that if we're going to restrict free speech in any way, if we're going to curtail what political advertising is permitted, then everyone needs to be treated the same.

I wanted to address one other argument really quickly. There is federal legislation and B.C. legislation which does have a provision similar to what the hon. member is proposing here. The problem is that this legislation as a whole is completely different from those two pieces of legislation. It's an entirely different take on third-party election advertising. The reason it's different is because the federal legislation and the B.C. legislation cap. They put a cap on the amount of money a third party can advertise in an election. It's a hard cap. I believe it's about $150,000. That's the rule.

If you're going to have cap legislation like that, I guess it makes sense that you can go in and cap what is allowed in each individual constituency against a candidate. But that's not what this legislation does. We don't cap under this legislation third-party advertising; we cap contributions. We limit the amount of contributions that can be given by any one individual or corporation to a third party, but we do not cap what can be spent. If a third party can raise for their cause millions of dollars from hundreds of voters, then they can spend that. So there are fundamental differences between the legislation being proposed under Bill 205 and the federal legislation and the B.C. legislation. It is important to understand those distinctions.

Lastly, there is the issue of practicality. Under this amendment it would be very difficult logistically to be able to determine, given that media coverage doesn't stop at boundaries, doesn't stop at jurisdictions, et cetera, when $3,000 is spent in a certain riding or when it is not spent in a certain riding, given that a television broadcast, a commercial, can go over several different ridings.

With that in mind, Mr. Chair, I just wanted to say that I will not be supporting this amendment for those reasons although I do applaud the hon. member for his intent with the amendment. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill on the amendment.

Dr. Brown: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I listened very carefully to my colleague from Airdrie-Chestermere and certainly recognize the point of view which he has maintained. I don't agree with it, however, and I would like to extrapolate a little more. In the last discussion, last Monday, I had some difficulty with speaking. I'm still not a hundred per cent, but I'm going to try and expand, perhaps, a little bit on my reasoning for bringing this amendment.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere mentioned that the British Columbia legislation, which proposed something equivalent to what is being proposed in the amendment, has an overall cap. I want to make it clear that I'm not proposing any such cap, and I don't think that either he as the sponsor of the bill or I as the sponsor of the amendment has proposed any sort of spending cap in any way, shape, or form, nor have we dictated in any way how people can spend that sort of money that's being raised. The hon. member in his bill has proposed some restrictions on fundraising with respect to third parties for the purposes of political advertising and campaigning, and I'm fully supportive of his bill whether or not my amendment is approved by the House.

I do think that the amendment makes sense in view of a number of considerations, particularly those which involve the possibility of outside interference in elections. I think that if we look at what happens in the United States with these political action committees, very powerful organizations all the way from the National Rifle Association to the pharmaceutical industry, the coal organizations, and the steel organizations, they target individuals in quite a direct and very effective way in many cases, target individuals with smear campaigns, negative campaigning.

I want to say in a general sense that democracy is a fragile institution, and democracy is the most precious thing that we have. I had two parents that I'm proud to say served in the forces of this country during the last world war, and I had a grandfather who served overseas with the Canadian overseas regiment in the first war. What they fought for was democracy. Democracy can be taken from us in a lot of different ways, one of which is by some sort of totalitarian takeover of a government, and that's what the government fought against in the war.

It can also be taken away in more subtle ways. I'll give you an example. Right now in Russia, which was part of the former Soviet Union, the media is controlled by the government, and advertising for campaigns is controlled by the government. When the news media – radio, television, newspapers – are controlled and when there's a disproportionate coverage of one party or another, that can also lead to a decay of democracy.

There's a third way, which is perhaps even more subtle yet than just taking over the media and having a purported democracy, and that is where we allow a distortion of the balance in the political system to take place through the expenditures of money. Money, as some people say, is the mother's milk of politics. Well, I say that politics does need money to get the message out there, but there has to be some sort of a level playing field.

My honourable friend from Airdrie-Chestermere suggested that we want to put the third parties on the same ground as the candidates and the other political parties. Well, I disagree with that. I think that if people want to express their voice at the ballot box, if they want to influence it, there are ways to do that. One way is to run for office, whether it be in the five or six or seven different political parties that we have existing here in Alberta running in our elections or as an independent or some other voice. We have lots of avenues for people to enter the political process. But when we look at outside third parties' involvement in the political process and we allow them an unfettered amount, an unfettered scope to involve themselves in a campaign through advertising or electioneering of some sort and spending an unlimited amount of money against or for a particular candidate in a particular electoral district, we are on a slippery slope of going down that path to the loss of democracy in my humble estimation.

Let's look at what happens in the United States right now in the Congress. The House of Representatives is elected every two years, and I've been told by individuals who have worked in some of those offices that the congressmen spend over half of their time raising funds and lobbying for funds from political action committees. I think the influence of those committees is nefarious in many instances, and we need to restrict in some way the activities of those. Now, it hasn't happened here in Alberta, nor, as far as I'm aware, has it occurred in Canada yet. But all we have to do is look south of the border to see what the potential might be if we allow unfettered campaigning on behalf of certain political action committees in a particular riding and targeting with negative advertising, smear advertising, and all the rest of that type of campaigning and what that might do to our political system here in Alberta.

For those reasons, Mr. Chairman, I think that as part of this overhaul, which is a very good one, as I mentioned, we need to have some restrictions on third-party spending against given candidates in a given electoral district. With those comments, I'll take my seat at this moment.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It is my pleasure to speak in favour of the amendment to Bill 205, Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009. Bill 205 is a very good bill. I'd like to commend my colleague from Airdrie-Chestermere for all his efforts put into this bill, but I believe that it needs some fine-tuning to become a stronger piece of legislation. The amendment would serve to strengthen this legislation and also to match the federal government's provision in their own legislation.

In the federal provision this proposed amendment mirrors the maximum amount of funds allowed in one electoral district, $3,000. This is an area that is three times larger than our own ridings, provincial electoral divisions. This amendment will help to promote fair elections and prevent third-party special-interest groups from blanketing a riding with an overwhelming campaign or with a great deal more ads than any politician could afford to match. The Supreme Court has stated in 2004 that such spending limits do not violate the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The court stated that the limits of $3,000 per electoral district were a reasonable amount.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to comment on political action committees, that the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill just mentioned. Political action committees are third-party organizations with the goal of getting a certain political candidate elected. The size of this group is irrelevant to their classification. As you know, these committees have become a major issue in our neighbour to the south. Millions of dollars were being spent in close campaigns by third parties. These funds are used to buy up huge amounts of media and to promote a specific viewpoint, which may not be the same viewpoint shared by the communities at large.

While we have not seen this type of occurrence in Alberta elections, there are signs that such campaigns may not be far off. These large expenditures of money in elections by third parties may serve to influence not only the public but also the very candidates in the election. This goes against the very democratic principles upon which Canada and Alberta were formed. Third-party interests with deep pockets and self-centred interests should not be permitted to manipulate the democratic process by buying up media space and attempting to push a certain political agenda that favours their special-interest groups.

We have no limits on campaign spending by candidates or by parties. This amendment would not change this in any way. Candidates would be free to spend as much money as they deemed fit on their own election platforms. Nothing in this amendment restricts the amount which political parties can spend in any given electoral district. This proposed amendment also does not alter the total amount which could be spent by a third party during an election in the province as a whole or in a given city or region.

Third parties and candidates would still be free to use attack ads as well. This is not affected by this proposed amendment at all. The proposed amendment would not control total spending, nor does it affect the spending in a particular city or area of the province as long as it doesn't single out a specific candidate. This amendment only addresses limits on advertising for or against individual candidates in a given electoral district.

The danger lies not just in influencing the election, however, but perhaps in the intimidation of members of the House or candidates for office from taking strong stands or expressing their honestly held opinions on what might be controversial issues, whether it would be pro or anti nuclear, for or against oil sands development or coal-fired plants, for or against amendments to the labour codes, on regulating the insurance industries, or on dozens of other issues which may arise. From fear of an overwhelming and undefeatable campaign against them by a third party, candidates may not vocalize or promote their own honestly held opinions and beliefs, and as a result certain viewpoints may be stifled and even eliminated.

I urge all my hon. colleagues to support this amendment to what is already a very good bill, which is Bill 205. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak to the amendment? The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development to the amendment.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In a liberal society, in a free and democratic society, one of the most fundamental rights is to criticize government, and part of that ability to criticize government is the ability to collect funds and spend it in the media to criticize government. So any time government looks to put restrictions on that right, we have to do so very carefully.

I think the author of Bill 205 has structured it in a way that basically minimizes the restriction that's put on this right to free speech, the right to criticize government, in the sense that Bill 205 merely imposes the same reporting restrictions on third-party groups that we already expect of organized political parties. It seems to me that that strikes the balance. The proposed amendment goes further than that and puts more restrictions on voluntary groups or private groups that want to collect money and buy time to criticize government. It puts more restrictions on them than we do on ourselves, on political parties. So I would oppose the amendment and encourage others to do likewise.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Are you ready for the question on the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

The Deputy Chair: To the bill, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I had thought the vote had gone the other way. My hearing is deficient.

Now, I listened with interest to the debate on amendment A1, but this afternoon in committee on the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009, I have a number of things that I would certainly like to get on the record in the time allowed. It's an interesting bill. I don't know how the Chief Electoral Officer or the office of Elections Alberta will have the time to administer all this. They are having difficulty keeping up as it is with investigations of financial affairs and records. You go over to the office and look through the records, and certainly there's more work to be done, which they acknowledge.

Elections Alberta started auditing some candidates and some constituency associations but not all whenever they file a financial disclosure statement. I think all reports should be audited, not just a select few. But specifically with this bill, it comes about after we had the million-dollar or the $2 million plus ad campaign before the last election. It may have even been during the election. I do remember watching the Super Bowl, and there was an ad.

An Hon. Member: Relevance?

Mr. MacDonald: It was relevant. It was relevant then, and, hon. member, it's relevant now because the ad said that there was no plan. Whenever I look at health care or I look at the electricity deregulation of this government, those ads were right. There is no plan. There was no plan when the Super Bowl was on a year ago, and there's no plan now.

An Hon. Member: Albertans didn't think that way.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, that gets to another point, as to how much money each respective party has. What I find quite odd about this legislation is the definition of election period, Mr. Chairman, which reads:

"Election period" means the period commencing the day a writ of election is issued for a general election and concluding at the end of polling day.

Now, does that mean it's business as usual before the election is called? Can any organization anywhere in this province have an ad campaign either promoting the government's health care reorganization or pointing out flaws in it? I can't imagine who would promote that reorganization other than some private hospitals in America who see this as a market that they do not currently have access to. [interjection] You don't believe it? Well, hon. member, many people who are passionate about public health care certainly believe it.

So that would be my first question, and hopefully I can get that addressed. This election period definition: what do we do with the period leading up to the election? Is that a third-party advertising free-for-all?

Also in the definitions here, Mr. Chairman, I see that in 39.1(1)(b) "political advertising" means advertising in any broadcast, print or electronic media including telephone, fax, internet, e-mail and text messaging with the purpose of promoting or opposing any registered party or the election of a candidate.

And it goes on. How does the author of this bill, the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, propose to control the Internet, propose to control how text messaging will be regulated? That to me, again, sounds like a very heavy-handed manner. The Internet is free for all uses and purposes as far as I understand, and not even the CIA can get control of the Internet. That's what I read. So how we could control the Internet is another question that I want to have answered.

Could we, if this bill was to become law, be having an online discussion or an online forum linked to a website? Would that be considered political advertising under this bill? How is all this going to work? Now, we go on a little further with the definitions under political advertising, and it goes on to say that it does not include a television program or a website or online discussion forum. How is that going to work? Again, if I could get an answer to that, maybe I would be a little bit less reluctant and more supportive of this bill, but I just see this bill as targeting certain individuals and certain groups and restricting and limiting their free speech.

We go on further in the definitions section here. Mr. Chairman, I'm quoting again. It's interesting in 39.1(1)(b):

- (iii) the transmission of a document in any form directly by a person or a group to their members, employees or shareholders or other persons who have given permission to the person or group to receive information from them, or
- (iv) advertising by the Government in any form.

Now, the government, of course, can carry on business as usual. We know $25 million had been used in the propaganda campaign to try to change the government's image abroad and here at home. We do know that there were photographs of siblings, a brother and sister in Northumberland, over by Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in the northeast section of England, that somehow wound up as part of the branding campaign. Interesting to note that the Public Affairs Bureau even used that photo in the focus groups. So to say that it was an oversight or a mistake is wrong. The $25 million is an example of the unlimited resources the government would have, and that's not included in this third-party advertising.

Now, also I'm curious with the definition in 39.1(1)(b)(iii). I'm not going to read it again because I know there are others that want to participate in this, but would a union need to get permission if they were to transmit documents in any form? Do they need to get permission from those individuals before, for instance, they could even talk about a political action campaign starting? Members have said that this levels the playing field. I would certainly disagree.

When I look at the definitions that are under section 248(1) of the Income Tax Act – I've had a look at this – I'm still puzzled, and I need further clarification from the member as to why we're using that definition of a registered charity. That seems to be a trend in legislation this spring, to use that definition. It's not the first time that I have seen this section of the Income Tax Act quoted, and I don't recall that before. I know the Income Tax Act has been changed recently, in fact as recently as last year, but I'm curious about that. I'm curious about that. Some people view that as a legal loophole; others do not. If the hon. member could clarify that for me, I would be grateful.

Now, of course, we see in section 39.2(5) that numbered companies shall not be registered under this section. I would like to know why that has been pulled out of there. A union has to register; a numbered company does not. If I could have an explanation on that, I would be grateful.

Again, whenever we go through this bill and we go to section 39.5, of course, we've got more work for the Chief Electoral Officer, who is already overworked. [Mr. MacDonald's speaking time expired]

I hope I have more time later to participate in the debate.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to rise and join the Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to start by thanking the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere for this timely piece of legislation.

The overarching objective of Bill 205 is to clarify the parameters of third-party spending for election advertising during a provincial election. This bill supports this government's commitment to ensuring that our electoral processes remain fair and transparent. While this Bill 205 offers a number of notable sections, I'd like to specifically address sections 48(1.1) and section 49.1.

Section 48(1.1) prescribes the penalties third parties could face if they contravene section 39.10, which related to the third-party election advertising report. Specifically this section reads: "The chief financial officer of a third party that operates a third party advertising account who contravenes section 39.10 is guilty of an offence and liable to a fine of $10 000." As prescribed in section 39.10(1), the third-party election advertising report must be provided to the Chief Electoral Officer within six months of the provincial election polling days.

As per section 39.10(4)

the third party election advertising report shall include

- (a) the amount of contributions for third party election advertising purposes that were received during the year,
- (b) for each contributor who made contributions of a total amount of more than $375 for third party election advertising purposes during the period referred to in clause (a), their name and address and the amount and date of each contribution,
- (c) a financial statement setting out income and transfers and the amount of expenses in total, and
- (d) the time and place of broadcast or publication of the advertisements to which the expenses relate.

Mr. Chairman, the report requirements prescribed in this section will enhance the Chief Electoral Officer's ability to thoroughly examine the advertising activities of third parties during elections in Alberta. Specifically, the Chief Electoral Officer will be able to determine the amount of financial contributions third parties have received.

Section 39.10(4)(b) will allow the Chief Electoral Officer to determine what individuals or groups have donated significant funds to third parties for advertising purposes. This will allow for accurate assessments of any real or perceived undue influence within a municipal election.

Subsection (4)(c) will ensure that third parties have met their fiduciary duty with respect to receiving and expending the financial contributions that they have received. The financial statements would be required to include all revenue and expenses related to the third-party election advertising account. This could help election officials determine if, in fact, the funds received for election advertising were used in an appropriate manner.

Subsection (4)(d) would allow officials to determine when and where election advertising is going to take place and what expenses were related to the specific advertisements. This will add an additional level of accountability as an election official will be able to review the advertisements to determine the accuracy of the filed financial statements.

Furthermore, the election advertising report would be available to the public, adding an additional level of transparency and accountability. The electorate would be able to effectively ascertain what groups and individuals had donated significant funds to a campaign and if third parties have conducted themselves in a professional manner. However, section 39.10(1) would only be effective if there were legislated repercussions for not allowing the prescribed requirements.

Part 4.1 further ensures that third parties submit their advertising report and also allows the Chief Electoral Officer to cancel their registration if they fail to do so. This would help ensure that larger organizations with significant funds at their disposal do not violate part 4.1.

Mr. Chairman, the two sections that I spoke to today will ensure that there are financial consequences for violating the requirements of the third-party election advertising report. This report is paramount in ensuring that third parties conduct themselves in an appropriate and professional manner.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. When I look at the details of this proposed legislation, I am still at a loss to understand how we're going to put so much more work on the Chief Electoral Officer when that office has indicated that they don't have enough resources to conduct what they consider necessary now.

I remember that before the Legislative Offices Committee the former Chief Electoral Officer, the one that was fired or did not have his contract renewed – you can pick one of those two – basically said that it's a free-for-all, the financial disclosure, the amount of money that's raised, where it goes, where it's spent, who donates. It was just out of control. Yet through this bill we're going to give that office more work to do without adequate resources.

Now, specifically in section 39 again, in 39.8(2), this restriction limits unions, in my view.

A third party that collects periodic dues, assessments or initiation fees for its members may consider each individual payment as a separate third party . . . advertising contribution to the third party's advertising account where the payment is not related to the employment of an individual or to fees associated with membership in a professional association.

So union dues or dues that are collected by a union from each individual member cannot be used for that third-party advertising account, and that is a further restriction on unions.

The next section, section (3): "No third party shall use a contribution for the purpose of third party election advertising if the third party does not know the name and address of [each] contributor." How are unions going to be able to comply with this? Whenever you read the fine print in here, Mr. Chairman, there's no doubt that we've got only one group in mind that we want to restrict and limit, and that is organizations, whether we agree with it or disagree with it, such as the no-plan ad crowd. Let's not pretend that it's any different because that's exactly what this bill is trying to do.

Now, we can limit and restrict others. I would be more inclined to support this bill if we were going to fix up our own financial disclosures and how much can be donated and by whom. We seem to be making rules this spring for each and every organization or group but ourselves. Of course, we saw the mayor's comments in the Edmonton Journal, the mayor of Edmonton, Mr. Mandel, over the weekend and some of his colleagues, who claim that they were not consulted with restrictions and limitations that are placed on municipal elections. I know they were outraged. I was surprised that they weren't consulted.

After I read that article, Mr. Chairman, I came to the conclusion that, well, if they're angry about that piece of legislation, wait until they figure out what's happening with Bill 36 and all the overrides that are going to be in place against municipal governments if that legislation becomes law. So we'll see. [interjection] I'll be watching that – you bet – hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, and they'll be watching you.

The Deputy Chair: Through the chair.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. This hon. member certainly is entitled to participate in the debate, and this hon. member, if he was committed to openness and transparency, your leadership race, all the money that was donated to that, you would certainly have made that public.

Dr. Morton: Thousands.

Mr. MacDonald: Thousands and thousands of dollars, yes.

Specifically, Mr. Chairman, to Bill 205 and in the time that we have left, whether this will survive a legal challenge is another issue. I heard Charter issues and Charter arguments going back to 2004, but we need to have a look at what happened recently in British Columbia. In May of 2008 the government of B.C. passed Bill 42, the Election Amendment Act, 2008, which among other measures – get this – introduced limits on third-party election advertising and extended the third-party election advertising limits beyond the 28-day campaign to cover the 60 days prior to the scheduled start of every campaign.

That's where our bill here is different, and that's why I think the drafters of this legislation – and I'm going to go out on a limb and say that the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development probably had Gerald Chipeur have a look at this draft legislation. But I could be wrong; I could be wrong on that account.

The difference is in the election period prior to the writ being dropped. That's a major difference between what was quashed in the courts in B.C. and what we have before us today. Certainly, we have to look at the four B.C. labour unions: the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, the Federation of Post-Secondary Educators of British Columbia, the British Columbia division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, and the British Columbia Nurses' Union. They objected to some of the restrictions and limitations that were placed on them by this Bill 42, and they took the whole issue to court. Now, what happened when that was taken to court? Well, we know the outcome of that, and don't be surprised if the same thing happens here, Mr. Chairman. The B.C. government lost their attempt with Bill 42 to limit pre-election advertising.

Let's be clear: there is a difference between our definition here in this proposed Bill 205 and what the B.C. government did. There's a difference there, but the intent is still the same. The Court of Appeal quashed the provincial government's hope of throttling a potential large campaign of third-party advertising in the days leading up to the start of the recent campaign. The justice refused to even grant a stay that would have suspended the decision, as I understand it. The government has served notice that it wants to appeal the decision.

We've got to make our law, if we're going to make one, one that will perhaps survive a court challenge, and I don't think this will. I think individual Charter rights are being restricted and limited by this legislation, and I don't think that if it goes to court, this piece of legislation would be upheld. I just don't think it would.

Now, I would certainly encourage hon. members – in fact, maybe tomorrow, when I have an opportunity to photocopy this B.C. Court of Appeal decision, I will table it, and over the summer hon. members can have a look at this. Here we're talking about individuals who believe that on the grounds that it unjustifiably infringes their rights and freedoms under sections 2(b) and (d) and section 3 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. These are the four unions that thought that. Of course, we know what happened. As they say, "The rest is history," or it's proceeding through another level of court.

I can't support this bill for those reasons. I think we're picking out and restricting and limiting the ability of one group to participate democratically, that ability to express their opinion, while we're not restricting and limiting other groups. We're picking and choosing who can say what during an election. I would agree with hon. members who spoke earlier that there has to be some sort of control. [Mr. MacDonald's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to rise and join debate on Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009. This bill is about enhancing and providing clarity, openness, and accountability to freedom of speech. Bill 205 would provide regulation for third-party advertising during provincial elections. It would do so by requiring that funds used for election advertising originate from a political advertising account registered to a third-party sponsor and that this account be registered with the Chief Electoral Officer. In addition, Bill 205 clarifies the definition of third-party sponsor, eligible donor, advertising, and political advertising. This is an important piece of legislation that needs to be examined with due diligence.

Mr. Chairman, I find sections 39.5(1) and (2) particularly interesting and would like to further explore the meaning of these sections. Section 39.5 deals with the identification of third parties on electoral advertising and reads:

39.5(1) Every advertisement that is the subject of a third party election advertising expense must contain the name of the third party that sponsors the advertisement as registered with the Chief Electoral Officer and indicate that the third party authorizes the advertisement.

(2) The Chief Electoral Officer may establish rules for the content of notices in advertisements under subsection (1).

In essence, this section states that third-party election advertising is subject to rules.

Currently political parties are subject to rules as well regarding advertising disclosure while third parties are not. The public deserves to know who is placing election advertisements and who is trying to influence their vote. To fully understand section 39.5, I must take a moment and reference back to section 39.1(1)(c), which defines third-party advertising as "political advertising that appears during an election period and is placed by a third party." Mr. Chairman, the first word in section 39.5(1) is "every." Every advertisement by a third party is subject to the rules as stated in this subsection. It's important that rules are applied across all forms of advertising and that certain mediums are not exempt from these rules. Each of these advertisements, as stated, must contain who is sponsoring the advertisement. This is central for the sake of transparency and for knowing exactly who is behind the advertising.

Additionally, the names appearing on the advertisement must be as registered with the Chief Electoral Officer. This is essential as groups may go by several names or may join forces with others for the sake of election advertising. It must be clear who is authorizing the advertisement. By using "registered," it can be assured that the appropriate paperwork has been filed with the Chief Electoral Officer. Section 39.5(1) strengthens the overall meaning of Bill 205.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, subsection (2) of section 39.5 is an important line in this legislation. Firstly, I must note that the Chief Electoral Officer is the main component of this subsection. This subsection establishes that it is the Chief Electoral Officer, also known as the CEO, that establishes rules regarding third-party advertising, therefore avoiding political interference. It is established that the CEO may establish rules. By including the word "may," it gives him or her the ability as they see appropriate to establish rules for what is suitable in advertisements and required for third-party identification. Furthermore, by including established rules for the content of the notices, it is clear as to what the rules are being established for.

To conclude, Mr. Chairman, section 39.5 allows for there to be a more level playing field with third-party groups when they advertise during elections. By establishing rules, it is clear as to who is doing the advertising. Together subsections (1) and (2) of section 39.5 are integral to this bill. It is clear and concise wording, leaving no room for misinterpretation. Ultimately, Bill 205 will provide for greater transparency within the election process.

Mr. Chairman, at the end of the day the goal here is to get everybody involved in the democratic movement, in advocating for issues that are important to them. All we're asking here is for everybody to declare who they are and what they are advertising and campaigning for.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere for bringing forward this bill, that has fostered an interesting debate and discussion. I look forward to further debate of Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise today and join the Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 205, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure (Third Party Advertising) Amendment Act, 2009. This act is being put forward by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. I would like to thank him for this timely and effective piece of legislation. The benefits of this proposed legislation have been covered in great detail during the second reading debate, and I will not review these comments except to say that if passed, Bill 205 will assist third parties by bestowing on them a framework of transparency.

Today I'd like to draw the Assembly's attention to a section of the bill that I find very skillfully worded. Section 39.8(1) is the area of the bill that addresses which groups are ineligible to make campaign contributions to a registered third-party election advertising account. Specifically, this section reads:

The following shall not make contributions to a third party for third party election advertising:

- (a) if the contributor is an organization, an organization that has not carried on business in the province of Alberta for one year prior to making the contribution;
- (b) if the contributor is an organization, an organization whose primary purpose is to engage in political advertising;
- (c) a registered charity within the meaning of section 248(1) of the Income Tax Act . . .;
- (d) a candidate for election;
- (e) a registered political party;
- (f) a registered constituency association;
- (g) a member of Parliament;
- (h) a member of the Senate;
- (i) a sitting member of the Legislative Assembly; or
- (j) a prohibited corporation.

Mr. Chairman, this section is large and addresses many important areas; therefore, I will separate some of the ideas to help with clarity. First, subsection (a) proposes limitations on organizations who wish to contribute to third-party election advertising but reside and engage in business outside of the province. The rationale behind this part is actually rather straightforward. Simply put, Alberta's provincial elections should be run for the benefit of Albertans and Alberta businesses. Restricting non-Alberta organizations will ensure that there is no undue outside influence shifting the political debate within the province.

I don't quite have time to go into all of the other details of this, but in ending I do want to applaud both the intent and the wording of Bill 205, specifically section 39.8(1). I applaud the hon. member for bringing forward such a valuable piece of legislation.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, given that we've had 120 minutes and pursuant to Standing Orders 8(7)(a)(ii) and 8(7)(b), which state that all questions must be decided to conclude debate on a private member's public bill which has received 120 minutes of debate in Committee of the Whole, I must now put the following questions to conclude debate.

[The clauses of Bill 205 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

[The voice vote indicated that the request to report Bill 205 carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 3:58 p.m.]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee now rise and report Bill 205.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 205. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, for second reading.

Our society is changing rapidly. We have all these new technologies – Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, text messaging – and somebody is probably inventing a new way to communicate right now as I'm speaking. All of these new technologies have put a new face on an old problem, bullying. It used to be that a bully's insults were heard by 30 other kids in a cafeteria. Now it's out on the web for 6 billion people to see. These days electronic media is a crucial part of kids' culture. They can't imagine life without it. They run home from school and the first thing they do is log on so that they can talk for hours using instant messaging, bulletin boards, and chat rooms. But the chatter and the gossip can spin out of control and become degrading.

Bullying has always had the potential to turn school into a living nightmare for some children, but now the problem is going beyond the schoolyard. It's bad enough that a bully can make a child's life hell in school, but these new technologies are allowing for 24/7 bullying. You can put somebody down with a text message at supertime, lewdly doctor photos of them and post the photo on Facebook at 8 p.m., and threaten them on Twitter at bedtime. The keyboard has indeed become a weapon.

Mr. Speaker, to deal with these types of incidences, we need to think creatively. Bill 206 will be the first legislation in Canada that expressly bans bullying by electronic media. Specifically, it will ban bullying by means of a school computer or the Internet, access through a school computer, or at any time where such activity may reasonably be expected to cause a substantial and material disruption at school.

We're taking extraordinary action to deal with an extraordinary problem. Bullying is so damaging to the mental health of our children. I talked to one mother whose seven-year-old was bullied so viciously that they had to pull him out of school. He was so traumatized that he currently receives therapy from a psychiatrist because he's suicidal. Seven years old, Mr. Speaker.

I talked to another mother today whose son was bullied maliciously. I have a file two inches thick on this case. It contains emergency room reports of the horrific injuries that the boy sustained, including an eight-centimetre blood clot in his testicles. It also contains pages of letters that the mother wrote trying to protect her child. Ultimately, the only action that was taken was that the boy was moved to another school. On June 5, 2008, with a few weeks left in the school year he started his car in a closed garage and slipped away from all of his worldly cares. What a terrible tragedy, Mr. Speaker.

We can't let our youth be terrorized in a way that affects them for life. Our schools are diverse, and this is a good thing. They're reflective of the vibrant and diverse society that we have in Alberta. Unfortunately, sometimes differences make children a target for bullies. Bill 206 makes it illegal to harass somebody on race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, mental or physical disability. That doesn't mean that these are the only behaviours targeted by the bill. Other forms of harassment include stealing the possessions of an individual, physical or sexual assault or threats of physical or sexual assault on that individual, threats of death to that individual. These are ugly and serious behaviours. We have to stamp them out so that they can't ruin the lives of our youth.

For anyone keeping score at home, I've used the word "bullying" or a variant of it nine times so far. That's because bullying is a very important part of this bill. But it's not the only type of behaviour in school which endangers students. Weapons don't belong in school. They're dangerous, and they're harmful. We've had this sad fact illustrated to us by the tragedy that occurred in Taber 10 years ago. Jason Lang was only 17 when his life was so tragically ended. He was shot by a student who brought a gun to school. You can open the paper any day and find other children who've been killed at a school somewhere around the world.

This bill will allow our police to act immediately when a weapon is found. Right now it can be difficult for police to act when they find a weapon in our schools. The provision of the Criminal Code puts the burden on our police to prove intent. So if the police find a billy club in a kid's locker, they often have to wait for them to use it or to threaten or injure another student. I've talked to our police officers countless times about this, and they're frustrated. Mr. Speaker, there is no good reason for a billy club in school. It doesn't improve your math skills. It's not part of any physical education class. What could a student possibly be using it for? We know that these types of devices are used to inflict harm. It makes no sense to wait until harm occurs to take action. Bill 206 will make weapons in our schools illegal and allow police and school officials to take immediate action.

Mr. Speaker, we all know that drugs are dangerous for our youth. Recently two teenaged girls west of Edmonton died after taking ecstasy, and events in Vancouver have illustrated the violence associated with the drug trade. Two high school boys in Surrey were killed last week in an event that may be drug and gang related. We need to keep these types of danger out of our schools. That's why this bill will make the possession of drugs and drug paraphernalia on school property an offence.

One of the key pieces of this bill involves mandatory reporting. In my conversations with our police officers they have told me that they often are only contacted when an incident spirals out of control. Suddenly they have to go to court regarding an incident that they have no prior record of. Making schools document all incidents which compromise safety, including bullying, drugs, and weapons, will give our justice system the tools to deal with cases early and effectively.

I urge all of my colleagues to support Bill 206 and take an important step to make our schools safe for our youth.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much. It's a pleasure to rise this afternoon and participate in the debate on Bill 206. I listened to the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, and I certainly know that she is well meaning with this legislative initiative. Any time we can enhance the safety of students and teachers by amending the School Act to include explicit sections on banned items and bullying, I think we should give it due consideration. However, there are some issues that I do have with this bill. Certainly, no student, Mr. Speaker, deserves to be bullied. At the same time school authorities need to be empowered, not limited in their ability to use their judgment.

Now, there are those that would consider this bill to be unnecessary. The School Act already protects students from bullying. If the bill is passed in its current form without amendments, principals, in my view, will have less authority to suspend students, and I don't think that's what the original intent of this bill was.

We certainly had a discussion last session on a very, very similar issue. But when we are defining "bully" and "banned item" and we look at the earlier concerns that had been expressed in this Assembly and earlier concerns surrounding Bill 44 regarding the exclusion of sexual orientation and disability, if we're going to exclude that in the definition of bullying . . .

Mrs. Forsyth: No.

Mr. MacDonald: We're not going to do that?

Mrs. Forsyth: It's in the bill.

Mr. MacDonald: It's in the bill. I appreciate that.

Mrs. Forsyth: Read it.

Mr. MacDonald: I have read it. Other members may not have, but I certainly have.

Now, we are looking at this bill, and we are looking at the procedure that teachers and principals must follow if a student is suspected of either possessing a banned item or is bullying another student. The principal in collaboration with a peace officer can determine an educational measures program for the student to participate in. A principal must advise the board of placing a student in an educational measures program, and the board must advise the minister of any contraventions regarding bullying or banned items from the bill. The school board has the responsibility to ensure that there are educational measures programs. Certainly, I had a meeting the other day with some school board officials. They certainly talked and wanted to talk at length about Bill 44, but they had very little to say about this private member's initiative.

Now, there's been certainly a lot of coverage on bullying since last fall; in particular, on kicking ginger, or kicking redheads. Now, who on that side of the House is supportive of that initiative? I can only imagine. The notice on bullying redheads, or the Kick a Ginger campaign that was on the go, is not included under race or ethnicity or ginger-based bullying, which is part of the proposed definition in section 2 here, Mr. Speaker. I was appalled at that Kick a Ginger campaign. I know students who were victims of that. Regardless of what may pass as, you know, lighthearted sport on the other side of the benches here, certainly people that I know don't appreciate campaigns of that nature.

Now, there was an article in a recent Alberta Teachers' Association newsletter. The newsletter is in agreement with what is being recommended here in this bill. It states that although the bill is well intentioned, there are serious problems with the bill itself. Our neighbours in British Columbia passed a law requiring schools to have codes of conduct for students and, therefore, zero tolerance for bullying. Ontario states that bullying is a cause for suspension.

Overall, this bill is a good idea. I certainly think it can be improved although this bill has been improved because of the definition of bullying. Now, I'm not certain that we're doing everything here that the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek would like us to do, but it's a start. It certainly is a start.

I think we should amend the bill to completely strike out section 5 as it is written. There are two main problems with section 5. Again, it seems to contradict legislation in the School Act. We talked earlier about eroding or reducing the power or the control that principals have. I would also appreciate clarification as to what educational measures programs are. What will be involved in initiating them? Where is the funding going to come from to make all this work? Others certainly have indicated that this legislation is poorly written. I don't know if I would go that far, but I think it certainly needs to be amended to make some clarifications here and satisfy the concerns that have been outlined previously, Mr. Speaker.

Now, if we look at section 3 and if we look at section 4, they appear to be fine, but specifically what if a peace officer and a principal disagree? Who has the final authority? Does this section mean that a principal alone cannot determine whether a student must take part in an educational measures program? What is the motivation behind requiring the involvement of a peace officer in these infractions, and should there be a peace officer in every case of a contravention? Now, those are just some of the questions around section 4.

Specifically, section 5. Section 5 amends section 24, which states the conditions under which a student can be suspended. It states that with the exception of a contravention of banned items or bullying, a student cannot be suspended if they don't comply with section 12 or failed to participate in an educational measures program or caused injury to others in the school, whether it be a taunt or whether it be physical bullying. Now, this section is attempting to ensure that a student that is found guilty of a banned item or bullying will take an educational measures program, and only if the student fails to participate in the program will that student be suspended. I among others think that this section should be struck. A student may be found guilty of bullying, be required to enrol in an educational measures program, and so shall not be suspended, all the while being guilty of 12(f), which is failing to respect the rights of others as well.

If the student is guilty of contravening section 12(f), then there is a reason to suspend the student. On the one hand, the bully should participate in the educational measures program and should not be suspended but should be suspended considering whether an injury has occurred. This would make the proposed legislation contradict existing legislation and, I think, would create a basis for appeals by one party or the other.

Now, currently principals can suspend students who have been found guilty of bullying or of possessing banned items. This amendment states that if a student is guilty of bullying or possessing a banned item, the principal cannot suspend the student but should make the student participate in this educational measures program. As a result this amendment would create greater restrictions, in our view, on the available courses of action for principals.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise in support of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. As a teacher of 36 years I have a wealth of experience in dealing with the problems that bullying causes. I have witnessed many accounts of this type of harassment during my tenure as a school professional. From name-calling to physical abuse, students become victims of bullying for years. Names can follow a student through their entire school life, from elementary through high school. Bullying is something that we as elected members of this province should do everything in our power to prevent.

Mr. Speaker, you do not have to be a teacher to know that bullying exists. Many of us had first-hand experience with this form of control that one person or a group of individuals exerts over others. We may have seen a classmate or a co-worker constantly being mistreated by another. We may have witnessed a family member come home frustrated, or we may have been unfortunate enough to have gone through this mistreatment ourselves. If any member of this Assembly has ever experienced first-hand the negative effects of bullying, I'm sure they would want to do everything possible to rid our school system of this form of abuse.

Bill 206 is a positive step forward to achieving mental well-being for staff and students. This comfort and security is vital for a productive learning and teaching environment. By amending the School Act, the proposed legislation would better equip our schools with a direction on how to handle incidents involving bullying or other conduct that creates an unproductive learning atmosphere.

Without a safe school setting students begin to react negatively to their place of learning. Mr. Speaker, many individuals will avoid situations where they feel threatened. It is a part of human nature to protect oneself. Some children are fearful to play in certain areas of the school grounds during recess and will avoid these areas. Many students hate taking the bus because of the treatment they get from other students, so they avoid it. Other individuals learn to take the long route home to keep safe. I've seen students stay home from school entirely because they felt unwelcome in a school. This is unacceptable for schools in this great province.

These are passive reactions to bullying, but some students don't react passively. Many parents tell their children to fight back and stand up to a bully because that is the only thing a bully understands. In extreme cases these students may feel threatened and lash out with violent reactions against the bully. There are cases of children bringing weapons to school in order to protect themselves, keeping knives, bats, and even guns in their lockers. With the tragic events that have happened over the past 10 years across North America, there needs to be a mechanism in place that will stop this violent reaction before it becomes irreversible. Under Bill 206 all schools will be required to record and report any incidents that involve tools or devices that can be injurious to the physical or mental well-being of others or the possession of drug paraphernalia.

Mr. Speaker, the Internet has ushered in more difficulties for teachers and students when it comes to bullying. The Internet can become a tool in the hands of a bully. Rumours can spread quickly and to more people than ever before. It is hard to prevent every single instance of bullying that could occur on a daily basis. It is even more difficult to prevent Internet abuse from spreading and hurting the individual in question. With the availability of Internet through cellphones and other electronic devices many students have access to the Internet for hours of the day. I have known girls who use the Internet MSN Messenger to spread rumours about other girls. It became so bad that the girl had to switch schools because she could not tolerate the torment she received in the school about what took place over the Internet.

There are some parents and individuals who do not take bullying seriously. They may say things like, "Oh, well, kids will be kids" and defend the student responsible for causing another student's grief. Bullies may be part of the cool crowd, and the social hierarchy makes it hard for a student to rat them out to the principal or the teacher for fear of being ostracized by their peers even further. We cannot just pass these actions off as nothing because there are a great many children, adolescents, teenagers, and adults who are affected daily by this harassment.

Mr. Speaker, the root cause as to why these actions take place is highly debatable. Family life, music, movies, magazines, newspapers, websites are among the hundreds of reasons why one individual may bully another. I don't think that this Assembly should have to wait until the exact cause of bullying is determined before taking action. We as a government work towards stopping this problem by increasing the ability of students, teachers, and family members to handle this complex issue.

Bullies need to be dealt with so that other kids can feel safe and welcome at their school. That is why I'm so supportive of this legislation. By requiring all persons on school property to conduct themselves in a peaceful manner so as not to cause any mental or physical stress on others, Bill 206 provides the opportunity to protect every individual within our learning institutions. This legislation is a positive step towards dealing with the increasing problems both teachers and students face each and every day.

I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this piece of legislation and urge all members of the Assembly to support it. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to speak to Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. Certainly, I would like to express my gratitude to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing this forward. I think that it's probably one of the most important bills that we'll actually discuss in this House for a long time because it affects our children right from grade 1; it affects our future leaders; it affects the young children that we expect to be the leaders in our society. We expect them to be educated, and without an education in this world as we know it today, particularly in technology, we are or we will be behind the rest of the world.

One of my contentions, particularly on the elementary school level, is that I really believe our schools are getting too big, and certainly we have cutbacks in teachers. There are fewer eyes to watch what's going on, and there are more and more kids coming in. Kids are being bused from many distances. These little kids are six years old, and if there's bullying that goes on at that level, it does follow them all the way through their high school years, particularly – actually, not just even in grade 1 but in grades 2 and 3 as well. If there's bullying at that level, it does affect them for their entire school life. So this is very important if we are expecting to create a civilized society going forward in terms of how we treat other people and in terms of how we want to be treated ourselves.

It is a repeat of Bill 210 from the last session, and I'm glad that this has come forward again because it defines "bully" and "banned item" and meets our earlier concern regarding the exclusion of sexual orientation and disability in the definition of a bully. It states the procedure that teachers and principals must follow if a student is either suspected to possess a banned item or is bullying another student.

One of the things that is so very difficult to ascertain is really mental bullying. The psychology that has already been mentioned by the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek in terms of being able to use the Internet and Twitter and Facebook and all of the other mechanisms that the young people today use to communicate really can be very, very – and, as was sadly pointed out, can actually lead to suicides.

There are more bullying incidents in the schools than we actually know of because many are not reported. Kids are too frightened or, in fact, the parents then move their child to another school, and the child that was the perpetrator never really is identified, which is sad because now we have someone that has gotten away with that bullying, and they will continue that behaviour quite possibly into their adult life.

The principal in collaboration with a peace officer can determine an educational measures program for the student to participate in. One of my problems with that is that the perpetrator can then be put into this educational measures program, but the point is that they are still physically in the face of the person that they have bullied, and that person knows that the perpetrator of their bullying is still in the school and is still basically, to use the local language of the kids, in their face, and it's very difficult for them to avoid them. I really think that when a perpetrator has been identified, they should be suspended. Even if it's just for one day, at least the point is being made, and the person being bullied knows that they are being protected in some fashion.

The principal must advise the board of placing a student in an educational measures program, and the board must advise the minister of any contraventions regarding banned items or bullying. I think the intent of this is very good, but how it's actually going to be enforced is not really clear in my mind. Bullying episodes are increasing whether we like it or not, and to have this kind of reporting system go all the way up to the minister takes time. I'm not saying that perhaps it shouldn't happen, but I'm just not sure that this is a really good use of the time of the principal and the school board.

The school board has the responsibility to ensure that there are educational measures programs. I know that in Lethbridge we have excellent police officers in our schools. They have mediation skills. They have skills to be able to defuse violent situations or even mentally violent situations. These police officers are trained. Having police officers in the school, I think, is another good example of how taxpayers' money is in my estimation used well to be able to protect our students so that they can learn.

Anybody that's being bullied simply cannot concentrate in a classroom even if who they're afraid of is in another classroom or, in fact, may well be probably in grades older than them. But just trying to concentrate on something and learn and listen to a teacher when you're afraid to even step out of your classroom door just doesn't happen. They simply don't learn.

As we know, certainly, no child deserves to be bullied. There's a fine line to be established between teasing and bullying. Some teasing can be done in fun, but there's always that little extra where it can slip over into the bullying. I'm not saying that teasing isn't good. I think we see it in our sports teams. You have nicknames for each other, and it does create camaraderie.

I think Robin Williams, who is a very well-known comedian, is an example of a kid that was bullied and has told the story many times. The only way he could get around it was to try to handle the situations with humour. Well, not everybody has that innate ability to be able to dissipate bullying, particularly verbal bullying, with the counter of humour. He has gone on to describe himself, as many comedians have, as being introverted, for one thing – often kids who are introverted do get picked on – and also that he suffers from depression. Many comedians have said that, which is kind of a dichotomy of behaviours. Children who are bullied often do end up with kind of a dual personality because they have to be able to react in a situation that is often against, really, who they are.

The other thing that I would be interested in seeing is along the same lines of how I think schools are too big. I would like to see the stats of bullying in public, large schools versus bullying in private, small schools. I don't know whether private schools keep these sorts of records, but I would assume that if they have been legislated by the Alberta education act, then of course they would have to keep these stats. I think it would be interesting to study those particular statistics.

One of the other things is that we keep talking about peace officers. I know that in Lethbridge we're fortunate to have police officers. I'm wondering why we would want a peace officer versus a police officer. I guess I just want a good old police officer who's had that training in mediation, who's had that training in dissipating violence. As I've mentioned, I think it's important to have school officers on-site.

I think I've mentioned that I think the perpetrators should at least be suspended if just for one day because for the child that's being bullied, that person is always in their face. Sometimes children have to switch schools, and many parents I know would like to try to get their children into private schools and, of course, couldn't possibly afford that. [Ms Pastoor's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in this Assembly to speak in favour of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, being put forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. I think it's fair to say that many members of this Assembly would support a bill that protects the safety of children and staff in schools. This is exactly what Bill 206 intends to do, and as a former police officer I feel this bill is long overdue.

Bill 206 would require all people on school property to conduct themselves in a safe and peaceful manner that would not be injurious to the physical or mental well-being of others nor impact the school's safe learning environment.

Additionally, Bill 206 would prohibit the possession of drug paraphernalia as well as any tool or device that is intended to cause harm to others on school property or during school hours. Any of these violations can result in police intervention. Also, the principal can call a meeting with the student, parent or guardian, and police to discuss appropriate consequences and next steps for the student. Mr. Speaker, involving local authorities has become essential because bullying and the possession of harmful devices have escalated to a level that only these professionals are trained to deal with.

The intent of Bill 206 follows one of the government's top five priorities, promoting strong and vibrant communities and reducing crime so that Albertans feel safe. There is federal and provincial legislation in place to protect the safety of individuals. This bill works to extend that same protection on school grounds. Bullying and possession of drug paraphernalia and/or any device that can potentially cause harm to others pose serious threats to the safety of students on school grounds and, ultimately, in our communities. Weapons are a growing concern for schools because many have been found on students on school property. Any type of weapon that is on school grounds compromises the safety of staff and students.

Mr. Speaker, early intervention is a vital part of preventing children from falling into a cycle of bullying. Bullying, which is characterized by a repeated pattern of unprovoked aggressive behaviours carried out to harm or control another person, can be linked to future criminal behaviour. It can also be linked to family violence. It is clear that the targeted and sometimes innovative strategies such as those proposed in Bill 206 are needed to ensure appropriate intervention and protection.

It is also important that follow-up support is provided. This was reinforced by the Roundtable on Family Violence and Bullying. The round-table was announced in October 2003 to gather stakeholders and communities together to recommend solutions to the problem of family violence. The expert panel emphasized the importance of early childhood development and school-aged strategy as society's best chance to create positive change.

In addition, Alberta's Crime Reduction and Safe Communities Task Force was established in March 2007 to gather input and ideas from Albertans on ways to reduce crime, enhance community safety, and improve public confidence in the criminal justice system. The executive summary of the keeping communities safe report says that not enough is being done to prevent crime. They identified that starting young and addressing the factors that put children and youth at risk is a proven strategy and one that will have the best results in the longer term. Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 provides the necessary support recommended by the Alberta round-table and the Alberta Crime Reduction and Safe Communities Task Force.

Stats Canada did a nation-wide study that was conducted in voluntarily participating schools in the 2007-2008 school year, surveying over 30,000 students. Of those who participated in the study, 23 per cent of secondary school students and over 36 per cent of elementary school students reported having been bullied at least once in the previous month. Further research shows that bullying of overweight children gets more frequent and more violent as they move into their teen years. This can scar a child's self-esteem and severely hamper, even ruin, their quality of life.

Mr. Speaker, bullying is not the same today as it was a generation ago. Now bullying can be fatal. It can get to the point where a child who is being bullied no longer wants to attend school. It is a child's right to obtain an education, and it is our role to make sure that children are safe while they are on school property, including school buses. Mr. Speaker, we need to make sure Alberta's schools remain welcoming to students so that they are excited to come to school. We want children to be inspired to learn, but this could be difficult if they're feeling isolated and insecure as a consequence of bullying.

Most of us here are mothers or fathers and care deeply about our children and our communities. We will go to any length to make sure they remain safe. That is why I support Bill 206. I want to do everything I can to make sure my grandchildren's safety is not compromised. I fully acknowledge, Mr. Speaker, that this government has an aggressive plan to make sure Alberta's communities are safe, but there is still more work to be done to make sure our schools are safe. I feel as though Bill 206 fits into that plan. Bill 206 will allow the government to maintain control of this issue by giving the schools and police the tools they need to prevent or intervene when bullying becomes a problem and, perhaps more importantly, before it becomes extreme.

Mr. Speaker, bullying behaviour is unacceptable at any time and is not a normal part of growing up. Bill 206 is an opportunity to teach children right from wrong when they are young so that they do not continually repeat destructive behaviour throughout their lives. I support Bill 206 because I put children's safety and security first, and I am sure the children of our province would support this legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to be able to rise and join in debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. This is an interesting bill. I want to start out by congratulating the sponsoring member for her insistence on putting it forward again because I know this is her second attempt to get it forward. I don't question for a moment her commitment to addressing and trying to deal with a very important issue, that I think probably almost all of us in this House share an opinion that that issue is one we need to take very, very seriously and do everything we can to address, and that is the issue of bullying in our schools.

I do applaud the member for this initiative and for taking the time and using this opportunity to put this issue on our agenda here in the Assembly so that we can discuss the issue and address a number of the factors or circumstances relevant to the debate. I guess at this point that while I appreciate the objectives and the goals of this bill, I'm not sure whether this bill is the best vehicle for achieving these objectives. When I say that, I say that quite genuinely. I really am not sure. I have some questions with respect to how the bill would be interpreted and some technical questions in some respects in terms of its implications. So I will put those out there, and then I look forward to the opportunity to have further debate and discussion on it as the bill works its way through, which I assume it probably will.

The first question that I'll put to you, because I'm afraid I will run out of time, may seem a bit rhetorical, but truly it's not. It is something that I genuinely believe we need to address, and I'm sure it will come as no surprise to the sponsoring member. I very much appreciate that this bill we have before us today includes amendments to the definitions of bullying to include sexual orientation as a prohibited ground upon which bullying could occur.

I note that within the bill there is the provision that where it's determined by a teacher in consultation with the principal that bullying may have occurred, the principal and, ultimately, a peace officer will consult with one another to talk about a potential program of education to which the perpetrator, for lack of a better word, would be invited to attend in order to have that person, hopefully, learn something from that education process such that we would mitigate and prevent further bullying activity in the future.

So, of course, it should be no big surprise that my question is: how will the provision in this bill, were it to pass, work in conjunction with the proposed section 9 of the human rights code, that would potentially allow a parent to withdraw a child from a specific course of education that might deal with the issue of sexual orientation? In fact, I'm quite convinced that everybody who works, particularly, in education and in particular around issues of bullying – in fact, I've consulted with many over the last two or three weeks – will tell you that sexual orientation or suspicions of minority sexual orientations form the foundation of 40 to 50 per cent of the bullying that occurs in the school setting.

Obviously, if you're truly going to mitigate it and prepare a course of education that will prevent it in the future, you simply can't have a passing or incidental reference to sexual orientation in the education that arises. You have to talk to the perpetrator of the bullying about the issues around sexual orientation in order to promote understanding and, ultimately, discourage and persuade that person to not engage in bullying in the future.

My concern, of course, is that we might well have a parent come along and say: no, my kid is not going to participate in that. Right now, as it stands, it's not clear to me that there is anything to stop a parent from doing that. That is a concern I have, and I look forward to hearing from the member about how that particular outcome can be avoided. On the face of it I don't know how it can be avoided, and that is of grave concern.

The other question I have, somewhat related to that but also relating to all types of bullying, is just the question of what the authority is right now of the school – and I genuinely don't know – to suspend students who do engage in bullying. My understanding is that they have the authority to suspend at this point. Is it arguable that this bill might actually undermine that ability to suspend? I don't know the answer, but if the answer is yes, then I guess I'm concerned about that because I think that there are occasions where the bullying becomes so systemic and so engaged and so deeply embedded that for the sake of the victims of the bullying it is necessary to remove the bully from that setting.

So those are two of, probably, about six or seven questions that I have, but I suspect I'm coming close to the end of my opportunity to speak right now, so I may have to adjourn debate on this bill and come back to it in the future.

An Hon. Member: Question, Mr. Speaker.

Ms Notley: I am not sure.

The Speaker: Hon. member, you have the floor. What you choose to do is your business.

Ms Notley: I look forward to there being more opportunity to debate this bill, so I will adjourn debate.

The Speaker: There is a motion to adjourn the debate. The hon. member wants to adjourn the debate.

[Motion lost]

The Speaker: Well, it becomes redundant anyway. Standing Order 8(1) requires that at 5 o'clock Motions Other than Government Motions be called.

Motions Other than Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Labour Protection for Farm Workers

510. Dr. Swann moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to introduce amendments to the Occupational Health and Safety Act to protect paid farm workers while continuing to exempt family members and other unpaid labourers.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to stand in the Legislature and put forward Motion 510 on farm worker safety. We've risen in the House repeatedly on the issue of farm worker safety and farm worker protection. This caucus has met on many occasions with people in the field, with farm workers and farmers, and talked about the issues, and increasingly Albertans are supporting the notion that is proposed here in the motion.

At the present time Alberta's farm workers have no right to refuse unsafe work, no protection regarding hours of work and overtime, no compensation if they're injured on the job. Even more, they're not allowed to unionize. In 2001 the Supreme Court of Canada ruled in Dunmore versus Ontario that excluding farm workers from labour relations legislation was unconstitutional, yet in Alberta farm workers are exempt even in 2009 from most provisions of the Employment Standards Code and the Labour Relations Code. They're exempt from mandatory Workers' Compensation Board coverage, and they are exempt from occupational health and safety legislation. This is an anomaly in the land, and more and more Albertans becoming aware of it are saying that this needs to change, especially those who stand for human rights and equality and the constitutional right of all labourers to be protected in terms of their person in their workplace.

There are a number of ways in which Alberta's paid farm workers are not treated the same as other workers. One of those is the exclusion from the Occupational Health and Safety Act. The definitions in the Occupational Health and Safety Act clearly exempt farming and ranching operations. I quote section (s):

"Occupation" means every occupation, employment, business, calling or pursuit over which the Legislature has jurisdiction, except

(i) farming or ranching operations specified in the regulations.

Excluded operations then include farming and ranching operations that relate to

- (a) the production of crops, including fruits and vegetables, through the cultivation of land;
- (b) the raising and maintenance of animals or birds;
- (c) the keeping of bees.

These are excluded.

What is included is equally interesting, Mr. Speaker. It includes operations involving the processing of food or other products from the operations, the operation of greenhouses, mushroom farms, nurseries, and sod farms. It includes operations involving landscaping, and it includes operations involving the raising or boarding of pets.

Mr. MacDonald: What about horses?

Dr. Swann: Well, no. Those are excluded. Those are considered animals.

Those working with horses are exempt from protection under the Occupational Health and Safety Act even though there is significant risk associated with those, far more than raising mushrooms, I guess I would argue.

Mr. MacDonald: Even Spruce Meadows?

Dr. Swann: Even Spruce Meadows.

It is inconceivable why those workplaces should be covered but not all other farm and ranch operations. Changes are needed, Mr. Speaker, and we encourage the government to bring forward amendments to the Occupational Health and Safety Act to no longer exclude paid farm workers. The government repeatedly has said that education is the answer to farm safety and that, quote, common sense will prevail. However, this offers little protection to farm workers. It is unfair, and it needs to end in Alberta. Workers' rights can no longer be ignored in the area of farm workers, especially those who are paid.

Imagine if we had no labour laws or occupational health and safety legislation in this province. Would the government say that common sense will prevail and that education is the answer to all workers? Clearly not. It's absurd to say that education can be a replacement for labour and safety laws. Both are required. It's not either/or. Education is clearly not enough, else why would we have consideration for other workplace conditions, many of which are much less risky than raising animals or cleaning grain augers? What happens when a worker raises a safety concern at his workplace and his or her superior tells them, "Just keep doing it" and ignores the concern? If the worker refuses to work, he or she could be fired, and it would be legally quite okay to do so because the laws do not apply equally to farm workers at the present time. They have to choose between unsafe work with the risk of being injured or killed or potentially being fired for not doing the job.

I know all members of the House stand for fairness and equality and human rights. It's surprising that it's gone on this long, and I expect that with the renewed interest and commitment in this House to human rights, we're going to see those changes. This motion is trying to move things forward more quickly.

Farm workers could be experts in farm safety and know everything they need to know about how to work safely, but they cannot control what happens to them if the boss doesn't create the conditions for health and safety. It's important to note that these circumstances are not the norm. At least we would hope they are not the norm. There are many employers of farm workers who take the extra steps, make the extra expense, and ensure the safety of their farm workers, but that does not mean that the problems do not exist.

Again, imagine if all workers were excluded from occupational health and safety. Certainly, there would be workplaces which maintain high standards and keep their workers safe, but there would be no protection for those workers who face unsafe situations. Why are we treating farm workers differently?

Farmers should no longer be excluded from workplace health and safety legislation in the 21st century. This government has legislation to protect livestock: pigs, cattle, chickens, and sheep. The law covers everything from abuse to illness to lack of food or water or ventilation or transportation. Alberta laws provide for inspection, enforcement, and penalties for the mistreatment of animals, yet this same government has deliberately exempted paid farm workers from the same conditions for health and safety.

The Animal Protection Act penalizes owners who neglect their stock. If the same farmer has unsafe practices that jeopardize the health and safety of their workers, accidents do not trigger mandatory occupational health and safety investigation. There is a double standard of massive proportions.

Since 1997, 223 Albertans have died working on farms, and there have been thousands of injuries. In addition to those thousands, there are many more that go unreported because there is no legislated requirement to identify farm-related injury, so some hospitals report, and some hospitals do not report farm-related injuries of workers. Every death is one too many, and every preventable injury is one too many. Had paid farm workers been included under occupational health and safety and not deliberately exempted, these numbers would be much lower. The evidence is in other provinces across the country.

It's important to note that there are, indeed, different circumstances for some farms, particularly family farms. The second part of the motion notes that continued exemption of family members and other unpaid labourers exists under this motion. We recognize that sometimes children will be helping their parents on a farm. Late into the night neighbours and friends will be helping the farmer out. In these cases there is a valid argument for exemption.

However, paid farm workers, particularly at large corporate farms, are another matter indeed. The government cannot use the uniqueness of family farms to exempt all farm workers. Corporate feedlots are quite a different concern. These are industrial sites, more akin to the factory floor than the family farm. Injuries and deaths on these feedlots are still too common, especially when safety regulations could prevent further accidents. We believe that workers on corporate farms clearly deserve the same protection under the Occupational Health and Safety Act as other workers in the province. Several members of our caucus, including myself, Mr. Speaker, met personally with several Alberta farmers and farm families who have endured the loss of a loved one due to accidents on corporate farms. We've heard their stories as well as the stories of others they have shared with us, and it's clear that changes need to be made.

Just a few months ago a provincial court judge in his report following the fatality of Kevan Chandler made recommendations to this Legislature as follows.

It is recommended that paid employees on farms should be covered by the Occupational Health and Safety Act . . . with the same exemption for family members and other non-paid workers that apply to non-farm employers.

Secondly, the justice recommended that training programs be set up by the Department of Agriculture to address ways to minimize the risk of hazardous activities, with a system to record training received by both employers and employees.

Since the filing of that report the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development and the Minister of Employment and Immigration have indicated that they are now looking into the matter. However, we have seen these commitments before without action. For these consultations going on now, it is important that the government meet not only with the employers, the farmers, but also with the employees, especially those who have been hurt or the families of those who have been injured or killed.

Ultimately, this is about the protection of farm workers. The government owes it to them to listen to their stories and their concerns. Now is the time to give paid farm workers the rights they have been denied for so many years. Alberta is a province where all workers deserve to be treated equally and have equal rights and protection under the law. We must end the exclusion of paid farm workers from the Occupational Health and Safety Act. Therefore, I urge all members to support this motion to make amendments to include paid farm workers under Alberta's Occupational Health and Safety Act.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to stand before this Assembly to talk about Motion 510. The strength of rural Alberta is critical to the strength of our province as a whole. Rain or shine – and I guess I can say that in this particular case we'd sure like more rain – the farmers of rural Alberta work hard to meet the agriculture needs of our province. They provide the fuel that feeds us. As the Minister of Municipal Affairs and as a rural MLA I am committed to supporting these rural Albertans who do so much for us in return. Their safety and well-being and their success is a priority for our government.

Prevention is the key. Improvement in technology processes and awareness of safety issues have made huge headway into the safe farming practices. I firmly believe that this is where we must go and where we must continue to focus our attention. We must continue to invest and support the efforts to increase the knowledge and awareness of farm safety. By doing this, we will actually prevent accidents from occurring in the first place. This will have a real impact by supporting farmers and the agriculture industry.

Community groups have played a huge role in preventing farm accidents. Agriculture and Rural Development supports numerous community initiatives, and I can say to you that our minister supports with his heart the 4-H Foundation, the funding for the Farm Safety Centre.

Mr. Speaker, many campaigns have already made a huge impact, the first being the community safety campaign. It's called: be careful; we love you. It is a campaign that was started in western Canada, and it was basically a heart with those words written on there just to let family members know that there are challenges. There are, if I can say, areas where safety needs to be looked at more carefully: our government's farm safety program; a public education campaign; there is also the safety up campaign, which targets young farmers.

Mr. Speaker, as I said before, prevention is the key, and it needs to be done through education and awareness not only with the agriculture producers and labourers but also with the manufacturers of farm machinery. This is the right thing to do and will have a real impact on industry. Maintaining the safety of farmers in our province is essential. I do not believe that this motion will address or achieve the issue of prevention, and therefore I cannot offer my support.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Prior to that, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

(reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly constituents from Edmonton-Mill Creek. Unfortunately, the hon. Minister of Aboriginal Affairs could not be here, so I am introducing them on his behalf. I'd like to introduce to you the Wedman family – Don Wedman, Betty Wedman, Janel Wedman, and Eric Wedman – and their friend Breanne Johnson. If they would rise, I'd like to ask my friends to offer them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, an introduction as well?

Dr. Swann: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just want to take this opportunity to include an introduction of Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop, who have been very faithfully raising the issues of farm worker safety across this province for several years. If they would like to stand up and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The motion that we're dealing with this afternoon on farm worker safety is appreciated. Hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, you are to be commended, as is the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, for diligently bringing this issue up time and time again because it's time that this province joined the rest of the country in providing some form, at least, of protection for workers on farms.

We do know that farms have grown significantly in size. We have a smaller number of farms that have grown bigger and bigger and bigger. The activity that's occurring on these farms is significant. Workers certainly need the protection of the Occupational Health and Safety Act. I can understand where the hon. member is coming from whenever he makes the exemption for family members and other unpaid workers, but there is no reason in the world why workers that are employed on our farms and ranches and in our industrial operations associated with farming cannot be protected by occupational health and safety laws.

We only have to look at the income supports that are available for farm workers who through no fault of their own are injured. The injury is so severe that they can no longer work. They've got bills to pay as well as anyone else. When we see what happens to them, whether they wind up on social services or on AISH, it's the taxpayers who are footing the bill for this. It's not the local farm operation where the accident occurred, but it's the taxpayers that are providing income support to these individuals, and it's very modest. It's a very limited amount of money, and I don't think it's fair. It's not fair to the injured worker. It's not fair to the taxpayer. There has to be some form of compensation available to these individuals. I think that if we adopted this motion, we would go a long way to doing that.

Now, when we look at the whole argument and we hear from the government that educational programs work, well, the statistics would prove that to be false. As well meaning as these educational programs are, they're certainly not reducing the number of accidents or deaths.

Now, according to the Alberta farm workers, whenever we do not allow these workers to be protected by occupational health and safety, it's a denial of basic human rights. I would certainly agree with that because that is true. We can go through a long list of individuals who as a result of their activities on a farm lost their life. In 2006 for the lack of a safety harness Kevan Chandler was buried in a silo on a feedlot operation and suffocated as a result of the grain. Now, there was no compensation. It was difficult to look his widow in the eye, but there was very little done about this operation until, of course, there was a court case. The whole idea here is: well, if you're not satisfied, go to the courts. Many of these individuals can't afford the legal costs.

Let's read into the record some of the things that were stated in that court. An Alberta Department of Employment and Immigration employee advised the inquiry or the court that their employees establish and maintain workplace safety rules and provide technical support for workers or employers. They help interpret provisions of the Occupational Health and Safety Act, and its regulations. If necessary, they can recommend that prosecution for a violation be conducted.

This individual, however, notes that farming is exempt from the Occupational Health and Safety Act by the farming and ranching exemption regulation, Alberta regulation 271-1995. This employee attributed this to a greater desire in other industries to establish uniform workplace safety rules, whereas the agricultural community was more interested in education.

We talked about this before. Education: a good idea, but it's not working effectively.

This employee that was testifying from the department of employment felt that the non-farm employers appreciate having workplace guidelines in place governing hazardous activities. This allows employers and employees to become aware of what is required to be safe. Employers that follow these guidelines can use them to enforce proper behaviour by their employees, and to claim due diligence if the guidelines are followed and an accident occurred.

Now, the testimony provided by an employee from the Alberta department of agriculture at the same inquiry agreed that [the department's] approach to farm safety was to provide education, with the emphasis on children.

Not for the workers but for the children that are associated with the family that runs the operation.

There are three employees of the Alberta Department of Agriculture involved in educating 50,000 Alberta farmers, whereas there are 84 Occupational Health and Safety inspectors from the Alberta Department of Employment and Immigration monitoring 140,000 non-farm employers.

That's quite a difference, Mr. Speaker. That's why I think that if we were to support this motion, it would go a long way to protecting all workers in this province regardless of whether they work in a factory or they work on a farm.

I really think that we need to have a long, careful look at this motion and, hopefully, adopt it because we do know what was said in the report to the Minister of Justice and Attorney General, in the public fatality inquiry into the death of Kevan John Chandler in Black Diamond, Alberta. I think we need to act on the suggestions or the recommendations that came from that, and this motion gives us the ideal opportunity to do that.

Now, Alberta is the only province that I'm aware of, Mr. Speaker, that completely excludes farm workers from labour legislation. Many groups, including the Alberta farm workers themselves, have asked that family farms be exempt – the hon. member has done that – but that employed farm workers be covered under the legislation.

When we look at some of the hours that these individuals work, there are a lot of long hours. There are 12 to 15 hours per day during cropping season. They can go weeks without a day of rest. Many of these workers do not make much more than minimum wage. Some of them are on a monthly salary. Room and board are provided. I don't know how some of the individual farm workers that I have met over the years are getting by with that kind of money as a monthly salary. It was just amazing to me when they told me how many hours they actually worked and what their monthly salary was and the condition of the bunkhouse. One individual, in particular, told me that he thought some of the animals under his care had better living accommodations than he did. This particular individual is now getting by on a very, very modest sum from AISH, and he would be far, far from retirement age. He got caught, unfortunately, in the power takeoff of a farm tractor, and he's lucky to be with us today.

The Federation of Labour also has some issues regarding this.

In conclusion, I would urge all members to please support the motion.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I know the manner in which the motion reads, which has been well cited here by the mover, as well as the intent of the motion; namely, that Alberta's paid farm workers, who are currently not covered by the act – the note is that the farms would be recognized as work sites, but family members and unpaid labourers would not fall under legislative protection. Well, one of the issues I have – and perhaps you would deem it to be a technical issue – is the manner in which this motion has been presented. For example, its intent is to introduce amendments, quite specifically, to the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

At this time our Minister of Employment and Immigration has been tasked with reviewing and getting considerable review on the definition of the farm sites themselves, the farm as a family operation versus the farm as distinguished by some sort of nonfarm business on farmland, and to engage in getting industry feedback. I was very satisfied that the work done by Agriculture and Rural Development and by Employment and Immigration would provide for us this fall something that may be of value.

What I want to identify, especially because of time I spent in Geneva listening about the rights of the child, is my concern that if you distinguish between the rights of family members and unpaid labourers in a bill relative to paid labourers or paid workers, you might be providing some with a false sense of having rights that another member may not have. For example, does that family-farm worker lose their rights because we recognize an extraordinary right for some other group that might be working alongside that family member? I'm not sure, especially if that person happens to be a youth member of that family. It might behoove Alberta to do what Alberta often does and define things in an Alberta context relative to what Alberta would want, which may not be under the umbrella of the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

That's one of the issues that I have with this. This is very specific to engaging this Legislature in approval or bringing forward amendments to that act to deal with this issue. I would rather hear a little bit more on the investigation that will happen because of the process already initiated by two of my colleagues on this side of the bench. It does not mean, in wanting to vote against this, that I care less about those individuals. I'm concerned, in fact, about the distinction that's presented here, and sometimes on this side of the House, I admit, we have argued distinction. What about the family farm member? I think we need to have all of those kinds of pieces of material in front of us before we can make any kind of decision.

I respect very much, too, that the Minister of Municipal Affairs himself as a farmer has identified very strongly the kinds of things that Alberta has wrestled with on this issue at one time or another that may make it very difficult to provide for under the context of this bill. When I myself was in a position of working on adjudicating how we would manage this issue, it was no small agony to try to determine what was the right course of action. Currently I would urge that the Assembly support the ministries of Agriculture and Rural Development and Employment and Immigration to complete their task, to undertake that thorough review, to make sure that we've defined things properly, to be sure that we look through the lens of the rights of the individual in the family, what rights they maintain if we're suggesting that only those that are paid workers or unpaid labourers from a volunteer perspective would be covered by a piece of legislation that others may not be covered by. I have always maintained that education was an important component of it.

I mean, the real issue in this Legislature should be around how we protect our people, how we step in to protect them in a way that is universal at best. In a situation where this motion distinguishes between those and sets up what might be deemed to be two or perhaps even three classes, I think we should know an awful lot more about it to see whether that's the appropriate way.

There are many times, too, Mr. Speaker, in this Legislature where we've approved specific bills dealing with specific industries and specific organizations. To put this under the broad context of occupational health and safety may not be what we would choose to be the right way in the future, and I'd very much like to see us engage in that debate before precipitating that it can just be a resolution by a few amendments to an existing bill. I'd like to understand thoroughly the intent of that and who was getting leveraged perhaps in exclusion of who we were ignoring in the process.

So I would urge this Assembly to allow the process that we've initiated to take place and to defeat this motion.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise and speak in favour of this motion. This is a motion which we support in full. I will make a couple of comments in a moment about the fact that I don't know that it actually goes far enough, but it certainly highlights a very critical issue that has been discussed by members throughout the House throughout this session and one that we need to address quickly. There have been a number of comments about why that is, very salient comments made both by the Leader of the Official Opposition as well as the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

I'd like to take an opportunity to just briefly comment on some of the arguments that have been put forward against this motion. There has been some talk about sort of the romantic nature of rural Alberta and how the energy of Alberta is premised on, you know, the historical family farm and how that's so much part of who we are as Albertans. I just need to say that I find that somewhat ironic given Bill 43 and given the decision of this government to very clearly choose big agriculture and big agricorp over maintaining and preserving the integrity and the longevity of the family farm, yet when it comes to this issue, we're going to suddenly wrap ourselves in a notion of rural Alberta that the government is at the same time running away from as quickly as it possibly can.

With respect to the role of 4-H and education programs in terms of playing a role in ensuring safety and preventing the injuries and the deaths which occur on our farms on a regular basis due to the lack of protection and prevention and safety standards, I would just say this: if that model were to work, then presumably what we ought to do is simply let Mothers Against Drunk Driving run some courses, run some ads. We'll get rid of the speed limits, we'll get rid of the drinking and driving laws, we'll get rid of the penalties for breaching those laws, and we'll get rid of police officers because presumably all you need to do is have education and lots of good advertisement. I mean, we know that won't work, and that's why it's not working for our farm workers throughout this province. That is why they are being injured and why they are dying: because we are not doing the job that every other province in the country is doing.

With respect to the comments made previously about how we need to check about: how will this one clause affect this one little class? Could we do it a different way? Could we come up with a different Alberta way? Well, the reality is this: every other province in the country provides this kind of protection to their farm workers, and the consultation process is simply a mechanism for delay and distraction. We know what the answer is. The answer is to apply health and safety protection and legislation to employees on farms the same way we provide it to all other employees in the province.

If we are concerned about the implications to family members, well, I know a lot of daughters and sons and nieces and nephews that work in stores owned by their parents and who work in restaurants owned by their parents and who do lots of things in family businesses. This is no different. It is simply a question of protecting those paid workers who work for farmers, many of whom are new immigrants, who have never had the opportunity to go anywhere near a 4-H meeting, by the way. So we need to do that because people are getting injured.

Now, I mentioned that my one concern was that this bill did not go quite far enough. A couple of members talked about the rate of injury and death on Alberta's farms and actually identified the fact that we don't know if the statistics are accurate. Part of the reason we don't know if the statistics are accurate is that it's actually the Workers' Compensation Board that collects those statistics and compels the hospitals and the doctors to report when there is an injury related to work. By failing to include the application of workers' compensation to farm workers, we then will still unfortunately fail to get a clear picture with respect to how many people are truly being injured on our farms, primarily on the large farms, where they are employees working for a paycheque.

Now, recently in Manitoba the workers' compensation law was expanded to include farm workers as was employment standards law, including provisions against excessive overtime, providing for premiums where people were working too long, providing for minimum wage. All the kinds of protections that we provide to all other workers in the province were extended in Manitoba to farm workers. I would suggest that, again, that is something that ought to happen here because, as was described by two of the previous speakers in favour of this motion or moving this motion, farm work is such that at certain times of the year the hours are incredibly long and people are working well into the night. The fact of the matter is that we say that people who work beyond a certain number of hours – I believe it's 44 hours in a week – should be entitled to overtime under the Employment Standards Code. That's simply treating your employees fairly. I'm not sure what it is about being a farm worker that makes you exempt from fairness, but it appears to be a popular notion within the province of Alberta.

The other thing that I would like to ultimately see, which was pursued by the unions in Ontario, was the right of farm workers to have access to organizing and becoming part of a union should they so choose. Particularly, this would be applicable to the large corporate farms. In Ontario there was kind of a part-way law created for farm workers, and that law was challenged. Ultimately, the Ontario government was told that their prohibition on farm workers having the ability to unionize was in breach of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Now, unfortunately, the Liberal government in that province is appealing it.

In my view it is a position that we should seriously consider, in that farm workers should have the ability to join a union should they choose. Why? Well, it goes back to some interesting stats, that were put forward by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, simply that even if you're covered by the health and safety legislation, there are 84 health and safety inspectors and currently 140,000 employers. So how do you assert a safe workplace in your workplace? You need to have a mechanism to ensure that you can compel your employer to provide for a safe and healthy workplace because inspectors aren't going to be able to do it for you. There simply are not enough, which is why, generally speaking, we have a very poor health and safety regime for all employees in Alberta. Frankly, in Alberta the best and only way to ensure that you can compel your employer to keep you safe is through the activities of your union or, alternatively, through a joint employer-worker health and safety committee, which, of course, is another thing we don't have in this province, unlike every other province in the country.

These are all things that we should be offering to farm workers because they have a dangerous job. How do we know they have a dangerous job? Because they keep getting injured and they keep getting killed and they keep ending up in hospitals. We had a public inquiry and a judge who oversaw a public inquiry who recommended that we are far, far overdue, long overdue, in expanding the application of not only health and safety legislation – well, he talked about health and safety legislation but, I would suggest, also about workers' compensation legislation and all other employee rights – to farm workers.

Where you're worried about the impact that has on families, well, you treat them like you treat families in any other business. That's the way you work it out. Ultimately, there is no reason to treat these people differently. There is no reason to force their families and their widows to have to go to court to sue to get an income when somebody in the family is killed. They should all be able to have access to the kind of protection and income security that any employee would.

It's for that reason that I see this motion as a good start to addressing the long-standing inequity suffered by Alberta's farm workers, and I urge all members of this House to support it.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise and talk about Motion 510. I want to start off by saying that I'm not a farmer, but I spent enough time working on my uncle's dairy farm to appreciate that there's no romantic part of farming, as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona talks about. When you shovel cow dung every night after 50 dairy cows are finished in the barn, there's nothing romantic about that.

I want to talk about the part of the motion that says that farms are to be recognized as work sites but that family members and unpaid labourers would not fall under legislative protection. I think that, first of all, putting farms right now as work sites would create just a bureaucratic nightmare for farmers to try and work under. A perfect example would be that as a work site all workers would have to fill out workplace hazard assessments. I can tell you from my 30 years of working in industry, in coal mining, which is one of the most regulated industries in Canada, that workplace hazard assessments just don't work. What those mean is that every worker before they start their shift has to fill out a workplace hazard assessment form of what their jobs are going to entail during the day and assess any workplace hazards that they're going to see, and they have to try and address those. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that in the mining industry, for example, I know that workers on four days of work take a piece of paper, photocopy it four times, sign their name, and hand the thing in. So it does nothing.

Mr. Speaker, the other thing is that since family members and unpaid labourers would not fall under legislative protection, I think you're compromising the motion. I think that this is just a tactic to get this motion through because I think the opposition knows that family members and your regular farm people wouldn't support this motion as it stands right now.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the ongoing consultation process that the ministries of Agriculture and Rural Development and Employment and Immigration have undertaken in looking for industry feedback to look at regulating nonfarm businesses operating farmland is the proper way to go. The feedback process, I believe, will examine ways to distinguish between family farms and corporate farms for regulatory and legislative purposes, and the recommendations will be forwarded to the government in time for the fall session. I strongly believe that this is the way to go. I find farming to be a very unique enterprise, and I think that we should leave it to the people that are in the business to come up with their rules and regulations.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I talked to the industry task force that about four years ago looked at the occupational health and safety regulations and came up with all kinds of new regulations where they combined all of mining – oil sands, quarries, and coal mining – into one regulation. I can tell you from personal experience that, for example, under blasting regulations, the new regulations that were put in place put six of my people out of work because they couldn't pass the blasting tickets that were required by the government even though these people had 30 years of experience in blasting in the mine. So regulations aren't always the way to go.

In my mind safety training is the best way to prevent farm-related accidents and, for that matter, the best way to prevent accidents anywhere in any business. As such, the government currently employs several safety programs for farming. There's the Alberta farm safety program, which is an awareness and prevention program, designed to motivate farmers to work and play safe on Alberta's farms. This program provides statistics, educational resources, and plans for safety-related community events.

There's the Safety Up! program, Mr. Speaker, which is a new farm safety campaign aimed at young farm workers aged 17 to 24, and Agriculture and Rural Development is working closely with the Alberta Farm Safety Centre to support the safety smarts program for kindergarten to grade 6 in rural schools. The focus is on increasing awareness of farm safety issues. I think that's important, that you get to the kids when they're young and teach them the safety practices. The safety smarts program has been running in southern Alberta for eight years now. With the increased industry and government funding the program will be expanded province-wide this year, and we've committed $120,000 over three years to support this very important initiative.

Mr. Speaker, I want to talk to you also about safety training and about regulations. Again, I can rely on 30 years of experience. You can have all the safety regulations you want in place, you can have all the safety equipment you want in place, but if people do not use common sense and follow those regulations, they're absolutely worthless. For example, going into a coal plant where there are signs that say, "put on your safety glasses; this is a safety glass area; this is a hard hat area; this is a hearing protection area," I know that on doing hundreds of safety tours, you catch people without their eyeglasses on, you catch people without their hearing protection on, you catch people without their hard hats on. So you can have all the regulations you want, but it boils down to education; it boils down to a culture. You have to have a culture in your workplace where people work together to make sure that they look out for each other and are safe.

Mr. Speaker, I think another important part of this is injury statistics. The farm accident monitoring program, FAMS, collects data on farm accidents that rural hospitals provide on the nature of farm accidents in Alberta. It is impossible to compare statistics between jurisdictions. There are significant differences in how stats are collected, and stats don't always tell the story. Unlike other provinces that may count only paid workers' deaths, Alberta stats also include accidental deaths that occur and include deaths resulting from recreational activity on the farm. I think that's a key point.

I think what's more important, Mr. Speaker, is that data from the WCB shows a significant decrease in lost-time claims from 2006 to 2007. Lost-time claims have decreased by 19.5 per cent, disabling claims have decreased 18 per cent, and in addition to a reduction in claims there has been a reduction in the duration of injury claims by 25.8 per cent. I think we're headed in the right direction, and I think that if we have the consensus of farm people coming to the agriculture department and Employment and Immigration saying, "This is what we have to do to make our farms safe," that's the way to go.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to say that one fatality on a farm is too many – for that matter, one fatality at any workplace is too many – and we must do what we can to continue to resolve that. But I strongly believe that education, information, and raising awareness of the potential hazards are the best ways to facilitate safe farming practices and, for that matter, all work practices.

Motion 510, Mr. Speaker, is redundant. We have already begun the consultation process to address this issue, and it's the best way to serve Albertans. It is impossible to legislate behaviour. I can't stress that enough. There is little evidence indicating a problem with agricultural safety. Safety is a personal commitment between employers and employees working together to create a safe workplace.

Mr. Speaker, I won't be supporting Motion 510.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise in favour of Motion 510. I will speak a little bit about my experience as a farm worker. In 1971 I worked on a dairy farm. I was 19, young, and when I started my job was given no training. I think the gentleman who I was working for didn't even know that he was supposed to train me. I was there 24/7. I think I had a couple days off every two weeks or something, and I was getting paid about 450 bucks. I was there on the farm. You know, I didn't come home; I was staying there.

Now when I look back, I don't think that the conditions I worked under were very safe. One night the cows took off. You know, they broke the fence. And here we were running around in the middle of the night with a blizzard out there, couldn't even see anything, trying to gather the cows. My concern is that now, when I look back, there were safety issues there, too.

The Minister of Municipal Affairs was talking about education. If education alone will do the job, then I don't think we need to put any cameras at red lights. We don't need sheriffs. We don't need police. We don't need safety laws if education alone will do the job. You know, here we are talking about safety and well-being and the success of not only the farm workers; we're talking about the success of the farmers, too. Agriculture is the backbone of our province, I would say.

I think that with Motion 510 we are just trying to improve farm safety here. I don't see any reason why members from all sides of the House shouldn't be supporting Motion 510. We are just talking about having these slogans, putting the slogan on the heart that "we love you; be safe," and all that. Had they been working, then we would not be having any injuries or deaths on the farm.

Like the member before me said, even one injury or one fatality is one too many. We cannot afford to have any more of those injuries or deaths on the farm. I think that for those reasons we should all be supporting Motion 510 so that we can give rights to farm workers, including workers' compensation and all the other rights they should have which they have been denied for a long time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'll be brief. It's obvious, probably, to everyone in this Assembly that I am not a farmer, never have been, probably never will be. But relative to this Motion 510 I just want to reiterate what I've been hearing in debate today; that is, that this motion is redundant. We have a study, and we've got, you know, two ministers out looking at this issue. I believe it is more complex than some of the hon. members across the way maybe have been able to, in their minds, categorize it. I say the family worker, the employed worker, the family member that's – I mean, there's a lot of complexity around when you work at home and who's there, who's not paid, who is paid.

I did marry into a farming family. Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that I was quite shocked one day when I was at the farm and my brother-in-law, who used a little motorcycle to herd cows all the time – all the time – used it as a vehicle to do the job that they were working on, one day was out just recreating. I remember him walking in the door, and he'd been just out playing in the ditch and took all the skin off his face. By the time I wedged the dirt out of his mouth and out of his eyelids and determined that it wasn't ketchup on his face, that he'd really injured himself, we had quite a significant injury there.

I would say that we already have somebody looking into this. They've committed to come back to this Assembly in the fall, to come with some recommendations. This motion is redundant.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: I hate to interrupt, hon. minister, but under Standing Order 8(3), which provides for up to five minutes for the sponsor of a motion other than a government motion to close debate, I'd like to invite the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View to close debate on Motion 510.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to all the members who've commented on this motion. I think it should be obvious that we've been wrestling with this issue for over a decade. It's clear that we're discriminating against farm workers.

We are treating them as second-class citizens. We are imposing undue and unfair, unjust burdens on them and their families when they're injured without compensation or without recourse apart from the courts.

I don't think anyone would be remiss in supporting this motion. It's not a commitment to anything except to extend our work as a Legislature to ensure that we're providing reasonable, equal, just access to occupational health and safety legislation and the protection of these workers and their families. So I hope hon. members will stand in support of this very basic motion that would bring us in line with the rest of Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[The voice vote indicated that Motion Other than Government Motion 510 lost]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated.

Hon. members, I wish to have unanimous consent to revert to introductions briefly.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you to all members for allowing me to revert to introductions. With us today are two constituents from Edmonton-Castle Downs who are eagerly awaiting the debate on Bill 44 no matter what time of the night it may come. One of them is Mr. John Winslow, owner and operator of JRW Logistics, a safety professional and a very active blogger and a Twitterer as well. Cellphones are not allowed up there, so he won't be twittering, but he'll be listening. His partner, Richard LeSueur, resource development co-ordinator of the Alberta Food Bank Network, is also involved with Kiwanis in Edmonton and with the Heritage Festival. I welcome both of these constituents. They're already standing. I'd ask the Assembly to extend a warm welcome.

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Bill 25

Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise this evening to move third reading of Bill 25.

The Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2009, legally transfers the pre-1992 unfunded liability to government effective September 1, 2009. The amendment act will also incorporate changes to the payment and governance arrangements pertaining to the pre-1992 unfunded liability. Under the November 2007 memorandum of agreement the government agreed to pay the teachers' portion of the pre-1992 . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, it's procedural that I need to interrupt you here. This is a money bill, so we need a minister to move it.

Ms Evans: I would be pleased to do so and allow my colleague to complete his comments if that would be appropriate.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister of finance has moved Bill 25.

Hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, please proceed.

Mr. Marz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm almost finished. As I was saying, under the November 2007 memorandum of agreement the government agreed to pay the teachers' portion of the pre-1992 unfunded liability payments till August 31, 2009, then assume the total pre-1992 unfunded liability on September 1, 2009.

I'd encourage all of my colleagues in the Legislature to fully support third reading of Bill 25. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, it has just occurred to the chair that this bill is about the teachers' pension. There was a note from the Ethics Commissioner that if whoever is present in the Chamber has a conflict of interest, please declare and absent yourself from the Assembly, from the debate.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I have a conflict, and I'll withdraw and not take part in the debate or the vote.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay, hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. As the Ethics Commissioner has made it extremely clear in his ruling to this House that I do not have a conflict of interest even though I am a retired teacher in receipt of a pension, I will proceed. However, I will not vote on this although the Ethics Commissioner has indicated that I have every right to vote on Bill 25. When it first came up, I indicated that I would not be voting on this particular bill, but I will put forward some comments.

I'm extremely supportive of Bill 25. It's the right thing. It should have been done decades ago. [interjections]

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity has the floor.

Please continue.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. As I indicated, Bill 25 is a very good piece of legislation which should have been resolved decades ago. Had it been resolved decades ago, if the government had lived up to its portion of the unfunded liability, the debt associated with the unfunded liability would not be at $8.6 billion at this particular time.

This bill solved a lot of problems. It created labour peace for five years for students, teachers, and parents. It recognized the value of teachers both in terms of their pensions and also in terms of their right to receive a wage raise equivalent to those that MLAs had been receiving, the difference being that MLAs to a large extent voted for their own increases whereas teachers were subject to the collective bargaining process.

Bill 25 created an environment whereby the major focus for teachers and students was learning because, as I say, with the exception of concerns over working conditions a five-year period of peace was bought. Based on my 34 years of teaching and having served on numerous strike committees, that peace is something that I value to a great extent. Later on this evening we'll be talking about Bill 44, and I'll reserve my comments to that time, but it's the diametric opposite of the value that's being put forward in Bill 25.

Now, it is my hope that this government recognizes that the longer they delay paying off the unfunded liability, the greater that unfunded liability will climb. I've already stated in previous debates that the government's current deficit has exceeded the $23 billion that Ralph Klein was so keen on bragging that he had paid down. When it comes to the infrastructure deficit, when you add on this particular $8.6 billion, when you add on at least another $1.5 billion in unfunded liabilities of other public-sector groups, when you add on $4.7 billion worth of debt, you see that we are in worse shape than we were back in 1993, when the government used various draconian methods, basically on the backs of public servants, to defeat the debt at that time. Thanks to the rise in nonrenewable oil and gas prices, some of the harm that was done was softened.

However, in the process we lost half our hospitals in Calgary. It seems that we are, or at least the government is, about to repeat history in terms of driving individuals away.

Bill 25 is a laudable bill. It is something that every Albertan can celebrate. But unless, as I began, the government takes sequential steps in a timely manner to pay off this deficit, it is projected to rise to as high as $45 billion over the next 40 to 45 years. To date the government has basically been paying the minimum payments, which is the equivalent of just paying what your credit card states is your minimum payment, and of course the interest increases. That amount has been approximately $83 million a year. Unless the government makes sizable payments over the next series of years despite our recessionary experience, the debt is only going to worsen. The sustainability fund, the stability fund will have been burned through by that time.

I urge the government to not only pass Bill 25 but live up to the payment expectations and remove the unfunded liability so that we can enjoy the fruits of our educational labour now and into the future. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a quick comment on what I have just heard. The member feels and claims that with the passage of this particular piece of legislation addressing the issue of the unfunded pension liability that teachers have had, the government has – and I’m quoting him – bought labour peace. Well, I find that very insulting. I wonder how teachers out there would feel if they knew that this member of the Liberal opposition feels that their peace – their desire to downsize classroom sizes, their desire to have adequate pay, their desire for ongoing professional development, all that – has been bought with dollars, that we bought their peace, that we basically paid them off to be quiet and not strike and not complain for the next number of years because they have received a number of dollars.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I had the pleasure of chairing the committee that dealt with the unfunded pension liability. I can tell you that nothing was bought. Teachers, as professionals who care about the quality of education and our children’s education, would not allow their respect for the profession and their care for the children to be bought simply with dollars for labour peace. The settling of this unfunded pension liability simply was deemed by government to be the right thing to do at that time and not in exchange.

Perhaps the member, if he wanted to rise and talk on the issue, should read the agreement. It is not in exchange for anything. It was deemed to be the right thing to do for Alberta teachers, to attract more teachers in the future, for the teachers of the future, to shift the responsibility from more seasoned teachers that was placed on the younger teachers, and, basically, to bring stability into the education system.

Again, Mr. Speaker, it’s difficult not to rise and address this comment because it’s just insulting to education and to individual teachers.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I’d like to just make a few comments with respect to this bill, but before I begin, I’d like to compliment the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs. This is the nicest thing I’ve ever heard a member of this party say about a union. In fact, it’s almost the only nice thing that I’ve ever heard members of this party say about unions.

We know, Mr. Speaker, that the government had a long-term problem on its hands with respect to that liability, and we also know that the young teachers were being badly hurt and paying exorbitant amounts in order to service the liability, which really was created in the first place by the government.

Just to clarify the situation, this was a negotiation. The teachers had a long-term goal of getting a resolution for the pension liability, which they accomplished. The deal that was reached was for a four-year agreement. You know, perhaps it was a little indelicate the way it was put by one of the previous speakers, but in fact it was a negotiated settlement and, I think, a good one. I think this was all around a good deal. I’d like to commend the Alberta Teachers’ Association for their patience and perseverance because it wasn’t too long ago that a previous Education minister seemed to delight in provoking conflict with the Alberta Teachers’ Association.

There was a very long and successful fight that was waged by the teachers for fairness and justice. I want to mention not just the current president of the Alberta Teachers’ Association but the past president of the Alberta Teachers’ Association, Larry Booi, who led a very successful battle against this government’s intransigence.

Ultimately, the government did reach an agreement that I think is balanced and provides benefits for both sides, which is the essence of reaching an agreement under collective bargaining. That’s what you strive for, and I would say, Mr. Speaker, that 80 or 90 per cent of the time that is actually accomplished. It’s more easily accomplished when there is a fair and balanced playing field, but notwithstanding the lack of such in this province, there was, in fact, a decent agreement. I think that it will provide a good security for the future and fairness to those younger members who are entering the teaching profession.

I am pleased to support this bill, and I’m happy to do so on behalf of my caucus. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and join debate on Bill 25 at third reading. Okay. Let’s just acknowledge that the government brought this bill forward because it was the right thing to do, and the Alberta Teachers’ Association, immediately after this all was worked out, negotiated an unprecedented five-year collective agreement because it was the right thing to do. Now we’ve taken the partisanship out of it, and we get back to the business of talking about the bill.

I want to reiterate and agree with the comments from my colleague from Calgary-Varsity regarding the need, now that this bill is about to become law, to get down to the business of funding the unfunded liability, paying down the debt, if you will. The faster we do that, the better.

There are a couple of reasons for that. I know the minister of finance can very much relate to the first reason because I know that this has been an important issue to her in recent months, perhaps even years, the notion that there are a whole bunch of Albertans and a whole bunch of Canadians who do not have the savings anymore – if they ever did, they certainly don’t anymore given the stock market meltdown – to fund their own retirements. The leading edge of the baby boom is coming up on retirement age pretty quick, and there are a whole bunch of us to follow. I believe, if I remember my population demographics correctly, it was either the year that I was born or the year immediately after that the baby boom hit its biggest bulge. We’ve got 10 years to go, those of us who are my age, before we hit the traditional retirement age of 65.

You know, some of the experts, the actuaries and investment professionals, say that that might just about be enough, 10 years, to make back what people lost on their retirement savings plans, might just be enough time. It's going to take that long, they think, because of the nature of this economic meltdown, because of the nature of the credit crunch, because of the nature of the housing meltdown in the United States. There are a lot of fundamental and systemic things wrong with our economy. The chickens came home to roost, if you will, starting a couple of years ago down in the United States. When a global economy unwinds with the speed and the ferocity that this one did, you need to take some time to put the pieces back together again. So we are looking at perhaps a 10-year time frame, perhaps a little bit shorter, perhaps even longer, but it's going to be a while. That's just talking, Mr. Speaker, about individual Canadians' retirement savings plans.

I was shocked and appalled to read today that of the Canadians who are in the 60th to 80th percentile of income level, those who are still working and who have not yet retired, the median RSP is only worth $35,000. That's all. I know the minister of finance has been talking with her provincial counterparts and with her federal counterpart about options around some kind of government pension plan or pension supplements, however it may come down in the next several months that they work on this, to help make sure that when baby boomers do retire, they're not a horrendous drain on the taxpaying workforce that follows them. I know that's a great concern to her.

I look at a bill like Bill 25, and I say, "Well, that hardly solves the problem across the board, but it does solve a good chunk of the problem," again provided the minister and her counterpart the President of the Treasury Board and the rest of cabinet commit to paying down this unfunded liability in as timely a fashion as they can afford to.

The other thing was a personal experience, and it happened over the weekend in two different places. On Saturday morning I attended the Western Canada high school graduation. I was a platform guest there. That is a phenomenally enjoyable annual event, to see students from arguably one of the best high schools in the province, if not the known universe, graduating and about to take on their adult lives.

When you're a platform guest at the Western Canada high school graduation, of course, the first couple of rows that you look out on before you look at the graduands are the teaching faculty. I should have done some research on this. I didn't think to until this struck me as I was listening to the Member for Calgary-Varsity speak to this. I know that I was looking around at the teachers and trying to guess their ages. Now, teaching can be a stressful profession, especially at this time of the year when every single sports team in your school but one is still advancing to the city-wide finals and when exams are coming up and you've got a graduation ceremony to prepare, and all the rest of that. But I swear, Mr. Speaker, there were not a whole lot of teachers of the Western Canada faculty who looked to be under the age of 30. There weren't a lot who looked to be under the age of 40. I think that that's a problem.

No matter whether you're talking about teaching, nursing, politics, broadcasting, sanitation engineers, bus drivers, grocery clerks, no matter what endeavour you want to talk about, the profession, the job, the skill, and all the people in it are reinvigorated by the addition of new, young, fresh, eager talent, and that talent has been missing relative to, I think, the desired potential for hiring new teachers. That's been missing both in the hiring and especially in the retention of teachers in this province because absent Bill 25, far too high a percentage of Alberta teachers' paycheques goes to their pension plan. They can get a better deal teaching in British Columbia, teaching in Vancouver, teaching in Saskatoon, probably even teaching in Toronto, and that becomes over time a real problem.

The passage of this bill and the serious attention to the prompt paydown of the unfunded liability by this government stand to turn that around and reverse it and attract a lot of new talent to the teaching profession in Alberta at just the time when it's needed because the baby-boom teachers are starting to retire in droves – well, they may be putting it off a little bit given what's happened to the economy, but they're looking forward to retiring as soon as they possibly can – and certainly retain those younger teachers once they're into the system.

Now, the other experience I had on the weekend, Mr. Speaker, was at the Lilac Festival on 4th Street S.W. in my wonderful constituency, in my fantastic – what do you call your constituency, hon. member?

Ms Blakeman: Fabulous.

Mr. Taylor: Fabulous. Okay. Mine is wonderful. Mine is terrific. Mine is rock 'n' rolling. The constituency of Calgary-Currie.

It's one of the most awesome annual events anywhere, I think, in this province, certainly one of the most awesome one-day events, where a hundred thousand people or more turn out to attend the Lilac Festival. The Member for Calgary-Buffalo and I had a booth there, and we talked to an awful lot of people – an awful lot of people – quite a number of whom were teachers. Based on what the teachers told us – most of the rest, you know, had a variety of things to say – you may have some damage control to undertake a little later on tonight when we get around to third reading debate of Bill 44 because they certainly are not happy with that. But we take our victories where we can, Mr. Speaker, and Bill 25 will certainly ease the pressure on the classroom and incent new teachers to teach here in Alberta rather than going somewhere else. Once they're in the classroom, hopefully, it will help to incent them to stay.

I'm going to support this bill, and I would urge all other members in the House to do the same. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, now the chair shall call the question on Bill 25.

[Motion carried; Bill 25 read a third time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair shall now call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 32 Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. As hon. members will recall, we commenced Committee of the Whole on this bill last week but only had three or four minutes, I believe, so I'd like to take just a few moments now to complete answering some of the questions that were raised in second reading debate on the bill. Last time I addressed questions regarding potential implications for the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement with British Columbia and, as well, the question around the role of stakeholders under the review of agencies, boards, and commissions that is mandated through the proposed legislation.

There are a few other points I'd just like to quickly mention, Mr. Chair. One hon. member raised the question: why does Bill 32 give ministers the ability to waive maximum years of service for agency appointees? As I think most members know, Bill 32 allows for a person to be appointed to an agency in excess of the maximum years of service when the responsible minister believes that to be necessary to ensure effective operation of the public agency. This sets a strict standard to be met before there can be a deviation from a general rule of 10- and 12-year maximums. The flexibility is necessary to ensure that there is always adequate succession planning and staggering of appointments – in other words, good governance practice – and to address the situation of agencies whose members have such highly specialized expertise that recruitment of new and fully qualified replacement members is not always possible. Again, as we discussed in second reading, the bill has significant flexibility built into it to support the governance practices that are proposed in the legislation.

Another question was raised with respect to the appointment and re-appointment of senior and elected officials to agencies, boards, and commissions. Just on that point, Mr. Chair, I wanted to say that it's certainly true that the task force recognized that there can be good reasons in specific situations to appoint senior and elected officials to an agency, board, or commission. Indeed, there are certain circumstances where it is vital to have the specific knowledge and expertise of a department's representative. Consistent with this the framework provided that elected or senior officials should only be appointed to agencies when their input is important for the agency to achieve its mandate and when that input cannot be provided by any other member of the agency, board, or commission who is not a senior or elected official.

The task force report based its recommendation on potential conflicts of interest and undermining of the role of the chair. These are issues which can be fully addressed through codes of conduct and mandate and roles documents as provided for in the act. I'd just add, Mr. Chair, that both of those, the codes of conduct and the mandate and roles documents, are public documents which will be available on the Agency Governance Secretariat website for all to review and to raise questions with respect to if necessary.

Another area that was questioned in second reading. Actually, I believe it was a question raised by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, who was concerned about the possibility that the bill could restrain the independence of the local authorities pension plan board of trustees. Again, to answer this, Mr. Chair, we have to go back to the basic intent of the bill, which is to provide a general set of governance principles that will be applicable to all agencies, boards, and commissions, approximately 250, as we discussed last time.

Key principles underlying the bill include the principle of agency accountability to government and ministerial accountability to the Legislative Assembly and the public. These principles apply to all agencies, including the local authorities pension plan board of trustees. Once authority has been delegated to an agency, it is responsible to government for how it carries out that responsibility. Of course, Mr. Chair, we have to remember that the delegation of responsibility is through other legislation, enabling legislation for the particular agency, board, or commission in question.

Bill 32 reflects the fact that in order to be held properly accountable, an agency must have sufficient autonomy in carrying out its responsibilities. The bill does not propose to improperly restrict any agency's autonomy, especially its autonomy with respect to its day-to-day operations. The bill's requirement for competence-based appointments applies to all appointees to public agencies whether they are appointed directly by stakeholder groups or appointed by government in response to a nomination by stakeholders. Mr. Chair, I would find it hard to envision anyone making an argument that in some way a move to competency-based appointments is not in the public interest or is not in the interests of better functioning of any agency, board, or commission. Surely there can be no serious objection to that.

Another question that was raised, Mr. Chair, had to do with the mandatory review of agencies as proposed in the legislation. A suggestion was made that every seven years is not long enough. Just in response to that, briefly, the reviews include a thorough evaluation of the agency's mandate and operations. Reviewing every seven years provides a better balance between the extensive costs of undertaking reviews for the almost 250 agencies and the importance of monitoring ongoing agency effectiveness. Seven years is the maximum time between reviews. Individual ministers may choose under the legislation to conduct the review at shorter intervals. So, again, the flexibility is there.

Finally, I'd just like to talk briefly about the question that was raised, I believe, by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar about policy field committees. The member questioned whether those committees should have a role under this bill. As members will know, Mr. Chair, under the standing orders, I believe specifically 52.07, the annual reports of each agency, board, and commission are permanently referred to their respective policy field committees. Further, "A Policy Field Committee may on its own initiative . . . inquire into any matter concerned with the structure, organization, operation, efficiency or service delivery of any sector of public policy within its mandate." Given this broad jurisdiction, I would submit that the mechanism already exists for the policy field committees to make inquiries into any agency, board, or commission. It is not necessary and really not consistent with the intent of the legislation for them to be given any further specific role under this bill.

I hope, Mr. Chair, that I've addressed at least the major questions that were raised in second reading debate. I will take my place and await to hear from other members.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Well, this is a very, very important piece of legislation, Bill 32, the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act, 2009. It will codify a framework and processes that have been developed to improve the management and accountability of agencies, boards, and commissions. Those bodies deal with 50 per cent of the provincial budget, showing the importance of the issue.

There are, as my colleague from Edmonton-Rutherford pointed out, a couple of hundred of these boards, agencies, and commissions in this province. The list just goes on and on and on. It fills one, two, three, four, five full pages of fairly small print in the Agency Governance Secretariat inventory. Like I said, this represents half our provincial budget. This represents half our provincial spending. This represents half the government's annual operating expenditures, for which this government must be accountable to the taxpayers.

We're in an interesting position, a bit of a dichotomy, I guess, where, on one hand, these agencies, boards, and commissions need to be able to operate at arm's length from government, and on the other hand they need to be accountable to the minister to whom they ultimately report, especially if there's money involved. Now, that doesn't mean that the minister has to sit there and hold their hand. That doesn't mean that the minister has to attend every meeting. I wouldn't for a moment suggest that the minister should do anything close to that. But as we're setting up the way things are supposed to work under Bill 32, we need to make sure that we're setting things up in such a way that the boards and agencies and commissions are accountable through the minister to whom they ultimately report, through the government to the people, the taxpayers of Alberta, since they do spend so much of our money: spend it, invest it, are responsible for the expenditure of it, are responsible for the role that our tax dollars are put to by this government through the agencies, boards, and commissions that report to it.

How to attack this. You know, on one level I'm tempted to say, "Well, we'll have to see how this works out" because in regard to the mandate and roles documents, for instance, Bill 32 will require agencies to have a mandate and roles document developed within three months, and those documents will be developed between the agency and the minister responsible. That's good. There's a three-year limit on the document. At the end of three years it has to be reviewed and updated. I think that's good.

There are transitional issues addressed around mandate and roles documents. Say, for instance, an agency, board, or commission already has a document drawn up that meets the requirements of this act. It can carry over. That's good, I think.

The section regarding codes of conduct requires agencies, boards, and commissions to implement and make public a code of conduct governing members and employees. This is an important issue, Mr. Chair, because agencies, boards, and commissions are working for the public, yet they are not directly accountable to the public in the same way that elected officials are. This makes the code of conduct a key way for the public to have some checks on these bodies. I think that's pretty key when they're responsible for spending 50 cents out of every tax dollar that we fork over to the government of Alberta.

What's crucial here, Mr. Chair, is that there is monitoring of these bodies to ensure that the codes of conduct are being followed. Now, the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford said that mandate and roles documents and codes of conduct are to be public documents and that they will be available on the Agency Governance Secretariat directory. He didn't say when. I'm going to assume – and perhaps he wants to add a little bit of clarification here – that they're going to be ready and available within three months of the passage of this bill. If not, I'm hoping that he can give us some sense of when they will be.

You know, while just making the mandates and roles documents and the codes of conduct public and accessible and available to the public – please, don't get me wrong here – is vitally important, and I don't want to downplay the importance, in and of itself it's not enough.

One of the things, I think, in terms of codes of conduct, that is going to be of vital importance is whether the minutes of the meetings of agencies, boards, and commissions are taken and made public and posted so that we the people and we the people's representatives, the elected officials in this Assembly, can know when conflicts of interest arise and can see that these codes of conduct are being adhered to.

I bring this up, Mr. Chair, because it came to my attention about a month ago that potential or perceived conflicts of interest are not always perceived by the people who find themselves in that position. Case in point: the decision by AIMCo to, depending on who you are and on which side of the fence you sit on this issue, bail out or make a wise investment of our dollars in the heritage fund, or perhaps a bit of both, in Precision Drilling. The issue became public, and then we raised the further issue in this House that the vice-chair of AIMCo, George Gosbee, is a very good and long-time friend of the founder of Precision Drilling, Hank Swartout.

Now, Hank Swartout has not had anything directly to do with Precision Drilling for I think it's a couple of years now. He stepped down as chair or chief executive of Precision Drilling and sold his shares, retired in essence, from his role as founder – well, if you can retire as founder; I don't know if you can – as the guy who is running the business he started, and divested himself of his shares. Mr. Gosbee has no direct involvement in Precision Drilling. However, Mr. Gosbee and Mr. Swartout, who have a long-standing business and, it seems, personal relationship, co-own a business which, admittedly, has nothing directly to do with either the energy industry or the decision by AIMCo to invest in an energy company.

Quite apart from the optics of that, which, as I think all members of this House who have any oil and gas or oil field servicing businesses in their constituency know very well, was widely interpreted across the industry to be a situation of the government deciding to pick winners and losers in the business, they do co-own a heliskiing operation. When I last checked – and that was very recently – unless there's been something that changed in the last few days, they are both directors of North West Upgrading. They both sit on the board of North West Upgrading.

While nothing official has been announced or even hinted at by the government officially and publicly, the word on the street, the buzz on the street, is that North West Upgrading is widely speculated to be in line for a contract from the government that involves the upgrading of bitumen in kind. Now, whether that comes to be or not remains to be seen. Again let me stress, Mr. Chairman, that what I am putting on the record here, if you will, is what the buzz on the street is. And the buzz on the street can be horribly wrong or devastatingly accurate or anything in between, I suppose.

What it comes down to is that it is not best practice for a person who sits on the board of AIMCo – whether they hold the title of vice-chair or not is, I think, not the most relevant factor here – to be involved in discussions of and finally by his own admission voting on whether to invest public dollars in a company that was founded by a good friend and long-time business associate. This is probably going to get some people mad at me, which doesn't bother me because that happens on a regular basis and has for years predating my getting elected. One of the things about being a talk show host is to get people mad at you on a regular basis.

You know, saying that Mr. Swartout has no fiduciary, no pecuniary interest in Precision Drilling is certainly one thing, Mr. Chairman, and the facts are that he doesn't. But walking away completely from the company that you founded, a company that you started from scratch and built into the biggest driller in North America now, I believe, and then watching the company get into trouble, which Precision Drilling did do with its purchase of – oh, boy, the name escapes me – the drilling firm down in Texas that prompted the need for, again depending on which side of the fence you sit, the bail-out/wise investment of public money on behalf of the people of Alberta, you know, asking a guy to completely step away from that, from what has been his baby, is a bit like asking a parent, once their flesh-and-blood baby celebrates his or her 18th birthday and officially in the eyes of the law becomes an adult, to walk completely away and wash their hands totally of anything they ever had to do with the parenting of that child. It doesn't happen.

Yes, your child is now an adult, seen by the law to be fully capable of getting married, getting drunk, going off to war, signing contracts, going into debt, making investments, buying lottery tickets, getting divorced, now even getting married to same-sex partners, whatever that person wants. In the eyes of the law that person is an adult and can go ahead and do that, and that includes making bad decisions of the sort that adults make and, you know, having to live with the consequences of those decisions. But, of course, Mr. Chair, when parents get involved or when parents are involved – and they are; there are no two ways around that – it's just not as easy as walking away and washing your hands of it. If your adult-age kid gets himself or herself into a jackpot, you bleed inside for them, and your instinct is to go to bat for them, and your instinct is to talk to people, to seek out people who may be able to help get them out of trouble, ameliorate the situation, whatever. I don't think that it's all that different in business.

I'm not for a moment suggesting that Mr. Swartout did anything improper. I'm not for a moment suggesting that Mr. Gosbee had anything but the purest of intentions when he voted in favour of that investment. He looked at it, I'm going to suggest to this House, and thought that it was a wise investment to make on behalf of the people of Alberta. Certainly, in the first few weeks after the investment it appeared that that's the way it had turned out, but the fact that he voted, given his prior direct relationship with Mr. Swartout and given that their paths do still cross on a regular basis in other areas, doesn't really pass the smell test. It's a perceived or potential, or perhaps both, conflict of interest, and I don't believe that this bill adequately addresses that.

When I start to see the mandates and roles document for AIMCo and the code of conduct for AIMCo, perhaps I'll change my opinion and perhaps not. I think that this bill falls at least a little bit and perhaps a lot short of actually achieving best practice around the issue of conflict of interest. I would strongly suggest that there's some work that we could do on this bill that would improve those sections. I think I'll leave it at that, Mr. Chair, and let others join the debate.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to join debate in Committee of the Whole on Bill 32, the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act. I was pleased to see the introduction of this bill because over my now 13 years in the Assembly there's been a sort of ebb and flow of whether the government chooses to take responsibility for what the public agencies that it creates are actually doing. I can remember being in Public Accounts and questioning the Auditor General on, you know, how responsible, on what kind of procedures and policies these various delegated administrative organizations – that's the other terminology for them – had. How did the government keep track of them? Which were the best ones? Who was on the board? How were they chosen?

The response from the Auditor General at the time was that it was very uneven, and actually the ministry that was the best at it was the then ministry of – oh, boy. It's changed names so many times. I'm going to guess it was called community development then. Of course, they were responsible for a lot of the foundations that gave away lottery-money grants. A number of other agencies were under them. So I have watched this progression for some time.

Of course, with the creation of the regional health authorities that was another way of the government being able to step back and say:

well, we're not responsible. We actually had ministers of the Crown saying: "Don't ask me that question. I'm not responsible for that. Go and ask the regional health authorities." Well, we couldn't ask the regional health authorities. They don't sit in this House. We went through a period of time when the government ministers would not respond to any questions on health care because the regional health authorities were delegated to do this work, so the minister wasn't going to respond, or the Premier wouldn't respond to it. You know, we went back and did some digging and looked through the legislation and went: "You know what? Yes, you are. You're listed in the act as the minister that's responsible for this act. You set their budget and allocate it. You have to answer the questions about it. We have no other ability to question anybody else."

Fine. Then we were able to get the minister of health to answer questions about health and health delivery even though the vehicle that was being used for it was the public agency that was then known as the regional health authority. We had something of the same sort of thing happen when the Alberta Health Services Board was set up, what was known as the superboard.

I was very pleased to see the preamble in this bill. The preamble is first. It sets the tone and the context for the rest of the bill. If you kind of wade into these bills – and this is a biggie, folks. For those of you following along at home, at 51 pages this is a bigger bill than you usually get in this House. If you sort of get partway into this bill and you kind of get lost and you forget what the heck this is all about, go back to the preamble because that sets the context for what this is about. What we have here is:

Whereas Ministers of the Crown are accountable to the public for the activities and performance of public agencies in their ministries;

Whereas public agencies are responsible for their activities and for the fulfilment of their mandates, and are accountable to their responsible Minister respecting their activities, successes and failures;

Whereas public agencies require varying degrees of authority to fulfil their mandates; and

Whereas clear communication and transparency are desirable with respect to the governance, mandates and activities of public agencies;

Therefore Her Majesty, by and with the advice, et cetera, et cetera, and they go on into the actual part of the bill.

This clearly sets out that there is a line both ways on responsibility and accountability, but ultimately the minister is responsible for giving those delegated administrative organizations or public agencies or agencies, boards, and commissions, however you want to talk about them, a good structure and good policy to carry forward their work. Those agencies must be responsible and account back, which has also been a long-running problem. The agencies themselves weren't necessarily giving the minister a report, so it was hard for the minister to stand up in budget debates, for example, or in the Public Accounts Committee and say, "Yes, well, I know this particular public agency has been doing thus and so." If there was no reporting structure, how did the minister know?

This is a good idea. This bill is a good idea. It is setting up that structure of governance. There is an expectation there that these public agencies, boards, and commissions will have governance policies in place, that they will have an auditing function in place, that they will report back to their responsible minister, and that their responsible minister will be responsible and will be able to be kept informed and will be able to answer questions in this House in being accountable back to the taxpayer, from whence the money came.

Let me also be clear here that that includes when the money is coming from lotteries. There's been a big division here about: well, you know, we don't have to talk to you because our money came from lotteries. Well, yes, you do, actually, because one way or another that is money that this government has to be declarative for and has to be transparent about how they spend it.

You know, the other thing that happened, which I hope is clarified through this, is that we would have a situation where the government set up a delegated administrative organization or an agency, board, or commission, whatever you want to call it, and gave them responsibility for completing a task without giving them authority to complete a task, which was also a bit of a trick. So when they actually had to order somebody to do something, they actually didn't have the authority to do it. These, I hope, have been addressed.

Most of this is flowing from recommendations that were made in '04-05 from the Auditor General under cross-ministry recommendations. Their two key recommendations were that "the Deputy Minister of Executive Council update Alberta public sector governance principles and guidance so that they are consistent with . . . good practices for recruiting, evaluating and training directors" – and my colleague has spoken somewhat about why that becomes really critical – and secondly, the Auditor General recommends that "guidance include a statement that governing boards evaluate and report publicly their own performance against both . . . public sector principles and their own board governance policies" so that they test themselves and they answer back. They're responsible.

This is important. It is covering 250 agencies and a schvack of money. [interjection] Yeah, over a hundred billion of public assets. That's a lot of money. It does cover a range, you know. Going from banking, health care, education, regulatory management, social services, it goes from AIMCo down to some very small organizations that the government creates to carry out its business.

This has been a 20-year movement in a change of structure. Government used to do everything through its own departments and its own public servants. Increasingly we see things now sort of farmed out to these agencies, boards, and commissions and/or contracted out to a different sector, usually the not-for-profit sector, particularly around social services, for example. It is really important that we have that same rigour, that same muscular reporting strength to come back through to this Assembly so that ministers are empowered to give us some straight answers, frankly, and are able to get the information to do that. So I am very glad, having gone from that very first time I raised this with the Auditor General – I think it was my first or second budget debate, so '97 or '98 – to see this come forward in the manner that it does.

I think the second thing that's really critical is that what we don't have right now is a good grasp in these agencies, boards, and commissions, mostly because they didn't have to. There was no requirement made of them – not that there was any sort of nefariousness; it just wasn't there, and people didn't think of it – that that same level of understanding of conflict of interest be instilled into these agencies as we operate within this House. In many cases they're dealing with as much money as a minister is and have as much of a long-reaching effect on the public.

We've run into that, and here's one tiny little example. You know, there has been quite a bit of controversy around the Mazankowski centre and troubles with the building there. So we were a little shocked, actually, to see that one of the people that was appointed to the new Health Services Board was, in fact, the CEO of the company that had a major contract with Alberta Health, a number of different contracts, actually, to provide engineering and building services. This person is now sitting on that Health Services Board, which is, to my ear, the definition of conflict of interest. That Health Services Board is now deciding on giving contracts back to building and engineering firms to build more health services, more hospitals, more clinics. That is the very definition of conflict of interest.

Not a lot that can be done about this when there's nothing that sets that out in the structure. We, in fact, had made a complaint to the Ethics Commissioner that this needed to be looked at, and the response we got back from the Ethics Commissioner was: there's no MLA involved in this. So that took away one venue. But there was nothing really in place. There were no rules there in which that conflict of interest could be recognized. That is far more serious when we don't even have the structures in place that recognize things like that.

I mean, we used to have a situation in Calgary where we had – let me see if I can remember this. The individual owned a private clinic that did eye surgeries, I think. [interjection] No, it's the other one, the brothers. Say it again. [interjection] No. Okay. It was some kind of surgery that ended up being contracted out – let's say hip surgeries – and the individual who was on the regional health authority was also a director of medical services and also owned a private clinic. Once again, they could essentially be on the governing body that gave themselves and their private company business. That is a conflict of interest.

I'm hoping that this piece of legislation will stand as a really exemplary structure that will give us strong, healthy, transparent, and accountable public agencies, boards, and commissions in which all public members and members of the public are confident and comfortable in looking at their structure and understanding what they do and understanding where their money is coming from and where it's going and that reports up to the ministers. This idea that we would actually be appointing people into those very important positions so that they could then work themselves into additional contracts would be a thing of so far in the past that it would get buried with the dinosaurs and turn into more oil for us to pump out of the ground.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, for my being allowed to comment on Bill 32 in Committee of the Whole. I'm happy to support the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act. I hope it does really turn into a shining example and that we are first in the nation in our accountability on this. Please let us lead this in something that is exemplary.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'd like to begin by thanking the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford for sponsoring Bill 32, Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act. I also want to thank him for stating the underlying principle associated with this bill, and that principle is competency.

Over the years, as the hon. members for Calgary-Currie and Edmonton-Centre pointed out, there has been a great deal of suspicion. It's not just clouds of suspicion. It has been more like a storm of suspicion that has swirled around the appointments of members of agencies, boards, and commissions. As has already previously been pointed out, a hundred billion dollars of Alberta expenditures have to deal with this bill. It has been pointed out also that the agencies, boards, and commissions account for 50 per cent of government spending. So getting the right people in place is extremely important.

For example, George Gosbee, who is obviously a very intelligent man and a wonderful Alberta entrepreneur, is also an owner and shareholder in an investment banking company that researches and recommends how oil companies, gas companies, et cetera, should function. Now, the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie already pointed out the Gosbee-Swartout connection and the overlap with AIMCo and Precision Drilling. One of the reasons Precision Drilling, that investment, soared as quickly as it did had to do with the layoff of a significant number of employees. Whether Precision Drilling will continue to be effective remains to be seen, but those initial increases were at the expense of the laying off of a significant number of employees.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre also pointed out the potential conflict with the appointment of the CEO of Stantec onto the Alberta Health Services Board. It's going to be really hard for that person to be in attendance at major meetings, especially those that involve any type of infrastructure, because Stantec has a very good reputation in this province for building a variety of forms of infrastructure; for example, for being involved in the construction of the Trans-Canada highway on 16th Avenue, going between University Heights and the Foothills hospital, where Calgary-Varsity begins. For that individual to be able to contribute his entrepreneurial advice, as I say, the number of times he'll have to absent himself from meetings because the potential of contracting is discussed is a concern. Also, because he's the chief shareholder for the Stantec company and he was not required to divest himself of any Stantec stock, that also adds to the perception of conflict of interest.

However, I remain hopeful that Bill 32 is going to address what to a large extent had been a partisan patronage trough where competency was secondary to Conservative connection. I'm hoping that in this new era of professed transparency and accountability we'll actually see it materialize.

Also, the Member for Edmonton-Centre pointed out her historical membership on Public Accounts. I'm pleased to say that I am currently and have been since being elected in the fall of 2004 a proud member of Public Accounts. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre noted, the Auditor General was critical in 2005 of two key aspects of ABCs. They had to do with the public-sector governance principles and guidance that needed to be consistent with current good practices for recruiting, evaluating, and training directors and that it wasn't who you knew but what you knew that had to be important. Also, the Auditor General pushed to include a statement that governing boards evaluate and report publicly. So there's the accountability and there's also the transparency that is so important and that, hopefully, Bill 32 will bring into practice.

This government has been noted for pushing more and more information from legislation and hiding it into regulation. Hopefully, the rules for Bill 32 will be as transparent and accountable as the principles upon which it is based. I'm willing to suspend reality in the hopes that this improvement in transparency and accountability actually takes place, and I am pleased to see that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford is following in the accountable traditions of his predecessor, Rick Miller, who is currently lending terrific counselling and advice to our caucus.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I see my hon. colleague from Calgary-Buffalo would like to participate if not now, in the near future.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. It's a privilege to rise and speak on Bill 32, Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act. I, too, would like to commend the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford on bringing forward a piece of legislation that has been long overdue on the plains of Alberta, and I am hopeful that it will ring in a new day of accountability. I say that I'm hopeful because I think in many instances for far too long in order to get a position on a board or commission, competency might have been a secondary trait the government was looking for in individuals to sit on these boards.

I believe that maybe what they were looking for first was whether that member was a card-carrying member of the Progressive Conservative Party or a donor to the Progressive Conservative Party or a door knocker for the Progressive Conservative Party. You can sort of see where I'm going here. I think everyone knew that, and everyone had bought into that. I think I read an article once that in a hospital district up north 23 of the 25 members were card-carrying members of the PC Party. Now, albeit there are a few PCs up there, nevertheless, when you are going to have a board, you'd think you'd find some people who are maybe of a different line of thinking. Those are some of the things that have crept up in Alberta and seem to creep up from time to time. Hopefully, this is the beginning of the end of that.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre brought up conflict of interest. Even in my brief time here I've had the occasion to ask the hon. minister from SRD what the conflict of interest rules were to sit on the Surface Rights Board. You'll remember that just recently two members of that Surface Rights Board were actively engaged in selling tickets to the Premier's dinner. Now, call me crazy, but that says that there is a conflict of interest here. I'm not saying that these people are untoward. I'm not saying that anything bad is happening. All I'm saying to anyone paying attention is that this is a conflict of interest, and it shouldn't be happening. I'm hopeful that this bill will allow some rules and regulations to be put into place where we don't have this anymore.

I just really hope the Tory party doesn't get smart and just say: "We're not going to do this anymore. We're not going to actually print their names anymore. We'll keep doing business as usual, but we won't print their names on a thing that says they were head fundraisers." Let's hope that that's not the case of what actually happens. Let's hope that they go back, implement some of these rules. They look back at what a conflict of interest is and try and follow through on that. It would allow, I believe, for Alberta to run together as a province, some decisions made by our boards and agencies to run smoother without political interference or the like. That is one thing that I would really like to see.

If you even take a look at the example that's been brought up twice here tonight about the current makeup of our superboard and the fact that a gentleman sits on there who builds hospitals, builds government projects, and then is deciding on them in a closed-door meeting, yeah, maybe he abstains himself every time these decisions are made, but I tell you what: he's cozying up to some people with a pretty significant amount of power. You all know that when you're friends with somebody, it's more difficult to vote against that person than when you don't know him from Adam and you're really just voting on the issue. When you know that Fred or Jamie or Jeff are coming back into the room and they're going to know whether they get a contract out of it or not, well, you know, it's a little harder to look them in the eye and go for coffee with them and go to the next meeting.

That's why these rules are in existence. People aren't necessarily bad people. They just say: "Ah, man. Am I going to give Fred this contract or Joe? Well, I see Fred in the meeting next week, and I don't see Joe for another couple of years. Fred gets it." That's just sometimes how the cookie crumbles.

Anyway, I tried to simplify that a little bit. We'll see how that goes. Hopefully, that gets us onto the road of some broader based accountability in this province.

Thank you, Mr. Chair. It was a privilege to be able to rise and speak on this bill. It's a start in the right direction.

The Chair: Any other hon. members? The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to speak to Bill 32. I did speak to it at second reading, so my comments will be quite brief. In general we support the bill and support the direction that's been undertaken and want to express appreciation to the task force that did review this issue. They did invite me to come and make a presentation to them, and I did that.

I want to just indicate to you a couple of points. I'm disappointed that the government has not accepted the recommendation to remove elected officials, remove MLAs from serving on these committees. I think that this has weakened the work of some of these bodies, weakened their independence, and it's increased the degree of political influence on them. So I'm disappointed that that isn't here.

I would also like to just make an additional recommendation. I think that we should have a commission of nonelected people with a very strict mandate that it be impartial, that it use its best efforts to ensure that all appointees represent the community broadly, that it make recommendations for appointments to agencies, boards, and committees based on competence, and that there be some disclosure with respect to relationships, including political affiliations, in the appointments of people, an independent commission rather than the political process we now use. This may refine it and cure some of the worst abuses. It will still be fundamentally a patronage-based system.

In my view, an independent commission of nonelected people with a clear mandate to be objective and to be impartial and nonpartisan would be a really good step that could be taken to ensure that all appointments to government agencies, boards, and committees are made on the basis of merit as opposed to partisan outlook. I would make that suggestion as a way to strengthen this legislation and to strengthen that process. I know that the government isn't going there; nevertheless, I think they should consider it. Certainly, we'll continue to push for that as we go ahead.

Those are my comments, Mr. Chairman. Thank you very much for your patience.

The Chair: Any other hon. members wish to speak on this bill? Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[The clauses of Bill 32 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 42 Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, amendments with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's, again, a privilege to speak to Bill 42, the Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009. Primarily this bill is driving at allowing bars to collect personal information on patrons as a condition of entry in order to identify troublemakers and prevent gang activity. This amendment to the provincial Gaming and Liquor Act would permit bars and nightclubs the authority to share information about problem patrons with each other.

This idea has been tried before in Alberta and has run into problems with the Privacy Commissioner. This is another attempt at trying to get this bill passed. This time I know they've sort of used the language of the day, which, again, is very strong on gangs, that represent a scourge on our streets. I believe they are a problem. So they've incorporated that language into this act to say that it's targeting gangs who, I guess, are carrying on, allegedly, coming into some nightclubs in various locations.

I guess that if I could offer some suggestions to this bill that would make this better, as we are in committee, it would be primarily looking at the definition section. That's 69.1. When we're talking about a gang member, it says there: "‘gang’ means a group of people engaged in a pattern of unlawful behaviour or in creating an atmosphere of fear or intimidation in a community." "A pattern of unlawful behaviour." Certainly, I can see that that would be a gang member, but "or in creating an atmosphere of fear or intimidation in a community" seems to be an awfully broad definition. Is that three people standing on a sidewalk? Is that 10 people in a corner in a bar? Is it five people in the side room? It just seems like a whole lot of, I guess, impetus or a wide range that people could go into with what is the definition of a gang.

I think it's very difficult, actually, for an owner of a bar or a person running a liquor establishment to really be in the best position to decipher whether or not these people are involved in a gang or gang activity. I think it's fraught with peril when we actually use this system as a matter of course.

Let's look at the next thing.

(2) For the purposes of this section, a person is associated with a gang if the person

(a) is a member of the gang.

Sure. That's okay.

(b) supports, facilitates or participates in the gang's activities, or

(c) is in the company of a person described in clause (a) or (b).

Well, look at that. Once you start going there: a person in the company of a gang member. Well, if I'm going to the pub and I'm with some guy I met on the afternoon street and he seems like a decent guy and we talk up a friendship, sort of talking about the New York Yankees game or the Boston Red Sox game, and then all of a sudden we end up in a pub in downtown Calgary, the next thing you know I'm putting my licence in, and I'm getting rejected from going into this pub regardless of the fact that a man is not a camel and he's very thirsty and needs a drink. I think that's an infringement of his civil liberties, and it just shows some overbreadth to this legislation, who's going to be hanging out with these – you know, it's not really well-tailored legislation.

I'd like to see that part of the bill, (c), "in the company of a person described in clause (a) or (b)" – if you're a gang member, yeah, maybe this legislation should apply to you, but if you're just hanging out with a gang member or you might not know that this guy is a gang member or the girl is a gang member, well, you shouldn't be caught by this. It should be a gang member – and that maybe has some justification for this law – but by no means should this apply to you when you're in the company of a person described in clause (a) or (b) and you have no knowledge that that guy is a gang member. It is just over broad and, I think, affects far too many people who are just simply minding their own business.

Now, here we go to what a police officer can do when they're interpreting when a person is a gang member or when they can evict a person from a nightclub.

(4) A police officer need not rely on personal knowledge in concluding that a person is associated with a gang but may rely on information from others, including but not limited to . . .

(i) any admission of association with a gang.

Well, that would be by the individual himself. I doubt that that would be freely forthcoming at a bar on the night in question, where that guy would say when the police officer came up: "I admit it. You got me. I'm a member of a gang. I will leave immediately." I don't think that's going to happen that often.

The "use of names, signs, symbols or other representations used by a gang." Well, to be honest with you, I don't see a lot of guys running around the streets with, "Hey, I'm a gang member" on them. You know, I guess there are some people with Hells Angels patches on, but I'm not sure if that is what this law is intending. In fact, I've seen them in bars all across this province. Are they allowed now to go to one of these nightclubs? Maybe not. Maybe that's not the gang we're looking for. Maybe we're looking for other gangs. I don't know. So that is a real troubling section that I would try to rework, to clarify. Maybe it's a certain type of symbol that we're looking for, but that seems to be an awfully wide range of things you're looking for.

"A person's presence at the scene of unlawful behaviour by a gang, regardless of whether the person participated in the unlawful behaviour." That one is really troubling. I'm walking down the street and a guy, a gentleman that I don't know from Adam – I think that's the term. They're referring to the guy in the Bible, I think, by that saying. Anyway, that gang member robbed someone, and the police saw me witness that, and they think that I somehow had something to do with this even though I didn't. Well, the next thing you know, I'm not going to be able to get into a pub or go have a drink even though the fact is that I'm really thirsty. I think that is bothersome to me a little bit.

Or here's another one: "frequent association with persons associated with a gang." Well, okay. "Frequent association." How much do you have to hang out with a person? Is that once a month, twice a month, 15 times a month? What is the definition of frequent? I think that's, again, far too over broad. You're trying to kill – what is the saying? – a fly with a mallet. It looks like that's what we're doing.

Anyway, I think I'm getting to the long and short of it, that this amendment is far too broad. It captures far too many people. Hey, I realize that gangs are a difficulty and that we should be using whatever measures we can to stop them. I just don't think this is a viable method to really stop them. I've never seen any evidence to it, any written evidence, any evidence in terms of a crime report that says: this is a way to stop gang violence cold. Never. No one can point me to that literature. I've looked. No one can point me to that literature.

Let's also talk about another thing. We already have ways – these are private clubs. A gentleman can disallow anyone from coming into their establishment any time they want: no, you're not allowed to come into my club. If they had knowledge of it or whatever, there you go. Don't allow them in your club. If they're a troublemaker, don't allow them in the club. Simply don't allow them in. Those things are available.

We also have a thing called the telephone. You've got some people in there that you're really suspicious of? You pick up the phone and say: hey, could I call the police? If the police deem it important enough, they will come and do some police work, which may get us to a secondary point, which is why we see all these bills coming out. Maybe there's a recognition that we do have a lack of police officers if you compare us to other policing agencies across the nation in other large centres. If this is, I guess, our knee-jerk reaction to trying to cover that up or trying to look tough on crime without actually putting boots on the streets, well, fair enough, but I just think this is fraught with difficulty, that it reaches far too many people and randomly targets people for simply hanging out and going into a club.

Anyway, those are my comments. I think this bill needs a lot of work to be saved, but it could be saved if it narrowed down a lot of these definitions and was really defining maybe to say that a gentleman who's been convicted of gang activity will no longer be allowed in here, something of that nature. They've got a lot of creative guys in the backroom there who could go to work on this, narrow it down, who could probably make it something that will stand up to, I guess, a test somewhere down the line.

Anyway, thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Well, thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I just want to indicate that, you know, I'm quite torn on this. I represent an area that has a great deal of concern about crime activities. Certainly, people in my community are very vocal that they have a right to live in as safe a community as people in other parts of the city or in other parts of the province, and they want action to be taken.

On the other hand, this is one of a series of bills that gets at solving these problems by just nibbling away around the edges at the civil liberties of people. We've seen that in giving the right, for example, to police to seize without a conviction cars that might be involved in prostitution or drug use. That is a concern.

We contacted the Criminal Trial Lawyers Association, and they had quite a lot to say about this particular piece of legislation. I think that I'd like to put a few of those concerns on the record. Having said that, I think that it's quite clear that we need to step up our efforts to combat gang activity. I think that, ultimately, letting gang members operate unchecked in bars or anywhere else is what has led to a great deal of the problems we've seen in our community, not the least of which is the gun violence, the drive-by shootings and murders that we've seen in the major cities in this province. It's a very, very serious situation, and I think that enhancing the intelligence available to police on gang activities, on balance, is the right thing to do. But I do want to make mention of some of these concerns.

The bill allows a police officer to remove a person from licensed premises if the officer "believes [that person] to be associated with a gang." The Criminal Trial Lawyers Association believes that definition is too broad. If you're in the company of a gang member or a suspected gang member, then you're potentially at risk here. They believe that this provision contravenes the Charter of Rights and Freedoms' guarantee of life, liberty, and security of person as well as the freedom of association and assembly. Guilt by association, they say, is not a sufficient reason to bar people from licensed establishments.

They have a concern with allowing licensees – that is to say, bar owners – to collect personal information from people before entering the licensed premises and the ability to share that information with other licensees. In my view, Mr. Chairman, that's not a concern that I feel really strongly about. I think that bar owners operate private businesses. In my experience they've always been able to choose their clientele and do so regularly.

One of the problems that I do think is going on – in 2008 the Privacy Commissioner ruled that bars could no longer scan people's drivers' licences after a University of Calgary law student made a complaint. The Privacy Commissioner has made that ruling, but it's quite clear that this activity is ongoing. I talked to my son and asked him if he'd ever had his licence scanned on Whyte Avenue, for example, and he said that, yes, that happens, depending on the bar, but it happens frequently, and it's still going on. I think that the government needs to make sure that that activity is curtailed.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to indicate that on balance I think we need to take steps to ensure that our bars are not breeding grounds for criminal activity and, in particular, the activities of gangs, which have become a real scourge in our province and something that I think we need to step up the action against. I have consulted with the people in my communities, who wish to see more steps taken to protect those communities, to protect their kids from gang activity and from violence.

I believe that on balance this act will help do that, so with considerable reservation I am prepared to support the bill. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Well, I am not prepared to support this bill, not unless somebody can point me to a very, very clear, compelling, evidentiary example of a jurisdiction – federal, provincial, state, or municipal level – somewhere in this world, outside of the Communist world, where the chip, chip, chipping away at civil liberties and constitutional rights and freedoms actually makes the populace safer than they were before. Of course, we're human, and it seems to be a human trait that every time we develop a new piece of technology, we think that that is going to save us somehow if only we can put it to its fullest, maximum, use. We've been at this game, as far as law enforcement is concerned, for quite a number of years now, quite a number of decades, yet I don't see society getting any safer.

I'm not altogether sure that Canadian society is in real terms getting that much more dangerous, by the way, but it's not getting that much safer. I think that more to the point, it's not getting to the point where it is perceived as being safer, yet it seems that with every passing season somebody in government, whether it's this government or some other, wants to use technology to chip away at a little more of our rights and freedoms in the name of crime prevention, crime fighting, and public safety.

It's not enough to look like you're tough on crime. You've got to be tough on crime. You've either got to go big or stay home, and I would contend that bills like this really don't go big on crime fighting. They're designed to look like they're going big on crime fighting. They're designed to take a lazy approach to crime fighting, and they're designed to take a lazy approach to crime fighting at the expense of civil liberties and our constitutional rights. If we can just let bar owners scan people's drivers' licences, then we'll keep all the bad guys out of licensed establishments, says a bill like this. Furthermore, we'll let the proprietors of those establishments share that information with all the other licensed establishments, we'll let the police come in without a warrant, and all this will make us safer, and we'll get all the criminal element out of every bar and public house in the entire province. Then it'll be a wonderful day, Mr. Chair, when Alberta is safe for good, law-abiding citizens to go out for the night and get faced.

Well, here's a news flash, Mr. Chair. When people get faced, whether they do it in a bar or whether they do it at home, they sometimes get out of control. If they get out of control at home in a good way, then probably not much more happens than the bed starts to spin uncontrollably, the bathroom gets visited, you know, unintentionally, and then the next morning the bottled Aspirin gets depleted somewhat. But when it happens in public – and it can happen in private, too – when the drinking gets out of control, criminal activity can follow: spousal abuse, violence, assault. When you take that out into the broader public world and you let people get faced, then they can get themselves and others into a pickle either in the establishment or on the way home from the establishment.

I had a visit from a couple of bar owners, who were not Paul Vickers, by the way. I had a visit to my constituency office early this year from a couple of bar owners. I'm not sure that I necessarily fully support them on this, but I thought it was a very interesting point of view. They expressed concerns over the death of happy hour and minimum drink pricing, that the unintended consequence of that decision by this government – and by the way, full disclosure: on this side of the House we actually called for that before the government got around to doing it.

The unintended consequence and unforeseen consequence is that young people are now bringing booze in their cars and sitting out in the parking lots of establishments and power drinking so that they get a good buzz on before they go in. They're drinking fast enough and drinking in enough quantity that it catches up to them. It hits them, you know, like a sledgehammer after they're in the establishment, but they scoot into the bar before they are appearing to the bouncer to be as drunk as they are, and it's causing problems for the bar owners. These are problems, the bar owners suggested to me, that didn't exist back in the days of happy hour drink specials. Now, a whole other set of problems existed back then. But that was, I think, an unintended consequence. It did not exactly do what we thought it was going to do, which was lessen social disorder and lessen the potential for criminal activity.

The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood – I'm going to get that one of these days; it's just a complicated name – made reference to the fact that he had consulted with the Criminal Trial Lawyers Association, and so did we. I want to quote just a couple of very brief passages from the letter that they wrote back to our leader, the Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

The citizen must know what the law states so as to permit individuals to govern their actions. We note that section 69.1 defines a "gang" very broadly. The definition is so broad that it would include, for example, sex trade workers, and those with criminal records. Section 69.1(3) allows the police to exclude or remove from licensed premises any person the police believe to be "associated" with a gang. Those "associated" with a gang are defined as members, those who support, facilitate, or participate in the gangs' activities, or those who are in the company of "gang" members.

This is so expansive, the letter goes on, Mr. Chair,

... that the mothers, for example, of sex trade workers could be excluded or removed from licensed premises merely by virtue of their association to their daughters. Parents of children convicted of minor criminal offences could also be targeted.

The letter from the Criminal Trial Lawyers Association goes on to say:

In this country, the freedom of association and the freedom of assembly are such important principles that they are enshrined in section 2 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. We as Canadians take pride in living in a state where we are permitted to associate with whomever we choose, and where our movements are not subject to state control merely because the police may not want us to associate with certain people. The Charter also enshrines the right to life, liberty, and security of the person and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice.

The letter goes on to say:

This is a protection which extends to those who choose to go to licensed establishments as well. The notion of guilt by mere association is offensive to civilized persons.

The letter goes on, but I won't quote any more from that. I think you get the point and the thrust of the letter.

By the way, although I am not a lawyer, in the research that we have done in consulting with lawyers, to the extent that lawyers will ever go on the record as saying that they're going to prejudge how the Supreme Court would rule on an issue, I have grave doubts that this bill could possibly survive a Charter challenge. I have grave doubts that this bill, if passed, would manage to go unchallenged in the courts. So at the end of the day we're going to be back where we were, quite frankly, when the Privacy Commissioner ruled on the practice of scanning drivers' licences at the nightclub Tantra.

Mr. Denis: It's under appeal. The privacy thing is under appeal.

Mr. Taylor: Yeah, and the Court of Queen's Bench upheld the finding of the Privacy Commissioner.

Mr. Denis: That I didn't know.

Mr. Taylor: See, Member for Calgary-Egmont, you learn something new every day. It's upheld on appeal.

We're going to end up back in the same place after all this collective chasing of our tails, and in the interim we'll have given an indication that this Assembly supports needless limiting of our Charter of Rights and Freedoms just because it is perceived to make it easier for bar owners to do what they ought to be doing anyway, which is stopping bad guys at the door and saying, "No, you can't come in" and calling the cops if there's a problem. It, I think, further encourages the view that I have that when faced with the choice of funding especially our big city police agencies sufficiently to allow them to do the job of keeping the million people who live in the greater Edmonton area and the million people who live in the city of Calgary safe and to prevent crime and to apprehend the criminals once the crime has been committed or the choice of doing something whiz-bang that involves cameras, surveillance, scanning electronic identification cards, collecting information for the sake of collecting information about all and sundry, who in this case happen to feel like going out for a drink, this government's tendency is to go for the cheap and dirty, easy, lazy technological option. I'm not going to use the word "solution" because I don't for a minute believe that it is a solution, and I don't for a minute believe that it will be allowed to stand as a solution. The courts will have at this, and they will make mincemeat out of it.

Mr. Chair, I cannot support Bill 42 in its current form or anything even approaching it. I think we should just tear it up and start over again.

Thank you.

9:20

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Well, thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I don't want to delay things, because I want to get on to Bill 44, but I just want to remind the hon. member that this is not about people who drink too much and go out and create a nuisance or drink and drive. This is about gang activity. This is about people involved in activity that's led to people being shot down in the street in a whole number of communities, a very serious problem. They don't go in there to get faced. They go in there to deal drugs and make deals and engage in the planning of organized crime. That's why it's called organized crime. I think that it's something that we need to be prepared to consider. It's a question of whether or not people have a right to be in a bar, not whether they have a right to vote or a right to freedom of speech. The bar owners have been collecting and sharing information on their own independently for some time now. I would question whether or not the hon. member can make the case that that is an illegal activity to do that.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In response to those comments from the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood I think if you go back and check the Blues when they're available, hon. member, you'll discover that I was not for a moment suggesting that this particular piece of legislation was designed to keep people from drinking too much and carrying on. In quoting from the letter from the Criminal Trial Lawyers Association, I think I made clear that in the process of attempting to catch the gangbangers to which he refers, this is going to capture in the net all kinds of other people who we ought not to capture. This is using the proverbial, you know, nuclear deterrent almost where it's not required and where the principles of fundamental justice, our constitutional rights, and the requirement for probable cause in an environment where we're properly funding police agencies so that we, frankly, have enough cops on the street to enforce the law, should be enough to keep these gangbangers from going into bars and using bars as the place where they're going to plot their nefarious activities.

I mean, I suppose that we could go back to the Hollywood version of them doing it in the backroom of a pasta joint or pizzeria, something like that. My point here is not to cast aspersions on any one identifiable group or other, but organized criminals will plot and carry out criminal activity in an organized fashion, and they will find someplace to do it. This may discourage them. It may. I remain unconvinced that it will. I don't know of any evidence of anyplace where this does work with shining regularity. This may convince them not to conspire in bars, but they will conspire somewhere else. In the meantime you are capturing potentially everybody who goes into that bar and collecting, with no probable cause, personal information on them that you can then turn around and share with whomever.

I would simply ask the hon. member: to what end? How does the end justify those means?

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bufferalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. Just to sort of preface my earlier comments, it wasn't that I didn't take an eye to this bill in a way that it may have some possible merits to it. I just think that, in balance, if you look at it, some of the freedoms and rights that we're giving up and that they're taking away from people – I don't mind if this thing was tailored specifically to a gang member. Great. You know what I'm saying? I don't mind. My civil liberties have an ebb and flow to them, sir, that tend to be stronger on certain people than they are on others. I'm not a clear civil libertarian on all issues or on crime and punishment.

All I'm saying, sir: in this case there was a real attempt here to try and go after a bad thing, which is gangs. I'm the first one to admit that these are bad things. Bad things happen out there, and if these groups of bad people who are going around dealing drugs, prostitution, causing chaos on our streets, what have you, can be stopped, most of the time we should give our police the ability to do that and/or in other situations the ability to make people safe in their community.

The only thing is that we've got to sometime look at whether the bill is actually accomplishing that goal without taking away our fundamental freedoms, and in this case I can see no clear, logical way that this takes away from crime activity. It might be less of a headache for the bar owner, maybe, but by no means does this lessen crime activity. Okay? The organizations are not going to cease. They're not going to stop doing their stuff, what they have to do. What is going to happen in a bar if there is drug dealing there? Well, you know, it's going to be done by low-level people, which are probably still the ones doing it. And guess what? That bar owner should be on the horn to the police officer right away and saying, "Hey, there's a person dealing drugs in my bar; I want him out of here" or "I saw this guy last week dealing drugs in my bar; I don't want him in there." That's what each individual bar owner should be able to do. He should be able to call the police.

If you look at the definition of gang and gang member, the fact that no personal knowledge needs to be had before a person can be denied entry into a bar, the fact that a person doesn't even have to be a gang member, could merely have known a gang member or seen a gang member walking on the streets, is just too wide. There's just no evidence that this will get rid of gang activity, make people safer, make our communities safer. If it did, I could possibly support it, but right now I don't see that as being in play.

Since it doesn't solve any of those problems, it is too high of a price to pay on our civil liberties. If it did accomplish some of those goals that I previously mentioned, maybe I could support it. I just don't see it doing those things that the goal is defined to do.

I thank you again for belabouring this debate further. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, and I'll be quick. I do not believe that you can do better than actual feet on the beat. If you want to prevent gang activity, then you have greater support for police officers. The police officers work with the community in terms of increasing educational awareness. They go into the schools. They deal with the kids as community resource officers, and they discourage involvement in gangs right from the very beginning. If you provide opportunities for youth early on and supervision, involve them in sports and a variety of activities, their chances of getting involved in a gang are reduced right from the very beginning.

I don't believe that bar owners trading identity cards combined with street surveillance cameras and all other kinds of civil-liberty-stretching circumstances, a Big Brother society, are going to solve this problem. There are a whole lot of better and cheaper solutions. The first one is education and support, and the second is working with police officers.

I am very aware that in Calgary Electric Avenue, 11th Avenue, was a war zone. It was a place where as either a policeman or a paramedic you would not want to have to have your night-shift duties. Gradually what happened was that a lot of the activities on 11th Avenue were shut down because of, to a large extent, the violence, but it was simply moved down to 17th Avenue, the Red Mile. I don't know whether you'd call a bunch of people wearing red shirts with Cs on them gang members or just hockey supporters, but there does come a point where, based on your association and your assembly, a gang mentality can break out, and that's not going to be dealt with by changing cards.

It's important to note that Maurice Tougas, a former colleague, was the individual who first brought up the idea of reducing the cheap drinks in happy hour, which were the cause of a tremendous amount of the violence and the bad behaviour, whether it was gangs or just simply individuals who got hammered. But bar owners also have a responsibility beyond just simply collecting identification, and that's to do with overserving. There has to be a point where you realize that that person should not be served any longer. You also have a responsibility, as far as I'm concerned, as a bar owner for seeing that that individual, your patron, gets safely home.

In Edmonton there's been a fair amount of violence associated with Whyte Avenue, and again it's not necessarily gang related. To a large extent it's been hockey celebration related. But Whyte Avenue and the area surrounding it have been cleaned up to a degree by the amount of police presence. When there is a constable on every corner, as is the case during the playoffs, the behaviour seems to improve dramatically.

Entrusting bar owners with managing personal information is somewhat of a stretch considering that the Auditor General has pointed out this government's inability to control its own electronic records, whether they be health records or whatever. The Auditor General has pointed out the electronic hacking footprints in terms of delicate information. So the idea that bar owners are going to be absolutely custodial in terms of the information and the protecting and the sharing is a bit of a stretch and an extra imposition on bar owners.

I'm also concerned about the so-called gang identification and gang association. There have been situations of racial profiling that have taken place in Calgary – and I'm aware of it in Edmonton – where because you're a member of a particular race whose skin is darker than the traditional Caucasian, you're more subject to identity checks than your white counterpart might be unless they've got their head shaved and Aryan Nations marking, tattoos or something like that. I know that my son-in-law, who is a lawyer with Bennett Jones, is of East Indian descent, and as a young university student he and his friends were subjected to that type of racial profiling.

Sometimes a question is asked just as part of identification, and there are no racial overtones to it. But this past weekend I was running along the river, and I came across an individual who, incidentally, was Caucasian who seemed to be in difficulty. This individual was standing out on the road, and I came up to him and asked him if he was in trouble or if I could help. When he didn't respond, I didn't want to intimidate him, but I did see that there was a city truck in the vicinity, and they provided me with a police number. I phoned and said: "I'm concerned about this individual. He seems to be in a stuporous state. He's standing on the road, and I'm worried about his well-being." The first question the police officer asked me was, "Is this person Caucasian or First Nations?" That concerned me a little bit because there was the potential of jumping to a racial conclusion. Now, I did have a good conversation with the officer I was speaking to, and to my reassurance he indicated that a car would be sent out and that the well-being of this individual would be looked after. I was very appreciative of that.

I'm not willing to give up civil liberties. I'm not willing to allow a large net to be cast in the name of preventing gang association or gang penetration into bars. As I began and as I'll end, police are the answer, and support for our police forces will go a long way to resolving this problem.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. As I raised in second reading of this bill, which is Bill 42, the Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009, I was waiting for amendments to come from government that would have corrected the severe omissions that are appearing in section 16 of the bill, which is amending section 69(1) of the originating act. That is about empowering the licensee, usually a bar owner, to collect personal identifying information of an individual. This is placing an unfair burden on the licensee because they now have a whole bunch of personal information about people, and there are no requirements on them and no help for them to understand what they're supposed to do with this information.

As we move into this realm of databases and cyberspace and instantaneous transfer of information and we come to better recognize how personally identifying information can be used both for us, for example electronic health records, and against us in this particular example or in identity theft, we are moving into a different realm. This bill fails to recognize that and to grapple with it and to give tools to the licensee to help them and tools to the rest of us to not be in a position where we have to hand over personally identifying information.

There's nothing in here about the manner in which the personally identifying information will be kept. Is it on paper? Is it on a CD? Is it on a DVD? Is it in somebody's computer that they can take home and it can be stolen or on a piece of paper they can leave in a garbage can out back of a restaurant at the end of the night? For how long is this identifying information kept? In what form is it going to be kept? Is it easy to access? Is it being sent by Internet back and forth as they are able to share the information with others, as is allowed for and empowered in this act? Is there an audit trail as to who looks at that information? Can anybody that works in that restaurant or bar look at the information that they have collected? How many times? What else can they use the information for?

There's no context or control that is offered in this bill other than that they can collect the person's name, age, and photograph, if you can imagine – a photograph and their name and their age all put together – and we're just going to let this float around out there in cyberspace somehow. There's a blanket consent that is assumed here for the collection of this, and they are allowed to disclose it without getting additional consent from others. This is just an old-fashioned way of looking at something. This government has got to move into this millennium and understand that you cannot collect personal information from people without pretty specific boundaries around how it's going to be collected, used, and disclosed, how long it's going to be kept, who needs to look at it, and a number of other issues. If you can get it around the health information records, you've got to get it with information like this. I will not support this bill while you're collecting information like this from people without boundaries around it.

Thanks.

The Chair: Is there any other hon. member who wishes to speak on this bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[The clauses of Bill 42 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee rise and report bills 32 and 42.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Marz: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 32 and Bill 42.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Before we proceed on Bill 44, I have a request to revert briefly to Introduction of Guests. Would I have your consent?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm aware that a number of people have joined us in both the public and the members' galleries in anticipation of the debate on third reading of Bill 44. I'm sure there are people that are watching the video streaming at home, and I'm sure Twitter is a-twittering. So welcome to everyone.

I wanted to acknowledge and welcome those people who have come down tonight at a quarter to 10 to join us as public witnesses to this debate. Specifically, if I might introduce my old friend and colleague from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, except that when he served, he called it the city of Edmonton ward 4. Michael Phair, if you would rise, please.

I also know that in the members' gallery we have Jan Lukas Buterman. I think Jan is still up there. If we could welcome Jan.

If I could ask all of those who have come tonight to witness the debate on Bill 44, both sides of the debate, to please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Bill 44 Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce third reading of Bill 44, the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009, which will strengthen our human rights system for all Albertans.

Much of the discussion about Bill 44 has centred on changes to the legislation and most recently on amendments. Although parental rights and freedom of speech are important and deserve discussion, there are other proposed changes that also deserve some attention.

Last year when I began reviewing Alberta's human rights system, I quickly saw that legislative changes were required to improve the Alberta Human Rights and Citizenship Commission's processes. The commission receives about 30,000 inquiries a year for Albertans. Out of those 30,000 inquiries we're also seeing the number of actual complaints filed with the commission increase. Within the past year we've seen an increase of 16 per cent, with the number of complaints received by the commission jumping from 680 to 788 in 2008-09. The commission's current processes simply cannot accommodate that type of demand. This is evidenced in the number of complaints that remain unresolved in the system as of the end of March, with 940 complaint files compared to 810 the year before.

If we're going to meet our commitment to make a human rights system available for all Albertans, we need to help the commission improve the way it manages its complaint files. First, we are going to clarify the intent and purpose of both our human rights legislation and our human rights commission by taking the word "citizenship" out of their names. Citizenship is actually a federal responsibility, and including the word simply creates confusion. We're going to bring new staff on board to respond to inquiries from the public so that other commission staff can focus on those complaints that are already in the system.

Section 12 of the amending act clarifies wording to describe the two sides of the commission – the mediation investigation side, with investigators who report to the director, and the adjudication side – by referencing the commission and tribunals. We have heard that some people were confused that the commissioners do both, but they do not, and we have clarified that by calling them tribunals. Section 12 of the amending act also clarifies that the new chief of the commission and tribunals is, indeed, chief of both sides of the Alberta system.

We have heard that the commission needs strong leadership, and we have that in place. We hired a new chief commissioner in February. He brings extensive experience as a member of the Court of Queen's Bench to this position.

By amendment the commission may refuse to accept any complaint if the matters are being dealt with through another forum or under another act. Section 16 of the amending act reads: "The director may refuse to accept the complaint or may accept the complaint pending the outcome of the matter in the other forum or under the other Act." This is part of our response to address a concern we heard from many Albertans that complaints take too long to resolve. If the commission staff are receiving over 30,000 phone calls a year, some of them will relate to matters in other forums. We have added an amendment to require individuals to pursue other appropriate forums or acts.

Section 17 and elsewhere in the amending act also addresses the concerns that complaints take too long to resolve. We have addressed this by adding additional resources to the commission and also implementing a new process to address appeals more quickly.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, Bill 44 strikes the right balance on a variety of complex and difficult issues. We have after 13 years written sexual orientation into the act. We also have written in respect for parental rights, and we have administrative changes. We feel that by making these difficult and somewhat controversial decisions, however, we are acting in the best interest of Albertans. As elected officials that is what we are here to do, and we support Bill 44 in its entirety.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak in third reading to Bill 44, the amendment act to the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Act. I do not see Bill 44 as a serious attempt to grapple with the threats to legal protection from discrimination. This should have been an attempt to enshrine protections, and instead what has happened is that there has been created additional discrimination against the same group that it purported to start out to protect. In other words, the government is taking back what they purported to give. They purported to say, "We're going to put in the grounds of sexual orientation as a prohibited grounds of discrimination," and it has resulted at the end of this bill in, in fact, establishing an additional tier by which members of that group can be discriminated against.

I think additionally the government has created chaos by introducing ideology into our education system, and it failed to eliminate the conflict of interest that existed in the resolution of human rights complaints. In moving from a commission to a tribunal, it did not deal with the advancement of human rights and with the adjudication of human rights.

Mr. Speaker, I want to acknowledge the engagement of Albertans in this debate, and I want to thank them for their engagement in this particular debate. I know we will have people watching this debate through the video streaming and Twitter and through various websites and reading Hansard after the fact. In fact, we have people joining us in the gallery tonight. I am always excited by that engagement of Albertans in the process of what we do on the floor, and I thank you each and every one, even if we disagree, for engaging in that process. I think it's an important one for democracy.

What is interesting is that I think I could argue with great success that we are just starting the process of engaging the public in this debate and, in fact, the debate will end tonight. [some applause] I get it that some members on the other side are eager for that moment to come, but I don't think that's appropriate, actually. I think when you start to see the engagement of Albertans come up from the grassroots, you should be allowed to continue that debate to hear from them as much as possible and to understand the effect that what we do on this floor carries on outside of these doors into the lives of Albertans.

We had a number of ways of engagement. I want to start by recognizing the work of Oba Powis, who was a high school student from Lethbridge who was against Bill 44 and within a couple of weeks at his school of LCI in Lethbridge collected 700 signatures and more than two dozen supporting letters in his petition against Bill 44, working through his MLA, the Member for Lethbridge-East, and those, in fact, ended by being presented in this House.

That was mirrored and carried on through a young woman who contacted me late Friday. Katherine Creelman, a grade 10 student at Archbishop MacDonald high school, actually approached me to ask about how to do a petition on Bill 44. I wrote back and said, "You know, I don't think you can get a petition done and have me get it through the parliamentary processes that are a necessity before we'll be debating it on Monday night, but if you send me a letter, I'd be happy to table it in the House." Well, what was I thinking? I did not consider Facebook, and of course she had a Facebook group. She sent it out on Facebook, and by Monday morning I had 84 letters from students, many, many of them dealing with very personal stories. Some of them were more or less a template, but an awful lot of them were not. That is a wonderful kind of engagement, especially from younger people that are in junior high and high school and university, to get involved and understand how legislation affects them. So thank you so much, Katherine and all of the kids that were involved in that Facebook and in sending me letters.

I think we often see in this House – and I sort of put emphasis on how much work and effort you put into something is how I give back to it. Someone that takes the time to come out here and sit on these hard seats for hours and hours gets a lot of credit from me, someone that writes a personal letter or an e-mail, someone that comes and has a meeting with me or their MLA in some way: all of those are an investment of time and energy and thought into the process. Petitions: a little less effort involved, but still you're reading the prayer; you're taking the time to sign your name. An online petition is a little less effort again because it's a little easier to hit the buttons, but still it is engagement, and it's important that we recognize that.

So thank you to Katherine and the 84 students that got engaged that way. I was a little depressed earlier when I heard that there had been some 700, 800 signatures that had been presented in the House and then it was pointed out to me on one of the many electronic news outlets that it was an online petition, which, as I say, still counts. I appreciate all of the effort that they put into it, but, boy, I really prize those students' letters and e-mails.

I also want to note the effort that was put into this debate by the Wild Rose United Church, who tried hard to contact me on Friday to talk about what their minister, Linda Hunter, could put into her sermon on Sunday and talk about in the church, in the before-and-after activities. In the end we could not connect, but they did manage to write up quite an in-depth and thorough letter, and 75 signatures from that congregation signed on to that letter.

From the Alberta and Northwest Conference of the United Church of Canada a letter was circulated last week noting that at their conference a resolution was overwhelmingly adopted by over 400 conference delegates asking for the removal of provisions regarding education in Bill 44 and then going on to talk about how important they think human rights and protection against discrimination for certain groups are. Again, thank you very much for those efforts.

I want to talk a bit about the larger issues that were put into play. Essentially, for those of you that are following along, the debate in third reading is a debate on the anticipated effect of the bill once it is passed. There is an assumption that once you get this far, it's going to get passed in an amended state or as it was first presented. In this case the government did present amendments, and those amendments were accepted. They have a majority to make sure that happens.

What we had happen with this bill was that we started out, as the minister said, to make some administrative updates and corrections to make it a better functioning commission and to include, finally, sexual orientation. We ended up with this additional somehow purported to be a balancing by putting in a parental opt-out clause, which is now commonly referred to as a parental rights clause. That slopped over into affecting an entirely innocent group of people, and that is our teachers and those working in our school system, including the trustees.

All of a sudden, something that if it needs to be – and let me underline that. I would argue that the arguments are not strong that that needs to be the case. If it needs to be, that should be in the School Act. In fact, as we're often told now, there is an ability to withdraw students from class if parents object on certain grounds now. So that process exists. It should be in the School Act. But what the government chose to do was to put in a section in this act that then impacted an entirely different and, I would argue, innocent group of people, and that is our teachers. It put them in a precarious position. Some would call it a chill and that we're likely to see a chill come into the classrooms because now there is a requirement that schools will identify sections of their curriculum that could stray into grounds that would be considered religious or dealing with human sexuality or sexual orientation.

They have to go through their curriculum and send out letters to all of their parents identifying that. They have to create a database.

Just imagine how that's money that's going to be sucked out of your kids' education because they have to create a database and keep track of all of this stuff. They're going to have to deal with negotiating, mediating between divorced parents when one wants one and one wants the other thing for their kid: in a class, out of a class. This school system now has to keep track of all of this, so some secretary is madly tearing her hair out trying to figure out how to organize all of this stuff now. That's a cost that will take away from the education of our kids in classrooms, and frankly I resent that because I want my taxpayer dollars going into educating kids, not into organizing how people can pull them out of public education.

This bill, by the way, affects public education, which includes our Catholic school system in Alberta. But my understanding is that it does not affect the charter schools and the private schools because they are defined differently under the School Act.

We now put something in this act that flows over onto and into our classrooms. They now have to notify parents and get instructions back from parents about pulling their kids out of school. There's still a very vague definition about what could be considered a subject matter that is dealing primarily and explicitly with religion, human sexuality, and sexual orientation. When I spoke in Committee of the Whole, I talked about how religion is often a sincerely held belief. So we have very little basis for definition to understand what we have now subjected our schools to and the problems that they will have to deal with as a result of what's been brought up here.

I think families are important. We look for families to bring stability into our communities. Stability in our communities means, generally, stability in our cities and in our wider society. But where I differ, I think, is what my definition of a family is, that very core unit that starts to create that stability. In my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre one of the reasons it's fabulous is the people that live there and the way they choose to build their family units and build their community and build our city and build our society. I am not willing to make that definition, as I have been reading about, of a natural family, which seems to be some definition that doesn't match very well what I see out in my community. I think that's very short-sighted and does not move us forward as a more tolerant society.

Back to the classroom. We're now allowing people to pull their kids out of school through some definition that's not very clear around religion, human sexuality, and sexual orientation. But we don't get into those larger issues now of dealing with difference and tolerance and analysis and critical thinking that we're supposed to be bringing our kids through this system for. I mean, how do we get there if kids are pulled out of class whenever a topic might be offensive or troublesome for their parents?

I've already talked about different definitions of religion and religious instruction. Where do we end up 10 or 20 years down the road when we look to: what is our standard of education in Alberta, and what have we done with our society? Have we taken children in and taught them how to do critical analysis, to deal with difficult subjects, to be challenged around their tolerance? That is how you become a stronger society.

When we look at what's going to lead us forward into a new economy – they talk about creative economies; they talk about knowledge-based economies – that is about tolerance and diversity. That is about creating communities that people want to move to to have their families, whatever form that is, to build those communities, those cities, and those societies that will make us exciting for years to come and give us an alternate form of energy, if you will, and diversify our economy. So this starts to ripple out in a way that I think was not anticipated here.

One of the things that I was looking at was:

If we ignore [things] like abortion rights, same-sex marriage, employment equity, racial discrimination, and hate speech, how will we teach our children to ask hard questions when their liberty, equality, their dignity, and their privacy are under threat? How will they know when they are being treated unfairly? We must prepare them to ask the hard questions that people living in democracies must ask.

Indeed. That is from Cultivating Habits of Democracy: Asking the Hard Questions, by Danielle McLaughlin from the Canadian Civil Liberties Education Trust.

We still haven't particularly dealt with the issue of impromptu questions. Although the government amendment does indicate that it should not apply to incidental or indirect references to religion, religious themes, human sexuality, or sexual orientation in a course of study, I am not convinced that that is going to solve the problem that has been identified in so much debate.

We ended up putting in human rights what belongs only in the School Act, and I'm not convinced that it is appropriate there. I'm definitely not convinced that it is appropriate to put it there. The issue is not one of parental control at home. It's what happens when we are now enshrining those parental rights into a public school system that is funded by taxpayer dollars. That public school system has farther-reaching effect. I think that is the issue that we've created, possibly unknowingly but, hopefully, not deliberately through this act.

In the end I'm not going to be supporting this bill. I started out with such hope and such enthusiasm and even such joy that finally sexual orientation would be included under human rights and I could quit asking the poor minister when he was going to do it. Yay. I thought this was a point of celebration for me and for many in my community, and I have come – whatever it is now – six weeks later to urging my colleagues to vote against this bill. It does not do what it purported to do. It, in fact, creates two levels of discrimination, and although it includes sexual orientation under prohibited grounds in one section, it then goes ahead and says: but you can discriminate on the grounds of sexual orientation in the school system by pulling your kids out of any class where it might be mentioned.

That to me is horrific. That is one step forward and two steps back, and we should be beyond that in this province. Frankly, I don't think that intolerance is actually in the wider Alberta population. I think that intolerance is here on this floor, and that is my greater disappointment with the process that I have seen develop here over the last six weeks. As well, we have engaged teachers in schools in activities that are far beyond what should have been appropriate and expected of them, and we have placed them, I think we will see in the future, in an untenable position.

I want to make sure that I thank again all those who wrote and twittered and stayed engaged with this and came tonight, came the other night, stopped me on the street, the seniors that stopped me at the seniors' teas this afternoon and last week, that engaged on Facebook, that created their own websites, that went to our websites here. I thank all of you again for your engagement. It's very important that you do that. It's very important that you continue to do this. Particularly for the students: you guys are going to vote soon; you may be voting in the next election, so pay attention. You've got sharper memories than some of the older generation, and I'm expecting you to remember what happened in this exchange. You'll be able to hang onto that information for the two and a half years you need to hang onto it for.

Those are the bulk of the comments that I wanted to make. There was just a couple of other interesting e-mails that I got along the way that I want to highlight as I go. One woman who wrote to me – I think I can identify her; I won't give her name – wanted me to know that she was currently a student at the University of Alberta, and she did not agree with Bill 44 and did not agree that parents should have the right to pull their kids out of human sexuality courses. Had she not been taught about human sexuality within the Edmonton public school board, she would not have known that she could escape a sexual abuser, and that had been very helpful information to her in her life. I thought: okay; hadn't thought of that one as a plus for why we need to have that kind of information available.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to extend my thanks and my congratulations to the hon. member for the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. I think you put that very eloquently. I think you put the defence of what is right and what we should be doing in this bill as opposed to what we are doing in this bill very succinctly, very well. I don't know if I can top it, but I can certainly add to it and support it.

I will not be supporting Bill 44. I cannot support Bill 44. It's bad enough that it took 11 years for this government to get around to doing what the Supreme Court of Canada told them to do, which is to write in that you cannot discriminate on the basis of sexual orientation, but having taken that long to do it, they've put conditions, they've put asterisks on this particular human right through the inclusion of the parental opt-out clause, and in my book that's still discrimination.

The way that this really came home to me, the way that it was really driven home to me was, actually, yesterday when the Member for Calgary-Buffalo and I were standing in the sunshine cooking at the Lilac Festival in my awesome constituency of Calgary-Currie. A woman came by that I know and I've had some professional dealings with over the years. She was carrying her little boy, who was maybe three or four years old. He's not in school yet. Susan started talking to me about Bill 44. One of the first things she said – she thanked me and she thanked us for everything that we have done in terms of bringing this to the public's attention, bringing it to the forefront, putting up a fight against Bill 44, putting up a fight against the parental opt-out clause, and so on and so forth. Susan, to that I say, "You're welcome."

I think my colleague from Edmonton-Centre is right that we've just now started to engage the broader population in this debate, and engaged they are. My goodness, engaged they are, Mr. Speaker. Of all the people who stopped to talk to me at our booth on Sunday – and there were many, many, many, many – I would say 50 per cent wanted to talk about Bill 44, and 50 per cent wanted to talk about everything else put together. It has become a hot topic. It has become a matter of great concern.

Anyway, back to Susan and her little boy. We were conversing. We were carrying on a conversation about Bill 44, and the conversation was going in, I think, the usual direction that a lot of conversations between Liberal MLAs and people who are opposed to Bill 44 go. Then all of a sudden she said: I'm concerned about this guy when he gets into school; I'm concerned what's going to happen when he talks about having two mommies and how the school is going to handle that if they can't talk about it, if they have to shut it down, if they have to stop the conversation for fear that somebody in the classroom might have a parent who would object to an explanation of what that's all about.

The damage is still going to be done in that he is going to have revealed that he has two mommies. Then without any kind of contextual explanation of how that can be, what that means, what the ramifications of that are, this little boy – he's a little sweetheart, you know – is suddenly going to be quite possibly, quite likely, the object of scorn by his classmates in around about maybe grade 3, grade 4, grade 5, something like that. Now, this is not something Susan said. I'm speculating here based on my own experiences as a parent as to when the bullying tends to start and the other carryings-on like that. He's going to be identified by his classmates as some kind of freak, some kind of weirdo, because he doesn't have a mommy and a daddy; he has two mommies. Because of the parental opt-out clause in Bill 44, if it comes up in class, which it probably will, there is no way for the teacher to deal with that and make it a teachable moment. This is not good.

Mr. Speaker, I have been sitting, reflecting on my life and my progress through life and how that has dovetailed with the progress that society has made in the time that I've been alive and going back not too long before then. I was born in 1953, and only 10 years earlier, in 1943, the government of this land, of this country, was doing everything that it possibly could to keep Jews from coming into Canada, Jewish refugees from the Holocaust.

I remember growing up in Sarnia, which is a border city in Ontario, and across the river is the city of Port Huron, Michigan, which is just a little smaller than Sarnia. When I was growing up in Sarnia, it had a pretty stable population of about 50,000, and we had four black families in the entire city. Port Huron, across the river, about half its population was black, and they all lived south of one particular street. The part of Port Huron south of that street – I think it was 36th Street, if I remember correctly, but I'd have to really look at a map – was the bad side of town, of course. The rich side of town was where all the white folk lived, north of that street.

I remember hearing somebody say at some point along the line how well off all the black people in Detroit were. They made that comment because we happened to be driving down an expressway in Detroit, and we saw a few black people go by in cars like Cadillacs and Buicks and that sort of thing, which undoubtedly they got at employee pricing because they probably worked for General Motors or Ford or Chrysler. It was just assumed that, oh, we've got rich black folk in Detroit. Then it was only a couple years after that that Detroit's heart and soul was ripped from its very body by the 1967 riots, which demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt that the black population of Detroit was nowhere near equal partners with the white population.

The following year, at Easter time or thereabouts, Martin Luther King was assassinated. I remember standing, indulging my then developing passion for birdwatching, on an island in the mouth of the St. Clair River, looking across Lake St. Clair to where two pillars of black smoke were rising from Detroit because there were riots again, standing by this well-to-do white woman from Michigan who blamed it all on the Communists, that the Communists were in there instigating this whole thing, stirring up the rabble.

Well, we've come a long way from there, come a long, long way from that point. We've come to a point where, I think – and this is a lot easier for a white guy to say because a white guy is born privileged, born advantaged. He never experiences much in the way of discrimination, or if he does, he can laugh it off as something else. But most of the time in this country black people and white people really do enjoy equality. I think that most of the time in this country we've achieved a level where we don't see colour as anything that divides us but, in fact, as something that enriches us: difference in colour, difference in skin tone, difference in religion, difference in culture, difference in background, difference in the country of origin of our family versus your family, difference in language.

Oh, we still have our squabbles. Truth to tell, we often forget, apart from the language difference, how much like brothers Albertans and Québécois are. We both have that same streak in us that likes to stir up the pot. We've come a long way.

I remember that my grade 11 physics teacher was the first Indian I'd ever met, the first immigrant from India. There was Mr. Patel and his wife, and I believe he had two daughters. One of his daughters was in my class. Now, this was Sarnia, a small city. It would've been a slightly different experience, obviously, if I was growing up in Toronto or Montreal or Vancouver or something like that. But I remember when Mr. Patel first came to teach at Northern. None of us could figure out where he was from because he had this weird accent we'd never heard before. He went on to become one of the coolest teachers – and way too cool to be a physics teacher – that I ever had the pleasure of being in class with and being taught by.

We've advanced, maybe we've even evolved, but we've still got this hang-up. We've had lots of other hang-ups that we've overcome, so I think we can overcome this one, too. We've still got this hang-up about people of different sexual orientation than our own. It's not nearly as big a hang-up as it used to be, because it's not unusual in Calgary-Currie or Calgary-Buffalo or Calgary-Mountain View or Edmonton-Centre or, I'm sure, Edmonton-Strathcona or quite a number of other constituencies in the cities to see and to run into and to meet gay people, lesbians, bisexual, transgendered, questioning, who are living side by side with the mainstream straight majority and who are making it in life and who are no longer closeted.

I think of my own kids' experience at high school. In fact, a very good friend of my daughter is gay, and both my daughter and my son knew kids in grade 10, grade 11, grade 12 who were out. Man, I cannot imagine. I cannot imagine anybody in the late '60s, early '70s, when I was in high school – we had five grades in high school in Ontario; it's not that it took me five years to do three grades – having the nerve to come out, be out, maybe even to be out to themselves then. Well, it's different now, and it's better now, but it could be better still. It could be a lot better still because we could have just brought in in Bill 44 an amendment that says: you cannot discriminate against someone on the basis of his or her sexual orientation. Period. Full stop. End of story.

The ability of parents to opt their children out of classes where sex education and religion are taught exists in section 13 of the School Act, has existed in section 13 of the School Act. Well, it has existed in the School Act; I don't know if the School Act has been amended and it has been changed to a different section. But it has existed since my kids were little enough to take their first human sexuality or health courses – it came up under health – in I believe it was grade 4. You've always been able to opt your kids out of that if you objected to that. There's no need to transfer that or clone it from the School Act and include it in the human rights act unless you want to telegraph, unless you want to send a message that gay people aren't really as good as the rest of us. You're putting an asterisk beside their inclusion in the human rights legislation. There's no other reason to do it. As for our kids learning something... [Mr. Taylor's speaking time expired]

Well, I can't continue on. I'll have to stop there. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, sorry. We have five minutes for comments or questions under Standing Order 29(2)(a). Does any member wish to take that five minutes?

Seeing none, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the bill.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise to speak to Bill 44 at third reading. There's a lot to say about this bill, and there's a lot that has already been said, but I'd like to start by just talking about how even though we are obviously on the verge of having this bill passed for the moment this evening, it's not, in my view, the end of the debate. Eleven years ago the Supreme Court of Canada told this government that it was discriminating against people on the basis of sexual orientation. Of course, it took this government 11 years to agree to even consider bringing their human rights code in line with our Charter of Rights and Freedoms or every other human rights code in the country. A lot of work went into making this government do that. Now, unfortunately, as we've heard tonight, they decided to bring that provision in alongside another provision which actually undermines the first one and takes the gay, lesbian, and bisexual community back several steps.

My point is this: they didn't stop fighting when the government steadfastly decided to ignore the Supreme Court of Canada for the purposes of maintaining a level of intolerance which has only been seen here in this Legislature, and I highly doubt that that community will stop at this point either. I suspect that this issue will be debated over and over and over again. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that people in this caucus will make sure that it is debated over and over and over again until this government finally has the courage to do the right thing and actually put in provisions protecting the human rights of Albertans who happen to have minority sexual orientations.

Having said that, while we're not really at the end – we're only at a point in the road and a new beginning on this particular issue – I want to talk a little bit about what this bill does. There's been a lot of talk about how this bill is about parental rights, but I want to talk a little bit about the parental rights that are being ignored through this bill. I'm sure a number of members will note that there are a few people up in the gallery tonight watching our discussion. I know from personal experience, from actually knowing most of them – many of them are actually from my riding, and it's so great because I didn't even know they were going to be here – that many, many of them are themselves parents. They are here because as parents they are deeply offended by what is happening to their rights and the rights of their children.

What rights am I talking about? Well, I'm talking about the rights of those parents to be able to expect through their public school system a balanced education, one that is based on teaching diversity and engendering tolerance for diversity, an education which promotes inquisitiveness, an education which promotes critical thinking, an education which is widespread and exposes our children to things beyond which they might otherwise simply be exposed to in our house. That's why we send them to school. That's why we decided education was a good thing for kids because schools actually help our kids grow.

There are a lot of parents who are deeply, deeply disturbed by the imposition and the infringement on their rights tonight by this government bringing this piece of legislation into place. That's why they're here. When we talk about parental rights, I'm talking about the parental rights of the majority of Alberta parents, who are not in support of this bill.

I'd like to talk as well a little bit about the issue of what's going to happen in our schools. Earlier today we had a brief debate on a private member's bill around a very worthwhile objective of preventing bullying in our school system. But the deep irony of that bill was that it was actually talking about a mechanism where a principal and a peace officer would collectively determine whether or not on the basis of a number of grounds, including sexual orientation, bullying had occurred, and they would then put together an education program which the bullier would be asked to attend or to be part of. I found that deeply, deeply ironic, Mr. Speaker, because, of course, as they were promoting this very bill, we are now talking about Bill 44, which would allow the parent of the child who may have bullied another child on the basis of sexual orientation to refuse to let that child attend the very education program that another government member wanted to put into place in the schools.

It seems to me that with a lot of folks here one hand really does not know what the other hand is doing. This is what happens when you get into a very political consensus-making process: you end up with very bad language and very bad ideas. That's what we've got here in Bill 44.

I want to talk a little bit about what it's going to look like in the schools. The Member for Calgary-Currie did talk about that a little bit with respect to the kid who wants to come into school and talk about his two mommies or two daddies. I know that some of the people up in the gallery here can remember that poster that all of our kids make – and I can't remember if it's in kindergarten or grade 1 – the all about me poster, where they work for about a week on a poster. They put in pictures of their family and their pets and their favourite place to go, and they do a little story about each of their family members. They work for days putting together this poster. Then they each get a chance to get up in front of their class and talk about their family and who they are and where they come from. It's how they learn about community and how they're part of community.

Well, as has been rightly pointed out, now we're going to have this problem. The teacher is going to be really worried when one of the little kids comes forward and wants to talk about his two dads or his two moms. Is that talking about sexual orientation? Are we getting too close to the line? Is it inadvertent? Is it covered under the new amendments? Is it not? Well, the amendments, as I've said already before, are simply an invitation to spend three or four times as much money on legal fees as we would have already with the bill because it does nothing but inject uncertainty.

This is what's going to happen when a teacher, a kindergarten teacher or a grade 1 teacher, sits down to try and decide how to teach that lesson. Do they invite the kids in their class whose parents are part of the sexual minority community to talk about their family? If they do, do they give notice to the other families? Then what happens to that kid if some of the other kids are pulled out because it's a sensitive topic, quote, unquote, that some parent would rather have discussed at home? And what does that say to the child in that family? Well, I know what it says. It says that we are a deeply intolerant society. The irony, of course, is that this is happening within our public schools.

Earlier today we had a number of representatives from the GLBT community speak on the steps of the Legislature. I was particularly touched by the comments made by Lance Anderson. Many people in this Legislature may recall that he and his husband, Blair Croft, worked very, very hard to push this government to allow them to adopt a child. Lance was on the Legislature steps today talking about how deeply offended and rejected his family felt once again as a result of the initiatives taken by this government through this bill. I just wanted to say to him that it's really not Albertans who are rejecting them but, rather, simply the members of this Assembly that are going to go ahead tonight and vote for Bill 44. I do believe that the vast majority of Albertans are far ahead of the vast majority of government members, who want to push forward with this particular piece of legislation.

I'd also like to talk briefly, of course, about sort of the litigious part of all of this. I've mentioned it before, but I want to say it again. I actually believe that we are on the verge of passing an amendment to our human rights code that will actually put our human rights code in conflict with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms once again. I don't know how many times a government can have its human rights code assessed and described by national judges, by the law of the land as being itself in breach of equality provisions and not start to get a little bit embarrassed. I realize it's been 11 years since this government has been told that their human rights code was in breach of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Is it that they're getting bored and that they need it to happen again, that they need to make an amendment because it's been a while since they've been to the Supreme Court of Canada and they miss Ottawa or something and they need to go back to be told again?

They will be told again, and they'll pay money to be told again. Alberta school boards will pay money for this government to be told again, and Alberta families will pay money to be told again. We will all spend a lot of money being told that Alberta's human rights code is substandard to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. This doesn't make me proud, and I don't know how it could possibly make members on any side of the House proud. But that's where we're going, and it's not hard to understand how that will happen. It's pretty clear from an on-the-face reading of what this government proposes to do to our human rights code.

I'd also like just to speak very briefly about the issue of – well, again, I think it really comes down to the issue of tolerance. I've heard speakers in this House talk about how families should have the right to discuss, quote, sensitive topics themselves, and they don't want that discussed in the school. But I have to say that if we as a province and as an Assembly are prepared to say that the issue of sexual orientation must be included in our human rights code, we cannot then turn around and call that a, quote, sensitive topic and refuse to discuss it in our public settings the way we would talk about any other minority characterization. Of course, sexual orientation is a different issue. We can't do it. We can't do it without basically saying that we're creating a second tier, a lower tier of human rights. That's what this government has decided it wants to do. It wants to create a lower tier.

I'm sorry that it's sensitive to some people. You know, there was a time when being part of a different race, part of a different culture, being part of a different gender was a sensitive topic. There was a time when talking about women being in this Legislature was a sensitive topic, but that doesn't matter because there was also a time when as people who are part of government we decided that equality should go across the board, regardless, so we included it in our laws. Once we did, our public institutions needed to respect that fact.

Instead, what we're doing here is that we are including the rights of sexual minorities into our human rights code and then saying that it's still okay to treat them differently. It is absolutely the wrong place to have this discussion. The School Act had some provision for that in the past although I'm not entirely sure how long that would have lasted anyway. Regardless, if it didn't last, that would have been the right thing as well. Ultimately you put it right front and centre, Mr. Speaker.

The government clearly has not moved forward. We are still dealing with a government that is being primarily run by a very right-wing, conservative group of people. There was an attempt at one point to characterize them as moving forward, as being part of a new generation, that they're not really Tories anymore, that it's a new group. Well, no. It's the same group that would not change the legislation 11 years ago. Albertans need to understand that that's what they're dealing with, and if they want a government that actually reflects the values of the rest of Albertans, they're going to need to fight for it. I think this bill is an invitation to Albertans to do just that.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for questions or comments. Does any hon. member wish to take that five minutes?

Seeing none, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege as always to speak on bills, but this one doesn't necessarily warm my heart, shall we say. I, like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, represent a constituency, called Calgary-Buffalo, located in the heart of downtown. In my community we have many different people who see family as just a loving expression of two individuals who raise children in the same way as everyone else does although it doesn't seem to be recognized as the same. We have a large population of our GLBT community, who I'm very proud to represent.

In fact, my first question in this House was to the hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit on when we were going to bring sexual orientation into our human rights code. That was the first question I asked in this House, and it was chosen for that specific reason. Those rights should be included in our human rights code and are, I guess, now included in our human rights code. I say "I guess" because it's a little bit of what I've said before: what the large print giveth, the small print taketh away in this bill. I'll talk about that a little further on. I've got a few other things on my mind before I get to that.

If we look sort of as a province where we've come from, 11 years ago, give a few days, the Vriend decision was decided by our Supreme Court of Canada, where at that time they told our province to include sexual orientation into our human rights act, to make it part of what's written into the documentation. They said that for a reason. Gay and lesbian and transgendered and many other people were suffering discrimination here in Alberta. They said: let's write it into the code, and then there can be no ifs, ands, or buts about it, and also people can feel then that their government is supportive of them and that their government is representing them, and they can join the mainstream of other Canadian Legislatures that had already done that naming in their human rights code.

Nonetheless, we chose a different path here in Alberta. We sort of ignored it at first for a while and then, I guess, you know, would discuss it only sometimes. Then probably when it got to be this time when a new government got voted in, some people said: hey, you know, maybe we can bring this in at this time; maybe it's time to do this stuff. So what we've had, then, is 11 years of foot-dragging, 10 up here. Where's here? Well, that's kind of open for debate. We do have sexual orientation being now listed in our human rights code as protected grounds. For what it's worth, I guess, that was, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre said, a step in the right direction. But at the same time, if we look at the inclusion of sexual orientation enshrined in our parental rights clause, it is essentially two steps back.

So are we anywhere further? I would argue not. In fact, much debate has been centred on this bill. I think the government has gone to great lengths to say that sexual orientation is not included in this bill as a slight towards gay or lesbian people. Oh no, we didn't include this in there as a slight to gay or lesbian people; it's just in there to reference sexuality, to allow parents to be able to opt their children out of sex ed classes and other things they deem appropriate. But I don't think so.

If we look at the history of that word and what it has meant to this government, the fact that they have kept sexual orientation has meant something to this government for 11 years. I think that at this time for them to say that sexual orientation is not really put in that act as any backhanded sort of comment to the gay and lesbian community is a stretch at best and very difficult for me as what I consider a sane individual to believe that this has occurred as just some sort of one-off, that it's there merely for parents and that it's not an actual slap to the GLBT community. I believe it is, sir, and I think anyone would believe that. But I'll talk to that a little bit later too.

If we look at other human rights acts across Canada and across the United Nations and other places, human rights acts are considered the sort of supreme test of what a province believes are the inalienable human rights of its citizens. I looked across all of Canada, and nowhere are there parental rights regarding children in any of this legislation. You know why? Because it's not a human right to have children. Simply put: people . . . [interjections] No. What I'm saying is that people choose to have children. They choose to have children. Some people don't have the ability to have children, so they don't have children. Some people don't want to have children. Okay?

So guess what? That's why in human rights, really, they don't include parental clauses there. You know where they put all parental rights clauses and all that? In some other act to the side or in something like the education act here, where we say that our parents shall have the right to take their kids out of class, like we had the common sense to do. Because I believe in everyone's right to be able to take their child out of a classroom if they don't agree with what's being taught there. Fair enough.

Why didn't we leave it there in the human rights code? You know why I don't think it was? Because I think it was a dirty little trade, Mr. Speaker. I think at the end of the day that it was a dirty little trade. It said: "Here's what we do. We're getting pressured all over the place. We're starting to look silly. We're the last place in Canada that has not included sexual orientation in our human rights code. So you know what? It's time we do that. But tell you what: we're going to let the GLBT community know that they're really not welcome here. We're going to sort of put it in, and we're going to dress it up a little." There's a saying here: if you put lipstick on a pig, sir, it's still a pig.

I'll tell you what. They might have tried to dress this up with a little bit of lipstick, a little bit of fancy language, call it a parental opt-out clause, call it whatever you want, but all it was was straight, utter, bigoted nastiness that I believe goes against what Albertans stand for, what I believe people in Alberta come to expect out of their government, and what really we as a people would deem acceptable. I believe that. That's how this got in there.

Guess what? We already had that the parents had the ability to take their kids out of class. Like I say, I respected that right. That didn't happen this time. Somehow those words "sexual orientation" ended up there. The hon. member from the third party offered a way to take sexual orientation out of that language in an amendment that would allow this government simply to just enshrine parental rights but without the words "sexual orientation" in it. I remember we debated that for some time. We said: "Yes. It's still not a very good bill. It's still not the way the other 10 provinces have done this. But guess what? We can take the words 'sexual orientation' out of this bill, and it will be a little less offensive to these members of our community."

You know what? This government said, "No. We don't mind offending them." We had a chance to do that. You guys all sat there. The hon. member who has been razzing me here, a couple of them, were here when they could've chosen with that amendment to take the words "sexual orientation" out of the bill. You were here when that happened. Yeah. And that didn't happen, okay? Why not? Why didn't that happen? Why did we leave those words "sexual orientation" in there? Well, you know, I think, like we heard, the proof is in the pudding is why it's still in there. I believe that, and I stand by my saying that.

I'll just conclude sort of the way that I started this bill. I think that if you look at what people who founded the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta did, people like Ron Gitter, who actually started the first human rights code, came out and said that this bill is an embarrassment to Alberta. He said that, and I believe he wouldn't have done that willy-nilly. He did it because he felt it. He felt an obligation to say that. I have a feeling that the governing party has returned to its roots of, say, the 1960s. Well, this party wasn't there but maybe has adopted some of the roots of the 1960s or what some of the mindset was in this province at that time.

I don't believe this language is progressive. I don't believe this language does anyone any justice, much less any Albertans who are looking for a full, inclusive set of human rights to be delivered to the population.

I thank you for allowing me the opportunity to speak. I'll wait to hear from other members. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of questions or comments.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I need to stand up today and congratulate this government and the minister for introducing this legislation. I am very grateful to see that it's about to be passed. I would say to the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo that I do believe that the right to have children is a human right. Not only that; I would say that the one place where it is not a human right is China. In China when that right is not respected, there are interesting things that happen, pretty brutal things that happen. So I would say that it is a human right to have children, and I take exception to any saying to the contrary.

Now, I went to a public school. I'm a public school graduate. I learned a few things in public school. I learned a little bit of English, for one. Members of this party have been accused in this Legislature of being intolerant; they've been accused of being many things, as you are affirming now. Let's look at the definition of intolerance that I learned in school: intolerance is an unwillingness to recognize and respect differences in opinion and beliefs; intolerance is narrow-mindedness about another's cherished opinions. That is the definition of intolerance.

Now, Bill 44 allows parents to quietly choose, when they believe that two very narrow subjects are being taught to their children and they want to be the first ones to teach those innocent children these subjects, to make that first impression on their minds about religion and about sexuality. They want to make sure that in these most delicate topics they have first dibs on their kids, so to speak. So we're giving them the option here of being able to pull their children out for these narrow topics and give parents first dibs on their children. That is being called intolerant.

Let's compare this with debate from the opposition. [interjection] I'll get to that, hon. member. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity in a letter to the editor dated May 17 says, "Bill 44, unless amended, has the potential of turning inclusive secular schools into bigotry-breeding battlegrounds with teachers and students caught in the parental religious rights crossfire." Is that the language of tolerance? I say no, it's not.

The same hon. member as well as the leader of the third party have accused our Minister of Culture and Community Spirit of being duped, of being used to bring this bill forward, the inference, of course, being that because of who he is, he is being used to bring this human rights legislation forward. Is that the language of tolerance? I would say not. Every member on that side of the House has stood up in this House and has said: we know better, the state knows better what our children should be taught with regard to sexuality and with regard to religion. That is what they have said. They know better than parents how to teach these things. Well, there's another definition I learned in public school, and that's arrogance. It is: marked by or arising from a feeling or assumption of one's superiority over another. That is very evident here. Hypocrisy – another interesting word – is: to act in contradiction to one's stated beliefs or feelings.

I would ask these hon. members opposite how they can believe in a concept such as the separation of church and state, yet they believe that the state is better suited to teach objective religion to our children. That's the separation of church and state?

They believe, they say, in human rights. They believe in a various bundle of rights that everyone has. They would look at the United Nations declaration on human rights and quote it over and over again about equality and all these good things that are in there – and there are great things in there. It's an amazing document. Yet they choose to ignore in that document article 26, which says that parents shall have a prior right to determine how their children are educated. That's hypocrisy.

Ms Blakeman: The choice about a public or a Catholic school, for God's sake.

Mr. Anderson: I'm going to get to that exact point, hon. member. You made my point dead on. You believe in public education, the importance of public education, and I believe in that, too. Yet you advocate in the same letter that I'm reading here that any parent who objects to religion or sexual education being taught by parents to their children, anyone who would dare opt their kids out on those grounds, should leave the public school system and go to a Catholic school or private school or charter school. Apparently, a tolerant public education, Mr. Speaker, does not include tolerating the children of parents who believe that they should teach these kids these subjects. Extremely hypocritical.

Now, going back to the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, who said that we are already doing this in policy and partly in the School Act. That's the argument. Okay. That's a fair argument. So why are we doing it now? Well, let's apply that same argument in adding sexual orientation to section 3 and through all the different provisions in the legislation. The reason we're putting sexual orientation in there is not because it's changing anything that this government already does. We already respect the rights of people of different sexual orientations. That's not why it's in there. The reason we're putting it in there is because it's the right thing to do. The reason we're putting it in there is because no person, regardless of whether they are gay or not gay or any other sexual orientation that they may have, no one should be denied a job because they're gay. No one should be denied housing because they're gay. It's the right thing to do to put it in there.

That's why we're putting parental rights into this, not because we have to do it but because it's the right thing to do. We need to recognize a parent's role as the primary educator of their children. We are doing it because it's right. We're doing it because we want to reassert that the family and not the state is the fundamental unit of a successful society. We want to do it because we feel that it is necessary to protect the rights of those embarking on the most important job that any of us will ever have, and that is being a parent.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of questions. The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: I'd like to ask the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere a question. His riding borders mine on the south, and as a rural riding it's, I think, quite similar to mine. I've heard very little on this particular bill compared to many of the other bills, but it seems to be drawn on two lines. One is the parents that support this bill. Almost all the calls I got from parents support the bill, and the few I got from teachers don't support it, but all in all I haven't gotten that much response from it.

As recently as the weekend I got to speak to a number of my constituents and even a few right at a convention I was at. Basically, conversation left my hands because it became between a parent and a teacher, and those lines were very evident there: the teacher on one side of the issue, parents on the other side. I assured the member of the teaching profession that we did introduce some amendments to the bill and that we'd be sending them out to him. Without seeing them, at the time he couldn't guarantee that he would be happy with them, but he seemed a little bit more assured with the amendments that we talked about. Could you tell me if the response in your riding has been similar to mine or quite a bit different?

Mr. Anderson: Absolutely. The response has been similar. There is no doubt that there are teachers with concerns. Part of those concerns has been due to a lot of the fearmongering and a lot of misinformation that has been out there and has been put out there intentionally in a lot of ways to push this bill back. Some of the concerns are legitimate, and I believe that this government has been very clear, especially the minister as well as the Minister of Education, in clarifying those points of uncertainty with teachers.

I will say this. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona earlier had mentioned that she believed the majority of parents were against this bill. I could not disagree with her more on this point. About three days ago I had a parent approach me and say: "Rob, I don't know what to do. What's the avenue? How can I as a parent support your bill, support the bill of the government, support the bill of the minister? I think that it's really important to support it, but I don't know how." I said, "Well, there's not much time to do a formal petition," much like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre stated, "but what you could do is you could maybe do an online petition and get some of your friends to sign it." She said, "Okay," and she went off and did that.

Well, within 72 hours roughly 900 people, just from one person starting out an e-mail chain, had signed this online petition, and it's still growing. It's getting near a thousand now. This technology is great because it allows you to make a comment as well as sign the petition. Some of the comments. Valerie Garratt from Calgary, Alberta, says: I should have the right to parent, educate, and protect my children as I see fit. Then you have Willis Winter from Calgary, who says: the government must respect the fundamental rights of citizens in a democracy; one of those rights is the right to direct what the parent views as the appropriate education and guidance of their children; dictating what must be taught is not appropriate in a democratic society.

Taralee Runge from Red Deer, Alberta, says: I believe we as parents have the right to decide whether we want the schools to teach this kind of extra curriculum; I believe it is for us to teach them these things in life, not some stranger. Sherry Adams from Edmonton, Alberta, says: parents have every right to determine if they want their children to opt out of a class that violates their conscience or their personal beliefs without any penalty to that child; that right should definitely be respected.

I could go on. There are hundreds and hundred of comments like this.

Some Hon. Members: Go on.

Mr. Anderson: I just might.

There are many others, but the point is, hon. member, that there are thousands and thousands of parents, the silent majority, severely normal Albertans that are extremely happy with this legislation, that believe it's right to affirm the right of parents as being the primary educators of their children in these subjects. I think that it's a credit to this government that it has stood up for what is right on this matter despite the inevitable cries of foul that come from the opposition benches.

I hope that that answers your question.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Over the millennia innumerable wars have been fought over the separation of church and state. For a brief period of history during the Crusades Christians, who conveniently forgot that Muslims and Jews share a common ancestry dating back to Abraham, put aside their differences in an attempt to impose their interpretation of the one true faith on the Holy Land and drive the infidels, anyone who didn't share their beliefs, out of Jerusalem. After the Crusades they went back to beating each other up, all in the name of the same God. Not only did Catholics battle with Protestants, but various sects of both religions fought internally for their faith.

Bill 44, unless amended, has the potential of turning inclusive, secular schools into bigotry-breeding battlegrounds, with both teachers and students caught in the parental/religious rights crossfire. While Bill 44 proposes to protect sexual orientation in the workplace and in tenancy, the right to discriminate would be enshrined in the public school classroom.

Parents through the School Act have always had the right to temporarily remove their children from classes of human sexuality and religion. However, sexual orientation isn't as clear-cut. What further muddies the waters is the Premier's earlier but later recanted assertion that parents have the right to object to discussions of evolution based on their personal religious beliefs. Parents currently have the taxpayer-subsidized choices of private schools, charter schools, and home schooling. Turning inclusive, secular public schools into faith-based battlegrounds is in no one's best interests.

Bill 44 in its current state is a regressive piece of legislation that turns back the clock rather than moving a tolerant Alberta forward. Bill 44 not only maintains but actively promotes the negative Alberta stereotype of red-necked intolerance which the latest Maclean's polling affirms is not the case.

For a variety of reasons Alberta is under scrutiny not only nationally but internationally. The government's $25 million greenwashing, rebranding efforts continue to stumble, from thousands of ducks drowning in toxic tailings ponds to pirating pictures of a Northumberland beach to promote Alberta's unique landscape. Freedom to Fake, Right to Discriminate is more representative of the branding perception by which Alberta is being viewed and judged both internally and externally.

Erasing a negative stereotypical image is considerably harder than creating and maintaining a positive view. Hollywood thrives on promoting villainous stereotypes. Remember the 1970s movie Deliverance, which portrayed gap-toothed, developmentally challenged banjo-playing hillbillies running amok in the Ozarks, terrorizing a group of urban adventurers?

Fast forward to 2004 Alberta and the filming of Brokeback Mountain, which was also set in the 1970s. Does anyone in this Assembly think the choice of Alberta for the backdrop was purely coincidental? The red-neck stereotype featured prominently in the childhood memory flashback of the gay cowboy who had been violated, murdered, with his body dumped into the ravine, foreshadowing what was to become of the ill-fated relationship of the two protagonists. The conflict between discretion and discrimination, which created the tension in this fictional film, is about to be played out in classroom reality in 2009 Alberta if Bill 44 in its tinkered amended state is passed.

Fact is frequently stranger than fiction. What was actually taking place in Alberta circa 1970? The majority of MLAs in this House look back with fond memories on a significant political event that occurred in 1971, with a young Peter Lougheed stepping onto the stage. One year later this progressive, in all senses of the word, leader put an end to the sterilization process that had been the norm in Alberta mental institutions for decades. State-sanctioned castration and hysterectomy had been institutionalized procedures for dealing with individuals loosely diagnosed as suffering from disability or deep depression. Shock treatment and frontal lobotomies, as featured in another 1970s movie . . . [some applause]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity has the floor, please.

Mr. Chase: Shock treatment and frontal lobotomies, as featured in another 1970s movie, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, were still in vogue as accepted procedures for dealing with mental illness.

Flash forward two decades to another Premier attempting to block compensation payments for individuals who had been caught up in the state's fondness for sterilization. The public outcry over this insensitive approach caused Ralph to blink, and compensatory payments were made as part of the recognition of past and present political folly.

Flash forward almost two more decades to the public outcry over Bill 44, which so far has fallen onto the deaf ears of a government that claims to be transparent and accountable yet appears to be so blinded by faith-based bigotry and intolerance that its members are willing to sacrifice the historical secular and inclusive public school system.

By enshrining prejudice in the name of religious tolerance, this government has taken Alberta back to the controversy of the Scopes monkey trial of 1925 in Tennessee. To divert Albertans' attention from their prejudicial proposal, they have played and replayed the racial discrimination defence card, that due to their caucus's ethnic diversity they are shocked that anyone would dare to accuse them of promoting intolerance. However, that is exactly what Bill 44, which does not apply to private schools, will do to previously inclusive, open-minded, secular-based public schools by enshrining in law the right to discriminate on the basis of human sexuality, religion, or sexual orientation.

Bill 44 is this regressive government's latest attempt to cater to a private minority at public schools' expense. Last year the per-pupil grants to private schools were increased to 70 per cent of their public component. The government further catered to private interests by paying for private school infrastructure at public expense. The fact that private schools have been exempted from the destructive ramifications of Bill 44 is a testament to how far a minority, dogmatic tail has wagged this government.

Tonight's vote will be a history-shaping event during which the shepherds will be separated from the sheep, the leaders from the lemmings. The votes of those who haven't learned from the mistakes of history will be recorded tonight in Hansard. For the sake of the future of public education I urge all members, particularly those on the government side, to consider the true meaning of progressive and balance both your conscience and your constituents in your voting decision.

Mr. Speaker, with that, I would like to introduce an amendment. I'll wait for you to pass that amendment out.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, you have introduced an amendment, so proceed on the amendment.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am moving that the motion for third reading of Bill 44, the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following:

Bill 44, the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a third time because the proposed notice provisions contained in the bill will cause a chill in expression that will adversely affect Alberta's education system.

This amendment states that we need to pull the bill because of section 9's negative impacts on teachers, students, and learning in our public schools. Children should be learning the full curriculum, and the teaching of that should not be subject to the penalties of the human rights act. This is an issue for the School Act, and that is where it belongs.

The major basis of dispute between the government and the opposition is what constitutes parental rights. As a parent I believe I have the right to introduce – and did – to my daughter and to my grandchildren a certain view of religion that they could choose to embrace, accept, or not. What I did not do, however, was pack amongst their lunch my particular religious preferences or prejudices and send them off to school to share with their classmates. What Bill 44 does is it makes it an opt-out, intolerant act if you so choose to absent yourself from discussions of human sexuality, any type of discussion of religion, and sexual orientation.

Now, the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere talked about perceived intolerance. Whether that intolerance results in a child pulling themselves out of an inclusive public school classroom because of a parent's viewpoint, that is prejudice, particularly when it has to do with discussions of sexual orientation. Under the School Act we already dealt with concerns over human sexuality. If parents for whatever reason want to continue to tell their child that, you know, "The stork arrived, and that's why you've got a new brother," that's their right, but in terms of inclusive education and providing children with a much larger understanding, then I have concerns about children not being subjected to open and universal discussion.

This amendment basically says that under the name of religious tolerance or religious opting-out parents can interfere with the public school system and pull their kids out from their class whenever there are topics where they find the potential of controversy. In other words, "Children, you don't have to be tolerant of your classmates on these grounds: human sexuality, religion, or sexual orientation. Feel free to discriminate, leave the class, cover your eyes, cover your ears, cover your mouth. Stop thinking. Just do what mommy and daddy say because mommy and daddy are your parents, and they know best." If we do not separate school and home, then we have a problem. Parents, instill your views, but don't force them on the school system because that's not where religion belongs. It belongs in the home, not pushed into the school.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs on the amendment.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's difficult to sit through this debate without getting engaged.

An Hon. Member: Give it a whirl.

Mr. Lukaszuk: I'll give it a whirl.

Mr. Speaker, what particularly concerns me right now is that this debate has devolved, not evolved but devolved, into a bit of a mockery. It's not often you see this in this Chamber, but as we're here debating and speaking on something that is perceived by both sides of the issue, of the spectrum – those in the galleries I imagine have some defined points of view, and other members may have others – this entire debate right now is being narrated by various members in this Chamber on Facebook, on their computers, just showing how this debate is really not about the subject matter but how it is about showing what big heroes we are to our supporters.

You know, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood should receive a certificate because his typing skills are phenomenal. I'm just sitting and watching his Facebook face, and he literally is narrating step by step what's happening in this Chamber. His last comment – and I will use the last name because I'm quoting. I'm quoting, Mr. Speaker, so you can't rule me out of order: Stelmach arrives to much thumping.

It has nothing to do, Mr. Speaker, with the debate, and I know that they want to now stop – there's an amendment on the floor to stop this bill from passage. This debate has nothing to do with what's in the bill anymore. It has to do with getting the crowds out there riled up, and it's just about spin and PR right now because, frankly, this bill does nothing. It does nothing for either side. It does not give our gay community any rights that they didn't previously have since the Vriend decision from the Supreme Court of Canada. All of their rights have been entrenched in government's literature, and they have been exercising all of these rights.

Yes, they were not codified. Perhaps they should have been codified earlier, but they weren't. Today, as a result of this bill, they are. So all we are simply doing as government is affirming in writing the rights that they have had for the last 11 years, and now with the passage – hopefully, if this amendment fails – of the bill, these rights will be codified.

On the other side of the spectrum, Mr. Speaker, there is a group of parents out there, and I have, actually, a large number of them in my riding, who have been exercising a certain right because of policies and regulations by school boards and in the School Act, and that was the right to remove their child from certain classes. Maybe we should read that section of the act. Everybody has been talking about a child who has two dads, and indeed there are many of these children right now who by way of having gay parents, by way of divorce have mixed families. This is the reality. Somehow members of the Liberal opposition and the NDP opposition want to create this picture that members of this caucus live in some kind of a cocoon and that we don't have these constituents. As a matter of fact, we have members of the caucus that live in such families, that have blended families.

Mr. Speaker, look at the bill itself, section 11.1(1):

A board as defined in the School Act shall provide notice to a parent or guardian of a student where courses of study, educational programs or instructional materials . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, I recognize a point of order from the leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, while I enjoyed the hon. member referring to Facebook as if it had anything to do with the amendment, he's now debating the bill and not the amendment. He should be called to order and asked to speak to the amendment which is now before the House correctly.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member on the amendment.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, hon. member, for proving my point because the moment you start talking about the bill itself . . .

Mr. Mason: The amendment.

Mr. Lukaszuk: . . . and the amendment to the bill, you obviously, hon. member, have an issue with it. You're proving my point: the bill and the amendments are no longer relevant; it's about the spin that you're managing to put on it.

As I was reading, Mr. Speaker:

A board as defined in the School Act shall provide notice to a parent or guardian of a student where courses of study, educational programs or instructional materials, or instruction or exercises, prescribed under that Act include subject-matter that deals explicitly with religion, sexuality or sexual orientation.

Mr. Speaker, in my riding right now I have a rather large group of parents who for religious reason – for religious reason – do not wish their children exposed to music, and they require that these children be removed from classes where any form of education or instruction entails music. Well, these parents have been enjoying the privilege of being able to remove these children from class, and education carries on. As a matter of fact, it doesn't really weaken public education because the alternative would be that if not allowed to remove those children from that one particular class, these parents would have to opt for plan B, which would be either home-schooling or a private religious school.

I personally as an educator and as a parent am not a big advocate of home-schooling or private religious schools, but that's a choice that's offered to Albertans. So by not allowing a parent to exercise his or her option of having a child removed from a certain aspect of education, what you are really doing is forcing that parent into a private or home-schooling situation.

This doesn't only pertain, as you like to focus, to sexual orientation. There are parents out there, and I know a number of them, who would have issues with their children being educated on certain aspects of heterosexuality simply because they don't feel comfortable with (a) a child learning it at a certain stage in life because they may find that their son or daughter is simply not mature enough to absorb that information; or (b) they feel that they can do it better as a parent, that they have built a better relationship with their child to discuss such a sensitive issue than a teacher would have. Now, are we to deny them that right? How is entrenching in law one set of rights which are already being enjoyed and exercised by a group of people any more important than entrenching in that very same law the rights and privileges of another group of people who are currently exercising these privileges? Mr. Speaker, I do not see the difference.

As a result of this, I think public education could possibly be strengthened because parents now will be able to carry on with the enrolment of their kids in public education and will not have to exercise home-schooling, and they will be satisfied knowing that their children are not learning anything that they don't particularly approve of. These parents simply don't trust the state. Maybe some members of this Chamber find it difficult to accept the fact that there are people out there who simply don't trust us in our ability to draft curriculum that would be satisfying every single parent. They do not want to give the state the right to have the final decision on what their child learns. They want to make sure that they as a parent of a child have that last choice, and I think most Albertans would agree with that.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge all members of this Assembly to defeat that amendment.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, you stood up before.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I welcome the opportunity to speak on the amendment as moved by my colleague from Calgary-Varsity, which is essentially asking that the bill not now be read a third time because the provisions that are in the bill will cause a chill in expression that will adversely affect Alberta's education system. In fact, that's what's happened to us. We started out with a bill that was about human rights, and we've ended up with a bill that's about schools and parental rights. Not the same thing.

I think there are a couple of issues that we want to talk about here. The Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs actually introduced quite a bit of it. There are a number of choices that are available to parents in the system now if parents do not like or approve of the public system. They have a number of options, and they were outlined earlier. They could home-school their children if they chose. They could send them to a private school, which used to be the sort of enclave of the truly wealthy, but now since we provide 70 per cent of the funding for that, it's not quite so much anymore to be able to send your kid to a private school. So that's a choice that's available. Of course, we have a number of charter schools that are set up to deliver a very particular kind of education. It is under the school system but is not included in the sections that are included in Bill 44. So already there are choices that are offered to these parents if they do not like the way the public school system operates.

I am a child of the public school system here in Alberta, and more than that, my parents were both teachers in that system. I believe in that public school system. I think it strives for excellence, and I think, in fact, it has produced excellence. I appreciate that they tried very hard to give a range of experiences to me as a student and continue to do so. I think that a public school education should be something that has a value and a standard to it in the same way that we look at public health care, for example. Indeed, you can opt out of public health care if you want. You can pay cash or you can opt out completely or you can get other kinds of insurance that will cover your health care costs. But that doesn't mean that we change the quintessential quality of our health care system.

I believe that a public education should stand for something. I am confused, and I have failed to hear a compelling argument about how having different children pulled out of different classes for different reasons over a period of time is going to give us a standard of education that is recognized outside of Alberta as an Alberta education because this kid didn't do evolution because of some reason, and this kid didn't do biology, and this kid didn't do English. I think that what we do is start to create a patchwork in our education system. That's my concern about what we've created with Bill 44 by adding this in.

We went from talking about a parental opt-out section to a parental rights section, much more muscular talking about parental rights than talking about a parental opt-out section. And, indeed, we had a parental opt-out section. That's what existed. We didn't need to put it into legislation. So you think to yourself: why would we? Given the chance, from a government that professes to be of an ideology that wants less government and less legislation, why was there such eagerness to put more legislation in place around this and more rules and more administration around this and put more into something that then had to be dealt with?

Let me move on to talking about what the effect of that is on our schools. I touched on that during my earlier remarks. What we've done is create the necessity for each of our schools, many of which are dealing with 500, 700, 1,000 students, to establish a system. Does it happen that each school is responsible for developing their own database and for paying for it and for bringing in the IT specialists that are going to help them to run this database, or is this going to be a school-board-wide initiative that has to pay for this?

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Ms Blakeman: It's relevant because in the amendment, if you'd care to read it, it talks about adversely affecting Alberta's education system. I think that having to pay for a computer system and IT support is going to adversely affect Alberta's education system, particularly because it's going to pull the money off.

One of the things that we tried to get through as an amendment when we were in Committee of the Whole was an amendment that would try to not have the effect of a teacher hauled before the human rights tribunal, the liability, to have to be assumed by the school.

So right there are two things that affect the school very directly. One is having to devote the resources, both the staff resources and the financial resources, to developing and maintaining this database of parental preference around what they want their various children to do. And, of course, you could be dealing with one or two parents, and you could be dealing with several different children in the school, so this starts to be a complicated database that you're dealing with.

Second is the effect on and the cost to teachers. The bottom line here, what we have created is the ability of a parent to bring a human rights complaint against a teacher for having taught something in a class that would be around – once again, I'm going back to the language here – “religion, human sexuality or sexual orientation.” For teaching that or having course materials or instructional materials that possibly deal with that – think poetry, plays, books, images, science, math, all kinds of ways that this could be perceived as being offensive to someone – for having any of that material available that somehow is offensive to a parent, now you can end up bringing a teacher before the human rights tribunal and all of the costs involved with that.

This is not chump change, guys. You start to get lawyers involved in this and a number of different hearings, and it can be appealed upwards from the Human Rights Commission into the court system, so you can potentially commit somebody to a significant amount of money for this. When we look at what we have done that could adversely affect the school system, well, I think that's where the chill on the teachers comes from.

Somebody earlier talked about seeing a line being drawn where on one side were parents and on the other side were teachers around how this bill is coming out. I actually think that's pretty accurate, not to mention the people that this is actually affecting the most because their very beings have now been deemed to be open for discrimination based on what is anticipated under section 9, which is amending the original section 11. I think this is a whole section, an anticipated effect of this bill, that has not been dealt with.

I approve of the amendment being brought forward because I think we do need to deal with this and understand what it's going to cost in staffing and in financial resources and in an emotional investment for how teachers approach their classrooms. When you see those teachable moments come by – well, yes, we're now supposed to be protected from things that are sort of casual. Sorry; I'm searching for the amendment so that I've got the right language here. Impromptu things are not supposed to be grounds for bringing a teacher before the human rights. But even that, I think, could run us into difficulties because we're not getting a real clear definition of those circumstances.

Frankly, this is all going to play out by test cases. That's how law is developed and precedent is developed, by test cases. If we don't write good, clear legislation on this floor, we end up costing those individuals that get involved in it and the court system and ultimately the taxpayers a fair chunk of change because we weren't specific enough in what we did on this floor.

Given that, I would recommend very strongly to my colleagues on the floor that you support this amendment, which, in effect, would result in the bill not now being read a third time because it brought in a whole section that was not originally anticipated and is affecting the school system and teachers and school boards and school councils in a way that was not originally anticipated.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak in favour of the amendment.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. leader of the third party, you stood up before.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to speak to this amendment because I believe this is a good amendment. I think that we shouldn't give this bill third reading tonight for a whole bunch of reasons, but I think this amendment puts its finger on one of the very important reasons why we should not give this bill its third reading, and that is the chilling effect that it will have on education.

Now, I want to begin, Mr. Speaker, by talking a little bit about the government amendment, which is allegedly set out in order to deal with this. It says that this section – well, there are two. Section (a) says, by striking out “explicitly with religion, sexuality or sexual orientation” and substituting “primarily and explicitly with religion, human sexuality or sexual orientation”; and (b), by adding the following: “This section does not apply to incidental or indirect references to religion, religious themes, human sexuality or sexual orientation in a course of study, educational program, instruction or exercises or in the use of instructional materials.”

Mr. Speaker, at first blush, someone might be led to believe that these amendments by the government have solved the problem set out in the Official Opposition's amendment here. I don't think that that is the case because we talk about primarily and explicitly, but let's take an example and just work it through and see how this might affect it.

You might be teaching your children about the Holocaust, and you might be talking about concentration camps and telling the children

what happened, having a discussion of that bit of horrible history. You might talk about Jews being sent to concentration camps. You might then talk about Gypsies being rounded up and sent to concentration camps. One of the students might ask a question about whether or not homosexuals were rounded up by the Nazis and sent to concentration camps. If that subject comes up and one of the parents has explicitly written under the act that their children are not to be taught about that, then it may create a serious problem for the teacher.

The problem is that the teacher won't know. The teacher won't know until there have been cases brought and considered by the Human Rights Commission. They won't know where the decision will come down and where the line is because this act gives the power to determine that to the Human Rights Commission. So in that particular case, if parents were not satisfied with the way it had been handled and couldn't resolve it with the teacher or the principal and so on, then in fact there is a possibility – a possibility – of a case before a tribunal of the Human Rights Commission, the teacher being hauled before the Human Rights Commission tribunal, and that tribunal adjudicating whether or not there had been a violation of the rights of the child or, as the government likes to call it, the rights of the parent. It is that possibility, it is the potential for that to happen that will create the chilling effect that this particular amendment talks about.

Now, it's not just the NDP, it's not just the Liberal opposition that has this concern. Mr. Speaker, you know, some of the backbenchers say, "Oh, what a bunch of nonsense," and they scoff. But these concerns have been expressed by teachers, by school boards, by school administrators. These are precisely the concerns of the professionals who work in the field.

I don't underestimate at all the concerns of parents in this matter. There are many parents who have great concern with respect to this. Many of them are in the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs' constituency. He is really, clearly, feeling a lot of pressure with respect to this. It's clear. When we talked about Bill 44 at the committee stage, the hon. member talked about this being a wedge issue. He doesn't seem to want to debate that. Tonight he complained that members were twittering or talking about Facebook or talking online about the debate that's here, anything but tackling the real issue, the fundamental issue of Bill 44. It's very clear that a lot of government members are getting a lot of heat from a lot of parents on this bill. Frankly, Mr. Speaker, rightly so – rightly so – if a government would bring forward this bill.

Let's not forget that this bill is under human rights, but it is primarily human rights in the education system, in the classroom. Isn't it curious, Mr. Speaker, that before this bill was introduced, this government did not consult with school boards, and school boards have objected to that. They did not consult with parents, and parents have objected to that. School councils are officially on record as objecting to the lack of consultation. School boards, the Alberta Teachers' Association, parents, everybody involved in the delivery of public education, who are primarily affected by this particular piece of legislation, were not consulted by the government because it started out as a human rights bill. The Minister of Culture and Community Spirit, after rejecting opposition calls for months to make sexual orientation a protected right, finally decided he would bring it forward, 11 years after those rights had already been granted by the Supreme Court of Canada in the Vriend decision.

That was, of course, just the start of this bill, Mr. Speaker, and the Tory caucus got involved, the great multicultural, broadly-based, diverse caucus that the Premier is so proud of but which acts just like any Tory caucus in its narrow approach to fundamental human rights. What happened is that it got changed from a human rights bill into an education bill that inserted the Human Rights Commission into the classroom.

Now, there are amendments here from the government that have tried to mitigate that, but, you know, if you ask the professionals, if you ask the parents, you'll find that they think that these don't do the job. This amendment that's been brought forward says: "Let's not read this. Let's not give it third reading. Let's not pass it into law, and here's why. Because it will create a chilling effect in the classroom." This is not just what the opposition is saying. This is what parents are saying. This is what teachers are saying. This is what school boards are saying. So for the government members to sit on their high horses and say, "Oh well, the opposition, you know, doesn't know what it's talking about" – they're wrong.

It's clear, Mr. Speaker, that this government has not consulted with people in the educational community, and it's brought forward something that's ideologically driven. It's brought forward something that's potentially very damaging to the education of our children. It might be the right of one parent to pull their child out of a discussion about sexuality or religion. That right already exists, and we have never contradicted that despite what Airdrie-Chestermere has said. But what has happened is that they've made it a right and inserted the Human Rights Commission into a system that was working perfectly well. It was working perfectly well. When we asked the minister, when we asked members opposite if they could produce a single case where some parents' rights to have their child absent when they talked about sexuality or they talked about religion were violated, some practical reason why we might need this bill, they were unable to produce a single case.

The question is: why is it here? Well, Mr. Speaker, it's here because there's an ideological drive in that caucus. It's a social conservative group that's driving the agenda, that's hijacked the government's agenda. They've inserted this ideological principle, which comes from the social conservative movement in the United States, where they're actually seeking a constitutional amendment to the American Constitution to insert parental rights. They're having very little success, quite frankly, in the United States, but they're having more success here in Alberta because of the lack of leadership that's taking place in this province on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I think that it's imperative that we should not give this bill third reading tonight. We should stop it and allow the government to do what it should have done in the first place, and that is to produce some justification for this change, to say: here is where rights have been violated, and we need to fix it. That's how rights come about. They need to consult with parents, they need to consult with the public, and they need to consult with educational professionals, things they should have done. It's sheer negligence that that has not occurred, but it's so typical – it's so typical – of this government to proceed in that direction, driven from the back seat by the social conservative rump of the Tory caucus instead of talking to the people they should be talking to, the people of Alberta: the parents, the teachers, all of the people who are involved in education.

This is fundamentally, Mr. Speaker, an education bill now. It's no longer a human rights bill. It talks about how education will be delivered and what things you can and cannot talk about in school and the rights of parents to interfere in the education not of their own children but to interfere in the education of all other children in the classroom because of the chilling effect on education. It's not just the child that should be taken out of the classroom. It's not just that child, because parents can do that now, but it's the impact on the overall educational process taking place in the classroom, which means that certain things that could be talked about and should be talked about no longer are.

So if that hon. member wants to take his children out of class when certain things are discussed, the impact is that it affects the education of my child and every other person's child, and that's what's wrong with this. It's not that they are exercising their parental rights. It is that they are exercising a negative influence, a baleful influence on the education of the rest of our children. That's why parents are in the gallery. That's why parents are so strongly opposed to this bill. They see it for what it is, an attempt to prevent the full, critical education of their own children under the guise of protecting the children of specific parents. That's what it is, Mr. Speaker, and that's what's wrong with it.

I'm glad the Premier is here tonight. I'm glad he could hear this speech.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to this amendment to Bill 44. Not wishing to repeat anything that's been said before but simply to get to the practicality of the issue, it's clear that we have a strong division not only in the House but across the province on the issue. It's concerning a great many people: human rights people on both sides, I suppose, parents on both sides, school boards, mostly against this bill.

I guess what I would argue is that as a body of men and women elected to represent the population, the fact that this has created such division and perhaps a 50-50 split, as the Herald would have suggested in one of its polls, behooves us to pause and get out of this frame of reference in which there is that right-wrong, us-them, good-bad about this whole discussion and recognize that if we are going to serve the best interests of the public and our children, we may need to take a hiatus. We may need to pause and think and confer and discuss with members of our community, members of our schools, members in the human rights community to try and get this right.

I appreciate that on both sides of this question there is legitimate concern for children, for the future, for education. I guess that from a very practical point of view we're at an impasse in the province, not only in the House. This is something that is very dear to the hearts of many people in the province. There is a clear split, and in the interests of being democratic and responsive and actually wrestling with this for a little longer, perhaps, and hearing more from the public and from the schoolteachers, who are going to be most affected by this, I think it behooves us to support this amendment and put this off for a while. There's nothing lost by putting this off till the fall, nothing lost except pride on both sides, I suppose, that neither wins this particular debate. But I don't think we're here to win or lose the debate. We're here to do the right thing by our children and by what code of conduct and human rights we wish to stand as 21st century Albertans.

My plea to everyone is to consider the possibility of simply postponing the decision on this, supporting this amendment and making sure that we do the right thing in something that is so critical as our children's education and to honour the human rights that we all want to stand for in the long term.

I won't take any further time but simply want to put that on the table, Mr. Speaker, as a constructive option for us to move this issue forward and recognize the legitimate perspectives on both sides on this debate. The fact is that we have a split across the province on this issue, and those most severely affected – children and teachers as well as parents – may want to be heard more clearly than they have been and get by the rhetoric, get by the polarization. I guess that is what I'm seeing on this issue, that perhaps isn't serving those who are most going to be affected by this.

Thank you for the honour to speak, and I look forward to the vote.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit on the amendment.

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hyperbole and the conjecture and the excessive rhetoric certainly comes from the opposition benches. Last week I said that there are other Albertans, that there are other parents that believed in our position on this bill, to which you said that there was no one else that did. Now you say today that the Calgary Herald says that it's 50-50. Well, I'd argue that next week it'll be 75-25 because the silent majority of those people out there that you derided, that you dismissed, that you said are represented by parents' councils – parent councils do not represent the parents of 600,000 people. You have to get that through your head.

In terms of whom we talk to in this caucus, that you say is somehow hijacked by this right-wing cabal, is it myself? Is it the Minister of Education? Is it our Premier? Is it the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods? Is it the one from Edmonton-Meadowlark? Is it Edmonton-Ellerslie? Where is it?

An Hon. Member: Show yourself.

Mr. Blackett: Show yourself.

When we consult with our own caucus, with our 72-person caucus, we have three former school board chairs. We have three school board chairs. We have seven teachers. Because you do not believe in what they believe in doesn't mean that they're wrong, doesn't mean they're not representative. You have to understand through your narrow-minded, little view that there are contrary views, and because we don't believe the same thing as you do doesn't mean that we had any nefarious intent.

Back to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. You forgot the second part of the amendment, as you so conveniently do when you go on with your rhetoric. You forgot the fact that if there's a process, which you agreed is so wonderful, within the school boards, it says specifically that those individuals have to go through that process: go to the teacher, go to the principal, go to the school board, and that has successfully resolved every complaint, according to the ASBA, that has happened in this province. So there is no need to go to the Human Rights Commission. That was an amendment we put in in response to them.

At that meeting at the end of the day they didn't say: well, the whole world is going to come to an end. Their response was: we would rather that we don't have this section in the bill, but if we have it and we have to work together moving forward, we will work with you. So they will sit down with representatives of the Human Rights Commission and work out a system. They'll work out a template. They'll work out a system of notification. It's not very hard for them because they already have one now.

You say that we need an amendment. You say that we didn't delay. We don't need any of that. We have consulted with others. You just choose to deny the fact that we have. You say that we talked to no one. You say that we don't represent parents. Who are all these people in here? Where are the hundreds of thousands of people out there that you say are against this bill? I've had 350 letters. I get that in one day on other issues. So I categorically deny your outrageous assertions.

You know, someday, actually tomorrow, the sun will rise, teachers will conduct their classes, and all will be well with the world. Six months from now, when there's still not a human rights case, all will be right with the world, and we'll be focusing on fixing the administrative changes that this bill was intended to do. Sexual orientation will be a protected ground within the legislation, as we had intended. Those tolerant parents that you give no credit to, that are going to pull their kids out by the hundreds: it's not going to happen either. They want a chance to have a discussion with their children. They want to have a chance to discuss those issues. If you are offended by the fact that they are sensitive issues, that's too bad. Those parents are whom we represent, 3 and a half million Albertans, not your little cabal, not your five little ridings or your nine little ridings or your special-interest groups. We represent 3 and a half million people on this side of the floor. That's why we're going to carry this bill forward, and we're going to vote on it tonight.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the amendment.

Ms Notley: Yes. Thank you. A pleasure to be able to get up and speak to this amendment. I do appreciate the minister taking the time to get up and engage in the debate because I think it's an important one. We don't agree, but it's somewhat disconcerting to see the lack of participation on the part of the apparently very large and fully consulted caucus.

A few points, I guess, just to go back to some of the points that the minister just raised. I mean, I think it's fabulous that the caucus talked to itself. I think that's great. Of course, we've all heard that there are lots of them, but I have to say that at the end of the day talking to oneself even if one is a large caucus is not consultation. You know, you're a parent. I'm a parent. I don't stand here purporting to speak on behalf of lots of parents because I happen to be a parent. The reason I'm speaking on behalf of lots of parents is because I can't run into a parent for the last two weeks without every single, solitary one of them telling me how much they are opposed to this. You are right: school councils are not necessarily elected to represent on every issue. But they are probably one of the most representative groups of parents out there. I've yet to see the 350 letters from parents that say they support this, but I have seen the thousands that don't.

Now, in terms of other people out there, I mean, I think it was mentioned before, but I just saw a little note here that the student group which has been up on Facebook since Friday is now up to about 2,400 members, so it's continuing to grow. As the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood has noted, we have school boards opposed to it, teachers opposed to it, parent councils opposed to it, human rights groups opposed to it, the GLBT community, for whom this legislation was theoretically originated in part, opposed to it. So I appreciate that the 72 government members talked to themselves about this, but at a certain point no matter how representative those 72 folks think they are, when you've got that many groups saying that this is wrong, I find it hard to believe – I don't want to use the word "arrogant" because we had a whole discussion on the definition of arrogant, but it seems to me that there might be a picture of what I've just described beside the word in the dictionary were we to look it up right now.

I want to follow up just a little bit on the comments that the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood made because it truly does reflect the concern that I have and that I've been hearing. This is not about the right which currently exists under the School Act or school policy for certain families to pull their children out of classes. Now, that's a different issue, and we could have a long and probably very interesting discussion about that and how that should be framed and how it should be done. But it is about the right of parents and kids to not have discussion inhibited or limited or frozen within the classroom because of a poorly constructed law that is implemented through a poorly thought out system by a bunch of people throwing amendment after amendment at it with nobody really thinking about what the actual, ultimate implications are.

I made this point before, but I want to make it again because it doesn't appear as though the minister heard before. He talks about the amendments that were made that talk about how, "Oh, well, you have to go to the school board first and you can go to this place first and there are all these other places you have to go to resolve the issue before you can go to the Human Rights Commission." The problem is that once you've got something in the human rights code, you've just opened up the door for litigation because it's in the code. The fact of the matter is that there are cases out there that are almost decades long now about the fight between whether something is properly in front of an arbitration board or properly in front of the human rights code.

What the government has written into this legislation has just created a whole new area, a whole new body of law. There are dozens of lawyers that are going to be able to make a career out of interpreting this piece of legislation, and they will do it on our tax dollar at the expense of our education system and at the expense of our kids while they learn less because teachers are trying to figure out whether they can afford the legal costs of all of this. So what the government has proposed is not a solution. It is an invitation for more debate and more litigation.

On that issue I would really be incredibly grateful were the minister to actually table for the House any legal opinions that he had received or, probably, all the legal opinions that he had received on this issue. It does strike me as a bit perplexing that if this is such a clear bill and if there will be no problems and if everything will all be fine because we're all reasonable and we'll all wake up a year from now and discover there's not one legal issue arising from this, that if that's the case, why can't the minister table the legal opinion? I don't understand. It can't prejudice you. It's the same legal opinion that ultimately would be argued in court even if somebody does decide to challenge it.

It's ultimately going to come out anyway. Why not share it with Albertans? Why not assure us that we're not running afoul of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms? Why not assure us that we're not injecting a tremendous amount of legal uncertainty into our human rights code? Why not do it? Unless you've received legal opinions even from inside your own ministry saying that this is an ill-advised reconstruction of what was otherwise an incomplete human rights code. I can only go with what I'm given, so the absence of assurances means that I along with many other members of the House and the many groups that I've mentioned have to conclude that, you know, the government is knowingly embarking on a path that they know is going to trigger a tremendous amount of litigation.

We just have to go back to this whole issue of what this is going to actually do in the classroom and how it's going to impact the ability of kids to learn and the ability of teachers to teach. Just tonight, you know, I think I've received about 10 e-mails from different teachers saying, "Just today in the staff room we were talking about how we were going to change how we teach this subject or that subject," and parents, of course, who are very upset.

I go back, of course, to that because we have not ever actually implemented the recommendations from the Learning Commission. As I'm sure I've mentioned in the past, one of my kids has spent their time in school in a class that's never gone under 28 children from kindergarten onwards. Anyway, in that class there would probably be at least two families, statistically speaking, where the parents are of the same gender. I really worry about how those kids are going to experience their education, and I also worry about how my kids are going to learn about those kids and what that's going to do to their education.

There are so many other resources that we need in our schools, and this bill is pulling those resources to the wrong place. Instead of effectively limiting the degree to which we can in our schools actually teach our kids about the human rights code and its history, we should actually be working on programs to enhance tolerance and the acceptance of diversity within our classrooms.

I worry that because we've got this in the human rights code, when a parent exercises their option to pull their kid out every time there's something they don't like, they will very soon say that they're being adversely impacted, that there's a form of adverse-effect discrimination because their kid is sitting in the library unattended. So then suddenly an aide gets pulled out of one class to watch the kid or the children in the library. Now suddenly the classroom with 28 kids and one teacher and two aides has 28 kids and one teacher and one aide because the other aide is having to address the fact that sexual orientation is a, quote, sensitive topic, in the words of some government members.

I do worry that people think that's a sensitive topic. Inclusion of that issue into our human rights code should mean that we all believe it's not a sensitive topic anymore. It should mean that we are all prepared as adults to talk about sexual orientation, people who are gay, the same way we talk about women getting the vote and different ethnic minorities having the right to, you know, equal employment, equal tenancy, and equal access to jobs. We should not somehow suggest that some of that is still sensitive.

It's in that debate at the very heart of this that we find what is the problem with this and what is the underlying sentiment behind this government's desire to move forward with this bill. That's why people are so concerned about it because at the very core of it there's a little kernel of something that most Albertans are very uncomfortable with, and it's that little kernel that I'm uncomfortable with and all opposition members on this side are uncomfortable with.

I think the best thing to do would be to not read this a third time. I think the best thing to do would be for the government to take this issue back, to finally, once and for all, adhere to the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and put sexual orientation into our human rights code. Then if there are ongoing concerns, if there are real issues, real examples of problems that are raised by parents – because, of course, we've yet to hear about any of them. It's not discussed in the media. It's not some huge outcry where parents are saying that their kids are being brainwashed into being, you know, gay-loving sex freaks; there's not that kind of issue out there. But if there were, we go back to the School Act, where the issue should be addressed, and we figure out how to do it better. We save face, and we don't make Alberta the laughingstock of the continent, and we do a good day's work.

It's on that basis that I think we should all vote in favour of this amendment. I certainly will be, and I'll be encouraging others to do the same.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Seeing no other speaker on the amendment, the chair shall now call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on amendment RA1 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 12:12 a.m.]

[Motion on amendment RA1 lost]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 43(d) and pursuant to Standing Order 49 I wish to move that the question now be put.

The Deputy Speaker: This motion is known as a motion for the previous question, which is the question on the motion for third reading of Bill 44. It's a debatable motion.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I'm sorry. Could I get the citation again, please?

Mr. Renner: Forty-nine.

Ms Blakeman: My understanding with this is that it comes into play only after a hoist motion. Am I incorrect? This comes into play after both a hoist and a reasoned? No. It's coming into play separately. Okay.

I would argue that this should not be adhered to. The very fact that we have more and more people interested in the debate of this bill, admittedly aside from those that are in the House – I sense that there's not a lot of appetite for that amongst my hon. colleagues, but there certainly is appetite for it beyond the House. We've already talked about the rising interest from those outside of the House, whether it's through an online petition or an increase in the number of e-mails that are being received. Therefore, the need, the necessity for the government to get up and preclude any further debate, including, I might mention, the opportunity for the leader of the third party to actually participate in third reading, aside from speaking specifically to an amendment, is really unnecessary.

Once again, you know, you've got 72 votes here, guys. What does it matter to you? When people want to speak about this, what is the great need to shut it down? What are you afraid of? What do you think somebody is going to say that necessitates your having to, you know, use a little-used citation in the standing orders to shut down debate?

You know what? That's going to become the news story, not what happened about this. The news story will be that the government used a heavy hand to shut down debate in the Legislature. Why would you do that? [interjections] Well, this is a debatable motion, and I'm sure some of you can get in on it.

You don't need to do this. You already have your votes. You know that you're eventually going to win this. What does it matter to you to have to sit here for a few minutes longer and listen to some people that want to say something about this bill? Clearly, there is an appetite for it outside of this Chamber. Maybe that's what you're worried about. Maybe that's what you're trying to subvert and avoid, that discussion that's taking place elsewhere.

It's your choice. It's the government's choice in the scheduling of this bill to put this on at night. We could do it during the day. We could do it tomorrow. We could do it Wednesday. We could do it Thursday. But I think the government likes to put it on at night so that it can do things like this in the middle of the night, when there are not so many people around to notice it, conveniently. [interjections] Well, it's a debatable motion, so I invite people to get involved and get engaged in the democratic process.

I would argue that there is no need at this point for the government to have to bring this in. It's a matter of a few more speakers at most before this bill reaches the end. I think it's wrong to be taking away that opportunity from the leader of the third party in particular. [interjections] Everything I've said has been on point here, boys. If you want to argue, get up and argue.

So far I fail to see where the government has a need to invoke Standing Order 49 and bring it into play in this case. What's it going to cost you, another couple of minutes? Forty-five minutes and the debate is done. But you will turn this into a debate about how the government had to be heavy handed and shut down debate when there were one or two people left to speak on this. For shame. Why on earth would you need to do that?

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, I just want to remind you that this motion for the previous question allows the debate on the bill and the motion as well.

Thank you.

12:30

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is disgusting. They're laughing, they're certainly enjoying themselves, but the fact of the matter is that neither the leader of the Liberal opposition nor I have been allowed to speak. Now you say I can speak to the bill?

The Deputy Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Mason: Okay. Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, the government is moving to cut off debate on a bill that was generated with very little consultation. As my hon. colleague has said, they talk to themselves, and they think that's consultation. They've got seven teachers in their caucus, so they think that's enough. They don't have to talk to 7,000 teachers in the rest of the province. They've got a couple of former school trustees in the caucus, so they don't have to talk to any of the school boards. They can proceed. Now they're using the most severe form of closure to shut down the debate. Not only did they hold the debate in the middle of the night on this bill, but in their arrogance they're using every tool at their disposal to limit the debate and to make sure that this ill-advised bill goes through.

Mr. Speaker, I've talked earlier about the lack of consultation. I've talked about where this bill really came from. There are a couple of glaring things that I would like to reiterate. First of all, as I've mentioned, section 9 of this bill primarily affects the public school system. It affects the classroom. It affects everybody affected by the classroom; that is, the children, their parents, their teachers, and school administration, school boards as well. Those are the people who are primarily affected. None of them have been consulted. This is a glaring error, a glaring fault that I don't think should ever have been allowed to happen. I think that that's one of the real problems that I see with how this government proceeds in general. It talks about parents' rights, but it hasn't really discussed parents' rights with parents. Now it finds that parents are, in fact, rather divided on the whole question. I think that that is one of the most serious problems with the bill.

I think another serious problem with the bill is that they haven't really taken into account how the whole system will affect children other than the children of those parents who wish to withdraw their children from certain parts of the curriculum, that being human sexuality, sexual orientation, or religion. Now, those rights exist today, and a system exists that seems to be working very well by all accounts. The impact on other children, the rest of the children is what our concern is. We don't want the quality of their education to be affected by this bill. We don't want the quality of our children's education to be affected by the decisions of other parents about the education of their children. That's why the current system is so much more effective than what is being proposed, because parents can ask that their children withdraw from certain parts of the curriculum.

Despite the intentions of some members on the other side to suggest that we don't support that, it's not true, and we've never said so. But again we see the real pattern of saying that your opponent stands for something that he doesn't stand for and then attacking that position. We've seen that from the top on down in this Legislature. Instead of dealing with the actual position of your opponents, you create a false position and then attack that. It's a lot easier task to kick down a straw dog, Mr. Speaker, than it is to demolish a truly held and in some cases even thoughtful position of your opponent. I think that that's one of the problems that we face with respect to this.

I think that it's important that we make it clear to this government that it can't just proceed based on its own wishes, that it's responsible to govern for all of the people of Alberta and not just a portion of the population. What this smacks of is the imposition of a minority's views on education – it could be a significant minority – on the majority, and I think that that is a very risky proposition for any government no matter how large its majority. I think that it's not something that's truly democratic and not something that I think that a wise government would undertake.

I want to just suggest to all members of the House, particularly the government, that the fight on this issue does not end tonight. You may impose closure, you may silence us tonight in this debate, and you may ram through this very, very bad bill, but the fight on Bill 44 does not end tonight. It doesn't end when it's proclaimed, and it doesn't end when the first charges against a teacher are laid by an irate parent or by a special-interest group of some kind. This will be an issue going forward. This will be something that will continue. Mr. Speaker, the battle to repeal Bill 44 starts tomorrow and will continue through the next election and until Bill 44 and our human rights legislation is put within its appropriate parameters and not used as a tool of a particular minority in order to attempt to impose their view of education on all the rest of us, because the rest of us won't accept that, and we will continue to go forward.

I really find the use of closure here at 20 minutes to 1 in the morning to ram through this bill abhorrent. It's disgusting. But it has a beneficial side, Mr. Speaker, because it really underlines the arrogance of this government and their own belief, almost messianic belief in their own correctness, their own being right, and their willingness to use whatever tools are at hand to force through their view of education on the majority. I'll urge all members to not accept this motion, to not vote for it, and to allow the debate to run its natural course.

Quite frankly, I thought we were coming to the end of the debate or near the end. I wished to speak directly to the bill and not have to also deal with this particular manoeuvre on the part of the Deputy Government House Leader. Quite clearly, this has been planned in order to short-circuit legitimate debate, and it ought not to be allowed, in my view. It's a sordid end – words almost fail me, Mr. Speaker – to a bill that really has no place in a modern, educated, sophisticated, and scientific province as Alberta ought to be. This is a relic of the past. This is a throwback to a simpler and allegedly happier time that probably never really existed anyway, and it's, I think, beneath us all.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, stand and oppose this standing order on parliamentary process and the shutting down of debate. Clearly, this is an issue that has exercised all of us a lot, has stimulated a lot of thinking and discussion across the province. That can only be good, especially for something as contentious as limiting opportunities for teachers and students to discuss fully issues of great importance and certainly great controversy in our society.

I had previously in my comments hoped to address the question of hoisting this bill and giving us all time to reflect and take the time with our constituents, with our organizations that we care about, that care about us, but that's clearly not going to be the case. We are going to be shut down within minutes, and again it appears that pride goes before the fall. I think this government will have to answer for this not only in Alberta; it's already being discussed across the country. Even in America this has now become news.

I guess it raises the question of what it is we think we can do so uniquely in Alberta to advance human rights that we should impose this and in many ways threaten the very foundations of public education because I understand this doesn't apply to the private education sector. That's of some interest, that we have a bill that holds public teachers in a different way accountable to human rights and to charges under the Human Rights Commission but doesn't hold accountable private and charter schools.

We are embarking on a rebranding of Alberta. We've heard a lot about the government's $25 million rebranding and a lot about the image of freedom and creativity. In the context of this human rights legislation, this amendment, one sees a real contradiction, and that's what I think many people that come to me and have written to me about this issue – educated people, professionals, people from different religions have said to me: this is a backward step; this is a branding of Alberta that we don't want to be branded with, a reflection of a more bigoted past and a more discriminatory approach to differences and to different lifestyles, different faiths. It isn't the kind of open and democratic society that I think we all believe we're trying to move towards.

I have to wonder about the Premier's commitment to a free vote when we see in this past vote just how much freedom there is on the other side to speak their own individual perspective on this issue.

When we heard the Minister of Education just a couple of weeks ago on air speak about the fact that there have been no complaints about the public education system and the act in relation to the opting out of children for certain subjects, one really has to wonder why it was necessary to put this into law and to create a context in which teachers now feel the heavy hand of legislation. This from a government that says that they want to minimize laws; they want to enhance individual freedoms: smaller government with fewer laws. This is one more that seems to be contradictory to a philosophy of small government and minimal legislation, especially legislation that's hard to enforce. We've already talked about the vagaries of how we define religion and sexuality here on many occasions this past couple of weeks.

To speak more specifically to this motion for closure, it raises again the questions of just how much this government respects democracy. I for one have experienced a profound loss of democracy in the province. That's why I'm in the Legislature today. Having been fired in 2002, it was very clear to me that this government doesn't respect democracy. They don't like dissent; they like to have it their way. More and more Albertans, professionals and nonprofessionals, are telling me that they fear speaking out in this province because of repercussions, overt and covert repercussions: job promotions, hiring, opportunities lost, family members who lose opportunities because of speaking out in dissent on some of the issues that these members feel is their right because they are a majority and have been a majority for decades.

The question, I think, that these members have to wrestle with is: to what extent are they committed to free and open discussion? How is it reflected in the Legislature? How is it reflected in our electoral system, in our financing of our electoral system and campaigns and openness in campaigns, openness to revealing campaign donations, the connections to party affiliations? All of these are questions about honouring democracy and respecting this institution that we say is going to protect the public interest, going to protect the majority and, at the same time, preserve minority rights, in this case sexual orientation and issues around different sexuality and religion.

I don't want to prolong the debate. I don't think there's any reason to prolong the debate. What I needed to say was that I am profoundly disappointed with Alberta today in terms of its commitment to democracy and with this government in particular and its unwillingness to look at the warts and fix them, to genuinely care about democracy and to raise this in their constituencies, to raise this in their caucus, to change the electoral system, change the way we finance campaigns and report on campaigns, to make it very clear that boards and commissions and agencies will no longer be fed with Tory insiders, that we will make a serious commitment to openness and accountability and a willingness to hear opposite points of view.

In this case a large number of Albertans don't agree with this bill. We've all been hearing from them. Let's respect that and put this bill on ice for six months and let Albertans talk to us. Let Albertans vote. Let's have a referendum, including on section 9 in this bill. Section 9 is the contentious part of this bill. Why not ask Albertans just how many of them would support that? I could live with 51 per cent. I don't think this government could live with 51 per cent. I think the evidence is in. We are making a mockery of our modern-day society in retrenching attitudes and values and discriminating on the basis of particular orientations.

I'll say no more, Mr. Speaker, except to say that it's a profoundly disappointing day for me in Alberta and in this Legislature.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the motion and the bill.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Given the hour I can't help but think of images such as the dark ages into which we're descending or the notion of the thief in the night. In this case the thief-in-the-night analogy is the idea of someone attempting to steal freedom of speech, the democratic right of debate, and that's what, unfortunately, Bill 44 is all about. Bill 44 is attempting to stifle discussion in an inclusive, secular public school system. It will stifle it, as I refer to it, by causing the teacher to stop, drop, and roll over because some student or some parent objects to a discussion that is brought up in class.

Now, the hon. minister who represents Culture and Community Spirit has been suggesting through his tinkering amendment that spontaneous discussion would not be limited, and he went on at great length to suggest that six months from now – I think he referred first to the sun shining tomorrow. Yes, it will shine tomorrow, but our Alberta democracy will be a little bit more clouded over as a result of the eventual passing of this bill than it was before we had this discussion.

Now, this government's idea of consultation – and it's been pointed out by other members, so I won't belabour the point – is looking into a mirror. What this government is seeing is basically 72 faces looking back and saying: "Thumbs up. It's okay. I agree completely with you." That insular attitude is what's wrong with democracy in this province, the idea that one can bring their prejudices with them to the classroom and at least temporarily shut down discussion until the fire bell is pulled on any kind of discussion on universal themes because some person believes that somehow their religious right or their concerns with regard to human sexuality or sexual orientation are somehow being infringed upon.

Well, tonight we're seeing this played out in this House, an attempt to stifle freedom of speech, an attempt to shut down discussion based on individuals' beliefs that they have a superior right to govern. When the hon. Leader of the Opposition put forward the idea of a referendum, the laughs and the giggles from the government group just rose to the ceiling. That should tell Albertans exactly how this government values freedom of speech or the opportunity to have input into decisions.

You take it for granted. You are so caught up with your own self-worth, you're so caught up with the fact that a whole 21 per cent of Albertans have voted for you that you think that gives you the right to ride roughshod over the rest of Albertans.

Now, there has been very little tabling on the part of government members indicating support from their constituents for Bill 44. We've heard of an ongoing electronic poll that suggests that numbers are growing. We will no doubt see in tomorrow's papers and papers that follow up about the number of hits on a particular topic. Those can be easily manipulated. What can't be manipulated is the idea of a plebiscite or a referendum. This government very much needs a checkup because they have taken their right to govern to the point where they have left Albertans out of the process.

This is another night of shame. We've had a series of these nights that have gone on well past midnight, where opposition members have in previous cases not even been allowed the opportunity to put forward amendments. At least we got one amendment on the floor tonight before the suggestion of shutting down further discussions was brought up. This is typical of autocracies, where individuals believe that because at this particular time in history they have a majority, the majority of Albertans still support their views.

The majority of Albertans do not support your views; 79 per cent of Albertans did not vote for this government. You will be lucky in upcoming elections to get the 21 per cent that you got in the last one. History will not be kind to individuals collectively that attempt to ride over democracy and put it under their totalitarian heel.

Mr. Blackett: Point of order.

The Deputy Speaker: It's a point of order. The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Blackett: Unparliamentary language. There's no need to be calling anybody here totalitarian, Mr. Speaker. I'll expect their apology.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, it's very early in the morning. Maybe you'll help out and move on.

Mr. Chase: Well, considering that the hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit didn't provide a citation, his point of order is as full of air as the discussions that he's brought forward tonight. There wasn't a point of order. There was no citation. If "totalitarian" fits, wear it.

The Deputy Speaker: I would advise us to please watch our parliamentary language. We'll go on now but watch what we say from here on.

Thank you.

Debate Continued

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I understand that as the mover of this motion I would have an opportunity to close debate. No? I'll call the question, then.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. From our forests and parkland to our prairies and mountains comes the call of our land. From our farmsteads, towns, and cities comes the call of our people that as legislators of this province we act with responsibility and sensitivity. Grant us the wisdom to meet such challenges. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have with us today 26 visitors from Norwood elementary school in Wetaskiwin, who I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly. They're here with their teacher, Marcie Hofbauer, and parent helpers Arlene Moussa, Angela Mantai, and Kathy Nicholson.

I was interested in a little chat I had with a guide, who indicated that as she had taken these young folks through the building, she was very impressed with their good manners and also their strong knowledge of what we do here. That's a credit to their teacher and their parents and also to them.

I think they're in the public gallery. If they would rise, I'd ask that this Assembly give them their warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you a group of 23 visitors from Robert Rundle elementary school in St. Albert. Robert Rundle elementary school produces some of the finest students in the province. Actually, three of my children graduated from Robert Rundle many years ago. I'm pleased to introduce 21 students plus teacher Chris Akins and parent helper Mrs. Linda Dennis, who are all seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask them to stand and for the members to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly three guests this afternoon. The first is a great young lady who's working in my office in Spruce Grove as my STEP student for the summer, and that's Reed Wolodko. She's a young woman with a great future who is doing a great job for us in the constituency with a can-do attitude.

The second is my constituency office manager, who everyone here knows is really the lifeblood of the MLA's job. I'm very, very lucky, Mr. Speaker, to have Carol Stewart, who has been with me from the start, since I got elected.

Accompanying them, Mr. Speaker, is another special individual to me. In order to do the work that we do, all things at home must be taken care of, and it's the strength of that home life that really makes it easy for us to do the job that we do. For the last 29 years this lady has been the rock behind all the things that I have done, and that's my wife, Aukje Rose Horner.

I'd ask all three of them, please, to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This morning you hosted the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association bursary and essay contest award presentation ceremony at the Legislature Building. These bursaries are presented annually by the Alberta branch of the CPA to young people from TUXIS, the Girls' Parliament, and the grade 6 essay contest. The Royal Commonwealth Society of Canada contributes to the essay contest bursary.

It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all the members the award winners and their guests, who are sitting in the Speaker's gallery. Please, our guests, rise as I call your name: the first place CPA essay contest winner, Jack Quest from Strathcona constituency; the second place CPA essay contest co-winner, Katelyn Borle from Sherwood Park constituency; the second place CPA essay contest co-winner, Kevin Yin from Strathcona constituency; the Alberta Girls' Parliament co-recipients, Sarah Knowles from the Calgary-Shaw constituency, Shelby Vincent from the Highwood constituency; the TUXIS recipient, Nicole Larson from the Strathcona constituency. Will our guests – the award winners and their families, educators, and friends – please all rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's such a pleasure today to be able to rise and introduce to you and through you some great staff from the Department of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. In particular, they work in the parks division. Their names are Heather Lazaruk, Anita Padlesky, Marcy Bresler, Gloria Cheng, Peter Weclaw, Graham Morris, Emily Chamberlain, Robin Walczak, Erin Saunders, and Deborah Johnstone. I'd ask that they'd rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me pleasure to introduce to you and through you our new summer student in Culture and Community Spirit, Julie Van Boom. Julie is working towards her education degree at Dordt university in Sioux Center, Iowa. Aside from her schooling, she also finds time to do a great amount of volunteer work. During the summer months she lives and works on her parents' farm just outside of Fort Saskatchewan. I'd ask Julie to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you Mr. Paul Mabbott, a young student who will be working in my constituency office as a summer STEP student. Paul is from Cochrane. He completed a year of journalism studies at Carleton University. When he returns to Carleton, he'll be starting his history degree. He joins us today to see the proceedings of this House and to view the debates in question period. Paul, if you would please stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very special guest, Miss Angie Lee. Angie is 12 years old, lives in Edmonton, and attends George H. Luck elementary school. Angie has faced her battle with ALL, acute lymphoblastic leukemia, with great courage and positivity. Angie's wish is to attend the teen choice awards, where she hopes to catch a glimpse of one of her favourite bands, the Jonas Brothers. With the help of the Children's Wish Foundation Angie's wish will be granted this August. Angie is seated in the members' gallery along with her mother, Sandie Lee, and Stacey Johnson of the Children's Wish Foundation of Canada. If I could ask them all to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a young man whom I hold in very high regard. Samim Aminzadah worked as a summer student in my constituency office last year, helping deal with the concerns of residents and with the day-to-day operations of the office. He learned that it can be very busy and at times quite challenging. Samim is in his last year of political science at the University of Calgary. We all wish him well as he hopes to enter the Faculty of Law. I think you'll do well there, Samim. My constituents and I are very fortunate to have Samim working in my office again this summer. Samim, it's so good to have you here in the Legislature. I'm going to ask that you rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you two guests I have today. I'd ask them to rise as I mention their names. The first one is very familiar with this building. He was working here many years ago, 18 years altogether, I believe. His name is Brian Hlus. Please stand.

My other guest is Annette Gerdes. She works for the city of Edmonton in the deputy city manager's office. Would you please rise and receive the warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you a dedicated volunteer, Ms Jena Krystofiak, and her parents, Doug and Asifa Krystofiak, seated in the members' gallery. You may recognize Jena from the cover of the latest edition of Travel Alberta magazine. She will be attending the U of A in the fall with the goal of becoming a neonatologist. Jena uses her dance performances to support community organizations in their efforts to raise awareness of local, national, and international issues, including the World Partnership Walk last Sunday, May 31, at the Legislature Grounds. I ask my guests to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a few special people. I had the distinct pleasure of being the keynote speaker at the M.E. LaZerte high school graduation. Part of the reason was that over the past 18 or 19 years I've delivered 200 children, I've had a chance to attend to their bumps and bruises and their stitches and broken bones and asthma attacks, so for me they were like my family. I'd like to introduce a few special people. One is Taylor Mah. I met Taylor years ago in my work, and he was just a little fellow. I said he'd be six foot five one day. I was wrong; he's six foot six. As well, his father, Gene Mah, and another young fellow – his name is Baljot Chahal; Baljot was the valedictorian at the school – as well as his father, Paramjit Chahal. I heard this young fellow speak. I said: "You know what? One day you're going to be in the Legislature here. We need young, bright people like you here after we leave." I'd like to ask these people to stand up and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to this Assembly two groups of constituents who are visiting the Legislature today. With us today are Elk Island public school board chair Bonnie Riddell; principal of Wye school Ms Patty Berry; Mrs. Tanya Jordan, a teacher from Wye school. They're in the Legislature to attend the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association 2009 awards ceremony, which took place earlier this morning. As you know, Mr. Speaker, my son, Jack, was one of the award winners, so my lovely wife of 15 years, Fiona, is also here today to celebrate. They're seated in your gallery, Mr. Speaker. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

My second introduction. I'd also like to introduce my constituency office manager, Laurette Strong, and STEP student Kristen Pue. They do a wonderful job in my constituency office, Mr. Speaker. I'm proud to have them with us this afternoon. They're seated in the public gallery. I'd like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly someone who taught me the value of hard work, honesty, and, as well, how to reuse and recycle long before it was in style. I would now ask my father, Mr. Alvin Berger, who is seated in your gallery, to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Brain Injury Awareness Week

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize Brain Injury Awareness Week, which runs from May 30 to June 7 this year. Each year there are approximately 10,000 brain injuries in Alberta alone. This is a time to learn more about brain injuries and to show our support to brain injury survivors and their families.

Brain Injury Awareness Week is an opportunity for Albertans to be aware of brain injury prevention. By working together to educate Albertans, we can prevent more brain injuries. In addition to wearing approved helmets for recreational activities, brain injuries can be prevented by wearing seat belts, obeying speed limits, and using safety equipment such as hard hats in construction areas.

One of the ways that this government has supported brain injury survivors and those who assist these brave and courageous individuals is through the Alberta brain injury initiative. The initiative is a network of supports and services which assist individuals with an acquired brain injury to live, work, and participate in their communities to the fullest extent possible.

Another way the Alberta government provides support services to survivors of brain injury is by providing funding for the Alberta Brain Injury Conference, which took place about a month ago. This biennial conference is an opportunity for Albertans to come together and share information and learn more about acquired brain injury. It is also a great venue for survivors of brain injury to meet other survivors, share their stories, and connect with those who face similar challenges and have achieved similar triumphs.

As part of Brain Injury Awareness Week events are being held across the province. The activities range from the Courage Canada Trail Ride in Innisfree to a film viewing about brain injuries at the Glenrose rehabilitation hospital in Edmonton. More information is available on the Seniors and Community Supports website.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I encourage this House and all Albertans to take part in these events to recognize those among us living with brain injury and to promote awareness of how to prevent brain injury. The impact is very significant, and we should look for all ways possible to better support brain injury survivors and their families.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Carbon Emissions

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. When I was a kid, we were strongly cautioned against swimming in the North Saskatchewan River because we could be exposed to typhoid or hepatitis and various chemicals. In those days people, municipalities, and companies freely dumped waste into the river, which was treated like a sewer. Today the river is far cleaner, a place where people swim and boat and fish through the summer. People don't pour their used oil into our river, nor does the city dump raw sewage into it. We all agree that investigations, fines, and penalties are in order for that sort of behaviour.

Unfortunately, we don't yet treat the air with the same respect we treat the water. Every time we drive our cars, we dump waste from the burning fuel into the air. Every coal-fired power plant, every factory, almost every building treats the atmosphere like a sewer. One solution is to start charging a cost for dumping into the atmosphere. This government, to its credit, has begun charging what it calls a levy for major carbon emitters. A variation on this is the so-called carbon tax, which has been the subject of heated debate and opposition.

Now, this is just my personal view, Mr. Speaker, but I think we need to reframe the debate around carbon levies and carbon taxes. Language is very important. Let's call these things what they are, not a tax or a levy but a dumping fee. If you dump carbon into the atmosphere, you should pay a fee, just as you would for dumping a load of trash at the landfill, just as you would pay a fine for tipping dirty oil from your car down the sewer or your household trash into the ditch. For the sake of the planet let's reframe this debate. Language really does matter.

I don't like carbon taxes or levies, but I can live with a carbon dumping fee. After all, I'm ready to stop treating the atmosphere like a sewer, and I think a lot of other people are, too.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Henry Bergen

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to celebrate the great honour and award that one of my constituents, Mr. Henry Bergen of Coaldale, has been selected to receive. On May 21, 2009, the Alberta Order of Excellence recipients were announced by the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, and I'm pleased that Mr. Bergen was one of the eight lucky recipients.

The Alberta Order of Excellence is the highest honour the province of Alberta can bestow on any citizen. The Order of Excellence is awarded to individuals from all walks of life but who share one common factor: they all work to make a difference, to make Alberta a better place, and to make contributions to our future that will stand the test of time.

Mr. Bergen studied at SAIT, training in automotive mechanical trades, machinery, welding, economics, and psychology. In '68 he launched GEN Manufacturing, a company that develops tools that avoid overtilling of land. He and his company received the industry achievement award from the American society of agricultural engineers in September 2001. He has become a major player in the agricultural business, and in the spring of 2008, Mr. Speaker, he was the recipient of an honorary degree from the University of Lethbridge. He also received many other awards, including the Order of Canada in 2007 for his work promoting zero-till land management practices. Mr. Bergen has always been ahead of his time and unafraid to take on challenges.

Other recipients of the Alberta Order of Excellence include Shirzad Ahmed from Calgary, William Bowes from Grande Prairie, Sister Helen Hengel from Calgary, Bernadette McDonald from Banff, Kenneth Sauer from Medicine Hat, Barrie Strafford from Calgary, and Harold Wyatt from Calgary.

These Albertans are greatly deserving of this award, and I hope that this Assembly and all of you would join me in congratulating each and every one of them.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Provincial Budget

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, fiscal conservatism is no longer an adage that can be claimed by this Tory administration. Unprecedented wealth has slipped through the administration's fingers, and what are the people of Alberta left with? Cancer centres kept open by private donations, sick children being treated in tents, and a budgeting process based on the hope for improved commodity prices. These problems were created by this administration and their failure over years to manage our resources responsibly. They have failed. To the Premier: how does the Premier explain a record $4.7 billion deficit and a health care system in chaos?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, in terms of the amount of money that the government has set aside, let me start with just the last 10 years: $117 billion net transferred to Ottawa, over $23 billion paid off in debt, considerable savings in endowments to universities, the science ingenuity fund, the $17 billion sustainability fund, and since 1993 to today $41 billion in new infrastructure and actually about $19 billion just from about 2006 on in infrastructure. When you pull that all together, that's a considerable amount of investment that went to the people of Alberta.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, I wonder how the Premier can explain the net loss in our primary savings account in this province since Premier Lougheed left office.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I think many Canadians, Americans, and people around the world are asking that question, how through the lack of transparency in banking regulations in the United States, in Europe – I'm, quite frankly, very proud of the fact that we have stricter banking regulations in the country of Canada, that have stopped a lot of the precipitous drop in savings that, you know, has caused banks to go bankrupt in other countries as a result of rapidly decreasing, very volatile energy prices.

The other problem is that our best trading partner, the United States, is going through a tremendous economic downturn, trillions of dollars in debt. We're going to have to watch our relationship there very carefully because I'm afraid of perhaps an increase in rates, maybe inflation coming in the future. We have to plan very carefully.

Dr. Swann: Will the Premier commit today in the public interest to an independent value-for-money audit of government spending?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we do have a very good discussion on public spending right here in this Legislative Assembly. We've just had, I believe, 20 days of discussion on the budget. The opposition asked questions, good questions, with respect to the spending. The budget has been delivered, and it will continue. Next year we'll deliver another budget, and it'll be openly debated in the House here as well.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Provincial Health Facilities

Dr. Swann: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. The changes this Premier has made to health care this past year have created anything but progress. Through this whole experiment the Premier and his minister have released no information and left the public and professionals guessing as to what is coming next. To the Premier. Internal Alberta Health Services documents indicate that this government is currently in talks with doctors' groups for leasing publicly built hospitals such as Fort Saskatchewan and the urology centre in the Rockyview in Calgary. What is the Premier's reason for turning these public facilities over to doctors' groups?

Mr. Stelmach: You know, Mr. Speaker, just before I came here to question period, the opposition was giving out papers to the members of the media. Now he's brought forward some allegation. I'm not aware of what's happening in terms of a doctors' group, not naming the doctors' group. Without further information I can only take that question under consideration and will definitely find out what the question is all about and who the group is.

Dr. Swann: Well, let's try the health minister, then. What specific doctors' groups are you in talks with over private hospital use?

Mr. Liepert: Well, we talk to doctors all the time. You know, I'm not quite sure what this – Mr. Speaker, I've been waiting for this. The member used a term again that he's used in this House, calling it an "experiment." There's only one experiment under way in this province, and that is the experiment the Alberta Liberals launched last December with this new leader, and I would suggest it's been a failure.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, again to the health minister: what other facilities are you considering turning over to health groups?

Mr. Liepert: None, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Automobile Insurance Rates

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, here we go again. The auto insurance rate review is under way, and the insurance industry is again calling for a whopping 40 per cent increase in premiums. Nation-wide the insurance industry has seen a 2,000 per cent increase in its profits in the past five years, yet it still tries to make us believe that it can't afford to pay injury claims without a cap in place. Once again this government has taken the side of insurance companies as the finance minister has contended that without the cap insurance rates will increase by 20 per cent. I'm sorry, but Albertans will find that unacceptable. To the minister of finance: does the minister agree with the proposed 40 per cent increase in insurance rates, or, put another way, where does the minister stand on the industry's claim that that's what it needs?

Ms Evans: You know, Mr. Speaker, as the spring session goes into the summer, I find it wonderful that the hon. member opposite and I are agreeing on an issue after all this time. He sounds as uninterested in a 40 per cent increase as I am. The request last year was 37 per cent. It made huge headlines. What did they get? Five per cent from the insurance rate board. What did they get in the years previous? Nothing until they got 5 per cent last year, and they substantiated that claim to the insurance rate board. That's how they got it. But I am no more interested in seeing Albertans take a hike of 40 per cent than the hon. member opposite is. Good news, hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: We agree on something. Mr. Speaker, I'm gobsmacked.

Maybe the minister can explain this to me because the sense that I get is that we either all get shafted by the insurance companies with higher premiums, or the cap goes back in place and only the injured get shafted. That seems to be the choice that we're being presented with between the industry and the minister, and that's not much of a choice, but, you know, Mr. Speaker, I might be prepared to go along with it if the minister would table some sort of proof. Will the minister table the evidence on which she bases her claim that rates will go up by 20 per cent if the ruling against the minor injury cap is upheld on appeal?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, it would be premature for me to speculate further on the hon. member's question. We still haven't had the court ruling. We thought it was coming in December, January, February. We keep waiting for it. At that time we can more fully disclose and discuss strategy. But the hon. member makes a good point, that the requests are extraordinarily high, and we have no interest in substantiating them.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister: will the minister commit to implementing a freeze on auto insurance rates?

Ms Evans: You know, Mr. Speaker, I'll just make one comment. Before we put the cap in place relative to the auto insurance, before we had that, we were having an escalation of rates that was significant. Today our rates are 13 per cent lower than they were when that cap was put in place. So we've had good news since 2004 because the action of the government at that time precipitated a much more reasonable insurance rate.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Vehicle Vicarious Liability

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. On its website the Truck Renting and Leasing Association brags about a December 18 meeting with the finance minister in which she agreed to introduce legislation to cap vicarious liability for car rental companies at $1 million. This leaves those with serious and permanent disability as a result of car accidents involving rental vehicles unable to collect enough of a settlement to live a life of dignity. It saves the company $9 million. It's Hertz, Avis, and Enterprise 1, brain and spinal cord injury victims 0. My question is to the Premier. Why did you allow your finance minister to cut a backroom deal with the big car rental companies at the expense of those who are permanently disabled in accidents?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of any backroom deal with any rental agencies. The minister that's responsible for that area will respond to the question.

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's no secrecy here. There's no backroom deal. This legislation was introduced publicly in the Legislature and debated in public. When it was introduced for first reading on March 16, it was accompanied by a news release sent to every newsroom in Alberta. Although this is what's in place for the car rental companies, it does not imply that people with serious injuries cannot go through the courts or get their claims resolved in some other fashion.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The association is giving credit to the lawyer who represented them, and he is none other than Mr. Joe Yurkovich, the vice-president of the Edmonton Progressive Conservative Association. This entire deal reeks of Tory friends and insiders making deals to save millions on the backs of injured Albertans. My question is to the Premier. Why is a leading Tory insider lobbying the finance minister for reforms which save rental car companies millions of dollars and deny rightful compensation to injured Albertans?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I really don't understand where this hon. member is getting all that information. We brought forward legislation a year ago that capped the same on leasing companies. We're doing exactly the same thing that the province of British Columbia did, and we're doing exactly the same thing that the province of Ontario did. That was to make it fair for everyone and not make people that had no responsibility whatsoever for who was driving their vehicle responsible for something that they shouldn't be responsible for. It also does not stop the person from going after the driver if they've done something wrong. That's who should be responsible.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this illustrates very clearly policy development with this government. You have Tory insiders coming in, getting meetings with ministers, taking an industry group in there, finding a way to cut their costs, saving them $9 million – they brag about it on their website – and we have a policy that disenfranchises people who are permanently and badly injured in car accidents. This is a serious problem, and I want to ask the Premier: why don't you change your way of doing business? Why don't you put the disabled people, the people who are badly injured, first instead of your friends in the insurance industry, in the car industry, the medical industry, or whatever industry it is?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, first of all, the gentleman that the leader mentioned – I'm not aware of any Edmonton Progressive Conservative Party, so I'm not quite sure what he's talking about. Anyway, it is a person that's well known to Edmontonians.

If, you know, Stelmach Lease Agency owned a car and would lease it to a driver – okay? – and the driver took the car for a nice drive to Jasper and got into an accident, well, the way the situation was prior to these changes, the owner of the vehicle, which would be Stelmach Agencies or whatever, got sued. But I wasn't driving. It was the person behind the wheel that caused the accident. The situation was that in all provinces, to make it reasonable, in terms of who to sue for the actual incident, it's the driver behind the wheel. It's not the owner of the vehicle in this case, which is a leasing agency. It's just not fair. That's why it was capped at a million dollars, or else nobody would be leasing cars in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Alberta Bond Offering

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans support this government's continued investment in priority capital infrastructure projects in spite of the economic slowdown we are experiencing. Some of my constituents have asked about the potential of establishing a capital bond that could help finance important infrastructure projects and create a potential investment opportunity for Albertans within Alberta; however, they're looking for more information. My first question is for the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. Is the establishment of an Alberta bond under consideration by this government?

Ms Evans: Yes, it is, Mr. Speaker. We want to give Albertans an opportunity to invest in their province. We understand that with that investment it is like Alberta as a government borrowing from its constituents. We have in our budget a line on the borrowing for $1.1 billion. We are examining the best ways to enable Albertans to invest in Alberta through this type of process, through the bonds.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister my first supplementary: could a bond program be developed that would be attractive to Albertans looking to invest their money in Alberta without costing undue charges to the government above what would be competitive?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, that's exactly the thing we're looking at, the various features of many types of bonds. There are probably about six types of bonds. We know that Alberta has a triple-A credit rating. We know that there are ways and means in which some of the bond issues could be more advantageous to some of the people for longer term strategies, some perhaps for shorter term strategies. This past weekend we heard several ideas where people want to invest in Alberta infrastructure, accelerate the pace of infrastructure. So there are a number of different things we'll look at for the future of bonds in Alberta. We have had successes in bond sales here in Alberta before.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: would an Alberta bond fund be a feasible and competitive method of financing infrastructure projects, and in what time frame could this be developed for Albertans?

Ms Evans: We're looking at it over the next few weeks and months. If we were to develop a bond specific to infrastructure, we have to make sure that it is competitive. We want to make sure that we assess everything from the interest rates, the principal, what would be carried, how it would affect the debt picture, and so on. There are a number of different pieces to look at, but we're taking a very close look at it in conjunction with some of the other experience more recently felt in other parts of Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Nursing Vacancies

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The March 2009 chief executive officer report to the Alberta Health Services Board notes that at the start of this year there were 1,277 vacancies under the category of direct nursing. Now there is supposedly a surplus of nurses in this province. My first question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Why did the government order Dr. Duckett not to fill these 1,277 direct nursing positions?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the member has some documentation from somebody in government who he alleges made this order, I wish he'd show it to me because it didn't come from me. What has happened in the last year are a number of things, and I think I explained it yesterday in the House. Number one, the new CEO has determined that we need to ensure that we have nurses doing what nurses are trained to do. Number two, it has been determined that, likely because of economic situations, a number of projected retirements have been put off. So there's no real secrecy here. Times change. I guess I would ask the question: just because a number was used last year, does the opposition want us to go out and hire that many nurses if we don't need them and then have to lay them off in a few months?

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Everyone knows that the hon. minister of health gets his marching orders from the Premier's office.

My next question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. With the $45 million that is budgeted this year for health workforce development, who exactly is the government planning on training given that this minister and this Premier have ordered 1,277 nursing positions not to go filled by the Alberta Health Services Board?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I think we need to remember that nursing shortages can remain an issue in the future. As the minister of health has indicated, we need to look at it on a long-term basis and take a very long-term strategic planning approach to our workforce and the amount of people that we will need in the future of the province.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, given that sick Albertans are waiting in emergency rooms for services or emergency surgeries, who are they to believe, the Minister of Employment and Immigration or the minister of health? Again, to the Minister of Employment and Immigration: who ordered, to your knowledge, the 1,277 nursing positions not to be filled? Was it the minister of health, or was it the Minister of Immigration and Employment?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there is nobody that has given me any orders in terms of cutting numbers or doing those changes that are happening. But I want to indicate and re-emphasize that as a government we continue to plan for the future by preparing more Albertans for health careers. That includes our physicians, our nursing – both RNs and LPNs – and anybody involved in the health professions.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Cumulative Environment Effects Management

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've heard several times in this House that the cumulative effects approach is the future of environmental planning and management in Alberta. I know the Industrial Heartland is viewed as a pilot for this new approach for protecting our land and water. My question is for the Minister of Environment. What have we achieved from the cumulative effects management approach in the Industrial Heartland?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to report that we have achieved a significant amount in this pilot project. We have set clear targets for industry with respect to air and water. On the water side we actually have an implementation framework already in place that involves not only industry but the municipalities in the area. The use of recycled waste water from municipalities is an integral part of how we're going to be managing the water in the area. We have begun and are moving very significantly along the lines of planning for how we're going to deal with sulphur management in that area as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm a strong supporter of the cumulative effects management approach, but several industry representatives in my constituency have voiced concern about the specific targets for NOx and SOx. Again to the Minister of Environment: how do you respond to these concerns?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, any time you put limits in place, it's not something that you should be surprised at that someone would have some concern that there may be a point in the future where those limits are reached. Two things that I want to point out to the member: first of all, the limits that we've put in place far exceed the position that we are in today, and secondly, I have indicated to industry that if there are errors in calculation, if there are assumptions that are inaccurate, we would be willing to have a look at those. The bottom line is that there's no point in having limits if you're not prepared to enforce them.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental is to the same minister. How is your ministry preparing for the upgrader projects and other applications in the Industrial Heartland given the current economic situation?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we're continuing to progress on our planning as business as usual. As a matter of fact, there have been some changes in timelines, but work is continuing to proceed in the heartland region. In fact, in some cases capital costs are declining, and it's incenting some of the projects that have been put on the back burner to proceed. In addition, we have to consider that the bitumen royalty in kind that is under discussion with government will have a significant impact on opportunities in the Industrial Heartland. So we expect this development to proceed, and we're planning on it in an appropriate way.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Peter Lougheed Centre

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Peter Lougheed hospital expansion was meant to add much-needed capacity to an overburdened health region. This expansion has been turned into simple replacement. In order to add 140 new beds, another 140 old beds have to be closed. This is government math that Calgarians are familiar with and are sick of. To the minister of health: why did you commit to expanding the Lougheed without any commitment toward operating funds? This makes no sense.

Mr. Liepert: Well, what makes no sense, Mr. Speaker, is that the member is making an assumption that may not be true.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When will there be sufficient operating funds given to this hospital so that an additional 140 beds will actually translate into an increase in capacity?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, any health facility expansion or capacity increase in this province is part of the annual budget of Alberta Health Services. I think this member was here when we passed the budget for our department. Alberta Health Services will be receiving some half a billion dollars in additional funding this year, and they will be charged to spend it accordingly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we are getting mixed messages here. One day we are expanding the health care system. Another day we are cutting back.

To the minister again. The Peter Lougheed and the prostate laser are examples of how out of touch you and Alberta Health Services are with the citizens of Calgary. When will you begin to listen to what Albertans are telling you that they need?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the only mixed messages that consistently come into this House are from that group over there, who one day want to spend and the next day want to save. They have to determine whether they're savers or spenders. You can't suck and blow at the same time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mental Health Services

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Parents know all too well that just because your children have become adults does not mean that your role as a parent is over. This is the case for several of my constituents in Edmonton-Decore who must deal every day with adult children who live independently but suffer from mental illness. The situation becomes very difficult and cumbersome when their adult independent children go off their medications. These parents often feel powerless to help their loved ones and are concerned that they do not have access to the right supports for their children with mental illness. My first question is for the Minister of Health and Wellness. Can the minister please explain what his department has done to support treatment and prevention of mental illness?

Mr. Liepert: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, let's be clear that we need to ensure that we do a better job of treating mental illness as part of the overall health delivery system. You know, this province can be very proud of what we have brought forward in the last couple of years. We introduced a provincial mental health plan a couple of years ago and, most recently, a children's mental health plan. We've made amendments to the Mental Health Act. I think that more important is not plans and acts but what's really happening.

I had the opportunity last week with the Member for Lacombe-Ponoka to tour the Centennial Centre in Ponoka, Mr. Speaker. This is a world-class facility that this province has put in place that doesn't institutionalize individuals with mental illness. It's a world-class treatment facility that allows these patients to get back into the community and be productive members of society.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary question is also to the same minister. Can the minister share with us at this time and explain what a community treatment order is and how this will help all those suffering from mental illness and their families?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the community treatment order is another tool, I guess, that was brought in as part of the Mental Health Amendment Act in, I think, 2007. It's a tool to encourage compliance so that individuals with severe and persistent mental illness are admitted but then are also monitored and given options in terms of when they may or may not choose to take their medication. It doesn't force treatment upon individuals but simply encourages those who are on medication to comply and to continue to be productive members of society and, quite frankly, eases some of the burden that is placed on family members.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is also to the same minister. Currently what supports and resources do families of the mentally ill have available to them?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as I mentioned, the community treatment order is clearly one of those tools that families do have as an option. But, you know, we do have some, I think, 16 designated mental health facilities around the province and almost a hundred community health clinics throughout the province. These provide mental health intake and assessments and diagnosis and, to some degree, some treatment services. Then, of course, we have our more expanded services, that I referred to, such as the Centennial Centre and, certainly, Alberta Hospital Edmonton and others across the province, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Children's Services Workforce Complaints

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The ability for employees to feel that their opinions and concerns are respected is one of the most important aspects in ensuring a satisfied and productive workforce. This is especially important when the staff involved work with vulnerable children and may feel the need to speak in the child's best interest as opposed to that of their department. To the Minister of Children and Youth Services: will the minister table the current internal complaints policy that is being used for issues staff have with both human resources and case-specific concerns?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have several mechanisms in place in which to take a look at workforce issues and workload issues. I can tell you that we have managers and supervisors on an ongoing basis that are always taking a look and monitoring workloads as well as a provincial committee that works with our unions. I think there are all kinds of mechanisms to take a look at what you're talking about.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. You didn't answer the question about tabling those policies. Hopefully that will follow.

Will the minister answer whether there is any whistle-blower protection within her own ministry for staff who feel that there is an issue that needs to be raised yet fear reprisal. If not, can the minister explain why this necessary protection for Children and Youth Services staff has not been implemented?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again I would say that I think we do have lots of mechanisms in place. I would always encourage staff to come forward to their manager or supervisors with any concerns.

Mr. Chase: Unfortunately, lots of mechanisms in place – without referring to specific mechanisms, which I've asked you to table, we're just talking generically, and I'm looking for specifics.

Since early March you've had in your possession the report regarding the Child and Youth Advocate. You've been asked on many occasions, including yesterday by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, to table this report, and the answer has always been that soon it will be released. Will the minister finally commit to tabling this document by the end of business today?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just reiterate what I said yesterday. It is true that I have a copy of the report. We have been working through a government response that I've mentioned in the last couple weeks. Just a reminder to the House that that response does have to go through an approval process. I can tell you that we're very close to the end, and it is my intention to release it shortly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Insurance companies want to jack up car insurance rates by 40 per cent. The finance minister says that 20 per cent might be reasonable if the cap is struck down by the courts. The notion is ridiculous, and it's a gouge. The government promised rates that would meet or beat those in other western provinces. I guess we can chalk that up to another broken promise. Does the finance minister really expect Albertans to cough up a 20 per cent insurance hike from companies that are making billions?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The fear factor of significant increments based on experience we had some five years ago would suggest that rates might increase if, in fact, the cap was removed. We have to wait until the court case validates whether or not the manner in which we've pursued this is going to be successful. It's been suggested to me that if we win, well, there'll probably be an appeal from the other side and vice versa. I don't think we should prematurely examine and make any finite decisions on this. I think it's speculative. It was suggested very strongly, certainly, by our experience in years past that we would have to be careful so that we didn't have significant cost increases.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the 20 per cent figure was a number that the minister used just a few minutes ago in question period here. Drivers don't want to hear about that. Some have lost their jobs, their wages have been cut back, and they can't afford to spend another penny on inflated car insurance.

In Saskatchewan, where they have public insurance, they're proposing a 4 per cent hike in fees. Here private companies are lobbying for 40 per cent. It's a gouge, Mr. Speaker. When will the finance minister stop the gouging and stop breaking promises to ensure that Alberta's insurance rates are as low as or lower than any other western Canadian province?

Ms Evans: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. For one thing, if the hon. member retrieves the Blues, he'll find that I was not the person that talked about 20 per cent in the Legislature.

The other thing. Although you can cherry-pick and cite other jurisdictions and say, "They look better; they sound cheaper" and all the rest of it, I would be very surprised if the hon. member would advocate for something that would give less value for the injury. I mean, our focus is what kind of injury is sustained, what the person should receive in fair compensation. In Alberta we believe that we should be compensated for pain and suffering. Other jurisdictions don't always do that. So you can't examine things, a complex question, in a simple question-and-answer period and get a satisfactory conclusion on this. We are defending Alberta ratepayers, Alberta people who are consumers and buy auto insurance. We're doing a good job, and I think the public trusts us for that.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, with respect, if the minister can't see how unacceptable this is, then we have a bigger problem than we thought. The fact that the minister even feels comfortable discussing a 20 per cent rate hike is disturbing, and it just shows how out of touch this government is with Alberta families. When will the finance minister either stand up to the insurance companies once and for all or admit that public auto insurance is the only solution?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, at the risk of being redundant, I will say once again that I have not been the person discussing any particular percentage that might seem reasonable. I have been the person that spoke just moments ago in question period and outside this Chamber. The suggestion of the media was: did we support a 40 per cent increase? No. And we didn't support a 37 per cent rate increase last year. What did they get last year? Five per cent.

Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member is missing the point here. The rate board adjudicates based on the information they receive. We receive that information from the rate board, and then we respond.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Maintenance Enforcement Program

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are about 65,000 children in our province who are registered to receive financial support through enforced child maintenance orders. I want to know that these children and the children who live in my constituency specifically are receiving the support they deserve. My first question goes to the Minister of Justice. Does the province have anything in place to monitor child support orders?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under the Department of Justice we have a very successful maintenance enforcement program that has really built and grown in the last 20 years. We want to make sure that not only are we able to enforce court orders and agreements that parents have come to or been directed to pay, but we also want to talk publicly about the fact that people have an obligation to pay support for children, who need to have love, commitment, and the support of both parents, whether they're living together or not.

Mr. Prins: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's all well and good, but we know that there are still parents in Alberta not paying child support. So what tactics is the province going to use to get these people to meet their obligations?

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The maintenance enforcement program over the years and with the co-operation of the courts has developed a series of approaches that they can use once a court order has been granted and registered with maintenance enforcement in order to ensure that child support orders are paid. If people do not pay those orders, then we're able to put in place a number of collection procedures, which include seizing their bank account, seizing personal assets, garnishing wages, places liens on property, to ensure that we're able to collect money from people that have an obligation to pay.

Mr. Speaker, last week we announced the Help Us Find website, which unfortunately highlights people who have made very few payments in support of their children, and we're going to make sure that we encourage the public to help us to hold those people to their obligations.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. I have a constituent with two young children whose ex-husband lives on a reserve near me, and he refuses to pay his court-ordered maintenance. My final question is also for the Minister of Justice. How is the maintenance enforcement program going to work with those of my constituents whose ex-spouses live on reserves?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So much of the work that we do at maintenance enforcement relies on the fact that we are able to collect debts and orders from people that haven't fulfilled their obligations. Now, this does present a particular challenge for us for people who work or have property on reserves which are First Nation. They fall under the jurisdiction of the Indian Act; therefore, we have to take a different approach with them. We work very closely with Indian affairs in order to ensure that information is provided to bands to enforce those orders, and we have had some success. We also work very closely with – and I know the Minister of Aboriginal Relations has been very vocal on this issue – and we have had very good support from band leaders. We think that there might be other opportunities to explore with respect to the responsibilities that the federal government has and will be pursuing those.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Sour Gas Levels at Mildred Lake

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Hydrogen sulphide, also known as sour gas, is highly toxic and could lead to eye irritation, sore throat, cough, nausea, and shortness of breath, and that's at its very, very lowest levels. It's average annual concentration at Mildred Lake in northern Alberta has increased 135 per cent over the last 10 years. The air in Wood Buffalo went from exceeding the standard 13 times five years ago to 350 times this last year. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. How does the minister explain exceeding the standard 350 times? What the heck is going on?

2:30

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the issue of the monitoring of air comes down to determining what are the levels at which the various operators are allowed to emit and determining when exceedances occur. The point at which the allowable limit is set is far less than the point at which there would be any risk to humans. The member is pointing out a serious concern that we have, a concern that we have taken up with the operators out there. We'll be doing everything that we can to bring that under control, but I can assure the member that these exceedances do not equate to human health risk.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thanks very much. This morning the level of sour gas at Mildred Lake was twice as high as Alberta's standard. To the minister: with consistent exceedances why isn't the government forcing compliance?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we are holding the operators accountable. I must reiterate yet one more time: there is a difference between an exceedance on an operating permit and human health risk. I can assure this member, I can assure all Albertans that should there be a point at which our air monitoring indicates that there is a health risk, we would be dealing with it in a decidedly different way.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Well, Mr. Minister, it's 350 times, and it is sour gas.

My final question to the minister is: why isn't the sour gas monitored in Fort MacKay, which is the closest populated area to Mildred Lake?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we rely on a series of monitoring stations, some of which are permanent and some of which are mobile. The member knows perfectly well that we do have on occasion the ability to move mobile monitoring into locations that we feel are in need of monitoring. If the member has reason to believe that that mobile monitoring should be taking place, I would ask her to bring it to my attention.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Alberta Arts Days

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My family, like a lot of Alberta families, really values the arts. In our family for the last 10 years we've had an annual arts week, and we have a film festival. Family Day weekend we had 170 people at our house. So I was really delighted to hear that the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit announced Arts Day last year, and now we're even more delighted to hear that it's being expanded to a three-day event. I do have a few questions for him, though. In this time of economic uncertainty, of course, we're always mindful of costs, so I'm wondering if the minister can give some assurance that he will be prudent with the spending as we engage on this expanded event?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's always important to remember that we're in tough economic times, and we should always be fiscally prudent. But you know what? We have to keep on living. The air that I breathe right now is full of oxygen. We don't take that out of it. We don't take arts and culture out of our province, which shows such great diversity and shows great benefit for us. Right now in tough economic times we need a diversion. We need to look at the arts to help us escape for at least an hour or two the drudgery and the problems that we encounter in our daily lives. Also, it's a great opportunity for us as a province to showcase our tremendous artists.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Olson: Thank you. Again for the minister. Last year I know there was a provincially organized event that took place in Calgary.

As a rural MLA I really want to stress that the arts and culture are alive and well all over Alberta and certainly in rural Alberta. I'm wondering what the minister has done in terms of engaging the rest of the province in these events.

Mr. Blackett: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, last year we had over 30 different communities – large, small, and medium – across the province participate. Whether it was Barrhead, whether it was Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, Cardston, Banff, Didsbury, Three Hills, you name it, they were involved in it. This year, instead of just focusing on Calgary, we're going to be in Fort McMurray, we're going to be in Edmonton, we're going to be in Olds, we're going to be in Calgary, and we're going to be in Medicine Hat. We're going to cover all five regions of the province, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Olson: Well, I understand that last year schools and libraries, in particular, felt as though they might have missed an opportunity, so I'm wondering if you're doing anything this year to make sure that schools and libraries get the opportunity to take part in this event.

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, an excellent question. We want to make sure that this is a group of days that all Albertans feel they can participate in, so with the Minister of Education we're involving all K to 12 students this year, whether it's drawing a picture, writing a poem or a story, participating in a musical or a play or in a sports and recreational activity. We include that as part of culture as well. Also, we have our libraries, which are a gateway for our new immigrants. We are going to utilize them. We're going to make all of our provincially owned facilities through arts and culture available free of charge to all Albertans so that they get a chance to have a little slice of culture.

Taser Testing

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, prior to Christmas a national news organization reported that certain tasers were firing outside the limits that the manufacturer was guaranteeing. In Alberta we found that we had some of these tasers in use, and the Solicitor General organized for some of them to be tested. The last time I asked this question, there were still some of these tasers out on the street that hadn't been tested. I'm just following up on that. Have all of those tasers that were scheduled to be tested now had that procedure completed on them?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To answer the question, we are anticipating that all of our tasers in this province will be tested by the end of June.

In regard to the recent article, I believe that the RCMP had 249 of the earlier models, the M26s, in Alberta. They've all been pulled off. In the remaining police forces in the province there were only 15 of them that were being used. They have been tested. The ones that proved to be good are back in service. The ones that weren't have been pulled. Any that have not been tested have also been pulled. So it's looked after here in Alberta due to our proactive testing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The follow-up question – and I believe that the Solicitor General indicated this in estimates – is: will you be committing to a regular testing regime of all tasers within this province, and if so, when can we expect this to begin?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, an excellent question. Yes, we did commit to regular testing. We're putting the final finishes to that very quickly here. We'll likely start off with a program where we will test them probably fairly frequently. Depending on those test results, we'll re-evaluate the program as time goes on. We hope to have that in place fairly soon.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question for the Solicitor General. It's my understanding through some of the research that I've done that the RCMP have a little more stringent guidelines on the use of tasers. People have commented on this, saying: why don't we just simply adopt the RCMP guidelines to maybe improve on the standards already used in Alberta?

Mr. Lindsay: Again, Mr. Speaker, we did a thorough review of our guidelines a little over a year ago. We did put them in place, and they are probably the most stringent in Canada. Our guidelines are pretty much in agreement with the new guidelines that the RCMP came up with a few months ago.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Thorhild Landfill

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There's a landfill being proposed in my constituency, in the county of Thorhild. The status of this landfill is dependent on rezoning hearings by the county. Some of my constituents are looking for clarification regarding this process. I would like to ask the Minister of Municipal Affairs: why won't the province get involved in discussions on sensitive projects such as this?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, rezoning is a planning and development issue, and decisions on these matters rest with the municipality. It is up to the local council to make local decisions such as surface development. If I can say, there is a process in place, and the decision on the application has not yet been made. So the process needs to be completed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: in the event that the rezoning is successful, what are the next steps in the process, and what role does the province play, if any, in the evaluation and decision-making for this municipal project?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have provided a framework for an accountable process under the Municipal Government Act. Again, I want to repeat that the decision to amend the land-use bylaw is the responsibility of the municipal council. If rezoning is approved, the next step would be to apply for a development permit from the municipality. I will say that if it's granted, then the development permit can be appealed through the local subdivision and development appeal board. The third step would involve obtaining of approval from Alberta Environment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Some of the concerns my constituents have shared with me focus on the possible environmental impact of the landfill. My second supplemental is to the Minister of Environment. What can the minister do to assure my constituents that this landfill won't harm the environment in our region, and what role does his department play, if any, in the approvals or oversight of projects like this?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My department plays a significant role in the approval process for any landfill. There's a comprehensive, rigorous approval process. But I want to emphasize to the member that it is the department, not the minister. The minister stays out of these kinds of decisions for, I think, a very appropriate reason. These things are supposed to be based upon environmental, scientific information, not politics. Eventually this project would require an Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act approval and possibly even a Water Act approval. I can assure the member that we would review carefully and ensure that the strict guidelines are met, that compliance is assured, and that impacts in the area would be lessened. Again, as the Minister of Municipal Affairs has already pointed out, this project has not yet been applied for, and we are awaiting an application. At this point there is nothing that we will be doing on this project.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today.

In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Children's Wish Foundation of Canada

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Each year, sadly, thousands of Canadian children between the ages of 3 and 17 are diagnosed with a life-threatening illness. Granting wishes to children diagnosed with high-risk, life-threatening illnesses is the primary business of the Children's Wish Foundation of Canada, which this year celebrates its 25th anniversary. As I read this statement today, Children's Wish is in the process of granting its 15,000th wish to a child in a community somewhere in Canada.

The magic of a wish provides children and their families with an opportunity to share the joy of a special experience and an escape from the day-to-day challenges of the illness. For a child whose wish is about to be granted, the pain and discomfort of their illness somehow becomes more bearable. For many the excitement of planning and anticipating their dream has a dramatic effect on their healing. I commend Children's Wish for their commitment to bringing wishes to life for these courageous youngsters and for supporting families during the most difficult of circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, Children's Wish is a symbol of hope and a chance to provide children and families with special memories. I invite all Members of the Legislative Assembly to acknowledge Children's Wish for the important work they have done with 1,300 families right here in Alberta and the work they continue to do with families across Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Penbrooke Meadows Community Cleanup

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past Sunday I partnered with the Calgary East Church of the Nazarene and the South American Pentecostal Church for their Faith in Action event. Instead of going to church, both congregations along with other volunteers spent the day cleaning up the community of Penbrooke Meadows, the community in which I was born and now so proudly represent.

We had 98 volunteers out who picked up garbage from the streets and back alleys, helped residents with yardwork, picked up discarded electronics and other refuse from residents' homes, provided bins for the free use of the community, and cleaned graffiti. By the end of the day, Mr. Speaker, we filled four garbage trucks with refuse and collected over eight bins of electronics to be recycled. A number of residents also received help with their yardwork.

The day was capped off with a joint service involving the two congregations. Mr. Speaker, it was a touching service. Pastor Ricardo's kind words of prayer for me left me speechless and, yes, even a little teary-eyed. I would like to thank pastors Douglas Webb and Ricardo Escobar for offering their hand in friendship to me and for taking the initiative to organize such a great project. I hope we make this an annual occurrence.

This event was about service in the community, Mr. Speaker. It was about people from different walks of life uniting in service, uniting in our common pursuit to make a positive contribution to the world around us. When we unite in service, we bring down the many artificial barriers that separate humankind, and this project did just that.

This cleanup is a step towards building a stronger community. I hope this initiative inspires other residents of Penbrooke Meadows to make a difference. Specifically, I hope we can find more households to adopt a park, a street, an alley to keep clean, Mr. Speaker. I encourage them to do so, and I thank the congregations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Victoria Settlement

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Saturday, May 23, there was a very special event in my constituency of Athabasca-Redwater. The signing ceremony for the commemorative integrity statement for the Victoria district national historic site of Canada and the Victoria Settlement provincial historic site. This commemorative integrity statement outlines the planning, managing, operating, reporting, and remedial action for the Victoria Settlement in Alberta. This designation will help ensure that this area is preserved for future generations to enjoy.

The Victoria Settlement was first established by a Methodist mission in 1862. Then in 1864 the Hudson's Bay Company built their trading fort nearby, which is now Alberta's oldest building still standing on its original site. By 1900 Scottish, Métis, and Ukrainian families, including the forefathers of our Premier, began populating the area and established a school and a hospital, and the area has been slowly growing ever since. The Victoria district settlement is one of the jewels in my constituency from both a cultural and historical standpoint and is an example of the rich heritage in Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Speaker, this site is one of a number of sites in my constituency which hold significance historically for Alberta. Athabasca Landing on the Athabasca River was the gateway to the north and the transportation hub for the Hudson's Bay Company. The Athabasca Landing Trail, the first registered road in Alberta, played a vital role in the development of northern Alberta. Amber Valley, which was one of Canada's earliest black settlements, is celebrating its hundredth anniversary this year.

Mr. Speaker, I want to recognize the dedicated volunteers of the Victoria Home Guard Historical Society and the Smoky Lake Heritage Board and volunteers Graham Dalziel, Pauline Feniak, Noreen Easterbrook, and Joyce Peats, who all worked so hard to have this site designated a national historic site by the government of Canada. My constituents and myself also wish to thank the Premier and the Minister of Aboriginal Relations for attending this very special ceremony a couple of weeks ago.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure as the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo to present here this afternoon to the Alberta Legislature a comment by over 450 citizens encouraging the government to promote municipal integrated fire and emergency medical services throughout the province with one administration and not a duplication of overhead.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Yes, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona I'd like to present a petition which reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta believe that public education should be balanced, scientific and encourage critical thought, and petition the Legislative Assembly to amend Bill 44, Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, 2009 by striking out section 9.

The petition has 226 signatures, and that is in addition to approximately a thousand signatures we presented yesterday.

Thank you.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I rise to give oral notice that at the appropriate time I will be rising on a point of privilege concerning the May 26, 2009, ruling of the Ethics Commissioner, which excluded me from participating in debate on Bill 43. This decision unfairly and inappropriately prevented me as an MLA from fulfilling my duties.

Thank you.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a series of tablings. The first is the program for the 50th anniversary graduation at William Aberhart high school, located in Calgary-Varsity. L'école Banff Trail had a similar 50th anniversary celebration just around the corner. It's a feeder elementary.

Secondly, I am tabling a follow-up e-mail from Alison Ainsworth expressing concern about the lack of government support for her severely autistic seven-year-old daughter. The letter is addressed to the Member for Red Deer-North, in whose constituency the Ainsworths are now residing. Alison appeals:

The current and updated documentation, as provided by the family to FSCD, states clearly by every one of her current specialist team of more than 20, that my child's behaviour surrounding safety, sleep, and anxiety resulting in significant self-harm to her hands, arms and torso, needs to be supported by psychology.

I would like to table a letter regarding the potential damaging effects of noise not only in the wilderness but also in residential areas. David Sulz writes, "The noise created by off-road vehicles is as destructive, if not more, to wildlife and to the enjoyment of wilderness areas by Albertans."

Mr. Speaker, today I'm tabling two e-mails received in my office from Calgarians who express their concerns about the decision to delist gender reassignment surgeries. They're worried that it will end up costing the government more in the long run. Allison Leonhardt writes, "I ask you to please bring up reinstating funding for Gender Reassignment Surgery." Willow Brocke writes:

Those of us who are mental health professionals in the constituency, who are already overwhelmed and under-resourced in treating mental health conditions that are not curable with surgical intervention – are counting on you to be wise and do the right thing.

Mr. Speaker, I am tabling three letters and e-mails received in my office from Albertans who are disappointed and angry about this government's decision to eliminate the Wild Rose Foundation. The letters were received from Alison Steward, Dr. Robert Dickson, and Robin Doherty.

Mr. Speaker, I am tabling three letters and e-mails received by my office expressing support for Motion 503 and urging the government to follow through on the will of this Legislature and eliminate provincial achievement testing. The correspondence was received from Jackie Seidel, Elisha Danielson, and Andrea Gough.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table four letters from individuals concerned with section 11.1 of Bill 44. The letters have been received from Tyler Gschaid, Scott Rowed, Cheryl Zelmer, and Julia Smith, who basically summarize the concerns. They are asking, "How can an understanding of other people and of beliefs other than one's own be harmful to Alberta's youth?"

Mr. Speaker, today I am tabling six letters and e-mails received by my office from Albertans who are angry about the government's decision to increase fees for seniors' drug programs. This correspondence was received from Donovan and Eunice Williams, Ron Summach, Craig Thorn, Janice McNabb, Stewart Taylor, and Dennis Sanders.

I'm also tabling 13 letters expressing grave concerns over the delisting of chiropractic services. These came from Esther Davidchuk, Roger Zwack, Fernand Theunissen, Brian Donaldson, Mariola Kolanos, Christa Duclos, Jaimie Jessop, Dorothy Harrison, Don Findlay, Freya MacLean, Robert Stephenson, James Nielsen, Lina Gareau, and Veronica Petri.

Mr. Speaker, I'm tabling my final tabling, the names of 284 Calgarians who ask the government to ensure podiatry remains covered by Alberta health care.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure today to table five copies of a special booklet entitled Inspiring People: 2008 Aboriginal Review, which essentially outlines Syncrude's aboriginal review and their leadership role in the employment area, education and training, business development, community development, and the environment. Syncrude is truly a leader with aboriginal communities, and I want to thank them for this and provide it for the emolument of all members here.

Thank you.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the hon. Member for Stony Plain I stand today to table five copies of a letter from Esther Gehlert regarding the unfortunate death of Lorraine Adolph at an Alberta hospital.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a cease-and-desist order to the hon. minister of health urging the hon. minister to "cease and desist from further dismantling of our public health care structure," and it's signed by people from Edmonton.

I have one more tabling. In reference to my question earlier today this is the chief executive officer report to the Alberta Health Services Board, March 2009, and I would urge all hon. members to have a read through this document. It's quite interesting.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table the appropriate number of copies of Travel Alberta Stay, the summer festival and event guide, which features Jena Krystofiak dancing at Edmonton heritage days. I had the pleasure of introducing the lovely and talented young Edmontonian in the Assembly earlier today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today that, unfortunately, I couldn't get through yesterday.

The Speaker: Well, we just about can't get through today either, so keep 'er going.

Ms Pastoor: Five copies of a letter from Tyler Gschaid fully outlining that Bill 44 finally was obeying a federal court order but that section 11 was regressive thinking and, therefore, flawed in this bill.

The second one is five copies of a letter from Kathleen Shigemi, who suggests that Bill 44 "flies in the face of the new Social Studies curriculum that focuses on multiple perspectives, and includes religious perspectives on a variety of historical and current events."

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Knight, Minister of Energy, return to order of the Assembly MR 8, asked for by Mr. Mason on April 6, 2009.

On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Klimchuk, Minister of Service Alberta, response to Written Question 4, asked for by Mr. Mason on March 16, 2009.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Goudreau, Minister of Employment and Immigration, pursuant to the Workers' Compensation Act the Workers' Compensation Board Alberta 2008 annual report and return to order of the Assembly MR 10, asked for by Ms Notley on April 20, 2009.

On behalf of the hon. Ms Tarchuk, Minister of Children and Youth Services, response to Written Question 8, asked for by Ms Notley on April 6, 2009.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Renner, Minister of Environment, response to questions raised by Ms Blakeman, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, during Oral Question Period on May 26, 2009, regarding the Alberta energy efficiency rebate program.

The Speaker: Hon. members, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Merci, M. le Président. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly two friends who are visiting us in the members' gallery today. Marie-Laure Polydore of Edmonton is originally from Guyane, or French Guiana. Rêmi Ogouma is visiting from Ottawa, and she is originally from Benin, West Africa. These ladies are woefully trying to help me improve my French. I would ask that our guests rise – and I wish them bienvenue – and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: On the point of privilege?

The Speaker: Absolutely.

Privilege

Ethics Commissioner Advice on Conflicts of Interest

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pursuing a point of privilege under Standing Order 15. I'm pursuing this privilege on the grounds that I as an elected member of this Assembly was prevented from carrying out my duties during both debate and voting and, further, was informed that I could not raise issues in question period. There is no more serious breach than preventing a member from carrying out his or her duties to constituents.

I am pursuing this privilege against the Ethics Commissioner, who, as an officer of the Legislative Assembly, is a creature of the Assembly and accountable to the Assembly. Here are the facts and the timelines that go with it, Mr. Speaker. Allow me to do this with care.

On the afternoon of Monday, May 25, the Speaker read into the record of this Assembly a cautionary letter concerning Bill 43 from the Ethics Commissioner, which is recorded for everyone to read on pages 1206 and 1207 of Hansard.

Second, prompted by actions of the Speaker, by your reading the letter into Hansard, I phoned the Ethics Commissioner to clarify the situation regarding my in-laws owning a small herd of cattle.

Third, on Tuesday, May 26, the Ethics Commissioner wrote to me saying that I must recuse myself from debating or voting on Bill 43 because my father-in-law owns a small herd of cattle. I will table that correspondence.

Fourth, on Wednesday, May 27, in the evening the debate and vote on Bill 43 in Committee of the Whole was pursued and recorded in Hansard. Bill 43 passed through Committee of the Whole. I did not attend as per the ruling of the Ethics Commissioner. No one in the Assembly at the time identified a conflict of interest.

Five, the following morning, Thursday, May 28, I was considering asking a question relating to Bill 43, so I phoned the Ethics Commissioner to ask if I could in fact ask questions in question period relating to Bill 43. He advised me not to ask questions in question period relating to that issue. In the course of the phone call I noted that Hansard showed a number of government MLAs from the previous evening who appeared to have farm connections similar to or closer than mine participating in debate on Bill 43 and, indeed, voting.

Six, on Thursday, May 28, in the afternoon I wrote the Ethics Commissioner asking for written clarification of his ruling that I could not participate in question period relating to Bill 43. I will table that correspondence, too, Mr. Speaker.

Seventh, on Monday, June 1, after morning phone calls from the Ethics Commissioner indicating he had made mistaken rulings, my office received at 1438 hours, 2:38 in the afternoon, a letter from his office reversing his decision of May 26 and, to his credit, apologizing. I will also table that correspondence.

Mr. Speaker, there is, I believe, little question that I was blocked from fulfilling my duties as an MLA. I am the opposition critic responsible for Bill 43, and as such I had had extensive written and verbal correspondence on the bill. As you know and everyone here knows, it's a contentious piece of legislation with deeply held views on both sides, exactly the kind of thing that should be hashed out here.

As the critic I had acquired a good understanding of Bill 43. I had asked questions concerning it in question period before it came to the Assembly in Committee of the Whole. I had prepared a number of amendments to introduce during Committee of the Whole. I had a significant list of stakeholders across the province who were counting on me to raise their concerns. In short, I had given a serious commitment to fulfilling my duties as an MLA and as a member of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. I was not able to do these things because of the rulings of the Ethics Commissioner. I scrambled to make do in the best way possible through such things as having amendments made in other members' names, but it is clear my rights as an MLA were infringed.

When I read Hansard the day after Bill 43 passed through Committee of the Whole, I was surprised to see that a number of government members who may have been in a similar position to me participated in debate and voted on Bill 43. One of the first questions that came to my mind was: am I being held to a different standard than government MLAs? Mr. Speaker, that can be a serious concern for opposition MLAs in a province where one party has been completely dominant for four decades.

However, Mr. Speaker, the concern I want to emphasize today is about the rights of MLAs, all of us, to fully participate in this Assembly and about the general lack of understanding of conflict of interest that led to my rights as an MLA being infringed.

Let me deal first and ever so briefly with the rights of MLAs to fully participate in this Assembly, which is, of course, crucial to a matter of privilege. I'm concerned that these rights are being increasingly curtailed and that the current ruling is not the only one to do this. In recent weeks MLAs have been cautioned by the Ethics Commissioner about participating in debate on matters relating to teachers' pensions if they are themselves teachers or have family members who are teachers. A number of MLAs dutifully recused themselves from debates and voting even though the Conflicts of Interest Act says that a private interest does not include a matter that is of general application or that affects a person as one of a broad class of the public. This is section 1 of the act, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I am aware of at least one other ruling, this one from the previous Ethics Commissioner, that was startling in its effects on my rights as an MLA. I will read a portion of that into the record. This stems from the fall of 2007. It arose during the debates on royalties. As it turns out, through inheritances from homesteading my family, my wife, owns a fraction of a per cent of the mineral right, so in the course of royalties I wrote the then Ethics Commissioner. I said:

Dear Mr. Commissioner:

As I have indicated and filed previously with your office, my wife owns a partial interest in a freehold mineral rights point on some farmland in Alberta. This interest is generating some income for her from oil and gas production. She inherited the interest, and it goes back to her family's time as homesteaders.

Given the current debates on royalties, including discussion of freehold mineral rights, I want to ask your advice on my involvement in this issue. Given that there are thousands of people who own such rights, it seems to me this is a program or policy of general and widespread application and that I should be able to participate freely in the public debate. Can you please advise me as soon as possible.

The response was startling, and I think all of us need to be concerned about this as MLAs. This is dated October 19, 2007, from Donald Hamilton, at the time Ethics Commissioner.

Dr. Taft:

Thank you for your e-mail requesting my advice on your ability to participate in matters relating to the royalty review in Alberta.

To be consistent with advice I have given to other MLAs in similar circumstances . . .

I don't know who, but I think we need to be very alert to this as a group of MLAs.

. . . my advice is that you do not participate in the debates or discussions on the royalty review.

I do appreciate that there are a number of citizens who hold mineral rights but their circumstances may vary and not all may take the same position on the issue of royalties. For that reason, it is my advice that there is a private interest and that it is not a matter of general application.

Donald Hamilton

Ethics Commissioner

I was Leader of the Opposition. This was the largest issue in the province at the time, and I had just been told I could not participate. I was startled. I sought legal opinion, and I can tell you that counsel was startled, too.

I wrote back. I won't go through all of this, but I pointed out to the Ethics Commissioner, and I quote from my correspondence:

In the entire 105 page report of the royalty review panel there are just two sentences concerning freehold mineral [rights]: "Freehold Mineral Tax: That a flat 6% tax apply regardless of level of production. Retain the base exemption of $1600."

In 105 pages that's all that the report addressed.

So, Mr. Speaker, my point in reading this is that the events and rulings of the last week are the culmination of what I think is a very worrisome trend, and that's why I'm bringing this to the floor of the Assembly for all members to consider. The ruling of this commissioner in recent days brings to a head a trend that has been building from the time of the previous commissioner. It is a trend that I believe is misguided and misinformed. It is based on a wrong-headed approach to conflict of interest. And if it continues to develop, it will not only erode the fundamental privilege of MLAs; it will become a recipe for paralysis of the Legislature.

It is also important to note that these decisions by ethics commissioners create a false impression that this Assembly is being tough on conflict of interest. In fact, I was not in conflict of interest with Bill 43. I should have had every right to debate, to vote, and to ask questions in question period. It's because Bill 43 did not create a private interest. It applied to a broad class of the public, numbering in the tens of thousands, and it was of general application. The same logic applies to the teachers' pensions issue, and it also applies to the matter of freehold mineral rights, each of which apply to tens of thousands of people.

Mr. Speaker, in asking you to find a point of privilege, you may consider what is the remedy. After all, if there's no feasible remedy, then why bother? Because I have sought views on this in the last 24 hours quite broadly, I've been informed from very credible sources that in many jurisdictions in this country this could lead to a resignation by the Ethics Commissioner, but I don't believe that's necessary. I do believe we need to consider other, more constructive remedies. In the long term these could include amending the Conflicts of Interest Act to set a minimum qualification for the commissioner, such as having a background in the legal profession. But, more urgently, the remedy I would seek is to have the commissioner prepare an in-depth working paper for study by all MLAs and, of course, by the Ethics Commissioner himself on the nature of conflict of interest and on standards of best practice.

Ironically, until we as an Assembly and the commissioner understand conflict of interest better, we think we're being tough on the issue when we are simply being misguided. On the one hand, we carefully recuse ourselves from issues that are not conflicts of interest under the Conflicts of Interest Act, and then on the other hand, we stand by while any number of people appointed to government boards fall short of best practice and in some cases are in obvious conflict. Over and over this Assembly passes legislation or approves appointments that do not meet standards of best practice.

Mr. Speaker, in recent years the corporate world has gone through a dramatic improvement in standards concerning conflict of interest. Part of that process was a systematic, industry-wide process of education for people in the corporate worlds. It is time this Assembly followed suit. It would be a wonderful remedy to this privilege if, in fact, it led to the Ethics Commissioner undertaking a serious education program for all MLAs concerning best practice on conflict of interest.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I thank the hon. member.

Is there an additional member who would like to be recognized on this subject matter? The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question of privilege that's been raised is a very serious matter. Well, any question of privilege is a very serious matter, but in this case it involves a question being raised against an officer of the Legislature on a particularly critical issue, and I would want to indicate that I think the issue itself is a critical issue. The question of the definition of private interest and when an interest is not a private interest because it is a matter of general application to the public is a very critical issue for many of us. Bill 25 has certainly raised that issue for members of the House, as has Bill 43.

The critical piece – I'm using the word "critical" too many times, so I'll find another word. The real question here for a question of privilege is not the issue itself, which is important. As the Speaker you will know that as Government House Leader I have approached the Speaker and the Attorney General, the Speaker to act on behalf of all members of the House and the Attorney General to act on behalf of members of Executive Council and people appointed by Executive Council, to approach the Ethics Commissioner to deal with this broader issue of private interest and general application because it's a very critical issue to members of the House doing their work. However, it should be clear in all of the expressions that the hon. member raised and in the letters that we received that the Ethics Commissioner provides advice, and it's up to each and every one of us as members of the House to determine our participation.

When I excluded myself from the House with respect to Bill 25 because of the advice of the Ethics Commissioner, I specifically said: I'm excluding myself because the Ethics Commissioner believes that I have a conflict of interest. In fact, I did not believe, myself, that I had a conflict of interest. I believe that the law of general application would have protected me in terms of participation in that debate, but it wasn't an issue that I was prepared to make a point of at that particular time. It is an issue that I think is important and I think should be addressed in an important and appropriate way.

But that's not a question of privilege of the House because the question of the hon. member being able to do his duty is one that he has to determine. Every member of this House has to determine when they should be present and when they shouldn't be present, and only each of us as an individual, knowing our personal circumstances, is in the position to make that decision. We should and we can ask for advice, and we do ask for advice, and when the Ethics Commissioner provides advice, it is prudent to follow that advice until, if one disagrees with the advice, one can get it changed.

The issue of whether or not an individual member is precluded from doing his duty. If the doors are locked and they can't get in, that might be a question of privilege. If one's character is besmirched in an inappropriate way to the extent that they no longer can carry the trust of their members, that might be a question of privilege. But the question of whether one can attend and participate and vote on an issue, whether they have a question of conflict or not, is a personal question for members to determine themselves. They can take advice on that, and I would quote the letters that I have. I know the hon. member referred to several letters. There are two letters here. In one of them it says, "It is my advice that you may participate in further debate," and the other is, "It is my opinion that the term . . . would include that of your father-in-law and that you must therefore recuse yourself." "It is my opinion": that's what's being asked for here.

I don't want to diminish in any way the importance of the issue. I think it's a very important issue because I think members ought to be able to participate fully in every matter that comes before the House unless there is an expressed private interest. But this is not a matter which should be determined by referral to the privileges and elections committee for some determination as to whether the Ethics Commissioner has or has not impeded the interests of a private member. I would say it is not that and should not be that for this particular reason: if the House was to do that, it would undermine, in fact it would eviscerate, the role of the Ethics Commissioner in its entirety because if we were to . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader has the floor.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, this is a very important question, and I would ask that the hon. member . . .

The Speaker: Come on. Keep coming.

Mr. Hancock: I will. I lost my train of thought there because of the chirping from Calgary-Buffalo, which was entirely inappropriate.

The point that I was making is that we cannot eviscerate the role of the Ethics Commissioner by having it open to the House determining a question of privilege on the basis of any ruling that we might disagree with. That would undermine the role of the Ethics Commissioner entirely. That would put every ruling of the Ethics Commissioner with respect to the participation of a member in question.

When I say ruling, I want to put it in the context that I said earlier. We have the privilege of being able to approach the Ethics Commissioner as individual members with the benefit of privacy to outline our personal circumstances and ask for advice as to whether our personal circumstances would put us in a conflict. We get that advice, and then we either take that advice, which is the prudent thing to do, or do not take that advice, as we wish, but it is our decision to do that. It is not, in my view, appropriate for this House to undermine that role of the Ethics Commissioner by second-guessing, by in fact saying: you gave me wrong advice, and that interfered with my ability to do my job. If you believe the Ethics Commissioner has given you wrong advice, then look to somewhere else to get advice, and then act on the benefit of your conscience and your understanding of your position. That is the position that I think we need to be in while understanding the very important issue that's been raised about how far, how broadly we want to have interpreted this question of private interest or general public application.

I think the hon. member is exactly right when he says that at some point in time, after having these discussions and having the benefit of what's happened with respect to these two bills, we may need to look at the conflicts act itself and determine whether it needs to be changed in any way. But I think the appropriate process right now is for the discussions to happen with the Ethics Commissioner from the perspective of the Speaker on behalf of members and the Attorney General on behalf of Executive Council, both groups of people that are affected by the Conflicts of Interest Act and any opinions of the Ethics Commissioner, and determine whether there can be some bulletin published or direction given as to where that line might be. I don't think you can ever be definitive about where that line is, so it always is a matter of opinion. We cannot undermine and eviscerate the role of the Ethics Commissioner in this way, by allowing a question of privilege to determine this type of an issue.

The Speaker: I guess it's going to lead to further discussion. Now, I want to be very, very clear to hon. members. I will recognize anyone who chooses to participate in this matter today. This matter was raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview as a very personal item. It was his privilege within the Legislative Assembly of the province of Alberta. It was not a discussion with anyone else. It was his experience. He knows it better than anyone else. So we will focus entirely on the subject matter that was raised by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll try to do that, and I'll try to be quite brief. I simply want to say with respect to the role of the Ethics Commissioner, which was part of the privilege that was raised by the hon. member, that it is incumbent on all of us to carefully heed the advice of the Ethics Commissioner. To suggest that if we disagree with the Ethics Commissioner, in some way we should be prepared to reject his advice or go outside to get other advice, I think is not a fair statement. If you think about it, if the Ethics Commissioner gives you advice and you don't follow it and another member then raises a question against you, which could lead, ultimately, to the loss of your seat, and an investigation is initiated by the same Ethics Commissioner, who then provides a report to this Assembly, what are the other members of the Assembly going to rely upon in order to make their judgment? Are they all going to go out and get their own separate legal opinions? No.

In fact, you can almost count on the fact that all members of the Assembly will rely on the judgment and the opinion of the Ethics Commissioner to make a judgment about your own personal situation and whether you have a conflict of interest. The result then is a vote in the Assembly that ultimately could cost you your seat. So I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview has made a very serious and valid point, and I think that the approach suggested by the Government House Leader goes nowhere. The reality is that we depend upon the Ethics

Commissioner for advice, and if we don't accept it, then he is involved in the process that follows from that, and other members of the House are very dependent on his advice in deciding what further action to take. The net result of that is that you simply have no choice but to accept the advice of the Ethics Commissioner.

The Speaker: Additional participants? The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I understand a matter of privilege, your function is limited in these cases to deciding whether the matter is of such a character as to be an issue of privilege and whether or not it should entitle the House to make a motion with respect to the issue. In my respectful submission I think that the matter of privilege raised by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview is a serious matter. It raises issues of a broader concern to all of us as Members of the Legislative Assembly, and I know that I for one would be loath to reject the advice of the Ethics Commissioner. In fact, I think that I share with the Member for Edmonton-Riverview the belief that when the Ethics Commissioner gives a ruling or a direction in a particular matter, I would be bound to follow that advice.

In my respectful submission, Mr. Speaker, I'm not going to propose a motion, but I wonder whether or not it is an appropriate circumstance where one member of the House, perhaps, would make a motion to refer this matter to the committee on privileges and elections to investigate the matter further and perhaps to report back to the House.

The Speaker: No ruling has been made by the chair yet, so it's a bit presumptuous to talk about motions.

Dr. Brown: Well, when you make your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I guess that is an option for the House if you should decide that this is an issue of privilege.

But, as I said, I think it is a serious matter, and I think it warrants further investigation by the House.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Sorry, hon. member. One shot.

Dr. Taft: I can't close debate? Okay. Thanks.

The Speaker: Are there additional comments to be made by hon. members?

Hon. members, this issue was unknown to the chair until 10:55 this morning, and the last involvement that the Speaker had with respect to this matter was when the Speaker rose in the House and, in fact, read into the record the advice provided by the Ethics Commissioner. All members will know that the chair was pretty forceful with respect to heeding the advice forthcoming from the Ethics Commissioner. It was very clear. The chair was also unknowing, hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, about any ruling with respect to royalties that was made to the member in times gone by.

This is a matter that I want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview for raising in the House. This is a very serious situation. The chair, having been in this Assembly for nearly 30 years, appreciates the importance of a member wanting to participate and having the broadest general application and ability to participate as an elected person. The chair also knows that we have a Conflicts of Interest Act and that there have been rulings with respect to this. The chair is aware of the changing advice given to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, and the chair can fully understand because when I read the letter that was provided with the first advice on May 26, I must say that a few questions came into my head with respect to that ruling. Then on June 1 to get a letter that shows a different perspective can cause some issues.

Look. I do not recall when a question such as this has been raised in this House, but I do know that it applies to the integrity of all 83 members of this Assembly. All 83 members must be assured, then, that when advice is sought and advice is given, they can move forward with comfort and a feeling of assurance. The chair will not comment further on some of the opinions expressed here in the last few minutes as to whether the chair agrees or disagrees with them. That will come at a later moment.

I intend on taking this matter. I take it as a very serious situation – and I underline the words “very serious situation” – because it involves the integrity and the privileges of all members of this Assembly and their participation in this Assembly and their belief that the advice given to them is of the highest possible quality that can be provided. Hopefully, I'll be in a position to come back tomorrow with a statement with respect to this.

I recognize as well that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview sought what I would believe to be a very professional remedy with respect to this. I do not recall any request being made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview for having a motion or the matter referred elsewhere other than to prescribe some certain steps to be taken to basically create a working paper to look at standards of best practice, to review all of this. There's a variety of ways that that may be done, but I do want to take the time to think about this. Hopefully, it will be tomorrow afternoon that I will return with a statement with respect to this.

I want to repeat again that this is serious. Basically, it involves the contempt, I think, of an officer of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta. In essence, that is the underlying statement that we're talking about and the assurance associated with it. I appreciate the comments of all members, and I will deal with this further.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 43

Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to rise and move third reading of Bill 43, the Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2).

I truly appreciate, Mr. Speaker, the support that was received at Committee of the Whole and the vigorous debate that was engaged in. It is regrettable that the Member for Edmonton-Riverview couldn't participate. Bill 43, if everyone recalls, gives fundamental right of choice to producers of four commodity groups, namely beef, pork, sheep, and potatoes.

There was only one question that remained from Committee of the Whole which I had not had a chance to answer. That was about exactly how the refund process would work. In fact, the change will go into effect for each of the commissions in their 2010-2011 fiscal year. The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka was exactly correct, Mr. Speaker, when he said that the regulations will have to be put together after this legislation is passed. The regulations would specify the refund process and likely use a process that's similar to the other refundable commissions, where there is a payment period and a refund period. The existing refundable commissions have varying regulations. Some have a refund period that's only once per year, some have a refund period that is twice a year, and some do it quarterly.

I can assure all the members of this Assembly, all the members of the commissions, and the members of the public that once Bill 43 is passed, Mr. Speaker, the Agricultural Products Marketing Council will consult with each of the commissions and members to ensure that the regulations work appropriately for them, their producers, and the commissions themselves, to make sure that they're effective and they don't create any tremendous undue burden by spending a lot of time dealing with the refunds and commissions at inappropriate times.

I appreciate the support that was given in Committee of the Whole to this legislation, and I anticipate the continued support through third reading. With that, Mr. Speaker, I will take my seat.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, I'm giving you first chance to participate in this debate. You've got 20 minutes.

Dr. Taft: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will go from memory on the discussion of Bill 43.

The Speaker: Usually the best speeches, by the way.

Dr. Taft: I realize this has been a contentious piece of legislation, a difficult one for the government and one that has led to some pretty bitter feelings in the agriculture sector.

I guess we can deal with it beginning from the point of principle as it's been put to me. One of the first people I called in the cattle industry who talked to me about it captured it in a sentence. He said: this is about a few people with a lot of cattle versus a lot of people with a few cattle. I thought that was a pretty good summary of the interests here. The concern is that the few people with a lot of cattle are carrying the day and that the provisions in the current legislation that are there to allow a plebiscite on this issue, in which the many owners, each with a few cattle, could exercise a vote on the basis of equal suffrage, on the basis of one person, one vote, are being revoked or being overruled, that in fact the democratic processes under the bill are eliminated and that a default position is being pushed through that favours the few owners with the many cattle.

There is an issue here of people in the beef, hog, lamb, and potato industries feeling that what they assumed were democratic rights are being steamrolled. I can understand that. I know they feel very strongly, and frankly I'm sympathetic to them.

The concern further is that if Bill 43 is passed – and it looks like it will be – there will be an impact on the viability of the various producer organizations to really fulfill their jobs. The Alberta Beef Producers are concerned that a handful of large operators may cost their organization hundreds of thousands of dollars a year or even more than that and, as a result, curtail their efforts to support the industry. So there's the democratic issue here, and there's the economic issue, and I am sympathetic, frankly, to the large number of smaller producers on both fronts.

There's a third issue here, Mr. Speaker, which has to do with what we might call collateral damage, a term borrowed from, as we all know, war. It's, I think, a term that was concocted in an effort to reduce some of the ugliness related to civilian casualties in war. Regardless, the collateral damage here would be the impact on the pork producers, the sheep and lamb producers, and the potato producers. They very strongly feel that this is really a beef issue. It didn't involve them at all. Nobody in the pork industry was particularly outspoken on this issue and nobody in the sheep or potato industries either, yet they're caught up in this because of the real conflict within the beef producer sector. So there's that issue as well.

Then that, of course, raises the matter of fairness. If you're a pork producer happily going along raising your pork when there's no particular issue of any note around the functioning of the check-off and the viability of the producer organization, suddenly it feels like the rug is pulled out from under you because of the conflicts occurring in the beef sector. Then you can see why they feel it's pretty unfair. The same applies to the potato sector and the sheep sector.

Mr. Speaker, there's a series of fundamental problems with this bill: democratic, economic, and fairness. That's why we have opposed this bill.

Now, we've heard all sides of the debate. I've had correspondence from those who support the bill, and clearly the government supports the bill. There's a gulf between the two sides that's not going to be bridged. The decision will be made, and things will move on.

I guess I'm left most fundamentally questioning on the basis of the democratic matter here. Given that there were grounds in the existing and historic legislation for a plebiscite to be held, why didn't the government simply allow the plebiscite to be held? After all, that is how elections generally are run. In the stock market people get to vote by how many dollars they have, but in the political arena it's been historically for very good reason one person, one vote. That was the set-up for the producer organizations. I think it's a regressive step for democracy that we've abandoned that principle and, instead of one person, one vote, in effect said one animal, one vote or one dollar, one vote. It's an unhealthy trend.

I am concerned about a tendency in this government in many different areas to consolidate power, to in my view weaken democratic institutions, and to justify it in the name of economics. I know that some government members have done that. The Member for Battle River-Wainwright has explored this issue in some of his debates on Bill 43 and has come out saying that when the chips are down, this is, first and foremost, an economic issue. For me it's first and foremost a democratic issue. So we lock horns, and since there are only a few of us and there are a bunch on the government side, we lose. But that doesn't necessarily mean that I'm convinced that it's the right outcome.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to rise at this point to Bill 43. I might as well say on the record, although I said it at some length half an hour ago, that I really do regret not being able to participate in debate in Committee of the Whole because of the ruling of the Ethics Commissioner. I had a bunch of really good amendments and very well-prepared notes and an awful lot of people around this province looking to me to carry their case forward. Speaking for a few minutes in third doesn't equal that, but I'll take it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To move the process along, I would like to introduce an amendment. I will ask the pages to pick it up and distribute it, and then I will speak to the amendment.

The Speaker: We'll wait till it's circulated.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, please proceed. I believe that there are enough copies out.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am moving that the motion for third reading of Bill 43, Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No.2), be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following: "Bill 43, the Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No.2), be not now read a third time but that it be read a third time this day six months hence."

Speaking to the amendment, Mr. Speaker, there has been tremendous conflict with regard to Bill 43. Questions that I asked during the committee stage such as, "How were producers contacted? Were any polls taken? Were there public consultations held, and if so, where and when?" couldn't be answered. So I'm left with the feeling that this bill has been imposed on the agricultural community as opposed to being proposed by the agricultural community.

Without repeating details that I brought forward in the Committee of the Whole debate, I want to emphasize the point made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview with regard to the few who own many cattle and the many who own a few cattle. In terms of the total number of cattle in this province: 5.4 million cattle and calves. In terms of the number of individuals involved in raising those cattle and calves: 28,750 farms. Those are a lot of individual farms that I don't believe received the consultation necessary to have the opportunity to provide informed input into the consideration of this bill.

What we have is the traditional western style battle of various groups over the usage of the land. I can't help but think of westerns where we had the cattle barons hiring gunslingers to run off the farmers and the shepherds. This type of conflict is antiproduative to this province.

Now, in dealing with our discussion this afternoon and the point of privilege, it was noted that the Ethics Commissioner barred the MLA for Edmonton-Riverview from debate on this bill at Committee of the Whole but later reconsidered this ruling. Others in the House who participated in the debate on Bill 43 could have had potential conflicts of interest but were still able to participate, while the Member for Edmonton-Riverview was not able to.

I believe that time is needed, not only time for the members within this House to get back to their constituents, the 28,750 of them – and those are just the farms. We can assume that there are other family members involved on those farms. I think the Ethics Commissioner needs an opportunity to clarify prohibitions affecting the participation of Members of this Legislative Assembly and to share these clarifications with all members of the House. I don't believe this bill is ready. I don't believe the homework has been done that is necessary to assure that not only the economic interests of the few are met but the livelihood and the survival of family farms and ranches throughout the province that are at stake.

As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview pointed out, the underlying consideration that is most key to this bill is the democratic right to express an opinion, and I don't believe that the individuals who live on the 28,750 farms that produce cattle and calves have had an opportunity to have their opinions taken into account. I don't believe that the 2,180 farms that produce lamb and sheep have had their voices heard, nor do I believe that the 1,570 farms that produce hogs have had an opportunity for input nor, it follows, would the 400 farms that grow potatoes and the individuals who live on those farms.

Now, Bill 43 is taking a very drastic measure in terms of removing the rights of a plebiscite. That is draconian, to say the least.

Therefore, I believe that the hon. mover of this bill has good intentions, but he and I are both teachers, and we know what happens when you don't do the research and the homework assignment is incomplete. Using that analogy, I think that in the six months that intervene – I know that farmers and ranchers are extremely busy. The seeding has taken place. They're praying for rainfall to help with their animals and help with the production. Mother Nature has a tremendous influence on the success of farms, whether they're of the potato nature or cattle or sheep or hogs. If we're going to get this right, if we're going to do service to the over 31,000 individuals involved in agricultural undertakings in this province, I don't believe that Bill 43 meets those requirements.

Hence, what I am saying is: let's do our homework right. Let's allow six months of public consultation to take place, and let us give those 31,000 individuals an opportunity for full participation. This may be the last time they get that opportunity, Mr. Speaker. If this bill goes forward and eliminates the plebiscite, I have grave concerns about the state of democracy being eroded even further. Therefore, I have proposed this amendment, and I look forward to others participating in the discussion as to: is this homework complete, or is there more work to be done?

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we are on an amendment. The debate will be restricted to the amendment.

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion on the amendment lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 3:50 p.m.]

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for recognizing me. It's a pleasure today to rise and commence discussion on Bill 49, the Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2).

This bill will extend the good-faith clause, under which our Alberta firefighters work, to municipalities and fire departments. What it will do is reduce the time fire departments and firefighters spend in courts responding to liability claims, and in turn it'll increase the time that these valuable firefighters spend protecting their communities.

Now, Mr. Speaker, you may ask yourself: what would a firefighter be doing in a courthouse? Well, a trend has developed in Alberta, an unfortunate trend, where following a fire, following a loss of property, in the settlement of insurance claims very often, more often than not, fire departments and municipalities are named in lawsuits. Naming someone in a lawsuit sometimes is a routine thing, but in these cases these lawsuits are actually pursued. What happens is that firefighters are then asked to attend examinations for discovery at various law firms. Experts are hired from outside of the jurisdiction, often even from outside of the country, and these firefighters are being questioned on what it is that they did or did not do during that emergency, during the fire, and what more they could have done to perhaps save the property further and, therefore, diminish the liability of the insurance company for paying out and settling a claim.

Mr. Speaker, an example occurred not that long ago. All of us will remember a fire in a condominium complex in Clareview in Edmonton. Minus 30 to minus 35 outside, the middle of winter, in the middle of the night a semiconstructed condominium site caught fire, with exposed timber burning. Firefighters showed up from several fire departments. Their hoses were freezing. Firefighters ended up in emergencies because of slips and falls and other injuries.

Well, a number of years later this matter has reached the courts, and a fire chief from California – yes, Mr. Speaker, a retired fire chief from California – was retained by the defence, and he was questioning what our Edmonton firefighters could have done differently. What experience did he have? I don't know. But I tell you that in most of these cases all of our municipalities settle these claims because fighting these claims is very expensive. What they do is settle them for a certain percentage of whatever the statement of claim demands, which is Alberta taxpayers' money. The money that's being transferred by our MSI funds to municipalities now is being expended on settling these claims instead of being expended on services for Albertans.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, what is even more troubling – and every firefighter will tell you this – is that firefighters feel horrible about having to appear in an examination for discovery or even a trial and being questioned by someone three years later on what they could or couldn't have done in a moment of an emergency, under a given set of treacherous circumstances. Everybody can be an armchair critic a number of years later.

There's a stake for us as Albertans in this, Mr. Speaker. I don't want to see our firefighters running into a fire, saving lives and saving property, and now having to second-guess themselves, to second-guess their instinct, to second-guess the training that they have received for many, many years and doubt whether they should or should not do something because they may become liable and may have to one day appear before a judge or a justice or perhaps in an examination for discovery. That is not what should be on their minds at a time when they're going into fire and when they're going into emergencies and are responding and are saving lives. These are costly ventures for municipalities. They are frustrating ventures for firefighters.

Now, in my recent discussions with our retired fire chief from Edmonton, when I asked him, "How is your retirement treating you?" even though he is fully retired, his response was, "I am very busy." He still has a number of court cases and examinations for discovery that he has to attend and prepare for for many, many years to come. So we are now pulling firefighters out of retirement to attend to these matters.

What also is very important, Mr. Speaker, is that in much of rural Alberta our firefighters are volunteers. It is difficult to find volunteer firefighters because that demands a great deal of time and commitment from them. It takes them away from their gainful employment. They have to be trained. Imagine being asked to volunteer and do all that yet be told: by the way, there could be an insurance company questioning some day whether you did your job right, and you may have to appear before judges or before lawyers and be questioned on it. It's frightening, and it's discouraging volunteer firefighters from being enrolled.

Mr. Speaker, this bill will put an end to this. What this bill will do is extend the good-faith clause, meaning that any and all decisions made during an emergency that are made in good faith – and we imagine most, if not all, decisions of firefighters are made in good faith – will not be subject to future litigation or will make future litigation significantly more difficult for plaintiffs in these cases.

This bill also is a bit of a success story because it came as a process of collaboration. Even though insurance companies in these cases are usually the plaintiffs, credit has to be given where credit is due. The Insurance Bureau of Canada has met with me on numerous occasions, Mr. Speaker, and fully supports this piece of legislation. They understand how important this issue is, and they now understand the ramifications of laying these lawsuits against municipalities. They do support us in passing this particular legislation, so at this point I would like to extend my sincere gratitude to the Insurance Bureau of Canada and all of their member companies who have collaborated with me in drafting this particular piece of legislation. I know that they are comfortable with the wording of it, which probably diminishes the chances of them ever trying to appeal any decisions in the future, because they are the co-drafters of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this bill responds to resolutions passed by the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association and the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties, who have requested that the municipal act be amended because they were on the receiving end of the frustration of having to have their municipalities, fire departments, and firefighters continuously appear before courts and judges. Also, we have consulted with department staff, obviously, within the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. We have consulted with firefighters, which included the city of Edmonton and the city of Calgary, so consultation should not be a problem.

Mr. Speaker, it is time we support our firefighters. The day couldn't be more appropriate. We just had some massive fires in Edmonton in a seniors' facility, and in the absence of this legislation I can assure you that with a fire like this, where firefighters responded in droves, a loss may follow to offset the cost of the claim that may have to be paid. I would encourage, at this point, all members of this Assembly to support our firefighters, to give them that peace of mind so that they know that when they go into a fire, that's the only thing that they have to worry about: the safety of others' property and their own safety and not worry about lawsuits and appearing before judges and lawyers in the future. That's the last thing they should be doing. They're trained to do much more important things than that.

I will take my seat at this point, Mr. Speaker, and ask all members to support this bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: Did I hear the hon. member say that he was moving a motion to adjourn?

Mr. Lukaszuk: That is correct, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 50 Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to move second reading of Bill 50, the Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, on behalf of the Minister of Energy.

The amendments in Bill 50 propose that the government of Alberta take responsibility for approving a need for critical transmission infrastructure projects to meet the electricity needs of Albertans. We will do that based on the expertise of our province's Electric System Operator, a nonprofit body with the responsibility of ensuring that Alberta's electricity system operates in the public interest of all Albertans.

At the same time the government will ensure that the regulatory processes continue and that landowner and public concerns are addressed about where transmission facilities are located. When it comes to transmission sitings, landowner issues will be heard. These folks must have a say in the process. That's part of the legislation we debated here previously. The impacts of these new transmissions will be mitigated to the extent possible. Landowners will receive fair compensation. That's an issue that we've heard here in the past few days, and it's one that will continue to be addressed by the Alberta Utilities Commission. The way these matters are addressed will not change. In fact, these issues aren't even part of this legislation. That's because those decisions on the siting of critical transmission infrastructure projects have been made.

We know these lines are needed, but the actual routing has not been determined. That remains part of the Alberta Utilities Commission's regulatory process, just as it is today. With Bill 50 we are simply moving approval of need from the Alberta Utilities Commission to the government of Alberta. From a public policy perspective this just makes good sense. The technical input and analysis are done, and the provincial government, elected by the people of Alberta, will now be responsible for determining when and which lines are needed.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. minister introduced a document called the provincial energy strategy last fall. Some thought it had some good ideas, some nice pictures and so on. There were some folks across the way who said there was a lot of meat to the document. Well, that document specifically indicates that the government of Alberta will take responsibility for a comprehensive plan to upgrade our transmission system in Alberta, and that's exactly what Bill 50 does.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, there have been no new major power lines built in Alberta since the 1980s. Think about that. Our population has grown by over 1.3 million people since 1986, with nearly 400,000 people coming to our province in the last four years alone. More Albertans means more schools, hospitals, community centres, office buildings, shopping malls and so on, all requiring massive amounts of new electricity.

What else has happened since the 1980s? Mr. Speaker, we've seen tremendous advancements in technology: computers in nearly every home, the advancement of the Internet, multiple TVs in homes, and other conveniences, which all require power to operate. As we look to the future, this demand will only grow.

Well, let's take a step back. Where are we today? Our transmission system has been working at or near its limits for extended periods of time. In recent years you've heard about new peaks in electricity consumption during both cold snaps in the winter and extreme heat in the summer, and that means that more than ever before Albertans are at risk of losing their electricity service. The Minister of Energy believes that's something he simply cannot accept, and that's why the government is moving ahead with Bill 50.

Upgrading the electricity system will be expensive. These projects are worth an estimated $8.1 billion, Mr. Speaker, and yes, the ratepayers of this province will be expected to pay their share of that cost based on the amount of electricity that they use. That means about 80 per cent of the costs will be borne by industrial and commercial businesses operating in our province. Yes, there will also be costs borne by households. Those costs will ramp up over time, but it is estimated that costs will be around $8 a month for an average household, again based on their consumption.

Let's remember a couple of things, Mr. Speaker. First, these costs have always been covered by ratepayers. It was either bury the costs of the electricity like it was in the past, or it will be broken out in bills as it is today. So that's not new. And remember one thing: there's a real cost to consumers of doing nothing at all. It's not free to maintain our entire transmission system as it exists today. Last year the inefficiency of our transmission system resulted in more than $220 million in electrical line loss. That means there was a need for additional electricity to be generated and then, of course, the environmental impacts that come from generating that wasted electricity, power that is lost on the lines in the form of heat. Not only are consumers on the hook for $220 million in lost electricity, but that's also enough power for 350,000 homes a year. Our system operator is successfully managing the demands on the transmission system, and they're getting by; however, the situation we're facing increases the risk of widespread power outages and unreliable service. That risk and the costs will only grow if we don't act now.

Now, some might be thinking that this isn't an issue because the lights come on when they flip the switch. The system is working right now, isn't it? We've seen what system failure can mean in the United States and eastern Canada, and to a much lesser extent we've seen what it can mean here. Consider July 24, 2006. That morning a transmission line tripped out, and as a result, two generators were isolated from the system. Then the Alberta-B.C. tie-line tripped due to a lightning strike, resulting in customer outages in Calgary, including their C-Train. Or how about May 15, 2007? A farmer accidentally drove his tractor into one of the 24-kilovolt lines near Red Deer which runs between Calgary and Edmonton.

Some might suggest that these issues are minor inconveniences; however, as we look to the future, the potential for greater failure exists. Albertans are not willing to accept anything less than a reliable source of power. They expect the lights to come on when they flip the switch. I would suggest it's the responsibility of this Assembly to ensure that that happens.

We know the risks, so what are the benefits, Mr. Speaker? If we are going to maintain our lifestyle and our province's economic growth, Albertans require an adequate, reliable source of competitively priced electricity. They expect it, and they depend on it. Alberta needs more generating capacity, but as they say in the electricity business, transmission must precede generation. In other words, private investors, who pay for all the new generation in Alberta, are the ones who must make decisions on when to build new electricity generation. Why would those investors pay for new generation if they have no way to ship their product to Albertans? Further, if we are to encourage the responsible development of our resources, advanced clean-coal technology and coal gasification for example, we need the transmission capacity in place to deliver this product into the marketplace.

Coal in Alberta is cheap, and it's relatively easy to get, and there's a lot of it. There's an economic advantage to us to have it developed and for us to use it to generate power, particularly since Alberta has limited capacity for hydro power. Since the federal government is moving ahead with a yet unspecified plan to phase out traditional coal-fired generation, advanced coal technology is a must for Alberta.

That leads me to another important issue, the price of power in Alberta. There has been much made about Alberta's electricity prices under our restructured electricity market. The one way to help drive electricity prices downward in Alberta is through increased competition in the market, and that means unlocking all potential sources of electricity throughout the province to meet the needs of all Albertans.

I know there have been some that suggest we should simply build generation close to where the electricity is being consumed. There could be some potential for that in the future, but at this point in time that just doesn't reflect the reality of Alberta's electricity system. We operate on a single grid that serves all Albertans. The minister is not interested in creating two or more islands in the province to serve the needs of certain cities or regions. His job is to serve all Albertans, and properly fortified transmission systems will do just that.

There are proposals to bring on new generation of all types, from wind in the south, advanced coal in the centre part of the province, cogeneration in the north, and so on. These projects, including renewable energy projects, are simply waiting for new transmission line capacity to meet the electricity demands of Albertans. We know we need transmission. It's time to act, and it's a good time to act.

As we've been discussing throughout this session, the global economic slowdown is affecting Albertans. While these projects are costly, we've seen a recent decline in the price of steel and other products, and Alberta has the labour force available and able to take on projects of this size. It just makes good sense to move now on so many levels.

I realize it's June, Mr. Speaker, and folks might be wondering: why is the minister bringing forward new legislation now? Well, the simple answer to that is that it's important to have this bill before the Legislature before the Assembly rises so that all members will have their summer to discuss the important issue with their constituents. Awareness of these issues is, first, an important step for Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to adjourn second reading debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Private Bills Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill Pr. 1

Beverly Anne Cormier Adoption Termination Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments or questions with regard to this bill? The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the question be put.

The Deputy Chair: Any other comments or questions?

[The clauses of Bill Pr. 1 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

Bill Pr. 3

Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments or questions with regard to this bill? The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm going to make a motion with respect to an amendment, so at this point if we were to distribute copies of that amendment, I'll proceed.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, we will pause for a moment while the amendment is passed out.

Mr. Dallas: Okay.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, you may proceed.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that Bill Pr. 3, Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act, be amended as follows: the preamble is amended in the third recital by striking out "and liabilities."

The Deputy Chair: Any comments or questions on the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Oui, monsieur. Je suis certain que Les Filles de la Sagesse apprécient beaucoup cet amendement. Alors, nous allons le supporter.
Merci.

The Deputy Chair: Are there any other comments or questions on the amendment?

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Deputy Chair: We are now speaking to the bill.

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill Pr. 3 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee rise and report Bill Pr. 1 and Bill Pr. 3.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bill: Bill Pr. 1. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill Pr. 3. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: All those members who concur in the report, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed, please say no. So ordered.

 Third Reading

Bill 36
Alberta Land Stewardship Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move third reading of Bill 36, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act.

Bill 36 provides a legal foundation to the land-use framework to manage our land and natural resources for now and for decades to come. We have consulted widely on Bill 36 and listened to criticisms and concerns from Albertans, from stakeholders, and even the opposition parties, and made amendments that have improved the Alberta Land Stewardship Act. We've made amendments that ensure that the Métis Settlements General Council continues to make decisions consistent with the Metis Settlements Act. They also ensure that the Métis Settlements Appeal Tribunal continues to hear matters related to land compensation on Métis settlements. Amendments to the bill have strengthened accountability and reporting on regional plans by appointing a committee every five years to evaluate whether regional plans are meeting the purposes of this act and to report publicly on their findings.

Concerns were raised over executive power with respect to statutory consents. Existing statutory rights to compensation, such as they are, are not changed by Bill 36. However, if cabinet decisions and a regional plan require or cancel approval for a disposition, we have put a new process in that ensures fairness for the holders of these dispositions, requiring that reasonable notice to the holder be given and that the holder of the disposition be given the opportunity to propose an alternative means of achieving the objective. This amendment provides new procedural protections for disposition holders that did not exist before.

One opposition amendment actually narrows the remedial powers of the courts. I was encouraged to see, perhaps, that the opposition is learning that unfettered judicial discretion is even more to be feared than unfettered political discretion since at least cabinet is accountable for its decisions.

There were other concerns raised about accountability, and I'll repeat what we said the other night: decisions about regional plans need to be made by elected representatives and not by the courts.

Mr. MacDonald: Didn't you guys say: after Ron Stevens was gone?

Dr. Morton: We covered that base, too.

There were concerns raised, helpful concerns communicated to us about the continuing role of municipal and local authorities. I want to reconfirm that municipalities are represented and will be represented on regional advisory councils, will be consulted as stakeholders as the regional plans are developed, and will continue to exercise their existing powers within the framework of the regional plans; that is to say that local authorities will continue to make decisions to meet local needs. Municipalities will retain their authority for municipal development plans, area structure plans, land-use bylaws, subdivisions, and development standards.

This legislation also respects the property rights of Albertans. We've introduced a new conservation and stewardship tool, the conservation directive, which may be used to conserve valued landscapes, ecologically sensitive areas, and scenic landscapes if this is expressly identified in a regional plan. But we have ensured that if a directive is used in a regional plan, landowners will be compensated for any loss in market value to the land that may result. This is a first in Canada, and one that Albertans can be proud of.

Mr. Speaker, in 2003 in the water for life initiative the government of Alberta committed itself to a place-based approach to sustainable development, a regional and watershed approach to sustainable development. Now, six years later, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act is the bookend, the logical follow-up to the water for life policy. The Alberta Land Stewardship Act is the most comprehensive land-use policy in Canada and, indeed, in North America.

Bill 36 is a timely response to the growing pressures on our air, land, water, and wildlife in a growing and changing Alberta. In a growing and changing Alberta if we want to keep what we value about life in Alberta, we have to change how we manage that growth. The Alberta Land Stewardship Act represents innovation. I cannot tell you that the Land Stewardship Act is risk free, but no innovation is. To innovate is to risk. I can tell you that Alberta was not built by people who were not willing to take responsible risks.

Our hydrocarbon legacy is a blessing, and our development of this resource has provided generations of Albertans with good jobs and economic opportunity. But there is the challenge to manage this development in a way that doesn't undermine the beauty and ecological health of our great province. The Land Stewardship Act is how we will manage this challenge. It is our opportunity to help define the future of our province so that it will be as good for our children and grandchildren as it has been for our generation. This is what stewardship is all about; this is what the Alberta Land Stewardship Act is about.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a privilege to rise and speak on Bill 36. I've had the opportunity to speak at the other two stages prior to this, so I won't belabour this much longer. I'd first just like to commend the minister on bringing forward a bill that is very necessary and, in fact, timely for the Alberta landscape. We've needed this type of framework put into play for some time.

It's a detailed and comprehensive bill that, hopefully, will lead us to a path of better resource and land management, that can balance our growing population, growing water use, growing economy, all of those things, all with the recognition that we are running out of land, running short of water, and our air is becoming more and more polluted, in some areas anyway. That's what this bill does. It sets a framework for us to try to manage that. It understands that we in Alberta have probably come to a tipping point, where we can no longer just continue to go about doing whatever we want to various plots of land, various streams, various riverbeds, what have you, without some sort of centralized or some sort of regional plans, which are in place here.

I've put these concerns on the record before but might as well do it again. That's what I'm here for. We do see this as being somewhat of a very large concentration of power in Lieutenant Governor in Council, in cabinet, in that decisions regarding the land-use framework happen at the council level, happen behind closed doors, and are not openly reported to the public. Also, we pressed strenuously for some amendments that would allow for some judicial review to this plan.

I think, at least, what I would put forth is that this is a good plan, but – guess what? – politicians can resist anything but temptation. You know, sometimes although we have a good plan, we get into a rough spot later on, and we say: "Well, let's tinker with this or tinker with that. Maybe we'll shove a shopping mall here, and it'll appease things for a temporary time. It'll get people off our back. It may get some donations coming in the door, what have you, and we'll go back to the land-use framework in a couple of months." You know, I realize that's a scenario that has happened from time to time. That's why we pressed for judicial review. I think anyone around this hall would agree that these things have happened in the past, and that's why we've gone to judicial review.

Nevertheless, it is what it is, sir. I appreciate the opportunity to be able to speak on this for the third time. Let's hope that the land-use framework adds to the continued road to Alberta becoming a more sustainable province.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and speak in support of Bill 36, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act, in third reading. Bill 36 is the product of over two years of intense public consultation and is the first legislative step in both the implementation of the land-use framework and the development of regional planning. This act will accomplish three important goals. First, it will provide a means for the government to meet its economic, environmental, and social objectives; second, it will provide a means to plan for the future; and finally, it will ensure sustainable land development while taking into account the cumulative effects of human development.

Through the extensive consultation process and also during the last election campaign Albertans have stressed the need for long-term, effective planning at the regional level. To this end, both the land-use framework and Bill 36 will implement a regional planning model, allowing for effective implementation of provincial policies. Specifically, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act will eliminate exemptions that existed in previous planning legislation that related to resource infrastructure and pipeline transmission systems. In the past these exemptions created undue complications that made effective land-use planning more difficult. In essence, Mr. Speaker, Bill 36 will create the legislative framework needed to ensure that the unique considerations of regional planning do not conflict with the effectiveness of provincial policies.

As my hon. colleague for Airdrie-Chestermere has stated, the new regional planning does not mean creating a heavy-handed, centralized bureaucracy in Edmonton. Rather, it means looking ahead, weighing options, anticipating the future, and attempting to forecast the cumulative effects of development. That, I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, is what planning is all about. This, in turn, means accumulating a lot of land-use data and making intelligent decisions based on that data. The end result will be the creation of an effective planning and zoning process.

There's no question in my mind that long-term land-use planning and zoning is in the greater public interest as can be seen in the case of projects like the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads. A further example of regional planning can be found in both the capital region plan and the Calgary regional partnership. While this legislation clearly supports these long-term development projects, it also remains committed to addressing the cumulative effects of development. After all, the impact of a public project on land can extend for many years and can have many unplanned consequences. Bill 36 recognizes this potential and creates legislation that addresses not only planning issues but long-term developmental impacts as well.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona stated earlier in the debate that the land-use framework could truly be one of the most important government initiatives ever introduced and could put Alberta quite high up in terms of responsible land-use policy with respect to other jurisdictions. I agree that the land-use framework is one of the most important government initiatives and will ensure that Alberta leads North America and probably the world in land-use planning. We will now have a hierarchy of land-use plans, leading with the provincial plan, the land-use framework, down through regional, municipal, area structure plans, and the more prescriptive land-use bylaws.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has over the years been renowned for having the best land-use planning legislation in North America and even the world. We in Alberta have a long history of land-use planning going back, I believe, to the first planning legislation that was introduced in, I think, 1913. The former Planning Act, which was folded into the Municipal Government Act in the late 1990s, was and continues to be very effective planning legislation at the municipal level. Unfortunately, the well-developed system of regional planning was withdrawn in 1995. This created a number of regional disagreements which this legislation will cure. We need to get back to a system of regional co-operation and collaboration on the land-use front for the greater public interest. Mr. Speaker, Bill 36 will continue this tradition and ensure our continued leadership in the realm of effective land-use planning.

Bill 36 is a groundbreaking piece of legislation and has earned my full support. With that, I will conclude my comments and urge all members to join me in support of Bill 36. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the fact that the hon. mover of Bill 36, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act, noted even the support of the Official Opposition. Not to belabour the point, but even is what Bill 36 is all about. "Even" suggests balance, a balanced approach between the environment and the economy. I appreciate the clarification that the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development explained within the amendments, that it was strictly alphabetical order that economy preceded environment, but we know that both are of equal significance.

Reference was made to the water for life strategy 2003 and Lorne Taylor's initiatives. The whole point of Bill 36 is correctly built on the foundation of Alberta's seven watersheds, and water protection needs to be at the heart of all decisions that we make. It is disconcerting to me that while we're moving ahead with greater concerns over cumulative effects, a reduction in water testing and environmental stewardship is taking place because, for whatever reason, they are not considered sufficiently economically valuable to receive funding within the Department of Environment. I am also concerned about potential cutbacks to the front-line representatives of Sustainable Resource Development.

What I would like to do is very quickly acknowledge some key water stewards in this province. I would like to acknowledge the Leader of the Official Opposition, the MLA for Calgary-Mountain View, who pushed this government to pretesting prior to drilling and having that testing involve testing of isotopes so that we had an understanding of the predisposition of the water prior to the drilling for oil and gas. That's absolutely essential.

I want to thank Dr. Brad Stelfox, who is Alberta's absolute expert on cumulative effects – Dr. Stelfox's projections have been recognized by all Albertans, government members included – for his ability to lay out what could be without pushing what should be and leaving that up to the people of Alberta to decide. I would like to also recognize the work of Dr. David Schindler, who for years has been a leading advocate on water conservation and protection. Last but not least, I would like to thank a young man by the name of Dan Woynilowicz of the Pembina Institute, who has written numerous papers and provided numerous talks and PowerPoint presentations on the importance of protecting water, our number one Alberta resource.

Thank you very much for allowing me to participate, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, thank you. On the bill, Mr. Speaker. It's with interest that I rise to participate in the debate on Bill 36 this afternoon. Certainly, I don't share the enthusiasm that other hon. members have regarding this legislation. To be truthful, I have many reservations about this bill. I have read it, put it away and then picked it up again and reread what I had read, and I'm still, unfortunately, not impressed, with all due respect to hon. members.

I hear of the public consultation process that occurred. It was two years in length. I heard the hon. Member for St. Albert talk about that. I certainly read, like many others, the comments from the mayor of Edmonton over the weekend in the minister of health's favourite newspaper, the Edmonton Journal. The mayor of Edmonton was outraged at the lack of consultation regarding the private member's bill which passed through the Assembly.

Now we have under this bill amendments to the Municipal Government Act, which is going to override local governments. Also, if the provincial government is not satisfied that the orders of the government or the minister in question are being adhered to, I'm looking at a section here that would allow the provincial government to withhold money: "withholding money otherwise payable by the Government to the municipal authority or regional services commission pending compliance with an order of the Minister." That's a lot of power. That's, in my opinion, very, very disrespectful to local levels of government, whether it be a city or a regional municipality. I don't understand why that is necessary if we are to have compliance with a regional plan.

Now, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview initiated the whole public debate around land management and plans to go into the future for land and our water. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview certainly would not consider this amendment to the Municipal Government Act necessary. In fact, the hon. member presented a plan, and there was nothing like that in the ideas and initiatives that were presented by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

So I take strong exception to this government, a government that has been in power for the best part of four decades, again taking this authority to suspend the authority of a council to make bylaws in respect to any matter. It's quite simple: you are overriding local government, and if you feel that a government is not abiding by your wishes, well, then you're going to withhold money. I fail to understand why we would need to do this. If in the consultations that were made the governments that you consulted with agreed to this – I see where the AUMA has endorsed this bill, but I don't know if they endorsed that particular amendment.

Also, there is a section in here that will force urban unions if necessary. I know the Premier worked very hard in getting groups together from around metro Edmonton so that they could work together in a more effective and efficient manner. There wasn't any need for Bill 36 at that time. The Premier, to his credit, got some good work done. But this bill is unbelievable.

Also, in the time that I have, judicial oversight. I think we need judicial oversight. There are three legs to the democratic stool. There's the executive branch, there is the judicial branch, and of course there's the legislative branch. I can see why the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development has his issues around judicial oversight. The judiciary, Mr. Speaker, do not make the laws; the laws are made here in the Legislative Assembly. They simply enforce them if necessary, if a matter comes before them. There are three sections of this bill that allow complete override by the minister or by the cabinet. I just don't understand why we would need to have that: no review by the court.

This also applies to a decision of an appeals body. I'm going to read directly from this because I think this is draconian, Mr. Speaker. I'm looking at section 74(3):

On receiving the report of the appeal body, the Minister may, by order, confirm, reverse or vary the decision appealed and make any decision that the person whose decision was appealed could have made, and make any further order that the Minister considers necessary for the purpose of carrying out the decision.

I think that is completely unnecessary. Why do we need to have this ultimate authority? Then after this ministerial override of an appeals process, I don't see how we can say that this is fair to landowners or fair to Albertans. There's no review by the court. There's absolutely no review by the court, and there are two other sections in this bill where there is direct reference made to no review by the court.

Now, I don't think, whenever this bill was drafted by the minister, that the hon. minister wanted people to go into this in detail. If we look at part 5, the transitional provisions, related amendments, and coming into force of this legislation, sections 68 to 94 are conveniently listed as related amendments. There are significant amendments in there, Mr. Speaker, that I think this Assembly has failed to take notice of. There are significant amendments to the Public Lands Act, among other pieces of legislation, that I don't think we have dealt with effectively in the time we've had to debate this bill.

I'm amazed. I know we need to have a land-use law. I know that is necessary, but what I do not feel is necessary is the absolute power that we are providing to the minister and to cabinet. I think that whenever landowners eventually become more aware of this bill as it's implemented, they're going to have a lot of questions, like I do.

I know that earlier in this session we had a long and lengthy discussion on Bill 19, but one of the last amendments, I think the very last amendment, is an amendment to Bill 19. That's section 3. I think 3(1), to be precise. Of course, we're striking out the notwithstanding clause and substituting: "Subject to any applicable [Alberta Land Stewardship Act] regional plan and notwithstanding." "Notwithstanding" goes back in there. We all know what that means. I'm really, really disappointed. I was told before, whenever we were debating Bill 19, that there was another shoe to drop with this, and this is it, this amendment, the very last amendment in Bill 36. Everything is connected here. Unfortunately, the connections do not bode well for the landowners of this province because I think they're going to be bulldogged here. The province has got this benevolent attitude that whatever they decide is right. I'm sorry. I cannot accept this bill in this form.

In conclusion, I want to say that we need a land-use framework, but this bill, for myself, just doesn't meet the test. I'm sorry. I cannot accept this bill. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to third reading of Bill 36, the Alberta Land Stewardship Act. I think it's an interesting bill, and there are different aspects of it that are worthy of comment. I think the first one is the approach that's been taken in general, the overall approach to the issues. They flow from the choice of the ministry to head this up. I was somewhat surprised when Sustainable Resource Development was selected as the lead ministry in developing this plan. Normally I would have thought it would have been Municipal Affairs. I think you would get a different approach depending on which ministry was taking the lead on this particular bill.

A lot of the concepts in the bill I think flow from the fact that it's Sustainable Resource Development that is heading it up. For example, the division of the province into regions based on their watersheds wouldn't occur to the average Municipal Affairs minister as the way to develop. I'm not saying that it's a wrong thing at all, just that it seems to come from that. There is some good thought put into different provisions that allow for the conservation of land and resources in natural areas. It outlines four in particular. In that respect I think it's interesting, and there are some positive things that have come out of it.

The real question, I think, that bedevils the leaders at the municipal and provincial levels, which is the second thing I wanted to mention, Mr. Speaker, is the whole question of intermunicipal planning. Alberta used to have a system of regional planning councils. I was serving on the executive of the Edmonton regional planning council at the time the then Minister of Municipal Affairs, Dr. West, directed all of the regional planning commissions to wrap up their affairs.

Now, there were some disadvantages to the whole approach. Basically, in the Edmonton region, the one that I'm familiar with, Edmonton appointed I believe it was nine members of the regional planning commission, and then there was individual representation from other towns and rural municipalities within the boundaries surrounding Edmonton. So there was, I think, a pretty good balance in terms of representation between the city itself and the regional area, and we worked through a lot of areas.

The principles there, though, were important because it gave focus to a balance or appropriate roles for rural municipalities and urban municipalities. In other words, it had a major objective of preserving agricultural land and preventing urban sprawl although in those days that wasn't really a popular term to call it. Effectively, it operated in a way that acted as a check on urban sprawl.

Once it was wrapped up and the new approach was in bilateral plans, that had to be negotiated bilaterally between adjacent municipalities, that broke down, and we saw a great deal more urban sprawl taking place. It's actually culminated in the last few years in a situation where municipal counties are consciously attempting to ring municipalities on their borders with urban-style development. They do that for a very clear reason, Mr. Speaker, and that is to ensure that as development occurs, the tax base occurs in their jurisdiction and not in the urban municipality.

I've had complaints about this when I've met with mayors right around the province, not just from larger centres but some smaller towns as well. That's been a growing concern, and I think it's very, very dangerous. For example, a city like Edmonton provides many of the services for all of northern Alberta in terms of health care, to some degree in education, certainly in social services, provides many of the cultural and recreational opportunities for the region, and deals with policing costs and health costs, at least until recently with ambulances.

To deprive the central municipality of tax revenue allows, I think, some suburban municipalities to have increased tax revenue but not some of the responsibilities, so there has to be a balance there. Our view is that urban styles of development belong in urban municipalities, and rural development, which can include heavy industry, by the way, should be occurring in rural municipalities. We need to make a clear distinction between them.

Now, it's possible that this act can do that, but it does that, I think, in a way that troubles me, and that brings me to the third thing that I really wanted to talk about, which is the centralization of power. The decisions that are being made in this act reside ultimately in the hands of the cabinet. We've established the principle of the provincial government as Big Brother, sorting out potential disputes in plans and knocking recalcitrant municipal children into line. It's this aspect, I think, that concerns me the most, Mr. Speaker, and makes me wonder a little bit why some of the municipal organizations haven't raised more of a fuss about this.

I know that in the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, when I chaired the governance task force, we were very clear that municipal governments were an equal order of government to provincial and federal governments, and we were also clear that they should not be subject to a high degree of control by provincial governments. In fact, we objected strongly to the whole doctrine that municipalities should be the child of the province, but it seems to me that this principle is very strongly incorporated into this piece of legislation.

I also think, Mr. Speaker, that this is yet another example of the government's own trend towards centralizing power in the political leadership of the province. Specifically, I'm talking about the cabinet. There are so many decisions that have previously been made by other organizations in the province that are now being made at the cabinet level, even with respect to, you know, government grants to community organizations; for example, the Wild Rose issue that we have dealt with. There is more and more centralization of decision-making and the exclusion of bodies that are less partisan, less political, that aren't part of the cabinet or the government. They're falling like tenpins, in my view, in terms of any decisions that might be of great significance, including financial decisions and some of the decisions around municipal planning.

I know the hon. minister mentioned just a few minutes ago that he hoped the opposition was beginning to see that political power or power vested in the political side was superior to power vested in the courts because the government, at least, was accountable. I rather prefer an approach where there's some distribution of power so that there are checks and balances. I like the concept of having some checks on power, whether it's judicial power or political power. I think that when you centralize it all in one or the other, you're not really counterbalancing perceived overreaching by the courts. You're not substituting it with something that really deals with that whole question.

What you really are doing is just transferring the problem into another sphere or into another jurisdiction. I think that the real answer is not to take power away from the courts and give it to the government. The real answer is to distribute the power more evenly and allow more participation and greater participation at the community level in the making of decisions. I don't think this bill does that in any way.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to, I guess, wrap up by saying that while I think there are some innovative and positive things here and that I don't think putting this bill under the leadership of Sustainable Resource Development was a mistake in any way and has produced some, I think, real benefits, some real positives in the bill, I don't think that the solution to intermunicipal planning or the overcentralization of power in the hands of the cabinet are really features of the bill that can allow me to support it. I think that we need a bill that more clearly addresses some of the principles, some of the urban principles that we need to see, and concentration of population and sound urban planning.

A real direction to oppose urban sprawl should be set out. I just want to indicate in passing as well on that point that the government seems to be very, very committed to the whole concept of ring roads, ring roads, ring roads everywhere. One of the things that produces urban sprawl, that puts in place infrastructure for urban sprawl more than any single investment government can make is ring roads. You can see this in American cities. You look at Minneapolis; you look at many other cities. The ring roads around major cities allow the creation of satellite communities for miles and miles and miles around. If you look further at some of the cities and the impact of that on urban cores, it's decay. It's decay because tax money, tax base flows out to the surrounding municipalities, and everybody that can afford it gets out of town, and they live in these municipalities. The inner core still has all of the responsibilities for the region in many, many areas and can't afford those commitments, so blight and urban decay are the result, and that's not what I want to see.

I think that if some of those principles were laid out in this bill, I could support it, but on balance it doesn't address the emerging issues of a modern, rapidly growing and rapidly urbanizing province, and for that reason I cannot support it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Does the hon. minister wish to close?

Dr. Morton: I call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 36 read a third time]

Bill 27

Alberta Research and Innovation Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I take pleasure in moving Bill 27, the Alberta Research and Innovation Act, for third reading.

The act provides for a considerable amount of restructuring with respect to the research and innovation agenda for the province. It preserves, in my view, some of the good work that has been done in this province over the last 25 to 30 years in terms of investment in research. It recognizes that innovation and unleashing innovation is the future of the province and that we need to have a very strong approach to it and provides a real structure to move us forward into the next era of innovation and development in a knowledge-based economy.

I'd ask the House to join me in supporting and voting for Bill 27 in third reading.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. Certainly, Bill 27 has caught the attention of many hon. members. In conclusion, in debate in third reading, even though I'm not supportive of this enterprise, I would like to again put on the public record my appreciation for the time of the minister and his staff in providing the Official Opposition with their view of this legislation.

Much has been said about this bill during the course of debate. Certainly, there have been amendments presented by this side of the House. There have been amendments, in particular, put forward by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, who, of course, has the University of Alberta within his constituency. Postsecondary education has been an issue that the hon. member has been very vocal on, and he certainly has an opinion on what would make for a very strong postsecondary institution, including, of course, the University of Alberta.

There have been amendments put forward, as I said, to improve this legislation. Certainly, the government did look at one and consider it and accept it, but there are still outstanding issues around this bill, particularly whenever we look at what will be done here when we consolidate or we bring together through the Alberta Research and Innovation Act the Alberta Agricultural Research Institute, the Energy Research Institute, the Forestry Research Institute, the Alberta Information and Communications Technology Institute, the Life Sciences Institute, parts of iCORE transferred from Alberta Advanced Education and Technology, the endowment funds for medical research, and the foundation for science and engineering research. So we're looking at a pool that will be in excess of $2.5 billion when all is said and done.

I can understand where the department is coming from. I could appreciate what the minister was talking about whenever he was visioning this part of the world as a centre of excellence for research and development, and I can understand that. But I'm not so certain that we have the ability to govern this new enterprise. I'm looking at, again, some of the outstanding issues that we have in particular on the Ministry of Advanced Education and Technology from the Auditor General. Whether it's the last report or going back two to three years, the Auditor General has put up some flags. We talked about this in second reading, and I'm just not convinced. It's like increasing the allowance of your teenagers: more money, more scope. The more money they have, the faster they can get around town.

I would urge caution here. I know the minister has put on the record his view, his attitude toward this and why we need this, but I'm not convinced at this time that we do. I'm not convinced that we have the ability to govern this. More and more this government has the habit – it's not a disturbing habit, but it's a habit – of more and more activities occurring outside the potential view of the Legislative Assembly. This is another example of that.

Sure, we're going to have experts, and they're going to be from all different fields and professions, and they're going to have the best interests of the act at heart. I have no doubt about that. But the $2.5 billion, Mr. Speaker, is money that belongs not to the government, not to the minister, not to the research community. It's taxpayers' money.

In conclusion, I would like to say that I don't see the public interest, the taxpayers' interest here. I hope I'm proven wrong. I hope, if this bill becomes law, that everything works out. I hope what the minister told me in the briefing comes true. But I'm a little skeptical. One only has to look at some of the examples that were brought up by the Auditor General to validate the skepticism that I have expressed.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'll be extremely brief. I am extremely proud to be the representative of the University of Calgary, which is one of the top research institutions in Canada, never mind the province of Alberta. One of the most effective areas or departments in which this research is undertaken is in the ISEEE, which is the Institute for Sustainable Energy, Environment and Economy, and at times "experiential learning" is substituted for "economy."

It's absolutely important, however, when we're doing research, that that research not be strictly focused on industrial aspects. There is no doubt that we need to move beyond our dependency on nonrenewable resources, but if the types of research are restricted, then the outcomes are also limited.

I previously referred to Aldous Huxley's Brave New World, where research determined the nature of the society that was being built. I'm very concerned, for example, that while I support tremendously innovation and technology and advancements in medicine and while I support in those areas, particularly, the government's sponsorship through medical trust funds of a program that's jointly operated by the University of Calgary and the Foothills hospital that allows students from all over the province to conduct their own research in a lab setting with mentorship from a number of well-known and capable research experts, as I say, cross-connected with the University of Calgary and the Calgary Foothills hospital – this is wonderful – I've also recounted the terrific advancements in nanotechnology. I've referred previously to the Alastair Ross research centre and Smart Technologies, that has recently opened up.

What I believe we are lacking and where we need to expand our research is research into the humanities, research into areas of sociology, research into psychology, research into the important role, as the button we were given today indicates, of the arts and culture. I believe that these areas, if we're going to be a rounded society, require research dollars as well. It shouldn't be just a matter of how quickly and safely we can get things out of the ground, but we should look at our human potential and the importance of those discussions. I truly believe that had more thought been given to sociological effects and aspects, the government might have reconsidered how quickly Bill 44 was put through, and they might reconsider the effect it's going to have on education in this province and, as we put forward in an amendment, the potentially chilling effect. The point I am making is that while I support the notion, obviously, of research and innovation, I want to see the scope expanded to go beyond just the areas of medicine and science and include areas such as humanities.

We're a complex group; there's no doubt about it. Recognizing and studying that complexity so that we can be more tolerant and understanding of a variety of viewpoints and having the opportunity to discuss those viewpoints is extremely important. What I see in one sense is an exclusion of open-ended discussion in Bill 44, yet Bill 27 is talking about reaching out. So I say: let's extend our reach.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to debate.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffer.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to speak to Bill 27. As I had an opportunity to speak earlier and listen to many other people, I too shall be relatively brief. One of the continuing themes that we've seen come up, at least in my short time in the Legislature – and I believe this has been a relatively new habit of the government – is to continually put power into the cabinet, the Lieutenant Governor in Council. Needless to say, if memory serves, this is another one of those bills that does it.

What you have here is a tremendous amount of money being put towards what looks like a very good cause. Well, what is a better cause than research and innovation? Everyone in Alberta knows that we have to learn to diversify our economy to try and move to a knowledge-based economy, whatever that may look like. We have to get off sort of the fossil fuel treadmill, even to a certain extent our production of beef in this province. If you look at it taking a thousand litres of water to produce one pound of beef, well, you know, it doesn't take a long time to figure out that that might not be the most sustainable area of things to be involved in.

Anyway, when you look, then, at this fund being essentially controlled from the Premier's office and the cabinet, that's an awful lot of money that can get set in picking a direction of where you want research to go or in looking for a particular solution to Alberta's problems: "Alberta's future is in carbon capture and storage, so we're going to put all this money into here," or "Alberta's future is in, say, the raising of Holsteins, and we're going to go one hundred per cent in favour of creating the best Holstein cow available."

Mr. Chase: Hopefully, it's not that black and white.

Mr. Hehr: Hopefully, it's not that black and white, yes.

Anyway, I'm just saying that if we allow that to occur, it sort of defeats the purpose of the winners coming out of the laboratory, the real competitiveness that can happen in a lab, and the real, I guess, advances that can occur there from the ground up and not from the top down. That's where you see the real winners in this type of innovation, and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview put forward many amendments that I believe would have gone a long way to spurring that creative process from the ground up, where the ideas and the friction that are created in competition in the labs would rise to the top.

5:30

Nevertheless, it appears that this government again has preferred a top-down approach to how this is going to go. Let's just hope that it works out. I think this bill is fraught with peril, that we may be looking back some 10 years from now and saying: where the heck did the money go? But let's hope not. Let's always look at the glass half full, or let's look at the sunny side of life as the session is almost over.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It was an opportunity to speak and get my points on the record.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Seeing none, the hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to speak to this. This is an extension of the concern that I talked about and other members have talked about on the continuing centralization of decision-making in a political way. It's very, very problematic when it comes to academic research, so I think that the framework laid out in this bill is cause for concern for a number of reasons.

First of all, there's a real lack of detail about the new framework, how it will affect researchers and their funding. We've got the legislative skeleton here in front of us, Mr. Speaker, but we don't really know how it's going to operate. We don't know what kind of day-to-day functions it will serve and what the transition to the new framework will look like. We don't have details about the public reporting requirements of these entities that are being created, so we don't know how accountable they'll be to the people of Alberta. The only public report that the bill guarantees is an annual report from the minister of finance that summarizes the activities of the endowment funds during the previous fiscal year.

We have been in touch with a number of researchers who are funded through the existing government institutions, and they seem to be quite worried by how little they know about the changes that are going to be made and how they will be affected by them. I think this is especially problematic at a time when the global economic situation has made finances so uncertain. For example, the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research just announced that it will only be awarding $39 million in research money this year. They gave out $59 million in both of the years 2007 and 2008. The reason that they're giving out less is because the endowment fund lost a considerable amount of value.

Now, I think I'm just going to make an aside here, Mr. Speaker, to say that the overdependence on endowment funds in education is potentially a real problem, and the recent economic circumstances have demonstrated the limitations of that approach. That doesn't mean that we should throw out endowments altogether, but let's be clear. When we save lots of cash and invest it in the stock market, we are taking significant risks, and it won't always be there when we need it. It's a bad time, I think, to be compounding financial uncertainty and insecurity with organizational uncertainty and insecurity.

Mr. Speaker, there is some evidence in Bill 27 that the government is trying to get more control over research money, and this is a big concern. AHFMR and the AHFMR endowment fund are currently under the AHFMR Act – I think you should use just an acronym or something for some of these things, just one word like “SMART” so that it's easier to say, but that's just me – and it says that:

The Minister of Finance must, at the request of the Foundation made on reasonable notice, pay from the Endowment Fund to the Foundation money that, in the opinion of the trustees, is required by the Foundation for the furtherance of its objects.

There's a similar clause in the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Science and Engineering Research Act with regard to that foundation. However, the section in Bill 27 regarding endowment funds says:

The Minister of Finance and Enterprise must, at the request of the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology made on reasonable notice, pay from the specified endowment Fund money that, in the opinion of the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology, is required to carry out the purposes of the Fund, which include the funding of the research and innovation corporations.

So any removal of the funds from the endowment fund now has to come through the minister.

The ministry has also been talking about aligning research with government priorities through this new framework. This is precisely the problem, Mr. Speaker. You do not want to have the government directing research so that it aligns with the immediate political priorities of the government. That will undermine the research effort in this province and will create no end of problems. We will essentially have a research program in this province that will not produce the long-term results that we wish. Putting politicians in charge I think is very much wrong.

Mr. Hehr: Fraught with danger.

Mr. Mason: It's fraught with danger, and I think that we should resist the temptation.

I think this frightens researchers because more government intervention basically means less opportunity to get innovative, leading-edge research funded. If you're not working on what the government is interested in, then you're out of luck. This could drive some of our top researchers out of Alberta if open calls for submissions are replaced with calls for submissions in specific research areas. It also represents an opportunity for government to favour the areas of research their friends are involved in. I hate to say that I think the government is capable of doing that, but I do.

The ministry says that the conversation about funding priorities is a two-way conversation between the government and the universities, but the bill only really accounts for the priorities of the government being primary. Also, the alignment of the new research entities would align departments according to the ministry, and this is one of the motivations for structuring research entities in this way. The addition of a cross-government portfolio advisory committee which has the relevant ministers on it indicates that the ministry's priorities for research are going to have a much bigger influence on what gets funded through the research entities.

Also, Mr. Speaker, in the current legislation specific powers and purposes for various research entities are outlined. However, Bill 27 only says that the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations about the capacities and powers of the corporations, so it's unclear whether the new corporations will have the same abilities as current entities and whether the government will be taking more control over research operation. Once again, there's a lack of transparency about how these entities will actually operate. Thus, it's unclear how the public will be benefiting from the results of these research corporations' initiatives.

Mr. Speaker, I think that AHFMR – I'm just going to call it that – has been an extremely successful force for medical research in Alberta and has put Alberta medical research on the map internationally. Changing the way government sponsors medical research in Alberta is a risky move because the government is trying to fix something that isn't really broken. Where have we seen this movie before, hon. members? We risk losing some of our top researchers due to the uncertainty that this transition is causing as well as the threat of more government interference in the distribution of research funding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to just indicate that there are concerns about loss of academic freedom. There are implications for being able to retain people that have been recruited. I've mentioned government interference in research priorities.

I think, Mr. Speaker, there's a concern about the immediate status of researchers funded through current programs and their future funding that simply needs to be addressed by the government. There's a great uncertainty in the research community over this bill and the future directions of the government and the decisions that will flow from the passage of this piece of legislation. I think the principles of academic freedom have stood the test of time against all sorts of governments far, far more tyrannical than this one. I want to be positive about this and suggest to hon. members that this is not the most tyrannical government that's ever tried to interfere with research funding. But, frankly, I think we could do better, and this act is part of a worrisome trend. It's interesting that the two bills, the last one that we just spoke about, about land use, and this one, have some common features, and that is cause for considerable concern.

That being said, I want to indicate with great regret to my hon. colleagues that I will be unable to support Bill 27 at third reading.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Government House Leader on behalf of the hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology to close debate?

Mr. Hancock: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 27 read a third time]

Bill 45
Electoral Boundaries Commission
Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to rise this afternoon to move third reading of the Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act, 2009.

I believe that this legislation is important because it provides for the way forward for our province. It ensures that we have the opportunity to make sure that Albertans are well represented as we continue to have new people come to our province. I think it's a very good balance between the representation that we need to have in our government and in this House with respect to urban and rural MLAs.

I would urge all members to support this bill. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I listened with intent. Again, I enjoy the sentiment of what my hon. friend on the other side just said, yet I don't think I can support this bill either. The simple fact of the matter is that at this time – and I think we all know this as I've tried to train you guys; get ready for this – Alberta needs another four MLAs like . . .

Mr. MacDonald: A hole in the head.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Mason: Unless they're New Democrats. Then it's okay.

Mr. Hehr: Yes.

Needless to say – I've put this on the record before – it costs approximately $10 million for four more members to sit here for four years. I think that at this time in the Legislature we can roll up our sleeves, pull ourselves up by our bootstraps, a good conservative mentality, rise to the top, and lead by example. On that front I'd like to bring some fiscal sanity back to the House, urge all members to vote against this unnecessary expenditure, and recognize that with cellphones, computers, technology, what have you, we can do a good job representing the citizens of Alberta and do not need another four members at this time.

I urge all members to send this bill back. Let's send it to the drawing board, and let's let the electoral redrawing committee do this with only 83 members in this House, not 87. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, at this time I'd like to move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour and in light of the fact that we've had some late evenings, including last night, I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:46 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon and welcome.

Let us pray. Let us keep ever mindful of the special and unique opportunity we have to work for our constituents and our province, and in that work let us find strength and wisdom. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly the ambassador of the People's Republic of China, His Excellency Lan Lijun. Accompanying the ambassador today are Mr. Jiang Shan, minister-counsellor, embassy of the People's Republic of China; Mr. Tian Yuzhen, second secretary, embassy of the People's Republic of China; and Mr. Wu Xinjian, the consul general in Calgary. This is the ambassador's first official visit to Alberta. I had the pleasure of hosting a lunch for him earlier today.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta and China have a rich history of co-operation, including a twinning relationship between Alberta and the province of Heilongjiang that dates back to 1981. Alberta also has international offices in Beijing and Hong Kong, which have helped to strengthen our trade relations, and China is Alberta's second-largest export market. Looking to the future, I believe there is tremendous potential for greater collaboration between Alberta and China.

I would ask His Excellency the ambassador and his delegation to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three bright young Albertans seated in the members' gallery. Their names are Miss Madeleine Gauthier, Mr. Rory Dumelie, and Miss Danielle Bailey-Heelan. Rory, Danielle, and Madeleine are accompanied today by their unsung supporters, their parents: Mr. Patrick and Stephanie Dumelie, Mr. James Heelan, and Mr. Denis Gauthier. This is truly a group of outstanding Albertans whose generosity and caring for this province is unparalleled. I would ask now that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a visiting group of 63 folks from my constituency and the Greentree school from Drumheller made up of students and parents and teachers. It's such a pleasure to introduce these wonderful young people. I had an opportunity to have my picture taken with them and had them up to the office. They truly, truly are a bright bunch of kids that I know are going to make us proud. With them today are their teachers Lesley Smith and Kirstin Sutcliffe. They're also accompanied by parent volunteers Jacquie Lemal, Michelle Olsen, Jim Brown, Norm Fournier, Donna Weiss, Koren McDougald, Brad McDougald, and Lenore Rowbottom. I would now ask them if they would please rise and receive the warm and traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's with great pleasure that I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some of Alberta's environmental leaders who are seated in the public gallery this afternoon. Today Miss Georgia Turcott of Canmore is Alberta's honorary Environment minister. Georgia is one of approximately 1,400 students who participated in this year's minister for the day program. Earlier today she along with her deputy ministers did an excellent job of briefing me on their environmental concerns.

Mr. Speaker, Georgia is joined by her 11 deputy ministers in the public gallery, and I would be pleased if I could introduce them at this time. They are Alyssa Ermineskin of Wetaskiwin, Asma Azad of Calgary, Abby Cardinal of Westrose, Dharma Ozsust of Ardrossan, Ethan Wagner of Airdrie, Tosin Odugbemi of Stony Plain, Aqila Walji of Calgary, Dylan Yanke of Medicine Hat, Maria Ayala of Calgary, Julie McIntosh of Edmonton, and Georgenea Senetza of Smoky Lake, along with the minister for the day, Georgia Turcott. I ask that they all rise and receive the recognition of the House.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to acknowledge that they are joined by a number of teachers and parents, who have done an excellent job of bringing these young people into a true leadership position, and I congratulate them all.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of bright and friendly grades 5 and 6 students from Standard elementary school in my constituency. They are accompanied today by teachers Mrs. Susan Moncks and Mrs. Dora Will and one of their parents, Mrs. Michelle Lomond. I believe they shared the coach with the Greentree school, that was just introduced to you. They are seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask them to rise and enjoy the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Legislative Assembly of Alberta is a host site for the annual Historica Fair and initiated an award to recognize participants who demonstrate outstanding achievement in celebrating an aspect of Canadian parliamentary democracy, governance, and political history with a specific focus on Alberta. It is now my pleasure to introduce to the Assembly the winner of this year's award, a grade 7 student who presented an enthusiastic representation of the life and work of Louise McKinney. Please join me in congratulating Moira Wyton from the Victoria School of Performing and Visual Arts in Edmonton. Moira is seated in the Speaker's gallery with her parents, sister, and grandparents. I would ask our guests to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. The first is of my summer STEP student in my constituency office, Alyssa Brotto. Alyssa has proven to be a very smart and hard-working addition to the office, dedicated to helping my constituents. In addition to working in the constituency office this summer, Alyssa gives swimming lessons and is a lifeguard as well. Come September, Alyssa will be returning to the University of Alberta, where she will continue her bachelor of arts degree and her bachelor of education and become a high school social studies and English teacher. Could I ask everyone to join me in welcoming Alyssa to the Legislative Assembly.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker, is of my constituency assistant, Josie Jason. Josie has been my assistant since I was elected. I know my office would not be running smoothly if I didn't have her. Josie approaches each day with enthusiasm and a sense of humour that allows her to overcome and deal with the many challenges she has every day. Please join me in welcoming Josie Jason.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to present to you two guests today. Judy Lytton is a long-time resident of the constituency of Edmonton-Manning. Judy has just completed her book called The Orphan Wild Rose, a personal biography. Accompanying Judy is Theresa Lightfoot, who has assisted Judy with photographs and compiling her words into book format. They are seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask them both to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today and introduce two good friends of mine from Three Hills that are here today. They actually drove up all those great students from the Greentree school. They are seated in the public gallery: Mr. Scott Morrison and Mr. Alex Cunningham. Alex and I served together formerly on the Three Hills hospital board. If Alex and Scott would rise and please receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just need to point out that we're joined in the gallery today by Brady Whittaker, executive director of the Alberta Forest Products Association, who's working so hard on behalf of his industry in these tough times. Welcome, Brady, to the Legislature.

Privilege

Ethics Commissioner Advice on Conflicts of Interest

The Speaker: Hon. members, yesterday there was in this Assembly a petition for a question of privilege, and I'm prepared to make my ruling with respect to this matter now. This purported question of privilege was raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview yesterday, June 2, 2009.

To summarize, the member's purported question of privilege was that the Ethics Commissioner interfered with the member's ability to perform his functions by providing conflicting advice as to whether the member could participate in debate on Bill 43, the Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2).

In documents provided to the Speaker in support of this purported question of privilege, the member included letters from the Ethics Commissioner dated May 26, 2009, advising him that as a result of the holdings of the member's father-in-law he had to recuse himself from participation in debate on the bill and from voting, and a letter dated June 1, 2009, where the Ethics Commissioner apologized for his earlier advice and informed the member he could participate in further debate and vote on Bill 43.

Under Standing Order 15(6) the Speaker's role in the question of privilege is to determine whether the matter was raised at the earliest opportunity and whether it constitutes a prima facie question of privilege. With respect to the formalities the member indicated yesterday that he'd received the Ethics Commissioner's letter after the proceedings in the Assembly had commenced on June 1. He provided notice to the Speaker's office at 10:55 a.m. on June 2, which the chair finds to be in compliance with Standing Order 15(2), and the chair finds that the matter was raised at the earliest opportunity.

At the outset the chair notes that it was clear from the Member for Edmonton-Riverview's comments yesterday that he was driven by a desire to comply with the rules that the members have set for themselves in the Conflicts of Interest Act while wanting to participate in debate on a matter for which he had prepared extensively. His justified frustration was apparent.

While this matter was raised by one particular member, it reflects a sentiment that is found throughout the Assembly of members being dedicated to observing the rules while wanting to represent their constituents.

In this case there is no doubt that the member was prevented from participating in the debate at committee stage on Bill 43. However, any obstruction that occurred was because of advice from an officer of the Legislature whose mandate and functions are set out in the Conflicts of Interest Act. The member did not suggest that there was any malicious intent on the part of the commissioner or that the commissioner was acting outside the scope of his duties.

The Ethics Commissioner occupies a unique position as the Assembly has delegated to that individual the ability to know a member's and his or her family's most intimate financial details and to apply the Conflicts of Interest Act in a fair and even-handed manner. It is a position of ultimate trust. While the position and duties are defined by a statute, his recommendations are subject to debate and approval by the Assembly when he proposes a sanction against a member. Just as the commissioner must expect members to be forthright in their disclosures, members have the right to expect that the decisions and advice from the commissioner are rigorous and consistent.

In this case the commissioner admitted to having made a mistake which deprived the member of his ability to participate in a critical phase of the legislative process.

In conducting research on this matter, the chair discovered that on October 6, 2005, Speaker Milliken of the Canadian House of Commons found that there was a prima facie question of privilege involving the actions of the then Ethics Commissioner, Dr. Bernard Shapiro, which can be found at House of Commons Debates pages 8473-8474. The matter was referred to the Standing Committee on Procedure and House Affairs, which found that the commissioner was in contempt of the House but did not recommend any sanctions or penalty. That report was presented in the House of Commons on November 18, 2005. In that case the issue was that the commissioner discussed a complaint against a member with the media in violation of his duty of confidentiality and that the member was not provided with written notice of the investigation and the charges against him.

In this case the Ethics Commissioner was fulfilling his duty to provide advice to a member. The essence of the complaint is that the advice was wrong, which was admitted by the commissioner, and that the error deprived the member of his ability to participate in debate.

The Assembly is not without recourse against officers. For instance, under section 36 of the Conflicts of Interest Act the Ethics Commissioner may be suspended or removed from office for cause or incapacity by the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Assembly. If the Assembly is not sitting, the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices may recommend suspension, but that suspension is only effective until the end of the next sitting of the Assembly.

The Conflicts of Interest Act is a code for members. It does not provide for an appeal of advice provided by the commissioner. The chair is reluctant to find that there is a prima facie question of privilege as that could be interpreted as providing an avenue for appeal for members from advice from the Ethics Commissioner.

The chair would as well like to make a comment on something said by another member during his participation in the debate on this purported question of privilege. It is this chair's view, and one supported by the Conflicts of Interest Act, that members must act in accordance with advice from the Ethics Commissioner. Under section 43(5) of the act no proceeding can be taken against a member "by reason only of the facts so communicated and the compliance of the Member, former Minister or former . . . staff member with the recommendations." In short, members should not engage in opinion shopping as they are only protected if they comply with the Ethics Commissioner's advice.

At this time the chair is of the view that there is no prima facie question of privilege but does not want to end the matter there. In the chair's view the member was most gracious in speaking to the issue of remedy. He was not seeking a proverbial pound of flesh but wanted to ensure that there were measures undertaken to review what constitutes a conflict of interest so that members could perform their functions while not furthering their private interests.

In the chair's view there is much merit to this suggestion. Even prior to this question of privilege discussions were under way to ensure that caucuses and officials could provide their views to the Ethics Commissioner so that there was harmony between the intent of members in enacting the legislation and the commissioner in interpreting it. Towards that end, there are some actions that the chair would like to advise members of that will or, in the chair's view, should occur.

Number one, the Ethics Commissioner has agreed to meet with caucuses to discuss and receive input on the application of the Conflicts of Interest Act. This invitation must be taken up.

Number two, Parliamentary Counsel and counsel from the Department of Justice and Attorney General are to meet with the Ethics Commissioner to discuss the background to the act, previous reviews of the act, and approaches to interpretation.

Number three, the Speaker and Minister of Justice and Attorney General are to be available to discuss any issues that the Ethics Commissioner might have concerning the application of the act.

Number four, the Ethics Commissioner is to provide prior to the commencement of the fall sitting a general overview of the interpretation of the act with respect to what might constitute a private interest of such a nature to require a member to absent himself or herself from the proceedings of the Assembly, committee, or other forum.

The chair reminds members that a special select committee of the Assembly under the able chairmanship of the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill reviewed the Conflicts of Interest Act a few years ago.

The committee issued its report in May of 2006. The bill resulting from that review was introduced in the Assembly on April 18, 2007, considered by a policy field committee, and given royal assent on December 7, 2007. It came into effect on April 1, 2008. The chair points this out as there was a great deal of background material on this subject found in the report and the proceedings of the committee. Research should be done, in fact, with the historical records of that committee.

While it is hoped that any consultations are productive, the chair would like to offer a comment as he is not a disinterested observer in the proceedings of this Assembly. In fact, it is the chair who witnesses and deals directly with the impact that the Ethics Commissioner's rulings and advice have on the deliberations in this Assembly.

As the discussions move forward, the chair hopes that all are mindful that constituents often expect that their elected representative's experience will play a part in the decision-making process. Of course, no one is disputing that if, for example, a member or a direct associate would derive a real and tangible benefit from a contract or such, the member should recuse himself or herself from the deliberations. The issue is where to draw the line between private interest and public duty.

One of the recommendations of the select special committee that reviewed the act in 2005-06 was that the preamble be expanded to include provisions such as:

- The Assembly as a whole can represent the people of Alberta most effectively if its Members have experience and knowledge in relation to many aspects of life of Alberta and if they can continue to be active in their own communities, whether in business, in the practice of a profession, or otherwise.
- A Member's duty to represent his or her constituents includes broadly representing his or her constituents' interests in the Assembly and to the Government of Alberta.

Bill 2 amended the Conflicts of Interest Act to add a new recital to the preamble, which reads:

Whereas Members of the Legislative Assembly can serve Albertans most effectively if they come from a spectrum of occupations and continue to participate actively in the community.

In the chair's view these principles are a good basis on which to guide discussion on the interpretation of the act.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Government Communications

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. From fiscal '07-08 to fiscal '09-10 this administration's total communications budget increased 55 per cent. The ministries that had the largest budgets or received the largest increases are those that have the worst image problems. Alberta Environment, Energy, Health and Wellness, Sustainable Resource Development are among the big spenders, and of course the Premier's Executive Council has received a considerable increase in the communications budget. To the Premier: if the government needs to cut program spending in order to reduce its budget, will the Premier commit to communications being the first area audited and considered before cutting core social programs?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, a couple of things. One, with respect to the overall programs that we hold dear – health, education – we continued increases in the budget for education, advanced education, health, and social services. That is coming from our sustainability fund, that we've put together to deal with particular situations. With respect to the Public Affairs budget, that budget was debated here in the House. The hon. member will recall the fact that for the budget that was allocated to Public Affairs, we actually did not spend all that money in Public Affairs, and it was part of the 250 some-odd million dollars that went into savings at the end of the year to balance our budget.

Dr. Swann: Well, the Premier in his own ministry, Executive Council, spent $11 million on policy development and $25 million on communications through the Public Affairs Bureau and the new rebranding scheme. What is the Premier's rationale for spending more on spin than on trying to improve government services?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe the member is referring to a three-year budget, the business plan. We are continuing with promoting Alberta to a global marketplace. It is very, very important that we do that. We get the message to the American decision-makers. We have done some work, obviously, in Europe, and we'll continue to do that because we do depend on exports of our commodities to markets, and that is what creates the wealth in Alberta that supports many of the social programs that the hon. member is talking about.

Dr. Swann: Well, given that some of his own ministers can't remember the new million-dollar slogan, would the minister say to Albertans that this is a responsible way to spend 25 million public dollars?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, yes, it is. Just coming back from Europe and listening to the questions that were asked by investors – and I believe there was a few trillion dollars collectively that investors held to look at investment around the world. The fact that we were there and talked about some of the misinformation that was delivered to those investors by other groups dealing with the misinformation, giving them the correct information and inviting them to invest some of that money in the province of Alberta is integral if we're going to keep our economy growing and support all of the programs that we enjoy.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Provincial Health Facilities

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Albertans find it concerning that the Premier only hears about important decisions occurring in one of the most critical ministries through internal documents we tabled in the House. Yesterday I asked the Premier questions regarding talks that Health Services is having with doctors' groups for leasing public health facilities. The Premier did not know what I was referring to and said he would find out. Again to the Premier: will the Premier give the reason that Fort Saskatchewan hospital and the urology centre at the Rockyview are under consideration for being turned over to doctors' groups?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'll make it very clear. I don't care what kind of information he has. I can assure people living in the constituency of Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville that the hospital will remain as a publicly funded institution in the province of Alberta. No question about it.

Dr. Swann: Will the Premier now confirm that this is the reason why the Fort Saskatchewan hospital is under review and repurposing of the facility may happen?

Mr. Stelmach: I don't know where he's going. I just drove – actually, I stopped by to pick up some potted plants for Marie at the Home Depot. The hospital is being built just a bit south of the Home Depot and the other centre. Construction is proceeding. It looks like they've got the elevator shaft poured. This is, of course, a replacement facility for the Fort Saskatchewan facility that does a lot of work, a good partnership with the hospital in Lamont and other physicians in the city of Edmonton. It's part of the ever-growing partnership and collaboration of our doctors and specialists that are doing good work in the province of Alberta, and they'll have a brand new facility to work in.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, Albertans, including professional groups, are really unclear what this government is concealing about the plans for the health care system. Could the Premier talk about what other facilities are under consideration for professional groups, including doctors' groups, to have a role in? Be open.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, you know, a little angel is saying, "Don't say this," and a little devil is over here. He just questioned me about the cost of communication in the province of Alberta, and now we're saying how we're going to communicate to Albertans. We're going to keep communicating with Albertans. Just, again, to all Albertans: we're working very, very hard to ensure that our system, this good health system that we have, remains publicly funded, that it remains there for future generations, and we're going to do whatever we can to improve the effectiveness and the quality of care in our province.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Electricity Transmission System Upgrades

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In May 2003 the government behind closed doors overruled a regulatory process and shifted all the costs of transmission upgrades onto the monthly electricity bills of Alberta consumers. Six years later we now know that this decision, made behind closed doors, shifted over $7 billion from the power generators to electricity consumers, who have already seen the full effects of electricity deregulation as it was implemented by this government. To the Premier: why did the government make the decision behind closed doors to overrule the regulatory process and shift an additional $7 billion onto the monthly bills of consumers and not leave it where it belonged, with the power generators?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the little devil is getting ahead of me, but I won't listen to him. I don't know. Maybe there was a window behind these closed doors that the hon. member was peeking into and could see who was around the table. I don't know.

Let's be honest. Let's be honest with all Albertans, all Canadians, and all Americans. One of the biggest issues we're facing on this North American continent is an aging, very inefficient transmission system. At the end of the day it's the consumer that pays the cost. If anybody says that some company pays the cost, that is bunk. That's absolutely not true.

Now, here's the thing. The other day we heard some comments with respect to carbon. Okay? Well, today because of this aging and inefficient system – can I just compare it to a water pipe? This water pipe has some holes. If you're sending, let's say, 10 gallons of water through that water pipe, you're losing an X amount of water. Well, when somebody turns on their hair dryer or plugs in their car, all of a sudden we have to send more electricity down the line. Guess what? We lose more. This is not only adding to the carbon footprint, but we're also burning more coal to make more electricity to lose more in the line getting to where the consumer is.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier. The Premier knows full well – and he doesn't have to get his little devil to tell him this – that the generators of electricity are the big winners in electricity deregulation and consumers again are the big losers. Now, given the fact that we need an additional $2 billion plus to upgrade our provincial interties, will the Premier guarantee here this afternoon in the Assembly to consumers that they will not have to foot the bill for the $2 billion in intertie upgrades that are needed?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, what I was referring to is a good transmission system within the province of Alberta. Here's the issue. In southern Alberta we have a potential of generating a considerable amount of wind energy. That's where the wind blows, except the consumer doesn't live where the wind blows. Okay? They live in Calgary. They live in Edmonton. We have to tie that wind energy, green energy, to a good transmission line, that we add the extra energy to, to get it to where the consumer is.

We have tremendous potential in the future for more green energy. It could be even in-stream generation, power generation. It could also be more biomass. I mean, there's a huge movement towards biomass. It's the future, really, for Alberta. Wherever we're creating that biomass energy, we have to also transmit those electrons to where the consumer lives. This is the discussion; this is where we're going.

The other thing is that there are all kinds of costs attached. You know, one paper says $14 billion; one paper says $8 billion. We'll know what the cost is when we actually get to the design stage. All I know is that we have to replace those transmission systems.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier. This report which was issued yesterday indicates the total cost will be over $16 billion, and I would strongly urge the hon. Premier to read that.

Now, speaking of costs – again to the Premier – how can inflation be blamed for the skyrocketing costs for these transmission upgrades, which have increased from 3 and a half billion dollars to over $14 billion, plus the $2 billion for the intertie? How can inflation be blamed now for this dramatic increase when we see other construction projects in the province with a reduction in costs up to 40 per cent?

Mr. Stelmach: First of all, with respect to the intertie.

Mr. MacDonald: Did you read the report?

Mr. Stelmach: Can you give me time to answer? You asked the question.

Mr. MacDonald: It won't matter.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, I guess if it won't matter, why are you asking the question?

One of the things on the intertie is that it's clear that the Alberta consumer won't be paying the cost. However, to deal with this issue of aging lines and this cost of inflation, we were living in inflationary times, obviously, in the last number of years. All of these costs that we have that are quoted by the opposition and by one of the newspapers vary from $8 billion to $14 billion.

All I'm saying is that we have to make the decisions. Let's identify where the transmission line is going to go, number one. Number two, let's get on with the design and getting them constructed because four to five years from now there may be areas of this province of Alberta that are actually going to be short of electricity.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Children in Care

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great sadness that Albertans learned of a horrible tragedy in Strathcona county on Monday. A man's and a woman's bodies were discovered following a police investigation into the alleged theft of a pickup truck. Now, the two 14-year-old boys that were charged with that crime were in the care of the Minister of Children and Youth Services. To that minister: will she now launch a full public inquiry into the crisis within child intervention services in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is an absolutely tragic incident, and my condolences go to the family and the friends of the victims. Now, obviously, because we will have legal proceedings, I can't say too much, but I can tell you that these two youths are in our care. They also have been placed in a residential treatment facility. We have taken an initial look at the decisions that surrounded that placement and found that they were appropriate. We also have confirmed that the protocols surrounding the reporting of AWOL youth were also followed by that facility. There was never any indication that either of these youths was ever a risk to themselves or others, but obviously as we move forward with more information, we will continue to look at the situation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under this minister's watch we have seen the death of two children in care, the traumatic injury and hospitalization of another, and now two teenagers in care are accused of murder and accessory after the fact. It is clear that there is something very seriously wrong with the entire system. So will the minister announce today a public inquiry into child protection services in Alberta in an effort to find solutions to a system that is so obviously in crisis?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The system is not in crisis. I would like to remind everyone here that we have 9,000 children in care receiving services from thousands and thousands of volunteers, staff members, and foster parents, and they do an awfully good job. We also know that across the country, because of our Alberta response model, we are seen as a leader in child welfare. We know that our Alberta Foster Parent Association is considered one of the top in the country. We had a full foster care review last year that considered our system a good one. They said we weren't perfect, had recommendations, and we've adopted them. As well, the Auditor General has fully audited our ministry and said that it was a very well-designed system.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, this minister's inability to fix the problems with the foster and the group home system has had tragic results. Residents and community representatives in Strathcona county have expressed concerns to the ministry in the past about the particular facility in question. It is not enough to simply express sympathy and concern after the fact without addressing the circumstances that led to the tragedy. Why won't the minister initiate a public inquiry? Why isn't she interested in fixing a broken system?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, this situation has been absolutely shocking and devastating for everyone, including the other residents of that facility, the staff, and the community that the member refers to. Our immediate focus is to make sure that we get support to those people. I can tell you that as early as tomorrow we do have CFSA and the RCMP meeting with the county out there to address any issues. In fact, they were all together this morning for the sharing of the information on the circumstances here.

Back to the comment about looking into circumstances, we have taken a look at the two most important things, decisions around the placement of these youth as well as protocols being followed in the facility, and like I said, they have been.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Clean Energy

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Right now, as we sit here, in Ottawa and in Washington and later at an international conference in Copenhagen discussions are being had and decisions are being made on clean energy production at the highest levels of government. These decisions will have a direct impact on Alberta's economy for all Albertans as energy consumers and also those who make their living in the energy industry and from related spinoff industries. My question is to the Premier. What will the Premier do over the coming months to make sure that Alberta's interests are clearly and forcefully represented?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there's no doubt that as a growing energy producer and, of course, the engine of the Canadian economy, a lot of the eyes of the world are on this province. We're going to have to manage our relationship with Ottawa, with Washington, and with some of our other partners around the world very carefully. Decisions made elsewhere have a direct impact on the province of Alberta, a direct impact on our global competitiveness, and they also will have at the end of the day an impact on our quality of life and standard of living. I will undertake this summer to again meet with the western governors in Utah and the Western Premier's Conference and continue to work with federal officials with the Minister of Energy and also the Minister of Environment to make sure that we are at the table for all of these discussions.

Mr. Prins: Thank you. Clearly, our federal government is a huge player in these discussions on these issues. My second question again to the Premier: have you spoken to the Prime Minister on this issue, and if so, has he offered anything by way of assurance that Alberta's interests will be protected?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I did write to the hon. Prime Minister outlining Alberta's concerns as we enter into the clean energy dialogue. If climate change is the new national priority, we have to make sure that at the end of the day there is balance, that Albertans alone won't be singled out as having to absorb the total cost, burden, of any policy that's implemented. Our concern, of course, is over coal-fired electricity generation – that is the largest carbon footprint that we have in Alberta – followed by transportation and, thirdly, by the oil sands. The discussions have been fruitful. All I'm saying is that I don't want to have Albertans burdened with the cost of something in national policy that should be shared across the country.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is again to the Premier. You know, this could have huge, huge implications for all Albertans and Canada. What really is at stake here for Alberta and Canada?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there's no doubt that Alberta has taken a leadership role, knowing the fact that as we produce energy, we need to transition to cleaner barrels of oil and a lower carbon footprint and electrical generation. The problem is that if the cost of energy really increased rapidly, then it will have an impact on our economy, but because we are the engine of the Canadian economy, it'll have an impact across Canada. My concern is that if it is a policy that places a further burden – I made it very clear to the Prime Minister that the net contribution to Ottawa over the last 10 years, just the last 10 years, from Alberta was $117 billion. So if there are further interregional wealth transfers, we'd better look at what Alberta has already contributed to Canada and find a solution so that, again, we find a balance that treats everyone fairly across Canada and doesn't focus on the province of Alberta. That will be my top priority over the summer.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Workforce Employment Services

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Given that the unemployment rate for Albertans in the construction industry is 13 per cent, for manufacturing it's 8.7 per cent, for mining and gas it's 8.5 per cent, and for youth in this province it's over 12 per cent, what is this government doing to retrain these individuals so that they can get back in the workforce?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we've got quite a number of initiatives to make sure that unemployed Albertans get to work or have the ability to work. Inasmuch as the member quotes numbers, we need to keep in mind that the unemployment level overall in the province of Alberta is more like 6 per cent rather than some of the numbers that he is identifying. He leads us to believe that our numbers are considerably higher. That means that we've got 94 per cent of Albertans working, that there are still some sectors that are short of employees.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can't believe that this hon. member has very little sympathy for unemployed construction workers and for youth in this province between the ages of 16 and 24 who cannot find a job.

Again to the same minister: given that only 25 per cent of unemployed Albertans are receiving EI benefits, when is the Minister of Employment and Immigration finally going to stick up for and defend the interests of the unemployed in this province?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we're very actively engaged in offering additional training and upgrading to individuals that are looking for work. I'm very, very sympathetic to those who don't have any jobs. Any time somebody loses their job, it's very disconcerting for them, and I'm, again, very sympathetic to them. We also do job matching. We're making sure that we are continuously posting those jobs that are available. We've got thousands, as a matter of fact probably between 4,000 and 5,000 jobs that are posted on our website that are available. We do take a very active role in matching individuals to those particular jobs.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. We know you're very actively engaged in recruiting temporary foreign workers – that's the truth – but for the unemployed people, you're just leaving them out in the cold. Now, I personally wrote on behalf of our caucus to the federal government in February urging them to make EI payments more fair for unemployed Albertans and to make the same rules apply across the entire country. Why haven't this minister and this government put more pressure on the federal government to make sure that the unemployment insurance rules are fair regardless of where the unemployed live, whether in Alberta or Ontario?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, first and foremost, there still is a good role for temporary foreign workers in the province of Alberta. Having said that, our priority is still to make sure that Albertans are first, that those individuals that the hon. member indicates – our youth, our aging population, or those from the aboriginal community or the disabled community – have opportunities to work when they can. We're going to do everything for that to happen.

As well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier has talked to the federal government concerning EI reforms. I, too, have written to the minister. I have a scheduled phone call with the hon. minister tomorrow morning, as a matter of fact, to talk specifically on that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Federal Economic Stimulus Funding

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the federal budget announced earlier this year, a number of economic stimulus funds were announced along with it. I'm hearing from many municipal leaders that the initially welcome news that the federal government would finally be participating in infrastructure spending has not been accompanied by project announcements and the money that was originally expected. My questions are to the President of the Treasury Board. Can you update this Assembly on the status of the federal stimulus spending on infrastructure in the province of Alberta?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it has been an interesting discussion with the federal government with regard to the stimulus spending on top of the many different funds that the federal government has brought forward through the building Canada fund. However, we have agreed to and have signed off on the stimulus funding framework as well as the knowledge infrastructure program, that they have signed with the province. It has flowed. Just as recently as two weeks ago the Minister of Transportation announced $227 million for 73 projects around Alberta, and on May 4 the minister of advanced education announced 348 million joint dollars on 28 projects around the province. We are certainly continuing to work with our federal counterparts to bring forward the money.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. Again to the President of the Treasury Board: do these previous announcements represent all of the federal monies available, or can we expect additional announcements in the near future?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, we haven't announced even all of the projects that are currently under some of the project funding as we are working off our capital plan and from our priorities. We would expect that probably in the area of another $350 million will flow to Alberta communities and projects through this. We also are anticipating the regulations around the RINC fund, which could see another $150 million, potentially, go to recreation projects throughout the province of Alberta. While we have not been part of talks of an Ecofund or a community adjustment fund around environmental issues, we expect that that's on the way, too.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. Once again to the President of the Treasury Board. While it appears that there's a lot of effort under way, my understanding is that these federal stimulus funds and the projects they fund have to be completed by March 2011. That's not a lot of time that we're talking about to complete significant infrastructure projects. What is the holdup in getting all of the projects announced and the federal money into the province of Alberta?

2:20

Mr. Snelgrove: The hon. member is correct. It was a bit of a problem when the federal government talked about shovel-ready projects, Mr. Speaker, but then they wanted new projects. It's very difficult for the province to set aside their current capital plans – we have a very thorough capital plan – and go to meet some of the criteria, so we've been working very carefully to get that to the funding. It can be a problem for some. This program is based on a reimbursement. Approximately 25 per cent of the funds will be at the start of the project, and then the communities in the province need to complete these projects before they're eligible to receive the rest.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, we have to assume total financial responsibility to ensure that the funds are expended in the two years, and we need to be very careful that these projects fit that criteria so that we're not in a position to reimburse the funds.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Income Support for Housing

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, as the buck passes between ministers, people are losing their homes while others can't get off the street. Worse yet, the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs thinks cancelling the HEP fund program was a good-news story, and the Minister of Employment and Immigration doesn't understand that $350 for a damage deposit, even for a single person, isn't enough given rents for apartments in this province. Both ministers seem clearly out of touch with what's happening on the street. To the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs: what support, other than going to a shelter, is available for someone who is unable to qualify for emergency funding and can't wait the two years to get a rent supplement?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can tell you that I'm very in touch with what's happening out on the street, hon. member. I visit often with the organizations and the agencies in a number of municipalities across Alberta, and I know exactly what they're looking for for services. What you're referring to right now, emergent funding, is with Employment and Immigration, and I'll ask the minister to respond.

Mr. Taylor: As I said before, the buck passes.

Since the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs is no longer in charge of eviction prevention funding and likes to make that clear every time I ask a question, even dancing around the edges of that, the next questions are to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. How much money did that minister's department receive to handle the other minister's caseload of people who are looking for emergency funding for housing and used to look to her for it before they dropped the program?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I think the important thing to recognize is that individuals that require help will get the help on a timely basis and get the amount of help that they require to be able to find the proper accommodations. We know that in this province there is more available housing than there was a year ago, and we also know that rents in a lot of communities have gone down, so it is making it a lot easier for those with lower incomes to access accommodations or housing.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, no, it isn't. Trying to keep or get into an apartment is a bureaucratic nightmare now that eviction prevention funding is under the Minister of Employment and Immigration's responsibility. What is that minister doing to make the process easier to access, I mean, other than saying that it's easy and other than saying that he's got a big heart and that he's going to look after everybody eventually? Or is the goal, ultimately, to save money by pushing people off the system and into a cardboard box in the river valley?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, our goal and our role is to provide a hand up for those particular individuals, and we want to ensure that they get proper accommodations. We do work with individuals, and those that need emergency assistance will receive that type of assistance, and those that require regular housing help will receive that help.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Vehicle Vicarious Liability

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I was truly outraged to hear in this House unduly caustic and self-serving allegations from the leader of the third party regarding so-called backroom Tory deals on the issue of vicarious liability. My question is to the Minister of Transportation. Can you please clarify for this House the intention behind the changes to the rental car industry and vicarious liability?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, let me set the record straight. The hon. leader of the third party made some terrible, misinformed comments yesterday in this Assembly. The hon. member alleged that a so-called Tory insider acted on behalf of the truck renting and leasing association in regard to Bill 30. What this individual did is what most other stakeholders do on countless issues. He wrote a letter, for a completely different group than the one cited by the hon. member, to myself and the finance minister proposing amendments to a piece of legislation that was passed in this Assembly last year. If the member had done his research, he would have seen that none – none – of the proposals lobbied for were accepted. I'm happy to clarify this for him.

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, again to the same minister: is it the intention behind this policy to limit what an insured person can get in compensation for a traffic accident?

Mr. Ouellette: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. What this legislation does is harmonize with other Canadian provinces the provisions on vicarious liability, where the rental car companies are not held responsible for the actions of those who actually drive the vehicle. It's about doing what's right. Why should someone who gets hit by a rental car be treated differently than someone who is involved in an accident not involving a rental car? That is the issue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the Minister of Transportation. Why is this being brought forward now and not before?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, this bill has been in front of the House since March 16. Further, the hon. member and his colleague in the third party spoke in favour of the bill they now seem to be trashing. I refer you to Hansard of May 26, 2009, on page 1273. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood says, "Mr. Speaker, I just want to indicate that we're prepared to support this piece of legislation and would like to see the changes contained in it enacted because we think they're in the best interests of the community." That's a bit confusing. Has the hon. member suddenly changed his mind, or did he not actually read the bill before he spoke on it?

The Speaker: Well, just as I thought everybody was falling asleep, that was quite a wake-up call. I would like to remind, as I've just been reminded by Parliamentary Counsel, that the point of question period isn't usually to hold the opposition to account.

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mortgage Fraud

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With the slowing of the economy, the widespread mortgage fraud that occurred during the boom is beginning to become apparent. Cases of mortgage fraud are on the rise, and Service Alberta's investigative unit assisted police on more than a thousand cases of mortgage fraud last year alone. To the Minister of Service Alberta: what steps are being taken to address the rising number of cases of mortgage fraud in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to families facing tough times, mortgage fraud and those kinds of things, I know that our department is made aware of incidents that occur when people contact our department. On an ongoing basis we are aware of situations that go on, and we are looking at those, but again it's about making sure that consumers know where to ask the questions and know where they can get support.

Mr. Kang: To the minister again: how is the minister increasing the enforcement ability of industry, such as the Real Estate Council of Alberta, to help deter these crimes?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have regular meetings with the Real Estate Council of Alberta and with the organizations based in Edmonton and in Calgary. They have a great emphasis on consumer education, consumer awareness when purchasers are looking at getting mortgages and on making sure that they assist with making good decisions that they can afford as well as making sure that they are working with the right individuals and are protected.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How is the minister working with the banks to investigate these crimes and prosecute the criminals involved?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the role of the banks with the federal government, again, we are aware of those situations that are going on. For Service Alberta, from the consumer education point of view, it is our department's responsibility to make sure we give the consumers the tools and the information and to make sure they are accessing the information with respect to the federal banks and the banks here in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this government intends to spend $16 billion to upgrade Alberta's electricity transmission system and have ratepayers pay the bill. As a result, Albertans are going to see large increases to their electrical bills, but power producers get off scot-free. My question is to the Premier: why isn't this government forcing electrical companies to share the costs of transmission upgrades?

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, the leader of the third party's understanding of economics is just as weak as the Leader of the Opposition's. Do they think Santa Claus is going to come down and pay? What are your alternatives? Our electrical system has not been upgraded for two decades. It's old. It's overloaded: $75 million line loss a year because of overcrowding. Do you want to wait till the brownout? We don't. We need transmission now, and that's what this party is going to do.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the minister needs a little economics lesson about his beloved free enterprise system. It's clear in a free market that the producers sell for whatever the market will bear. If they have increased costs, they can't necessarily pass them on because the people will buy less of the product. It's basic economics 101. They might have to take a cut in profits, something this minister doesn't want to see happen. My question is: why don't these companies have to share as they once did in the cost of these very, very expensive upgrades? Why are you going to let consumers' power bills go through the roof, Mr. Minister?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, let's stay on the subject of economics. Obviously, the hon. member has something to learn here. Electrical energy powers this province. That's what runs it. It creates jobs. You're the head of a party that claims to represent working families. I haven't seen much evidence of it this week in other debates. Maybe that's why they typically get less than 10 per cent of the vote. This party wants Albertans to have the jobs tomorrow that we have today. We need transmission now.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, so do we. He's setting up a straw dog. The question is: who's going to pay for these lines? He and his government are going to have the consumers of this province shell out hundreds of dollars more every year, maybe even every month, for power bills because they won't go after their friends in the power industry and make them share in the cost of these lines. Why not?

Dr. Morton: Okay. Mr. Speaker, economics lesson 3: repeat, $75 million a year already being lost in line loss. That needs to be corrected. You'd be interested to know that this province actually imports more electricity right now than we export. We actually export at a low cost and import it back in at a high cost. Better transmission will save Albertans money and will put them back to work. We want Albertans to work. I don't know what you guys are thinking.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Payday Loans

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Minister of Service Alberta announced that the government of Alberta will be regulating payday lenders, and it's my understanding that the minister settled on a maximum cost of borrowing of $23 per $100 borrowed. My question is for the minister. How did you decide that $23 was an appropriate maximum amount for payday lenders to charge?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Service Alberta reviewed research on the business of costs for the Canadian payday loan industry from a number of sources, including independent research information prepared for payday lenders. We wanted to strike a balance between the interests of industry and the need to protect consumers and ensure they are borrowing at a reasonable cost. Keep in mind that that is a maximum cost of borrowing. Since we have introduced rules for disclosure of information to consumers and prohibitions on practices such as rollovers and discounting, Alberta consumers will know exactly what they're paying for and be able to shop around for the best rate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First supplemental to the same minister: why does the federal government have to approve the cost of borrowing amount?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Yes. Mr. Speaker, the federal government delegated the responsibility of regulating payday loan lenders to the provinces; however, federal legislation still requires that they approve the maximum cost of borrowing. We'll be working very closely with them on that. In the meantime, this regulation will still come into effect on September 1, 2009. This will give businesses an opportunity to become licensed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Last supplemental to the same minister: how will you enforce these regulations, and what kind of penalties will be in place for those who break these new rules?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To make sure payday lenders comply with our regulations, we will be conducting random audits of payday lenders and will investigate consumer complaints. We can use a wide range of enforcement actions, including suspending or cancelling a lender's licence or prosecuting them in court. Also, payday lenders must forfeit any interest or fees owed on a loan if they do not comply with the regulation, giving them a strong incentive to follow rules. For those payday lenders who completely ignore the rules, the Fair Trading Act includes fines up to $100,000 or up to two years in jail or both.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has claimed that they will follow through on their promise to pay the unanticipated increase to teachers' salaries due to changes to the average weekly earning index. Unfortunately, their promise has not been so far followed up with the necessary dollars to cover the salary increase. As a result, school boards have had to cut programs, reduce supplies, and raid their piggy banks to cover a promise the province made but has yet to deliver on. To the Minister of Education: what progress has there been in determining where the money is going to come from, and what is the timeline for school boards to receive these much-needed funds?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, the first assumption that the hon. member makes is wrong. There has been no determination of what the actual amount of the average weekly earnings increase for Albertans has been. StatsCan had a process by which they determined it, which would have driven out an increase of 4.83 per cent. They changed their process, which under their new process drives out a 5.99 per cent. Our agreement with teachers is that their salaries will increase by the amount that the average weekly earnings of Albertans increases, and we need to determine in discussions with the Teachers' Association and the School Boards Association and, of course, across government how to appropriately measure that. The fact that StatsCan has changed the way they measure it causes us a problem, and that's the problem we need to resolve. What we've said is that we will fund whatever the appropriate amount is, and we will do that.

Mr. Chase: Unfortunately, as Alberta burns, you appear to be fiddling, and school boards can't be waiting for that fiddling to end. You haven't answered where it's coming from, but maybe you will in the follow-up.

Luckily, due to its frugality the Calgary school board will not have to lay teachers off this year in order to afford the salary increase promised by this government, whatever that should be. How does the minister expect other school boards who aren't as financially secure to find the money to pay for teachers' salary increases?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have made it very clear to school boards that whatever the amount is, we will fund it. So there's no reason for any school board in this province – and I've had that discussion with them directly on the phone to the board chairs and superintendents on budget day. I was down at the ASBA on Monday speaking to the School Boards Association, making it very clear that whatever the average weekly earning increase for Albertans is that we need to pay in accordance with the agreement with teachers, we will fund that. He doesn't need to worry about that piece, nor do school boards. They should budget on the basis that they will have the money for their teachers' increase. They don't need to cut teachers to solve that problem.

What I have also said to them is that they should not prejudge that that average weekly earnings index is 5.99 per cent because if they prejudge that, they may put themselves in a very difficult position. So they should hold their budgets open. They should budget on the basis of 4.83 per cent for average weekly earnings until we determine what the actual number is with all those affected. When we do, if it's more, they'll get the funds for the more.

Mr. Chase: And in the meantime they'll be forced to rehire young teachers, who they were forced to let go because of the intransigency of this government. The ASBA is looking for the government to act ASAP. It's not happening. Given that public school boards have been forced to make cuts within their operating budgets to fulfill this province's salary grid promise, why has the minister not proportionally reduced private school funding to last year's levels to help make up for the public school funding shortfall? Spread the pain.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, he obviously didn't hear the first two answers. Let me say it again. We have said to school boards – and they have a very clear message from us – that they should budget for average weekly earnings at 4.83 per cent. There's no need to cut back. We've provided the funds to support that for teachers. We provided funds at 3 per cent, which should cover their other wage increases, and there's no need for them to cut back on teachers or let young teachers go on that basis. If they have to budget for more money at a later date because the average weekly earnings are higher, they will have the money to do that. We've made that clear to school boards, and I hope now that I've made it clear to the hon. member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Industrial Site Remediation

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Brownfield sites are vacant and underused properties that have been contaminated. In my community of Whitecourt old bulk fuel stations remain contaminated. They are eyesores, and they tie up valuable land. These sites are owned by major oil companies that operate in this province. My questions are all to the Minister of Environment. What's this government doing to encourage remediation of these contaminated sites?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The member has identified a very serious problem. As you know and I'm sure other members of the House know, in rural Alberta in particular but throughout Alberta abandoned retail gas station sites are a real scourge for small towns. We need to do something about that. We need to get something moving. One of the things that discourages the owners of those sites, apart from the costs of remediation, is that they don't completely eliminate the risk that they have associated with those cleanups. So today we announced a remediation certificate program that will remove that risk, that will once and for all give some assurance to the landowner that they will no longer be responsible for the liability on that site once they've cleaned it up to appropriate standards.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, that assurance is fine, but what happens when the provincial or federal government changes the targets, which always seems to happen? Again back to the minister: what about this issue of moving the targets continually?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, we are assured at this point in time that the standards that we have in place in 2009 are appropriate standards that will ensure that on an ongoing basis there is no risk to further development on those sites, provided that they meet the standards that we have in place today. By participating in this voluntary program, the owner of the site will remove that uncertainty that is associated with future governments changing standards because once they have the certificate in hand, they will be relieved of any need to adhere to new standards should they arise in the future.

Mr. VanderBurg: To the same minister. Again, these sites have been contaminated for 25, 35 years in my community, and it's an expensive and time-consuming endeavour. To the minister: who's going to pay for this?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's a long-standing principle in Alberta, and that principle will not change with the introduction of this new program. In Alberta the polluter pays. Unfortunately or fortunately, depending on what side of the equation you're looking at, this program does not absolve anyone from paying the legitimate and true costs of remediation of contaminated soil. What it does do is bring certainty into it. It removes some contingent liabilities that may be there, and we believe that this will be sufficient incentive to get a lot of work done on a lot of those vacant properties throughout the province.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 84 questions and responses today.

There's a rumour going around that this may very well be the last day of the spring session. A number of pages will be retiring, so I'm going to call on the hon. Deputy Speaker to make some comments.

Page Recognition

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As Deputy Speaker I would like to draw to the attention of all hon. members that we will have to send off four of our wonderful pages at the end of this spring session. They are Michael Molzan, the Speaker's page; Andrew Ralstin; Hyun-Soo Lim; Maryna Muzychenko. I ask you to join me in recognizing the great efforts of our pages, who daily show patience and understanding of our many demands. They carry out their tasks with attention to duty and in good humour and suffer some very late nights of work with us. On behalf of all members I present to each of the departing pages our memento gift. These gifts are from the personal contributions of all members of this Assembly, and along with these gifts are our best wishes.

I would like now to ask our Deputy Chair of Committees to present the four gifts to the Speaker's page, Michael Molzan, representing the four pages. [applause]

The Speaker: Their work is not yet done. I think tonight they have the speaking contest. Is it tonight? Last week. Sorry. Okay. One day we'll have the awards announced for that as well.

Might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have the pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a few priceless volunteers whom I will have the pleasure of presenting a minister's seniors' service award tonight. The awards honour Albertans for outstanding volunteer service to seniors. Individual Albertans who will receive an award are – and if they could stand as I call their name – Eric Longeway from Calgary, Dorothy Carleton from Banff, Dorothy Hodgkinson from Mayerthorpe, Irene Nordean from Picture Butte, and William Butterwick from Foremost.

I also have the pleasure of recognizing two organizations for their service to seniors with a minister's seniors' service award. Representing the New Horizon Drop In Centre in Grimshaw are Anne Toker and Irene Foster, and representing the Seniors Outreach Network Society in Edmonton are Fran Matthews and Sylvia Galbraith. Mr. Speaker, I know I speak for all members when I say we truly appreciate the contribution they make in enriching seniors' lives across the province. I would ask the award recipients to now receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased to welcome numerous guests accompanying the recipients: Don and Jean Ingwersen, Terry Carleton, Mike Carleton, Sylvia Carleton, Darla Morrison, Kyrstyn Morrison, Tori Morrison, Lyndon Nordean, Ardis Branch, Vernon and Elaine King, Delores Butterwick, Helen Diebert, and Mona Flett. Also here with our recipients are Laura Paradowski and Leslie Sorenson from my ministry. I would ask them to all stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Minister's Seniors' Service Awards

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To follow up from the minister of seniors, today I rise to recognize the recipients of the 12th annual minister's seniors' service awards. Tonight I'll have the pleasure of joining the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports to honour six individuals and two organizations for their exceptional service to Alberta seniors. These individuals and organizations demonstrate how volunteering enriches our communities. In doing so, they set an important example for all Albertans. By giving so generously of their time and their talent, the award recipients enrich and support seniors in communities across Alberta.

This year the award recipients were selected from a list of more than 70 nominees, Mr. Speaker. The selection criteria for the recipients was based on positive impact on seniors and the community, the need for the service they support, and the quality, originality, and diversity of their service. Please join me in congratulating the six individual recipients who will be honoured tonight: Joe and Vernie Bruder of Pincher Creek, William Butterwick of Foremost, Dorothy Carleton of Banff, Dorothy Hodgkinson of Mayerthorpe, Eric Longeway of Calgary, and Irene Nordean of Picture Butte. As well, please join me in congratulating the two organizations who will be honoured tonight: the New Horizon Drop In Centre in Grimshaw and the Seniors Outreach Network Society in Edmonton.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Seniors' Week

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise to recognize Seniors' Week, which reminds us of the important contributions Alberta's seniors continue to make to our society and our families. Their efforts have helped to build and shape Alberta into the wonderful province it is today. As the Member for Edmonton-McClung I'm pleased to recognize the many special seniors in my constituency, where almost 8 per cent of the population are seniors. This government continues to be dedicated to providing strong support for our seniors. In fact the 2009-2010 budget increases its level of commitment by increasing the budget for Seniors and Community Supports to nearly $2 billion.

I would like to highlight two seniors' facilities within my constituency of Edmonton-McClung. Touchmark at Wedgewood and Caleb Manor on the west side of the Anthony Henday freeway are home to many seniors, and I am proud to say that such excellent facilities are available in our province.

Mr. Speaker, I would again like to thank our seniors for making Alberta a wonderful place to live. I will continue to work hard with my colleagues to represent seniors' interests and to make sure that they will have the quality of life that they deserve.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

World Elder Abuse Awareness Day

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. June 15 is World Elder Abuse Awareness Day, a day when communities across Alberta and around the world engage citizens about how to learn about the signs of elder abuse and the steps that they can take to prevent it. Unfortunately, there are many forms of elder abuse, and any senior can be a victim. Two of the more common forms are financial and psychological abuse, and in some cases seniors experience more than one form of abuse at the same time.

The good news, Mr. Speaker, is that we can do something about this. We can be part of the solution by helping to identify elder abuse by watching for common signs of abuse like unexplained injuries, financial irregularities, low self-esteem, and social withdrawal, to name a few. As part of World Elder Abuse Awareness Day the province is working with the Alberta elder abuse awareness network to distribute a new screening guide, a guide designed to help front-line service providers and caregivers identify situations where abuse may be occurring and to suggest steps to take to assist seniors in these situations. The screening guide, along with fact sheets, posters, and other materials, has been sent out to more than 2,400 organizations across the province. More information on elder abuse is available on the Seniors and Community Supports website at www.seniors.alberta.ca or by calling the seniors' information line at 1.800.642.3853.

In recognition of World Elder Abuse Awareness Day, I encourage all members of this Assembly to wear the purple ribbon you received today on your desk to help raise awareness of this very important issue.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Calgary Airport Runway

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last weekend I had the pleasure to attend a large and lively yes-tunnel committee meeting. Several individuals representing various committees spanning the entire city of Calgary attended the meeting to support the airport tunnel. They support the tunnel because they want to maintain the good quality of life they currently enjoy. Without the tunnel there will be severe costs to the economy and the environment. Without the tunnel Calgarians will face increased delays, reduced productivity, and more business closures.

The airport needs this new runway, apparently, because airplanes are too often idling on the tarmac waiting for an open runway. Idling airplanes waste fuel and emit carbon into the atmosphere, so if a new runway can alleviate that problem, that is terrific. However, the same problem applies to thousands of cars and trucks idling on our roads if the airport tunnel isn't built. Doing nothing comes with a steep environmental and economic price. Upgrading Deerfoot Trail is not an option. That won't solve the problem of accessing the airport from the east side, and upgrading Deerfoot is far more costly than building the tunnel.

Clearly, the tunnel is the best option, but my frugal constituents are mindful of the costs of building a new tunnel. We understand that options for either a segmented tunnel or a continuous tunnel would cost $200 million. In response to the overwhelming demand from the citizens of Calgary, federal officials are meeting in Calgary to get funding in place to build this tunnel. It is time for the provincial government to step forward and fund their share of the tunnel now. Doing so will keep traffic and commerce flowing in northeast Calgary.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

CAPP Steward of Excellence Awards

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week I had the privilege along with the Minister of Environment and my colleague from Leduc-Beaumont-Devon to attend the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers stewardship of excellence awards dinner. The evening was a celebration of the efforts of Alberta petroleum producers to go above and beyond the call of duty.

Mr. Speaker, oil companies are a competitive lot, so we should not be surprised that as true Albertans they compete for superiority regarding a clean environment, safety, and social leadership. For example, Canadian Natural Resources was recognized for building the first fisheries compensation lake in the oil sands. Imperial Oil's contractor safety program was identified for its commitment to worker health. BP Canada's A+ for energy program has helped teachers across Alberta discuss energy and energy conservation education in their classroom. Nexen corporation was recognized for their extensive and effective community consultation on their Balzac Crossfield expansion project. Devon Energy received the prestigious president's award for their new pipeline technique that reduces right-of-way impact by 50 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta companies are showing environmental, safety, and social leadership day in and day out. This year's winners represent just a snapshot of this commitment to our province. The goal of the steward of excellence awards is to take today's best practices within the oil and gas sector in Alberta and turn them into tomorrow's standard, and these five projects demonstrate that we are well on our way.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all members of this Assembly to join me in congratulating all the award winners for their efforts.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

University of Lethbridge Strategic Plan

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In May the University of Lethbridge presented its new five-year strategic plan to the Lethbridge community, promising to stay true to what has made the university and its students so successful for the last 42 years: fostering a personal, supportive learning community; ensuring that professors are inspired scholars who include research and creativity in their classes; and delivering programs relevant to today's world. The plan also charts an exciting new path for the U of L to expand its graduate program, a mandate encouraged by this government. Significant progress has already been made on this.

For example, Mr. Speaker, I'm sure that all members remember the announcement made last year in Lethbridge when the U of L became the inaugural recipient of the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research's Polaris award, that brought $20 million in research funding and helped attract Dr. Bruce McNaughton.

The U of L has also become a world leader in water research, and the Alberta Water and Environmental Science Building opened last year. This project was possible because this government recognized that great discoveries will be made there, thanks in large part to our $22 million contribution to this project.

A third example is the creation of the Prentice Institute for Global Population and Economy and the appointment of Dr. Susan McDaniel to lead this important initiative. The policy work that will be done by the Prentice institute will help the private sector and government to make prudent policy decisions by taking into account demographic and economic shifts.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the U of L will introduce exciting new programs this fall, including a master of fine arts and a master of music and, a first in western Canada, a bachelor of music degree in digital audio arts. The university will also offer a new bachelor of nursing after-degree program in collaboration with Lethbridge College and a land agent bachelor of management degree in conjunction with Olds College.

I would like to congratulate the U of L for its forward thinking in this strategic plan. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table five copies of an e-mail I received from Nate Gartke, who is a grade 10 student in my constituency. Nate wrote to me to convey his support for Bill 44 and applaud the good work this government is doing to ensure that children can be educated in the best wishes of those who know them best, their parents.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling five copies of two different books written by Mr. Harpreet Singh Sandhu. The first book is called Canada in Brief, and the other is an issue of Guru's Word, which is a religious book for Sikhs.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we've now arrived at 3 o'clock, and according to our standing orders, rule 7(7), I must advise the House that there is at least one member who wishes to do some tablings. We will need unanimous consent to continue. Is any member opposed to going beyond the 3 o'clock standing order item? If so, say no.

[Unanimous consent denied]

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 45 Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate June 2: Mr. Oberle]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to participate.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A brief backgrounder. The shortest political speech I ever gave was to a group of children about to open a playground at a Catholic school in Calgary-Varsity, and my speech was: "Children, the only thing keeping you from enjoying this playground is me. Thank you very much." My speeches today will be of a similarly short nature.

Concern has been raised with regard to electoral boundaries. The Liberal opposition does not believe that we need more constituencies; in fact, we believe we could do with considerably less. We also recognize the need for rural MLAs to adequately represent their constituents, but in the balance we also recognize the need, as in all democracies in this world, for representation by population. So a delicate balance that all constituents of this great province are recognized has to be struck, and we don't believe that will be struck by increasing boundaries.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional speakers?
Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 45 read a third time]

Bill 32Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to move on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford Bill 32, the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act.

This act puts into effect the work of a commission that was established. There's been discussion about that work and the benefits of having a very clear process and procedure for Alberta public agencies governance, and this act, I believe, will put that into effect very well for Alberta. I would encourage all members to support it for third reading.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. As the hon. mover of the bill, the MLA for Edmonton-Rutherford, pointed out yesterday, the whole point of Bill 32 dealing with agencies, boards, and commissions is to hire people based on their competency. That is, obviously, the most important factor, and the Liberal opposition supports the notion of competency. It's what you know, not who you know, that should count.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Additional speakers?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 32 read a third time]

Bill 34Drug Program Act

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm privileged to move on behalf of the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness Bill 34, the Drug Program Act.

With this act there will be an opportunity to make sure that our drug programs in Alberta are appropriately aligned and set up so that Albertans can have access to appropriate pharmaceuticals when they need them, and I would commend it to the House and ask for support for third reading.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The Alberta Liberal opposition cannot support this bill because within it a solution has not been found for the 40 per cent of seniors whose Blue Cross individual coverage will be tripled as a result. It's wonderful that 60 per cent of Albertan seniors are getting reduced prices, but the other 40 per cent are picking up the tab for this unfortunate circumstance. Their health care premiums have basically been traded for increased drug costs, and this is causing them great economic and physical hardship. They have been forced to make choices between paying their mortgages, buying their groceries, or having the medication that will sustain them and provide them a quality of life. Therefore, we are not supportive of Bill 34.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, stand in opposition to this bill. One of the main reasons I'm in opposition to it is because I've had too many seniors come through my office with actual, hard numbers about how this is going to affect them and how their choices will be limited. In fact, the conversations are: which drugs are they going to cut out? Which ones do they really need, and which ones don't they? For that very, very hard, in-your-face example of how this is affecting many seniors, I could not support this bill.

The Speaker: Other speakers?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 34 read a third time]

Bill 35Gas Utilities Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to enter the final debate on Bill 35, the Gas Utilities Amendment Act, 2009, its third reading. As mentioned in prior debates in this House, it's an administrative bill to amend existing legislation and give force to the ruling of the NEB, the National Energy Board, keeping in mind that the NEB is a federal regulator whose decisions, like those of our Energy Resources Conservation Board, are quasi-judicial.

There is a great future for Alberta in unlocking our vast pools of unconventional natural gas. Likewise, there is great potential for continued growth in Alberta's value-added sector. This is something that we've all talked about and I believe everyone sees as a desirable outcome.

To achieve that, our Alberta-based petrochemical industry needs access to increasing volumes of ethane feedstock from natural gas. This will provide more jobs for Albertans. As we move forward, some of that feedstock will come from natural gas that's transported across our borders into Alberta. The transportation of that gas must by necessity be federally regulated. Bill 35 speaks to that particular point and, in a broader sense, speaks to Alberta's future success in using the NOVA gas system, which will further diversify our economy and add value to our natural resources.

I encourage all members to support passage of this bill, and I thank you for the opportunity, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. member . . .

Mr. McFarland: I would like to move third reading.

The Speaker: Thank you. That's kind of important.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Liberal opposition recognizes the administrative nature of this bill and is supportive of it. In previous debate I recognized the important role of the Alberta Gas Trunk Line, which later became NOVA, which has now had the pipeline authority taken over by TransCanada. It's absolutely essential for our economy that this gas be moved, and therefore we support it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move third reading of Bill 42, the Gaming and Liquor Amendment Act, 2009.

This amending legislation is intended to improve the safety of the law-abiding public in and around Alberta's licensed premises. It does so by giving police and bar operators the authority they need to effectively address violence in bars and nightclubs. Violence is too often related to gangs and problem patrons in these establishments. With the full support of the police and licensees Bill 42 helps make Alberta's communities safer, more secure places in which to live, work, and play.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The Alberta Liberal opposition does not support Bill 42. It does not believe that simply allowing bar owners to exchange the identities of potential patrons who may or may not be involved with gang activities is proactive. We believe the emphasis, the energy, and the funding should go directly to police forces, as we have stated numerous times before. It's feet on the beat as opposed to trading information that will have a strong influence on the reduction of gang violence. As I have mentioned before, as a teacher, the way to eliminate gangs is by providing a good education, involving community resource officers at the school level, providing kids with opportunities to do the right thing so they don't end up as older individuals doing the wrong thing.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a few words on this in opposition. Certainly, there are some good parts, and I think that the intent is good. However, here we go again. The good guys pay. It's the good people that we are asking to turn over their identity cards. Where is the privacy in this? Where is the trust when I turn over my identification because I want to go into a bar? I might be looking for one of my kids. Who knows? Why would I trust these people?

The Speaker: It's an age matter.

Ms Pastoor: I'm sorry. I didn't hear.

The Speaker: Sorry, hon. member. Really, for you it would be an age matter, just to be sure that you are 18.

Ms Pastoor: Well, yes.

The Speaker: Sorry. I know I'm out of order.

Ms Pastoor: No, no. That's very true, and it has been a long time since I was ID'd. However, young people going through should have the same concern that somebody has private information.

Again, as I've said, it's the good guys that pay. We should be helping our police to go after the bad guys, and the good guys should be able to walk into a bar and not have to trust that the information that they're handing over to the bouncer at the door is going to be guarded safely.

For those very short reasons and the fact that it's been a long time since I was ID'd, I probably won't be involved with this. I'm still opposed to it. Thank you.

The Speaker: Others?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 42 read a third time]

Bill 41

Protection for Persons in Care Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move third reading of Bill 41, the Protection for Persons in Care Act.

The act has been rewritten to include a number of substantive changes that will help protect more Albertans who receive government-funded care and support services. Bill 41 speaks to the responsibility of Albertans to report abuse and for service providers to take reasonable steps to protect clients from abuse while they are providing care or support services. The Protection for Persons in Care act will expand the scope of the act to capture a broader group of service providers that deliver care and support services, include protection provisions for people who report abuse or assist in an investigation, improve the minister's ability to fulfill a more preventative and protective role, and increase the offence provisions within the act and the fines. As well, the act now outlines duties of complaints officers, investigators, and the director so that they will have more flexibility and scope to fulfill their duties.

This is legislation that reflects this government's priority to protect our most vulnerable citizens, and I urge all hon. members to support this bill on third reading.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It does give me pleasure to stand up and support this bill. There has been a great deal of work done on this bill, and some of it has come from the work that was done in 2005 on the MLA task force, and certainly the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill has also done some really good work to bring this together. It's a new bill, and I know that there has been controversy around it based on many unfortunate incidents that were prior to this. I think that this bill will help address some of those issues of abuse and neglect that had been happening prior to this.

One of the things that I'm happy to see is that there is an evaluation process in there. It also has a timeline, which is one of my big mantras. I like evaluation, and I like timelines so that we can look at things. One of the other aspects to this that isn't a part of this bill but that certainly goes adjunct to it is the fact that the government will be doing education on personal directives, which is actually an adjunct behaviour with this bill.

The only other thing that I would like to say, that I'm still not happy about, is that I still would like to see "police officer" stated in here rather than "peace officer." I think that police officers can move serious complaints through the system a lot faster than peace officers.

With those comments, I'm pleased to see this go forward. There's been a lot of work done on it, and I know that many, many people, who we can't even identify going forward, will be the beneficiaries of this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I, too, am rising in support of the intention and, hopefully, the resulting application of this bill. One thing that did not occur within Bill 41, which I hope will soon occur, is the establishment of a seniors' advocate. Whether it's in assisted living or long-term care, a number of seniors are abused not by direct negligence, not by direct neglect but by understaffing. There is also abuse of the workers in terms of the low pay scale that they receive for the very important work they do in looking after seniors. Hopefully, as part of revisions of Bill 41 the seniors' advocate, the treatment of individuals, both those that are giving the care and those in receipt of the care, will improve.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 41 read a third time]

Bill 52 Health Information Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to move third reading of Bill 52, the Health Information Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 52 was referred to the Standing Committee on Health by this House on November 27, 2008. I would like to thank this all-party committee for its hard work in recommending amendments, which were passed in this House, that reflect a consensus of opinion in response to the many concerns raised by average Albertans, doctors, and the Privacy Commissioner to improve the effectiveness of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would encourage all colleagues to support third reading of Bill 52. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We also, the Liberal opposition, recognize the hard work of committee members to make the privacy associated with records that much more intact. A number of physicians and their patients still have reservations about how the information will be protected and with whom it will be shared. These remain still of great concern. Hopefully, working through Bill 52, that information will be held back from those who are not entitled to it and will be speedily accessed by those in need of it. It's also important to note that a person's medical records belong equally to them as they do to their physicians.

One of the problems that has occurred to date is the passing on of records when a physician retires to the individual taking over that responsibility. It's particularly difficult in rural Alberta, where there is a shortage of physicians. When one person retires, there are times when there's not another person to take their place, and those records are basically frozen until that time. Bill 52 moves towards correcting that problem, and hopefully physicians and patients and patient Albertans will have the opportunity to recognize that the government does hold their information in the securest format possible.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 52 read a third time]

Bill 33 Fiscal Responsibility Act

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Finance and Enterprise it's, indeed, my privilege to move third reading of Bill 33, the Fiscal Responsibility Act.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Liberal opposition is certainly not opposed to fiscal responsibility but considers this alignment of terminology an oxymoron in Alberta. We question the fiscal responsibility that led the government into the highest deficit historically in this province, $4.7 billion. As I've stated before, that is just part of the debt: $8.6 billion in terms of the unfunded teachers' liability, well over $10 billion in defrayed infrastructure, at least $1.5 billion in other public service unfunded liabilities. As I've stated before, we have exceeded the $23 billion that Premier Klein paid off on the backs of civil servants. So fiscal responsibility is something that has not yet arrived in Alberta.

A savings plan has not arrived in Alberta. The combined approximately $13 billion to $14 billion of the sustainability fund and the capital fund will be eaten through in rapid time unless this government comes up with a more substantial savings plan, that also recognizes the importance of doing things in a traditional manner when it comes to infrastructure, avoiding long-term 32-year P3 debt and taking advantage of our current recessionary circumstance, where labour is less expensive and materials are less expensive and, therefore, we can accomplish a lot of catch-up in terms of public infrastructure. As a former teacher I would like that money to be spent on school maintenance as well as construction. Of course, shelled-in hospitals are not able to serve patients, so we need the staffing in those hospitals and the construction completed.

We cannot support the Fiscal Responsibility Act because it's simply irresponsible. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 33, the Fiscal Responsibility Act. I think the limit on the nonrenewable resource revenue that can be spent is gone, and there's no legislation on annual spending increases, no commitment to savings other than a vague statement to top up the sustainability fund to $10 billion if surplus dollars become available – if they become available. This bill just lets the government spend every penny they have. This move makes them less fiscally responsible than they were before, you know, when we were swimming in money. If we couldn't be fiscally responsible then, how are we going to be fiscally responsible now? The only limit now on deficits and drawing from the sustainability fund is that the fund can't be drawn below what is in the account, meaning that the government can spend every penny in the sustainability fund and can spend every penny of nonrenewable resource revenue without any of it having to be put into the sustainability fund.

While the Treasury Board had the authority to draw funds out of the sustainability fund, there was at least, in principle, a limitation on how that could be done. The justification used for this is to improve flexibility as the previous legislation was too complex. The Fiscal Responsibility Act is actually quite short and specific, so calling it complex seems like a bit of a reach.

There was a clause that stated that $2 and a half billion had to remain in the sustainability fund as a contingency for natural disasters, which has been removed. You know, this doesn't seem like a fiscal responsibility act; this seems like a spend, spend, spend act. The Fiscal Responsibility Act was nothing more than a stunt in the first place since it was never actually effective. I don't know how this government is being fair to future generations by removing any caps, or limits, on the amount of resource revenue and savings in the sustainability fund that it can spend. What is the plan if the money runs out?

I think this government made a big mistake spending this money very wildly. You know, they were spending more aggressively than the money was even coming in, spending 23 per cent more per capita, I believe, than other jurisdictions. The spending has been going up 10 per cent year over year, and $60 billion is just gone like that. Had we tied the spending down to inflation and population, I think our budget could have been about $27 billion instead of $37 billion. I think we have been spending like drunken sailors here. There was no plan to save for a rainy day. Whatever money the government claims to be saying they have saved in the sustainability fund will, if this keeps up for another maybe two or three years, all be gone. What are we going to do then?

We take into account the shortfall of teachers' pensions. If, God forbid, there's any other major disaster, you know, I think we are going to be in deep, deep trouble. We claim to be the richest jurisdiction in North America. Look what happened with laser surgery. You know, we couldn't even afford to spend $100,000 on the machine. What happens if there is, like I said, some major disaster? What are we going to do? Are we going to depend, maybe, on private business to bail us out? Are we going to go cap in hand to Ottawa? That's what has been happening already.

For those reasons, I'm going to oppose Bill 33. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I would like a few remarks on the record in opposition to this bill. A number of things have been taken from this bill. The previous legislation stated that any amount of the nonrenewable resource revenue over $5.3 billion was to be transferred to the sustainability fund. It's been removed. Previous legislation stated that $2.5 billion had to be retained in the sustainability fund for public emergencies, amounts payable under the Natural Gas Price Protection Act, expenses paid or payable for the capital account, and payments to the First Nations. That has been removed.

Section 3 states that the capital account is dissolved into the sustainability fund, which, as we've just heard, has basically disappeared. Any surpluses that may occur in subsequent years shall now be transferred into a sustainability fund. Section 3(1) states that the purpose of this section is to use the sustainability fund to fund deficit years "with a view to adding to or replenishing the Fund in years in which there are cash surpluses." It's vague and it's really meaningless, when you see what else has gone on within this bill.

The only provision on fiscal responsibility in the whole bill is section 3(6), that simply states that the sustainability fund cannot be drawn below zero, effectively meaning that the government can now spend every penny available until there's no money available, using the excuse that there's no point in saving because there will always be money coming in. I think that's a very weak argument.

The section legislating the contingency allowance equal to 1 per cent of the revenue for fiscal policy purposes, i.e. the $5.3 billion, has also now been eliminated.

For those reasons stated, I cannot support this bill.

The Speaker: Others?

Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 33 read a third time]

Bill 23

Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 23 is essentially a bill that is brought forward to improve assessment complaints and appeals processes with respect to municipal governments across the province.

I would move it for third reading and ask the House to support it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I find myself, as I frequently am, in support of the Minister of Education. Bill 23 is a bill that takes some of the laborious assessment process off the shoulders of the municipalities, which they are gratefully handing back to the province. Considering that the assessments are based on provincial regulations, it does make sense, and it also opens up the opportunities for residential owners to appeal the process.

What needs to be taken into account, and I hope that Bill 23 does, is the fact that just the geographic location of a residence should not be its prime consideration. There are a lot of seniors who are living in downtown areas where their property values have risen considerably higher than the value of the home in which they are currently trying to continue living. Until the assessment process recognizes not only the value of the property but the nature of the dwelling on that property, seniors will continue to pay exorbitant taxation rates. Of course, we all are waiting, and as we get closer to approaching seniors, we recognize the fact that the government took away the exemption that seniors had in paying the education portion of their property tax in 1993. Seniors are patiently waiting for that exemption to be given back because taxes continue going up and their fixed allowances remain. I would hope that maybe it will be Bill 24 in the fall that will address and finally give back to seniors that exemption for the educational portion of their property taxes.

However, we are supportive. This is a step in the right direction, as the hon. Minister of Education pointed out. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others?

Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 23 read a third time]

Bill 29

Family Law Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There are just a couple of comments that I want to get on the record in third reading, much to the chagrin of my friend from Airdrie-Chestermere. The way that the law currently is on this is that a parent that does not actually submit his or her financial information year over year is deemed to have a 10 per cent increase, and this would accelerate that increase after the first year. The one thing I would just like all hon. members to consider in this legislation is that many of these people just simply fall onto the social assistance or other government assistance rolls if it's impossible for them to collect their child support. That is something to consider. This is in the best interests not only of parents and children but also of taxpayers.

With that, I move third reading of Bill 29.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The Alberta Liberal opposition supports the notion that the family – well, basically, that it takes a village to raise a family is the concept that's put out there. It's also very fortunate if you have two individuals involved in that raising, whether it be a mother and a father, two mothers, or two fathers. The love and support they provide for the child is absolutely important to their development.

Back in November of 2007 I put forward Motion 511, which was unanimously accepted by this House. It called for a unified family court process. This, unfortunately, has not occurred within the framework of Bill 29. But I and thousands of families across this province hope that there will be a simplification of the court process so that the interjurisdictional wranglings that occurred between the Court of Queen's Bench and the provincial court are eliminated and families can be served more quickly, efficiently, and without the heavy costs associated with court battles.

Taking children into custody as opposed to requiring larger support not only for the parents but in this case, as Bill 29 points out, from the parents is extremely important. That financial disclosure and the requirement of a parent to live up to the expectations of raising their child or, if not directly within the home, at least providing the support for the raising of that child is absolutely essential. That is one of the many reasons we support Bill 29.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 29 read a third time]

Bill 30

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, at this time I'd like to stand and move third reading of Bill 30, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009.

I think it's very important that we keep our roads and all of our other transportation issues in Alberta very safe. I think that there are a whole lot of things within this act that are needed today. I'd like to move it now.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. We also are supportive of the intent of Bill 30. One thing that remains unaddressed in this bill and, hopefully, will appear in the fall is the government's distracted-driving legislation. The government to date has equated eating a hamburger and talking on a cellphone as equally distractive, the difference being that the hamburger doesn't talk back, although for some members that may be the case. However, we are supportive of the intent of Bill 30. If you find yourself talking back to your hamburger, then I suggest you get the appropriate psychological care required.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others?

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm also supportive of Bill 30. As well, I spoke in favour of that before, too. There were some concerns, issues we had. I think that verbally those issues have been addressed. You know, we were talking about an Alberta provincial police force, and those concerns have been addressed.

3:40

The concerns I had, as the Member for Calgary-Varsity raised, about cellphones being used when we are driving, hopefully, will be addressed in the future soon, too, so that we can make the streets, the roads safer for all Albertans. You know, it's costing $4 billion a year for accidents. It costs us lots of money in productivity and health care and insurance costs. I think we should be much more vigilant for the safety of Albertans.

I will be supporting Bill 30, Mr. Speaker, as long as we get the other issues addressed in the fall session. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall was the third speaker here, so we do have our Standing Order 29(2)(a) if anybody wants to exercise it. I gather that nobody does.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise to speak on Bill 30 in third reading. As the Minister of Transportation had tremendous fun pointing out in question period today, our caucus had previously spoken to Bill 30 and at that time had indeed spoken in favour of it.

However, we are, in fact, not entirely perfect, both of us, our tiny little caucus. I'd like to think we are, but we're not quite. We are tiny but not perfect, unlike other people with similar names, and that is because as much as we do work as hard as we do, we don't get a chance to read everything through in as much detail as we would like, particularly when you're going through this many bills. So periodically there is an oversight.

In this case we believe that there was an oversight on our part with respect to our analysis of the bill and the concerns that we needed to raise in regard to that analysis, notwithstanding that we hadn't had an opportunity to raise them till now. In particular, as the leader of the third party has stated in question period, there is a concern around one element of this bill that would limit the liability of motor vehicle rental companies to $1 million.

It is on the basis of that concern, then, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to move an amendment to the bill at this point. Distribute it?

The Speaker: You should have sufficient copies with Parliament Counsel's initials on them. Yes, the pages will bring the first one to me, and we will distribute the rest and to the table as well. Just wait, hon. member, till we arrive at the point that there's some distribution.

Hon. member, you may proceed. Please read into the record your amendment.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The amendment reads that the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting the following:

Bill 30, Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a third time because the bill limits the liability of motor vehicle rental companies to $1 million and thereby fails to protect the interests of individuals injured in motor vehicle accidents.

May I speak to the motion now?

The Speaker: You are on the floor, and you're recognized. Narrowly to the amendment.

Ms Notley: Okay. Thank you. The reason that we are proposing this amendment is because, as I've said before, the act otherwise addresses safety issues in a way that is satisfactory to our caucus. It is our concern that this particular element does not and, in fact, may well result in harm being done to victims of motor vehicle accidents.

Essentially, as I believe the leader of the third party has already pointed out, the concern arises where someone is a victim of a traffic accident and incurs injury which exceeds $1 million. Many years ago, of course, we wouldn't have thought that that would happen very often, but as we know now, that can happen quite often. It can happen in terms of lost income, and it can also happen in relation to the cost of care, depending on the severity of the injury. If there's more than one person that is a victim of the accident, that form of injury can go further than that.

Now, I do understand that, of course, people who rent vehicles – and I'd certainly be happy to be contradicted by the minister in this regard. My understanding is that if this passes, what will happen is that when a person chooses to rent a vehicle, they would be given the option to purchase additional insurance. But it is not my understanding that they are compelled to purchase additional insurance. Now, obviously, the person who makes that decision puts their own future in jeopardy because they themselves know that should they get into an accident and should they cause an accident where damages exceed $1 million, they would be personally liable for those additional damages.

My understanding – and, again, I'd be happy to be corrected by the minister if I'm incorrect – is that it is still the option of the person renting the vehicle whether they will buy that additional insurance and that it is possible that they might rent a vehicle and choose not to buy that additional insurance. Of course, it's not the person who is concerned about the extra money that we worry about; it's the person who's just barely scraping together enough money to be able to afford to pay the cost of renting the vehicle.

Then we have a situation where that person does ultimately cause an accident. Let's just say that there are a mother, a father, and two children in the vehicle, and both parents are fatally injured. Well, at that point, let me tell you, we've established an amount of damages that far exceeds $1 million. Then the person who has rented the vehicle and opted not to buy the additional insurance is damage-proof or can't be sued because they effectively have almost no assets. At the end of the day the person who suffers as a result is the victim in that accident.

I will be quite honest. I appreciate that a similar amendment was made with respect to leased vehicles last fall. Again, we did not understand the consequences of it at the time, nor did we note it. Now, I believe that with leased vehicles it's more often the case than an employer is paying for additional insurance, but even then there is a problem.

Here I think you will have more cases of people who rent vehicles choosing not to buy additional insurance and not being covered for additional insurance. Indeed, I can think in my own life where that actually happened. They were acquaintances of mine. The people that were injured ultimately were paid directly by the people who had rented the vehicle because they didn't have the insurance that they thought they had.

Again, I would be perfectly happy to have the minister tell me that our interpretation of how this works is incorrect, but my understanding is that this opens up the potential for people to be on the road with a maximum amount of insurance of $1 million. That, to us, is of great concern because it is the victims of those accidents who will pay the cost of that.

It's for this reason that we're asking that the bill not be read a third time. What happens is that ultimately in the next session the government can come forward without that section included.

Thank you.

The Speaker: On the amendment, the hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to be very brief here and try to calm what she believes. Really, what we're saying here has nothing to do with if you get hurt in an accident, the maximum you can get is a million dollars if there's a rental car involved. What we're saying is that the rental company, that is not responsible at all other than renting somebody a vehicle because they're supplying a business, shouldn't be the ones held responsible, but we are still holding them responsible for that up to a million dollars. In any other vehicle out there, as you know, in Alberta the requirement is only $200,000 for insurance.

This isn't insurance we're talking about; this is capping the liability at a million dollars for a company that may not have been responsible for any of it. You still can go after the driver of the vehicle, the person that rented it, the person that actually caused the accident. Maybe the person has some worth; maybe they don't. That's not for us to decide. But I will say from what she was commenting on, if you go talk to rental car companies, most of the people renting cars and stuff are the people that are travelling and the people that need it for business, and most of them have money in their pocket, Mr. Speaker, to the opposite of what the hon. member was trying to say.

All we're trying to do here is bring out parity, bring out fairness across the board with everyone else out there, and not hold responsible the person that maybe wasn't the one that caused the accident or the one that was responsible. But it sure as heck isn't there to try to limit somebody, no matter how catastrophic their injuries are or their accident was, to this $1 million. One catastrophe is too many, Mr. Speaker. I've been told by our researchers that of all the accidents we've had, hundreds of thousands of collisions in a year, there are only 30 that have ever had a claim of over a million dollars. But that's not the point here because one would be too many.

We're saying that we're not limiting it to that million dollars. They still have the people that were responsible for the accident to go after, Mr. Speaker. We're trying to make it fair. We're also following the other provinces of British Columbia and Ontario, that have brought in the same legislation. We just overlooked that last year on the other bill when we did it with leasing agents, and now all we've done is added car rentals to it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the amendment.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you very much. Speaking on the amendment, which talks about the cost of insurance payments, one of the concerns that has been previously discussed with the highway safety amendment act was that in that particular act the fine for driving without insurance was actually less than the cost of insurance, so people would continue to drive on the highways and take their chances as to whether they were going to be pulled over or not. So this is sort of reminiscent of the concerns with regard to insufficient or nonexistent insurance. Related to the insurance area is what is currently before the courts, and that's the caps that the government has attempted to work with the insurance companies to place on undefinable soft-tissue injuries. This has the potential of resulting in a 40 per cent increase.

I understand why the hon. member brought up the notion. We have to balance, obviously, the responsibility of the driver and the responsibility of the rental company. It's a very complex issue, and I'm not convinced that in the time remaining we can adequately deal with it. I do appreciate the hon. member for bringing up this concern. It's one of many concerns dealing with improper or inadequate insurance policies.

The Speaker: The hon. member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the hon. member brought up a valid concern. The intent is good. Like the Minister of Transportation said, the majority of Albertans carry $200,000 of insurance. I believe I've got a million dollars of insurance coverage. So what happens if I get into an accident and the damage is more than that million bucks? They could come after me. We should be somehow trying to address the concern the hon. member brought up. The concern is there. I think we should address that concern: if the damage is more than a million bucks, what happens then? I think the intent is good. The concern is good, but how are we going to address it? I don't think we can do that today. But it's a very valid concern.

On that note, thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others on the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment to third reading of Bill 30 lost]

The Speaker: We're back to debate on the bill.

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 30 read a third time]

The Speaker: Hon. members, you're now going to go into Committee of the Whole. This probably won't take very long. I want to wish all of you the very best as you go through the summer. You will adjourn probably in a few minutes, but I will not be in the House, so all the best to you for the summer. You know when you're coming back according to Standing Order 3(4)(b).

Length of Service of the Member for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, before you leave, given that you're not coming back, may I just mention for the record that it has come to the attention of elected members that you were elected on November 21, 1979, and have now served 10,788 days in office. You are now as of tomorrow the longest serving Progressive Conservative MLA in the history of the province. Now, of course, that brings you to being the fifth-longest serving Alberta MLA, the longest serving currently sitting Speaker in the House and, of course, as shown by your ruling today, certainly among the wisest.

We just wanted to have that on the record. [standing ovation]

The Speaker: You're very kind. Thank you very much.

Private Bills Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill Pr. 2 Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move the first of two amendments to this bill.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, you're moving an amendment. Do we have it here?

Mr. Elniski: Yes.

The Deputy Chair: We'll pause a moment while we pass out the first one.

Hon. members, may we revert for a moment to introductions?

[Unanimous consent granted]

4:00 Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly our summer staff member at the NDP opposition caucus. Isabelle Lecours was born in Longueuil in the province of Quebec. She obtained a college diploma degree in social sciences at Champlain college at St. Lambert, and she is currently completing a bachelor's degree in communications in poli-sci at Université du Québec à Montréal. Isabelle is interested in national politics, international relations, and diplomacy. She aspires to achieve a doctor's degree in political science. Her ultimate career objective is to work for the United Nations, and I've no doubt that she will learn many things here that will give her much assistance at that time. I would now ask that Isabelle please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll read the first amendment into the record with respect to Bill Pr. 2, Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. The following is added after section 4: under 4.1 section 2(2) is amended by adding “subject to the laws of those jurisdictions” after “Canada.” Under 4.2 section 8 is repealed, and the following is substituted:

8 The members of the corporation are not as members liable for any liability, act or default of the corporation.

Under 4.3 the following is added after section 9:

Filings with the Registrar of Corporations

9.1(1) The corporation shall, once in each calendar year, file with the Registrar of Corporations the following:

- (a) the annual financial statements and auditor’s report;
- (b) a list of the directors and officers of the corporation, with their addresses and occupations.

(2) The corporation shall file with the Registrar of Corporations a copy of the by-laws of the corporation and any amendments or additions to the by-laws.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: Any comments on the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the amendment, and we’ll call this amendment A1.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Speaking specifically to the amendment, I want to draw the House’s attention to 4.3, section 9.1(1)(a), where the corporation shall, once in each calendar year, file with the Registrar of Corporations the following:

- (a) the annual financial statements and auditor’s report.

That addresses accountability.

- (b) a list of the directors and officers of the corporation, with their addresses and occupations.

That deals with transparency. We’re all about accountability and transparency, Mr. Chair, and therefore we support this amendment. Thank you.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to introduce a second amendment to Bill Pr. 2, Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

The Deputy Chair: This will be amendment A2, and we’ll pause while it’s being circulated.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I’d like to move that Bill Pr. 2, Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be amended. The following is added after section 8:

8.1 No action for damages may be commenced against a director or officer of the corporation for anything done or omitted to be done by that person in good faith in the performance of the person’s duties or functions or the exercise of the person’s powers under this or any other enactment.

The Deputy Chair: Any comments or questions? This is amendment A2. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I recognize the fact that this is an amendment that came from an all-party committee and that, therefore, I am obliged to support it. I have a little bit of difficulty with the language in 8.1, where it says, “No action for damages may be commenced against a director or officer of the corporation for anything done or omitted to be done by that person in good faith.”

I understand and I appreciate the nature of whistle-blower legislation. I appreciate the fact that a person is doing their best, whether, as was discussed yesterday, it’s a fireman, and that we need to protect these individuals in the jobs that they are doing. I just hope that good faith is matched with good intelligence and that, therefore, good results occur.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill on amendment A2.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to speak in favour of the amendment as proposed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. This amendment would put the directors and officers of the Caritas Health Group on the same footing as the regional health authorities’ directors and officers, and the wording which is proposed in 8.1 directly tracks the provisions in that other statute. I think it’s reasonable. It’s something that we accord to people who are acting in public service. Firemen, for example, also have the same sort of exemption from liability provided that they’re carrying out their duties in good faith.

I am supportive of the amendment as proposed and would urge all hon. members to vote in favour of the amendment.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak?

I will call the question on amendment A2 as proposed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

[Motion on amendment A2 carried]

The Deputy Chair: We’re now on Bill Pr. 2 as amended. Shall I call the question on that?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill Pr. 2 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report Bill Pr. 2.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill with some amendments: Bill Pr. 2. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Private Bills
Third Reading

[The members indicated below moved that the following bills be read a third time, and the motions were carried]

Pr. 1 Beverly Anne Cormier Adoption Termination Act	Anderson
Pr. 2 Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009	Elniski

Bill Pr. 3
Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we end, I think the hon. Member for Red Deer-South wanted to infuse some humour into this as he's going to test my French, so I'd like to move third reading of Bill Pr. 3, Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Merci, M. le Président. M. Goudreau et moi, nous sommes d'accord que Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act est une bonne loi. Alors, nous allons la supporter.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 3 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We appear to have come to the end of the day's agenda, and we appear to have come to the end of the session's agenda. There are a number of bills remaining on the Order Paper which, we've indicated, will be left over for discussion in the fall. That being the case and given the hour, I would move, mindful of Standing Order 3(4), that the Assembly now stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. on October 26.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:13 p.m. pursuant to Standing Order 3(4)]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Welcome back.

Let us pray. Grant us daily awareness of the precious gift of life which has been given to us. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we dedicate our lives anew to the service of our province and of our country. Amen.

Hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, we'll now proceed to the singing of our national anthem. We'll be led today by Mr. Paul Lorieau, and I would invite all members and all guests to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Presentation to the Assembly of Mr. Paul Hinman Member for Calgary-Glenmore

The Speaker: Hon. members, I've received from the Acting Chief Electoral Officer of Alberta the report of the returning officer for the constituency of Calgary-Glenmore containing the results of the by-election conducted on September 14, 2009, which states that a by-election was conducted in the constituency of Calgary-Glenmore and that Mr. Paul Hinman was duly elected as the Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

[Preceded by the Sergeant-at Arms, Mr. Hinman approached the Mace]

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have the honour to present to you Paul Hinman, the new Member for Calgary-Glenmore, who has taken the oath as a member of this House, has inscribed the roll, and now claims the right to take his seat. Hon. member, please take your seat.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature a very, very special guest, His Excellency David Jacobson, the newly appointed United States ambassador to Canada. The United States is our closest neighbour. It's also our province's largest and most important trading partner.

In addition to serving in the White House, assisting the President, and the ambassador's successful career as a lawyer, he has worked to advance nanotechnology and the economic competitiveness of cities, two areas in which Alberta is very interested. Members may recall that Mr. Jacobson visited Alberta just a couple of weeks ago. We are certainly very appreciative of the fact that he took the time so early in his tenure to learn first-hand about Alberta, especially about our energy sector. Today I look forward to speaking with the ambassador about the close relationship that exists between our province and his country, and I am confident that under Mr. Jacobson that relationship will continue to grow and to be strengthened.

I would like to congratulate our new ambassador on his position. I'm looking forward to, again, building the relationship on behalf of all Albertans. I wish him every success in this new position and let him know that he is always welcome in our great province of Alberta. I will ask him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure to stand and introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly the new leader of the Wildrose Alliance, Danielle Smith. She's just gone through a vigorous leadership campaign and was very victorious in that, and it's a pleasure to introduce her to the floor. I ask that she stand and receive the warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 30 students from l'école St. Angela in the fine constituency of Edmonton-Calder and their teacher, Miss Sophia DeRose. All of the students are here this week attending the School at the Legislature. I would ask them to all now rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and through to members of the Assembly 25 students from Sweet Grass school. They are accompanied today by their teacher, Mrs. Nicki Gardner. They've been here learning about the legislative process and have asked some very tough questions. I'd like to invite them now to stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly 27 Alberta government employees from Employment and Immigration. They represent a variety of areas in the ministry. Some of these individuals work directly with Albertans to improve their work-related skills; promote and enforce fair, safe, and healthy work environments; and provide support to those in need. They also help newcomers settle into their communities. Others work in corporate roles like IT, data development, finance, administration, intergovernmental relations, and information and privacy. Each staff member plays an important part in helping Albertans reach their potential in the workplace. I believe they are in both galleries. I would like them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a special guest, John Hampson, who is sitting in the members' gallery. John has served for the past year on the Children and Youth Services Youth Advisory Panel, and John and his fellow panelists this past year tackled a number of important issues, including our gang strategy, homelessness, and provided ongoing input into the Alberta mentorship partnership. John is attending the University of Calgary and has recently become a constituent of Banff-Cochrane. I would ask that he rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. [applause]

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't know what that was for.

An Hon. Member: First time up.

Mr. Webber: First time up, yes.

Actually, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly our new U.S. consul general, Ms Laura Lochman. Ms Laura Lochman has replaced Mr. Tom Huffaker, who was our past U.S. consul out of Calgary. Tom was and continues to be a good friend of mine. He is now with CAPP in Calgary. Laura has replaced him. I've met her on a few occasions, and she has just been an absolute pleasure. Today I understand that she apparently represents the largest geographic area of any consul general in the United States. Laura, welcome to Alberta. Welcome to Calgary. We look forward to working well with you through your office and with the ambassador. Thank you for coming today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two wonderful young Albertans: first, Riley Georgsen from my constituency, who is here with his new bride, Samantha. Riley is now living in Calgary with Samantha. Of course, Calgary is better for that. Riley has been an amazing young person in volunteer work in the constituency. He also is probably single-handedly responsible for bringing me into the new century technologically and getting me in touch with young people in Alberta through the new mediums. I would ask for them to please rise now and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a guest who is in the public gallery, Mr. Raghbir Singh Badesha. Mr. Badesha is a teacher by trade and is very interested in the Canadian political system, so he is here today to watch question period. Question period is a great opportunity for him to witness our democracy in action. I would like to ask Mr. Badesha to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise. With us today is Alberta Firefighters Association president, Mr. Craig Macdonald. A few days ago a half-dozen or so of our members geared up in firefighters' outfits and entered a live fire just to see the risks and dangers involved in the firefighting profession. To say the least, the atmosphere in that chamber was hotter than we sometimes face over here in this Chamber. Firefighters will be approaching members of this Legislature as time goes on, asking for the addition of two additional cancers onto a list of presumptive cancer legislation with the Workers' Compensation Board. I would ask Mr. Craig Macdonald to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Also, I have a very young and, indeed, inspiring constituent. Mr. David Adomako-Ansah has struggled with several health problems. After contracting lupus, he had a stroke. Then he was on a Berlin heart awaiting a heart transplant. Also, a pacemaker was implemented. Recently, in February, he had a heart transplant. While going through all that, Mr. Speaker, imagine: he has started a not-for-profit agency and started raising money for the Stollery children's hospital through basketball. He has created a foundation called the Dunk on Disease Foundation. Now he's fully recovered. He's attending NAIT. He will be a broadcaster when he graduates. He tells me that he will not stop raising money for Stollery for as long as he possibly can. I would like to ask him to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly. He's truly an inspirational man.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly, seated in the members' gallery, two constituents from Edmonton-Meadowlark. The first constituent is Brent McGillis. He's a hard-working Albertan and an ironworker.

My second constituent is Sharon Crawford. Sharon is an advocate for the transgendered community and no stranger to the Legislature as her father is the hon. Neil Stanley Crawford.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, seated in the public gallery, the future doctors are in the House. We have 50 medical students from the universities of Alberta and Calgary, who are here for the Pan-Alberta Political Action Day. They are meeting with MLAs regarding the rural integrated clinical clerkship, which places medical students in rural communities for 36 weeks of training.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask all of my guests to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three individuals who attend upon the House today to remind particularly the Minister of Health and Wellness that there are a number of issues around gender reassignment surgery that remain unresolved. I'd ask them to please rise. They are Mercedes Allen, Jan Buterman, and Amy Swanson. If you would please rise and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly additional members of the Trans Equality Society of Alberta and transgendered community supporters. My guests are concerned about the lack of consultation given to the decision to cut funding for gender reassignment surgery. They believe that all potential cuts to health care should be given careful thought about how they affect Albertans, and they feel it's reasonable to ask the same regarding gender reassignment surgery. I would now ask my guests, who are seated in the members' gallery, to please rise as I call their names: April Friesen, Sabrina Dow, Gina Bennett, Eva Ryckman, Terry Ferguson, and Michelle Drinkell. If you could join me in providing them with the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and introduce a very special guest this afternoon and a very good friend of mine. It is a great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly Mr. Bill Smith. Mr. Smith is a former firefighter. Many members of this House will know that he is also a well-respected lawyer in the Calgary community. He is the incoming president of the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta, and we are very excited about that. I'd ask all members in this Assembly today to join me in extending a warm welcome to Mr. Smith.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly three people representing Meyers Norris Penny. These people are here today to witness the introduction of Bill 53 later this afternoon. I would ask Mr. Cal Carpenter, Mr. Tim Dawson, and Mr. Lanny Westersund to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature a couple of my bosses, constituents from Calgary-North Hill, Jessica Powless and Greg Conlin. It would be fair to say that I would not be sitting here today if it weren't for the hard work and dedication of Jessica. She was a tireless worker on my campaign, and I owe her a great deal of gratitude. Her boyfriend, Greg Conlin, is a power engineer at Enmax and is not only a born and raised Calgarian and Albertan but a born and raised Calgary-North Hillian. I'd like them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to the rest of the Assembly two individuals among dozens who showed up at the Legislature today to show their concern about the progressive erosion in the health care system. They are Carol Kujala and Gerry Chiasson. Please rise, and we'll extend to you the welcome of the Assembly.

The Clerk: Oral Question Period.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we proceed, there have been some changes.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it would be appropriate to ask for unanimous consent of the House for today only, because it's our first day back, to allow continued introductions and then the ministerial statement and responses that were anticipated.

1:50

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 7(1.1) says, "At 1:50 p.m., the Assembly shall proceed to Oral Question Period with the balance of the daily routine to follow." There's a request being made here by the Government House Leader to waive this section of our standing orders and to proceed with the Routine, which would include the conclusion of introductions and dealing with the subject matter of a ministerial statement and the appropriate response. Unanimous consent would need to be granted.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, thank the hon. Government House Leader for that one.

From my constituency of Fort McMurray, the oil sands capital of the world, it's my pleasure to introduce a gentleman who has called Fort McMurray his home for over 30 years. In fact, he ran a restaurant, a 24-hour café, for the last 25 years, and now he runs my constituency office. I'd ask the honourable representative from Fort McMurray, Vaughn Jessome, to rise. Also, with him today is Rolando Nicolas. They are both in the gallery. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, it's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly two other excellent Wildrose Alliance members. They are tireless soldiers that have helped me in the by-election. I'd like to introduce to the Assembly Said Abdalbaki and his cousin Mustapha Abdalbaki.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I believe that that concludes my list of those who indicated to me their desire to do an introduction today. Did I miss anyone?

Well, then, let me draw to your attention the presence today in the House of the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright, who today is celebrating an anniversary of birth. Happy birthday.

Ministerial Statements

H1N1 Influenza Vaccination Program

Mr. Liepert: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I thank all members for changing the House rules for today. I think it is an important day because today marks the launch of Alberta's H1N1 pandemic flu vaccine program across the province. I'd like to take this opportunity to join our chief medical officer of health in urging all Albertans, including every member of this Assembly, to join in the effort to control this new virus by taking advantage of the incredible efforts of the medical community to make a safe vaccine available in such a short time.

As I stated in a previous statement to the Legislature, the province is prepared. We received approval from Health Canada last week for the new vaccine. It's been shipped across the province, staff have been trained, clinics are now up and running, and we've communicated to the public the importance of protecting themselves, their families, and friends. There's just one more thing that has to happen: Albertans have to roll up their sleeves and help us get the job done.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes we take medical advances for granted. Here we are, in a situation where a new virus appeared in April, challenging public health officials around the world, and within six months we have a safe and effective vaccine ready for delivery. It's actually quite amazing compared to pandemic situations in the past. Yet we still see polls saying that people are reluctant to get their shots. They say that there's too much confusion. Some say that the vaccine isn't safe, et cetera. Well, I'm here to give the people of Alberta a simple message: we have a safe, effective vaccine, don't listen to the naysayers, and get immunized.

Mass clinics started delivering the vaccine across Alberta today, focusing on the high-risk groups first. I'd ask everyone to please check www.albertahealthservices.ca for the nearest clinic. That means that people under 65 with chronic health conditions and their caregivers, kids between six months and five years of age, pregnant women, health care workers, and people in remote or isolated settings and communities, all these groups, should get immunized as soon as possible. No one will be turned away at the clinics, but we are aiming to have those groups who can benefit the most come forward first.

The vaccine will be offered initially through mass immunization clinics as this is the most efficient means of immunizing a large number of people in as short a time as possible. Alberta Health Services will also look at the possibility of resuming immunization programs for the seasonal flu in seniors' lodges once a critical mass of the general population has been immunized for H1N1.

In the next several weeks, once the vaccine stockpile in Alberta increases, we'll distribute that supply to other vaccine providers, including family physicians, pharmacists, and private vendors who contract with large employers to set up immunization clinics in the workplace.

As our chief medical officer confirmed last week, we are now in the second wave, as predicted, and people need to keep practising those other common-sense behaviours as well. They include coughing into your sleeve, staying home if you're sick, washing your hands, and calling Health Link for further advice if you're not getting better.

Now, I'm not a medical expert, but those who are all say the same thing: the vaccine is the best way to control this pandemic. I urge all Albertans to go out and get immunized.

As we move further into the flu season, Alberta's chief medical officer of health in conjunction with other health experts will continue to provide timely, accurate, and important information in our fight against H1N1.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Health and Wellness is correct when he says that Albertans should ignore people spreading disinformation about the safety of vaccines. The safe, responsible thing to do is to get immunized as soon as possible for the H1N1 influenza.

This morning about 9:20 I drove past the immunization clinic at Westmount mall in Edmonton. I was hoping to get immunized myself. I was startled to see a lineup that went out the door and stretched way around the outside of the building. Hundreds of people were trying to do just what the minister has asked, get immunized. But the organization is clearly not in place for this to succeed.

We are already in our office getting phone calls from across the province that the immunization clinics are swamped. We're being told that there are few, if any, provisions for disabled people, that seniors, pregnant women, children, and others are being expected to stand for hours. People are asking why, for all of Calgary, in a serious pandemic that has been foreseen for half a year, there are only four immunization clinics and only five in Edmonton. Nine clinics to urgently immunize 2 million people won't do the job.

If this is the best this government can do, it is not good enough. The shortfalls of the immunization campaign are almost certain to lead to a surge in emergency wards and intensive care units. People will become critically ill and some will die because they do not have immunizations, and some of those people, perhaps many of them, will not have immunizations because, despite months of preparation time, this government could only open nine clinics for 2 million people.

We have a chance here if this government acts immediately to correct this problem. I urge this administration to act this afternoon and order urgent action to expand the immunization program. Even if the current clinics run 24/7, the flu season may be over before a large proportion of the population is immunized.

Mr. Speaker, my plan originally for this statement was to join the minister this afternoon in a simple plea to Albertans to get immunized. Clearly, it's not Albertans who need to hear a plea. They are trying to do their duty. It is this government that needs to pay attention. While I urge all Albertans to join the long lineups at these immunization clinics, my real plea is to this government: act now, this afternoon, to put in place an immunization program that really works.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Just hold the clock, please.

Statement by the Speaker

Rotation of Questions

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we begin, just a brief statement for clarity with respect to the order of question period with a changed situation in the Legislative Assembly. The routine today and tomorrow – that is, day 1 and day 2 of this session – will be exactly the same as it was when we left here in June earlier this year. On Wednesday the fifth question will go to the Member for Calgary-Glenmore and replace the ordinary government question, and on Thursday the fifth question, which is ordinarily a government question, will go to the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. During tablings this afternoon I'll table a schematic to deal with this particular matter. So we're on the same routine today and tomorrow, slight adjustments on Wednesday and Thursday.

First main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Alberta Hospital Edmonton

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This summer the Premier changed the plans for Alberta Hospital Edmonton three times in two months. Only after rallies and public outcries did he realize the mistake and recently created an implementation team to help clean up the mess. To the Premier: why did the Premier wait months after the initial announcement to sort out any consultation and involve those most affected?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I support the Alberta Health Services Board in their plan to move people into the community. It definitely improves their quality of life. I also listened to the position taken by the board when they said that it may take two to three years. I certainly thought that was an appropriate length of time to move the number of people and to ensure that the supports are in place in the community. This implementation committee will ensure that that is going to be done. I look forward to the work that's going to be done by the committee over the next number of months to place many people into communities across Alberta to ensure that they have a much better quality of life.

Dr. Swann: Well, again to the Premier: will the Premier guarantee that the team's recommendations will be made public before any closures?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, first of all, there are no closures. People are moving from an institution to community-based beds, and we want to make sure that that transfer is done in the best interests of the patients, those that are presently residing in the Alberta Hospital. Our number one priority is to make sure that people are looked after, supports are in place, and their quality of life is improved.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, how can the Premier say that no beds are going to be closed when it's been clear in the public that up to 80 beds will be closed when these people leave Alberta Hospital Edmonton? What does this mean?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, you know, we're moving people out of an institution. So many community groups have supported the Alberta government in its position to give people a better quality of life, moving them out of an institution and moving them to a community bed. They move from one facility, and they'll move into accommodations that appropriately reflect their needs. We'll make sure that the services are provided and give them a quality of life. Why in the world would these people want to keep people living in institutions for the rest of their lives? What kind of quality of life is that?

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pandemic influenza is here. The vaccine will save lives, and I applaud the tireless efforts of health officials and front-line workers delivering this important preventative measure. I myself will be getting the vaccine when I have hours to spare. Unfortunately, there are only nine flu clinics available between Edmonton and Calgary to cover over 2 million people. My questions are to the Premier. With years of planning for pandemics already completed, how is it that there are only nine clinics providing immunization to over 2 million people in Alberta today?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as the minister communicated earlier, there are specific populations that we're asking to receive their H1N1 flu vaccine. Over the course of time the vaccine will be available for all Albertans, but we're asking those that are more susceptible to the flu to receive their vaccine today. We'll ensure that all other Albertans, including those that may not be at risk as much as others, receive their vaccine in the province.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, that was a real dodge.

Will the Premier actually admit that his leadership is responsible for the lack of staff and the lack of funding for these essential clinics in Alberta?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we said many months ago that even though the budget is under pressure, this is a priority, that we want to ensure that all Albertans have an opportunity to receive the vaccine. There are some that still are undecided whether they should or not. We certainly encourage everyone to receive the vaccine. We will do everything in our power to make sure that everybody receives the vaccination.

Dr. Swann: Will the Premier, then, commit to opening new clinics within days to address the backlog of individuals who need this vaccination?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, let's be clear. We've had a number of discussions in this House in the past about whether or not government listens to our chief medical officer of health and our public health officials. This plan that was rolled out was clearly the plan of the chief medical officer of health and public officials around the province. For us as political members of this Assembly to interfere in that rollout would be inappropriate.

Now, let's make it clear that every Albertan who wants the vaccine will receive it. They may not be able to receive it in the first hour of the first day. We need to ensure that with limited supplies we get it to the most vulnerable the quickest we can, and that's the reason for the clinics as they're set up today.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Premier. The intent of this government and this Premier is clear: they want to force Albertans to pay for billions of dollars of electricity transmission lines without any independent hearing to see if those lines are actually needed. That's what Bill 50, introduced by this government, means. Why is the government taking such a casual attitude towards Albertans' money?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, a number of public hearings have been held in the province of Alberta with respect to the need for transmission. We also hear from Albertans about moving to various forms of energy – whether it be wind, solar, geothermal, biomass, coal-fired, natural gas – ensuring that there is competitiveness in the generation but also moving the energy from its source to where the consumer is. Our lines are congested. They're aging. We're losing a lot of electrons on the line as a result of the congestion, roughly a quarter of a million dollars a year. The plan is good. We'll proceed to start with the critical infrastructure that's necessary to grow this province into the future.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, many electricity experts are saying that the plan is not good, that some of the lines in this gold-plated plan are not necessary, but the government explicitly refuses to hear their points at a public interest hearing. Instead, at the last minute they're giving less than two weeks' notice for one single committee hearing. That's less notice than you get if you're being fired. Will the Premier admit that this is simply window dressing, simply cover for him on a controversial issue just before his leadership review?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I think that over the next few days we'll hear this kind of misinformation in the House, all tied to leadership. I can tell you I'm not backing away from the principles that got me here no matter what the threat from the opposition is.

Let's clarify again the misinformation that the member gave earlier. There is a policy field committee that'll be meeting on resources and the environment. This has been instituted by this government. We've never had public policy committees ever meet in the province, and they're there to hear submissions by the public. On the 2nd and 4th we'll be hearing from the Canadian Wind Energy Association. The Sierra Club will give a presentation on grizzly bears. The Alberta Geothermal Energy Association will provide a presentation on potential for geothermal energy development. Also, the Alberta Federation of Rural Electrification Associations, the Independent Power Producers Society of Alberta, Enmax, and EPCOR are all expected to provide presentations about electricity transportation. That is fact, not what that person was talking about.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Just a second, hon. member. Did I hear the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre rise on a point of order?

Ms Blakeman: No, sir.

The Speaker: Now, what did the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood rise on?

Mr. Mason: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Okay.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now that we have that straightened out.

If the Premier thinks that having public input on Bill 50 is necessary – and Mr. Speaker, I'm not convinced that he does if he's only setting aside two days of hearings – why not pull Bill 50, send it to the standing committee for a proper series of hearings? The two-hour sessions are not nearly enough.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the bill is going to get the most public hearing right here in this Assembly. We've got a couple more stages to proceed, and it'll be done here. All these members can bring the points of view of their constituents to this House, and we'll debate the bill. That is the way democracy works, I believe.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party in the Assembly, followed by the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

2:10 Public Health System Reform

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. More than 60 per cent of Albertans think the Premier is taking Alberta in the wrong direction. Public outcry over this government's secretive health reforms and service cuts has never been louder, but the Premier says he's going to ignore it. The fact is that this PC government simply can't be trusted to protect public health care and is leaving patients out in the cold. Why is this Premier ignoring the wishes of Albertans, not to mention common sense, and continuing his reckless plan to dismantle public health care?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as you know and this Assembly knows, this government is firmly committed to publicly funded health care. We want to make it the best ever. We want to make sure that we sustain it for the young people who are out there when they need it in the future. That is the goal: to embrace publicly funded health care, ask our health care professionals to work with government and others to ensure that we have a system that's going to be accessible, that's going to of course improve the quality of care, and make sure that it's there for the future, meaning sustainable. Those are the goals.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Premier refuses the opportunity to commit to support public health care. He only commits to funding publicly funded health care, which means taking taxpayers' money to pay their friends in the private health care business, insurance companies, drug companies. That's what they mean when they talk about publicly funded health care. My question is to the Premier. Will he admit that his government intends to use taxpayers' money to pay private companies to deliver private health care in this province?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker . . .

Ms Evans: Patience.

Mr. Stelmach: Take a deep breath.

. . . we're committed to publicly funded health care. Health care will continue to be delivered by professionals. You know, they try and twist and talk about the American two-tiered style of health care. I forgot about that today for some reason, but, you know, he'll keep repeating it. All I'm saying to all Albertans is that we are firmly committed to publicly funded health care. We want to work with all health care professionals so that it's the best system ever. We have the opportunity to do it right here in this province of Alberta. Why tear at each other? Let's work together and make sure that that system is here for the next generation.

Mr. Mason: More on publicly funded health care.

In the two years since he became Premier, the percentage of Albertans who think he is taking them in the wrong direction has steadily risen. They're tired of misleading announcements, tired of government secrecy, and they oppose the Premier's direction on electricity transmission, health reform, and long-term care, but the Premier's response is to stay the course. When will the Premier admit that he's chosen the wrong direction for Alberta and start listening to the people who put him where he is?

Mr. Stelmach: In some other poll that I read, 89 per cent of the public in the province of Alberta don't even know who the hon. member is. I don't know what poll he was following, but you know, we can leave the politics and the debate for later.

We're firmly – firmly – focused on making this the best system available to Albertans. You know, yesterday I had the opportunity to bring opening remarks at the Canadian Cardiovascular Congress. Over 3,000 – 3,000 – delegates came to Edmonton to talk about innovation, research, the commercialization of that, and the way we deliver cardiovascular care in Alberta, which to many at that conference says, "Alberta has taken a leadership role; we want to do what you're doing in the province of Alberta and take what you have accomplished to the other provinces so that we can reach out to as many people as you have" in terms of the kind of cardiovascular care we have in Alberta, leading across the country of Canada. Others tell us that, and he tries to drag it down.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a keen interest in the announced province-wide vaccine program for H1N1 because my constituents are frightened, and I know we know why. Many questions have arisen, and I would like the Health and Wellness minister to please tell us how rural Albertans are going to be addressed in terms of the H1N1 vaccine when in our constituencies I have 80,000 square kilometres, I have 45 communities, and we only have two places where the vaccine is going to be provided. To the minister: what are we doing for rural Albertans?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, the difficulty we have today is that this is a new virus, a new vaccine, and it's still to a large extent being produced as we speak. We have limited quantities at this stage. We want to ensure that we have the maximum ability to monitor that those vaccines are getting to the appropriate individuals who are in the high-risk group. So I ask for some patience. There's no question that in rural communities, especially in isolated communities like the member's, it will take a little more time, but we're working towards getting every Albertan vaccinated.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the fact that we're trying to stop the whole issue of the scare tactics that are occurring, but there are a lot of scare tactics that have been occurring, whether it's through various websites or lobby groups. To the minister: could you please tell Albertans the potential time frame of immunization clinics that could occur in the next little while?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the really good news is that this vaccine actually has come on stream some two to three weeks earlier than we had originally thought it was going to. The original belief was that it wouldn't be ready until possibly mid-November. That would have had a very compressed time frame as we led up to the holiday season. The fact that it's available here now, in the final week of October, gives us that extra three-week period. I believe that by mid-December the vaccine will have been well distributed throughout the province, and any Albertan who wants to be vaccinated will have the opportunity to do so.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Calahasen: Yes. To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: if we are going to make sure that all Albertans can be vaccinated, why then are we using mass clinics instead of getting it out to as many health care providers as possible, especially in rural Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: I would like to elaborate on the first answer. One of the problems you have if you disseminate small batches across the province is that you lose the ability to monitor whether the patient is actually receiving the vaccine. The last thing we want is having this vaccine sitting on a shelf somewhere and not getting to the appropriate individuals.

Again, I have to come back to the fact that this is a plan that has been laid out by our leading public health officials. I'm not going to sit here as an elected member and tell them that what they're doing is wrong. I believe they are the experts, and we should trust them. I would say that a month from now this will all be not an issue.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Inspiring Education Public Consultation

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Inspiring education? Mr. Minister, your do-as-I-say-not-as-I-do government spent millions of taxpayer dollars on a feel-good travelling public relations road show entitled Inspiring Education. You spent thousands more on self-congratulatory Success by 6 newspaper ads. The hypocritical actions of your ministry have more to do with conspiring than inspiring. Do you expect students, parents, teachers, or trustees to be inspired by your first round of $80 million cutbacks to educational programming?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I may get to the actual question, but first I need to correct the suppositions. First of all, the advertisement with respect to Success by 6 was an advertisement on a fundraising piece that was done by me privately with an organization. It's not government money, doesn't involve government money. This is the 10th year we've run this very successful golf tournament to raise money for Success by 6 because I care about kids and their start and I care about that organization, what it does in our community.

I certainly won't apologize for spending money doing what governments do, which is to look to the horizon and plan the future. So Inspiring Education, which has been actually well accepted both in stakeholder communities and in the public as a very robust discussion about the future of education, is a very, very important investment for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, if you want to achieve success by six, full-day kindergartens, fund them; half-day junior kindergartens, fund them; pay for breakfast programs rather than for ads. Are teachers to be inspired by a five-year contract, supposedly bargained in good faith, whose conditions have been unilaterally rewritten by your government halfway through the term?

2:20

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I guess we'll get back to the $80 million later, but on the average weekly earnings question, that is implicit in what the hon. member has said, again I need to correct the misapprehension that he's put forward. Nobody has ripped up any contracts or in any way denigrated the contracts. There's a very simple issue to be determined, and that is the question of how you determine average weekly earnings when the people who used to determine it changed the process. The contracts were written on one basis. There's a new basis in place. There's a very legitimate discussion between ourselves and the ATA with respect to how that should be calculated. We have agreed with the ATA to move forward in arbitration on that issue. It's not a question of not honouring the contracts – we want to honour the contracts; we will honour the contracts – but we do need to have an interpretation of the meaning of that term.

Mr. Chase: Then we have our Premier going around with a cup to public-sector unions saying: please take a wage freeze. I suppose that's part of the contract.

Do you honestly believe that grade 12 students, forced by your ministry's failure to schedule appropriately, will be inspired by having to write math and chem 30 exams on the same day?

Mr. Hancock: First of all, they won't have to write chem 30 and math on the same day. A schedule is going out. There was a schedule published. Two jurisdictions indicated that. As soon as I got feedback that that was what happened – I hadn't seen it – I said to my department that it's not appropriate to have two exams of that nature on the same day and that we needed that fixed. The new announcement with respect to the exam schedule will be out imminently.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Homeless People

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, and rightly so, there is a great deal of discussion regarding pandemic planning for H1N1. My question is for the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs. What is your ministry doing to prepare for the second wave of the outbreak, with specific reference to our homeless population?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, the homeless population is extremely vulnerable to the H1N1 virus, and they have very complex needs and a host of other needs as well. I can tell you that since they live in close quarters, traditional advice like stay home and rest is just not going to work.

Hon. member, we have taken this very seriously, and in fact, Mr. Speaker, I can tell you as well that immunization clinics will be offered at shelters on-site. They are expected to begin as early as this Friday, and you'll be pleased to know that our homeless population, whether they're sheltered or unsheltered, will be immunized on an urgent basis.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second and final question is for the same minister. Obviously, we can't afford delays or duplications for these important people. What has the minister's focus of discussion been with the Ministry of Health and Wellness in this respect?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, you know, Mr. Speaker, this is a question I have heard before, and I've heard it repeatedly. We have been working closely with Alberta Health and Wellness. We've been working closely as well with Alberta Health Services for several months, and that's to develop a pandemic planning guide, which I reviewed with my staff as recently as last week and have, you know, a number of times over the past few months. That guide, I can tell you, speaks to prevention, how to slow or stop the transmission of the virus. It outlines the resources that are available. It gives a very clear communication protocol, that they will notify health officials, notify officials in our department whether or not there have been any of their people that have been infected with the virus. I'm confident that our shelter advisers or shelter operators, our medical support staff, that people were talking about here earlier, are all very well prepared to deal with this virus in our shelters.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. In his ministerial statement the minister said, "Alberta Health Services will also look at the possibility of resuming immunization programs for the seasonal flu in seniors' lodges once a critical mass of the general population has been immunized for H1N1." Will the minister tell this Assembly what per cent of Albertans need to be immunized for H1N1 to reach that critical mass?

Mr. Liepert: I don't know if there's a specific number that I can lay out today. That will be a judgment call by the chief medical officer of health and public health officials across the province.

You know, the other issue that we have to keep in mind here, Mr. Speaker, is that this is out of the norm when it comes to delivery of health care services, and we want to ensure that we've got the right professionals involved in this particular immunization. There will be some hiccups as we move through it, but we're going to work to ensure that the process is as smooth as possible.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks. Again to the same minister: will this minister take action and immediately order the opening of H1N1 vaccination clinics at seniors' facilities? This would reduce waiting times at mass clinics and, frankly, relieve stress on worried seniors who have to travel, stand, go to great lengths. Will he push that forward immediately?

Mr. Liepert: I didn't catch the very outset. Is the member referring to the seasonal flu or the H1N1?

Dr. Taft: The H1N1.

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think I answered that question before. The intent with H1N1 is to get to the most vulnerable as quickly as possible. It has been determined that our seniors population is not the most vulnerable to the H1N1 virus. It clearly has been with the other seasonal flu, and that's why over the past couple of weeks we've had the seasonal flu vaccination program under way, and it has focused on our seniors population.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks again. H1N1 is unusual – obviously, the minister knows – in that it hits young people particularly hard, yet as far as we can see, there are no clinics where young people are most concentrated, in postsecondary institutions. Again to the minister: will the minister take action and immediately order that vaccination clinics for H1N1 be opened at major postsecondary institutions?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, either the member is not listening or is choosing to misinterpret the facts. As I said in my statement, those most vulnerable are between the ages of six months and five years. The last time I checked, none of those go to postsecondary institutions. I also said that those who are most vulnerable are those under 60 with chronic conditions, and for the most part that doesn't include those who are in mass numbers at postsecondary institutions. But I will say that once we get those who are the most vulnerable, once we get additional supplies, we will ensure that on workplace sites, at universities, where there is the ability to vaccinate a mass number of people, we will do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Liability Insurance for Search and Rescue Organizations

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Recent media stories have focused on the lack of liability insurance protection for some Alberta search and rescue teams, which may result in volunteers withdrawing their services. Search and rescue plays a vital role during emergencies, and I've experienced this first-hand in my Fire Ops 101. My question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Can the minister tell Albertans what is being done to address this issue?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do want to say that search and rescue is a very important part of our emergency management system. We have been working with Search and Rescue Alberta to address these issues with them.

Mr. Speaker, if I can say, when volunteers go on a search and rescue mission, they should not be liable. I will say that at the outset. As well, we are examining all the options of liability and disability coverage for the volunteers that are involved in search and rescue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is for the same minister. Can the minister tell us if the liability insurance issue is unique to Alberta?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact, we did meet with the president of Search and Rescue Canada this morning, and it provided us with a national perspective. We are very close to reaching an interim solution, and we hope to finalize this in the very near future.

Also, Mr. Speaker, in January we are hosting the federal-provincial-territorial ministers' meeting, and we're going to discuss at that time with the ministers involved how we can be more responsive in a long-term solution for this challenge. It's very important to note that we are supporting the fundamental safety services to Alberta.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Benito: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. My final question is for the same minister. Can the minister tell us what support there currently is for search and rescue groups?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, at the present time we have well-trained and responsive search and rescue teams, and in part of our commitment to those teams we're providing $150,000 a year for training. We provide WCB coverage. We're also working with the search and rescue teams to develop training and certification standards. Also, this last weekend we supported an exercise that took place at Rocky Mountain House, the largest of its kind in Alberta. Because of this support Albertans can have confidence that their safety and security are being well served by search and rescue.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Contentious WCB Claims

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. My first question is this: why has the government failed in the last seven years to implement a long-standing contentious claims review tribunal to once and for all have a look at many of the frustrated injured workers and their files at the WCB?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member refers, no doubt, to the Doerksen report and the Judge Friedman report. There were a series of reports going back as far as 2000 making recommendations for changes. Since 2000 there have been a number of changes that have been instituted at the WCB level. There were at that particular time, in 2000, about 59 recommendations that were made, and I'm pleased to announce that we've made progress on the majority of those recommendations.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's not what the injured workers would have to say.

Again to the hon. minister. An amendment was passed to the workers' compensation legislation in 2002 to implement a long-standing contentious claims review tribunal. Why has the government failed to implement that and take one final look at many of the issues that the injured workers bring up in our constituency offices almost on a weekly basis?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the member I think alludes to Bill 26, which paved the way at that particular time, in 2002, to set up the Appeals Commission as an independent, arm's-length body, and that was done. The process now of hearing appeals has been changed since that particular time. The Appeals Commission was given a lot more independence and, rather than responding to WCB directly, is responding to me as the minister, certainly removing that relationship that they had with the WCB, enabling them to give better hearings.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Again to the same minister: given that the amendments to the act that were voted on by this Assembly give the hon. minister the power through regulation to set up a tribunal that will once and for all have a look at these long-standing contentious claims, why is the minister and why is the government refusing to at least look one final time in the files of these injured workers and see if there's not something we can do to help them?

Thank you.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there were a number of changes that were made, but one thing that stays common is that if there is new information that pertains to that particular individual, new medical information, then the individual's files would be reviewed. Having said that, if there is no additional information, we would suspect that the decision would be the same as it has always been. Now, since then there were other changes that occurred in terms of operating files from 2002 and on. We've evolved and WCB has evolved a new way of resolving appeals which actually focuses on resolution, modification, and various agreements wherever that is possible. There has been a new medical panel established and a number of other things.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Long-term Care

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In January of 2008, conveniently on the eve of the last election, the Premier claimed he would create 600 new long-term care beds. However, the true plans of the most secretive government in Canada were brought to light in a leaked document that our caucus released in September, a report that called for the closure of thousands of long-term care beds. To the minister of health: how can he explain the difference between what the government says to the public and what they ask the staff to plan behind closed doors?

Mr. Liepert: As the Premier outlined in the House earlier, we believe strongly on this side of the House that you create a health care delivery system where you take the care to the patient and not make the patient fit into some system that some group has designed that may very well be out of date. What we have in this province, Mr. Speaker, what we are moving towards is a continuum of care, and in places where seniors reside – it may be their own home, it may be a lodge environment, and it may be assisted living – we're going to offer the opportunity to provide care in that facility where that particular patient feels more comfortable. If that's not good enough for those who are advocating on behalf of some of their supporters who happen to fund them, well, that's just too bad.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are about 800 senior citizens right now who would prefer to be in a long-term care bed, and they can't get one. Meanwhile, services that are critical to seniors' health which are free to long-term care patients will be transferred to assisted living facilities, and those services will be part of a thousand-dollar-a-month special service contract when those seniors live there. What will the health minister say to the seniors who simply will not be able to afford the care they need in the place that they did not ask for, that this government forced them into by cutting long-term care beds?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, any senior that needs health care gets health care. That's part of the system, the universal, publicly funded health care system that we have in this province. I would challenge that particular member to get out of the city of Edmonton, travel this province, visit some of the facilities that our seniors are living in, and see the care that's provided in those facilities instead of listening to these dredged-up reports that are sometimes a decade old that seem to be the genesis for scaring people, fearmongering, political rhetoric. I could go on and on and on, but that's what it is.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, (a) the report I'm referring to is actually six months old, not 10 years old, and (b) just last week I was in Medicine Hat, where I was told that not one person in long-term care could possibly survive in a meaningful, healthy way if they were asked to be in assisted living.

During the election the government made grand promises to care for our seniors, but once they got behind closed doors, they abandoned them. Why won't the minister once and for all stop his secretive plan to download costs onto the backs of Alberta seniors?

Mr. Liepert: Well, my guess is that the people that that member was talking to probably belong to a public-sector union or the so-called enemies of medicare or one of these groups that is just part of their little organization out there, Mr. Speaker. I heartily doubt that that member even bothered to venture in to visit with seniors in a particular facility.

Last week in Lethbridge with the Member for Lethbridge-West we visited a facility that I challenge the Member for Lethbridge-East, whose constituency it resides in – there is not one member of this Assembly who would not die to have that particular facility in their constituency.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Calgary city council and Enmax are united in their opposition to Bill 50 and the transmission line between Calgary and Edmonton. They are telling us it is very costly, not needed, and was decided without proper public consultation. Can the Minister of Energy explain or identify the benefits of this line to Calgarians, please?

The Speaker: Briefly, Minister, as this bill will be up for debate during this session.

Mr. Knight: Yes. What I can do is indicate to the member that a robust grid in the province of Alberta allows the least-cost generation to reach all Albertans, not just the member's constituents but all Albertans. Most certainly, Mr. Speaker, reliability of the system is paramount, and no generation facility operates 24/7, 365 days a year. The reliability of delivery to the citizens of Calgary is paramount in this discussion.

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. There is a lot of confusion about the role of AESO. Could the minister explain as to what AESO is, who appoints AESO members, and does AESO have the authority to make recommendations that will cost Albertans billions of dollars?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, with the situation, of course, that we have in front of us with the transmission upgrade, quite simply, when you look at the pieces of it, if we're talking about the upgrade that would happen in south Calgary, again it amounts to reliability. The number of people that are in the south Calgary area now, including but not limited to a new hospital, require that reliability of the system. It's that reliability that will affect and in fact enhance the opportunities for Calgarians along with all Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I understand that there is a major upgrade planned for a Calgary substation. Can the minister elaborate on this project and, with this upgrade, if the transmission is still needed?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, I think that the answer is similar to the ones before. What happens there with respect to south Calgary, quite honestly, is very little argument relative to that particular issue. Calgarians understand that those pieces of infrastructure are needed – are urgently needed – in Calgary. They need the reliability, and they certainly are going to get it when we continue to build into this transmission system.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Water Allocation

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Environment minister, living firmly in the past, said last week that the first in time, first in right, or FITFIR, system has served reasonably well over the last hundred years. But FITFIR does not protect drinking water or the environment during periods of drought. My questions are to the minister. Times have changed. Why is the minister not willing to take the recommendations made by numerous water groups, including some of his own, and update this legislation to put people before industry and not some antiquated system of whoever got there first?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm surprised that the member would suggest to this House that the decisions have already been made. I can assure her, as I have been assuring Albertans, that that's far from the truth. What we have committed to is to engage in a discussion around a new revised water allocation policy. That discussion has yet to take place. What I have said is that we have to look at ways that will recognize some of the historic rights associated with water but will also allow us to share the water and recognize that this is a limited resource that must be accessible to all Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that the South Saskatchewan River has recently been rated the most threatened river in Canada and studies show that with climate change, a growing population, and expanding industry the river will become even drier, why is the minister insisting that merely tinkering with the allocation system will be enough to meet the looming water crisis?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let's be very clear. We have a standing agreement in place with our downstream neighbours, namely Saskatchewan, that 50 per cent of the stream flow will flow through to Saskatchewan. So to paint this as nearly dry is an exaggeration in the extreme. That being said, that is one of the basins that we're concentrating on because clearly there is, as we speak, a moratorium on additional licences. That doesn't mean that there is not sufficient water for new development. It means that some of the existing users are going to have to have a facility to share the water with some of the new users.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that Albertans' right to water for their basic human needs is already compromised by the current system, why won't the minister commit to completely overhauling the highly inefficient water allocation system and prioritize the basic human needs of Albertans over uses of water such as watering lawns and golf courses? Albertans first.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I think that's kind of what we're doing. There are a number of needs associated with water. Basic human needs are absolutely critical, no doubt, but so are the needs of the watershed itself. Healthy aquatic ecosystems are equally important. If we don't maintain the viability of the river, then we compromise in a significant way the enjoyment of humans to consume that water. Mr. Speaker, that is very much the purpose of the discussion that we are about to enter into.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Electricity Transmission Upgrades

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituents have had many questions regarding the need for new transmission lines in our electricity system. My questions are for the Minister of Energy.

Albertans are hearing many conflicting messages concerning the cost of transmission upgrades. Can you please clarify what the cost to Alberta consumers would actually be?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, yes, I most certainly can. In general terms, for every billion dollars of capital deployed to build infrastructure in the transmission system in Alberta, the average consumer at home would pay about $1 per month.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: if consumers are faced with the possibility of an additional cost, $1 per month, on their bills, can you please explain what benefits they would see with increased transmission capacity?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, yes. Again, Mr. Speaker, I certainly can. If you look at the system that we have in Alberta currently, the system is aging, definitely. You know, we're all aging, and the system is aging. What we need to do is get some new technology on the ground in Alberta – more efficient, moves power better, less line loss – and at the end of the day I believe that Albertans will see the benefit in the economics and in the reliability of the system to supply the power that they require.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: can you please clarify the steps that will occur with respect to the rollout of the transmission upgrades? There seems to be a lot of confusion around that.

Mr. Knight: Well, again, as we go forward with respect to the transmission system, as the determination is brought forward by AESO that the system needs to be upgraded and reinforced, what will happen is that the pieces that are required to be built will go through the system of consultation through the AUC for the permit and licensing, siting, the cost, and the technology used. By the way, Mr. Speaker, the AUC will as part of their mandate determine these things in the public interest, and they'll move forward in a timely manner over, probably, the next couple of decades.

Police Officer Supply

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, both Edmonton and Calgary's police forces are dramatically understaffed in comparison to other Canadian cities in terms of the number of police officers per capita. Recently the Edmonton Police Commission noted that it would need to reduce the number of sworn police officers on its city streets during this budget cycle. My question today is for the Solicitor General: will the Edmonton Police Service be receiving the funds promised by the government in order to recruit and hire 35 new members this year?

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to remind the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo that the Premier of this province promised 300 additional police officers over three years, and we've actually met that goal over the first two years. However, that being said, we're in the budgeting process, and we'll review that budget.

Hopefully we'll be able to provide additional police services to both Edmonton and Calgary and the RCMP.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's the type of answer that I'm worried about. We've had that type of answer in the media now here this afternoon.

Given that the Edmonton Police Service is already understaffed compared to other major cities, why can't you confirm with us that it is going to be a priority of your government to get the additional 35 officers out the door?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, looking back on the last two years and the gains that this government has made in regard to policing and safe communities in the province, I don't think we have to take a back seat to anybody. As I've indicated, we're in the budgeting process, and depending on how things go, we'll see what the outcome is.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, although I hear the Solicitor General, those gains have still left us 20 per cent behind other major centres in terms of policing numbers. Why won't this government commit to having a safe and secure number of police officers on our city streets?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, in regard to safe and secure communities we have seen a downturn in the crime rate in this province. With the steps that we've taken, we're assured that, hopefully, those things will continue to follow in that direction.

Also, the hon. member doesn't speak to the fact that since 2006 we've formed ALERT, which also has played a big role in crime reduction in this province. In fact, in the last year it has taken about $85 million worth of illegal drugs off the streets of this province, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 88 questions and responses today, and we're now going to come up against a standing order again at 3 o'clock.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Bev Thirsk
Robert Thirsk

Mr. Rodney: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Bev Thirsk and Robert Thirsk are truly inspirational Albertans. Bev is a greatly gifted educator who is as talented as she is humble. Recently Bev shared a fabulous presentation with all in her school, documenting her experience in Russia last spring to watch her brother, Bob Thirsk, blast into outer space. The students then dressed up in space-themed costumes. Everyone was mesmerized by a 10-minute Q and A session with Bob as he orbited Earth in the International Space Station, and all responded to the event through composition, art, and music.

After I spoke with Bev a number of months ago when Bob was honoured by the U of C with an honorary doctorate, she was kind enough to contact him directly on the ISS, and he was kind enough to respond with the following unedited passage:

Dear fellow Albertans:

It is with great pride that I represent my country on our first long-duration mission on the International Space Station. I have now lived and worked aboard the station for more than four months. My days are incredibly busy, sometimes challenging but never boring. My duties include the ongoing maintenance of my new home, manipulation of Canada's robotic jewel, the Canadarm2, and participation in a number of world-class science experiments on behalf of Canadian researchers and the international scientific community.

In spite of my hectic schedule I do take the time to enjoy the spectacular views of our planet. Every time I fly over Canada, I look down in awe. I feel particularly closer to home when we pass over Alberta, the province where I grew up and completed some of my education which was pivotal in preparing me for this incredible endeavour.

To all my fellow Albertans I say thank you for your support. Your pioneering spirit sustains me on this mission of exploration. In the new year I look forward to visiting Alberta and sharing with you this incredible journey.

Mr. Speaker, I invite all members of this Assembly to join me in thanking and congratulating Bev Thirsk and Robert Thirsk for proving that, indeed, the sky is not the limit.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Premier's Awards of Excellence

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to take this opportunity to recognize the dedication and innovation of the Alberta public service in improving services for Albertans. At the 15th annual Premier's awards of excellence ceremony 25 teams of provincial government employees received awards for very diverse projects. The contributions of more than 1,400 members of the Alberta public service were acknowledged.

The Premier's awards of excellence exemplify superior client service, excellence in business practices, and outstanding leadership. The recipients' projects ranged from infrastructure projects to social work, from promoting the province internationally to streamlining regulations. As well, some initiatives involved provincial cultural events and technological advancements.

Provincial employees honoured at the ceremony work across the province. Their achievements have benefited Albertans across the province as well. This collective work, Mr. Speaker, demonstrates how the public service is continually improving the lives of the people that we serve. Since 1995 375 teams of employees have received the honour of distinction.

Mr. Speaker, the Alberta public service works hard every day to improve the lives of Albertans. I would like to congratulate the recipients of these prestigious awards. Heartfelt thanks to all public servants for their ongoing hard work, creativity, and commitment to excellence.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

It's a Crime Not to Read Program

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Late last month I attended the Calgary Public Library Foundation awards recognizing excellence in Alberta's literary community. As part of that celebration the Calgary public library and the Calgary Police Service celebrated an innovative partnership called It's a Crime Not to Read. The program involves police officers visiting grades 2 and 3 classrooms to read aloud to children and to encourage reading and literacy.

It's a Crime Not to Read allows the police to have positive interaction with kids and their families, building a sense of trust and rapport. Research has shown that children who read and do well in school are much less likely to participate in criminal activities. This important program helps set children on the right path in life.

For libraries the program introduced the public library as a welcoming, safe, exciting, and friendly place in the community. If we can get a child to cross the threshold of a public library, we can change their life forever and for the better.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has much to be proud of in its public library system. Programs such as It's a Crime Not to Read demonstrate the innovative approach our libraries take as they enhance the quality of life in our community. Today's library is about bringing people and ideas together. A library is about building literacy of all kinds: reading literacy, computer literacy, financial literacy, health literacy, and more. There are few organizations that touch as many lives as our public libraries.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to salute Alberta's public libraries and their inventive approaches to building informed, literate, inspired, and productive communities and individuals in every corner of our great province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Fiscal Accountability

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dickens, Douglas, and Duckett. When purely mathematical solutions are applied to ethical questions, the result is frequently failure. Charles Dickens described the dreariness and drudgery of those struggling to eke out an existence in Victorian England. In Dickens' fact-based fiction wealth of character triumphed over poverty of person in his tales of redemption.

With less than 10 shopping weeks remaining till Christmas, our fiscal surplus has vanished for the second time in 20 years, replaced by a deficit in the billions. The Premier has assumed the role of a very convincing penny-wise, pound-foolish Scrooge. His much alive and callously calculating accomplice, Stephen Duckett of superbord infamy, is the present stand-in for Scrooge's former partner and mentor, Marley.

As the plot unfolds, spectre Stephen warns our in-the-red Premier that he will be visited by three spirits. As the bell tolls, the ghostly Getty appears to warn our Alberta Scrooge about the perils of betting on the future by borrowing in the past, which ultimately ends in bust. On cue the second ghost arrives in the person of former New Zealand slash-and-burn 1990s fiscal failure, Sir Roger Douglas, whose philosophy, so closely followed by the man without a plan, Ralph Klein, led to Alberta's late 1990s bust-to-boom body count. The third and final phantom, in the spectral form of Peter Lougheed, points the way towards environmental, economic, and social redemption if the Premier will only listen and thereby recover from his personal repeat role in Alberta's boom-and-bust cycle.

Will the current irrational funding cuts to Children's Services, Education, Health, and Seniors produce less disastrous results than those previously felt under Getty and Klein? Will the Premier face his own knives of November with his upcoming leadership review? Will the Premier last long enough to learn the lesson lost to his former colleagues, that a society is judged by the way it treats its most vulnerable? Let's hope and pray for a Dickensian denouement to the current moral malaise playing out in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

School Libraries

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. October 26 marks the seventh annual National School Library Day. Today across the province school library staff will be holding book fairs, celebrating excellence in school library programs, hosting guest speakers, and linking up with community organizations to highlight the vital role of school libraries in the lives of our students.

The libraries in Alberta's schools contribute to students' social, cultural, artistic, and academic development, which help create a foundation for success in everyday life. I think that everyone in this House has fond memories of visiting their school library, perhaps to choose a favourite book, and the special pride we took in being able to take that book home and share it with our family and friends. School libraries are often the hub of the school, providing a place for students to gather, share, learn, be creative, and use their imaginations.

Mr. Speaker, October is also Canadian Library Month. Last year I had the privilege of chairing the MLA Committee on the Future of Public Library Service in Alberta. It gave me the opportunity to connect with many Albertans who are passionate and committed to quality library service in our province. Alberta has benefited from the deep dedication of these people, and their dedication is matched by this government, which is also committed to a strong, province-wide public libraries system.

I'm pleased to rise today to honour the National School Library Day, the Canadian Library Month, and the many people who tirelessly support our libraries. In particular, I'd like to recognize the Canadian Association for School Libraries for its hard work to promote awareness and the importance of libraries in our schools and communities. I'd also like to recognize the teachers, parents, and principals who work hard to ensure school libraries stay a strong and integral part of the educational experience of our students.

Thank you.

3:00

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 7(7) reads: "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly."

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader has caught my eye.

Mr. Renner: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Following the lead of the Government House Leader and hoping for a similar outcome, I would like to seek unanimous consent to waive standing orders today only so that we may proceed with completion of the daily Routine. With some extenuating circumstances with ministerial statements, et cetera, I think it's appropriate that the members consider waiving the standing order, again, today only.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the request has been made for unanimous consent to waive Standing Order 7(7). I will ask the question, and the question will be the following: does any member object to our waiving the standing orders so that we may conclude the Routine? If so, say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Family Doctor Week

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and recognize October 26 to 30 as Family Doctor Week across Canada. This week across our nation we proudly acknowledge Canadian family physicians for their dedication to patients and their communities and their outstanding contribution to the delivery of high-quality health care.

The Alberta College of Family Physicians and the College of Family Physicians of Canada will cohost the annual Family Medicine Forum this Thursday to Saturday in Calgary. The purpose of the forum is to provide family physicians from Alberta and regions across this nation with the opportunity to sharpen their knowledge and skills by participating in continuing medical education sessions.

Mr. Speaker, family doctors directly impact the health of individual Albertans and the health care system as a whole. In fact, adding a family doctor to a community improves access while at the same time reducing costs and human suffering and mortality. Each day family physicians make diagnoses, treat patients, and co-ordinate care with other health care disciplines. They advocate on behalf of their patients and their communities to promote health and prevent illness.

This week I encourage everyone to take time to thank their family physician for the care and advice and compassion given on a daily basis. I would ask my hon. colleagues to join me in thanking family physicians for their dedication to improving the health and wellness of all Albertans and all Canadians.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like today to present a petition on behalf of 105 Albertans. The petition reads as follows: we the undersigned residents of Alberta petition the Legislative Assembly to pass legislation to deinsure abortion in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Bill 53

Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today and I request leave to introduce Bill 53, the Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

This amendment will extend nonvoting share ownership of professional corporations to family members. If passed, our province's accountants, lawyers, doctors, dentists, chiropractors, and optometrists will have the ability to access some of the benefits of being incorporated, including some tax benefits. These benefits are currently enjoyed by the same professions in other western provinces.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 53 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 53 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Bill 55

Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to move first reading of Bill 55, the Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009.

The current act is set to expire on December 31, 2010. We are proposing an amendment to the act which would extend the act to December 31, 2016. This allows the Alberta government to hold Senate elections beyond 2010 should we decide to do so.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 55 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of a publication entitled Racism-Free Workplace Strategy: Breaking the Barriers, National Summary.

My second tabling is the appropriate number of copies of Book of Proceedings: Breaking the Barriers Open Session, Racism-Free Works!

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter I received from Katherine Wilson, one of my constituents. The letter describes how her husband waited in an acute-care bed for a space in long-term care but died before a space became available. She says that the system desperately needs "more continuing care beds, more nurses, and more doctors."

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three letters today from constituents, that have come in since the break. The first is from Margaret Doran, who writes with her concerns around health services and particularly the appointment of Dr. Duckett and some of the choices he's made. She states that his "ideas and 'objectives' are not welcome" and that he should tell his boss.

The second tabling is regarding the tents at the Stollery for the treatment of children. Jenny Adams, also a constituent, raises her concerns about losing specially skilled doctors to work in other hospitals because we don't have a proper facility and notes that "sick kids are our future too."

The final letter is from Marianne B. Hemery, who asks, "Why are Electric cars not Road Legal in the province of Alberta?" and notes that she's appalled at the callous disregard of the Conservative government "for the poisoning of our beautiful land by the Oil Companies."

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. members, I have a number of tablings that I have to deal with today. First of all, I'm going to table copies of a chart demonstrating the operation of the new rotation for Oral Question Period along with five copies of the new projected sitting days calendar for the fall sitting. In addition to tabling this, I'm going to have circulated to all members this rotation as well.

Secondly, I'm also tabling copies of a letter dated October 19, 2009, from the Member for Calgary-Foothills advising me of the resignation of that member from the Standing Committee on Resources and Environment, the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices, and the Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee.

Third, I wish to table with the Assembly five copies of a letter dated October 23, 2009, from the Ethics Commissioner together with an enclosure titled: quick guide for members. The chair is advised that the guide is intended to serve as a general overview of the interpretation of the Conflicts of Interest Act as to what might constitute a private interest in the act. Members will recall that this was one of the items suggested in the chair's June 3 ruling on the question of privilege raised by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview, found at pages 1512-13 of Hansard for that day. In addition to tabling these appropriate copies, I'm going to ask to ensure that the Clerk will have appropriate copies made for all members and circulated in the House this afternoon.

In addition, I'm also tabling copies of a brochure produced by the Legislative Assembly of Alberta titled Page Biographies, Legislative Assembly of Alberta, 27th Legislature, Second Session, Fall 2009, where we have a number of new pages that are in our midst.

Hon. members, pursuant to section 46(2) of the Conflicts of Interest Act the chair is pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Ethics Commissioner covering the period April 1, 2008, to March 31, 2009. I distributed copies to members on September 3, 2009, but pursuant to Standing Order 55.01 this report now stands referred to the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices.

The last tabling today is pursuant to section 28(1) of the Ombudsman Act. The chair is pleased to table with the Assembly the 42nd annual report of the office of the Ombudsman for the period April 1, 2008, to March 31, 2009. This report was previously distributed to members on Tuesday, October 13, 2009.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Tarchuk, Minister of Children and Youth Services, responses to questions raised by Ms. Notley, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, and Mr. Chase, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, on May 6, 2009, Department of Children and Youth Services main estimates debate.

Statement by the Speaker

Identification of Members on the Seating Plan

The Speaker: Hon. members, we will proceed shortly, but just one point of clarification. Interestingly enough, on days such as this when there have been changes in the Assembly, the chair does receive a number of notes as to: why is so-and-so referred to as such? As an example, in our seating plan if you are a member of the majority party, you are listed in here as an Alberta Progressive Conservative. If you are a member of the Official Opposition, you are listed in here as a member of the Alberta Liberals. If you are a member of the third party, you are part of the Alberta New Democrats, and we have listed in here a member from the Alberta Wildrose Alliance and an independent.

The question is: how come we're not calling the other two independents? Why are we identifying Wildrose? Well, historically we recognize individuals according to their party affiliation by which they have been elected, and the Member for Calgary-Glenmore was elected as a member of the Alberta Wildrose Alliance. Historically those members who have either voluntarily or involuntarily left the caucus in which they were elected a member, we refer to them as an independent. That's why the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo is referred to as an independent.

This goes back in precedent to our previous seating plan that we had, that members can look at. Going back to the previous seating plan of 2008, the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner was referred to as a member of the Alberta Alliance, and the Member for Edmonton-Manning, when he either voluntarily or involuntarily left the caucus he was with, was identified as an independent. That's the historical clarification for the rationale to describe the way this occurs. So if one of your colleagues who may be away, out of my speaking sound limits right now, may ask that question of you, you now know the answer to it forever and ever.

We have no point of order. After due deliberation by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood the hon. member has declined to participate further in this.

Orders of the Day

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 206

School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009

[Debate adjourned June 1]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona was participating. Whom shall I recognize next?

The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms. Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise today to speak in favour of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. I commend this Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. This act is a forward-looking act because Bill 206 works towards maintaining the safety and security of our schools and our students. Of course, it does this by mandating the documentation of students' actions by defining which actions are considered inappropriate and by giving schools the tools to deal with difficult situations. Providing schools the additional tools of allowing police intervention and consultation when dealing with serious situations is a giant step forward.

Since my teaching years bullying has evolved. It is my understanding that it can now be more aggressive and involve new mediums like the Internet. Bill 206 would allow our disciplinary measures to evolve similarly. Bill 206 accounts for the fact that one type of recourse is not suitable for every student who bullies. Mr. Speaker, kids experiment – we know that – some simply for the sake of experience. For many of these students time outs or being sent to the principal's office can be very effective. For others, however, it may not be.

If these students remain unco-operative and their indiscretions become severe, teachers and principals have few options with the exception of suspension and, in extreme cases, expulsion to compel their students to behave appropriately. These measures, however, are a last resort, and even then, Mr. Speaker, they do not effectively address the issue. While these penalties send a message to a student, a message of "this behaviour will not be tolerated," the consequence can just as easily be spun into a reward of sorts for a student who has a limited desire to attend school in the first place, and we've seen plenty of that.

Mr. Speaker, I fear that sometimes these are not really punitive measures for the student. Further, it is likely that these students, who are already misbehaving, will simply find peers outside of the school who facilitate their negative behaviours. This may in the end heighten the draw to skip class, a result that completely counteracts the initial goal, which is to motivate the student to attend school, to behave more appropriately, and to improve their performance. The fact is that as soon as the student is off school property, staff are unable to observe and assist them in any way, which can be, in the end, counterproductive.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, an article published in the Globe and Mail addressed the issue of expelling and moving students to new schools. The article draws attention to the fact that students who have a disposition to violent behaviour are highly likely to find new conflicts in a new environment in which they are placed. School resource officers have said that in the case of students who are drug trafficking, a school transfer simply means a whole new set of clientele. Often these students face multiple expulsions until they end up on the street, and then the issue is one of community safety. Sometimes they will simply drop out before disciplinary measures force them to do so.

It has been shown that schools that issue more suspensions have higher dropout rates. This makes for a tough balance for school staff and school boards. They have to seriously consider, when contemplating suspension and expulsion, what is best for the student who has misbehaved and what is best for the school environment.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 creates a new way to manage bullying behaviour, one that has a renewed sense of promise. First, by requiring the documentation of these behaviours, students are being held accountable for their actions. Mistakes made by students will not simply be forgotten, and in cases where the behaviour is repetitive, these records can be accessed to show ongoing or escalating behaviour. This, indeed, is a powerful message. This bill will provide an alternative to a traditional school suspension or expulsion by bringing together the principal, the parents, the student, and the police to discuss an appropriate and effective course of action for serious bullying. It will convey the message that bullying will not be tolerated.

Mr. Speaker, psychologically these students need support, and an expulsion does not provide that support. Suspension or expulsion is unlikely to motivate change. That is why I believe these alternatives are crucial. Keeping children in school is important to Alberta Education, to local authorities, to communities, and to parents. Bill 206 would provide the needed tools to address bullying and will provide students with the opportunity to recognize and change their behaviour patterns.

Mr. Speaker, speaking as a former teacher, I stand before this Assembly in full support of Bill 206. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I am very pleased that the mover of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, brought it forward, and I give credit where credit is due to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for having thoughtfully brought this forward.

I want this to succeed for a variety of reasons, Mr. Speaker. The first is to honour the memory of a young high school student, Alex Wedman, who is no longer with us because of bullying. Alex suffered bullying in junior high school. He was so severely kicked in the groin that he required several stitches to help to remediate the problem.

The bullying he received in junior high school followed him to high school. When he graduated from grade 10, he tried to leave his bully behind by switching high schools here in Edmonton. Unfortunately, on the first day of registration in his new high school to his horror and to his family's horror, the bully had shown up in the new school to which he was transferred. Attention was brought by Alex's mother and father to a variety of individuals within the school system all along the course of the bullying. Unfortunately, the interventions were not sufficient, and Alex Wedman went into his parents' garage, turned on the vehicle, and as a result committed suicide because he could no longer take the bullying that he had received.

This is a very sad circumstance which this bill is attempting to address. This past fall we heard of children being hazed with hockey sticks, some with nail studs, down in the southern portion of the province. There is a sort of male, foolish rule that suggests that you keep it to yourself, you tough through it, that you go through initiation processes, and that's part of being a man. Well, I suggest that beating or being the recipient of a beating has nothing to do with manhood. It's physical violence. It should not be tolerated.

Now, in order for Bill 206 to have an effect, it needs to have funding attached. It needs to have education components attached. The education components have to start at the earliest grades. Kindergarten children, or if we ever have junior kindergarten in this province, need to be given the opportunity to have the whole notion of bullying discussed. Teachers require in-service in order to recognize the characteristics of bullying. In the case of elementary schools be on the lookout for it at recess. In junior high schools be on the lookout for it during classroom discussions. Quite often the bullying takes place in phys ed classes, where a shot is given or a smack on the back is delivered.

We need teachers to be given the type of in-service training so that they can recognize and react to bullying early on so that situations that occurred to Alex Wedman do not occur to other students. Far too many children in this province have committed suicide because they have been driven to it by relentless bullying. It's extremely important in the universities as part of curriculum instruction that would-be teachers going through their masters in teaching program receive education on identifying bullying.

Teachers are busy individuals. They do their best, but in order to prevent needless injury and death, our best must get even better. We're frequently the first line of prevention in bullying. If a child comes to us or the parent of a child comes to us as teachers and tells us about the bullying, whether it's cyberbullying, which seems to be primarily the area that female students prefer, or whether it's knock-down physical abuse or name-calling, bullying has to be addressed, and funding for those programs must be in place in order to ensure that the bullying is ended. With the teachers who are currently teaching, as I say, we need in-service. In-service costs dollars.

A message that I've tried to put out through Children and Youth Services, that I put out last month at the Alberta Association of Services for Children and Families, is a simple message. It says: Safe Kids Save Dollars. If Bill 206 is going to have the effect that the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has intended, then there have to be dollars following the bill. There have to be the educational components provided in order for bullying to end.

Right now schools have very few options. Quite often simply expelling the bully provides a holiday and a type of recognition for the bullying, but the bullying continues. Suspension isn't the answer either for the child being bullied or for the bullying. It just transfers the program. We need in-school efforts and support in a sustainable fashion if we are going to end bullying.

I compliment the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. Through her communities and crime task force she travelled the province, and she heard from a variety of individuals, including myself at the University of Calgary and at another forum based in Calgary, about the need for funding for community resource officers. Those are police officers who spend time working with children in the schools. Currently, if a high school is sufficiently lucky, they'll have a resource officer attached to them. That support does not extend down to junior high schools on a regular basis, and it's extremely infrequent for school-based resource officers to be operating in elementary grades in elementary schools, where bullying often has begun.

In my own life I have been bullied. As a junior high school student in grade 8 in Richmond Hill, Ontario, I was the new kid on the block. My father was in the air force. We moved frequently, but I had never faced bullying before. I know what it feels like to be kicked and pounded and harassed and chased home. I don't want that to happen to any other Alberta children or any other children in this world for that matter. It had a profound effect on myself in terms of having to overcome the fears associated. Fortunately, between my parents and a teacher who was very concerned, I was taken under the individual's wing, and the bullying at least was reduced. It didn't end, but it was reduced, and I thank that teacher and my parents for having gone through that process.

As a teacher I vowed that there would never be bullying in my classrooms or, if I could prevent it, in the schools that I attended. I would hope that through Bill 206, School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, the provision will be made to fund the necessary education programs for students, for teachers, and for parents that will make this bill a success.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you, mover of the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to speak to second reading of Bill 206, School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. Our schools are facing challenges that are becoming increasingly more sophisticated. The safe learning environments that our schools strive to maintain are being threatened by bullying, violence, and drug use. By banning drug paraphernalia and providing novel disciplinary measures aimed at the prevention of major problems, Bill 206 provides substantial procedures in addressing these challenges.

Mr. Speaker, our school resource officers best understand these potential problems. These officers are regular uniformed police officers that work in our schools policing, protecting, and mentoring students. The officers act as counsellors, providing information to students about drugs and related topics and providing supports to students in need. Developing relationships with students allows them a greater awareness of what is going on in schools in terms of potentially threatening and illegal activities. These school resource officers are able to gain valuable knowledge that often leads to prevention of potentially dangerous situations. These officers are ideally placed and become a resource in terms of reporting some disconcerting trends within our schools.

Unfortunately, cases of bullying among students and incidents of drug use are increasingly seen in our schools. I believe this threatens our schools' safe learning environments. Bill 206 would outlaw the possession of drug paraphernalia on school property. Mr. Speaker, some pieces of drug paraphernalia used today could be sitting on your kitchen counter or coffee table, and you would not realize what they were. Many everyday objects are now, in fact, drug-related equipment. Pop cans, bottles, pens, cutlery, paper folds, and portable scales could all be considered drug paraphernalia. For example, the screw cap of a broken light bulb is now commonly used in the process of making crystal meth. It is also considered dangerous because it could be used as a weapon. This is a perfect illustration of the potential linkage between drug paraphernalia and violence.

Our school resource officers deal with these cases on a daily basis. Currently possession of drug paraphernalia is not directly an indictable offence. Although drug paraphernalia can be used as evidence in the case of a trafficking charge, as I alluded to earlier, it is difficult to prove that a pop can, for example, is intended for drug use. This inability to effectively deal with the possession of drug paraphernalia has resulted in numerous serious and potentially deadly situations.

There was an incident last year which nearly resulted in the death of a student, a potential death that could have been prevented. In this incident a female student at a particular school was frequently found to be in possession of drug paraphernalia. She continued to possess the items even though she had been reportedly suspended. After returning to school, this girl coaxed another female classmate into smoking marijuana. The other girl had never been known as one to experiment with drugs. Soon after smoking the drug, the young classmate became gravely ill, and an ambulance was called. The girl who provided the drugs realized the urgency of the situation and admitted to the police and medical personnel what she had given to her female classmate. The drugs were, in fact, impure, and the girl nearly lost her life.

Mr. Speaker, I believe this illustrates how stronger disciplinary measures coupled with a ban on drug paraphernalia are necessary to intervene in situations such as this. It is concerning that a situation like this can develop in our schools, that even when someone has repeatedly been found to be in possession of drug paraphernalia, our school resource officers at present are not able to effectively address the situation and prevent future problems. I believe that the possession of drug paraphernalia is not only an obvious indication of drug use with a particular student; it can be an indication of a safety issue that affects the entire school. The role that drug paraphernalia plays in the overall drug culture is recognized in Bill 206.

This is a culture that threatens the safe learning environment that our schools work towards. Alberta students and school staff are better off without these objects in our schools, regardless of their intended use. If Bill 206 is implemented, resource officers and staff would have another tool to eliminate drug paraphernalia in schools. This ban may not solve all drug-related challenges, nor is it likely to solve all bullying-related challenges. However, the measures proposed in Bill 206 would provide a valuable tool that may help prevent many serious situations.

Mr. Speaker, before I conclude, I would like to speak personally of a tragic event that occurred in my constituency of Cardston-Taber-Warner. In the spring of 1999 a 14-year-old boy armed with a rifle walked on the grounds of W.R. Myers high school in the town of Taber. He opened fire and hit three people, taking the life of one of them. The loss of this life is an obvious tragedy, but so is the story of the boy shooter, who had been the victim of frequent bullying incidents throughout his youth and adolescence. At one point he was doused with lighter fluid and threatened to be lit on fire. It is sad that he had to become reclusive and extremely fearful and eventually dropped out of high school. This shooting took place only eight days after the Columbine high school shootings, where two boys aged 17 and 18, who were both repeatedly bullied, entered the school, killing one teacher and 12 students and injuring 21 other people.

These tragic incidents are a demonstration of the impact that bullying can have not only on an individual but on a community. Mr. Speaker, I believe that Bill 206 is a measure targeted at preventing these incidents. For these reasons, I endorse the intent and focus of this bill, and I believe that many Albertans would welcome its passage. I commend the member for bringing it forward.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today in this Assembly to speak in favour of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, being put forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. Bill 206 would require everyone on school property to conduct themselves in a safe and peaceful manner in order to maintain the well-being of others. In addition, this bill would create a clear definition for bullying and provide mechanisms that would help ensure a safe learning environment at school.

Now, as MLAs we deal with high-conflict type issues, yet I doubt that anyone in this Legislature was actually physically endangered here on the way into the Legislature, nor were we physically bullied in any way today. That tends to be something that adults in our society can count on, that they can go about their business without being physically intimidated. Yet our kids, that we care about so much, are often in the situation in schools where they do not have that basic safety that we as adults have, so I do believe this is a very important bill.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 would provide students with support as they could be referred to educational measures programs, and because there is mandatory reporting in this bill, the actual problems will get dealt with. There will be various ways in which they can be dealt with, things including mental health, drug abuse, and anger management programs. These programs, which are alternatives to expulsion and suspension, would more effectively help youth by addressing their problems.

These educational measures programs are also used in other legislation. In fact, there's a similar provision under the youth criminal justice act where extrajudicial measures can be used. Extrajudicial measures mean measures other than the general judicial proceedings used to deal with a young person alleged to have committed a crime. They include referring the youth to a program or agency in the community once the youth consents or referring to an extrajudicial sanction, which is part of a program sanctioned by the Attorney General.

These extrajudicial measures provide support services to youth, which is similar to the intent of the educational measures program proposed in Bill 206. Mr. Speaker, if a student's behaviour is severe enough, Bill 206 would allow either the police officer and the principal or the courts to compel the student to participate in these educational measures programs, which are essentially rehabilitative programs. There's no single definition of what constitutes an educational measures program because these programs take into consideration the student's individual circumstances, and from there it would be decided what measures or support programs work best for that youth.

Every situation is unique. Therefore, these educational measures programs would be able to reflect that and effectively provide youth with the appropriate assistance. For example, Alberta Health Services provides several support services for individuals suffering from addictions, which could be considered an educational measures program.

Bill 206 is important. It ensures protection for the students who are being bullied, and it also provides support for the bullies, who may be acting out due to problems in their personal lives. Since these youth are our future, we need to have the tools to better address these problems early on so we do not perpetuate the cycle of violence and addictions. For this reason I support Bill 206, and I encourage all members to do so as well.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, you wish to speak, right?

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise today and speak to Bill 206, sponsored by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Our government is committed to promoting strong and vibrant communities where all Albertans feel safe. Bill 206 actively promotes this goal by targeting what some may consider the root cause of many forms of social violence, school bullying. Bill 206 proposes to extend the tools of educators and police officers, providing more ways to address schoolyard bullying more effectively. In addition, Bill 206 will require full documentation of all bullying incidents.

While these initiatives are well targeted, I feel the strength of this bill is how it addresses the evolution of bullying. When I think of bullying, I envision physical violence and playground name-calling. Seldom do I think of Internet chat rooms, text messaging, and e-mail. The sad reality is, however, that bullying has become well adapted to the information age. Mr. Speaker, this cyberbullying includes any form of bullying that uses an electronic medium. Using sites such as Facebook and MySpace, bullies engage in harmful behaviours such as spreading hurtful stories, engaging in name-calling, or even making personal threats on others' safety.

The Internet removes the human face from personal interactions. Individuals do not see the harm their words or actions inflict. Individuals who would otherwise be restrained from bullying can become empowered by their online anonymity. Technology shields bullies from the emotional harm they cause while offering no such protection to the victims. Adding to this shield of protection, cyberbullying also dramatically expands the scope of public ridicule. Simply put, online bullying exposes the victim to the criticisms of the cyberworld. Now, to be clear, Bill 206 does not attempt to control the entire cyberworld – that would be impossible – but it does ban bullying on all school computers and intranets.

While the methods of bullying may have a broader scope, the beginnings of bullying often remain the same, schoolyards. Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 will give teachers and police the tools to intervene more effectively in cases of bullying starting in the schoolyard. If cases of bullying can be identified and addressed at the schoolyard, it is hoped that cyberbullying might be stopped before it even begins.

Cyberbullying is only one example of how bullying has evolved in the information age. While the clicks of a mouse can spread hate and intolerance, they pale in comparison to the gut-wrenching shots of a gun. We only need look to the tragedies of Columbine, Virginia Tech, and Taber to find some reminders of why bullying, isolation, and hate cannot be tolerated in our schools. Bullying, acts of intimidation, and physical threats instill fear in the victims, and people who fear for their safety will take steps to protect themselves. Increasingly, this protection is taking form with the use of weapons. Weapons and weapon violence in schools are related to bullying, and it's an issue that must be addressed. Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 is designed to help stop bullying before it escalates into violence involving weapons.

Victims of bullying need to feel as though there are effective solutions in place to justify coming to teachers for help. Current punishments such as detention, suspensions, and expulsions may not be effective enough in deterring the most hurtful forms of bullying. Under Bill 206 principals would be able to call police to meet with the students and their guardians. In severe cases, especially those that involve weapons, police officers would be given the power to impose court summonses on these offenders.

With these bans in place teachers and police officers not only would be able to seize the weapon but also would be given the power to confront the student more effectively. The earlier an authority figure can confront and intervene in a case of bullying, the greater the chance that the use of weapons can be avoided.

Bullying in schools is not a new phenomenon, but the methods of bullying have adapted themselves to the information age. Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 is an effective antibullying proposal because it clearly addresses these adaptations. Granting school administration and police officers new tools for establishing appropriate consequences for bullies allows them to intervene more effectively in cases of both cyberbullying and bullying involving weapons.

In closing, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this bill, and I would urge all members gathered here to support Bill 206. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and speak today to Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. Schooltime is a time to learn, grow, and dream about endless possibilities. Unfortunately, many young people go through a difficult time for various reasons, and one of those reasons is bullying.

Typically, what happens at a school playground is that for some reason somebody chooses to exploit somebody else. We can all remember back as children; I'm sure many of us in this Chamber experienced this ourselves first-hand. I personally remember I was bullied. I looked a little different from anybody else where I grew up. Walking home, you'd have to defend yourself against the bullies. Sometimes there would be two bullies, sometimes three. You'd take a different way home from school or to school. If you were in the playground, you couldn't do activities that you wanted to do because the bullies would intimidate you regularly.

Mr. Speaker, I'm really saddened that we're actually still having this conversation here today. Thirty-five years have passed. This isn't a conversation we ought to have. This kind of stuff shouldn't be happening.

Bullies can take the fun out of school, where bullying happens the most, and turn most simple things like a ride on the bus or a stop at a locker or a walk to the bathroom into a scary event that's anticipated with worry all day long. School is a place where children go to learn. They go to read, not to worry about whether they're going to be safe.

Children who are bullied often experience low self-esteem, depression, whereas those doing the bullying may go on to engage in more destructive antisocial behaviour as teens and adults. Bullies, who often have been bullied themselves, may pick on others to feel powerful, popular, important, or in control. Often they antagonize the same children repeatedly. It's just easy to pick on that same person all the time.

Sadly, bullying is widespread, Mr. Speaker. According to a U.S. poll in 2004 86 per cent of 9- to 13-year-old boys and girls polled said they'd seen somebody else being bullied, 48 per cent said they had been bullied, and 42 per cent admitted to bullying other kids at least once in a while. Boys were more likely than girls to say that they would fight back, whereas girls were more likely than boys to say they would talk to an adult.

If a school is rife with bullying, it simply doesn't feel safe. It poisons the social environment for everyone and has long-term consequences not only for the victim but also for the bully. Bullying is a social relationship where an individual repeatedly picks a conflict with another individual. It can be verbal, physical, psychological. Perpetrators are equally likely to be boys or girls and to be physically or emotionally or verbally aggressive and now with the Internet, through cyberspace. Extortion, intimidation, and destruction of property are all parts of this behaviour pattern. Although black eyes or broken limbs are a concrete sign that your child may be a victim of bullying, there are many other different ways and different signs that children have that may not show a bruise.

Bullying, Mr. Speaker, affects the whole community. As they grow up, playground bullies may transfer their abuse to other forms of harassment or violence and become workplace bullies. Boys who were bullies in elementary school are more likely to have criminal convictions by the time they're in their 20s. This is not surprising given that many bullying activities are offences under the Criminal Code if they were done by adults.

Victims, on the other hand, typically suffer withdrawal and anxiety, their school performance may drop, and they may try to avoid going to school altogether. In rare cases they lash out in revenge, endangering the entire school.

Hear no evil; see no evil. Mr. Speaker, most children know when there's bullying, but they don't report it because they don't believe anything is going to get done. In fact, they believe that bullying is going to get worse because that's what happens: problems tend to fester under the surface.

A study of Toronto schools found that a bullying act occurred every seven seconds, but teachers were aware of only 4 per cent of the incidents. Seven out of 10 teachers but only 1 in 4 students say that the teacher almost always intervened. Close to 40 per cent of the victims say that they have not talked to their parents about the problem. Ninety per cent of children say that they find it unpleasant to watch bullying. Peers are present in 85 per cent of bullying episodes on the playground and in the classroom.

Now, why do kids bully? There are many reasons that they become bullies. Bullies frequently target people who are different. They seek to exploit those differences. They choose victims who they think are unlikely to retaliate. Bullies may also turn to abusive behaviour as ways of dealing with a difficult situation in their own home. Mr. Speaker, hurting people hurt people. Bullies might not realize how hurtful their actions can be, but some know the pain first-hand because they've been bullied. Some bullies think their behaviour is normal because they come from families in which everyone regularly gets angry and shouts or calls names and has physical altercations. They copy what they know, and just like the children they're tormenting, bullies themselves often have low self-esteem.

Victims are too fearful to ask an adult to intervene, but they can start by asking for help. Mr. Speaker, this is why we're here today. The objective of Bill 206 is to promote and improve the safety of our schools for our children as well as for school staff by providing a legislated definition of bullying in the School Act along with a ban on bullying on school property. In addition, Bill 206 would prohibit the possession of drug paraphernalia or any tool or device that could potentially harm our children. Within this legislation all schools will be required to document incidents that involve bullying, possession of any drug paraphernalia, and tools or devices that can be injurious to the well-being of others.

No parent wants their children to experience the degrading realities of bullying. Many students – our children, our future – believe that there is little that they or anyone else can do to stop a bully. As a society we have to do away with the notion that bullying is an acceptable part of growing up. There have been a number of well-documented cases that you've heard today where the victims of bullying have violently retaliated, and some have taken their own life as a result.

The strength of Bill 206 is that it gives police the discretion to lay a mandatory court summons for severe cases of bullying, possession of any drug paraphernalia or tools or devices that can be injurious to the physical or mental well-being of others. While we have programs in our schools and in our communities that target bullying such as those that prevent family violence or the presence of school counsellors and school resource officers, it would seem that something more is needed. Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 seeks to provide schools with the additional tools they need to deal with bullying more effectively by prohibiting these dangerous items.

Bill 206 provides schools with the ability to do more and to more easily identify and address dangerous situations, and by providing the option – the option – of involving law enforcement in severe case and allowing disciplinary measures such as a court summons or community service, I believe that Bill 206 will go a long way in changing the prevalence and effects of bullying.

Mr. Speaker, it's for these reasons that I will be supporting Bill 206, and I look forward to hearing from the rest of the Assembly. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and join the debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to thank the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this bill.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 is an important piece of legislation. If passed, not only will it help protect victims of bullying, but it will also provide support for bullies themselves. Bill 206 requires an amendment to the School Act providing options or tools to teachers and other officials for effective management of incidents of bullying, violence, threatening conduct, possession of unsafe tools or devices as well as drug paraphernalia. Additionally, Bill 206 addresses the new phenomenon of online bullying.

Mr. Speaker, bullying is an age-old problem that in recent years has become more pervasive with outcomes that are far too often tragic. The impact of bullying can be profound. It can wear down the confidence of the victim and lead to consequences such as suicide and murder. Not only does bullying impact the victim but the bully as well. They learn that this type of behaviour is effective and acceptable, which can lead to carrying these attitudes with them for life. Bill 206 will provide teachers, principals, and school resource officers the tools to effectively identify bullies and assertively address this problem.

Currently suspensions and expulsions are the norm for dealing with cases of bullying. However, this is not likely to address the root cause. When a child is sent home on a suspension or expulsion, often a parent is not there to supervise. They may be working or are unable to effectively parent due to problems that they themselves may have. In addition, while at home on a suspension or expulsion a child will have greater access to television, movies, and video games which, more often than not, can teach aggression as an acceptable form of problem solving, thereby aggravating the issue.

Furthermore, bullying is not limited to a school setting. All too often bullying starts in schools and continues in the community, thus creating greater social and criminal issues. If a child has no one to supervise them, they may begin to hang out or gravitate to those in the community that have also been expelled and, potentially, others that may have addiction and behavioural problems. By keeping children in school, as Bill 206 would do, these students are more likely to receive education and support. Further, being at school, where a peaceable environment is promoted, will help to teach acceptable behaviour, especially in comparison to walking the streets in our communities. Students are not required to participate in any remedial activity during the time away from school; therefore, the causes for their suspension or expulsion are not being addressed.

Mr. Speaker, catching and addressing these unacceptable behaviours early is key to students learning right from wrong and, therefore, aiding in becoming successful adults. Altogether, this is important in the promotion and maintenance of safe communities. Bill 206 gives schools resources to help children before bullying becomes a lifelong problem and results in even more serious or severe consequences. Those that cause problems in schools will often turn to a life of crime, drugs, and gangs, and these have immense impact on communities.

It has been shown that targeted strategies are needed to ensure appropriate intervention, protection, and follow-up support for those individuals involved, which includes both the bully and the victim. Bill 206 would be another tool to help break the cycle of violence, complementing our other initiatives. For example, Alberta Education offers effective behaviour supportive training, or EBS, to teachers across the province. EBS is an effective tool that includes helping teachers build a list of school-wide expectations that are directly taught and consistently reinforced throughout the school by all adults. In addition, it aids in the direct teaching of social skills and positive behaviours that specifically demonstrate what behaviour expectations look like in each setting or context. Bill 206 will work in combination with these strategies. Additionally, Bill 206 can work in conjunction with mental health programs and alcohol and drug abuse programs, allowing the child to receive the help that they need. Mr. Speaker, a child is not likely to have access to these resources if they are not at school.

Mr. Speaker, in 2003 this government recognized that bullying was becoming a concern that needed to be addressed. As a result, the Alberta Roundtable on Family Violence and Bullying was created. The Alberta Roundtable on Family Violence and Bullying, which presented its final report in 2004, emphasized the importance of early childhood development and school-age strategies for managing aggressive bullying behaviours. These strategies can prove to be society's best chance to effect positive change and address behaviours that perpetuate family violence and bullying across generations.

The consultations that occurred across the province led to a provincial bullying prevention initiative. The bullying prevention initiative through the joint efforts of Alberta Education and Alberta children's services comprises three websites that have been developed to help children, youth, and adults learn about bullying and how to deal with bullying issues. Bill 206 can work to complement this bullying prevention initiative.

Mr. Speaker, the ultimate goal of Bill 206 is to identify the problem and work at addressing it. Bill 206 can help end the cycle of bullying and stop this kind of behaviour in future generations, ultimately helping all entities involved, from the victim to the school administration to the community.

Mr. Speaker, I fully support Bill 206 and urge all other members to do the same. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise for the first time in this session to speak in favour of Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for introducing this bill, which I fully support.

This piece of legislation seeks to ensure that Alberta's youth are able to grow and prosper in our world-renowned education system. It would provide legislative direction that would require all persons on school property to conduct themselves in a safe and responsible manner. It would apply to all school property such as school buses, the Internet, and educational intranets. Further, this bill would also ban drug paraphernalia and any tools or devices that could cause harm to others on school property. This bill would help to ensure that an individual's activities do not negatively affect the physical or mental well-being of those around them. All together, this would help reduce and eliminate one of the most detrimental activities within our school system: bullying.

One of the strengths of Bill 206 is in the creation of a legal definition of bullying which seeks to identify the many forms of bullying experienced by Alberta's youth. Now, Mr. Speaker, the proposed definition would explicitly include harassment towards individuals based on sexual orientation and physical disabilities. By creating this legal definition of bullying, school officials and our legal system will be given the tools necessary to continue to provide the safe learning environment that our youth require.

However, Mr. Speaker, by simply defining the activities that are considered to be part of bullying, we must make certain that our schools can effectively address these situations. Many Alberta youth experience the effects of bullying on an ongoing basis and may feel as though they have no effective recourse to end their unfortunate circumstances. This can be attributed to a number of reasons such as fear of reprisal or fear of harassment or the common belief that bullying is simply a part of growing up. It's not. These unfortunate situations may cause bullying victims to internalize their anger and discontent for their current situation, which can severely limit their academic or personal growth.

Mr. Speaker, our society has come a long way in recognizing the negative and long-lasting effects of bullying. More importantly, we have conclusively established that bullying is not simply a part of growing up. We only have to look at the tragedies of Columbine and Taber back in 1999 to identify the potential consequences of not effectively addressing bullying in schools.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 gives our youth and school officials the necessary resources to recognize and address bullying, and even more importantly it removes the onus from the victim of identifying and remedying the situations of bullying. The fear of further bullying or being deemed a so-called tattletale by the broader student body may prevent those being bullied from coming forward and filing a complaint themselves. This can embolden bullies and result in more victims within our schools. These injurious activities can severely damage our children's self-confidence and may prevent them from achieving their full potential not just in their childhood but in later life.

Given this, Bill 206 provides a very effective provision which allows schools to become a complainant against a bully rather than simply having the victim initiate a complaint against an offending individual. For example, Mr. Speaker, if a resource officer were to see a student being bullied by other students, the officer would be able to initiate the complaint process against the offending students. This would provide students, bullied or otherwise, with the peace of mind that those working within the school system will be cognizant of bullies and have been given the necessary tools to address the circumstances. At the end of the day, this will reduce the students' fears of reprisal or intensified bullying as they do not have to be the ones that bring forward a complaint. This is not to say that those who suffer from bullying should not or cannot report the activities to appropriate authorities; however, this recognizes that there are many players in the ongoing struggle to end this problem and that school officials can play an important role in helping to end the torment of bullying.

Mr. Speaker, there are members of this Assembly who have experienced or witnessed the effects of bullying while attending school. I was moved earlier by the speech from the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark. I also recall the time when my mother, who was a teacher, came home from her grade 6 class, came to me in university and told me that she was attacked and bullied by a student. This is simply not acceptable in a civil society. These people, though, have witnessed the negative consequences of such actions, such as the pressures those being bullied may face when they look for ways to end their anguish.

Mr. Speaker, this provision will help alleviate victims from concerns of reprisal by allowing schools to become the complainant. For this reason I fully support Bill 206, and I want to say thank you again to the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward this important initiative.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and join the debate on Bill 206, the School (Enhanced Protection of Students and Teachers) Amendment Act, 2009. This bill was brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, and I would like to take this time to thank her for this noble piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 proposes that a number of amendments be made to the School Act to help address the serious issue of bullying in our schools. Bullying is an affront to our shared values of tolerance and acceptance and cannot be tolerated. Bill 206 confronts this contentious issue head-on and proposes decisive measures that I feel will effectively sideline the future of bullying in our classrooms.

While I've heard praise for specific measures proposed in this legislation, I would like to address how Bill 206 in its entirety would work to keep children and youth out of the court system. Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that bullying can be a criminal offence. Harassment and verbal abuse can impart long-lasting emotional scars that in far too many cases have led to violence or suicide. Similarly, physical violence and assault generate fear and hostility. These are the trademark symptoms of bullying and are clearly illegal under the Criminal Code. While many of these cases would be prosecuted in youth court, in serious cases of bullying often the last resort is a court hearing and a criminal prosecution. Court cases for bullying in schools can be treated in the same manner as an assault or a harassment case and in convictions can lead to serious penalties like prison time, probation, or restraining orders. It is important to state that these punishments are necessary, particularly for severe cases of bullying, and in no way will Bill 206 contravene these measures.

What Bill 206 will do, however, is create a system that will help address and resolve cases of bullying before they escalate to a court summons. With the measures proposed by this particular bill, school principals and their administration would be able to call meetings with parents, the student, and resource officers, as examples, if the offence merits it. This meeting would enable resource officers to become involved early in the cases of bullying and potentially prevent them from escalating to cases that end up in a court of law. Having resource officers attend meetings gives added weight to the conversation. Bullies would know that not only were their actions severe but that perpetuating those actions could lead to serious criminal charges.

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, most deterring: criminal charges can lead to criminal records. A criminal record is a serious document, that can follow a person for the rest of their lives. It can prevent them from finding employment and travelling abroad as well as dramatically affect people's perceptions of that individual. Bill 206 will complement local operational school systems that will help keep children away from the court system and serious consequences.

To be clear, Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 is not removing the potential for a court hearing and a criminal record for bullies; instead, it is creating a system that addresses bullying before it reaches this level of seriousness. In fact, if it is merited, the resource officers and the principal and others involved can refer the student to court, but in these circumstances the student would be tried under the School Act as opposed to the Criminal Code. This provides yet another mechanism for officials at the local level to address bullying without fearing that the student will acquire a permanent record.

That is perhaps why I am most supportive of Bill 206. On one hand, it offers clear protection to the victims of bullying, giving them the comfort of knowing that a resource officer is able to intervene on their behalf. On the other hand, Bill 206 recognizes that being a bully often happens in the formative years of a person's life and that imposing severe punishments on children and youth at early ages could essentially destroy their lives. After all, in many cases bullies are themselves victims of household abuse or neglect or other circumstances. Rather than simply imposing a mandatory court summons for all the cases of bullying, Bill 206 gives officials the discretion to choose whether or not to require a court hearing. This gives flexibility to the system. For example, it is possible that a case of serious bullying could be dealt with more effectively through communication or support programming rather than prison terms and probation.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 206 recognizes that bullying is a serious offence that has the potential to destroy lives, but to the credit of the hon. member this bill also recognizes that a criminal record has the same potential. Rather than simply legislating serious consequences for bullying, Bill 206 creates a balance wherein victims are protected from their aggressors and aggressors are protected from themselves.

In closing, I applaud the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for bringing forward Bill 206. I truly believe that this legislation extends protection not only to the victims of bullying but to the bullies themselves. I stand in support of Bill 206 and urge all members of the Legislature to join me.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, you indicated to me that you wished to speak on the bill.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to speak on Bill 206, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. The intent of the bill is to enhance the safety of students and teachers by amending the School Act to include explicit sections on banned items and bullying. I'm sure that even the majority of us, too, experienced bullying at one time or another. When I went to school, I was the victim of bullying, too. The only way I could escape bullying was because I was a shining student in my school, and the bullies always wanted some favours from me, needing help in their math or in English or social studies, so that's how I was spared. I'm sure, you know, like I said, we all experienced bullying at one point or another. Bullying goes on in the workplace, too.

This bill is almost a repeat of Bill 210 from last session. It defines bully, banned items. It meets lots of our earlier concerns regarding the exclusion of sexual orientation and disability in the definition of bully. It also states the procedure that teachers and principals must follow if the student is suspected of possessing a banned item — enough has been said about drug paraphernalia and all the other items — or bullying another student. The principal in collaboration with a peace officer can determine an educational measures program for the student to participate in.

That's where I have a concern, too, about the educational measures program. The principal must also advise the board of placing students in an educational measures program, and the board must advise the minister of any contravention regarding the banned items or bullying. The school board also has the responsibility to ensure that there are educational measures programs. Although the bill has been improved because of the definition of bullying and includes a number of discriminated groups that earlier versions did not, there are still some worries about the actual mechanics of how the students would be punished. Although the definition of bullying is more inclusive than prior to the last session, children do not have to have a reason to bully.

I think we should amend the bill to strike out section 5. There are two main problems with section 5. First, it seems to contradict legislation in the School Act, and second, it erodes the powers currently held by the principal to suspend students guilty of bullying or of possessing banned items.

We also need some clarification as to what educational measures programs are and what will be involved in instituting them. Where is the funding going to come from? In light of the big deficit I think we have to look at the funding for those programs as well. What exactly is an educational measures program, and are these programs already in place? For the school boards that don't currently have these programs in place, where is the funding going to come from? Again, that's the question that arises time and again. Do these programs have to be expanded if this legislation passes?

Section 5 amends section 24, which states the conditions under which a student can be suspended. It states that with the exception of the contravention of banned items or bullying, a student can be suspended if they do not comply with section 12 or has failed to participate in an educational measures program or has caused injury, mental or physical, to others in school.

This section is attempting to ensure that a student that is found guilty of a banned item or bullying will take an educational measures program. Only if the student fails to participate in the program will the student be suspended. I have concern with this section. A student may be found guilty of bullying, be required to enrol in an educational measures program, and shall not be suspended, all the while being guilty under section 12(f), which is failing to respect the rights of others as well. If the student is guilty of contravening section 12(f), then there's reason to suspend the student. On one hand, the bully should participate in the educational measures program and should not be suspended but should be suspended considering causing an injury. This would make the proposed legislation contradict existing legislation and would create a legitimate basis for appeals.

Currently the principal can suspend those who have been found guilty of bullying or possessing banned items. This amendment states that if a student is guilty of bullying or possessing banned items, the principal cannot suspend the student or should make the student participate in an educational measures program. As a result, this amendment would create greater restrictions on the available courses of action to principals.

I suggest taking a serious look at section 5. The consequences would be that the mechanism of placing a student in an educational measures program before suspending the student would be deleted. It would also result in resolving contradiction and continue to allow principals to choose whether a student should participate in an educational measures program or be suspended outright.

Those are my concerns. Otherwise, I support this bill. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, you have up to five minutes to close the debate.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to close debate on Bill 206. I want to thank all of my colleagues; my researcher, Elizabeth Clement; my assistant, Brock Mulligan; police; school resource officers; kids; parents; and a special thanks to one mom who shared her heartfelt, sad story with me, which I mentioned when I started the debate. Thank you, Betty.

As I said before, this bill is going to make our schools safer. It's going to prohibit acts of intimidation, which, I may add, Mr. Speaker, includes hazing, and bullying which is disseminated by electronic media on and off the school grounds. Additionally, it would prohibit the possession of weapons and/or drug paraphernalia. All of these issues detract from safety in our schools and hurt many young people and teachers in our province.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the committee stage of the debate and ask all members to support second reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 206 read a second time]

The Deputy Speaker: Before the next item, I would ask for unanimous consent for Introduction of Guests.

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To my colleagues in the Legislature, I am delighted to be joined by three individuals, constituents all, from the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre who have been very helpful in advising and guiding me and certainly in making their concerns and issues known about the upcoming Bill 208. In fact, I managed to facilitate a meeting between the mover of the bill and some of my constituents, for which I thank the member. I would ask the following individuals to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly: Dave Farquharson, who lives in the Lions Village life lease; Ornal Jorgenson; and I think Mrs. Francis Reid is also here today. Please welcome these individuals to the Assembly.

Bill 208 Life Leases Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mittel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to stand today and open second reading debate on Bill 208, the Life Leases Act. The objective of Bill 208 is to create a legislative framework for life-lease living accommodations within the province. Essentially, the Life Leases Act would function in much the same way as our condominium act or our Residential Tenancies Act. Bill 208's framework would address issues related to safety deposits, entrance fees, dispute resolution, security of occupancy as well as disclosure requirements.

Mr. Speaker, life leases are arrangements whereby a tenant is granted the exclusive right to occupy a dwelling for the remainder of their life. To be clear, the occupant does not own the property, as in the case of condominiums, nor do they rent, as in the case of traditional apartments. Furthermore, perhaps because of this unusual arrangement, there is currently no legislation regulating life leases in Alberta. A legislative framework would provide a sense of security for the occupants of these living arrangements, and knowing that life leases are regulated by the government may in turn make life-lease accommodations more attractive to potential tenants.

This accommodation is basically tailored for seniors. Alberta's population is aging, and over 25 per cent of our population will be seniors by 2020. Bill 208 will provide this framework by requiring four broad sections within all life-lease arrangements.

First, this bill would guarantee the right of leasers to have input within their life-lease community as well as guarantee a level of control over the operation of their residence. Essentially, this would function much in the same way as a condo board does in a condominium.

Second, Bill 208 would define requirements surrounding the concept of entrance fees. Mr. Speaker, an entrance fee would be defined as a substantial portion of the total occupancy cost paid in advance. Simply put, an entrance fee is the mortgage of a life lease paid up front. In addition, the Life Leases Act would require that this entrance fee is to be completely returned to a potential tenant if the tenant withdraws from the lease before it is accepted by the landlord. Furthermore, Bill 208 would stipulate that when a tenant terminates their life lease, no less than 95 per cent of the entrance fee must be returned to them.

The third main section of this bill deals with the occupancy and possession dates. For example, this bill would stipulate that tenants would have a three-day cooling-off period in which they could change their minds about their life lease and then get all of their money back. This cooling-off period is intended to give tenants the chance to reflect on their life-lease agreement and to make sure that it meets all of their needs.

Mr. Speaker, I believe there should be complete transparency regarding these contracts because, after all, these life leases will be addressing their future, and as seniors there needs to be an absolute assurance of the security of their investment. The last thing any senior would want to worry about in contemplating their future living arrangements is whether or not it's a risky proposition.

The final section addressed in this bill deals with the upkeep and maintenance of the life-lease complex. It would be stipulated that the landlord would be responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of the building and that major repairs should be funded out of a reserve fund.

Mr. Speaker, the end result of these four sections would be the creation of a framework supporting life-lease development. After all, I believe that life leases will eventually play a large role in meeting Alberta's future housing needs. For example, various forms of life leases have already become a viable and popular option for many Alberta seniors. This is not surprising. Life leases are an attractive option for fixed-income households for a variety of reasons.

First, they're affordable. In fact, the majority of life-lease complexes are owned by nonprofit organizations. These organizations often develop life-lease complexes in order to provide affordable housing options to fixed-income seniors, and as a result of this, life leases are relatively affordable when compared to condominiums or traditional homes. The lease arrangement also assures an equity position with regard to their savings rather than renting, which would gradually deplete their savings.

A second characteristic of life leases that would make them attractive to seniors is the various support services that they may offer. Mr. Speaker, many life-lease communities offer options such as housekeeping, laundry, and even cooking services to their tenants. These services are great for seniors who wish to remain independent in their own homes but also would like assistance with day-to-day chores. The goal is to respect the clients and to be able to respond to their needs with dignity, kindness, and compassion. Essentially, life leases allow seniors to age in their own homes. It is a safe and secure home environment.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, life leases are an attractive option for Alberta seniors because of their communal nature. Most life-lease complexes provide communal gathering areas and recreational facilities, depending on the individual lifestyles and personal preferences. These can range from swimming pools to billiard rooms to banquet halls to bars. A senior living in one of these communities would not only have access to these facilities but would also be welcomed into a community.

Mr. Speaker, ensuring that seniors have choice regarding where they live is a cornerstone of this government's health care plan. Legislating a framework for life leases would essentially create more options. More options, in turn, mean more choice. I feel that Bill 208 is timely, effective, and fair to both life-lease landlords and tenants. I believe that Bill 208 has the potential to make life leases an attractive living option within our province.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will conclude my comments and look forward to the rest of the debate. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and my compliments to the mover of the bill. This is a much-needed piece of legislation in this province. Frankly, I was working on my own version, so I'm very grateful that the member has saved me a lot of hard work.

Now, I'm going to talk about some of the things that we would like to see included or adjusted in the proposed legislation that the member has put before us. Don't misunderstand me; that's not to say that this isn't overall a pretty good bill and a pretty good stab at it. As was mentioned, life lease is a great option, particularly for seniors. Using money that they may well have accumulated in their family home, that money, because of the way this particular housing option is organized, allows them to often get a much more well-appointed or a larger unit in a very nice facility. Essentially, the developer is able to save on borrowing costs by using the entrance fee; therefore, that money saved can be redirected into, frankly, a much nicer place to live.

I am very fortunate in having one of the three life-lease units in Edmonton in my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. The two other ones in Edmonton are in Riverside and Castle Downs. I think mine is actually the longest one; that's Lions Village Raitown, just over on 109th Street here. So I've had to learn a lot about life leases over the years. The biggest problem is we had no governing legislation, so I think this is a really great piece of legislation brought in front of us.

Having said all that to put it in context, there are a couple of issues that my constituents who are joining us in the gallery today have brought forward to me – and I think I added on one of my own here – and feel is of importance. We'd like to see them included in amendments to the bill as we move forward with this. Very quickly, the list is: a preamble, the retroactivity of the bill, audits, the trustee sections, the Canada revenue act, and, if we have time, the use of excess funds.

I think it would be helpful if we had a preamble to the bill that recognized that the overriding principle of a life-lease act was to protect the consumer. I think there is a fair amount of protection, and indeed this whole housing option makes it very attractive to developers. Frankly, I'm not worried about the developers here. I'm worried about the human beings that are going to live in this and to make sure that in a preamble we would be able to shape the legislation by saying that this is primarily for consumer protection. We would like to see a preamble added to the bill that laid that out as an overriding principle.

One of the things that we're noticing is that when we develop this legislation – and I'll refer back to the condo act, which is the one we have in front of us – we're really good about laying out how we start these and all the nitty-gritty about who is responsible for which piece and how we divide it all up to begin with. Well, what we didn't anticipate in the bill – and I'm hoping that we can overcome that problem in this piece of legislation – is: do we design a piece of legislation that works for us 30 years down the road? That's the situation we now have with condominiums. For anybody representing the larger cities we have – or just about any riding now has condominiums in it – the condominium act that we have does not anticipate what it's like living in that building 30 or 40 years down the road. So I'm trying to make sure that we don't make that same mistake with this legislation.

Second, and I would say from my constituents' point of view the largest area of concern, is the way the bill is written. This appears in section 2(1). For those of you following along, it appears on page 3 of the actual bill. It does not capture those that are already in units. It only goes forward. Frankly, that's not uncommon, but I think we need to revisit that decision.

What we have is: "every unit that is the subject of a life lease and every residential complex that contains such a unit, where the life lease is entered into after this Act comes into force." We would advocate that that last subsection, "where the life lease is entered into after this Act comes into force," is deleted. Now, I'm committing myself, but if I can't get the member to do it, I may bring forward an amendment when we're in Committee of the Whole that would delete that section because then it would capture those that are already living in life leases. As I said, you know, there are already three of them in Edmonton, there are probably at least that many in Calgary, and there may well be others in places like Medicine Hat or Red Deer or Lethbridge, et cetera, et cetera.

The problem that we run into, of course, is that there is a certain amount of turnover that we have. In checking with my constituents, they were saying: yeah, it's about 10 per cent. You know, people move on; they go into long-term care; they may pass away. There's about a 10 per cent turnover. If we did that, for example, in Lions Village Railtown, we'd end up with about six people a year who would come in after the act took effect, but everybody else in the unit would not be covered by the act. So increasingly we have disproportion as to who the act applies to, and I think it's important that we anticipate that problem and deal with it. We need to have some sort of retroactivity or a phase-in where we capture the people who are already in life leases.

I mean, let's not kid ourselves. This is, I would say, the most vigorous kind of living situation that seniors are choosing in this day and age. Although it's a building designed for seniors, it really is independent living. These are very, very vigorous, active people who are living there, so we're going to end up with them in these units for a very long period of time, another 20 years or 30 years potentially. We just don't want to see that kind of disproportion on who's covered by the act and who isn't, so we need to address that.

Holy mackerel. I've got two minutes left.

The next issue that was of real concern was the audits. We need clarity in the act around the audits. In particular, we need an independent auditor. There has to be a clear separation in audit statements between various buildings that are owned by the same organization, whether that's private or not-for-profit, and the information has to be made available to the leaseholders. Right now there is no current requirement for reliable, consistent annual financial reports to be given to the leaseholders. And we need to sort out the problem of an audit versus a review. I don't want to see smaller buildings take an unfair financial hit to produce an audited statement; nonetheless, the people that are leaseholders deserve to know what's happening with their money and how it's being handled. So we do need monitoring.

We need a criteria, a method that this is going to be done by; we need enforcement – for example, a fine system if these statements aren't made available – and adequate penalties, perhaps on a sliding scale; and we need to address the issue that the majority vote can remove the requirement to produce an audited report. That can come around through various kinds of coercion or a landlord telling people it isn't necessary. I think the review has to be there, and it cannot be waived for any reason.

The fourth area is around a trustee, and that's covering sections 19 to 23 in the act. My question is: why does the act view the trust money as the landlord's money and not the tenant's money? There are some issues that have been raised by my constituents around who is determining the trustee. It needs to be a professional designation, and it needs to be more clearly laid out than what we have currently in the legislation. It could go under the section 1(1)(p), that description of a trustee, but I think that it needs to be someone with an actual professional designation, something more along the lines of what we're seeing in section 22(1)(b). So who determines this and the fact that it should be a professional.

The trustee should also be mutually acceptable and independent, and the communication must be freely given, and access to the trustee must also be freely available. I think there are a number of court cases before us right now that run counter to that.

Thank you for the opportunity. I didn't get through my list, but I will in Committee of the Whole. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to rise and speak to Bill 208, the Life Leases Act. I'd like to commend the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat for bringing forward this very timely and pragmatic piece of legislation. Bill 208 recognizes and addresses important issues which affect one of our province's most valuable demographics, our seniors.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 208 would address specific concerns regarding seniors' housing by providing legislative direction for senior citizens living in life-lease units. The bill also provides individuals interested in life leases with peace of mind, knowing that life leases are protected by legislation. The life-lease concept is fairly new in Alberta, and there is currently little legislation that regulates life-lease complexes. However, there are life-lease facilities currently operating within the province and within Lethbridge.

Mr. Speaker, it is important to understand the concept of a life lease before one can discuss the need for legislation. One example of a life lease currently operating in our province is Martha's House located in Lethbridge. It's operated by St. Michael's health, and it's a member of Covenant Health of Alberta. Martha's House affords lessees with the benefits of life-long tenure within the life-lease complex with the payment of an entrance fee while also providing a variety of extended care services. Lethbridge's Martha's House serves as an example of an effective and valuable life-lease property. However, the nature of life leases prompts questions surrounding how Bill 208 would apply to existing life-lease tenants and landlords.

Examples of care options at Martha's House include the rights for lessees to choose optional meal services, on-call doctors, and other personal care services are available. Mr. Speaker, life-lease facilities such as Martha's House provide lessees with varying degrees of care and the opportunity to be part of a stable community. Martha's House provides an example of the benefits that a life lease has to offer our senior citizens.

Bill 208 will not change the daily operations of our provincial life leases; rather, it will further protect the investment that Alberta's senior citizens have made in their life-lease properties while also creating confidence for property owners that they, too, are protected by legislation.

Mr. Speaker, a prospective tenant must know the financial obligations going into a life lease and as well once it is terminated under any and all circumstances. Bill 208 will require this information be granted by the landlord to the prospective lessee so that they can make informed decisions regarding their future. Under Bill 208 any change in completion or possession must be disclosed to the prospective tenant.

Bill 208 would also permit potential tenants who express interest in a life lease to place a deposit, known as a prelease payment, on a particular unit. This payment would ensure their right to provide the landlord with the appropriate entrance fee, effectively solidifying their tenancy in that life lease. Bill 208 will require these prelease payments to be held in trust, to be either added to the entrance fee upon tenancy or refunded to the individual if they decide not to enter the life lease. This would ensure that a lessee's prelease payment to an existing life-lease complex will be secure. I do not mean to imply that currently prelease payments are being withheld, but to encourage confidence in the security of investing in these type of complexes, Bill 208 addresses the rules around prelease payments.

Mr. Speaker, solidifying a long-term living arrangement is an important decision for our Alberta senior citizens. Where prelease payments are received to place a hold on a life-lease unit, the payment of an entrance fee grants a lessee entry to the life-lease complex. The entrance fee paid to the landlord provides seniors with secured tenancy and in some cases the access to care facilities.

Given the significance of a senior's decision to enter into a life lease, Bill 208 provides a three-day cooling-off period to the prospective tenants during which the lessee can cancel their life lease and receive a full refund of their entrance fee. Any withdrawal of the offer to lease prior to the landlord's acceptance would also require the entrance fee to be repaid in full to the prospective tenant within 14 days of withdrawal. Mr. Speaker, this allows our Alberta senior citizens adequate time for reflection and careful consideration regarding their future in a life-lease facility.

Upon entry into the life lease the entrance fee must be responsibly managed in order to ensure that the full amount is available to be refunded to the lessee at the end of their tenancy. Bill 208 would require the landlord of current life-lease properties to now hold the lessee's entrance fee in trust for the duration of their tenancy, using any interest accrued to provide upgrades or additional services to the life lease. What this allows, Mr. Speaker, is both the security of the lessee's entrance fee and maintained or improved life-lease facilities.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 208 establishes the rights of lessees in securing entry into a life lease while also providing new rights to tenants after they have established residencies in the life lease. Alberta's seniors deserve the right to be informed and involved in their life leases. These are their homes. Bill 208 would establish these rights by requiring landlords of an existing life-lease complex to hold annual meetings with lessees and disclose financial statements to ensure that tenants are well informed regarding the fiscal status of their life lease. During these meetings lessees are also encouraged to voice any concerns regarding the operation of the life-lease complex. Bill 208 will ensure that Alberta seniors have the opportunity to be actively included in the operation of their life-lease complex. This is their home, and we must never forget that.

On certain occasions a life-lease community may be subjected to a mortgage sale, a tax sale, or a foreclosure order which would change the landlord. In each of these scenarios it is crucial that the lessees are given an appropriate amount of time to address their options. First and foremost, Mr. Speaker, it is imperative to note that Bill 208 requires that each lessee will receive a full refund of their entrance fee. Following a change in landlord, lessees have the right to remain in their unit till the end of the month. In addition, Bill 208 would provide the option to lessees currently residing in a life-lease property to remain in their current unit under new management with the new landlord.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 208 provides lessees with the security to enjoy their senior years free from concerns regarding their housing situation and protecting their very valuable investments while also allowing the opportunity to take an active role in the operation of their life lease.

With that, I would like to again thank the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat for putting forward this comprehensive and well-thought-out piece of legislation, and I look forward to hearing the rest of the debate. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, you indicated to me that you wish to speak.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate this opportunity, particularly due to the fact that three years from next month, when I'm assuming we'll probably be running another election, I'll be a senior and I will be looking more intently at life leases than I currently have. I consider myself to have a good lease on life right now. I feel healthy and far from wealthy but wise, no doubt.

The work that has been done by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat and the efficacy that has been noted by the hon.

Member for Edmonton-Centre and the hon. Member for Lethbridge-West, to name a few of the individuals who have contributed to today's discussion, point out the need for life leases and also the need for guarantees. We're aware, particularly in B.C., of the leaky condo syndrome, and we have to make sure that within this lease legislation there is protection for seniors who invest in life leases with so much of their funding up front that should there be structural problems within the formation, they're not stuck for the repairs.

Seniors need to be made aware, in the same way that condo owners need to be aware, of any debts that the housing development may have. I know that I was unpleasantly surprised by some of the costs of projects in the condo that I'm currently living in in Edmonton. Also, as has been pointed out by other individuals, the need for a trustee, with all the meaning of the word trust applied to that trustee, to manage the monies that are collected from the seniors in their life leases is absolutely important.

With the condo situation currently condo organizations seem to be prevented from investing the condo association's money in GICs because that money has to be always available for repairs and expenditures. I would hope that in the proposed legislation with regard to life leases, the money, or at least a portion of the money, could be safely invested, with of course the agreement of the lessees, in some type of safe interest gaining investment so that if repairs were required, seniors would not have to dig further deeply into their savings in order to render their housing development more acceptable or at least maintain its current situation.

One thing the Life Leases Act doesn't do in the case of for-profit organizations is protect the lessees, the seniors, from rent gouging. Several members of this House can remember what became close to a 30-hour debate on affordable housing and rent controls. There doesn't appear to be anything within this legislation to protect seniors from escalating rents, and in order to make this document even more acceptable, some type of provision for rent protection would be most welcomed. Seniors should have a sense going in, especially those who choose to go in a for-profit organization. They should be able to sign a contract indicating what would be a reasonable rent increase over the years and under what conditions the rents would be collectively agreed upon to be raised.

We've had situations throughout Alberta where because there was no ceiling on rents, the only legislation allowed that you could raise the rent by whatever you liked if you only did it once a year. I know that there have been very creative landlords who have managed to get around that by charging extra fees for cable, extra fees for heating, and sometimes repairs that were supposedly structurally important to the whole facility were then foisted onto the individual in the specific condo or, in this case, long-term lease. So it's extremely important for seniors, whether they've been able to accumulate savings over the years which they would theoretically like to pass on to their descendants or in the case of vulnerable seniors who life has not been kind to, that their investments be protected.

The whole notion of a life lease is a very positive one, and it's turning out that adults as young as 55 are looking at these types of developments because of their potential security.

With those thoughts in mind in terms of setting what can be reasonable increases, guaranteeing structural support so that there aren't any surprises, I think this Life Leases Act goes a long way in terms of achieving the sustainability and fiscal stability that seniors are looking for. Like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre who preceded me, I will be looking forward to amendments that close the loopholes with regard to the potential of gouging because of structural construction deficiencies and the concerns over the possibility of rent gouging and also, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre mentioned, the role of the trustee in looking after the financing of the life-lease building that seniors find themselves in.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. And I would like to thank the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat for bringing forth a strong piece of legislation which is probably 80 per cent of the way there. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am excited today to rise to speak in favour of Bill 208, the Life Leases Act, brought forward by my friend the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat. I have to say that the last few speakers have had some good points, the members for Lethbridge-West, Cypress-Medicine Hat, and, yes, the members for Calgary-Varsity and Edmonton-Centre as well. [interjection] Yes, I am feeling well today.

I have to say that Bill 208 is important because life leases are quickly becoming an attractive alternative living arrangement for many seniors in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, I've been one of the principal shareholders of a property management company in Calgary for a number of years, and real estate has always been of interest. I think that this is really a step forward when it comes to looking at options for accommodation, particularly for our seniors. Life leases, however, are a living arrangement whereby a tenant purchases the right to occupy a residence for the remainder of his or her life. Now, they do not purchase the property outright, as is the case in a condominium sale, for example. Rather, the land is held by the sponsor group that manages the complex.

Mr. Speaker, there are numerous types of advantages in dealing with this type of arrangement. First, life leases tend to be more affordable than standard condominium ownership. We have seen a dramatic rise over the last decade in the cost of real estate in this province, particularly in our cities. Secondly, life leases offer a greater predictability since there are no rent increases. Thirdly, most life-lease arrangements offer some form of support service such as housekeeping or meal preparation, which, again, are particularly important to seniors.

Now, Mr. Speaker, because of some of these advantages, life-lease living arrangements are an attractive living option, as I mentioned, for seniors. The Member for Calgary-Varsity mentioned that people even 55 and older would consider living in such a place. They're a viable choice as they provide services along with, essentially, the freedom of home ownership. Because life leases are targeted toward seniors and because many seniors live on fixed incomes and cannot suffer large financial setbacks, it becomes particularly important to continue to ensure that tenants are protected when entering into such an arrangement as a life lease.

Bill 208 provides exactly this protection. Without a doubt, the most effective way to ensure that any consumer or leaser is protected is to ensure that they have access to information. To this end, Bill 208 requires that life-lease landlords disclose several critical pieces of information to potential tenants before they accept a prelease payment. Now, just for clarity, Mr. Speaker, a prelease payment is a holding fee that is paid to the landlord while the complex is being constructed.

The bill would require landlords to disclose the estimated entrance fee, which is essentially the down payment that is required for the complex itself. This disclosure would inform a tenant of how much money they would be expected to pay up front when moving into their unit pursuant to a life lease. After all, Mr. Speaker, a consumer is not going to pay a holding fee if he or she is unable to pay the final cost of the lease.

The second required piece of information that would be disclosed by a life-lease landlord would be the projected completion date. Again, the need for this information to me is patent and clear. A consumer might not be willing to put a holding fee on a property if he or she were unable to occupy that property for several years.

Now, the third piece of required information deals directly with the entrance fee. Essentially, the landlord would be required to disclose the minimum amount of the entrance fee that would be held in trust. Mr. Speaker, when a tenant lives in a life-lease complex, landlords are required . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, but the time limit for consideration of this item of business has concluded, so we can continue the next time.

5:00 Motions Other than Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Alberta Human Rights and Citizenship Commission

511. Mr. Vandermeer:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to review how complaints are addressed by the Alberta Human Rights and Citizenship Commission to ensure a fair process for both complainants and respondents.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the human rights legislation passed this spring, I will not be moving my motion as the intent of it has already been achieved.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Executive Vehicles

513. Mr. Kang moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to require that all vehicles purchased through the executive vehicle allowance be low-emission vehicles.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Service Alberta, pursuant to Treasury Board directive 06/88, is responsible for providing vehicles to certain senior government officials. Currently, the employee may choose whichever year, make, model, or optional equipment they wish. The employee must abide by a certain yearly price limit determined by the ministers of Finance and Service Alberta or exceed the limit and pay the difference. The price limit for an executive vehicle was $43,500 in 2008.

The government has insisted that it is moving in that direction of increasing the fuel efficiency requirement for executive fleet vehicles. A list of ministerial class vehicles for 2009 shows two cabinet ministers choosing hybrids. I congratulate those two cabinet ministers, and they know who they are.

Mr. Speaker, Service Alberta claims that vehicle management has initiated the arrival of 92 hybrids, including five in the executive fleet. That is according to the Service Alberta annual report 2008-09. Service Alberta's minimal progress is likely the result of the fact that the ministry merely encourages the purchase of low-emission and hybrid vehicles rather than requiring it. The 2008-09 annual report on page 12 and the minister herself both indicate that executives are encouraged to purchase low-emission vehicles but not required to.

Mr. Speaker, what kind of cars could the government purchase? Some of the most efficient examples include the 2009 Toyota Prius, which gives 48 miles to the gallon in the city and 45 miles per gallon on the highway; the 2009 Honda Civic hybrid, 40 miles per gallon in the city and 45 on the highway; and the 2009 Nissan Altima hybrid, 35 miles per gallon in the city and 33 miles per gallon on the highway. Instead, what kind of cars are they purchasing? The Minister of Culture and Community Spirit: a 2008 Infiniti EX35. The Minister of Health and Wellness: a 2007 Jeep Grand Cherokee. That one only gets 17 miles in the city and 21 miles on the highway, and the Infiniti gets 16 to 17 miles per gallon in the city and 23 to 24 miles per gallon on the highway. The Minister of Justice: a 2008 Audi A4, getting 15 to 21 miles per gallon in the city and 25 to 31 miles on the highway. It all depends on how hard she pushes on the gas pedal.

Naturally, we want the government fleet to be green. Members on this side of the caucus have repeatedly raised the issue of fuel efficiency requirements for the government vehicles. In 2008, when the caucus members questioned the government regarding low-emission vehicles, like on April 24, April 29, May 1, May 20, June 4, and in October of 2008, the minister's response every time was some variation on: we are moving in that direction. Every time we raised the issue, the minister said that we are moving in that direction, but I think the minister is too, too slow in moving in that direction: no definite answer, no concrete date or vision to phase out all the high-emission vehicles from the government fleet.

Given the increasing concern over global climate change – we hear about it every day – every other day some country is taking pretty harsh steps to clean up their environment. With the need for greater energy efficiency in our daily lives, the case for low-emission vehicles should be clear. Lately the cabinet on the islands of the Maldives was going to hold their meeting under water. They were taking lessons in scuba diving, sign language. I think we are lucky enough; we are not at that point. The islands of the Maldives are only about seven feet above sea level, so they will be the first ones to go down if we do not take care of the environment. Beirut, Bangladesh: the examples are numerous.

More generally, low-emission vehicles such as hybrids and/or alternative fuel vehicles make sense environmentally, and reduced emissions will contribute to cleaner air not only for us Albertans but for Canada and for the whole world. It will make a significant difference in terms of climate change and public health: a lot less asthma, a lot fewer other diseases related to the environment. Low-emission vehicles will also make sense economically considering the lower fuel costs overall.

Greening the government fleet is a more effective use of taxpayer dollars. If the public must subsidize these cars, it is not unreasonable to expect that the use of such vehicles is in the public interest. A low-emission standard for executive vehicles will demonstrate leadership and commitment at the highest level of government to fuel efficiency and environmental sustainability.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans want to see environmental leadership from this government. What kind of message does it send to have the highest levels of government able to drive inefficient gas guzzlers at public expense? If anybody should be concerned about the greenhouse gas emissions, the concern should start right here, and it should be the government leading the parade by example. The minister claims to be moving in the direction of more low-emission government vehicles, but drifting in a particular direction is still drifting. This motion will make the government's determination to improve the fuel efficiency of its executive fleet clear to Albertans. The total cost to taxpayers of executive vehicles was approximately $2.1 million in 2009. That's according to the most recent list provided to the library.

Other provinces are moving forward in greening their government vehicle fleets. In Alberta we are going to be left behind. For example, in B.C. they have been taking action since the year 2000. The government set their goals to reduce. Their target was to reduce the greenhouse gas emission by 16 per cent from 2000 to 2005. They've been going hybrids, biodiesel, and driving smart. They have been promoting different kinds of initiatives for driving, even in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and I think we are falling far behind.

This motion, Mr. Speaker, is also comparable with the government policy, and the Minister of Service Alberta has also been very supportive of this idea in the Assembly. "The vehicles that we are moving towards will be hybrid vehicles, as many as we can." This is "something that we certainly need to move towards." "With respect to the whole executive fleet and greening the whole fleet, that's something that is very important." That's from the minister. We should not be dragging our feet to move forward very quickly to put Alberta on the path to lowering our greenhouse gas emissions drastically.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I rise to speak in support of Motion 513. This is just one way in which Albertans could see their government as setting an example for regular Albertans by showing some personal restraint. We have vehicle fleets, and members of cabinet and a number of deputy ministers and so on have access to vehicle allowances. If they were to demonstrate the type of conservation, a word that goes right along with conservative, then people would see this government as true conservatives in terms of conserving gas and doing the "right thing" as opposed to the far-right thing, as we've recently seen with our newly elected Wildrose leader.

Now, credit where credit is due. We as members of the Assembly receive vehicle allowances in terms of the number of kilometres we drive, and we also have fleet cards, which assist us with our gas mileages. It's wonderful when we see examples of individuals putting aside their own necessary physical comfort for a vehicle that does the job.

Now, I want to take a moment to recognize the Member for Edmonton-Calder. While he is not a cabinet minister, he is right in the theme of redemption, that I began my member's statement with. He has realized some of the mistakes associated with coffee sweeteners, he has realized some of the problems associated with Twitter, and he has, to use almost Christian language, been reborn in the form of a Smart car driver. This wonderful man, who has changed his lifestyle, was featured in the Edmonton Journal this weekend in his Smart car delivering diapers, thousands I believe, that could barely fit within the confines of the Smart car. He managed to somehow buckle them down, and he delivered these to an agency. It's that type of leadership, Mr. Speaker, that we're looking for from the government as a whole.

We as individuals, as I say, benefit from the generosity afforded to us courtesy of the taxpayers and the vehicles that we choose to drive. I myself admit that I started as a member driving from Calgary in a V10, a 1999 Dodge V10, but I saw the light. I saw the light. I now drive a Dodge Compass, Mr. Speaker, that gets very close to 35 miles to the gallon on the highway. I know that it's not a Smart car, but it is a smart purchase for me, and the taxpayers are benefiting from the fact that when the big brute Dodge leaves the garage on the few occasions to pull the fifth wheel trailer, it is myself who pays the bill and not the taxpayers. What Motion 513 is looking for is the government setting the example, recognizing that at least for in-city travel . . . [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, the Member for Calgary-Varsity has the floor.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I appreciate the support from the hon. sustainable resources minister, who is a Calgary-Varsity resident and wants only the best for not only Calgary-Varsity residents, but I'm sure he wants the best for all Albertans. I'm sure he will be one of the individuals voting for Motion 513 because he's a believer in conservation. The hon. minister of sustainable resources by his own title wants to see sustainability in this province. We need to start right here within this House, right here within this government and purchase vehicles that show restraint, that will deliver the job because of their hybrid efficiencies but not cost either the environment or the taxpayers undue concerns.

Now, as I say, this Motion 513, which the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall proposes, I would like to suggest is just the starting point, that we as individuals take account of our own purchases and the bills that we submit, that the taxpayers so thoughtfully pick up on our behalf because, after all, we're elected to do their bidding. But if we could show the type of restraint personally that is being shown in Motion 513, then possibly by leading by example, Albertans would be encouraged to look at the types of vehicles they drive and the recognition that while this province was built on nonrenewable resources and we are trying to be more efficient in our extraction of those resources and our utilization of those resources – wouldn't it be nice if the people of Alberta could look at the province because they're getting into the hybrid mode.

Yes, we're behind other provinces like B.C., but we know that we can surpass B.C. We have the ability even in our recessionary experience, and possibly because of our recessionary experience we know the value of a dollar. If we can save those dollars and save those emissions by driving smartly, as Motion 513 proposes for the government fleet to adopt, we're so much farther ahead.

Now, the hon. sustainable resources minister mentioned my fondness for my truck. I will confess that I have a fondness for that truck because I feel safe within that truck. I feel safe pulling a 24-foot fifth wheel on the few occasions when I venture out, usually no farther than the Bow valley to enjoy the camping experience with the solar panels firmly attached to my roof to provide the necessary survival mode. However, the reason I mention my fondness for my truck is that it would not be smart, for example, for either sustainable resource officers or conservation officers or fishery individuals to be driving along rural roads, particularly forestry roads, in Smart cars. They would find themselves in great difficulties, particularly as the weather worsens. But where we can, where it's an urban circumstance or primarily a highway circumstance as opposed to forestry roads, I would encourage the hon. members of this Legislature to quickly pass Motion 513 for not only the good of Alberta, but let us be true leaders for this nation and for the world.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising to actually speak in favour of this motion. I'm inclined to support this motion. I would be more inclined to support this motion if it had been a little bit more inclusive, if it hadn't been written in such a way that was designed to perhaps score political points as opposed to environmental points, because the motion refers only to the executive fleet. I know that there are some reasons and some rationale behind that, but the fact of the matter is that if we really wanted to do something, we would expand beyond and concentrate on more than the executive fleet. When I say that I will probably support this motion, I would be more prone and feel much better about supporting this motion because in fact I believe that there would be more opportunity for this motion to actually result in action on the part of the government if the motion had been thought through just a little bit more.

In fact, the Member for Calgary-Varsity has just been talking a little bit about some of the shortcomings in this motion where there are practicalities that are associated. He talked about some. He talked about weather related and road condition related, but there are also some practicalities that are limiting factors for even the executive fleet. One would assume that the executive fleet is only ever driven in good driving conditions in urban centres, but that's not always the case. There are circumstances where some of the vehicles that are part of the executive fleet have to deal with some difficult kinds of terrain and, more importantly, some remote areas. Some of the ministers in particular but some of the other officials that drive these vehicles find themselves in very remote areas, and service in those remote areas on some of the more exotic vehicles is difficult. Hybrid, for example, is not available in all communities yet. The capacity to do repair on hybrid vehicles requires a very significant investment on the part of the dealer. If a dealer in a small town is not, you know, allocated more than three or four hybrid cars in a given year, at this point in time – it will certainly, undoubtedly change in the future – they're not in a position to be able to buy the necessary equipment to service the vehicles, so there are limitations.

I recognize that the motion does not refer specifically to hybrid vehicles. It does talk about low fuel consumptions, and I give the member credit for that because I don't think that we should be restricting ourselves just to one technology. There are a number of other alternatives that would achieve the same result, so from that perspective the motion is well written.

Mr. Speaker, the reason why I say that we need to think beyond the executive fleet is to look at government-wide operations. We operate about 3,400 vehicles in this government, and there are a lot of those vehicles that would be appropriately targeted for this kind of low fuel consumption target. The Member for Calgary-Varsity pointed out that there are some that clearly wouldn't be. We've made some progress. Admittedly, there's room to make more progress, but we have in excess of a hundred vehicles within the government now that are hybrid vehicles. We have a number of other vehicles that although not hybrid would be classified as being low fuel consumption standard. So we're making some progress.

I would urge all members of the Assembly to think about this motion. I urge members to support this motion because it's sending a message that the government needs to hear, that Albertans need to hear. But let's not just target the executive fleet. Let's think about government-wide operations, and let's be reasonable. Let's not try and get a one-size-fits-all in place and put in a policy that may or may not be practical. Let's instead think of a motion like this as being an opportunity for government to have another look at its overall fleet operations and determine whether or not there could be opportunities for other vehicles to be targeted.

I'm the Minister of Environment. I certainly could not in all good conscience stand up in this House and oppose this motion. This motion is inherently urging the government to do good things for the environment. What I do point out, though, is that the motion, perhaps, is targeted a little bit more to a very specific, small segment of vehicles that the government operates. One would have to question whether there is political motivation in limiting that or if in fact it was done because the member honestly felt that this would be an appropriate way to move this agenda along.

From my perspective, I'll support the motion, but I'll support the motion almost on the assumption that the words "where appropriate" or "when possible" or "where feasible" would be read into the motion. I know we can't amend motions. There's not a process to amend motions, but the motion also says to "urge the government." It's not binding in that perspective. So from the point of view that I believe that we can send a message to the government, to my colleagues in government, I support this motion. From the point of view of having a hard-and-fast rule, I think that it's an example of trying to fit one size into all packages, and that doesn't necessarily work when we start dealing with issues like this. But, Mr. Speaker, I will be supporting this motion.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the Minister of Environment for the previous comments. I know that it may be a surprise to some that we're debating Motion 513 today, but I do hope that there are more speakers on the government side than just the one because I think there is an opportunity here to talk about possibilities in other things that we could be doing as leaders to try and set an example of how we can make a better world and a better Alberta.

It's possible that the motion is before its time, and that wouldn't be the first time that I've seen that in my years in the House. I'm remembering the then Leader of the Official Opposition Ken Nicol, who introduced and campaigned long and hard for a stability fund, which I think is now called the sustainability fund after it was adopted by the government. I'm thinking of the legislation from the then Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Beverly, Alice Hanson, on violence against women and family violence prevention, which then came back under the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek and was accepted by the government, or, you know, even the idea of a savings plan and various endowments that we're now hearing the government talk about. So it's not the first time that we've had members of the Liberal opposition introduce an idea that took a while to get traction with the hon. members opposite, but that doesn't mean that it's not possible. I am an optimistic person, obviously, in that I'm still standing here in this House.

But I think there's a real opportunity here, and I don't want to see the government miss that opportunity to lead by example.

5:30

I often cast back to some advice that I got from a very well-placed executive in the oil sector who said: well, you know, Laurie, we look to the government to kind of point the way, to show leadership where they think we should be going, and if we don't see any movement from them, if we don't see any examples set, well, we're not going to put ourselves out there. So, you know, people do look to the government members, the front bench, the Assembly members as a whole to lead the way on issues like this. It's okay; you can be a bit cutting edge. That's all right. You could be a little zippy. You could add that to your resumé.

I think the other issue here is around – and this is a touchy subject, so I'm trying to come into this carefully. We are aware of a branding issue that we have in Alberta, particularly with our neighbours to the south. They've taken some very particular stands about environmental protection and taken some very deliberate moves there that are reflecting back on us. We had those municipalities that actually listed us as having dirty oil. We're struggling with that. It's a communications problem, but it's also an action problem. It is not enough for us to just be paying for more glossy brochures of lovely mountain scenes, going: no, no; really, we're very green. People are looking to us and scrutinizing us to see if we actually are taking action behind those words.

With mass communication, with the constant use of the Internet they can check up on us. It's not as though we can sort of send out our brochure and hope nobody looks back. They can be checking on this debate in the House. They can check the published list that we got from the library of who was driving what kind of vehicle. I mean, it's not hard to get this information. I think it is important that we move forward on this.

I'll use a personal example, and I'll say up front that I have an advantage in that this is my riding. I can walk to work, which I know most of the rest of you can't if you're coming from your constituencies.

An Hon. Member: Long walk.

Ms Blakeman: Very long walk.

I also know that many, many of you, in fact, have purchased condominiums or rent apartments in my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, so I do encourage you to walk, and I think some of you do.

I made a commitment a couple of years ago to try to reduce my driving, you know, down to three days a week and then two days a week and down to one day a week. Just recently my partner and I decided to go down to one vehicle, share one vehicle as a move in having a smaller environmental footprint. Obviously, vehicles are a way that you can do that. We've taken the next step in that move, and we bought a hybrid. It's working out pretty well. Thankfully, I got winter tires put on it. I was in Lethbridge on the weekend and had to drive back. From Nanton to Balzac it was nothing but snow, but it served me very well. We can all take these steps. They don't have to be huge and showy. They can be small and incremental.

I think the opportunity to pass a motion like this signals that the government is interested and, you know, is interested in starting with itself. When we talk about the executive vehicle allowance, that is starting with ourselves. It could have been mischief-making, which was, I think, the point that the Minister of Environment was talking about, but knowing the member who sponsored this, he's not as much a mischief-maker as some of my colleagues. So I'm going to take it that he was pretty straight ahead on that.

Indeed, you know, maybe we could have expanded it to talk about the larger government fleet. Knowing that we have 3,400 vehicles that are considered government fleet vehicles and a hundred that have now been purchased that are hybrids is great, but it's 3 per cent of the whole fleet. I think we need to be a bit more muscular in how we approach this if we are going to try to lead by example.

I think that the Minister of Environment also made some really good points. You know: don't narrow the box. Don't try to shove everybody into driving around in a Toyota Prius because it just doesn't work. The wonderful thing about Alberta is that we've got 83 different constituencies. Some of them are pretty far away, a lot of roads, a lot of miles between here and where you finally stop, at home or your constituency office. Expecting someone to drive a Smart car to Slave Lake is just dumb, and it's pretty unfair for the person that has to drive it. But for some of the people that are in urban centres, a Smart car might be a good idea or any of the other hybrids that are available. Frankly, Lexus has just come out with a really high-end, complete hybrid vehicle. Well, you know, we've got some people over there: what they want is a nice vehicle. Fine. I'd be much happier if you chose the Lexus hybrid than if you chose something else, like my colleague's V10 or whatever it was. There are different possibilities that are available to match a number of different driving requirements but also personal tastes.

In this Assembly we still allow members of the executive branch and the deputy ministers and various other chairs of committees, et cetera, to choose the vehicles that they want to drive aside from the fleet cars that are made available for people that are driving on government business. You know, if we're going to do that, fine. But there's a range of cars that you can look at that are low emission. I think that's what my colleague was trying to capture.

As I come to closing in support of Motion 513, the issue is whether this is binding. You know, there's support for the motion from my hon. government colleagues if it's voluntary. Just a little reminder that our voluntary requirements have not had a lot of uptake on them. I would prefer if there was something, as I said, a bit more muscular, a bit more vigorous, a bit more committed to actually following this. I don't necessarily see this as having that proviso added onto the end of the motion, but I don't see that that's a reason not to support it. I hope that we will get a great deal of support from a number of other members of the House today in support of my colleague from Calgary-McCall and his Motion 513.

Thank you very much. I do urge everyone to support the motion.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to stand and talk to the motion. I'm going to talk to the motion to say that, you know, in principle there is merit, especially the merit of environment. But in practicality I sure do not want to see this go in any compulsory type of direction. Let me tell you a couple of reasons why. One of them, of course, is my location. Number one, the last time I bought a vehicle, my dealer very much talked to me that he felt the vehicle wasn't secure enough, if you want to call it that, that it didn't have enough stability for the conditions that we have to operate under. Also, the discussion was around that if it's used predominantly on a highway, that that also causes a concern because you're not going to get the value out of it that you think. Thirdly, there are really no vehicles being manufactured except one truck – and it's not the truck of my choice – that offers the option.

I will say this to you, that in my constituency it is really imperative that I have a vehicle that, unfortunately, has to be a four-wheel drive. Some places I can't even get to in a four-wheel drive, and depending on road conditions, most of the time I have to use that four-wheel drive.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to bring attention – and I can't see anybody here that was with me – that as recently as last Thursday, I believe it was, we were at the fire safety building, and we had discussions and had a demonstration of safety and what firemen need to do in order to be very effective at car accidents. One of the major concerns ends up being a vehicle, what you would call in this situation, that you can't hear run. You get into an accident, and it takes more time. You can't hear the vehicle run, and you subconsciously forget about that. You don't know if it's running, and you start to try, at the time of an emergency, to take the individual out that may be hurt in a vehicle. Then all of a sudden what happens is the vehicle takes off. You have to make sure that all of those hybrids are blocked up initially. All of this takes just a little bit of extra time.

All I say to you is don't make it compulsory. I understand that from the aspect of the hon. member opposite: "Yeah. Just shut it off." That's easy to do if a vehicle is running, but you don't know if it's running. That's the point.

Ms Blakeman: It's lit up like a Christmas tree.

Mr. Danyluk: It's not a Christmas tree. Lights stay on in any vehicle. I mean, I would love for you to come to the fire department and let them explain to you some of the challenges that they have with hybrids.

Mr. Speaker, my point being, I want to stress that, yes, there are some practical places that these vehicles could be used, but please don't try to impose them on everybody because we will not be able to represent our constituents in rural Alberta to the ability that we can with the vehicles we have in place. Will they develop to the point where maybe we can? Yes. Did I ask when I bought a new vehicle, being the environmentalist that I am? No.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour to come in to speak to Motion 513. This motion would require the executive fleet to be comprised of low-emission vehicles. I think it's definitely an idea whose time has come.

Just to go back in time a little bit, Mr. Speaker, as recently as 2004 this government was actually still contemplating the science around global warming and whether it was, in fact, true or not. Thankfully, we've passed that day, but as other people in this House have mentioned, we still have a challenge in this province of projecting I guess what would be called clean environmental standards. I think that one of the ways we could do that here to silence some of the naysayers out there, silence some of the critics of our oil industry, silence some of these people who are protesting up north is to do some of the little things correctly. One of the little things would be to have our government lead by example and require the cars of at least the executive fleet to be low-emission vehicles.

If we do these little things, some of the big things that we can't really do – let's face it; we can't really limit the amount of oil that we produce because that is subject to what the world wants and what the world needs and what the world markets are prepared to pay. We're not at fault for that, but what we can keep in control is what we actually do ourselves as individuals and as government. This would be a great way for the government to lead by example. Go to low-emission vehicles; provide a little bit of cover for our oil and gas industry. Like you say, let's move to the forefront.

Let's put out a nice big announcement paid for by the Public Affairs Bureau that we send out to Saudi Arabia that the Alberta government fleet has now gone to low-emissions vehicles. We seem to be using the Public Affairs Bureau for quite a bit lately. You know, a lot of money is coming out of that thing. I heard the Premier's address to the province. Well, I hear these advertisements on the radio all the time, at least in between Edmonton and Calgary, on the looming brownouts and blackouts that are coming to Alberta. It looks like we are putting the Public Affairs money to use, so we might as well maybe do it this time. We'll send it around the world and say: Alberta gets in with the 21st century, and look what they're doing here. I really think that might be a good thing. In fact, it would be a good thing. It would show that our leaders get it. It would show that our Premier gets it. It would show that we, too, are trying to do our part as an oil-producing area of the world to at least do some of the small things correctly when a lot of times the big things are out of reach or can't be moved on as quickly as we'd like. That is one of the things.

I also bring up a little bit of sort of what has been discussed here earlier, the debate on whether we make this compulsory or not. It is an interesting debate. Sure, we're loath, especially in a jurisdiction like Alberta, to limit choice. I know it's a darn difficult thing. Personally, I would love to see us be able to come in here and write a law that says: no one shall drive a Hummer. You know, I for one would think that's a decent law, that really at this time and day there comes a point where you look around and say: does society need this? At certain times in certain constituencies we may in fact need that Hummer, but it's so limited that I think governments maybe should be moving in the direction of saying that sometimes this stuff is unnecessary. Sometimes for the overall betterment of mankind and protection of future generations maybe this type of stuff should be limited.

Now, I just point to that as an example. If the government tomorrow acted on that, I know they'll have thousands of people, including car owners, average Albertans, producers of these vehicles, protesting on the Legislature steps saying: "This is unfair. This is un-Albertan. My choice is taken away." I realize that. But that's the trouble sometimes when you make things – decisions like this have to be made with some sort of, I guess, force to them. That one is difficult to do it on, but this one is not. We have people, in particular leadership here in Alberta, that would be able to comply with this, I believe, relatively easily despite some of the protestations we've heard here tonight.

I believe that limiting choice, especially to a narrow group of people, could in fact be used and could in fact be used to show Alberta in a positive light. Sometimes I think that possibly governments have to get better at making some of these hard choices that may in fact have to limit some choice on the extreme edges. You know, we're loath to do it . . .

Mr. Elniski: The problem with socialists.

Mr. Hehr: I heard that, and I'm not a socialist. But, needless to say, governments should in fact at some point in time get into limiting things. There are certain times that leadership comes from being able to say: "No, I guess we're not going to be kids in the candy store. No, we're not going to get everything we want. No, because it says that we're going to do it." That type of comment is absurd. We have to get down to the fact that sometimes we have to make decisions that are better overall, that are better for future generations, that are based on science, and that sometimes say that we're going to do things differently.

I'm glad I came here and got the opportunity to speak to Motion 513. I believe it's something this government could do that would have relatively little impact on our executive fleet's daily lives. I believe that they would be able to choose a vehicle that would still allow them to be able to move around freely, that hopefully would get to 99.9 per cent of the constituents. Maybe a local coffee shop could be used to meet some of them who couldn't be met at certain locations. If some meeting of the minds or the Internet could be used or the telephone could be used to maybe meet those people, that 1 per cent of people we could talk about, maybe some alternative could be reached.

Thank you very much for allowing me the time to speak, and we'll move on from there.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the Member for Calgary-Buffalo has just done us a great service. He's really pinpointed the difference between a liberal and a conservative. A conservative looks at behaviour that he doesn't approve of and he says, "I'm not going to do that." A liberal looks at it and says, "Not only am I not going to do it; I'm going to make it illegal for everybody else to do it as well." So thank you for that clarification. It may explain your great success at the polls.

Again, I'm going to support everything the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs has said for reasons to vote against this, but I just want to remind everybody of what the motion reads, what you're voting for. The motion reads:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to require that all vehicles purchased through the executive vehicle allowance be low-emission vehicles.

So it's not limited. It's not optional. It's required. It's all vehicles. As the Minister of Environment has already pointed out, there are several thousand cars, 3,400 vehicles, in the government fleet. Over a hundred of them already are low-emission. So where it makes sense, we're beginning to move in that direction. Not only is this motion political grandstanding, but it's also redundant. I'd urge everybody to vote against it.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall to close.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thanks to all the members for their participation in the debate. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to say a final few words on Motion 513.

For the Minister of Municipal Affairs. The minister brought up an important point about fire safety. We do not think that this is a reason to oppose this motion. Our fire safety personnel are very well trained, and they have handled a number of innovations when it comes to vehicles, electric windows for example. Our fire personnel are very smart and committed, and they will figure something out about this, too.

This motion will urge the government to observe low-emission standards for all executive vehicles as just a start, and this motion makes sense, Mr. Speaker. Low-emission vehicles lead to improved quality and contribute to the fight against global climate change. By going green, the government can also save taxpayers money and fuel costs. Finally, there's a symbolic value to this initiative.

I want to thank the Minister of Environment for his support of the motion. The Minister of Environment is right. This is not done to get any political points here. There's a sincere, genuine concern about the environment, and that's why the motion was put forward. The government's fleet should be low emission wherever possible but not necessarily hybrids.

Mr. Speaker, this is just the beginning. That's why I said that I urge the government to purchase low-emission vehicles. The senior leadership for our government should be setting an example for all Albertans, and this is the way to do it.

The government's progress on this initiative has been disappointing. Only two members of the cabinet have used their taxpayer-funded vehicle allowance to purchase hybrid cars. That's what I said before, too. Service Alberta mentions that five more are on the way for the executive fleet. To those who might object that these low-emission standards are too expensive, we respond that hybrid vehicles are comparable in price to vehicles ministers and senior bureaucrats are driving as we speak. To those who might object that this motion is redundant because the government is already committed to increasing the proportion of hybrid vehicles in its fleet, we respond that this is simply not enough.

The Minister of Service Alberta still insists on merely encouraging our public servants to drive low-emission vehicles if they so choose, but Albertans expect real standards when it comes to protecting the environment. The Minister of Service Alberta has repeatedly said in this House that the government is moving in the direction of increasing the proportion of low-emission vehicles in the executive fleet, but drifting in a particular direction is still drifting, Mr. Speaker.

I urge all members of this Assembly to join me in voting for this motion so that Albertans can be assured that we are moving strongly in this direction of a greener, more sustainable government and so we can help protect our environment for future generations to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[The voice vote indicated that Motion Other than Government Motion 513 lost]

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, may I suggest waiving the bell time?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:56 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, October 27, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Guide us so that we may use the privilege given us as elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. Give us the strength to labour diligently, the courage to think and speak with clarity and conviction and without prejudice or pride. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you a very attentive class from Inglewood elementary school. The class made their way from Edmonton-Glenora to the Legislature today to take in a tour of the building and to witness the excitement of question period. Just before entering the Chamber, I had an opportunity to meet the students and pose for a picture as well. They are very excited to be here. I would like to thank the class for coming today, and I would now like to ask the students as well as their teacher, Rodney Corkum, and parent volunteer Wendy Heather to rise to receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 10 high school students from the Strathmore high school. These students are members of a political thought class that is here to tour the Legislature today and will in about 10 days also be travelling to Ottawa. They are accompanied today by their teachers, Mr. Rob Pirie and Mr. Steve Alexander. They are seated in the public gallery. I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Edmonton-Riverview, like all of Alberta, is a wonderfully diverse place, and it's a great pride for me that I have the distinct pleasure to introduce to you and through to all members of the Assembly the grade 6 class from l'école Notre-Dame, which is a school in my constituency, in fact only the second francophone school to be opened in Edmonton. Its mission is to bring la Francophonie to life for its students while letting them develop to their full potential. They are seated in the public gallery. They are accompanied by their teacher, M. LaRochelle. I would ask them to rise and accept the warm welcome of all members of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly 17 very bright grade 6 students from Norwood school in my constituency.

They're accompanied by their teacher, Ms Shannon Chinery, and parent Kim Eades. I'd ask that they please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great honour to introduce to you and through you to the rest of the Assembly our two new researchers in the Alberta Liberal caucus, Ms Avril McCalla and Mr. Ben Whynot. I'll ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't know if my guests have arrived or not, but I'd like to introduce two former colleagues of mine from Teck Coal, where I worked for 30 years: Mr. Terry Fredin, the general mine manager, and Mr. Mark Symbaluk, director of environment. I'd ask them to rise if they're here and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to take this opportunity to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly the co-chair of Greensense, an organization in Lethbridge. He's here today to highlight his support for green and renewable energy, and I would like to ask Tom Cain to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to rise and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly roughly 50 members of the Coalition for a Nuclear Free Alberta. The coalition is an umbrella group of about a dozen grassroots organizations from across the province. The coalition's objective is to raise awareness about the true risks and costs of nuclear power. They believe that this province will do better to invest in renewable energy alternatives. They're here because they've not been invited to any open conversation with the government about nuclear power. I would now ask that my guests rise. I hope they are here. I saw them waiting outside on the way in. If they are seated in both the members' and the public galleries, please rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, today is the anniversary of his arrival on the planet Earth, the birthday of the hon. Member for Peace River. Please join with me in conveying appropriate wishes.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Child Abuse Awareness Month

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. October is Child Abuse Awareness Month and as such is the perfect time to learn more about the negative impacts of child abuse and neglect on families and on society as well as to consider how we can work together to stop it from happening. I trust we can all agree that no child should have to live in fear, especially of their parents or loved ones. No matter what the circumstances are, no child should ever be victimized. Preventing child abuse and neglect is a community responsibility.

It is reliant upon family members, neighbours, teachers, health professionals, and all others involved in a child's life to report any suspicions they may have about possible abuse or neglect.

During Child Abuse Awareness Month Albertans are encouraged to call the confidential child abuse hotline to report situations of suspected abuse or neglect. Anyone who suspects a child or youth is being abused can call 1.800.387.KIDS. Mr. Speaker, over 8,600 calls were received last month alone, and each of those calls represents a child or youth who may have been at risk. I commend callers for their courage in stepping forward. Any one of those calls may have helped a family cope with a stressful situation that could have brought harm to a child. Any one of those calls may have saved a life.

I encourage individuals and communities to support children, youth, and families by continuing to be vigilant in reporting abuse or neglect. In doing so, we'll create stronger and safer communities here in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Waste Reduction Week

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week we celebrated the ninth annual Waste Reduction Week in Canada, and people from across the country and this great province took part in activities to help reduce waste and divert waste from landfill. Celebrations like this remind us how we need to start looking at waste as a resource.

Government showed leadership recently by providing Ecotrust grant funding to two projects to do just that. One is a plant in Drayton Valley, the second project to join the Bio-Mile, that will convert waste product from the forest industry to energy. I am proud to see this initiative move forward in my hometown because it will create forest-related jobs, reduce our environmental footprint, and will help with the long-term sustainability of the community.

The second is a project that will transfer waste heat from the city of Edmonton to homes in Strathcona county. When the city of Edmonton's plant is fully operational, the city will divert 90 per cent of its waste from landfill.

During Waste Reduction Week I had the pleasure of visiting two schools, Aurora elementary school in Drayton Valley and Our Lady of Peace school here in Edmonton. Grade 4 students in these schools reminded me of the kind of enthusiasm children have for making changes to the recycling habits in their communities. Participating classes registered and conducted a five-day waste audit in the classroom and pledged to reduce waste in the classroom for the rest of the year. Throughout the year we can take steps in our homes, our workplaces, and for our future leaders in the classroom because our resources are indeed too good to waste.

That's why I'm encouraged by the results of increasing beverage container recycling across the province. Since last October beverage container recycling in the province has now risen from 76 per cent to 81 per cent. Our goal was to reach 85 per cent in just three years, so we're well on our way. And since dairy containers have been added to the bottle depot return system, we have already seen significant changes in the recycling behaviours of Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

House of Refuge Mission

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For over 25 years the House of Refuge Mission has provided food and other aid to the poor and homeless of downtown Edmonton. House of Refuge always welcomes everyone with warm food, coffee, and spiritual comfort. It is open to all seven days a week, 365 days a year. But on October 22 the mission was issued a closure statement by Alberta Health Services for reasons of public safety. The mission remains open to serve coffee, juice, and prepackaged food, but they can no longer provide the hearty prepared foods such as soups and sandwiches that their clients depend upon.

The good people who run the mission realize that they need to provide a safer, more sanitary environment, but in their own words they are "rich in Spiritual resources [but] poor in practical resources." So today I would ask the community to please step up and help the mission with the practical resources they need to continue their work to provide to those who need it most.

The House of Refuge Mission needs the following: legal aid to determine their best course of action, financial assistance to repair their current rented property or help with finding a new property that meets Alberta Health Services' requirements, assistance in finding prepared foods for the downtown homeless people who won't be able to go to the mission and get a hearty meal until this crisis is resolved, and, finally, some short-term action from this government to feed and clothe the homeless while long-term solutions move forward.

The mission serves between 100 and 300 homeless citizens each and every night, people who for whatever reason don't have access to other charitable resources. These folks have no support system, often very little beyond the clothes on their back. The mission does important work that deserves the support of our community. I urge both citizens and government to help get the mission and its people that they serve so well back on their feet.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Alberta Hospital Edmonton Implementation Team

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 6 the hon. the Premier directed the establishment of an implementation team to provide oversight with respect to changes proposed for Alberta Hospital Edmonton. As the Premier's designate on the committee I'd like to provide an update on our work.

We have three tasks: first, review and, where necessary, recommend changes to future plans for Alberta Hospital Edmonton, including proposed transfers of some existing beds to community-based settings and general hospitals; second, consult with clinical staff, employees, community stakeholders, and, most importantly, patients and their families to ensure their concerns are thoroughly considered; and third, consistent with the Premier's commitment, ensure that community-based mental health resources necessary to support patients affected by any change are in place before implementation proceeds.

Our members, Mr. Speaker, are community and patient focused. We are conducting a systematic and detailed review of proposed changes in three of the hospital's four program areas: geriatric psychiatry, adult acute psychiatry, and rehabilitation psychiatry. As previously announced, forensic services will remain at the present site. Our consultations with patients, staff, and stakeholders will run concurrently with a review of each program area.

Mr. Speaker, the Premier's direction in this matter is a powerful statement about the importance this government places on mental health and mental health care. In the final analysis, this exercise is not about buildings. It is about people and, specifically, how we care for our families, friends, and neighbours affected by mental illness in the communities where they live.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to be very clear. Our government is committed to making mental health service delivery part of mainstream health care delivery. This means offering access to more mental health services in the community where it is in the interest of patients to do so and not until the necessary community supports are in place. Albertans suffering with mental illness and the 1 in 5 of us that will follow them deserve no less.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Piikani First Nation Housing Project

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had the honour of attending an event to commemorate a unique training partnership at the Piikani First Nation community in Brocket on October 2. This is a joint project between Alberta Employment and Immigration and the federal government as well as the Piikani First Nation. The project provides much-needed housing while at the same is training 32 members of the Piikani First Nation in the trades of carpentry, plumbing, electrical, and welding. They can now take that training and apply it to a career that will benefit them and their families as well as their community.

The Piikani First Nation also benefits greatly from this project. There will be 12 new homes built in the community, the first new homes, Mr. Speaker, in 15 years.

For the people of the Piikani community the event symbolized what can be accomplished through the power of believing. I was touched to see many of the people who attended the event that day wear red T-shirts with the word “believe” in bold white letters across their backs. If we are to be successful in lowering the unemployment rate for aboriginal Albertans, all of us must believe in projects such as this one.

The project has been a success in this community, and there are many more just like it happening in other communities across Alberta. I am excited to see what can be accomplished through the power of belief and partnerships.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Firefighters and Military Personnel

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great humility that I rise today to pay honour to those who serve with pride and protect us when we need them the most. Last Wednesday and Thursday I had the privilege with a number of my caucus colleagues to experience and learn about the extreme challenges that face both our firefighters and military personnel. Also last week we became very aware of a frightening and unfortunate situation that unfolded up the street at the WCB offices, a situation that could have been much worse if it weren't for the professionalism and expertise of our law enforcement officers.

Mr. Speaker, with this fresh in my mind I wanted to take the opportunity to thank all of the men and women in our province and right across Canada who put on a uniform every day to serve and protect us in the most difficult of circumstances. These individuals are the most selfless in our society, putting their lives on the line for our safety, security, and happiness. From crawling through a burning house without being able to see because of thick toxic smoke, sometimes not finding the source of the fire until surrounded by flames, or scouring the hinterland of Afghanistan for weeks at a time, living out of nothing but a light armoured vehicle while requiring a constant state of alertness, or remaining calm and professional after being thrust into a volatile situation, where every move you make could cost lives, these are the day-to-day experiences of our brave men and women in uniform.

I also want to thank the families and loved ones of these men and women. Mr. Speaker, I can't imagine the feeling of kissing or hugging a loved one each and every time they went off to work knowing that it was possible that they may not return home the same or even at all. I would love to call these men and women and their families heroic, but I can't. It does not even begin to justify or describe the sacrifices that they make. These people are our guardian angels. They show up in times when we need them the most, when our safety and security are threatened, and in the most dire and trying of circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, I know that Thanksgiving was a few weeks ago, but it took me until last week to figure out what I'm truly thankful for the most.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Bill 54

Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce Bill 54, the Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is a direct result of the hard work of the Select Special Personal Information Protection Act Review Committee, an all-party special committee of the Legislature that in 2006 undertook a complete review of the act and tabled a report to the Legislature in November 2007 outlining recommendations for amendments. This bill incorporates a number of their proposed amendments.

The main proposals for change include emerging issues such as notifying the commissioner or individuals about security breaches that place personal information at risk and informing individuals when services involving personal information are occurring outside of Canada. Mr. Speaker, as required for any new legislation in a rapidly evolving area, this bill also does some updating and fine-tuning of the existing provisions of this act.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 54 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 54 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Vaccination

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has been warned for the past year that its handling of Alberta Health Services was creating an organizational train wreck. Albertans are now living that train wreck, and they're angry. Yesterday this government said that it had only days to get ready for the pandemic vaccine, yet national news stories since September 16 were telling the country that vaccines would be out in the third week of October. To the Premier. Your minister has had more than a month to prepare, and he has failed. What do you say to Albertans who are standing in the cold and wet for hours because your government created health care chaos?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, let's put this in perspective. This is the largest flu vaccination program of its kind in the history of the province of Alberta. I want to acknowledge all of the hard work of the front-line health care providers for the many, many hours administering the flu vaccine. Any other detail the minister of health will cover.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have direct reports, corroborated by photographs which I'll table later, that large numbers of workstations in the big-city immunization clinics are unstaffed while Albertans shiver in lineups for hours. To the Premier: how can it be that Albertans have to wait outside while immunization stations are unstaffed?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it's important to put things in perspective. In this province today the health care system is delivering health care uninterrupted, the way it did yesterday, the way it did a month ago and a year ago. We are undergoing, as the Premier said, the largest immunization in the history of this country. So above that delivery model, that is operating on an hour-to-hour basis throughout the province, we layer over this mass immunization program. Alberta Health Services has made best efforts to go and recruit as many health professionals as they possibly can. They are doing an outstanding job. I must admit that the take-up by Albertans has been significantly higher than we anticipated out of the chute on this program, and that's a good thing. We will work towards ensuring that all Albertans can be accommodated as soon as possible.

Dr. Swann: That's hardly credible, Mr. Speaker, when in past immunization clinics there were dozens of centres for providing immunization. Why have we cut back, then?

Finally, to the Premier. There are widespread reports that some government MLAs have had special immunization clinics provided. Can the minister of wellness confirm whether or not special provisions were made for government members?

Mr. Liepert: Well, if there were special provisions, they must have been for those guys over there, Mr. Speaker, because I can tell you that unless one of our members is in that higher risk category, we will be in line like everyone else. To make those accusations is politicizing an unfortunate situation, and I would suggest that if this member has got evidence as to who he's talking about, table it in this Legislature.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since last spring we've been hearing from across the province – from physicians, nurses, technicians, administrators, from the public – that Alberta Health Services is in organizational paralysis 18 months after the last re-organization. Because of the decisions of this Minister of Health and Wellness we now see evidence in the H1N1 as a symptom of this. To the Premier: what is he doing to hold this minister of health accountable for this mess in the health care system today?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, on any average day within the province of Alberta over 5,300 people are at some emergent care centre; another 500 are in an urgent care centre; 165,000 laboratory tests on an average day; 27,000 hours of home care provided; 140 babies born, on the average, every day. That's good. A mini baby boom in the province of Alberta tells us that people still look at Alberta as a land of opportunity. At least 700 are going through emergency in an ambulance on any given day. And we spend about $30 million a day on health care in this province. That's what's happening in the province of Alberta.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, it's become all too common in recent years for every acute-care bed to be plugged in Calgary and Edmonton; in other words, not a single hospital bed available in either big city. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: as this pandemic begins to hit, is it true that there's no surge capacity in existing beds to take care of H1N1 victims?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think we can stand here and we can fearmonger and try and scare the public all we want. But what I've noticed in the last 24 hours is that the public has said, "We are taking this situation seriously; we are going to get vaccinated because we do not want to be in emergency taking up hospital beds," as the member alludes to. Now, I can say that in the past week we have had 12 hospitalizations, not out of the ordinary, so there is no indication, that I'm aware of, that what the member is alluding to is actually occurring. We do recognize, however, that the crest of this flu will probably happen sometime in November, and that's why it's important over the next two or three weeks for people to get vaccinated.

Dr. Swann: One of the tents bought to provide extra capacity in case of pandemic has been operating for 18 months as the emergency ward at the Stollery children's hospital. Will this tent be emptied and converted for pandemic purposes? If so, what will happen to the normal emergency demands at the Stollery, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, actually there's a plan that doesn't include what this particular member is referring to. Let me be clear. As of Thursday we're expecting another shipment of the vaccine. That will allow us enough vaccine dosage to now start distributing across the province to physicians and hopefully by next week to pharmacists. We've got some 400 certified pharmacists who can administer the vaccine. We will be having it available in some of the health clinics around the province. We have to remember that there was a limited amount of vaccine at the initial tranche because, despite what this member says, the original intent was that this vaccine would not be available until November. It's earlier than anticipated. That's a good thing. I would suggest that when we get into this time next week, I think this vaccine will be available across the province in a number of areas – physicians' offices, pharmacies – and they'll go on to some other issue.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are for the Premier. The parliamentary assistant for Energy was recently quoted as saying that next week's meetings of the Standing Committee on Resources and Environment would be, in effect, a public consultation giving the public an opportunity to discuss Bill 50, and the Premier indicated as much yesterday in his answers to my questions in question period. But the standing committee is not holding hearings on Bill 50 next Monday or Wednesday night because Bill 50 has never been referred to it. To the Premier: why is the government claiming the public will be able to have their say on Bill 50 when that's not the case?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, very selective hearing on behalf of the member. I listed as to who will be present at the meetings, I believe, on the 2nd and the 4th. There will be some people talking about grizzly bears. There will be some people presenting a topic on green energy. There will be some from Enmax if they accept the invitation. There will be some from other generators, and they will talk about the value of generating electricity from all sources in the province of Alberta. There may even be some discussion about transmission. But the issue here is a little bit of a play on words. When we talk about committee, the committee is here. It's one of the stages of the bill. So here in this Legislature, once the bill goes into committee stage, we will have a full and open debate in the Legislative Assembly, right here.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bill 50 will result in billions of dollars' worth of infrastructure getting slapped on Albertans, yet this government's response to the outcry over this is a discussion on grizzly bears along with some presentations from some of the power generators. Look, I don't suppose grizzlies like big, high-voltage power pylons in their backyards anymore than anybody else does, but doesn't the Premier see that this closed, undemocratic forcing through of this bill is completely and utterly inappropriate?

2:00

Mr. Stelmach: Well, I guess if the Liberals aren't interested in grizzly bears, then they don't have to attend. They don't have to listen if they're not interested in wildlife. All I know, Mr. Speaker, is that in the province of Alberta we lose about $250 million worth of generated electricity because of congestion and old transmission lines. We also know that we're growing demand the equivalent of two cities of Red Deer every year. We also fully understand that if we're going to grow the value-added, we need more energy in different parts of the province, especially the Industrial Heartland and Fort McMurray.

We'll have, again, the opportunity to talk about the bill, debate it here in the House just like any other regular bill. We laid it over the spring so that people could read the bill, bring their comments to their MLAs, and that's where the debate will take place.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I guess we could get into a discussion at another time about which one of us is the grizzly and which one is the salmon, but we'll leave that for another time.

The dissent over Bill 50 is widespread, Mr. Speaker. Even the PC Constituency Association of Foothills-Rocky View has a resolution going in front of next week's convention of that party asking that "the government of Alberta not proceed with Bill 50 in the fall session of the Alberta Legislature." Why won't the Premier listen to all of these concerns with this multibillion-dollar boondoggle and pull this flawed bill from the government agenda?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, well, at least we have a party that's open and transparent and actually has people that come to an annual meeting as opposed to the Liberals, that I don't know even if they do have an annual meeting and nobody brings up issues within their discussion.

All I know is that we've had a number of public consultations on need. We're going to discuss the bill here in the House. We'll debate it just like any other bill that comes before the House, and they'll have equal opportunity to get up and talk about the bill and make all kinds of different allegations. But at the end of the day we know that we have to move the electricity from one corner of this province to another. It's got to be done much more efficiently and effectively. I don't know why in the world we'd be burning more coal, creating more carbon, and still getting less electricity to the consumer.

The Speaker: The hon. leader of the third party, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for High-risk Albertans

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The health minister's handling of the H1N1 vaccine program is failing to reach high-risk communities, where early immunization should have been targeted. The minister doesn't care about inoculating the homeless or aboriginal and First Nations communities. Yet in Edmonton there is no program in place to inoculate the homeless. The H1N1 flu shot should have been available in shelters from the start. This government's flu vaccine program has been badly planned, badly organized, and badly led. My question is to the Premier. Why have you allowed your health minister to ignore the vulnerable communities, who are at the greatest risk of being cut down by the H1N1 virus?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, our housing minister has the full details on how we will be preparing to immunize all of the homeless people in the province of Alberta.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd be very pleased to meet with this member – I know that we did address this question yesterday in question period – and actually go to the good organizations we have in Edmonton that are offering the vaccine to our homeless. We could go to the Hope Mission, which has a well-established tradition of 80 years of looking after our homeless, and Boyle Street. There are a number of good organizations. We've had some very, very good staff – Susan McGee, whom I am sure you know, and others – who have been working on that pandemic plan.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I don't know how the housing minister knows about an immunization program, but I can tell her and I can tell this House that the agencies in the inner city of Edmonton cannot get the vaccine, cannot get word from Alberta Health about when they'll be able to start offering that vaccine. I have no idea what the health minister knows about that, if anything, but certainly the question is to the Premier: why has this government failed the homeless, the people in shelters and rooming houses, who are four times more likely to die a premature death because they are so vulnerable? Why have you ignored them? Why haven't you provided vaccine for them, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, you know what? I'm going to take the word of this nurse over any bus driver any doggone time.

Mr. Mason: Well, Mr. Speaker, you know, we could all refer to each other by our previous occupations. I could do that to the Premier, but it's beneath me. It should be beneath him as well. We're all members of this Assembly, Mr. Premier. Your arrogance is beyond belief.

I want to know why aboriginal groups will not get the H1N1 flu shot immediately. They're lagging behind in remote and impoverished communities. This government's own MLAs are saying that a single clinic is expected to service 45 remote northern communities where many aboriginals and First Nations groups live. How can the Premier explain that from the very outset his immunization program ignores aboriginal communities at greatest risk of contracting the H1N1 virus?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Instead of rising on a point of order, why don't I just set the member straight right now and save the House some time later? We have an aboriginal communities initiative that involves people from the First Nations. It involves people from the Métis settlements. It involves people from the Métis Nation of Alberta. It's an extremely effective group. I can tell you that we've already ensured that vaccinations have been provided to the majority of the communities that are referenced. At the same time, we also have the five zones set up by Alberta Health Services, and the aboriginal community members are working with them. We also have 20 native friendship centres that are disseminating this information so that full access to the clinics will be available. In most cases it already is, and if not, it should be available by the end of this week.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for Aboriginal Albertans

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many First Nations, Métis, and Inuit people in Alberta live in rural and isolated communities. In Bonnyville-Cold Lake I have two Métis settlements and three First Nations. The federal immunization priority list has identified the aboriginal population as a priority group to receive the H1N1 vaccine. My questions are to the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. I want to ensure that my aboriginal communities are a priority in this government's response to H1N1. What is the plan for H1N1 vaccination for the First Nations in Alberta?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the aboriginal communities are definitely a priority for our government and for the government of Canada, and we're working very closely on the response plan to ensure that the H1N1 vaccine is provided to all the reserves in Alberta as well as all the Métis settlements. I just commented on the MNA group and the people living off settlement and off reserve. However, we're also working with the Public Health Agency of Canada and with our own aboriginal communities committee, which is charged with the responsibility of ensuring that these clinics are up and running as quickly as possible.

I'll just close by saying that I've just spoken to a number of chiefs today just to verify that the vaccines have arrived. They have, and in most cases they're already being provided through the clinics' vaccination programs. So we know it's working.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question is to the same minister. Given that the federal government plays a lead role in supporting First Nations people living on reserves, can the minister tell us what steps are being taken to ensure that residents of the Métis settlements are also getting access to the same level of support?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, among other things we have the provincial Emergency Management Agency, which is working with the local municipalities to ensure that there are no gaps in the provisions for the planning of the H1N1 clinics nor in prevention initiatives to stop it from ever taking root.

Specific to your riding, hon. member, I can tell you that the Elizabeth Métis settlement has the vaccine. I can tell you that the Fishing Lake settlement has the vaccine, and they have been vaccinating since 2 o'clock today. I guess they've just started. So there are plans already in place, and the rest will be up and operational very soon, in a matter of days.

Mrs. Leskiw: Mr. Speaker, my final question is to the same minister. Given that close to 65 per cent of aboriginal people in Alberta live in urban communities, are there any special strategies to overcome the challenges faced by these individuals?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we in Aboriginal Relations are working very closely with the Ministry of Health and Wellness. We're in touch with them on a daily basis. I can assure you that the five zones that I referred to earlier are ready and up and running, and they're receiving aboriginal people as one of the priority groups along with others that the Minister of Health and Wellness and our Premier have mentioned as being in the vulnerable area. So the planning is in place. There are no gaps so far. We care deeply about all Albertans and will ensure that they get the services they require in this respect.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Physician Supply

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Throughout this summer we've been hearing loud and clear that Albertans are concerned about access to a family doctor, whether it's getting a family doctor in the first place or getting in to see the doctor in a timely fashion. For example, almost 20 per cent of Calgarians do not have a family doctor. To the Minister of Health and Wellness. Alberta is growing, and we are losing ground and falling behind the target for family doctors per person. Why isn't the government doing more to encourage physicians to enter family practice?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's not quite that simple. Let me explain the situation that actually does occur in Calgary. We have a PCN at Crowfoot village mall that has moved to a different model of delivering health care. They've moved to a team-based model. They're using other professionals in delivering health care. They're under a different payment system, and they're seeing 25 per cent more patients. So I would suggest that if 25 per cent of Albertans don't have a family doctor – if all of our physicians moved to team-based care under a different payment model, that would allow us to have those 25 per cent who don't have family doctors all getting team-based care in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks. To the same minister: then is the minister saying the government is abandoning its targets for increasing the number of family physicians per capita?

Mr. Liepert: I don't think that if the member checked Hansard, he would see that at all. The Minister of Advanced Education can elaborate if he so chooses, but we're actually increasing our number of seats at the postsecondary institutions and medical school. In fact, I met with some of them yesterday. They are very pleased with the move that the government is making relative to rural initiatives. They are very pleased about the fact that they're going to have opportunities to work in team-based care, Mr. Speaker, and they very much believe like we do: if you keep doing things the same way you've always done them, you're likely not to get any different results.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. Actually, the medical students are very concerned that the rural integrated community clerkship program, it is rumoured, is being cut. I ask the minister here in the Assembly today: can the minister make a commitment to increase the number of medical students who choose to practice in rural settings, and will he continue to see that the rural integrated community clerkship program is supported and expanded?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, now I know why they came into my office wondering if this program was going to be cut: because they probably met with this member, who was spreading rumours, before they were at my meeting.

I can assure this Assembly, although we have not finalized our budget for next year, that if that was one of the things that I put on the table with this caucus, with these rural members, I'd be run out of the room.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Alberta Hospital Edmonton

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Over the past two months there has been a great deal of confusion over the changes at Alberta Hospital Edmonton. I have heard from my constituents that these changes are going to result in mental health patients being forced onto the street. How can the minister allow this to happen?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'm not surprised that this member has heard this from constituents because I heard these irresponsible statements across the floor here just yesterday from the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. They are absolutely irresponsible statements. What we have so often been accused of on this side of the House is: well, what's the plan? So we roll out a three-year plan for the treatment of mental health patients, and then you have these kinds of statements that scare that member's constituents, and I understand why that is. We will not move one patient until we have the community setting that treats that patient in an environment that is superior to where they are today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Two months after it was announced that the Alberta

Hospital site would not be redeveloped, an implementation team was put in place. Can the minister tell us what this committee has done and why this work was not done in the first place?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that in hindsight there are probably occasions when every one of the members in this House would take a look at what we've done and maybe would have done something a little bit differently. So you take a pause. You say: is there a way that we can ensure that this particular rollout is going to be smoother than what we've got as the belief out there? The Premier has asked me, and we have appointed a committee. The Member for Edmonton-Rutherford delivered a very impassioned statement in this House today a little earlier very much outlining what the committee work is going to entail. I'm very confident that this committee made up of stakeholders, many of them involved in the mental health community, is going to ensure that this transition is a smooth one.

Mr. Sandhu: Mr. Speaker, my final question is to the same minister. We don't need to be causing more stress on the mental health patients and their families. There's so much confusion out there. Can the minister give the House any detail on the plan for the patients and their families?

Thank you.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I think is not well known is that on any given day in the capital region of the province there are more mental health acute beds in service outside of Edmonton hospital than inside Edmonton hospital. On a daily basis patients are moving back and forth from the community to Edmonton hospital, and that will continue. So if you happen to read by open letters from certain physicians or certain psychiatrists at Alberta Hospital that there are actually patients moving back and forth between the Edmonton institution and the community, yes, there are. Always have been; always will be. But I can assure you that as recently as yesterday in discussions with Dr. Duckett there is no intention to move any unit from Edmonton hospital into the community before April, May of 2010.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, you rose on a point of order as a result of something the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness said in response to the first question of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Mason: Yes. I think he meant someone else, Mr. Speaker. I didn't talk about mental health yesterday.

The Speaker: You want to rise on a point of order later?

Mr. Mason: No. That's good enough.

The Speaker: Okay. Well, fine. We're making progress. This is good.

Lethbridge-East, followed by Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Conversion of Agricultural Land

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have now been given the agricultural portfolio to be the critic for, so the Minister of Health and Wellness will just have to wait for another day.

Agricultural land loss poses a very real threat to agricultural producers in Alberta; 86 per cent of the land we've lost has gone to residential subdivision, oil and gas activity. This government invests hundreds of millions of dollars in agriculture, yet conversion and loss of land continue to accelerate. Alberta must continue to have internationally competitive agricultural practices. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. We can't wait any longer. What concrete measures have you put in place in the last year to protect agricultural land?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I congratulate the Member for Lethbridge-East for being the agriculture critic. And I congratulate her for the question because now we get in on some sanity. She didn't ask a question that was fearmongering because the question is a true question, and it is a bit of a fear for us in Alberta. I appreciate the question.

Agriculture and Rural Development certainly is concerned about the agricultural land that's disappearing out there. Unfortunately, it happens around the big cities, all the cities, the big towns, the more progressive towns. It's a problem that we have out there, a problem that we intend to deal with. We know that the land-use policy and property rights, Mr. Speaker, certainly are very important issues to our agricultural producers.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. To the same minister, of course: what are the definitive plans to ensure that our farmers aren't selling off the back 40 to survive?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, we have some issues in the works, thank goodness, Mr. Speaker. We certainly know that the fragmentation and conversion of agricultural land is important to all Albertans and, indeed, to all municipalities. I encourage all Albertans and municipalities to join in with the minister of sustainable resources with his land-use framework. It's an important part of it. It'll be important to you, hon. member. The South Saskatchewan River basin, of course, is coming up this year. They've put together a committee. It's largely agricultural, but it's an across-the-board committee. I would certainly encourage you and your people to get involved in that part of it because a huge part of it is going to be devoted to land use.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. That partly answers my third question because what I was going to ask you is what you've done to ensure that the protection of the agricultural land is a priority in the land-use framework regional plan. Perhaps you could speak to that. You have a bit. Please elaborate.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a priority, of course. But, you know, as ag minister it's a priority for me, it's a priority for my department, but it certainly has to be a priority for the agriculture people out there. They're the ones that have to get involved in this. They have to make their thoughts and worries and fears, whatever they may be, known. They have to get to the people on this board. There are going to be consultation meetings, I understand, but we have to be more involved. I sometimes think that agriculture is the weak sister in all the land-use framework, so I appreciate where you're coming from because it's certainly where I intend to go with agriculture.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Deposit-refund System

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's been less than six months since the government introduced milk containers into the deposit-refund system. Most constituents I've talked to about this change think it's a good idea, but not everyone is convinced. I've also heard from nonprofit groups such as food banks who say that they face added expenses. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Doesn't the addition of milk into the deposit system provide too much hardship for food banks and other charities, especially as we move towards the Christmas season?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me be very clear at the outset that we completely support the work that a lot of these nonprofit organizations are doing, and we'll do everything that we can to assist them and appreciate some of the financial pressures that they're under. But let's also not forget that the goal of this program is to increase the amount of recycling and keep containers out of landfills. I'm pleased to report that to that end a number of the organizations that are involved with processing these containers, from the handling facilities all the way through to the dairy board, are meeting as we speak and trying to seek some solutions to assist some of these very worthy nonprofit organizations to deal with some of the pressures that they're under.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental to the same minister. Many communities already have an effective voluntary recycling system in place. In fact, Calgary just introduced curbside recycling this spring. So why make this change?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I applaud some of the work of some of the municipalities throughout the province. But I have to remind the member that there are only limited parts of the province that are covered by such a program and that even under that program the return rate was not nearly approaching the 85 per cent that we've set as a target. We believe that by raising the issue of milk containers and including them in a deposit-based system, we should have similar kinds of results that we're experiencing with juice and pop.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplement to the same minister: has the introduction of milk into the deposit system really made a difference in recycling rates? Mr. Minister, what percentage of containers are being recycled under this initiative?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, it's early in the process to make conclusive statements, but clearly the imposition of deposits has had a tremendous effect on the return rate. In fact, the numbers have almost tripled from what they were prior to the deposits being in place. The detailed results have been reported, and we will be releasing those details on the exact percentages tomorrow.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Water Allocation in the Crowsnest Pass

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Minister of Environment gave assurances that there is enough water for new development despite the fact that the South Saskatchewan River basin is closed to new water licences and Okotoks and Strathmore are projected to run out of water in the next couple of years. To the Minister of Environment. The Crowsnest Pass was denied a water licence last year because of the closure to the water basin. So why does the minister continue to say that there is enough water for new development?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, what this member forgets is that the per capita consumption of water in southern Alberta is tremendously higher than similar kinds of communities elsewhere in the world. So there's an opportunity there, a huge opportunity, if we get our act together with respect to water conservation. But I've also said and I said yesterday that the reason that we're engaging in the review of the water allocation system is to provide for a way of having the existing water users share available water with some of the new users.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Given that the Crowsnest Pass is appealing for their right to drinking water, with court costs at about $20,000 for their municipality, and that last year the province spent $85 million in a lawsuit over water rights, how much of the taxpayer money is the minister willing to spend before he moves on new water rights legislation?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the appeal that the member refers to is the subject of the Environmental Appeals Board. I'm not going to comment on that because at the end of the day the final decision rests with me, and it would be inappropriate for me to comment until I've received the advice from that board. But I must say that the rhetoric that's coming out of this member is incredible. We have taken a proactive approach. We've talked about the need for us to review our legislation, to provide for a facility so that the water – and I remind the member that the amount of water is a finite amount of water, not infinite. We can't go on assuming that we can just issue licences whenever and wherever they're requested.

Ms Blakeman: Back to the same minister. So, Mr. Speaker, Albertans do not have secure access to water, to drinking water. We don't have a fair allocation system. The first in time, first in right is an archaic system, and it sucks, frankly. We don't have enough water left over to protect our ecosystems. For more than a year now the minister has been saying that he might possibly, maybe, at some point, is thinking about, should get around to doing something. Mr. Minister, can you put a date on this review, on this legislation, on the Water Act that's going to be before us? Put a date on it.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the member talks about the last year and, in her words, the inaction on the part of this minister. I'd remind this member that we've had a thorough review and recommendations from the Water Council through their WATSUP committee. Dr. David Percy from the University of Alberta has provided me with a detailed recommendation and review of the system. We've had the Alberta water institute doing an interjurisdictional review. All of those reports are now on my desk. They are being combined and put into a policy. I can advise the member that that policy will be ready to bring forward to the public either later on this fall or early next spring.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Nuclear Power Consultation

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, Albertans from across the province are saying that they are not interested in bringing nuclear power to our province, but instead of listening to what they have to say, the most secretive government in Canada chose to meet behind closed doors with only selected participants. Will the Minister of Energy today release the results of their managed consultation so that the rest of Albertans can get in on the discussion and tell this government once and for all that they don't want nuclear power in our province?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The short answer to that question is no because I don't have the report. When it's available, when they've finished doing the work, at that point in time we will assess it and make Albertans aware of the result.

2:30

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, in contrast to Alberta, Saskatchewan held a transparent public hearing process that began in July and ended in August of 2009, and they released the findings last month. They reported over 80 per cent opposition to nuclear power. Now the government of Saskatchewan is backing away from it because it's too expensive and it's unreliable. Why won't the Minister of Energy come clean with Albertans, admit that nuclear power is not viable, and move on to real efforts to build renewable energy in this province?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, again, I'm not able to speak for the energy minister or the Premier of the province of Saskatchewan, but what I can do is indicate to you that there are probably at least three times more people in the province of Alberta that we need to consult with in the first place. Should it take a little bit longer to get it right? I believe so. That's exactly what we're intending to do. We will get this right, and when Albertans have given us what they think is the answer relative to this issue, we will make that available to Albertans.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, I find that very interesting because, in fact, in Saskatchewan they had public hearings, with over 2,600 people attending. How many people showed up to your public hearings? None.

We know that in order to be a viable source of energy for Alberta, at least four nuclear power plants would have to be built, at a cost of somewhere around $30 billion. Today in Alberta there are wind-powered projects just waiting for approval that would bring the power of one of those plants online immediately at a fraction of the cost with none of the risks. Why won't the Minister of Energy listen to the few Albertans he has consulted, talk to the rest of them, and reject once and for all the costly, inefficient, and environmentally unsustainable spectre of nuclear power?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that there is not a single application from the province of Alberta or Saskatchewan that I'm aware of that's in front of the nuclear regulators in Canada today, none.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Education Funding Formulas

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've been hearing from three of the school boards in our riding about recent cuts of some $80 million to school board budgets. In addition, I think many of us have seen the ads where the ATA and the ASBA have expressed their interest in this issue. To the minister: if investing in our education is really so critical to the economic prosperity and recovery of this province, why would the minister contemplate taking some $80 million from some of our school boards when they themselves feel it would be counterproductive?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the budget was presented earlier this year, it was clear that there was an in-year adjustment that was going to be required, and every department was asked to do a value review of their functions to determine what savings could be made to meet that target for the adjustment. Our assigned target was $80 million. We looked at what was happening in our department, and we took $24 million out of the budget to the department by seeing what could be deferred, what could be done differently, how we could do it in a different way. That's 20 per cent of the budget to the department itself. The others were assigned to the school boards to come out of reserves.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While I accept the explanation, as a former trustee myself the question begs answering: why would a board that is fiscally prudent and puts money aside for identified projects be penalized or have money taken back when those boards who haven't been as fiscally prudent have nothing to contribute?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, what we were trying to accomplish was to make sure that the students in the classroom were not affected by this adjustment. That was the important outcome that was necessary for the process. When we went to the school boards, we first adjusted two grants that could be adjusted by virtue of results from Statistics Canada. In other words, we do one top-up grant for cost indexing and another one for socioeconomic status, so those would have been adjusted in any event. School boards would have expected that. Then we went to school boards and said: we'll take up to but not more than 11 per cent of your operating reserve and ask you to take it out of operating reserve, not out of the classroom. In other words, we all saved for a rainy day. We all saved for a purpose. Now is the time when we need to use some of those resources not to cancel projects but to stretch them out.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister. I guess the next obvious and final question is: of the boards that you took money from, when we return to balanced budgets, would you specifically look at returning money to those specific boards who contributed to this situation in the first place?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, what we are doing is having conversations with boards around the province and asking them to participate with us in the value review process so that decisions can be made, as we go forward, on a thoughtful, evidence-based, and value-driven basis, and we will be doing that with boards. There will be some changes as a result of our discussions, undoubtedly, in funding formulas. I have to say that not all boards would agree that the funding formulas have been effective for all of them to date, so they're all thoughtfully working with us on developing the right funding model, recognizing that we're in difficult fiscal times but also recognizing that all of our decisions need to be based on evidence and value driven.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Government Accommodation Expenses

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Twelve million dollars has been spent on hotels and food by this government here in Alberta over the last two years. In a recession, with tens of thousands of Albertans losing their jobs, unfortunately, and many seeing their retirement savings dwindle, this government actually increased spending on hotels last year by over $2 million. My first question is to the President of the Treasury Board. How can this government justify a $2 million increase in spending on hotels in a recession year when at the same time the province is faced with a deficit of $7 billion?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, you can take the downturn in the economy and the recession and you can sit there and pretend that you can't drive your way out of it or that you can't change. We've seen several things change in this government, and to get change right, you need to talk to the people that you're working with. The Minister of Education has gone through one of the most, we've heard, enlightening, stimulating, effective ways to talk about a new way of delivering education. Well, these people come from all over Alberta. The minister of health has been involved in working with health providers. We actually believe on this side that there is value in meeting with Albertans, sometimes where they live, sometimes in Edmonton or Calgary, and we'll continue to consult with Albertans so that the results we get going forward make us stronger than ever.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. I can't understand why you can ask civil servants and nurses and others to work longer for less when you yourself won't tighten your belt. Why is this government telling ministries to cut programs for Albertans while it continues to spend millions of dollars at the Fairmont hotel, the Delta, Banff Park Lodge, the Hilton, the Crowne Plaza, and even the Fantasyland Hotel? That's just to name a few.

Mr. Snelgrove: I've got a hunch they've named a room after him in the Fantasyland Hotel. I won't know for sure.

Mr. Speaker, one of the pillars of going forward is to make sure that we not only sell our products around Canada and around the States but around the world. We are attracting businesses here to come and look. We are attracting governments and organizations to come and see what we're doing in Alberta and how we're doing it. It's important for us, the MLAs and ministers, to travel to where we're going to be doing business and understand these people. So, yes, we are investing and going around the world and developing markets for our products, and we're proud of it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thought the hon. minister's favourite hotel was the Hotel Macdonald.

My third question is to the minister of children's services. There was $160,000 from children's services last year spent at the Radisson hotel and convention centre. Was that money, that 160 grand, spent for children in need, or was it spent for senior management?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will get that information to this member.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Reclaimed Waste Water

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs. A major greenhouse and gardening business in St. Albert is currently building a large, new, environmentally friendly operation adjacent to Big Lake provincial park. As one of their many environmental initiatives in designing their operation, they proposed to reuse grey water for landscaping and other environmentally friendly purposes. Apparently, they were denied a permit to use grey water because the Alberta building code requires that grey water must go directly into an approved sewage system. My question to the minister: does your department endorse the environmentally friendly concept of reusing grey water for other purposes?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There is a growing interest in using grey water to help protect the environment. We don't have any regulations or codes in place to mitigate risks at this time, and I do want to emphasize that there are health and environmental risks. But we have established a group, a reclaimed water working group, that will develop regulations and standards and guidelines to facilitate safe use. Until this framework is established, reclaimed waste water cannot be used in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In view of the St. Albert greenhouse development and several other housing proposals for grey water systems in the city of St. Albert and I know in the county of Lac Ste. Anne and I'm sure there are other areas as well, is your department actually proposing amendments to the Alberta building code to recognize proactive environmental advances in construction technology?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is a good concept that could help protect Alberta's environment. The working group will explore the benefits and the risks. When the risks are mitigated, we will update the code. I just want to emphasize that the initiative very much supports the Alberta water for life strategy. Presently, Environment can issue a site-specific approval. More importantly, using reclaimed water for various purposes can help conserve the water resources of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplemental again to the Minister of Municipal Affairs: is your department prepared to initiate pilot projects to keep abreast of new environmental developments?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I think the issue of a pilot project would probably be more in the purview of the Ministry of Environment, so I'll answer the member's question.

Clearly, recycling of water is critical if we're going to be engaging in water conservation. I referred to that even earlier in question period today. Grey water is already used in some industrial applications. The current policy has a case-by-case analysis done, and that would be available to this particular development.

In the long term, though, Alberta Environment is working very closely with Municipal Affairs to review the policy, to develop a new policy so that we can have a much more robust system that will allow for these kinds of innovative projects to be approved on a more consistent basis and with far less hassle than would be the case today on a case-by-case basis. I applaud this particular development. I'm aware of it. I understand that it is truly leading edge. I'm hoping, whether it be a pilot project or any other way, that we can accommodate this project but, more importantly, we are able to develop that broader context for a policy in the future.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 84 questions and responses today.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of an electronic petition received in my office over the summer months. This petition states:

We, the undersigned, request Alberta Health Services re-examine their decision to relocate Ambulance Dispatch Services to Calgary from Medicine Hat.

It is our opinion that moving Ambulance Dispatch Services to Calgary is detrimental to our region.

A total of 1,386 individuals signed their names to this petition.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of tablings from constituents today. The first is from Ian and May Dalziel, and they are writing with concerns around the condominium act and looking for legislation that could limit the percentage of rental units in a condominium.

The second tabling – actually, it does look to be a form letter – is from Lawrance Landry, also in my constituency, laying out concerns around French immersion funding.

The next is from Walter Sheluk, also a constituent – he managed to misspell my name, but that's okay – who is very unhappy with the direction of the current Alberta government in "attacking the citizens of Alberta who are ill" and is critiquing Dr. Duckett's performance.

Finally, from Anthony Falls, also a constituent. He makes the point that living downtown, he can "see on a daily basis what happens to people who can get the help they need." He's referring specifically to Alberta Hospital Edmonton and asking that it be redeveloped.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings today. The first tabling I have is a letter that I received from the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness regarding the revised drug plan for seniors, and certainly his response is, as usual, interesting.

The second tabling I have is copies of a petition that was organized by Dorothy Black, and it was presented to our constituency office on October 16, 2009. It is from citizens across the province petitioning the Legislative Assembly to vote against Bill 50.

My third tabling is the accommodation expenses from the government of Alberta blue book for the year ended March 31, 2008, and the blue book for the year ended March 31, 2009. It's prepared by the Alberta Liberal caucus. I would think the Public Affairs Bureau will be checking my math, and they're welcome to do that, Mr. Speaker.

My last tabling is the accommodation expenses from the government of Alberta blue book for the year ended March 31, 2008, and for the blue book for the year ended March 31, 2009. The totals are there for everyone to see. This is regarding my questions earlier in question period.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. It's on behalf of the Leader of the Opposition. In his question today he referred to photographs, so I am tabling copies of photographs. They are from the Westmount influenza clinic yesterday, and they show all kinds of unmanned vaccination stations despite the crowds of people in the clinic.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of the executive summary of a report referred to today by my colleague prepared for the government of Saskatchewan entitled Future of Uranium Public Consultation Process. The report was delivered on September 15, 2009. It concluded that "the overwhelming response to this public consultation was that nuclear power generation should not be a choice for Saskatchewan."

Thank you.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk: for the hon. Ms Evans, Minister of Finance and Enterprise, the ATB Financial 2009 annual report and pursuant to the Securities Act the Alberta Securities Commission 2009 annual report.

Orders of the Day Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Alberta Capital Bonds

16. Ms Evans moved:

Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

Ms Evans: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to respond to this motion, and I want to assure you that I'll be listening intently to the ideas of my colleagues here in the Assembly as we work through the motion. The fact that we are having this discussion is due to the visionary leadership of our Premier as he unveiled his plan, The Way Forward, to Albertans in his address to the province on October 14.

Alberta is a beacon of hope and a magnet for international investment. Albertans have told us that they, too, are looking for a way to proudly invest in our province. A retail savings bond program targeted at capital infrastructure projects would provide Albertans with the opportunity to invest in a secure financial instrument and to participate very directly in building an even better quality of life for Albertans. That's why we're looking forward to offering Alberta capital bonds as part of our borrowing strategy. Alberta capital bonds are a retail bond program that would give individual Albertans an opportunity to invest in building needed infrastructure.

Judging from the volume of calls, letters, and e-mails that both my office and our department have been receiving, interest in buying Alberta capital bonds once again is high. Just to be clear, a bond is simply the legal instrument; that is, it is the promise to pay the government's issue when borrowing from multiple investors as opposed to a loan from a bank or another single third party.

There are several points around the bonds program where we are seeking advice through debate on this motion. The first point relates to the question of the type of bond or bonds that should be offered. There are a variety of types of bonds that could be offered for sale to Albertans, two of which are quite common and have been issued by the province in the past. These include conventional bonds, which pay a fixed rate of interest over the life of the bond, and variable-rate bonds, which pay an interest rate that is reset once or twice yearly to reflect movements in interest rates over time. I would suggest that offering three-year fixed-rate and five-year variable-rate bonds would be a viable option for the Alberta capital bonds program.

One of the other questions around the program deals with who should be able to buy Alberta capital bonds. In line with their name, a valid option would be for them to be sold only in Alberta and only to Albertans. What better way for Albertans to invest in their province and support needed infrastructure?

Another issue around bonds would be what the minimum and maximum amounts should be for purchase. In the past we've gone with a hundred dollar minimum, which I believe would be appropriate again. This would allow Albertans with even modest means to become involved. In order to keep the bond program focused on individual Albertans, there needs to be a maximum amount set for purchase after a full discussion here on this motion. In our borrowing we need to find the balance between opportunities for larger investors to get involved as well as opportunities for individual Albertans to take part. It is important to provide opportunity for individual Albertans of varying capacity to invest. I believe that a reasonable maximum amount for Alberta capital bonds gives the citizens of this province their chance to take part.

One of the questions we have been getting around these bonds is if Alberta capital bonds will be RRSP eligible. Our proposed selling period, next February, is during RRSP season, so I see this as an opportunity for another level of encouragement for Albertans to get involved in the Alberta capital bonds program.

We've also been asked where people can buy their Alberta capital bonds. As with our previous bond issues Alberta capital bonds would be available across the province at financial institutions such as banks, credit unions, at ATB Financial branches, and also through investment dealers. The most frequent question we're getting from Albertans is: what kind of interest rate will they offer? The interest rate will have to be determined at a date closer to when sales start. We don't want to upset the investment market or increase our debt service costs any more than necessary, so the rate should be close to Alberta's market rates at the time the bonds go on sale.

Before I conclude, let me please remind you that the original capital bonds were first issued in the spring of 1987, with the last bond issue in 1997. The 1997 issue of these bonds raised $206 million to help pay for infrastructure projects and to help offset budget deficits. I want to reiterate that our new issue of Alberta capital bonds will give Albertans the opportunity to invest in this great province while supporting capital infrastructure projects such as roads, highways, schools, hospitals, and bridges. It is an exciting moment for Albertans, with their individual aspirations and dreams of a better financial future, to have their chance to take an active role by investing in their province in the form of an Alberta capital bond.

I look forward to the discussion and hearing from all members of the Assembly as to what their advice would be and encourage all members to participate in this important discussion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, and then I will recognize the hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and participate in the debate this afternoon on Government Motion 16, Alberta capital bonds. I listened to the hon. minister with considerable interest. She is talking, of course, about a bond process that this province has used before. She correctly states that Alberta first introduced Alberta capital bonds in 1987. The name was changed less than a decade later. The bonds were originally – originally – used to pay for capital projects and to offset budget deficits.

Now, we have to be very careful here. We realize, to our astonishment, that we now have a $7 billion deficit. If we look at the consolidated financial statements from last year and read the fine print, there's a $2.8 billion deficit from that year as well. The deficit is growing, the sustainability fund is, unfortunately, shrinking, so we have to be very very careful here. I'm not saying that this is not a good idea, but I'm certainly urging that this Assembly, in light of this government's fiscal track record, proceed with caution, Mr. Speaker, on this matter.

I would remind the House that the government – and it was listed in the 2009-10 budget – has already borrowed $1.1 billion by issuing bonds on the capital markets. Now, any additional issuance of bonds to the public would go above and beyond that amount that was quoted in last spring's budget. These bonds would go towards capital spending. At this time be mindful that we were talking a little bit earlier about bonds in the past being used to fund deficits. If we were to use this money for financing of the three-year, $23 billion capital plan, that would be noteworthy. If one is to look at the annual report of the province of Alberta, you can see where last year, 2008-09, the total capital plan anticipated was $8.7 billion dollars, but the actual amount spent in various places, whether it's on the highways or municipal infrastructure, postsecondary facilities, schools, hospitals, was $7.5 billion dollars. There was an unallocated amount of $1.1 billion.

We have some of the highest per capita spending in the country on capital projects. The Premier himself said in his televised address here two weeks ago that in some cases it was up to a 40 per cent saving. Contractors, like the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster – he used to be a contractor. I'm sure the hon.

member had a very sharp pencil and could give a good price on a project in the oil patch. If any gentleman in this House would know that now is the time to see if we can get some of these contractors to sharpen their pencils, it would be him. I was surprised to hear the Premier say that there could be savings of up to 40 per cent, so perhaps it's time to stretch out this $23 billion dollar, three-year capital plan into a longer period of time to see if we can realize some significant savings like the Premier was talking about. So that would be one reason why we certainly should be proceeding cautiously with this debt.

The second issue, of course, is the fact that we already have the Alberta Capital Finance Authority, where municipalities can use the government's very good, to date, credit rating to borrow money for capital projects. Certainly, I see that as an item that should continue. If we look at the debt now from Alberta Capital Finance Authority and if we look at the annual report from the province, we will see that between 2008-09 there was a $1 billion dollar increase in loans and advances made under the authority of the Alberta Capital Finance Authority Act.

We also need to point out, before we go into further debt, the obligations under public-private partnerships, the famous 3Ps. Now, if we look again and compare 2008 and 2009, we see that 2008 was restated. It was roughly $1.6 billion, but it skyrocketed up to $4.7 billion in 2009. So, you know, we can call it an obligation, but in reality it's a debt. At some point we're going to have to pay this money.

When we look at what's going on and we look at the money that we have available in the stability fund, I would again, please, caution all members of the House that perhaps these bonds are a very good idea, but we have to put limits on these bonds. I am not convinced that this government can manage our money. I'm sorry; you just don't have the track record.

If we are to proceed with this – if we are to proceed with this – I would like to ask the hon. minister of finance to consider that if these bonds are for sale only in Alberta and can only be purchased by Albertans, the capital projects that they are to finance, perhaps we can let some good Alberta contractors through an open and fair bid process get some of the work that these projects would finance. I'm getting calls in our constituency office from people who are driving by the ring road projects. They see the sign, and they want to know who Flatiron Construction is, Mr. Speaker. Of course, we all know Flatiron is from Denver, Colorado. There are other outfits building 3P schools that I think are from Guernsey island or somewhere like this. But I think we should also consider, if we're going to proceed with this plan, making sure that Alberta companies, if they're qualified and have sharp pencils, can get the work. I don't think we should be considered unreasonable if we were to stick up for a few of the Alberta contractors in these difficult economic times.

I know we have an infrastructure backlog in this province, but I would like to note, Mr. Speaker, two of the departments that are responsible for a lot of the infrastructure spending or the funding, the capital projects in this government: Infrastructure and Transportation. Now, in Infrastructure last year there was an amount – and perhaps the President of the Treasury Board can tell me – of $1.5 billion that was transferred at the end of the budget year into, I believe, the stability fund. Did that come from savings in capital projects that were deferred or cancelled in the Department of Transportation or in the Department of Infrastructure?

We think there is a shortage of monies. Certainly, there appears to be whenever we look at the $7 billion deficit. But in the Department of Transportation last year there was an unexpended amount of half a billion dollars. A lot of it came from natural gas rebates, but there were other interesting projects that were either cancelled or used less money. If this money is part of that $1.5 billion, it would be reasonable, in this hon. member's opinion, that perhaps we have money set aside or deferred for capital projects that the House or, certainly, this member is not aware of. I would like to have that clarified before we go any further on this debate on the Alberta bonds.

Also, in municipal support in the Department of Transportation there's the municipal infrastructure program, the Alberta cities transportation partnerships, the federal gas tax fund, the federal public transit trust, the Canada-Alberta municipal rural infrastructure fund. All these funds had unexpended amounts, and I would like to know: where is this money now? It obviously wasn't spent last year. There seems to be a panic on behalf of this government to raise additional funds.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would just again like to remind the House that there are a number of questions here that, hopefully, will be asked, but we do have a $7 billion deficit anticipated this year. We know the results from last year. We know from some of the individual items in the respective departments that there was money unspent on capital last year. Why is it necessary to borrow more? We've already borrowed to our limit that was anticipated in the budget.

These are questions that I think should be answered before we vote on Motion 16. It certainly would be interesting to see how many Albertans would be willing to step up and buy bonds around RRSP time. Hopefully, if there is significant investment, the maximum benefit to Albertans through the construction of capital projects would proceed, and it would proceed in a timely fashion and also with a price tag that certainly is reasonable. If at this time I could have those questions answered through the course of the debate, I would appreciate it.

Again, there need to be measures of control placed on these capital bonds. Without a cap, I believe, or a limited time frame to issue the bonds, there's no certainty that this government will show fiscal restraint. I know there was fiscal restraint shown in Transportation and Infrastructure for whatever reason last year, and if I could have that explained to me, I would be very grateful.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we'll now proceed to hear from the President of the Treasury Board, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, and then the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to take the opportunity today to probably stay a little bit away from numbers and statistics because I think this concept of the art of the possibility here, what we can do with Albertans and what Albertans can do with their money to contribute to making the province they've chosen to live in a better place to be, is the question.

We are in a tremendously solid financial position compared to just about anywhere else, and we have started on a very aggressive program of building the infrastructure we need. All the while it begs the question: where is the money coming from that we spend? It comes from Albertans or industry that works in Alberta. And what are we doing with it? Well, we're providing the operational dollars for the different programs, and we're addressing their needs. We're building their roads. We're building their schools, their hospitals, and whatnot.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

It's a subject that the Premier has talked about for many years, the opportunity to allow Albertans, to encourage Albertans to invest in this infrastructure. It probably became more urgent with us witnessing a global meltdown that robbed many people, many Albertans of their cash, their investments. In many ways, Mr. Speaker, it robbed them of their hope and of their dreams for a comfortable retirement, and that's really unfortunate. We look at Alberta as a place where we can provide what many people would want, and that is certainty and stability, and have the bonus of helping to create an even more solid economy that they can be a part of.

I know a lot of the talk around the bonds has been around the tremendous comfort that seniors would have, knowing that their investments were invested in the Alberta government, in infrastructure in the Alberta government with a fair rate of return. But I would say that the best way, probably the most sure way, to make sure that you have stability for seniors, Mr. Speaker, is to have opportunity for youth. I think young Albertans will be a large class of the people that will want to invest in these bonds.

Our priorities may change as we go through life. As a young businessperson I may be more interested in investing in the roads or the other infrastructure that I see as the economic enablers. As I start to grow older and start to raise a family, I may think that I would like to invest a little in schools and in health care facilities because that's where my interest is. When I'm starting to see a lifetime of return from investing into these bonds, I'll realize that I am building that opportunity that I want as a senior in this province. As I get older, I may look for the opportunity to invest in bonds that build the seniors' facilities that we're actively building right now and different kinds of health care facilities.

So I think: what better form of direct democracy than allowing people to invest their money, to put their money where their mouth is? If they would like to invest in these bonds, then they can. Certainly, there'll be no pressure other than knowing that they have a place to put some money that's going to benefit them, maybe their parents, certainly their children, and overall the economy of Alberta.

So when we talk about the bonds, I see this as the start of a new way of doing business in Alberta. This isn't a result of the economic meltdown. We are one province that can proceed with our capital plan. We've set aside billions of dollars in our sustainability fund to be able to assure the building sector and Albertans that we are going to be able to continue to complete our capital plan.

The hon. member mentioned P3s. There's no question that the P3 opportunities have many, many different benefits that have been talked about in here. But one of the detractions is that much of the foreign capital that comes with it comes from out of the province. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that where possible we need to allow Albertans and the investment community in Alberta to invest. I, for one, think there are more opportunities than just the bond.

It goes back to the unfunded pension liability we picked up from the teachers. I believe – and I have talked with many teachers that would agree – that if we filled the shortfall in that unfunded pension plan with assets that provide a return, the teachers then have an opportunity to invest in schools that benefit our children. We have an opportunity as a government to accelerate our building programs around schools. It's a win-win. I think the care that people take with things they own or have a share in is greater, and I think that when the mindset becomes quite clear that it's Albertans owning Alberta's infrastructure, we'll all take a little more pride in how we deal with it. Certainly, the opportunity that we will be able to benefit from in having more available cash is true.

Now, I absolutely agree with the minister and the hon. member that there needs to be a balance in how much money we would attract, how much we can invest. We have to maintain the very practical, sensible approach of ensuring that we're building what we need where we need it, that we're building facilities that we have the staffing for, that fit into the existing capital plan. I don't think that it would be a real stretch, Mr. Speaker, to know that people would certainly be even more comfortable as we follow a capital plan.

The world has changed with being more innovative. I would certainly not want to use the banking community as being innovative in a good way because what we saw there were ways to take money from people with no accountability. I think that the last couple of years have shown people that if you can invest where you know, with people you can trust, they'll take that opportunity to do it.

I look at the capital plan that we're faced with, Mr. Speaker, and the $20 billion and change that's in that plan. We don't look at it as a problem. We look at that as what we're building for the future. It's the ring roads. It's the hospitals. It's the schools. We know – and it's been stated many times in this room – that we're building far more per capita than anywhere else in Canada, and you know, that's okay with Albertans. Rarely do we get a call that says: "Hold my school," or "Stop my hospital project," or "Don't worry about my new road; I'm just fine."

Mr. Speaker, Albertans realize that a successful economy is knowledge based. It needs healthy communities in every sense of the word, and it needs the infrastructure to allow business to thrive, and they pay the bills for what we're trying to do for those who can't. So I think we have to accept that normal doesn't live here like it used to and that the opportunity we've got now – and I would certainly disagree with the hon. member about our history of finances. Albertans have asked for this repeatedly. The Premier made it, actually, one of his leadership mandates when he started, to give Albertans the opportunity to invest in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, I know that there are a lot of details that will be worked out around who sells them, the rate of return. Obviously, we'll use prudent money management when we work on that. I for one would like to have the opportunity when I'm no longer in this Legislature to invest in these bonds for the simple fact that I have the confidence that it'll be there, that it'll pay a fair return, and I think many Albertans are in the same frame of mind that they would love to have the opportunity to invest in this province we all live in.

I look forward to the debate. I know that we can come up with challenges to it. Fair. I also know that we have the staff and we have the vision to put together the appropriate amount of bond issuing. I think that as this develops, Mr. Speaker, it will develop into one where it can be accessed through the municipal borrowing process and other entities that you may not want to directly get in the bond business but certainly can benefit from the wealth that Albertans have accumulated and want to reinvest in Alberta.

So this, Mr. Speaker, is really simple. It's about letting Albertans reinvest or invest in Alberta. It's what we ought to do. I look forward to the discussion. It certainly opens up the art of possibility, that lives here in Alberta more than anywhere else I've ever been.

Thank you for this opportunity.

The Deputy Speaker: There are five minutes for comments or questions if any member wishes to. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Sure. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the President of the Treasury Board. I actually think this is an interesting idea. One of my concerns, however, is that there will be kind of a menu choice, if I understood correctly. My first question. Maybe I didn't understand correctly, but I got the impression that people investing in these bonds might be able to decide: does it go to the local hospital in Lloydminster, or does it go to expanding highway 2 or to a new skating rink somewhere else? I'm going to express right here that I'm uneasy with that because it seems to me that then our capital program becomes a bit of a popularity contest rather than necessarily investing in what's needed. Are sewers going to be a popular item for capital bonds when they're up against competition for a seniors' lodge or a new arena? I'm wondering if the President of the Treasury Board has any information or views on just having people buy the capital bonds in general as opposed to having them check off specific projects.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, hon. member and Mr. Speaker. I thought I was clear when I said that we have a capital plan in place and that we have the prioritized projects in the capital plan.

As to the bonds, originally we talked about the bonds being more appropriately at this time for seniors' facilities, obviously facilities that are prioritized already in our capital plan. I agree: I don't think we want to get in a position where a wealthy community or wealthy groups start to dictate our capital plan. I agree with you. If I left that impression, I didn't mean to. My intention is that you will put together a priority plan that fits our capital plan, that has all the checks and balances in the two, you know, whether it's staffing, appropriateness, and you would work that out.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I found the hon. minister's speech informative and quite interesting. Now, you mentioned that one of the Premier's campaign promises was a similar policy to this. The Premier also made a campaign policy to increase the amount of bitumen that was upgraded to synthetic crude oil in this province. Given that the government is now willing to take bitumen in kind as a royalty, could these bonds be used to finance a merchant bitumen upgrader in this province?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, these bonds are very specifically targeted for public infrastructure. While I certainly applaud and agree with our ministers of Finance and Energy that we need to work on the BRIK policy and how that can move forward, it's about involving business. It's about using what we have in Alberta to get upgraders or upgrader/refineries or whatever mix it is to come here and to help us achieve the policy objectives of the Alberta government. But raising capital for business ventures is clearly, clearly outside the issue that we're talking about here, bonds for public infrastructure.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. members?

Seeing none, then the chair shall recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and discuss the motion that is before the House today, which is the issuance of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

As was indicated earlier, Alberta has a bit of a history doing this. It first began introducing Alberta capital bonds back in 1987, and they were later changed to the Alberta savings certificates in 1996. Around 1997, when our finances turned and things began to get a little bit better for the province, these methods of financing Alberta's, I guess to use a new terminology, way forward came to an end at that time as Alberta coffers became, once again, filled with royalty revenues from the oil and gas industry. We began again to then spend those for our development, our projects, our infrastructure, our horse racing, whatever you want to call it that this government spent on over the last number of years.

Now, when we find ourselves here in 2009, again with the money tree not pumping quite, I guess, literally, like it was at one time, we again have gone back to capital bonds to try and raise revenue for the government, which is essentially debt. You know, that is not necessarily a bad thing. In fact, we possibly could be using some of these funds right now to go to the marketplace and to raise money, and it may be a good time to do that. Interest rates are relatively low. If you go to a private investor and they were given the opportunity of saying, "Well, we'll raise capital and only charge you 2 per cent, 2.5 per cent interest on this money for the next 10 years," a lot of people would say, "Hey, that's a heck of a good deal," especially if you can afford the payments. Alberta appears to be in that situation.

Having said that, there were also some comments brought up by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar which resonated very true with me. This government had, at least by many accounts, including by opposition members of this House, pretty extensive spending habits over the course of the last little while, whether these have been legacy projects or program spending or whatever was the flavour of the day. With that history in mind and with Alberta's boom-and-bust culture and our history of having to go into debt and then get out of debt at other times by resorting to the money tree in the backyard, the oil and gas industry, those comments resonated with me; I mean, particularly those.

We already have a $23 billion capital plan that's out there that is fairly extensive, fairly detailed, and fairly aggressive compared to other jurisdictions. With the slowdown in the economy that $23 billion may be more than enough to get us by, to increase the public infrastructure space that is necessary. If we can always, hopefully, build the schools and the hospitals that people need with that money, it's better than going into debt even further than we appear to be going, and hopefully that won't be necessary.

Given those concerns, I would say that we can't just give a blank cheque to how many government bonds we're going to issue, or we could be in trouble here. I think it is necessary that, as the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar said, we should put some limits, some constraints on how many times we will go to the marketplace in the next little while to raise funds. I think that would be prudent. It would allow us, once we reach that limit, if that limit ever arrives, to then come back to this House to discuss whether we need any more money. At that time it may well be necessary, but I don't think that putting in that extra step of coming back to the House and discussing whether more money is necessary to pay for whatever Albertans need or what we deem necessary is a bad thing. It's just another opportunity to keep Albertans apprised of what is going on with government expenditures, and it would allow us to then look at the issue more closely and take a second look at whether the finances are truly necessary.

Those things being said, as long as there is a recognition that although this may be an okay time to be going to the marketplace for funds and that, yes, there is an argument that we're giving Albertans a nice way to invest in their future, well, yeah. Sure. Why not? We can paint it up that way, but at the end of the day this is still debt.

You know, the average Albertan has many ways to invest in the marketplace to get capital bonds, other places besides the Alberta government. They can walk down to their local Alberta Treasury Branches and talk to the teller, and she'll direct them to the financial department. They'll say, "You want some bonds; well, here's a list of things we can get you into" or "Here's a group of mutual funds where you can get bonds that average you back probably more money than we're going to pay out on this bond issue over time." Let's not fool ourselves that we're doing this great service for the Alberta people here by issuing these bonds. Hopefully, they're picked up, hopefully they'll provide us with a little bit of comfort room and hopefully an ability to do good things for Albertans. But let's remember that this is debt that Albertans and Alberta's future generations will have to pay back, and we should always be cognizant of that going forward.

It's been a privilege to get up here and speak to this. Again, hey, I'm hoping this works out. I'm hoping we put this money to good use. But at the same time I urge caution in the approach we're taking right now.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments, questions.

Seeing none, the chair now shall recognize the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and speak to Government Motion 16, which provides for the availability and the sale of government savings bonds for all Albertans, or Alberta capital bonds, or Alberta savings bonds. Savings bonds would provide Albertans with a safe and secure investment tool which would be fully backed by the government of Alberta. I've been in favour of savings bonds. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo mentioned just a moment ago about other areas going to banks or whatever to look at the list of bonds that are available. I have to admit that I've done that, and I consider them a very secure instrument. Really, once purchased, they may be redeemed at a later date, at which point the government would pay back the principal and any interest accrued.

3:30

Mr. Speaker, savings bonds are a key element to achieving the goals of The Way Forward, our Premier's bold vision of an Alberta that emerges from the economic recession stronger than ever. It's comprised of four elements. First, this government will take firm action to deal with the fiscal challenges we face. Second, we'll draw upon the savings we wisely invested in the boom years. Third, we'll continue to invest in public infrastructure to get value for the taxpayer, to support jobs, and to prepare for a return to economic growth. Fourth, we'll make sure that our energy and other industries are competitive and attract the investment we need to develop Alberta's resources.

Mr. Speaker, savings bonds will provide several benefits and opportunities for Albertans. First, this would be an excellent saving tool for Albertans. Backed by Alberta's triple-A credit rating thanks to our record of strong fiscal management, they will offer an exceptional rate of return. Second, the government of Alberta will invest the funds collected from the sale of these bonds into critical infrastructure projects to help maintain our communities. Bondholders will be able to know exactly what projects they're helping to build. It could be anything from improving our transportation network, including new roads and highways, to schools and medical facilities. As an investment tool savings bonds would offer a more competitive rate of return than a regular savings account from any bank.

While banks may attach certain conditions to their accounts, Alberta savings bonds will offer maximum flexibility for investors. No matter what age, Alberta bonds make an ideal savings solution. For young Albertans a savings bond could grow substantially over a period of time, providing a useful tool for a variety of future needs. For young adults savings bonds could provide an additional tool to save hard-earned money. Moreover, young adults could use their hard-earned savings for postsecondary education, for purchasing a home or a vehicle.

For young families savings bonds are a way for parents to invest in their province's and children's future. The savings bonds that a young couple purchases may end up helping to fund the construction of a new school that will one day educate their child or the hospital that may help deliver a future child of theirs into the world. A young couple may wish to purchase bonds to save for their children's postsecondary education. In the meantime, Mr. Speaker, the government may choose to use the funds gathered from the sale of these bonds to help finance improvements to our postsecondary institutions such as new lecture halls or more student spaces.

The bonds that the couple purchases will accrue interest over 18 or more years until they're withdrawn for the child's postsecondary education. It's important to note that families who purchase capital bonds could also withdraw their investment for other critical needs. These could include a down payment for a new car, a home, or home renovations.

Mr. Speaker, savings bonds would also benefit those who have given so much to build this province, our senior citizens. For seniors a savings bond is yet another way to contribute to building a stronger Alberta. Bonds purchased today by seniors may be used to help fund major projects in their communities. They can take great satisfaction in knowing exactly which projects their bonds helped to fund. As savings bonds will provide a favourable rate of return, they will provide an attractive means to save their hard-earned money. In addition, they will also be an ideal solution for individuals or families who wish to diversify their savings portfolio.

Mr. Speaker, the rate of return on savings bonds will, I hope, compare quite favourably to a savings account individuals can open at their bank. Furthermore, banks generally charge a fee to maintain a savings account, and depending on the account, the bank may require a fee for withdrawals from that account.

Another popular option for savings is a tax-free savings account, a flexible, registered, general-purpose savings account which was introduced by the federal government on January 2, 2009. These savings accounts permit Canadians to contribute up to $5,000 annually as well as withdraw any amount at any time tax free. Similarly, it's my hope that the government permits Albertans to purchase and withdraw savings bonds tax free as well.

Mr. Speaker, this government has a bold plan that will help Alberta emerge from this economic recession stronger than ever. I believe that savings bonds will strengthen Albertans by providing an exceptional savings option that will offer a favourable rate of return. With record-low interest rates and construction costs savings bonds purchased by Albertans will help to fund critical infrastructure projects for an exceptional value.

I strongly believe that this motion speaks to the values that define us as Albertans, working together to build a stronger province for future generations. For these reasons I'm very proud to stand in support of Motion 16 and strongly urge my colleagues from both sides of this House to support it as well.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Five minutes for questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that. I have a number of questions for the hon. member. The hon. member in his speech indicated that the government had a record of I believe it was strong fiscal management if I heard him correctly. I would like to ask the hon. member: does he consider the track record in the last year with Alberta Health Services – we went from nine regional health authorities. We fired them, and we created this one streamlined system that was supposed to control costs and improve service, and in reality what has happened is that it's over a billion dollars in deficit, people are being laid off, and facilities are being downgraded. Does the hon. member consider that strong fiscal management?

Mr. Mitzel: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's an interesting question. You talk about strong fiscal management. You talk about a point that the hon. member has raised. Now, I think the one thing that the hon. member has not raised is the fact that this is included in the 20-year plan, Vision 2020, with regard to health services. I think that if you looked at the whole thing and took it as a whole, you'd probably see how it fits. Now, look at all the rest of the management we've got. You look at all the money that has been saved. The sustainability fund: that's up to $17 billion. If you look at all of these other ones and put those all together, I would have to say that there is a track record of strong fiscal management.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Again specific to Alberta Health Services, does the hon. member think that providing a $22,000-a-month pension to the CEO of the Calgary health region after eight years' service and giving that individual 26 or 28 years of pensionable service for eight years' work and having the taxpayers make the entire 100 per cent contribution to that $22,000-a-month pension is strong fiscal management?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, you can take any figures you like. You can start at a very high level, and you can drill down to a very, very low level. What you do when you go down to the low level is you get involved in micromanaging the nitty-gritty. In fact, what we're talking about with the Alberta savings bonds is something at a 30,000-foot level that looks at all of Alberta. There are instances that have to be looked at and worked with in all departments, whether it's agriculture or oil and gas or anything else, and you've picked one item and looked at that and asked how it fits with strong fiscal management. You look at that, and you'll find that we're talking from a very, very high level here on all of this.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay. If we're talking about micromanaging the nitty-gritty, I would caution the hon. member that if you look after the dimes and nickels, the dollars will look after themselves. How could you explain this example – giving after only nine months of service to an individual who was the former deputy minister of health, Paddy Meade, a quarter of a million dollars bonus for nine months' work when she was let go – as a sign of strong fiscal management?

3:40

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Mr. MacDonald: That's relevant. Of course it is, hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, I think that the contract arrangements that were possibly made with the individual he talks about and Alberta Health Services are something that I'm not privy to, nor do I have a part in that. I think we work with contracts. As well, Alberta Health Services has a job to do, and they're working through that.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I think I now understand why the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar hasn't got two dimes to rub together.

I wonder if I could ask the hon. member: rather than the sniping or whatever you might call it that the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar has been doing, I wonder if that member has heard one constructive suggestion from the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar as to how to move forward and improve a very strong record of sound fiscal management. One constructive suggestion.

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, on reflection, no.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to use the five minutes?

Seeing none, the chair now shall recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and offer my support for the government motion to issue Alberta savings bonds. The effects of the current economic recession have been felt across the world, and many Albertans have many stories that exemplify the effects of the challenging times they face. These have been trying times for Albertans and our province. However, we have reason to be optimistic for our province has positioned itself to emerge from this recession with a stronger economy and with stronger public services.

Albertans are known, Mr. Speaker, for their hard work, for their dedication to their families, and for the pride they have in their communities and province. In 2003 with the help of hard-working Albertans our government paid off the provincial debt. This was a momentous feat that our government and our citizens should take pride in. After all, it serves as one example of contributing to Alberta's legacy. Also, since 2003 our government saved a percentage of our revenue while still providing Albertans with effective and efficient public services. After paying off the provincial debt, we have amassed $25 billion in savings: $8 billion in the heritage savings trust fund and $17 billion in the sustainability fund.

Mr. Speaker, our government had the strategic foresight to realize that the prosperity and growth which our economy witnessed during these good years would be interrupted at some point down the road. The current global recession and the global financial crisis had an impact on government revenue. However, the sustainability fund was intended for economic times like the one we are currently facing. With the heritage trust fund, the sustainability fund, and the hard-working citizens of our province we have the potential in the near future to return to the days of growth and prosperity. Our government cares about people and continues to position and strengthen Alberta to emerge from the recession with a stronger economy. One way in which we can take strides towards recapturing the growth and prosperity in our economy is by reintroducing Alberta savings bonds.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has achieved the highest credit rating possible. In fact, Alberta has the highest credit rating of any province in Canada. Because of our massive savings our province has received a triple-A credit rating. The ratings system identifies the level of security that an investor has in their investment. Few organizations are able to achieve a triple-A rating. Our triple-A credit rating is the highest rating available and is based on our past savings initiatives and our province's superior economic performance. Alberta savings bonds would provide Albertans with a convenient and secure savings platform.

Alberta savings bonds will also provide peace of mind for the investor, knowing that a repayment of the initial purchase price and interest are guaranteed. A particularly attractive feature of Alberta savings bonds is that they are an investment in our province which can enable the opportunity for public service and infrastructure projects.

With the reintroduction of Alberta savings bonds, Mr. Speaker, many questions will be asked regarding specific conditions, including the maximum amount available to purchase and who would be eligible to buy Alberta savings bonds. First, Mr. Speaker, let me address the maximum amount available to purchase. The Alberta savings bonds will allow an individual to have the opportunity to diversify their investments in a secure and stable manner, and I am truly confident that our government will set an appropriate limit that will allow our government to control the amount of bonds sold with the opportunity to reassess the maximum amount available for purchase.

The second question, Mr. Speaker, is regarding who will be eligible to purchase Alberta savings bonds. Alberta savings bonds, for example, should be sold solely to Albertans to allow the citizens of our province to enjoy the benefits of our government's savings practices. The credit rating which our government has earned provides security to the investor and allows the investor to display their optimism and confidence in Alberta's future. The security which these bonds provide is a direct result of our government's savings and positive economic past. Thus, only Albertans should have the option to purchase savings bonds.

Furthermore, Albertans should know the specific projects that Alberta savings bonds will fund. The projects chosen should benefit all Albertans in order to make investing in Alberta savings bonds more attractive.

Mr. Speaker, our rising population – today we have approximately 50,000 people migrating into Alberta per year – has led to an increased demand for infrastructure projects. Not only are infrastructure projects needed for our increasing population; they create jobs and provide value for Alberta's taxpayers. Investing Alberta savings bonds in infrastructure projects is a step toward returning to sound economic growth and additional planning for Alberta's future. For example, Alberta's increasing population has meant more vehicles on our roads. Upgrades to our provincial highway network are necessary to allow for the efficient and safe transportation of people and goods throughout the province.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta capital bonds can be used to improve our provincial highway network and to provide value for our taxpayers. The Ministry of Infrastructure's three-year capital plan, for example, includes funding to complete two interchanges on highway 63 within Fort McMurray. The population growth that Fort McMurray and the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo have experienced over the past 10 years is staggering. Reports suggest that the population is expected to exceed 100,000 by the year 2012, which is just around the corner. Being home to one of the world's largest single deposits of oil, a commodity which is viable to the economic growth of our province, may require improvements in infrastructure to improve efficiency and keep up with the demands of an increasing population.

Although the details for the Alberta bonds are still in their early stages, I would like to highlight some of the current infrastructure projects going on and suggest that future projects like these may benefit from the funds generated by the Alberta bonds. Our government has acknowledged the significance of the oil sands to our province's economy. Funds generated through capital bonds could in the future fund the completion of projects like the completion of the two interchanges on highway 63 within Fort McMurray. Projects like these are a major step in providing roads for future Albertans to enjoy.

Mr. Speaker, another project that is identified in the Ministry of Infrastructure's three-year plan is the continued twinning of highway 63 between Edmonton and Fort McMurray. This stretch of highway has experienced increased volume due to the rapid population growth around the oil sands. There will continue to be a need for improved and new infrastructure. To deal with this need, Alberta bonds could be used to mitigate future growth.

Our government has recognized that this stretch of highway 63 is vital for the efficient transportation of goods and services to and from Fort McMurray. By twinning this stretch of highway, we are increasing efficiency and improving the safety of this very important highway. The twinning of highway 63 is consistent with the government's commitment to provide connections between major urban centres and high-growth industrial areas.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the money invested in our province through the purchase of Alberta savings bonds should be used to fund infrastructure projects such as these. This would improve the value of tax dollars provided to Albertans while improving efficiency, safety, and preparing our province for the population growth which we will experience in the coming years.

This population growth also brings the need for other public facilities such as schools. That is why this government has initiated building 14 new schools in the Edmonton and Calgary regions. Although some of these schools are being built through a public-private partnership, some will be delivered through the design-build approach, which is where the government finances the design and construction. Although these 14 schools are creating 12,700 more spaces for Alberta students, future projects that are similar to these schools, I believe, should be considered when investing the funds raised through the Alberta savings bonds. They are ensuring that our province is prepared for our population growth.

The third point of this government's economic recovery plan as outlined in The Way Forward, in fact, is to continue to invest in public infrastructure. The projects I just used as some examples of sound investments in our province's future: I wholeheartedly believe that they are the types of projects that will contribute to this province moving forward and its legacy for generations to come and making a strong recovery.

I am deeply interested in other members' discussions and continued advice from even my constituents of Edmonton-Decore and all Albertans regarding Alberta savings bonds, and I warmly welcome all the input. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: There are five minutes for questions and comments. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore mentioned in her remarks about the government's superior economic performance, and near the conclusion the hon. member provided examples of sound investments. My first question to the hon. member would be this: does the hon. member consider the $45 million that was spent in achievement bonuses in the last fiscal year another example of a sound investment at a time when everyone else is being asked to work harder for less?

Mrs. Sarich: Mr. Speaker, I'm struggling regarding the relevance of the question to this particular subject.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Just to clarify for the hon. member, in your remarks you talked about the superior economic performance of the government, you elaborated, and in conclusion you provided examples of what you thought were sound investments. Again, my question is: do you consider the $45 million that we spent in senior management achievement bonuses in the fiscal year 2008-09 an example of a sound investment? Yes or no.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to rise on a point of order, Beauchesne 459, relevance.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on a point of order.

Point of Order Relevance

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I listened carefully to what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore was talking about, and when she talked about sound financial management, I believe she was referring to $25 billion worth of savings that have accumulated during surplus times and how those particular dollars were allocated. In fact, I recall her distinctly saying that $8 billion of the $25 billion went directly into the Alberta heritage savings trust fund, which is very good, sound economic planning, which is what she was talking about. A further $17 billion was set aside into the sustainability fund, another example of good, sound, prudent planning. It is, in fact, as a result of that good, prudent planning that we now have a $17 billion daily cash account upon which we can draw should the need be here, and the need is here. That all, of course, arose several years ago when we made the conscious and conscientious decision to in fact allocate those monies for rainy days such as is the case in Alberta today. As a result, I would ask your indulgence to call the member to order on the point of relevance because I think it was relevant whereas the comments he is making are totally irrelevant. I think he is inventing purposes to suit his own claims.

Mr. MacDonald: In response, Mr. Speaker, it's clear that I was the one that was paying attention to the hon. member's speech, not the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek. Now, it was clear, and the hon. member said it on a number of occasions. She provided examples of sound investments. It had nothing to do with sound financial planning or any of the other comments that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek has provided as examples. You're totally offside here. This is not a point of order. The hon. member talked about examples of sound investments. It had nothing to do with financial planning or anything else.

I'm sorry if the hon. member was busy working at his files and not paying keen attention like I was to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore's speech. I dare him to stand up and then accuse me of not being relevant when the hon. party whip over there got up before and was completely out of order, but the House chose to just ignore that. This is frivolous, and I think we should continue with the debate in the five-minute allocation that we have left. I would again ask the hon. member, if she can, to please answer the question. Yes or no.

The Deputy Speaker: I have to rule on this thing, this point of order raised here.

First of all, this is the five minutes for comments and questions – comments, which have a large latitude. I just want to rule that there is no point of order but also want to call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar to be narrow in your questions, to the point. Thank you.

Debate Continued

The Deputy Speaker: Do you still wish to answer the question, hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore?

Mrs. Sarich: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I still maintain that I'm struggling with the relevance of the question. I do believe the deputy House leader has highlighted the points that I emphasized in the time allocated, and I have nothing further to add on this subject. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: On my list here the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to support the government's motion for this Assembly to approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities. I'm also excited to rise today to speak to this government motion because I look forward to the potential benefits that it would bring to all Albertans.

Essentially, this motion would re-establish government of Alberta savings bonds. The savings bonds would be a safe and rewarding investment for all Albertans because they would guarantee a return while giving all Albertans the opportunity to purchase them. This motion is a worthwhile cause with endless potential benefits for this province, Mr. Speaker. The funds generated from these savings bonds could be invested in many ways. For instance, one way could be in Alberta's infrastructure as this investment would be advantageous for all Albertans and future generations to come. This is an exciting possibility because Albertans would pocket their dividends while watching their investment go towards infrastructure projects that benefit the province.

There are many reasons why some of these funds should go towards maintaining and expanding the province's infrastructure. After all, investing in our infrastructure provides multiple benefits to Albertans. First, as Alberta's population continues to grow, it is more important than ever that we continue to ensure that we have the infrastructure in place that will support this province's future growth.

The government is already aware of this, which is why we have allocated nearly $7.2 billion for infrastructure projects this year as part of Alberta's 20-year capital plan. This three-year capital plan totals $23.2 billion and provides significant investment in infrastructure such as health facilities, schools, postsecondary facilities, municipal infrastructure, highways, climate change initiatives, and regional water systems. On capital projects like this this government is spending double the per capita average of other provinces, which shows our serious commitment to Alberta's future. This also means that we are taking advantage of lower construction costs and increased availability of labour. This is a value-added strategy, Mr. Speaker.

The capital plan is an example of this government's foresight and long-term planning, which help to ensure a continued high standard of living for all Albertans. For instance, Albertans will benefit from 54 new and replacement schools across the province, which will accommodate more than 31,000 students. Money will also be invested in school infrastructure revitalization projects such as repairs, health and safety upgrades, mechanical system replacements, and energy efficiency improvements.

The capital plan funding will be evenly distributed as $5.8 billion will be provided over the next three years for Alberta highways, $5.6 billion for municipalities, and $1.2 billion for postsecondary facilities. More specifically, this $1.2 billion investment in postsecondary facilities will create spaces for more than 16,000 students in high-demand programs, and it includes funding for new facilities, additions to existing to existing institutions, and approximately $328 million for infrastructure maintenance across the province.

Mr. Speaker, everyone benefits from our capital plan since nearly $1.7 billion will be used for climate change initiatives such as supporting technologies that reduce greenhouse emissions and increase efficiency of energy use and production. This includes carbon capture and storage projects as well as initiatives through programs like the green transit incentive program, the climate change and emission management fund, and the Canada ecotrust for clean air and climate change.

Furthermore, Albertans will have access to more patient-focused services through capital funding in health care, with more than $3 billion over three years for expansion projects, construction of new health facilities, health information systems, and vaccines. This funding will also relieve pressure on the acute-care system and emergency rooms by building a more robust outpatient and ambulatory care system.

Mr. Speaker, I can go on, but it is very clear that this government is committed to maintaining and building our infrastructure. With that being said, the government of Alberta savings bond could be another form of investment in ensuring that Alberta is well positioned for the future.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, public infrastructure projects help stimulate the economy – I would know that because I finished economics at the University of Alberta – which is another reason why the savings bonds have the potential to be extremely profitable for Albertans. After all, infrastructure projects create many jobs. In this way this government motion could be a vital component of the government's commitment to stimulate the economy and support employment. It is estimated that every $1 billion invested in infrastructure spending supports 11,600 jobs across the economy, from engineering and construction to the retail and service sectors. In fact, capital planned spending this year is expected to support more than 80,000 jobs, Mr. Speaker. In this way the government of Alberta savings bonds would be going towards creating more jobs as an increase in infrastructure spending equates to more employment for Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, my third and final point is that by expanding our infrastructure network, the province would be continuing to ensure open access to trade, investment, and labour mobility within Alberta, between provinces, and with other countries. Investing in our highways supports the operation of Alberta's essential energy, forestry, and agriculture industries, all of which require safe and efficient transportation routes. In addition, developing ring roads, twinning highways, building interchanges, continuing construction of trade corridors, and pavement rehabilitation all help to ensure that our cities are accessible and free flowing. This ultimately ensures that our cities are attractive places to live, work, and invest. This, I believe, is the vision of our good Premier for this province.

Mr. Speaker, this government motion could support Alberta's interprovincial trade policy, which is to pursue free trade in goods, services, and investment and access for people between Alberta and the rest of Canada. It could help make certain that Alberta's industries are globally competitive and continue to attract investment to develop our resources. Investing a share of the savings bonds in infrastructure would be an example of an innovative way of raising funds without increasing taxes. This government motion has the potential to be another way for Albertans to voluntarily invest in programs that are very important to them. It is always good to have several methods of attracting investment. This government has made a commitment not to increase taxes. Therefore, other forms of generating investments which benefit all Albertans are a worthwhile venture.

Mr. Speaker, in the end, these savings bonds could help advance Alberta's economy by increasing trade, creating jobs, and ensuring that our province is ready for future growth. The government of Alberta savings bonds would not only be an investment in Albertans' futures but could also be an investment in the future of this province. I cannot think of a better investment. For these reasons I support this government motion for this Assembly to approve in general the issuing of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm wondering if the member who just spoke might have ideas of projects in his constituency that he might want to see funded through these capital bonds.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A few days ago there was a fire hall that was opened in my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. I'm very proud to say that this government really supports the infrastructure projects and facilities that would be needed in any community to meet the needs of our constituency membership. I think this is a good example: 5,200 calls were made to the emergency response team that serves the community in meeting their immediate needs. I'm very proud to say that this is really the essence of these capital bonds that this government is thinking of approving.

Thank you very much.

4:10

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. Correct me if I'm wrong. I think fire halls in Edmonton are actually municipal infrastructures. If I am correct in that, then my question to the member would be: is it the government's intention with these capital bonds to also finance municipal infrastructure?

Mr. Benito: Well, I think the intention of this government motion is very clear, Mr. Speaker. It is to support the infrastructure projects and facilities. We should not limit ourselves to the short-mindedness of anybody in this House. It can be anything that supports the government's initiative when it comes to infrastructure projects and facilities, and it is very broad. This is the reason why, you know, we are doing this motion as a broad concept at the same time.

The Deputy Speaker: Seeing no other members, the chair shall now recognize – in fact, I have a list here. I'll just name a few: the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the Minister of Seniors and . . .

Mr. Hehr: A question.

The Deputy Speaker: Oh, you have a question. All right. Sorry.

Mr. Hehr: I just have another question for the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. I believe that during his speech he was commenting something on stimulating the economy and economics at the University of A. I was just wondering if this is sort of a means by his government to undertake essentially debt to stimulate the economy, to play a role in the economy at the time when it's down. Was that what you were saying there?

Mr. Benito: Well, you know, I've been in business for more than 20 years. I'm involved in real estate development, selling of real estate, commercial, residential. I know; you know, I've seen it first-hand. Any development that any government will do in support of any infrastructure always will stimulate the economy. I could confirm that because of my experience, having an economics background, also, from the University of Alberta. I firmly believe that this government motion will really stimulate the economy, no doubt about that. Personally, for myself, I feel very strongly on this, and I'm a firm believer in this government motion.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I guess the follow-up question: would you consider yourself a Keynesian, then? You've taken these courses in the economy. Would you believe that governments do have a role to play, then, in economies when things are in the muck, shall we say, like they are now and through the issuance of bonds? That's what you're doing.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, if you wish to reply. [interjections]

Hon. members, if there are questions or comments, address them to the chair. Thank you.

I have a list here. I just want to read it out so that you gentlemen and ladies can be prepared: the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne, followed by the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, the hon. members for Edmonton-Castle Downs, Edmonton-Ellerslie, Strathmore-Brooks, and the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Now the hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's great to get into this debate. I guess that when this topic came up, I probably had more questions than answers. I think a lot of the time I'll spend today is putting out some ideas that a lot of constituents have asked me when they're hearing about these bond issues. Probably before my time, that I can recall anyways, Alberta capital bonds were used. Maybe some of the members opposite that have been around longer than I have could refresh my memory about what capital bonds were used for, but I think maybe the sky is the limit on this issue.

Maybe offering a bond right now could give a lot of people the surety that Albertans can invest in Alberta. You know, why should we always have to buy a Montreal bond or an Ontario bond or a Suncor bond? Why couldn't we buy an Alberta bond? Especially, I look back at the senior population and my constituents. You know, in the '80s, when the economy went bad, I remember my wife coming home and saying: "What are we going to do? Our mortgage rate is going to go up to 20 per cent." I also remember that Sunday at my parents' house and my parents thinking: "Wow. Isn't this great? Twenty per cent." For the senior income it was pretty good, but for those of us that didn't have any money, not so good.

Well, the reverse has happened this time in the economy. Maybe this instrument could give our seniors that are getting a fraction of a point in their savings accounts in interest some surety for future income, but maybe it will also give them an opportunity to invest in the future for their children and their grandchildren and for generations forward. I know that our senior population has been there for us, and this will also give them another instrument to be there for Albertans.

I say that there's a Canadian savings bond instrument right now, so again, why not an Alberta savings bond? I know that my parents were very involved with buying Canadian savings bonds. They were proud to do that. They were proud to be Canadians, and they were proud to be Albertans. I think this will again inspire that proud-to-be-an-Albertan, proud-to-be-a-Canadian atmosphere. I think I'm feeling pretty good about this idea of a bond.

We heard some of the previous speakers talk about a preference for Albertans. Well, I know you have to be competitive out there in the market when you're issuing a bond, but maybe there is an instrument that our finance minister could consider when Albertans are purchasing an Alberta bond. Maybe we wouldn't have to pay Alberta income tax on the money generated by an Alberta bond. Why not? Why not have the preference that way, Mr. Speaker? I think the sky is the limit on this issue.

You know, the member opposite talked about municipalities: should they be part of this? Well, maybe they should be. In Whitecourt-St. Anne we have a foundation that's made up of all the municipalities, and they pool their resources for seniors' facilities. You know, right now when they want to build a seniors' facility, well, they get in line for the grants that, hopefully, they can access from different levels of government, but then they go to the regular institutions for lending. Well, maybe they should be able to line up at Alberta financial services somehow, maybe through a bond, maybe through the same instruments as municipalities can borrow from through their sources for an arena or a water pond or a sewage lagoon. Maybe foundations should be able to line up for this funding if this bond idea is successful.

Again, previous speakers talked about preference for Albertans. Well, I see this as larger than Albertans investing in infrastructure, in multiple levels of capital expenditures. I'm thinking that this should be an RRSP-deductible issue. We'll have to get the federal government involved if it's going to be RRSP. We'll need to have some discussions with our federal counterparts because what better instrument to invest into than a bond that's backed by a government with the credit rating that we have? Why not use that? That's an asset. I think it's an underused asset. Why not get out there and promote that asset? Yeah, I think the minister should have a meeting with her federal counterparts and talk about an RRSP. [interjections] You know, I can't hear. I'll put my earpiece in. Afterwards you can question me all you want, but I can't hear this stuff. If there are smart aleck remarks coming about my hearing, it had better come to you, not through the background here because I can't hear that stuff, okay?

Mr. Speaker, I think these bonds are worthy of investigating. I think these bonds are worthy of investing in. The sky is the limit. I think we should not restrict ourselves from discussing anything in this Legislature about this idea. I think it's good for Albertans. It's good for Canadians. Yes, I think we should have some kind of preference, but maybe that could be built into a tax instrument. Yes, I think they should be RRSP eligible.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We'll have five minutes for comments and questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, let me reassure the Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne that there is much too much respect for him in this Assembly for any smart aleck comments to be made. I don't want to speak for my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo, but he was simply making the point that as bonds these almost certainly already qualify for RRSP eligibility. That's what he was just trying to tell you, so we probably don't need to consult the federal government.

My comment or observation to the Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne is simply that I'm left almost with my head spinning here with his enthusiasm for this. A bond? This is debt we're talking about. Let's not kid ourselves. We're doing something here that's going to take this government into debt. When I hear the enthusiasm from an apparently fiscal conservative group for debt and hear them talking about the sky is the limit and so on, I'm startled, and I'm worried.

We worked hard, suffered a lot, and I think made some very serious blunders in getting out of debt, and to now hear this caucus wax enthusiastically about going into debt, apparently without limit – at least, that's the kind of comment I'm beginning to pick up – really concerns me. It concerns me as a legislator and as a citizen, somebody who seeks balance from its government. The lurching about here on fiscal policy from this government is nothing short of frightening.

I would just urge all members to understand what we're talking about here. We're talking about big-time debt. Now, maybe it's justified, but let's know clear-eyed exactly what's going on here. We're talking debt. So if we want to get into debt, let's think carefully here. It may well be that to build a new hospital or to build a seniors' centre or something, debt is okay. But I just want everybody to be really clear here. Your motion is about taking this province deeper and deeper and deeper into debt.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, Mr. Speaker, very good points by the opposition member. When I talk about the sky is the limit, the sky is the limit in the discussion that we should have. I appreciate your comments.

I remember when Liz and I got our first mortgage for our house. We didn't go into that debt very lightly, but we also knew that there was an opportunity for an investment so we could raise our family, and we could have a piece of real estate that we could call ours. Yeah, we called it ours and the bank's for a while. There's no doubt about that. But when we considered where we were going to borrow the money from, you know, one of the first issues in our minds was: "Well, we're going to borrow the money from a local bank, somewhere you can get some advice from, and we're going to borrow the money from maybe" – at the time the Alberta Treasury Branches was the instrument that we felt best to use.

If this government decides that we need to borrow money in the future, why would we want to go to a New York bank? Why would we want to go offshore? I'm saying: let's get it here. That's my point, opposition. I'm saying that we should not restrict ourselves to the discussion. Your discussion is valid, and there are good points that you've made. But I'm saying that if we're going to borrow, let's borrow here.

Plus, member opposite, I want to know what we're borrowing for, too. You know, I'd like a list that says: "Okay. This is why we're borrowing." I'll give you an example of the Whitecourt Hilltop school, that I graduated from, that my sons graduated from. About two years ago it went out for public tender to do a major retrofit and teardown of some of the 40-year-old wings in the school. Twenty-four million dollars was the lowest bidder. Plus, we had to encourage a second bidder to come along. It came out six months ago: $13 million. What a time to invest. What a time. What an opportunity. Why – why? – constrict ourselves to this discussion?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to add my thoughts to those of my colleagues regarding this motion that would see the creation of Alberta capital bonds. These bonds would be a good investment opportunity for Albertans. They would also provide Albertans with another way to participate in building and strengthening our province.

I'm especially hopeful that funds raised through these bonds could help further support Alberta seniors and persons with disabilities. I'm excited about Alberta capital bonds for another reason as well, Mr. Speaker. I'm excited because Alberta capital bonds speak to me of the future. They speak of the future of this province and the future of our children and our grandchildren. I'm excited because they allow average Albertans to participate, young and old, rich or not so rich. Young parents who have a hundred dollars or $200 can buy bonds to invest in the future postsecondary education of their children. There are many grandparents that I know who have grandchildren who own every toy and technological gadget available. What a wonderful way this is for grandparents to give gifts to their grandchildren, a gift that keeps on giving. When the children cash in these bonds when it comes time for their postsecondary education, they will remember how much they were loved or are loved by their grandparents. [interjections]

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to commend this government for reintroducing the idea of government bonds. I notice my colleagues across the way are having a little bit of a chuckle, but I have to tell you that if I had the opportunity to invest in these bonds, I'd probably stand in line to be able to purchase a bond for a child's birthday or a child's Christmas present because, unfortunately, my grandchildren have too many toys.

As the others have mentioned, the Alberta government has had success with bonds in the past, including the capital bond campaigns in the late '80s and early '90s. The capital bond program being proposed today would greatly assist Alberta in moving forward during this difficult economic time.

I agree with others who have said that the bonds should be available only in Alberta and only for Albertans. I believe such a bond program can help foster a greater sense of Alberta pride and a real connection among Albertans with projects funded through their investments. By purchasing these bonds, Albertans would be guaranteed a competitive rate of return while giving them the opportunity to invest in a real and hands-on way in the future of their province.

Issuing capital bonds will also complement our government's four-point plan for economic recovery. For those who may need a refresher, that plan calls for reduced spending, the use of cash reserves such as the $17 billion sustainability fund to cover revenue shortfall and protect key programs, ensuring Alberta's energy sector and other industries are globally competitive and continue to attract investment, and continuing to invest in public infrastructure.

It was no surprise that investing in public infrastructure was the main focus of this year's provincial budget. That's because investing in public infrastructure is a key way to stimulate economic activity during a recession, and I believe that capital bonds can play a significant role in supporting these efforts.

Mr. Speaker, it's a personal priority for me and a priority for this government that seniors have access to the right kinds of facilities to allow them to maintain their independence and to maintain essential connections to family and friends. The majority of seniors reside in their own homes. Some require home care supports and help from neighbours and family members. However, for those seniors who require additional personal and health care needs, there are facilities available for them, and our commitment remains to increase the quality, supply, and choice of continuing care.

In support of this priority our government committed more than $190 million in capital funding in March of this year to help build and modernize more than 3,000 affordable supportive living spaces and lodge units across Alberta. In addition, since 1999 the Alberta government has invested $246 million in capital funding toward developing or upgrading about 4,800 supportive living housing units. As announced in Budget '09-10, our commitment is reinforced through the allocation of additional capital funding to support the development of additional spaces. In light of these and other investments I believe this government has made significant strides forward in supporting the needs of Alberta's seniors.

But my colleagues and I in government recognize that more can be done. As it says in our government's economic recovery plan, The Way Forward, while "the foundations of our publicly-funded system are good . . . there are things we must improve or the system will not meet the needs of a growing and aging population." I wholeheartedly agree with this statement, and capital bonds can help. Funds raised through capital bonds can further support our priority of ensuring that seniors are aging in the right place using our continuing care strategy.

The benefits of this strategy are evident in communities across Alberta. In Red Deer, where I live, I can point to several examples where lives have improved and the community as a whole has improved as well from investments under the continuing care strategy. We have two major projects in Red Deer. We have Michener village, which has 220 long-term care beds. It will be completed in the spring of 2010 thanks to some support from this government. We'll have assisted living, we'll have independent living, and we'll just have regular living in what we call the community of care. Now, Bethany CollegeSide, which is also long-term care, will also have assisted living and will be a community of care.

Now, why is a community of care important to me? I'll tell you why. I experienced first-hand the sadness and almost the tragedy of a couple, an older couple, my grandparents, married over 65 years, being separated because one had to go into long-term care and the other couldn't be close to him. Knowing what that can do to that couple, my grandparents, and knowing what it can do to every other couple that has been together for a long period of time, to have a community of care where they can live in different levels of care but be close together is very important to me, so that's why I talk about a community of care and why it's important.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, Alberta's aging population is a key priority for this government. Every month Alberta has a thousand new seniors. The current number of seniors in this wonderful province is 386,000. This government remains committed to Alberta's seniors, and the focus on increasing the supply and choice of continuing care spaces is reflective of that. As such, I believe that a portion of the funds through Alberta capital bonds could go toward developing and modernizing facilities for seniors.

I know Albertans are concerned about the help provided to seniors. They tell me so. I believe those same Albertans would be eager to support the government with these projects through a capital bond program, and I know Albertans would be proud to say that they helped support seniors and people with disabilities in the community. They would be proud to say that they helped build their province, and they would be proud to say that they helped their children or their grandchildren.

Whether this includes a facility for seniors or a roadway for them to travel on to visit their grandchildren or a school, a university that trains doctors, it doesn't matter. They'll be proud to be part of that because at the end of the day that's what this bond program should be all about, Albertans investing their money to support a meaningful and real, tangible difference in their province and their communities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for questions and comments to the minister.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. I believe I heard somewhere in that speech – it was very eloquent and spoke of future generations and all that stuff – that you enjoyed this type of capital project and capital spending to stimulate the economy at this time. Are you, then, embracing that governments have a role to play in economies and in stimulating in times of economic downturn?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would agree with that. I think that it's very important to stimulate an economy in times of recession. It's not the time to stop spending. One of the things that's very important is to keep people working.

The interesting thing is that even in this time of economic recession we're still building the population of Alberta in more ways than one. We have lots of babies being born. We heard the Premier say that we have – I don't know – how many hundreds of babies being born every week in Alberta. We have people still coming to Alberta. So we still need to build infrastructure. What better time can there be than now, when prices are lower because bids are lower, because people need the work and want the work, compared to a boom time, when everybody is so busy that the prices are so high, they're unaffordable? This is the time to be building infrastructure. I can't think of a better way to build infrastructure than by having Albertans help you do that.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: I'm done.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just a brief question to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. She was talking in a very impassioned speech about the many good things that capital bonds are going to do for this province. But I'm wondering if she has at all considered the fact that this is going to be income, then, earned to parties in Alberta and therefore subject to Alberta taxation, and perhaps then we will gain some money back from any of the interest paid on these bonds. I wonder how she feels about that.

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I said that this was the gift that kept on giving. Obviously, that's part of the giving. It comes back to us in more ways than one. Although I hadn't exactly considered that, it's an excellent point. It just helps to prove my point that Alberta capital bonds are a gift that keeps on giving.

The Deputy Speaker: Seeing no others who wish to question or comment, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to participate in the debate on Motion 16. We've heard, certainly, some very interesting perspectives this afternoon in the course of the debate. I'm going to take the opportunity to comment on a few of those and then submit some of my own thoughts.

I guess to begin with I'd like to go back to the speech of the President of the Treasury Board, when he characterized what he hoped this debate would be. I believe the term he used was the art of the possible. For my part, Mr. Speaker, that's really what I'm hoping this debate will be about, a debate about Alberta's future. There probably isn't a whole lot of point in talking about the mechanics of how bonds would work unless we have a clear vision of the type of province we want to build in the future and what strategic role Alberta capital bonds might play in helping us get there. The President of the Treasury Board also talked about opportunities for youth, providing security for seniors, and I also think that's a similar invitation for us to maybe talk about this on a bit of a higher level.

For myself I guess just a few things in terms of the financial position of the province and why we might want to consider capital bonds as part of our economic policy. To be blunt, it goes back to the question of why we paid off the debt in the first place, Mr. Speaker. We have a budget in the order of $36 billion in this province. The projected assets for the end of this year are in the range of $35 billion. As for my thoughts, while I certainly don't subscribe to the idea of using bonds to cover operating deficit costs, I don't know very many successful business entities or other governments in the world that don't use the strength of their own balance sheet to fund their own future growth.

So I think we need to be cautious when talking with Albertans about the intent of the bonds – they're capital in nature – and we need to give them the freedom to believe that the strength of the balance sheet that they have built over successive generations and which we now have the privilege of stewarding as government is really an opportunity for us to invest in that growth and to provide for our collective vision of the future. I guess that's where I start in terms of why we need to be considering capital bonds. There isn't much point, Mr. Speaker, frankly, in the sacrifices that Albertans have made in the past if they don't have the opportunity to put those assets to work not only for the benefit of themselves but of future generations.

I raised the question a bit earlier about, you know: why did we pay off the debt, what is our vision of the future, and what strategic role do bonds play in that? I guess for me, and as the Premier often discusses, it really has to do with the question of our eventual transition from a largely resource-based economy to what we hope will be a knowledge-based economy and perhaps a day when the revenue and investment that is generated from intellectual property and the development of knowledge capital, the commercialization of that capital, exceeds the revenue that's available to us through natural resources, which I think we'd all acknowledge are very, very important to us but also very volatile by their very nature.

I'm hoping that through the course of the debate we'll hear a bit of a discussion about how we move to a knowledge-based economy, what sort of infrastructure is required in order to get there, what level of integration is required between our postsecondary institutions and our business community, the education system in Alberta and what role that plays, and also our opportunities internationally and how we might position ourselves to market intellectual property to a much greater extent and perhaps aspire to be a global leader in that field. That's certainly one of the reasons that I chose to run for public office, and members around all sides of the House have talked about this in the past. Why don't we put on the table some specifics about how we might use capital bonds to help us get there?

There were a few other points raised that I'd like to respond to. The Minister of Seniors and Community Supports talked extensively about what I'll call social infrastructure. The opportunity to use funds raised through the sale of capital bonds to invest in seniors' facilities was one example.

We have an equally big challenge when it comes to health care in this province, Mr. Speaker. I'd ask the House to look at two factors. The first is the level of per capita spending in Canada on health care – we're about third in the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development – and then the performance of our health care system internationally, which is at best middle of the pack in the last few benchmarking reports that I've looked at. It suggests to us that we're probably not getting the best bang for the buck from the money that we're spending on health care in the country. That's measured in terms of health outcomes, health system performance, and the overall health status of the population. I think we need to look at the opportunity that capital bonds could play in strengthening health infrastructure.

I guess the second is a fact that's often referred to in this House, and that's the percentage of health care spending that goes to labour costs, to funding for the salaries and benefits of health care professionals that deliver services. That figure, while it's come down in the last few years from about 80 per cent of total spending, now stands in the range of 75 per cent. What that means, Mr. Speaker, is that every dollar that we choose to spend from government on health infrastructure – on capital costs for hospitals, for clinics, for other facilities – is a dollar that's not available to us to deliver a greater level of health services that meet the needs of Albertans. I think capital bonds can play a tremendous role in building that health infrastructure.

The minister may or may not have referred to this – I'm sorry; I can't remember exactly – but my research shows that in addition to the $119 million in provincial capital funding that was announced in March to modernize more than 3,000 affordable living spaces, if you look at all of the spending before that, add it up, the result is that this province has invested $246 million in capital funding in the last 10 years to support the development or modernization of about 4,800 supportive living housing units.

I don't offer that statistic, Mr. Speaker, solely as a way to point out the government's recognition of need and their willingness to invest. I point out and I ask the House to consider the proposition that that $246 million in capital funding also represents funding that wasn't available to us to provide home care or other direct services to seniors and others living with disabilities, although I think we all agree that our hope for them is that they can live as independently as possible in the community. There are certainly some opportunities there to build some infrastructure through capital bonds that will allow us to put more into these sorts of direct services in the future. We're certainly going to need to do that in view of the demographic shift, the aging population, and so on. We've talked about that at length in this House in the past. So I'd offer those thoughts as reasons why we should be considering this proposition.

In terms of the specific offering, hon. members of the House have offered a number of thoughts about how the bond issue might be structured. I thought the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo made a good point when he talked about the possibility of offering the bonds in set limits. We might want to look at a particular series of bonds to suit specific purposes, and maybe we proceed in stages. That's perhaps something we should consider.

I also think that we need to look at the financial opportunity that we're offering Albertans in terms of not just investing in their own province. I'd be the first to agree that that's very, very important. But if we look at the contributions by Albertans through taxes to federal coffers minus what we receive back in services, I think most of us are aware that the net amount, the net contribution of Albertans to the rest of the country is about $18 billion per year. That's a very substantial sum, Mr. Speaker. I think there are many Albertans, myself and my own constituents included, who, if they had an opportunity to target more of that money to Alberta, to Alberta projects, to Alberta's future, would readily choose to leave that money in this province and to make it available to pass on to future generations. I think that's a valid point as well.

I think I'm going to conclude there, Mr. Speaker. Again, I'd just like to reiterate my initial point. I think this should be a debate about the future of this province. I think that as elected members we should all have a clear vision for the province's future. It should be based on our own experience, of course, and our own thoughts, but more importantly we should be able to reflect well the views of our constituents.

I know that, for my part, in the constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford I'll be consulting extensively on this question with my own constituents. It's going to take a bit of work to explain the debt/deficit difference, but the more we reiterate in this House that we're talking about capital funds that are available for investment, that it's debt that's prudently undertaken, that it's with due regard to the balance sheet, the strongest balance sheet in any jurisdiction in North America for a government, I think we can have that discussion with them. But if we engage in discussions about fear, about entering a slippery slope and Albertans being back where they were in 1993, I think we do them a disservice. They have the opportunity and the privilege and certainly the right, Mr. Speaker, to chart a course for the future of this province and to expect that all of us as members of this House can contribute positively to developing strategies to achieve that vision.

With that, I'll conclude. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, you talked about health care costs in your speech, and you indicated that labour costs are 75 per cent of the total health care bill. Does that 75 per cent include all of the individuals, including contractors, working at Alberta Health and Wellness, the individuals that work at Alberta Health Services, and also the people who would be contracted out, whether it's for other services provided to the regional health authority like long-term care? Where exactly do you get that number of 75 per cent for labour costs in the health budget?

Thank you.

4:50

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member for that question. The figure I quoted is a national average. I got that figure from the Conference Board of Canada. In terms of how the specifics of the health care budget in Alberta break down compared to that percentage, I wouldn't have the answer to that question.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay. Thank you.
May I ask one more, Mr. Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: Unless there's other indication.
The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffer.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford for really putting some thought and actual ideas into it, not merely platitudes and saying that this is the greatest thing since sliced bread, that Alberta is going back into debt again after a wholesale reversal of what this government told us for the last 15 years. It's really nice to see some actual thought put into what he would like to see out of a capital bond project. He's right on one thing, that this government hasn't been successful in 40 years of trying to diversify our economy. That is painfully evident right now as the money tree in the backyard, the oil and gas industry, isn't producing, and we're broke. A bit of a recognition of that in your speech in that we've got to look to developing our knowledge-based economy, possibly our wind, our environment. How do you see sort of your bond project, if you were talking about that, this capital bond project, being able to do those things? I'd like to hear your ideas on that.

Mr. Horne: I'll thank the hon. member for what he said, but I'm not sure whether he's offering a comment or a question.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, there is no question that the strength of the balance sheet of Alberta today is directly due to over 30 years of very solid financial stewardship by this government. We can have all the debates we want about spending on a year-to-year basis, and people will have various opinions across the House, but the fact that we have the balance sheet we do, that it is the strongest of any government in North America, is not a credit to the individual members of this House. It's a credit to successive generations of Albertans that worked to make that possible. I don't think we can state that often enough. With due respect to the hon. member, I guess my comment in reply would be that it's not about us; it's about Albertans. That's really what the nature of this discussion should be.

In terms of the question around how the funds raised through the bonds might play into planning in the future, the way I look at the 20-year capital plan, for example, is that it's a portfolio of projects. So rather than looking at individual projects, we look at an entire investment portfolio that is closely linked to a strategic plan for our province going into the future. I'm really talking here about 20, 30, 50 years down the road, the next generation. I see the bond issue as a way to provide a regular system of cash flow to fund that portfolio, not without the opportunity for us to discuss and debate changes that might be made as we proceed through time and as priorities change. But I really see it as a stable flow of cash for a long-term capital plan rather than a way to fund individual projects. Hopefully, we'll hear some other ideas on that as well.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: You have only three seconds.

Mr. MacDonald: Oh, dear.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to take part in this debate. Not often do we have an opportunity in this Chamber to discuss something that actually has the opportunity to inspire not only us in this room but all of Alberta. [interjection] The member across is making a snide remark about the term "inspire." But maybe he's right. You know, there's something about this Chamber that somehow precludes us from talking about things that actually inspire, precludes us from talking about things that could be. Instead, we often talk about things that can't be. It often requires of us, and particularly members of the opposition, to find the negative underlyings in no matter what it is that we do.

Well, there is one motion on the floor right now, that actually is not binding us. It's a motion, Mr. Speaker. It is not very technical in nature. It doesn't ask us to define the mechanisms of how these bonds would operate and what the percentage of lending would be and whether they will be offered in bulk or not and whether they will be offered only in Alberta or not. This motion only asks of us to blue sky about what can be done if such a bond was in place. Would it be the proper thing for government even to consider such a bond in the first place? It's unfortunate that the use of the word "inspired" is laughed upon in this particular Chamber. Perhaps it is the architecture of this Chamber that is not conducive to being inspired.

Mr. Speaker, these bonds would be for capital investment and capital investment only. It is very important to delineate that because if any member was to rise in this Chamber and say, "We have a shortage in operating dollars for running our programs or paying salaries and hence we should consider bonds," I would be the first one to rise in opposition to that because all we would be doing is incurring operating deficits which then lead to debts, and there is no end to that cycle. But this is for infrastructure debt, infrastructure that will employ people not only while it's being built but once it's built. Whether it's schools or nursing homes or whatever institutions they are, they will in turn end up employing Albertans who will be paying taxes and who will be serving the ever-growing Alberta population.

Also, I agree with the member of the opposition that it is an opportunity to diversify Alberta's economy. He refers to it as the money tree. Well, I'm not sure if money tree is a proper analogy, but if it is to be used, let's not forget who planted that tree in that backyard in the first place. Mr. Speaker, oil sands are available in provinces to the east and provinces to the west, and they haven't been explored. They had an opportunity to plant that tree. They didn't. It was this government that planted that tree. That's why we have the revenues from it. So I'm not sure if it is a good analogy, but if you want to use it, I might as well make a comment about it.

Another thing is that the opposition often talks about ethical investment. I agree with them that if money is to be invested by government or by individuals, it is important to know what it is that you're investing into. Coincidence would have it that tomorrow, actually, I will be going to a bank, buying a registered education savings account. Probably a chart will be put in front of me of various investment portfolios, but frankly, to be honest, Mr. Speaker,

I won't have an idea what it is that I'm investing my money into. It could be an operation in Europe or in Asia. It could be an investment house in New York. The fact is that I will be making my decision based on the risk factor and the rate of interest that will be given to me as a dividend, and that's how most Albertans invest right now in various vehicles that are available to them through banks.

Now, that would be an option. You know, as an Albertan I think I would feel much more comfortable knowing that my money is backing the operation and construction of facilities that are utilized by Albertans in my province, in my Alberta, that somehow my dollars, which I would have invested anyhow in a different investment vehicle, are building this province, that one day I can say: you know, I contributed to building, perhaps, this building or building this chain of buildings or supporting seniors or education or whatever it is. If I am going to invest these dollars anyhow – and I will – I might as well know where these dollars are going.

I know that some were laughing when the minister of seniors was talking about the sentimental aspect of it, but there is nothing wrong with being patriotic. There is nothing wrong with supporting your own province. We are doing that anyhow. Many of us volunteer in our own province. Many of us give endless donations to various charities and societies. Why not use our investment portfolio and see it as another way of donating and investing in our own province? I don't think there is anything wrong with that. I think it's actually the right thing to do. You invest at home first, before you send your money abroad.

I don't think there is anything ideologically wrong with using your equity, which this government has built up. As was properly pointed out by the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, our balance sheet is impeccable. We have a triple-A rating on international markets. We have some $75 billion worth of liquid equity between all the endowment funds and all of our accounts. Why not use that to the benefit of Albertans? After all, why did our forefathers work so hard and save all that money and put us in the position that we're in right now? Why not leverage our ability to borrow and borrow from Albertans to build infrastructure for Albertans?

I would encourage members of this House to start focusing on the possibilities because I think that the possibilities really are endless, not endless in how much money we borrow but endless in how we utilize this new way of generating dollars and improving and investing in Alberta. I would encourage all members to blue sky a little about it because that's why we've been elected by our constituents, to be here and come up with solutions, come up with solutions to real problems.

There are simple solutions that many governments are doing. You know, you can just go out there and deficit spend. The outcome would be the same; you would still end up building a hospital or a school. But would it be the wisest way of doing it? Would it allow Albertans to participate in it? This allows Albertans to participate.

Mr. Speaker, I am very encouraged by this motion. I wish we had more motions like this on the floor that simply allow us to explore the possibilities. Let the bureaucracy of the minister of finance figure out the fine details and bring them back to us in the form of a bill of what this bond would look like. But at this point I think we should be discussing it. I encourage all Albertans out there to think about it and give us MLAs feedback on it: how they feel about it, what they see the future of such a bond would be, and how they see such a bond being constructed.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Five minutes for questions and answers. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. I have a question for the hon. member. Given that the Fiscal Responsibility Act was amended, allowing assets of the capital account, which the hon. member talked about, the balance sheet – these monies from the capital account in the case of 2009-10, the current fiscal year, were transferred from the stability fund. Now, has the hon. member given any consideration to the fact that if we're raising these bonds to be used for capital, could that money be transferred into the stability fund and used to fund operating deficits? Have you given that any consideration or thought?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, the reason we have this motion on the floor is to have that discussion. If you're suggesting that that would be the right thing to do, I will gladly take that as your input, that you're suggesting that money be transferred from one to the other and cover the operating expenses of the Alberta government. I personally suggest that that is not the right thing to do. In my opinion, if such bonds were to be issued, I would want them to be well defined because I want to have the ability to tell my constituents that these dollars will be enveloped, or dedicated, to infrastructure spending only. But your suggestion could be as good as mine. The fact is that I'm glad that you're engaging in this discussion because that's what it's really all about.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Clearly, the hon. member doesn't understand the amendment that came through this House in the spring which amended the Fiscal Responsibility Act. Assets of the capital account were transferred into the stability fund for this financial year. Okay? I can understand why the hon. member would be cautious, but can you guarantee that with this motion we will not be raising money through this issuance of capital bonds and have that amendment to the Fiscal Responsibility Act allow the government to quietly transfer all or a portion of this money on the balance sheet from the capital plan through to the sustainability fund and then withdraw it for operating funds? I'm not for that. I never did say that. What I want to know from the hon. member is: are you concerned that as a result of the amendment to that act possibly this could happen?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, see, that's exactly why I spent the first three minutes of my speech talking about the atmosphere of this Chamber. This member, it appears, has spent some time, obviously, trying to figure out a conspiracy theory: how this could go wrong and how money could possibly be siphoned from one account to another to somehow not tell constituents, Albertans, that money is being misdirected and misspent. But he hasn't taken the time to read the wording of the motion, which is actually one sentence long. The motion simply encourages the government to explore the possibility of having a bond. It doesn't tell you what the bond will look like. It doesn't limit this discussion at all. We haven't even conceptualized what this bond would be, and he already has a conspiracy theory on how the money will be misspent.

Mr. Speaker, the next motion should be that we somehow restructure this Chamber because, obviously, there are either air circulation problems or maybe the architecture is not conducive to talking about things that are inspirational because they seem to focus on conspiracy theories on subject matters that haven't even been developed yet. Imagine what theories they must have on things that are actually currently in place.

The Deputy Speaker: The next speaker would be the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise today and speak to this government motion and its benefits to education in Alberta. As we're all well aware, the world is facing a period of economic uncertainty, and Alberta is not immune to its effects. As we work our way through this recession, we must not abandon our long-term goals for Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, continuing to plan for the future while laying the foundation for a strong economic recovery is this government's highest priority as we move forward. To this end Alberta capital bonds could support capital infrastructure projects that will help our province remain competitive in the global market. We have an opportunity here to take advantage of historically low interest rates and continue our commitment to investing in Alberta's future.

Included in this vision is a continued commitment to education in our province. Education lies at the heart of Alberta's future prosperity, and it is imperative that the money generated from the sale of Alberta capital bonds be used in part to ensure that our education system remains one of the best in Canada. Alberta is proud to have one of the most skilled and educated populations in North America. For example, 60 per cent of Albertans 25 years of age and older hold a postsecondary degree, diploma, or certificate. Initiatives and programs to encourage this kind of lifelong learning are integral to a dynamic and competitive economy.

While we're fortunate that Alberta is rich in natural resources, knowledge is increasingly becoming Alberta's new renewable resource. Our outstanding education is at the centre of this change, and Alberta students are the future of this new knowledge-based economy. This is why, Mr. Speaker, continued investment in education is a key component of our economic recovery plan. With the money generated from these bonds, I encourage the government to further support the many innovative education initiatives currently under way.

For example, the Alberta schools alternative procurement initiative, known as ASAP, plans to deliver 14 new schools, which will result in the creation of more than 12,000 student spaces by 2013. Among these schools will be 10 elementary and middle schools and four high schools. In addition, the construction of these new schools will provide Albertans with additional jobs. By using the revenue generated from the sale of Alberta capital bonds to build future schools, we will be giving Albertans the opportunity to invest directly in the province's future. It is the people of this great province that will be creating jobs, building communities, and strengthening our economy. Also, we must take advantage of low building and material costs so that we can get the most for each and every dollar we spend. By making these investments now, we're setting the stage and preparing ourselves for when economic growth returns to our province.

Another important education initiative is Setting the Direction for Special Education in Alberta. As many of you know, I have spent the last year and a half as the chair of the steering committee on the Setting the Direction project.

Mr. MacDonald: I didn't know.

Mr. Bhardwaj: You do now.

Mr. Speaker, the Setting the Direction steering committee presented our recommendations to the minister in June of 2009. He recommended that a new special education framework be created in order to continue Alberta's proud history of meeting the educational needs of students with disabilities and diverse needs. Protecting Alberta's most vulnerable, including children with special needs, must remain one of our government's top priorities. Programs such as those that help students with special needs must be sheltered in times of decreased prosperity. Albertans need to know that this government is committed to meeting their families' needs and the needs of those who are less fortunate.

Alberta Education has also initiated a unique discussion about the future of education in this province. The Inspiring Education initiative is based on five key values – opportunity, fairness, citizenship, choice, and diversity – and involves parents, teachers, and other education stakeholders. By engaging in this kind of productive discussion, we will continue to provide a secure and bright future for our children.

Another of Alberta Education's innovative programs is Alberta's high school completion framework. This initiative recognizes that Alberta's future prosperity rests on our ability to generate a well-educated workforce that is responsive to change. Unfortunately, not all of Alberta students are able to complete the requirements for a high school diploma. Alberta's high school completion framework reflects one of our education system's key priorities, which is to ensure that all of our students are successful both in school and in life. The framework includes a strategy to address some of the obstacles and challenges that students face in finishing high school. By giving our future leaders every opportunity to succeed, Alberta's high school completion framework helps to strengthen our economy today and for years to come.

Mr. Speaker, all of these initiatives aim to improve the quality of our children's education and contribute to Alberta's future. After all, a quality education system not only inspires a passion for knowledge and lifelong learning but contributes to the overall vibrancy and strength of our economy and our community. One of this government's priorities in the past has been to ensure strong communities throughout the province. It is through the support and education of our youth that we're able to build the foundation that is needed for a strong community.

By using Alberta capital bonds, we will be making an important investment in Alberta's future, and we must make sure that these programs continue to receive the support they need. This is the kind of investment that will see us emerge from these uncertain times stronger and more vibrant than ever. Education is a pillar of any strong and prosperous community, and I'm proud of the accomplishments of Alberta's world-class education system. In turn, what is required to maintain the world-class quality of this system is continuous support and investment. Offering Alberta capital bonds will enable this government to strengthen its commitment to quality education in Alberta. To this end, these bonds should be available primarily to Albertans as they have a vested interest in the future of this province.

This is, however, a chance for our government to promote Alberta as a great place to invest on both the local and global stage. As such, all those who would like an opportunity to invest in Alberta's future should be able to purchase Alberta capital bonds. By offering Alberta capital bonds on the global market, we can ensure that the Alberta economy remains competitive. We can also attract the key foreign direct investment that is required to strengthen our economy and promote Alberta on the world stage. In addition, the bonds should be readily available at all major financial institutions in order to make it as easy as possible for people to invest in Alberta's future.

Alberta capital bonds make sense in both the short and long term, and I wholeheartedly support this motion. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you for the opportunity to speak to this government motion, which promotes strong community foundations in the face of this recession and will work to strengthen the quality of education in Alberta. I would also like to applaud the government for its strong leadership in these difficult economic times.

With that, I would ask all members to join me and stand in support of Government Motion 16. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall now call on the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm also pleased to join in the discussion this afternoon on this important government motion. Government Motion 16 proposes the general approval of the government of Alberta issuing capital bonds in support of public infrastructure projects and facilities. I think this is a good idea and certainly a very interesting opportunity for Albertans. I also appreciate the opportunity to engage in the exchange of ideas with regard to what might work with regard to the issue of capital bonds.

I find it interesting that the Minister of Finance and Enterprise referred earlier this afternoon to the fact that Alberta hasn't issued bonds since about 1997, which is more than 12 years. I think that the whole matter of this being an idea that needs further development is where the opportunity lies. In terms of the detail of how capital bonds might work, I think there's a wide range of opportunity that obviously is available to us with regard to this, and I look forward to further detail coming forward from the Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Certainly, I think the opportunity for families, for parents, for grandparents to invest in an instrument that is within the province of Alberta provides an interesting concept for investing in the future educational needs of their children and grandchildren. I think that there's a whole range of opportunities that can be developed as a result of this.

It's not really my intention to spend a lot of time with regard to what exactly the bonds should look like, but certainly from the perspective of being responsible with regard to these types of instruments, I think the fact that they are secure should be reflected in the rate of interest and the return that they bear so that this becomes something that works not only for people who are investing in them but is also a useful instrument for the province of Alberta. I find it interesting that a number of other jurisdictions have similar issues of bonds: Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, other provinces that all have issued bonds for their residents. I do think that with regard to what we're talking about here, it's important that these are restricted to be available to Albertans and only Albertans.

The second part of this motion refers directly to the investment in infrastructure projects and facilities. I think this is consistent with Motion 501, that was passed at the beginning of this session, that also talks about aggressive investment in infrastructure projects in this province. I note from our budget that this government has in this fiscal year proposed to invest $7 billion in capital infrastructure projects. That's a very significant investment in the future of this province, and I think the concept of inviting Albertans to invest in some instruments that support that is consistent with many of the types of projects that we already invest in.

I think particularly of the Ministry of Culture and Community Spirit. I would expect that as members, when we drive through our communities, we see a whole range of infrastructure projects that really make us proud of what our communities have accomplished. I know that in my constituency every community has projects that already have a great deal of investment from volunteers in the community, particularly the projects that are supported by the Ministry of Culture and Community Spirit, that already have at least 50 per cent investment from fundraising projects that community members have really led. I think that the idea of issuing Alberta bonds just adds to the pride that Albertans already have in many of the projects that have been supported.

This afternoon I was thinking for just a few minutes about the range of projects that are supported in our communities. I had mentioned Culture and Community Spirit. There's Agriculture and Rural Development; Tourism, Parks and Recreation; Municipal Affairs, a very significant investment in our communities; Infrastructure; Seniors and Community Supports; Housing and Urban Affairs; Health and Wellness; Education. Most of the ministries of this government invest in our communities, and I think that the concept of adding to that because of the issue of government bonds is something that we should take a good look at.

I certainly appreciate the input of other members through the course of the afternoon. While I think this is a blue-sky opportunity, an opportunity to take a look at what we can do, we also have to exercise balance in this whole thing, as I mentioned earlier, so that this is an instrument that works not only for the people who invest but also for us as government, an opportunity to support, again, the infrastructure projects, the roads, bridges, overpasses, hospitals, schools, and community facilities that all of us enjoy.

With that, I will lend my support to Motion 16 and look forward to the further development of this concept. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to stand up and to speak to the government motion.

I want to start off by saying that we all know that Alberta is a commodity-based province. Whether you're a farmer or you work in the energy sector, viability is a word that we all very much understand. Albertans have asked us to temper the hills and the valleys of our economy, and thanks to the consistent leadership of our Premier we have planned and prepared for times like we are facing now.

Earlier this month the Premier laid out our government plan to position Alberta for a strong economic recovery. A key part of this strategy is to continue to build our communities by investing in our provincial infrastructure. This will lay the foundation for future generations. This is a priority of our government, and it always has been. Let me say that again just for the members opposite. This is a priority for our government, and it always has been. This is why we created the municipal sustainability initiative. This consistent funding helps finance important infrastructure projects in our communities. It gives communities the ability to move forward now and to be able to plan for the future, Mr. Speaker, because strong communities benefit all Albertans.

Whether you are a new Albertan or you have deep roots in the province, Albertans love Alberta. They love the freedom to create and the spirit to achieve. They love the opportunity this province offers, and they also love their communities. Albertans especially love their libraries, schools, hospitals, and recreation facilities. The Alberta capital bonds are an opportunity for Albertans to show their pride in their communities. These bonds are a chance for Albertans to invest in the communities they love, and this will help build a better, stronger Alberta in the future for everyone. I notice that there are a couple of members on the other side that are wiping tears.

I will say that I do share the Premier's commitment to strong communities. This has guided our ministry and guided myself in everything we do. We want Albertans to continue to take pride in their communities, and by providing the opportunity to purchase these bonds, this will be achieved.

Mr. Speaker, again, this is why I am so pleased to support this motion, because this motion supports Albertans. Thank you so much.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my sincere pleasure to rise today and speak to this motion. This motion is just another example of how forward-thinking ideas can improve Alberta's quality of life today and tomorrow. By issuing Alberta capital bonds today, we will be able to reap the benefits for many years to come, but it is just one step in a larger strategy to further strengthen Alberta's economic position.

This government has a clear plan to lead Alberta out of the recession, and I would like to speak specifically to the four points of the plan for economic recovery. The first part of this plan focuses specifically on the fiscal challenges that we currently face, and while this government will not make reductions in the programs that Albertans rely upon, we will have to live within our means. That's why the first step in our plan will responsibly limit government spending, and our goal is to have Alberta back into a surplus position in three years. Alberta capital bonds will help achieve this objective by maintaining and creating further economic activity in this province.

The second part of our plan is to use the cash reserves that are in the sustainability fund. Now, these funds will cover revenue shortfalls through this period. I want to take a moment to speak specifically on the foresight that this government had in creating a sustainability fund. Over the past few years the amount of money that we have saved was substantial. Seventeen billion dollars – that's not millions; that's billions – went into the sustainability fund specifically for times just like now. This government fully understood the volatility of the energy markets and the correlation between these markets and our budgetary revenues. That's why in years when we had significant surpluses, we did not spend it all, as some of the members opposite urged. We put money into savings, and now is the time to use these funds so that we can protect our key programs. This government had the discipline and the foresight to save, and because of this Alberta is in a better position than any other jurisdiction in Canada and most likely better than any jurisdiction in North America. By issuing Alberta capital bonds, we will continue to lead Canada in economic activity so that we will overcome the economic downturn earlier and in an even stronger fiscal position.

Now, the third part of our plan is to continue investing in public infrastructure. Over the past few years this government has invested in the construction of new schools, new hospitals, new senior facilities, and new highways: all projects that were very, very highly prized and very highly needed for Alberta. Today all across this province we see cranes standing high. Now, whether it's at the south Calgary hospital or the Calgary and Edmonton ring roads, we see men and women working hard to build the infrastructure for tomorrow. While one day members opposite say to spend more on infrastructure and the next day they say we should spend less and stop building infrastructure, this government has had a plan and will stick to it to build the needed infrastructure.

That's where this motion comes in. By reintroducing Alberta capital bonds, Albertans will be investing further into provincial infrastructure and continue to build up Alberta's future. While investing in these projects, Albertans will also be receiving financial returns for their investment. Now, I know that in the past I've been investing in Ontario bonds. I've been investing in B.C. bonds. I've been investing in all these other bonds because Alberta didn't have any bonds. I would have loved to have been able to invest in Alberta bonds. Just think of the prospect of investing in infrastructure projects that would directly benefit your community now while at the same time earning a competitive interest rate.

Now, if we can provide a competitive interest rate, Alberta investors will find these capital bonds a smart and secure investment. Because of our solid credit rating and also because of this province's fiscal history, investors will have confidence, knowing that their investments are secure, because, hey, there's no other place in the world that has a higher credit rating than Alberta does. Now, together with a high rate of return and the opportunity to build up our communities, there will be a win-win situation for Albertans.

Across this province the cost of building infrastructure has declined and in some cases up to 40 per cent, which, in effect, provides better value for the taxpayer now. In addition, by investing in the infrastructure projects, we will be prepared for the expected growth for many decades to come. We need new schools to educate the leaders of tomorrow, we need new health facilities to care for the increasing and aging population, and we need new highways and transportation corridors to facilitate projected economic growth.

This leads me to the fourth part of our economic recovery plan, which is to make sure that our energy and other industries are competitive and attract the investment we need to develop Alberta's resources. Mr. Speaker, this section of our plan is made possible by the first three parts. By living and spending within our means and returning to surplus, by expending our cash reserves to maintain services, and by building up our public infrastructure, we can be assured that Alberta will continue to be the most competitive environment for businesses. This is important because if Alberta is competitive, the business that resides in Alberta can also be competitive, which will lead them to be world leaders in their sector. That is what Alberta is.

Our students are world leaders in their academic fields. We have world-class health centres and physicians, and we have world-class infrastructure. But as this motion exemplifies, we are also world leaders in fiscal responsibility. We were prepared for this economic downturn, and with the passage of this motion we will continue to be leaders in fiscal responsibility for years to come.

I urge all members of this House today to stand in support of this motion. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I guess just sort of a question as we continue to go down the line of government members who embrace this form of government debt, embrace this bond issue. I was just wondering if looking back now, in hindsight, with us going down this path of taking on government debt, you look at the law you guys passed or the former Klein government passed where they said that we'll never go into debt again. Do you think that was rather a silly law given the situation we're now in?

Ms DeLong: This actually doesn't have to be a situation of debt. In other words, if we have cash on hand – okay? – which balances off the bonds, we are not in debt. So as long as we have cash on hand to balance it off – you know, our assets are way over our liabilities – it gives Albertans the chance to invest in really solid bonds.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. I was listening to the hon. member's speech, and just before the hon. member concluded, she stated that we in this province were prepared for the economic downturn. If that's true, how did we go from an $8 billion surplus to a $7 billion and counting deficit so quickly?

Ms DeLong: I am really pleased to be able to answer that question. The number one thing that really irks me about this whole thing is that "deficit" – okay? – is the technical name for it. But if you knew that you wanted to go to university, you would save up some money. You would put it aside. When you went off to university, you would be spending more than came in, but, my goodness, you'd have the savings there. So you wouldn't call it a deficit; you would call it just saving ahead and planning ahead and using your money wisely. That is exactly what we are doing.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Seeing no other questions, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Minister of Environment.

5:40

Mr. Renner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have an opportunity to address this motion this afternoon. I've been listening intently all afternoon, and I've heard some really well-thought-out presentations about this whole concept of capital bonds. I've heard some, I think, valid concerns that have been raised by both sides of the House. This at the end of the day is not designed to be some sort of blank cheque, that government can go on some sort of free-for-all spending spree. What this is all about is allowing the government the flexibility to take advantage of some of the lower than expected tendering that we're experiencing as a result of some of the depressed economic conditions that we find ourselves in. But more importantly, Mr. Speaker, it gives Albertans an opportunity to invest in their own province.

I think that there are a couple of things that we have to spend a little bit of time thinking about today and throughout the discussion on this issue of capital bonds before the government moves forward. After all, Mr. Speaker, this is a motion that indicates that this Assembly supports the development of capital bonds. This is not the operational side. This is not the motion that is going to, upon being voted on, bring about capital bonds the next day. Clearly, a lot of work needs to go into dealing with the process and putting in the necessary background that will accompany bond issuance.

What this discussion is all about, what this debate is all about is an indication of whether or not the members of this House are in support of the concept of capital bonds and whether the members of this House recognize some opportunities that would be associated with capital bonds. But equally important, Mr. Speaker, are some of the challenges and some of the cautions that the members of this Assembly would bring forward to the government in the development of the bonds.

Clearly, what I've heard, Mr. Speaker, from the opportunities perspective is that this will allow Albertans to invest in their own province. But the challenge of that is that there may be Albertans who, while they would like to participate in this structure, may find themselves in a situation where the bond issue was set too high. If you somehow set a minimum of $10,000 or something like that, I think I've heard pretty clearly that that's maybe a market that this Assembly would not support. I've heard reference to people purchasing bonds in much smaller denominations that could be used to be the basis for some kind of ongoing legacy or foundational family investment for children and grandchildren and those kinds of things. What I'm hearing is that there are a number of members who are suggesting that we should have these bonds available in lower denominations, perhaps $500 or a thousand dollars, so that a larger cross-section of Albertans could participate.

I've also, I think, heard that there may be a need for us to put an upper limit on the issuance of these bonds. We should think about whether or not an upper limit needs to be in place because, as we've heard, this is the kind of investment that many of the seniors in Alberta would look to to bring some kind of income stability to, in some cases, very limited investment portfolios. If the interest rate is enticing enough, the last thing we need is some institutional investor coming in and taking up the entire bond issue in the wink of an eye. Believe me, Mr. Speaker, there are investment houses out there that could take up a few hundred million dollars before you even know what's going on. I've heard around the room today that that's probably something that would not be recommended or supported by the members of the House. Clearly, this needs to be aimed at Albertans, and it needs to be aimed at Albertans, perhaps, of more modest means, so there need to be some parameters put on it.

I've also heard, Mr. Speaker, that this is not something that we should associate with Albertans investing in specific projects. This is not the kind of issue that someone would come out and say: I will buy these bonds if you build my school. That's not what this is all about. This is about allowing the government to deal with the 20-year capital plan in, perhaps, a little bit faster fashion, recognizing that the opportunities that we have now may not be here in the balance of that 20-year plan and the costs – some of the projects are coming in at a much reduced price – may not always be there. This is not designed to all of a sudden create a whole bunch of expectations that suddenly everybody's wish list can be fulfilled if Albertans invest in these bonds. This is about making some prudent investments based upon what is already an established capital plan.

I also think that this is an opportunity for Albertans to initiate and show that they want to be investing in their own province. They want to have that opportunity to be proud Albertans to be investing in the future of this province. Above all, Mr. Speaker, I think that's what this investment opportunity is all about. It's about prudent financial management on the part of the government, and it's about allowing Albertans to take pride and invest in their province.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will take my seat.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments or questions.

Seeing none, the chair recognizes the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we call it 6 p.m. and adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. We give thanks for Your abundant blessings to our province and ourselves. We ask for guidance and the will to follow it. Amen.

Please be seated. Hon. members, I'm going to rise, but I'm also going to do something else which is entirely out of the ordinary. For the members who sit to my right, may I ask you to stand up and move to the left side of the Assembly. [Members moved from the east side of the Chamber to the west side]

Thank you very much. No, I'm not asking the people to my left to move to the right. That would be a coup that I do not have the authority for. That is not part of the whole thing.

Centennial Window Unveiling

The Speaker: Hon. members, the city of Edmonton has given the Legislative Assembly of Alberta a unique gift commemorating the 2006 celebration of 100 years of democracy of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta. This kind gesture celebrates the beautiful resources and landscape of Alberta as well as the opportunities and hope for the future of our beloved province.

To my right, on the east side of the building, you'll see two pages standing. I'm now going to ask the pages, Alexandra Candler and Andrea Bailer, to unveil this very generous gift from the city and the people of Edmonton. [The centennial window was unveiled to the applause of members] The generosity of the city of Edmonton and the people of Edmonton lives on, from the canopy over the Speaker's chair, which was donated in 1980 to celebrate Alberta's 75th anniversary, to this gift today. The Legislature and the capital city have been enriched by this stained-glass window, which will provide members of this Assembly and all visitors with a unique view of this great province of ours.

As all can see, in the centre is a figure representing Queen Victoria's daughter Alberta. She receives the viewers with one arm extended in welcome and another full of bounty. Above her the northern lights shine. Flowing through the centre is the North Saskatchewan River. The Alberta wild rose blooms in the foreground, a flower known to grow in challenging climates. The rich colour blocks of fields and golden wheat offered by Alberta symbolize a wealth of opportunity and hope for the future. The red of St. George's Cross extending along the bottom of the window alludes to the arms of the Hudson's Bay Company and the progressive industry which founded the city. The theme of the window's design is Alberta: the Land of Opportunities, which is a true reflection of the Alberta we live in today.

The stained-glass window is located on the east side of the Assembly, and the question is: why on the east side of the Assembly? It is to catch the morning sun and the dawning of the day as the picture itself was done to commemorate the dawning of the new province of Alberta 100 and some-odd years ago and the opportunities to go with it.

I'd ask members to return to their places, and I will continue with some introductions. [Members returned to their desks]

Hon. members, this process began a number of years ago when the chair was visited by a number of councillors from the city of Edmonton. There are three councillors in the city of Edmonton who are former Members of this Legislative Assembly: Councillor Karen Leibovici, Councillor Linda Sloan, and Councillor Ed Gibbons. Along with the mayor, over time discussions occurred as to what would be an appropriate gift. The conclusion was that it should be something like what we have received now.

The city of Edmonton then took the initiative through its own forces to meet with arts people in the greater community and selected the artists who created this piece. The artists are Barbara and Pawel Jozefowicz, who are unable to be with us today. I believe that they are in Poland today. We advised them that they can access this channel in the virtual world. If they have, I want them to know that their creativity was well received today.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: Joining us in the Assembly today are a number of very distinguished people that I would like to introduce. As I call out their names, I'd ask them to stand, and I would ask you to withhold your applause until we have introduced them all. First of all, the illustrious mayor of the city of Edmonton, His Worship Stephen Mandel; Karen Leibovici, ward 1 councillor and former Member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta; Linda Sloan, ward 1 councillor and a former Member of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta; Ron Hayter, ward 2 councillor; Kim Krushell, ward 2 councillor; Amarjeet Sohi, ward 6 councillor; Dave Thiele, ward 6 councillor; Joyce Tustian, Edmonton deputy city manager; Blaire McCalla, communications consultant; John Mahon, executive director of the Edmonton Arts Council; Ted Kerr, centennial window selection committee member; Alex Sokolowski, brother to the artist.

Also joining us here today and seated in the public gallery are others directly involved in this very special project: with the Edmonton Arts Council Kristy Trinier, public art director; Laurie Stalker, grants director; Katia Michel-Wasney, grants assistant; David Turnbull, public art conservator; Sean Borchert, public art program officer; Sarah Patterson, public art assistant; some very distinguished people who assisted us in bringing this project to fruition from Alberta Infrastructure – Norm Furler, craftsman; Brian Oakley, director; Henry Zuehlke, project manager; Lyle Butchart, facilities manager; Jim Werenka, operations supervisor; and Peter Caron – along with a number of people from the Alberta Legislative Assembly Office.

Hon. members, I'm going to ask all of our guests to receive our warm welcome.

Thank you, all. Thank you very much, again, to the people of Edmonton and the city of Edmonton for this generous contribution.

Hon. members, 2005 was the 100th anniversary of the province of Alberta, 2006 was the 100th anniversary of the first Legislative Assembly of the province of Alberta, and 2012 will be the 100th anniversary of the existence of this building. In the next several years additional projects will be initiated to reach us in the year 2012.

Thank you.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Ouellette: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's great for me to be able to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 88 students from Innisfail middle school who are seated in the members' gallery. They're accompanied by their teachers and parent helpers Mrs. Judy Bourne, Ms Kim Morison, Mrs. Dale Jensen, Mrs. Rosemarie Piechalski, Mrs. Dusty Daines, Mrs. Carolyn Flower, Miss Jennifer Mann, Mr. Gord Tulk,

Mr. Calvin Bacque, Mrs. Connie Johnston, Mrs. Sherry Hunley, Mrs. Yvonne Bradshaw, Mrs. Jenna Grant, Mrs. Stacy Koenning, and Mrs. Val Layden. Today the students had the opportunity to tour this beautiful building and participate in a mock Legislature. I had a chance to meet with them briefly this afternoon. As I've said before, I think it's so important for all of these children to visit the Legislature because, as you know, they're going to be tomorrow's leaders. They're such bright minds here today, and I'd like them all to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a very good friend of mine, Mr. John Short, a real gentleman who many Albertans know. It's a real privilege to have a legend here. Of course, you've got to be old to be a legend, and I don't think he looks as old as he is. John has had an incredible career as a journalist, beginning at the age of 15 at the Globe and Mail. He came to Alberta in 1959 and has had many interesting jobs in journalism, very accomplished. He worked with TV and newsprint, but he really found his calling when they realized that he had the perfect face for radio, and that's what he did for many years, as many of you will know. He is much dedicated to Alberta, much loved by Albertans, has taken an incredible interest in amateur sports and charities, and now sits on the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation, and we value that very much. If my colleagues could join me in welcoming him to the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my distinct pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Miss Fareeha Saleem of my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. Fareeha is in her third year at NAIT, finishing her bachelor of business administration. She is here to write her term paper regarding leadership, and she is shadowing yours truly for some good three hours of the day. I would ask Fareeha to rise and receive the traditional welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's not often a person has in life a friend from elementary school to in your 50s that you meet with and have constant contact with, and today I want to introduce you to a good friend of mine who is exactly that. We went all through school together, raised families together. He's a past mayor of Whitecourt and now works with the Alberta Forest Products Association. I'd like to introduce to you and through you Mr. Brady Whittaker. I'd ask him to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a past assistant of mine, who I lost moving into cabinet. His name is Mr. Marshall Thiessen. He was a great assistant for me in my past four years as a private member. I thank you, Marshall, for all the work you've done for me. He is also a great Flames fan, which is what really endeared us together, the fact that he was a Flames fan. I'd ask Marshall to please stand and accept the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Excellence in Teaching Awards

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Teachers across our province dedicate countless hours to ensuring that Alberta students are engaged and are successful in learning. They spend time in the classroom teaching, supervising extracurricular activities, grading assignments and tests, oftentimes at home, working with parents and families, and generally doing everything that they can to make our children's school life the best it can be. The hard work and dedication of teachers often goes unrecognized despite the fact that they are mentors, motivators, and facilitators to engage our students in developing the knowledge, skills, and attributes needed to thrive in the modern world.

Nominations for the 2010 excellence in teaching awards are now being accepted, and I encourage students, parents, teacher colleagues, and community members to nominate a teacher or principal for their invaluable commitment to education in our province. Now is the perfect time to recognize a special teacher or school principal for their contribution to student growth through innovative or creative teaching.

We have successful students because of the tremendous work of our teachers, Mr. Speaker. The excellence in teaching awards have been celebrated since 1989, with more than 8,500 teachers nominated and more than 400 who have received awards. Last year 365 teachers were nominated, and 23 received awards. I am pleased to rise today to recognize all of the extraordinary teachers and principals across this province and encourage you to nominate a deserving teacher.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Public Consultation on Health Care

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This summer and fall I've been touring the province to speak with Albertans about their hopes, their dreams, their deep concerns with the state of our province today. As part of the process I and my colleagues in the Official Opposition organized a series of town hall forums for seniors concerned about Alberta's health care system, one of our most precious public institutions.

I am encouraged and inspired by the turnout at these forums and by the passion with which these engaged citizens, primarily seniors, spoke about their lack of confidence in where this government is taking public health care and long-term care. Based on several years of personal experience, these citizens overwhelmingly told me and my colleagues that they do not believe the Premier and the minister of health can be trusted to manage our health care system.

These citizens are extremely concerned by the serious shortage of health care professionals across the board in the professions, from doctors to laboratory services. They're upset about the callous deinstitutionalization of patients at Alberta Hospital Edmonton. They're worried about rising costs and falling quality of long-term care and continuing care while millions of dollars were spent on bonuses, severance packages for senior officials, and public relations.

My colleagues in the health care sector have also expressed fears, bewilderment, and frustration, yet this government plunges ahead, ignoring the good advice of Albertans, discounting the long-term effects of their agenda of cutbacks, staff hiring freezes, and creeping privatization. Alberta's seniors have spent their lives building this province. At the very least, a responsible government would immediately ensure that there is enough quality public long-term care and home-care services for our seniors. This would be a huge improvement over the flawed first-bed policy of this administration, which too often separates seniors from their families and supports.

A responsible government would also ensure that every Albertan has a family doctor, which would improve care, reduce overcrowding in emergencies, and reduce hospitalization. A responsible government would listen to seniors, welcome professional advice, and stop this chaotic experiment with our most cherished public health system.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Terra Centre Diaper Drive

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week I participated in an event called Baby Heroes to raise diapers and awareness for the Terra Centre for pregnant and parenting teens. As a grandpa of two little boys, Dominic and Orion, I know how tough it is for their parents to make ends meet and provide the best for their children.

My wife, Barb, and I decided in good humour to see how many diapers we could get into my Smart car and donate them to Terra. I mentioned this to a friend on a social media site, and within four hours we had raised 2,000 diapers. The goal then became 10,000, and when all was said and done, people as close as this Chamber and as far away as southern California contributed both money and diapers.

I am very pleased to report that last Friday we delivered 12,064 diapers to the Terra Baby Heroes collection centre in West Edmonton Mall. We loaded the car, and we quickly realized that we could not carry the diapers in one load, so we made two trips from the parking lot into the mall without major incident.

Most of the support for this event was generated on social media such as Facebook and Twitter. It is said that it takes a village to raise a child, and last week we proved that the social media community has become a very important part of the village. I would like to thank everyone who contributed to the Baby Heroes diaper drive for making it the huge success that it was. By supporting Terra, you have given teen parents and their babies a real chance to succeed.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over and over again in the past few days this health minister's excuse for long lineups at immunization clinics has been that they only had a few days' notice of an early release of the vaccine. However, in a national news story of September 16 the chief public health officer said, "Seven to 10 million doses . . . should roll out by the third week of October." To the minister of health. Both Health Canada and national news agencies were telling Canadians in mid-September that the vaccine would be available the third week of October. Either the minister was unaware and therefore incompetent or he's deliberately misleading the public. Which is it, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess one of the things that's really bothered me in the last couple of days is that we have an individual who has training as a public health doctor in this province. This is an individual who is choosing to politicize an event that thousands and tens of thousands of Albertans believe is serious enough that they have to get immunized, and that's a good thing. Now, we can stand here all day and argue about semantics, about whether or not the vaccine was going to arrive at the end of October or it was going to arrive in November, but the reality of it is that we have the vaccine, we are immunizing Albertans, we are trying to provide priority for those who need it first, and it is an incredible success.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, this government's own pandemic plan indicates up to 11,400 hospitalizations needed. Will the minister tell this Assembly how many of Alberta's acute-care beds will be available for H1N1 surge?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have been consistent in saying that if they are required, we will ensure that they're available. There has been no indication to date that that's the case. Again, this particular member, instead of taking a responsible approach to this, is trying to politicize an event. I would suggest that if the member really cared about this issue, he would be standing in this House and he would be expressing his appreciation to all of those front-line health care workers who are busting their butts.

Dr. Swann: This minister's own pandemic response states, "It is expected Alberta's total hospitalizations will range between 3,800 [and] 11,400 . . . of whom 15 to 25 per cent will [need] intensive care." Alberta's major hospitals and intensive care units are routinely at a hundred per cent capacity, Mr. Minister. Where are you going to find 570 beds for intensive care patients?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I've said, what we intend to do is ensure that as many Albertans as possible get vaccinated so that as few as possible have to use our health care system. Wouldn't that be the ultimate thing that we should all be striving for instead of standing in this Legislature spreading fear, I would probably say even misinformation in most instances? I think it's irresponsible, especially for someone who has the training that this particular individual has.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Continuing Care for Seniors

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This summer I travelled Alberta and met thousands of seniors at seniors' forums. After meeting and speaking with so many concerned and angry Albertans, one thing is clear: Alberta seniors do not agree with this minister on continuing care. To the minister. Moving seniors' public long-term care facilities to private designated assisted living facilities will drain the savings of significant numbers of seniors. How can you justify this?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've said on a number of occasions in this House that what this government is going to do is move the care to the patient and quit taking the patient and sticking them in a square hole in the system somewhere. I would challenge this particular member to stand up, and I would say: is he referring to the Good Samaritan Society, is he referring to Covenant Health of the Catholic faith as private providers? They are the entities out there that care about the care for seniors. I would suggest that this particular individual again trying to politicize on the backs of our seniors is despicable.

Dr. Swann: Well, clearly, this minister is not listening to Albertans. Seniors are being reassessed for designated assisted living facilities after being in public long-term care, and many find they cannot afford the increased cost. Again to the minister: what are you doing to assist those seniors so they're not left destitute in some cases?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as I said in my last answer, Mr. Speaker, what we're doing is we're going to ensure that the senior has the care where they best need it. If a senior is in a lodge environment or a senior is living in their own home and can no longer function on their own without some care, is this member suggesting that we should all of a sudden take that individual, stick him or her into a long-term home rather than taking a couple of hours and providing the care in the situation that they're most familiar with?

Dr. Swann: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, I would ask whether the minister is building a case for this as a viable option. Is he going to be tracking the number of increased ambulance visits to some of these designated assisted living facilities in order to prove his case and whether this would indicate adequate or appropriate staffing in these institutions as opposed to what they've been getting in long-term care? Are you going to be tracking ambulances?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, this minister and this government are going to build a case to provide the right care for the patient in the right place. If he doesn't like it, then I suggest that's something where he should be going out there, not spreading misinformation, and talking about real-life situations because that's what we're seeing. That's what all of my colleagues are seeing in their communities.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Long-term Care for Rural Seniors

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate my legislative colleague from Lethbridge-West taking the Minister of Health and Wellness to one of our designated assisting living facilities in Lethbridge. However, I was disappointed that the minister did not avail himself of the opportunity to inspect the long-term care facility with me. To the minister. Alberta Health Services statistics show that rural hospitals have the highest percentage of seniors waiting for long-term care. How can the minister justify ignoring the needs of our rural seniors?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons why I didn't visit the long-term care centre is because in the city of Lethbridge this government is investing so much money that it took us an entire afternoon to just go take a visit to the new high school that's under construction, to go to the hospital and see the cancer radiation therapy unit that's about to be unveiled, to meet with mental health officials in Lethbridge. What did I forget, Member? We had a busy day. I just want to take a minute and say that the facility that we did visit, the DAL, which is in partnership with Covenant Health, is one of the finest facilities with the best care you will find anywhere in North America.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you for that, and I agree. However, we have an excellent long-term care facility in Lethbridge, and you have to see it. It happens to be my alma mater, and you should still see it.

My next question is: will the minister exactly spell out how much he wants seniors to pay for necessary supplies and services such as bedding, incontinent supplies, and the extra care services, which means extra beds and, in fact, could mean feeding . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister. [interjection] The hon. minister has the floor.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I will take the member at her word that they have an excellent long-term care facility in Lethbridge, and I think that's probably true because we have excellent long-term care centres around the province, but long-term care centres on their own are not the answer.

You know, Mr. Speaker, in touring the designated assisted living facility, we actually went into rooms. We actually talked to residents of the designated long-term care centre, and overwhelmingly their response was, "We love it here," so I would suggest that that member should start to go visit the residents of that designated assisted facility instead of taking all of her questions from a researcher who lives in Edmonton.

Ms Pastoor: They say that they love it here because they are in the right place for them. There is still a place for long-term care. It's assessment that decides where they go, not their condition.

To the minister. Seniors who live in seniors' facilities are more at risk than those that live at home. Will the minister guarantee that there will actually be enough supply of the H1N1 vaccine for Lethbridge, which currently has none, so that vaccination programs can be expanded to seniors' homes?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I won't comment relative to what the member said about Lethbridge not having any vaccine. That's not my information.

However, I must remind the member that with this particular influenza, seniors, unless they've got some chronic health conditions, are not high risk. Ultimately, we will get to those seniors, whether they live in a lodge, whether they live in a long-term care centre, whether they live in Lethbridge or they live in High Level.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Nursing Shortage

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much. Mr. Speaker, one of the most significant reasons this government's swine flu vaccination program is so fraught with problems is that Alberta is severely short of nurses. As of July over 500 nursing students can't find work, and over a thousand nursing positions posted this spring have been left vacant. The minister's plan to eliminate nurses has left Alberta unable to cope with the most threatening public health pandemic of our time. Why won't the minister of health admit that he has helped create this crisis by cutting nearly 1,500 nursing positions?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the one part of the member's question is so absurd that it kind of colours everything else in the question. I didn't even hear the last part because the first part was so absurd. Where did he ever get the impression that my job was to eliminate nurses? Now, give me a break. Nurses play an integral role in our health care system. They don't play the only role; there's a role for all health care professionals. For him to stand there and say that I'm trying to eliminate nurses is absurdity at the best.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, there are over a thousand nursing positions that haven't been filled because of the hiring freeze. The minister is eliminating nursing positions, and his hatchetman, Dr. Duckett, is part of his strategy.

In order to staff flu shot clinics, this government is taking nurses out of schools, baby care programs, and chronic disease programs, and now it's preparing to redeploy home-care nurses as well. They've hired fewer temporary seasonal nurses for the flu clinics this year. I'd just like to ask the minister: why won't he admit that by eliminating hundreds and hundreds of nursing positions, he has left the health system unable to respond appropriately to this pandemic?

Mr. Liepert: I won't admit it because it's not true, Mr. Speaker. This particular member is trying to take a situation where we are trying to ensure that the right care is provided to the patient in the right environment and somehow suggest that by doing that, it's tied to the most recent immunization that we're currently undergoing. You know, his question makes no sense.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Premier talked about having to run a health care system and dealing with the pandemic as if they were two separate things. It really speaks to the lack of capacity this government has created. It has had months to prepare. Failure to ensure appropriate staffing levels to accommodate for a public health outbreak has left the system unable to cope. It creates serious doubts about Alberta's capacity to cope with any health emergency, whether it's a pandemic or some other type of emergency. Why won't the minister admit that his scheme to cut nursing positions has left Albertans vulnerable?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, nothing but untruths. Because of the outstanding work of the front-line health care workers in this province, in the first two days of our immunization program we have administered in excess of 100,000 doses of vaccine. In addition to that – and this member would probably like to hear this – we have supplied to First Nations enough vaccine to vaccinate 50 per cent of the population. Many of them are running out of vaccine. That's an incredible success.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Calgary Rockyview Hospital Laser Equipment

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to be here representing the wonderful people of Calgary-Glenmore. One thing that we can all agree on as elected representatives is that we need to stay in touch and listen to those people who we represent. Thousands of Albertans across this province want to send the Premier a message about his health care superboard. Health care must be patient centred, not government centred, and the Premier's superboard puts bureaucrats in charge. Albertans want medical professionals in charge that understand their needs as patients. Will the minister of health listen to Albertans and return health care decision-making to local communities?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'll just take one member of the Alberta Health Services Board – I think he may even have an Order of Canada – Mr. Franceschini, who's an incredible businessman in this community. I can name a whole bunch of others. If that member wants to look Mr. Franceschini in the eye and call him a bureaucrat, let him go right ahead, because that's what I heard him say. It tells me he is as out of touch with health care as he was with rural issues when he represented the former constituency.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, the minister and all Calgary MLAs were silent when the superboard removed the GreenLight laser equipment from the Calgary Rockyview hospital. Does the minister agree with the superboard in its decision to remove the GreenLight laser equipment from the Rockyview hospital?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, that issue was taken care of a long time ago. I think that was well before the member moved into Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, he needs to check out history.

The minister has insulted the people of Calgary-Glenmore and all Calgarians by removing the GreenLight laser equipment from the Rockyview hospital. Does the minister consider their health concerns as he does their democratic decisions, as simply the flavour of the month?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the minister did no such thing. The particular piece of equipment that this member refers to was in the hospital on a trial. The company that had it in on a trial had determined that the trial had ended and had made a decision that they were going to remove it unless it was taken on full time. That issue was resolved. To the best of my knowledge it is continuing to operate. I'm not sure; I think the member should be a little more prepared about his own constituency if that's the kind of question he's going to ask.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

H1N1 Pandemic Ethics Framework

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. It's the Minister of Health and Wellness's day today. My questions are to him. The government's H1N1 pandemic response plan indicates that anywhere from 570 to 2,850 Albertans are going to need intensive care. It also predicts that 130 to 400 Albertans are going to die of H1N1. Given the overloaded intensive care system there will be very difficult ethical decisions. Alberta Health Services has developed a pandemic ethics framework to guide clinical and operational decisions. Is the minister aware of this framework, and can he tell us what it involves?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, pandemic planning is extensive to the point where you should have in place the most extreme situation. I will not apologize for our officials having in place a pandemic plan that deals with the most minor of a situation and the most extreme situation. What this member is referring to is the absolute extreme situation. To stand in this House and say that somehow the department is predicting that hundreds of people are going to die from H1N1 is not accurate.

Dr. Taft: Well, actually, Mr. Speaker, I'm quoting directly from his department's own plan. I didn't make the numbers up. They're a direct quote from his department's documents.

To the same minister: given that the pandemic response plan says that this ethics framework can be used to include the public in developing a response to the community challenges created by H1N1, can the minister tell us if the ethics framework will be made public?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I didn't deny that the numbers were in our plan. All I said in my answer was that it is the most extreme situation. I will take the member's question under advisement.

Dr. Taft: Well, let me urge the minister to make this framework public. The government's pandemic response plan says, "By providing transparent, equitably applied criteria, based on fundamental moral principles and values, the Pandemic Ethics Framework will serve to guide the difficult decisions that will . . . be made during Pandemic (H1N1) 2009." Mr. Minister, doesn't the public have a right to know?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, if the member is reading from the pandemic plan, then why doesn't he just photocopy it?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

2:10 Calgary High School Construction

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government announced today that it has signed a contract to begin work on the four new high schools being built as part of phase 2 of the Alberta schools alternative procurement project, ASAP, which will result in 14 new schools. Now, a rumour has it that our Bowness high will only be upgraded after the northwest high school is built. So my question is to the Minister of Infrastructure. It seems like so far phase 2 has just been a series of announcements. When are we going to start seeing results?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're seeing results right now. We made an announcement today on the four high schools that are conventional builds, and Albertans will be pleased to know that the first project with the four high schools came in 40 per cent less than engineering estimates, so we're extremely pleased.

We're also pleased that the ASAP 2 that we're going forward with for 14 schools will provide the spaces for thousands of students in six different communities in the province. They'll be here, and they'll be here on time.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you. My first supplemental to same minister: in light of current global economic conditions and provincial fiscal restraints, will these high schools be financed with borrowed dollars, or are they being paid for with savings that we have in the bank right now?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. These four high schools are in our four-year capital plan, and they've all been budgeted for. As I mentioned, there was a 40 per cent savings based on what our engineering estimates were, and that translates into $40 million of savings to Albertans for these top-notch, state-of-the-art schools, that are going to provide great environments for our students.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you. My final question to the same minister. We haven't heard much recently about the 18 schools being built under ASAP phase 1, announced in the summer of 2007. What is the status of these schools?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had the opportunity this summer to tour the schools in Calgary in the first ASAP package. They were ahead of schedule for the most part. They're wonderful looking buildings. They're on schedule, on time. They're going to open their doors to 12,000 students in the province of Alberta. They're about 75 per cent complete at the moment. We're actually ahead of schedule with them, Mr. Speaker, so they'll be there for the students when they need them.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Home Moving Industry Regulation

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A number of Albertans have had painful experiences with shady moving companies such as being charged unfair hidden fees or losing their possessions. Just last month the Better Business Bureau's branch for northern Alberta identified home movers as the industry with the second-highest number of inquiries province-wide. To the Minister of Service Alberta. Ontario introduced new protections for consumers dealing with moving companies four years ago. Why has your ministry not moved faster by introducing reasonable rules for the home moving industry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the moving industry I am very aware of the concerns that consumers are experiencing with some of the companies that are out there, and we also do know of the good experiences. With respect to consultations and moving forward, as always I meet with many individuals on a monthly basis, and that is a conversation that has come across my table as well. As well, I've written to many Albertans on this issue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again. This ministry seems to be reviewing everything with no end in sight. When can Albertans finally expect action on appropriate standards for the home moving industry? Can you offer a specific date or timeline?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The joy of Service Alberta is that there are so many individuals and so many things that we're looking at, and as a minister it's up to me to make good decisions on behalf of Albertans as to where we need to make good regulations and regulations that don't burden individuals and businesses. With respect, we did the gift card regulation and the payday loan regulation, and those are areas where we had to go in and support Albertans. So as always I am prepared to look at the moving industry and any other number of topics as well.

Mr. Kang: I think it's about time the minister stops looking, Mr. Speaker, and starts doing something about the moving industry.

To the minister again: how many formal complaints against home movers has the ministry received? What kind of action did the ministry take against moving companies found to be engaging in unfair business practices?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Mr. Speaker, on a yearly basis the number of complaints we get with respect to moving companies is under 50. Moving companies can be prosecuted under the Fair Trading Act.

Again, it is about consumers. When you sign up with a moving company, go and do the research, visit the company. If the company, perhaps, does not have an office and they're operating out of a home, you need to know that information. We have tools to empower the consumer to make the best decisions for themselves, and it's about assisting them to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Reservists' Leave for Winter Olympics Service

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My question today is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The reservist leave act, which was proclaimed earlier this year, allows Alberta's reservists to take unpaid leave to serve our country. There's also provision at the discretion of this minister that allows reservists to take unpaid leave for domestic deployment. To this minister: is this simply just paper legislation, or is there some action being taken here?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a matter of fact, I've recently signed a ministerial order allowing Alberta reservists to help provide what I'm confident will be outstanding security for the upcoming Winter Olympics and Paralympics in Vancouver. I'm told that upwards of 60 Alberta reservists will be part of a 300-member contingent from western Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. One thing this minister did not mention is what sort of time frame is being considered for this particular leave. I'd appreciate his comments.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we can all appreciate that significant training is required for the Olympics, not just for the athletes but for security details as well. As such, although the games are only for a few weeks in February and March, some reservists are beginning their training now and could be away from their employers for upwards of six months.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just a final to the minister. I appreciate these comments, but at the same time we also must consider the rights of the employers involved here. I'd like to know from this minister: what sort of inconvenience does a six-month leave put on the employer, many of whom might have to hire others in difficult economic times to fill the void?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, considerable notice to the employer is required. First, a reservist must provide at least four weeks' written notice of the date on which the leave will start. In this case, the reservist must also give at least four weeks' written notice of the return-to-work date. I'm very confident that the majority of Alberta employers agree that this might be a minor inconvenience in order to supply some very solid security for a major world event.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Spinal Cord Injury Rehabilitation Services

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1991 I suffered a spinal cord injury. After being treated in acute care, I immediately went into rehabilitation at the Calgary General hospital. I was lucky as research clearly shows that it's important to move to rehabilitation as soon as possible. It has come to my attention that lately it is now three to four months for some spinal cord injury patients to get into rehab. To the minister of health: why is care for spinal cord injury patients so much worse now than it was when I had my injury some 18 years ago?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I would endeavour to ensure that the member's facts are accurate. I want to check to make sure of that, and I will respond to his question when I have the facts.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This delay in availability of rehabilitation services is not only an affront to the woman or man who has suffered a spinal cord injury, but it also adds additional costs to the system as they're shuffled from acute care to home to possibly long-term care and then back to rehabilitation. Does the minister accept that on top of the medical impacts on the person who's had the spinal cord injury, this also seems to be an unnecessary cost to the system?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I believe I've said in this House before that one of the things that troubles me about wait-lists is that somehow the Canadian way of having to wait for health care is okay, that it's just a matter of how long. I think we should be shooting for a vision in this Assembly that our health care system is there when we need it. So I'm not going to acknowledge that any particular wait time is acceptable. In many cases the member is absolutely correct: wait-lists actually cost us money.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister of housing. After people leave acute care, or if they're lucky enough to get into rehabilitation services after this happens, oftentimes what is happening: they are being shuffled off to long-term care facilities, the Bethany or some other places like that. These are often 18-, 19-, 20-year-old individuals. It seems like they're being warehoused. Is this really the way forward here in Alberta for individuals like this?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can't speak to why people have moved from acute care to the long-term care that you're referring to, but I can tell you that we do have 1,600 housing units in Alberta that assist people with special needs, and that would include people that require wheelchair access. I think we do a fairly good job with this, actually. Through our rent supplement program we do assist people with lower rents and with affordable housing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for the Homeless

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If this government truly intended to prioritize immunization for homeless Albertans, special plans would have been made to ensure that it happened. That's what the Manitoba government did. In Winnipeg they set up 30 special clinics that targeted that city's disadvantaged and were open for business yesterday. Here we're having lots of meetings, but we still have no firm date as to when similar inner-city rolling clinics will be opened. Will the health minister explain his department's complete failure to prioritize this particular group of vulnerable Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, we have a very thoughtful plan that's been put in place. It was put in place, as I said to you previously, over the course of several months. We've worked closely with Alberta Health Services officials, with medical officers of health. We've worked with the department overall, the health department. I can tell you that our homeless population is extremely vulnerable, and they were assisted immediately and in various areas of the province. An example would be that High Level began administering their vaccine; that was completed on Monday. We've completed the vaccination program for Fort McMurray. In Calgary, as I mentioned earlier as well, we have vaccine that was available yesterday, and the clinic is moving ahead there.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, we still have no firm date for the inner city of Edmonton and when those vaccines will roll out, and we should by now.

Now, former Manitoba Premier Doer started planning for his province's response to H1N1 back in the spring. He then made it a priority at the Premiers' meeting in August. As a result, Manitoba's system is experiencing none of the chaos that ours has this week. Why was our minister of health, by his own admission, caught by surprise when other governments seemed perfectly capable of planning in advance?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, as is so typical of these two individuals in that party, the question generally has no resemblance to the truth because it's a known fact that all across the country this same situation has evolved. There are some areas that are better than others, and some of that has to do with population. Some of it has to do with the take-up by the population.

You know, I was interested to read in the local media this morning, Mr. Speaker, a comment by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood relative to the homeless situation here in Edmonton. The next paragraph was actually asking someone in a homeless situation whether the member was correct or not, and that particular person said: no, he wasn't; we actually have a very good working relationship with Alberta Health Services.

Ms Notley: Actually, that person also said that there was no date yet for when the vaccine would be available for her agency.

The government of Manitoba planned ahead, so they had 12 clinics ready to go in Winnipeg alone and lineups that did not exceed 90 minutes. Equivalent preparation in Edmonton would mean that we'd have 13 clinics operating today. In Manitoba they hired 600 retired doctors and nurses who were recertified and ready to go well in advance. Here we're scrambling for staff. Why was this government caught so unprepared for what we've all known was coming?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to answer this question from this member. You really are misleading the public, and you're doing it through this forum. I think that you need really accurate information. We've offered to take these members to the clinics that are available here in the city of Edmonton, through the Boyle-McCauley health centre. A vaccine is being offered through the Boyle centre community organization. As well, we're going to have nurses as of Friday doing outreach on the street, offering the vaccine to homeless shelters. We have the vaccine being offered at Hope Mission as well on Friday for our homeless. So for you to say that, it's uncalled for.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Cattle Age Verification

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All my questions are for the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. As you know, Alberta has strengthened traceability and quality assurance measures on livestock, specifically mandatory age verification on beef, yet some of my constituents remain concerned that their customers are not asking for these measures, they're not necessary for market access, and they're increasing the cost only for the primary producer. Can the minister tell us: are these measures going to bear fruit in terms of market access, and how are these measures being received to date by our trading partners?

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, there is a demand for traceability and age verification in our livestock system. Foreign governments are telling me that the emphasis on traceability and age verification are the minimum requirements for market access. International markets are demanding that their suppliers have strong traceability in place today. I certainly received a letter from the Japan Meat Traders Association applauding Alberta's work on traceability. An unintended consequence that we've derived from traceability is that we hear that the Americans are now buying age-verified and traceable beef from Canada and shipping it into the south Korean market because they cannot supply those cattle from their supply.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recent correspondence circulating among beef producers in my area claims that McDonald's Canada actually purchases beef from South America because it's less expensive, suggesting that age verification is not part of their purchasing criteria. Can the minister please respond to my constituents on that claim?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, I certainly can, Mr. Speaker. The e-mail is a hoax. Let me say that again. The e-mail is a hoax. It originally started in 2002 and every so often starts the rounds again.

McDonald's Canada sources all of its beef from Canada, more than 64 million pounds a year. Also, all of their patties are produced in Spruce Grove, Alberta. In fact, McDonald's recently sent a letter to the federal minister as well as all provincial ministers expressing their support for traceability. At this time only Quebec can supply animals over 30 months of age that are age verified and traceable. So it is absolutely a clear indication that the market is demanding and pushing for traceability.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My primary producers tell me that they'd be comfortable with additional traceability and age verification measures if they knew they would be paid for that work. Some of my constituents claim that the cost of age verification adds as much as $50 per head to a primary producer, yet there's no premium for that work. Can the minister please respond to my primary producers who are frustrated that there's no value for them to comply with mandatory age verification?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, this can be very discouraging. We've provided $30 million through AFRP 2 and have field staff available to help producers with their own operations. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that the cost to age verify is significantly less than $50 a head. As a matter of fact, a national industry organization estimates the cost at less than $1 per head.

When new markets open, Alberta has to be ready with the age-verified beef that they're looking for. As I mentioned earlier, there is very little U.S. packer interest in cattle that are not age verified. Mr. Speaker, we need to use every weapon at our disposal to get the livestock industry back on its feet and out of the funk that we've been in for six years now.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Horse-racing Industry

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Over $300 million of gambling revenue, $200 million in the last five years alone, has been directed from racing entertainment centre slots to horse racing in Alberta. The profitability of the industry is declining, fewer people are going, and there are fewer race days and less money bet. Instead of directing money to support the NGO sector or even to create new green economy jobs, the government throws more money at the horses. To the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit: given that the popularity of horse racing has been declining for 20 years, what was the business case for continuing to support horse racing?

2:30

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, horse racing has been an important and integral part of Alberta's way of life for many, many years, something that many Albertans feel very strongly about. It supports revenue that goes to our department, and it supports itself through some of the funds that flow through our department that help with their breeding programs and other pieces of that.

On the business case, at the time I wasn't part of that discussion, but I know that today, as it was then, horse racing is something that Albertans believe in, and we believe in supporting Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thank you. Back to the same minister, then: how is propping up a particular industry with $300 million, 80 per cent of the revenue in that sector, not in the business of being in business? How is that not so?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, as we've experienced today: a lot of misinformation. The industry generates $399 million annually in economic benefits; 33 and a third per cent of the net proceeds from slot machines located at racetracks goes into community investment programs, which benefit all Albertans; 15 per cent of net proceeds is allocated to the track operators; 51 and two-thirds per cent of the net proceeds is returned to the horse-racing and breeding industry. In 2009-10 approximately $35 million is expected to be returned to Horse Racing Alberta for the horse-racing and breeding industry. Horse Racing Alberta uses this funding for racetrack operations, infrastructure, and breeding programs.

Ms Blakeman: Yes, minister. Those are all the same facts that are in the Horse Racing Alberta brochure that I quoted my facts from.

Now, speaking of picking winners and losers, what makes horse racing so important as to receive the same allocation in funds during a recession when wellness groups or youth recreation and food banks have all had their money eroded? Why is horse racing so important that it gets the same allocation?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, the government of Alberta actually believes in living up to its commitments. As far as I know, none of these organizations have received less funding from us. You know, we sit here when the member from the opposition talks, "Let's promote rodeo" because, somehow, all of a sudden that day they — the Liberals, that is — decide that they support rural Alberta. But every chance they get to take a swipe at the hard-working people of this province who happen to be in rural Alberta, they do.

Mountain Pine Beetle

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, speaking about the hard-working Albertans, some of Alberta's most major forest industry is located within Whitecourt-St. Anne, Mr. Speaker, as you know. The woodlands manager at Blue Ridge Lumber states that central and northern Alberta suffered another major in-flight of mountain pine beetle from British Columbia and the federal mountain parks during July this year; the mountain pine beetle has gained a stronghold in the majority of Alberta's pine forests and presents a major threat to Canada's boreal forest. My questions are all to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Where is Alberta focusing its efforts against the pine beetle?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne is absolutely right. This summer's in-flight from British Columbia is one of the most severe we've had, apparently more severe than the 2006 in-flight. The effect it's had is to push the eastern edge of the pine beetle infestation much further east, now in west-central Alberta between Hinton and Slave Lake. Accordingly, we've moved our control efforts to that leading edge to try to prevent it from spreading eastward into the rest of the boreal or southward into the eastern slopes. Behind that front edge we're working with forestry companies to do salvage operations and then, of course, to replant new forests.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, it's essential that all levels of government and industry remain increasingly committed to fighting the mountain pine beetle. Again to the same minister: does your department have adequate resources to meet this new threat?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has committed very significant resources to the fight against the pine beetle already, and within the current fiscal restraints we will continue to do so. Up to this point this year we have committed an initial $10 million for our spring campaign. Currently we are mapping out our fall and winter strategy based on the surveys we're doing. On a positive note I can tell you that the federal government has been in contact with us, and they've heard our message. This isn't just an Alberta issue or a B.C. issue anymore; it's an issue of concern to all of Canada. We're working with the federal government to get involved as well.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my communities and our industry I want to thank and encourage the minister and his staff at SRD to continue the fight and to keep up the good work. But I want to know from the minister: how does this specific event change Alberta's approach to managing beetle infestations?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I can confirm again that this government is committed to healthy, sustainable forests and, accordingly, a healthy, sustainable forest industry and forest communities. This year's flight does threaten that industry, though, a $9 billion industry, 38,000 jobs, but also affects the boreal, the eastern slopes, the watersheds, and the habitat and recreation that it provides. We are finishing our aerial surveys. We've been doing that in September and October. Based on that, we'll develop new strategies. Probably we'll do less single-tree removal and more stand removal and also, of course, continue our replanting. But, again, containing the spread of pine beetles is not just a concern to Alberta; it's a concern to all of Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Education Funding

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Education hypocrisy. Albertans want those in charge of directing our public education system to adhere to high standards. However, this government's approach to education continues to be: do as I say, not as I do. Because the Ministry of Education doled out $2.5 million in achievement bonuses this year while punishing students with cuts in excess of $80 million, the minister owes Albertans an explanation. Are these stratospheric bonuses intended to reward senior bureaucrats for their ability to slash the Education budget?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I think I answered the question about the $80 million the other day. The hon. member obviously didn't hear the fact that none of the $80 million that we've reprofiled in the Education budget has come from the classroom or affected the students. None of it. We went out to the school boards and said: you have reserves in place; we understand that you saved those reserves for certain purposes, but we're going to ask you this year in the in-year adjustment – and an in-year adjustment is never an easy thing or a fair thing to do – to take a portion of the $80 million, not the full $80 million, a portion of the $80 million out of those reserves, not out of the classroom, not out of teachers, not out of students. So the hon. member has it wrong on that account. He also has it wrong on other accounts, which I hope I'll get another chance to address.

Mr. Chase: Here's your chance, Mr. Minister. The minister has been travelling the province, clawing back the surpluses of school boards that tried to accountably build up their reserves. How can the minister preach fiscal sacrifice to our school boards when he overspent in his own internal office budget by $2.5 million this year?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member would know from my answer the other day that of the $80 million that we had as an in-year adjustment, we took a full $24 million directly out of the department's budget so that we wouldn't have to pass as much on to the school system: $24 million. That's about 20 per cent of our budget. The hon. member is obviously looking at one line in the budget to see whether there has been management. What he has got to take a look at is the overall budget and understand that sometimes you have to go to extra effort to make sure that all stakeholders are part of a considered and rational process of decision-making, and sometimes you spend some money doing that. We do, and we don't apologize for it.

Mr. Chase: Well, $2.5 million of overbudgeting in your own office must have bought an awful lot of pencils and erasers.

This minister needs to finally start aligning his words with his actions when it comes to cuts to public education. What concrete assurances can the minister give to students, parents, teachers, and trustees that even more draconian classroom cuts aren't being dreamt up for next year's budget?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, concrete assurance is the Minister of Infrastructure's job, and he just announced today that we're going to be pouring concrete for four high schools in the province almost right away. We're moving ahead to make sure that we have schools in the right places, that we have teachers in the classrooms for our students, and that we keep our eye on the real agenda, which is to make sure that the students in Alberta have a good education not just for today – world-class, by the way. People from around the country are coming to take a look. I understand that just yesterday at Bishop Grandin in Calgary were people from Australia coming to see what a great job we're doing here so that they can duplicate it over there. But in response to the spending that we're talking about, part of what he's talking about is the fact that we're also looking to the horizon to make sure that we have that great education system for tomorrow.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Community Initiatives Program

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's communities are the building blocks for our province. It helps to provide the communities with facilities and resources for Alberta's families. All my questions are to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. How does the community initiatives program strengthen our local communities?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, we strengthen our communities by supporting them and sustaining them. We put funds into the programs in our communities as stakeholders, and we invest in those projects that the communities deem to be important. To build us a province of strong communities, we have to make safe communities as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I understand that some changes have been made to the CIP program. How will these recent changes affect the CIP program?

Mr. Blackett: Well, first of all, in consultations around the province with different stakeholders and the not-for-profit community, we realized that we had to make some changes to make it more effective for them and to deal with the programs that were funded through the previous Wild Rose program. One thing that we did is move our decisions to a quarterly process so that we can have decisions made and monies funded and expended and passed out to the communities in a more orderly fashion, and it wouldn't be such an administrative burden on our department. We also cut back the amount of money that we were putting out there for such things as schools or a hockey team going to Europe. We want to put that into the community. We have given a group the status of being able to get money on a nonmatching basis, which was available under the Wild Rose Foundation. Now instead of $50,000 they get up to $75,000, and for those international projects they still get the $25,000 that they were eligible for before.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: with these changed deadlines, can you tell me what's happening with the applications of some of my constituents and associations who have already applied?

Mr. Blackett: Well, the process is still a process. What we've done is we've got more resources now. We've got the different granting programs all working together to deliver it better. What is happening is that that means we have more time to work on the actual applications, we have more time to process, and we have more time to actually do some outreach in the communities to make sure that those organizations who are in desperate need, especially today – we have to remember that 5,000 people a month are still coming to Alberta, and that stretches the resources of those great agencies that are already out there.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today.

In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine, and I'll call on the hon. Member for Little Bow to participate but in 30 seconds or less.

Members' Statements (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

International Space Station Live Satellite Hookup

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to stand before the House today to report yet another Alberta first. On September 23 the hon. Minister of Education and I participated in a unique education event that touched the lives of many in my constituency and throughout the province of Alberta. Students and teachers from many of the Palliser regional schools and the community were part of a live satellite hookup with the International Space Station at County Central high in Vulcan. This is the first time an event like this has taken place in Alberta for school-aged children.

Canadian astronaut Dr. Robert Thirsk and his fellow astronauts answered a series of science and technological questions for eager students while they were hurtling live through space at seven kilometres per second.

I became aware of this special project in February of 2009, when I first met with representatives from Alberta Education and the Canadian Space Agency, particularly Marilyn Steinberg. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank all of them for their dedication in making this project a reality. I'd also like to acknowledge the efforts and vision of Palliser regional school board; Kevin Gietz, the superintendent; and the County Central high school students and staff, who were staunch supporters of this learning opportunity.

The support demonstrated by our government recognizes our government's goal to ensure that Alberta students are unique and receive stimulating learning opportunities. Through the SuperNet students in rural Alberta can receive the same opportunities in education as those in urban centres throughout the rest of the province. I rise today to honour the many people in education who continue to contribute greatly to our students' educational experience and to congratulate the Palliser regional school board, County Central high, and the community of Vulcan, which hosted this once-in-a-lifetime event.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I take it the hon. member communicated with Mr. Spock.

Mr. McFarland: "Live long and prosper," he said.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to rise to acknowledge Breast Cancer Awareness Month, which was established to promote awareness of breast cancer and to raise funds for breast cancer research. In Alberta about 1 in 8 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer during their lifetime, so early detection is vital. Screening mammograms can usually find breast cancers several years before they can be felt. Early detection through a mammogram means early treatment, and early treatment means a better chance of survival.

Through the Alberta breast cancer screening program Alberta Health Services is encouraging all women aged 50 to 69 to have a mammogram at least every two years. Women aged 40 to 49 and aged 70 and older should talk to their health care provider about the need for a mammogram. In addition, all women should follow a healthy lifestyle that, one, eliminates smoking, two, limits alcohol consumption, and three, includes a healthy diet and regular exercise.

While breast cancer death rates are declining – and that's good news – we must continue to take steps to prevent this disease and reduce its impact on women in our province.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

The Doorway Street Youth Transition Program

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to recognize an exceptional Calgary organization, The Doorway, which helps young adults living on the streets successfully move into mainstream society. Over the weekend I had the honour of participating in The Doorway's annual walk and run. I must confess that I walked. The Doorway, made up of four staff members and 10 community volunteers, was founded as an experiment in social change in 1988. Its initial goal was to test a cost-effective model for assisting street youth in becoming self-sufficient and productive members of society.

I especially like the fact that their method helps promote self-determination, ownership of the individual's life, and, perhaps most important, accountability for one's choices. Mr. Speaker, The Doorway has had a high success rate in getting youth off the streets and helping them stay off the streets. In fact, over the past 21 years 700 young people have successfully transitioned off the street.

Mr. Speaker, the event was not just about raising money, though. It was about a series of steps towards empowerment. Every step we took was a step towards breaking down barriers, a step towards a less judgmental society, towards breaking down stereotypes, a step towards progress in personal responsibility, a step towards empowerment and towards unleashing the vast potential of those in the midst of challenging times, and a step towards reaching out to those who feel forgotten and offering them a small piece of our hearts.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 55 and section 6(4)(d) of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act it is my pleasure to rise today and table the 2008-09 annual report of the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund. The report is available on the committee website, and copies will be distributed to all members today.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the minister and staff of Alberta Finance and Enterprise and the Alberta Investment Management Corporation as well as the staff from the office of the Auditor General and the Legislative Assembly Office for the dedicated support they provided to the committee throughout the year.

Thank you.

2:50 Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to present a petition signed by 122 people. The petition calls for the rights of currently practising massage therapists to be grandfathered so that the therapists may upgrade their skills gradually without losing the right to practise while the upgrades are taking place.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to present a petition which reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, object to the development and use of nuclear power in Alberta, and we petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government of Alberta to develop an energy policy which encourages conservation, promotes the use of safe, clean, renewable energy sources and explicitly rejects nuclear power in this province.

The petition has 1,032 signatures.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Bill 209

Children's Services Review Committee Act

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Children's Services Review Committee Act, Bill 209.

The committee shall undertake a comparative review of the provision of children's services by employees of the government under the minister's administration and the provision of children's services by organizations and their employees on behalf of the minister, including but not restricted to the quality and effectiveness of the services; the remuneration of the individuals; their training, development, and qualification; their workload and type of work.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 209 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the appropriate number of copies of the Capital Region Board's annual report for 2008. This report provides a summary of the board's activities during the 2008 calendar year and up to the completion of the growth plan at the end of March of 2009.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. chair of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Committee.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to section 16(2) of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act and as chair of the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund it is my pleasure to table the 2008-09 annual report on the fund.

Pursuant to section 15(2) of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act and as chair of the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund it's my pleasure to table the 2009-10 first-quarter update on the fund.

Copies of these reports have previously been distributed to all members.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings today from constituents, all of them concerned with the bed closures at Alberta Hospital. The first is from Kevin and Pascal Wallace, who note that in the alleyways behind our condo, we witness and experience the wandering individuals who are clearly suffering from various mental illnesses. To close more beds is, in our opinion, guaranteed to expand the population of mentally ill homeless people.

The second tabling I have is from more constituents, Ken and Pat MacDonald, who note that they're against the closure and ask to work towards redeveloping Alberta Hospital Edmonton.

The final correspondence from constituents today is from Roger and Georgina Lufkin, whose condo is just down the street from my office. They actually form it as a petition.

We, the undersigned residents . . . petition the Legislative Assembly to redevelop Alberta Hospital Edmonton as necessary in order to maintain all services, programs, and beds operating . . . at Alberta Hospital Edmonton.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have one tabling today. It is a letter that I wrote to the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, dated August 7, 2009, asking for answers regarding the $100 million in five internally restricted funds that are to be liquidated and used to pay down the debt of Alberta Health Services.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter from Mildred Dunlop in Whitecourt. She has concerns that “the Seniors and Citizens of Whitecourt are in great need for an Extended Care or Nursing Home in Whitecourt.”

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the appropriate number of copies of a letter dated October 27, 2009, from the Member for Calgary-Egmont advising my office of the resignation of that member from the Health policy field committee, effective immediately, is now being tabled as well.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mrs. Ady, Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, pursuant to the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation Act the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation 2008-2009 annual report.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You just tabled a letter from the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont resigning from one of the committees of the House. As is normal, there have been changes.

Committee Membership Changes

17. Mr. Hancock moved:
Be it resolved that the following changes to the following standing committees be approved.
 - (a) Standing Committee on Legislative Offices: that Mr. Rogers replace hon. Mr. Webber;
 - (b) Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing: that Ms Redford be appointed to fill a vacancy;
 - (c) Standing Committee on Resources and Environment: that Mr. Denis replace hon. Mr. Webber, that Mr. Jacobs replace Mr. Griffiths;
 - (d) Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services: that Mr. Griffiths replace Mr. Jacobs;
 - (e) Select Special Chief Electoral Officer Search Committee: that Mr. Rogers replace hon. Mr. Webber;
 - (f) Standing Committee on the Economy: that Mr. Hinman be appointed to fill a vacancy.

The Speaker: Hon. members, this is a debatable motion. Any participants?

The Government House Leader has nothing further to say. He doesn't want to close the debate because there was no debate.

Shall I call the question, then?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Government Motion 17 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Alberta Capital Bonds

16. Ms Evans moved:

Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

[Adjourned debate October 27: Mr Campbell]

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and participate in the discussion on Government Motion 16, Alberta capital bonds, an important discussion, I believe, in determining our strategy as we emerge from the global economic downturn. The economic downturn has presented a challenge to Alberta's industries and our government, as it has to many others in Canada and abroad.

While no one fully anticipated the circumstances which confront us, we are in a relatively good position in Alberta. Thankfully we have the sustainability fund to cushion the effects that we face. The sustainability fund is a significant resource for times like this and something that most other jurisdictions do not have and none in Canada that I know of. It is clear that we must maintain and remain committed to replenishing it. The reason we have the fund is the very reason why I'm confident in The Way Forward.

Alberta's industries attract business from around the world, and hard-working people want to establish roots here. We have committed to maintaining a competitive business environment, keeping our corporate income tax low. We will continue to maintain strong foundations for our communities, providing the necessary services for Albertans and their families while keeping the income tax at its current level.

Mr. Speaker, while we find ways to improve the efficiency of service delivery, we also have some continuing priorities which cannot be ignored. We have a responsibility to continue investing in our province and building for tomorrow. This includes, first and foremost, investing in infrastructure. Building infrastructure and keeping our capital plan in sight will maintain a solid foundation for years to come. While our savings will provide a large portion of funding, we can also explore other avenues of raising capital.

Motion 16 proposes the issuance of savings bonds similar to the Alberta capital bonds of the late 1980s and 1990s, a motion that I fully support. Mr. Speaker, issuing bonds to raise capital has a number of benefits at this point in time and would fund important infrastructure priorities. First, savings bonds would promote savings and provide a direct return to their holders. Alberta savings bonds would be among the best investments one could buy as they would be backed by our government and, by extension, the economic climate that our government promotes. Much of the returns could remain with Albertans, and they would be investing directly in their province's future.

In considering who the bonds should be available to, Mr. Speaker, I believe that individual Albertans and Alberta business owners should have the first opportunity to purchase the bonds. This way, Albertans and their families will have increased savings down the road. Typically bonds are also purchased by financial institutions for investment portfolios that they manage. Mutual funds, for example, are comprised of a number of different investments with varying degrees of risk, including stocks and bonds. I am sure that financial institutions would be keen to include Alberta bonds in their investment portfolios as they provide a low risk and guaranteed rate of return to any fund. Many Albertans invest in mutual funds with a number of different financial institutions, so it may be appropriate to allow financial institutions to purchase some amount of the bonds, but again I would like to see individual Albertans and their families given the first opportunity since the bonds would be a secure, long-term investment opportunity.

It would also be preferable to allow as many Albertans as possible the opportunity to purchase the bonds. The bond issuance would be structured, then, with an appropriate maximum purchase amount and a reasonable low minimum. This would afford a fair opportunity to most if not all Albertans.

Speaking for my constituency of West Yellowhead, Mr. Speaker, I can say that there are a number of opportunities to invest in infrastructure using capital raised from the proposed bond issuance. Like many constituencies in the province West Yellowhead relies on highways, primarily highway 40 and highway 16. These highways provide transportation between communities and, most importantly, to the rest of the province and across the border into British Columbia. Road infrastructure supports trade for local economies and allows for the integration with the rest of the province in numerous industrial sectors. The primary industries revolve around natural resources as with much of northern Alberta. Forestry, oil and gas, and mining are the industries that most of the communities in my constituency were born out of, and these industries continue to be the main growth catalyst.

The coal industry in Alberta could only grow when the tracks were laid to Edson and Grande Cache and the Edson Trail allowed people to settle in new communities. As you can see, Mr. Speaker, reaching remote areas allows our industries to flourish. Obviously, we've come a long way since the journey through the mud and muskeg on the Edson trail, with good road infrastructure throughout West Yellowhead and much of the province, and we must keep this up. Maintaining solid infrastructure in our remote areas promotes new industries and economic diversification for our communities.

Community-based infrastructure is also crucial for promoting economic diversification. New industries within a community often rely on new people in addition to new business ties with other regions, Mr. Speaker, so it's important to have sufficient community-based infrastructure in place to make all of our communities attractive places to live, work, and raise a family. As we make our recovery, we must remain committed to funding infrastructure that will lay the foundation for future economic growth, and we must be aware of opportune infrastructure investments for both rural and urban areas that will have some benefit to the province overall. With the cost savings that we stand to benefit from, it is a good time to build, depending on, of course, the project. In raising capital through the issuance of bonds, we can provide a great opportunity for investment to Albertans and value that will remain for years to come in Alberta communities.

As we move forward, Mr. Speaker, I am confident that we will keep our priorities in mind and target funds only to necessary and opportune areas. Infrastructure is one key area for my constituency and, indeed, the entire province. The provincial economy depends on local economies, and local economies depend on basic infrastructure to a large extent. We have maintained a commitment thus far, and I trust that we'll keep sight of our infrastructure requirements moving forward so that future generations do not have to catch up on the crumbling roads.

With clear priorities and prudent spending, Alberta will emerge from this economic downturn as strong as ever. Challenges have been thrown at us in the past, and while this one may have been more intense, we are seeing positive signs already. With continued leadership and determination and a resolute commitment the way forward is ever-promising, with new opportunities on the horizon.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to hearing what my fellow members have to say on this matter in the discussion today. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. Okay. The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased today to speak about the Alberta capital bonds.

The Speaker: Well, no. We're still under the question-and-comment period.

Mr. Hayden: Oh. I'm sorry, sir.

The Speaker: That being the case, I will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, then the hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak to the motion with respect to the issuance of provincial bonds. I want to talk a little bit about the path that the government has been going down in terms of infrastructure, and I particularly want to talk about how that's going to be financed.

Mr. Speaker, it's become clear to me that when the province was actively involved in the pursuit of paying down the debt under the previous Premier, one of the things that was done in order to do that was to minimize expenditures on infrastructure. As a result, our infrastructure aged and required replacement. It had higher costs of maintenance because if you let your maintenance go, then the costs rise, and that's actually what happened here. So we got to the point where although we had paid down our financial debt, the debt on our infrastructure was growing at the same time. We didn't get ourselves out of debt, but what we did do was shift where the debt is. If you double up your payments on your mortgage on your house and you don't fix the roof or the foundation, you have incurred a real debt nevertheless. Even though you've paid off your mortgage, you may not be further ahead. I submit that that's precisely the position that the government put this province in.

Having said that, I am pleased to see that there is an increased interest in infrastructure projects in this province and that there are more expenditures going towards infrastructure, which is badly needed not only to replace the outdated infrastructure that was not replaced in a timely way but also, of course, to facilitate the growth of the province. I also think that investment in infrastructure plays an important stimulative role at a time when the economy is not what it once was, if I can just put it that mildly. So I think that those kinds of expenditures are timely, and I'm pleased to see that the government is continuing to go ahead with them.

I want to talk about the situation around our budget, at least as the President of the Treasury Board saw it when I asked him questions during the estimates debate. I'm going to quote a little bit from Hansard from that committee on April 28 of this year. We had quite a discussion on it. I have to thank the minister because he was quite forthcoming, and I got a much better understanding of where the government is going in terms of the budget of the province.

Now, one of the things that I learned is that in next year's budget – well, we knew this from the budget – the government is looking for $2 billion in savings. When I asked the minister, he talked about $1.3 billion of that coming from reductions in the operating budget of the government. So $1.3 billion of the $2 billion coming from reductions in the operating budget. Now, keep in mind this is back in April, so things may have changed, but I thought it was quite interesting.

He also talked about the expenditures on capital, and he talked about planned expenditures of $7 billion, of which he admitted that the government was intending to borrow $1.1 billion. That means that out of the revenues of the province infrastructure spending of $5.9 billion would be financed. So at the same time as the government is looking for $2 billion and $1.3 of that coming out of program expenditures, they're paying from government revenues from that year $5.9 billion.

I asked the minister a question. I said: why not increase your borrowings on the capital side by $1.3 billion, so it would be $1.1 billion plus $1.3 billion, or $2.4 billion, in debt financing of infrastructure, and you won't have to make dramatic program cuts on the operating side? You know, he said something about how I should probably talk to the Treasurer or something like that, and we didn't really get much farther on that point. But I think that it's interesting and I think that it's relevant here because if by issuing government bonds for capital projects, for infrastructure projects, we can in fact replace some of the general revenue money flowing into infrastructure, which – I don't know if in the province they call it pay-as-you-go, but that's certainly the name we had for it in the city of Edmonton. When you paid cash for your infrastructure instead of borrowing, we called it pay-as-you-go. So instead of $5.9 billion, we reduce that by $1.3 billion. Basically, we wouldn't have to cut.

I want to just make this clear that the decision to reduce spending in next year's budget by $1.3 billion is a conscious decision that doesn't necessarily have to be. The government could, by increasing its borrowing or, I guess, reducing the amount they're spending on infrastructure, ensure that we do not have to make those cuts. In other words, Mr. Speaker, we have enough money coming in in order to avoid any cuts at all to program spending in next year's budget, but we would either have to reduce the capital budget or we would have to borrow more.

It brings me to the question of bonds. I've looked through some of the speeches yesterday and some of the government comments. I'm not sure that I was able to find what the issue was going to be. In other words, how much debt through bonds does the government intend to undertake, and will this be used to offset borrowing in the market or to supplement it? In other words, if we used these bonds to supplement the borrowings we're already doing, it would be possible, in my view, to fund all of our program services in the next year with no cuts whatsoever. There is revenue available to this province in the budget, according to the government's own estimates, that is sufficient for that, plus a considerable amount left over to pay for infrastructure. The question is whether or not the government wants to cut and lay off on the operating side in order to finance more spending for infrastructure on the capital side.

Mr. Speaker, I think that bonds are a reasonable way to go if you are going to borrow, and I know that the government has had a hard time over the last few years getting back to the point where they're even prepared to let those words pass their lips. They used to be dirty words on the government side when I first came here. Now the government seems to have adopted a more reasonable position. In my view, borrowing on the operating side, running a deficit on the operating side, is wrong. It's unnecessary, it's not responsible, and the government shouldn't do it except in extreme circumstances.

But it is reasonable and prudent to borrow on the capital side. All governments do it. Municipal governments have been doing it for many years. What you need is a revenue stream sufficient to retire the debt.

One of the things about major infrastructure expenditures that lends itself to borrowing is that they're often very long-term projects that are used for a long period of time. It's not fair for the current generation or current group of taxpayers to pay all of the costs of a major capital project if it's going to last for 50 years. So by borrowing you spread the costs and the responsibility of that infrastructure over the generations of people that are going to use the infrastructure.

I think that the idea of getting Albertans involved in lending the province money to build capital projects is sound. I have no objection to it, and I would rather borrow the money from Albertans than I would New York banks. I think that it makes sense, so in this particular case, Mr. Speaker, I'm going to support the government's proposal. I think that it's a good one. But I want to urge members opposite to really question and challenge the whole idea of limiting the borrowing on the capital side, spending what could be operating money on capital projects when it means layoffs of employees and rollbacks, perhaps, in their contracts but certainly reductions in services for Albertans, whether it be in education or health care or any of the other important services that the province offers. These cuts are not necessary, based on the information given to me by the President of the Treasury Board, absolutely not required. They are a deliberate decision of the government, which could be changed if a different set of priorities were adopted.

Mr. Speaker, with that, just to indicate that I do think that the bond program, although we haven't seen it in any detail, in concept is a good idea and one that I am quite comfortable in supporting.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Then the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have previously sent to the table officers an amendment that I would like to propose. When that amendment is distributed, I'd be pleased to argue it.

The Speaker: Hon. member, the amendment is being circulated. Please proceed.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity. The amendment, which members will soon receive, suggests that Motion 16 be amended by striking out "the issue of Alberta capital bonds," which is an open-ended target, and substituting "the issue of a maximum of $250 million in Alberta capital bonds."

The concern we have as the Liberal caucus is that the government has collected so much money over the previous 15 years through a variety of revenues, mostly having to do with the good fortune of our nonrenewable resource revenues. We've had a very stable gas economy for a number of years, and our oil was rather stable during those years as well. Unfortunately, when the bottom fell out of the market globally and the government's revenue was reduced to the point where the government is now running a $7 billion deficit, we're concerned about the government's ability to manage money. What we're suggesting with the $250 million limit in Alberta capital bonds is: demonstrate to Albertans how well this $250 million worth of bonds will be managed, and if you can demonstrate a better fiscal track record than what we've seen over the last 25 years, then we would consider raising a higher amount of bonds to support infrastructure.

Now, we are grateful to the government for acknowledging one of the Liberal proposals, and that is the stability fund. Because of the adoption of the stability fund, we have what the government calls a sustainability fund, which, when combined with the capital fund, provides a $16 billion buffer that other provinces do not have the good fortune to have. However, you cannot brag about your buffer without actually utilizing it for the good of the province, and rather than starting to commit dollars out of that buffer in terms of capital projects or preventing operational cuts, the government continues to talk about how wonderful it is to have that $16 billion instead of doing something with it. What we have seen already, first out of the chute, is in the Education ministry a cut of $80 million. In terms of the health care superboard and the reorganization of health care, instead of delivering efficiencies it has delivered $1.3 billion in combined health debts.

Now, with regard to the $250 million being a starting point, what we see is a series of cuts, for example, to health services. We have seen podiatry services no longer being funded. We have seen chiropractic services no longer being funded. We have gone from a need for 1,400 nurses to a hiring freeze, and the only nurses that are currently being sought out to any large degree are temporary, contract nurses. Where the buffer, as I refer to it, the $16 billion buffer, if utilized strategically, would help offset the need for cuts, unfortunately, the cuts continue. Not only do the cuts continue, but the cost of providing services is being passed on to a variety of individuals. Seniors, for example, have seen the cost of their Alberta Blue Cross health care insurance rise threefold, and this is affecting them very directly.

The government has talked about buffering Albertans, whether it be in Education or Health or Children and Youth Services, where there has been a freeze, from the very beginning of the announcement of the budget. What we're saying with this particular motion of $250 million is: demonstrate a new track record; demonstrate that that $250 million will be assigned to very specific projects from which we can see the value.

In addition to the $16 billion buffer in the combined sustainability fund, various ministries have within their budgets pockets of significant amounts of money. For example, in the health care budget there is approximately $1.7 billion assigned for capital building. Now, considering that the southeast hospital's costs rose threefold from, initially, in the area of $500 million to very close now to $1.5 billion, there isn't a whole lot of wiggle room in that particular budget. It would make sense, as I say, on an assigned basis to utilize a portion of the $250 million in capital bonds, that we are suggesting, to designate towards, for example, completing the number of mental health care beds that were cut from that particular project.

We're very concerned that these bonds be very specifically targeted and accounted for as part of the fiscal responsibility. We have seen what happens when the way out of a bust is cutbacks. We've gone through it in the 1990s. We saw the beginnings of the centralization of budgeting with the loss of autonomy of school boards to collect the educational property portion of their budget. That used to give them the autonomy to control half of their budget. They no longer have that ability. We've seen the move, as I said, towards the centralization of health care. We're supposed to have faith that at some point the bleeding will stop and the success of the program will be enhanced, but again the government is calling on Albertans to have faith, trust us: we're not going to set any limits to the borrowing or the issuing of bonds.

So the government has gone from its dependence on the fluctuation of nonrenewable resource revenues to its dependence on casino and lottery funds, and now it's hitching its falling star to Albertans investing in bonds.

Now, if Albertans were to look at some of the investments this government has made in the last year and a half, $3 billion was lost from the heritage trust fund. We've had investments in asset-backed commercial paper which produced disastrous results – for example, Alberta Treasury Branches – and it's the Alberta taxpayers that are on the hook for paying back that amount of money.

Again, what we're proposing in this particular motion is: let's have a reasonable experimental sum, $250 million, in terms of capital bonds. If this initial amount serves as an incentive for much-needed capital projects, great. Then there will be confidence, and we can guarantee that it will almost be like a commercial for Albertans to see how well the government has done with its initial $250 million bond investment.

What Albertans have seen over the last 15 years is infrastructure deficits increasing dramatically. In Calgary alone the combined infrastructure deficit of the school boards, Calgary public and Calgary Catholic, is rapidly approaching a billion dollars. The overall infrastructure deficit – and the hon. Minister of Infrastructure can correct the figures that I'm rounding off – is in the area of $10 billion. Now, that's on top of our $7 billion debt. We have the unfunded liability in the teachers' agreement that is in the area of $10 billion. The point I'm trying to make here is that when you combine our current deficit of $7 billion with the $20 billion that I have pointed out in terms of infrastructure and the education unfunded liability, we're rapidly approaching and surpassing the $23 billion deficit that Ralph Klein faced. The way out of that deficit is not further borrowing. Therefore, we have to be strategic.

Now, if Albertans are going to buy into the notion of bonds, then they have to have confidence that when it comes to cashing in those bonds, the interest will be there. The government can say: well, you know, look at our total overall worth. If we look at AIMCo, for example, we're looking at in excess of $70 billion. Well, it's not as though we can take that $70 billion of government buildings and roads to the bank and cash them in and start paying off the interest on the bonds that Albertans have invested in. The majority of the assets we have are of a fixed nature and are not something that we can, as I say, cash in.

So what we are proposing in this particular amendment is: let us take a $250 million experiment, a type of leap of faith for Albertans. It's easy to sell the notion of the $250 million in bonds. Building a Better Alberta, for example, might be the slogan. But if Albertans are going to be convinced that they've paid out their taxes – they've heard the Auditor General's reports about billions of royalty dollars not being collected according to the old royalty system, and now they've seen five changes to the current royalty system. They've lost faith in the government's ability to manage our resource wealth. They have been lining up for days in the cold around the outside of shopping centres to get simple flu inoculations. They have seen a lack of efficiencies in a number of government departments. They have witnessed $44 million of bonusing going out in the midst of a recession.

3:30

So the Alberta taxpayer has to have a reason to, I would suggest, re-invest in the Alberta process. It is for that reason that we're saying: start with a reasonable amount, a quarter of a billion dollars of bonds. Prove to Albertans how expediently this investment can be utilized. Promise specific school constructions. Promise that hospitals will be built in a timely manner with the capital funds generated from the bond issues. Let them know that highway 63 – for example, a series of the $250 million bond issues would be bought potentially by people from the Fort McMurray region to finally see the twinning of their deadly road, highway 63. Give Albertans specific reasons for specific bond issues.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available on this amendment, questions and responses. We're dealing with an amendment. The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: I just wanted to say that I think that, you know, it is a good idea that you've come up with in terms of limiting what this bond issue should be, but I do believe that it is something we should very carefully consider, that putting this particular number on might not be the right number. For instance, we want to make sure that the people of Alberta who want to invest in Alberta do have that option. In other words, we shouldn't make that ceiling too low. Yes, this is something new and exciting, and I think it's something that Albertans want in terms of Alberta bonds. Yes, I think that we shouldn't jump into it with, you know, an unlimited limit on the top. But I do believe that that is a number that should be studied, and I would ask that we get further feedback from the finance department on this issue. I do not believe that we should be deciding in this Legislature with insufficient information on one particular limit today.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Others to participate on Standing Order 29(2)(a)? Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: I'm sorry. I was going to participate, not question and answer.

The Speaker: No, we're still on 29(2)(a).

That being the case, no further questions, I'll now call on, as I indicated before, the hon. Minister of Infrastructure on the amendment.

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, if I may, a clarification: is there not further discussion to be held on the amendment that has been introduced?

The Speaker: That's what I just finished saying, hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Sit down, please. I'm calling on the hon. Minister of Infrastructure to continue the debate on the amendment.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Similar to the speaker previous, I don't think that we have the proper information with respect to what an appropriate limit would be at this time for the bonds. I think that there are questions that would need to be answered and need to be debated and discussed with respect to possibly even numbers of issuances, limits both high and low for investments, and rules surrounding that. So I have to speak in opposition to this specific amendment.

The Speaker: Others on the amendment? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East on the amendment.

Ms Pastoor: On the amendment, yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to say that I was pleased to hear from the other side that the idea, the concept, of actually setting a limit would be a good one. The other thing that I would like to see is where this limit is set, despite the fact that we think that a quarter of a billion dollars is a large chunk of money to be sort of allocated. But this will come back as a bill, so we will hopefully have more specifics.

What I think should happen is that you have the projects on the table. You know what those projects are going to cost and then go to the citizens, to Albertans, and say: these are the projects, and this is how much money we need. I would suspect that the quarter of a billion dollars may well cover the projects that actually the government has in mind.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Additional speakers?

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall under section 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Kang: No. I will talk about the amendment.

The Speaker: Okay. Anybody want to participate under 29(2)(a)?

Then I will recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall on the amendment.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to speak in favour of the amendment because that's why we have the budgets, so the government should know how much their infrastructure budget is for the next year. We cannot have just an open-ended bond issue and get faster into debt than we need to. It's a good idea to build infrastructure. I think that in 1993 when the government was cutting back, they cut back too deeply on that, and that's the mistake we made. It's a good idea to issue the bonds and then build the infrastructure when we can build it cheaper, but there should be some kind of ceiling put on issuing the bonds. I'm tabling the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Section 29(2)(a) is available for question or response to the last speaker. Does anyone wish to participate?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Bufferalo on the amendment.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak in favour of the amendment brought forward by my colleague from Calgary-Varsity. I think this is a good measure that shows a level of prudence going forward that we would be wise to accept in this Chamber. If we look back and simply have legislation written as a blank cheque, where governments can continue to go back to the capital markets on an unlimited basis without having some sound debate in this Legislature on what the ramifications are both for now and for the citizens of the future in Alberta, I think that would be done with great peril.

There is no need to look further than the ebbs and flows of our finances here in Alberta. Over the course of our existence they have tended to skyrocket when oil prices are high and, of course, then plummeted down to the bottom when oil prices are low. What we have to do in this province is find some middle ground where we have a stable funding mechanism in place that goes forward and takes these ebbs and flows of the vagaries of the economy in stride – and we don't need to needlessly herk and jerk – and go forward in whatever direction the economy seems to be going. The government could go forward and plan on a more stable basis. I think that is a direction that we need to go.

As I got to speak to the regular part of the bill yesterday, I was supportive of this bill but with some limits to it, and this would actually be a limit. I know the Member for Calgary-Bow said that this is a new and exciting thing, but I think we only have to look back to 1986 when this was also maybe considered a new and exciting thing that went until 1997. That new and exciting thing led to some consequences. I guess I would caution that lipstick on a pig is still a pig. If these things result in accumulating a vast amount of debt, although this may look like a new and exciting program now, these vast accumulations of debt will need be paid for by future generations of Albertans.

So let's watch the way we dress this up. This is debt. Despite that members of this hon. House are trying to put forward that this is some great opportunity, it's debt. Now, hopefully it is financed by regular Albertans, and hopefully we have a limit on it like the one suggested by my hon. friend from Calgary-Varsity. Nonetheless, if we don't accept this amendment, I think it would behoove us in this House to come up with another amendment, another reasonable limit that we can discuss. Should we reach that limit and should we reach a time in Alberta where we have to for the security of our future come back here and issue another round of bonds, then we do so with some sober second thought and some more discussion in this House and listening to our constituents.

Thank you very much for this opportunity to speak, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to confess a little confusion here, and I'm wondering if I could ask the hon. member opposite to clear that up for me. First of all, we're debating a motion here, not a bill. The government has proposed a motion surrounding capital bonds, and in debating that motion it would open to all of us to make suggestions about whether we think it should be capped or whether we think it should be, you know, applied to certain kinds of projects. I mean, any member is free to stand within this House and propose to shape the future direction of the government here. I'm a little confused as to the purpose of an amendment at this point anyway.

I'm wondering if that member or other members opposite are aware, because it doesn't seem like they are or that that particular member is, that the government just doesn't get unending, wide-open borrowing power as a result of this motion or any other motion in the House. In order to proceed with borrowing or expenditures, our government has to table a budget in this House, and that gets freely debated. So the point of this particular amendment is kind of missing, at least in my mind, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. member, do you wish to respond?

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I thank the member for the comments. It's just that, needless to say, I think it is imperative on why I spoke to the amendment. Although it may not be specifically the correct time due to the correct channels or even the appropriate time, I think it always is a wise discussion in this House to look at our past financial practices, some of the things that have gone wrong in the past, and maybe what we can look forward to in the future. But if we brought them up at the wrong time, well, so be it. We got a chance to discuss it, discuss sort of the perils of what Alberta has been through, the future as we see it and hope it is. I hope we didn't delay the member from going somewhere else, if he had to be somewhere else, to listen to this. Nonetheless, I'm hopeful that our comments are taken in the vein they are offered in sort of helping us go forward on a reasonable and prudent financial footing.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available should there be additional comments. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on 29(2)(a).

Mr. Chase: Yes. Very, very specifically to the hon. government whip: what we're suggesting is providing structure.

Mr. Oberle: You're supposed to be asking him questions, not me.

Mr. Chase: This is a comment as well as a question, sir. You asked a question which I am providing a comment for, and that comment has to do with providing structure. We cannot simply operate on the trust-us methodology and have decisions made by the government members for which our only input is a discussion in the budget. That's why it's very important that we structure our discussions with regard to the purpose of bonds and the amount of bonds we would consider looking into.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I take it that there's no further comment under 29(2)(a).

Okay. We're back to the debate, then, on the amendment. The hon. Member for St. Albert on the amendment.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to make a few comments. Firstly, I would just like to thank the hon. Member for Peace River for clarifying the process. Further to that, in reflecting on the amount, I appreciate the need to exercise some caution. When we think of $250 million these days – as I recall, just a year or so ago the city of Edmonton proposed and is now building an overpass, and I believe the cost of that was $250 million. Really, $250 million isn't an awful lot to work with, so I really am concerned that we put such a low limit on it at this point in time. I think that as the hon. Member for Peace River has suggested, the budget is the proper place to get into details of debate on the amount. Therefore, I'm urging members of the House to defeat the amendment.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. We're in a new time period. We're in a recession. As the hon. Minister of Infrastructure pointed out, we're able now to build, traditionally, I'll add, as opposed to P3, four new 1,500-student high schools at the price of $93 million. So $250 million now, where infrastructure is 40 per cent cheaper, will actually have a fairly big bang for a quarter of a billion bucks. It would have purchased for us, using the high school analogy, 10 high schools, much needed, that would accommodate 1,500 students apiece. So please do not suggest that $250 million will not go considerably further now than it did in the time when that overpass was being costed out.

The opportunity during a recession to wisely invest in capital infrastructure that will have the greatest benefit for Albertans goes without saying, and the idea of strategically investing in communities for specific projects that those communities would like to see built and gaining interest on those bond investments could be attractive if Albertans have confidence in the investments.

The Speaker: There's still time under the Q and A, 29(2)(a) here. No, no, no. That's not correct. The hon. Member for St. Albert started participating at 3:46. There's still time. He gave his debate on the amendment. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity raised questions under Q and A. Any additional questions under Q and A?

Then we're back now to the debate on the amendment. Are there additional speakers on the amendment?

If there are no further speakers on the amendment, then the question will be called.

[Motion on amendment A1 lost]

The Speaker: We're now going to return to the debate with respect to this particular motion. The next person up to be recognized is the hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to speak today with respect to the Alberta capital bond issue and a retail bond program for Albertans. This would give Albertans an opportunity to invest in their own province. It would give them an opportunity to be involved in the building of the infrastructure that they all need in their own communities. It's even more critical at times like these that we build this infrastructure.

Projects do a number of things for us in Alberta and for Albertans. The projects we are working on now are keeping thousands of Albertans working. It also shows the commitment of this government to a strengthening economy and to a recovery that will be very well placed. The building and the upgrading that's needed in facilities, as I mentioned, gets many people working. It injects the capital into our economy. That being said, we must ensure that that investment is strategic and that it provides very good value for Alberta taxpayers.

Investments in services, transportation networks, and facilities is going to meet the needs of a growing population and improve the quality of life for Albertans and continue to support the economy for years to come. We have to remember that many of the investments that we make in infrastructure serve us not just today but serve us for generations in this province, and we need this infrastructure to support Alberta's economic rebound. This is a global correction, Mr. Speaker, and this is a global correction that's going to bring Alberta out stronger than before we entered into the economic correction that's taking place.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

I'll just speak for a moment about: why build? Well, it's one way to invest in our future. As I mentioned before, it generates employment in our province. It's estimated that every $1 million that's invested in infrastructure projects supports 1,160 jobs. When we break that down and we take a look at what that means to Alberta now for the investment that we're making, this year's investment brings close to 80,000 jobs to the province of Alberta. These include jobs of construction workers, but it's also the spin-off employment in the supply sector and the retail sector. Of course, very importantly, it provides work for the skilled tradespeople that we want so badly to keep in our province and attract to our province.

Alberta capital bonds would be available only in Alberta and only for Albertans, including corporations and Alberta-based trusts. Our finance minister talked a little bit yesterday and has been quoted, and I just want to show my support for some of the comments that have been made. The bonds, of course, would offer a competitive rate of return, and they would be backed, of course, by the province. In saying that they'd be backed by the province, it's recognized worldwide that Alberta is one of the safest investment environments available in today's economic climate. By investing in infrastructure, Albertans would be investing in our future as a province. They would be able to invest and the bonds must be set and the investment must be set at a level that all Albertans have an opportunity to invest and benefit from these bonds.

The 2009-12 capital plan contains significant infrastructure investments. It's an integral part of our economic recovery plan. Over the past three years nearly $20 billion has been invested in capital projects, and this includes roads, schools, hospitals, and other infrastructure. We can look at the list of projects completed last year alone, and it's, of course, huge: things like fire halls, adding waterlines, paving highways, building interchanges – the list goes on and on and on – renovations and expansions of health care facilities, openings of schools and adding postsecondary classroom spaces, creating additional affordable housing. All of these projects employed Albertans, and all of them positively impacted our economy.

Work is under way now to establish the 2010-13 capital plan. We continue to invest in infrastructure. The key component of the plan is to deal with current economic conditions, and we're taking advantage of the improved pricing in the construction sector, as has been mentioned. Construction is less expensive, and as stated today in this House, the latest project came in at 40 per cent less than engineering estimates. So we're getting more value for taxpayers' dollars on the projects that we're doing now.

As we look forward at major government facility projects, of course, there are some very large ones out there that we're working on at the moment: the construction of the new remand centre here in Edmonton, 8,000 new child care spaces by 2011 on top of the 6,000 spaces already provided. Health-related capital projects are being reviewed and aligned with the strategic plan to improve the service available to Albertans. I would mention also as we stand in this beautiful building the redevelopment on the Leg. Grounds of new spaces in a more environmentally friendly and energy efficient environment that we're working on. We want to work towards improvements. The results are going to be better systems for our people, better facilities for our people, and an improved quality of life.

Budget 2009 announced that Alberta would borrow $3.3 billion over the next three years to finance capital investments in infrastructure. The Fiscal Responsibility Act, of course, prohibits borrowing to finance operating shortfalls, deficits in other words, in those areas. However, the act does allow us to borrow to finance capital investment for infrastructure.

The normal way a province borrows is by issuing bonds rather than borrowing from a bank. Bonds can be sold in capital markets, to large institutions, pension plans, and so on, but they can also be sold to individual retail investors. The savings bonds that we're talking about are just that. Both methods are going to be required for the $3.3 billion. A bond is simply a legal instrument, a promise to pay, that I think will work very well for what we're intending. It can be sold at financial institutions such as banks and credit unions and through investment dealers.

To this point, Mr. Speaker, the province has borrowed $1.1 billion through public markets. Of course, that was grabbed up immediately because of the safety of an investment in this province. We're considering borrowing the remainder over the coming months. Alberta needs to be able to borrow money at the best possible terms, and we are able to do that because of our excellent credit rating.

Previously issued bonds had a maximum purchase of $100,000. ATB's recent issue of the government growth notes had a maximum of $25,000. Having a maximum purchase limit keeps the focus on individual Albertans as investors. I mentioned earlier that it needs to be affordable for all Albertans to take advantage of it and be able to realize the investment opportunities that are there for them.

Long-term planning is key for our province to keep moving forward. We know the economy is recovering and will recover more, and people are going to continue to move to this province. Right now, even with the correction that's taking place globally, we are increasing our population by the size of a Red Deer every year. The reason that they're coming to Alberta is that this is still where the opportunities are far superior to other areas. We have to make sure we're ready for these people, and we have to have the things in place that they need, from schools to hospitals to roads to public transit. If you just looked at the Red Deer phone book and looked at the infrastructure involved in that phone book, it would give you an idea of what we have to do as Albertans. Before we do anything else, we have to provide that infrastructure for these new Albertans. We need this infrastructure. People will continue to come. We need to be cost-effective and innovative. We're not talking about creating new projects. We have a great list of priorities in the province, and we have a great plan for where the most important needs are. Those are what need to be met first.

We've set the standard in so many areas with P3s, core schools, modular designs, standard designs. We're applying those innovative ideas to health facilities now. We're doing these things in the best interests of Albertans. We're doing it to protect their investment with the tax dollars that they give us to work with.

We expect to be back in a surplus situation, but while we move to that, we need to focus on helping seniors, low-income Albertans. We need to support the services to Albertans that they need the most. I'm talking about health care, education, and seniors' benefits. I think Alberta capital bonds would enable Albertans to invest directly in the province's future, and I know they have faith in that future. They can invest in public infrastructure. They will receive value as a taxpayer. They will also support the promotion of jobs in the province, and they will help us prepare for a return to economic growth. Albertans will know which hospitals, schools, and other public projects they're helping to build. We will let them know that. Individual Albertans can participate, and they can participate in building Alberta's future. Mr. Speaker, I think it's a win for us all.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm pleased to hear that the government has learned somewhat from the mistakes of the 1990s. We got out of that bust period on the backs of public-sector employees. We got out of that particular bust on the backs of seniors. There was a building freeze, basically, during that time period. So the idea of building our way out of the bust does have a most definite appeal.

As the Minister of Infrastructure stated, the notion that we can get 40 per cent more for our dollar than we could during that highly inflationary time period, driven to a large degree by the government's approval of so many projects going on at the same time that we didn't have the workers or the capital for those projects – the recession has taught us a degree of restraint, and it has also given us some hope for how we get out of our current recessionary period.

I am very pleased that the Minister of Infrastructure agrees with me about the specificity of the projects that we need. Yes, we need schools. Yes, we need hospitals. Yes, we need roads. We have needed those facilities for the last 15 years, and this does give us an opportunity.

I also appreciate the fact that the minister spoke specifically about the specificity of projects. We could issue a series of bonds, for example, that would be, I'm sure, snapped up in a particular community if they knew that those bonds were going to build a school in their area. This has been the case in northwest Calgary, where parents previously proposed paying half the value of building a school with sort of a bond circulated circumstance, with the government covering the other half. It makes considerably more sense than sending parents out to casinos to pay for educational basics.

It makes absolute sense, and I'm sure a number of seniors as well as juniors, for that matter, would invest in long-term care for themselves and in the cases of their family members. If they could put this money into specific long-term care projects through a bond issue, then it would make terrific sense. So I'm pleased to hear from the hon. Minister of Infrastructure that we are building our way out of this area as opposed to breaking the backs of individuals.

To the minister the question would be . . . [interjections] Just for those who don't know the rules, this is a comment as well as a question opportunity.

Point of Order

Question-and-comment Period

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, the Government House Leader has raised a point of order.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 13 I'd just like an interpretation from the Speaker. This is five minutes set aside for comments and questions, and under the general provisions that have been in play with respect to comments and questions generally, there is a short comment or question allowing for a short response, not for one person to use five minutes. There may be others who wanted to raise questions or comments who are not afforded the opportunity if one member uses it all up with his very, very long comment. I'd just like an interpretation from the Speaker. Usually the comment or question is kept short. There's nothing stopping him from having a second one if no one else wants to have a question, I guess, but for him to presume that he has the whole five minutes to re-enter into the debate is not in accordance with the practice of the House.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, I think that the Government House Leader is absolutely right that by tradition the question-and-answer period allows for questions and answers to clarify certain specifics of a particular speech that's been made, but I don't see anything in here that states specifically that a person can't take five minutes to ask the question.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. If you wish to cut down on my conversations, the way would be for more members of the government to participate.

Debate Continued

Mr. Chase: My question to the hon. Minister of Infrastructure is: do you think it would be valid to have bonds for specific projects that local communities could purchase to achieve the infrastructure in their area that they've been waiting to see rise?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do believe there are some possible merits to what the hon. member is suggesting. My biggest concern, though, is that the priority list that we have in the province with respect to infrastructure projects that need to take place does not include any calculation with respect to the wealth of the people in that particular community. They deal directly with the need in that particular community. So for a community that may not have the financial ability to raise funds for bonds, it wouldn't necessarily mean that the people in that community didn't badly need a seniors' residence or badly need an elementary school or badly need a high school. I would suggest it wouldn't serve us well to go away from our priority list because it's based on the needs of the people of Alberta.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise in debate on Government Motion 16 and to move another amendment to the motion. I have the amendment here. I will deliver it to the table, and then as soon as there is an opportunity to distribute the amendment, I will speak to it.

The Acting Speaker: Okay. We will pause for a moment until the pages deliver the amendment.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The amendment is being distributed now. If I can just grab a copy of it myself – I gave all the copies to the table – I'll read the amendment into the record. I move that Motion 16 be amended by striking out "the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities" and substituting "the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government for a maximum term of 10 years in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities."

Mr. Speaker, the intent of this amendment is in some ways similar to the intent of the amendment proposed by my colleague for Calgary-Varsity, which was voted down in this House a few minutes ago. The intent of the amendment is to put some parameters on this motion that we are discussing in the House today. The motion as brought forward by the government read simply: "Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities."

Certainly, Mr. Speaker, the way I read that, there are two clear interpretations that you could take from that. One is that all we're being asked to do here is sort of in principle say: "Well, yeah. You know, it's a good idea, kind of like motherhood and sunshine and puppies and rainbows and lollipops and hotdogs at baseball games. It's a good idea. Yeah, I think I like it." The other interpretation is that we're being asked to pretty much hand over a blank cheque to the government to determine the parameters of this thing as they see fit, and I have a problem with that based on the spending records of this government over the last few years that I've been in this House.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I took a look at the closing numbers on the TSX today just before I got the chance to rise and speak here, and I notice that the TSX is down 248 points today, down more than 800 points from its 52-week high, which I believe was reached just last week or perhaps the week before. It's been on a downward slide for a few days now. Certainly, when you look at numbers like that, you go, "Well, gosh, Alberta capital bond: set period to maturity, set interest rate, backed by the government of Alberta," which despite its profligate spending ways is, you know, judged by most financial institutions and analysts to be in somewhat better shape financially than the taco stand down the street, that sort of thing. It might be a good investment. You know, I might like to go out and buy a whole bunch of these things. But, by the same token, I want to know that five or 10 years hence, on the off chance that these guys are still in power, the government of Alberta is actually going to be able to pay me back when it's time for me to cash in my Alberta bonds. That's why we're trying to put some restrictions on just what they can do with this motion.

Now, I recognize the comments of the Member for Peace River, I believe it is, a little earlier to the effect that motions like these are in a sense more principle motions, I guess we could call them, and that the details are to follow, but what we're discussing right now is the landscape of the thing. You know, there's a very different shape to a landscape that's a prairie landscape and a landscape that's a mountainous landscape or a landscape that ends in a fairly big and deep body of water, that kind of thing, so I think it behooves us in this House to put some shape and form on the landscape that we're debating.

I'm proposing that we amend the motion so that it would read, "Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government for a maximum term of 10 years in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities" as a way of doing that. Now, let me explain. When I talk about a maximum term of 10 years in this amendment, I'm not suggesting that we're saying: this is how long the term of each bond issue should be. What we're suggesting here is that this motion give the government a window of 10 years to issue bonds, at the end of which time the government has to come back to the Legislature with another motion saying: we want to continue doing this.

I would remind the Speaker and all members present – and I guess this goes to the notion that if you can live long enough, everything old becomes new again – that we have been down this road before, in fact by the very same name. In 1987 Alberta first introduced Alberta capital bonds. Now, let me see: 1987. That was 22 years ago. That was a generation ago, and the Premier at the time, Don Getty, was leading a government that was racking up – what? – a deficit. That's what it was, a deficit. It was racking up a deficit because energy prices weren't what they used to be. There were a number of other circumstances that came into play that were not identical to what we're facing today. That's certainly the case. We certainly have not had to cope with 20 per cent interest rates or anything like that in this go-round, like we did the last time, but every economic setback, every economic downturn brings with it its own set of circumstances that are unique to that downturn and its own fresh set of hell, if you will, for people who are caught in it, and this one has the potential to do that, too.

In 1987, when we brought Alberta capital bonds in, the government of Alberta was starting on a course, that turned out to be pretty costly in a number of ways, of running successive deficits and putting the people of this province into a collective debt. We all know what the end result of that was. It was brutal cuts and deep cuts in 1993 and '94 and '95, in through there, that balanced the budget – true enough – but as my colleague from Calgary-Varsity pointed out, it balanced the budget on the backs of a lot of people who in some cases are still trying to recover from that exercise today and balanced the budget on the backs of infrastructure, which is what this is supposed to be all about.

We walked away from, we abandoned the savings bond program, the capital bonds, or, as they were renamed in 1997, the saving certificates program, because the province felt at that time that there were more effective ways to raise capital. I think we should remember that in going forward on this because the issuance of capital bonds right now, today, seems to be an effective way of raising capital, but we have been down this road before, and we came to a conclusion, whether rightly or wrongly – it's not for me to say right now – that there were, in fact, more effective ways to raise capital than this.

What that says to me, Mr. Speaker, is that we should not rush headlong into the issuance of capital bonds as an exercise in patriotism and, you know, near sovereignty almost, where everybody is going to rally around the flag and feel so proud to be Albertan, and we're going to get some infrastructure out of the deal as well. I'm not saying that we shouldn't go down that road at all. Far from it. All kinds of provinces and other political jurisdictions do this sort of thing. It has a place. It has a purpose. I think its place and purpose are timely right now. Yes, in general, to use the words in the motion, this is the right way to go but with limits, with parameters, with a leash on those who would spend taxpayers' money, with a leash on those who would avoid spending taxpayers' money today by selling these bonds to raise money that has to be paid back with taxpayers' dollars five years, 10 years, whatever we set the term at, down the road.

The safety and security of provincial bonds notwithstanding, it is very hard to predict where the economy of any particular country or province is going to be 10 years down the road, 15, 20 years down the road. You can say in very broad, general terms that, well, we will have grown, that the trend line will probably continue to go in an upward direction from the left-hand side to the right-hand side of the graph. But what you can't predict is where the peaks and valleys in that upward trend line are going to be over the course of that period, and it's even tougher to make that kind of prediction in a resource-based province like the province of Alberta, where we can live or die, we can sink or swim based on the price of an mcf of natural gas today.

It behooves us – and this amendment is one suggested way of doing it – to put some limits on ourselves today as we debate this government motion, to say that, yes, we approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government but not at any price, not in any amount, not for any, you know, indefinite length of time but for a set length of time, for a set amount of money – well, that one was proposed and already rejected – for whatever parameters we want to put on this. That's the intention of this amendment, saying that we want to change it to read that we're approving in general the issue of capital bonds by the government for a maximum term of 10 years in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

In this amendment we haven't placed a dollar limit on it. We tried that earlier, and the House, in its wisdom, decided that, no, we don't want to go that route for whatever reason: we don't have the expertise, or we don't have the evidence to suggest what the dollar amount should be perhaps. We're putting a limit on it that says that we'll urge the government to issue Alberta capital bonds as a prudent way of raising money by going into debt for the next 10 years, but we don't want to go any further than 10 years before we are compelled to revisit this concept and see whether we're still on track with it.

I think that describes the amendment and the reasoning behind the amendment pretty well, Mr. Speaker, and I'll take my seat now and see if there are any questions under 29(2)(a) or if anyone else wants to speak to the amendment.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, this is amendment A2.

Just before we ask for Q and A, I just want to caution, as I mentioned prior, that the five-minute Q and A is to ask for comments, to ask for questions of the individuals, and out of respect and fairness to all the rest of the members in this House it's been the practice to keep your questions short. It's not five minutes of another part of the debate. Keep your questions short and keep your comments short as well so that more people can participate.

The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think I need to ask the hon. member for a little clarification of his remarks. And I apologize; I'll paraphrase. I don't have the Hansard transcripts here. He said something to the effect that despite its profligate spending ways the government of Alberta finds itself in a financial position slightly better than the taco stand down the street. I think I'm pretty close to where he arrived at. I wonder if I could ask the hon. member what he meant by that. Did he mean, in fact, that taco stands, a euphemism for small business I think was the way he was using it, are generally in bad shape or shoddily managed or anything like that? I hope he didn't mean that. Did he mean that the province itself is in bad shape? I would challenge him to compare us to any jurisdiction in the world and talk about whether we're in bad shape or good shape. I challenge him to find a jurisdiction in North America that's in anywhere close to as good a shape as the province of Alberta.

If he didn't mean that, Mr. Speaker, then did he mean to convey that somehow the members maybe on this side or in this whole House somehow take this whole issue very lightly and flippantly? I want to assure that hon. member that I for one and, I'm pretty sure, the members on this side of the House take this issue deadly seriously. We're talking about jobs, people's incomes, people's family situations here, and we're talking about the path of a government here, whether we should assume debt and a whole bunch of very weighty issues. Maybe the member could read that I took that flippancy a little bit personally or insultingly. I wonder if he would comment if, in fact, that's the way he meant it.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I will comment if he left me any time to do so. Yes, the member was paraphrasing, but I think that if he goes back and reads the Blues when they're available or goes back and reads Hansard tomorrow, he will see that I meant what I said, and I said what I meant. I think I was pretty clear in saying that despite the profligate spending that goes on by members of the government opposite – you know, God, look at the budgets for the last few years, for heaven's sake, and the year-over-year increase in the amount of spending that has gone on on this government's watch – most financial analysts, most institutions, perhaps all of them, certainly most of them, would rate the financial position of this province as good, and I said that. If the Member for Peace River didn't hear that, well, it's not my responsibility.

The Acting Speaker: Q and A is still available.

Mr. Oberle: I want to thank the member for that clarification, Mr. Speaker, and I would point out, as he just mentioned, that, well, at least on the days that they were criticizing our spending – I can never remember which day they were doing that. Half of the time last year they were criticizing our overspending, and the other half of the time they were criticizing our underspending, so a very inconsistent message from that side. But I do want to thank the member for his clarification there. He's essentially clarified that, yes, he is treating this whole issue flippantly, and I'm glad that Albertans heard him say it.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. Perhaps we could eat up the rest of the time debating which one of us thinks the other is the more flippant in this House. You know, where this member is coming from is rather baffling to me, quite frankly. I don't think I've said anything that would indicate that I am treating this issue flippantly. In fact, the whole purpose of this amendment is to bring some guidelines, some limits, and some sober second thought to this notion that we're just going to go off and holus-bolus sell bonds until we got no more bonds to sell. I don't know. Of course jobs are involved; of course the economy is involved; of course we have an infrastructure deficit. Gee, I wonder how we got to that point. Was it maybe something that this government didn't do for 15 years? Maybe, perhaps.

This notion of whether today is a spending day or a savings day always tickles me, Mr. Speaker, because I always find it difficult to understand why members of the government opposite seem to have such a hard time wrapping their heads around the notion that, in fact, like any family of Albertans anywhere in this province, you spend and you save and you invest all at the same time. You do all those three things. It's called prudent budgeting. If you don't do those three things, you're going to have creditors coming after you demanding that you pay back your debts, or you're going to end up dirt poor in your retirement.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Speaking on the amendment, I think we should defeat this amendment for exactly what the hon. member who brought it forward said. He said, and he clarified it: I'm not talking about the term of the bonds; I'm talking about how long the government can have to set out the bonds. I think that with just the very nature of the confusion, although it matches some of his other speeches in terms of confusion, this is why we deal with the specifics of these sorts of things in legislative bills as opposed to motions. This is the intent that we're working on, not trying to make it, you know, as detailed as possible and putting a bunch of parameters around it. So I would encourage, actually, all hon. members to defeat this motion based on the argument that the hon. member presented himself.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Under 29(2)(a) the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm just wondering if the Minister of Advanced Education feels that the 10-year period under which bonds could be issued, each set of bonds over a series of 10 years, is an encumbrance on the government. Does that somehow limit the government's ability to fund raise through bonds? Is the hon. Minister of Advanced Education concerned about the need for structure, a plan, a definition, an end date, an evaluation period?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm sure that Hansard will provide some clarity to whatever that question was, but I think that the whole issue around financial planning, the whole issue, as a corporation or an entity, around when you borrow and what you borrow for and how long you're going to amortize it, all of those questions, as the hon. minister of finance suggested in her speech – and I would encourage hon. members to refer to Hansard about what her intent was upon bringing the motion forward – was to look for advice, to look for some of the parameters, not to change the motion but to look for the parameters around which we might be able to put this forward for all Albertans. I do hope that I will have an opportunity at some point in time to provide my comments on this, but let's speak to relevance in this House and the rules of this House. We're talking to an amendment. Again, I would ask all hon. members to defeat this amendment on the basis of the amender's own argument.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available.

Mr. Chase: I'll try to make my question simpler. Do you not believe that in the process of providing advice for the finance minister, there is a role for amendments, a role for amendments that have specific timelines or specific structures to them?

Mr. Horner: Again, Mr. Speaker, we're talking about the rules of this House and how we debate issues and a motion. A motion is something that is going to give advice to the hon. minister. I believe, hon. member, that in the context of your speech as well as some of your colleagues' from that side, several times you've talked about putting conditions around and putting certain parameters around the bond issue. In fact, I agree with that. But at this point in time we have no idea what the legislation looks like that we would present bonds to. Why would you start throwing amendments up before we even have any idea what we're going to do?

I think, Mr. Speaker, that the intent of this motion is to put on the floor of the House the concept of the Alberta government looking to offer a vehicle for Albertans to invest in the future of Alberta through capital issuances based on whatever the parameters are that are built into the bond issue itself. I know that my colleague the President of the Treasury Board also talked about the interest rate. Am I to assume that the hon. members are going to now provide us with an amendment that the interest rate must be at some level in terms of the motion? That would be as silly, in my view, as this amendment, before we even get to debate over legislation that we don't have on the floor of the House.

Mr. Speaker, again, the motion is to provide advice to the government through the debate within this House. It's to provide advice to the government in terms of the preparation of some potential legislation that we might do. It is not about cornering the whole issue into a little box before we even get a chance to debate the legislation on the floor of the House. I think that would be unfair to members that may want to become involved in the debate down the road. I think it would also be unfair to do that before we've had an opportunity to hear from Albertans, who are no doubt listening to this debate today and want to have some contact with their personal representatives in this Legislature from their constituencies. I think it's important, Mr. Speaker, that we hear from them about what they feel about this motion so that we can craft appropriate legislation to bring forward something that is of value to this House and can be debated on the floor of this House in a more appropriate manner.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd ask the hon. minister of advanced education if he didn't just do the same thing that he accuses me of doing with the amendment in terms of making an argument that defeats his own point. If the intent of a motion, sir, is to provide advice to the government, then it would seem to me that included in that intent is the option, the possibility, of this House putting some limits on that.

The Acting Speaker: We are still on the amendment. The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to follow up on the comments of the hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

The Acting Speaker: We're talking to the amendment.

Mr. Allred: Yes. I'm speaking to the amendment.

When I first got this amendment and read it, it was my interpretation that the amendment meant a maximum term of 10 years to maturity. The hon. member in his speech in introducing the amendment has indicated very clearly that he's giving the government 10 years to continue to issue bonds. Mr. Speaker, I would certainly agree with the hon. minister of advanced education that we should defeat this, but I would go one step further, and I would ask that in view of the fact that this is an ambiguous amendment, you rule it out of order.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Mr. Chase: Well, actually, I'm very keen, Mr. Speaker, to hear your ruling as to how this could possibly be out of order when it is very specific. There is a time period in the framework of the motion, and it does not tie the hands of the government, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie pointed out. They have 10 years to basically pull this province out of its recessionary period by the wise use of capital bond granting. I will sit and look forward to your ruling.

The Acting Speaker: To the point by the Member for St. Albert, the amendment is not out of order.

Mr. Allred: Mr. Speaker, I anticipated that possibly the rules didn't allow it to be ruled out of order, but in view of that fact I think the hon. minister of advanced education is quite correct: it is ambiguous, and it should be defeated.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Apparently, it's ambiguous. What within the time period of 10 years, the ability to issue bonds within each of those 10 years, is ambiguous?

Mr. Allred: Mr. Speaker, as I thought I clearly stated, it can either mean a maximum term of 10 years to maturity of a single bond, of a single issue, or it can mean that the governments for the next 10 years can issue bonds. It's that simple. It's ambiguous.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. When the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie introduced his amendment, he clarified any concerns about the 10-year period. He very carefully spelled out – and it's available in Hansard – that the 10 years is not a maturity factor. In each of those 10 years bonds could be brought forward by this government.

The Acting Speaker: We're still speaking to 29(2)(a).

Mr. Allred: Mr. Speaker, I think that's exactly the point. We know what the intent of the mover of the amendment is, but if you read the amendment, it has two different meanings. It can mean the maximum term to maturity, or it can mean that we can issue bonds for 10 years. It's unclear.

The Acting Speaker: Anyone else wish to speak on 29(2)(a)? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is starting to remind me of Abbott and Costello: Who's on First, Who's on Second, Who's on Third? Nevertheless, let's just put it to this. We're making these amendments to try to put some clarity to a motion. Let's not get so worked up about the form. Let's take it for what it's worth and move on from there. At least, that's what I suggest. So when you take one of our amendments, take it as advice for when you're formulating your bill. Let's not get all worked up.

Thanks.

The Acting Speaker: Anyone else?

Mr. Allred: Well, Speaker, I agree entirely with the last speaker. We need clarity, and it's not clear.

The Acting Speaker: We're speaking to the amendment. Anyone else wish to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. That's the beauty of this legislative experience: we provide suggestions; we provide clarity. As members of the opposition we have extremely limited ability to put forward suggestions. It wouldn't be surprising if people were discouraged by the amount of ridicule or criticism or concerns that members of the government have on the very few occasions afforded us to discuss the governance of this province, which we were elected by our constituents to participate in.

Now, speaking very specifically to the amendment, with regard to the 10 years it's been clarified. It's each year in any of the 10 years. So that part of the discussion is hopefully over. What the 10-year period provides, and the reason for suggesting it, is a framework. It's a structure; it's a plan; it's a definition. It's a very specific time period. I view it as a stopgap measure. If by the issuance of bonds along with whatever other global circumstances occur – our gas market goes up – this government has not been able to pull us out of our current recession, then we won't need to worry about Albertans having any confidence in buying bonds from this government because this government will no longer exist. It will have been voted out of its current position.

What Albertans are looking for and what the Premier promised to deliver during his leadership speeches was accountability and transparency. This province and Albertans expect a check-and-balance way of operating. Unfortunately, the government has cut too many cheques, and as a result we've got a negative balance. But that's not the type of check and balance that we're looking for within this province.

I attempted to approach it by limiting the number of bonds issued. That was defeated. So what we're proposing instead is to give the government more flexibility, to give them some type of fiscal management credibility, which is hard for us based on what we've seen over the last 25 years. We're saying: "Okay. Here's a defined period. Here's 10 years. Let's get it right within that 10-year period."

As to the notion that this is just a motion of direction towards where the government could potentially head to resolve a position through a particular tool in the tool box, issuing bonds, when it comes to actual legislation, our hope is that some of the discussion that's being held today and was held yesterday and will probably continue to be held tomorrow – what are three afternoons in terms of getting the legislation right?

It's not a problem if you reject an amendment on sound fiscal reasoning and if in the rejection you offer something in its place or amend it to the degree where it becomes more effective. Albertans don't just expect the opposition to be critical. They turn off when they hear: no, no, no. They're looking for alternatives, and that's what we're attempting to do in terms of the amendments that we're introducing today. To suggest that there is a proper time and a proper place for innovative discussions for shaping legislation just limits the amount of discussion that we can possibly have. While we have a democratic opportunity to put forward alternatives and discuss them and value them, then we need to take advantage of that particular time and particular situation.

I would like to almost put the government in the reverse position that they currently find themselves. Instead of saying, "Well, this amendment doesn't cut it," work with the amendment or offer an alternative to the amendment that we could all get behind. The idea of collaborating, of attempting to head in the same direction, as our all-party standing policy committees are intended, is probably the Premier's greatest achievement. Yes, the opposition notions can be voted down because of the idea that majority wins, but at least there is recognition, by putting opposition members on these committees, that maybe these elected individuals have something to contribute.

So I would urge when you're speaking against a motion, would you please come up with a substitution, an alternative. Point out the flaws, by all means, in the amendment, such as we have here, limiting at 10 years, but please provide another suggestion, a solution which will enliven our debate and our discussion and potentially give direction to our finance minister for giving legislation that is going to help us get out of the current recession that we're operating in now, partly globally caused, to a great extent caused by in-house fiscal mismanagement.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for giving me this opportunity to talk about the importance of not only the motion of suggesting 10 years of limitation for capital bonds but for the opportunity to discuss the importance of our getting all our heads around the best piece of legislation, going forward, around the bond issue.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: On the amendment, 29(2)(a) is available.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I'm meaning to comment, maybe question the Speaker, but I do need to refer to the original motion for just a second, which says: "Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities." Now, the member in his comments suggested that by having this fight about amendments, we were somehow stifling his ability or that caucus's ability to have input on that issue. I would say that quite the opposite is true. The motion is on the floor. I think the Member for Calgary-Buffalo had it right: if you've got something to say about the motion, let's get it out on the floor, have the debate, and move on. It seems like pretty reasonable advice here.

There are some important questions here. Should it be limited in issue? Should the bonds be issued with a 10-year term, which is what the current amendment says, or should they be issued over a 10-year period, which is different but also a legitimate question? Should they be restricted? Should the bonds apply to an already existing capital infrastructure priority list, which does exist, or do we somehow come up with some other process? Those are all things that could be tabled in response to this motion, which would help the minister shape the coming legislation, which is required and which, again, has to hit the floor of this House. At no point is the government ever going to have some unending, unlimited spending authority that doesn't get back to the floor of this House to be debated.

So I'm struggling, and I ask the hon. member: why the insistence on amendments? Why don't we all get to talk about what we would like to see happen in our constituencies or our province with our seniors? Should this bond issue be limited to Albertans, for example? Those kinds of things. We all want to talk about what good we see or not in this motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: On the amendment the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I very much appreciate that feedback, and I say that with all sincerity. In that short discussion you brought up about five different concepts that could be considered in the creation of the bonds, but the way the motion is stated at this point, it is absolutely open. Do we have general agreement on the concept of issuing bonds? Well, based on our amendments, you can see that we believe the idea of issuing bonds is a good one under certain qualifications. We cannot write a blank cheque without the discussion, so thank you for contributing to that discussion. Those were very valid ideas.

The Acting Speaker: Under 29(2)(a), hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House, you wish to speak?

Mr. Lund: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Much has been said about these amendments. I'm not going to make some suggestions, as the hon. member had indicated before, about things that should be in here, but the fact is that when you read this one and as the Member for Peace River has just indicated, it raises a number of other things that have to be described and worked on. If you read the motion that's before the House, it's a concept we're asking to move forward with. Certainly, with the discussion this afternoon you've put on the table some of the things that you would like to see, the fences around the motion, and I think that that's what this whole discussion was for, but you should have been able to do it through your speeches to the original motion, not by bringing in a bunch of amendments.

I would urge the House to not go along with these amendments. I would ask the hon. member if he doesn't agree that it would be a wise thing for us to do what we on this side always do, to go out and talk to the people and see what they want.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I think you've hit the nail on the head. The importance of seeking input from Albertans is absolutely essential but not the type of input that is e-mailed to a website. I'm talking about face-to-face community gatherings, where individuals have a chance to contribute to the discussion. I'm not talking about select invitations. I'm talking about the type of circumstance we have within our standing policy committees or all-party committees where anyone can provide a submission, where anyone can appear before our standing policy committees. In other words, I'm looking for a wider open opportunity.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to participate on the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A2 lost]

The Acting Speaker: We are back to Motion 16. The next person on my list is West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: I closed debate yesterday, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: I'm sorry. I didn't have that on here.
The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a good thing I didn't leave thinking I was not going to get on the list today. I just want to make a couple of very brief comments today. I won't take long, and I'm sure others will have a chance to get in on this.

As the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood has already pointed out, our caucus will be supporting this motion and the general principle included within it. I just want to review a couple of sort of general points that would explain why that is. The first point that the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood made talked about how it is that the government goes about financing the work it does and the initiatives that it engages in throughout the course of governing and talked about sort of the different funding models for that.

I've had an opportunity to read through some of the comments that other members of the House have made, and I found it interesting that it appears as though the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford was actually making points that were not dissimilar to what the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood was saying. Now, perhaps I'll subsequently be told that I completely misinterpreted it, but I'm going to just take it for what it looks like at this point.

In essence, you know, he was making the point that if you free up money from capital spending and develop other ways to finance that capital development, instead you can take that money and spend it on direct services, or another way of putting that would be on operating costs. Of course, this is the point that the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood was saying, that it is not necessarily the wisest course of action in the current economic situation that we're in to insist on developing our capital assets on the basis of a pay-as-you-go model. That's a very, very rich approach to developing capital assets. Obviously, I think we've had all the members discuss the different levels on which those are not the circumstances that Albertans are facing at this point.

Instead, I would suggest that subject to the principles of wise financial oversight – you know, the kind of wise financial oversight that would have ensured we didn't have some of the outrageous executive compensation payout bonus things that we've seen over the last few months, the kind of wise financial oversight that would see us properly funding the Auditor General to engage in value-for-money audits, that kind of wise oversight – we ought to be trying to maintain much of our current operating expenditures and much of our current service levels. We know – I mean, the research is out there – that if you're trying to stimulate the economy, the greatest number of jobs per dollar invested are created through investment in primarily health care and education.

If you're trying to stimulate the economy and trying to support a transition away from a natural resource based economy to a knowledge-based economy, you achieve that through those kinds of investments, so this would be the worst time to cut, for instance, a billion dollars out of our health care budget or additional billions of dollars out of advanced education or out of our schools or, you know, shoving 35 kids together in the same classes because we can no longer maintain or even achieve – we've actually not achieved them in many cases – reasonable class sizes. All those kinds of things are dollar for dollar more effective stimulant investments, so we ought to be trying to do that as much as we can.

The point that was being made before by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood is that rather than taking our annual budget and engaging in a pay-as-you-go approach to capital expenditures, there is room to engage in some borrowing. Let's face it: all we're doing, really, is calling it what we've always known it was, which is debt. Whether you now borrow through capital bonds to finance the long overdue investment in many capital projects or whether you pretend you've eliminated the debt while you meanwhile have an infrastructure debt that is accruing right beside you, sort of like an elephant in the room that you choose not to identify or talk about or point out to the cameras, the fact of the matter is that we had the infrastructure debt two years ago. We have the infrastructure debt now. If what we're trying to do is eliminate that infrastructure debt by proper investment, allowing Albertans to participate in that through the capital bonds is a reasonable way to go, and it's something we all understand. There's a shortage of funds. We need to figure out the most moderate and reasoned approach, and this has the potential to be that.

Now, I of course echo many of the concerns that I think I've heard from both sides of the House with respect to: what's the limit, how many bonds are issued, for how long are they issued, and how far into debt are we prepared to go? I think these are all legitimate discussions that we need to have. Frankly, I think the government needs to make a case for the particular amount that it's looking for and put that information before Albertans so that we can all hear back from Albertans in terms of what they are or are not comfortable with in relation to what wise and prudent fiscal advice we receive. That's the first point. I'm just really reviewing the point again that had been made earlier by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

In addition, in reviewing some of the comments made by members opposite, I did note that the minister for seniors and community living talked about the opportunity to use these funds to invest in infrastructure and capital spending for the care of seniors, and I think that she is quite right. I'm not sure that I necessarily accept her characterization that that's what's happening right now.

I do believe that part of the reluctance on the part of the government ultimately to follow through on their election promises with respect to the opening of new long-term care beds and/or the rebuilding or upgrading of current long-term care beds arises in part from their clear understanding that probably half the long-term care facilities in this province are struggling under the weight of this massive infrastructure debt that this government has allowed to accrue over many years and that, in fact, the current long-term care centres are themselves at a breaking point in terms of their physical capacity.

What we would like to see, of course, is that whether it's long-term care or whether it's publicly owned and operated models of graduated care within the same setting, the government definitely consider using some of these bonds to invest in these kinds of services that will ensure that seniors receive the care they need when they need it – and then here's the key part – without paying a cent out of their pockets for it beyond what is currently in place in long-term care settings.

I would be very concerned if we took this money, if it was possible – and I may be told that it's not possible and that I needn't worry about this, but we shall see – to subsidize private developers and others who are getting into the seniors' housing business and who, as part of coming up with their luxurious apartments, are also crafting these fabulous little contracts for additional medical services that people have to buy. That is not a good use of our money, and subsidizing those kinds of operations is not a good use of our money. I'm not entirely sure whether the phrasing in the current motion, which talks about public infrastructure projects, would negate that kind of investment or not. I just wanted to make that point.

The final point that I did want to make as well comes again, I guess, from how one defines public infrastructure. Of course, part of the capital plan does include what we have in our caucus consistently characterized as a boondoggle in the making, which is, of course, the carbon capture and storage investment. I would certainly not want to ever see Albertans sucked into investing in something that is so clearly poised to become historic, perhaps, in terms of the efficacy of that expenditure and the value for money of that expenditure to Albertans and the fact that probably there is almost no value for money in that expenditure to Albertans. Again, it may well be that the motion referring to public infrastructure projects and facilities would negate any bonds being related to that particular investment, but if they don't, then that's certainly something that we need to discuss more fully in the future.

Those are all my points for now. I appreciate the opportunity to rise to speak to this matter, and I look forward to further debate and further information with respect to the particulars of what these will look like. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much. A question I have that I'll frame to you. I was here yesterday and found the conversation here rather a sea change, one of embracing debt, deficit financing, and wrapping your arms around this in a feel-good way. You probably were paying close attention to this Legislature back in 1999. Some of the members of this House who were here – probably there are still seven, eight, or nine of those members who are still here – can be found in Hansard with: we will never go into debt again. I was wondering if you'd like to comment on whether this is a government that is just wisping along with no real direction or whether they just say things to suit their course.

Ms Notley: That's an interesting question, and I'm not entirely sure how to answer it. The reality is, first of all, that when the current government had previously wrapped itself in the cape of slashing and burning and cutting and deficit reduction and the so-called debt elimination, I think the key point here to recognize is that there never really was an elimination of the debt. What we're dealing with now is another way of dealing with the debt that's already existent and that always did exist. It comes down to a question of positioning and spin and all that kind of stuff. There's no question that we're in a position where this government is having to engage in more spin than they're used to – well, actually, I don't know if that's really fair because there's a lot of spin – a lot of back-stepping and trying to recharacterize positions that had previously been quite opposite to what they're doing now.

Having said that, though, I am not an advocate of saying that one only buys a house if one has $350,000 in their pocket right now. That's not how people finance. One makes sure one can pay the utilities every month, one makes sure that one can maintain that house, one makes sure that one has a payment plan to get rid of that mortgage, but I would not suggest that you don't buy the house because you don't have the money in your pocket right then. I, of course, as I've stated before, fully believe that we're in a situation now where we have to look very carefully at ways to stimulate the economy. I am a firm believer that investment in the public sector is one of the most efficient ways to stimulate that economy. I hope to see that this will be a mechanism to maintain the greatest level of investment in the public sector that we can in the light of the current economic situation.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Based on your comments, hon. member, do you think the government is heading in the direction of going from Edward Scissorhands to Bob the Builder with these bonds?

Ms Notley: I worry about the child who is watching both Edward Scissorhands and Bob the Builder, I've got to tell you, but that's certainly one fair way to characterize it, hon. member. Beyond that, I think I'll leave the answer there.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak on Q and A, 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Chase: To sort of lose the comedy and put clarity, do you believe that the money that would be invested in capital infrastructure through the bonds issuing could then be freed up from our $16 billion buffer to support operations?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Well, that's generally the point that was being made earlier today by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. He also referred back to discussions that he had with the Minister of the Treasury Board during budget estimates last spring, where he essentially made that argument, that, in essence, we're spending too much from our operating expenditures on new capital projects. That would be our hope, that this would be a mechanism through which we could ensure that we're not making the kinds of cuts that this government made in the '90s, which we are still reeling from.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: On the motion the next speaker is the hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed my pleasure to rise today and offer my support for the government motion to issue Alberta savings bonds. The effects of the current economic recession have been felt around the world, and Alberta certainly has been no exception. These have been trying times for Alberta. However, we have reason to be optimistic. Albertans are known for their hard work, dedication to their families, and pride in their province.

In 2003, with the help of hard-working Albertans, our government paid off the provincial debt. Since 2003 we have amassed $25 billion in savings, $8 billion of that in the heritage savings trust fund and $17 billion in the sustainability fund. Mr. Speaker, our government had the foresight to realize that strong economic growth would be interrupted at some point down the road. With the heritage trust fund, the sustainability fund, and hard-working Albertans, our province has the potential to quickly return to the days of growth and prosperity.

One way in which we can take strides towards recapturing this growth and prosperity is the issuing of Alberta savings bonds. Mr. Speaker, Alberta has worked hard to achieve and maintain a triple-A credit rating. In fact, Alberta has the highest credit rating of any province in Canada. The rating system defines the safety of investing in bonds. CIBC says of investments in bonds with a triple-A credit rating, "Earnings are considered stable, the structure of the industry in which the entity operates is strong, and the outlook for future profitability is favourable." CIBC also says of triple-A rated bonds, "The entity has established a credible track record of superior performance." In this time of economic uncertainty Albertans and my constituents in Red Deer are looking for a safe place to invest their money. To invest in Alberta savings bonds is to invest in Alberta. With the knowledge that these bonds have strong protection for the repayment of the initial purchase and interest, purchasers can be reassured that this is a sound investment.

The reintroduction of Alberta savings bonds poses many questions, including what the interest rate should be and who is eligible to buy Alberta savings bonds. We also need to ensure that Alberta savings bonds are an attractive investment. To do this, the interest rate tied to Alberta savings bonds should be determined through an analysis of interest rates paid by other triple-A rated bonds coupled with an analysis of alternative investments. I have full confidence that our government will consider these two factors and set a competitive interest rate to attract maximum investment and that this would allow our government to provide a secure investment for Albertans who believe that Alberta will emerge from this recession as a global leader.

Alberta savings bonds can be used to fund numerous capital projects in many different areas that will benefit the citizens of Red Deer as well as all Albertans. Furthermore, I believe that Albertans should know what projects that Alberta savings bonds will be used to fund and think that Alberta savings bonds should be used to provide Albertans with better health infrastructure. Alberta has the second-highest per capita health care spending in Canada. However, by many measures our health care system is performing at about an average level. Mr. Speaker, Alberta capital bonds can be used to enhance our overall health care performance and improve our quality of life through capital investments in health care infrastructure. I believe that the Alberta government's Vision 2020 for health care identifies the five key goals to increasing our quality of health care and making the system sustainable. With the funds generated from Alberta savings bonds, we can invest in infrastructure projects. I believe that this will help us achieve our goal of providing the right service in the right place and at the right time.

In order to improve performance in health care, we need to ensure that Albertans are receiving the care they need in the most appropriate facilities. For example, Albertans can receive a number of services outside of hospitals and long-term care settings. By increasing the number and availability of community-based services such as community health and urgent care centres, we can reduce wait times in our hospitals and long-term care centres. This will improve both the quality and the efficiency of health care provided in Red Deer and throughout the province.

Moreover, our government is already addressing this issue by providing our seniors with more choice and new ways of receiving health care. Under the new continuing care strategy Red Deer seniors will be able to receive health care supports in their homes and communities rather than having to go to a hospital or a long-term facility. Seniors will have the option to get an appropriate level of treatment, which they might have previously accessed in a hospital visit, but in the comfort and the convenience of their own home. In turn, this frees up more hospital beds and reduces wait times for critical care patients in Red Deer.

Another example of the Alberta government's innovative approach to health care is the Johnstone Crossing community health centre opened in Red Deer in 2008. This is a remarkable facility as clinics, immunization, education, counselling, treatment, and support services are all offered under one roof. What this means is that patients will have more convenient, efficient, cost-effective, and timely access to health care, and surrounding public health centres will experience less pressure.

Mr. Speaker, another great example of this kind of facility is in the Okotoks community health and wellness centre. In 2004 this facility was opened in order to provide urgent care 12 hours per day seven days per week. Patients can go there to receive their immunizations, well-child services, mental health services, and speech-language services. Because of this clinic the number of emergency room visits in surrounding hospitals has declined since 2004. This change has increased efficiency and decreased wait times.

Innovations in Red Deer and Okotoks are great examples of improvements to our health care system. The Alberta savings bonds could be used to help provide more facilities like these. This would undoubtedly improve both the access and quality of service in Alberta in keeping with Vision 2020 by providing the right service in the right place and at the right time.

Mr. Speaker, using Alberta savings bonds to provide community-based infrastructure such as physician clinics and urgent care centres, we will ensure that our health care system will be able to handle the population increases our province will experience over the next 20 years. Not only will our population increase; our population will be aging as well.

I believe that money invested in our province through the purchase of Alberta savings bonds could be used to fund health care infrastructure, specifically community health clinics and urgent care centres. This would improve the services provided to the people of Red Deer and all Albertans, improving the quality of life and preparing our public infrastructure for the population growth our province will experience.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for the time to speak on this very important issue. I look forward to hearing other members' thoughts on Alberta savings bonds.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, hon. Member for Red Deer-South. Just for clarification, hon. member, I believe in the first part of your speech you were talking about the savings that were accrued in the last number of years, and I think you said the figure of $8 billion in the heritage trust fund. It's my understanding it's $14.3 billion. Would you please clarify that?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thanks for that, hon. member. In fact, I did some double-checking on that myself. What I'm referring to is the amount of contribution that we have made since 2003 to the Alberta heritage trust fund. Since 2003 we actually increased the amount by making contributions in the amount of $8 billion, and obviously in that same period of time was when we accrued the $17 billion in savings that are now in the sustainability fund. I hope that clears that up.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. A comment, a clarification, and a question. Maybe I'll actually start with the clarification. I support the Minister of Infrastructure's concerns about only certain wealthy individuals being able to access bonds and therefore enhance their neighbourhoods at the expense of other individuals throughout the province. Obviously, there has to be some kind of a leveller, but we should be attempting to reach the highest common denominator as opposed to the lowest common denominator. We should be able to have bonds that cover both.

Now, specifically to Red Deer, formerly when I was the Infrastructure critic, I had an opportunity to visit the Red Deer municipal airport. They have done some very forward thinking. They've purchased land with the hope that if a rapid rail system does go through, it will include Red Deer, and I know that the economic development from having people being able to fly into Red Deer as well as fly out and connect with the larger world would be of great economic benefit to Red Deer. Do you think of the bond issuing for the Red Deer municipal airport as a priority project? Do you see its importance?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you for that, hon. member. In fact, I'm delighted to stand and speak briefly about the regional airport in Red Deer. As you may recall, the regional airport in Red Deer is unique from the perspective that the signatories, the operators of the airport, are actually a partnership between the city of Red Deer, Red Deer county, and the Red Deer Chamber of Commerce. You may recall that in my role both as the president of the Red Deer Chamber of Commerce and later as the CEO of the Chamber of Commerce I've been a strong supporter of the airport and the infrastructure there. You are correct that they are creative, innovative, and have developed a long-term plan and a vision for the airport, which they're having a good deal of success with.

I guess that when I think about the priorities for how we would utilize the bond issue that we propose, first of all, my reference was to health care as a personal priority, but, secondly, I believe it's very important to plan your work and work your plan. In this case the government has created a long-term plan in terms of capital projects in the province, and it has a three-year plan in terms of specifically what projects would be funded going forward. So even though I'm a homer and love Red Deer, I suppose that, as opposed to suggesting that we would jump the queue and perhaps find investment opportunities specifically in Red Deer outside of that plan, I would have to answer that I believe in the three-year plan, and that's where we need to be.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on 29(2)(a).

Mr. Chase: Thank you. A project that occurred in Red Deer with the best of intentions was public housing specifically built for people with disabilities, and we know that that funding, unfortunately, went astray. Would you put reservations or restrictions on the type of builders or organizations that could take money from the bond issues to create the projects?

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, hon. member. [Mr. Dallas's speaking time expired]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise and participate in the debate on the government motion. I will be introducing an amendment to Motion 16.

5:20

The Acting Speaker: All right. I will have the pages distribute those. This will be amendment A3.

Okay. The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Government Motion 16 be amended by striking out "in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities" and substituting "in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities by Alberta companies."

Mr. Speaker, I listened to the members from the government side with lots of interest about Motion 16, how it's going to help build us all the infrastructure projects such as hospitals, bridges, roads, stimulate the economy, and create badly needed jobs. We have been there before. We have done it in 1987. We issued Alberta bonds, and then they were changed to Alberta savings certificates. It was lots of money: $5.7 billion were raised by those bonds and certificates in 10 years. It is a good idea to issue Alberta bonds to build those infrastructure projects, but keep in mind that it's not free money. It will be debt we will be accumulating, but that debt will be a positive debt. At some point in time that debt will have to be paid back.

The last bond issue matured in 2004. When we go back to 1993, the whole idea was to cut down the deficit, cut down the debt. Sure, we paid down a $22 billion debt, but at the same time we created another bigger infrastructure debt. All those cutbacks on the infrastructure projects, on health care, on education – you name it – created a much bigger debt. We haven't even recovered from those cutbacks of the '90s, and here we go again. Because of the fiscal mismanagement of the government, I think, you know, we are in a hole again, and we are talking about a $7 billion deficit. That's the deficit we know of.

We have been having some of the higher per capita spending in the country on capital projects. The Premier said in a televised address that there were up to 40 per cent savings on the projects' bids which were coming in now. They were lower now than when the economy was hot, so we were committing $23 billion over three years to build infrastructure projects. If it's coming out 40 per cent cheaper, I think we can stretch our capital projects a little bit further, Mr. Speaker.

We should also have a look at P3 projects. If this money is going to go to the P3 projects, I don't think that will be a good idea. If you're issuing Alberta bonds, that money should strictly be going towards pay-as-we-go projects. The P3 debt has already ballooned to almost $4.7 billion, and here we keep on talking about $17 billion in the sustainability fund. My question is: how much money is there in the sustainability fund? Is it still $17 billion that we have? Or are we taking into consideration all of the debt that has been racked up?

Mr. Speaker, sure, it is cheaper to borrow now, but we have to look at our overall debt, that we are accumulating faster than we think. I wonder what happened to, you know, that $17 billion. Again, is it still in the sustainability fund? Or have we got $9 billion left? I hear in the news that there's only $9 billion left. Somebody says only $7 billion left. We have to take a good look at all the money we have and all the debt we have so we can have some kind of budget for how much we can issue in Alberta bonds.

Mr. Speaker, we know that there's an infrastructure backlog, and this is the best time to build that infrastructure. This is the best time to catch up on our infrastructure backlog. There were some monies unexpended, for instance, in the Department of Transportation, about half a billion dollars. We should look at all the departments and see if there is some unspent monies sitting in other departments or if the capital projects have been deferred.

Sure, investing more money into infrastructure projects is going to stimulate the economy and create very badly needed jobs. Like the Minister of Infrastructure said, every million dollars we spend creates 1,160 jobs. That's why I'm proposing this amendment, so that we create all the jobs, and Albertans get first crack at those jobs. There are a lot of Albertans running out of their EI benefits, and this will go a long ways to help those Albertans have jobs.

Another thing, I think the hon. member raised a very good point about capping the Alberta bonds, putting a cap on it, like $250 million. That's why we have the budgets. In the last budget, Budget 2009, the government stated that it would be borrowing $1.1 billion a year for the next three years to pay for capital expenditures. On September 21, 2009, the government issued $600 million in provincial bonds to the capital markets. These bonds were issued for a rate of 4 per cent over 10 years and sold out within minutes of being issued. Then an additional $500 million in bonds was issued on October 7, 2009. That was at a rate of 2.75 per cent over five years. This equals $1.1 billion. If the government can say in the budget that this is how much they will be borrowing, I think we can have some kind of idea how much in Alberta bonds the government will be issuing yearly. That's the question we are raising. We have to have some kind of plan here because we will have to pay down that debt in later years.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, we're speaking to the amendment. This is part of the amendment, right?

Mr. Kang: That's where I'm coming, sir.

The provincial bonds issued will be for Albertans only. The reason I'm making this amendment is because it will be Albertans' money that will be spent in Alberta on infrastructure projects, so Albertans can benefit from the Alberta capital bonds. If they can do it in the U.S., I think we can do it here, too. It will go a long way to stimulate our economy, create those badly needed jobs, and put Albertans back to work.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for comments or questions. The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm just wondering if the hon. member could describe a couple of things for me. The first one would be: what is the definition of an Alberta company? Is it percentage ownership, registration in the province? If they do business in other provinces or have shareholders outside of the province, are they an Alberta company? Are they an outside company?

5:30

The second thing that I'd like to ask him is: is there a cap on the number of Alberta companies that must bid, and if there's no competitive bid, will we be able to go outside for other bids? The other thing that I'd like to know is: given the fact that we have a western economic agreement with the three provinces, are we going to exclude Saskatchewan companies from bidding on capital projects in Alberta that might have Albertans working for them? I guess I'm kind of curious as to how you'd want to do all of that, hon. member. The other thing is: if there's only one bidder and he sets a price so high that it's kind of in the stratosphere, are we going to say, "Yes, that's good"?

The point I'm getting at here, hon. member, is that, again, you're creating an amendment to a motion that complicates the entire motion and gives no real advice. In fact, your advice is that you would like to have preferred status for Alberta companies in the bidding. That's fine. Put it in Hansard. But when you put a motion like this – and I have all of those questions, which, I might add, I believe to be valid – it makes the amendment difficult for us to vote for, Mr. Speaker, and I would encourage all members to vote against it.

Mr. Kang: I think it's pretty clear that when I say "by Alberta companies," the companies should be registered in Alberta and that the majority of shareholders should be in Alberta. That's where we're coming from. You know, I don't think there's only one company in Alberta doing one business. There is more than one company that could be bidding on the projects, and they will be competing for the projects.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Yeah. Just a quick question. By breaking the TILMA agreement, does the hon. member have a concern that what he's suggesting could stop Alberta companies from seeking employment and seeking work outside of the province of Alberta? That would be the result.

Mr. Kang: We're talking about Alberta projects only. They will be Alberta bonds. Those companies will be registered in Alberta, and then they will be able to bid on them. That's what I said. Sure, TILMA may have some effect on that, but I think we should be protecting Albertans' jobs first.

Mr. Hayden: Just for clarification, does the hon. member understand that this completely would go against TILMA, would ruin the relationship with the province next to us, and limit the ability of Alberta workers and companies to bid on business in other spots in western Canada?

Mr. Kang: I understand that, but those companies could be registered here in Alberta.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would just like to ask the hon. member a few questions and, particularly, relative to this protectionist idea that he's trying to introduce into this motion. Like my colleagues before, the two ministers that just asked questions, does the hon. member not foresee that we would have some backlash from other companies and other provinces and also North American wide? We're also part of a North American free trade agreement. Does the hon. member not see or wouldn't you expect that we would have some backlash and probably take away some of the advantages that you are trying to create from Alberta companies right across the entire economy of this province? I'd like to hear some of your comments on that, hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Well, lately in China they have done it, and in the U.S. they have done it. If they can do it, I think we can do it, too. It will not really exclude our companies from doing business there.

Ms DeLong: I just wonder whether the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall believes that the people of Alberta should have to pay for something – say that the only bids from Alberta were 10 times as much as what you could get from outside of Alberta. Do you believe that the people of Alberta should be held to that and that they should have to pay that exorbitant cost just because of a policy that says that we have to buy from Alberta?

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) has finished now. We'll move on.

Anyone wish to speak to the amendment? Hon. Member for St. Albert, to the amendment.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very disturbed at the tone of this amendment. We've worked so hard in this country to break down provincial trade barriers with mobility agreements, with TILMA. Now we're working with Saskatchewan, even NAFTA. I think this flies in the face of so many things we've decided in this country and in the province in the last 10, 20 years. It just creates a protectionist state. We've really got to vote this down.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Any other members wish to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I understand the concerns that have been raised with regard to the wording of the amendment. The intention of the amendment was not to freeze out the western tiger concept of dealing with British Columbia or dealing with Saskatchewan through to Manitoba. We've talked in this House before of the importance of trade. What it was trying to achieve – and I will suggest that the wording could have been considerably stronger – was to look at the Alberta advantage and the idea of Albertans having opportunities to not only invest in bonds but having opportunities, as the hon. Minister of Infrastructure indicated, where we would like to see Albertans potentially getting first crack at the jobs. But, obviously, if people are making ridiculous bids, we would not accept those types of bids. Whether it was a priority project or not, it would have to be put on hold until such a time as a reasonable bid was provided.

One of the things that this amendment is looking at is the notion that so much of our infrastructure has been built on lower wages, on non-unionized organizations, on the backs of temporary foreign workers that have had no voting or protective rights as they enhanced our Alberta projects, whether it be the Chinese labourers and workers who worked in the oil sands but weren't paid for their work or whether they were the temporary foreign workers that were brought in and told that they would have certain accommodations and certain remuneration only to find out that that wasn't the case.

What we're trying to do is not build a wall around Alberta, as our current Prime Minister has suggested, and a letter to that effect was also cosigned by our Minister of Environment. Rather than protectionism, what we're trying for is promotionism in terms of promoting the best opportunities for Alberta companies to participate in the process in a fair, compensated manner, not, as individuals have pointed out, to the exclusion of other companies. I'm not sure to what extent or whether members of this House would suggest that all projects that are government sponsored be wide open and that the lowest bid will determine the project versus the quality of the company in order to build the project.

We've got a number of organizations that have offices in Alberta that do building world-wide. The fact that they're registered as an Alberta company would not prevent them from being considered for other particular projects. We have trade offices in Calgary from a whole series of countries indicating their desire to do business with us, and if they have an established presence or they have shares in, for example, an oil sands project, that would in theory have them considered not only to be a global company but a company operating in Alberta with established offices and established credentials.

Mr. Horner: That's not what he said. He said majority only.

Mr. Chase: And I take your point, minister of advanced education, that we need to clarify the wording. Unfortunately, the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall drew somewhat of a short straw on this particular amendment, but the intent of this amendment is to get the best advantage within the economic global circumstance for Alberta companies. What we have seen, for example, in the Fort McMurray area was division 8, where the first company in got to underbid all the other companies that were following in on a project. A good example of that is an outfit, CLAC, that poses as a union and then underbids everyone else.

What we're saying is that we want Alberta companies, unionized and non-unionized, to be a part of the rebuilding process for which the bond issues are directed. I apologize to members of this House that the wording appeared exclusionary. I understand that the way it's read. I appreciate your pointing that out. What we should have said is: give Alberta companies the opportunity to be considered in the bidding process, not have an advantage but a consideration. I fully understand where you're coming from, and I appreciate that contribution.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for questions and answers. The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just for clarity and for the record I need clarification if the hon. member thinks that there have ever been jobs that the provincial government has put out for infrastructure that have excluded Alberta companies and not encouraged them to bid. Secondly, I wasn't clear on the end of the statements from the hon. member, but in the beginning I did hear that they should be limited to unionized companies and exclude all other Alberta companies and companies outside the boundaries. So just for clarification.

Mr. Chase: I'd be very pleased to clarify. I did not suggest that only unionized companies could bid. That would not be correct. I attempted to clarify that we're a global competitor and we need to be accepting bids from all companies.

With regard to: have Alberta companies ever been shut out of the bidding process? What has happened is that we have had great demand, for example, for electricians up in Fort McMurray, and we've had great demand for pipefitters, but because these individuals were unionized and because we had an apprentice system and an expectation of the journeymen supervising the apprentices and so on, the unionized Alberta employers were considered too expensive within the Alberta process, and therefore they were bypassed. At the height of the boom, particularly in Fort McMurray, there were a number of qualified, unionized individuals who were prevented from participating in the projects because less expensive foreign labour, non-unionized, undercut their ability to work in their own province.

We brought forward a number of plebiscites calling for the government to recognize and consider unemployed Albertans, First Nation Albertans, and farm-working Albertans for employment. These people were at the end of the line with cheap foreign labour, cheap partly because they didn't have any democratic rights to back up their ill treatment.

I hope I've provided that clarification. It's not just Alberta unionized individuals; it's not just Alberta individuals who should be able to bid on the projects. But working Albertans have been shut out in previous circumstances because the government was not willing to pay the standard contractual wage that had been provided for projects in Alberta.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you. Just do a quick clarification, member, if you would, please, with respect to your comments about CLAC. Are you aware that CLAC is in fact recognized by the Alberta Labour Relations Board and that CLAC itself does not bid jobs? I'd just like you to explain to us, please, what it is you meant when you talked about them.

Thank you.

Mr. Chase: CLAC is known for their pretense of a union. CLAC is known for underbidding projects.

Mr. Elniski: They don't bid jobs.

Mr. Chase: They are part of the process for lowering the wages of working Albertans.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you. May I seek additional clarification from the member with respect to how CLAC has in some way the ability to influence wage rates on construction projects?

Mr. Chase: That's what I was talking about with division 8. If CLAC is the first organization in, then according to Alberta labour laws, the first organization to reach a contract determines what the contracts of subsequent contributors to a project involve. If CLAC says that they'll do it for this amount, every other project has to pay the amount that CLAC would get, with the limited benefits that CLAC members receive.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak to the amendment?

Mr. Campbell: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd just like the member to clarify if he understands what the Labour Relations Board is all about and how unions are certified in this province to bargain on sites.

The Acting Speaker: We're speaking to the amendment now. The time for questions and answers is over. We're speaking to the amendment, amendment A3.

If there are no others, I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment A3 lost]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been a very interesting afternoon. Seeing that we are approaching 6 o'clock, I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:49 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we humbly represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you a very special group of people who are associated with a very important organization situated in the constituency of Calgary-East, the Council of Sikh Organizations. This group is led by four community leaders: Mr. Virender Bhatti, Mr. Amandeep Khangura, Mr. Avinash Khangura, and Mr. Avtar Rehill. These very special seniors have had an opportunity to tour the Legislature this afternoon, and they had the distinct privilege of being in attendance at the morning poppy presentation. I had the opportunity to meet and participate in a memento photograph with them, which I will be providing to each one of today's visitors. I would like to sincerely thank all of these seniors for making the journey today. They are seated in the public gallery. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly. [Remarks in Punjabi] Hello and welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce a group of students and their teachers, Ms Susan Jolliffe and Ms Jeri Wylie-Smith, from Bow Valley College in my constituency. I've been over to Bow Valley College numerous times since I've been elected, and I can assure you that both the teachers and the students there are very interested in what we're doing at the Legislature and how democracy is being handled here in Alberta and in Canada. It's been a wonderful experience. If they can please rise and accept the warm welcome of this Legislature, I'd be greatly happy.

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the Hébert family. The Hébert family are long-time residents of the city of Edmonton, and they're an example of a fine, young, hard-working Alberta family. They are here to observe government in action, and they are a great reminder of the importance of our jobs and why we must continue to work very hard to make sure that Alberta is the best place to live in. Mr. Damon Hébert is accompanied by his wife, Heather Mateer, and their children Brennan and Quinn. I would ask them to all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three guests in the gallery today that I would like to introduce. Actually, I'm going to introduce two of them. I think my colleague from Livingstone-Macleod is going to introduce the third one. We've had meetings today with the leadership of the Alberta Medical Association. Joining us today is Chip Doig, the newly elected president of the AMA. Accompanying him is Ron Kustra of the offices of the AMA. I'd ask them to stand and be recognized by this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you. It's a great honour and pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mrs. Dalsit Kaur Grewal Consion, sister of the present premier of Punjab, Sardar Parkash Singh Badal, who is visiting her daughter in Calgary. Accompanying her are Mr. Darshan Dhaliwal, past president of the Council of Sikh Organizations, and his wife, Mrs. Parmjit Kaur Dhaliwal. They were also blessed with a grandson in October. Mr. Dhaliwal has been a strong supporter of me all the time. They are seated in your gallery, Mr. Speaker, and I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a physician member of the Pincher Creek Good Health Team in the incredible constituency of Livingstone-Macleod. Dr. Tobias Gelber is an integral part of a group of innovational health providers and is seated in the members' gallery. I would now ask Dr. Gelber to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

CFB Edmonton Visit

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many of us in this Chamber ran for office with the hopes of making a difference, helping leave this province better than we found it and making an impact for Albertans. Well, we soon realize, however, that on many days in this job it's really Albertans that make a big impact on us. For many of my caucus colleagues last Thursday was just one of those days, a day we will not soon forget.

Thanks to the leadership of the Premier and the invitation of Brigadier General Mike Jorgenson our caucus was privileged to be hosted by dozens of Canada's finest as they gave us a taste of their life on CFB Edmonton. In army fatigues we rode in LAVs and in tanks, fired weapons, inspected equipment, witnessed air force jets fly over, and visited with real-life heroes. On behalf of my colleagues I'd like to publicly thank Brigadier General Jorgenson, Lieutenant Colonel Bradley, majors Aleknevicus, Hildebrandt, Hynes, Mackay, Mackey, Morrison, Master Corporal Corbett, and all the soldiers for hosting us to an inspiring day.

The most moving part of the day came as I watched an emotional Premier and Mrs. Stelmach bid a personal farewell to a small group of soldiers as they deployed for their mission in Afghanistan. The commitment and sacrifice of these heroes and their families is truly humbling. I know this Assembly and all of Alberta will join me in thanking them and praying for their safe return.

But, Mr. Speaker, as you know, some of our soldiers do not enjoy a safe return, a fact that hit home to an Alberta family on Tuesday. Lieutenant Justin Boyes had barely begun his mission in Afghanistan when he made the ultimate sacrifice while leading his men of the Princess Patricia's. We are deeply saddened to hear of his loss, and on behalf of all of my colleagues in the Assembly I'd like to express our sincere condolences to his family and friends and in particular to his wife, Alanna, and his three-year-old son, James, on this tragic loss of one of our heroes.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Energy Efficiency Consumer Rebates

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. When it comes to reducing our environmental footprints, Albertans are not asking why; they're asking: why not? Albertans told us clearly that they have a role to play and that they want to act. They told us overwhelmingly that consumer incentives need to be part of our climate change action strategy.

With this in mind, Mr. Speaker, six months ago we launched a program to help Albertans realize these possibilities. We did this by creating a $36 million, three-year investment in energy efficiency consumer rebates. Rebates ranging from $100 to $10,000 are available for new home buyers who purchase energy efficient homes, to existing homeowners who improve their energy efficiency, and to taxi operators who are transitioning their fleet to hybrid vehicles.

Mr. Speaker, the rebates continue to be a wise investment in difficult times, ensuring an environmental focus while at the same time stimulating spending and creating jobs for Albertans. When it is fully subscribed, the rebates will help Albertans reduce greenhouse gases by about 1 million tonnes. Now, in context, that's the equivalent of taking more than 200,000 cars off the road per year.

I'm pleased to say that in the first six months of the program nearly 14,000 cheques have been sent to Albertans, for approximately $2.5 million in rebates. Mr. Speaker, approximately 6,000 Albertans have taken advantage of the home evaluation rebate to learn more about energy efficiency in their own homes. The next most popular rebate, with more than 4,000 issued, is energy efficient clothes washers.

Mr. Speaker, this is just the beginning. I'm encouraged by the tremendous response of Albertans, but we can do more. We need to spread the word. We all have a role to help in the transition of our province to a low-carbon economy in the future. Consumers have the power to significantly reduce greenhouse gas emissions through their day-to-day energy decisions. The choices we make, big or small, really do have an impact. For information on what purchases are eligible and how to apply for a rebate, Albertans are encouraged to visit climatechangecentral.com. That's climatechangecentral.com.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Opiate Drug Doda

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my constituency of Calgary-McCall there is growing concern over a harmful and addictive substance called doda. Doda is created by grinding up dried poppies into a fine powder, then using that powder, rich in opiates, to make tea. This addictive concoction is growing in popularity in the East Asian and South Asian communities in Calgary, especially among blue-collar workers such as taxi and truck drivers and factory workers. Members of my community and even members of the Calgary Police Service have asked me to remind the members of this Assembly and, indeed, all Albertans of the seriousness of this issue.

I want to thank the ministers of Justice and Health and the Solicitor General for their written responses to me regarding this issue. Their letters helped clarify why doda currently exists in a legal grey area, as the powder must be tested for opiate levels each time it is seized by police. Sometimes the opiate levels are too low to lay charges, but what about traffickers offering stronger doda? Surely such concentrations are out there on the streets.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I urge citizens and the government to remain vigilant. Any substance derived from the opium poppy presents health risks not only to the users but to the people around them, particularly when we are talking about people operating motor vehicles. And, of course, there are the serious consequences, both personal and cultural, of this addiction.

Drugs destroy lives, communities, and families. I urge my fellow citizens to shun doda and all other illegal substances, if not for themselves then for the sake of their loved ones.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Pincher Creek Primary Care Network

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I am pleased to rise again to acknowledge the innovative health care delivery that takes place in my constituency at the Pincher Creek community health centre. This member's statement is quite unlike the doom and gloom member's statement we heard on health yesterday. This PCN is a model that sets a shining example for other facilities across our province. It is innovative and full of energetic and committed health care professionals. The Chinook primary care network has been a leader in delivering excellent primary health care services, with a strong focus on improving access, chronic disease management, and interdisciplinary family practice.

The Pincher Creek PCN was well ahead of the curve and championed change to improve patient care. Pincher Creek has demonstrated significant achievements in improving patient access, a 20 per cent improvement in access despite an increasing number of patients. The leaders of this PCN now teach other primary care network clinics how to improve access. This facility provides acute and continuing care and offers 24-hour emergency services, intensive care, obstetrics, surgery, and palliative care. It even has on-site diagnostic imaging and laboratory services.

We applaud the health professionals who make this PCN a success and are thankful to the constituents in the area who have embraced the change in health care service delivery in order to receive better access to care. The doctors at the PCN can see more patients because the facility is run more efficiently and the right provider is providing the right service to patients.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to bring to the attention of this Assembly the proclamation of the Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act, which comes into force tomorrow, October 30. This is indeed good news that all members can feel proud of. This act arose from extensive public consultation with over 4,300 Albertans as well as legislative reviews involving both sides of the House. I got a chance to review the details of this act as a member of the Standing Committee on Health. I am very pleased to see this progressive piece of legislation, that balances individual rights with more protective measures, finally come into force.

One of the important cornerstones of this legislation is the importance of an individual's dignity and autonomy. Not only is the act designed to help people remain as independent as possible for as long as possible. It provides more choices to people who need assistance in making personal decisions. Just as importantly, the act is designed to enhance the protection of vulnerable Albertans through enhanced screening of new co decision-makers, guardians, and trustees, a formal complaint and investigation process, and a more standardized and rigorous capacity assessment model.

I was personally pleased to see the number of public information sessions held across the province to inform Albertans about the changes being introduced by this legislation. I think that once Albertans learn more about the changes, they will appreciate the positive benefits that the act provides. Mr. Speaker, I commend the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports and the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General as well as their staff for their commitment and dedication in developing this progressive and world-class piece of legislation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Nursing Shortage

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Despite the denials of the Minister of Health and Wellness, the nursing shortage is very real. According to the College and Association of Registered Nurses of Alberta there was a shortage of 1,483 nurses in March, and these positions have not been filled. Alberta Health and Wellness continues to project a shortage of 6,000 nurses by 2016. Yet as of July over 500 nursing graduates were not able to find work in Alberta because of a hiring freeze, forcing them to go somewhere else to find work.

I've talked to nurses who, over the last few days since the H1N1 vaccine arrived, have been overworked and short-staffed. Nurses are being pulled from their regular positions to help administer the vaccine. Not only did the government lack foresight and vision regarding this public health emergency, but they have been systematically eroding the public health care system at the same time. The minister's scheme to cut nursing positions has left Albertans very vulnerable.

Over the long term an acute shortage of nurses will leave all Albertans without the proper care they need and, indeed, deserve. We need to value the critical work and valuable expertise that our nurses provide every day on the front lines of our health care system, not only during public health emergencies but in our hospitals, seniors' homes, and clinics every day. This means that instead of cutting nursing positions, we need to consider a more proactive hiring of nurses as well as effective strategies for retaining those experienced nurses we do have.

At our NDP health care hearings, being held all across Alberta, we are consistently hearing the message that high levels of nursing care reduce mortality rates and contribute significantly to overall better health in our communities. Mr. Speaker, this is what we should all be striving for, and I urge the government to resume its efforts to increase the number of nurses in our health care system.

Thank you.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise in the House today to present this petition with over 1,200 signatures on it from people across Alberta. The petition reads: "To the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, in Legislature Assembled: We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to vote against Bill 50."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a petition signed by 105 Albertans, and the petition reads: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to pass legislation to deinsure abortion in Alberta."

Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Bill 56

Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to beg leave to introduce Bill 56, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009, on behalf of my colleague the Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

The bill removes the requirement for the Deputy Minister of Finance and Enterprise to be a member of the board of Alberta Investment Management Corporation, AIMCo.

[Motion carried; Bill 56 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Bill 57

Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce first reading of Bill 57, the Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act.

This legislation will help to increase the efficiency of Alberta's justice system. Currently under the Criminal Code applications for certain warrants can only be made to provincial court judges or justices of the peace. Applications for other types of warrants must be to the Court of Queen's Bench. This act will allow Court of Queen's Bench justices the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, allowing them to issue all types of warrants under the Criminal Code.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 57 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 57 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Preparedness

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As a former public health officer I am committed to solutions, and I can tell the Premier that the best way to stop public fear around H1N1 is presenting a clear plan and demonstrating the capacity to deliver services without prolonged wait times. This spring I made several suggestions to the Premier prior to H1N1 arriving. To the Premier: how will the Premier demonstrate that there are enough doctors and nurses for this outbreak, as I suggested?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, just the other day I sent a letter to the health critic acknowledging the fact that the hon. leader was signed off on the pandemic plan, if we get there. But I just want to take this opportunity to thank all Albertans for their civic duty. I know they're lining up in lineups, cold weather, et cetera, but they are getting their vaccinations, and this will go a long way in preventing any kind of a pandemic in the future once we get our population vaccinated.

Dr. Swann: Well, for the record, Mr. Speaker, I signed off on the pandemic plan, not the vaccination plan.

Again to the Premier: how will the Premier assure Albertans that there will be enough acute-care bed capacity with the increased H1N1 patients?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, part of the pandemic plan is to put in place with the health care professionals a detailed plan to ensure that we have the capacity to deal with a pandemic if it ever should happen. But, on the other hand, Albertans are doing their civic duty in spite of, you know, long lineups and cold weather and all of the other issues that we're facing. They're doing their civic duty and receiving the flu vaccine, which will greatly reduce the risk of a pandemic in the province of Alberta, quite frankly, a province that is leading in terms of getting its population vaccinated as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question to the Premier is basically this: will the Premier commit to increasing staffing and stop cutting acute-care beds at this time?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I committed on behalf of our government to ensure that we will do whatever we can to prevent a pandemic in this province. If people do get ill, we'll take whatever steps are necessary to make sure that our citizens are protected and that they do receive the medical attention that they require. I know that we're in tough economic times, but this is a serious situation, and we want to prevent further costs down the road by ensuring that people do receive their vaccine. But if we do need the additional beds, they will be there.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. The public needs information and action to reduce fear, information and action this government is not demonstrating. One thing they're giving is the number of hospitalizations in Alberta, and overnight it increased by 15 to 233 hospitalizations. Calgary is taking the largest load at 95 patients. Again to the Premier. The minister of health has been asked questions several times and has not given an answer. Will you tell Albertans how many of the 6,800 acute-care beds in this province will be available for H1N1 patients today?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, that detail in terms of what beds will be available for whatever issue at any particular time rests with the medical profession. They will make those choices based on the evidence that's presented. It's not the role of this Assembly to determine that; it's through health care professionals, and I have every trust in them to do that properly.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Calgary's hospitals are already overstressed and facing the largest number of H1N1 cases in the province. Meanwhile, the Peter Lougheed expansion leaves 140 beds sitting empty. Will the Premier order these closed units in the Peter Lougheed to open to provide the relief needed for this outbreak?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister has a plan and can give the details once again to this Assembly and to all Albertans in terms of dealing with a possible pandemic. But, again, I stress the fact: please, I know, longer lineups, et cetera, but get the vaccine. We'll keep providing the vaccine as soon as even more is made available. I mean, we've come a long way in the last six months, from not having the vaccine to getting the research done, providing the vaccine, getting it, obviously, produced and now distributed across the country of Canada. We worked very hard as Premiers with the federal government to make sure that money was available, and now we're doing our duty as Albertans to ensure that we have staff in place and the vaccine in place to make sure that people are vaccinated.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. More beds are useless, in fact, if there are no staff to provide the care. I guess my question for this government is whether they've contacted retired nurses and doctors to help staff and work immediately to increase the prevention programs.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, just to be clear, there has been a plan in place for some time, long before this pandemic started to take place. In fact, we've had a policy in place through our department where we have paid for updated training for nurses if they wanted to come back, even part-time, out of retirement. That still exists. Part of the staffing of this particular immunization program is around either moving those who are working part-time into full-time roles, or if there are health care professionals who are retired in the community and want to come back and work, we're open to that. We're quite flexible.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Electricity Transmission Lines

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the next 10 years, according to the government's electricity transmission plan, there will be at least $14 billion worth of transmission lines built across this province. The government is claiming that it's all vital that we build this now. In the United States President Obama just announced $3.2 billion in spending on the smart grid for the entire United States. British Columbia's 10-year plan calls for just $2.5 billion in new line spending. To the Premier: why on earth is this province so far out of line compared to other jurisdictions?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, part of the critical infrastructure that is required is around $5.8 billion. There are about four lines that are critical.

Getting back to the Americans, I spent a considerable amount of time with the Western Governors' Association and Secretary Chu, Secretary Vilsack, and Secretary Salazar. Their number one issue in the United States is more efficient transmission. They're having the same issue in the United States that we have here. They are going through some unbelievable issues, of course: huge, huge deficits and larger debt.

Secretary Chu was very clear. He said that the only way they can reduce as quickly as possible some of the carbon that they're producing as a result of the inefficiency in transmission lines is to start building new ones. They're beginning to undertake that. That's nice to hear. There's a lot more to come on that particular file in the United States.

Mr. Taylor: Well, here's the thing, Mr. Speaker. The Premier isn't an expert on transmission needs, I'll admit that I'm not an expert on transmission needs, but among those who are experts, there's widespread disagreement. But this government doesn't want to address that disagreement; it just wants to make it disappear. So it cuts the public needs hearing out of the regulatory process. No more controls on spending. To the Premier: where is the check and balance on the spending of billions upon billions of dollars on transmission lines? Where is it in the system?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Utilities Commission is responsible for making those determinations. We know that we're growing demand in this province the equivalence of the size of the city of Red Deer twice in one year. We'll see another 50,000 people move to this province this year. You know, they're going to bring their families, they're going to be working someplace, they're going to be plugging their cars in during winter, they're going to heat their homes, and it's all increasing the demand.

Another issue we have is moving some of the green power to where the consumer is. We've got some good cogen going on in the province of Alberta. We want to tie that into a very good, new, very efficient grid so that the next generation has the same opportunity as we all have to have electricity at their fingertips.

Mr. Taylor: We'll have more electricity at our fingertips potentially than we could possibly imagine if we go ahead and build this gold-plated transmission system when we need something considerably less over the short term.

The lobbyist registry is finally coming online, Mr. Speaker, but unfortunately it's too late for this particular issue. But billions and billions of dollars of Albertans' money is too important to let this remain secret. Will the minister table in this House details of the discussions he and his ministers have had with the companies who are in line to build these multibillion-dollar power lines?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the need for more electricity in this province is very, very clear. We import roughly 1.6 million kilowatt hours every year. That's how much we're short, and most of the time we bring that into the province of Alberta at the highest cost. This is all part of a general plan to make sure that we have very efficiently transferred power in this province and also at a very, very reasonable rate. I know, given that we see construction costs across Canada coming down, especially here in Alberta, there's an opportunity to start on some of the critical infrastructure that's very, very necessary and will actually help bring in more industry in the province of Alberta so we can grow more jobs and pay for all of these social programs that we dearly enjoy.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Nursing Shortage

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much. Mr. Speaker, this government's struggle to cut wait times at flu clinics in Edmonton and Calgary is about to be made more difficult by the increasing number of people infected with the flu who are showing up in hospital emergency rooms. The surge has begun, and the sick are beginning to learn just how dearly the health minister's plan to cut nurses is costing the province. Lineups and wait times are rapidly growing at already-crowded waiting rooms. Will the health minister please outline for us his plans to ensure that emergency rooms are properly staffed to handle the surge of H1N1 patients?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, sometimes the best plan is to go talk to the people. Last night I spent some time at the University of Alberta emergency room. I met with the staff there. Yes, there is an increase in visitations to the emergency room. At the U of A, as an example, they've taken on their own initiative: what is the children's clinic during the day has now become a triage centre simply for influenza patients from 4 in the afternoon till midnight. All indication I had last night was that, yes, there is an increase, but they are dealing with it, and there was no panic that I saw last night.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, he didn't outline his plans to deal with it, and I hope he'll take the opportunity to do that.

Now, yesterday the minister said: "Where did he ever get the impression that my job was to eliminate nurses? Now, give me a break." But it's clear that there's a serious shortage of nurses in the system, and we're struggling to cope both in terms of flu clinics and in terms of emergency rooms as a result of this pandemic. Will the minister stand up and say to the 500 nursing students who have graduated in nursing and don't have jobs available to them because of his hiring freeze that, in fact, he will offer them jobs to ease the problems that have been created in our health care system?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, if the member actually wants to be serious about what he's asking about, maybe he should sit down and talk to some nursing students, as the Member for Lethbridge-West and I did last week in Lethbridge. What we discussed with the nursing students was that we cannot guarantee jobs for every graduate that comes out of any training in this province. However, we want to ensure that when highly trained nurses come out of university with their degree, we want them to be involved in the front end of the health care system doing what they are trained to do, not necessarily in the back end of the system, because other professionals are trained to do some of the work that nurses are currently doing today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, we have met with nursing students. Nursing students actually came to the NDP caucus public hearings on health care and made a presentation. They were enticed into this profession by this government, and now they're about to graduate after four years and there are no jobs. There are 1,400 vacant positions that have been frozen, Mr. Minister, and there are 500 nursing graduates. The math isn't that hard. Why don't you hire these students?

Mr. Liepert: Well, in fact, Alberta Health Services on a daily basis is hiring new nurses, Mr. Speaker. They're offering opportunities for nurses who have been working part-time or casual to move to full-time. We have to remember that the economy in this province has changed in the last year. Many nurses, primarily those who are female, were working part-time. There's been the desire by some of them to move to full-time. We're accommodating that within the system. Each time you move an individual from part-time to full-time, obviously that squeezes the system and takes up a position that may have been open for a graduating nurse. We're working within the economies out there today, and I believe that over time there will be adequate opportunities for every graduating nurse in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Long-term Care in Fort McMurray

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Members of this Assembly know very well what goes on in their own constituencies. Our senior citizens who have built this province – it's important for MLAs to listen to their bosses at a coffee shop or anywhere in their constituencies. The government uses some of this information in making decisions, which is good. Eighteen months ago a detailed government report recognized the gap in my city of almost 100,000 citizens that did not even have one long-term care centre, by comparison. The government announced to build a long-term care centre, which was welcome news. My question today is to the minister of health. Why did he contradict these findings in the government report when 12 months later he commented: the urgent need is no longer, and the average age of your community is just too young?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I will try and answer the member's question. Because I have been accused in the past of talking gibberish, I'll try and make sure that what I'm providing the member is factual. One of the things that did change in the last year and a half is the fact that we went from regional health authorities, who had their capital plans built around their region. We're now with one region throughout the province, and we have to ensure that we're providing health care equitably throughout the province. When we did the reassessment within the budgetary constraints that we had, it was determined that the Fort McMurray long-term care centre was not the highest priority. Not to say it won't happen, but it won't be in the three-year capital plan.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The average age is too young, and it's not urgent: I guess I beg to differ. As MLAs we don't deal with averages; we deal with real people, real Albertans whose families have helped their loved ones. So my question is to the minister of health. What would you want to say to a senior citizen, Charlotte Mitchell, who lived in her home for 99 years? She just celebrated her 101st birthday. She's in an acute-care bed in the hospital, and based on your previous comments, she will have to wait until she's about 103 or 104.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can only go by the best advice that we receive. The advice that we received is that Fort McMurray has the youngest demographic in the province. The growth rate in seniors is projected to decline, not increase. The acute-care beds in Fort McMurray are underutilized, and many of them are being used for seniors' care. We also have to remember that what we're trying to design in this province is a model where we take the care to the patient and not create a system where we're forcing the patient into the system. There is a lodge in Fort McMurray that has some 42 spaces, and we want to ensure that we're providing the right care there if required.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question centres on this. When a government makes a commitment with funding, should it not honour that commitment first, in this case to our seniors? Three weeks ago in my community we welcomed the announcement of more new money, $241 million. But the difficulty is that it doesn't reflect the priorities on the infrastructure list. Nowhere on there is there mention of the announcement from 18 months before. So my question to the President of the Treasury Board would be this: can he assure this member in this House that he will put that commitment of 18 months ago to the top of that $241 million new money that was announced three weeks ago to show that respect for our seniors?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, I have to be able to make the same commitment to all members of this House on an equitable basis. We have to understand that priorities change and that the way that growth develops, the way that the pressures on government expand or morph sometimes needs a second look. But I will commit to the hon. member and to every member in this House that the number one priority of this government is to deal with Albertans openly and honestly, to deal with the most vulnerable Albertans firstly, to continue with the priorities that are set out by the Premier of making sure, not losing sight, that while we continue to provide health care and education, we also acknowledge the economic enablers that need to proceed to pay all the bills.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

2:10 Cellphone Use and Vehicle Safety

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year a standing committee of this Legislature referred the issue of cellphone use while driving to the Minister of Transportation. Their committee wanted this province to be leaders. Now, a year later the minister is saying that we have to wait even longer before he finally takes action to address this danger on our roads. To the Minister of Transportation. Action was expected, sir. Why are we waiting so long?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think I've told this hon. member many times before that there's more than just cellphones that are distractions in this province and with drivers right across the country. Yes, there are other provinces right now bringing legislation – Ontario just put theirs into play at the beginning of the week – but they’re all doing one-offs. If you look at our last report that I looked at about distracted driving, cellphones were about the middle of the road of distractions. We have a huge number of distractions out there. Our first priority is safety, making sure people keep their eyes on the road and their hands on the wheel. We want them to pay attention while they’re driving. But to answer his question, we haven’t found all of the . . .

The Speaker: You’ll have a chance, I’m sure.
The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we are talking about the same thing, people keeping their eyes on the road. This government talks about needing to see how other provinces handle this, but many, many jurisdictions in North America alone have long ago taken action to address the distractions of cellphone use: Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, California. To the minister again: how many more examples does the minister need before he takes any action?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, all of those examples he’s talking about, all of those people are talking. Some of them have enacted. The ones that he’s saying have enacted. Others are going to. But there’s no proof today yet that it’s reduced collisions on the highway. We’re wanting to make sure we get it right. That’s why we’re taking our time, to make sure we get it right.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This has already taken a long, long time. How many more accidents will happen? How many more lives will be lost? I think the Minister of Transportation must be overworked or something else. When can Albertans expect the study period to be finally over and the Minister of Transportation to act on this?

Mr. Ouellette: I’m really happy he recognizes how hard I work. I love that when I hear people say, “That minister is working so hard.”

Let me tell him through you, Mr. Speaker, that we absolutely are working on making sure that we get the proper legislation in place before we bring it forward. But I have to add that if he’s looked at our stats that have come out, we have reduced our collisions by 10 per cent in this province and our fatalities by 10 per cent from ’07-08.

The Speaker: There are no childish pranks allowed in this Assembly, to my two children to my left.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Preparedness (continued)

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As H1N1 moves across Alberta, there will be a greater need to identify and treat those Albertans who have contracted the disease. My questions are for the Minister of Health and Wellness. As Alberta’s emergency rooms fill up, what will be done to ensure that people with H1N1 are treated and not just waiting in emergency rooms?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I dealt with that a little bit in my answer to the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. In addition to what’s happening at the hospital site itself, Alberta

Health Services announced today that they are opening three influenza assessment centres where team-based care will be available to treat those patients who are suffering from influenza. I have signed a ministerial order which will allow nurses to prescribe. In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, we’ve taken the opportunity to allow through ministerial order doctors to prescribe medication by telephone for patients who are exhibiting symptoms of H1N1. So we’re attempting not only with our vaccination program to keep Albertans out of emergency rooms and doctors’ offices but also make it easier to access.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is to the same minister. How will the primary care networks like the one in my constituency of Edmonton-Decore, located at Northgate Mall, work with these influenza assessment centres?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I don’t know that there’ll be a direct relationship other than the fact of what will allow a clinician’s office within a primary care network to be able to triage to these particular centres either by telephone or in person. I think what is important is that this assessment centre will very much work within the team-based concept where nurses, nurse practitioners, not just physicians, will actually be diagnosing and prescribing to patients.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental is to the same minister. Will these influenza assessment centres be in operation after H1N1 has peaked?

Mr. Liepert: That’s a very good question, Mr. Speaker, because I’ve said on many occasions that sometimes very good ideas come out of trying circumstances. If this proves to be something that we should take a look at in continuing going forward, I think that I’m certainly open to that. I think some of the other initiatives that I’ve just talked about are other things that we should be looking at going forward. So I certainly would take that as: if it’s a means of increasing access to the system, we’ll absolutely take a look at it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

H1N1 Preparedness in Seniors’ Living Facilities

Ms. Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s better to be safe than sorry. Page 22 of the Alberta Health Services pandemic H1N1 response plan states, “All continuing care facilities . . . are expected to be self-sufficient, to the greatest extent possible.” This is concerning. There are already questions about staffing and care levels in some of these facilities. To the minister of health: will the minister admit that in his plan for a pandemic continuing care facilities will be left to cope with an increasingly complex system of cases?

Mr. Liepert: If I understood the member correctly, it is: what are we going to do to ensure that residents of long-term care are protected? Unless there are chronic conditions that put them in the high-risk category, they are not in the initial rollout. I think what we need to remember here, Mr. Speaker, is that this is a vaccination plan that will take place over several months. We are now in day 4. We do not have an endless supply of vaccine. In fact, we have some 600,000 doses, and it is arriving as it's manufactured. We need to ensure that the right patients are receiving the vaccine appropriately.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. It wasn't just long-term care I was referring to. I was referring to continuing care, which can be lodges, enhanced lodges, assisted living, designated assisted living, and long-term care.

Whether it is seasonal flu or H1N1, in a seniors' living facility illness spreads quickly, and often isolation procedures are necessary. Can the minister guarantee that there will be enough staff to meet this possible situation?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't run the long-term care, enhanced living facilities, all of the above that the member mentioned. We trust those who do operate these facilities. They know better than we do. I would suggest they probably know better than the member knows how to manage a facility. They are professionals, and they will deal with the circumstances.

Ms Pastoor: I would know very well how to look after the care in a facility.

Having round-the-clock registered nurses on-site as a temporary measure will reduce the number of seniors that will need ambulances to take them to severely crowded ERs and acute-care beds. Will the minister order that all senior living facilities have registered nurses around the clock when they are needed?

Mr. Liepert: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West-Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

2:20 Arts and Culture Funding

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans are increasingly looking to arts and cultural activities in the province as a source of celebration and entertainment, particularly during these challenging economic times. The recent Alberta Arts Days was only a three-day event. My question is to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. As the minister responsible for promoting arts and culture in Alberta, do you think that Alberta Arts Days did enough to inspire Albertans to come out and support our artists in communities?

The Speaker: Well, okay. Try and stretch that one. We're dealing with government policy, not information questions. If that's government policy, do you think, go ahead.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, we're talking about Alberta Arts Days, a celebration. Last year we had the first, in 2008, one day. Thirty communities participated across the province, a hundred and some different events. In 2009 we expanded that because we wanted to include schools; we wanted to include libraries. We wanted to have our young people exposed to it. We wanted to make sure that the people that are less fortunate and the people that are new immigrants to the country are exposed to it.

This year, in tough times, Mr. Speaker, we had 116 communities, up from 30. We had 571 events, up from 100. We had 80 schools and 110 different libraries participating. I think Albertans have overwhelmingly said: we believe in arts and culture. That was in communities from hamlets to villages to cities.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental again is to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. Annual celebrations are fine, but there are also specific commitments that you agreed to in your ministry's cultural policy, the Spirit of Alberta. Do Alberta Arts Days actually deliver on any of these commitments?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, they absolutely fulfill those commitments. We talked about the Spirit of Alberta, four key points that we want to go forward with. We want to have access to all Albertans irrespective of where they live or their socioeconomic status. We want to build capacity in our communities to house the performing and literary and visual arts. We want to promote excellence. We want our artists to be recognized like our hockey players and our Olympic athletes, some of the very best in the entire world. We want to make sure we preserve our cultural industries. Having our artists in all different parts of the province onstage together celebrating Alberta: that's what we're supposed to be doing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary question is again to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. Were the dollars spent on Alberta Arts Days the best use of funding that could have gone instead directly to the organizations?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm proud to say that the government of Alberta spent $700,000 on Alberta Arts Days. That was not money that was taken away from arts organizations. That was actually money to facilitate the 571 productions that we had. You know what? We funded five of them; we paid for artists. But the communities across this province stepped up themselves, and they put this on. They did that with their own dime. That's what we're trying to do – we're a hand up, not a handout – and Albertans have responded.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

H1N1 Pandemic Ethics Framework

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Health Services pandemic plan estimates there will be between 130 and 400 deaths from H1N1. The same plan predicts a demand for ICU space that will overwhelm capacity, so life-and-death decisions about who gets treatment will need to be made.

Mr. Speaker, could I have some order in the Assembly, please?

The Speaker: I would ask for order, please. Yes.

Dr. Taft: Thank you.

The Speaker: That's the first time, by the way, in 13 years that I've used the word "order."

Dr. Taft: The public has a right to know the ethical basis for these life-and-death decisions. The pandemic plan briefly mentions an ethics framework but does not include it. Will the minister of health make public the pandemic ethics framework that is briefly referred to in the pandemic plan?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I will take that question, and I will discuss with Alberta Health Services what they're referring to. I'm not quite sure what this member is all twisted out of shape about, but we'll figure it out, and I'll report back to the Assembly.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, what I'm concerned about is the basis for which life-and-death decisions are going to be made, and the medical community is well aware that this is coming. People need to know how decisions like that are going to be made. They can, for example, make preparations if they know that a loved one won't be on a priority list in an intensive care unit.

I'm going to table later today a pandemic ethics framework from Ontario which is fully public. Can the Minister of Health and Wellness tell the Assembly why Alberta's ethics framework has not been made public?

Mr. Liepert: I think I answered that question, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Taft: You did no such thing, and you're sloughing off your job.

Why has it taken this administration several months longer than Ontario to even, apparently, begin to address the issue of an ethics framework for life-and-death decision-making?

Mr. Liepert: Just to be clear, if the member didn't understand my earlier answer, I said that I would check with Alberta Health Services, and I would provide him with an answer. I'm not sure what he didn't understand about that, but I think his problem is that he didn't know how to rephrase his supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Employment Standards for Sick Leave

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unlike other jurisdictions in Canada, Alberta's Employment Standards Code provides no protection whatsoever for workers who miss work because of illness. In many cases these workers are in the service industry, and they have the most interaction with the public but at the same time have the least amount of job security. Why won't the minister of labour amend our Employment Standards Code to protect Alberta workers who fall ill?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there are no provisions under our Employment Standards Code that speak to paid sick leave, but I might add that there are no jurisdictions in Canada that address paid sick leave.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, I wasn't talking about paid sick leave. I was talking about the right to be away from work without pay and not lose your job, which is not a right currently enjoyed by Albertans, unlike most of the rest of the provinces.

Now, Alberta Health Services estimates that up to 35 per cent of Albertans will fall sick and have to stay at home for the next seven days. Why can't the minister of labour use common sense and display common decency and join most of the rest of Canada in protecting the jobs of sick workers?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, for many Alberta workers sick leave is addressed through their collective agreements, company human resources policies, or other arrangements with their employers. This has worked really well in our province in the past, and I would suspect that it will continue to work quite well in the future.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, it works well for employers, not for workers. Vulnerable low-paid workers are not in any position to negotiate on an equal footing with their employers. If the minister doesn't understand that, he doesn't understand his job.

Now, the government itself is calling for employers to stop asking for doctors' notes, yet the government's own policy is that they ask their employees for doctors' notes after three days. Will the minister take his own advice and get rid of this policy for his own employees?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there are collective agreements, as I've indicated. It's working, and it's providing solutions between employers and employees. The employers as well as the employees have certain rights in terms of responding to some of the activities that occur within their work environments.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Most of my questions have actually been asked just previously, but there is one piece that has not yet been addressed, and that is a final question to the same minister. Is there anything to stop an employer from firing an employee who might be laid up at home with H1N1?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I would say that these workers and their employers should be having good discussions about the provisions in the event of any type of illness. There are no reasons to have to wait until a worker is sick before determining possible solutions, even if they never need to have those solutions exercised. I would continue to encourage all employers and employees to be proactive, to become aware of the sick leave arrangements that may be available to them, and to use common sense.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Affordable Accessible Housing

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the minister of housing assured Albertans that she is doing a good job of providing accessible affordable housing to people with disabilities. Well, it isn't a good enough job for the 30 people with disabilities in Calgary who need accessible housing, many of whom have been waiting over a year now. To the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs: what does the minister have to say to these people in Calgary who have been waiting, sometimes over a year, to get an affordable, accessible unit?

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd be pleased to meet with these – I don't know if they're your constituents, hon. member, or if they're a particular group in your constituency, but I have been meeting with this member's constituents on a regular basis as you refer them with these types of issues. I'd be pleased to meet with this group in order to assist them with whatever it is that their need is.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks for that kind offer. However, I did just call down and get that information from the Calgary housing people down there, so maybe the minister could place a call down to those people and find out who the 30 people are who've been waiting sometimes up to a year, maybe doing her job instead of asking me to do it for her.

Nevertheless, of the 1,600 units that are available, how many of these have been rotated in the last year with new people coming onboard these affordable, accessible houses?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, I'm sure you have the answer to that question as well if you had the answer to the first question. But I'm uncertain about the number here today, about the 1,600 units and what became available and how those are being filled, you know, with an immediacy right now. I don't know that.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess what I'm saying is that the 1,600 housing units you provided for affordable and accessible housing are full. When can we see some more affordable, accessible units provided so people are not in long-term care, on the street, or wherever they may be hiding? We want some affordable, accessible units on the street. When can we expect some more to be available?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, we've had a request for proposal for affordable housing. We have a mandate of developing 11,000 housing units over a five-year period. We are over halfway there within the first 24 months. Of that housing I can tell you, hon. member, that we've ensured that developers and municipalities, nonprofit organizations are definitely providing housing that is accessible for people with disabilities. So I can tell you that that's happening today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Grade 12 Diploma Exams

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Department of Education announced that the grade 12 diploma exams in math and science will no longer include a written response but will only include multiple choice numeric responses. Given that the Minister of Education has talked many times about the importance of our students developing literacy and communication skills, why would he dumb down the exams by removing the section that tests these essential abilities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, a context, I think, is necessary. Over the last number of months, over a year that I've been in the portfolio, I've certainly heard from students, from teachers, from school boards that we have too many exams, it takes too long, and it's too much exam anxiety on the students: too much, too much, too much. When we looked at what we could do differently, we determined that the correlation between the part A and the part B, the written and the multiple choice and numeric portions of the exams in maths and sciences, was extremely high. In other words, students were doing as well on the part A as they were on the part B. If you're looking for an exit result, which is what the diploma exams are, and you're getting the same mark on both exams, one of them is redundant. So reducing the number of exams for students, reducing the time frame for exams answers the questions that I have been asked.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The teachers that I've spoken with say that multiple choice questions cannot properly assess all of students' abilities or allow them to show their thinking processes. How does the minister expect our students to be fairly assessed if the diploma exams don't reflect all of what they are learning in the classroom?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, while teachers in the classroom are really pivotal and key to student assessment, obviously, as part of learning, we do have very strong assessment expertise in the Department of Education working with teachers from across the province to design valid and reliable questions. Multiple choice and numeric questions are valid and reliable. They test not only knowledge but comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis, and evaluation. Most of our questions are at the application and analysis level while some are at the synthesis and comprehension level. In other words, it's not just testing and regurgitation of facts, and you can't succeed by guessing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. In addition to changing the format of the math and science exams, the Department of Education changed the exam calendar so that students were to write math and chemistry, two very challenging tests, on the same day. It is my understanding that this has been changed. Can you clarify this and how you'll let staff, parents, and students know, and can you ensure that this will not happen again in June?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, we have sent out a revised exam schedule for both January and June to all jurisdictions. It'll be communicated in the same way that the original exam schedule was, through the classroom to the students immediately. It's also on our website.

I think what happened is that when we looked at how we could shorten the amount of time taken for exams and return more time to the classroom and less stress on the students in writing exams, we got a little bit overexuberant in that, perhaps, and that resulted in the doubling up of the chem and math on one day. We've changed that. They'll be written on separate days. We've responded to that concern that's come in from students across the province and also to the concern about exams being written on the 28th and 29th of June. We've backed that schedule up. The new schedule is out. Schools should have it as of yesterday, and it's on the website.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Child Protection

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Ministry of Children and Youth Services is constantly making changes to practice without making the necessary changes in policy, which causes confusion and inconsistency in casework across the regions. The Auditor General and the children's advocate have raised concerns regarding the lack of clear policy, especially surrounding investigations of maltreatment of children and youth already in care. To the Minister of Children and Youth Services: what is being done to ensure consistency in practice and policy across the child and family services authorities and the designated First Nations agencies?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that when we're talking about workloads, there are actually two things that would be helping to take care of what you're talking about. One is the work that's being done on the casework practice model. As you know, that's been implemented across the province. The other is workload issues, which I've mentioned before. We have all kinds of mechanisms that are in place to make sure that we have appropriate workload levels for all of our staff.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. With the rising number of students in care and a freeze on working staff employment, a crisis is occurring as we speak.

Since the establishment of a working group in 2008 what specifically is being done to address the very real and problematic lack of regulation surrounding investigations of maltreatment of those children and youth who are already in government care?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, I'm not exactly sure what the member is talking about here. What I would suggest is that if you could get more information to me, I will get a response.

Mr. Chase: I appreciate that follow-up.

Will the minister provide a date for when clear and consistent policy will be in place regarding investigations into the maltreatment of children and youth in government care?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Yeah. Again, Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the member is talking about in terms of the maltreatment here. Please do follow up, and I'll get back to you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The new Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act received royal assent last year. However, I have heard from constituents expressing concerns that the new legislation does not respect people's rights to make their own decisions. To the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports: is this true information?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, this is certainly not true. In fact, the opposite is true. The Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act provides more, not fewer, protective measures and options for Albertans who need help making decisions. It focuses on the least intrusive approach to respecting an Albertan's right to make decisions for as long as possible.

This is good legislation. The significant amount of work and effort over the last four years to get to this point has been worth it. This progressive legislation benefits Albertans both today and in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first supplement to the same minister. The other concerns I have heard relate to capacity assessment. Can the minister advise the House on how capacity assessments will be done under this new act?

2:40

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, another great improvement in the act is the more standardized and rigorous capacity assessment model. The act's regulations clearly outline the represented adult's rights during the capacity assessment process, including the purpose of the assessment and their right to legal counsel. In addition, in-depth training is being provided to capacity assessors, and guidelines have been developed to further standardize the assessment process.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final supplement to the same minister. There have been a lot of stories in the news this past year about the abuse of vulnerable people, specifically seniors. Will this new act do something to better protect seniors?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the abuse of vulnerable Albertans is a significant concern of this government. This act is a great step forward. It provides more safeguards and protective measures. This includes enhanced screening of new co decision-makers, guardians, or trustees as well as a formal complaint and investigation process.

I would also like to add that it's not just me that thinks that the AGTA is great legislation. New South Wales in Australia have asked for details on AGTA as they review their legislation. Again, Alberta is leading the way forward.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 92 questions and responses today.

Speaker's Ruling

Oral Question Period Rules

Go Green Initiative

The Speaker: Just a couple of comments before we move on. First of all, there were a couple of interjections by the chair today, one having to do with a question that said: what do you think? Well, please, let's all remember that we're dealing with policy questions here and government policy questions, not dealing with personal opinions from people, particularly ministers.

Secondly, for a couple of my colleagues here to my left House of Commons Procedure and Practice page 520 deals with exhibits being inadmissible in the House. A little reading over the weekend might be in order.

Thirdly, thank you all for all of these little pamphlets being returned to me about Go Green. Remember, there are three of them because there are three documents that we're trying to basically say that you can access in ways other than printed material. One is Votes and Proceedings, one is the Order Paper, and the other is Hansard. That's the reason there are three. Secondly, it was a subjective decision to do it in one day only and not kill some more trees to do it in four days. But my experience is that it usually takes about four days to get the message through. So today is the last day of the messaging with respect to this. On Monday you will not see this.

Let us continue the Routine in 30 seconds from now.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: Hon. members, we're back on the Routine now.
The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Bill 58

Corrections Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today to request leave to introduce Bill 58, the Corrections Amendment Act, 2009.

These amendments clarify the roles of monitoring and recording and allow for electronic monitoring or recording of nonprivileged inmate communications. The intent here is that it will increase the opportunities that we have to intercept and report active or planned criminal activities within our communities.

The amendments also will allow remission to be granted to offenders serving sentences for provincial statutes or municipal bylaw offences, Mr. Speaker, which are nonviolent crimes. This encourages good behaviour and encourages inmates to take courses to improve their quality of life so that when they get out, they're active in society, and it will reduce the offender population, which should give us significant savings within our facilities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 58 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 58 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Bill 60

Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and request leave to introduce first reading of Bill 60, the Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009.

This bill proposes two categories of amendments. One category of amendments will impact midwives, acupuncturists, and dentists. The amendments add teaching, management, and research activities to the scope of practice statements for these three professions. This change will allow their colleagues to regulate members' practice in these areas. It's important because it enables colleges to put in place measures like ethical guidelines for research.

The second category of amendments reserves additional titles for the nursing, paramedic, and pharmacy professions. All health professions reserve titles that may be used only by registered members. These titles enable the public to distinguish accredited health professionals from others who may provide a similar service but do not have equivalent knowledge and training.

I'd ask all members to support this bill and to move this bill to the next stage. I move first reading of Bill 60.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 60 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 60 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the appropriate number of copies of annual reports for the Alberta Foundation for the Arts, the Alberta Historical Resources Foundation, the historic resources fund, and the Wild Rose Foundation, as well as the annual review for the Alberta Human Rights and Citizenship Commission.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three sets of tablings. I have e-mails from concerned Albertans Mariella Villalobos, Jenny Regal, Stephan Verrier, Marsha Hales, Marilee Sharpe, Joy Lutz, Agnes Thurmeier, Kelly Russell, and Kelly Waterman urging the Minister of Education and the Premier not to cut funding to education because the future prosperity of Alberta depends on the knowledge and skills of its children and because it's even more important now to invest in education.

My second tabling is a letter from Mr. Leslie Zydek to the Education minister stating that he has always found the minister to be very honest with teachers in the past, reminding the minister of his comments at the teachers' convention in February, and asking him to "honour the agreement that is in place with a 5.99% increase and help to build some faith and trust back."

My last e-mail is to the Premier from Joan Farkas, who is "outraged that due to your lack of leadership, your lack of planning, and your completely inept financial management" your cuts "to education, health and social services demonstrate that you . . . do not care about Albertans."

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is the appropriate number of copies of a report released by the Sheldon Chumir Foundation for Ethics in Leadership entitled Dashed Dreams, New Realities: Calgary's Talk Frankly about the Impact of the Economic Downturn. The report is sponsored by Alberta Global Forum, University of Calgary; Calgary Counselling Centre; Calgary Foundation; Canada West Foundation; and the Sheldon Chumir Foundation for Ethics in Leadership.

The second is an information pamphlet on the Ukrainian Museum of Canada, the Ukrainian Women's Association of Canada, Alberta branch. This is an organization that has a museum in my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. I was able to be at a most recent exhibition of their collection, and it's pretty impressive, so I'm happy to table copies of that information brochure.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter dated August 25, 2009, that I received from the Alberta College and Association of Chiropractors regarding the delisting of chiropractic services from Alberta health care insurance benefits. It's signed by a Dr. Clark Mills, and it's certainly informative.

The second tabling I have today is a letter dated August 20, 2009, from the Capital Region Board: regional action, global opportunity. It's addressed to the hon. Minister of Transportation and also to the hon. Minister of Infrastructure. It's a letter regarding the importance of the Green TRIP program to the capital region.

Thank you.

2:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling a document that I referred to in question period today. This document is titled Adult Critical Care Triage and Resource Allocation Protocol for Pandemic Influenza. It's dated July of this year. It's from Ontario, and the purpose of it is "to apply to an influenza pandemic, when demand for critical care needs outstrips available resources."

Thank you. It's important reading for the Minister of Health and Wellness.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Goudreau, Minister of Employment and Immigration, pursuant to the Government Organization Act the Alberta College and Association of Chiropractors radiation health administrative organization annual report for the year ended June 30, 2009, with attached financial statements; the Alberta Dental Association and College 2006 radiation health and safety program annual report January 1, 2008, to December 31, 2008, with attached financial statements; the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association radiation protection program 2008 annual report with attached auditor's report on the radiation protection program; College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta radiation health administrative organization annual report for the period April 1, 2008, to December 31, 2008; University of Alberta authorized radiation health administrative organization annual report 2008-2009; University of Calgary radiation health administration organization annual report for the period April 1, 2008, to March 31, 2009, with attached financial statements; pursuant to the Regulated Forestry Profession Act the College of Alberta Professional Forest Technologists annual report 2008.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The hon. Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 7(6) could I ask the Government House Leader if he would share with the House the projected government business for next week.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, Monday, November 2, is occupied with private members' business.

On Tuesday, November 3, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders for second reading we would anticipate a debate and progress on Bill 46, Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act; Bill 48, Crown's Right of Recovery Act; Bill 49, Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2); introduction for second reading of Bill 55, Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 56, Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 57, Court of Queen's Bench Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 58, Corrections Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 59,

Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009; and Bill 60, the Health Professions Amendment Act, 2009. Some of those bills will be introduced for first reading, of course, on Monday. Time permitting, Committee of the Whole on Bill 31, Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, and I believe members have been advised that there will be amendments proposed for that; then Bill 46, Gunshot and Stab Wound Mandatory Disclosure Act; Bill 48, Crown's Right of Recovery Act; and Bill 49, Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009 (No. 2).

Wednesday afternoon, November 4, for second reading Bill 53, Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, and Bill 54, Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009; Committee of the Whole on Bill 55, Senatorial Selection Amendment Act, 2009; third reading of bills 46, 48, 49; and as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, November 5, in the afternoon for second reading Bill 56, Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009; Committee of the Whole on Bill 53, Professional Corporations Statutes Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 54, Personal Information Protection Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 56, Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2009; third reading of bills 31, 53, 54, 55; and as per the Order Paper.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

Alberta Capital Bonds

16. Ms Evans moved:

Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities.

[Adjourned debate October 28: Mr. Hancock]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader to continue.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do want to take the opportunity to spend just a few minutes to talk about Alberta capital bonds and the opportunity that I think they provide for Albertans and for Albertans' government.

Alberta is and has been recognized as one of the best places to live, to work, and to raise a family. Certainly, I think all Albertans are very, very proud of the province that we have. When we looked at what we aspire to in terms of the 20-year horizon for Alberta and talked a number of years ago about unleashing innovation and leading and learning and competing in a global marketplace and making Alberta the best place to live, work, and visit, that was about how we help to unleash the potential that Albertans have in a province that has a wonderful wealth of resources and a wonderful environment to live in.

When we talk about the best place to live, to work, and to visit, we're really talking about how we proceed with the development of our resources and our economy while we maintain the wonderful environment, the big blue sky, the clean water, the place that we have, the quality of life that we have, which includes not only our environment but also our ability to celebrate the arts, the ability to share our culture, and then, of course, the need for us to develop our potential through making sure that we have an excellent education system and making sure that we have the opportunity to ensure that there's health care available for our children when they need it, for our parents when they need it. That's what we talk about when we talk about Alberta being the best place to live, work, and visit: the ability to unleash our potential, our human potential and the potential of the place in which we live so that we can trade out into the world, be citizens of the globe and trade into the world economy.

Now, there's a world recession happening, and Alberta has become an unwilling participant. The reality is that some of the things that we rely on in our current economy – the ability to export particularly our carbon energy products, oil and gas – depend on a world price. That world price is set to a great extent by demand, and when you're in a world recession, demand goes down. We have this recession happening that has impacted our citizens in terms of their ability to invest their hard-earned resources, the money that they've saved for their retirement, the money that they're building towards their retirement. It's impacted the revenues to government in terms of what we do going forward. It's created this uncertainty in the economy.

Now, luckily, as most prognosticators would say, Alberta was best positioned going into this recessionary time, and Alberta is best positioned to come out of that recessionary time, but in the meantime there are some issues that need to be dealt with. One of those issues is: how do we help Albertans to weather the financial crisis that's happened across the world? It truly is a financial crisis. I've talked to seniors in my constituency and even members of my own family who probably shouldn't have had money in the market because when you're a senior, you're really looking for stable investments, for income-based investments, essentially investments that will give you an interest stream and an income, but because of the meltdown of the financial market, interest rates are at an all-time low. There aren't good places to put your money to get an interest income return, and going into the market to get those interest instruments puts people at risk. We've seen people whose portfolios have been, if not devastated, certainly diminished significantly, and they're not in a position to recoup that because they don't have the time left in their lives to be able to recoup that.

We have people, senior citizens, but we also have others who are saving through their RRSPs, who are saving in other ways to try to make sure that they can take care of themselves and their families in future years, and they're at a loss as to where to put their investments at this point in time. With interest investments, as I say, if you put your money in the bank, which is the safe, secure place, in Canada at least, where deposits are guaranteed up to a certain level, you only get a .5 per cent return. I haven't looked recently at the Canada savings bond return, but it's pretty low. There's a lot of money that's parked on the sidelines, that's not actually going into our economy to help bring us out of this recession.

We also have the other fortunate position to be in; that is, that Alberta is recognized as being a very, very strong, well-managed, well-governed jurisdiction. It's been recognized, as some of the members of the opposition have indicated in their comments in the last couple of days, with a triple-A credit rating, which you don't get by being a place of fiscal mismanagement. You only get it if people recognize that you have sound management.

Here we have a government with a triple-A credit rating, an ability to get the best rates, with a strong covenant, a good place to invest. In fact, we find people coming from all over the world to look to invest in Alberta. When you look at that sort of a scenario, you say – perhaps I could add a little bit more before I get to that conclusion. We also are looking to say: in Alberta, where we were well positioned going into it but are participating in this world-wide recession and do have some issues, what is the best way to prepare to come out of that recession, to make sure that we can be leading-edge and that we can trade out into the world? When you have that discussion, you have to say: well, we want to have our people prepared. We need to be up to date. We need to be leading edge in education, and that requires some physical infrastructure although probably not in the same way as we've traditionally done it over the years.

We have to invest in our education infrastructure. We want a healthy, vibrant population, which means we need strong health infrastructure. We want to have places where people can enjoy quality of life so that their families can know that they have a good place to stay, that they're going to be safe and well cared for. We need seniors infrastructure in terms of long-term and continuing care places. We need our economic infrastructure. We need roads. We need power lines. We need utility corridors. We may want to be talking about looking to the future in terms of a corridor, perhaps for a high-speed train link or something of that nature. We need to be looking ahead to the grids as we're ready for development but want to contain certain elements of that development so that we can preserve our environment. We need environmental infrastructure, water treatment, those sorts of things.

We're also in a time where one of the silver linings, of course, in the cloud is that costs have been reduced, so it's a good time to look to infrastructure, to build that infrastructure. It has two benefits. One, we get the infrastructure in place that we need for that long-term growth of the province, for that long-term growth in our human potential and our physical infrastructure, and we can do it at a lower cost than we've been receiving for the last number of years.

Here we have a population with money to invest and no place to invest it. We have a province that's poised for growth again, that needs to be ready for that growth, needs to have the infrastructure – the human infrastructure and the physical infrastructure – in place for that growth not only so that we can trade out into the world but so that we can protect our environment and continue to build our quality of life. It all comes together very nicely in the concept of saying that Albertans want to invest in Alberta. Albertans want to have the opportunity to put their money in a safe place, get a reasonable return, know that that return will be assured, and have the pride of being able to build the infrastructure that we need, the human and physical infrastructure that we need, for that future of the province that we are so poised for and so ready for.

Capital bonds, Mr. Speaker, are an instrument that we've used before in this province, but they're an instrument that would be particularly well suited, in my view, for the time that we have today. It allows Albertans to invest in Alberta, to take pride in being part of building the physical infrastructure that we have and the human infrastructure that we need. It allows Albertans to show their confidence in Alberta. It allows Albertans to have access to a covenant which is strong, an investment which is assured, and a reasonable return on that investment. It's a good time for us to do the work. It's a good opportunity for us to have Albertans employed. It just makes sense for all those purposes.

Now, we heard yesterday that there should be constraints around it, that we shouldn't borrow too much from Albertans, that we shouldn't leave it out for too long, that we shouldn't use the money to hire anybody but an Albertan. I think those were the gist of the three amendments that were tabled yesterday, and maybe there'll be more today.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think we should constrain the idea at this stage. As we build forward and as we go out with an instrument for the investment of Albertans, we should be looking to the full power or the potential of this tool to make sure that we can have a sufficient amount of bond available, a sufficient level of investment available for Albertans so that all Albertans have an opportunity to participate.

I remember when my aunt passed away, quite a few years ago now, and in her estate were her Alberta Energy Corporation shares.

Albertans had a chance to invest at that time in a government company that was set up for a purpose that would provide them with, in that case, some risk, yes, but an opportunity to be a part of the growth and development of this great province. They took that opportunity with great pride, some of them investing as little as a hundred dollars. I don't know if you could even invest less than that.

But it's not about how much. It's about every Albertan having that opportunity not only to have a secure investment but to have what I would call a prideful investment, an opportunity to put your money into something you care about, not just into a bank, not just into some investment that may go somewhere else, not having to worry about whether it's an ethical investment or whether the company that you're investing in is doing something in some part of the world that you may or may not agree with, investing here at home, in our province, to build this place so that we can be poised, so that the future children of this province and our grandchildren and their children will be able to live and work in this province and trade out into the world. What could be a better concept? What could be a better way of bringing the concept together than to have Albertans who are proud of their province have the ability to invest in a stable investment, get an appropriate return on that investment, and help to build the future in this way? Mr. Speaker, it's an idea whose time has certainly come again.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Under 29(2)(a)?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, please, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. To the hon. Minister of Education. I certainly listened with interest to your remarks regarding Motion 16. You said that you were reluctant to constrain the idea by having limits to the amount of the bonds that could be purchased. I'm just looking at your own budget from 2008-09, and I see where you were precisely over budget in your ministry support services by $2,474,000. It's not quite 10 per cent of your budget. At the same time that we see that overexpenditure in your ministry budget, we see some of the same senior managers who would be working out of that office receiving almost the identical amount, ironically, in an achievement bonus of $2.4 million. When you talk about being reluctant to constrain the idea, my question to the hon. minister is this: when your own track record here is not very good in your department, in your ministry office regarding sticking to your budget, why should taxpayers have faith in this government to give you, essentially, a blank cheque to go into debt for any amount that you so choose?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, in the comments that the hon. member makes, he sort of mixes things up. He talks about my office. Well, my office wasn't $2.5 million over in its budget. I think we spent about $60,000 more than was budgeted. Actually, in the budgeting process it's interesting. You do things line by line in the budget, but you do have the opportunity to move things around to areas of need. I did a little bit more travelling, actually, last year in terms of going to Singapore. Alberta is recognized as one of the leading-edge education jurisdictions in the world, so we got invited to Singapore. There'll be a report out soon on that conference, about looking to the future of education and what the best jurisdictions in the world are doing in that regard.

I went to London to meet with 69 ministers of education from around the world to talk, again, about what's happening in education in the world, which is pretty profound for Alberta. While we're leading edge now, we compete in a world economy, and we need to know what it's going to take for our children and our grandchildren to be educated to compete in that world economy. I don't apologize for that, nor do I apologize for the $2 million that he's talking about, an overage in ministry supports, which was spent primarily on Inspiring Education, Setting the Direction, and Speak Out Alberta, three initiatives which are clearly set up for the sole purpose of making sure that not only are we leading edge today but that we continue to be leading edge for tomorrow, all those things I was talking about in terms of developing the human potential of this province. That's why it's important.

Mr. Speaker, he needn't take my word for it that we do fiscal management well. The bond agencies around the world, the financial agencies around the world, that rate the best places to invest, rate Alberta as a triple-A best place in the world to invest, the best credit rating that you can get. That's an independent assessment by people who put their money where their assessment is. He doesn't have to take my word for it that fiscal management is good. He can take the advice of the people who have managed money around the world that this is the best place to invest your money.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River on the Q and A side.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if I might ask the hon. minister to clarify, based on the comment of the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar and a number of comments I heard from that side last night to the effect that we're talking about an unconstrained blank cheque, unending spending, those sorts of things. I wonder if the minister might want to clarify that we're not actually debating whether the government is going to spend any money here, unconstrained or otherwise. We're debating whether or not this House supports the notion of bonds. Any actual spending won't be authorized by this motion. It would be authorized by subsequent legislation and a discussion around budget, all of which comes back to the floor of this House. I just want to clarify that point.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, clearly the hon. member makes a very good point. The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar as chair of the Public Accounts Committee would know that all spending by government is both voted by the House and accountable to the House, and it has nothing to do with where the money comes from. It's a question of: before you can spend money, you have to get authority to do so. The hon. member would know that we are constrained by the processes of the House in terms of what you spend, but what he was referring to in his question was how much you should . . . [Mr. Hancock's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: We have to now move on.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre to participate in the debate.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm sorry that I had to cut off the Minister of Education when he was in full flight because I know how much he enjoys that.

I'm pleased to have an opportunity to join this debate on Government Motion 16. I have done my best to listen from my Annex office on the Tannoy and to follow up on the parts that I missed by reading the Hansard. I'll apologize in advance if I have misunderstood or missed somebody putting something on the record, but I don't think I have. What I heard in listening over the two days was essentially two debates running concurrently or woven together. One was a debate about the content of Motion 16, and a second was an ongoing debate about the process that we're involved in today.

Let me look at the debate around the motion itself. I'm just going to remind myself what the motion actually said because it's worth reviewing at this point. Essentially, we're looking at the idea of Alberta bonds being considered by the province. I read the remarks from the finance minister as she laid this out on Tuesday, and she had some very good points in the way she laid it out about what she was looking for from people and some questions that she put on the record that she wanted to see answered.

I'm on page 1578 of the Hansard from October 27. She essentially put a couple of things out that she was looking for. We're talking about Motion 16: "Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities."

Then she talks about and a lot of people have talked about how much Albertans want to invest in this. That, of course, is not in the text of the motion, but the minister of finance did mention that Albertans are looking for a way to proudly invest in the province. That is the way she put it.

Then she got into some questions, that she was seeking advice through debate on the motion on a couple of things: the type of bond that should be offered, who should be able to buy the bonds, whether it should be a fixed rate of interest over the life of the bond or a variable rate, shorter or longer, minimum and maximum amounts available for purchase, whether it would be RSP eligible, suggestions on where it could be available to purchase, and what kind of interest rate should be offered. Interestingly, I didn't hear a lot of debate that answered those specific questions, but there was a lot of sort of visioning and . . .

Mr. MacDonald: Blue skying.

Ms Blakeman: . . . blue skying – that's fair – of what people imagined this could result in. Fair enough, if that's the way people wanted to debate it. But from our side, the Official Opposition side, we had a number of issues. Actually, we did try a little closer to answer some of the questions that she had raised.

The Minister of Education and others have raised a number of times the credit rating that this province receives, but the idea of fiscal management is larger than a credit rating. It's not only about comparing ourselves with outsiders but also comparing ourselves with ourselves and with our own performance over the years. Of course, the one big thing that we're dealing with right now is that we've gone from $8 billion up to $7 billion down in a period of about 12 to 15 months, so on our own performance I think that argues that there's a fairly significant turnaround here. Is the government responsible for some or all of that? Most definitely. Are they responsible for all of it? No. Clearly not. You know, there are a lot of people who suffered a downturn in their finances. I'm not going to lay that whole issue at their door. But did they make choices that made this worse for us? Yes, I would argue that they did.

Now, the second part of this is the limits that are placed. We brought forward a number of amendments yesterday to try and put some limits on that motion: the idea that there would be a maximum of a quarter of a billion dollars that would be borrowed through the creation of this debt. In other words, we couldn't embrace a debt larger than a quarter of a billion dollars through the issuance of this bond, that we would not go into debt for longer than 10 years with the issuance of this bond, and that we would have an Alberta-first policy for those who would be the recipients of the contracting work that flowed through the infrastructure projects that were enabled through this bond. Those were the concerns that we raised. We put them in the form of amending motions to the motion because we wanted to make sure that they were recorded and that we were able to refer to them later, and it's a way of getting the discussion on the floor, which it clearly did.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of reasons for debt. Of course, you don't ever want to be incurring debt for operating because that money is gone, and you have nothing to show for it other than the fact that you ate a meal. But, again, it's gone. You provided a program, but it's gone. You have no tangible asset for it.

Going into debt for capital projects is a different matter entirely. You end up with an asset. What we need to be careful of here is that the money that we borrow now so that people can enjoy or make use of the infrastructure today, which is equivalent to someone taking out a mortgage for a home – you're not going to save your money until you're 60, and when you've saved that $350,000, then you can go out and buy a home. You're going to buy that home when you're 30 or 35, get a mortgage, and pay that money off over the life of that so that you can enjoy it at a good time in your life. That's what we're looking at doing now, but that's where we have to be careful that we're doing that in the right way. We have to be careful that the money, the debt, is paid off before the asset is either used up, we need to rebuild it, or we need to put massive amounts of money into it. So those are the issues that the Official Opposition has concerns about around the issuance of these bonds.

The second thing that has happened is a lot of questions about whether we were able or why we were raising issues like this around the motion. In fact, the Member for Peace River just raised it again today. But when I went and looked in my documents, in fact, you are certainly allowed to do that because in Beauchesne 552 it does say quite clearly that you can put a motion on the floor. That's okay; that's what you're supposed to do. You can also amend it. That appears in Beauchesne 567 and 569. Beauchesne 567 says, "The object of an amendment may be either to modify a question in such a way as to increase its acceptability or to present to the House a different proposition as an alternative to the original question." It also references Erskine May, page 395. Of course, 569 says: "A motion may be amended by: (a) leaving out certain words; (b) leaving out certain words in order to insert other words; (c) inserting or adding other words." There's a second section there as well. Certainly, what the Official Opposition was doing yesterday was well in order, and that was reflected in the rulings from the Speaker.

There's been some discussion that, well, this is just a general motion, and we should just talk generally to it and trust that at some point we'll be able to get down to the nitty-gritty of it. But what I looked for very carefully was any kind of a guarantee from anyone that there would be legislation that would follow, and all I could find was remarks that this would come up again in the budget debate. Well, the way the budget debate is structured now, it's done in committee, and if we're lucky, members of the Official Opposition might get in maybe two at-bats, maybe 20 minutes of questions for an entire department. To be able to concentrate on one issue such as the issuance of bonds as a part of the debate on the entire department of finance would not satisfy what we would be looking for as a vigorous give-and-take in debate. So, of course, we have used this opportunity over the last couple of days to do exactly that, and in fact we should be doing exactly that.

Now, the other way is through Public Accounts, of course, and that's after the fact. We'd be talking about whether it was appropriate to be issuing these bonds in Public Accounts way after the fact, so that's not an appropriate place either for us to be doing it. I hope that's helpful to those that were not understanding the process that was being used by the Official Opposition.

I do want to demarcate the difference between a visioning exercise, marketing, which we have also heard some members use, and a business case. I was really looking for the business case of why these bonds would be a good way for the government to be embracing debt, to be knowingly entering into a position of debt for infrastructure. The motion before us does clearly indicate that the monies would be used for infrastructure. Good. Fair enough. But this government has already reached the limit that it set out for itself and that its members all supported in the budget. It said that it would go to no more than $1.1 billion of debt, and they've done that already. To now embark upon a second series of debt, to take on additional debt beyond what the government has already allocated itself in the last budget, the budget that we're in, is I think problematic. I need to be much more convinced that there would be a limit on the bonds that are going to be embraced as new debt here, that there would be a time limit set on when the debt would be paid off so that we weren't in sort of perpetual debt here.

I think it's very appropriate to be embracing an Alberta-first policy. There was a great deal of pretty pointed discussion and criticism of the member for putting that motion on the floor yesterday and all kinds of detailed demands for clarification, which of course was very interesting because they had spent the earlier part of this debate insisting that we should be having a very wide-reaching and wide-ranging debate. But when the opposition starts to speak, boy, the government wants details. You've got to love it. I think it's very appropriate that we say that if we are going to get into debt and the government will owe Albertans that money – that's what this is all about; it's about debt – I think it's more than appropriate to say that we have an Alberta-first policy.

Now, of course, you have to be reasonable with all of that. You're not going to say, you know, that we would take an Alberta company even if they're a terrible company just because they're an Alberta company. Of course you're not going to do that. Nobody here would be suggesting that you would. But I think that as a general policy to say that if we can look to and encourage Alberta companies to be engaged in these infrastructure projects, which the province has gone into debt to fund, I think that's very appropriate. I feel much better as an Albertan knowing that we're incurring debt that will at the very least benefit Alberta companies rather than saying, "Yeah, boy, let's go into debt so that we can give money to companies that are in other countries or even other provinces."

The issue of, well, goodness, we're going to get into real trouble with TILMA – not necessarily. I don't think that need be a huge issue. I mean, we have trading partners there, and I don't think that saying Alberta first but Saskatchewan and B.C. second is that big a deal. Again, if we're embracing debt here, if the government is looking to embrace debt, I would like to see us have a reasonable Alberta-first policy. I have a union-first policy in my office, for example. I always look to buy products that are made in a union shop first. If I can't find it, then I'll go outside of that. I'm not going to say: no, I won't buy it because I can't find a union-made article. If I need the article, then I'm going to go somewhere else and get it, but I'm going to look for union-made first. That's the point of that, and I think it's a good idea to have an Alberta-first policy here.

That is what I was looking for with this motion, a clarification that we would have a limit on the amount of debt that we were going to incur as a result of these bonds, that we would have a limit on the time that we would be in debt for these infrastructure projects, and that we would have an Alberta-first policy to go along with it. I'm not comfortable with the looseness and the lack of detail in the motion. I'm not comfortable because I don't see another opportunity.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is now available should one want to participate.

There being no interest in that section, we shall now move on to recognizing the next speaker. The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to express my support for the government motion to issue Alberta savings bonds. In a time of economic uncertainty every person and entity – individuals, families, businesses, and government – are inclined to take a look at previous spending patterns and identify new opportunities to invest wisely. When I look back at this province's budgeting, I find myself truly proud to be an Albertan. When I consider that moving forward there'll be the opportunity to purchase Alberta savings bonds, I can take pride in the fact that I'm part of this government. This province continues to demonstrate a level of sound financial planning that rivals any other jurisdiction.

Issuing savings bonds is another testament to this government's legacy of financial sustainability. For example, in 2002, following a successful elimination of the provincial debt, the government acknowledged not just the need for change in our budget structure but also the changing economic environment. In response to this, the financial management commission was struck to review fiscal and accounting policies and to ensure that Alberta remained a leader in fiscal planning. One of the key recommendations made to government was the establishment of the sustainability fund. Mr. Speaker, it was recommended as a means to stabilize volatile resource revenue. This is what I mean when I refer to sound financial planning. It was forward thinking and fiscally responsible, and now this planning and saving is paying off. In a time when the global economic climate is less profitable than it used to be, Alberta remains a leader in terms of recovery. While others are running major deficits in order to stimulate their economies, this province is able to use dollars from the sustainability fund to fuel capital projects. By issuing Alberta savings bonds, this government is providing Albertans with a unique opportunity to invest and save. The issue of these bonds is a demonstration of this government's economic leadership.

3:30

In addition to the sustainability fund, in 1976 an act of the Legislature established the Alberta heritage savings trust fund. This fund is designed to provide prudent stewardship of savings from Alberta's nonrenewable resources by maximizing financial returns. In fact, this year the fund is expected to exceed the forecasted net income, and due to the strong growth in the equities over the first quarter the net income is estimated at $1.34 billion in 2009-10, up from the $711 million forecast. Mr. Speaker, this trust fund is unique to Alberta. No other province has such a fund. It's a demonstration of the prudent financial leadership that this province takes, leadership that's being demonstrated again and again with the establishment of the Alberta savings bonds.

Furthermore, as part of this effective financial planning, residents of this province benefit from Alberta's tax advantage. Mr. Speaker, Albertans have the lowest personal income taxes in Canada as a result of this low single tax rate system, no general sales tax, and the lowest gasoline tax rate amongst all of the provinces. Further,

Alberta's business taxes are amongst the lowest in the country. This is a result of low corporate income tax rates and no payroll or capital taxes. Businesses, like individuals, also benefit from the lowest gasoline tax and the absence of a provincial sales tax. These competitive tax rates will continue despite the economic downturn as we've heard our Premier announce that taxes will not be raised.

Mr. Speaker, this government has a history of creating sound financial plans, effective budgets, and being innovative in booms and busts. This continues today with this government's commitment to limit spending and live within our means while using the sustainability fund to cover revenue shortfalls and protect key programs. Further, the effective planning can be seen with the promise to continue to invest in public infrastructure and thereby invest in our province while creating jobs. Keeping taxes low and creating Alberta savings bonds are additional initiatives that complement this government's fiscal leadership.

It will provide an innovative way for Albertans to do two things, invest in their province and save their hard-earned money. This is a way to ensure that we're able to continue making necessary investments in Alberta's future, demonstrating our confident and balanced approach to managing the effects of the global economic downturn.

Mr. Speaker, our province remains strong and competitive due to sound financial planning, and The Way Forward, our four-point economic recovery plan, will continue to effectively manage these economic circumstances responsibly because the plan is built on our province's proven track record of sound financial leadership. The plan calls for limiting government spending and living within our means while continuing to protect the programs and services that Albertans need most. These include seniors' benefits, education, and health care. Further, we will make up three-quarters of the revenue shortfall with the sustainability fund, ensuring that we do not assume any unnecessary debt.

In addition, the Alberta savings bonds will support continued investment in Alberta and Albertans. Mr. Speaker, I believe we should actually use the funds received from the bonds to fund infrastructure projects. This will continue to create jobs, support seniors, and put the money that Albertans have invested back into their pockets. Further, Albertans will know where their funds are going and will be able to see the benefit of investing within their community. In particular, I believe that the focus on seniors and seniors-related infrastructure should be considered amongst the infrastructure projects that are funded.

Additionally, I believe we should focus on oil sands development and related infrastructure such as highways. Mr. Speaker, this is in line with the last point of the economic recovery plan, which is to ensure that our industries are globally competitive and continue to attract investment in Alberta. Investment in the oil sands will ensure preparedness when the markets recover. Mr. Speaker, overall, I believe that issuing Alberta savings bonds is an innovative way to continue to build our province's reputation of fiscal responsibility.

In order to ensure that this initiative can benefit all Albertans, I believe these bonds should be issued in reasonable denominations with the options of fixed and variable interest rates. The bonds could be RRSP eligible and even available for this year's RRSP season, and this will further encourage savings. Mr. Speaker, issuing Alberta savings bonds will help to ensure Alberta's return to long-term stability and prosperity. It'll provide Albertans with the unique opportunity to invest in their province. Overall, it is a continued demonstration of this province's innovative and effective fiscal planning. I'm proud to stand in this House today and support this government motion and sincerely urge all hon. members to do the same.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview to participate.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question for the member who just spoke would be one relating to this kind of a vehicle, a public bond investment, but wondering about an adjustment to this particular approach. Now, I know that the Industrial Heartland is very close to the heart of this member, that there are some serious delays and challenges there, and that it right now looks like it's not going to play out the way we thought it would a year or two ago. There has been talk about establishing a Crown corporation to handle bitumen upgrading. One approach to that would be an adaptation of this, like the Alberta Energy Company of many, many years ago, where public financing could be made to establish a Crown corporation to facilitate bitumen upgrading within Alberta, particularly in the Industrial Heartland. I'm just looking really for discussion here, don't need a final answer. Is that an approach that this member might like to take? It's a variation on this capital bond. Instead of investing in a road or a seniors' facility, you'd be investing in a Crown corporation to upgrade bitumen in Alberta.

The Speaker: Hon. member, if you wish.

Mr. Quest: You're right. The Industrial Heartland and its development is certainly very important to me and all of our members. That type of investment certainly isn't something I personally would see where these bonds would be going. This would be solid capital. This would be infrastructure. This would be roads, buildings; again, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, I think, referenced, projects that would have a long-term, solid benefit over an extended period of time, something really concrete. At this point, although, again, I'm very passionate about the Industrial Heartland and believe that we will see significant development there, I'm not sure that this would be the vehicle to use for that type of development.

The Speaker: Others to participate under 29(2)(a)?

Others to participate in the debate? Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, do you wish to proceed? You're recognized.

Dr. Taft: Sure. Thank you. On the debate in general, Mr. Speaker, on Motion 16. For the record the motion reads: "Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the issue of Alberta capital bonds by the government in support of the development of public infrastructure projects and facilities." Now, Mr. Speaker, I have to open my comments here with an observation of irony, I suppose, and paradox in that we have here a motion brought forward by the government urging itself to go back into debt. We have a caucus that has spoken enthusiastically about this. The paradox, of course, is that this government has run and this caucus was largely elected on the basis of the record of getting out of debt. I think it has to be observed that this government, which had the Fiscal Responsibility Act and, you know, various other provisions for avoiding debt at all costs, is now speaking enthusiastically about getting into it.

I think the people of Alberta need to be aware that this is a sea change. This is not a tinkering; this is a sea change in the thinking of this government. I'm not sure that it's the right sea change, I'm not sure that it's the wrong sea change, but it's definitely a 180-degree change of direction. It does make one wonder and I'm sure it will make many in the public wonder what this government exactly stands for. What happened to that ironclad, defining commitment of the previous Premier to never get back into debt?

I think we need to be careful that this in the full flood of history doesn't turn out to be 1986 all over again, which is when this government last began to really start to pile up debts. We were told that, well, it was for good causes and that, you know, it was only going to be short term and so on, but in fact it turned out to be very long term, a very difficult situation to get out of.

I'm just raising serious yellow flags here again that this idea needs to be seen in the clear light of day for what it is. This is a motion urging the government to go back into debt. We have a government that's already moved quickly back into debt. They issued well over a billion dollars of, in effect, commercial bonds earlier this year. I don't know where that billion dollars has gone. But the trend is dramatic. That's a rapid acceleration in debt, and it's something that we all need to think through as legislators very carefully.

I fully recognize a case to be made for debt. This is not something that should be determined on purely ideological grounds. It should be made on the basis of pragmatics. The case for debt right now would, for example, include the fact that interest rates are at historic lows. If you're going to go into debt, there's no better time than right now to be out there borrowing money. That needs to be considered. I'd be interested to know – there are no details in this motion – what is the term considered for these bonds? I mean by that the time frame, not the interest rate that's offered. Is it guaranteed that these will be a five-year term or a 10-year term? What will it be? Certainly, there's a case to be made that this is the time to be borrowing.

There's also the case to be made – and I've heard it from one or two, at least, of the government members – that this is a reasonable way to stabilize the long-term capital infrastructure of the province. I felt and I think history proves that some of the dramatic cuts to capital expenditures from 1993 to about 1998 were mistakes and that this rushed urgency of the last Premier to get out of debt at all cost has led to problems. We see our roads breaking down. We see shortages of hospitals, schools, and so on. This is a tool that could bring some long-term stability to the infrastructure of Alberta.

There's also a case to be made that, in fact, infrastructure should be paid over a long period of time because it's used over a long period of time. So I am recognizing in these discussions – and they'll probably be turned around and used against me at some point in the future – that there is a case to be made for debt.

But there are also some serious cases to be made against debt. The first one I've already alluded to, which is simply that we're already seeing this government go into debt through commercial paper and bonds. We're now seeing it go through these kinds of capital bonds. If this pace of debt continues to grow, we will find that we are in deep debt within just a very few years.

There's also a concern that I have that we are now sending the government out there to compete with the private sector for financing. So if you're running a private company and you want to go to the market to raise capital, as tough as that is these days, it's just going to get a little bit tougher because people now have a further choice here, the provincial bond. I'd be interested to know if any effort is being made to consult with people who raise money for the private sector about the wisdom of this program and if it runs the risk of pushing private money off the table. I think that needs to be considered as well. We don't need to make it that much more difficult for private capital to be raised.

My understanding – and the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar points this out – is that there are no overall limits to what the scale of corporate bonds in this government issue might be. I mean, we've talked about over a billion dollars already, hundreds and hundreds of millions more. The Auditor General, actually, points out that there is no limit, so we might find in a year or two that we're $10 billion or $20 billion back into debt. It seems to be piling up, if I was to do the math quickly, certainly at the rate of many hundreds of millions of dollars a month right now, so we do need to be careful.

Mr. Speaker, as with many things, there are multiple sides to this issue. I think, just to reiterate, that this fundamentally represents a sea change in this government. I can tell you that they didn't run in the last election on the basis of taking Alberta back into debt. I don't recall that being in the government platform. I don't know if anybody else did. In fact, they ran on the basis of being the party that took Alberta out of debt, so I think there's, you know, a public obligation here. That having been said, I like the idea of long-term stabilization for public infrastructure. Interest rates are low. I'm concerned about competing with the private sector for capital.

I will finalize by saying that if this government had managed Alberta's wealth at all effectively, we wouldn't need to have had this decision because we would have more than enough money in the bank, as Norway and Alaska and lots of other places do.

With those comments, I will take my seat and see what unfolds.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

Then I'll recognize the next speaker, the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today and contribute to the discussion on Motion 16, which proposes the option of raising capital by issuing Alberta savings bonds. I am totally in support of this motion because savings bonds are an attractive option for a number of reasons.

Savings bonds offer Albertans the opportunity of a safe and secure long-term investment that will promote savings and financial security for each investor. Mr. Speaker, those who purchase the bonds would be investing in the future of our province. Purchasers would be assured that the money raised from the bonds would support important capital projects that are needed in the near term. Moreover, the projects supported would be vital to our province's overall economic growth and the long-term vitality of our communities.

In addition to being a great personal investment opportunity for Albertans, the proposed bond issuance would also provide an opportunity for the government and all Albertans to invest in the necessary infrastructure now, when we can take advantage of the cost savings. Mr. Speaker, this is an opportunity that I would like to stress. There is a potential to save a significant amount of money, getting more out of our dollars. Mr. Speaker, it is projected that costs will be as much as 40 per cent lower in some cases compared to previous project costs.

Some may be skeptical, Mr. Speaker, that the cost savings are enough to justify the spending, but it is about more than the cost savings, which simply add to that great opportunity. The infrastructure projects that would be funded by the bonds would not be pet projects or unnecessary roads and facilities. The projects would be in the vital spending areas that are core to the foundations of our province.

Mr. Speaker, I can confidently say that in light of our priorities for The Way Forward any spending will be a direct investment, steel in the ground, so to speak. The entire province and all Albertans stand to benefit from investments in our core infrastructure as it supports not only our communities and the day-to-day lives of Albertans but also the economy for years to come.

Prime examples are the ring roads in Edmonton and Calgary. I am eagerly anticipating the opening of the northeast and northwest Stoney Trail sections of Calgary's ring road next week, Mr. Speaker, on November 2. I know that my constituents in Calgary-East as well are excited about the opening of the northern ring road portions, which represent about 45 per cent of the total planned ring road. Undoubtedly, anyone using Calgary roads will see the direct benefit.

Mr. Speaker, I share this enthusiasm with the rest of my Calgary colleagues and, indeed, everyone here, including the opposition members, because the entire province benefits from crucial infrastructure upgrades like that of the Calgary ring road. From the efficient transport of goods and materials to their destination, wherever it may be, to the time savings of everyday commuters the benefits are clear. Both industry and communities require a foundation of infrastructure, and I am proud that we remain committed to providing this crucial investment.

Further investments in the Calgary ring road will help us work towards a modern, efficient road network in the region. This is just one example of the type of infrastructure investment that I trust will be supported through the proposed bond issuance. Roads, Mr. Speaker, community facilities, seniors' facilities, and health facilities all represent key areas of infrastructure which will support Alberta's prosperity today and tomorrow for future generations. Failing to make new investments in these areas and to maintain the infrastructure that we have in place would be simply irresponsible as it would only increase the cost for future generations. The bond issuance that is proposed by the motion would provide capital for the types of projects I have highlighted, and the benefits are clear. The northwest and northeast portions of the Calgary ring road are just one example of the types of infrastructure projects that we can and must invest in, especially at a time when significant cost savings are possible.

I look forward to the rest of the discussion on this proposed bond issuance, and I urge all my colleagues to support this motion.

The Chair: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on the Q and A side.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. member. There have been a lot of suggestions from the other side of the House that this is a proposal, it's a motion, it's a blue-sky document. Certainly, I heard from the hon. Member for Peace River earlier this afternoon that this is the case. To the hon. Member for Calgary-East. How is it that on the Alberta Finance and Enterprise website is this statement: "Alberta Capital Bonds will be offered for sale in February 2010"? If this is just a proposal, why is this definite statement already on the finance department's website?

Mr. Amery: Well, let me say from the outset here that all of us on this side are speaking on and supporting this motion because we believe this is a safe, secure, and dependable motion for all Albertans. Mr. Speaker, I know, I assume, that the opposition on the other side will be, of course, voting against the motion.

I have a little story to tell here. Years ago, Mr. Speaker, when our children were arriving in this world, we thought about saving some money for them, trying to create some secure investments for them, so we shopped around. The best thing that we could find at that time was Canada savings bonds – by the way, that was my wife's idea – so we invested in Canada savings bonds. We found out that these Canada savings bonds double every 10 years. By the time that my children were of age to enter into a postsecondary institution, that money just came from heaven. They were able to fund their education, and we're all happy for that.

Mr. Speaker, the other thing is that I support this motion because it will allow all Albertans to invest in their own province. It gives you a good feeling. It gives me a good feeling when I am driving on the Stoney Trail – right? – next Monday, on November 2, when that portion of the Stoney Trail opens, to say: well, I have invested in this road. It gives me some good feelings when I'm driving by a hospital in my constituency to say: well, I invested in this hospital. It gives me a good feeling when I am driving by a university or a postsecondary institution to say: well, this is the result of my investments and other Albertans' investments that created all these good things for the province.

I heard other questions from members of the opposition asking a particular member as to: what has been done in your own constituency? Mr. Speaker, this is more than one constituency. This is more than my constituency and more than the hon. member's constituency. We're talking about the whole province of Alberta, the province that we love, the province in which we live, work, and raise a family.

The hon. Government House Leader mentioned the recession that hit us about a year ago. Nobody expected that there was going to be a recession. Many seniors around this province, Mr. Speaker, have lost a huge chunk of their savings. Alberta savings bonds are a safe, secure, and dependable investment, and I urge everybody to support this motion.

The Speaker: Well, we're down to one second, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. That was a pretty long anecdotal response, but we're out of time for that section.

The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today and join the discussion on our government's motion to issue Alberta savings bonds. Savings bonds have been recognized as a convenient, secure, and low-cost product to facilitate savings and capital. They are a solid investment opportunity for Albertans to invest in their own province. As a province we have utilized this investment tool in the past with success. We recognized before, as we do now, that bonds can be used to help build a tomorrow.

Savings bonds offer prudent and hard-working people a mechanism to save for their future while enabling governments to raise capital for projects like roads, schools, and hospitals. Through Alberta capital bonds Albertans will be able to invest directly in our province. Bonds can act as a tool for Albertans to facilitate the industrial and social development of our province. For these reasons our government should introduce bonds for purchase to Albertans with the intent that our savings bond program will replicate the achievements of similar programs in other jurisdictions.

Savings bonds are particularly appealing to low- and middle-income earners because they offer these individuals an opportunity to attain their saving goals within their risk tolerance. As we know, savings help families gain a stronger financial footing, and those who are on firmer financial ground are in a better position to be active participants in the economy. Over the past year many families have probably reassessed their own household savings rate and acknowledged the importance of having assets to fall back on in tough times.

As a government we, too, recognize the importance of savings, and due to our savings we entered this recession in a stronger position than any other province in Canada. Thanks to some $17 billion in Alberta's sustainability fund, coupled with strong fiscal management, our government is able to continue providing the quality programs and services Albertans rely upon.

Our disciplined stewardship of our province's balance sheets has also earned Alberta an excellent credit rating. Moody's September 2009 report pegs Alberta's credit rating at triple-A and notes that Alberta has a strong net asset position and is rated at the high end of all the Canadian provinces. Moody's report states that Alberta's triple-A debt rating reflects Alberta's minimal debt burden and corresponding high shock-absorption capacity.

Our government will continue to improve our fiscal standing through prudent measures like limiting government spending and issuing savings bonds. Savings bonds are a vehicle to help Albertans build assets now and will enable our government to fund infrastructure projects at a lower cost. For this advantage alone I would recommend that Albertans be able to purchase a set amount of bonds so we can finance public projects that are essential to our long-term growth and prosperity. These projects will complement our government's 20-year capital plan, which sets the course for us to meet the needs of a growing population. The revenue generated through Alberta capital bonds should be used for supporting new transportation networks and strong infrastructure, specifically in Alberta's unique northern community.

I know that in my constituency these bonds could help further develop roads that are in desperate need of upgrades such as highway 55 and, as a result, supply people in many communities with jobs. Constructing new highways will improve connections between Alberta, the Northwest Territories, and Yukon. These connections will boost trade opportunities and will not only benefit Alberta's northern communities but communities across our province. Alberta bonds can serve as a catalyst and could help support some of these important infrastructure projects. Now is the time to fund infrastructure projects that will keep tens of thousands of Albertans working.

The province has already invested in projects in my constituency. Highway 28 between Cold Lake north and Cold Lake south is a prime example of this. Improvements to roads lead to an increase in mobility of goods throughout our province, and this mobility is essential to encourage trade and attract investments in Alberta's north. These links can be enhanced by continuing to improve our northern transportation networks, such as twinning of the Peace River bridge to improve safety and traffic operations in the area for industrial development and upgrading of highway 43 between highway 16 and Grande Prairie to expressway standards as well as building a new bypass at the town of Whitecourt to facilitate increased traffic and transport to the new Prince Rupert terminal. We should also continue to plan and build new east-west trans-Alberta connector highways across northern regions.

Now is the time to invest, time to fund infrastructure projects that'll keep tens of thousands of Albertans working, when construction costs are in some cases even 40 per cent lower. Alberta will return to economic growth, and we want to ensure that we have a strong network of highways, postsecondary institutions, and community and health facilities to spur our prosperity.

To help us remain Canada's economic engine, we should move forward with initiatives such as Alberta capital bonds that will work in tandem with our government's economic recovery and 20-year capital plan. Our economic plans will enable us to continue to fund infrastructure while moving us back into the black and saving for Alberta's future within three years. Our plan will also work to ensure that our industries are globally competitive and continue to attract investments to develop Alberta's resources so we can take full advantage of emerging trade opportunities. Furthermore, our plan focuses on helping seniors and low-income Albertans by supporting the programs and services Alberta needs most, such as health care and education.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to offer my support to this government motion. I believe Alberta savings bonds will complement the great work our government is doing in support of our plan to enhance Alberta's quality of life and return us to economic growth.

I will now take my seat and look forward to listening to the views of my hon. colleagues on this motion. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of questions for the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake. She seems very, very plugged into the government policy, so I'm sure she'll have the answers to this. Can she give me a subtotal of all of the wish lists that we've heard described over the last couple of days? There's highway 55 in her constituency. Then later she talked about housing for seniors. I heard the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie talking about schools. I heard the Member for Red Deer-North talking about seniors' housing. Obviously, there's a great wish list, and I'm just wondering if there's a subtotal somewhere that I could be let in on the amount. That's question 1.

My second question is that this motion is about creating debt. It's about setting up a system so the province can borrow money to do something. And my compliments to the Public Affairs Bureau. I have to say that everything I've heard has been consistent in the messaging of allowing Albertans to share and wonderful phrases about how they can invest and they can drive by a highway and go: I am so proud of my piece of this highway. I guess my question is: is there an understanding that this is about creating debt? Do you understand that this motion is about going into debt and that not all Albertans will be buying a capital bond?

All Albertans are taxpayers and will be sharing ultimately in the debt that's created. So if this government sells a billion dollars' worth of bonds, we have to pay that money back to those people with interest, which creates a debt for every Albertan because that's where the money comes from. Do you understand that this is about debt rather than flowery phrases about a few people that can afford to invest and buy a bond? I'm not clear on that, so maybe you can help me understand that.

Let's just go with those two questions for now. She's so plugged in, I know she'll know. [interjections]

The Speaker: Sorry. We're going to talk through the chair.

Hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, do you wish to respond?

Mrs. Leskiw: No.

Mr. Snelgrove: Hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, I would wonder if she would be aware of the difference between an investment and an asset in the future of Alberta and debt or, because apparently some don't, if she would know the difference between appropriate use of public borrowing as defined by just about every democracy and country in the world right now and gibberish or if she thinks that there's a future for her constituency in an Alberta that's prosperous and forward looking.

Ms Blakeman: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Okay. Stop the clock at 1:57. We're dealing with a point of order now. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

4:10

Point of OrderAllegations against a Member

Ms Blakeman: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's just interesting that I've heard so much in the last couple of days about respectful give-and-take of ideas, and then we have ministers of the Crown who should be respected ministers of the Crown who get up and make statements which are truly casting aspersions. Under 23(h), (i), and (j), which are all about saying unnecessarily nasty things to characterize other people, which we just didn't need in this debate – the minister could have controlled himself, but he just couldn't. He had to get in there and say an allegation against another member. With the hand gesture he was certainly indicating this member because there's no one else on this end that it could possibly be at this time.

I don't think it's a motive to say that anything that I was referring to was gibberish, but it was certainly using "abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder." I would ask that the member withdraw that. I mean, I'm more than willing to engage in the debate. If the member had listened to what I'd been saying, I clearly outlined the case for borrowing for capital projects, so clearly I do understand it.

I'm asking the minister to contribute to some good give-and-take in this Assembly, to encourage a good give-and-take and respect between the two sides of this House, and withdraw his comment.

Thank you.

The Speaker: No. We're not going any further. It's 11 minutes after 4 on the fourth day of the first week, and the chair is going to deal with this matter right now.

Two segments ago under the Q and A – part of the Q and A is to deal with policy questions and debating questions – the chair almost intervened when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar personally went after the hon. Minister of Education over his budget, which has absolutely nothing to do with the debate that we had. But the chair didn't. The hon. Government House Leader responded, and it was dealt with.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, you turned around on at least two or three occasions and looked directly at the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake and said, "Do you understand?" Boy, if that isn't suggestive in a lot of ways that could lead to a lot of violations of 23(h), (i), and (j) – but the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake did not.

Then the hon. President of the Treasury Board got up and, for whatever machismo or honourable reason, in order to defend the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, used the word gibberish. Well, okay. Gibberish is not a word that we've ever ruled out to be inoffensive in the past.

So I'm just saying that it's not a point of order. We're going back. We've got one minute and 57 seconds in this Q and A. If anybody wants to raise a question with respect to the submission made by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, please prepare to do it, but we're dealing with policy things. We're not putting down people, and we're not being suggestive that somebody who says something in this House is ignorant or does not know what they're talking about. That is wrong, and there's no more issue on this issue. There is no issue. No. I'm not going forward on this; 1:57 left. Okay.

Ms Blakeman: Well, under 13(2) I'm allowed to ask the Speaker to explain.

The Speaker: I just did. I said the matter is over. Do you want to participate in the Q and A side?

Ms Blakeman: Yes.

The Speaker: There's 1:57 left. Proceed through the chair.

Ms Blakeman: I have a question. I'm wondering, given the statements that I heard the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake make, if she does understand the difference between creating debt and offering something . . .

The Speaker: Please sit down. If we want to have a debate on semantics, you can have a debate on semantics. But I think that for the most part people do not attack one another personally.

Ms Blakeman: It's not an attack. It's a question.

The Speaker: Well, hon. member, please. Just listen to yourself. Just listen to yourself.

There was a question. The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, if you wish to proceed, go ahead.

Mrs. Leskiw: No, I'd just like to make a comment. I may not know all the semantics about what goes on with Alberta bonds, but I do know that my own father bought Canada bonds for all us kids when we were growing up to invest in this country that he adopted as his home. I believe in this province like my father did. I believe that to invest in Alberta is the prudent thing to do. I know that when we can invest in Alberta and invest in infrastructure to keep Albertans working, it's a good thing. I may not understand all the things that go around with the fine print, but I do understand that anything to do with investing in this great province to keep as many people working as possible is a good thing.

The Speaker: There are 45 seconds left if anybody else has a question.

There being none, I'm going to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning to participate in the debate.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to give my support to Government Motion 16, which proposes to introduce Alberta capital bonds. The global economic downturn has affected everyone throughout the world – governments, businesses, seniors – but Alberta is the only province which saved money for the rainy days. For example, the Alberta government saved $17 billion in the sustainability fund, which it will use to help cover revenue shortfall. In addition, the Alberta government has a 20-year capital plan, which it will use for capital infrastructure projects, about $22 billion over three years. Mr. Speaker, Albertans are known as hard-working people, Albertans like those in my constituency of Edmonton-Manning, who told me that they would like to invest money in Alberta savings bonds.

By promoting investment and saving within the province, Albertans stand to gain a lot, providing benefits for them and their families down the road. I hear the same from coffee shops to dinner tables: Albertans want to invest in Alberta. After all, this is a good way to invest in the province's infrastructure, infrastructure such as highways, schools, and seniors' long-term facilities. Mr. Speaker, I can see every Albertan being proud to invest in capital savings bonds, knowing that their investment will build the province.

I hope that Albertans are able to buy RRSPs. The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise needs to work with the federal government so that Alberta capital bonds will be RRSP eligible.

Other generations will benefit from this investment. I also expect that they will have great returns. They will benefit from projects like twinning highway 63. This project will link the rest of Alberta.

There will be economic potential for Fort McMurray which will ultimately promote population growth and economic development. Not only would this project efficiently move goods and services, but it will also prevent road accidents and save lives.

Mr. Speaker, building infrastructure will give Albertans jobs. At the same time, getting up to 40 per cent of the savings cannot be wrong. In turn, these savings can be used to develop seniors' housing, long-term care centres so that seniors can live in the community that they have lived in all their lives. Alberta has a triple-A credit rating. It's a good opportunity for seniors to invest like other Albertans. These capital bonds will give Albertans a good return on their money, money that will stay in the province. The bonds will position us well ahead of the curve as we come out of the economic downturn. This money will end up in Alberta roads, schools, and long-term care, not in New York. After all, these projects will be needed.

Approximately 50,000 new people are expected to move into our province, and it's easy to see why. Now Alberta is the only province with no sales tax, low corporation tax and personal income tax, but it has a strong education system and strong, safe communities. Mr. Speaker, I came to Canada in 1979 with my parents. I landed in Vancouver, B.C., but I learned fast, and within two years I moved to Edmonton, the city I now call my home, the province where, I am proud to say, my oldest son graduated from the University of Alberta with a bachelor of commerce degree. I was impressed with our recent discussion at the dinner table when he said that offering Alberta savings bonds was a wise move for the Alberta government.

We will also continue to promote a business-friendly environment and a solid foundation for all Albertans to grow their roots. Mr. Speaker, with Alberta's economic track record, bright future, and the leadership of the government the bonds would be one of the safest investments you could make. When I was talking to my son, he talked to his friends at the same time, all university students. He said: "Dad, when I talk to my friends, they all like this good idea. They all just want to participate. They'd like to buy bonds." This is a good way to build our province, of which we are all proud.

In closing, I would like to thank the hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise for introducing the motion and urge all members to support it. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Effective April 1, 2005, the Fiscal Responsibility Act requires that the financial assets in the debt retirement account must be equal to or greater than the amount of the accumulated debt at the fiscal year-end. During 2008-09 the province complied with the act. My question to the hon. member is this: if we borrow – I'm just going to pick a figure – $500 million in bonds, can the hon. member guarantee that we will still comply with the act in the next fiscal year?

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member if he wishes to respond.

Mr. Sandhu: No comment.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The previous member, for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, raised an issue that I think should be on the mind of the Member for Edmonton-Manning and all of us, which is Alberta's debt rating. Now, we've been told in debate here that Moody's debt rating agency gives Alberta a triple-A debt rating on the basis of Alberta's minimal debt. The fact that we have a relatively small debt gives us a high debt rating. So my question to the Member for Edmonton-Manning is: is he concerned that as we begin issuing bonds – and make no mistake; bonds equal debt – as we begin driving Alberta back into debt, our debt rating is going to start diminishing again?

The Speaker: Hon. member, do you wish to participate?

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, hon. member. We're selling capital bonds, and we're investing at the same time in infrastructure which is for generations to use. We build bridges. We build highways. We build seniors' facilities. The benefits from all the money we're going to pay are going to Albertans. We need to build these facilities. All the members here, everybody wants their roads, everybody wants schools, everybody wants bridges, so we are investing money back to Albertans. That's all I can say.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona also rose.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a question for the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning. My understanding is that the member in a previous life was a very successful builder, so my question would be: would you have been able to build your business, create jobs in your own company, create jobs for subtrades, create jobs in suppliers, generate wealth for all those people all the way down the line, would you have been able to do any of that plus, obviously, supply some people with some very nice homes in the process, would you have been able to achieve anything without creating some debt?

The Speaker: Once again, that's pretty personal. Hon. member, you're on the edge if you want to respond, then.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, hon. member. You know, when you're building anything, nothing comes free. You have to take money from somewhere to build. So in selling the bonds, creating money, money goes back to Albertans. At the same time we're building infrastructure. Like I said, highway 63 could save people, could move stuff to the economic engine for the whole of Alberta. The highway could be used for everybody. Everybody gets the advantage when we get good infrastructure built, but it's not going to come free. It's going to cost money. I think we have the opportunity. We could save 40 per cent on the costs. It's very low these days, and we can build and invest this money in Albertans. Albertans get the benefit of that return.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you. I think the debate of this issue has been good, and it's been healthy. There may be a time when this province does have to borrow money once again. I would ask the Member for Edmonton-Manning if he thought that... [Mr. VanderBurg's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: Sorry. That's it.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill on the debate.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and to speak to Motion 16. I want to acknowledge the remarks of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, who referred to what he called a sea change in policy for the government, where we are projecting to run a deficit. As he knows, of course, we had a budget debate in this House. We talked about the necessity of running a temporary deficit. If there was a sea change, however, I would suggest that it's with the Liberal opposition. It's one of those sea changes like the tide that comes every 24 and a half hours or 25 hours.

Yesterday I listened with great interest as members of the Official Opposition were alluding in a negative way to some budget restraints in the fields of education and health care. Today two members also were talking about why couldn't we fund more health care centres and why couldn't we fund more nurses and why couldn't we put nurses in all of the seniors' facilities and so on. Yet they seem also to be reticent about supporting the whole idea of a capital bond. I would point out that the motion says "approve in general." We seem to be stuck in debating how long the bonds are going to be and how much the bonds are going to be and all of the nitty-gritty, but we're talking about approving in general the issue of capital bonds by the government.

Again on the issue of a sea change, extraordinary times these are, and I would say that extraordinary times call for extraordinary solutions. I would just point out that a Liberal government in the province of Ontario right now is running a deficit. In fact, they're projecting a deficit, according to my figures, of $24.7 billion this year, and as of September 30 the government of the province of Ontario had a $193.3 billion debt. Wow. There's a difference. By contrast, this province has no net debt. Zero. None.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta is but one part of Canada. Canada is part of what is becoming an increasingly interdependent world economy. We have been experiencing a global economic recession. It has brought with it low commodity prices, and the province of Alberta has not been immune from the effects of this recession. So make no mistake about it . . .

The Speaker: Sorry, hon. member. You will be recognized next when this debate returns. You still have a number of minutes.

It's now 4:30, and the House stands adjourned until Monday afternoon at 1:30.

[The Assembly adjourned at 4:30 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. Renew us with Your strength. Focus us in our deliberations. Challenge us in our service to the people of this great province. Amen.

Hon. members and to all our special guests, today we will proceed with the singing of our national anthem. We'll be led in the Assembly today by Mr. Paul Lorieau, and I would invite all here to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: For the schoolchildren in the Assembly today, yes, that is the same Mr. Lorieau who does the singing at the Edmonton Oilers hockey games.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure for me to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the House here today 43 extraspecial students from the Edmonton-Mill Creek constituency who attend Julia Kiniski elementary school. Today they are accompanied by two outstanding Alberta teachers, Susan Skillings and Dale Mandryk. They're here to learn about the democratic process, and I want to say thank you for having invited me to be there for reading week with you. Please, if you would all rise, we'll thunderously applaud you. Thank you for coming.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure this afternoon to introduce to you and through you 30 students from l'école St. Angela, who I believe are seated above me in the public gallery, and their teacher, Miss Meghan St. Pierre. An interesting note is that all of the grade 6 classes at l'école St. Angela will be participating in School at the Legislature. I would ask them all now to rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a real pleasure and an honour for me today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 26 grade 9 students from Ponoka composite high school. They are very bright and eager young students. They're here with their two teachers, Mr. Brady Teeling and Mrs. Lacey Elliott. They're seated above me in the public gallery, and I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of this Legislative Assembly a group visiting this afternoon from St. Kevin school in the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar. They are in the public gallery. I would now ask them to rise as I introduce them. This is a small delegation. It's led by teacher Mrs. Tammy Genge and parent helper Mrs. Laura Tetrault. The students accompanying them this afternoon are Zane Cumby and Rainy Gosselin. If they would now please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you three constituents of Edmonton-Ellerslie who are seated in the members' gallery: Otto Wollin; his wife, Traute; and son Harold. On September 10, 2009, Mr. Otto Wollin celebrated his 90th birthday, a celebration I was honoured to be part of. Some interesting facts about the couple: they met in January, got married in May, and moved to Edmonton on October 30, 1949. I want to thank them for 60 years of making Alberta a better place with their presence here. I would now ask my guests to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly two special guests, dear to me, who are in the public gallery, Mr. Jagan Nath Gupta and Mr. Amit Gupta. Both of these gentlemen are here today to watch question period and see democracy in action. I would like to ask these gentlemen to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Mr. Liepert: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. One week ago I stood in this Assembly and announced the launch of Alberta's H1N1 pandemic flu vaccine program, the largest immunization ever in the history of this province. I urged all Albertans to join in the effort to control this new virus and get vaccinated, and mass clinics started delivering the vaccine last Monday. Now, I announced at that time that our efforts would focus on high-risk groups first, but I also said that we would not turn anyone away. And Albertans heard that message. In fact, the response was so great that clinics in Edmonton and Calgary were quickly overwhelmed. In the first week, thanks to the tireless efforts of this province's health care workers, almost 400,000 Albertans received their flu vaccinations. That's over 10 per cent of Albertans, and no matter what anyone says, that's an amazing accomplishment.

We also found out late last week that the amount of vaccine that was going to be shipped to all provinces was going to be significantly reduced over the next two weeks. Less than expected vaccine shipments from the manufacturer in Quebec and a huge unanticipated demand at mass clinics resulted in a perfect storm. So on Saturday our public health officials made a decision. Under the direction of our chief medical officer of health we suspended our mass immunization clinics. Alberta Health Services officials have spent the last two days refocusing their immunization plan to target only high-risk groups over the next few weeks. A new plan will be rolled out tomorrow. Details will be announced by Alberta Health Services. Priority will be given to children six months to less than five years of age, pregnant women, and, shortly after, people under 65 with chronic health conditions.

Now, I need to assure all members that strict enforcement of this new plan will have to be implemented, and we are working through measures to ensure that we have a reasonable approach to ensure compliance. No one likes to turn away citizens of this province from receiving their vaccination, but unfortunately, with a limited supply, we are left with no choice.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, there will always be Monday morning quarterbacks who will be critical of our program, but the facts speak for themselves: Alberta has vaccinated approximately 10 per cent of our population in just six days, and that will reduce the impact on our health care system.

During the next two weeks we will refocus our efforts on vaccinating only those at high risk, and over the next two months, as our vaccine supply increases, we will fulfill our obligation to vaccinate all Albertans that so choose. Mr. Speaker, that is a commitment that this government has made and it will stand by.

Thank you.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition on behalf of Alberta's Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The first duty of a responsible government is to protect its citizens. The minister of health's abysmal record over the past 18 months proves that this administration has utterly failed to carry out this sacred responsibility. Tens of thousands of vulnerable Albertans – cancer patients, children and pregnant women, and the chronically ill – are at serious risk thanks to the lack of good leadership and management from the health minister and the Premier. Abruptly shutting down Alberta's immunization clinics when we still have hundreds of thousands of doses of vaccine available shows that this administration is panicking at a time when Albertans can least afford it. It's just the latest bad decision in a long line of them.

For years we and others have warned this administration that their mismanagement has left the health care system with no capacity to cope with a major crisis. Even on routine days our major hospitals are at or over capacity, with not a single bed available. It's become normal for patients to wait in emergency rooms for days.

For the last year and a half this minister has sown discord and chaos throughout the public health care system. He dissolved the regional health authorities and the advisory groups – AADAC, the Alberta Cancer Board – with no transition plan and no evidence to base these decisions on. He oversaw the unexpected termination of three medical officers of health last spring and the chief of the provincial lab early this summer, people who would have been invaluable during this pandemic. He denies our critical nursing shortage despite the evidence. We raised a red flag about the breakdown of management in August this year, when my Health critic wrote a five-page letter to the Premier with detailed questions and concerns about preparation for H1N1. It took two months for this administration to reply, with little more than an acknowledgment of the letter and a copy of some of the planning documents.

Alberta has been unprepared for any kind of health care crisis for years thanks to Tory mismanagement, and now the chickens have come home to roost. We have no surge capacity in our hospitals. Our system is already struggling to deal with the demands of a growing population and increased numbers of senior citizens. This administration has left the health care system in such a state that our health care professionals no longer have the confidence and the capacity to deal with any large-scale disaster.

Mr. Speaker, I implore this government to provide the necessary resources to immediately inoculate high-risk Albertans as quickly as possible. Open a sufficient number of well-staffed clinics to handle the load. Invite all available health care professionals, including students and retired professionals, to assist. As a physician myself I would be happy to again offer my services for this.

It's all well and good to talk about Monday morning quarterbacking, Mr. Speaker, but when the general manager is on vacation and the coach has no playbook, Albertans are left with little choice but to let their leaders know when they've dropped the ball. No more excuses.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm seeking the unanimous consent of the House to allow the leader of the third party to respond to the ministerial statement.

The Speaker: Hon. members, there is a request for unanimous consent. That means everybody has to agree. If one person disagrees, consent is denied. I'm just going to ask one question. Anyone who is opposed to allowing the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood to participate, please say no at this time.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the House.

The ministerial statement we just heard sounded more like a ministerial fairy tale: after a few unavoidable bumps along the road, the H1N1 ogre is defeated by the heroic health minister, and everyone lives happily ever after. I wonder how this fantastic tale will be received by those who have stood for hours and hours in lines and still didn't get vaccinated or those who attended the pointless assessment clinics, standing in line for hours with people already sick with H1N1. As if the virus doesn't spread fast enough on its own, this government designed a program to help it spread faster. I wonder how vulnerable Albertans, those who should have been a priority, feel about this fairy tale as they watch those who are strong enough to stand in line for many hours get the vaccine which they needed.

Mr. Speaker, I received this e-mail from my sister in Calgary on Saturday.

Dear Brian,

I just wanted to tell you to keep hammering away at . . . And she uses his name, but I'll say the Premier.

. . . about this vaccine fiasco. We just went up to the closest clinic at 5:45 a.m. (it opens at 8:30) and clearly people had been there all night long. The lineup stretched the entire length of the mall and down the street. We couldn't see the end of it. I estimate about 3000 people. This is at 5:50 a.m. for a clinic that opens at 8:30. This is the 6th attempt I have made to get the vaccine and I am considered high risk because I am immuno-suppressed because of the drug . . . that I am taking.

It is unbelievable that the Governments (on all levels) can create this kind of panic and not have the resources to deal with the resulting chaos. They created it because a poll showed that 47% of Canadians weren't going to have the vaccine and so they went to work with their scare-mongering tactics and whipped people up into a frenzy and now they can't handle it.

I think [the Premier and the health minister] are getting off entirely too easy on this.

Your loving sister,
Jo-Ann.

The minister has outlined his plan B, and it looks like what other provinces did from the start; that is, giving priority to those Albertans who are more likely to face a serious illness or death as a result of contracting H1N1. Better late than never, but Albertans will not soon forget the fear, confusion, and chaos of Alberta's H1N1 immunization program. I hope there is a happy ending, Mr. Speaker, but Albertans should not believe the fairy tale they heard from the health minister today.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Devon Energy Steward of Excellence President's Award

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to congratulate Devon Energy for its extraordinarily innovative pipelining practices. Devon's pipelining strategies are so effective that the company received the 2009 steward of excellence president's award. The Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers presents the steward of excellence awards every year, acknowledging improvements in environmental, health and safety, and social performance. This award honours Devon Energy's ability to reduce their pipeline footprint on agricultural land. In fact, Devon's new technique, called innovative pipelining strategies, reduces right-of-way impact by approximately 50 per cent. This greatly benefits farmers as well as the environment. This technique helps to ensure that we continue to have responsible resource development, which is one of this government's top priorities.

Mr. Speaker, Devon Energy collaborated with Alberta Environment's partners in resource excellence initiative, which includes producers, contractors, inventors, landowners, and regulators, and it is obvious that these efforts have paid off, since they successfully minimized pipeline disturbance. Hopefully, other companies can learn from Devon's best practices and collaborative partnerships. I look forward to the future because this initiative is only the beginning in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Calgary Ring Road

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise in this Assembly to say a few words about the single-largest transportation project in Alberta's history. Several members and I attended the opening for the new Stoney Trail ring road in Calgary this morning. This road represents an investment of over $1 billion by this government in Alberta's highway network. This new 44-kilometre road is the concrete result of a forward-thinking vision that began over 30 years ago. Today I wish to honour those who had the vision and the ambition all those years ago to start planning the transportation and utility corridors around our two major cities. Their foresight is paying dividends for Albertans today and will continue to benefit Albertans well into the future.

Mr. Speaker, Calgary is a major city in a growing province that needs and deserves a world-class road on which to move its people and goods safely and efficiently. This road will allow Calgarians more time to do what matters most. We are a government committed to enhancing the quality of life of all of our citizens. Whether you live in Monterey Park or Tuscany, Citadel or Applewood, Signal Hill or Marlborough Park, this road allows Calgarians more time to spend doing things that matter most. This road means that Bobby in Citadel can visit family in Marlborough Park more often. My constituent in Monterey Park can get home from work in Tuscany sooner to help his children with homework. A young family in Signal Hill can get to the North East Sportsplex sooner for hockey practice. This road is about government giving Calgarians more of what they value: time.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Planning

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first question to the Minister of Health and Wellness: given the complete failure of his ministry in responsibly dealing with pandemic H1N1, something this administration has been planning for for years, will the minister admit that he is ultimately responsible?

Mr. Liepert: Well, absolutely, Mr. Speaker, ultimately responsible, but with responsibility we also have to deal with the facts. As I outlined in my ministerial statement, we have 400,000 Albertans who will not be using our emerg wards at our hospitals. The concern that this member has just been expressing not only in his statement but consistently in this House is that we lack surge capacity. Well, what better way to deal with a so-called lack of surge capacity than to vaccinate? It has been tremendously successful in getting 400,000 Albertans vaccinated.

Dr. Swann: Well, this minister clearly still doesn't get it, that it's the high-risk people that end up taking up the surge capacity, Mr. Minister.

Again, the minister has shown himself to be incapable of managing the system. Will he now do the decent thing, the right thing, and resign?

Mr. Liepert: I guess it would be nice if it were that simple, Mr. Speaker. You know, somehow this particular member seems to be implying that this has only happened in Alberta. Well, I'm here to tell you that all Canadians – all Canadians – have rallied around the necessity to get vaccinated, and all governments are dealing with the same issue. I can tell you what we will do. We will roll out tomorrow a staged approach going forward, and as I said in my statement earlier, high-priority Albertans will now be the priority.

Dr. Swann: My final question. To the Premier: given the disaster this week for your administration will you fire this minister today?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I have every confidence in my minister. I also have confidence in our medical officer of health. I met with both this morning plus the Minister of Municipal Affairs and the Solicitor General to ensure that as we move forward on the plan that will be articulated tomorrow by Alberta Health Services, all ministries that have anything to do with providing more comfort, reducing the waiting lines throughout all of the clinics across Alberta put all the resources that we can to ensure that this is done in an orderly manner. Tomorrow there will be further news in terms of availability of the vaccine and how we're going to proceed.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier has a leadership review coming this Saturday. This is a key opportunity to show true leadership. To the Premier: does the Premier accept ultimate responsibility for the failure of Alberta's health care system to cope with this H1N1 pandemic?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as Premier of the province, of course, all of the issues and responsibility rest in this office. I can tell you that from what information I have and in looking at the news right across the whole nation, this province has vaccinated 400,000 Albertans of all categories – all categories – in terms of high risk and low risk. They did their civic duty. Yes, they stood in line, but you know what? That's 400,000 more people that have a vaccination, that are now at little or no risk because they've received their vaccination, and they'll take the pressure off our emergency wards.

Dr. Swann: With hundreds of thousands of doses of H1N1 available today in the province, why are those most vulnerable to H1N1 sitting on their thumbs waiting for this vaccine when you contacted people this weekend and closed clinics? Why do you not open these clinics today to provide those vaccines to those people?

Mr. Stelmach: Well, misinformation: there are not hundreds of thousands of doses available.

I'll ask the minister to respond to the latter part of the question.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that we will deal with in rolling out tomorrow is the fact that we need to ensure that we go in a staged approach going forward because we don't want to get in the situation of stopping and starting. If we were to listen to the opposition, we would have had multiple clinics open throughout the province on days 1 and 2, and our vaccine would have expired. Albertans would have been showing up, and there wouldn't have been vaccine. We want to ensure that going forward we have a consistent approach to vaccination.

Dr. Swann: Health care professionals are now calling and are not receiving H1N1 when it's available even though they're the ones that are facing the people with H1N1 in emergency departments and in the hospitals. What do you say to these health professionals, Mr. Premier, with doses of vaccine sitting available?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, it's ironic how the position of the Leader of the Opposition has changed over a matter of days. Early last week he was supporting all Albertans to go and receive the vaccine, and I guess that on November 1, yesterday, and into today, November 2, he has now changed his position. At the beginning of the week he encouraged everybody to go to clinics and get their vaccine, and as of yesterday, well, they should have prioritized the high risk. You know what? Everybody can predict the past, even the Leader of the Opposition.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This Premier needs to take immediate action to repair the damage that this minister of health has already done to our health care system. Again to the Premier: will the Premier immediately contact retired doctors and nurses and students to assist in administering this vaccine as soon as possible?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, those are decisions made by the medical officer of health. I know that last week the minister signed a ministerial order allowing more health care professionals to administer the vaccine. Again, I have full confidence and trust in Dr. Corriveau and Dr. Predy, and they are doing a good job given the limited supply of vaccine that's available to every province. We will make the best decisions based on the medical evidence that's presented by the doctors.

Dr. Swann: Interesting that the Premier is now interested in evidence when we've been ignoring evidence for the last couple of months.

Every Albertan knows that the hospitals have no spare beds and no extra staff. Will the Premier commit to staffing our hospitals properly for this pandemic?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, last week I mentioned that we'll make every resource available to ensure that we get through the vaccination program and deal with any other circumstances that might avail themselves in the province, but once again I want to reiterate that it's not an issue of not having enough medical professionals to administer the vaccine. The issue is that there is a shortage of the vaccine made available by the only one supplier in Canada, and that shortage is experienced by all provinces in the country of Canada.

Dr. Swann: Finally to the Premier: when the immunization clinics open later this week, will the Premier ensure that these clinics have the capacity to not keep the most vulnerable people waiting for four hours for their injection? Will you guarantee that?

Mr. Stelmach: The plan will be unveiled, and certainly what we have learned from the past week will be taken into consideration. As well, there will be very clear communication. I just urge all Albertans to listen very closely to what we unveil tomorrow so that they can access in those high-risk groups, children and also pregnant women. There'll be clear indication where the clinics will be and at what times the vaccine will be made available.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization for High-risk Albertans

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Day after day Albertans waited in line for hours at flu clinics, camping overnight, missing work, and risking infection from others, only to be turned away again and again. This government has created fear, confused people with contradictory messages, and did not ensure that high-risk populations were vaccinated first. My question is to the Premier. Mr. Premier, can you explain to Albertans how you have failed in handling the largest public health crisis our province has ever seen?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question from the leader, there were a number of doses of vaccine that were said to be available to the province in the earlier stages of planning. That changed significantly towards the end of last week. We have to make changes in the way the vaccine will be now administered, especially to those high-risk groups that I had mentioned: children six months to five years and also pregnant women. As I said, the plan will be unveiled tomorrow as to when the clinics will restart, where the clinics will be. We also want to make sure that where the vaccine will be administered, it's as comfortable as possible for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much. Opening just a handful of urban clinics to serve 3 million people was a terrible mistake. Failing to target high-risk groups, forcing those least able to line up and camp overnight in the dark and in the cold is unforgivable. Creating assessment centres where the sick are crowded together with the uninfected is not only stupid; it's irresponsible. Why won't the Premier admit that his government has made mistake after mistake after mistake?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the advice in terms of how the vaccine should be administered comes directly from the medical officers of health, and quite frankly I do have confidence in them. They have the experience, the education. They know the evidence behind it. We listen to their advice, and then we incorporate whatever decisions based on the evidence brought forward by the physicians.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First the government scared people so that tens of thousands descended on clinics that couldn't handle the load. Massive lineups meant that only the strong and healthy could get the vaccine while the vulnerable people who needed it most had to return home, sometimes in tears. Albertans want to know who is accountable for this mess. Who is ultimately responsible, Mr. Premier? Is it Dr. Corriveau, is it the Minister of Health and Wellness, or is it you?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I think that we have to put some things in perspective here. Last week in question period this particular member was asking us what we're doing about the homeless. Well, let me tell you what we did about the homeless. The homeless have been vaccinated. Last week we heard about our aboriginal population, another very high-risk group. I can tell you that our aboriginal population has been vaccinated. Another high-risk group is our health care workers. Every health care worker in this province who wanted to get vaccinated has been vaccinated. Let's talk about the success of this program, not continue to dwell on the fears of this particular member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the weekend the mass H1N1 vaccination clinics were temporarily closed. Most of the focus has been on lineups in the cities, but the people in my area have great concerns there isn't a plan for rural and remote communities. Planned clinics in Cypress-Medicine Hat were advertised on the government website and then cancelled. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: what are you doing to ensure the pandemic plan includes Albertans in rural areas just as much as those living in cities?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's a very good question, unlike what we've just heard. That particular plan will also be part of what Alberta Health Services will be announcing and communicating tomorrow. I should say that there's no question that our intention in some of the smaller communities around the province was to try and get the vaccine to physicians and pharmacists as quickly as we could. The tremendous take-up of the mass clinics derailed that particular effort. There probably are some areas of the province that did get neglected, and that's what we have to deal with going forward.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the past few days my office has taken calls related to the mass immunization clinics set up for the H1N1 vaccine. Many never did get the vaccine after waiting in long lines, and they would like some answers. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: what is the plan for school-age children that cannot wait in line for the H1N1 vaccine?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, I don't want to preannounce what Alberta Health Services is going to be announcing tomorrow, Mr. Speaker. That will be dealt with.

Keep in mind that school-age children, unless they have underlying medical conditions, are not the high priority. I know I've had some members ask me about vaccinating in schools. Again, as the Premier has indicated, the chief medical officer of health is the quarterback of this planning process, and he will adjust as we need. Right now school-age children are not the highest priority.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Seniors in my area lit my phone lines off the hook last week and this weekend with complaints about the long lines either inside or outside in the cold. With the clinics temporarily closed this week will vaccinations for seniors also be reviewed?

Mr. Liepert: Well, there will be some review, Mr. Speaker. Again, unless seniors have underlying medical conditions, they are not in the highest priority category. As we've heard here today, with a lot of yipping across the way, we want to ensure that the highest priority, those at highest risk in the province, are dealt with, and that's what we will be announcing tomorrow.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Medical Tent at Stollery Children's Hospital

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Health and Wellness threw Alberta's health system into confusion and crisis when he dissolved the health regions and the Alberta Cancer Board. We've been receiving increasingly panicked calls from cancer patients who urgently need the H1N1 vaccine. Because of chemotherapy some of them literally cannot wait until tomorrow, and they cannot stand in line for hours. My question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Does he understand that dissolving the Alberta Cancer Board created a leadership vacuum in which nobody considered the high-risk needs of cancer patients?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Health Services Board has a mandate to provide equitable health care across this province; it doesn't matter where you live. That will be the same policy and priority that will take place with the H1N1 vaccination program. The member should listen attentively tomorrow when Alberta Health Services rolls out its plan.

Dr. Taft: Well, in a bizarre example of how one hand doesn't know what the other hand is doing in the department of health, because this minister created total chaos, the pandemic tent at the Stollery children's hospital, having been set up 18 months ago, was taken down last week just as the pandemic hit. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: how does he explain leaving up the pandemic tent at the Stollery for 18 months when there was no pandemic and then taking it down the first week the pandemic hits?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, it was the day that I visited the University emergency, last Wednesday, when the head of emerg at the University was proudly showing me the fact that the tent was gone and construction was going to start the next day. If the member is going to suggest here that he doesn't like that idea, well, then, I suggest he should say so because it's in his constituency, and there are a lot of constituencies around this province that would gladly have health care construction tomorrow.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, the physicians from that department who were talking to me are saying, quote: it is beyond stupidity to take down a pandemic tent that has been set up for 18 months the first week the pandemic hits. Will this Minister of Health and Wellness take steps to ensure that that pandemic tent is set up somewhere else, where it can be used for the purposes it was paid for?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, this just shows that this member doesn't even know what's going on in his own constituency because the tent was never set up for pandemic purposes. The tent was set up for emergency services at the Stollery children's hospital. Now, with the announcement that this government is going to proceed with the construction of the emergency services at Stollery hospital, is this member suggesting that we should stop just because we have a vaccination program going? I suggest he should stand up and say so if that's what his view is.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Calgary Ring Road

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This morning I had the privilege of joining the Minister of Transportation and several other members of this Assembly at the opening of the northeast and northwest Calgary ring roads. Obviously, people in Calgary are very excited to be able to use these new sections of the ring road. I know this project has been in the works for a number of years, and it's great to see it come to fruition, but I do have some questions. To the Minister of Transportation: can the minister tell this Assembly what has led up to this opening and the timeline behind it, please?

2:10

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, this vision began 30 years ago, and today it became a reality. That foresight is paying dividends for Albertans today and will continue to benefit Albertans in the future.

Thinking big and planning for the future and being innovative is what Alberta is all about.

Today we opened 44 kilometres of world-class ring road that will benefit the residents of Calgary and our entire provincial highway network, Mr. Speaker. This new road will help move people and goods safely and efficiently in and around Calgary. It is such a good road that I hope the hon. member will make sure he obeys the speed limit in his new blue van.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. We're all concerned about money these days. How much did this program cost, and how can we ensure that Albertans got good value for their money?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's the single-largest transportation project dollarwise in Alberta's history, an investment of over $1 billion by this government: Stoney Trail northwest, $460 million; Stoney Trail northeast, $650 million, in 2007 dollars. The northeast was built as a P3 project. In fact, when the Premier was Minister of Transportation, he knew we could do things better. We have now successfully used the P3 model on both Calgary and Edmonton ring roads. P3s are only considered when a thorough business case. . .

The Speaker: The hon. member. [interjection] The hon. member has the floor. If he doesn't want it, he doesn't have to take it.

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, one more question to the same minister. Now that the northern sections of the Calgary ring road are open, when can I expect to drive my blue van on the southeast leg?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, the southeast section is out for tender right now, and we expect to start construction in the spring of 2010 and open the road to traffic in the fall of 2013.

As far as the southwest section we all know that the Tsuu T'ina Nation voted against the agreement in July. We respect that decision. We are moving forward, and we're committed to completing the ring road. We're now working with the city of Calgary to find an effective transportation solution that will meet the immediate traffic issues in Calgary and support this province's long-term plans. This work is going well and moving ahead. There have been no decisions made. I have to admit that we probably will have a tough time meeting our 2015 guideline on that southwest now, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Climate Change

Ms. Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. While the Premier is fearmongering on climate change, the rest of the world is taking action. A report came out last week stating that Albertans can enjoy continued growth and prosperity while reducing greenhouse gas emissions. That message is clearly lost to this government. To the Minister of Environment: given that Shell is asking for stricter greenhouse gas targets and regulations to stay internationally competitive, when will the minister protect our energy industry's assets and reputation by implementing absolute targets and meaningful regulations?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I want to remind this member that Alberta still is the only jurisdiction in Canada that actually has legislation in place that mandates reductions in CO₂. That being said, Alberta has been more than open in working with our partners not only at the Canadian national level but internationally, with particular emphasis on our neighbours to the south, and has been engaged very actively in discussing a balanced approach on a go-forward basis so that we can achieve that very target that the member is alluding to.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Back to the same minister. A prominent Calgary-based solar energy firm is moving to Ontario. Why will this government not invest in renewable energy and stop the wealth transfer and the loss of jobs?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, because this government believes that it's not the role of the government to invest in energy. It's the role of the private sector, and we'll do everything we can to assist them.

Ms Blakeman: No wonder they're leaving.

Again to the same minister. According to a government of Alberta report, if energy efficiency measures had been instituted in 1990, we would be emitting 60 per cent less emissions and enjoying an annual $2.2 billion return. Will the minister tell us: what was the business case for doing nothing?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, that is just a gross exaggeration of reality. Nothing could be further from the truth. Again I remind this member that this government is the first jurisdiction in all of Canada to bring forward legislation that requires reductions in CO₂, and that has led to some very direct results. In addition to the fact that we have $120 million in a technology fund, the bonus, as far as I'm concerned, is that there have been a great deal of savings that have accrued through industry working very diligently on that very energy efficiency file that she talks about.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Tourism Marketing

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Virtually every industry is feeling the impact of the global economic downturn, and experience teaches us that, sad as it is, tourism is often one of the first sectors negatively affected in a recession, for obvious reasons. My first question is to the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. How extensively was Alberta's important tourism industry negatively affected this past summer season?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Ady: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member is right. We have heard from tourism operators, and there was a decrease in our international visitors in this province. But the silver lining in this is that the Travel Alberta corporation ran the Stay campaign for the last two years, and Albertans have really taken that to heart. Our campgrounds, our RV units, and our attractions saw a major increase this summer, just Albertans using the Alberta product. So they were busy, and this helped go a long way to offset the decrease in the international market.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My only supplemental is to the same minister. With all the information that she has access to, can she tell us when the industry is expected to recover and also what the province is doing to help speed up that process?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's difficult to predict how quickly we'll see a rebound in the tourism market, but we know that it's resilient and that it's weathered tough times before. We're doing things like investing in major high-profile events like seven World Cups coming to Alberta and the 2010 Winter Games to generate awareness. Those World Cups alone will generate some 41,000 30-second commercials that will go right back into those European markets and remind them why this is a great place to come visit.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Commercial Vehicle Driver Safety

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Auditor General's report contained many concerning investigations. One was this government's commercial vehicle safety programs. My questions are to the Minister of Transportation. Why has the government failed to make driver training mandatory for the operation of commercial vehicles?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, there is driver training available for any level of driver in Alberta. If they want to go take class 1 training, Red Deer College has a great program for that. We do make sure that we test those drivers so that they're safe on the street, but I don't think I have to tell them who has to teach them how to drive. We just have to make sure that they're capable and they're safe when they're out there.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are talking about making it mandatory, not just leaving it up to the person to have the safety training or not.

The Auditor General points out that there are some commercial vehicle carriers who operate indefinitely despite identified safety issues. To the minister again: what measures is the minister going to put in place to ensure that carriers cannot repeatedly fail safety tests and continue operating?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, all of the different companies that are in the business are on a point system, and at some point in time they do lose their running rights. I can't off the top of my head recall exactly how that system is in place, but I do know that the system is in place to make sure that our roads are safe.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again: when will the system be in place to monitor commercial vehicle drivers and carriers so that our roads are made safer?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of different systems in place to make sure of everything he's talking about. PIC, our partners in compliance program, is one of the highest rated programs across Canada. If you rate high enough to belong to partners in compliance – there are automatic readers now on the highway, if you've seen them, right by our scale houses. They allow people to miss the scales because their compliance is so high with our regulations. We do have random checks even on them to make sure that they comply. We are continually working on our traffic safety plan, and we are continually trying to make sure that our roads are safer for you and everyone else to get home to their families in the evening.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While Alberta's most remote Métis settlements are hoping to get their H1N1 immunizations sometime this week, there is no word about whether they will have enough vaccines for every member of their community. Last week in Fishing Lake they ran out of vaccine after only 100 of the 700 people living there got their shots, and they still don't know when they can expect their next batch. My question is to the minister of health. Why did the health minister not plan ahead enough to ensure that these most highly vulnerable Albertans had enough vaccine for their entire population before inviting healthy Albertans to line up at mass clinics?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, we have made it very clear and I restated in my statement today that over the course of approximately the next two months we will ensure that every Albertan has the right to be vaccinated if they so choose. Now, the population that the member is referring to is part of our high-risk group. That will be exactly what Alberta Health Services will be detailing tomorrow.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, in Alberta there are roughly 40,000 pregnant women, and there are around 200,000 kids between the ages of six months and under five years. After hours and even days waiting in lineups, many of these Albertans were turned away because of this government's first-come, first-served policy. Can the minister tell us how many pregnant women and how many young children are still waiting for their vaccine because of this government's hapless invitation to low-risk Albertans?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I have no idea because I haven't asked every woman who got vaccinated whether she was pregnant or not, and we are not going to do that. What we are going to do is lay out a plan tomorrow that will deal with women who are pregnant and with young children. I would suggest that the member wait, and we'll have the details tomorrow.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, in most other provinces people aren't waiting. In almost every other province in the country they had a solid plan ready to go that ensured that high-risk people got the vaccine first, unlike here. In contrast, yesterday the minister was quoted as saying that he had no idea how many Albertans even fall into that category. How can Albertans possibly trust that this minister has the capacity to care for their health when he doesn't even know the basic information needed to put an effective pandemic plan in place?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the chief medical officer of health was asked yesterday how many Albertans fell into what was deemed to be the high-risk category. It was his best estimate that it could be as high as 30 per cent. I would suggest that the member take the advice of the chief medical officer of health, and we will assure her that those will be the next group that we will deal with.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Edmonton Ring Road

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are for the Minister of Transportation. The contract for the northwest leg of the Anthony Henday ring road was let a little over a year ago, and I continue to be amazed at the progress they're making in the vicinity of St. Albert. The roadway is taking shape, and several overpasses appear to be nearing completion. In fact, they even put the first lift of asphalt down in several sections. If this pace of construction is occurring throughout the northwest leg of the Anthony Henday, does the contractor anticipate that this project will be completed ahead of the fall 2011 completion date?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, the province of Alberta is making a major investment in highway infrastructure at a cost of $1.42 billion to construct the northwest Anthony Henday. Again I'd like to stress the vision of this great government 30 years ago. I understand that possibly 30 years ago today's Speaker was the deputy minister of transportation with that great vision.

But I'd better get back to answering the question here. I'm pleased to say that the project is on schedule and on budget. Construction has been progressing very well on the 21-kilometre roadway, and the complete project is on schedule to open in the fall of 2011.

The Speaker: It's not my fault, Mr. Minister, that it took 30 years. The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's interesting to learn these little historical anecdotes all the time. I appreciate them.

My first supplemental is to the same minister: can we anticipate that the Anthony Henday and Stony Plain Road interchange will be completed at the same time as the northwest sector of the Anthony Henday ring road?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I have to answer yes. The province is investing $169 million to construct a major interchange at Stony Plain Road, and that interchange is scheduled to open in the fall of 2011 alongside the northwest leg of the Henday. In addition, the province is investing $45 million to construct the Lessard Road interchange and the Callingwood Road interchange, and both of those interchanges will also open in the fall of 2011. This means that by 2011 motorists will have no traffic lights from Lessard Road in the south to the Manning Drive freeway in the north.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is indeed good news.

To the same minister: why did the province not include the paving of the ramp at the 137th Avenue flyover as part of the current construction work?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, there will ultimately be a full interchange at Anthony Henday Drive and 137th Avenue. The current stage 1 construction of a flyover will meet today's current traffic volumes. I think that hon. member knows that. Most importantly, the flyover will keep a free flow movement of traffic on both 137th Avenue and the Henday, and there will be no traffic lights. When development proceeds in the area and when there's a need to pave the interchange ramps, the province will of course be looking at the developers and the two cities, which I've explained to the hon. member. I've talked to both mayors, and everybody is onside for that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Provincial Marketing Costs

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier didn't think it was important enough to address Albertans when the recession hit or when tens of thousands of Albertans were losing their jobs or whenever we went $7 billion into deficit. Only when the Premier's own job is on the line does it suddenly become urgent to address Albertans on television at the taxpayers' expense, of course. My first question is to the President of the Treasury Board: how can the President of the Treasury Board justify spending over $134,000 of taxpayers' money just weeks before the PC leadership review?

Mr. Snelgrove: I guess the hon. member could try and make the connection. The fact, Mr. Speaker, is that Albertans need to hear a lot of what's important without the filter of media or some of the spin that could be put on by the opposition. The simple fact is that $134,000 to a budget of roughly $36 billion or $37 billion is probably the least amount percentagewise that any corporation would ever spend to get the go-forward to the people that they're working for. It's not our money; we're very aware of that on this side. It's Albertans' money. It was a very careful, conscious choice to let Albertans know the way this government is going forward.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. Good governance should sell itself. If it has to be glossed up through expensive marketing campaigns, then there's something wrong with the government. How much of the $134,000 spent on the Premier's address was for marketing and advertising in advance of the speech itself?

Mr. Snelgrove: Let's just back up and say why it's important that Albertans understand. The hon. member made a statement there: "What happened there? What about the $7 billion deficit?" Mr. Speaker, the projected deficit after second quarter last year was $7.8 billion, $8.5 billion. That never happened. They can't seem to get it out of their minds that that's what would have happened if oil had stayed where it was, our surpluses. Our deficits are projected on best information at each quarter, and if the hon. member stays tuned to the end of the second-quarter update, we'll see what the numbers are then. We don't make these numbers up, Mr. Speaker. We use very real projections from real companies to give Albertans a best indicator of where our financial situation is.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: you were certainly making up those numbers when the budget was tabled here last April.

Now, again, on top of the $25 million branding campaign and the millions spent through the Public Affairs Bureau, this government has spent an additional $24 million in contracts with the marketing firm DDB Canada over the past three years. Why is this government spending millions of dollars marketing itself when it could be directing the money towards public health care or public education, for an example?

Mr. Snelgrove: Selling what we have in Alberta is a big job, and the millions that he – Mr. Speaker, we're talking about billions that we're saving on behalf of Albertans: $25 billion that we've saved in the last five years, $17 billion in the bank, $8 billion in endowments, $20 billion put into infrastructure, $17 billion in a savings account. No other province in Canada, no state can even consider it. They're worried about whether we take the opportunity and the time to tell Albertans what the real financial picture is. Maybe they ought to take a look at the real financial picture.

Temporary Foreign Worker Wages

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been brought to my attention that the food service and hospitality sector is being forced to pay wages that in many cases are not reflective of the marketplace that they're operating in. My question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Why is the Alberta hotel industry forced to pay temporary foreign workers wages higher than Alberta workers doing the same job?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, my colleague is certainly referring to the temporary foreign worker program operated solely by the federal government. Human Resources and Skills Development Canada assigns a prevailing wage rate for each occupation and each region. If an employer wants to hire a new temporary foreign worker, they must pay this rate, and because the rates are assigned by geographic regions, some employers have received a labour market opinion with wages that are higher than in their community. For example, communities that are near high-cost communities are affected. My department is aware of this particular issue and will be working with our federal counterparts to address this issue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental, then, to the minister: Mr. Minister, will you immediately seek a meeting with your federal counterpart to address this issue on behalf of Alberta's employers?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the member that I will be sending a letter to my federal counterpart as Minister of Human Resources and Skills Development shortly to outline our continuing concerns. This has been an ongoing issue for quite some time. We need to reopen our dialogue with our counterparts in Ottawa, and hopefully this will resolve the issues being addressed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Minister, in your answer you acknowledged that this is not a new issue. Wage disparities within the temporary foreign worker program are an ongoing problem for Alberta's employers. Do you have a plan of action to solve this problem once and for all?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, as I've said, the temporary foreign worker program is the responsibility of the federal government, and generally employer complaints are referred to them. However, we've had occasion where we act on behalf of employers, and this is when we see significant disparities in the wage rates between communities within a region. Our goal still remains to hire Albertans first, then Canadians. We have staff and resources to help employers address their labour needs. Employers in the capital region, for instance, have access to labour market information centres or job boards, the employer connection events as well as designated business and industry liaison services.

Postsecondary Tuition Fees

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The global economic downturn is hitting university and college students and their faculties hard. The University of Alberta is facing a $59 million shortfall in its next budget, the University of Calgary has begun to lay off 200 of its employees, and the universities of Lethbridge, Mount Royal, and Grant MacEwan are similarly experiencing funding shortfalls. It is imperative that institutions scrambling for lost dollars do not download unfair burdens onto the backs of our students. My questions are to the minister of advanced education. Is the minister in discussions that will allow postsecondary institutions to raise base tuition rates beyond the government's own tuition caps?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, several months ago we brought in a budget in this House which indicated to our postsecondaries that the 6 per cent increase that they got this year in their budgets brought their total base operating grant increases over the last five years to more than 40 per cent. That's unprecedented in North America and certainly in this climate right now, where you have places like the University of California, Berkeley, cutting 20 per cent across the board on their faculty on their entire campuses. I think it's important that we recognize that we're not immune to that economic situation. So we have put it out to all of our postsecondary institutions that we're open to their ideas, to the things that they can do to make our system more accessible, more efficient. We're going to continue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Will the minister of advanced education commit to keeping the mandatory cap limiting tuition increases to the consumer price index, and will he make sure that institutions aren't allowed to wiggle around the caps to increase costs to students?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it's fair to say that what I have suggested to the postsecondaries is that I'm open to any and all ideas that they can bring to us. We're not actively engaged with them in those discussions, but if they bring forward some proposals that are fair and equitable to the students, that are fair and equitable to the taxpayers of this province, and that are fair and equitable as it relates to the economy and this society, we will look at those.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Postsecondary institutions are going to be making painful cuts to programs and staffing levels to avoid going into the red. How will the ministry monitor those decisions to ensure that students do not end up paying more for less when it comes to the quality of their education?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm sure the hon. member has been aware of the Campus Alberta approach that we have built over the last 18 months in this province, that is the envy of many jurisdictions in the world, really. We've had a number of other jurisdictions coming to talk to us. Within that Campus Alberta context we sit down with all of the postsecondaries, all of the chairs of the boards of governance, and all of the presidents, and we talk about best practices within the system. It's all for three clients. It's for the student, it's for the taxpayer, and it's for the economy and society. It isn't about the institution. It's about those three clients.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bufferlo.

English as a Second Language Programs

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Having a knowledgeable and skilled workforce is key in meeting the future needs of our economy. Between 1988 and 2008 the number of identified English as a second language students in Alberta has tripled from about 15,000 to 50,000, yet those students in Alberta are faced with one of the highest dropout rates in our province. In a recent study by the Coalition for Equal Access to Education students and parents have expressed concerns that the schools allocate less than five hours per week to ESL instruction and that schools stop teaching ESL to students when students are considered at the levels . . .

The Speaker: I'm afraid we're going to have to move to the answer now. I don't know who the question is to, though. The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I want to clarify that the dropout rate for ESL students is not one of the highest in the province. In fact, at 4.4 per cent it's actually lower than the provincial average of 4.8 per cent. Neither are acceptable. But ESL is not higher; it's in fact lower.

We have developed tools and resources to provide clearer direction on intake and assessment of ESL students. We have curriculum – for example, the K to 12 ESL proficiency benchmarks, teaching resources, second language guide to implementation for kindergarten to grade 9, and a senior high school program of studies for ESL, assessment resources; there's a list of assessment resources for English as a second language – and, of course, professional development. So we are working with the system to provide that kind of education.

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. What specific policy and requirements does the ministry have in place to ensure that schools are accountable for ESL funding they receive from the school boards?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, funding is provided to school boards for students who have insufficient fluency in English to achieve grade level expectations; in fact, $1,155 per eligible funded child or student up to a maximum of seven years. Additionally, enhanced ESL funding is available to assist boards in providing support services for immigrant students who have little or no formal schooling. But we don't tell school boards how to allocate their monies or what to do with their monies. We give them the money based on their student population, and we hold them accountable for the results.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. What performance measures does your ministry have in place to ensure that schools in Alberta systematically address cultural diversity and competence in all aspects of school structures and functions?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the measures that we do utilize is comparing the results of the ESL students to the results of students overall. This enables jurisdictions and schools to assess how well ESL students are doing and to develop strategies to improve their results. An example of this would be the diploma examinations, where 77.1 per cent of the ESL students achieve the acceptable standard compared to 84.4 per cent of students overall. We measure overall accountabilities, and we're able to differentiate between ESL students and other students to determine whether they're achieving at the same level as other students. Then school boards can put in place processes and systems to ensure that ESL students have that ability to get to the same level as other students.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 94 questions and responses today. In light of the time and our standing order rules we're going to proceed back to the Routine with Members' Statements.

H1N1 Influenza Immunization

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There's a hole in your Duckett, dear Premier, dear Premier. There are several holes in our health care, unclear Premier, unclear Premier. The fear-filled flu fiasco that unfolded last week saw first nine, then 10 primarily outdoor only accessible clinics struggling to provide indiscriminate inoculations for a meagre fraction of the 2 million-plus people yet to be served in Calgary and Edmonton. The doctors and nurses, the sheriffs and peace officers, the mall security guards, the merchants who, despite having their store entrances blocked, brought out refreshments and allowed those standing for hours to use their facilities are to be congratulated for their support of the thousands of Alberta health care refugees.

It is unfortunate that these people who lined up in the cold and dark in order to secure a spot, a shot for themselves or a vulnerable family member, won't have the opportunity to line up and cast their vote in the Premier's leadership review this Saturday in Red Deer. Prior to this past week it seemed that no graphic images could symbolize poor health planning more than the implosion of Calgary's general hospital. However, this superboard-supporting government has now surpassed that save a buck now, pay several later gang with its latest short-sighted scenario.

Ralph's plan for the SARS pandemic was to simply stockpile surgical face masks. Our current Premier's plan appears to be to create chaos and confusion for his Survivor Albertan show. In this Darwinian dash children under five and pregnant women are pitted against able-bodied men in the struggle for the serum. The last one standing before the line is cut off gets to play another day. In this week's episode tension builds as the clinics close, leading up to the leadership review. Will the Premier survive this weekend's confidence vote? Will Albertans survive this government's health care . . .

The Speaker: Alas, we must move on.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Glenrose Rehabilitation Hospital Fundraiser

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week on October 27 the Edmonton Glenrose hospital foundation was a beneficiary of a fabulous fundraiser, and this really needs to be highlighted. Edmonton's Chinese community decided to put together a fundraiser dinner, not for themselves, not for the benefit of the Chinese community only, but for the benefit of all Albertans. They raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for the Glenrose rehabilitation hospital.

The honorary chair, Mr. Speaker, for the Glenrose Rehabilitation Hospital Foundation happens to be our Premier's better half, Mrs. Stelmach, who spearheaded this fundraiser. Our Minister of Employment and Immigration and my colleague from Edmonton-Meadowlark and myself had the pleasure of participating in this dinner. I would like to extend my sincere thank you to all members of Edmonton's Chinese community for having the citizenship, duty, and obligation of raising money for such a fabulous cause.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Adoption Awareness Month

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in recognition of Adoption Awareness Month. Every November we celebrate the tremendous contributions adoptive families make in the lives of children and youth who dream of having a loving family to call their own, something that most of us take for granted. At any given time Alberta has about 200 children and youth ready and waiting to be adopted by families who will help ensure these kids have the love and support they need to achieve their full potential.

Alberta's adoption program is considered by many to be one of the best in the country, exemplary in its aggressive, proactive approach to recruiting families for children and youth who need loving, nurturing homes. Just last month, Mr. Speaker, recruitment efforts were enhanced by the launch of a new grassroots strategy that reaches out to Albertans across the province. A Child's Hope is designed to get people talking about the many benefits of fostering, providing kinship care, adopting, or mentoring a child or youth who needs our help and support. Families who have adopted say that at the time they decided to reach out and give a child or youth a loving, stable home, they had no idea how much of a positive difference the experience would make in their own lives.

Mr. Speaker, there is no better time or better place to adopt a child than right now, right here in the province of Alberta. Every kid deserves to grow up in the kind of caring environment that they can call their own. I encourage all families interested in adopting to first consider kids in our province and visit the adoption website at www.child.alberta.ca to find out more about the amazing children and youth ready and waiting to be matched with you to bring love, joy, and fulfillment into your home.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Anniversary of the Birth of Guru Nanak

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today and talk a little about a very important day to the Sikh religion. Today, November 2, marks the 540th birthday of Sri Guru Nanak Dev Ji, founder of Sikhism. Every year Sikhs around the world celebrate Sri Guru Nanak Dev's birthday with an Akhand Path, or reading the holy scriptures, Sri Guru Granth Sahib, from start to finish. This reading takes about 48 hours and concludes in the early morning of the guru's birth.

Mr. Speaker, the Sikh community is doing a lot to mark this special day. The Sikh community of Edmonton and the Punjabi Media Association of Alberta have joined together for the third annual food and fundraising event. This time there is $50,000 plus three tonnes of food. Every year near Sri Guru Nanak Dev's birthday the members of the Sikh community join together and raise food and money to help support the Edmonton food bank. I would like to give special thanks to Desh Punjab Radio and Radio Sursangam for their radiothon, which fund raised a lot of money. The fundraising portrays Guru Nanak's concept of Langar, or the community kitchen. The Sikh community raised $2.5 million for the Mazankowski Heart Institute's Guru Nanak Dev Healing Garden.

I am proud of the hard work of these organizations, proud of the positive impact they are having on our community. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to present a petition signed by 113 Albertans that reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the government of Alberta to:

- Grandfather the rights and status of all currently-practicing Registered Massage Therapists . . . in Alberta in a manner that they may continue their practice undisturbed and, when necessary, gradually upgrade to newly-proclaimed standards of training, so as not to force current therapists to lose their ongoing income whilst upgrading and so to ensure that clients of said therapists will be able to use their insurance coverage in order to pay for massage services from current therapists.

These signatures are mostly from Calgary.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with Standing Order 30 I wish to give notice that at the appropriate time I intend to move that the ordinary business of the Assembly be adjourned to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the government's inadequate preparations for the pandemic H1N1 influenza program.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member will be doing this?

Ms Notley: I'm giving notice on behalf of the hon. member.

The Speaker: Okay. But the hon. member said that she would be rising to do certain things. Is she doing this on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood?

Ms Notley: I'm giving notice on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Yes.

The Speaker: Okay.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Bill 59

Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and request leave to introduce first reading of Bill 59, the Mental Health Amendment Act, 2009.

This bill supports the implementation of community treatment orders by clarifying, firstly, the role of psychiatrists in issuing and overseeing community treatment orders; secondly, the criteria that will be considered by mental health review panels when reviewing community treatment orders; and the Mental Health Patient Advocate's legal authority to access records and information for investigations involving community treatment orders. Mr. Speaker, these community treatment orders will enable individuals to maintain their mental health treatment in the community. These orders will be introduced when the remaining sections of the Mental Health Amendment Act, 2007, are proclaimed, which is expected to occur early next year.

I ask all members to support this bill and to move this bill to the next stage. I move first reading of Bill 59.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 59 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 59 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Bill 61

Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to move first reading of the Provincial Offences Procedure Amendment Act, 2009, otherwise known as Bill 61.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is designed to not only simplify and unclog our currently busy court system, but it also aims at making sure that more police officers spend their time actually on the streets, doing the work that they want to do, and not in busy courthouses. Among many other clauses in the bill it will allow for the filing of evidence by police officers by way of affidavit as opposed to having to appear in person. The details of the bill will be unveiled in second reading.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 61 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 61 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter written by Faith Paul, and I certainly have permission to table this letter. It is her letter to me dated October 27, 2009, and it outlines reasons that we should consider keeping Alberta Hospital open.

The second tabling I have is a document from the Friends of Medicare. It's titled Stop the Cuts, a rally November 7, 11:30 a.m., with march and rally to PC Party convention at 12, at the Kinsmen community hall in Red Deer. Reserve your seat on a free bus from Edmonton and Calgary. Contact friendsofmedicare.org.

Thank you.

Emergency Debate

The Speaker: Hon. members, we do have a matter of business to deal with, and that's an application under Standing Order 30. I'm going to listen attentively to the arguments, but I'm also going to limit the number of speakers with respect to the application for the motion as there is a process in the standing orders to deal with this. I'll invite the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood to make a brief statement with respect to the urgency of this matter, and we'll recognize one spokesperson from each of the other two caucuses in the House. Then we'll make a decision.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Preparedness

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As required under Standing Order 30(1) I gave written notice to yourself at least two hours prior to today's sitting. My colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona gave oral notice of this motion during today's Routine, and copies of the motion have been distributed to members of the House.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that this motion meets the urgency requirement under Standing Order 30. Each day for the past week we have seen Albertans reacting with frustration and confusion to the government's pandemic H1N1 influenza program. The H1N1 virus is a significant threat to the health of Albertans. We have seen over the last week that there is extremely high public interest in protection against the virus, but we have also seen the government send out very mixed messages about when individuals should seek to get immunized. The government has now been forced to change its plan, which adds to public concern about the spread of the virus and raises questions about whether the government had properly prepared for the second wave of the virus. I believe the government's most recent decision to stop mass vaccinations while a new plan is developed to immunize only high-risk populations underlies the urgent need for this House to discuss the government's plan for minimizing the spread of H1N1.

We know that over the past week many Albertans in high-risk categories stood in line for hours without being able to get vaccinated while others with lower risk received a vaccination. Others in the high-risk categories were unable to get to a clinic and stand in a long lineup because of their health problems. We also know that other provinces were able to deliver the vaccine to people at higher risk first. Albertans need to hear why this did not happen in our province.

Beauchesne's 387 says that a debate under this standing order "must deal with a matter within the administrative competence of the Government and there must be no other reasonable opportunity for debate." Mr. Speaker, the H1N1 vaccine program is clearly within the responsibility of this government, and I know of no other motions or other such opportunities which would allow this House to have a full discussion of the issue. This is a most urgent question, very much on the minds of Albertans throughout the province, and it seems to me that this motion would give opportunity for this Assembly to discuss this most urgent question. So I submit that clearly this motion meets the urgency requirements under Standing Order 30.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While it would have been, I think, preferable if this motion had been worded in a more appropriate way, I don't think there can be any question that the issue of the H1N1 virus and the preparation by government and by the health authority to make sure that Albertans get vaccinated is a very, very clear issue on the minds of Albertans. I think it is quite appropriate for us in this House to address that kind of an issue in this open forum so that Albertans can know and understand clearly the amount of preparation that has gone into pandemic preparation and the way in which this government and the Health Services authority have been able to make sure that as many as Albertans as possible get vaccinated as quickly as possible. So while I cannot agree with the wording of the motion in terms of inadequate preparation, I certainly do agree and would urge all members of the House to support the concept that we adjourn the normal business of the day and speak to the preparation for the H1N1 pandemic influenza program.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As always with Standing Order 30 there are two categories of tests: one is that the genuine emergency that exists must be proven and, secondly, that there is no other opportunity for a debate to have taken place on the particular issue. In this case I will argue the second category first, that there has been no other opportunity for us to have any substantial debate; therefore, following the words of the Government House Leader, it would be appropriate to do that this afternoon.

It is within the administrative competence of the government. There's no government bill on the Order Paper. There's nothing on notice on the Order Paper, nor has the Government House Leader indicated to me in our presession meeting that there would likely be a bill coming forward specific to the H1N1 implementation. There's no private member's bill, public bill, or private bill. Of course, there's no budget, and again there's no indication that there would be a supplementary supply budget that would open up for debate on this. There are no government motions. Oral Question Period allows us a very, very brief time: 35 seconds to ask the question, 35 to answer. A number of mentions, including Beauchesne 408(1)(e) and (f) and 408(2) and 410(7), all speak to brevity, which is not a debate on the issue.

The second category, the genuine emergency. We're seeing a number of issues take place. This caucus heard this morning from a resident at the Royal Alexandra, a few blocks from here, admitting that those residents are admitting people suffering from H1N1 to that hospital and to the emergency ward while the residents themselves have not been inoculated and are not being allowed to be inoculated. That increases their risk as health care providers substantially and, of course, affects their families. As well, it increases the risk that the virus will be passed on by those very same health care providers.

The government has inoculated a little over 10 per cent of the population, but it has not completed or even started in some locations. Again I reference health care providers and a number of those from particularly vulnerable groups. I will focus on cancer patients, as raised by my colleague earlier today, who have very strict and limited windows, given their cancer treatment, of when they would be able to sustain a vaccination. They are not physically able to stand in lineups, but there have been no provisions made for them that we're aware of. So that's a third group of very vulnerable people who have not been able to be helped. I would argue that they would qualify under the genuine emergency considerations that are before us today.

So I would ask the Speaker to please rule in favour of the Standing Order 30 application. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I am prepared to make a decision with respect to this matter. Standing Order 30(2) provides an opportunity for members to speak, allowing as many of them to be in the debate as possible. I've heard the three petitions we've had here with respect to this.

The motion itself certainly arrived at my office in time, met the requirement of two hours' notice. It arrived at 11:27, so it beat it by three minutes.

Secondly, the question here is whether or not there is "a genuine emergency, calling for immediate and urgent consideration." For those members who follow this sort of thing, Beauchesne's paragraphs 387 to 390 and Marleau and Montpetit, House of Commons Procedure and Practice, 586 to 589, deal with this particular matter.

There are two key points with respect to this and a third one which is quite subjective. In fact, all three are quite subjective, but the third one is important as well. First of all, to meet the requirements of urgency, there must not be another opportunity for members of the Assembly to discuss this matter. Secondly, the matter must relate to a genuine emergency. There's one other that I do take into consideration, and that is the general mood of the House with respect to this as well. The chair certainly has heard spokesmen on behalf of the other caucuses in the House advocating that there might be something to this today.

I am a little concerned about the specific words of the motion itself. Having said that, ordinarily the motion itself, the wording in it, might not necessarily meet all three tests, but the third test – that is, the general mood of the House – is one that I'm considering today. No hesitation on my understanding that there is an element of questioning going on in the province of Alberta with respect to this matter.

I also wish to advise that the Canadian House of Commons will also be proceeding to such a similar debate as this almost immediately now. There's a two-hour time difference between ourselves and the Canadian House of Commons, but the Speaker there ruled a few minutes ago that, in essence, such an opportunity should be afforded to the men and women of the Canadian House of Commons as well.

In essence, I'm going to find that the request for leave is in order. We are going to move to this, but it's your decision as to how we move to this and if we move to this. There are rules with respect to how we move to this. Standing Order 30(3) requires that the question be put to a vote of this Assembly. If there are any objections to the question, then the chair will ask those members who support the motion to rise in their places. So if there are any objections to my question, members then have to move physically in order to endorse and uphold what the Speaker has ruled with respect to this.

I'm going to ask the question. Shall the debate on the urgent matter proceed? All those in favour, say yes.

Hon. Members: Yes.

The Speaker: Those opposed, say no.

Okay. We are now going to proceed, and you can follow the rules in our standing orders with respect to this. I should advise all members that, in essence, you have a 10-minute speaking time with respect to this.

Standing Order 30(6) says, "An emergency debate does not entail any decision of the Assembly," and there are some conditions which the standing orders provide with respect to this emergency debate. Whoever is in the chair this afternoon may have to bring this to the attention of the members participating. A key one is that "not more than one matter may be discussed on the same motion." So we do have a motion. It's very clear what the motion is. There has to be attention to the motion per se under the debate. It also will preclude any further discussion on this matter by way of a Standing Order 30 application on this subject for the remainder of this session if it's a similar concept. So this is the shot.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, I'll invite you momentarily, but might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a good citizen and friend of mine from my constituency, Denis Ducharme. Denis Ducharme is our former MLA. He served our community extremely well for 11 years. His early retirement and encouragement have allowed me to fill his shoes, which was not an easy task. I would like to now ask Mr. Ducharme to stand so that we can give him the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

H1N1 Influenza Pandemic Preparedness

The Speaker: Hon. members, we are going to proceed. We'll proceed in this order. First of all, I'm going to call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, then I'm going to recognize the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, then I will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, and then we'll try to find a rotation as we go forward. After the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview I will recognize the hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations. They're the next four speakers.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to have this debate in the House today. I know that the Government House Leader indicated some disagreement with the suggestion in the wording of the motion that the government's preparations were inadequate, but I assure him that this is about the fourth draft of the motion, and this is by far the most favourable reference to the government that we have.

I want to say that I've never seen a situation yet in this province in the time that I've been elected to this Assembly where there was so much anger on the part of many Albertans towards an action of the government. Each day for the past week we've seen them responding with frustration and confusion to the government's pandemic H1N1 influenza program.

The H1N1 virus is a significant threat to the health of Albertans. We've seen over the past week that there is extremely high public interest in protection against the virus. Although severe illness due to the virus may be relatively low, the number of people infected could be so large that the disease will put a severe burden on schools, businesses, and public services due to a high rate of absenteeism, not to mention, Mr. Speaker, the surge in emergency rooms and in our health care system generally.

Albertans got the message that the government was trying to deliver, that H1N1 immunization was an urgent matter which all responsible citizens should take. The minister of health urged in this House last Monday, "Albertans have to roll up their sleeves and help us get the job done." But, Mr. Speaker, the government was not prepared for the very high level of public participation in the vaccination program. The news of the past week has been filled with stories of long lineups at clinics, people waiting for hours and hours to be immunized, only to be turned away.

Earlier, Mr. Speaker, in my response to the minister's statement I read an e-mail from my own sister indicating that even though she's a high priority for immunization, she has made six unsuccessful attempts to get immunized in the city of Calgary. There is, in fact, a very, very serious problem. The government will argue – and I'm sure the minister will when he gets up – that the indicator of success of this program is that 400,000 Albertans have been vaccinated. That is not the real measure of the success of this program. In fact, we heard earlier that according to Dr. Corriveau, up to 30 per cent of Albertans may in fact be considered in the high-risk category. That's just under a million people, Mr. Speaker. Now, we've just expended our first tranche of vaccine of 400,000 doses on people in, essentially, a random way. In fact, I would go further than that; I would say that the way it's been set up, with the requirement that people stand in line for lengthy periods of time, has favored strong and healthy individuals who are most likely not on the list of people who should get the vaccine.

The question is important, Mr. Speaker. Why do we have certain people who are considered vulnerable on a higher priority list? The simple fact of the matter is that these are people who are more likely to have a very severe illness and may more likely die if they are infected with H1N1, and that's why they are a priority. But the government has allowed people to get to the front of the line. In fact, they've set up a system that allows people who are stronger and healthier to get the first dose, to be inoculated ahead of people who actually need the vaccine. That's the problem. That's the core problem with what's happened. Now, we've got another 80,000 doses coming, but that is insufficient to even cover some of the categories of vulnerable priority individuals. That is why this is a fundamentally flawed and, in fact, very badly organized and managed process. There are some secondary things: for example, the fact that people have to line up, that particular target groups weren't targeted.

Mr. Speaker, we've run out for the moment, I guess, of large supplies of the vaccine, and the government has now decided that they're shutting the entire program down. This very day, Mr. Speaker, in Ontario the government announced that they would be doubling the number of clinics. I think that's about 100 additional clinics. Today they're opening another hundred clinics, on the same day that Alberta is shutting down all of its clinics. But the clinics are very different. They're not mass immunization where everyone can come. They're specific; they're small. They're specifically targeted to the key groups that need to be immunized, and if you're not one of those people that qualify at that clinic, you don't get immunized. That's important, Mr. Speaker, because that is what protects the lives of people who are most vulnerable.

Manitoba I think has done a much better job as well. For example, a call was put out in Manitoba last spring to retired health care professionals to work in the vaccination clinics. The recertification necessary for them to inject people with a vaccine was fast-tracked. The result was 600 workers who were ready to help staff the clinics. This allowed Manitoba to set up more clinics than we've seen in Alberta. In Winnipeg, for example, which is a little smaller than Edmonton, 12 clinics were set up compared to only four in Calgary and five in Edmonton. Like Alberta, Manitoba initially made its immunization program available to everyone regardless of their risk factors, but it has now decided to immunize only target populations. Ontario, on the other hand, has only provided the flu shot for these target populations. People in these high-risk groups have been able to make appointments at flu shot clinics with minimal inconvenience. Ontario has now announced, as I mentioned, that they'll double the number of clinics.

In Alberta the experience of the past week has shown that this government failed to properly prepare for the second wave of the H1N1 virus. The government failed to ensure that the most vulnerable Albertans would receive the vaccine quickly. People across the province have spent frustrating hours in lineups at clinics, and now they're closed while the government goes back to the drawing board.

Well, all provincial governments have had to deal with the sudden shortage of vaccine. This is not the provincial governments' fault. This is the federal government's responsibility. I'll put it mildly, I guess. But how we are positioned to react to that is the question, and how soon this government knew about that shortage is a question that I would like to have answered.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to address the whole question of the pressure that's now going to be put on our health care system by people who are infected with H1N1 influenza, and that's a very serious problem. Because of the minister's health care reform, led by Dr. Duckett from Australia, we are in a process of limiting the number of nurses in the health care system. Now there's a hiring freeze which applies generally, and that's another question of the level of funding. The strategy of Dr. Duckett is to replace nurses as much as possible with other health care professionals and remove the number of nurses that are involved in the health care system, but there's plenty of research that shows that there's a direct relationship between the number of nurses in a health care system and the incidence of mortality and morbidity within the health care system. So taking nurses out of the system makes it less responsive, makes it less able to respond, and there are other cuts that do the same thing.

In general, the changes that have been made to our health care system by this government have thrown it into chaos, and it is unable to respond. I heard the Premier say just the other day: well, you know, give us a break because we're trying to run a health care system, too. It just struck me as someone who didn't understand that a health care system has to have the capacity to deal with things like a pandemic. My last point is that, in fact, the government doesn't seem to get the fact that they've had months and months to prepare for this pandemic yet have failed to do so adequately.

Mr. Speaker, just in closing, I want to say that the government has completely failed Albertans in this respect.

The Speaker: Hon. members, just two housekeeping matters. First of all, because this was a change to the Routine today, there was no opportunity for the chair to say: Orders of the Day. So, yes, you can proceed to have that liquid refreshment, whether it be tea or water or the like. I'll make that very clear. Secondly, there is no Q and A of five minutes awarded to this, so we're moving right along. I've got a long list of speakers at a maximum of 10 minutes each. There are over 20 now on the list. We're going to proceed in the following order for the next six speakers: the Minister of Health and Wellness, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, then the Minister of Aboriginal Relations, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, then the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, and then the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's actually my pleasure to stand here this afternoon and participate in this debate. I'm sorry that we have to participate in a debate where we have the member introduce this particular motion, worded in such a way that it takes away from the incredible good work that our public health officials have done in preparing for this influenza campaign. As I've said on many occasions, this is a plan that has been well thought out, it's a plan that has been put together with other provincial officials and the federal government, and it's a plan that was put together by our chief medical officer of health and public health officials. To say that somehow Alberta was inadequately prepared is to take a direct shot at those hardworking officials within our government.

I find it really quite remarkable because we have this particular member who introduced this motion today introducing it somehow on the basis that he could have predicted what happened last week. I remember that when I made my ministerial statement in the House last week, he did not even respond to it. I would have thought that when he had the opportunity to respond, Mr. Speaker, he would have stood up, and he would have said, "You are inadequately prepared for this pandemic," but he didn't. He sat there. He didn't move. He didn't say one word. So, you know, this member, I've noticed over the years that I've been in this House, has this incredible ability to see miles ahead by looking in the rear-view mirror. He always does that.

Mr. Speaker, this is also a member that, any chance he gets, tells us about how good he is at looking at an individual and assessing whether or not they're in the high-risk category. I remember when the Member for Edmonton-Riverview last week stood up and responded to the ministerial statement. He said that he went to the clinic to get his vaccination shot, and the lineup deterred him. Now, he may very well have been in the high-risk category. I can't tell by looking at him whether he is or isn't, but I'll bet the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood can tell because he seems to be able to predict that none of our people who took this vaccine were in the high-risk category. Absolutely despicable.

Now, the member just referred to Ontario. I would refer him to last week's Globe and Mail. All there was was lineups in Ontario all across the front page of the Globe and Mail, so don't try to lead this House, Member, that somehow this isn't happening somewhere else in the country.

Now that I've got that off my chest, Mr. Speaker, let's talk about the most successful week that we have had when it comes to vaccinations in this province. This is the largest in the history of the country. There is no template. Our officials in public health, working with the federal government and the other provinces, had to put together a plan and then launch it. I can remember that I was at a health ministers' conference in Winnipeg in August, and the discussion around that table with the federal minister and the other provincial ministers was the fact of the concern about how Canadians were not going to take up this challenge to get vaccinated. In fact, we were talking about numbers somewhere in the range of 30 per cent.

We had a great deal of concern that aboriginals, for instance, in the high-risk group were not going to get vaccinated, and those groups that are highly vulnerable were going to put great pressure on our health care system. I am so proud to stand here today, Mr. Speaker – and I know the Minister of Aboriginal Relations is going to speak to this – and say that we've done an incredible job of vaccinating a large percentage of our aboriginals in this province. We've done a very good job in getting to a large majority of the homeless in this province, and I hope that the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs addresses that as well. We have in our best estimation – because, again, unlike the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, I can't look at someone in a line and say whether they're in that high-risk category or not; I trust them that they're in that high-risk category. They're a large portion of that 400,000 that we have vaccinated.

You know, we launched this campaign last Monday, and we had an incredible take-up on Monday. There was no question that as we moved into Tuesday and Wednesday, it was reported that our lineups had dwindled considerably. I know my colleague from Edmonton-Calder sent me a note last week in the House that he had received a note from a constituent that in 15 minutes they went and got their vaccination. But something happened mid-week last week, Mr. Speaker, and it was the unfortunate death of a young boy in Ontario. We could just see things turn. We could see the panic start to set in. Once that started, it was very difficult to turn around. In addition to that, about 24 hours later the federal government issued a release that said that we were going to be running short of vaccine. Those two situations, Mr. Speaker, caused what were eventually, on Friday and Saturday, situations that were no longer acceptable.

The chief medical officer of health called me on Saturday morning. He outlined what he wanted to do. As I have throughout this, I supported his recommendation, and his recommendation was that we stop all of the clinics, that we take a pause, that we bring out a plan that will deal with those that are most vulnerable. Our vaccine supply stands at about 180,000 doses in Alberta right now despite the comments of the Leader of the Opposition, where I think he was quoted today as saying that we have hundreds of thousands of doses of vaccine. That is incorrect, Mr. Speaker. We have somewhere in the range of 180,000.

We are anticipating that this Thursday we will receive about another 50,000 of the regular vaccine plus some for pregnant women, the unadjuvanted, and then we have no guarantee next week what we're going to get. We are in a situation where if we don't ensure that we have a staged rollout of this over the next two weeks, we will clearly run out of vaccine. We'll have to shut everything down again, and that is not what we want to have happen.

I just want to take a couple of minutes here. I'd like to thank all of those who have been involved in rolling out this campaign, everyone from our chief medical officer of health to public health officials to front-line health care workers to all of those who took it seriously and actually stood in lineups. I would just quote. Through the noon hour I was speaking to the head of the Alberta Medical Association. He assured me that he's got a meeting with the Leader of the Opposition tomorrow, and he's going to make sure that he passes on the fact that there is no other way that you can describe 400,000 people being vaccinated in six days as anything but a tremendous success, Mr. Speaker. That's coming from the medical community.

I would just conclude that we will hold to our commitment that all Albertans will be vaccinated by Christmas, all of those that choose to be vaccinated, and I would just ask that we talk about what we can do to ensure that we accomplish that. Laying blame, pointing fingers is going to get us nowhere, Mr. Speaker.

With those few words, I would ask all hon. members to participate in this debate, support our public health system, and not fall for the member who introduced this particular motion because, quite honestly, for the most part, again, he has no idea how the system operates and is attempting to only score cheap political points, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have a list of approximately 18 members, and the following six will be recognized immediately: the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the Minister of Aboriginal Relations, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, then the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, then the Minister of Municipal Affairs, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'll start just by trying to raise the spirit a little bit here. My initial intention last Monday morning was to actually work with the government and to help advance the public interest in obtaining vaccines, and that's the spirit in which I went to the clinic on Monday morning. I think it's regrettable that the minister of health and other members here are somehow holding that against me. I saw the extensive lineup, and I didn't stay. It was pretty apparent immediately that there were problems. But like everybody, I'll assume, in this Assembly we in the end want this to work out.

I'm going to just cover a few key points here. I'm going to begin with what are for me among the many dozens of e-mails and phone calls I've received on this issue in the last week, some of the most heart-wrenching, and those are coming from cancer patients. I had an e-mail Thursday or Friday in which the subject title read: Please Help My Sister. It came to me from a woman living in a smaller town in Alberta who was pleading on behalf of her sister here in Edmonton who was in cancer treatment, and her immune system was compromised. She was unable to stand in line, and she was unable to get the vaccine because no provisions had been made for cancer patients.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

As things turn out, she's not alone. I have had other people contact me, including people phoning me at home on the weekend yesterday in something of a panic. For example, in one case a constituent of mine scheduled for chemotherapy the day after tomorrow – he's in the midst of a series of chemotherapy treatments – had been told that the only day in which his system would be able to absorb the effects of the vaccine was today. When they announced yesterday that there would be no clinics open today, his family and he were, frankly, frightened. I think it's shocking, and I would urge the minister, please, to pay attention to ensure that special provisions are made for cancer patients so that when their systems are able to accept the vaccine safely, that vaccine is provided.

3:30

It's hard for me to believe that we are at this point, with a supposedly sophisticated health care system, where that kind of provision was never made and those cancer patients were not thought about. I've heard a similar account about a child with leukemia in Lethbridge who is having difficulty getting the vaccine. I just think that we have really, really dropped the ball with cancer patients, so I would plead to the minister and urge the minister to make sure that there are special provisions for cancer patients in the plan that gets rolled out tomorrow.

The second point I would raise is one I raised last week, and that's the development of an ethics framework for what we hope will never happen but could happen, and that's a situation in which there are not enough resources to look after all people requiring critical care. This kind of situation has come close to occurring in the United States and could occur here if we get into an extreme position. My information is that while there is reference to developing an ethics decision-making framework in the pandemic plan – I've read that – there is, in fact, no ethics framework in place.

Just so people understand how serious this is, imagine a situation in which 10 patients require ventilators and there are only five ventilators. Who gets the treatment, and who doesn't? What's the basis of that decision? These are very real issues. Can you discriminate, for example, Mr. Speaker, in that situation on the basis of age? On the basis of disability? On the basis of ethnic background? Can you discriminate on the basis of survival possibilities? What are the frameworks by which people will make those decisions? Those things need to be laid out. They need to be thought through, finalized, and made public in advance. As controversial and difficult as that is, it has been done elsewhere, and I recommend to all members of this Assembly and, frankly, to all Albertans a document put out by Hamilton Health Sciences in Ontario addressing specifically this. I tabled copies of it last Thursday. So, Mr. Minister, please get your department finalizing that ethics framework, and when it's done, please make it public.

My third point is around surge capacity. I have been warning this government for years that it has created a health care system in which there is no surge capacity. There is literally no capacity for something as serious as a major bus crash or a major plane crash, much less a pandemic. In fact, a couple of weeks ago I was in a meeting with doctors where this topic came up. They were telling a story in which two or three years ago they were put on notice to prepare for the possibility of a huge influx of patients because a passenger jet in the area was in some crisis. Well, luckily the passenger jet landed safely, but the doctors were saying: "There was nothing we could do. We didn't have a bed available. We didn't have the equipment. There was nothing available."

Now, Mr. Speaker, it's important for people here who don't know that historically the ideal operating rate of a hospital is about 85 per cent so that on any given day you would have about 15 per cent spare capacity. That allows for all kinds of absorbing of challenges in the system, but, most importantly, it allows for dealing with a genuine major emergency like a pandemic.

Well, Mr. Speaker, it's been more than a decade since the major hospitals in Alberta had anything close to a 15 per cent surge capacity. In fact, as we've often heard in this Assembly, they routinely operate without a single spare bed. So we need to address that. We can address that through permanent measures like reopening the empty beds at the Peter Lougheed hospital and other hospitals. We can do it through interim measures like a pandemic tent, which potentially could be very helpful. Ultimately, we need a long-term solution to this. We need to rebuild the capacity of our health care system so that it can provide necessary services at times of major emergencies.

The fourth point I'd like to make, Mr. Speaker – and I hope the minister and his officials are paying attention – is that given the situation we've got with lineups, let's at least make the best of what's not a very good situation. What do I mean by that? Well, how about providing chairs for people to sit in? If we have a lineup, and we know there's going to be a long lineup, then, you know, let's dip into the sustainability fund or the emergency fund somewhere and rent some chairs and put them at the clinics so that our women and children and seniors and so on who are expected to stand for hours can actually sit. You know, that would help people. That's a simple gesture that would help people.

How about looking for ways to shelter people from the weather? We've been very lucky. Last week was relatively mild, but this is Alberta, and that could change any given day. Many of these lineups are occurring out of doors. I think it's time that we took some serious consideration to provide some shelter for people.

Those kinds of simple gestures can mean so much. I think this government could probably find it somewhere to find some chairs, maybe put up some urns of coffee, and turn this into something a little bit more humane.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to conclude my comments by reflecting on what I see as the underlying causes of these problems. As much as we've heard that there are problems in other provinces – and in some provinces there are – there are a number of provinces where this has gone really smoothly, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and B.C. being three examples. They have proceeded by targeting high-risk groups at the beginning, and they have succeeded extremely well. They've avoided the long lineups. They've had a much higher uptake of high-risk groups. They've targeted aboriginals. They've targeted patients in hospitals. They've targeted health care workers.

So how did we end up in this situation? Well, my belief, Mr. Speaker, is that the problems we have here are a symptom of Alberta Health Services' being in general turmoil, of a situation in which effectively the executive head of this organization was cut off. That was done when the regional health authorities were disbanded, and the cancer board was disbanded, and so on. We have great front-line workers – we'd all agree with that – but the system itself is in chaos.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to all members for allowing this debate to proceed. I want to make some comments primarily from the standpoint of being the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. I believe the minister of health has covered a number of issues that pertain to Albertans in general, so I will try as much as possible to reflect what I believe is happening and is of importance to our aboriginal clientele in Alberta.

I want to begin, first of all, by saying that while I support the gist of the motion, I am a little disappointed with some of the inflammatory wording in it. To suggest that the government of Alberta was inadequately prepared for the pandemic is to somehow suggest that we had some crystal ball in knowing exactly what this strain was supposed to be all about and that we could somehow persuade the provider, GlaxoSmithKline, the people who are making the vaccine, that we had some way of impacting how much of it to make, when and where, and so on, and that's simply not the case.

I believe that what we're doing here today, Mr. Speaker, is of a positive nature nonetheless. I say that because while we wait for additional vaccine to be provided to this province, as every province is waiting, there are some things that we could focus on in the interim to help stop the spread of it and to help stop the fearmongering that sometimes accompanies things like this. I'm not suggesting for a moment that this is intended to diminish the importance of the issue; it certainly is in fact intended to elevate the importance of it. But it's important that we not panic at this time and that we send out messages of things being addressed as quickly as possible given the circumstances that confront us today. There is little purpose in pointing fingers at anybody or in accusing anyone with blame. Rather, I think we need to focus on the fact that as vaccine comes available, it's going to be distributed as quickly as possible, just like it was last week, to the rest of the province so that everybody who wants this vaccination can have direct access to it. That includes the aboriginal population.

Mr. Speaker, in that respect my ministry is an integral part of a very intensive rollout and a co-ordinated effort to monitor this situation closely and to help ensure that aboriginal people in Alberta, regardless of where they live – on reserve, on settlement, or off reserve, off settlement in our communities – receive the information, the care, the supplies, and the services that they want. We identified that First Nations, Métis, and Inuit people in the province of Alberta are important populations to focus on, and we base that decision on the experience that we had with the first wave of H1N1 back in the spring.

Alberta's plan for pandemic influenza is for all Albertans – let's be clear – and that includes First Nations, Métis, and Inuit populations living here. The aboriginal communities pandemic influenza liaison committee has been established. It meets weekly. This is essentially a subgroup that's been established to provide a forum for discussing the specifics for Métis people, for example, living in Alberta. I should stress that given that 50 per cent of Alberta's aboriginal population is less than 24 years of age, of additional concern is the number of very serious cases appearing in young people in both the previously healthy and in those with pre-existing medical conditions.

Planning for H1N1 influenza pandemic involves many partners to complete the planning. We've worked very closely with Alberta Health and Wellness, with Alberta Health Services, with the Public Health Agency of Canada, with Health Canada officials to ensure as smooth a rollout and as smooth a provision of vaccines as could possibly be undertaken. We've worked with the chief medical officers of health. We've worked with the lead responders within their staff branches to ensure that the positive messaging on what to do to prevent this further spread while we wait for vaccinations has occurred.

As part of that comprehensive and multisector, multiplanning structure Alberta Health Services and Alberta Health and Wellness have created a specific forum to address more specifically the needs of aboriginal people in Alberta through the committee that I just mentioned and through other strategies to mitigate risks and to minimize any further complications. In fact, the recently released federal immunization priority list identified aboriginal populations as a priority group. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that when the minister rolls out his plan with the medical health officers tomorrow, the new plan, we will see some very concrete ideas on how they're going to go about dealing with the completion of the phenomenally successful program of last week.

You know, Mr. Speaker, when I was the associate minister of health in 1999, 2000, and 2001, I can recall going to provincial, federal, and territorial ministers meetings when we talked about the next pandemic. I'll confess to you that it was a little bit confusing at the time to hear people in 1999 planning for a pandemic that they had no idea what it was going to be about or what the strain was going to look like or what the virus was going to be like, but that it was going to happen within five years. That was a little bit confusing. But let's make no mistake about it. The fact is that you don't know what the strain is going to be. All you know is that on average about every five years there is some type of pandemic or a pandemic scare.

That's precisely where we are today: 1999 to 2004, 2004 to 2009. As we're solving this particular dilemma that's before us today, we're already, I am sure, in health circles across the country looking at what the pandemic will be five years down the line. But you cannot – you cannot – prepare enough vaccine that far in advance.

You don't know what the strain of the virus is going to be. You don't know, as a result, what the shelf life of that medicine is going to be. You don't know how quickly you're going to reproduce it. You don't know how it's going to ramify and how it's going to affect different population groups and different population ages. Those factors are simply unknowns. I want to congratulate the people at GlaxoSmithKline for having done a pretty incredible job of providing as much vaccine as quickly as possible and for helping us in Alberta get it a week earlier than we were anticipating. That's good news.

To the people who have been standing in line, I want to express our sincere apology once again. I'm truly sorry that that happened, that there were long lineups and there were long waiting lists. That is unfortunate. I'm also sorry that a number of people were not able to get in at all after having waited a long time. But that's not specific to Alberta. If you take a look at what's happening elsewhere, you will find that these lineups are occurring in those provinces as well. I say that because I was having some informal chats with other ministers last week when I was in Toronto for the meeting of federal-provincial-territorial and aboriginal ministers and/or leaders when we met to talk about a number of issues pertaining to the aboriginal community. There was no one that was immune to the lineups to some degree.

I want to applaud the medical experts, the people who have designed the program and had the successes that they had last week. I know they will recognize that things could have gone better, obviously. Hindsight is so perfect all the time. This is a national vaccine shortage. That's what this is.

Last week I assured First Nations on reserve that we were working hard on their behalf to ensure they had adequate supplies. I'm happy that all 47 First Nations in this province received the vaccine, and they rolled out as quickly as they could as much of it as possible. I'm happy that there's a specific plan in place, which now, obviously, will be modified tomorrow, to help Métis settlements. The Elizabeth Métis settlement had a clinic on October 27. The Fishing Lake Métis settlement had a clinic that started on October 28. The Buffalo Lake Métis settlement had one that started on October 29. The plan was for the remaining settlements to start as early as Thursday or Friday of this week and continue on next week. That would be the Kikino Métis settlement, the Paddle Prairie Métis settlement, the Gift Lake Métis settlement, the Peavine Métis settlement, and the East Prairie Métis settlement. So those plans were in place. I know they will now need to be modified because of the quick take-up of the vaccine that was provided to us.

I don't want people to leave their listening and watching of the day to feel insecure or to feel in some way threatened. That is not to undermine anything that's been said to date in terms of the critical importance. I do want people to have a sense that we are doing the very best we can but that we're reliant on the supply. We're totally reliant on the supply. We have people in place. We have locations in place. I could list you 15 or 20 different locations in the north half of the province just within about a 150- to 200-mile radius where this is happening and will occur.

So thank you, and please let's be patient and work our way through this as positively as we can.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do feel that it's very important that we take the time today to have a little more debate on this subject of the H1N1 pandemic. It's been very discouraging for the people that have been calling me in my constituency. I heard from some seniors on the weekend that, again, they opened up a new clinic, and the accessibility was unbelievable, how far they had to park and walk in order to get there.

I want to back up here and talk about all the planning that has gone on. It hasn't been in depth enough to really look at the whole situation. Again, probably the most concerning thing, that has been brought up by the good Member for Edmonton-Riverview as well as all the others, is the fact that so many people are having to stand outside and wait. The number of people that are having to stand outside is not acceptable, and I hope that is going to be addressed tomorrow. We need to look at different facilities and where we're going to have these people come in. This is Alberta, and it is critical that they are in areas that enable people to come in, whether it's school gyms, whether it's such places as conference centres, downtown exhibition grounds. We need to really address this going in there.

The other thing that I'm concerned about, that we seem to be missing in the debate, is a prioritization. We've heard of the first three, but what are we going to do after the young children have been vaccinated, those people with health risks? What's next on the list? Albertans need to be informed in realizing that. Some of the concerns that I've heard: I've had teachers that are teaching elementary school and are not able to get out to receive their vaccination because they're at work and they can't get there. I think we need to really focus on that area of young children and who they're exposed to in the areas they're at and to realize how we get that vaccination there. It would just be prudent, I think, for a health person, especially out in some of the smaller areas, to be able to go to these different schools and ensure that the teachers are vaccinated so that they're not exposed because we can't afford to have our teachers go down along with the students and be in there. I think that we need to realize those things. Daycare workers: have they been contacted? Is there a situation ready to touch the daycare workers?

Most important of all, though, is there a plan in place, and are they ready to mobilize into a hotbed where the pandemic could reach an unparalleled level, where they can't reach them? Are they ready? They need to start informing Albertans. I believe also, again from Edmonton-Riverview, that a very important part is the ethics framework. It hasn't been addressed. It needs to be addressed, and Albertans need to know and understand these things. We need to make it public. It's incredibly important that the public is informed.

Another one of the things that's very frustrating – and I think that Alberta Health Services needs to do a better job – is to really let people know because of the rumours now when someone passes away: oh, it was H1N1. It's immediately put onto this area that “Oh, this has happened” only to find out three or four days later that it wasn't so. I think they need to be on top and in front of information on what's happening during this pandemic so that the fear doesn't spread and get out of control.

There are many areas that we need to be concerned. I think that they need to publicize. It was good to hear from the minister, and maybe I've just missed it with all of the news, that we have 180,000 doses – how are those going to be broken up and spread around the province? – and to realize there are 50,000 more coming in. I think this is important information that needs to be presented to Albertans so they understand the situation. Then when we understand, the frustration level isn't so high.

There are just so many areas, Mr. Speaker, where we need to a better job of prioritizing, we need to do a better job of planning, and then we need to do a better job of educating and informing in those areas so that people do understand the ethics and the decisions that are being made and why they're going forward. I think it's most important that it needs to be raised to a nonpartisan level. We don't need the hits back and forth attacking individuals or this or that. Let's look at the problems, let's address them clearly, and let's have some solutions rather than the nitpicking and pointing out that this has gone wrong or that's gone wrong. It has happened. There's been incompetence on many levels, it seems like. Like I say, even such things as realizing where people can park to be covered from the weather because that's going to be our next major problem. The weather is going to change. Have we planned to look at moving into better facilities that will enable people in a more comfortable way to receive it?

Another area that also hasn't been addressed – maybe it will be going forward – is when you go into an emergency and you have the triage nurse that lines people up. I don't understand for the life of me why they haven't taken people out and moved them ahead and formed two lines, just like in emergency, or three lines, and said, you know, "Here's young people, here's pregnant mothers, here's people at health risk," and actually know that. So when people arrive there, they can realize that these two lines are going first, this is the third line, and if, in fact, they hit those high-risk people first, then we'll be able to be touched. There were so many people that showed up that weren't high risk standing in line and forcing those who were high risk to not get there. Just how can you be there giving those shots, realizing how many people have come through that haven't been asked? Ask the people.

I don't expect the member, or any member, to be there doing the triage, but there are some simple screening questions that could be asked, and then people could move quickly along and get through. It might be as simple as the fact that, you know: "I need to get mine done because my children are coming home at 4 o'clock. I've got to be there in order for them to have someone at home when they arrive." There are multiple questions. We need to do a proper assessment. We need to do better planning. Like I say, we need to be looking at better facilities where people can go. What's the access? Can they use public transportation? Do they have to walk a kilometre to get there? Is it going to be outside if the weather turns?

All of these areas need to be addressed, need to be made public and the people of Alberta told why they're making these decisions, to not just seem haphazardly to be thrown out and each week changing, looking back with 20/20 hindsight as the minister talks about. Well, maybe we do need to be using some 20/20 hindsight because the best way to predict the future is by looking at the past. They fail to be looking at the past and seem to be giving excuses, saying, "Oh, we couldn't plan for this; we couldn't plan for that" although many things could and should have been planned for. Let's make sure we have it right going forward.

I'll step down at this time and listen to the other good members for their ideas on how to set this forth to treat the people of Alberta.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, followed by the Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the Minister of Municipal Affairs, followed by the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to enter this important debate and advise the House of the actions of my ministry. As I said last week, homeless shelters do face special challenges as they work to minimize the spread of the H1N1 virus. As members may know, Alberta has 30 shelters located across the province in all of our major cities and in many of our smaller cities. These shelters are home to some of our most vulnerable people, people who don't fit into any one demographic but have one thing in common: they have nowhere permanent to stay, so they live on the street.

Homeless people come from all walks of life, Mr. Speaker. Many have jobs, some haven't worked in years, some are addicts, some have debilitating mental illness, many have multiple and serious health conditions and often are chronically ill. All are extremely vulnerable to disease. They sleep in very close quarters at the shelter, and when they do fall ill, they typically become much sicker than healthy people do. So you can see why it's so critical to prevent this virus from getting a serious hold on one of our most vulnerable populations.

I want to speak to the absolute nonsense that I heard in this Assembly last week, and it was from the opposition, Mr. Speaker. That nonsense was all about that we had no plan to protect the homeless or to protect some of our most vulnerable people. In speaking to that, I hope that you listen carefully because there was a lot of work done to assist people that are homeless and people that need protection. That good work was done by our shelter advisers, our shelter operators, working closely with Alberta Health and Wellness and working closely with Alberta Health Services. That considerable work began over the past several months to prepare for the second wave of H1N1, that we knew was coming this fall.

Mr. Speaker, through that work an H1N1 planning guide, the operational planning guide, was developed. Importantly, there was a specific portion of that that dealt with vulnerable populations, and that meant our homeless population as well as included in that. This planning guide was reviewed. It was revised with shelter operators last month. It was created in a way that allowed shelter operators to use their experience, their knowledge, their skills, and their resources for managing contagious disease. They have incredible knowledge. I can tell you from the shelters that I have visited over the past week, which have been a number, that people felt by the debate that was occurring that people were second-guessing the knowledge that they had at the shelters and the experience in how they would be handling the H1N1 virus. That experience, as they shared with me, included managing TB, the Norwalk virus. I mean, the drop-in centre said they had 185 people that contracted the Norwalk virus. They kept them at the shelter, handled it very well as with other communicable diseases.

They do this on a regular basis, Mr. Speaker, in caring for people at shelters that have been ill. So the provincial pandemic guide for vulnerable populations built on this experience, and it identified the critical issues that we needed to plan for this virus. They developed a communications distribution plan for service providers, and they ensured that they had access to appropriate educational materials and procedures. Most importantly, as I said, my ministry worked with Alberta Health Services to develop a strategy for the immunization of both the sheltered and the unsheltered homeless populations and the staff from homeless-serving agencies.

Alberta Health Services officials met with the organizations. They ensured that their site plans were accurate and that they would meet the need that they saw coming into each shelter because each shelter in each municipality is completely different. That included how to treat the homeless at the shelters, that it was going to be appropriate and that it was going to be effective. They also met to ensure that a sufficient supply of medical supplies was in place at each shelter. These meetings were extremely productive. In fact, one outcome was agreement between the shelters to work co-operatively to leverage the services and the supports among the shelters.

When I said about it being appropriate, I mean, everyone here as well has talked about handwashing, ensuring that people are washing their hands on a continual basis. I can tell you that at the shelters, when you enter a shelter, that's a resource that they're using.

Yes, they're sharing the pamphlet information, et cetera, with people that are homeless, but you can imagine how extremely difficult it is to have people that are entering the shelter follow through with just a generic pandemic planning guide, which is why the homeless were included in this guide. I know the tremendous work that's been done, and I'm going to ask that people here in this Assembly actually thank the shelter operators and thank the shelter advisers for the good work that they've done in protecting our most vulnerable people.

Flu clinics. We had a question about that last week as well, that there weren't any clinics that were being held at shelters. I can tell you that they've been held across the province over the past week. They've been held in Edmonton, Calgary, High Level, Fort McMurray, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge. A clinic was held just recently at the Hope Mission here in Edmonton on Friday, the Calgary drop-in centre. It's very orderly. As I said, the various shelters are protecting our most vulnerable people.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, tomorrow when they roll out the new plan in protecting the vulnerable people that they've identified, as they move forward with this, I'm hoping that people will support that plan, that they'll recognize, just as the Minister of Health and Wellness said, you know, that we're pausing and looking at how we move in the future. It really does have to do with the resources that are available. That resource, of course, is the vaccine and how it can be distributed as we move forward. I know that that will include the clinics and our shelters as well continuing to operate along with that rollout.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise on the emergency debate on pandemic influenza. There are three key issues that I have with the way this plan has rolled out, and I've been raising them in the House and out. They revolve around communication, resources, and ensuring that hospitals are capable of managing the extra demands.

On the issue of communications what is needed, clearly, is to reduce the level of fear by having a communicated plan and demonstrating on the ground that you can deliver on the plan. Neither of those were, unfortunately, provided to the public, so we did indeed have consistent anxiety and overreaction to the offer of vaccination. That plan has to be based on good science and ethical guidelines, which have been part of the pandemic plan for as long as I've ever been involved in it, which is over a decade. It focuses first on those at risk. There's no question about that. Other provinces followed that. For some reason we didn't.

The second key issue, then, is ensuring that we have the resources to deliver the vaccine in an efficient and effective way by professionals. Again, we tried to save money and go cheap on this program and had only five in Edmonton and four in Calgary when we could have had many more settings to provide the service, especially if we'd called on retired and student resources that should have been called on until we had the several hundred thousand high-risk people that need it first.

The third has to do with hospitals and having the capacity to respond to the extra demands in emergency departments, in waiting areas, in beds, and in intensive care units. We have cut the service to the bone, and it's clear that there is no capacity for dealing with the extra demands that are coming with this pandemic. In spite of lots of warning, lots of heads-up, this government chose to continue its freeze and cost-cutting measures at the expense of our most vulnerable populations.

The statement I issued early on in the pandemic indicated that the target of all vaccination programs is to get at least 80 per cent of the population vaccinated. There's no question that the cut-off when people start to be protected and the transmission of an infectious agent starts to go down is when we get over 80 per cent of the population covered. That does not negate the priority that high-risk individuals should take in any vaccination program, and to confuse the two from my statement on pandemic is really unfortunate.

I also have three letters here from citizens who wanted to be known in the public by their letters of concern. John Jessiman from Calgary writes:

At 10:15 AM . . . I was turned away from the old [Alberta Children's hospital], as were countless others, by a couple of stressed [emergency medical technicians] (their ambulance idling by the door) in an attempt to line up for the H1N1 vaccination for my daughter, Kathleen, since she is advised by her family physician to get the shot, before having to enter hospital December 4.

At that time, I was informed by the paramedics doing "door duty" that there would be a nine hour delay for me if I were allowed [at all] inside. All the other clinics in Calgary are similarly oversubscribed and closed today as of sometime before I was turned away. There are reports that people with [serious] symptoms . . . were made to wait outside the other side to the old [Children's hospital] until . . . 8:00 AM . . . while perfectly well people were allowed to wait inside . . .

I have to ask, what if all these people were actually ill with [this] mutated . . . virus. Do the . . . conservatives have enough coffins on order? This is a gong show, from this man's point of view.

I woke up the other day with the thought that the current government of Alberta is extremely reminiscent of the So-cred's when my family moved here in 1966: imperious, detached, and oblivious.

They should resign in embarrassment; they've transported us to the third world.

I hope some of this will be helpful to hammer these . . . bums. A second one from Monika Rieger, also from Calgary.

I thought you should be aware of a situation here in Calgary . . .

The groups allowed to go to the clinic at the Oval are: pregnant women, young children, seniors and family members accompanying anyone in those groups.

Notice that disabled people are specifically NOT included in those groups. And yet, there are many who are not seniors but have equal difficulty standing/waiting in the long lineups . . . I am such a person. As well, I am in the high risk group (because of lung illnesses) who should be getting the vaccine as soon as possible.

I have tried to contact my MLA and Alberta Health Services and have had no response from either one. At the moment, the Deputy Medical Officer's staff is trying to get an answer for me as to why [I was excluded.]

Please email or phone me if you would like more information [and] . . . use my case in the Legislature or anywhere else to put pressure on the government and/or Alberta Health Services about this issue.

The third one is from Karen Bose.

I'm sure I am not the only unsatisfied Albertan with the way Alberta Health Services has conducted the . . . clinics. It is a glaring example of mismanagement, inefficiency, and short sightedness. I am an asthmatic, and all three of my young children are severely asthmatic. We are the definition of high risk. We have not been able to get near a vaccination clinic because of the horrendous lineups. These clinics should have been designed to target just the high risk populations first. Why was this not done?

And she goes on.

I guess the final question that all Albertans are asking is: why, with hundreds of thousands of doses still available, have we shut down clinics when we have vulnerable people remaining and health care workers that still could benefit from this and are being exposed today, as they were yesterday, as they will be tomorrow, because of delays in getting the essential service that is there, and people are willing to give it, but this government has stopped the clinics for some unknown reason?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

4:10

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, the comments that have just been raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition definitely bring me, if I can say, the energy to speak.

Mr. Speaker, whether it's the government or whether it's the opposition, we have some responsibility. This is not a House that should be spreading fear. This should be a House of reason. This is not the avenue for scare tactics and political advantage. Our government is guided by a pandemic plan which is flexible and scalable. The Alberta Emergency Management Agency is currently supporting Alberta Health and Wellness as it takes action under the pandemic plan. This plan was not developed today. We have been working on this plan for three years. We've been working on this plan as a cross-ministry, with many ministries involved. This needs to be adaptable. Why? Because every situation is different.

We are providing updated and timely information to our partners, whether it's municipalities, First Nations, Métis settlements, and other government ministries. Mr. Speaker, we are prepared to co-ordinate and support a response to this pandemic, whether it remains mild, as it is now, or whether it becomes more serious. The safety and security of Albertans is an essential priority of this government and our Premier.

Shortly after our Premier became Premier, he created the Alberta Emergency Management Agency. The agency's mandate is to support communities and industry before, during, and after emergencies. When any emergency occurs, be it a pandemic, a flood, or a fire, agency staff are there to assist and inform. The agency collects and shares timely information. This helps us all to work together and share resources to respond to emergency events. Mr. Speaker, let me repeat: this helps us all to work together. This House should be working together. Everything we do as a government focuses on co-operation and collaboration. This philosophy shapes my ministry in everything we do. Together we will continue to build safe and strong communities that our families, our friends, our neighbours, and our sisters would want and deserve.

I want to thank the front-line health workers for their tireless efforts in administering the H1N1 vaccine to Albertans. As has been described many times today, 400,000 Albertans have been vaccinated so far. There is no doubt that that is due to the efforts of dedicated public servants. I applaud their professionalism and dedication in ensuring that Albertans are safe.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to add some of my comments to this debate flowing from Standing Order 30 requesting an emergency debate on the government's preparation for H1N1. This is of great interest to me because, as some members of the House may know, I spent the greater part of September going out and making presentations on the work that I've done as their member to all of the seniors' residences and activity centres in my constituency.

Of course, one of the things that I made sure to talk about – I actually did up a special brochure – was preparation for H1N1. I was primarily concentrating on the fact that in Alberta we have not had a major crisis, in memory, where people might be ill in their homes and others couldn't reach them or couldn't reach them for a period of time. There could be some additional problems. The way I was explaining it was, you know, in Quebec they had the ice storm; in Ontario they had SARS. There are places in Canada that are a little better prepared to deal with this on a sort of personal basis.

I was urging my seniors and, indeed, my constituents to take reasonable precautions, the whole thing about the handwashing and the use of the sanitizers, that sort of thing, but also to not panic but do plan on how they could prepare their home, make sure they had food supplies and supplies for their pets and that they had some additional things that may be helpful, masks and gloves and water and things like that in their home, in case they were sick for a period of time and there was possibly a lag in others being able to come and assist them. I was trying to get people to kind of use their common sense, not to panic but to make arrangements so that they could be as comfortable as possible.

I actually didn't talk at all about, you know, whether they'd be first in line or last in line for an inoculation for a vaccine because I didn't know. So I actually didn't talk about that part.

If I may offer my advice to members of the House as well, please don't panic, but please do plan, and I think we'll all be a little farther ahead.

The second thing I did was that I phoned around to some of my contacts in the federal government and anybody else I could find that might have been working on pandemic planning because I wasn't getting a sense from the government of what was going on. I've got to say here, folks: you guys are becoming so hypersensitive about security and any information leaking out that you're doing yourself a disservice in this area and in a number of other ones. I couldn't readily get a good feel for where the government was in its pandemic planning, so I asked around, and the response I got was: well, they're doing not too badly. I mean, it's not a flat-out disaster, and I was glad to hear that.

The two exceptions were that there were problems in the system because of the chaos created by the constant restructuring in the health system and that that was having some fallout, and the second area that I was advised to look for was surge capacity. I would argue that that continues to be a critical area where I'm not getting a sense from the government that that is well under control. When I use my common sense and look at, you know, the news reports, when I look at the number of code reds, I look at what people are saying in the media, I look at what people are saying that work in the hospitals, we don't have a lot of surge capacity, and I don't know how big our need for that surge capacity may be. I mean, at one point they were talking about 15 per cent of the people that got H1N1 would die when the average is more like 6 per cent. I don't have a sense of that. But I also don't have a really clear sense of where this government is on that surge capacity.

I'm noticing that in this debate there is a reluctance from – and maybe there's a reason for that. Maybe government members are feeling a little defensive about what's been coming at them around this. To be fair, I don't think that reflecting on what people have said to us should be taken as a personal attack by members of the government, but it is reflective of how the public is feeling or at least how certain people in the public are feeling. So when this debate started, I went out and phoned my office and said: please bring over a couple of the e-mails that we've received that we can verify are from constituents of Edmonton-Centre. I still get ones from across Alberta, and I'm sure you'd like to deal with your own people, and I'm happy to send those back to you. But these are from Edmonton-Centre, and I will table these at the appropriate time tomorrow.

One woman, Ann Campbell, notes, "Why [were] the at-risk people not handled on a priority basis?" Well, my friends, that's a question that's been asked by an awful lot of people. The government made a choice to open it up and say: please be considerate; at-risk people should go to the front of the line, but we're not going to police it. It was a choice they made. People are interested in why that choice was made. Indeed, Ann is asking that question. She also asks:

Why is vaccine not being made available through the primary care networks where many of those with chronic disease are registered and attend?

And, I would add, attend regularly.

Why are the clinics that have been established under staffed? How many dollars have been spent on pandemic planning?

All of those, I think, are pretty reasonable questions and should be aired and asked, especially in a forum like this.

4:20

I also have a question from Victoria Stevens. She says that there's a sheer terror that the media and our government has been feeding them. Yesterday, the clinics were shut down due to a shortage of the vaccine, this after the government assured Albertans that there would be enough for everyone.

So there is confusion out there, and it would be helpful if the government could be more open in sharing some of that information for people because I think they're genuinely seeking it. She also asks:

Why did the government change their minds? Why did the government decide that allowing the masses to take over is better than making sure our most vulnerable are taken care of? And why is the government pushing this vaccine so forcefully on all Canadians?

I'm assuming she's asking why there's been such a campaign to get the uptake on H1N1, but then clearly she prefers that people should be in a priority lineup, and she names them: "pregnant women, children under . . . five, aboriginal peoples, and people with underlying severe health problems."

The other thing that I will say just by way of a hopeful statement is that one of the schools in my constituency was one of the ones that had an outbreak in the first round of H1N1, an absolutely devastating thing to happen to a school, as you can imagine. They had to close the school. They had to admit that they had a child in the school who had tested positive. They had to clean the school. If you can imagine if they said to us here today: "Sorry, but if there's H1N1 in this building, everybody get out your rubber gloves. Here are the bleach wipes. Go to it. Scrub down the walls, every door, every telephone, every armrest on every chair." That's what that staff had to go through at that school. They did it with great good humour.

Here they are six months later, and they have had no further outbreaks in that school. They went to an extraordinary length to be able to deal with it, and they really pulled together to do it. That school is Grandin school, and I am so proud of that school. It's a small school, but boy do they have spirit. They're led by a fabulous principal, Reny, and he and his staff really did a marvellous job with that. So there is life after H1N1 as they well show to us, and by pulling together, they got through all of that.

The last thing I want to mention and to recognize is, in fact, the work that has been done by many of the front-line workers. Again, as part of coming into session, I had gone out and met with a number of the not-for-profit groups that work in Edmonton-Centre. As you know, we have a lot of them because there's a lot of service provision through that sector delivering either contracted work for the government or charitable work.

You know, all the shelters are in downtown Edmonton in my riding, a lot of the missions, the church groups that offer support, the soup kitchens, and groups like that but also organizations like the Boyle Street Co-op. They were certainly watching this and waiting and planning. They were worried, and they were looking for information at the same time, but of course they're going to do a good job. They're looking after people who are extremely vulnerable, and the staff there know it. Again, they were trying to get out ahead of this and get as much information as they could ahead of this so they could prepare as much as possible for the protection of their own staff but also the protection of the clients and people that come to them.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood for asking leave to have this very important conversation. While I may not necessarily agree with all the wording, I would agree with the intent, that this is a very important issue that affects all of us in our society. Now, I'd also like to thank all of my colleagues in this Legislature for their unanimity in agreement with the hon. member to have this discussion.

I'd just like to talk to you just to explain to everybody about pandemics and H1N1. Now, to put everything into perspective, years ago we had the SARS that had hit the world, and that caused a lot of fear across the world. That's when all these pandemic plans were implemented. The planning began all across the nation in all the hospitals and all the health regions and provinces. Then there was H5N1. H5N1 was this scary bug that we all worried about because it truly has anywhere between 10 to 20 per cent death rate.

H1N1. We didn't know much about this when it first struck. You'd watch CNN and see Dr. Sanjay Gupta running through stairwells of hotels. We didn't know what was happening. As we gained more evidence and more data, this is what we do know about H1N1, to put it into perspective not only for my friends here in the Legislative Assembly but also for all Albertans.

Regularly every year we expect about 4,000 to 5,000 Canadians to die from the regular influenza flu, and that's tragic. Those people are usually the very young and the very old. With H1N1, from the Australian experience we've learned – we have the fortune of having our winter after theirs – that assuming nobody was vaccinated in this province, we would expect about 875,000 Albertans to contract the H1N1 influenza. The challenge there is that nobody has immunity at this point in time unless you were born before 1918. Of those, we expect 400 deaths – 400 deaths – assuming nobody was vaccinated in this province. We will have a large number of people who will get quite sick and require hospitalizations. So 875,000 are expected to get the flu. A few thousand are expected to get sick and have to be hospitalized. Of those, 400 are expected not to survive.

Now, what we really need to concentrate on is, number one, prevention: the importance of handwashing and maintaining your distance from people who are sick and, if you are sick, to stay home and to decrease transmission of the virus.

Number two, the vaccination programs. This is the largest mass vaccination program in this nation. I do have to apologize to all those folks who waited for so many hours and weren't able to get the vaccine. I am, however, very happy that we were able to roll out 400,000 vaccinations in a very short period of time very efficiently. Now, the challenge is that our supply of vaccine is not fully there as we had expected.

Now, of those 400 deaths there are a number of people who are identified as high risk: those between the ages of six months and five years; pregnant mothers; those with chronic medical conditions, who have diabetes, heart disease, lung disease, neurological disease, who are on immunosuppressant drugs; many members of our remote aboriginal communities; and many members of our society who have morbid obesity. I am aware that right now today we have 16 confirmed cases in intensive care units on ventilators. I'm also aware that there are a few 23- and 26-year-olds and 50-year-olds who have no risk factors who also are on ventilators.

We still have 3.2 million people to vaccinate, Mr. Speaker. We're very early in this. I'm glad this is an emergency debate. As an emergency doctor when these things happen, we always ask for calm. We all need to just calm down a little bit. We have a lot of work to do. We have a long way to go. We have 3.2 million people, I'd like to repeat, still to vaccinate. For any vaccination program to be successful, there is something that we call herd immunity. My neighbour here may not be at high risk, but they may have a family member at home who is high risk. To get herd immunity we need 60 per cent of the members of our society to get vaccinated. I'm thankful to the members of the opposition that they agree with the vaccination program because there are many people out there who don't agree with vaccinations.

Now, the peak of the flu is expected in about six weeks' time, and we'll have another wave in January or February. Today is not the peak of the flu season.

On the vaccination program there is something called an adjuvant. An adjuvant is really an oily substance that they place in your arm. It helps to maintain the vaccine in that location for a longer time so we get a better immune response, and we only need to use one-quarter of the vaccine. You're getting a better response with one-quarter of the vaccine. We've been able with the adjuvant to stretch our vaccine supply fourfold. The challenge recently with the supply is that because of the uncertainty and concern over pregnant women, they're designing a special dose just for pregnant mothers, and they've had to put production of the vaccine on hold.

So I ask all Albertans, number one, to wash your hands before you eat, to wash them regularly, and if you're sick, to stay home. Now, of those patients who do get sick, if you're a high-risk Albertan, you need to see your health care provider. We have a treatment for the flu. You need to get that treatment, preferably within 48 hours. We can stretch it to 72 but preferably within 48.

Secondly, of those Albertans who get very sick, the initial symptoms will be sore muscles, aches and pains, cough, loss of appetite, fatigue – that's normal when you get the flu – but if you've got chest pain, shortness of breath, or signs of significant dehydration, if you're feeling faint or just really sick, you need to see a health care worker because, one, we need to get you some fluids, some rehydration, we need to assess your vitals, and we need to get you this medicine for treatment if you do get very sick from H1N1.

For the vast majority of Albertans – I don't have the exact number, but it's in the 90 per cent range and then some – most patients will be absolutely fine. They will be sick from the flu. They will have fever and chills. I ask that they stay home and get lots of rest, drink lots of fluids, and don't transmit the virus to members of your family or members of your community.

The challenge we face on the front lines is that because of all this fear that you hear in the media, everyone is so scared, and they're showing up at the emergency departments. Yes, they have the flu, but they're not that sick. Then we have a number of people who actually probably need to go to the emergency department because they're in the high-risk group or they are very sick. What that's doing is placing an undue burden on the front-line staff. They're working tremendously hard, Mr. Speaker. You have to give them credit. I still work every Sunday alongside many of the health care workers in this province. They're working very hard to provide care to Albertans. I want to remind everybody that H1N1 is not the only medical issue out there. What this does is place a challenge on delivering health care to everyone else. This is a national issue. It's not a made-in-Alberta issue. It's not a made-in-Canada issue. It's an international issue as well.

Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that this is not SARS, that this is not H5N1, we still need to deal with this issue. We have a health care system to run, and we need to run this together. I have had the opportunity to visit the emergency departments in Edmonton and Calgary. I just phoned my colleague at the pediatric emergency department. They're open for business. They're very busy with a lot of people showing up with suspected H1N1. All of the admitted patients have been moved out of their wards so they can deal with all the sick children showing up at the Stollery emergency for northern Alberta.

We have these flu assessment clinics. One opened up yesterday in Duggan in Edmonton. They saw 311 patients quickly, rapidly, and they relieved a lot of the burden on the front lines in the emergency departments.

There is a stage zero to stage 4 plan that they have for the intensive care units. I met with ICU docs. We're at stage 1. There's a long way to go. There are plans in place to deal with this if it ever gets that bad.

Mr. Speaker, I just ask all members of this Assembly to unite to work together on this issue and for the solidarity to support front-line staff, and I ask all Albertans to be patient and to allow those who are high risk to get the vaccination program first. If you fit in that high-risk category and you're sick, please get treatment early.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to be able to speak at this emergency debate regarding the Alberta government's preparedness on the H1N1 pandemic. I guess that before I get into playing a little bit of Monday morning quarterback, I would like to begin by thanking all of the front-line health care workers who have been out there, who have been administering the vaccines at the various locations and trying to do their best to ensure that Albertans are safe and free from illness.

The second thing I'd like to sort of talk about just quickly is a little bit on quarterbacks in general. If we look at yesterday, we had the venerable Brett Favre go back into Green Bay, and he had a game plan. He went there – they actually won the game – and threw four touchdown passes. No doubt this morning in Minnesota people in coffee shops, people around town are analyzing his play and analyzing the plan he put into place and analyzing what he did. Today, obviously, people are saying: "Brett you did pretty good. You threw four touchdowns yesterday. You led us to victory."

I guess Brett Favre, unlike our minister of health, has been known for a long time. He's been a quarterback prize since he's been 10 years old. On occasion on Sunday afternoon when you go out there and light it up and you play great and the plan you devised was followed through and executed and you delivered, people are going to talk well about you because you followed through and executed your plan. If you don't deliver on a plan or if you don't play well or you don't produce, that is when people are going to look at it and talk about it. It may not be as glorious as you want, but that's why you're the quarterback. That's why you get paid the big bucks. That's why sometimes you get to go in the parade and all that stuff. I guess that now is a little bit of that opportunity for us to do it, and I don't think it is a bad thing that some of that Monday morning quarterbacking is possibly going on in this House.

If we look at what has happened, I don't disagree with the health minister when he says that some three months ago they were looking at numbers where great fear was placed on whether people were even going to get the health care vaccination, whether people were going to go and get the H1N1 vaccine. I can see this as highly concerning both to him and to other health ministers across the nation, so they did start probably beating the drum a little bit, letting people know to get out there and letting more people know than possibly the ones who were most likely to get the H1N1 virus, hence our decision to open up our lines to everyone. Every man, woman, and child regardless of ability, disability, need, or vulnerability would be accepted at our lines last Monday morning when the clinics opened. That was a conscious decision made by this minister and, I'm assuming, some other ministers around the country, that led to exceedingly long lines almost the first day or at least the second day, when people came out and started coming.

Now, the health minister is right also when he says that when the gentleman out east, the poor young boy who fell victim to H1N1, passed away as a result of this pandemic or this flu, that caused a great many more people to take this seriously, to go out and get their inoculation shot, and to a certain extent mobilized a population that wasn't necessarily going to get immunized. It drove them to the tents to get vaccines in numbers not expected.

However, when we look at that, when that was happening, probably a decision had to be made at that time to be more forceful about limiting those who were in healthier or healthy conditions from going and getting their vaccines, by no means an easy feat but one that could have been done and could have been enforced, and I believe that therein lies sort of essentially what happened here.

We weren't as bold as we should have been earlier last week to come out and say: healthy Albertans, you're not going to get the shot. That would have been a difficult thing to do. We'd already called out to mobilize the masses to go, but there had to be a decision made earlier to say no, to say: "No. We're going to get this to the people who need it, the people who are vulnerable, the people who are more likely to succumb to this illness and more likely to die." I believe that could have been done earlier, and I believe it should have been done earlier. That's my Monday morning quarterbacking for you.

A little bit on the numbers. We have inoculated 10 per cent of the population. Of the 10 per cent that's inoculated, I guess that if you look at that at its face value and don't dig any deeper, it is a reasonable number. But if we look down and dig deeper, because we didn't go back earlier in the week and say, "No; healthy men and women who are ages 20 to 60 are not going to get this vaccine regardless unless you're in certain circumstances," with that 10 per cent – and I'm just estimating; I'm no expert on these things – I would say that probably you missed, you know, a large portion of the target population. As the estimate by one of the health minister's right-hand men was that 30 per cent of Albertans are vulnerable or should be on a priority list for this vaccine, maybe 3 per cent of those actually got the vaccine because the lineups, the way they were situated, made it more easy for those who were stronger, less infirm, less vulnerable to get the shot. That was, I think, a valid concern and legitimate for us people calling into the phone lines to judge the quarterback's play. A legitimate complaint, and I will stand by that.

Going forward – I guess it was mentioned earlier – I'd like to hope that we sort of now have a plan in place that outlines how to get the most vulnerable the shots they need. I would like to add – and this just came in from a constituent today – what I think is a very valid issue: to look at teachers possibly being added to this list of people who should receive the vaccine. [interjection] I didn't quite hear.

Mr. Liepert: I said: we've got a shortage.

Mr. Hehr: I know, but even with the shortage possibly teachers could be added to the list of people. I'm not sure. Again, that is why the minister of health will have to prioritize. I'm saying that if there's any possibility to have teachers on that list, he should prioritize. If he can't, I understand. There are a great many people on the list who are in vulnerable situations.

Nonetheless, those are my comments, and I thank you for giving me the opportunity to speak to this. I was also happy about Mr. Favre throwing four touchdowns yesterday afternoon.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security, followed by the Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to join in this debate about a very, very important issue, that issue being in particular the government's inadequate preparations for the pandemic H1N1 influenza program. I will stick to the inclusion of that word "inadequate" notwithstanding that I appreciate that some members opposite get a little prickly at it, but I'm afraid that that is the situation that we are faced with here in Alberta.

I want to say that that is the case notwithstanding our acceptance of the fact that there are some situations, some factors that impact governments across the country to which we were no more subject than anybody else, so I understand that there are some issues that are out of our control.

One of those issues was the unpredictable uptake, absolutely. I understand. Public health officials typically spend their time trying to talk people into vaccination, and they probably had underestimated the degree to which the press coverage of H1N1 over the last several months had created a desire on the part of all Canadians to be inoculated. That's fine, and I appreciate that that was an issue that spread across the country. I also appreciate that the shortage of the vaccine is not something that is in the control of this government but that, rather, is something that is in the bailiwick of the federal government and the relationship that they do or do not have with the vaccine producer.

Having said that, though, notwithstanding those challenges that faced all governments similarly across the country, I believe that in Alberta we managed to take those challenges and multiply them and create a problem that was much bigger – much bigger – than it needed to be. That exists, basically, in two ways: first of all, in the distribution of the vaccine and, secondly, in what is to come, which is going to be the treatment of Albertans when some do ultimately succumb to the flu and need enhanced treatment.

Let's just talk a little bit about the distribution of the vaccine. There's been much backslapping across the way about the fact that they were able to get 400,000 Albertans vaccinated. But, of course, as I think a number of members in this Assembly have already noted, public health experts across the country agree that the success of a vaccination program rests in part on how quickly you vaccinate those most at risk and those most likely to be subject to the spread of the particular flu or pandemic in question, the virus in question. So the number, 400,000, is not really particularly relevant if that actual number advertises over and over and over again how we managed to misplace our resources in such a grand way. What we did in Alberta, unlike most other provinces, is that we failed to prioritize the distribution of that vaccine. We did that in part by sending very, very confused messages throughout the province. We didn't do that just through our public health officials, but we started by doing that right here in this Legislative Assembly.

For instance, in question period on Tuesday, October 27, before news had spread widely about the fatality out east, the minister of health said, "We do recognize, however, that the crest of this flu will probably happen sometime in November, and that's why it's important over the next two or three weeks for people to get vaccinated." That is not a message saying: let's just have the priority people – the vulnerable people, the kids under five, the pregnant mothers, and those in remote communities – get vaccinated. No, no, no. That's a message designed to get everybody out, and it's not one that's consistent with what the government has since suggested in their approach.

Two days later the Premier himself says, "But, again, I stress the fact: please, I know, longer lineups, et cetera, but get the vaccine." That's what the Premier was saying to Albertans last week. Interestingly, though, at that point apparently the minister of health was starting to get a little bit worried because in the very same question period the minister of health said, "We need to ensure that the right patients are receiving the vaccine appropriately." So they started to be moving along that line, but of course they gave no clear indication to Albertans that if you're not part of the at-risk group, don't go anywhere near the clinics. They didn't say that. They just kind of hedged their bets, and that created the kind of chaos that we have now.

On the weekend I heard from a woman who is an elementary school teacher who is six and a half months pregnant who waited in line for four hours at a clinic outside of Edmonton, in Spruce Grove I believe it was, and was unable to get the vaccine and then did it again the next day and was unable to get the vaccine and has still been unable to get the vaccine.

The other thing about how the government has managed this that is very problematic, though, is where we're at now. Now we have the minister of health saying: well, we're just going to trust that the high-risk people show up to get the vaccine; we're not going to ask them if they're pregnant; we're not going to ask them if they have a chronic problem; we have no idea how many of those 400,000 people that were vaccinated actually are part of the high-risk group that we need to focus on now. To me that's just awe inspiring.

Presumably now that we've finally seen the light and we've decided to administer this in the way every other province has, we are not going to let the general population in on this game until we have fully vaccinated the targeted group that we should have been focusing on last week. But how can we decide when to change the rules of the game if we don't know when the targeted group is vaccinated, if we haven't kept track of who amongst those targeted people were vaccinated within that 400,000 group? It's shocking to me that this is the information we're getting back from the minister: I have no idea; we're just going to trust them. Wow. Who is running this show?

Then we hear the government talk about how, well, we have all these problems and all these challenges across the country, and we're doing no better or no worse than other provinces. In fact, I would suggest that that's not the case. Several times the minister responsible for aboriginal affairs and the minister of health have made statements like: all the First Nations communities have received the vaccine. Now, I'm going to take them at their word, and I'm going to believe that's the case. But what, of course, is the critical point is that the First Nations groups received the vaccine because that was a federal government responsibility, and they started working on that very early on. Back when we all knew it was a problem, they decided to work on it.

Meanwhile, the Métis settlements, which are under the jurisdiction and are the responsibility of this government, we heard today have not for the most part been fully vaccinated. It sounds as though the majority of the communities haven't received any vaccine, and we know that some of the communities that were mentioned by the minister today as having received them, although the vaccine was there and there were clinics, ran out of vaccine before they were able to fully vaccinate them.

What we have, then, are two examples of how government can work. One is how it worked with the First Nations communities; they got their vaccine. One is how it's working with the Métis settlements; they're a little bit behind the eight ball: maybe this week although we might have to meet with them and reconfigure the distribution because we're a little short now, so we don't know for sure. It's not rolling out for them the same way it is for other communities, and the difference is the provincial government versus the federal government. So that's a problem.

Basically, the other thing I wanted to just lay out very quickly, though. There's been a lot of suggestion that in being concerned about the distribution of the vaccination, somehow we are attacking front-line workers. I want to just put it on the record that that could not be farther from the truth. Quite the contrary. We hear constantly from the front-line workers who are trying to distribute this vaccine, or who were trying to distribute this vaccine, that they're desperately short-staffed, that there aren't enough of them, that they're being pulled from their other jobs because we don't have enough staff.

Interestingly, I was in B.C. this weekend and had an opportunity to chat about these issues with a number of senior public health officials there. They jokingly referred to Alberta as the new South Africa because they've been so successful at hiring Alberta nursing students over the course of the last several months. The fact of the matter is that we have a shortage because of the clear decisions made not by any front-line workers, not by any public health officials, not by Dr. Corriveau, but by this government and this cabinet. So that issue needs to be addressed and accepted by them.

Finally – I just have a few seconds left – I want to make the point that last week we asked this government about how they were going to deal with the situation if the worst-case scenario arises and 35 per cent of Albertans experience symptoms with the flu. We asked them to tell us what would happen about the fact that we have one of the few employment standards codes that does not protect people's jobs if they are away from work sick. We did not get a satisfactory response. We got a response that referred them to collective agreements, which is lovely, but I don't expect them to amend the labour code any time soon. That's something we need to hear back from the government on.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly a pleasure to rise to debate the government's pandemic H1N1 vaccination program. It's interesting that the mover of the motion made reference to a fairy tale in a negative way during question period today in regard to the H1N1 vaccination program. Four hundred thousand Albertans were vaccinated during week one, including the homeless, health care workers, aboriginal Albertans, children, pregnant women, Albertans under 65 with underlying health conditions, and many Albertans not considered high risk. That's the stuff that fairy tales are made of. It's a good-news story.

However, because of projected reduced shipments of vaccine and the risk of people being exposed to the virus while in long lineups, the program will be revised to ensure that those deemed to be at high risk will be vaccinated first. Children from six months to five years will be the first priority, Mr. Speaker. I am confident that the new direction will be supported by Albertans, including peace officers, who will be at the next level to receive vaccines – and I repeat – after all those who are identified as high priority have received or have been given the opportunity to receive the vaccine. Police are not at a high risk of developing serious health issues if they become infected; however, their absence from work could be a public safety concern.

There has also been some question as to when inmates should receive this vaccine. I believe they should be vaccinated at the same time the vaccine is available to the general public, not before.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta's plan from the start was to focus on those at the greatest risk, focus on them first. All Albertans will receive the vaccine or access to it, and I believe the majority support how this program has been rolled out and will be rolled out.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, let's applaud those dedicated staff who are working long hours to ensure that Albertans receive the vaccine in an orderly fashion. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to join this debate on this very important topic. While I don't agree with the members opposite in terms of their assessment of the situation, it is certainly important that this House have a good discussion on the methods applied to date.

I, too, want to start off by commending Dr. Corriveau and his team. When we look at the fact that this province, the province of Alberta, has vaccinated over 400,000 individuals, something that's probably maybe not quite but close to half of the population of the province of Saskatchewan, I think we have to feel very proud of our team, Mr. Speaker, the team of individuals that are carrying out this work, and as a province for the job that we have done so far.

What we have seen is a very large and significant vaccination of a large portion of our population in the face of a situation where we have what I would call a very frightened public. I would encourage the members opposite to contain themselves, to stop the fearmongering, because I do fear that a lot of what has driven the lineups that we saw last week and the uncertainty that has been created is because of a lot of the rhetoric that we have heard.

I would say that this has been a great success, even with the lineups that we saw and even the disappointments by some who were unable to get the vaccine. Let's remember that it was clearly stated – it was stated by the minister of health, it was stated by Dr. Corriveau, and it was stated by everyone who is looking after this very important file – that those at greatest risk were the ones who were encouraged to be first in line, Mr. Speaker. Now, while there was a decision made not to turn anyone away, there was a lot left up to the discretion of individuals, clear-thinking people, that if they were not in the high-risk category, they should not have come out.

Mr. Hehr: Were you here last week?

Mr. Rogers: I believe you were as well, sir. I believe that, again, the rhetoric that we hear, through the chair – I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I'm sorry for the distraction from elsewhere.

Mr. Marz: Calgary-Buffalo.

5:00

Mr. Rogers: I wasn't going to name the member.

Mr. Speaker, it has been made very clear from the outset that the supply of this vital vaccine would be a major factor in how this program would be rolled out. As we know, this is a vaccine that has been developed in a very short span of time, and I want to commend all the researchers and everyone that has been involved in researching and producing this vaccine in a very short time. But then we have the reality that it has to be manufactured, and there is a lot to manufacturing a very technical product like this. We know that last week it was found out that there was a need to manufacture a special batch of this product for pregnant women, and that slowed down some of the production and distribution of the vaccine.

I just want to say that I believe that Alberta is very well served by Dr. Corriveau and his team, and I would encourage all the wannabe quarterbacks to let the professionals do their job. We can second-guess in here all we want, Mr. Speaker, but I think it's important that the people that have the expertise, that have been tasked with delivering and carrying out this very, very crucial program on behalf of Albertans, be allowed to do their job and that we give them our full support.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Dr. Brown: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to make a few remarks regarding this debate about the H1N1 virus and about the plan to respond to the influenza outbreak. I'm not going to partake in ascribing blame to this or that individual, whether they be elected officials, public health managers or officials, or workers in the health care system. I'll leave that criticism to members of opposition parties or to the political pundits. At best blaming others is a nonproductive pursuit; at worst it's political opportunism. Nor will I indulge in scaremongering; instead, I'd like to try to put the present pandemic into some sort of perspective.

Pandemic is a scary word, but according to the shorter Oxford dictionary, it simply means a disease that's prevalent throughout a country, a continent, or the world. Diseases can be, as we know, serious, or they can be less serious. Historians will tell us that the influenza pandemic of 1917 was one of those that was very serious. It was responsible for millions of deaths throughout the world, and medical science had no real answers to that pandemic. People lived in dread from the disease as those around them succumbed to serious symptoms and often to death. In fact, at that time we didn't even know what the structure of viruses was. We didn't have things like genetic decoding in those days. We didn't know the structure of viruses by electron microscopes.

Mr. Speaker, we are truly fortunate to live in a country like Canada in this present day and age, a developed country, and even more so to live in Alberta, where we have one of the finest health care systems in the world, although by the criticism of some of the opposition in this House on an ongoing basis, one would wonder whether we had such a great health care system.

Our health care system is one where every citizen has access to first-class, free, public-funded care. We lead the world in many areas of treatment, and unlike in 1917, it's a modern system, where we have tools at our disposal to look at the structure and the genetic code of viruses to learn about how they mutate and change and about how the human body responds symptomatically to those different strains. But, Mr. Speaker, expectations must be tempered by the knowledge of what is possible given the timelines and the resources available.

In North America, Mr. Speaker, influenza usually affects people in the November to April period. We know that influenzas can be serious for certain people in our population vulnerable to one strain or another, and not everyone is vulnerable to the same type of strain. As we become exposed to them, we develop immunities to similar strains. But to put things in perspective, every year in Canada seasonal flu causes anywhere from 2,000 to 8,000 deaths – every year, just to put it in perspective.

Now, recognizing that it can be serious for some, for a number of years health care providers and governments in Alberta and across Canada have instituted programs to vaccinate anyone who wants to receive seasonal influenza vaccine. The strains are targeted. Usually they include the three most common strains that are prevalent in the spring, and then they get to work and produce a vaccine for the fall. By taking the vaccine, our immune response is triggered, and our bodies generate specific antibodies. This is not an exact science, however. Because viruses mutate, they change their composition, and the antibodies produced inside our bodies become ineffective or less effective in attacking the viruses, which brings me to the H1N1.

The H1N1 strain of influenza was first reported in March or, according to some other authorities, as late as April of this year. Yes, March 2009. That's not even eight months ago. In April 2009 Canada launched a public awareness campaign about the H1N1 virus, and the government of Canada got to work on a response. It should be remembered, Mr. Speaker, that for most of us in the population H1N1 will only bring on mild symptoms. However, it was recognized that H1N1 was one of the most widespread strains of influenza, and on June 11 the World Health Organization declared the outbreak to be a pandemic.

Knowing Canada's scientists and technicians and industry, they were already at work on a response to those threats. They rolled up their sleeves, and working with colleagues around the world, they developed a vaccine which is effective, and most importantly it's safe. These developments and the testing protocols don't happen overnight. Testing, clinical trials, et cetera, take time, and it wasn't until about 10 days ago, in fact October 21, that Health Canada declared version 1 of the H1N1 vaccine to be safe and effective – October 21.

In planning for the use of vaccine doses, public health officials believed that given the limited resources available and given the fact that we had supplies of the vaccine in stock and that the approval had not yet been given, the best way to plan the uptake of the vaccine was to concentrate the resources in a few large clinics, where assembly line techniques could be utilized to move people through the process as quickly as possible. To that end, individual staff could distribute information sheets for completion by the patients. They could counsel and inform the patients so that they would have informed consent to the vaccinations. This was a reasonable way to proceed given the fact that there were vaccine doses in stock and more were expected. This will be, as the minister has said, the largest program of vaccination in the history of Alberta.

Let's look at what was accomplished in the first week of the availability of the H1N1 vaccine after approval by Health Canada: 400,000 people vaccinated, an amazing accomplishment. That's about 1 in every 8 Albertans. Not only will those people be protected, but they will not be transmitters of the virus to others in the population, and despite what some people have said in the House, we don't have to get to 80 per cent before we get some protection. It depends on who you're in contact with. If you're in contact with some of those people that have already been vaccinated, you'll be protected as well by the fact that those other people have been vaccinated.

Having several hundred thousand doses awaiting approval for Health Canada to deploy, it was a reasonable assumption that the best way to proceed would be to vaccinate as many people as possible in the shortest period of time. But what happened to upset the original plan for vaccination were two things. One, the response was much greater than expected. Why? People listened, first of all, to the advice of the medical community to get the vaccination, to be sure, but beyond that a few notorious but extremely rare cases where robust and healthy persons succumbed suddenly to the virus were widely reported on the front pages of our newspapers and our television and radio news. Secondly, the deliveries of the vaccine doses were not as quickly made available as originally contemplated. In view of these two facts, unplanned limitations of supply and much-increased uptake, the plan began to bog down.

Mr. Speaker, let's calm down, put the matter into perspective. The plan as it was originally rolled out was a judgment made in the best interests of Albertans based on the best predictions of response of Albertans and based on the expected supply from the manufacturer of the vaccine. It was a plan to maximize the speed with which the vaccine could be made available and utilized as soon as it was approved by Health Canada. As I mentioned, that was only October 21 when the vaccine was declared to be safe and effective.

In view of the evolving facts as we know them, our public health officials have changed their plans to prioritize the high-risk population, those with chronic conditions – such as asthma, diabetes, heart disease – pregnant women, or those with weakened immune systems. But let's remember, Mr. Speaker, that for most of us the H1N1 influenza will only produce mild symptoms. What will happen now is that the higher risk people will go to the front of the line. Let's realize that it takes time to get things right.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to begin by thanking the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood for bringing forward to this House Standing Order 30. I also want to thank the House leaders of the two parties for consenting and contributing to the discussion. I'd also like to thank the Speaker for agreeing to have this most important discussion take place.

There's a bit of a joke out there that suggests: I went to a fight and a hockey game broke out. Albertans don't really want to see us dropping our gloves and beating on each other while the puck remains at centre ice and nobody seems interested in getting that puck to the goal. That said, it's important that we learn from our past mistakes and go forward.

In my member's statement today I said with a degree of tongue in cheek: will Albertans survive this government's health care deorganization? What was at the base of that conclusion to today's member's statement is that Albertans don't know anymore who's in charge. The antidotes to ignorance and fear are education and assurance. What we've seen recently is a very quick redesign of our health care system. Albertans are obviously supportive of health care professionals such as Dr. Predy and Dr. Corriveau, who are doing the best they can given the marching orders that they've been provided by this government.

Now, what we have is a great degree of, as I say, ignorance and confusion, and it's up to us as members to try to shed some light on the topic. In terms of light-shedding, I want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, an emergency physician, who provided a very good summary of what the actual risk is and who the people are that should be on that priority list for receiving their inoculations. I also want to thank the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill for providing a little bit of biological background information.

What Albertans are looking for is leadership, and within that leadership they're looking for information. Some of you may have heard while driving up to Edmonton yesterday CBC's Cross Country Checkup, hosted by Rex Murphy. On that particular program in terms of information the head of the national Canadian health association, who is in charge of pandemic plans, was providing a great deal of information. For example, he talked about, as did the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, how this H1N1 flu is so vastly different and that our world conditions and modern technology are so vastly improved from the Spanish flu epidemic of 1918.

Now, my name, Harry, comes from my grandfather, Harry Cooper, who barely survived that 1918 flu epidemic. However, as has been pointed out, in terms of getting the information out, people like myself, who were born before 1955 and don't have contributing health difficulties, should obviously be at the very end of the line if they're in that lineup at all. But when it comes to vulnerable individuals such as children under age five, we have to ensure that they're being looked after very early on in the process. I would suggest, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview mentioned, that these ethical decisions as to who's at the front of the line, who's second, third, fourth, and who's at the end, need to be discussed.

Well, obviously, the absolute first to be inoculated have to be our health care professionals because they're the ones whom the rest of our population is reliant on. We have to protect them first so that they can do their job. But I would suggest that along the lines of who's next, please, let the children under five be the next in the line.

Here is an e-mail that a number of MLAs, I am sure, have received similar comments on from constituents.

We just returned from the Avenida Clinic where we stood in line with two small grandchildren, ages 1 and 3, from 8:00 a.m. till 1:00 p.m., only to be told at that time along with hundreds of others that we should come back tomorrow or another day because there were too many people in line.

Here are the things the grandfather had issues with.

Why is there no effort to take in little children who are at most risk, instead of the mixed message the politicians are giving out about everyone getting the vaccine? Why are there not sufficient clinics to disperse the workload? Why are local doctors not given the vaccine so that they can deal with their patients?

These are legitimate questions which, hopefully, the minister of health in his announcements tomorrow will clarify so that we know who's next and so that we know which clinics are providing the help for various individuals.

Now, the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore and the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo both talked about: where in the lineup do teachers fit? I'd like to offer a little bit of a suggestion. I think that teachers probably fit in the line somewhere after the children under age five, who are at risk, they probably fit somewhere in the line after the people with immune deficiencies, and they're probably in that line standing beside policemen, firefighters, and other emergency services.

Now, in terms of emergency individuals, just think what would happen if the majority of teachers in a particular school came down with the virus. That means that the majority of the children in those schools would have to be sent home, which means that the majority of the parents of those children would have to be at home looking after them. You see the ripple effect.

If we're going to continue to go forward and be productive and proactive and, in this case, H1N1 preventative, then these orders and priorities have to be given considerable thought. We are in a pandemic situation, but it doesn't have to be a pandemic pandemonium. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark pointed out, we've had three months of learning experience from those down under, who have already gone through their flu season. We can learn from their experience. We've had the SARS pandemic come through. We've had emergency circumstances where emergency measures took place. I'm talking about the ice storm that took out power and left a number of individuals in isolated communities.

We have gymnasiums. We have auditoriums. We have arenas where we can keep people at least seated and in the case of ice arenas, obviously, not nearly as warm. We've got the two Jubilee auditoriums, for example, in Edmonton and Calgary. We can during the day, when these arenas are potentially available, solve part of our problem.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River, followed by the hon. Minister of Service Alberta.
