Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As with so much, the commitment of this government will be measured in funding, not words, and the funding for public transit through the Green TRIP initiative has already been cut by over 90 per cent. Will Albertans ever see the full $2 billion that was promised for public transit? That is so important even before considering the economic stimulus impact it would have.

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can't say what our revenues are going to be in this province, but I can say that we have committed to $2 billion. What the hon. member is referring to is the hon. finance minister's third-quarter update, stating that there was only $195 million within Green TRIP. She's talking the '08-09 time. We don't know what we're going to have in this year's budget. I'm sure that because of the way our economic downturn has been and the way that our income isn't as high as it was, we may have to stretch Green TRIP out a little bit.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Flood Damage in Calgary

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week the Calgary neighbourhood of Sunnyside experienced flooding, with many of the residents sustaining water damage to their homes. My question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Since the minister is responsible for the Alberta Emergency Management Agency, can he please explain to this House how the province responded to this serious incident?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The safety of Albertans is paramount for this government. The Alberta Emergency Management Agency was on scene immediately, and we continue to provide technical expertise with cleanup and damage assessment. We are working with the residents and also the municipalities to determine what support is necessary and what support is needed.

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, my next question is for the same minister. A number of residents in Sunnyside have lost personal items and experienced property damage as a result of this disaster. What is the province doing for a disaster recovery program for these flood victims?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, they should contact their insurance provider. Secondly, they need to contact the city, and that can be reached at 311. Also, I'd like to suggest to individuals who do have damage to dispose of carpets or whatever damage they have appropriately. We will continue to work with the city and the residents to collect information that's necessary to see if the flood does qualify for support.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Heritage Savings Trust Fund Investments

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Not everybody took a bath in last fall's market meltdown. Last week it was revealed that the city of Calgary's 2 and a half billion dollar capital fund performed extraordinarily better than the heritage fund in 2008. The province's savings lost 15 per cent of their value. Calgary's fund lost only one-tenth of 1 per cent. To the minister of finance: can the minister explain why the heritage fund underperformed Calgary's fund by so much?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would have to do some type of analysis. The heritage savings trust fund was 14 and a half per cent. There was a slightly larger per cent of loss given to some of the other funds that are managed by Alberta Investment Management Corporation on behalf of the province. One would have to undertake an analysis. I could give you a list of funds that performed less well than the heritage fund, but it's embarking on a very dangerous precedent. It depends entirely on the mix of assets. It depends entirely on the manner in which those assets are bought and sold. Some of those losses may in fact be paper losses which can be reaccrued at a later date.

Mr. Taylor: As Calgary's fund did so well by staying away from derivatives and, instead, investing in safer bonds, will the minister be changing the government's investment practices to safeguard the heritage fund in the future?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, a great deal of analysis is undertaken before there's any change in the mix of assets and the mix of products that are purchased. In fact, in endeavouring to discover what sort of science is used in that regard, I have consulted with a number of people, including the Canada pension plan principles that talked about maintaining exactly the status quo. We have looked at the schedule of assets for this coming year, and when we deliver the budget, we'll be able to report accordingly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How does the minister plan to recoup the losses in the heritage fund over the next few years, or does this government consider savings a luxury we can no longer afford?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, when you speak to the board members that are responsible for the Alberta Investment Management Corporation, they are very clearly bright, assertive policy-makers. They have every intention of being aggressive with the fund within the limits that we define in terms of a risk. I'm very satisfied that they will come up with the right strategies to continue the unprecedented record over the last 30 years of management of the heritage savings trust fund. Albertans should be proud of our track record.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 98 questions and responses.

In a few seconds from now we'll call upon the first of six members to participate in Members' Statements. In the interim can we revert to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three officials from the Grande Cache Coal company that are here today visiting with officials from Employment and Immigration and Energy. I'd like to introduce Mr. Bob Stan, CEO and president of Grande Cache Coal; Mr. Lloyd Metz, vice-president of mining from Grande Cache Coal – we go back to 1981 in Estevan, Saskatchewan, with the Estevan Coal Corporation – and Mr. Bernd Martens, the vice-president of environment. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Lethbridge and District Exhibition

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is March madness for Lethbridge and District Exhibition. There's Ag Expo, the North American Seed Fair, extreme pro rodeo, and the home and garden show. There will be an expected 50,000 guests through the gates in March. Ag Expo is western Canada's premier agricultural trade show. The North American Seed Fair has been held annually since 1897 and is the oldest seed fair in western Canada. There were 50 different classes in pedigree seed, open classes, and junior classes. There were 13 judges, 17 committee members, all of whom are volunteers, who put in many hours to ensure its great success, in addition to a very dedicated staff. Products of agriculture are important exports for Canada. It supports our rural communities, which we are in danger of losing. Rural or urban, we are all dependent on agriculture. After all, we all eat.

Our Aggie Days is an agricultural education show: 3,000 school-children came to learn about agriculture in a fun and interactive environment. It is an annual event provided free of charge by the Lethbridge and District Exhibition. To further highlight the importance that agricultural exhibitions play in communities, Exhibition Park was privileged to host both the federal minister of agriculture, Gerry Ritz, and the Alberta Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development and the MP Rick Casson. The ministers attended, participated, and toured the seed fair and exhibition. I'm sure they were both left very impressed.

Mr. Speaker, on another note, it is a very great honour for someone to receive a special name from our First Nations. The Member for Lethbridge-West received just such an honour last week at an international powwow in Lethbridge. The name translates to "sees many things." I know he will wear his name proudly. Please join me in congratulating him and thanking him for his work with First Nations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Student Engagement Initiative

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to say a few words today about Speak Out, the Alberta student engagement initiative that was launched by the government last fall. The role of the student engagement initiative is to motivate Alberta's youth to participate in an ongoing province-wide discussion on education. Asking for students' input and taking action on their ideas will create more actively engaged citizens and a stronger education system. To date the Speak Out team has conducted 30 Speak Out forums in high schools across the province. The Speak Out interactive website is being actively used by students. In fact, there are over 3,500 posts on the discussion forum, and the numbers grow daily.

On May 3 and 4, 2009, the first Speak Out Annual Student Conference will bring together approximately 200 youth from all over the province to explore and discuss recommendations for the education system. At the forum the Minister of Education will be announcing the three winners of the Speak Out video contest, the theme being What I Want, What I Need: My Vision for Education. The deadline for the video contest submissions is March 31, so interested students still have a few weeks to enter a video.

Students have an opportunity to apply to become a member of the Minister of Education's student advisory council, which will be formed in May after the first annual conference. This council will explore new and innovative ways to improve learning opportunities, and council members will act as representatives for Speak Out in their communities and schools.

More information on the conference, video contest, advisory council, and Speak Out in general can be found online at the Speak Out interactive website at speakout.alberta.ca.

Youth can and should influence the decisions today that affect the rest of their lives. Their perspectives are essential to future changes and decisions being made in education. I'm excited to hear what students have to say because every single voice counts. I urge all young Albertans to become involved and to speak out.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Marlborough Park Boy Scout Event

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This February 22 I had the opportunity to attend a Scouting event at the Marlborough Park community hall. It was a wonderful event that brought out dozens of people and inspired young people. The event involved three Scout troops: the 174th Marlborough Park, the 71st Marlborough, and the 161st Forest Heights. Every year they gather to celebrate the birthday of the founder of the Scouts, Lord Baden-Powell.

Scouting offers young people an opportunity to do many things that they might not have had a chance to do on their own, everything from canoeing to Cub car building. The Scout law is something we can all take into consideration when we go about our daily lives even though we and even the youngest member in the House have long passed the age range. A Scout is helpful and trustworthy, kind and cheerful, considerate and clean, wise in the use of all resources.

I was proud to present an award to Brian Swan, who has served the Scouts for over 25 years and has mentored many young people in living up to that motto. In helping run the Scouting program, he has taught many youths in my area valuable life skills from community service to outdoorsmanship. I thank Brian for his service and hope that he continues to serve our community.

I also want to thank everyone that is involved in Scouting in our community. Your service makes a profound difference in the lives of our young people.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Rotary Club 104th Anniversary

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to honour the 104th anniversary of the Rotary Club, which was celebrated on February 23, 2009.

For five years I have also been a very proud member of the Rotary Club of Edmonton. The club's four-way test is an important ethics compass for the things that we think and we say and we do. It is a guide in both my personal and my political lives. The four questions we must ask ourselves are: is it the truth, is it fair to all concerned, will it build goodwill and better friendships, and will it be beneficial to all concerned? This test is indicative of how the Rotary Club and its members conduct themselves through service to their community.

The 104 years of remarkable Rotary Club service have provided resources for park systems, accommodations for the homeless, food programs for schools, seniors' residences, and aid to medical causes such as the effort to eliminate polio globally.

Mr. Speaker, I'm proud to congratulate the Rotary Club on the celebration of 104 years of service and commitment to bettering Alberta's communities and communities throughout the world.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Kidney Disease

Mr. Elniski: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. March is National Kidney Month, and this Thursday, March 12, is World Kidney Day. World Kidney Day is recognized in over 100 countries. This year the focus of World Kidney Day is on the importance of high blood pressure as one of the key symptoms and causes of chronic kidney disease. This is an incredible opportunity to raise awareness about the potential risk factors for kidney disease. By properly educating ourselves on the risk factors, we are more likely to take the steps to prevent this disease from affecting our health. Over the last year I have attended several events for the Kidney Foundation, a constituent organization in Edmonton-Calder.

On March 12 the Kidney Foundation is hosting its first annual World Kidney Day radiothon at Southgate shopping centre. It will be on air with EZ Rock 104.9 FM and The Bear 100.3 FM throughout the day. You may have already heard the radio commercials we recorded a couple of weeks ago. It's a great opportunity for this organization to share stories of those affected by kidney disease, raise awareness, and encourage Albertans to support this remarkable cause. An estimated 2 million Canadians either have chronic kidney disease or are at risk of developing it. It is important that we encourage awareness to prevent more from being affected by this disease. I encourage everyone to support the Kidney Foundation in any way that they can.

Thank you.

Commonwealth Day

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Commonwealth Day. The Commonwealth was formed 60 years ago, and Canada was one of the founding members of this association, which now comprises 53 nations and nearly 2 billion people, one-third of humanity. Today all hon. members have before them a message from Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, our head of state, our Queen, and the head of the Commonwealth. As Her Majesty has noted, it is the belief of the Commonwealth members in values like democracy, freedom, human rights, and equality which binds us together today as in 1949.

Mr. Speaker, it is one of these values, democracy, which I wish to acknowledge in particular today. That is the genius of the British parliamentary system of government, a proud legacy which has served this province so well for over a hundred years, a system in which the executive and the legislative functions of government flow from the same electoral mandate, a system where individual parliamentarians represent citizens of electoral districts and carry their voice to parliament for fixed terms, a system of ministerial responsibility in which the first minister and ministers in council exercise the powers of the Crown and the state and govern in the name of the people. It is our parliamentary democracy, which has never been equalled by any other form of government, which binds so many of the member nations of the Commonwealth today.

On the 60th anniversary of the Commonwealth I'm sure I speak for all hon. members of this House in thanking Her Majesty the Queen for her message and for her more than 50 years of faithful service as the head of this proud association of nations. May God save the Queen.

The Speaker: Thank you for that last statement, hon. member.

I will advise hon. members that this year, in 2009, the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association annual meeting in Canada, the Canadian region, will be held in Toronto, Ontario, in the third week of July. I'll be advising members of such as we go into early April.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 21, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009. This being a money bill, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 21 read a first time]

Bill 25

Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 25, the Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act, 2009. This being a money bill, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

Under the November 2007 memorandum of agreement the government agreed to pay the teachers' portion of the pre-1992 unfunded liability payments until August 31, 2009, and then assume the total pre-1992 unfunded liability on September 1, 2009. The goal of this amendment act is to ensure that the implementation of the pension agreement occurs in a timely manner.

[Motion carried; Bill 25 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the appropriate number of copies of a document showing where our ministry is in implementing the recommendations made during last year's review of our province's foster care system. There has been much discussion over the last few days about the status of the recommendations made by the review panel, whose members were well-respected experts internal and external to government. It has been suggested that some of the recommendations have not been acted on. I do want to set that record straight. All eight of the recommendations made by the committee were accepted, and this document shows that implementation in every one of the recommendations is either complete or well under way.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This past weekend the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo and myself had an opportunity to participate in a Poverty Talks! workshop. In 2008 and 2009 in over 45 community meetings approximately 350 participants answered the following questions: what would make a difference for low-income Calgarians, and as a low-income person what would I like to see change?

The Speaker: Hon. member, this is tablings.

Mr. Chase: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

I have two other tablings. They are both from child care workers concerned about the decertification of their profession. The first is from Maureen Thompson, who writes, "I am writing in regards to the sudden loss in my recognition as a Fully Certified Child and Youth Care Counsellor with Children and Youth Services within the Government of Alberta."

From Morag Rempel: "I am writing to you out of concern for the future of the quality of care offered to some of our most vulnerable children." She points out that "in 1984 the government took bold steps to protect the children in care by implementing strict hiring standards, a move applauded by child care providers across Canada, U.S.A. and Britain." She'd like us to continue to lead in our child care services.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings today. First, I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a story from the Edmonton Journal dated June 11, 2008, which relates to my questions today. In the story the minister of children's services is quoted as saying that the recommendations on foster care would be implemented immediately as opposed to many months later.

The second one is on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. It is the appropriate number of copies of two documents from the Alberta Lymphedema Association which describe the closure of the Calgary clinic and the result that non-cancer lymphedema patients have no place to receive treatment in southern Alberta.

The third, Mr. Speaker, is the appropriate number of copies of 10 reports from long-term care workers indicating specific problems on shifts that were short-staffed, including where residents were left in bed well into the morning and received late meals and had scheduled baths missed.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling five sets of documents in the House today regarding my questions in question period. The documents note on them: "Please join Deputy Premier Ron Stevens and other distinguished guests [to] celebrate a Milestone – The opening of the new Calgary Courts Centre" and "Please make cheques payable to Calgary Glenmore PC Association." We note that the . . .

The Speaker: Okay. Let's get on with the tabling.

Mr. Hehr: All right. Nonetheless, I am tabling some more documents which list the costs to the taxpayer of the event, including $5,000, it looks like, in the amount of food and drink as well as the costs, then, of some 32,000-plus dollars to the taxpayer to open the courthouse on that day.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. members, please remember that we have Standing Order 7(7), that basically says: at 3 o'clock. That's the reason why the chair is trying to push this ahead, so that we don't run up against that, because you still have the Clerk.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of Ms Pastoor, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, an Edmonton Journal website article dated January 7, 2009, entitled Gov't Rejects 4-year Council Term.

The Speaker: Hon. members, today the chair interjected on one occasion with respect to what he considered mildly intemperate language and then listened very, very attentively to the member's statement given by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder. We now have an additional reason why temperate language in this Assembly is so important. In the member's statement the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder made it very, very clear with respect to kidney problems, kidney concerns. He said that high blood pressure leads oftentimes to kidney problems. So temperate language in this Assembly reduces the blood pressure, reduces the kidney problems, helps the Alberta health care system. We should all be part of it.

Orders of the Day

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 201 Traffic Safety (Vehicles with Unlawfully Possessed Firearms) Amendment Act, 2009

[Debate adjourned March 2: Mr. Kang speaking]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today again in support of Bill 201. The purpose of the bill is to promote public safety, to make Albertans safe on the streets. The penalties associated with the offence are a fine of not less than $2,500 and not more than $25,000 or imprisonment of not more than one year or both and a driver's licence suspension of one year for a first conviction under the section, five years for a second conviction, and indefinitely for a third conviction.

To go down further, it says that if a police officer has reasonable and probable grounds for believing an offence has been committed, the officer shall request the surrender of the driver's licence and detain the vehicle. The licence is suspended for 24 hours, and the vehicle is impounded for the same length of time. The new section applies to drivers' licences issued both inside and outside of Alberta.

Like I said, the whole purpose of the bill is to make Albertans feel safe when they leave the house, to make their quality of life better than they have now. It is about suppressing the conditions that lead to criminal activities by gang members who are carrying illegal weapons in their vehicles, and it is about protecting the lives of innocent Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I think that Albertans are worried about their safety. They are worried about the safety of their children. They're worried about the safety of their neighbourhoods. More and more people are concerned about drugs being pushed in the schools, on the streets. I've got the example of a 7-Eleven store in Calgary-McCall. It was getting out of hand, and luckily we were able to get things under control with the help of the police and the neighbourhood around the 7-Eleven. I'm hoping that the problem is solved and we don't run into that problem again.

We all know there have been shootings in B.C. – in Surrey, in Vancouver, in Abbotsford – every day almost, every week. There have been tragic incidents in B.C., and even in Calgary-McCall there have been gang-related shootings. Deaths have been occurring in Calgary-McCall, too, in the past year. One doesn't feel safe on the streets of Calgary.

Mr. Speaker, I remember when I came here in 1970. There was a time we could leave the doors unlocked. We used to go shopping, leave the windows unrolled, go shopping, and come back. We didn't have to worry about cars being stolen. We didn't have to worry about houses being broken into because, you know, criminals were not running rampant, I would say, on the streets. Now there are gang members, they're pushing drugs, there are new drugs coming every day, and they're shooting each other on the streets. We have to get tough, I think, on the gang activity so our streets are safe before it's too late to get our streets back. It has been happening, the way things have been going.

I had a meeting with the police inspector, and the concern is out there. We should have more resources for the law enforcement agencies so they can investigate properly, they can prosecute, and they can head off the criminals before they commit any crimes. I believe Bill 201 is one more step in the right direction. It is proactive, and it's going to prevent crime, seizing guns before a crime is committed.

The present law, Bill 50, is a good law, but there are some loopholes in it, as well. It's just very vague as to who to charge when the police find illegal weapons in the vehicles because the occupants may deny that the guns belong to them. Mr. Speaker, the vehicles are a mode of transportation of illegal drugs and guns. Vehicles are used in criminal activity.

We heard the argument from the hon. members from other side of the House last week that as owners of unregistered long guns hunters and farmers would be charged under this legislation. Instead of having a clear intent of the bill, despite what the police officers are telling us would happen – it simply is not the case with this legislation that owners of unregistered long guns would be at risk of being charged. I think we can deal with any concerns raised by amendments to this bill.

Let's not be partisan about the bill. Let's bring all the genuine concerns forward, and let's amend the bill so we can strengthen the hand of our law enforcement agencies.

Bill 201 goes further to close the loopholes which arise in Bill 50. Passing Bill 201 is not going to harm law-abiding citizens. It's only going to hurt the criminals where it hurts. It will send a clear message to gang members that drive around with illegal guns in their vehicle that it will not be tolerated; it will be unacceptable. So if you're caught with a gun, you will be paying a heavy price for possessing an illegal weapon. This is just to strengthen the hand, again, of the police. I stress that point again and again because we're all concerned about gangs. You know, we are all concerned about the criminals, so I don't know why there's a big hesitation from the other side to proceed with Bill 201.

Bill 201 is being painted as such a draconian measure, that anyone with a gun in their vehicle will be put in jail or lose their car. What happened to "people are innocent until they're proven guilty"? You know, they will have to be proven guilty before they're charged.

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. member.

Hon. members, we have eight minutes remaining for this portion of business, three of which I will use to recognize an additional speaker if one wishes to participate, because I have to allow five minutes for the mover of the bill to close. Any additional member wishing to participate? The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and join second reading on debate of Bill 201, the Traffic Safety (Vehicles with Unlawfully Possessed Firearms) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo. The intention of this bill is directed at reducing gun crimes in our communities, and I want to thank the Member for Calgary-Buffalo for the spirit of this legislation. We on this side of the House very much appreciate support in our fight against crime.

As has been mentioned, this government amended the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act, or VRCPA, in 2008, which empowers our police officers to immediately seize vehicles and all property that has been or may be used to commit a crime. This act received wide support from police forces, victims organizations, and the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo. This hon. member stated on November 20, 2008, that the amendments to the VRCPA "would allow for us to deal with seizing vehicles of people who are driving around with guns unsafely and who are transporting them for use in crime." Further, the hon. member said, "this type of legislation would ensure that guns and gangs are kept in their place," and the hon. member is absolutely right to emphasize how the VRCPA empowers police.

Mr. Speaker, the amendments to the VRCPA were designed to protect the safety of Albertans, as it prevents criminals from driving their vehicles to carry out illegal activities. As the hon. member for Calgary-Buffalo said, the amendments to the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act "would ensure that guns and gangs are kept in their place." That's what the act is currently doing and why I, too, support the amendment. This strong government legislation goes well above and beyond what's proposed in Bill 201. Although I very much appreciate the hon. member's concern for tackling gun crime and, again, the spirit of this bill, perhaps he did not expect that our police and prosecutors would be so very effective employing this legislation. I'm sure that, along with all the members on this side of the House, he is very relieved to hear the reports last week of $4.6

million in illegal profits removed from criminal hands. Perhaps in view of the reports he's heard, he may even wish to withdraw his bill himself in respect for the more effective government legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have to urge all members to reject this redundant though very well-meaning bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo to close the debate.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today we vote on whether my private member's bill, Bill 201, the Traffic Safety (Vehicles with Unlawfully Possessed Firearms) Amendment Act, 2009, passes second reading. I've heard a number of MLAs speak on this bill. Although I'm not the sharpest tool in the shed, I think I know which way the wind is blowing on this.

Nevertheless, I've heard basically two major objections to this bill, and one I can really appreciate. It was brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, who was really worried, actually, about law-abiding citizens possibly being caught up in this, as my bill said that illegal firearms would be cracked down on. One of the unintended consequences of this, I believe he said, was his grandmother would be out with her .22 in the back round and possibly get picked up, which was, honestly, a concern. It could have happened under my bill.

However, I wish we would have taken this a step further; we could've gone and maybe, as the hon. member said, looked at revising this bill to have been to unregistered or restricted firearms. I appreciated his intellectual honesty in at least attacking the bill in that format and framing it as such because that is one of the unintended consequences that maybe we could get rid of, although police officers said they wouldn't be going after that, yada yada yada. But I appreciate that.

Now, moving on to the second argument, and it was that Bill 201 is redundant as it was brought up by the victims of crime restitution act. By all means, I hate to say it: that is not being, from my point of view, intellectually honest. Here's why. There's a loophole here, and the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont should know this.

Right now if a police officer pulls over a vehicle, a gangbanger who's driving a vehicle either stolen or rented, which many people are, with one of these restricted firearms, that are illegal, you know what happens, sir? What happens is the police officer lays a charge under the Criminal Code. Guess what? I've been told by police officers that going to court, the person denies that the gun was there. Well, guess what? No charge. Now we're supposed to, through the victims of crime legislation act, go through an in rem proceeding, attach that illegal gun found to a guy who's not criminally convicted of anything to maybe find some property or something like that out there to attach to him. Well, you know, more power to him if we're successful in this. I really don't think it's going to happen.

Further, what happens to the individual, the young gangbanger, who really doesn't keep his assets on paper in a nice little stockbroker report that says: I own 47 shares of this company, that company? It just doesn't work.

What this bill was intended to do was cover off the loophole from albeit a wonderful bill, the victims of crime restitution act, which is great work by the government, that I applaud them for. This was merely to close a loophole. That's all I'm here saying. Please, I hope that some other MLA, maybe from the governing party, comes up with this idea and goes to the Justice minister and says: hey, maybe we should bring this amendment in. I would applaud it, I would stand for it, and I'd say: that's another good piece of work by this government.

I wish we could maybe go to committee stage and have some of these resolutions changed. I think we really could make it workable, could maybe make those minor changes that would put some touches to the victims of crime restitution act, again a wonderful bill, that would allow for this loophole to be covered off.

I thank you for your time here today and for your commitment. Please vote in favour of what I think is a worthwhile initiative for this government to undertake.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to open debate on Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009.

I have met with many stakeholders who believe that this piece of legislation has the potential to greatly help municipalities. They have also been consistently pleased that this bill would make municipal spending practices as transparent as other levels of government. Many people have pointed out that the federal and provincial governments are both audited by their respective Auditors General. They want municipalities to be held to the same account.

Bill 202 creates the office of the municipal auditor general under the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. The municipal auditor general would work with Alberta municipalities and their external financial auditors to assist municipalities with making their operations both as effective and efficient as possible and to make sure that Albertans get value for their money. It would also create a mechanism for Albertans to determine whether they are receiving fair value for their business and property taxes. The municipal auditor general would conduct a performance audit of any municipal system or program that is deemed appropriate. It would subsequently provide the municipality with detailed recommendations for improvement and potential actions that may help achieve this. These measures would help to ensure that a municipality's operations and services are executed in a way that makes the best possible use of public funds.

Currently a municipality is required to submit annual financial statements and a financial information return to the provincial government. This helps to provide the government with the information needed to ensure that a municipality is operating within the parameters set out in the Municipal Government Act. When an external auditor completes a municipality's audited financial statement, they also provide the municipality with a management letter. This letter may identify areas where a municipality could improve financial controls or where different accounting procedures and processes may reduce costs or improve services.

It is my understanding that a management letter given to a municipality is not always made public and may not provide a municipality with in-depth analysis of their operations. On the other hand, the recommendations from the municipal auditor general would be made available to the public as soon as possible. This would provide for an additional level of oversight and accountability as the public would have access to these recommendations. In addition, the municipality would be required to notify the municipal auditor general within a specified time on the actions a municipality intends to take with respect to the recommendations. If a municipality does not take adequate or appropriate action on these recommendations, the municipal auditor general may report these concerns to the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

In short, Mr. Speaker, this office would work with municipalities to help ensure that their operations are sustainable in the long term. This bill is not intended to remove the operational freedoms that Alberta municipalities currently enjoy. Rather, Bill 202 simply seeks to give municipalities the tools they require to ensure that they are providing their residents with the highest possible value for the money they receive. Any recommendations provided by the municipal auditor general would take into consideration the long-term vision of a municipality.

Mr. Speaker, a performance audit would be particularly beneficial for Alberta's rural municipalities who may not have the capabilities to conduct an independent performance audit themselves. Bill 202 would provide rural municipalities with the expertise necessary to ensure that they can continue to meet the increasing demands of their residents in the long term. As the province continues to grow, we are all aware of the pressures municipalities are under to ensure that their operations and services consistently meet the needs and expectations of their communities.

Mr. Speaker, the province launched its 10-year funding commitment, the municipal sustainability initiative, MSI, to help address these pressures. The amount given to municipalities totalled $500 million in 2008, and it's scheduled to increase to $1.4 billion annually by 2011. The office of the municipal auditor general would ultimately seek to answer the question: are the funds received for property taxes and from the province creating appropriate and sustainable value within a municipality? This is not to say that Albertans are not receiving value for their taxpayer dollars at the municipal level. However, with property taxes increasing and the amount of financial assistance the province is currently giving the municipalities, Bill 202 seeks to create an additional level of support and accountability at the municipal level. This would seek to ensure that Albertans are receiving the maximum value for money for municipal services and programs. The municipal auditor general would have the authority to conduct an objective performance audit of any area within a municipality deemed appropriate.

To be clear, Bill 202 does not intend to conduct a yearly performance audit of all Alberta municipalities. Municipalities would have a performance audit conducted at the discretion of the municipal auditor general. This discretion would be based on consultation with the financial auditors, municipalities, or concerns from the public.

In summary, the municipal auditor general would help municipalities ensure that they are spending taxpayers' money in the most efficient and effective way possible. I anticipate the municipal auditor general to become a centre for best practice of municipal operations. The office would encourage intermunicipal co-operation by recommending areas where municipal partnerships would benefit both parties.

Mr. Speaker, the auditing process is crucial to all areas of our society as it gives us an objective perspective on spending. I think that any measure we can take to strengthen auditing at the municipal level is good for our province. I look forward to hearing my colleagues' comments and urge them to support this cost-saving measure.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise to speak to Bill 202. It's certainly an interesting bill, obviously geared, I suppose, in some respects toward improving certain areas of functioning within municipal government, but it is a bit surprising to see a bill like this coming from someone from this particular government caucus, I would suppose, just based on, you know, some of the attitudes that we tend to have here provincially vis-à-vis our own relationship with the federal government.

It is a bill, of course, as has already been mentioned, that would empower the minister to appoint a municipal auditor general, who would then engage in audits of municipalities that would ultimately be reported to the provincial minister, and then there would be various authorities with respect to following up on that. I think that in the introduction of this bill the member spoke about how provincially we have an Auditor General, and federally we have an Auditor General, although I'm pretty sure that provincially we don't have an Auditor General that audits us and then reports to the federal government or vice versa. I can't imagine that as a province we would agree to that kind of arrangement, so I find it a bit interesting that municipally we would appoint an auditor general and then have municipal governments having audits that were being reported back to us, the provincial body.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

At the end of the day this is a bill that impinges rather significantly on municipal autonomy. This is something that I think is problematic. Municipal government is growing and developing across the country. Municipal government is not a level of government; it's actually a separate order of government. That independence to a large extent needs to be acknowledged notwithstanding the way in which it first came about. We also need to look at, politically, how these municipalities have evolved. We know that municipalities have been asked to take on larger and larger levels of responsibility within our communities and within our societies. We know that they have in many cases stepped up to the plate in that regard. We also know, frankly, certainly in Alberta, that the level of engagement at the municipal level for the average person is as high as it is provincially.

I am concerned about the idea of exercising even sort of more centralized control over individual municipal governments. I respect the need for having high standards and ensuring that there are high standards and transparency and all those kinds of things, but it would seem to me to be a little arrogant and a little wide-reaching to march into the municipal sector and ask for this level of oversight and control.

The Municipal Government Act already has provisions for independent audits of municipal finances. As it is, municipalities must already submit annual financial statements and auditors' reports to the minister, and the minister already has the power to set requirements for financial reporting and auditing. A minister may at this point appoint an auditor to audit the books of a municipality at the request of at least one-third of the council or on petition by the electors. I think that these kinds of limits allow for intervention where necessary, but it ensures that the intervention is only where necessary as described or as acknowledged by either the municipal councillors themselves in any given municipality or at the request of the electors. Finally, where the auditor is appointed under this process, again the legislation already gives them access to these municipalities' records and their data.

I'm not sure exactly how this bill will move forward, but at this point we have some concerns about the apparent intrusion that this might represent into the political autonomy of municipal governments across our province. It is for that reason at this point that we are unlikely to consider supporting the bill. Although, again, we certainly invite the opportunity to hear and consider and weigh the debate as the bill progresses, if it does.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a very interesting bill for someone who has come out of the municipal sector and actually was elected as a municipal councillor. I think my first and foremost comment on this would be that should there ever be such a person, I certainly would be opposed to their reporting to the minister. If there's going to be such a person, they'd have to report to this House. That is far too narrow a scope that the minister would have over the municipal actions. It has to come to the House. It has to be someone that we could feel very confident in, that was actually independent and had done their homework without any oversight or the feeling of being overseen by a minister of the Crown. It really has to come to the House.

My other question would be: who would pay for this? I'm just wondering if there's any level of government at this point in time that has any extra money. I believe that one of the costs that I heard was $700,000. I know it doesn't sound like a lot when we're talking in billions, but it's an awful lot to create 700,000 new dollars. So that would be a question: who's going to pay for it? Certainly, I don't think any of the municipalities, including the big cities, would want to absorb that kind of cost, nor do I think that the provincial government at this point in time can drag up that kind of money out of the sustainability fund or any other little slush fund they may have hidden somewhere.

Auditors usually can't fix the messes that they find, but they can identify them and make very specific recommendations based on analytical data. So there is an argument for having an auditor. Auditors can't make policies, good or bad, and certainly auditors can't reflect on the behaviour of a particular municipality. That really is the responsibility of the elected people. Again, it's up to the people that elect them if they think that their behaviour has not been what it should be.

However, there is an argument to be made for smaller municipalities that, as has already been mentioned, really can't afford to have these extreme audits and the time that it takes to actually dig through books and go back in time and actually compare the audit against the bylaws or the laws that they have made at that level. So there is an argument to perhaps help those municipalities in some fashion, particularly if the citizens of that particular municipality are complaining. I believe that in the province today there is one municipality that is certainly having difficulties, and the citizens are getting a little excited about the accountability of their council.

It has already been mentioned, too, that it could interfere with the autonomy of municipalities. It has also been mentioned over the last 10 years, certainly since I was elected, that there is more and more – the word used, I believe, from my colleague was “responsibility.” Of course, I'm calling it downloading. There have been responsibilities downloaded onto municipalities without the dollars to follow to ensure that those programs, particularly on the social side, are actually adhered to. So, certainly, money would be a question.

I think this bill is interesting to me as well because I can actually argue both sides. I can argue for and I can argue against, which doesn't really put me out of line with anyone that I've spoken to nor with some of the groups that are out there: the city of Calgary, the AAMD and C, and the AUMA. If I'm correct, the AUMA has come out with a position against. CFIB and the Canadian Taxpayers Federation are in support of a provincial municipal auditor general. I believe that, of course, their approach would be from the taxation point of view: are they really using their dollars wisely so that they can control the mill rates in a better fashion?

From the people that I've spoken to, I believe that there is a mixed bag out there, some for and some against. I guess what I'd like to say is that this is a bill that I would like to see go maybe even to the committee level where there could be more discussion and perhaps a longer time to have a chance to take a look at this because people out there really aren't either firmly for or against. They actually can sort of argue both sides. I think this bill needs more time to have stakeholders look at it and get some more information on it. When I spoke to people, the reaction was mixed for and against, but the reaction was also mixed, which interested me, as to whom it actually should report. Some thought the minister was fine, and others thought no, that if there was somebody, it should report to the House. That's why I think that this bill does require more time.

I know that from Lethbridge's point of view the politicians down there and the chamber of commerce and some of the other people that I've spoken to and, in fact, some of the auditors that belong to the firm that actually audit the books for the city of Lethbridge are, again, mixed in their reaction to this. I think that our mayor had a good point in that many people don't realize that out of a Canadian tax dollar municipalities only get 8 cents, and we're at the level that's most accessible to the people. I think that people, particularly at the municipal level, really have more access to information on how the money is spent at the municipal level than the provincial or federal levels. It's very difficult at the two upper levels to actually get the information readily that you need unless you're FOIPing it, which, of course, costs a lot of money, too. At this point in time, you know, I'm speaking as having spoken to people with mixed reactions but also from my own experience. I think that Lethbridge has always had good audits and, certainly, has won many awards for the way they keep their books, the way that they are open and the way that they present them. I guess they don't find mistakes.

I really think it's a bill worthy of further discussion than we know private members' bills get, which probably won't get past second reading, unfortunately. I would like to see it go to committee. I'd like to have more time for people to take a look at this. There are some people in Lethbridge who write regularly to our newspaper who are most concerned with the fact that they think that the audit wasn't done properly and that it wasn't done on time nor presented on time, which is actually a legislated provincial law. That's something that an auditor would be able to make recommendations to or to look into why it happened that that particular activity didn't happen on time. There are other municipalities, I know, in that same situation.

Mr. Speaker, I will speak to this again. Again, I would hope that it would go to committee because I think it's worth while having a discussion and trying to get some kind of a stronger, definitive feeling from the community of where they'd like this to go.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to speak to Bill 202. In challenging economic times Albertans turn to their neighbours and communities for support. The Premier has stated his firm belief that strong municipalities are the key ingredients to strong communities. This shapes my ministry and everything we do. To foster strong communities throughout the province, the government of Alberta remains committed to supporting municipalities through a variety of programs, including the municipal sustainability initiative. This support is having real impact. It is putting Albertans to work right away, addressing vital infrastructure issues and needs, and helping our communities position themselves for the future. Provincial funding is helping to build new roads, recreation facilities, fire halls, and libraries.

Strong communities also need to be accountable to the ratepayers. That is what Albertans expect. That is what this government expects. Ensuring that we have financially stable and accountable local governments is a priority for us. As such, I appreciate the hon. member bringing forward this bill. It is critical that municipalities be prudent and responsible with taxpayers' money. Many municipal financial reporting processes are already in place. For example, the Municipal Government Act already requires municipalities to conduct annual financial audits. The Premier also gave me a mandate to build an accountability framework to ensure that funding provided to municipalities is used to meet agreed-upon objectives. The framework will increase our accountability to Albertans so that they can see how these funds are being used.

Mr. Speaker, as accountability is such a strong component of what we already expect of municipalities, this bill could nicely complement the existing financial reporting process. It could offer Albertans another tool to evaluate the performance of their local councils. Using resources wisely is always important. In times like today it becomes even more critical to ensure that each dollar collected from taxpayers is spent wisely.

I'd like to thank the hon. member for drawing attention to the issue of accountability through the introduction of this bill. While there remain a few questions, as mentioned by the hon. member opposite, to be worked on on the terms of how this bill could be implemented, the member clearly recognizes that we need to respect taxpayers' hard-earned dollars and use them wisely to invest in and build strong municipalities.

Mr. Speaker, it's been a pleasure to speak to Bill 202 and make comments on how, as I said previously, we can work with municipalities to make those municipalities a strong component of a better Alberta.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to participate in the discussion today on Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays. Bill 202 seeks to create an office within the provincial government whose mandate would be to assist Alberta municipalities in ensuring efficient use of their resources. The municipal auditor general would help municipalities conduct performance audits. The broader goal of the bill is to help improve the operations process of municipalities in a manner that would allow them to retain their current degree of autonomy. The office of the municipal auditor general would also be able to share and expand the network of practical knowledge amongst municipalities.

It's important to note that any recommendations made by the office of the municipal auditor general would operate within the scope of the municipality's own vision and specific circumstances. Individual municipalities may have differing financial, operational, and mobilization considerations when recommending the best course of action. For example, it may be more cost-effective to lease gravel road grading equipment in one municipality than it would be to purchase it. However, in another municipality it may be more cost-effective to purchase equipment than it would be to lease it. The point to take from this example is that each Alberta municipality is going to have unique needs and individual circumstances, and it's important to take these unique considerations into account when providing recommendations for improvement.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 202 aims to create a stronger network and improved service delivery for municipalities in Alberta. The provisions that Bill 202 seeks to establish are intended to help facilitate the sharing and implementation of best practices for municipal operations. There's a wealth of information that can be obtained from robust, objective performance audits. If deficiencies exist in a municipality, they can be revealed and assessed with comparative measures that would be developed and collected by the municipal auditor general. While there exist some inherent differences between municipalities in the province, useful comparative measures can, when properly assessed, shed light on any performance issues. These comparative and standardized measures can be very useful as a municipality seeks to improve its operations and service delivery.

Currently, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of forums where Alberta municipalities can share best practices, such as municipal zone meetings. The municipalities within these zones meet frequently to share ideas, address concerns, and learn from the successes of other similar municipalities. By having comparable municipal performance measures, as Bill 202 seeks to establish, the dissemination of valuable information at these meetings would be further enhanced. Furthermore, the municipal auditor general would serve as an additional forum to share and recommend best practices with municipalities.

The recommendations given by the office of the municipal auditor general would be publicly accessible so as to provide full disclosure of the performance audit recommendations. In addition, a municipality would be required to notify the municipal auditor general of the actions it intends to take in relation to the recommendations given.

Mr. Speaker, it's well acknowledged that local governance is most suitable for the effective delivery of a great number of services. Residents of Calgary or Edmonton, where two-thirds of Alberta's population currently live, will have different service delivery requirements than residents of rural municipalities. Further to this, factors affecting service delivery can also vary, with the local council being best suited to adapt their municipal operations to accommodate any region-specific circumstances, but the basic guiding principles for efficient operations, management, and service delivery remain consistent among municipalities. It's important that each municipality in Alberta get the most value for its tax dollars in order to make its goals achievable.

I'm pleased that Bill 202 continues to acknowledge the importance of local governance. For sufficient diversity to exist amongst our municipalities, their autonomy must be at the forefront. Similarly, municipal councillors wish to provide the range of services most closely aligned with their constituents' overall performance and needs. It's important, then, for municipalities to maintain a sufficient degree of autonomy so that efficient adaptations of local governance are possible.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe Bill 202 infringes on any part or any important aspect of municipalities' autonomy. Rather, it seeks to assess the municipalities' operations and make recommendations, if necessary, for improvements that can assist the municipality in better actualizing its own goals. For example, the information compiled through the performance audit process by the office of the municipal auditor general can reveal where grant dollars can be better allocated. Municipalities may learn of extra funding opportunities through these recommendations, which may be very helpful for a municipality in their initiatives. Furthermore, the municipal auditor general would provide an additional level of accountability for the money allocated to municipalities from the government of Alberta, ensuring that they're used appropriately and for what they were intended. This would include funds received through such programs as the municipal sustainability initiative.

Again, Mr. Speaker, the aim of the recommendations made by the office of the municipal auditor general is the long-term sustainability of municipal autonomy in operations and budgeting. Bill 202 is truly a win-win proposition for both levels of government and, indeed, for all Albertans. The office of the municipal auditor general would act as a network to communicate best practices and improve the operating efficiencies of municipalities across the province. Municipalities will retain their autonomy in setting their priorities in budgets and can do so more effectively with the measures proposed in Bill 202.

I wholly support Bill 202, and I urge my fellow members to do so as well. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today to speak to Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays. This bill proposes to create an office of the municipal auditor general, which would assist municipalities in conducting performance audits. I'd like to thank the hon. member for bringing forward the bill.

Mr. Speaker, as a long-time municipal councillor and reeve, when I first heard of this bill being proposed, I had some serious reservations. I thought that all we were going to do was add another layer of bureaucrats for councillors to deal with. Closer examination of the bill has revealed to me that it does make some points which would be beneficial to municipalities. I'd like to just mention a few of those points this afternoon.

First, performance audits would assist municipal governments in maximizing their efficiency by revealing areas for improvement and providing recommendations for action. These recommendations may suggest various actions such as the need for additional investment for better long-term sustainability. Mr. Speaker, the measures proposed in Bill 202 will greatly benefit municipalities in finding shortfalls in the operational capabilities and would assist in providing the province with information regarding these shortfalls.

Performance audits would be independent of the municipalities, and the recommendations would be focused on achieving the greatest value for taxpayers. Objective performance audits conducted by accounting professionals would further strengthen the ability of municipalities to seek additional funding for improvements that would enable them to carry out long-term strategies and increase sustainability.

Mr. Speaker, all municipalities want to ensure that their operations are being conducted in the most efficient and cost-effective manner, and in some circumstances the efficiency can only be achieved by making further investments. For example, if a municipality is underperforming in one area, for example garbage pickup, the performance audit may be able to identify exactly how this operation is falling short of expectations. It could take into consideration every aspect of the municipal garbage pickup process and reveal where inefficiencies exist and how they can be improved upon. The recommendations may include a change in operational practices or if further capital investment is needed.

One of these identifiable inefficiencies could be old machinery constantly requiring repairs or machinery that consumes considerably more fuel than newer models. A performance audit could compare the cost benefit of maintaining the current equipment to that of investing in newer, more efficient equipment. If investing in new garbage pickup equipment would save the municipality money in the long run, the performance audit could make this recommendation. The performance audit report and recommendations could analyze all aspects of this operation. This would offer a substantial benefit to a municipality in determining the most efficient action to be taken.

Further to this, a municipality could use the recommendations from the performance audit report to support its current position and past decisions. If past decisions come into the spotlight, municipalities would be able to use the credibility of the performance audit to support their past decisions. Additionally, if current decisions come under scrutiny, the performance audit could assist the municipality to explain in detail why they made those decisions. A performance audit could also provide information on which programs, operations, or activities have been effective and explain how the past decisions of a municipality are reaping a benefit in the present.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 202 could also strengthen a municipality's argument for further funding when lobbying other levels of government. The recommendations provided in an objective performance audit would give municipalities a great deal of credibility when pursuing provincial or federal grants. Additionally, a performance audit may recommend where intermunicipal co-operation or provincial partnerships would lead to greater efficiency and effectiveness in their operations. For example, if a performance audit determined that a municipality's snow graders were costly to rent but that the neighbouring municipality owned one, it may recommend that they pursue a partnership with one another and share the cost of snow removal. The municipal auditor general might find the current funding allocations to this area insufficient to achieve the desired results and that a larger, multilevel strategy may be needed.

In another example the public transit network within a municipality may need to be modernized or perhaps bus routes reassigned. If it is determined that modernization is required for efficiency, that new buses need to be purchased, and that new transit stations are needed, the modernization endeavour may cost well beyond what the municipality itself could afford. It could be determined that transit routes need to be reassigned to transport people to other areas. Both of these examples display how it would be mutually beneficial for different jurisdictions to work together to make this initiative efficient. Further, the benefits of an efficient public transit network would spill over into those other jurisdictions and areas such as environment, energy, and transportation.

Mr. Speaker, performance audits would also be useful in communicating to the public a municipality's decision to invest in certain areas as well as communicating to the public the areas that are efficient and the areas that are not. This would strengthen the argument of municipalities. Communication with the public is an essential component within government operations. As it is the public that elects governments, it is also the public that should be fully informed of government decisions. Bill 202 would enhance this stream of information by strengthening the municipal performance audit process, giving all municipalities a hand up when accounting for their decisions.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 202 fully recognizes how performance audits would assist municipalities in ensuring the efficiency and effectiveness of their operations. For those reasons I believe that members of this Assembly should give Bill 202 serious consideration for their support.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and engage in debate on Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to begin by thanking the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays for bringing forward this well-thought-out, forward-thinking bill. The goal of Bill 202 is rather straightforward, that the government create an office of the municipal auditor general, and in turn the office of the municipal auditor general would assist municipalities in completing performance and value-for-money audits. Creating a municipal auditor general would serve to strengthen municipal operations.

Now, before I dive into the advantages proposed by Bill 202, I'd first like to applaud and recognize the phenomenal job currently done by our municipalities, especially Strathcona. The audit practices currently employed at the municipal level provide clear and concise information, which is critical for ensuring an open and accountable government. Stemming from my appreciation for accountability, I feel as though I must clarify the motive driving this bill.

In no way should Bill 202 be viewed as an affront to municipal transparency. Bill 202 is designed to improve upon not only an effective but enviable accountability system. The measures proposed by this legislation are intended simply to assist municipalities. After all, the purpose of a performance audit is not to find fault but, rather, to find opportunities. Analyzing best practices data can clearly highlight strengths in planning as well as single out areas or programs that fall short of expectations. Simply put, effective audit systems promote and support effective value-for-money planning.

Mr. Speaker, the success of a government program is not based on whether or not they can achieve results but on achieving results in a financially sustainable fashion. Successful program planning requires that attention be paid to both costs and results. Performance audits are simply a program-by-program account of these two factors. Therefore, by improving audit practices, we are at the same time improving overall program and services planning. Bill 202 addresses the goal of improving municipal financial planning by creating a standardized information resource that allows municipalities to make clear, performance-based decisions.

The advantage of creating an office of the municipal auditor general is that all performance audit data would be centralized. In turn, a centralized body of information is easier to access and interpret than collecting performance data from several unconnected communities. With the measures proposed by Bill 202 in place, all of Alberta's municipalities would more easily be able to compare their services to their contemporaries'. An example of this could be a comparison of garbage pickup services between Lacombe and Ponoka. With a centralized body of a municipal auditor general the citizens and administrators in Lacombe could review the garbage removal practice of Ponoka and compare it to their system. If one municipality is found to have a superior system, the reasons for that superiority could be investigated and then applied to other municipalities looking to improve services. In this way having a central office to conduct performance audits can build stronger communities through the detailed sharing of program performance information.

In addition, performance audits could help foster co-operation at the municipal level. One example is if both Lacombe and Ponoka were interested in creating a facility designed to convert garbage into energy but neither could afford to construct such a facility on their own. The municipal auditor could recognize this joint desire and encourage the municipalities to look toward creating a co-operative program. In this example the cost of the waste-to-energy facility could be shared between the communities, and in turn both could benefit from a service they could not provide independently.

The strengths of this province will always come from the fabric of co-operation diligently interwoven with threads of kindness, dedication, and hard work. Mr. Speaker, I'm aware that the idea of an audit does not normally generate feelings of co-operation and unity. However, municipalities in this province are committed to providing the best services to their citizens, and I believe that co-operation between municipalities, which Bill 202 would help facilitate, would only serve to strengthen these services. Therefore, it's our duty to encourage the exchange of information to best promote strong communities and to ensure that the values of hard work and unity that help make Alberta great are encouraged in the future. In essence, I believe this is the strength of Bill 202. Creating an office of the municipal auditor general would create a system designed to foster information exchange and community co-operation. Sharing information and best-practice procedures would benefit all Alberta's municipalities.

I would like to close by again thanking the hon. member for bringing forward this bill. I urge all members gathered here to join me in support of Bill 202. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and join the second-reading debate on Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009. This bill was brought forward by my hon. colleague from Calgary-Hays, and I would like to thank him for presenting this valuable bill.

By this point in the process most of us have a firm grasp on the goals of this proposed legislation. Bill 202 aims to create an office of the municipal auditor general to help municipalities conduct performance audits. This proposed bill has many benefits, from assisting municipalities in obtaining provincial grants, to ensuring and promoting accountability, to helping to guarantee municipal autonomy. While these benefits are a strong endorsement of the legislation in and of themselves, what I find most advantageous about Bill 202 is the commitment it makes to municipal co-operation.

Community co-operation, of course, is one of the cornerstones this great province of ours was built on. In fact, from the early days of settlement Albertans have recognized the value of co-operation and helping those in need. When homesteaders came out west and were given their quarter section of land, survival often depended upon the help of the community. Plowing, harvesting, maintaining a homestead were difficult tasks, many requiring the efforts of more than one family. Recognizing this, community members would step in and assist each other to ensure the success of all households.

Fast-forward a hundred years, and it is still apparent just how important co-operation is to the fabric of Alberta. We're blessed to have a significant number of volunteers who recognize that strengthening a community is not an individual effort but, instead, one that demands co-operation and hard work. Mr. Speaker, this is why I take great pride in this great province. On one hand, we're fiercely independent, advocating self-reliance and the idea that through hard work Albertans can fulfill their needs and desires, but at the same time we have always been a people willing to pitch in and become involved with other communities, ensuring the welfare of others.

Now, to tie all this back to Bill 202, it is important that we understand just how an office of the municipal auditor general could promote community co-operation and involvement. After all, when I think of community unity, seldom do I think of accounting and performance audits. Basically, it all comes down to an exchange of information. If a community is informed about the needs of another community that match their own, they might be more interested to pursue dialogue and possibly work toward a mutually beneficial relationship. Likewise, if a community excels at one aspect of their municipal operations, the reasons for their success could then be shared with other municipalities looking to improve specific aspects of their own operations and services.

Instituting a system that overlooks and encourages municipal best practices would create a body of information that could easily be shared between those communities. This is not to imply that communities are currently not talking to their neighbours; however, if information pertaining to operations were to be centralized in one body, municipalities might be more inclined to access this information and engage in dialogue with their peer communities.

Mr. Speaker, an example might help this best. Consider inner-city road construction and maintenance, which falls under the jurisdiction of municipal governments. Providing these services requires heavy equipment. These machines all have one thing in common: they require considerable amounts of capital. Now, say, for example, that two nearby communities were interested in expanding or improving their internal road systems but both were apprehensive about the cost of this equipment. The office of the municipal auditor general could then determine that these two communities were facing similar problems and recommend some form of community co-operation. In this example the cost and use of heavy road equipment could be split between the municipalities. In this way a community would be able to offer an increased level of service to their citizens while at the same time being able to stay within budget constraints. In this example the solution to these communities' problems rested on information exchange, and because the municipal performance audit information was stored under one roof, it was possible for the auditor general to make recommendations based on their joint needs.

The strength of this bill really rests on the idea of bringing all municipal performance review information under one roof. Currently although municipalities may institute performance and/or value-for-money audits, they are limited because they might not have access to the performance standards of their contemporaries. And even if a municipality had access to the performance information of their neighbours, they might not have the ability to compare themselves to other communities. Bill 202 recognizes that the value of performance audits is to ensure Albertans that they are getting value for their money. After all, information is the cornerstone of both good governance and good service delivery. With clear and concise knowledge municipal governments can be better positioned to make good decisions on behalf of their constituents.

I would like to once again thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays for recognizing not only the benefits of information exchange but the value and the historical precedent of community co-operation in Alberta. I thank you all for the opportunity to rise today, and I certainly look forward to the remainder of the debate.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour and privilege to rise and continue debate on Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, as sponsored by my hon. colleague from Calgary-Hays. The municipal auditor general would work with municipalities and financial performance auditors to co-ordinate and develop financial statements, make recommendations on how to improve business practices and make them more sustainable. Ultimately, this would provide a powerful tool to our municipalities to create more openness and transparency at the local level for all Albertans regardless of where they live.

I'm a supporter of this bill as it recognizes the positive relationships our provincial government maintains with our local counterparts. Local governments are in the best position to truly understand local issues and how to implement solutions. To this end, this government maintains a host of municipal grant programs which provide billions of dollars of funding for our cities, counties, and municipal districts each year. Much of this funding is used to develop priority projects that municipal councils can identify. These projects can include roads, bridges, facilities, and other necessary public service that allows us to maintain our high standard of living. Bill 202 would expand on this relationship by providing municipalities with a powerful new tool to ensure they are getting the greatest value for money for their operations and their services.

Mr. Speaker, this bill provides an opportunity to discuss and determine exactly which programs might benefit from performance audits. One such program is the municipal sponsorship program. Introduced in 1998, its objective is to provide grant-based financial assistance to smaller municipalities with a population of between one and 20,000. Once a municipal council has identified their project needs, they can apply to the municipal sponsorship program for financial assistance in the form of a conditional grant. These grants are calculated on population size, with additional funding available for intermunicipal projects or shared provincial-municipal projects. Before these funds are released, the municipality and the provincial government enter into a conditional grant agreement that ensures appropriate oversight and accountability measures. These measures include reporting requirements and the minister's right to audit any project receiving a provincial grant.

I am of the opinion that Bill 202 would improve the effectiveness and efficiency of this program for the following reasons. First, it would assist municipalities in ensuring that funds from the municipal sponsorship program are used effectively for approved projects; second, through the information-sharing mechanisms that the municipal auditor general would foster, municipalities would be better positioned and informed to embark on intermunicipal projects and could further take advantage of conditional grants provided for such projects.

Mr. Speaker, in 2007 the government expanded on its vision of the municipal sponsorship program by introducing a 10-year initiative, the municipal sustainability initiative, to assist municipalities with the challenges of unprecedented population growth. This program is an excellent example of the kind of co-operation this government is fostering with our municipalities. The goal of the municipal sustainability initiative is to provide predictable, long-term funding for municipalities. The funding will increase from the $400 million initially distributed in the 2007-08 fiscal year to $1.4 billion annually by 2010.

The funding process was designed in a relatively straightforward manner and aims to hold municipalities accountable for the funds allotted to them while allowing flexibility. Following the passage of the provincial budget, municipalities will be advised of their annual MSI contribution based on 48 per cent per capita, 48 per cent education property tax, and 4 per cent based on kilometres of local roads.

Further to this, municipalities must forward a proposed project profile to Municipal Affairs by April 1 each year. In addition, they must submit a multiyear capital infrastructure plan that outlines all proposed capital expenditures over a five- to 10-year planning period.

In addition, grants received under the municipal sustainability initiative must be held in a separate account, and the municipalities must submit a statement of funding and expenditures for the previous fiscal year. Bill 202 could improve the successful program through increased information sharing between municipalities, which could foster greater co-operation on major infrastructure project such as roads, public facilities, and more.

Mr. Speaker, another innovative municipal support program is the regional partnership initiative. This program provides assistance to municipalities who express interest in forming a partnership around a specific opportunity or set of opportunities. Specifically, municipalities can be eligible for funding grants under this program when they explore possible opportunities for co-operation and when they work out the specific role for each municipality in this agreement.

Bill 202 would improve the effectiveness of the program in two ways. First, through information sharing municipalities would be better equipped to understand the infrastructure and service needs of the neighbouring communities. Second, these municipalities would be better able to gauge the resources and capabilities of other municipalities and the potential role that may be played in a prospective agreement.

Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, Bill 202 has the potential to make regional and intermunicipal co-operation stronger and more effective. Alberta's strong economy depends on the long-term sustainability of our municipalities. This is why I support Bill 202, and I encourage my colleagues all to do the same.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to the rest of the debate.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's with pleasure today that I rise to speak to Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays. Bill 202 proposes to create an office of the municipal auditor general, which would implement standardized performance audits for municipal operations.

Albertans expect that their hard-earned tax dollars will be spent wisely at all levels of government. I'm glad to say that we experience that today, but, certainly, improvements are always good. Bill 202 is designed to meet this expectation by having the municipal auditor general work with Alberta's municipalities to improve business practices and assist Albertans to determine whether they are receiving fair value for the taxes paid to their municipalities.

Mr. Speaker, performance audits help governments and other administrative bodies by revealing areas for improvement in their operations that may have otherwise gone unnoticed. Implementing standardized performance audits as proposed in Bill 202 would assist municipalities in ensuring efficiency and effectiveness in their operations, which would provide greater value for the taxes paid to communities.

The Alberta Treasury Board's performance auditing process is based on two principles. Firstly, public business should be conducted in a way that makes the best possible use of public funds, and secondly, people who conduct public business should be accountable for the prudent and effective management of the resources entrusted to them. Mr. Speaker, these principles illustrate this government's commitment to efficiency in Alberta's public sector. They recognize the importance of achieving value out of every tax dollar spent and providing a level of accountability with these tax dollars, all of which instill confidence in Albertans that their tax dollars are being spent as they would have their leaders do.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 202 would provide a standard for municipal performance audits that could ensure greater efficiency and effectiveness in their operations. Performance audits look in depth at both the organizational and operational elements of a government. It can then be determined if that body is achieving the desired results for the dollars allocated to each initiative.

To understand the benefits of the measures proposed in Bill 202, it is important to understand the process of a performance audit and how it helps to ensure that best practices are used in all aspects of an operation. Performance audits, like most audits, are carried out in four standard stages: a planning stage, fieldwork, reporting, and, of course, a follow-up stage. Mr. Speaker, a preliminary study may be undertaken for a performance audit to gather sufficient information to decide if and whether the audit is warranted.

If the audit is deemed necessary or it is a part of required procedures of an entity, the planning stage of the audit will then be undertaken. The planning stage involves establishing the criteria for the audit such as the scope, objectives, and, of course, the approach of the audit, Mr. Speaker.

Once the planning stage is complete, fieldwork begins by gathering and analyzing information relative to the specific performance audit. Mr. Speaker, this procedure will gather information on the actual performance of the entity in question and compare it to past performances and the current situation.

At the reporting stage the performance auditor makes recommendations to enhance the performance of the entity. This report starts at the beginning of the performance audit process and evolves throughout the undertaking. A first draft of a performance audit report will be issued to management in order to ensure the accuracy and the validity of the information, Mr. Speaker. Subsequent drafts will provide greater detail of how to implement the changes recommended by that performance audit. The final performance audit report provides an action plan to bridge the gap between the current and the expected performance.

Further to this, there would also be a follow-up stage to report on the progress being made on the recommendations of the performance audit report. The specifics of the procedures of a performance audit may vary, but the goals of all performance audits are to identify waste, ensure that best practices are being used, and ensure that these hard-earned funds are being put to the best use.

Mr. Speaker, performance audits are of particular importance when they are government related. When tax dollars are allocated to a project, department, or other entity, taxpayers expect that the tax revenue is used for that intended purpose. Furthermore, taxpayers expect that their tax dollars go as far as possible to maximize the goods and services that they receive from government.

Performance audits are helpful for both the private and public sectors to identify current shortfalls and how they can improve efficiency of these operations. Mr. Speaker, in the private sector it is essential that efficiencies are maximized to ensure the continued success of a firm. Likewise, we would expect the same in the public sector. Improved efficiencies in the private sector can maximize profits and return greater dividends to the shareholders. In the public sector efficiencies are just as important and desired. Public funds are entrusted to governments, and it is the responsibility of these governments to ensure that a maximum utility of every tax dollar is received. These efficiency improvements can result from even in many cases a small procedural change which can reveal and offer suggestions where funds can be better spent.

Bill 202 intends to ensure that Alberta's municipalities are given the tools that they need to effectively on our behalf analyze their operations. This office would play a key role in working with a municipality's financial auditor in identifying strategies for future planning as well as the cost-effectiveness of their current long-term goals. Mr. Speaker, like a performance audit in itself the municipal auditor general would assist in making sure that Albertans are receiving fair and just value for the tax dollars that they entrust to our governments.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to hearing further debate on this bill and how it will improve transparency and how it will enhance the auditing process to ensure that our tax dollars are being most effectively used. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in this Assembly to speak in favour of Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by my constituency neighbour the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays. I must first commend this member for bringing this bill forward. This member has a long history of wanting to improve accountability, and I'm pleased to support his bill. It must be something about southeast Calgary.

This government has put forth initiatives and legislation to make sure that accountability and transparency are achieved in everything it does. This bill is an additional tool, Mr. Speaker, that would help make sure that accountability and openness are achieved in all levels of government in this province. The objective of Bill 202 is to create a municipal auditor general, which would ensure that municipal operations are both efficient and effective. As a result there will be a standardized, objective body for municipalities to receive valuable information on how to improve their operations and services.

Mr. Speaker, strong local governments are one of the foundations of a prosperous province, and there are many quality people that are attracted to municipal governments, such as my alderman, Mr. Ric McIver. Bill 202 intends to streamline municipal operations and create a mechanism for Albertans to determine whether they are receiving a fair value for their business and property taxes.

Bill 202 is not the first of its kind. Looking to other provinces, Nova Scotia recently passed legislation that is very similar to what Bill 202 intends to put forth. Mr. Speaker, the province of Nova Scotia passed their Bill No. 138, which is an Act to Amend Chapter 18 of the Acts of 1998, the Municipal Government Act, which achieved royal assent in 2008. Nova Scotia's legislation created an independent municipal auditor general to oversee spending in municipalities. This legislation provides the Minister of Service Nova Scotia and Municipal Relations – I guess the ministries are named slightly differently there – the power to appoint a municipal auditor general to undertake the value of the money audits in all municipalities.

Mr. Speaker, the municipal auditor general must be a qualified auditor, which I presume typically is a chartered accountant, and may hold the office for a term of seven years. The municipal auditor general may examine the accounts, procedures, or programs of a municipality. They may also examine to the same extent persons and bodies receiving a grant from a municipality. The municipal auditor general is entitled to access books, accounts, financial records, electronic data, processing records, reports, files, and all other papers in the broadest sense as well as property belonging to or used by the municipality or municipal body.

The municipal auditor general is scheduled to take office on April 1, 2010. Now, of course, those of the members who know me, Mr. Speaker, know that April 1 is probably my favourite day of the year, and indeed it is. I'm thinking that we've chosen April 1, 2010, however, for opposite reasons, and I'll let the Member for Calgary-Hays talk about that in his conclusion.

The municipal auditor general will evaluate municipalities on whether the rules or procedures applied are sufficient to ensure effective control of money, if authorized expenditures are made with regard to economy and efficiency, and, most importantly, if the money has been spent with proper authorization and according to appropriation. This is similar, of course, to what this government deals with with its own Auditor General, Mr. Speaker. In addition, the municipal auditor general will evaluate whether municipal policies and procedures encourage efficient use of resources and discourage waste and inefficiency, two things that I detest.

The effectiveness of programs, operations, and activities will also be evaluated, Mr. Speaker. The municipal auditor general will report annually to the council in a public meeting if a value-for-money audit is completed and will submit a report to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. In this report the municipal auditor general will make recommendations for improvements in the efficiency of the municipality. Of course, much like our government, this must be done on an ongoing basis in each municipality in order to ensure economy and effectiveness.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to draw this Assembly's attention to the current legislation in Quebec that promotes accountability and transparency at the municipal level and in advance apologize to this House for my terrible French. Under an act representing the ministère des affaires municipales, the bureau of examining auditors may visit the offices of the municipal councils at the discretion of the minister. The examining auditors determine if books, registers, and archives of the offices are being kept correctly and in accordance with the law. Furthermore, they make sure that the security for the secretary-treasurer is valid and is sufficient, and they ensure that public monies are administered according to law. I put to this House that this is something that we would like to see also in Alberta.

The laws respecting the revenues and expenses of municipal corporations in Quebec are observed by the examining auditor as well, Mr. Speaker. Examining auditors complete reports to the Minister of Municipal Affairs detailing each of the inspections and include their remarks regarding the office in question. The auditor is required to include the changes that he or she deems necessary in order to obtain uniformity in the accounting of the offices. In addition, they are also to include the recommendations that deal with the safekeeping of the municipality's funds and the accomplishments of the secretary-treasurer and all of the other municipal officers.

Mr. Speaker, upon receiving the report from the examining auditor, the Minister of Municipal Affairs may give the municipal council instructions as he or she deems it to be in the interest of the municipality and, obviously, also in the interest of the citizens of that municipality. Next the municipal council will acknowledge the minister's instructions and may order steps it believes are necessary to carry them out.

The last jurisdiction which I would like to discuss is Ontario. In 2006 the Municipal Act of Ontario was amended under the title municipal statute amendment act. This amendment grants municipalities the opportunity to appoint an auditor general; however, it does not require the municipality to do so. Several municipalities in Ontario have already acted on this opportunity, including Ottawa, Toronto, Oshawa, and Markham. These cities believe that an independent perspective can help them identify ways in which they can do an even better job for their citizens.

Mr. Speaker, under the legislation the auditor general reports to the municipal council and is responsible for assisting the council and holding itself and the administrators accountable for the quality of stewardship over public funds and for the achievement of value for money in municipal operations, value for taxpayers. In short, these are just a few examples of how some jurisdictions have reached a new level of openness and accountability to reflect the wishes of their citizens.

I'm reminded of a constituent of mine named Oscar Fech, who always talks about accountability. I think that he would endorse this act. He's a proud resident of Kingsland, where I also reside.

Bill 202 intends to take the best practices of each jurisdiction, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has had many exceptional individuals who perform at the highest level when it comes to the management of municipal coffers. We recognize and praise our cities for achieving accountability measures that are currently within our own municipal governance, but we do not doubt our municipalities' successes and accomplishments. Rather, Bill 202 will give municipalities the tools they need to effectively and efficiently provide Albertans with enhanced accountability and transparency, which is why I support this bill and urge others in the Assembly to do the same.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona indicated that municipalities are a level of government. In fact, they're created at the pleasure of the provincial government, the body in which we sit now, pursuant to the Municipal Government Act.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak on Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, proposed by my colleague from Calgary-Hays. I am speaking in favour of the passage of this bill in second reading, which is the passage of the bill in principle.

Now, municipal governments are creatures of the province of Alberta by virtue of the Municipal Government Act. Of course, we do accord them a large amount of financial support, and I think it's reasonable to have the tools to ensure that the funds are properly spent, that those funds that are sent to the municipalities are properly directed to the programs which are intended to be targeted by the provincial government. Very large sums, as I mentioned, are allocated by the provincial government, hundreds of millions of dollars, in fact.

I must say that large cities like my own, the city of Calgary, have very effective audit programs to make sure that those funds are properly spent and that they're spent in the manner in which they were intended to be spent. They have very stringent auditing procedures in the city of Calgary and also in the large cities like Edmonton, Lethbridge, and so on. I also want to commend the city of Calgary for some of their auditing procedures which have worked towards performance measures and efficiencies. I would like to mention a couple of those which have been very notable and, I think, which have been exemplary as far as municipal governments go not only in the province of Alberta but right across the country.

One I would mention is the 311 call centre implemented by the city of Calgary. This 311 call centre is a unified call centre which takes care of all of the departments of the city of Calgary. Whether it's a planning matter or a bylaw enforcement matter – it could be a pothole in the street, a barking dog; it could be concern with the municipal tax assessment; it could be almost anything to do with the civic government – when one calls the 311 number, they have trained employees on the other end of the line. Rather than being redirected by an operator and going through to different departments and perhaps getting connected with the wrong department, one is connected with a knowledgeable person on the other end of the line that can usually give answers straight away. That is one example where efficiencies have been very marked and improved upon and, I think, have set an example for many municipalities across the country.

I also want to mention the 911 call centre in the city of Calgary, which is a tremendous facility. That one integrates the dispatch of police, fire, and emergency medical services from one centre. It is presently in transition, and some of the operators that are in the 911 call centre are already trained to take calls in all three of those areas and to dispatch the necessary services. Those take a tremendous amount of training. They're highly skilled people. The efficiencies are obvious to anyone. Rather than taking time to talk to a 911 operator who has to ascertain what the nature of the problem is and then go through to the appropriate department – fire or EMS or the police – one is immediately dispatched according to what the requirements of the caller are.

Another efficiency that has been gained in terms of performance that I want to mention is in waste collection in the city of Calgary. Formerly we had waste trucks coming down the alley which were manned by three persons. Now we have a new type of vehicle which only takes two persons to operate, and it's much more efficient. Obviously, eliminating one of the three positions resulted in quite a considerable cost saving to the city of Calgary.

I think that the cities, large cities particularly, do a very, very exemplary job in terms of their auditing procedures and their performance audits. Now, having said that, I think the bill as presented by my colleague from Calgary-Hays suggests that performance audits could be of assistance in the case of many municipalities for maximizing efficiencies and that perhaps some of the smaller centres and some of the rural municipalities in particular might benefit by having the input of a municipal auditor general.

The measures proposed in Bill 202 could benefit municipalities in finding shortfalls in operational capabilities. It might assist them in providing information on where those shortfalls exist and what might be done to correct them. Those performance audits, of course, could be done independently from the municipalities, and the recommendations could be given to the municipalities in order to maximize value for taxpayers' dollars. These objective performance audits could be carried out, of course, by professionals. They would enable some long-term strategies to be implemented.

Mr. Speaker, all municipalities, of course, want to ensure that their operations are being conducted in the most efficient and cost-effective manner. In some circumstances one might envision the fact of further investments, like the example that I gave about the city of Calgary, where they invested in a new type of vehicle to do the garbage collection. There are ways in which those efficiencies might be recognized and appreciated, and there might be recommendations made to make things much better.

Another example might be the cost of maintaining older equipment that is less efficient, upgrading to new practices, and of course technology is changing all the time. In particular an outside auditor might be able to have cognizance of what's going on in other jurisdictions, not only in the province of Alberta but right across the country, and be able to recommend some of those best practices to the particular municipality.

Performance audit reports and recommendations such as we receive here in this House from our Auditor General could analyze aspects of any particular operation or public service provided. They might enhance, for example, the delivery of social services by the city or municipality. Particularly in the case of small municipalities there could be efficiencies by joining forces and having some interjurisdictional co-operation between municipalities and delivering those services or perhaps having a centre for treatment or a centre for providing a particular type of social service in one municipality and sharing it with another.

Mr. Speaker, performance audits would also be useful in communicating to the public the municipalities' decisions to invest in certain areas. I think it's important for ratepayers to have some justification when their money is being expended, and a performance audit would certainly help in that regard. It would enhance the stream of information by strengthening municipal performances in their audits. It would give, as I said, guidance when accounting for decisions.

In summary, Bill 202 recognizes how performance audits might assist some municipalities in ensuring the efficiency and effectiveness of their operations. For those reasons I am supportive of Bill 202, and I would encourage my fellow members to support this bill in principle on its second reading.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy to participate in today's discussion in second reading of Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays. Alberta has a large number of far-reaching municipalities, many of them rural. Their continued success is a crucial factor in the long-term prosperity of the province. Our municipalities have grown. As such, we as a government have committed to helping municipalities address such growth with the municipal sustainability initiative.

Our government is also committed to low taxes, efficient spending, and a sufficient degree of local autonomy as many important public services are provided at a local level. Bill 202 helps ensure that these goals are met by establishing a framework that will improve the communication and learning process between the government and Alberta municipalities. Mr. Speaker, this will be achieved through the office of the municipal auditor general as proposed by Bill 202. Municipalities across the province will benefit from the office proposed by Bill 202 as it will serve as a central node between all municipalities.

Currently there exist a number of forums for collaboration between municipalities, such as the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties, or the AAMDC, and Alberta Rural Municipal Administrators Association. These organizations are co-operative bodies comprised of membership from Alberta's various municipal districts, especially in the case of the AAMDC, which includes each municipal district and county within the province. In the case of the ARMAA representation is composed of five broader geographic zones.

Mr. Speaker, co-operative associations such as those I just mentioned can serve as productive forums for discussion of municipal matters and as an effective liaison between the province and its municipalities. The AAMDC, in particular, maintains a good perspective of the operational aspects of the province's numerous rural municipalities through its organizational structure of five districts and representation by each county or municipality. Indeed, such an association can serve as a useful conduit for the office of the municipal auditor general. Bill 202 seeks to build upon this collaboration and would provide recommendations to improve operational efficiencies and effectiveness as well as documents and new implementations for future reference.

The proposed office of the municipal auditor general can work with these associations, thereby taking into full account the diverse needs of our rural areas while also promoting a transparent reporting process and accountability for municipal operations. Moreover, the standard performance audits compiled by the office of the municipal auditor general could enhance grant allocations and aid the implementation of best practices in municipal operations. This could ultimately help stabilize local taxes and increase budget flexibility.

Mr. Speaker, the municipal sustainability initiative funding criteria could also be enhanced as a result of information compiled by the office of the municipal auditor general. This can benefit municipalities that face unique challenges in their ability to conduct internal performance audits due to the geographical size of the municipal district or a staffing shortage. Rural municipal districts, for example, may not have the same administrative resources as large cities. Given the number of rural municipal districts in the province, their diversity, voluntary and independent information sharing may not be constant due to lack of resources. Rural municipalities can conduct ad hoc performance assessment from time to time; using external consultants when recruiting, for example.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake. The time limit for consideration of this item has been concluded. We will continue it next time.

5:00 Motions Other than Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Official Mushroom of Alberta

502. Mr. Benito moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to introduce amendments to the Emblems of Alberta Act to designate Leccinum boreale, also known as northern roughstem or red cap, as the official mushroom of Alberta.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and introduce Motion 502. I acknowledge that there are pressing economic issues that currently exist; however, this motion is important to my constituents and 2,500 Albertans who have chosen this mushroom to be designated as Alberta's provincial mushroom emblem. In fact, Her Honour Lois Hole, the former Lieutenant Governor of Alberta, believed it was a worthwhile goal and a way to recognize an important part of our heritage. She also believed that mushrooms play a crucial role in Alberta's ecosystem, history, medicine, culture, and cuisine.

By recognizing Leccinum boreale as Alberta's official mushroom, we would be continuing a long-held tradition. There are a number of official emblems that reflect Alberta's rich history, its people, and its biological and geographical diversity. Currently the Emblems of Alberta Act recognizes a number of environmental emblems.

For example, the wild rose was designated as Alberta's floral emblem in 1930 to recognize the valuable role it plays in Alberta's ecosystem. Also, rough fescue was adopted as Alberta's official grass in 2003, recognizing the vast amount and variety of this grass in the province. The lodgepole pine was established as Alberta's official tree in 1984, recognizing its value in constructing railway ties during Alberta's settlement as well as being the preferred wood for teepee poles, which I'm sure the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake knows very well. Petrified wood is found in gravel pits across this province and was made Alberta's official stone in 1977. As you can see, Alberta has recognized a variety of environmental emblems to symbolize this great province.

Mr. Speaker, there has been a lot of support behind this motion. One of the major proponents is the Alberta Mycological Society. This society plays an invaluable role in promoting the awareness of fungi in this province, and it is the only such organization in a western province. The mission of the Alberta Mycological Society is to raise awareness as well as to educate and promote a greater understanding and appreciation of the kingdom of fungi. Their awareness and education activities include seasonal trips, mushroom identification workshops, mushroom expositions, and an annual president's dinner, where a gourmet mushroom meal is served.

In 2004 the Alberta Mycological Society launched its Pick a Wild Mushroom, Alberta! campaign to choose a mushroom as Alberta's new provincial emblem, which was funded in part by the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation. The society received over 2,500 votes, with the Leccinum boreale emerging as the mushroom of choice for a new mushroom emblem of Alberta. This mushroom was chosen because it is found across Alberta, most commonly under poplar and trembling aspen trees. It is edible, easily identifiable, and has a long history of human use. It also has a long growing season and has been valued highly in a cultural sense as an edible mushroom by immigrant communities, especially the Ukrainian and Polish communities which populated this province.

Mr. Speaker, a great deal of time and effort has been put forward to establish a mushroom emblem for this province. Alberta would be the first province in Canada to establish an official mushroom emblem and would join a handful of American states that have already done so. Currently Oregon recognizes the Pacific golden chanterelle as the official state mushroom, Minnesota has established the sponge morel as the state's official mushroom, and legislation was introduced in Missouri in January 2008 to recognize the morel as their state's official mushroom.

It is important to point out that the mushroom industry contributes $30 million annually to the Alberta economy – a $30 million dollar annual contribution to the Alberta economy. By recognizing an official mushroom, we may help promote this valuable industry as well as inspire additional mushroom business ventures. It may lead to additional investment and diversification of the Alberta economy.

Mr. Speaker, this idea was brought to me by constituents in my riding. As their elected representative I have the responsibility to bring forward their concerns, petitions, and economic ideas, which is exactly what this motion represents. It is not just an emblem but a symbol that could encourage the growth of Alberta's $30 million mushroom industry. It is for this reason that I have brought forward Motion 502, and I encourage all hon. members to join me in urging the government to make Leccinum boreale Alberta's mushroom emblem.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to commend the member for bringing forth the motion regarding the designation of the red cap mushroom as the official mushroom of the province of Alberta. I appreciate the fact that this motion has brought some recognition to not only members of the House but to the Alberta public for mushrooms and the world of mycology in general. I would also like to commend the Edmonton Mycological Society for the same reasons, in bringing forth all of these various mushrooms, including the red cap mushroom, to the attention of the public in Alberta and particularly for the participation that they engendered by virtue of having a public election or choosing one of the three finalists that they put forth to the Alberta public for the official mushroom of the province of Alberta. All of this information has created people's awareness of these fascinating vegetables.

Now, for most people wild mushrooms are largely a dark and unknown subject. Hence, we often hear the simile that someone who is deprived of knowledge or information is said to be like a mushroom: they're kept in the dark, and they're fed manure. But to those of us who love nature and spend time in the outdoors, mushrooms are not only beautiful things but a fascinating part of the environment, and for those of us who appreciate eating mushrooms, they're even more fascinating because they make a wonderful accompaniment to meats, great soups. They're great fried in stuffing. I use them in all of my wild game stuffings, and they're just great.

Mushrooms, as people may not know, are only the fruiting bodies of fungi. They belong to a particular phylum of fungi called the basidiomycetes. Basidiomycetes are fungi that have these particular fruiting bodies above ground, which we know as mushrooms or toadstools or puffballs or things of that nature. [interjections] Pardon me?

Mr. Liepert: It sounds like an opposition question.

Dr. Brown: No, those are different kinds of puffballs.

These basidiomycetes, as are all fungi, are part of a very healthy environment. They help to break down vegetable matter. Of course, the fruiting bodies that we see on the surface are only a very, very small part of the fungi. In fact, the vast biomass of the fungi lies either beneath the ground or inside of decaying vegetable matter, things like trees and fallen leaves. Anything that's moist and in an environment that has lots of moisture tends to have a lot of fungi invading it. It helps to break it down, and it helps to create soil.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do love mushrooms, but my difficulty with this particular motion is choosing one of these wonderful basidiomycetes over all of the other basidiomycetes that we have in the province of Alberta. I thank the hon. member for providing us with a poster of some of these particular mushrooms.

I must say that I have some other favorites. I'm not too familiar with the red cap mushroom, but one of my favorites is the shaggy mane mushroom. I see on here that the Latin name for it is the Coprinus comatus. For those of you who don't know shaggy mane mushrooms, they grow in disturbed areas, quite often along the roadsides. They're one of the most common mushrooms in the province of Alberta, and they're absolutely delicious. They have a very short shelf life, however. They have to be picked very early in the morning, and they tend to go black, which doesn't mean that they can't be used, but they become quite inky after a day in the sun. Shaggy mane mushrooms are extremely edible, extremely tasty. They have a very, very pungent flavour, so a few of those fried up in a little bit of butter help to flavour almost any dish. They're a wonderful mushroom. That's one of my favorites, and I'd be hard-pressed to pick the red cap over that one.

Another one of my all-time favourite mushrooms is the puffball, Lycoperdon perlatum. A lot of people don't know that puffballs are actually very edible. In fact, my aunt Frances Borgal used to love picking puffballs, and she often brought them to our house when I was a youngster. They can grow quite large, and sliced up and fried in a little bit of butter, they are also very, very tasty. Incidentally, puffballs were also used by the native Indians in making war paint. After they were dried out, the spores are very fine, and they used to adorn their faces with this extract from puffballs as part of their war paint.

There are other mushrooms that I could talk about. The field mushroom, Agaricus silvaticus, again, is another one that's a very tasty one. It's also very, very common in the province of Alberta, and it's the one that we would most commonly associate with being edible. A lot of the other ones people are reluctant to use because of the fact that they're afraid that they might be poisonous.

I want to thank, again, the member. As I said, the reason that I'm unable to support the motion is simply because there are too many other ones, and I would hate to pick one over the other. But I want to thank him for his efforts in bringing the red cap mushroom and all of these basidiomycetes to the attention of the Assembly and the public.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: I must comment that the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill makes the debate delicious.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you wish to speak?

Ms Notley: It's a moderate kind of pleasure to be able to rise and speak to this particular motion, the emblem debate. It's, I guess, very important that we have a conversation about the province's emblems. We have a lot of emblems, actually, in Alberta. We have, of course, the wild rose, which we've heard about. We have a grass emblem. Rough fescue is our grass. We have an official tartan and an official dress tartan. We actually have two separate tartans. We have an official bird. We have an official stone. Petrified wood is apparently our official stone, which is kind of interesting. We have an official tree, the lodgepole pine. I'm not sure how many of those are left yet, but there you go; we have an official tree. We have official colours, which are remarkably similar to other well-known colours, blue and gold, with quotation marks around it, not at all similar to, say, orange, so no similarities there. We have, of course, the official mammal, the Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep. Of course, this I don't think made it into the rousing debate in question period involving the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, but we also have an official fish, the bull trout, a type of trout. Anyway, we certainly have a lot of official things, and I wonder how much debate went into the establishment of those particular official things.

Now we're talking about the official mushroom. I guess my first question is a little bit along the lines of the previous speaker. Why is it that we're picking this particular mushroom? You know, as soon as you pick one mushroom, you, of course, exclude all the others. As soon as you recognize one thing, you inadvertently insult the others. If you pick this mushroom, do other mushrooms not get their day in the shade, as it were? What about the other important fungi out there? For instance, one might say that the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood is a fun guy. Why can't he be on an emblem, for example? There are a lot of other things that could be on an emblem. The puffball was already identified by these folks over here. Clearly, if you were to actually do a vote, I'm sure that would be a mushroom that a significant unnamed group of government backbenchers would be inclined to want to support. So, you know, we have all these various and sundry overlooked fungi that will be, I'm sure, very deeply hurt through their failure to be included on this list.

Moving away from maybe the slightly more lighthearted reasons why one might not want to identify this particular mushroom as an official mushroom, I'm compelled to quote, actually, a member of the government cabinet, which is not something I do often. In this particular case I thought it was very interesting that the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit, I believe, was quoted in one of the newspapers, saying, "Bless them all for their enthusiasm, but do we really need any more official anythings?" I've gotta say that I was kind of inclined to agree with that. "Every time we do one of these things it costs money, and it's not a cheap proposition. I think we can spend our money elsewhere right now."

I have to say that that kind of leads into sort of my key point in this particular discussion. Members here may recall that we had a debate about changing the standing orders in the last session. One of the issues that members from the opposition put forward with respect to standing orders was the process through which members of the opposition managed to get either private members' bills or private members' motions onto the agenda. Of course, as you all know, right now we do it through a lottery. If you don't happen to be one that is very successful at lotteries, then you don't get a private member's motion or a private member's bill.

At the time we suggested a different approach, one where maybe the numbers of motions and bills would be split in half, and the opposition could take their half and divide them up on a pro rata basis. At the time I was told: no, no, there are very, very burning, important issues that all backbench members of the Assembly need to be able to address, very important issues, and that it's not partisan, and we all need to be able to have very important discussions about the really key issues of the day. So here we are today, having one of those conversations, apparently.

I would suggest that given the discussions we've had in the House over just the last three weeks, if I – well, in fact, I don't even have to. I was going to say that if I were to go into the sponsoring member's constituency and ask those constituents what they thought was a burning issue, but I don't actually have to go there because I often get mail from people outside of my riding. I believe I've received some from the hon. member's riding. Some of the things that they might talk about or in some cases have talked about would include their fear with respect to keeping their job over the next year or whether they will fall into that 15,000 and probably much, much higher number that the finance minister has said will lose their job.

They might talk about whether their grandparents will be able to find a long-term care bed with the appropriate level of care when they become ill and need that care. They might talk about the unfortunate state of our foster care system and whether or not we can keep our children safe in Alberta. They might talk about the issues of our environment and the fact that we appear to have no plan to meaningfully clean up the tailings ponds which are threatening the water system in the whole northern part of the province. There's not a shortage of things that people contact my office about that this Legislature has responsibility over that they are concerned about. There is not a shortage of important issues for us to discuss.

That's why I think it's a bit unfortunate that today, because of the process we have in place, we're not able to bring these matters forward in the form of private members' bills or in the form of motions. Instead we're in this process where today we're talking about this particular mushroom.

Having said all that, I will of course also say that, you know, were I to actually have to choose one, I would have to say that the puffball, reflecting this Legislature, would definitely be the more appropriate choice. But I won't take any more time because I think I've made the point that we're really taking too much time dealing with this particular issue.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I don't have much more to add to this debate. My friend the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill has made most of my comments.

The Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has mentioned colours. I look at the colour of this mushroom, and it actually is red. I'm not sure if that is her favourite colour or not. It definitely is not mine. It's not something that I like to wear on a regular basis.

Just before I get to a couple of comments, Mr. Speaker, I wanted to mention that I do appreciate the motion that the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods has brought forward. He's a very hard-working MLA. He's intellectually honest. Obviously, he was elected the same time as me.

I do engage in a bit of direct democracy every now and then, Mr. Speaker. Some of my favourite constituents have talked to me, and they've asked me why we actually are debating this when we have a world-wide economic crisis, when we have gang shootings in my own constituency, and some of the other issues that people have mentioned.

If we are going to debate this, the one thing I'll mention is that I've looked through this list, and I don't see any shiitake mushrooms here at all. Secondly, I also have started to look through some of the other motions here, other issues, as the previous speaker also did, and I notice that there are other motions, like Motion 523, which talks about deterring frivolous costs for the Human Rights Commission. That's another thing I'd like to debate, Mr. Speaker.

Some of the comments I'm getting about this just on my Twitter account. There's one person who is allergic to mushrooms, and she wonders if the government is trying to kill her. Somebody here also owns a mushroom farm in Sherwood Park, and someone takes it quite seriously here as well. On top of that, the press even is looking at this. But the most important thing that I will mention is, again, from one of my favourite constituents. She says: "Oh, come on. With the economy and infrastructure in disarray someone thinks you have to debate mushrooms?"

I will pass my hat to the next speaker and table these photographs that the Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods has been so kind to provide.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. members? The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to speak to Motion 502, Alberta's provincial mushroom, brought forth by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. Motion 502 urges the government to amend the Emblems of Alberta Act and declare the red cap Alberta's provincial mushroom. The mushroom would be grouped into a category of natural symbols along with other provincial symbols: the flower, grass, stone, bird, mammal, and fish.

Mushrooms not only play an important role in our natural world, but they also play a role in my culture. Mr. Speaker, I am a supporter of this motion for one major reason. There are approximately 300,000 Albertans of Ukrainian descent in our province today, and mushrooms are very important to the Ukrainian culture, especially in our cooking. When I got married, I participated in mushroom picking near Smoky Lake. This activity is something that my husband's family has always participated in and still does. We get on our quads, we go into the bush, and we look for mushrooms. We pick all sorts of mushrooms, including the red tops, the type that we are discussing here today. Mushroom picking was a way to bring our family together to enjoy and appreciate the beautiful Alberta landscape. We then used these mushrooms in many of the Ukrainian dishes that my family cooked. I still use a lot of mushrooms in my cooking today, in dishes like nalesniki, which are mushroom crepes, mushrooms and cream, everyone's favourite. Plus, a mushroom dish is one of the 12 dishes that we serve on Ukrainian Christmas Eve.

Mr. Speaker, while it may seem strange at first to declare a provincial mushroom for Alberta, it makes a lot of sense, especially when it's such an influential ingredient in our culture. Legislation that creates provincial symbols of our heritage is very meaningful to the province and its citizens. It's very meaningful to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, his constituents, and people like myself.

I am supportive of Motion 502, Alberta's provincial mushroom, because the mushroom is a great symbol to myself. This is very important to Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for giving me this opportunity to discuss Motion 502.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to speak to Motion 502, Alberta's provincial mushroom, brought forth by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. Originally I was skeptical about having an official provincial mushroom, but then I thought that we have a provincial flower, the wild rose; a provincial tree, the lodgepole pine; a provincial grass, rough fescue; and I just recently learned, this afternoon, that we also have a provincial stone. While I can see that as important as fescue and roses and stones have been in my life, trees and mushrooms have been much more so.

There are persons in this House who have on occasion today said that they felt like they were being treated like mushrooms. We've used that phrase to describe population explosions. The humble mushroom itself has taken on a new prominence in Alberta. Veggie burgers often feature a portobello mushroom, that tastes, I am told, almost like beef. As a cheeseburger-in-paradise kind of guy I confess I don't have any first-hand knowledge of that. Mushrooms have transcended the range of culinary delights from pig-snout truffle to the chanterelle to the barn-raised little white ones. They are a delight.

For those of us who could not wait to leave home when we were young, we quickly discovered that mushroom soup was perhaps the most versatile food in the cupboard. It ranked right up there with macaroni and cheese as a staple of youth poverty. In those dark days leading up to payday, when we had to make a decision between beer or groceries, we'd often buy beer, knowing that our environmental sensibilities meant that we would recycle the empties instead of discarding whatever it was that lettuce morphed into after two weeks in the fridge. We ate mac and cheese without milk, and we drank a little bit of beer. Mushroom soup could be soup, but often as not it was gravy in a can. My favourite meal, once I learned about ovenproof pans, was a little creation I called the SPAM filet. You open a can of SPAM – and, please, don't do this with corned beef; I'll have to talk to you about that – stand it on end, butterfly it, a couple of slices of pineapple, cover it liberally with mushroom soup, bake it in the oven, and that's excellent, excellent eating.

Of course, as every man in this room will know, once you entertain the thoughts of love, you will be called upon to show your new love interest your culinary skill with that old standard, pork chops and mushroom soup gravy. It is also at this dinner that you will discover your commitment to living the simplistic life and modelling yourself after Thoreau, which means that you don't own a corkscrew. The girl, if she shares an interest in you, will likely have one in her purse and will save the evening. You will of course be enthralled by this, and she will vow that while she appreciates the efforts, once you're living together, she will teach you how to cook real food. You will not fully comprehend what this means until you trade in your Camaro on a minivan and are expected to develop an opinion on things like the various shades of blue for the nursery.

Now, in British Columbia they have a slightly different affinity for mushrooms of the psychotropic kind. I can certainly understand how it might take that kind of fungus to make life more bearable, but as an illegal substance we can no more support the cultivation or harvesting than we can the consumption.

Seriously, Mr. Speaker, about this motion. This motion is for the law-abiding good people of Alberta, who know the difference between a red cap and a toadstool and who can be judged to act responsibly in their pursuit of the perfect fungus. I believe that the hon. member is an excellent representative of his constituents for whom this is an issue, and while there are those here who will attempt to silence his voice on this issue, I remind this House that we represent our constituents in this place and not the other way around. Give the hon. member his due. He's fulfilling a promise to a constituent, and we must respect this because, I am told, although admittedly the line has been just recently used, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods is a real fun guy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What more is there to be said about this mushroom? We've had cooking lessons. We've had eating-the-special-mushroom lessons, that apparently some people may be more attuned to than myself.

Mr. Speaker, I know that some will say and some have already said: is this the most important task at hand for this government right now? To that end I must admit that it is not. But this is a private member's motion. It's normal practice for a private member's motion to come forward to urge the government to consider doing whatever is in the motion. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods' Motion 502 urges this government to adopt the red cap as the official fungi emblem of Alberta. That's important to this member, and he has come back with quite a bit of backup, insight, and knowledge as well as many reasons as to why he feels this is important.

Some things were touched on earlier, one of which was the education benefits to Albertans on these mushrooms because of their significant value, that the average person is unaware of. One of those examples is how mushrooms contribute to medical research. In addition, they're a great source of protein, fibre, minerals, vitamin B, and ascorbic acid. They also help Alberta's ecosystems by decomposing organic matter. The mushroom, by growing around the roots, as was mentioned earlier by Calgary-Nose Hill, actually feeds many plants beneficial to our ecosystem, and the plants in turn supply those fungi with sugars that are required for them, that are picked up through photosynthesis.

In addition, mushrooms are a valuable industry. In fact, Alberta's mushroom industry contributes $30 million in annual revenues. The industry helps ensure a diversified economy and creates jobs. The mushroom as a fungus is underestimated, and this motion can help promote that importance. Although the northern red cap does have some things in common with the opposition, just the red part, if we were going to consider fungi as an emblem, that mushroom would be the one to pick because of its abundance in the province.

Mr. Speaker, I close by urging everyone just to take a look at the motion and think of its importance to our fellow Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods. I urge them to support his efforts to make this mushroom our provincial emblem.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I'm delighted to stand and speak to having a mushroom named as an emblem of Alberta, the red mushroom, not blue, not green, but red. Wonderful. I was pleased that one of my colleagues across the way alluded to psychedelic mushrooms. Now, that, of course, is what I thought we were going to talk about, which would have been a lot more fun. From what I understand, magic mushrooms really can expand your mind, and I'm sure the debate would be quite interesting around that.

However, we already in Alberta have armorial bearings, which includes the arms, the crest, the supporters, and our motto, of course, which is Fortis et Liber, which means strong and free. We also have the flag of Alberta and the floral emblem of Alberta. We have a grass. We have a pattern, which would apply to our tartan. We have a bird, we have a tree, we have a colour, we have a mammal, we have a fish, we have symbols of distinction, we've got regulations, and we also have some legislation for anyone using the official emblem in the wrong way. So I just think it's very interesting that the mushroom would be another object that we would have as an official something in this province.

I will just close with this thought: I would give you your mushroom if you would give me my rodeo. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wishing to join the debate?

Seeing none, I would call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods to close the debate.

Mr. Benito: When I accepted this idea from a constituency member, I spoke to my daughter, and my daughter told me: "Daddy, you have to be careful in presenting this to the House because many people may not see this as a traditional emblematic symbol. They might think that this is not a serious issue, that this is frivolous or funny." So that's the risk, and I'm willing to take that risk to represent the views and interests of my constituency members. I think that as an elected member of the House it is my responsibility to bring forward whatever issues they think might be important to this province.

There is an opportunity in this. There is a qualitative value to reinforcing provincial pride and legislation that builds on existing symbols and heritage which are meaningful in the life of the province and its citizens.

I just want to mention also that a study of nontimber forest products estimates the value of wild mushrooms to be $100 million in Canada. A study of the pine mushroom in B.C. estimates revenues of $10 million to $40 million annually. There have been no specific studies of the economic value of wild fungi in Alberta. There are no regulations in place requiring permits. In 2001 in Montana, where mushroom-picking permits are required, 3,642 commercial permits and 3,750 personal permits were issued. The annual value to that state is $200 million to $500 million per day in the high-peak season.

I would still request everybody to support this motion. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 502 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the hour, I would like to move that we call it 6 o'clock and adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:41 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. Guide us so that we may use the privilege given us as elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. Give us the strength to labour diligently, the courage to think and to speak with clarity and conviction and without prejudice or pride. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Stevens: Well, thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. It's truly my pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly two individuals from the Russian presidential academy for state service, Dr. Nikolai Volgin, professor of Economics and dean of the Labour and Social Policy Department; and Dr. Vera Smorchkova, head of the northern program at the Russian Academy of Public Administration and assistant to the chairman of the Northern and Indigenous Affairs Committee. Accompanying Drs. Volgin and Smorchkova is their interpreter, Andre Dimitri. I'd also like to introduce somebody who is no stranger to this Assembly, Dr. Mike Percy, dean of the University of Alberta School of Business.

The delegation is here representing the Russian presidential academy for state service, which trains and provides professional education for all levels of Russian state service. Alberta is proud to host these guests and to assist them in learning more about our postsecondary education system. I would ask that our honoured guests please rise at this time and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of students from Springbank community high school. Accompanying them are eight parents and teachers: Mrs. Deanna Ring, Miss Natalie Casey, Mr. Dave Fraser, Mrs. Tammy Hodgson, Mr. Terry Stein, Ms Cynthia Johansen, Mrs. Christine Whitney, and Mr. Ron Klippert. They're taking a tour of the Legislature and studying how the government of Alberta works. I'd like them to please rise and receive the traditional warm reception and welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today as part of Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie I have the privilege of introducing to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly representatives from the University of Alberta's Campus Saint-Jean. The Campus Saint-Jean, which just celebrated last year its 100th anniversary, is among the top francophone postsecondary institutions outside of the province of Quebec. It offers more than 650 students a variety of very unique undergraduate and graduate programs in French, ranging from education to business to nursing to engineering and much more. The campus is also home to the University of Alberta's Canadian Studies Institute and the largest French language library collection in western Canada, a real gem.

I would ask our guests in the members' gallery to stand to receive the warm welcome of this Assembly as I introduce them. They are dean Marc Arnal, Mr. Denis Fontaine, associate dean responsible for recruitment, and Dr. Claude Couture, director of the Canadian Studies Institute. I would ask all members to give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Mrs. Janet Ryan-Newell. I had the pleasure of meeting Janet last Friday at the Crossroads Family Services Foster Parent Banquet. Mrs. Ryan-Newell founded Crossroads Family Services since 1997. Crossroads is a nonprofit foster care agency. Their mandate is to recruit, train, and support high-quality foster families. Prior to this new opportunity she had worked as a child psychologist and a teacher in Edmonton for many years. I would ask her to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Foster Parents

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are more than 2,300 foster homes in this province caring for some of our most vulnerable children during what can often be troubling or difficult times in their lives. Each and every day they demonstrate dedication, generosity, patience, compassion, and strength.

This past Friday I was truly honoured to take part in the Crossroads Family Services Foster Parent Banquet that was organized by Mrs. Janet Ryan-Newell. It was a wonderful opportunity to visit with a number of dedicated foster families. It brought me great warmth and hope to know that there are people like them who open their homes and hearts to children and youth in need.

I also had the opportunity to hear about the terrific turnout at the foster parent recruitment information session hosted by my colleague the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose. We need more families like them to help us care for young Albertans. People of many backgrounds and situations become wonderful foster parents. I encourage Albertans to visit fostercarealberta.ca to learn more about foster parenting and if it's right for their family.

I want to express my heartfelt gratitude to Alberta foster parents. Without a doubt, your kindness, skill, and commitment are making a difference in the lives of young people and in helping to create a stronger, more vibrant Alberta.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Confederation Park Senior Citizens Centre

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to talk about a very special place within my constituency of Calgary-North Hill, Confederation Park Senior Citizens Centre. The centre was founded in 1973, beginning as a small group of seniors who wanted to create a place for seniors to stay connected with their community and maintain an active lifestyle. What began as meetings at St. Giles church grew to 125 members in their first year. Confederation Park Senior Citizens Centre now boasts over 900 members.

On February 25, 2009, I attended the centre's annual general meeting, where it highlighted the past year's successes and challenges and looked forward to the upcoming year. From the tea and conversation program to the camera club and fundraising events, the Confederation Park Senior Citizens Centre is an outstanding example of the kind of community that Calgary-North Hill is. The centre is even being used now by the family care centre in a pilot project for Alzheimer's patients and their caregivers.

Confederation Park seniors' centre averages 339 volunteers monthly who put in over 38,000 hours a year. The volunteers, who are the lifeblood of this facility, make me proud to be their MLA.

Mr. Speaker, just last month the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports met with myself and the president of Confederation Park seniors' centre, Claire Crierie, regarding some of the operational challenges facing the centre. We had a welcome and good discussion about how to keep such a needed resource for our seniors in our communities accessible and affordable.

I'd like to commend this facility for another amazing year in operation and wish them even more success in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Health Ethics Week

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak on Alberta's eighth Health Ethics Week, which took place from the 2nd to the 8th of this month.

According to the Provincial Health Ethics Network an ethical issue arises in any situation in which people face choices about how to act that will have an impact on others. Health ethics is the branch of ethics that deals with ethics issues arising in the fields of health care, medicine and biology.

Making ethical decisions within a public service context is becoming increasingly complex because of the advancement of technologies, evolving demographics and trends, and greater citizen interest in decisions that affect our lives and demand for better information to make informed decisions.

Health ethics issues are surfaced from all aspects of health services from the delivery of health care such as making decisions on end-of-life matters, to health promotion – an example would be allocating resources to preventative versus acute care – to conducting health research on matters such as gene therapy and informed consent.

Mr. Speaker, the key goals for the designated Health Ethics Week include highlighting the importance of examining values underpinning the health system, offering health ethics education, and profiling health ethics issues across the province. One of the objectives of Health Ethics Week is to engage citizens of Alberta in discussions about the meaning of respecting human dignity, promoting well-being for all, and advocating fairness.

The theme for the 2009 Health Ethics Week was Nurturing Respect and Caring in Times of Transition, which focuses on promoting respect between health care providers, patients, staff, and the public. Highlights from this year's events include lectures on subjects such as apology legislation and health care, ethics across cultures, human dignity, and medical technology. I believe most people can appreciate the level of complexity and controversy involved in these discourses just by the titles of the events.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

North East Centre of Community Society

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to offer my sincerest congratulations to the North East Centre of Community Society for acquiring funding for their new Genesis centre in northeast Calgary. This facility will provide an 18,000 square foot library, fitness centre, large gymnasium, multipurpose meeting room, community kitchen, food and retail services, and a new high school. The entire project will cover 225,000 square feet developed in the communities of Martindale, Taradale, and Saddle Ridge.

Mr. Speaker, the benefits of this building are numerous, such as immigration assistance, youth and family support services as well as employment and training assistance. It will also give young people a place to go in their spare time, and we all know that the more time spent on positive activities such as recreation and cultural pursuits, the less likely these young people are to experiment with drugs or get swept up in gang life.

The NECCS facility will also serve to break down cultural and ethnic barriers. Those seeking assistance with employment issues as well as English as a second language will be able to find support agencies here. This will also help new Canadians integrate into both the workforce and society, allowing them to participate fully in their communities to the benefit of all Calgarians.

This facility will serve as a jewel in the crown of northeast Calgary. I want to congratulate the NECCS board and their members and their partners in the community: the YMCA, the city of Calgary, the United Way of Calgary, Genesis corporation as well as all of the local community groups for their hard work and dedication. I would also like to thank the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit, who graciously offered his help when I met with him to promote this facility. I would like to thank the Premier and other hon. members who were in attendance. Without the efforts of all of these people this initiative would not have been possible. The legacy they have created will last for many generations to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Young Worker Safety

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Back in October I had the privilege of attending the launch of Alberta's young worker safety campaign called bloodylucky.ca. Along with the Minister of Employment and Immigration I had the honour of speaking with young workers at this event. I am strongly behind this web-based campaign, one that garnered significant media attention and had over 60,000 website visits in the first week alone. Now, we will never know for sure whether bloodylucky.ca can be directly credited with saving lives or limbs, but I am a firm believer that when we can encourage young Albertans to discuss workplace health and safety with their employers or they can talk about it amongst their peers, it is well worth it.

I was very pleased to hear that bloodylucky.ca has now been recognized by the Advertising Club of Edmonton. At its recent ACE awards bloodylucky.ca received the fearless client award, which is most fitting. I am told that the award is for a campaign that demonstrates a willingness to stretch boundaries and to take creative risks in an effort to deliver effective communications. This campaign pushed the boundaries because it had to, it went beyond the usual government messaging because it had to, and it made young Alberta workers sit up and take note because they had to.

I would like to commend everyone involved in bloodylucky.ca for having the courage to move forth with this campaign, for having the passion to reach out to such a hard-to-reach audience, and for being, as the ACE awards proclaim, a fearless client.

Congratulations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Agricultural Service Board Awards

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The 2009 agricultural service board annual supper and community services volunteer appreciation night was held this past Friday, March 6. It was hosted by Mayor Jim Rennie and the council and staff from Woodlands county. The evening started out with an official greeting by our Speaker, MLA for Barrhead-Morinville-Westlock. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for that. After a fantastic home-cooked meal the first recognition went to John and Mabel Baxter. The Baxters won the Northlands farm family award in 2008 for Woodlands county.

I would also like to mention the Golden Heart award winners for 2008: Helen Kluin and Pauline Thompson from Fort Assiniboine; Bill Jackson, Kaj Christensen, Don and Bonnie Myers of Blue Ridge; and Lorraine Yagos, Toni Meyers, and Diane Hagman from Anselmo.

This year's civic award was won by the Whitecourt Woodlands Flying Club. The club hosted an air show, with attendance of nearly 10,000, Mr. Speaker.

Our volunteers are the real movers and shakers in our communities. They make things happen and ensure that events run smoothly. Mr. Speaker, on both your behalf and mine I would like to congratulate the award winners. A big thank you to Woodlands county for treating us to a great evening at Topland hall, which is located just kilometres from the geographic centre of our province, Mr. Speaker, as you know.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

Dr. Brown: In accordance with Standing Order 99 the Standing Committee on Private Bills has reviewed the petitions that were presented Thursday, March 5, 2009, and I can advise the House that the petitions comply with standing orders 90 to 94. Mr. Speaker, this is my report.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to present a petition which reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to request the inclusion of Complex Decongestive Therapy in the list of accepted therapeutic procedures covered by Alberta Health Care.

This petition adds 246 signatures to the 335 signatures on a similar petition which was presented in 2006. The signatures were gathered by the Alberta Lymphedema Association, members of which were my guests in the House yesterday.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Animal Health Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce Bill 24, the Animal Health Amendment Act, 2009.

This new act allows Alberta to better prepare for and respond to an outbreak of a highly contagious livestock disease, and it also allows the government to respond to emergency disease situations quicker and more effectively to protect both animal and human health. The amendments to the act are being sought for minor improvements to the Animal Health Act. The proposed changes are completely aligned with the Alberta livestock and meat strategy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 24 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 24 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table Bill 26, the Wildlife Amendment Act, 2009, for first reading.

The Wildlife Act governs the management of wildlife as a Crown resource and enables the hunting and trapping of wildlife while providing protections and controls where necessary. Wildlife management is challenging and continuously changing, and these amendments will eliminate certain challenges in administering and enforcing the act. These miscellaneous amendments will clarify legislation to avoid confusion in courts and deal with offences. The amendments will also allow fish and wildlife officers to deal with offences, monitor hunting activities, respond to wildlife issues, and conduct wildlife control measures more effectively. These amendments will strengthen our wildlife management legislation to ensure the protection of our wildlife resources for current and future Albertans.

[Motion carried; Bill 26 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 26 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Speaker's Ruling

Use of Electronic Devices in the Chamber

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we move to Oral Question Period, I just want to advise all members that I have been receiving complaints. In the recent letter that I put out to all hon. members with respect to laptop computers and other electronic devices, including BlackBerrys, I indicated they were not to be utilized during question period. There's something going on in virtual wonderland called twittering, and it seems that even as the question period goes on, some hon. members have been accessing their BlackBerrys to put some messages in the virtual world before the question is even answered by another person. Come on now. We agreed on certain things, certain decorum. I've even noticed today that prior to this point in time several members had BlackBerrys out. Please.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In these uncertain economic times uncertainty is dominating the markets. This uncertainty is only heightened with the Premier continuously giving different messages about the plans for Alberta and what Alberta is facing. We've heard a different message from this government on the economic plan every week. To the Premier: why isn't the Premier providing a consistent economic message to Albertans?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we are. I've said that part of our three-point plan will be to tighten up our spending in the upcoming budget. The second will be the necessity to dip into the savings that we've managed to set aside in the bank for times like these. The third is to continue to invest in people and infrastructure in this province.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the budget is coming down within weeks, and we've heard from this Premier at various times indicating the possibility of dramatic spending cuts, public-sector debt, then no debt, then deficits, then no deficits. To the Premier: what principles will guide our economic plan in Alberta?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, our goal is to come out of this global recession stronger, meaning that we'll have to continue to invest in people and infrastructure, as I've said before. We don't want to lose the nurses, the doctors that we've attracted to the province nor all of the other people that have moved to Alberta. So that means continued investment in our programs and also in infrastructure.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Does the Premier believe he's inspiring confidence in Alberta's economic outlook by continuing to speculate about the course of this government's take on the economic downturn?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there's no speculation. The plan is very clear cut. We will tighten up our spending, as I said. However, as I said before, we will ensure that we take care of the most vulnerable Albertans. That is, you know, the history of this government, and we will continue to do so.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Provincial Borrowing

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I asked the Premier some simple questions around his musings about borrowing money and putting this province back into debt. Instead of straight answers, what I got was more musings about how we maybe could get a lower interest rate on the loan than the rates we're getting on our investments. This from a government that lost 15 per cent on its investments last year, so forgive me if I'm skeptical, given the Premier's ability to buy high and sell low. I'll try again, same question as yesterday: is the Premier going to change the Fiscal Responsibility Act so he can put Alberta back into debt? Yes or no?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, even though Alberta has lost some of its savings, I will say that AIMCo has done a marvellous job. Where other jurisdictions have lost as much as 35 to 40 per cent, the overall loss to the investments we've had is about 16 per cent. So that's a pretty good performance compared to other jurisdictions. The other is that we are looking at all options in terms of ensuring that we have the necessary infrastructure in place as we come out of this recession. I don't want to put this province back in the same position we were before, where we're building infrastructure at 20, 25 per cent inflation a year and trying to catch up with that. We have an opportunity to put people to work. We have an opportunity to build infrastructure that's going to support continued quality of life in this province, and it's the best time now than ever.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Has the Premier undertaken any review of his government's current spending practices, be it on capital or core programs, because you can spend stupid on both, before he started to think out loud about taking out a loan?

Mr. Stelmach: Yes, I have. In fact, with respect to our operational side of the budget – the operational side of the budget, Mr. Speaker, is what we pay for on a daily basis, whether it be surgeries in hospitals, educating our children – that part of the budget will be balanced; however, on infrastructure we may be looking at alternative ways of financing that infrastructure because concrete is about half of what it was before in price and steel has dropped dramatically.

You know, it's funny. I know that yesterday the hon. member expressed real anger. He was kind of agitated, and I can see why. If you're sitting on the fence all that time, it's kind of hard to take that. But here's the thing. It wasn't that long ago when the opposition planned to spend the entire sustainability budget before the last election on new boondoggles in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Here's the real question. How did we go – how did we go – from 15 years of surpluses in this province to six months after the economy goes south on us, this government has to talk about borrowing money?

Mr. Stelmach: That's the point that the hon. member is missing. As I said yesterday, there is no jurisdiction that has $14 billion in cash in the bank to help offset the difficulties as we're working through this global recession: $6 billion of that is for capital, and $7.7 billion is for supporting the programs that Albertans enjoy – again, that's in health and education, social services, children's services – ensuring that we maintain quality of life as we move through this very difficult economic period.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Farm Worker Safety

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. This government has laws to protect the welfare of pigs and cattle and chickens and sheep and other livestock. The law covers abuse and illness, food, water, ventilation, and transportation, and it provides for inspection, enforcement, and penalties. This same government deliberately exempts paid farm workers from WCB, occupational health and safety, and the labour code. To the Premier: why does this government protect farm animals but not paid farm workers?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, it's the same question that was raised by the member a few months ago. I said yesterday that both ministers are looking at consulting with various farm organizations, trying to bring about legislation or policy that's going to make sense in terms of the operation of our farms in the province, and I'm awaiting the results of that consultation. It will come back here to the House, and we'll have a chance to further debate it.

Dr. Taft: Well, it's taking too long, Mr. Speaker. This Premier when he was minister of agriculture strengthened the protection for livestock and said, and I quote: in Alberta we must show the public by our actions that the humane treatment of the livestock in our care is a priority, and we want to have a system that places Alberta in a leadership position world-wide with regards to the humane treatment of farm animals. This same government explicitly exempts paid farm workers from basic protection. Again to the Premier: why doesn't this government give all human beings the same rights?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the two ministers are meeting with farm organizations and others to discuss options with respect to this issue and will bring the consultations back to the Legislature.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, it's taking too long. This Premier was minister of agriculture 10 years ago when he brought in the Alberta livestock protection system. He could also have brought in legislation to protect farm workers. He refused. In the years since he became agriculture minister, 223 people have died in farm accidents and there have been over 15,000 significant injuries. To the Premier: will he act now to bring in equivalent protection for paid farm workers as is provided for farm animals?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Member for Edmonton-Riverview made quite a serious allegation in this House. What he said was, of course, wrong because in the years that I've served in this House as a member of this government and also the government that I now lead in Alberta, there has been no connection between support of the political process and my government's decision on public policy. I've always made it clear that I govern for all Albertans and that donors cannot expect any special treatment.

I also had a meeting with the hon. Leader of the Opposition before this session was convened, and we reached an agreement during that meeting that we were going to maintain decorum in the House. I expect the Leader of the Official Opposition to maintain the agreement that we reached a few weeks ago. I just hope that all sides of the House will be respectful of this agreement that we reached, and I wish the hon. leader success in obtaining that agreement.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Assembly of Land for Large Infrastructure Projects

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday in question period the Premier claimed that future power supplies to Edmonton and Calgary depended on giving the government almost unlimited and unchecked control over privately owned land. Previous Alberta governments have managed economic growth quite well without resorting to such draconian measures. The question is to the Premier. Why can't this government manage growth and development without taking away the rights of Alberta landowners? What's wrong with this government?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the preamble was, but he's totally wrong. I've made a comment that as we look to the future in this province and as we have more people moving in, we have the need to supply more electricity to the larger urban centres, which we know is definitely necessary. We want to ensure that all landowners in Alberta are treated fairly and that there is a fair process. That's the objective, of course, of the bill. I am going to work very hard together with our cabinet and caucus to ensure that all landowners, no matter where they live in the province of Alberta, are represented fairly and treated fairly and that there's a very fair process as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Landowners should not be subject to unchecked government control of their land, even more so when this control can exist for an unlimited period of time and without compensation. My question is to the Premier. Why is it the policy of this government to sterilize the land of Albertans without time limits and without compensation?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, that's exactly the issue that I raised yesterday. That's what we want to avoid. There were landowners that in prior years, the last 35 to 40 years, have had to resort to the courts to settle some of their differences. We want to make sure that landowners are protected in legislation as opposed to how we purchase land, perhaps, in the future for long-term corridors. That's why I'm looking forward to a good discussion of this matter because this is the time to put that legislation in place that will help carry this province forward.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this legislation will take away those rights to access the courts by giving the government almost unlimited power. Just one year after the election this government is already out of touch with Albertans. Giving the government the power to control the land of private citizens without due process flies in the face of Albertans' traditions and principles. My question is to the Premier. Will you admit that it's wrong to give the government almost unlimited power over private land, including two-year jail time for those who refuse to comply, and do the right thing and withdraw Bill 19?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, this is all about fairness and a process that's clearly laid out in legislation so that landowners are treated fairly in the province. What I will say is that yesterday the hon. leader was giving me a lesson, I think, through his preamble on how not to approach rural Albertans for support. I say that you should be the last person I would be consulting to see how to win more seats in this province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Landowner Compensation for Government-acquired Land

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have recently received a number of calls and e-mails from constituents regarding compensation for landowners when government identifies the need to acquire land. My questions are for the Minister of Infrastructure. What policy is currently in place regarding landowner compensation when government acquires land?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our policy, of course, is to pay fair market value, with negotiation being the preferred method that we use to determine the selling price. We obtain an independent appraisal before negotiations begin, and we suggest that landowners do the same. These appraisals form the basis of our negotiations.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. To the same minister: at what point during the process of identifying the need for land does the landowner have the opportunity to sell the land for fair market value?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, it's in our best interests to buy the necessary land as quickly as possible. When we approve a project that requires land, we must prepare to buy that land in a timely fashion. If a landowner is ready to sell us the land, we're very happy to start negotiations right away.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: is the government going to ensure that these principles are considered in future legislation that involves acquiring land for large projects that benefit Albertans?

Mr. Hayden: Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. Our policy is to compensate landowners fairly and to pay fair market value. That policy will continue. Once a project area has been designated by government, we'll begin buying that land, and priority will be given to the landowners who want to sell their property as soon as possible. That will be covered in all of our actions forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a government that has consistently failed to manage its relationship with private landowners. Bill 19 is about this government's latest attempt to acquire property necessary for utility corridors, pipelines, and roads. This latest government policy is a direct result of the bungled spying incident in Rimbey in the summer of 2007. My first question is to the Minister of Infrastructure. Given the government's history of tolerance toward the EUB practice of hiring spies to watch over landowners, how is this bill now going to do anything other than inflame the very groups of landowners that were spied on in the first place in Rimbey in 2007?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I disagree with many things that have been said there. I think it's important to note that the new legislation that is being brought forward and that we anticipate will pass is being put in place to give us a more open and transparent process than we've had in the past. It will ensure that landowners and those that are affected will be spoken with, will be in on the conversations of our requirements far before we ever move towards acquiring that land so that we get the opinions of those most affected and they get an opportunity for meaningful input.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Again to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: if this government was open and transparent, why did the government fail in this case to consult with the very groups that were spied on in Rimbey before they drafted this policy?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, it's in the best interests of Albertans that their government move forward, improve their legislation, and make a more open and transparent government and a more open and transparent process that takes into consideration their needs and their wishes. That's what we do. That's what we're doing. That's what we'll continue to do.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. This policy proposal is extremely controversial, and many Alberta landowners want to raise their concerns and propose changes. If you're open and transparent, should we not refer it now to this Assembly's all-party Standing Committee on the Economy so that we can have true public consultation even before it's debated here in the Legislative Assembly?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, legislation travels through the system in the way that is designated by that system. We ensure that we speak to the people that are affected and the people that can give us the proper input. Then we're going to enjoy a wonderful debate in this House that is going to show Albertans that what is being brought forward is in the best interests of Albertans, all Albertans, especially those who are the landowners, who need to be treated fairly and compensated properly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Online Exploitation of Children

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was recently reported that 1 in 50 Canadians access child pornography on the Internet, a shocking and disturbing figure. Child pornography is a multibillion-dollar industry and one of the fastest growing criminal segments on the Internet. We must ensure that our children are safe from online predators who use the Internet to anonymously fulfill their twisted fantasies. My questions are all to the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. Mr. Minister, what are you doing to ensure that here in Alberta we can track down and find those who try to sexually exploit our children using the Internet?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, that's an excellent question. I can tell the hon. member that this government funds an integrated police unit whose sole purpose is to track down and arrest online predators. The 22-member integrated child exploitation unit is made up of investigators from the RCMP and Edmonton, Calgary, Medicine Hat, and Lethbridge regional police services. These dedicated men and women work closely with local, national, and international police and law enforcement agencies to investigate complaints that range from the making and distribution of child pornography to the luring of children on the Internet.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What evidence does the minister have that will assure this House and all Albertans that the integrated child exploitation unit is making a difference?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, our integrated child exploitation unit investigates complaints anywhere in this province. Since the unit was established in 2006, ICE members have investigated over a thousand complaints, and they've laid over 500 charges here in Alberta. The ICE unit members have also been involved in a number of high-profile international cases that have resulted in the dismantling of child pornography rings and the apprehension of children who were being sexually exploited.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've heard police say that you can't arrest your way out of this problem. What else is the ICE unit doing to combat online child exploitation?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, finding and arresting those who try to exploit our children is the ICE unit's mandate, but the unit also serves another very important function. ICE investigators have made presentations to school and community groups to raise awareness about the potential dangers of lurking online. As the hon. member has mentioned, we might not be able to arrest our way out of this problem, but we can provide our children and parents with information that will protect them from Internet predators.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Ambulance Services

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's March 10, and the minister of health has only three weeks to clear any confusion regarding the transfer of ground ambulance authority to the province. There have been many concerns raised about the province's ability to properly plan and execute the ambulance transfer by the April 1 deadline. To the minister: has the province signed contracts with all the ambulance providers in Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'll repeat what I said I think last Thursday to the Member for Lethbridge-West. We have now concluded all 65 contracts with municipalities in this province. At that time – and I haven't had an update since – there were some loose ends to tie up with a small provider, but in essence everything is a go on track for April 1. Unlike the comments of the Leader of the Official Opposition, it is a smooth transition that is happening, with everybody co-operating, and I see no reason that it shouldn't proceed as planned.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the minister: how many municipalities will continue providing ambulance services after the April 1 date?

Mr. Liepert: Again I have to go from memory because I was prepared for the question last Thursday, but I wasn't today. My recollection is that I think 12 are going to be direct-delivered by Alberta Health Services, and the remainder are integrated services, but I'd have to get the numbers, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. Again to the minister: does the province have the funds necessary this time to make the transition?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, the dollars for this transition are in the current budget that we're in, the current year. The member was here when we passed the budget last spring, and I would ask him to take a look at the budget documents. They're clearly laid out in this year's budget.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Amber Alert Program

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The recent abduction of the young lady from Penhold has raised Albertans' awareness of as well as concerns with the Amber Alert program. My question is to the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. In light of some of the perceived problems that have arisen from this case, is the minister considering any changes to the Amber Alert program to make it even better?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, let me first say that we're all relieved and grateful that this incident ended with the return of the child and also the arrest of the perpetrator. Alberta's Amber Alert program has proven highly successful in helping police find abducted children because it quickly mobilizes the eyes and ears of the community. All nine Amber Alerts issued since this program started in 2002 have resulted in the safe return of the children. We have no plans to change this very effective program.

Mr. Marz: To make it better, would the minister consider allowing the RCMP to use their own discretion to trigger an Amber Alert within the first 24 hours of receiving a report of a missing person?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, to supplement a number of other investigative procedures, the police use the Amber Alert as a tool of last resort to find missing children. The Amber Alert program is effective because police throughout Alberta apply four consistent criteria when deciding whether or not it needs to be activated. Those criteria include whether or not there is clear evidence of an abduction; that police believe the child to be at risk of physical harm or death; that there is sufficient information to allow the public to identify the child, the abductor, and the mode of transportation; that the Amber Alert can be issued quickly enough for a reasonable expectation of success. It is critical that all police in Alberta apply the same criteria consistently for the Amber Alert program to continue being effective.

Mr. Marz: Again to the same minister, Mr. Speaker: would the minister consider implementing an Amber Alert based on the description of the victim only instead of waiting for a description of the perpetrator and their vehicle?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated earlier, the success of this program is based on the four criteria that I described. That being said, the police use other methods, such as in the case recently in Red Deer, where they do get on the airwaves and in the newspapers and on TV with the description of the person who's missing to ensure that we can find them as soon as possible.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Education Achievement Testing

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Fraser Institute recently released their rankings of Alberta schools based on the province's achievement test scores. Commenting on the ranking, the Minister of Education stated, and I quote: in my view, it is a totally inappropriate way to measure whether you have a good school or good teaching. To the Minister of Education: if the minister is opposed to ranking schools based on their test scores, why does the minister release the results for publication each year under the pretense of accountability?

Mr. Hancock: Every year, as I understand it, we receive a FOIP request, a freedom of information and protection of privacy request, under the act. Under the act, unless we meet one of the exemptions to withhold information, we're required to make information available to the public.

Mr. Chase: This government uses FOIP very much to their advantage. Usually it's a cloak.

Given that the minister himself questions the validity of using the test scores to rank schools and teaching, in what way does publishing the scores hold schools and teachers accountable or improve student results?

Mr. Hancock: First of all, it should be clear that we neither rank the schools, nor do we publish those results. We provide the results to the school boards for their use in doing assessments and for improvement of their system's approach to the delivery of education in the province. They're part of our accountability pillar. We do not publish the results, but we follow the law, and the law requires that information that does not impinge on a contractual obligation or release personal information is made public. That's the law of the province of Alberta. I have to admit that I've asked whether we can amend that law so that these results not be released, but that's the law as it stands, and we comply.

Mr. Chase: Interestingly, First Nations children's test results aren't revealed because they already know what the results will be. These are tests of economy as opposed to education.

The minister seems to acknowledge that there are other, more effective ways to hold schools accountable than provincial achievement tests. Does the minister also acknowledge that the $5 million spent on questionable testing at the grade 3 level alone is not good value for that money?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, with respect to FNMI results I would make this clear: one of the things we don't have to do under the freedom of information and protection of privacy rule is release any information which could be harmful or detrimental to an identifiable group of people. Because there are minimal results or much fewer results in the FNMI population, we can use that exemption, and we do creatively use that exemption to not release information where we don't think it should be released and where we can stop the release. So that would be the answer to the preamble.

With respect to the costs the hon. member has them wrong. It's about $540,000, if I remember correctly, for the administration of the PAT 3 tests. The $5 million is more like the budget for the administration of all of the provincial achievement tests.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Foster Care

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the minister for children and youth refused to answer my question about the number of overcrowded foster homes in Alberta. Instead, she began damage control, announcing a status update of unfinished recommendations she'd promised to implement last June. Everyday Albertans don't need more promises or updates; they need the minister to tell us the answer to a very simple, very important question. To the minister: how many Alberta foster homes currently exceed the four-child maximum?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't have the exact number, but I can tell you that in this province we have a ratio of two foster children per foster home, and that is either the lowest in the country or one of the lowest rates, so I do know that the percentage of anyone with more than four children has to be awfully small. I can also tell you that if we have more than four children in a foster home, it means that they have been licensed to do so, so I would not call that overloading. That means that the training is there, that the supports are there. I just think it's very important to make that point.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, last year your recommendations were that you needed to change that process because the licensing wasn't good enough. Common sense tells us that children in overcrowded foster homes are at greater risk of suffering injury or death. You told us you'd take action to reduce that. Nine months later it hasn't been done. To the minister: in the nine months since you made but did not implement your initial promise, how many more foster homes were allowed to exceed the four-child maximum?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, this member yesterday tabled an article that was in the paper last June. The foster care report had just been released. I automatically accepted all eight recommendations and said that we would immediately start implementing, which is in this article. The article also pointed out that it praised the province's system overall and said that it was envied by foster parents across the country. I think, again, we have to realize that we started implementing the eight recommendations, but what that entailed over the last several months is taking a look at options, taking a look at best practices, developing the policy, creating working committees, going out there and consulting, and then training staff. What I tabled yesterday shows that many of the eight recommendations are complete or close to being complete, so it's quite remarkable what has been accomplished.

Ms Notley: Those recommendations came a year and a half after the death that first prompted them, so I don't think that you should give yourself too much of a pat on the back.

The news about the most recent tragedy in foster care did not come through the minister. The news about the delay in your implementations only came as part of a damage control exercise. To the minister: what will it take to convince you that a co-chair that you call independent is not enough and that we need a fully independent, transparent public inquiry into Alberta's foster care system?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I was not giving myself a pat; I was congratulating the thousands of very dedicated individuals in this province that we have working on behalf of our children.

Yesterday I also made it very clear, when we were talking about this tragedy, that I would not be irresponsible, that I would not get into speculating, and I would not interfere with the work of the police. I can also tell the House that I called the special case review last week, and it was yesterday that I came out with the news that we would make the findings public and also involve some external expertise. Again, to make things clear, it was not because of this member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Postsecondary Education Affordability

Mr. Rodney: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently I've had a number of conversations with concerned constituents with regard to postsecondary education. I know that Albertans and specifically Albertan parents and students are well aware of the benefits of being able to save for education after grade 12. My first question, therefore, is to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. During these economic times, that are quite difficult and daunting for many, what is the minister doing to ensure that middle and lower income Albertans can save for their children's postsecondary education?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have a number of programs that can help Albertans realize postsecondary education. It's a very high priority for this government. This past year, as an example, we expanded the Rutherford scholarships to include those high school students who recorded averages between 75 and 80 per cent. It used to be above 80 per cent. There are numerous nonrepayable provincial government grants and bursaries available for students who demonstrate financial need, and a lot of our programs are targeted to those students or those adults who have a financial need. Our Alberta student loan program is one of the finest in the country, and our scholarship and bursary program is probably the largest in the country.

Mr. Rodney: My second question is to the same minister. That will answer some of the constituent questions but not others. In light of the downturn of the economy I wonder if the minister can ensure that the Alberta incentive programs for postsecondary savings such as the Alberta centennial education savings program will continue to support Albertan students.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At this point the ACES program remains consistent with past years of the program. Awareness and access are both on the upswing. I would admit that in the initial years of the program awareness by parents wasn't really all that high. At present 53 credit unions, scholarship foundations, and other financial service providers are processing ACES applications, and that's a fourfold increase since 2005. So, as I said, awareness is coming up. One of the greatest investments that any Albertan can make is in a postsecondary education, and our government works to ensure that that dream is possible for every Albertan.

Mr. Rodney: My final question is to the same minister, and it has to do with student loans and applying for them. Parents are often required, of course, to fund a wide range of costs to help children through postsecondary education regardless of these aforementioned affordability programs that are available. I'm wondering and my constituents need to know: are there plans to further reduce the financial commitments required by parents when students are applying for student loans?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, as part of the affordability framework two years ago the government of Alberta and the federal government made significant investments to reduce those parental contributions. At present parental contribution is required from, really, a very small proportion of students who require financial aid. In 2007-08 only about 5 per cent of funded students in Alberta were required to have a parental contribution. That's only about 2,400 students. Forty per cent of those parental contributions were less than a thousand dollars. Within the Alberta student financial assistance program we do have an appeal mechanism if students need to appeal that process, but we're working to make it better.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Provincial Wetland Policy

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 2005 Alberta formed the Wetland Policy Project Team to develop a provincial wetland strategy. Well, here we are four years later and still waiting for the government to deliver on a promise made to Albertans in the original water for life strategy. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Thousands of hectares of wetlands continue to be destroyed in the absence of any policy. Can the minister tell us just how long we will have to wait for the government to come through on this?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the member is absolutely correct that this process of development of a wetlands policy has been the subject of much discussion over a considerable period of time, but the answer to her question is a difficult one to give simply because this is such a critical issue. This is a very complicated issue. There are a number of considerations that have to be taken into account. I am in receipt of a report from the Water Council, and we're giving it due consideration, and I'll be coming forward very briefly.

Ms Blakeman: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker: given that over 90 per cent of the respondents in the wetland policy workshops overwhelmingly supported maintaining and even increasing wetland area and function in Alberta, will the government policy reflect this desire for even increasing wetland area and function?

Mr. Renner: I'm not going to get into a situation where I'm now speculating on what decisions are or are not going to be made by my colleagues. I know what recommendations I'm prepared to take forward. There is a process that needs to be dealt with through the regular channels of policy adoption within government, within cabinet and caucus, and until all of that process is completed, it would be, I think, irresponsible on my part to try and predict what the outcomes are going to be.

Ms Blakeman: With due respect, we need you to hustle up on that one.

To the same minister: given that there will be a cost to maintaining wetlands in Alberta and most evidently in the oil sands region, will the government require industry to bear these costs as part of doing business, or will the taxpayers be on the hook for some of these costs, as has already happened with the reclaiming of orphan wells?

Mr. Renner: Well, the analogy is totally inappropriate and doesn't apply at all. Clearly, we have an interim policy that's been in place with respect to wetlands, and it's been applied primarily in southern Alberta. The costs of that policy are directly borne by the developers. I don't see any reason why an extension of a wetlands policy across the province would be dealt with in any other way.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Rural-to-urban Transition of Aboriginal People

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are many aboriginal people living in my constituency, and more are moving there every day. Transition and the ability to adapt is a very important issue for aboriginals coming off reserve or off settlement to live, learn, or work in urban centres. Oftentimes many aboriginals and, in particular, aboriginal youth encounter various barriers to a smooth transition into urban life. My questions are for the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. What is your ministry doing to help aboriginals address and overcome potential transition barriers such as isolation, housing, and other support services?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, we provide about $0.3 million annually to urban centres such as Edmonton and Calgary for our urban aboriginal strategy. We provide an additional $0.7 million toward about 20 friendship centres across the province, where transitioning aboriginals frequently come for help with job training, life skills, upgrading, access to health and employment and recreational and cultural programming. Those programs are having quite a positive effect to date.

Mr. Vandermeer: What processes, checks, and balances do you have in place to measure the effectiveness of these urban help and self-help initiatives?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, that's an excellent question because at the heart of all of our government programs is accountability. Specific to the question in terms of aboriginal relations we require audited financial statements for these grants that are going out. We require activity reports. This year we're adding a stricter requirement for performance measure reporting, which will help us fill any voids or loopholes that might exist, to help improve those programs for the transitioning people being asked about.

Mr. Vandermeer: Given that Alberta's aboriginal population is already the third largest in Canada and continues to grow rapidly, what are your plans to address the additional impact of aboriginals in transition?

Mr. Zwozdesky: In brief, Mr. Speaker, my ministry is working very aggressively with municipalities across the province – that includes many urban centres, obviously – with aboriginal organizations, aboriginal communities, and indeed with the federal government to ensure that the programs we are currently designing and those that will be designed going into the out-years will have the maximum benefit for aboriginals in transition. We're also working very aggressively with other ministries on cross-ministry initiatives – for example, with Housing and Urban Affairs, with Children and Youth Services, certainly with Employment and Immigration, and, of course, with Advanced Education and Technology – to help design the best programs possible.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Asset-backed Commercial Paper

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In January it was reported that Alberta, Ontario, Quebec, and Ottawa had agreed to provide 3 and a half billion dollars' worth of loans to restructure frozen asset-backed commercial papers, yet this commitment came before the finance minister announced that this year's surplus is gone and that Alberta is going to run a deficit. To the minister of finance: how much of this $3.5 billion will come from Alberta, and where exactly will this money come from?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This money is, in fact, a backstopping of another backstopping already being provided by the investors in the asset-backed commercial paper. It was a request that was made by the Alberta Treasury Branches on behalf of the investors in Alberta. Throughout Canada, with Quebec mostly affected, Alberta in part, Ontario in part, we believe that a partnership with the federal government would assure that the overseas funders that were primarily responsible for the loans would get confidence that we were not going to leave those loans out for dissolving.

Mr. Taylor: That was an interesting answer but not to the question I asked. I'll ask it again. How much of this $3.5 billion will come from Alberta, and where exactly within that context will it come from?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a paper support for roughly $300 million, but it is, in fact, not something that is actually going to be spent provided that all of the bridges that are already in place are protected as we believe them to be. It is a support for the already in place backstopping being provided by the banks and the investors. It's just one additional piece of surety that we were able to provide the investors overseas. It is not something that is actually cash being put on the line today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since the Alberta government originally resisted this restructuring plan given that it had already provided ATB with $550 million in additional collateral for its exposure to the asset-backed commercial papers, what made the government change its mind?

Ms Evans: I think, Mr. Speaker, that's an excellent question because you wonder how we were thinking when we met as ministers at a finance meeting with Minister Flaherty. What we were thinking of was the Canadians that made investments. We were thinking about the people that had put their life savings on the line, the fact that we had confidence in the banks that were going to restructure this type of management in the asset-backed commercial paper. It was a show of confidence that our institutions would manage well. Here in Alberta we had universities, credit unions, and ATB all as investors accessing these funds, and we said that we're confident. Much more contribution was made by Quebec and obviously the federal government as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Charter Schools

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1995 as a strategy to improve education, the Alberta government introduced charter schools. Each of these schools, of which there are 12 in Alberta, has a unique charter mandate providing innovation and choice to parents in our education system, but because of the charter terms these schools have no guarantee that their charter will be renewed when their five years are up. To the Minister of Education: I know the minister recognizes the value of charter schools, so when will he grant them permanency?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have indicated to charter schools in meetings with their organization that we do appreciate the role and function of charter schools in the public education system, and we do appreciate the fact that they were set up to push the education system to explore new or alternative approaches to teaching and learning. That being said, what we need to do in order to move to the stage where they have permanent charters rather than renewable charters is to find a way to make sure that that innovation, that standard is continued. It is of absolutely no value to have just another school board; they have to be able to continue in their role and function.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The operation of charter schools is additionally complicated by the insufficiency of their facilities. Specifically, these schools cannot purchase facilities because they have no access to capital funding due to their charter status. Rather, they must lease their school campus. To the same minister: what are you doing to alleviate these financial barriers so that charter schools can create long-term visions and operate without the burden of a facility lease?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, indeed, that is one of the primary purposes why we would try and move to a permanent charter, if we can accomplish that and still maintain the purpose for which they've been established. In the meantime we work very closely with the charter schools to make sure that if there are other public school facilities available, they can be made available on a timely basis to charter schools, and we'll continue to do that. We want to work to a permanency for charter schools that are working well but in a manner which ensures that they continue to push the edges of knowledge and edges of education and keep new, exciting ideas for education alive.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. By supporting students whose second or even third language is English, the Almadina charter school academy in my constituency contributes significantly to the quality of education in Alberta. This school has a student population that is capped by the Minister of Education at 600. To the same minister: will you consider raising this cap so as to provide more students with the unique opportunities that this school offers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's an area that's very important as an intersection between where the charter schools operate and where the public schools operate, and we have a dialogue on education in which we're discussing those very issues of how we do education in the future of the province. Charter schools can be assured that their role will not go away – charter schools are still very important to the education system – so the Inspiring Education dialogue is not about that. But the purpose for sizes and caps on charter schools initially was because you needed a cohort of students necessary to be able to prove the concept that the charter school was engaged in. That's a discussion which needs to be had with public schools, with the public, and with others as we go forward in education in this province.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today.

Visit by Speaker of the House of Commons Use of Electronic Devices in the Chamber

The Speaker: Hon. members, several days ago I conveyed a message to the three House leaders advising that on Monday next Mr. Peter Milliken, the Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons, will be visiting Alberta and, further, that next Tuesday morning I'm going to provide an opportunity for members of the Assembly who wish to meet with Mr. Milliken in a consultation process. The memo has gone out to everybody today advising them of this opportunity next Tuesday morning.

Next Monday I would like to invite Mr. Milliken, the Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons, to join in our procession and to sit at the clerks' table. To have a stranger upon the floor of the Assembly requires that the Speaker seeks consent of the members, so I need unanimous consent because it's not part of our rules. Would anybody object to my request? If so, please say no. I think I didn't hear anything, so thank you very, very much.

I do have to convey another item. Contrary to my admonition prior to the question period today about the use of electronic devices and BlackBerrys during Oral Question Period, six of you were observed to have been utilizing these devices. Now, we have whips in each of the caucuses. Please, I've bent over backwards to try and assist in this. I don't want to get complaints from members. If we're going to have whips and they're going to be on the payroll, let's deal with this, or else I'm going to have to deal with this in an entirely different way, which would be to the regression of all remaining members.

In 30 seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to table the requisite number of copies of the Confederation Park seniors' centre 2008 annual report, that I made reference to in my member's statement today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a document provided to me by the National Farmers Union, and it is titled The Farm Crisis and the Cattle Sector: Toward a New Analysis and New Solutions.

The second tabling I have is with permission from Mr. Ervin Eccleston of 2511 109th Street here in Edmonton, and it is a letter from last fall that he wrote to the hon. Premier regarding his ongoing issues with WCB.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of 10 reports from long-term care workers indicating specific problems on shifts that were short staffed. These indicate the difficulty of taking care of residents who wander and are in danger of falling and keeping up with each resident's schedule of care when there are not enough staff to go around.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Orders of the Day Committee of Supply

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of Supply to order.

Interim Supply Estimates 2009-10 General Revenue Fund and Lottery Fund

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Albertans are suffering whiplash based on this government's economic policy. They cannot figure out the direction this government is going when it comes to protecting their assets, and it's very important that we spell that correctly. This government has in its predecessors Ralph Klein, who openly admitted that he didn't have a plan, and as a result we no longer see Ralph Klein in politics. But we have a Premier who makes up the plan on the spot and leaves individuals wondering, reeling, as to what the long-term plan is.

In September in Public Accounts, for example, when we were talking about ATB, the Alberta Treasury Branches, there was this overwhelming feeling being given out that Alberta was somehow insulated from the realities of the global recession. Yet with each intervening month and lately, never mind on a weekly basis, it's become on a daily basis the Premier changes his tune. We've gone from "No, we can't run a deficit" to "Yes, we can run a creative deficit."

Now, I don't know where the Premier is getting his financial information from, although I do admit I have much greater faith in the head of AIMCo than I have in the government's own ability to manage. But when the Premier speculated this past weekend that somehow he could get a really good deal on borrowing money and save any kind of expenditures from, I'm assuming, the sustainability fund or the capital fund and when he talks about running technical deficits, it becomes a real concern.

It's been pointed out in this House by a number of individuals from both the Liberal opposition and from the NDP that this government is currently spending 23 per cent per capita beyond what other governments are spending. There doesn't seem to be any long-term thought as to when we will pay the bills that we're building up nor how we'll be able to pay the bills. This government is racking up billions of dollars, for example, in P3s. The rationale behind these P3s is that we get to keep the money now, and we only have to let it out a little at a time, and be assured, Albertans, you'll be able to sleep tonight knowing that we're in charge, that at some point in the future, as we have to pay these bills, we'll still have the money to pay them.

Now, in terms of saving versus spending and lending versus spending the money we currently have, we've taken a 2 and a half billion dollar hit this year alone, this past fiscal year ending April 1, on the heritage trust fund. I don't know the average interest rate percentage that we have on our other funds, but on the Premier's comment that we can make better money saving our current money invested in the sustainability fund, in the capital fund, if any of that money is invested in the way the money invested in the heritage trust fund has been affected, then I think he's totally out to lunch on his economic calculations. This is a great concern.

Another concern that I have is the fact that the Auditor General, our financial watchdog, has had his own spending limited. He's had to either defer or cancel 27 out of 80 projects, or 34 per cent of his projects. Now, this government is very selective at listening to what the Auditor General has to say, but further limiting his budget so that he is not able to investigate constitutes a cover-up. It's one thing to not follow through or implement his recommendations; it's another thing to not allow the Auditor General to have the opportunity to make the recommendations.

Those recommendations face a number of areas and concerns. For example, in Children and Youth Services he's not going to be able to look at financial support for children with disabilities, look at the systems, until 2010. When it comes to monitoring daycare and day home services, protecting children, that's deferred until some unknown time. We don't even have a date for that. When it comes to deferred follow-ups on education, improving school performance, what could be more important than validating the way in which we measure school performance? Yet that's been deferred until goodness knows when. School board budgeting. Just yesterday an hon. member introduced the idea of having municipal oversight. This government is great at looking at everybody's records except their own. That's why the Auditor General's business is so absolutely important. Another area that we won't be able to look at – fortunately, it's one of the more recent deferrals. At least by October 2009 the Auditor General will report back to us on P3s. I look forward to that latest update.

When the Auditor General did report, for example, on royalties, his concerns that we hadn't for a number of years been collecting what was due were not only basically ignored, but the government, in order to, as much as anything else, discredit Fred Dunn's findings, brought in a former Auditor General, Valentine. Interestingly enough, a number of the recommendations that Valentine made paralleled those that were made by our own currently employed, hopefully for some time into the far future, Auditor General.

The government was criticized in the Auditor General's report for the way in which it collected the royalty information. At the time the Auditor General did his report, there was one person in the department controlling the flow chart information from which the royalties were assessed, and that one individual was basically just doing a sampling. He wasn't looking at each of the various companies flows upon which our royalties are judged. So I'm extremely concerned that the Auditor General is being limited in his oversight role.

The Premier at one point blames the global recession, and then the next day he comes up with his latest creative idea. He must sleep well because he certainly has interesting dreams, that are revealed in newspapers and on radio. He goes from deficit to dream to borrowing to P3s. There must be an awful lot of tossing and turning, talking about wrestling with angels, each night. We're left as Albertans wondering, for example: are the P3 school projects going to come in on time? It has taken a year and a half for them to even get to the point where the bids were made and the shovels started to get into the ground. We were told that because of the delays in building the southeast hospital . . . [Mr. Chase's speaking time expired]

I'll look forward to continuing.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chair. Interesting amounts of money that are being asked for in the interim supply. Again, I guess, probably the mantra from this side of the House is that if you'd budgeted properly in the first place, we wouldn't need all these extra dollars. If I ran my budget like this – unfortunately, I don't have a sugar daddy called the taxpayer to look after me, so I have to make sure that I do it right the first time.

There are some interesting questions out of Agriculture and Rural Development. I just read I think today in the paper or yesterday that, very unfortunately, more and more of our farmers are having to work off of the land to be able to make a living. I personally am very dismayed with that. I just think that it's a crime that we're losing our rural communities and that we can't in some fashion be able to help our small farmers. In fact, I think it was the federal minister of agriculture who said that he's a third-generation farmer and doesn't think that his son will be able to farm. I think that's a crime. I think it's very sad, when we do have probably some of the most arable land and excellent soil in the world, and unfortunately a lot of it, even just around the Edmonton area, is going under cement.

Questions out of Agriculture and Rural Development. The money that they're asking for is $190,200,000. Exactly what is that going for? Will that be creating funds? My questions would be: is some of that extra money going to rural development projects and if those projects would include the field staff that they have or have not increased? From some of the people that I speak to, I think they would be pleased to have the agricultural field staff numbers increased because a lot of it is expert resources for the farmers to go to not only for field questions, but also it can take them through how to set up books and other advice that they can give them that would actually keep our farmers on the fields, where they want to be and, certainly, where I think they should be.

The other is: how much of it is going to the AFSC, the Agriculture Financial Services Corporation, and if the money is going to that, what programs is it going towards, and how much of that money would actually go towards the insurance programs? I know that, certainly, there were huge payouts last year for the crop damage. It was an unusual year in terms of hail damage. What would be the breakdown for these monies that would be going to the livestock and meat agencies, and how much? I know that there's been, again back to the field staff, helping and working with the farmers to make sure that they can age verify their cattle. I know that it's had a tremendous amount of push-back, but I think, unfortunately, the bottom line is that if we want to compete in a global market – and I'm sure that we do – then our cattle have to be age verified whether we like it or not. We need our field staff to help set up the monitoring systems to make it as cheap and as efficient as possible.

The other question might be: how much of the funding would be going towards the renewal process for the farm fuel program? I know that that's had quite an overhaul, and they've cut back on the number of people that are actually allowed to use purple gas, so to speak. That's another thing that would have to be overhauled.

I'm not really sure that it's clear where all of these dollars are going to go. My colleague from Calgary-Varsity has referred to the fact that the Auditor General, I believe, is not going to get nearly the amount of money that he asked for, that clearly he needs because he's had to put a number of audits on hold. In the Agricultural and Rural Development department he's had to put the ARD systems on a follow-up, food safety is deferred until October '09, and certainly the grant management program is a follow-up in October '09. I know that that doesn't sound – at least it hasn't been cancelled.

Food safety, in my mind, is something that we shouldn't be playing with. I know, for one, that I wouldn't go to the grocery store and not read the label to see where it comes from, and there are certainly certain countries that I would never buy products from. It's not so much that I think that I don't, perhaps, trust those countries; my trust at this point in time should be in the federal government. But I think that as a province we also have an obligation to make sure that the foodstuffs that are coming into this country are safe for us to eat.

I think we have to look at the way we label things that come into this country. Just because it says that it's a product of Canada doesn't mean to say that, in fact, it is. Bits and pieces can come from other places. I don't have to go through the litany of some of the tainted food that has got into this country and, quite frankly, made a lot of people sick. The fact that we are not giving the Auditor General the money that he needs to follow through on food safety I just don't think is the proper thing to do.

I don't know where answers to these questions would come from – of course, the agricultural minister isn't here – but I think these are things that I would like on the record. Before we can say to you, "Yes, I'm going to give you $190,200,000," I really think that we should have at least some kind of an idea of where these dollars are going to be spent. Clearly, it's new money coming from somewhere. Again, my question is: why is this money necessary if the budgeting was done properly the first time? There may well be a very plausible explanation for it. Things do happen within a 12-month period, but I think that the people of Alberta should know, if this kind of money is going out, where it is going and why.

Thank you.

Mr. Snelgrove: In fairness to the hon. member, this is not extra money going out. This is to run the total ag department until the budget is passed. We dealt with and do have supplementary supply estimates that are for expenditures that occur throughout the year after the budget.

In some of the statements you make, you've questioned: where is this money going or why this extra money? This particular interim supply amount is a consistent amount for all departments to manage their responsibilities at least through the first quarter so that we can have the broader discussion during budget about those issues that you talked about. This keeps government running until the budget is passed.

Supplementary supply, on the other hand, is for expenditures that happen throughout the year if that will clarify it. To get into the wherefor of this is not exactly what the interim supply is, but I appreciate your concern, which I think is genuine.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I was talking about concerns that I have with regard to overruns on infrastructure projects, the prime example, the most recent example, at least the one that we're still waiting for, being the southeast hospital in Calgary. Originally that was to have been costing taxpayers approximately $500 million. Then it gained and gained and gained until it was very close to tripling the budget. As a cost-cutting measure the government decided to whack the mental health part of the southeast hospital. That's a large concern, and I'll be talking about what I see as cuts or poorly run funding for mental health programs.

In terms of other projects that we're yet to see that have been long promised, we were promised in Calgary by former Premier Klein that we would be seeing an expansion to the Tom Baker cancer centre. There had been a degree of controversy as to its location, whether it would be built on the existing site along with the Calgary Foothills hospital or whether there would be room for it found on the U of C campus. There was even a suggestion that it might go out somewhere towards the veterinary college in the Spy Hill area. Premier Klein had committed at that point $500 million towards that expansion. Nothing has happened since.

In terms of incomplete projects in Calgary that we're still waiting for funding for – and I realize that this is just interim funding – the reality is that this province, I believe, will be the last province to announce a budget. It's almost like our minister of the Treasury Board and our finance minister are looking for some type of divine or global intervention, that the price of oil and gas will suddenly rise in our nondiversified economy to save us all, but I wouldn't bet on that one.

In terms of other incomplete Calgary projects, as I began, the Sheldon Chumir health on 12th, for example, is shelled in to a large extent, but it is far from being a fully operating facility. We have the Rockyview hospital, where we built a whole number of new beds. Then we transferred patients from the old beds to the new beds, and now the old beds aren't being staffed. It was moving day, but in terms of the ability to improve the health outcomes, that didn't happen. We've had recently raised the controversy over the shelling in of the Peter Lougheed, doing the first floor and doing the third floor but skipping the other floors. The justification was: well, we'll shell it in now so that we can actually operate in it at a later time.

Here in Edmonton we've got the Mazankowski heart hospital waiting for its first occupants. The people in Grande Prairie don't know, as don't a number of rural districts, whether they're even going to get their hospital. This uncertainty is not being addressed at this point in this carry-over budget, which does not sort of direct or suggest where the April 7 budget is going to go, and therefore it's a large concern.

In terms of sort of great initiatives but a failure to follow up, I was pleased to be able to attend this past year the official opening of the Hotchkiss Brain Institute at the Calgary Foothills hospital. Wonderful. But, again, a lot of that particular operation is a shelled circumstance. The walls are there, but in order to pay for the researchers and to carry out the research, the majority of that operating budget comes from philanthropic donations. It's great that we have some very wealthy philanthropists like the Hotchkiss family; however, it is the responsibility of the government to deliver health care. Unfortunately, that's not happening.

When it comes to schools, the government has decided that the way to go is P3s. I talked about the deferred debt. What we have with schools is a reality. The average age of the schools across the province is over 40 years, and the defrayed deficit on the repairs is now approaching $2 billion. We've seen a series of Band-aids, partial roof repairs, rather than the absolute repairs that are necessary. The defrayed deficit for school infrastructure alone – and I'm not talking new construction – is in the area of $2 billion. For the Calgary public board alone it's over $630 million dollars. Each day that we defer putting in the necessary repairs, we're putting students at the potential of physical risk.

We're not dealing with their educational quality. For example, in terms of budgeting we had the Learning Commission recommendation to reduce class sizes. The government has yet to live up to its primary grades, the 1 to 17 average, and kids are being stuffed into staff rooms. Their gyms and stages are being compromised. Their libraries are only partially functioning because permanent classrooms are having to be placed in these areas because there has been basically a moratorium on school construction, and when the province finally did decide to go full speed ahead, they picked the most expensive point in the boom to finally sign those contracts.

Now, I look forward to the Minister of Infrastructure's qualifying the fine print, where it says, apparently, within the contracts that if somehow there's a dip in the economy, then the cost of labour will be considered, and if for some reason materials are less expensive, then somehow this will be factored in. What has not been factored in, at least to my satisfaction or to the satisfaction of Alberta taxpayers in general, is how the interest rates fluctuate over a 32-year period and how by borrowing money at the height of the boom and then paying it back if we can over a 32-year period we'll be able to do that.

When it comes to health, it's absolutely unacceptable that we have patients in hallways. It's unacceptable in terms of financial efficiencies that we've got EMS people basically biding their time in hallways instead of being out with their ambulances on the road. As a result we're seeing red, yellow, and burgundy alerts far too frequently, which puts patients at risk. Of course, in Calgary since we lost half our hospitals, the response time has gone up considerably, again putting individuals at risk. It concerns me when it comes to Children and Youth Services, for example, how so many needs are not being met. Hopefully, with regard to Children and Youth Services somebody can provide answers. The amount that was requested is 25.9 per cent of the total budget from the estimates of 2008-2009. How much of the $284,100,000 is going to the Child and Youth Advocate, who was too busy to submit annual reports for three years? How much is going to the ministry's support services? What allocation is there to family support for children with disabilities? How much is allocated for fetal alcohol spectrum disorder initiatives? In 2008 funding was announced, but we haven't seen it.

Mr. Snelgrove: It's interesting. The hon. member wants to talk about capital projects, especially Health capital projects, where the interim supply amount to be voted on is $4.8 million. Granted that's double what it was last year. Nevertheless, it probably wouldn't even put the signs up on the number of the ones he wants to talk about. I mean, he talks about what the people want. The consistency is very clear; we're within $8 million on the operational budget from last year – $8 million. I think that's pretty consistent on a $9 billion ask. Overall with some of the infrastructure requests – in this one we've nearly doubled the infrastructure request. Transportation is within a few million dollars. This is probably the most consistent year to year.

The Auditor. It's amazing how we would consider that the Auditor is being hamstrung when his total budget in '06-07 was 18 and a half million dollars. That was the total budget. Now for the first quarter we're going to give $7 million. Well, do the math. Do the math. The office of the Auditor General has grown exponentially. He does a very thorough job, Mr. Chairman, but he cannot nor should he attempt to do all departments and all initiatives all the time. It hasn't been his request at the audit committee. His request has been to fulfill his mandate to audit the ministries, and he puts a shopping list out of other things that would be nice to do.

Mr. Chairman, in today's economic climate there's going to be a whole province full of people who will have to reassess their nice-to-dos. I don't think the average Albertan is going to accept very well that they all have to accept a reduction in their nice-to-dos, but the Auditor would just continue to spend at whatever level he felt. I don't think the Auditor thinks like that. I know that he's reasonable. I know that he spends countless hours working with us to understand where to focus. Where is his money best spent? Where is there some duplication from some of the internal audit processes we have?

Somehow the hon. member would like you to think that there's a sinister plot here, that we've identified the Auditor as somebody we don't want to give money to. All of the officers of the Leg. are going to have to live within the current financial situation we find ourselves in. For him to pick and choose, virtually, statistical information, that doesn't accomplish anything except waste 20 or 15 minutes at a crack. The discussion around interim supply is interesting from their perspective, Mr. Chairman, but it is accomplishing precious little.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Let me pick up on the remarks from the President of the Treasury Board. This interim supply represents, in the Treasury Board president's own words, enough money to get us through at least the first quarter of the new fiscal year, I believe he said a little earlier on, and perhaps a little bit more than that. I understand that there's some front-end bloating that occurs in some departments and all the rest of that.

Given the President of the Treasury Board's comments that, you know, every single one of us in this province is going to have to reassess our nice-to-do and nice-to-have lists in light of the current economic reality – and, by the way, I agree wholeheartedly with the President of the Treasury Board that that's true – I wonder if the President of the Treasury Board can speak to the numbers in the interim supply estimates, which are designed to carry us through until we pass and debate fully the new budget. I understand that, and I understand as well that some of the debate on the new budget has to wait until the budget has been presented in terms of some of the details. But I wonder if the President of the Treasury Board can give this House any insight, any clue into whether any of these numbers – be they for his own department, be they for the Ministry of Infrastructure, be they for any or all of these ministries or for the legislative offices – have taken into account the need to start taking a good hard look at our nice-to-dos and our nice-to-haves.

As it's presented to us, Mr. Chairman, it's just a bunch of numbers, really, next to a bunch of portfolio names and next to very broad, generic descriptions, like expense and equipment/inventory purchases or capital investment or nonbudgetary disbursements, these sorts of things, or lottery fund payments. I mean, it's a bit difficult to look at this book, to stare at a booklet and to stare at it really, really hard and try to somehow psychically glean from this paucity of information what it is that we're actually voting on, what it is that we're actually debating, what the intention of the government is here.

I'm looking for, I guess, a fairly straightforward answer. Is interim supply, then, for this upcoming fiscal year just maintenance of the status quo from the fiscal year about to end at the end of this month, to get us through the first quarter of '09-10 exactly according to the plan that was laid out in Budget 2008, or has the President of the Treasury Board, the Minister of Finance and Enterprise, and in fact the entire government of Alberta started to take into consideration that financially, economically this is a very, very different world from the one that we were talking about a little less than a year ago, when we were debating Budget 2008, and that the nice-to-dos and nice-to-haves that were kicking around 10, 11 months ago need a very real revisiting? I wonder if I could get an answer from the President of the Treasury Board to that question.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Chairman, while it's not an exact science, one could go back if they wished to the interim supply requests for '08-09. Now, in '08-09 we were later and expecting to be somewhat later. Those requests at that time were $8.9 billion, $9.01 billion. If one wanted to take the time and go line by line on what is being asked for now as opposed to what was being asked for last spring, they may see an indication that there are some areas where the ask is down and some areas where the ask is up.

Overall, by simply going back to the '08-09 supply requests and transposing those numbers over beside the call on what we ask for now – and it's easier this year than maybe some years because departments have stayed consistent. Although the interresponsibility from departments is getting better and the opportunity for departments to work on initiatives overall are certainly going to show probably better support for those who need it and certainly some internal efficiencies, they could surmise a trend. I wouldn't want to do too much for them on that side; nevertheless, I think that you will see a trend.

The other part that the hon. member talks about is: what have we done to ensure that this isn't just the status quo? That's actually an interesting question. We've had a great deal of success, but it started long before this budget process. It started with our core value reviews of over two years ago when things looked absolutely wonderful out there. The government with all of the departments involved was asked to take a critical look at what they do and what they do with each other. In many ways it's just baseline funding increases, the most appropriate way to address some of the situations that Albertans find themselves confronting.

In our last go, with the Premier's guidance we developed the crime and safe communities initiatives, where all of the departments have to come back to the trough, so to say, for dollars to address that issue because it does not just rest with Justice or Sol Gen or Children's Services or Health; it rests with us all. Making it the responsibility of that department to come in with a plan that is measurable quite quickly: if you want more than just funding for a quarter or more, we have to see the results, and we have to see how it fits the solution to the issue. With the overview of the peers of the different ministries there and the deputies having to understand the limited amount of money and the issue to get a better bang for our buck, I think that, truly, it might not be the easiest accounting thing to follow. But that doesn't matter to the person who's affected by a child with an addiction or a community where gangs or crime have taken over or someone with a mental illness. I don't think they care about the accounting part of it. They just want to get it fixed. The ministerial working groups and the issues pot to fund to make sure that there's clear, quick results to go to that thing I think is a very solid move.

The other part that's showing more things – and it will be apparent in the budget as we go forward – was the opportunity to do significant departmental reviews, not just have a quick look but get back to “What are you doing? Can someone do it better? Can you do it better together?” and come forward with suggestions. Mr. Chairman, we have a binder full. Once again, this wasn't just started in response to the economic downturn but over two years ago. Dumb luck or whatever. The fact is that government should continually be in a process of reviewing itself. The times change, the needs of the people change, people's priorities change, and sometimes the world changes and forces that change on us quicker than we might be ready for, but I can sit here with confidence and look Albertans in the eye and say that we have been working on making our government better for at least the last two years from a financial point of view.

It's a work in progress, obviously. I think that to answer the hon. member, sometimes when you're dealing with billions, a million seems insignificant or 10 million is ha, ha, ha, an Oprah ha or whatever. But we found literally hundreds of millions of dollars internally, and we found a new process to get the ministers, whether it's seniors or housing or issues around mental health, all at the table working on the issue collectively. It's far, far better for our processes. It's far better for the people that are getting our support.

So we have done a great deal and proudly say that this isn't a result of the economic downturn. I think it's a result of the fact that we have an obligation to ensure to the people that are paying not only our salaries but are paying the way – it's not our money; it's their money. They want to know that we're spending it appropriately. We're maybe not where you'd like us to be, if that world exists, but we're a long ways from where we were.

Mr. Taylor: I appreciate that rather impassioned defence of a government reorganization that the President of the Treasury Board just undertook, complete with the little dig at whether I'll ever be happy with where you're going. You know what? Chances are that I might be, but in order for me to determine whether I can be happy with where you're going, I've got to know where you're going.

A couple of things stood out in what the President of the Treasury Board had to say there. Yes, you will see some numbers up, some numbers down in terms of the dollar figures beside the various ministries when you compare '09-10, the interim supply estimates, to '08-09, but when you kind of look at the bottom line, it's basically status quo. It's $8.972 billion on expense and inventory purchases, $581 million on capital investment, and so on and so forth. Not a lot has changed there from an evidentiary point of view.

Now, I agree with the president. Is the President of the Treasury Board listening closely to this? He should perhaps check it in black and white in Hansard later because it's going on the public record that I agree with the President of the Treasury Board that the average Albertan cares a heck of a lot more about getting the problem solved, getting the issue fixed, than they do about the intricacies of the accounting involved in all that. I understand that. Nevertheless, I still feel as though I'm being called upon here to accept as an article of faith that you guys are working on things and, you know, that the cross-ministerial meetings around whatever table, cabinet or otherwise, that you have your meetings around for these sorts of things are so much more rewarding and fulfilling and enjoyable and presumably productive as well.

Cross-ministerial issues have been a real problem historically, not just in this government. There are always interministerial rivalries and turf protection and so on and so forth. To undertake a reorganization that seeks to specifically address some of those problems and say, “Lookit, if we're talking about safe communities, we are talking about the territory of the Solicitor General, the territory of Housing and Urban Affairs, the territory of Children's Services, the territory of Seniors and Community Supports, Municipal Affairs,” and who knows how many other ministries – perhaps you can in one way or another involve just about every ministry in government in safe communities. To get the right parts of the right ministries working together on the right issues is not only the right thing to try and do, but it's a fairly Herculean task to pull off. To use a phrase that my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo has used in this House before, mad props to the government of Alberta for even attempting to do that.

However, we're here today talking about boring old intricacies of accounting, much as I would far rather stand here and talk about fixing stuff. I don't think that there's anybody on this side of the House who's on record more often in terms of talking about the need to solve problems, move forward, and get 'er done than myself. I'm very much into that. But at the same time, when we're talking about in total $10 billion, we need to have some sense of, I guess, the accounting issues behind it, whether this is the maintenance of a status quo or whether there's real, hard evidence in here, coming back to what I said before, that the government gets the change in economic times and realizes that it, like everybody else in this province, is going to have to re-examine and re-evaluate its nice-to-dos and nice-to-haves.

The thing is that if the ask for interim supply in ministry A goes down by $10 million this year over last and the ask in ministry B goes up by $20 million and the ask in ministry C goes down by $10 million, that doesn't really tell me anything except that we've moved the money around. It's kind of a shell game. It's kind of rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic. It doesn't say to me, it doesn't say to the people of Alberta: hey, we get it that times are tough; we get it that we have to really, really, really do a serious job here of reordering our priorities and reallocating our spending.

I'm coming back, Mr. Chairman, to what I asked the President of the Treasury Board before, which is: show me the evidence in this booklet that you've started to address the nice-to-dos and the nice-to-haves and started to reorder your priorities there. I'm sorry, but I can't see them here. I can put '09-10 beside '08-09, and I can see differences in line item numbers beside different departments, but I can't see a trend developing here.

I can't see evidence yet – and I'm prepared to acknowledge that there may be a great deal more evidence when Budget 2009 comes down; I'm also prepared to acknowledge that there might not be – that the reorganization that started nearly two years ago, according to the President of the Treasury Board, which may have paid off in nonmaterial, nonmonetary ways significantly already, is having an impact on bottom line. The reason why I keep coming back to that, Mr. Chairman, is because I think bottom line becomes an issue going forward in this very, very different economy and very different economic situation than we found ourselves in about a year ago.

Mr. Snelgrove: I may want to apologize in advance. I may have been wrong, Mr. Chairman. If the hon. member is starting to agree with me, maybe I'm straying into an area that I shouldn't be.

The difference between the cross-ministry issues of before was that it was very simple to identify the issues that affected the ministries. This process gets to the solution of the problem. I can accept that, yeah, you can't get it out of this book, and I don't think the intent of the interim supply was to drill down to where the hon. member would like to go.

We may even have to go back a couple of more years, probably take a five-year growing total of what interim supply estimates were. While I appreciate that you weren't here, they were growing just as fast as the end of the year spending. Maybe not quite. Your colleagues will be able to tell you that we were routinely coming in for sup estimates for things. There was growth and sups. You may have to go back and see what the numbers were then to see the flat line now.

When you consider that approximately half of what we get as a government or what we spend or is spent on our behalf is the boards and agencies, the health authorities, the children's education, it's the biggest chunk of what we do. We just collect it from wherever, and we give it to them. They're in the same boat as we are, that a huge chunk of what they spend is salaries, is wages.

I think our Premier made it abundantly clear, certainly made it clear to me, that this year we needed to go forward with the agreements we have in place, with our teachers and our nurses and all, and that as you know, we should be the first to show restraint. I think it's fair enough to say that if this continued downturn or situation we're in is worse or shows no sign of abating, it's time then to sit down with our unions and with others and say: "Okay, here's the reality of today. Here's the simple fact. Albertans don't want operational deficits." They have made that clear for generations in this province. They don't want them. So to continue to provide services that Albertans also think are important, we're going to have to work with our service providers to get where we have to go.

Now, I think the hon. member would agree that a couple of years ago it would have been, I would say, impossible to have the head of the CAW at a news conference announcing that they'd actually sat down with GM and given something back. We saw it here. I think most people who live outside of the industrial part of Ontario, the auto sector, looked at the union agreements over the years and said: "That can't last. There is no way that those industries can stay competitive paying two or three times up front." It didn't seem to matter. The unions were there to do a job, to get the most they could get, and for some reason the senior executives in the car industry seemed more than willing to sell their future into agreements that couldn't be sustainable. Couldn't be. If GM and Chrysler disappear, there will still be cars. Somebody is going to build them, but it might not be those guys that were building them and priced themselves out of them.

As we sit down with our service providers and unions, I think we have to have a pretty clear indication of where we're going. I can appreciate that the longer we can go with a budget, the better chance you have to use the process we have for forecasting revenues. Not to say that it could make a great deal of difference, but you're in here when they're picking away about being out $10 or $20 on the current price of oil or a dollar on gas, and somehow, magically, we're never supposed to get that wrong. So the longer you can go to get your projections right, the better and the more notice we can give all the people involved in this government – the nurses, the teachers, the janitors, the whole thing – that we're at a serious piece of business here. It wasn't about taking out existing contracts. It's about sitting down and saying: "Okay. Here's the situation. Where to from now?"

Where will budgets go? A lot depends on the circumstances that unfold around us. But there shouldn't be any mistaking the fact that if our revenues continue to tumble and no prospect of them coming back at any time soon, we will do as other governments in the past have done: you make the decisions you have to make. It gives me absolutely no pleasure or thrill to suggest that people may have to do with less. I find it difficult myself when I get a raise; I wonder how I lived without it before. But you can, and one of these days we'll get the pleasure of finding out.

The business of governing is sometimes based on audits. Sometimes it's based on outside sources. Sometimes it's based on a gut feeling. In this particular circumstance I think we have made a very conscious and prudent decision to say: let's take a time out. Let's go forward. We know we've been working internally on streamlining what we do. We know Albertans want to see and maintain confidence in the government. The commitment to them before, you know, was: "Work with us. When we get rid of the debt, Albertans will benefit." They've benefited greatly. They're going to benefit greatly down the road because there is the $14 billion or $15 billion available to cushion this. But we can't let it get to the day where we're still running deficits without a sustainability fund to do it.

We don't want to sink the ship. This is a course correction. The ship we're all on has kind of slowed down. I think if most people were to look at this, they would say: "Okay. They've managed to get their spending somewhat under control. It's not the final product, but according to this it looks like they've accepted the seriousness of the financial situation they're in. Let's see what's in the budget." More importantly, I believe that Albertans very, very clearly are more interested in what we do than in what you or I or anybody says in here. This is a vehicle in here to pass time. When it hits the ground out there, when the senior or the person in a waiting room or the student going to university gets their service, that's what it's all about.

I can appreciate that, yes, there is not much in this document. As we get into the fuller discussions on budget, then they're very appropriate questions. The ministers will be there, I think, to maybe not satisfy but explain where their priorities have changed. Until then I can only say as Treasury Board that on indications that we give to departments, their response has been overwhelmingly consistent: "We'll do the right thing. We'll look very closely at what our expenditures are. We'll keep an eye on the future." We learn from the past. We don't live in it but learn from that past. Once again, don't get caught looking in the rear-view mirror when there's nothing that can be helped by that.

My good friend and colleague Dr. West, who would be well known to the walls in this building, having gone through some of the most serious restructuring in probably any democratic country's history, said: don't panic; don't overreact. Even by his admission he said that maybe they overstated the need to get rid of the debt, and it came at the expense of infrastructure at the time. Now, hindsight is a wonderful thing. I'll someday hope to pick a barrel of it up myself and then use it whenever I want. But he said: don't overreact.

There are people that won't be happy. Some of the goofballs that run the Taxpayers Federation, whatever, won't be happy until every civil servant is laid off and they're not paying any taxes, I guess. I don't know what the hell they think the world is going to look like, but they're not going to be happy till then.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chair. I have a couple of points, and I may go backwards instead of forwards because some of the things that the President of the Treasury Board has just said I found quite interesting and I think also disturbing in some ways. I have been around politics for a long time, on the inside, outside. I've run in elections. I've done a lot of things. I've been around a long time. I've watched – I've watched – what I feel to be the losing of democracy. To have a minister stand up in the House and say that we're just passing time: that's not why I got elected, that's not why I believe in this House, and it's not why I believe in democracy. So I found that quite upsetting.

This is where things should be happening. We shouldn't have the attitude in here that one side is the enemy and one side isn't. That's not how it should work. Because an idea happens to come from the other side of the House, it should be respected for what it is, and that goes all ways. So, yeah, I'm a little disappointed in that because I put a fair amount of work into this House.

However, after I have said that, I'd also like to thank the same minister for the explanation regarding supplemental versus interim. Of course, I thought I understood it before you had actually said those words, but I wanted to make this clear. Does this money that these different departments are asking for just go into a pot? How did they know specifically to ask for these numbers of dollars? How did agriculture know to ask for $190,200,00? How did they know? I'm sure you guys aren't just saying: okay, we've got X number of dollars, and we'll just kind of spread it out. That ministry had to have come and said, "This is how much money we need and for these reasons," which is why I had asked the question of what this money is going to be used for. Somebody has to know what it's going to be used for. You can't just throw it into a pot; at least, I don't think you can.

You had made some remarks also about the Auditor General and that many things that we were going to have to do might be nice to do. I totally agree with the concept of nice to do and that it will be the difference between want and need. Certainly, there will be some needs out there. But I believe that the Auditor General is a little bit different because he reports to the House. He isn't sort of a part of this House, and I believe that what he does is necessary to do, not nice to do. We need him to do what you have said right from when the Premier was elected: be open, transparent, and honest. If those three things are there, it automatically equals trust, and I'm not altogether sure that there is a great deal of trust out there. There are too many questions that aren't being answered. So I do think that he is a little bit different and that by doing what he does, he's actually pushing forward your message of openness and transparency.

The other remark that was made was about the CAW and about unions per se. Again, I believe that both sides are to blame. Unions are to blame and the employer and the employee are to blame because they're not sitting down at the table looking at a problem as a solution. Again, we've got that us-and-them mentality, and it truly doesn't work. I think we all know that. But there's another thing, I believe, from way back when particularly in manufacturing and certainly in our textile industry part of what happened was that because the union demands were so high, then, most of our stuff went offshore, not just in Canada, certainly in the United States.

There's also another thing to factor in there, in my mind. When you have a difference of a thousand per cent between the guy on the line and the guy at the top, that is the tipping point of where huge problems start coming in. So there is blame on both sides. Again,

I think it's an attitudinal change, and I think that part of the attitudinal change is going to come whether we like it or not. Certainly, what's happening out there in the world on the economic side of it will make us all sit down, take a couple of steps backward, take a deep breath, and hopefully we'll all sit down at the table and be talking about the same things.

Back, I think, to the questions at hand, which are really about the interim dollars: how did these ministries ask for those dollars if they don't know where it's going to go?

Mr. Snelgrove: The ministers don't actually have to ask for what's in here. Their targets are achieved by the process we go through to build a budget. When the targets are set, then the offices of finance and Treasury Board would simply look at the departmental expense for a quarter of the year. This looks after their expenditures in the first quarter. Some have different financial obligations where they fund outside agencies, and they may need a certain amount of front-load, so theirs might be more than what would be a quarter. Some may have no other obligation or may know that they have greater expenditures. Historically it's pretty straight, but for the sake of your questions it's simply stating that this will cover expenditures for these departments for a quarter of the year. It's not that the department comes in and says: well, I need about that much. Once their targets are set and budgets are set, then they do it.

The other thing I want to get back to is that I'm surprised the hon. member would take anything from my statement around the unions other than that it is not about us or them. I made it very clear that we needed to sit down to engage them and on a go-forward basis, with the same information, start to talk about what we can do differently, if we have to, to stay in sync. I know that newpeople like to take what you say and then say what you didn't, but the hon. member doesn't normally do that. If she took from my approach that I was looking for a confrontation thing with unions: absolutely not. I think we made it clear. We need to sit down with them and on a go-forward basis see what we can do, and we'll see how it goes.

To pick out the Auditor. The Auditor's position is critical to the functioning of our trust in a process – I agree – but so is the office of the Ombudsman, who's in the same category; so is the office of the Chief Electoral Officer, whoever he might be; so is the office of the Ethics Commissioner; and so is the office of the Privacy Commissioner.

To anyone who has ever read the Auditor's report from front to back, my most sincere sympathies for a life wasted. But to somebody who's got an issue around FOIP or somebody who's got an issue around ethics, that's just as important or more important than the nerd who has to spend his days thumbing through the Auditor General's report. I don't put a higher value or a lesser value on that office. It makes no difference to me whether you rank them more or less important. Our responsibility is to fund them at a consistent, fair level as it relates to everyone else in the government.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the opportunity to rise and speak to Bill 22, Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009, and would appreciate the opportunity to have some interaction with the health minister on some of the issues that this relates to, depending on how he feels today. We have 20 minutes between us. Otherwise, I could just ask questions, and he can respond at the end of the whole array. What is the minister's preference?

Mr. Liepert: Go ahead.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, are we doing 20 minutes jointly, or are you doing 10 and 10?

Dr. Swann: That's the question I'm asking. I'm willing to interact.

Mr. Liepert: Whatever he wants to do.

Dr. Swann: Twenty minutes interacting, if that fits with the minister, is all right.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Fine. Thank you.

Dr. Swann: I very much appreciate the opportunity to talk to this. It's an issue on many people's minds today. It's the major budget item. It's the major area where we see some real danger, from a sustainability point of view, and the lack of control and the lack of understanding of where the extra funding has gone and why the budget has almost doubled in six years. I, for one, haven't seen enough of the evidence and would love to see more of just where the money has been going. I'm hoping that the minister can shed some light on it.

This is interim supply, so we are making up what is necessary to continue to the time of the budget. It does reflect, again, that we haven't had a budget to put into context some of the decisions in this interim supply. What we can say is with declining revenue from oil and gas and that there's likely to be a deficit, this year's budget will be a very different one from past years'.

I guess the primary role of the ministry of health is to prevent, intervene early, investigate, and treat and rehabilitate people to maximize their productivity, health, and opportunities. In that context it would very nice to know just where our budget is going in the context of prevention versus treatment and whether we are going to see a shift towards investment in more prevention and early intervention so that we can actually reduce the impacts of a burgeoning demand on the health system that's not only taking a toll on our budget, that's taking a toll on the health workers, who can't keep up to the demands and are increasingly on stress leave and are increasingly doing overtime and charging accordingly.

That's adding significantly, I'm sure, to the budgets that we're dealing with, the kind of overtime spending that I've heard about in nursing, particularly as we shifted from 80 per cent full-time nursing in Calgary to now roughly 20 per cent full-time nursing and how that came about and what kind of savings that's resulting in. As I indicated at the outset, we've gone from a budget in 2002-03 of $6.8 billion and in this past year $13.2 billion. There are some serious changes that are occurring within the system, and I think we need more detail to understand just where this is happening. Is it salaries? Is it equipment? Is it overtime? Is it new technologies? Is it pharmaceuticals? Are we changing significantly the way we're charging for lab tests? I heard one physician in Calgary say that when he orders a test, the standard bill is $130, whether it's one test or a battery of tests. There's just the standard fee. If that's the case, there is some serious gouging going on in the laboratory services that I think we need to know more about.

What about radiology and imaging? What's happened to those services, and how is it that they may or may not be contributing to a massive increase in investigative budgets? I've heard the same remarks made about MRIs, that we have increased the number of MRI scans exponentially the last few years and that many of these are unnecessary. I guess the question is: who is allowing this unnecessary use of very expensive technology, especially at a time when people who most need it are having to wait or pay privately to get those services done? What about long-term care and costs there? What are the impacts of some of the changes that the minister is planning to make in the long-term care setting, and how is that affecting both the capital budget and the operating budget? It would be helpful if the minister could make a few comments about that, and I'll come back with some follow-ups.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not exactly sure where to start, but let me try and give it a shot. The Leader of the Opposition asked a very basic question: the fact that we have one of the highest cost health systems in the country, and where is the money going? I just jotted down a few notes here as he was speaking. Let me mention some of these. On average we have the highest paid professionals in the country. We have the best senior coverage programs in the country. Overall we have the widest coverage of services in the country. We have the highest inflationary capital costs in the last five years. We have some of the best research. We have union contracts that, quite frankly, don't allow a lot of flexibility in some cases, and the hon. member mentioned a couple of examples.

I think we have a failed system in the way we compensate, especially the way we compensate our medical community. We pay doctors to have people be sick, not keep them healthy. That's where we have to make some changes relative, and I think that in the new contract that we just signed with the Alberta Medical Association, some of those changes are going to happen.

I would say, however, that two of the reasons why we have seen the highest costs in health care in this province are because we probably have some of the highest expectations in the country in this province, and we have what I believe is a lifestyle that has developed when we've got a booming economy. I refer to it as driving fast and drinking hard. You know, Mr. Chairman, all of these sorts of things lead to situations where the system is being used probably more than it should.

In just kind of a general way I think that if you take all of those particular issues in this province and start to drill down into each one of them, you're probably going to come up with a collective reason why we have some of the highest costs in North America and where the money is going. I won't go any further into that.

The leader talked a bit about prevention, and he is much more of an authority because of his past career in the area of prevention. However, there's no question that, as I said earlier, our system is designed to treat the sick, not to keep people healthy, and part of our changes are exactly around that area.

I think we need to have a renewed emphasis, bought into by all Albertans, around the importance of wellness. I've had a number of Albertans come to me, some fairly prominent Albertans, who want to lead an initiative in this province around wellness, and I hope that in the next few months we can put something together that will not be a government-initiated wellness program but will be actually an Alberta-initiated program. I hope to have a little more to announce in the next few months. That would be working with the parliamentary assistant, the MLA for Edmonton-Meadowlark, who takes a great deal of interest in this particular area.

We also have, as the member is well aware, a new chief medical officer of health, who is coming onboard here in the next couple of weeks, and I think that he will bring fresh thinking to the area around public health, wellness, and prevention. Then, finally, in that area we have Bill 7 before the House, which is going to change some of the ways that we actually handle public health and, again, the preventative side of things. I look forward to having the discussion on Bill 7.

Finally, the question relative to long-term care. Mr. Chairman, I've had this exchange with the Member for Lethbridge-East on a couple of occasions. You know, we have a fundamental problem that health care is built around the system and not built around the patient. A bit off topic. In a meeting yesterday with the two ladies from Calgary who were introduced in the House with the Lymphedema Association – lymphedema is an ailment, and I guess they formed a small association. The majority of lymphedema is caused after cancer. Our system says that if you've been fortunate enough to have cancer and then get lymphedema, we cover everything, but if you happen to be born with it and don't have cancer, well, you're on your own. That tells me that we've got health care in this province that's built around the system and not built around the patient.

Getting back to long-term care, we have a system that says that if you live either on your own or you live in a lodge or in assisted living and you get to a point where, let's use an example, you can no longer bathe yourself, the operators of that particular facility or you if you're in your own home have really no choice but to move all the way over to the most expensive outside of the acute system, which is long-term care. Again, why wouldn't we build health care around the patient and not around the system? Why don't we provide more actual patient care and not say: "There's the system. You need to fit into the system"? I hope that when we get to deliver our budget on the 7th of April, we can start to put more emphasis, more funding into actual delivery of care and less money into the standard system.

I hope I didn't take too much time, Mr. Chairman, but I wanted to try and deal with those three subject matters.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the comments very much. I wonder if the minister can make any comments at all about some of the trends in laboratory testing, diagnostic testing, and the potential for overuse of some of these. It's my understanding that there has been such a burgeoning of testing because to some extent we haven't funded the primary care system in a way that physicians are taking the time to do a careful analysis of the individual and the context and the probability of a diagnosis. They're depending so heavily now on doing a battery of testing, including expensive imaging, that we are in danger of bankrupting the system just through inappropriate testing in some cases.

Obviously, that may apply to pharmaceutical use as well. Instead of taking the time, having a thorough team assessment of a particular problem, we're coming to the wrong diagnosis, treating with the wrong approach, and ending up with complications and more and more demands on a system that is already overburdened. That's one aspect of what I might ask for more clarification on.

The other has to do with the budget in particular, which identifies $3.2 billion allocated to expense and equipment/inventory with only $4.8 million allocated to capital investment. I wonder if the minister could comment more specifically on why there's such a discrepancy there.

Mr. Liepert: Let me deal with the last one first because it's a very simple answer. The capital flow of dollars to Alberta Health Services over the past year or two has exceeded the ability to actually spend the money, so Alberta Health Services has, I think, in reserve about a billion dollars. Let's take the south Calgary hospital as an example. We have advanced it in our capital plan, but they are not yet at the point where they pay for the work that's been done. It hasn't got to that point yet. So we're actually kind of ahead, and for that reason we don't require any additional capital dollars in the short term.

Equipment. I think that what we are attempting to do on equipment is try and catch up on some of our equipment. We have an issue around equipment that hasn't been allocated in capital the way it should have been for the past number of years, and the health regions previously had been attempting to get as much equipment as they could possibly get funded out of operating. As we all know, there's a lot of pressure on operating dollars, so there has been a tendency to have some squeeze there.

The leader is absolutely correct in terms of the overburden and in many cases probably overuse. One of the issues that we believe is going to be absolutely imperative to ensuring that we don't have multiple tests being prescribed by multiple practitioners, as an example, is our electronic health record. As the members know, it's currently before the policy field committee led by the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford. We've heard presentations that I believe were about to resurrect the bill, if that's the right terminology, and get it back into the Legislature, get it approved. The electronic health record is clearly the tool going forward so that we can start to try and get a better handle on who's prescribing what for whom and the same thing relative to pharmaceuticals.

I can't comment specifically around the lab use, but I believe that the majority of our labs are owned by Alberta Health Services in any event, so really you're kind of taking it out of one pocket and putting it into the other. I'm not so sure that that in itself is an actual expense that is burdening the system, but I think that in many cases what is being overburdened is the patient.

One final comment relative to a team approach in primary care. Clearly, that's our objective. That's part of our AMA agreement. But you know what? We can't force doctors to practise in a primary care network. We can't force doctors to practise as part of a team. I think that what is very important is if you have a team. I visited several of the primary care networks, one recently on the south side of Edmonton that I recall. You know, the diabetes patient comes in, gets assessed by the doctor. The physician then prescribes a program that that patient is on for the next year, and every visit subsequent to that is with a nurse. It's not back to see the doctor. We have to have more of the team concept. There's Taber; there's Pincher Creek. There are a number of primary care networks that work well. That's the direction we're heading. But one thing I've learned in the short period of time I've been here: this is a tough industry to change.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thanks very much. My final comments, then, would simply relate to the need for, as I've indicated in the House before, some concrete measurables in relation to the restructuring that has occurred so that in the next 10 years we'll have some sense of whether quality, access, and cost efficiency have improved or decreased as a result of the structural changes which I understand the minister is trying to achieve through this restructuring. Will there in fact be some measurable parameters in which we can assess this latest restructuring in the next 10 years and say yes or no to what has been happening here?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think the answer is that we absolutely have to because if we don't and we continue to plod along like we are for the next 10 years, we won't have a system in 10 years. I'm very confident, hon. leader, in the new CEO that we've chosen, Dr. Stephen Duckett. If there are 20 things that the leader and I would put on a list that we wanted to see out of our new CEO, many of them are the same sorts of things: performance measures, physician engagement, and I could go on and on and on. He absolutely epitomizes those 20 things that we need to see out of the system. So, yes, there will clearly be some measures put in place.

I would just like to conclude with these comments, Mr. Chairman. I believe that the nine-month restructuring that has taken place in Alberta Health Services, despite the consternation of the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on occasion, you know, quite frankly, has far exceeded any of my expectations. [Mr. Liepert's speaking time expired] I guess we're done.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I was listening with interest to the minister of health, and he forgot to mention that the restructuring bill, or the tab for that restructuring of his, is $1.3 billion according to the Premier in his year-end interview. However, it's not that his issues aren't important; they are. They're significant. He has a significant portfolio and a $12 billion budget. But I have questions for the only cabinet colleague of his with a town named after him, the President of the Treasury Board. [interjection] Lloydminster. [interjection] It's in your constituency.

Now, I, like many others, have been following the financial plan of the government and the interim supply estimates and how our interim supply estimates are going to fit into the budget that we're eventually going to receive on the 7th of April. We look at the allocations and the requests here, and I can understand where it's a budget to tide us over, but as we spend this money or next year's money, I would like an explanation, please, from the hon. minister.

I heard him speak earlier about the ups and downs of oil and natural gas and what they will mean to our budget. Everyone in this House is concerned about whether we'll have adequate revenue from nonrenewable resources or whether we'll have adequate revenue from corporate tax or personal tax. Certainly, I don't think we can expect too much in investment income from the heritage savings trust fund this year. There are a number of revenue streams that are going to be significantly reduced. I would estimate between $6 billion and $8 billion less that the President of the Treasury Board is going to have to count this year.

Specifically, now we're not only in a different budget year, we're also in a different calendar year. This is reflected in the third-quarter update, where we now have a new price sensitivity post-January 2009 for oil prices and natural gas. If the Treasury Board president could tell me and taxpayers throughout the province what all this means, I would be very grateful.

Now, we know that oil price sensitivities will change now, according to the third-quarter fiscal update, by $105 million. I asked questions about this last week, but unfortunately I didn't receive any answers. When we look at the old price sensitivity for oil – and by old I mean prior to January 1, 2009 – the net change was 130, so if there was an annual change of $1 in the price of oil, we would either collect an additional $130 million or, if the price went down, we would be unable to collect that $130 million. The change now, or the sensitivity, is 235, or a change of $105 million. With the new royalty rates as oil decreases in price – the rate is price sensitive – we collect less. My question to the hon. minister is: how much less will we collect in oil royalties in this year of 2009-10 than we would have under the old royalty regime?

The same, Mr. Chairman, would apply for natural gas, where we see a price sensitivity that has changed since January 2009. If the price of natural gas was to increase or decrease by 10 cents, we would collect an additional $114 million or we would have a reduction of $114 million in revenue. We see that change by 44. I'm led to believe that if there was an annual change in the price of natural gas in Canadian dollars per gigajoule of 10 cents, if the price went down 10 cents, we would see $158 million less in our projected nonrenewable resource revenue. I'm referencing page 8 in the third-quarter fiscal update, where I'm getting these post-January 2009 sensitivities. If the minister could enlighten me and taxpayers and members of this House on these questions, I would be very grateful.

Thank you.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Chairman, if I could with absolute certainty tell you what we were going to get from oil or gas revenues next year based on price fluctuations and without knowing how much of it we're going to sell – I mean, it's great to say that we're going to get $100 a barrel, but if we're only going to sell 20,000 barrels a day, you can add up on one end of the equation, and you can lose her all on the other – if I could put a number on that, I've got a hunch I would have a lot better job than I've got right now. Even Mr. Buffett admitted just recently that he got it all wrong, and he's considered one of the great forecasters.

The hon. member is absolutely right that the price sensitivity of our royalty regime right now does make the government more exposed to price fluctuations. It means that if the price of oil goes up dramatically, our income follows, which was a flaw in the previous royalty, particularly on natural gas, where we capped out and the price could go to $30 and we were stuck at $3.50. So we took a risk. We said: "We're with you in the oil industry. If it's down here, you've got to keep making enough money to pay your families. We'll take what's there. When it gets good, we get a fair amount, and when it gets great, we get a lot." That was a conscientious choice we made.

I mean, besides the oil and gas we are at a very strong influence of the Canadian dollar. I think it's close to $273 million now that a 1-cent change makes in our budget. I mean, there's an enormous amount of variable factors that go into it, where you could take a snapshot in time on any day and say that if this and this and this and this are here and we've sold that much, that's what it is. But to just guess forward and say, "Well, you know, what are we going to be, up or down or otherwise?" doesn't suit any reasonable purpose for me to speculate.

The royalty structure in place is fair. It will return to Albertans an appropriate amount for their resource. But I wouldn't want to give the hon. member a dollar figure about what it actually means to our revenues. That would simply be a guess.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. I'll be quite frank: I don't understand that. In any budget document, in any of the fiscal plans from past budget years, certainly, the government has made revenue projections at a set price for both oil and natural gas. I'm not talking about synthetic crude but conventional oil production and natural gas production. There are lists of columns.

With the current prices and with the new royalty regime the price sensitivity is obviously spread wider, so we would collect more at higher prices, but we would collect less at lower prices. My question simply is: how much less at lower prices does the minister anticipate we will collect under the current royalty regime which came into effect in January of 2009? Previous government documents certainly would give projections on how much revenue was to be anticipated.

Mr. Snelgrove: What's that ad they have now? The accountants put it on, you know: if life was that simple. If the hon. member wants to pick a day and tell me what the price of oil is going to be, what the price of gas is going to be, and how much of it we're going to sell, I'll tell him how much of a difference it is from the projection.

The budget projections are not just done by us. We have the same process that we've used for years, where a multitude of energy forecasters look at their best-guess scenario, they put the figures out there, and they anticipate. We take a blend of those numbers, we put it out, and we suggest that's what the number will be for the coming year.

As the hon. member knows, we can think we're very low one day and all of a sudden find out we might be very high the next. It's irresponsible for me to say that we're going to be down $2,000, $2 billion, $3 billion. The hon. member can do the math as well himself. If we don't sell any oil, then the price really doesn't affect us very much. The simple fact is that we know that given the economic situation both our volume and our price are expected to be lower than we would have anticipated last year or the year before.

Mr. MacDonald: We're getting somewhere now, Mr. Chairman. The hon. minister is telling us that it will be lower.

Now, if I look at the fiscal plan from last year, certainly, there is nonrenewable resource revenue. There's an actual, there's a forecast, there's a budget, and there's a target through to 2009-10 and 2010-11. The target revenue for 2009-10 was $10.7 billion, and the target for the year 2010-11 was $10 billion. How much less than this target from last year's fiscal plan does the minister anticipate he will be counting in this fiscal year for the budget we're discussing in interim supply?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Chairman, he can come right back to that desk at this time on April 7, and he'll get his answer.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, Mr. Chairman, when we're discussing interim supply, and we are . . .

Mr. Snelgrove: We're discussing expenditures.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, the document that I'm looking at is an estimate for interim supply. Certainly, the hon. minister is right. They will be calculated into or totalled into all of the expenditures for the entire year. How are taxpayers to have confidence in this government and in this budget process when the minister is indicating that we will have to wait because no one on that side of the House has a number? I do not believe, Mr. Chairman, that no one, particularly this hon. minister, who has a town named after him, knows. I know he works hard, and he works long hours. We're not that far from April 7, and I think someone on that side of the House has to know what the target for next year's revenue will be under the royalty regime that came into effect in 2009, considering the prices that we're getting now for natural gas and conventional crude oil.

The Deputy Chair: I have to ask: are you sharing 20 minutes? The clerk is trying desperately to keep up with the switches on this. You hadn't let me know.

Mr. Snelgrove: Might I ask for unanimous consent to make it 25?

The Deputy Chair: Okay. You are sharing 20.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Chairman, interim supply is strictly and simply the expenditure side of our budget. We make no representation in here whatsoever about what the revenues may or may not be. That's completely within the purview of the minister of finance in consultation with the Department of Energy and the Sol Gen and gaming, that have revenue streams in there. The hon. member would also know that we have to take a certain amount of our lead on revenue projections from the federal government, who collects our taxes for us and remits. We have to use their trending to identify. This particular process we're in is strictly on the expenditure side, which is part of the responsibility of government.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I would remind the hon. minister – and he knows this full well – that you earn money before you spend it. The hon. minister is telling me that this is just what we're going to spend.

Now, I would like the minister, please, to note that there is a significant difference in these price sensitivities post-January 2009 than what was anticipated in last year's fiscal plan. This is concerning, Mr. Chairman, because the sensitivities to fiscal year assumptions for 2009-10 this time last year when we were dealing with the budget was for the oil price of $211 million. We see now that it's $235 million. There is a wee difference there of $24 million, and I suspect that it is because the price of conventional crude oil has declined more than what was anticipated by the province. I would agree with him that at this time last year it would have been very difficult to recognize that we were going to have such a significant decline in the price of conventional crude oil, but we did, and we have to be prepared for it – we are in sort of a modest way with our plan, which is a stability fund – but also for natural gas.

The government is not nearly out as much, when you compare last year's fiscal plan, because you knew what the calculation was on the new royalty structure, than what is in the third-quarter update as the price for natural gas has gone down. There's an $8 million difference in the price sensitivity for natural gas. I think we need to clarify this before the government members build the budget for this province. It's clear that as prices go down and we now have this price-sensitive royalty structure, the people who own the resource, Albertans, are going to be collecting significantly less.

Thank you.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Chairman, my kids and my wife are living proof that you do not have to wait until you make money before you spend it. As a matter of fact, I would think anybody with kids in college or university or a wife whose husband spends most of his time in Edmonton has a propensity to spend far more money and far faster, although we are very well paid and the compensation is terrific in this particular House. I would suggest to President Obama that he could save a lot of this frivolling around he's doing. Give my wife a MasterCard, start in New York, and by the time she hit L.A., their economy would be rock 'n' rolling like no one's business. The idea that you can't spend what you don't have may be foreign to everyone in my family but me.

Back to the sensitivities. It wouldn't matter, Mr. Chairman, if nothing in our royalty structure had changed. The prices have collapsed far past anything that any projector, any business analyst, any energy analyst had even contemplated. As a matter of fact, the governor of the Bank of Canada I think in July said that oil would hit $200 within a year – $200. He is a pretty high-paid, smart, informed guy, and he got it that wrong. So any suggestion that the projections on going forward stuff is a complete science would be incorrect. Any suggestion that simply because we have a different royalty structure in effect, it's going to have a worse or a greater effect will be a point for discussion after the finance minister tables her budget with the different modelling included in it to arrive at our final budget.

I'm not going to get into a debate about revenue with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, who, I might add, also has some facilities named after him. I think I've heard of the Gold Bar power station and the Gold Bar sewage treatment facility. Like, it's a start. Don't lose faith. I'm sure somewhere, someday, sometime some people will get incredibly drunk and name their town Hughie-minster.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We were discussing price sensitivities here. The only thing I can draw from our exchange is that perhaps the hon. minister is going to be . . .

Mr. MacDonald: Not only sleeping on the couch, but he might be having a sandwich instead of a hot meal. Anyway, that was quite interesting.

I was expecting more information on the anticipated royalty revenue than the spending habits of the hon. minister's family. However, I think this is a very, very important issue. These are very, very important questions because of the significant change in these price sensitivities and what they will mean to the treasury. I'm disappointed, again, that I'm not getting the answers that I seek. I would certainly suggest to the hon. members across the way that they have a look at last year's fiscal plan and see what was anticipated in revenue and what in the small, fine print the third-quarter update is anticipating before we go any further with the discussion on interim supply, Mr. Chairman.

With those words, I will certainly thank the minister for his time. I'm disappointed with the information that he has provided to me and to the taxpayers, but I guess I'll have to just put my patience hat on and wait until the 7th.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Chair. On behalf of the hon. President of the Treasury Board, I realize the difficult position that you're in. We're on this side making an assumption that you've actually worked with the minister of finance and you've got a reasonable sense of where things are going. If that's not the case at this point in terms of prediction of the assumption of the price of a barrel of oil or a gigajoule of gas, then maybe we're asking too much of you.

Also, it's very hard to limit discussion strictly to interim supply without trying to get a sense of the forecast of where we're heading. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar indicated, we can only reference what has been in the past, so going back into the past – this is for Children and Youth Services – how much is allocated for child and family services authorities? In the '08-09 the total was $749,336,000. Again, how much is allocated to child intervention services? The '08-09 total was $377,825,000.

It is very difficult, no doubt, to create a budget when we are so absolutely, inextricably dependent on the price of oil and gas. We have a growing population with growing demands. We can count on certain taxes. Although we have eliminated the health premium tax, which I would think the majority of citizens are grateful for, we've also seen a large portion of that space that was left and the savings left being foisted onto middle-income seniors in the form of increased pharmaceutical costs, especially if they're not on a group plan, as is the case with most seniors, and they're having to pay Blue Cross amounts that have doubled.

One of the concerns that I have is that in terms of trying to save money, we're trying to do things cheaply. It's the equivalent of putting a cheap fix, a partial patch as opposed to dealing with the entire roof if we just keep patching things. I've seen examples of cheaper approaches, and I'm extremely worried in the cheaper approach that's being applied to Children and Youth Services in the form of decertification. We've got seniors and children, our two most vulnerable members of society, and we're going to have child care workers that aren't certified, that won't have had the education and won't have had the experience. That's a concern, and it seems to be a pattern.

This government instead of bolstering municipal police forces, instead of standing behind the RCMP for example, has decided to do policing on the cheap. They've hired a tremendous number of sheriffs, who are considerably less costly than RCMP because they don't receive the same amount of training, and therefore the cost of their education is considerably lower and their salaries are considerably lower. Again, this is an example of doing things on the cheap. I'm concerned that when you operate that way, in the long run you end up paying out a whole lot more money.

Now, on the positive side the government has realized and gotten behind the 10-year plan to end homelessness. Forget the moral business of being your brother's keeper, but they've realized that it makes financial sense to provide 24/7 care for the people who are most costing of the system, whether it be through mental illness, whether it be through addictions. They've realized that for approximately $30,000 a year they can provide 24/7 care for those individuals. They can support them. They don't just put a roof over their head. I wish that sort of all-inclusive support and care notion that's being provided for the hardest to house was applied to other areas.

In this recessionary time frame I'm extremely worried for Alberta's children. The latest StatsCan indicated that we have 78,000 Alberta children living below the poverty line, and poverty very much restricts your choices. As the recession grows and more and more Alberta families are put under the pressure of either a husband or a wife losing a job, tensions increase within the family. And it won't be over, necessarily, whether you have a gold card and you're travelling across to solve President Obama's expenses; it will be whether you can just plain survive.

Last year almost 19,000 women, with children in arms in many cases, were turned away from women's shelters, and there has not been a significant increase in funding for shelters. The Sheriff King Home did receive some funding. The Inn from the Cold received a small amount of funding. But in terms of interim supply and tide-over funding there's not a whole lot there when it comes to sheltering individuals.

Also, the way the government directs its funding. We had the example, I believe, for the homeless and eviction fund of having paid out $121 million – and probably that was months ago – instead of putting pressure on landlords to charge reasonable rents. As a result taxpayers are out a tremendous amount of money, the rents are guaranteed to the landlords, and the prices don't go down. Part of our recession is being very much experienced by anybody who builds houses. There's a tremendous downturn in housing starts, and that again affects affordable housing.

In terms of education, if we don't deal with the approximate $8 billion in total of the unfunded liability for teachers and pay that down on a regular basis, then that's going to multiply. Again, I don't see within this interim supply a specified amount. The government can get away with just paying I believe it's $85 million to the fund, but if that's all they pay, then these fees are going to increase.

Another concern I have and I don't see reflected in the interim supply but hopefully will be dealt with in the budget is school psychologists. There has been some troubling discussion about doing away with coding for children, and it's based on coding that aides are provided for children with learning disabilities.

We're opening our arms, as well we should from a Canadian standpoint, to a number of individuals seeking refugee status, which is very much dramatically affecting pressures on English as a second language. A number of the children that we're receiving from war-torn areas such as Darfur don't have literacy in their first language, and therefore dealing with the emotional trauma that they've gone through and trying to give them some sort of English as a second language structure when their own language structure is limited is extremely challenging. It requires funding and support. Unless we address this in the early ages, have children reading by the time they complete grade three, then the cost to the system is just going to skyrocket.

Also, in terms of where the government spends money, it's sometimes questionable. For example, the amount of money spent on standardized achievement tests is higher than the amount spent on developing curriculum. There are good expenditures. There are good investments. [Mr. Chase's speaking time expired] I'll look forward to talking about some of them.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Some of those good expenditures that I'm looking forward to talking about are doing such things as working on eliminating child poverty. I indicated the figure of 78,000 children. Now, poverty costs a tremendous amount because those same children who are living in poverty are also suffering nutritional difficulties. Since good nutrition is a key to good health and, obviously, a key to good learning, the cost of poverty when combined with the cost of illiteracy is very much affecting our ability as a province to move forward. It has been estimated by a number of literacy organizations that 40 per cent of Albertans are functionally illiterate. If they're functionally illiterate, their ability to perform within their jobs or to increase their employment possibilities, and therefore their ability to pay taxes, is a concern. So, obviously, investment in education and literacy is extremely important.

We have to be looking for greater efficiencies where the money can best be provided, where we would receive less risk. Now, I agree with the hon. minister of the Treasury Board that we have to live within our means. Although the minister of the Treasury Board indicated that, you know, we should be as concerned about, for example, the Ethics Commissioner, as concerned about the Ombudsperson, the roles that the various departments face, it's the Auditor general who creates the fiscal map. If we followed the Auditor General's recommendations, then we would be saving great amounts in terms of efficiency and putting ourselves at considerably less risk.

Just an example of recommendations the Auditor General made in his October 2008 report – and it would be interesting if someone could comment on to what extent these have actually been embraced – on page 15 of his report under AIMCo, internal control certification, recommendation 32. Keep in mind that AIMCo is the outfit that manages our finances. I believe that they're in the area of approximately, in terms of assets, $72 billion, although at the rate we're losing lately, that sum may have gone down. This is what Auditor General Fred Dunn, our pilot, suggested:

We recommend that Alberta Investment Management Corporation introduce a process to prepare for internal control certification by:

- ensuring that its strategic plan includes internal control certification.
- developing a top-down, risk-based process for internal control design.
- selecting an appropriate internal control risk-assessment framework.
- considering sub-certification processes, with direct reports to the Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer providing formal certification on their areas of responsibility.
- ensuring that management compensation systems incorporate the requirement for good internal control.
- using a phased approach to assess the design and operating effectiveness of internal controls.

That was recommendation 32. Hopefully it's being followed.

Recommendation 33 has to do with ensuring completeness and accuracy of private equity partnership investments. This recommendation has been repeated because, obviously, it wasn't followed the first time. "We again recommend that Alberta Investment Management Corporation reconcile its investments in private equity partnerships to the audited partnership financial statements."

Recommendation 34, international swaps and derivatives association agreements. We know how many of us have gotten burned with derivatives.

We recommend that Alberta Investment Management Corporation regularly review its International Swaps and Derivatives Association agreements to ensure that they protect it from the risk of default by its counterparties. We also recommend that the Corporation document the reasons for any changes to the standard form of the agreement.

Just think how many of us within this House who had sufficient funds to invest wish that those same precautions were taken by our supporters, our auditors, our financial advisers.

Now, the Auditor General also had a whole pile of recommendations – and I won't share them all – for the Alberta Treasury Branches. The Alberta Treasury Branches, upon which so many Albertans are dependent for loans because the larger banks are less likely to lend than the Alberta Treasury Branches, made some very questionable investments with asset-backed commercial paper. It's no wonder that the Auditor General is recommending that they rein in their risk.

This is what he's saying to them to implement as soon as possible. He's saying to ATB to - develop and document the business rules and operating procedures required to implement the improved investment policy being developed.

In other words, don't go risking, as you have done before, with asset-backed commercial paper. Make sure that your obligations – possibly invest more in bonds seems to be a recommendation that financial advisers are suggesting. Be less risky. You may not get the same interest increase, but at least you won't lose from your principal, as so many people have witnessed.

- improve its process for establishing Global Financial Markets' performance targets by discussing the targets with senior Asset Liability Committee (ALCO) and maintaining evidence that supports decisions made.
- implement the updated investment and derivative policies for changes arising from its recent review of those policies. We also recommend that ATB undertake a review of the financial risk management policy.

Now, considering that ATB is one of Alberta's main bankers and the dependency that people, especially in rural areas, have on this financial institution and the fact that Alberta taxpayers are on the hook for any of its failures, these are very good recommendations that the Auditor General has made.

He also goes on to suggest: "complete its business rules on how variable pay is calculated for Global Financial Markets' staff by clarifying how to deal with revenue not collected and investment losses.” What he’s referring to there has to do with the fact that even though head individuals within the Alberta Treasury Board made some very poor financial risk decisions, they still received significant recompense for the bad decisions they made. He’s also suggesting, as soon as possible is the key here, to “review the role of the Asset Liability Committee (ALCO) and consider restructuring it into two tiers.”

Now, I realize that everyone here has the opportunity to read the Auditor General’s report, and although the minister of the Treasury Board suggested that only geeks would enjoy this type of reading, I don’t consider my honourable chair of the Public Accounts Committee a geek. I actually see him as a role model. This is, in his estimate, required reading if you’re going to be on top of your finances.

One of the areas that I think the government could potentially save some money on is either to get rid of its task forces and public consultations or actually listen to the results. If we go back to 2005, we had the long-term care task force. If we’d followed those recommendations, we wouldn’t have so many seniors taking up bed space in hospitals. There would be long-term care homes for them, and the care that they would receive would be grade A. There would be proper pay for individuals, there would be a recognition that medications should be decided by registered nurses, and there would be greater care provided. Unfortunately, the Auditor General has recommended year after year after year. . . [Mr. Chase’s speaking time expired]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I appreciate these opportunities.

Another task force that unfortunately brought back great ideas but was rejected was the Affordable Housing Task Force. Now, in terms of rejection there were a number of members, some still present, others now gone, who travelled the province, held forums. They spent an awful lot of time and effort and, in the process, money consulting with Albertans. What could be better? But then when they brought back all their recommendations, the government rejected 38 out of the 50 recommendations. They rejected the idea of a temporary freeze on rents, and instead we’ve seen the government pay out $121 million to subsidize landlords and keep the prices high.

The most recent example of consultation is the parks survey that the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation put out. That survey went out, and people who filled it out and took the time to engage in the process said: we don’t want more availability for ATVs into park areas. The numbers were extremely large, saying: “We don’t want greater access into parks. In fact, we want less access. And while you’re at it, how about fixing up the trails that are currently deteriorating in the parks?” These were recommendations, yet we had the Member for Athabasca-Redwater talking about increased access for ATVs and snowmobiles. Again, there are trails. We’ve got cutlines. We’ve got so many forestry roads. We’ve got so many extraction roads for a variety, whether it’s timber or whether it’s for oil and gas. There are places for people to play. If we’re going to survey, let’s take them and actually act upon the survey.

In terms of surveys we’ve had the minister of sustainable resources. He has certainly surveyed people considerably on grizzlies and protecting grizzlies, yet we have him currently talking about potentially restoring the hunting and taking away the protected status. We’ve had input on pine beetles and whether clear-cutting, particularly in parks and protected areas, is the way to go to combat the insect. Each time I give the government credit for having sent out the survey or asked for feedback or held the public forum. But when you ignore what Albertans have asked for – and it’s not pie-in-the-sky types of things. Four per cent of our land is set aside for parks and protected areas. Actually, protecting that is not a horribly large expectation. We have opportunities to not only listen to Albertans but to wisely take their suggestions, implement them, legislate them, and in so doing, save money, create efficiencies.

Again, I’m very grateful for the Auditor General. The Auditor General has made a number of recommendations, whether it be for improving our mental health systems or for postsecondaries, for example, making sure that the money that taxpayers send to institutions is not placed at risk. If we’re going to diversify, if we’re going to move forward, then spending money investing in postsecondary, investing in research and development is going to be extremely important.

Here’s just a very brief recommendation that the Auditor General made with regard to postsecondary. Here’s his first recommendation.

Clarify standards and expectations.

We recommend that the Department of Advanced Education and Technology:

- clarify its standards and expectations for non-credit programs and clearly communicate them to public post-secondary Institutions.

So where should the government start? It should start increasing its own efficiency and thus provide a better product for the postsecondaries. Set the example. The Auditor General, within that same recommendation, says:

- work with Institutions to improve the consistency of information that Institutions report to the Department.

I didn’t see anything within this interim about increased postsecondary seats, for example. I’m hoping that that will come out in the main budget. Promises were made that haven’t been fulfilled. As of last fall we were supposed to have received 15,000 more university seats. That hasn’t happened. We’re supposed to by 2020 have an increase of 60,000 seats. If we want to diversify our economy and create opportunities and have people paying the taxes that we need to sustain this province and sort of wean us from our resource dependency, then being well educated and moving up the wage bracket is one way to achieve that.

Now, the Auditor General, to his credit, has made recommendations in a variety of areas. That is why I am concerned, as where I began, that by undercutting the Auditor General as opposed to following his recommendations, we’re going to be wasting more money instead of conserving it. One of the things the Auditor General found he talks about on page 17 of his April 2008 report. “We found, for example, Institutions that did not include all incremental overhead costs of providing a non-credit program in their analysis of whether to provide the course, or what to charge for it.” Now, considering how tuitions have gone up, you would think that it would be very important for an institution to know what the cost of its program was going to be. Potentially it’s overcharging the students who are working three jobs just to be able to attend the institution.

The Auditor General suggests, for example, that “the approval processes were not well defined, and the same person often initiated and approved a course. This resulted in courses proceeding with only a few students,” – and that’s certainly not economically viable at the postsecondary level although class reduction at the primary level would produce great investments – “and sometimes just one student, or without a signed contract.”

Now, the amazing thing about the Auditor General's department is the depth and breadth of the individuals within the department and the fact that we don't have enough money for him to do his reporting. I can't think of a single department that's more important.

Anyway, the Auditor General:

We recommend that the Department of Advanced Education and Technology

- clarify . . . expectations . . .
- work with Institutions . . .

We recommend that the Department of Advanced Education and Technology implement effective processes to:

- monitor whether Institutions report information consistent with its expectations.

How can you tell that you're getting the output without the correct input? Are we making wise investments? What is the expectation?

Under implications and risks with regard to postsecondary the Auditor General says, "Lack of effective monitoring of non-credit programs may result in poor decision-making and programming quality." Well, having paid a tremendous amount for inflated tuitions, some of the highest in Canada, students should be guaranteed quality course work. The Auditor General goes on to say, "It also exposes the Institution to unmitigated risks and liabilities." Like, if you're not providing the education that you're stating that you're providing, you know, you're wasting students' money; you're wasting students' time.

I'll allow one of my other members to participate.

The Deputy Chair: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, but pursuant to Standing Order 19(1)(c) the question must now be put on the motion for consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's speech. I'd therefore invite the hon. Deputy Government House Leader to move that the Committee of Supply rise and report progress so that the Assembly may vote on this motion.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, it'll be my pleasure to in fact move that very motion, that the Committee of Supply now rise and report progress as noted.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions relating to the 2009-2010 interim supply estimates for the offices of the Legislative Assembly, general revenue fund, and lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2010, reports progress, and requests leave to sit again.

The Acting Speaker: On the motion does the Assembly agree with the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Johnston moved that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour the Honourable Norman L. Kwong, CM, AOE, Lieutenant Governor of the province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate March 3: Mr. Oberle]

[Motion carried]

Government Motions

Address in Reply to Speech from the Throne

9. Mr. Zwodzesky moved on behalf of Mr. Stelmach:
Be it resolved that the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne be engrossed and presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor by such members of the Assembly as are members of Executive Council.

The Acting Speaker: This motion is a debatable motion. Does any member wish to speak?

Hearing none, does the hon. Deputy Government House Leader wish to close?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for the support, hon. members. On that note, I would move that we close the debate.

[Government Motion 9 carried]

Committee of Supply

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Back under consideration for Committee of Supply are the 2009-2010 interim supply estimates.

Interim Supply Estimates 2009-10 General Revenue Fund and Lottery Fund (continued)

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. An area that I would like to talk about because I am concerned that it's being compromised in this interim budget is mental illness. I am very concerned that as part of the superboard's restructuring it has taken over the responsibility for mental illness as well as for AADAC as well as for the Cancer Board. I'm concerned that one centralized organization has potentially bitten off more than it can chew and that the various organizations such as mental illness may not be provided for to the extent that is required.

We've seen the first proposed – well, it's not proposed; it's out there. We've seen the first cutback in mental illness and treatment with the reduction of mental illness beds at the new south Calgary hospital. Before it's even up and running, it's already been cut. Likewise, we've seen that same type of reduction of beds with regard to the children's hospital in Calgary-Varsity. It barely has more beds than it had back in 1950, when the population was about one-third of what it currently is now.

Again, a statistic that I have concern about is that mental illness can strike up to 40 per cent of the population. If mental illness is to strike an individual, there's a 50 per cent chance of it happening before the person reaches 14 years of age, so early diagnosis and treatment are absolutely essential.

The Auditor General, in talking about mental illness, presents some very important and to some extent shocking cases directly relevant to the Alberta situation. Mental illness and the onset of mental illness can be triggered by a variety of circumstances, but the pressure that individuals and families are under during a time of recession, during a time of job loss, during a time of downsizing can very much trigger mental illness. The Auditor General states on page 65 of the April 2008 report:

It's hard to overstate the impact of mental illness on our society. According to recent estimates, one in five Canadians will suffer from mental illness. In 2002-2003, over 500,000 Albertans were treated by a physician for a mental health related problem. This represented over 2.25 million visits to a physician and accounted for 39% of all general practice physician billings. Overall, about $472 million in public funding was spent on mental health services, about 7% of the total amount spent on healthcare services in Alberta in 2002. As many as 15% of police contacts are with people with mental illness.

For example, the drop-in centre. It's suggested that a third of the individuals within the drop-in centre are suffering from mental illness. It's assumed that approximately 30 per cent are suffering from addictions.

Suicide is strongly linked to mental illness and remains one of the leading causes of death in Canada, higher than deaths by homicide or motor vehicle accidents.

Alberta has amongst the highest suicide rates. Therefore, investments in trying to provide security and stability from a very early age are going to produce tremendous results both in decreasing the cost of treatment but also in increasing productivity.

We found that the [Alberta Mental Health Board] and Department have systems intended to monitor progress on the Plan's implementation priorities, but those systems are not well designed and cannot determine whether the Plan as a whole has successfully progressed. We made two recommendations that will strengthen systems for the second round of provincial mental health planning.

This is a concern because we've gone from regional autonomy, a regional authority treating individuals with mental illness close to where they can receive the access and the treatment, and the authority for that treatment was at a local level. Now, unfortunately, that's been put into the blender of the health superboard, and I'm not convinced that those local needs are being met. I know that when we get calls to the office in Calgary-Varsity, people are asking: "Well, who do I go to? If it's no longer under the responsibility of the Calgary health region, then who's going to look after this?"

When it came to assigning responsibilities, the Auditor General pointed out:

We would have expected a summary from the central entities with the priorities listed and responsibilities assigned. The summary would have defined who was responsible for the various stages in the accountability cycle. Such a summary was not created. However, staff at the central entities understood who was in charge of implementing each priority. They were less certain about who monitored, reported, and adjusted each priority or the Plan in general.

Now, doesn't this make you think in terms of what happened in Vegreville? Who was in charge when the infections broke out? Then we had to try and get ahold of the people who had received treatment there.

In terms of trying to provide some stewardship to the Mental Health Board, which, as I say, is now part of the responsibility of the superboard, on page 72 the Auditor General recommends his third recommendation.

We recommend that the Alberta Mental Health Board and the Department of Health and Wellness, working with other mental health participants, strengthen implementation of the Provincial Mental Health Plan by improving:

- implementation planning,
- the monitoring and reporting of implementation activities against implementation plans.

You've got to have something to judge against.

- [and] the system to adjust the Plan and implementation initiatives in response to changing circumstances.

Well, recessionary times and increased pressure are definitely a new circumstance.

He goes on to say on page 76 that this is what could happen if his recommendations aren't carried out.

Implications and risks if recommendation not implemented
Without a documented implementation planning system (especially in a collaborative field like mental health), there is a risk that:

- Deliverables, timelines, targets, and resourcing may not be established;
- Activities may not be co-ordinated;
- There may be no foundation for monitoring and reporting priorities for the Plan as a whole;
- It may be difficult to determine whether progress is being made.

I mean, having taught for 34 years, I checked out the progress of my students with a variety of tests. There was an expectation from the parents that I would have checks and balances, that there would be reporting procedures.

But the Auditor General has concerns. He says:

Without monitoring the implementation of such a large undertaking, it's possible that priorities may not be actioned or unfold as planned. As well, those responsible will not have a system to alert them to issues that require remediation. Without a system of remediation, momentum on Plan implementation may stall.

Well, that's hardly surprising. If you don't have a plan, how will you know if you achieved it? This is what we're seeing more and more.

His fourth recommendation, found on page 77 of his April report:

We recommend that the Department of Health and Wellness ensure there is a complete accountability framework for the Provincial Mental Health Plan and mental health services in Alberta.

I'm picking and choosing. I'm by no way reading this document in detail. But he goes on:

Develop regional mental health plans. Within the scope of this provincial plan, regional health authorities should begin to work immediately on identifying priorities, service gaps and regional mental health plans.

So he's saying that even though a superboard is under way, local input and responsibility and oversight are absolutely key.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister of health.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Chairman, the last hour has been comparable to constant fingernail scratching on blackboards. You know, we have an opposition here who goes on at length about democratic reform and democracy, and then we have this member standing here for the last 15 minutes reading a three-year-old report by the Auditor General. Now, this just is the absolute – I mean, what is the old saying? The definition of insanity: keep doing the same thing over and over again and getting the same results. I would suggest that, actually, it kind of fits because he's talking about mental health. I would suggest that maybe some of us, you know, have no desire to sit here until 6 o'clock tonight, but we're relegated to be here. So let's actually make some use out of this time and quit listening to somebody who talks a good story and then stands there and reads out of a three-year-old Auditor General's report line for line. Just absolutely bizarre.

I'm going to talk for my full 10 minutes because I'm sick of listening to you guys. When my time expired, Mr. Chairman, I was being asked, actually, I must say, some very relevant questions by the Leader of the Opposition. I wish he would instill some of his relevancy into the member who has just been I was going to say speaking but I would say droning on for the last hour, I think it has just about been.

You know, when we first embarked on changes to our health care system in this province some nine months ago, we made some decisions that I know will change the way we do health care and deliver health care in this province. During the past nine months I, frankly, expected that we would have some issues. Any time you go through a restructuring, Mr. Chairman, you expect there are going to be some issues. But I would say that the health care delivery in this province in the last nine months has far exceeded what I thought we would be getting delivered. It has certainly been as good as or probably in many cases better than what was being delivered prior to the amalgamation on May 15 last year.

I'll give you a couple of examples, Mr. Chairman. I was meeting with one of the CEOs of a major hospital in one of our two major cities. I won't say which one or who it was, but we went down to the cafeteria, and I said: okay, no BS; tell me how this is going. She said to me: this is the first time since I've been working in this system that Calgary and Edmonton actually talk to one another, that we actually have a working relationship between Calgary and Edmonton. She said: "You know, when it comes to neonatal care, it had gotten so bad between Calgary and Edmonton that when Capital Health needed assistance on neonatal care, their first call was to Saskatoon, and in Calgary the first call was to Montana. As a result, we have quads in Calgary who are American citizens not by choice but because there wasn't a working relationship between Calgary and Edmonton." Well, Mr. Chairman, we fixed that, and we're not going to let that kind of stuff happen in this province going forward.

Mr. Chairman, we had a situation in the Chinook health region where some seven years ago the board and the CEO in Chinook decided that they could no longer with an aging population continue to provide long-term care to patients the way they had previously been doing it. They embarked on a new model. It's called designated assisted living. I know the Member for Lethbridge-East doesn't like to hear this because it's working.

Well, Mr. Chairman, in the seven years since they adopted that model in Chinook region, they have not had to increase their long-term care beds. The capacity with designated assisted living, if anyone is prepared to go have a look at it, provides equal or better care for some of these seniors at a significantly reduced cost in an environment that they feel much more comfortable in. My question to them was: why don't other regional health authorities adopt this measure? The answer to me was: we tried, but nobody seemed to be interested because it happened to originate in Lethbridge. Well, we're going to fix that, too. Under our new model in this province we're going to provide options for our seniors. We're going to provide options so that the seniors will have some choice. They will have additional care where they feel comfortable. We're not going to simply continue to build long-term care and institutionalize our senior citizens.

I think what we need to now start to see happen in this province – we had a very ambitious 2008. We brought forward a number of strategies, including continuing care, children's mental health, a pharmaceutical strategy, and several others that we now have to see seep into the system and start to be implemented in the system. The one thing we don't want to continue to do is trot out policy and not give it a chance to be implemented. Despite the fact that some of the members of the opposition want to always look in the past and live in the past, we're not going to move backwards. We're going to continue to move forward.

Mr. Chairman, this health care system 10 years from now will look different than it does today. I'm not exactly sure what it's going to look like 10 years from now, and I don't think anybody in this House can predict what it's going to look like. I can tell you that it's not only going to look different, but it's going to look better, and it's going to preserve our publicly funded health care despite all of the opposition that will come from across the floor.

Mr. Chairman, with that, I'll listen to some more scratching on the blackboard.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. It's very difficult as an elected individual who believes in facilitation and collaboration to, instead of receiving answers on the topic of mental health, be subjected to put-downs and character assassination as opposed to focusing on issues raised. The issue that is being raised is mental illness. The minister talks about my droning on and dealing with historical documents. Mr. Minister, this is from April 2008. The date today is March 10, 2009. This wasn't three years ago. The fact that it seems like ancient history to you is a large concern to me.

I'm going to share one more mental health recommendation. I think it's extremely important, and hopefully the minister doesn't shrug this off as he has shrugged off other comments that have been raised. On page 89 of this less than a year old document, April 2008, this is the alarm the Auditor General raises. He says:

Take immediate action to establish a province-wide suicide prevention strategy. Suicide is a serious problem in Alberta and work should begin immediately on a province-wide suicide prevention strategy targeted at the general population, school aged children and vulnerable populations, especially Aboriginal youth.

To the minister: where are you at in the immediacy of dealing with suicide prevention under your superboard?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister of health? No?

Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm delighted to be able to stand up and be a part of this discussion, and I promise the minister of health that I won't read out of the book.

First off, I totally agree with him, and I think that moving into a one-board situation is probably one of the best moves that has happened in this province. From my experience in long-term care and working within that system, it was quite clear that I couldn't move someone from one region to the next and have them assessed the same way. I have many stories that are quite heartbreaking around that, so yes, absolutely, one board. No problem.

However, it has been mentioned that – and I realize that this will take time because they're trying to straighten it out. I did have occasion to try to find somebody specific within the Chinook region, if that's what they're still called, so I called just the general number and said who I was. "Can you tell me who the hell is running the joint?" They said, "Well, that is such a good question." So I went to about three people until I finally found the person I needed, which I realize is working out the kinks. We really do need someone regionally that we can go to rather than having to try to go through Mr. Hughes' board. Through the way he sent letters to us, I'm assuming that he'll have somebody assigned to MLA offices so that when our MLA offices have concerns, it'll go through a specific, probably government liaison that would be under the board. I'm just assuming that that's the way it'll be.

Continuing care. I think that the minister of health and I have often been speaking sort of at odds when, in fact, we're on the same page. Continuing care includes all of the things that he has talked about, and it does include long-term care. I'm not necessarily advocating that it has to be a separate, stand-alone building. What I'm saying: it goes along with the designated assisted living, assisted living, enhanced lodges, lodges, or apartments for seniors.

The whole idea is that people can age in place, but beyond that, I think we need them to be able to live out their lives in place. For instance, in Lethbridge we will be getting new designated assisted living because I think that's the way the board will probably push them. But my contention is that part of that designated assisted living still should be for long-term care because it's not the housing that's the problem. It's the care that's the problem. If someone comes in one end of the building and they're walking and they go out the other end of the building feet first – they walk in vertical; they go out horizontal, feet first – they should be able to receive the care that they need so that they're not being moved around like bags of potatoes from one place to the other side of town to the other side of town or, in fact, could well be moved out of their community. I think that this is all underneath continuing care, and each place has its own need and its own use in how we can help our seniors move through this.

The word "warehousing," of course, comes up many times, and the last thing that I would ever ask for is that we warehouse our seniors. I want them to receive the care that they need. Now, when we deregulated long-term care, it was divided into two ministries, so again that makes it complex. But the housing side isn't necessarily the problem; it's the care side. The housing actually can make money, and that's why so many private operators are going into it. What they don't want is the care side because the care side has heavy, heavy expenses on the labour side. We need people that are trained, and we need many of them, particularly towards the end, from the extreme designated assisted living into the long-term care, when the care levels certainly increase.

It does become very complex. At this point in time I think we've got almost 200 people in a hospital tying up beds because they need that care and there's nowhere for them to go. There's no reason that they couldn't go to designated assisted living, because that's the next level up to where they would be, for long-term care, but in that building they should be able to get that extra care. You can move staff. If you need extra staff on the long-term care side, you could move that staff in, but they could still work in other parts of the building.

From my own experience I think it's good for staff to move around so that you're working with different people all the time. It's very easy to get burned out. You're overworked, you're understaffed, or you're working short, whatever. You do give so much of yourself in that line of business. So to be able to move around and have different kinds of people that you're working with – you do get burned out if you're always on an Alzheimer's unit. Let's move into something that may be lighter care and where the people are a little bit more copacetic in terms of being able to respond to you on a cognitive level.

One thing, again, with the changes – and I may not agree with it, but I can understand it. When they made the changes to the long-term care and into designated assisted living, it certainly decreased the cost to the system, but it did increase the cost to the residents. I think that that's something that would have to be looked at, certainly, in terms of the medications. Again, I guess a pharmaceutical plan would probably be good, and we'd have to look at the Blue Cross coverage. Many of these people, of course, would qualify for benefits anyway.

One thing that I used to always say to the staff at Edith Cavell, where I worked – and I really had very good staff. People considered me competent and good at my job, but the only reason I was was because I had excellent personal care aides that worked under me. When they came to me with problems, I understood them. You knew the ones that you could trust totally. I didn't have to go double-check. I knew exactly what they were talking about. Part of that was because there are some people that still work at Edith Cavell that have been there for 20 and 25 years, and (a) that speaks to a good employer, and (b) it speaks to people who are really dedicated to their jobs. I always used to joke when I was at Edith Cavell that I was probably going to be there until I moved in and that I wanted to make damn sure that the staff was good so that they would look after me and that I would have a good room.

Those are just some of my comments. I would be interested in the reciprocal comments.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister of health.

Mr. Liepert: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I would be delighted to respond. Again, I appreciate the positive comments made by the Member for Lethbridge-East. In many ways I do agree with her that we are attempting to get to the same end.

The very first part of her comments was around communications and communications relative to the new board. If you speak to the chairman, Ken Hughes, he will openly admit that if there's one thing that he feels they could have done better during this whole administrative change, it's in the area of communication. [interjection] You know, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, you might want to have a discussion with your friend right behind you because she just complimented us on moving to the one board. You have an internal problem over there. What was the company that he used to be on all the time? Enron. That was the company. I suggest that you maybe take your colleague out for dinner tonight. She could actually tune you in a bit on this whole health thing, Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Chairman, I absolutely accept the comments relative to communications. As a matter of fact, my colleague to the right, the Minister of Environment, had mentioned to me one time something very similar to what you said, that when I need to call somebody in Medicine Hat, I'm not exactly sure who to call anymore, and that's fair.

Now, I think it's safe to say that what the board did not want to necessarily do is put into place a permanent structure that the new CEO was going to have to inherit. They want to let him build his own structure. I would suggest that as we move forward, that's something where we need to ensure that as part of the structure that the new CEO builds, there is that contact point for MLAs in their particular region. I can guarantee you, Member, that I will get as much hassle from back here as I will from over there if we don't have that contact in the local community.

To talk a little bit about continuing care, the member made a comment that I think I have to take exception with. She was referring to the fact that under our current model, with our caps on residency in long-term care private operators can make money. I'm not sure who she's talking to, but every indication I receive constantly from providers, whether they're public, nonprofit, or within the health services system, is that one of the challenges we face is that we have caps for accommodation and then we fund the care side of it separately through Alberta Health and Wellness. That has been a challenge. In fact, this past year, in this budget year, our combination through my colleague the minister of seniors, from an increase in accommodation rates to an increase in the amount of funds we've provided for the care side of long-term care – I don't know the exact figure, but I think that combined, long-term care operators have received increased funding in the range of 12 to 15 per cent to try and catch up on some of those issues. Of course, they've had issues around shortage of human resources, competing with private industry, that could pay a lot more for those kinds of positions.

I happen to think, hon. member, that there's always some good that comes out of tough times. I think we're going to have an opportunity as we move forward in the next year to have the ability to catch up on some of these human resource issues. We're going to have a situation where there are going to be job losses in this province. The one area where there probably aren't going to be job losses and there are still going to be opportunities is in health care, so I think we've got a great opportunity to start to fill some of those roles.

I've mentioned before in some of my comments that the college of registered nurses told me in my office one day that on average 35 per cent of a nurse's day is spent doing non-nurse stuff. Well, I'm afraid it's non-nurse stuff at the low end of their training, not at the high end. If we can start to shift and fill that lower end, get an appropriate number of aides, then move the chain up so that we've got the appropriate number of LPNs so that they are doing that 35 per cent of a nurse's work, that nurse can take that 35 per cent and actually do things that the physician can start to hive off, moving everything up and actually having professions practising to the full scope of their profession. Actually, I don't believe that there's a nurse in this province that that 35 per cent of what she or he is doing is giving any satisfaction to. They want to be doing what they're trained to do.

We have an opportunity in long-term care, in assisted daily living, in all of our provision of services to our senior patients to integrate, as I said earlier to the Leader of the Opposition, to start to have health care in Alberta, deliver health care to the patient and not have the patient have to fit the system every time.

With those, I'll take my seat.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I am pleased that the hon. minister recognizes that integrating health teams is going to lead to greater efficiency. That's extremely important. I'm also pleased that the minister acknowledges that there has been a difficulty in communications with the restructuring. I want to toss out a bouquet to a lady by the name of Lynn Redford, who was the government relations contact for the Calgary health region. Lynn did a tremendous job. If you called her, within the hour she would be back and giving you the information and who you needed to call.

One of the areas I hope the minister can potentially give me an answer to is guaranteeing the transference and the equivalence of care. For example, a child in Medicine Hat suffering from severe autism moves to Red Deer, but there are different hours of care provided in Red Deer than they were receiving in Medicine Hat. Is this something, hopefully, that's going to be resolved?

Then if the minister could please give me an update on the progress, if there is progress, on the Tom Baker cancer centre, if that's moving forward. I would appreciate it.

Mr. Liepert: I'll start with the last comment. I can't comment relative to capital because we're in the process of bringing forward our capital plan, and it's tied into the budget. I just can't get into the capital plan at this stage.

Relative to the level of care, I guess one of the things that convinced me that we had these artificial borders between regions and there was clearly a differentiation between the care you received in some cases if you lived on this side of the road versus that side of the road – ideally, we should be striving for a system that provides equitable care across the province. It's never going to be the same in Edmonton as it is in La Crête, but we need to ensure that folks in La Crête and other communities have equitable access to care. It's obviously becoming a greater challenge. We have to take into account that professionals are individuals who can choose to locate where they want. I think that municipalities have to take a bigger role in making it convenient for professionals to locate in their community.

I answered questions at the AUMA forum, and I had someone from one of the municipalities say: what are you going to do to get a doctor in my town? So I said: what are you doing to get a doctor in your town? Because this is all of our responsibility. It's not up to us as government to provide doctors in every community, but it is very much up to that community to say: what can we do to ensure that we have an attractive place for physicians?

Many of these are physicians from out of country. In fact, we've got a couple of pilots going on right now where a physician comes from another country and they almost, if you might, have their hand held for the first six months to ensure that if there's a language issue, that's dealt with, that they have a familiarity with the community they're going to. Because, quite frankly, up until now, or still today, someone lands in this province and they're sent to a small community, and not only is it a new community to them, but it's a new country and in many cases a new language.

These are the kinds of things we simply have to do better to ensure that we are offering equitable care across the province.

The Deputy Chair: Anyone else wish to speak?

Mr. Chase: I realize, Mr. Minister, that you can't talk about the costs associated with the Tom Baker cancer centre. Can you give us any hopes as to the concept? Is it still within the drawing board or the planning board? That's what I'm looking for. I'm not looking for a dollar commitment. I'm just looking for a commitment to a cancer treatment centre expansion in Calgary.

Mr. Liepert: I just simply can't respond to that right now, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. Certainly, there are very interesting discussions going on here regarding health care. But whenever we are having a look at this interim supply budget, the questions still remain of how we compare this year with last and how we are going to manage with reduced revenue. Again, I'm looking at this request, Mr. Chairman.

Vote on Interim Supply Estimates 2009-10 General Revenue Fund and Lottery Fund

The Deputy Chair: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, but pursuant to Standing Order 4(3) and Government Motion 8, agreed to on March 2, 2009, I must now put the following question. Those members in favour of each of the resolutions relating to the 2009-2010 interim supply estimates for the offices of the Legislative Assembly, general revenue fund, and the lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2010, please say aye.

Some Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed, please say no.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Deputy Chair: That motion is carried.

Pursuant to the standing order the committee now rises and reports.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. I'm sorry. The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont. [interjections]

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I don't think I could follow that act with any humour whatsoever, whether it was in yellow or pink or any colour on the page.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again.

All resolutions relating to the 2009-2010 interim supply estimates for the offices of the Legislative Assembly, the general revenue fund, and the lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2010, have been approved.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the fact that we have no time left on the clock, I move that we now adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6:01 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. Let us keep ever mindful of the special and unique opportunity we have to work for our constituents and our province, and in that work let us find strength and wisdom. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly His Excellency Werner Brandstetter, the ambassador of the Republic of Austria. Accompanying the ambassador is the honorary consul of Austria, Mr. Nikolaus Demiantschuk. This is His Excellency's first official visit to Alberta, and I was very pleased to host a lunch reception for him earlier today.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta and Austria share much in common. We've got well-developed market economies, we've got a very high standard of living as well as majestic mountains and world-class skiers. Alberta looks forward to welcoming Austrian skiers who will compete in the World Cup events prior to the Vancouver 2010 games.

I would now ask the ambassador and the honorary consul to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature 11 very special visitors from Vegreville composite school who drove out on this very cold day to visit us in the Legislature. They are seated in the visitors' gallery. They are accompanied today by teachers Ms Tracy Cook and Mrs. Donna Stepanick. I would ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 24 students from John Paul I school in the constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. The group is led by their teacher, Mr. Dave King, and parent helpers Mr. Albert Pubantz and Mrs. Boshia Joyce. They are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly a very distinguished grade 6 class and their teachers from Richard Secord elementary school in my constituency of Edmonton-

Rutherford. The class is here today to tour the Legislature and see the democratic process in action. They are accompanied by teachers Deb Colvin-MacDormand and Richard Bonneville and parent helpers Rhonda Peter and Nick Smith. I'm very proud of all of these students, and I'd like to ask them to please rise along with their teachers and parent helpers and receive our warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Merci, Mr. Speaker. Today is part of Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie. I have the privilege of introducing to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly representatives from Alberta's vibrant francophone arts and cultural community. Since 2005 the government of Alberta has proudly recognized Regroupement artistique francophone de l'Alberta, RAFA, as one of 11 provincial arts service organizations. This has led to enhanced support for local francophone artists in their professional development and marketing their cultural talent.

Indeed, 2008 marked an important year for French language artistic and cultural products in Alberta with numerous albums, book releases, popular festivals like the cinéMAGINE international film festival in Fort Macleod, and participation of Alberta artists in national tours. This year I'm proud to announce that Edmonton will host the 20th annual Chant'Ouest showcase, highlighting the best of our French language singer-songwriters from western Canada.

I want to ask our guests to stand as I introduce them: Mrs. Josée Thibeault, president of RAFA and member of the Premier's Council on Arts and Culture; Mrs. Mariette Rainville, director of RAFA; Mrs. Daniele Petit-Chatelet, visual and literary artist; and Miss Ariane Mahryke Lemire, singer-songwriter and winner of the 2008 western Canadian music award for outstanding francophone recording. I would ask all members of this Assembly to give these guests a warm welcome to our Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is part of Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie. On behalf of the hon. Minister of Education I have the distinct privilege of introducing to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly members of the Alberta federation of francophone school authorities. Alberta students recognize the importance of second language. Alberta has the largest francophone program in western Canada and one of the strongest French immersion and FSL programs, totalling more than 180,000 students. This represents 1 in 3 Alberta students learning French, and we can be proud since our French-speaking students are achieving at the level of proficiencies that are recognized by many national and international standards.

I am very pleased to welcome our guests representing francophone education in our province and would ask them to stand as I introduce them: Mr. Fred Kreiner, president of the federation; Mr. Gérard Lavigne, executive director of the federation; Mr. Martin Blanchet, school trustee, Greater North Central Francophone Education Region No. 2. I would ask all the members of the Assembly to give these guests the very warm welcome of our Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise in the House today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly four women who are important to me. First, behind every successful man is a great woman, and in the public gallery today sits my wife, Kamal. Kamal and I just celebrated our 25th anniversary at the end of January 2009, and I thank her for putting up with so much over the years. Second, I have Rupinder Sandhu. She was very helpful to me during my election campaign. She knocked on doors no matter how cold it was. Next, my sister-in-law Manpreet Sandhu is also here today. Finally, Kiran Pujji is visiting my family from New York. Even with how cold it is, she has braved our winter and is here in the gallery today. I would ask these four women to please rise and receive the traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly Emrys Jacobs, who is a second-year social work student at Grant MacEwan College and currently doing her placement work at my constituency office in Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Emrys also volunteers as a relationship abuse prevention educator for the Canadian Red Cross violence and abuse prevention program, a program that does valuable outreach to Alberta youth. I really do appreciate the work that she does in my constituency office, and I would now ask her to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly eight people from the Edmonton Neighbourhood Watch program: Merv Swityk, past president; Arlene Kemble, vice-president; Olive Sydor, treasurer – and I'd just like to add that Olive was a runner-up for this year's SAGE awards for outstanding volunteer contributions to her community – Mr. Ralph Sell, the south director; Ms Linda Chasse, the central director; Mr. Lance Lamond, director at large; Miss Denise Thursby, program director; and, of course, my lovely wife, Barbara Grodaes, communications director. I will be discussing Edmonton Neighbourhood Watch and what they do for our community in a member's statement in a few moments this afternoon. For now I would ask the group to rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Statements by the Speaker Average Length of Service of Members 12th Anniversary of Elected Members

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Legislative Assembly of Alberta has now been in operation for 104 years, and nearly 800 different members have had the privilege of being here. The average length of service is about 8.1 years per member. Today I'd like to acknowledge nine individuals who were elected for the first time on March 11, 1997. They have now served almost 50 per cent longer than the average length of service for an hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud and Minister of Education; the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore and our Deputy Premier and Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations; the hon. Member for Sherwood Park, our hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise; the hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane, our hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services; the hon. Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Neighbourhood Watch Program

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Edmonton Neighbourhood Watch Program Society is an organization that gets citizens involved and engaged in their communities. We all value safe communities, and we all strive to live in one. The volunteers of Neighbourhood Watch report suspicious activities in their neighbourhoods and reduce crime by ensuring that everyone is aware of their surroundings and looking out for one another. Having more people involved in neighbourhood watches increases the safety of the community. I want my constituents to feel safe in their homes, neighbourhoods, and workplaces, and I am sure that all my fellow MLAs would agree.

Albertans want to feel protected from crime and the fear associated with it, and I believe that Neighbourhood Watch plays an important role in ensuring that each community is secure. If you aren't already a member of Neighbourhood Watch, join. I am proud to say that my wife has been actively involved in Neighbourhood Watch for many years, as are the visitors in the gallery that I introduced earlier. Crime prevention and safety start with involvement, so let's get started.

Thank you.

Agricultural Safety Week

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, March 11 to 17 is being celebrated as Agricultural Safety Week across Canada. In Alberta our agricultural legacy has a wide-ranging influence across our province for the great economic benefit and the employment it provides. I'd like to encourage all Albertans to recognize and participate in Agricultural Safety Week. This year's theme focuses on: Personal Protective Equipment Only Works If You Use It! It is one thing to have the tools at hand to adequately protect yourself from danger, but it's quite another to take a proactive approach and use protective equipment all the time, every day, and in every area of farm operations. We have all seen the tragedy of injuries and death that can occur due to lack of attention, lack of awareness, or from not using personal protective equipment.

Agriculture and Rural Development staff work with many groups, such as the Grande Prairie safe communities society, Red Deer safety city, Safe Communities Central Alberta association, Alberta Fire Chiefs Association, the Progressive Farmer Foundation, the Environmental Farm Plan Company, and many others to raise farm safety awareness and promote workplace safety best practices. Safety partners include 69 agricultural societies, agricultural service boards, 4-H clubs, schools, the Alberta Farm Safety Centre, and the Ag-Info Centre to deliver prevention programs and workshops.

In Alberta we promote farm safety through a number of initiatives and a variety of awareness programs during Agricultural Safety Week. These range from displays on hearing safety and protection to reminders to wash chemicals from contaminated clothing. Family and child safety is also a key component of the initiative. Among the notable events that occurred during Agriculture Safety Week is a series of safety sessions developed to run with 4-H clubs and rural youth. More importantly, this government also believes that farm safety goes beyond this week of commemoration and is a year-round priority.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I call on all Albertans to promote farm safety during the week of March 11 to 17 and to reinforce good farm safety habits all year long.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Neighbourhood Revitalization Project

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to recognize and celebrate a special project taking place in the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre between two communities, Queen Mary Park and Central McDougall. Neighbourhood revitalization is a project to help communities identify their strengths, capacities, and resources and to then use these to revitalize their neighbourhoods. Residents set their own goals and plan on how they want to do this. The project takes place over three to five years and is a long consultation, planning, and implementation process.

The revitalization is guided and supported by the wonderful folks at the city of Edmonton community services. I'd like to single out Wai Tse Ramirez as the project co-ordinator and her colleague Marian Bruin as well. In addition to these two, I've seen a number of other community services employees helping out as animators, session recorders, and facilitators. My thanks to all of them.

We're pretty excited about this process as we've seen it used to great success in the Alberta Avenue area. They have completed their planning and implementation stage, and it has brought great changes to their area. A local coffee shop featuring nearby artists is now in operation, a winter festival, a summer folk festival, and the list goes on.

For Queen Mary Park and Central McDougall we have great hopes. Both of these neighbourhoods have long, proud traditions. Queen Mary Park is built on the old Hudson's Bay reserve land. It is a strong, tight community which has been home to many Ukrainian and eastern European immigrants and is now welcoming newcomers from Cambodia, Sudan, and Somalia. Central McDougall is also home to a United Nations of different cultures, ethnic backgrounds, and faiths and has a large, long-standing aboriginal community.

Residents look to this process to help build a stronger, safe, welcoming neighbourhood in which to raise kids and grow old. Many thanks to the city of Edmonton for investing in us and for committing to this process which allows the people who live there to define and build their own futures.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Alberta Consumer Champion Awards

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's with pleasure that I rise today to acknowledge the winners of this year's Alberta consumer champion awards. The awards were presented Monday morning by the hon. Minister of Service Alberta, and I had the pleasure of attending the ceremony.

The consumer champion awards are unique in Canada. They recognize and honour individuals and organizations that have gone above and beyond to advocate for Alberta consumers and to contribute to a fair marketplace. This year nine individuals, journalists, businesses, and organizations received an award in recognition of their outstanding efforts to help consumers make informed decisions. As well, three bright and talented young people received an award as part of a poster competition challenging teenagers to raise awareness of consumer issues facing Alberta's youth.

Monday's award recipients each demonstrated a clear commitment to informing consumers and businesses of their rights and responsibilities. Mr. Speaker, their contributions have made a tangible difference to our province, and they deserve to be recognized for that. I was very impressed by the array of different ideas and initiatives highlighted during the awards ceremony. This was especially true of the young people, each of whom designed an impressive poster that helps raise awareness about a specific consumer issue. They all showed some incredible creativity and innovation, and it makes me proud to see what young people can accomplish. Youth today face more challenges with consumer issues than ever before, so having this specific award program is a good way of encouraging young people to become more involved in consumer awareness and education.

Mr. Speaker, it's exciting to see the variety of ways that Alberta organizations are doing their part to educate and inform consumers. The consumer champion awards are a great way to acknowledge and celebrate those in our province who are working hard to make a difference.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Release of Partially Treated Waste Water at Suncor Site

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Athabasca River is without doubt being contaminated from releases related to resource activity. Last year a million litres of oil and grease leaked into the Athabasca River from a Suncor facility. Now Suncor has been charged with 90 counts of dumping untreated waste water into the Athabasca River. To the Premier. Self-monitoring alone by industry has led to two years of crap going into the Athabasca River – two years. When will the Premier do the right thing to protect our most precious resource and fully fund government capacity to monitor and enforce standards?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is right: what went into the river was crap. It wasn't any leak from the tailings ponds. These are sewage lagoons on-site for the camp and some of the other related activities.

We have increased the dollars for monitoring. This shows that the system is working. Anybody that abuses the law, especially environmental law, and regulations will be charged and brought to justice.

The Speaker: I take it that we're talking about human refuse.

The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Monday this week the minister stood here and repeated once again that the Athabasca River has never been contaminated from resource activity. Well, given the million litres of oil and grease last year, the now revealed two years of untreated waste going into the river, and decades of tailings ponds leaking into groundwater, how can the minister stand up and support these statements? The evidence is overwhelmingly against it.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let's get this straight. The issue that is at hand, the issue of this court case that is being heard, is over the release of contaminants from domestic sewage systems. It's no different than a similar kind of occurrence that might happen with the city of Edmonton in their domestic waste sewer or any other municipality in the province. The fact of the matter is that it is not directly related to industrial development. It is, however, a serious offence. We take it very seriously, and that's why we laid charges.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. These charges were laid a year ago, in February 2008, right in the middle of an election. Can the Premier tell us why the public was never informed of two years of contamination? Was this buried for political advantage?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the charges were laid against the company. I would think that at least in this province under a Conservative government people are innocent until proven guilty. I think that that's the premise of the law that we follow.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The whole point of a Fiscal Responsibility Act is to make sure that the government is fiscally responsible. Of course, the legislation worked well when the government was rolling in money. But now, just months after things started to look bad, we're changing the rules. If this government had been fiscally responsible from day one, we wouldn't even be having this discussion today. But they weren't, so we are. To the Premier: will the Premier admit that the Fiscal Responsibility Act was nothing more than a stunt in the first place since it was never actually effected?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, this government is very fiscally responsible. This question came up yesterday from the media. We talked about the $23 billion of debt that we paid off and also the money that went into the heritage savings trust fund and the billions that went into endowments. We also invested over $42 billion in infrastructure between 1993 and 2008. We set aside $14 billion both to the capital and sustainability funds. The most important thing is that yesterday I was not able to determine how much money during this period of time, our net contribution, went to Ottawa to support programs across this country, which I would think would be in the billions.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier be introducing a long-term fiscal strategy along with the legislation to scrap the Fiscal Responsibility Act to make sure they get it right next time around?

Mr. Stelmach: We will continue to do what we have done: be very fiscally responsible and lay out long-term plans for the province in terms of keeping up with our infrastructure and maintaining our health and education and social programs. We are, I believe, still the only jurisdiction that's mandated by law to report on a quarterly basis. This is very open and transparent and gives information to Albertans, and they are able to track both the expenses and the revenue stream of the province.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, will the Premier admit that it was a mistake to spend wildly rather than saving more aggressively when we had the money so that changing the law could have been avoided in the first place?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I think that if one was to look at Hansard over the last 15 years, he would see that the members opposite had been asking for even more spending. Whenever we brought forward budgets, I never heard at all, not once recorded in Hansard, the opposition say: "Oh, no. Please, no more. No more; this is just the right amount of spending. No. You're spending too much." I haven't seen that as yet. However, they will have a chance when the budget is introduced on April 7. We've listened to Albertans, who said to tighten up the spending, and we will. They want to see reductions in spending. They will see that, and I'm sure that they will be supporting the budget.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Assembly of Land for Large Infrastructure Projects

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is clear that the government policy set out in Bill 19 is extremely controversial. Landowners across this province are stating that its powers are far too great. They're also furious about the arrogance on the part of this government in introducing this bill without consultation. In the face of this uproar the Premier is now talking about amending the bill, a lack of confidence, certainly, in his own legislation. To the Premier: what amendments will the government be introducing to this policy?

The Speaker: Okay. Hon. members, this bill has not even been moved in second reading, and we're already talking about amendments. Surely there's a process for dealing with policy and nothing specific about any of this bill.

Mr. Stelmach: I won't talk about the amendments but the policy. The policy is to obviously assure Albertans with clarity in wording that we will be open, we will be transparent, and we will be fair to all landowners. Speaking about changes, when this question came up yesterday in the news media, I said, you know, this Legislative Assembly is where we debate legislation that comes forward. And about the only bill that I know we didn't do – sorry, Mr. Speaker – amendments was when we talked about songs or mushrooms. The rest of the time we did make changes.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Given that the government is already talking about changing its own bill, it's indicating that the bill is seriously flawed. Now, we need to discuss improving the system of land acquisition, and we need to bring in affected and interested parties to a committee of this Legislature in order to do so. Again to the Premier: will the Premier refer this bill to the Standing Committee on the Economy so that they can have a look at it and make changes that would be representative of the views of landowners?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't direct legislation to the all-party committee. This Legislative Assembly makes the decision.

Mr. MacDonald: I don't believe that.

Why is the government afraid of the detailed study and the consultation that would come from a committee's deliberations? What does this government have to hide regarding this flawed policy?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, what we want to do is improve on the policy, entrench in legislation clarity so that all landowners feel comfortable as to how we'll acquire land in the future for public roadways, transmission lines, infrastructure that the public benefits from. We have a duty to work with landowners, to treat them fairly, and at the conclusion of the debate I know that we'll have a very good piece of policy and maybe some legislation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government tries to hide its black eye in the tar sands by insisting that oil and gas companies are not polluting Alberta's waterways. This government has trusted those companies to police themselves and lets them go on filing neat and tidy annual reports about how they run wonderful, clean operations. It's all very warm and fuzzy until we learn that this government allowed Suncor to dump raw sewage into the Athabasca River for three years while it looked the other way. My question is to the Premier: why did you hide it from Albertans that Suncor has been lying to the government about polluting the Athabasca all along?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again the hon. member uses language that's quite offensive to people that are not in this Legislative Assembly, infusing language so that he gets a headline in the paper. This is serious. We are prosecuting. At the moment this is before the courts, and I would just suggest to let the courts do their work. We'll monitor it as it's proceeding through the court system, but it's improper to talk about the charges in this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, what went into the Athabasca is not too dissimilar from that answer.

The government has avoided its responsibility to protect the environment, which has given this province an international black eye. It has not hired enough inspectors to police industry, depending instead on self-regulation by polluters. The question is to the Premier. Why does this government naively trust in some of the biggest polluters in this province to turn themselves in instead of getting serious about enforcing Alberta's pollution laws?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, one of the first things as elected Premier was to move on hiring additional environmental monitoring staff in the area around Fort McMurray. We've done that. We've also ensured that we brought more infrastructure dollars into the community. Most importantly, we did hire more people in Environment to monitor the situation, inspect, and as a result we're able to of course track some of the alleged infractions. Again, we'll let the court decide.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this government likes to hide the truth about pollution in the Athabasca River from Albertans. It denies that there's cancer in the water in Fort Chipewyan, and it looks the other way when Suncor flushes raw sewage into the river and then lies about it. It took four years to swear some of the charges, and no public announcement was ever made. My question is to the Premier. Why did you take up to four years to bring charges against Suncor, and why did you fail to let Albertans know what was going on?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, to give you an example of how some ramp up some of the stories around Fort McMurray, water in the Athabasca River has been monitored since the first day the oil sands were developed, well over 30 years. In fact, air quality is monitored 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. You know, it wasn't that long ago there was a fish, a goldeye, that was caught in the Athabasca River. In the headlines everywhere was this double-jawed fish. Finally, the investigation has been completed, and I think a University of Alberta professor has confirmed that the appearance of a second jaw on the fish is a natural phenomenon. Did we see that in the headlines? No. But it's the continued assault on industry. We're trying to grow jobs. We're trying to do the best job possible in terms of monitoring and controlling our environment and finding the balance between development and environment, and you hear this every day. It does get frustrating sometimes.

Farm Worker Safety

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, today marks the start of Agriculture Safety Week, which runs until March 17. With more than 49,000 farms, more than 52 million acres of farmland, and more than 50,000 Albertans employed in primary agriculture, farm safety is important to many Albertans. We all know that education and awareness are vital components of farm safety. Can the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development tell this Assembly what new steps are being taken to deal with farm safety?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. As the Premier has so patiently explained over the last two days, the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development and the Department of Employment and Immigration are working together to actively seek input of our agriculture industry. So we'll look closely at the options of running nonfarm businesses operating on farmlands, such as construction workers. We will also examine ways to distinguish between family farms and corporate farms for regulatory and legislative purposes. However, we've said all along that we would not make changes to this legislation without ensuring that all interested parties have a chance to provide input.

Mr. Drysdale: To the same minister: what farm safety training opportunities and resources are currently available to Alberta's farm employers and operators?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, we do have some new materials out there. We have a variety of print publications, of course. We have CDs, DVDs, and fact sheets that are all available free of charge. The Farm Safety: It's No Accident CD provides farm operators with safety information and a series of checklists to ensure that their operations are safe working environments. Our farm employer's guide to job orientation and training takes employers through a step-by-step process to ensure that new and young workers are properly trained.

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, farms tend to be family or communally owned operations in Alberta, employing a mix of family members and hired staff. My second supplemental question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. What protection do farm workers have under provincial legislation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Farm and ranch employees are covered by the Employment Standards Code as it pertains to termination pay or maternity or parental leave as well as for payment of agreed-upon wages. Farm employers may apply to have voluntary WC coverage for their farm workers as well, and that's a choice that they can make. If there is a mechanized process for packaging on site, then the provisions of the Occupational Health and Safety Act apply. Employers are required to assess hazards and have mechanisms in place for dealing with them, and our occupational health and safety officers investigate any incidents that may happen.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Groundwater Contamination near Calling Lake

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Albertans expect this government to protect water, our most important natural resource. An environmental protection order was issued against a chemical company yesterday, and it raises a number of questions about water protection systems in Alberta. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Groundwater monitoring at Ward Chemical's brine facility showed high chlorine levels in 2006 which exceeded both the provincial and the federal guidelines. Why did it take the government three years to issue an environmental protection order?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of tools that are available to our compliance officials in Environment. Like any kind of a regulator role or a policeman role, it's important that you work with the offender and try to resolve an issue as amicably as possible. If in some cases it's an ignorance of the law, then sometimes it's as simple as advising someone what it is. In this particular case we've worked with this company on an ongoing basis, and we found that it's necessary to issue a compliance order.

Ms Blakeman: Well, there's always someone downstream.

To the same minister: given that potential sources of contamination include the brine storage pond and surface runoff from the facility, does the minister accept that other industrial sites likely have these same contamination issues and that self-monitoring from industry is not working?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let's be clear: this is about dealing with the site that is contained within the bounds of the facility. If there was any reason to believe that the actions of the business were contaminating adjacent land, then we would be acting much more aggressively. In this particular instance I am assured by my officials that we're dealing with a contamination that is confined solely to the land that is operated by the industry. The efforts that are put in place now are to get them to clean up their own act.

Ms Blakeman: Well, Mr. Minister, groundwater doesn't stay in one place, so if these people, this company has contaminated groundwater in one place, it is going to be moving somewhere else. Given this contamination of groundwater that is near Calling Lake from Ward Chemical, does the minister accept that if it can happen at a brine facility, it can happen in a tailings pond? So far today we've talked about sewage, we've talked about oil and gas leaching, and we've talked about brine contamination. Someone is always downstream, Mr. Minister.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, my understanding is that in this particular instance we're not talking about groundwater; we're talking about surface contamination. We're talking about soil contamination. There are plumes associated with soil contamination. They're highly predictable; nevertheless, it's important that we deal with them. So in this particular instance we have put in place compliance orders that will require the industry to do what they have been politely asked to do in the past. Now we're not being nearly so polite.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Personal Directives

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. End of life is a difficult time for the many Albertans who built this great province. Many seniors of Edmonton-Meadowlark tell me that there is confusion and anxiety over changes to the Personal Directives Act that came into effect in June 2008. My first question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. What is the minister going to do to educate Albertans about personal directives?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There is currently an education and awareness campaign under way encouraging Albertans to make their personal wishes known by writing and registering a personal directive. New tools have been developed that make it even easier for Albertans 18 years and older to write a personal directive, and these new tools include an online registry and a personal directive information kit. This kit includes a personal directives form, instructions to help you complete the form, a wallet card to show that you have a personal directive, and who to contact in an emergency. To date we've put 200,000 copies of these information kits in different offices, including doctors' offices.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. My colleagues on the front lines in health care tell me that in life and death emergency situations we need to utilize technology, specifically the electronic health record, in order to make the right decision. Is there a requirement for personal directives to be registered online, and if not, why not?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the online personal directive registry is the first of its kind in Canada. When this new tool was introduced last June, we chose not to force Albertans to register their personal directives because our approach is to respect the choices of Albertans and to have a voluntary registry. However, we do encourage Albertans to voluntarily register their personal directives to help ensure that their wishes are followed if they become unable to make decisions for themselves due to an injury or an illness.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, my final question is also to the same minister. How are you going to overcome the challenge of educating not only Albertans but also Alberta's health care providers about these changes?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, a new guide to assessing capacity has been developed and distributed to health care professionals across the province as part of the changes to the Personal Directives Act. Over 40 training sessions on capacity assessment were held in communities across Alberta this past fall, and over 1,000 health care professionals were in attendance. Alberta is the leader in the area of capacity assessment. Changes to the Personal Directives Act and the introduction of the new Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act ensure that capacity assessments are done using standardized and credible assessment tools.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Ambulance Services

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister of health's assertion that the transition of ground ambulance authority is happening smoothly leaves some questions regarding changes that he's proposing. To the minister of health: will the minister explain what extra education emergency medical personnel will be required to have so that they can properly diagnose and triage patients that are in the field?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, it's my understanding that currently one of the frustrations that paramedics have is that they don't have the ability on most occasions to use the training that they already have. I don't think it's a matter of extra training; it's making better use of what training they have. Let's also make it clear that diagnosis will be done by phone in consultation with a physician.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Being an RN, I can understand the paramedics' frustration in not being able to work to scope. But are all levels of emergency medical personnel going to have the authority to triage patients in the field?

Mr. Liepert: Well, obviously not if they don't have the training, Mr. Speaker. There are several levels of paramedics. Any diagnosis or any treatment will be comparable to the level of training that they have.

Ms Pastoor: Not quite clear enough.

Will the minister provide a list of the exact types of facilities that possible emergency room patients are going to be diverted to?

Mr. Liepert: I could, Mr. Speaker, but by and large what we're talking about are urgent care centres. It may be even just a clinic that is required. In some cases – who knows? – it may be other facilities. But, by and large, that would be in consultation with a physician and to make the decision then.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Environmentally Friendly Affordable Housing

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On Friday I attended the affordable housing announcement in Calgary where Kanas Shelter Corporation received $7.5 million to build 100 units of affordable housing. Last year Kanas received the green building award at the platinum level from the Canadian Home Builders' Association. My question is to the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs. How are you and your department encouraging other affordable housing developers to follow similar environmentally friendly procedures in this province?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Member for Calgary-Egmont is absolutely correct. Kanas Shelter Corporation is leading the way, and they set the bar pretty high for private developers.

Through our RFP process, hon. member, we have asked that developers use green technologies, and that would include the conservation of nonrenewable resources, minimizing the environmental impact. It would include building components that would reduce operating costs over the long term. I want to assure you that we are working with developers to utilize best practices.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There's a lot of discussion in my community about the housing market and its condition these days. My question to the same minister: has the changing market affected the need for new affordable housing developments?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, the housing market has changed. There's a lot of discussion throughout Alberta about the market change. We know that the cost of purchasing a home or a condo is normalizing with the mortgage rates coming down and the number of homes, more homes, on the market. We know that affordability is increasing for some people, hon. member, especially for first-time homebuyers. Having said that, our low- to moderate-income individuals still are unable to purchase homes in this market, which is why we are developing our affordable housing units and why they've remained a priority, 11,000 units by 2012.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Denis: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. A final question to the same minister: we've talked a bit about affordability, but how does this impact low-income housing or people of meagre incomes in this province?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've had this discussion with the hon. member. We know that there has been an impact on the rental market for low to moderate income, which I know, hon. member, is your interest. You'll recall that two years ago rent increases were approximately 20 per cent. I can tell you that those kinds of increases are no longer there. They have stabilized, hon. member, at around 2 to 3 per cent. Having said that, though, as I indicated to you in my second answer, there are more units becoming available for the rental market through condos that are being placed on the market, and putting them on the market has had a positive impact and will have on our low- to moderate-income individuals.

Opening of Calgary Courts Centre

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, eight days before the last election the Deputy Premier, then Justice minister, had planned a partisan pre-election soiree at the Calgary courthouse, this in violation of the general rule that there's a complete separation of the judicial and political branches in our democracy. This party cost us $37,000, by the way. To ease the financial burden on taxpayers during these tough times, will the Deputy Premier commit to refunding all proceeds collected from ticket sales before the cancellation of this partisan fundraising event on January 20, 2008?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, you know, what really interests me is that in January 2008 there was this incredible celebration of the opening of this North American best-of-its-breed courthouse in Calgary. I know I was there. I know that representatives of the courts were there – the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal, the Chief Justice of the Queen’s Bench, the Chief Judge of the provincial court – the Premier, hundreds of lawyers; not this one, I suspect. Fourteen months later for the first time you hear about this. I can tell you that that courthouse opening was well received. It was well covered by the media. None of these allegations that the hon. member makes today were hinted at then, but 14 months later he has some crystal ball that he is looking at that allows him to stand, figuratively speaking, in this House and make these allegations.

Mr. Hehr: I filed the documents yesterday on the courthouse. They’re not allegations; they’re truisms.

Turning to the question now, my question is again to the Deputy Premier. You know, last year the opening of the courthouse was delayed several, several times. Then this big party was to announce the opening of the courthouse eight days before an election. Was the delay in opening this courthouse for you guys to have this announcement eight days before the election?

Speaker’s Ruling

Questions about a Previous Responsibility

The Speaker: It is customary, hon. members, that questions are directed to the minister of the day, not a previous minister in their capacity or activity with respect to their previous ministry. If we’re going back, when the hon. Deputy Premier is not the Minister of Justice, asking him about activities when he was the Minister of Justice, that would violate most of our traditions in the House.

I’m not sure if the hon. Deputy Premier wants to proceed, though.

Mr. Stevens: Well, unlike this particular member, I have some involvement in this particular aspect. Once again, he wasn’t there. I was, so I can explain matters. This was a good-news story, Mr. Speaker. Now, I recall that the opposition, over the course of the courthouse being built, didn’t see anything positive about it. But I can tell you that there was reason for celebration in January. The reason that January was chosen is because the courthouse became available to us as a government for move-in towards the end of August, September. Over the course of the balance of that year, which would be September through December, the five locations in which the courthouses in Calgary were located moved into this facility. Then you were into Christmas. So it only made sense that the celebration be held in January 2008.

Mr. Hehr: Clearly, it made sense to me: eight days before an election.

Anyway, moving on, I’d like to ask the Minister of Justice whether she would find it appropriate for the Progressive Conservative Party to advertise for a fundraiser in the Calgary courthouse. Would the Ministry of Justice find this proper?

An Hon. Member: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order.

It deals with personal opinion, hon. Minister of Justice. Do you want to comment or not? You can let it go if you don’t want to.

Ms Redford: I won’t comment.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Environmental Self-monitoring

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Suncor and its subcontractors illegally dumped dirty waste water into our rivers and lakes, and then they lied about it to the government over and over again. Even while he knew about this, the minister stood in the House and on the topic of industry self-monitoring told us, “We have the utmost confidence that that system is secure.” To the Environment minister: how can you possibly have confidence in a system that asks the fox to guard the henhouse and then self-report on how many hens it had for breakfast that day?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we have literally hundreds of such facilities operating around this province. The system that we operate is based upon monitoring, self-monitoring, and self-reporting. It would be, I think, inappropriate use of valuable resources within Environment if we were to send one of our employees out to every one of these hundreds of facilities around the province every day to do the monitoring. Our role is one of auditing. Our role is one of holding the operators accountable. We take very seriously the instance that in this case led to charges being laid, where that reporting and monitoring is apparently not taking place appropriately.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the system didn’t work in this case. They did it for two years before you realized they were lying. Who knows how many other times industrial polluters falsified reports to the government? I don’t know, and neither does this government. Even after laying these charges, this minister insists that industrial self-reporting and the occasional spot check are good enough. To the same minister: given that they may have lied more than 90 times, how can you possibly think that spot checks can ensure the safety of our environment?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, everything we do in a civil society is based upon personal integrity. I would suggest to the hon. member that there is probably the odd person in this nation that falsifies records on their income tax returns. That’s why we have audits. That’s why we prosecute when we find them. I would suggest to this member that, in fact, the system did work. We did an audit; we laid charges.

Ms Notley: They had two years to dump waste water into the river. They could have destroyed a whole water system in that time. It didn’t work.

Industry is responsible to their shareholders. They’re here to make a profit. This Environment minister is supposed to be responsible to ordinary Albertans. He’s supposed to be here to protect the environment. When industry pollutes, it’s not because they hate the environment. It’s because it’s cheaper, and it’s because this government lets them. To the minister: how can you be so naive as to think that industrial polluters will just admit to environmental degradation when they clearly now have a track record showing that they won't?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I can't get into the details of this specific case. The fact remains that the penalties are extreme, and we take as seriously, if not more seriously, falsifying records as we do the offence itself. That's why this court case is being heard. I cannot comment any further because there's evidence that's before the courts. It would be inappropriate to discuss details in this House until after the courts have dealt with it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Inspiring Education Public Consultation

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today the Minister of Education announced a number of ways in which citizens of this province can participate in Inspiring Education: A Dialogue with Albertans. In addition to daylong sessions around the province, Albertans can also join the conversation online or use conversation kits to host a discussion in their own community. My question is to the Minister of Education. What is he doing to ensure that disadvantaged Albertans are being reached out to, those such as the homeless, to ensure that their voices are heard as well?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of your comments yesterday in the House I would advise members that they can also Twitter me or send me a message on Facebook.

I don't want to diminish the importance of this question because it is absolutely, vitally important that we get all Albertans involved in the conversation. We know that some people will not necessarily either be aware of or be able to find ways to participate, so we're having what we're calling personal conversations, working with social justice agencies to identify groups that might otherwise be left out and going out to seek out those groups and have those conversations. I've seen the results of the group from Calgary, some street youth that were involved in the discussion, and the comments that they made were, quite frankly, powerful.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister has outlined a very ambitious agenda for Inspiring Education, and I can't help but think that at the end of this process we're going to have a very comprehensive report with an extensive list of recommendations attached. Can Albertans really expect substantial change from this process?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're in a very blessed time, actually, when it comes to education. The Premier had the foresight to work with the previous Minister of Education and the ATA to resolve a five-year agreement with teachers in the province to deal with labour issues, leaving us an opportunity to focus on the policy issues and focus on professionalism in education. So it's a great time to have this discussion. We've asked the steering committee not to come back with an extensive list of recommendations but, rather, to come back with a profile of what an educated Albertan looks like in 20 years and what policy framework and policies and government structures we need to get there from here.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. Looking into the future is very important, and as the minister says, this is a good time to do that. However, I'm hearing a number of issues about our current education system from my constituents. How does this Inspiring Education dialogue help fix those issues?

Mr. Hancock: Well, we need to be perfectly clear, Mr. Speaker, that Inspiring Education is about the education system of the future. We need to be planning now and implementing now so that we can be sure that not only do we have a great education for our children today but that that great education and all the aspects that are needed will be there for our children tomorrow. There are issues, and we're not overlooking the issues. We're not stopping the work on the day-to-day work. We have the Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, for example, chairing Setting the Direction for Special Education. That's very important. My parliamentary assistant, the Member for Edmonton-Decore, is looking at transportation issues in the province. There's a lot happening, but Inspiring Education is a very, very important dialogue about the future not just of education but the future of this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Submetering for Energy Use

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Boardwalk stated today that they would no longer be imposing submetering on their tenants, yet the government still has not taken any action on their part to protect the tenants. To the Minister of Service Alberta: how is it that Boardwalk is being more responsive to the concerns raised over submetering than this government?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's great to be able to clarify some issues here. It's important that Boardwalk has come forward and indicated to the tenants that they have made a mistake.

With respect to this whole submetering issue, we are entering a whole new territory, especially in the area of heat submetering. Since last fall I've begun to check into this matter because I was very concerned about how this was going to affect tenants, and we are indeed moving forward in a number of areas, firstly writing to Minister Clement of Industry Canada to get his concerns on the measurement issue. That's one of the first steps.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister again: why is the minister proclaiming the wonders of their consumer tipsheet when commercial landlords don't even consider it to be worth the paper it's written on?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's great that individuals are reading the tipsheet. That's what it's about. That's the input that I certainly need. I should mention that right now there is a pending legal process under way with the residential tenancy dispute resolution service on this whole issue. We are monitoring that issue very carefully, and that's something that we will bring forward to make sure that tenants are protected.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we've been monitoring this issue for too long. It's about time the minister took some action.

Given that Boardwalk acted so quickly, when will this government stand up for tenants and introduce legislation on submetering?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Mr. Speaker, it is important as a minister that we do not do anything that's viewed as a knee-jerk reaction. We have to do things right. I will be meeting with the Alberta residential tenancy advisory committee in the next couple of weeks on this issue to talk with stakeholders, to get the input from the tenants and from the landlords as well, to see what the conversation is out there. This is an opportunity for us to look to see if legislation is required, and I'll be looking at every option.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Livestock and Meat Strategy

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Animal Health Act was proclaimed in part on January 1 of this year, 2009, along with three regulations. My first question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. How does the Animal Health Act support the Alberta livestock and meat strategy?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, one of the priorities of the Alberta livestock and meat strategy is animal health and food safety. The goal of the Animal Health Act was to ensure rapid and effective response to an animal disease emergency. This is done through age verification, traceability, reportable and notifiable diseases regulations that we have out there. Together these regulations will help validate the safety of Alberta's herd to meet international standards and achieve the priorities of the Alberta livestock and meat strategy.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: by imposing these new regulations, isn't the government just adding to the regulatory burden already being felt by the livestock industry?

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, certainly not. The goal of the Alberta livestock and meat strategy is to reduce the unnecessary regulatory burden currently on the livestock industry. We're continuing to work with industry to reduce regulations that are burdens and not necessary. There may be some initial extra work required up front; however, we're only talking perhaps a couple of hours spread over a whole year. We can't forget the fact that these requirements that have been introduced are the ones that our trading partners are certainly demanding.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: is there support or what kind of support is available to producers to help them to comply with the age verification and premises ID?

Mr. Groeneveld: Yes, Mr. Speaker, there certainly is. In June 2008 the Alberta government announced $300 million in disaster funding through the Alberta farm recovery plan, which was and is being distributed in two instalments. To help to make the process easier, we dedicated 30 department staff members as well as additional staff from livestock identification services to visit producer operations and help them age verify those animals. We've also reopened 13 hub offices so that our producers have better access to knowledgeable staff.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Results of Education Achievement Tests

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Minister of Education claimed that results from FNMI students are not included in the averaging and reporting of school results because it "could be harmful or detrimental to an identifiable group of people." Setting aside the harm done to all students by making grades public, it seems to me that the chief motivation for excluding the results of FNMI students is that it would highlight the ministry's failure to adequately support aboriginal education. To the minister. ESL students and students with special needs are identifiable groups of students, yet their results are included in the school success rate, which is made public.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member misses in the equation is that the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy law does not protect identifiable groups per se. It protects against people who could be identified if they're in a group that's so small that by releasing the results, they could be personally identified. That's the issue. My preference would be not to release the information in the manner in which it's being utilized but to use the information for the improvement of the school system in the way we do release it to the school jurisdictions. The hon. member will know from discussions that have happened in public and will certainly know from discussions in the future in this Legislature that we're working very hard to get appropriate data relative to the FNMI population so that we can be held accountable.

Mr. Chase: The school results can be improved internally without beating them over the head externally with the publication of their results. Given that a private school's higher test scores can be partially attributed to the limited enrolment of ESL or special-needs students in their school, will the minister commit to exempting these definable groups of children from taking provincial achievement tests?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, we do not publish the results. We provide the results to school jurisdictions so that they can use them within their jurisdiction for appropriate purposes. We release the results when required to do so under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy law. With respect to the students that are included in the assessment processes, we should be very clear that I'm absolutely open to talking about whether we're doing assessment in the most effective way possible and, if it's demonstrable that we're not, to moving to more effective ways of doing it. But assessment has been one of the pillars of our system, accountability is a pillar of our system, and it's extremely important to our results.

Mr. Chase: If we're talking accountability, diagnostic would achieve a much better result. It sounds like you're passing the blame on to school boards for releasing results that you control.

If the minister will not exempt children that are learning English as a second language or children with special needs from taking the stressful provincial achievement test, then will the minister at least commit to not including those results in school averages?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I couldn't have been more clear. We do not publish the results. I'm not accusing school boards of publishing the results. The results are released to the Fraser Institute because they demand those results under our Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy law. That's how those results get out into the public domain. They use them inappropriately, and I've said that over and over in the public. We do an accountability process within our system so that we can both provide tools back to school jurisdictions and schools to improve their systems and so that we can account to Albertans for the effectiveness of their investment in education.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Seniors' Benefits

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many of Alberta's seniors have seen their financial situation drastically affected by the recent downturn in the economy. My questions are for the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Is there assistance available to help these Albertans, especially those seniors with low incomes, to assist them with their monthly bills?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta seniors' benefit program provides more than $21 million each month . . .

Mr. Prins: How much?

Mrs. Jablonski: That's $21 million each month.

. . . in direct financial support to approximately 138,000 low-income seniors. Generally, single seniors with an annual income of $22,700 or less and senior couples with a combined annual income of $36,900 or less are eligible for assistance. This program supplements federal income programs. Additional assistance is available to seniors who reside in long-term care facilities or designated assisted living facilities.

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is for the same minister. Some of the more common expenses for seniors are dental work and eyeglasses. Does the province provide any assistance for these types of expenses?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, we assist low- and moderate-income seniors with up to $5,000 towards dental work every five years and up to $230 towards the purchase of prescription eyeglasses every three years. More than 200,000 seniors are eligible for benefits from the dental and optical programs, which are available to single seniors with incomes of $31,325 or less and couples with combined incomes of $62,650 or less.

Mr. Allred: Mr. Speaker, my final question is also for the same minister. Key to seniors being able to remain as independent as possible is the ability for them to continue living in their own homes and being able to afford the upkeep. Is there any assistance to help seniors maintain their own homes?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, we're also very proud of the special-needs assistance program for seniors, which provides assistance to low-income seniors with one-time or extraordinary costs such as appliances and essential home repairs as well as some medical expenses. Low-income seniors can receive up to $5,000 per year through the special-needs assistance for seniors program. A senior's income level and the type of expense applied for determines the amount that is funded. Almost 26,000 seniors received this special benefit in 2007-2008.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 exchanges today, questions and responses. In 30 seconds from now we'll call upon the remaining members under Members' Statements.

National Nutrition Month

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about National Nutrition Month. The wealth of Albertans depends on the health of Albertans. It's often said that we are what we eat. Never before has there been such high public awareness about food and nutrition and what impact our daily eating habits have on our health and well-being.

Nutrition Month is recognized each year to provide access to reliable and accurate nutrition information and tips that will motivate Albertans to make sound, informed food choices. This year's theme is Stay Active, Eat like a Champion by making healthy eating and physical activity choices a part of our daily lives.

Government supports and encourages Albertans to stay active and make wise nutrition choices. In 2008 Alberta was the first province in Canada to release nutrition guidelines to equip facility operators of daycares, schools, and recreational facilities with the tools that they need to give young people healthy food choices. While the guidelines are not mandatory, we are encouraged to see more schools and facilities adopt policies that promote better nutrition choices.

Mr. Speaker, despite the wealth of information available on nutrition about 22 per cent of Alberta children and youth are overweight or obese, leading to adult obesity rates of 30 to 40 per cent. Our children are at greater risk of developing chronic diseases like type 2 diabetes or heart disease or hypertension. Today in Alberta we have 150,000 diabetics and 10,000 extra diabetics every year. The World Health Organization states that 80 per cent to 90 per cent of type 2 diabetes could be prevented through simple changes in lifestyle and eating habits. Most chronic diseases like these can be prevented by having a healthy diet and being physically active.

Individuals, families, organizations, and communities all need to work together to increase the availability and appeal of healthier food choices. As adults and parents we need to take greater responsibility for our own health and be good role models for our children. Making the effort to eat healthy and be physically active every day means we can all enjoy better health and reduce our risk of preventable chronic disease.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

ACT Foundation CPR Program
Ahmadiyya Muslim Women's Association

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Creating vibrant, safe, and inclusive communities is a key priority for the government of Alberta. I rise today to speak on the unique work of two Calgary-based nonprofit, voluntary organizations I had the privilege to get to know recently.

In celebration of Heart Month the ACT Foundation and the Kiwanis clubs of Calgary organized an event to celebrate the life-saving ACT high school CPR program in Calgary schools. ACT has worked in partnership with Alberta Education since October 2001 to help senior high schools and school divisions throughout the province implement a CPR program where teachers are trained to teach CPR to all students prior to graduation. Today more than 45,000 Alberta youth from more than 300 schools in 200 communities are empowered to save lives each year. In Calgary the Kiwanis clubs along with Calgary EMS and the STARS Foundation have played key roles in implementing the program.

Mr. Speaker, in recognition of International Women's Day Calgary's Ahmadiyya Muslim Women's Association invited me to moderate an interfaith symposium entitled Solutions of Modern Social Problems According to My Faith, with presenters and guests from the Christian, Hindu, Jewish, Islamic, and Sikh faiths. It was enlightening to listen to these women sharing perspectives on issues such as poverty, injustice, drugs and addiction, the environment, loss of faith, and lack of equality for women, to name just a few, and their belief in the need to be compassionate, have good knowledge and strong faith in their own religion, and develop critical thinking and analysis on issues and policies through a justice and impacts perspective. The sharing of a meal afterwards just allowed everyone to experience the sense of connection through our diversity.

Mr. Speaker, with dedicated citizens, our collective willingness to give and contribute, and people's commitment to work in collaboration, I think our desire to have a safe and vibrant community is being reached in different ways every day in this province.

Introduction of Bills

Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce Bill 22, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009. This being a money bill, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of the bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009, will provide spending authority to the Legislative Assembly and to the government from April 1, 2009, to June 30, 2009, inclusive. During that period it is anticipated that spending authorization will have been provided for the entire fiscal year ending March 31, 2010. When passed, the interim supply estimates will authorize approximate spending of $9.01 billion in expense and equipment/inventory purchases, $581.1 million in capital investment, $48.9 million in nonbudgetary disbursements, and $409 million in lottery fund payments.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. This past December 5 I was able to participate in the National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence against Women. This upcoming December 6 will be the 20th anniversary of the murder of the 14 women at l'école Polytechnique in Montreal. It's important that we eliminate violence.

My second tabling has to do with International Human Rights Day, which took place in Calgary on Monday, December 8, 2008. Among the memorable speakers was the Member for Calgary-Montrose. I appreciated the opportunity to listen to his comments about international rights.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter from Laura Franceschini regarding Bill 19, the Land Assembly Project Area Act. The letter expresses concern for the financial effect on property owners and urges the government to assemble the project land in ways that do not impinge on citizens' rights.

I'd also like to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter from Kirsten Goa, a friend and resident of my constituency, expressing her opposition to TILMA and Bill 18. She's concerned about the undemocratic process under which the agreement was reached.

I'd also like to table the appropriate number of copies of 10 reports from long-term care workers indicating specific problems on shifts – they were short staffed – including residents receiving their meals late and not receiving personal care until after lunch.

Finally, I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of court documents related to the charges against Suncor for allegedly dumping undertreated water into the Athabasca River. These documents were referred to in the questions asked by our caucus today.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think I'm in the right spot here as to tablings. I rise to table the appropriate number of copies of 54 postcards that were delivered to my office. These postcards were sent in by residents of St. Albert in support of chiropractic services in Alberta, including many people who urged the government to keep chiropractic services as a listed service.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader on a purported point of order.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier in question period today in a question from the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, repeating a theme that he raised, actually, Monday in the House as well, the hon. member made allegations against another member, which is a violation of our Standing Order 23(h). I would say that he also imputed false or unavowed motives to another member under 23(i) and certainly was abusive and insulting, which, as you know, always causes disorder under 23(j).

The topic, of course, was the alleged party that – well, it's not an alleged party; there was actually a celebration of the opening of the courthouse in Calgary, I believe on January 28, 2008. It could have been the 25th. I don't think there's any question of the fact that one of the best, if not the best, courthouses in North America opened in Calgary in August of 2007. The courts, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore indicated, moved in over the course of the fall. Then in January, as is normal with public buildings and certainly normal with courthouses, there was an official opening. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, who was then the Minister of Justice, as would have been expected in accordance with his office, attended that opening. I don't think there's any question about that.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo tabled documents the other day which are all, most if not all, matters of public record in terms of the costs that need to be disclosed from time to time with respect to those sorts of issues. Again, not a problem at all.

What becomes a problem is when the hon. member fails to do even the most elemental of research and tries to drag in a political fundraiser, which is an entirely different event at an entirely different time on the same date, perhaps, but in an entirely different location, not using a public building, not using public funds, and not in any way related to the courthouse opening other than the fact that it happened to be a fundraiser for the Minister of Justice. All of us as political personae need to raise funds for campaigns, need to raise funds for organizations. It was, as I understand it from the documents that the hon. member tabled, hosted by Brownlee LLP. That's a matter of public record because the hon. member tabled it.

He has deliberately confused in his questions a fundraiser hosted by Brownlee LLP with a court opening, that happened legitimately at a courthouse, which is a normal process of government, and by confusing the two – not confusing the two; deliberately entwining the two – suggested that the hon. Deputy Premier, then Minister of Justice, now Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations, did something inappropriate and improper.

So under 23(h) there were allegations that were absolutely false against another member. They impute false or unavowed motives to another member, the motives being to use a public facility and public money inappropriately, and quite frankly are close to a breach of the personal privilege of that member under Beauchesne's because, as you know and as all members of this House know, it's extremely important that members are seen to have integrity. The one thing that each and every one of us needs to have as we go out and talk to the public is our personal integrity and our honesty. Our public needs to know that we treat them with dignity and respect, that we act in their best interests.

We may have differences of viewpoint. Absolutely we would expect, with 83 members in the House, that each of us would bring our personal viewpoints and the viewpoints of our constituents to the table here, that we would have disagreement on matters of public policy. But to intentionally try to besmirch the character of a member, having done not even one iota of research, is absolutely, fundamentally foul and against the rules of this House and should be a point of privilege. I'm asking you as Speaker of the House to rule it out of order under our standing orders and to ask that hon. member to do the honourable thing and to retract the allegation.

If he wants to suggest that we spent too much money on the grand opening of the best courthouse in North America, that would be a policy issue, and he'd be fine to do that. If he wants to suggest even, quite frankly, although illegitimate as it is, that the celebration was too close to an election, although the people who planned that operation planned it well in advance – how they would know that an election would be called a week later is beyond me. I think that if the hon. member had any – any – investigation into the idea at all, he would understand that. So making the allegation of the closeness could be a policy issue or an appropriate suggestion, but to stoop to the depths of impugning the integrity of a member for the sake of trying to make some political point on which he's absolutely off base is actually reprehensible, Mr. Speaker. I would ask this member to apologize to the Member for Calgary-Glenmore and to the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the Government House Leader. That was certainly an impassioned point of order that he brought forward, but I'm going to disagree with my hon. colleague because I do not see – well, I don't always disagree with him, so it's worth noting when I do. I'm afraid I don't agree with him that there have been allegations brought against the member, that there were any imputed motives, or that there was abusive language used.

What is concerning my hon. colleague from Calgary-Buffalo is the interlinking and the closeness of two different events. That's what those questions were about. At no point, in my understanding of the questions that were asked – and, again, I don't have the benefit of the Blues – was the integrity of the Deputy Premier and his work in this House brought into any kind of question. It may be that my colleague improvised a bit and I'm not aware of it, but certainly I don't see anything in his written questions that would indicate that anything that was uncomplimentary was said about the Deputy Premier.

It is of concern to us when we look at documents where the line is clearly, to us, being blurred and where you have a partisan event that is set up to be in the same place at an interlinking time. That is of concern to us.

I mean, at one time my hon. colleague the House leader for the government, the Minister of Education, you know, somehow tried to say that elections are dropped from God on some sort of strange timing schedule. In fact, election timing is chosen completely and entirely by the government, and despite our best efforts we've not been able to convince this government to go away from that to something like fixed election dates. No, indeed, the timing of elections is completely under the control of this government. Yes, they work through the Lieutenant Governor to have those announced. Timing of things is completely under the control of this government.

The questions that were being asked were around trying to ensure that there was an understanding and a separation of a partisan event and a public event paid for by the tax dollar in a public building. To us, the questions we raised were around whether in this planned event – and let me underline that – there was not too close an interlocking and there was enough separation. I think that's a perfectly legitimate question to ask, particularly when we look at things like the Conflicts of Interest Act. It's outlining the way a member would breach, if they participate in a decision that they know would further a private interest of that member. That's our concern, and we just want to make sure that the government shares that level of concern with us.

I would argue that the event that we were discussing – again, we tabled documents on Monday which clearly showed that there had been an event that was planned. We were not able to find confirmation that the event took place, but certainly according to the sessional documents, there was an event that was planned. It was clearly a partisan event. You know, cheques were to be made payable to the constituency association of the home riding for Calgary-Glenmore.

It was advertised heavily on the Progressive Conservative association website, and it does not distinguish on that website that this is a different event than the opening of the Calgary courthouse. If anything, it goes in the other direction and seems to say that it's all part of the same thing.

To us, when we looked for what exactly this event was, we felt, as is often required of us, that we should be clear about what was the government piece of this and what was not. [interjection] Well, we are often questioned by members opposite to provide the documentation, so we were very happy to do that when the original question was asked and did so, so it's on the record.

I argue again that there has been no name-calling of the member. There was no disrespect shown to the member. Certainly, his integrity in the position that he occupies now and the work that he does in this Assembly has not been called into question. I think there were legitimate questions asked by the Member for Calgary-Buffalo, and I would argue that there is no point of order.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I've listened very attentively to the overtures of the Government House Leader and the Opposition House Leader, but I need more information with respect to this matter. This is not clear to me at all. Very serious questions were raised on Monday. Documents were tabled. Questions came again today. The rules are very clear about what is acceptable and what is not acceptable. There are some pretty serious allegations being made in here, but what is not clear to the chair at all – and the chair will need clarification; it's going to invite the Deputy Premier, and it's going to invite the Member for Calgary-Buffalo – is: did a political partisan event occur? It's not clear to me that one did. Did a political partisan event occur in a taxpayer-funded building in the province of Alberta, which seems to be the gist of all of this? That's not clear either to me. There's a lot of stuff going around and round and round here.

Hon. Deputy Premier, I would certainly invite you to participate.

Mr. Stevens: Two or three points, Mr. Speaker. First of all, a perfectly legitimate celebration of the opening of the Calgary Courts Centre occurred in January 2008. The ceremony, which involved the courts, the lawyers in Calgary and across the province, the Law Society, members of Alberta Justice, the Premier, members of Alberta Infrastructure, and others, took place starting formally at around 4 o'clock in the afternoon, ending probably around 4:30 in terms of presentations and whatnot, followed by a brief reception.

There was no political fundraising at this event, which involved, as I've indicated, the Chief Justice of Alberta, the Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench, the Chief Judge of the province, the head of the Law Society, and others. It was well advertised. It was covered by the media. We probably could go back and find numerous reports from the media, reported in newspapers. We could probably find numerous television clips associated with this. In any event, I was there and, as I have indicated earlier, the hon. member was not. This is 14 months later, so something, obviously, has given him insight that others who were there in the hundreds did not have at the time.

There was no fundraising by me or anyone else at that event. There was on that evening at a different place, at a different time a fundraiser that I was involved in, Mr. Speaker, so later that day, a different place. As you know, that does occur. Those of us who are on this side do work hard, and sometimes our evenings are not work but other matters. That was that time.

The way I look at this, Mr. Speaker, is that those who were part of this celebration include the people in this government, this civil service, the Justice department. They were the ones that were looking forward to this. They are the ones that organized this, referring to the celebration. What I'm going to do, candidly, when this is all finished – I don't really much care what happens – is that I'm going to take a copy of the transcript, and I'm going to send it to the people who were there, the people I know that were part of this, so that they have some sense of how this party, that member, feels about this. I think the best way to deal with a person's reputation is to establish that reputation firmly, and hon. member, you will have your reputation firmly established by the way you conduct yourself in this House. This is but part of that, but it is going to be a significant part.

There is a reference on the other side to a conflict of interest. I encourage you to pursue whatever avenues you want – bring it on, if you will – if you think something was done that was improper. Go ahead. Do it. It will force him, Mr. Speaker, to articulate clearly as opposed to innuendo and suggestion and sleight of hand about whatever he thinks went on. He will maybe have to make some inquiry.

Once again, he wasn't there; I was. Hundreds of reputable people were there. He wasn't. That happened 14 months ago, and he has insight today.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, you will make your ruling accordingly, but from my perspective there are other opportunities the hon. member can pursue. I encourage him to do that. I'd be happy to take it on. It will also force him, I think, to be a bit more focused in his perspective on this matter if he wants to take it outside.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, you need to say something. [interjection] Well, I've challenged the hon. Deputy Premier. I've raised a couple of questions. Did an event occur? The only information I have is that the opening of a courthouse occurred at a courthouse. Did a partisan event take place in a provincial taxpayer-funded building? I've been advised that none did take place, but an event that evening at a different time and at a different place has nothing to do with the opening of a courthouse.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, you on Monday and today again very clearly in the Blues said words to the effect that the Progressive Conservative Party advertised for a fundraiser in the Calgary courthouse. This is the gist of what we're talking about. We're saying that no event occurred. Go ahead.

Mr. Hehr: Sir, I thank you for the opportunity, and I do appreciate that the member opposite, the hon. Deputy Premier, has served the Alberta people well and honourably.

The Speaker: Sorry, but that's not the issue. I want to deal with the issue of the integrity here right now, okay?

Mr. Hehr: And that's fair enough. Let me tell you that from my perspective this was one of those situations where when you look at this, this was advertised on a Progressive Conservative website. It says at the top:

Please join Deputy Premier Ron Stevens
and other distinguished guests celebrate a Milestone – The opening of the new Calgary [courthouse]

It's a public event but at a location that is the judiciary, a place that is supposed to be separate from the political process, and that was my point in these questions. It appears that that line has been crossed. That is what I asked those questions around, and that's what I centred the debate on.

This was being solicited: it was $100 to support, you know, the Ron Stevens election campaign. Also take a look at the location of this event. I note under this, Friday, January 25, that it was supposed to be the new Calgary Courts Centre. You will realize that in my preamble I said that this event was pulled on January 20. Nonetheless, it was scheduled and put out on a PC Party website that this event was supposed to be held at the new Calgary Courts Centre.

What I'm highlighting and trying to bring forward is the fact that we need a separation between the judiciary and our political process. It shouldn't be advertised. I'm not suggesting, maybe, anything. I don't know how this happened; nonetheless, it did. It was advertised to be handled in the new Calgary Courts Centre, and it was to be a fundraiser for the Hon. Ron Stevens. That's what it says on page 2 of the document, and that's what I'm bringing.

I'll wait for your ruling, but I was just trying to argue that it seems that there has to be a separation between the judiciary as well as the political process. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: I'm afraid, hon. member, it's way too premature for me to provide a ruling. There are a lot of questions here.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview. Let's get to the gist of this.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Well, the gist seems to be exactly what's being debated, so I am presenting for all MLAs to review printouts here that say:

Please join Deputy Premier Ron Stevens
and other distinguished guests celebrate a Milestone – The opening of the new [courthouse]
To Support Our Justice Minister and Attorney General

The date is here. It's hosted by Brownlee Fryett.

Please make cheques payable to the . . . Glenmore PC Association
On the next page, the Progressive Conservative Association of Alberta printout, for Friday, January 25, it describes the event, and it says:

Location: The new Calgary Courts Centre

Mr. Speaker, this is the evidence that we're bringing forward.

Some Hon. Members: Read the next line.

Dr. Taft: Yeah. It says:

Join Minister Ron Stevens and . . . other MLA's, MP's, and PC
Candidates at Brownlee LLP.

The location indicated here is the new Calgary courthouse.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the member has acknowledged from the beginning that the event in the end didn't occur as described. The point here is that it is inappropriate in our view – and this is the question – for an event like this to be tied so closely to the courthouse. That's the point here. I would argue that it's simply inappropriate for a partisan event raising money for the Justice minister to be linked at all to the Calgary courthouse.

The Speaker: Fair game, hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, but you did not raise that as a point of order or a point of privilege. You only raised that in argument with respect to this.

The hon. Government House Leader. We're going on until 6 o'clock if we have to. We're going to clear this up.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think because the member was goaded into it, he read past the piece that he wanted to stop at and got to the piece which any idiot could determine on the face of it. It says right on here . . .

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, we'll assume that there are no such people in this Assembly.

Mr. Hancock: I wasn't suggesting that, just suggesting that anyone . . .

Ms Blakeman: Why are you referring to it like that? That's not being respectful.

The Speaker: Will you please proceed?

Mr. Hancock: I'm sorry. I will take that back.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you.

Mr. Hancock: It is obvious to anyone who wishes to read with any discernment that in posting an event to this website, somebody made a very tiny mistake. That mistake is so obvious, if you read the whole thing, that anyone reading it could discern it. Now, I understand that that was discerned early and was corrected very early.

When the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview reads the location line – and he's right – it does say, "the new Calgary Courts Centre," but given that we asked him nicely to read further, it's very clear in that very statement that the event is not at the Calgary courthouse, that in fact it's at Brownlee LLP. Anyone reading that could discern on the face of it exactly what was going on. The other piece of paper that was tabled is, in fact, an invitation to an event hosted by Brownlee LLP. That's clear on the face of it.

The point, Mr. Speaker, is that people who are elected to this House have a higher duty than just picking up pieces of paper and tossing them around. They actually ought to read with discernment. They actually ought to understand, particularly before they make allegations that impugn a member's character. It goes to the fundamentals, and the fundamentals are this. If these hon. members want to drag politics, governance, and the Legislature into disrepute, they're doing a very good job of it, but it brings us all down, not just the people – in fact, I don't think it probably harms at all the person that they hurled the allegations at because he's above any allegation of disrepute. He's a very highly respected person. But it does bring us all down.

It's very clear on the face of even the documents that they filed in the House, very clear on the face of it what happened.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, one of the arguments that the hon. member put up was, "Oh, well, we're trying to keep the separation of political life and judicial life," in the same statement where he made allegations against the Deputy Premier. It would be incredulous to assume or expect that the Chief Justices, the judges of this province, and all of the supporting cast would attend, would ever have put themselves in that situation.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know them personally, but I know this hon. member personally, and I know that neither he nor anyone else in this government would put themselves in a position so completely asinine as was tried to be portrayed by the opposition. Even if you had nothing, none of the documents that back up very clearly that there were two separate events, for the hon. member over there to suggest that the Chief Justices would even allow in their courthouse a provincial PC fundraiser is absolutely past anything I can imagine.

The suggestions they've made not only bring disrespect to us, but if they were even slightly true, they would bring huge disrespect to the judges that have been referred to.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River on this point of order.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to point out – and I believe it's an important point in this argument – that the allegation was about an event occurring. In his response to the point of order the hon. member himself admits that no such event occurred. The allegation was about our Deputy Premier, a man of very high integrity, having conducted a political fundraiser in a public building, which, he obviously and rightly pointed out, never happened. The hon. member in his response agreed that no such event ever happened.

I believe that this is a legitimate point of order and that an apology and a retraction are due immediately, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there others who would like to add additional information of pertinence to this matter? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: To the point of order, Mr. Speaker. In defending the Deputy Premier's choices, the government has suggested that we are somehow impugning the reputation of the judges, of the lawyers. They are suggesting that somehow we are opposed to the courthouse or that we're opposed to celebrations taking place in the courthouse.

I have stated – and it's in Hansard from last week – that I believe in the integrity of the Deputy Premier. It is not the integrity of the Deputy Premier that is being brought up, that is of concern. It is the confusion that resulted from a Progressive Conservative website suggesting that they should meet and celebrate and then at some point drop a hundred dollar cheque for the benefit of the hon. Deputy Premier. The problem exists in the separation. It is not in the integrity of the Deputy Premier. It is in the mistaken connections that have been made by a Progressive Conservative Association working hard to get this member of great integrity re-elected. It's the overlapping and the muddying that is causing confusion. It isn't the gentleman's integrity that's called into question; it's the co-ordination of the supporters of the individual who have caused this confusion. Whether it's 14 months later or 14 minutes later, the timing was questionable, the way it was advertised was questionable, and confusion has resulted.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, what appears on a Progressive Conservative website, I hesitate to point out, is not the purview of this Legislature. If the hon. member wishes to make some allegations to the Ethics Commissioner or, as our Deputy Premier pointed out, to any other party out there that might have some jurisdiction here, go ahead. That was not the original accusation that was made in question period. The accusation directly attacked the integrity of this hon. member. I again point out that it is a legitimate point of order, and I ask for an apology and a retraction.

The Speaker: Are there additional comments, involvement that additional members would like to make with respect to this point of order? There being none, okay.

On Monday of this week I sat in this chair, and I was particularly moved – and you can interpret what I mean when I say “moved” – when this series of questions came up. They came up again today. Documents were tabled the other day. Now, there could have been intervention by the chair as early as Monday. If one looks at Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules & Forms, Oral Questions, section 409(6), it very clearly says:

A question must be within the administrative competence of the Government. The Minister to whom the question is directed is responsible to the House for his or her present Ministry and not for any decisions taken in a previous portfolio.

This question, raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo on Monday, was directed to the Deputy Premier. The chair could have intervened immediately and ruled it out, and that would have been that. The question would have never come back again, presumably, other than in a different form.

In addition to that, I'd like to advise and draw to the attention of all members the House of Commons Procedure and Practice. This is something in question period that's not appropriate: a question is out of order if it addresses “a Minister's former portfolio or any other presumed functions, such as party or regional political responsibilities.” Very clearly on page 427: ruled out again.

The chair listened very attentively to find what this punch was going to be with respect to all of this. As best this chair can understand, some day in January – and I'm not sure yet if it was January 25 or January 27 – a very important building was opened in the city of Calgary, a new provincial court building. It was a big deal. I know because years ago when I was the minister of public works, supply and services, I think we started opening that file. It seemed to be a 10- or 15- or 20-year venture.

An Hon. Member: Twenty-four years.

The Speaker: A 24-year venture to get this Calgary court. So it was a big deal event.

I would suspect as well that virtually every Chief Justice in the province and every Chief Justice probably in Canada was invited or attended. The event would have been taxpayer funded; there's no doubt at all about that in my mind. The cost of that means absolutely nothing. It's had no significance to any of this discussion here today.

We've heard about why the date was there. Clearly, this member was a candidate in the provincial election in the spring of 2008, and this member did not know the date of the provincial election until it was called. If other members in this House had been privy to other information, they could have raised it in here, saying that they knew that January 12 or January 14 or November 23 or some other date was when the election was going to be. So that is a point of no significance to the discussion at hand in here.

What is very, very clear to the chair, though, is that the event is important. Closeness has nothing to do with it. Cost of it has nothing to do with any of this. The suggestion is being made very, very clearly by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo that a member of this Assembly, in this case the Deputy Premier, the former Minister of Justice, willingly somehow organized a political event at the Calgary courthouse. From what I've heard, that didn't happen. It would suggest to me that there are lots of violations of 23 in here that really go in.

I think there's a requirement here that if there was an issue that was moving the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo might have had a few minutes of conversation with the Deputy Premier, the hon. MLA for Calgary-Glenmore, about this as a discussion to basically verify this, to have authenticity, veracity, truthfulness. Then if it was true, the hon. member absolutely, clearly, could go for it in the Assembly or any other place. In this case it seems that the research was less than what would have been expected. Clearly, if I were the hon. Deputy Premier, the hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations, I would have been the one rising a lot earlier than today with respect to a point on this matter, and I would have sought clarification for this before today.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo and hon. Government House Leader, I do believe that this is an infringement on the integrity of the hon. Deputy Premier. This is a matter that we're dealing with in a point of order. The point of order could be dealt with now, this afternoon. I would ask the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, who I do believe is an honourable member, to find the words to convey a message that basically says that this matter is behind us.

Now, you've heard other members demand certain things. I'm asking the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo to find the appropriate words to make sure that we're not impugning anybody's integrity, that the integrity of this Assembly is sacrosanct, and then move forward. Would you do it, sir?

Mr. Hehr: Well, I thank you for the opportunity. I apologize to the hon. member for what was asked. I do respect his contributions to Alberta political life and all that he's done in that regard. Does that suffice?

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you, hon. member.

The Speaker: This matter is now behind us.
Let's go forward with Orders of the Day.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 18

Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate March 3: Mr. Stevens]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This bill basically is to harmonize the various Alberta legislations in an effort to remove the barriers to the trade and labour mobility act that will become TILMA and is necessary for the signing of such to have it come into effect as of April 1, '09. This side of the table doesn't necessarily support TILMA, mainly because it was developed in a very fundamentally undemocratic manner. There wasn't a proper debate on it in the House, and there are certainly some genuine concerns about how TILMA's measures on various levels of government will be effected in Alberta.

Ultimately, it really comes down to the argument of what I've just spoken about, whether TILMA is good or not. That's not what this bill is about. This bill is about being able to enable the aspects of TILMA that will become in effect within less than three weeks.

Some of the aspects of this bill will be that it will remove the term "Alberta" and insert "Canada" from legislation where its use would be counter to the province's TILMA obligations.

It allows for loans and income pools to reflect the new TILMA impact on certain agricultural and charitable institutions.

One of the other things that the amendments will do is provide extraprovincial charitable organizations and businesses the option of keeping records in their place of residence. For instance, if the Canadian Cancer Society has an office in Alberta, it wouldn't be necessary for them to have an address in B.C. as well. They'll be able to keep it in both.

It will give the authority to the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations to temporarily amend noncompliant legislation. I think that that provision probably could have received a little bit more debate in this House; however, it is very similar to provisions adopted by the B.C. Legislature in the spring of '08, and these are to jibe with each other.

The other one is the Marriage Act. It would amend the act to enable the minister to appoint any adult resident of Canada as a temporary marriage commissioner in order to solemnize marriages in Alberta. It will not change the rules under which any marriage must take place. It doesn't change the rules. It just changes who, in fact, might be able to perform the actual ceremony. As we all know, any MLA in this House can get permission to perform a marriage ceremony, and it is as legal as any.

The Mobile Home Sites Tenancies Act, which will be the same as the Residential Tenancies Act, requires that a landlord provide a postal address and a street address and a physical location in Canada for serving tenants with a notice of landlord. That really just tidies things up and is consistent with Alberta's and B.C.'s regulations that they will have together.

Basically, as I've said before, the discussion isn't about the right or wrong of TILMA. It is that this will allow this TILMA agreement, that has already been signed between B.C. and Alberta, to go forward. These were amendments that they found later that needed to be addressed in order that it would be a smooth transition on both sides of the border.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to participate on this bill.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm not going to be long. The benefits of TILMA could be that, for example, if Alberta and B.C. shared a pharmaceutical plan, a pharmacare plan, based on sort of riding on the back of B.C.'s population, we could tremendously lower our drug prices. So there is a wonderful potential there.

Another potential would be that we could jointly provide much greater environmental protection, particularly for our shared waterways. So, again, TILMA has tremendous possibilities.

The event of our signing the TILMA agreement will hopefully lead to the province of Alberta, in particular the Ministry of Transportation, working more committedly on the twinning of highway 3 to facilitate our east-west transportation of goods, which are primarily rail and highway.

A concern that was originally brought up with TILMA is the labour and the trade negotiations. Now, the city of Calgary recently, for example, published and adopted a living wage policy whereby basically each individual who is employed on a permanent basis for the city of Calgary earns something in the area of $13 plus an hour, which is considerably above even our increase in the minimum wage. Concern has been expressed that someone from B.C. who is wanting to do a contract-out service for the city might suggest that this wage requirement that the city had for its own employees would be a disadvantage, and therefore in order to provide service for which the $13 is being paid by the city, they should be allowed because of TILMA to provide that same service for $8. It can have very negative effects on contracting out by the city of Calgary. So this is one of the areas of TILMA that we'll have to very carefully watch and have legal provision for. In very similar ways as to under GATT and the free trade agreement there are possibilities for trade lawsuits to be filed and penalties in the millions of dollars being awarded.

Hopefully, this will be a very peaceful, amicable, economically and environmentally sound project. With that, I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Questions, comments under 29(2)(a)?

There being none, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I just want to speak really briefly here because both the process and the content of TILMA, I think, is not always in the best interests of Alberta, the process particularly. A number of people have spoken at length about that, the fact that Albertans were not allowed to be consulted in this, that in fact the agreement itself never came before this House, which I think is a real insult to all of the people that elected us to be here. To not even give duly elected people here representing folks the opportunity to comment on this agreement was really pretty shabby.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

As I watch these various bills come through that are to implement TILMA and give the government the tools that it feels it needs to adhere to the various parts of the agreement, frankly, the hairs on the back of my neck are starting to go up. There's just some stuff in here that does not sit right. I mean, first of all, let's look at this process of today. Prior to when the standing orders were changed at the insistence of the government – I certainly didn't agree to it – this would have been considered an omnibus bill because we're looking at amending the Agriculture Financial Services Act, the Business Corporations Act, the Cooperatives Act, the Charitable Fundraising Act, and the Government Organization Act, all of those. Yet members are restricted to 15 minutes and whatever use they can make of the 29(2)(a) provision.

Some of the things that are starting to come off the page for me are particularly around what I'm seeing in the Government Organization Act. I would like to get some answers back about this. This was brought to my attention by my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona. It looks to me as though cabinet can make regulations that relate to the implementation of this agreement. If as part of that they believe that they need to suspend or modify a provision of an act or a regulation, they can do so under this act. In other words, cabinet would then have the power under regulation, which as we all know happens behind closed doors, is not debated in this House, and the people have no say in it, to go and modify an act of this Legislature by regulation behind closed doors. So what we have done in this Assembly would be undone by cabinet behind closed doors. That, I would argue, is very undemocratic.

More than that, it appears in the next section that it can do that retroactively. So without our concurrence in this House, without the input of a number of you members here, these changes could be made to an act, actually change an act of legislation, and make it retroactive to April 1, 2007. How do you like them bananas?

Let's say you're operating out there under an act of this Assembly. You're doing your business. You're adhering to the law exactly the way it's written, and presto bingo, this thing passes. All of a sudden you're illegal – you weren't supposed to be doing what you were doing even though at the time you did it, it said you could – because the government, the cabinet behind closed doors, has now changed what is possible.

So I am happy to be corrected on this one.

An Hon. Member: That should be no problem.

Ms Blakeman: I would be delighted to be corrected on this one, but it sure looks to me like that's what's happening.

Whoever is getting lippy over there, you can get up and start making these justifications about how you would interpret this differently. It's saying that the Lieutenant Government in Council can make regulations in respect of this matter to

- (a) . . . suspend the application of or modify a provision of an Act or regulation or may substitute another provision in place of a provision, and
- (b) may specify the circumstances in which a suspension or modification of or substitution for a provision of an Act or regulation provided for . . . is to operate.

So it can change it, take it away, put in a new version, and it's a done deal, and it never came through this House. Maybe I'll go back and start to look, but I would have called that contempt of this House to be able to have cabinet, through a regulation, change a piece of legislation. Legislation that's made here comes back here. It doesn't get fiddled around with behind closed doors by members of cabinet who are trying to adhere to an international agreement. So I am looking very much forward to having some answers back on this one.

This same regulation goes on with a number of other sections, but to me this is very problematic. Aside from all the other problems that we have with TILMA about being able to make sure that our workers – a number of them have raised concerns with me that, you know, their higher standards of certification for work would now be lower and all those other issues we've heard brought up around TILMA. Aside from all of that stuff, what I just described is truly horrifying. What's next? We don't even come into this House, and cabinet can change anything it wants behind closed doors? That's the essence of what I'm hearing here.

So I absolutely cannot accept in principle what is before us in this bill today, and I will look forward to continued debate and additional information from the sponsor of this bill, but I'm sure not liking what I'm seeing here.

Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to be able to rise and participate in debate on this bill at second reading. As has already been stated by other speakers, of course, this is a bill that purports to provide some administrative nuts-and-bolts support to the TILMA legislation, which we've already passed. Now, as a global statement, of course, our caucus is opposed to TILMA. We talked in the past about why that is in particular, generally and specifically. The key element, of course, is that the TILMA agreement itself will, we indicated in the past, potentially supersede the control and authority of this Legislature and certainly of municipalities.

We previously pointed out that the specific TILMA agreement that this government agreed to, to be distinguished, for instance, from NAFTA, had enforcement clauses in it which specifically exempted certain areas rather than specifically included certain areas. By adopting that approach, what it results in, then, is that as the document is interpreted by the adjudicative panels that implement and make decisions around TILMA, it actually allows for a broadening of its impact, a broadening of the degree to which it impinges on the public-interest decisions that are presumably made within this Legislature or within municipal bodies. We had a problem with it very generally in that way because, frankly, it was structured in a way to be a great deal more invasive and a great deal more limiting of the public interest than even NAFTA was. So that was our concern at the outset.

Now we're presented with this bill, which we're told is a nuts-and-bolts bill. There are a number of nuts and bolts in it, frankly, that to me already signal a bit of a loss of our authority and jurisdiction and ability to focus on the public interests of those whom we are elected to represent.

I think the key thing to just primarily highlight about it at this point is the proposed amendments with respect to the Government Organization Act. I was really quite shocked to read the government briefing note which stated very clearly that this is designed to give the government temporary ability, by way of regulation, to amend legislation that's already been passed. I find that absolutely shocking – absolutely shocking. It's in order to bring us into compliance with TILMA, the very elements of which may change as it's interpreted by this panel that I just discussed, with a document that, frankly, is designed to have TILMA cover more and more areas of our governance and of what we do in this province and through this Legislature.

It really absolutely amazes me that today we have been presented with a bill by this government that would allow them to go behind closed doors and make regulations about any legislation which, ultimately, at some point between now and for however long this was in place, might be deemed to be noncompliant with TILMA. I'm not even sure we have the authority to do that. I'm actually not sure if we in the Legislature do have the authority. I wish I had done more legal research in this area, and I haven't. You know, Legislatures will have legislation struck down if it's ultra vires sometimes, and I can't help but wonder if this piece of legislation is effectively ultra vires our own authority. I don't know.

It's certainly to me way beyond what anyone would ever expect to happen inside this Legislature, that we would agree to give the government the ability to go behind closed doors and amend any legislation deemed necessary as defined by an agreement that's not in legislation but which may be interpreted by a panel sometime in the future as having priority over that legislation. It's so uncertain. I mean, it would fail, frankly, for uncertainty let alone fail for whether or not we actually have the authority to pass such a piece of legislation.

Getting away from the legality of it, I think that from the politics of it I am against – you know, we always joke around about how politicians, particularly opposition politicians, are prone to using the phrase “shocked and appalled.” Really, I have to say that this one deserves that well-worn phrase. Unlike many other things, this one really does. I am absolutely shocked and appalled that we would be talking here about such an undemocratic process within this Legislature. It is absolutely amazing.

I realize that this government won 72 of 83 seats and I realize that they're very popular and I realize that they will have been in government for, well, it will 40 years by the time we get to the next election. I realize all of these things. Even in the face of all that, I don't believe that Albertans actually thought we would move to the point where we'd just have those 72 Albertans go into a big room and have a discussion and then have the decision quietly recorded as an OIC at some point after that discussion. I just don't think that's what anybody bought into on March 3. I really don't.

You know, I certainly need more information about this. If we're somehow misinterpreting what appears to be written on the face of this, then, by all means, tell us and change it. Frankly, if we're misinterpreting it, I think there's a possibility that a judge may at some point down the road misinterpret it or that maybe a wayward cabinet minister may misinterpret it. It ought to be pulled very quickly because it is representative of a very, very serious and significant departure from the principles of democracy – dare I say it? – even in Alberta.

There are, of course, other areas in this bill which also raise some concern with me. I have a bit of concern around the issue of amending the Alberta Agriculture Financial Services Act so that we would now be allowing the body constituted under that act to provide loans and potentially other financial support – I'm not entirely sure – to people, farms, businesses outside of the province. I'm not always necessarily for enhancing trade opportunities at the expense of other things, but I'm not entirely sure why something that may or may not be taxpayer funded would be used for people outside of the province.

I'm similarly concerned about the notion of changing things so that charities, presumably charities which may well benefit from the donor program that we have in Alberta, where government dollars match other donations, can take that money and park it outside of the province. Again, I'm not really sure where the public interest of Albertans is in that one, not really convinced yet that that's going to help Albertans. So those are a few of the concerns that I have.

I find the amendment to the Marriage Act also kind of amusing because it seemed to me that we had gone through this whole process of limiting the number of people who might perform marriages. I'd always sort of wondered if that might be because there was a discomfort with the number of people who were interested in performing marriages of same-sex couples. In any event, we went through a process of limiting the number of people who could perform marriages, and now while we're not going to open the door to more Albertans, we certainly are going to open the door to more non-Albertans. Again, you know, I like my province. I'm kind of Alberta-friendly. I'm not sure why we're doing all this stuff to give our money away to people from outside the province. I just don't see it.

Anyway, that's really a small piece. At this point I'm looking for some information about the proposed amendments to the Government Organization Act because, as I say, it can't possibly be allowed to stand on its own, separate from the merits of TILMA. That provision needs to be seriously reconsidered.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm referring to 29(2)(a) because I've already spoken in second to TILMA. I was just going to ask: given your legal background are you concerned that a fair amount of Alberta taxpayer dollars may be expended to defend Alberta institutions, municipalities?

Secondly, had you wished to adjourn?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I appreciate both questions. I believe that we've reached an agreement with respect to how this bill will proceed over the course of the next two days, so it hadn't been my intention to adjourn.

Having said that, I am concerned, and what I did say with respect to the original bill around TILMA is that there's a tremendous amount of uncertainty around the agreement. It's crafted in such a way as to open up a plethora of opportunities, particularly for businesses unhappy with any sort of public-interest regulation, to challenge that regulation of the business in the interests of the public and to do so under TILMA because of the way it's structured, whether it's, you know, municipalities or others.

This is, of course, one of the things that we raised last fall, that TILMA is a recipe for disaster. The way it's structured is far too open. The ramifications go well beyond what was initially discussed in this Legislature by government advocates saying that it's all about making sure that, you know, lawyers in one province can work in another province. Well, it's a darn good thing because we're going to have a lot of lawyers working all over the place trying to figure out this one. I think that's because the bill has much greater implications than what we've been asked to accept to this point.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We still have 29(2)(a).

Mr. Kang: I have a question for the hon. member. What kind of impact is TILMA going to have broadly on the contractors, on the transporters? How big do you think the impact of TILMA will be on Alberta businesses?

Ms Notley: Well, I think that goes to some of the concerns that our caucus had raised at the outset with respect to TILMA. I think that where we try to regulate in the public interest and perhaps sometimes try to engage in government funding to support particular industries or to subsidize particular industries, all those things become subject to challenge under TILMA. Again, because the structure of TILMA is one where we simply identify those things which are excluded from it, that sort of structuring of an agreement allows for people to make a living out of trying to get other things included under its coverage. By doing that, the implications for transportation, the implications for a number of different businesses are great.

Again, at the end of the day I think we need to govern in the public interest, and giving a lever to business to challenge regulations which may modify the right to do business because of a public-interest objective is not in everybody's public interest. So it's for that reason that we objected to it. To the extent that this bill supports the pursuit of that agenda, which it certainly does through the proposed amendments to the Government Organization Act, then we just can't support it.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there other members who wish to join the debate on Bill 18?

Seeing none, I would like to recognize the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations to close the debate.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. members for their interest in this bill and for their comments. I'd like to just make comment with respect to some of the points that have been made in second reading. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East said that she was disappointed that there had been no proper debate with respect to TILMA – in other words, the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement per se – when or about the time it was entered into. The answer to that question has been given in this House a number of times, and the answer is that we don't debate agreements that the province enters into with other provinces or other government entities. I don't have the statistics for last year, but I do know that in 2007 this government entered into over 100 such agreements. The volume of that type of work writ large is very, very significant. But that's the way it is. We, I guess, debate motions and legislation or bills.

The impact of the TILMA has been significant. Ontario and Quebec are currently engaging in a discussion that sounds like the TILMA. I believe it was just within the last month that New Brunswick and Nova Scotia made an announcement that sounded TILMA-like. We've had lots of approach from a number of provinces and territories, for that matter, across the country interested in what we are doing with British Columbia.

More importantly, I can say, Mr. Speaker, that just this past December, December of 2008, the ministers like me gathered in Ottawa. At the instruction of Premiers across the country that was given to ministers like me and to ministers like our hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration, we entered into an agreement which has the agreement on internal trade as it relates to labour mobility and dispute resolution associated with it and modified for the first time since 1995 regarding something that I would describe as TILMA-like.

I am absolutely certain, Mr. Speaker, that that would not have occurred but for the fact that B.C. and Alberta led the way with the signing of the TILMA in the first place. It not only gained a great deal of attention internally; it gained a great deal of attention internationally. Indeed, the purpose of this is to develop the second-largest economic region that works in a largely compatible manner in Canada after Ontario, with some 7.7 million people and a very large GDP. That is the purpose of this exercise.

Calgary-Varsity speculated with respect to what might come out of the TILMA. The TILMA is a very straightforward agreement to read. It has things that are included and excluded. Indeed, many of the points, I believe, that the hon. member mused about are specifically excluded from the TILMA. I would encourage anybody who is interested to access the TILMA on the Alberta government website. It's there to be seen. It's not a long document. It's extremely straightforward and easy to read as agreements go.

From my perspective, one of the significant things is that we have been working very closely with B.C., with joint cabinet meetings and the like, since about 2003. The TILMA experience has brought us closer in terms of trying to find common matters, whether they are TILMA, TILMA-like, or something else. I think that type of collaboration among provinces, among governments in Canada is a valuable thing.

The hon. members for Edmonton-Centre and Edmonton-Strathcona both made reference to a proposed change in the Government Organization Act which will empower the Lieutenant Governor to make regulations to temporarily amend noncompliant legislation. I made my opening remarks, Mr. Speaker, relative to this bill in second reading last week. I specifically covered that particular matter. It's in the Hansard. If hon. members wish to go back, it's very clear that that's what we intend to do. Indeed, there is precedent for it, so it's not as if this is something that has not been done. It has been done before. It has been argued in this House. The Municipal Government Act and the Animal Health Act are two examples of that. But I hear the hon. members, and I'll see if I can gain a little more detail on the history of it. I did spend some time talking about it. In fact, I would say that I anticipated the interest of those two hon. members in that particular aspect, so we did attempt to, you know, at least raise it as a significant point.

I do appreciate the hon. members' interest in this. If you do have additional questions, hon. members, as I've indicated to both parties, we are happy to hear from you. The only way we can answer them is if we hear your questions. Indeed, we've been experiencing over the last two years and even before that ongoing discussions with many groups that are impacted by this. We have worked very closely with the professions, with occupations that are regulated, with municipalities both on the individual and umbrella-group basis. We have spent a great deal of time answering questions. We are set up to answer questions, so please share them with us, and we would be happy to provide answers to you in some form or the other. We have within my department experts in this area, people that understand nuances that I never will, candidly, because they have been dealing with trade policy for years and years and years, and this is effectively trade policy we're dealing with.

With those comments, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that we now vote on the matter. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 18 read a second time]

Bill 4Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate February 18: Mr. Bhullar]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a privilege to rise and speak to Bill 4, the Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2009. This bill will allow postsecondary institutions in the baccalaureate and applied studies institutions sector to by order of a minister apply to use the name “university.” It also allows for the delegation of powers by a faculty council.

I’m particularly pleased that this is now going to happen to my former, I guess, alma mater. I was lucky enough to go to Mount Royal College in 1990 as a somewhat recalcitrant and lackadaisical learner back in that time, and I began my studies at that time. I was also fortunate enough, though, to play on the hockey team. I was a little bit better at the hockey than I was at the studies, needless to say.

It is perfectly clear that Mount Royal has come a long way since those days. I know that when I go back to the college now and I see how the college has grown and the variety of students and the difference in programs that are going on at the college, it truly amazes me because it was only 18, 19 years ago that I did attend there. I do want to commend Mount Royal College’s continued efforts. They came to the government presenting an argument time and time again to make them a university, and I agree with the decision to make them a university. They have been providing the requisite learning tools to students for a long time, so this has been a long time overdue. This may open the door for other recognized institutions like Grant MacEwan College and some others to maybe go through.

That said, with this allowance having Mount Royal become a university, which I said earlier was warranted and, I believe, needed also in this province given that we want to graduate more people from university with more information, more abilities to deal with the changes that are coming down the pike here in Alberta, hopefully a movement towards a more learning economy, a more greening economy, and a smarter economy, we’re going to need these graduates. At the same time, I hope we never lose, I guess, the punch of what university is.

In Alberta, when we go to a place that has the university designation, we can be sure that that place has respected credentials, respected programs, and respected teachers that are going to enable the student/learner to get a quality education and become prepared, hopefully, for a job in their chosen field or to at least develop the skills and ability to compete in the workforce. That’s what I mean by that. We can’t simply grant university status to any johnny-come-lately who wants to put up a shingle and say: “Hey, I think there’s some money to be made in this university business. I might call myself a university and start running some programs here.” The next thing you know, they’ll get some funding from this organization, that organization, and the provincial government. The next thing you know, they’ll be handing out degrees at various colleges or universities all around Alberta that maybe aren’t worth the paper they’re printed on. This opening to university worries me a little bit. Although maybe it hasn’t happened yet, some of the stuff that’s in play seems to give me an inkling that some of this stuff may be in the pipeline, and I’m hoping that that is not the case.

Getting back to generally what this is, it’s nice to see this government bringing in more Alberta Liberal policy with this piece of legislation as I know it has been one of our policy positions for a long time that Mount Royal should be a university and that more university spaces should be at play here in the Alberta landscape. Hey, what the heck? It’s basically good government. If you guys see an idea that’s out there and something that’s worth doing, whether it’s our idea, your idea, as you guys are always thinking, or whether we spin it out first really doesn’t matter.

You know, it’s definitely time we see provisions in place for baccalaureate institutions to achieve this status albeit with the proviso that we are guarding the registration of the name “university” for those institutions that are truly universities, places of higher learning where people can get the skills they need and the programs they want, I guess, to learn maybe even a profession or to in fact just simply become a higher learner.

Anyway, those are my comments, Mr. Speaker, and it has indeed been a privilege to rise and speak in favour of Bill 4. Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of questions.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It’s a pleasure to rise today to speak to Bill 4, the Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, 2009. I would like to congratulate the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose for sponsoring this very, very important bill.

Based on my humble personal and professional experience I truly appreciate the impact and importance that teachers have on students at every grade level. I have a little experience with a BA, a BEd, and an MPE that were hard won, also in the classroom in three countries for well over a decade as an educator and administrator. It’s a time that I truly treasure. I’m humbled and proud to say that most of my involvement in education occurred right here in Alberta, so I’m confident in the understanding that education is one of the cornerstones of what it means to be a successful Albertan. I have every reason to believe that our commitment to education is a great factor in our economic success. The results speak for themselves.

Thankfully, during this time of world-wide economic uncertainty Albertans can be confident in the knowledge that our commitment to education will not waver. Inherent in the offering for Mount Royal and Grant MacEwan to exercise the option of applying to use the term “university” in their name is the recognition of the high level of learner-centred, teaching-focused baccalaureate degree programs that students receive. This bill is not about correcting a problem within these institutions. Instead, it’s about recognizing the high level of instruction offered at these facilities. Allowing these postsecondary institutions to issue baccalaureate degrees serves to improve upon an already strong educational system.

A new name will not change how these schools operate. Having visited both of these fine institutions, I know that they’re extremely effective postsecondary institutions offering unique and innovative learning environments just as they are, and I’m satisfied that both organizations will continue to offer high-quality, personalized learning in smaller classes. Again, because of experience with similar situations in my own humble academic background, I’m convinced of these realities.

I’ve seen that students choose programs and institutions based on their own learning style, on their needs. Smaller universities enjoy the advantage of offering smaller class sizes which allow students to learn in a more intimate and possibly less intimidating environment. Undergraduate universities also allow for more one-on-one interaction with professors and teaching assistants. This is of great benefit to students who may require additional help with concepts or ideas and could be instrumental in helping to create strong student-teacher bonds.

Undergraduate universities also enjoy the advantage of allowing for flexibility when it comes to full-time or part-time studies. Undergraduate universities grant administrators the freedom to offer courses and programs at unconventional times and in unconventional ways that can often be of great benefit to the student. Just ask those who attend. They can attest to it even better than I. I know, because they've told me, that students can enrol in courses during one semester and obtain work experience in another, or they can enrol in part-time studies while working during the evening. It really benefits not only the individual but Alberta as a whole. Alternatively, people returning to school or who are employed full-time might find it advantageous to attend night courses or even study online.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 4 highlights the advantages of undergraduate universities and recognizes the need to provide for a variety of unique learning environments. Mount Royal and Grant MacEwan offer excellent undergraduate degree programs in conjunction with the diploma and certificate and transfer and open studies programs. Allowing undergraduate institutions to grant baccalaureate degrees also eases the transition of these students into graduate studies at other universities. I've spoken with many dozens of parents and teachers and educators who are very pleased about that.

It's important to note that these universities will not offer graduate study programs and will not become comprehensive academic institutions. Graduate studies are cornerstones of innovation and technology industries, and these industries in turn drive our green initiatives and support our world-class health care system. Everyone wins. Offering undergraduate degrees at undergraduate institutions allows the comprehensive academic institutions to focus more of their attention on research and innovation. Again, there are no losers in this mix.

Finally, even though these institutions will offer baccalaureate degrees, they will still offer the range of opportunities that were previously enjoyed. No one has to worry about that. That will include, of course, diplomas and training certifications.

Mr. Speaker, in many capacities many of us have been working very hard towards this day, and I am proud to count myself as one of those in that number. It's a culmination of a great deal of effort on the part of many, including the hon. member bringing this forward and the hon. minister. It's a day we should all celebrate together. I anxiously look forward to the future for both of these institutions and others in the future of our great province.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes.

None taken, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I, too, am celebrating Bill 4, Post-secondary Learning Amendment Act, and the bringing forth of Mount Royal College to have university status. The Alberta Liberal opposition has been pushing for this event to occur, and it's with great celebration that we see that its day has come. Again I want to credit the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose for attaching his name to the bill. I know how much he values postsecondary education, based on his schooling in Calgary and his pursuit of a law degree that was interrupted. But I see him smiling, so he's pleased with where he has found himself.

One of the areas that I am concerned about in terms of the university and status is what has happened with the urban campus. It was originally proposed to take place in the East Village, and at various times Mount Royal was part of the possibility, the idea being that now a Mount Royal university as part of Bill 4 would have shared space with the University of Calgary, would have shared space with SAIT, the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, would have shared space with Bow Valley College as part of not only an academic one-stop-shopping circumstance, but also it would have served as a major project and major step in the revitalization of Calgary's East Village.

I do appreciate the fact that the government has made significant granting increases not only to the University of Calgary, also to SAIT. Obviously, in recognition of Mount Royal College now being a university, the funding will follow. But I am concerned, amongst the various university announcements, that the University of Calgary's sort of downtown, so to speak, infrastructural contribution from the government is basically leased space in a very old building, which I know is going to be renovated but was the former location of the 8th and 8th clinic, which, interestingly enough, is just basically around the corner from where the first Mount Royal College took place.

My hope was that all the academic institutions would have had that central downtown base in the East Village of Calgary. I know that Lance Carlson of the Alberta College of Art and Design was hoping to have a separate space within that East Village complex to recognize the distinct nature of the programs offered by ACAD. I'm hoping that the changes will not necessarily affect ACAD's dream, that instead of basically leasing space from the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, they will realize their hope and will be supported by the provincial government in a move to have their own unique space and be part of the redevelopment of the East Village. Having an art-based centre there, I think, would be wonderful.

On Monday members of the Alberta Liberal caucus met with representatives from CAUS, the Council of Alberta University Students. In that Mount Royal is now a university, the next time around there will be representatives of Mount Royal university at the meeting of CAUS. The council and their representatives from the University of Alberta, the University of Calgary, and the University of Lethbridge brought up three concerns. One concern was the high cost of tuition. That continues to be a concern. We asked how many students were forced to work during their university experience, and it was pointed out that each of the individuals was trying to juggle three jobs with their academic program when they were full-time students in order to meet the tuition requirements.

The second area that the university students put forward – and I'm sure this will be similar to those experiences of Mount Royal when Bill 4 is enacted to make them a university – is residence space. The University of Alberta is able to accommodate approximately 11 per cent of its overall student population. The University of Calgary is barely able to accommodate 7.4 per cent of its population. To have a vibrant university, you need to have dormitory space on campus so that the value of the campus is recognized on a 24/7 basis. This was a large concern for students.

I've been at presentations at Mount Royal College, soon to be Mount Royal university, where over 70 per cent of the students who were part of a rally indicated that they were spending well over 70 per cent of their income on accommodation whereas government policy recommends that people, particularly in subsidized living accommodations, only pay 30 per cent. So housing was a concern of the students.

The other is a concern shared by all universities. Although Lethbridge is relatively new in the scheme of universities, the University of Alberta has just celebrated its 100th year. It's an aging facility. While I'm pleased to see cranes not only at the University of Alberta but at the University of Calgary on a much more frequent basis now – the University of Calgary, of course, is celebrating its 42nd anniversary – the deferred maintenance is causing difficulties. It's particularly noticeable in the two dormitories just south of the Dining Centre. The University of Calgary students appreciate the fact that the government has provided some funding to create new residences where the parking lot now exists just west of the Dining Centre, but it will not change the number of rooms available for students to be accommodated on campus. So the infrastructure deficit that has been created continues to be a concern for university students, who want to receive value not only in terms of their academic achievements but value in terms of the environment in which this learning takes place.

Without going into great detail, it's very important that this government recognizes that there could not be better investment in the future than the investment in education. It has been noted that for every dollar we invest, we have a $3 return.

I celebrate Mount Royal College becoming a university. I thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose for lending his name to this wonderful bill. With that, I'll take my seat.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments, answers.

Seeing none, I'd like to recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. on Bill 4.

Ms Notley: Thank you very much for the opportunity to rise and speak to this bill. It, of course, is an issue that's important to me, having a university and a number of students in my riding. The way in which we approach our advanced education efforts is very important.

Basically, as other speakers have already identified, there are essentially two elements to this legislation. One appears to be an effort to simply correct an oversight that was made when this legislation was first brought in vis-à-vis the authority of general faculties councils to delegate their functions. My understanding through consultation, certainly, with the U of A is that this was something that they were seeking to have corrected and were very pleased to see this change being put in place in the legislation. So, too, are we.

The other element of the legislation, of course, does relate to the decision to essentially rename Grant MacEwan and Mount Royal as universities. They're not being moved from one category to another under the learning framework, but simply their name is being changed for the purposes of, I'm assuming, attracting students. It seems to me that there's no obvious reason why you wouldn't go ahead with that. Both of these institutions do a good job of providing university-level education and full degrees to their students, so it should be acknowledged accordingly. I know I had the brief pleasure of working as an instructor at Grant MacEwan, and I felt that it was an institution that provided good education to the students who attended it.

Just as an aside, I know that it's not actually covered by this legislation, that this particular decision would be made in a different venue, but I also had the great pleasure of doing the first two years of my university degree at Grande Prairie College, which I personally think also should be seriously considered for degree-granting status so that we can provide a northern Alberta university centre. I know that everyone in Calgary sees Edmonton as part of northern Alberta, but I can tell you that growing up in the real northern Alberta, it's a long ways away. In terms of developing that part of our province, I think a key strategy that would work in that process would be matching the initiative made by British Columbia and potentially putting a university in Grande Prairie to recognize the good work of that institution.

Anyway, I too had an opportunity to meet with students, quite regularly, actually, but also this week as the Council of Alberta University Students were touring the buildings and talking to people. Like my colleague from Calgary-Varsity, I also heard the same positions and submissions with respect to the kinds of things that they would like to see. I think it's really important that we listen to the views of our student leaders with respect to the work that we do in improving our system of advanced education.

We are in a position now, as many speakers in this House have referred to often, where we should be transitioning the economy. I mean, we almost have no choice but to transition it at this point and, certainly, to support diversification in a way that is more meaningful than our efforts to date. Part of that process, of course, will involve bringing people back into the system of advanced education.

You know, we've had conversations in this Legislature already about the fact that Alberta has the lowest university participation rate in the country. Of course, one of the things that has been said to contribute to that – I don't know if I necessarily agree – has been the degree to which young potential students can go work in the oil sector and earn a lot of money. So why would they go to university? But I think we know now that that's probably not going to continue. So it's important for us to make our postsecondary education system accessible to young Albertans because, again, there is a collective benefit. The more we educate ourselves and our young people, the better we will do in the long run.

I think that there are several critical pieces to this. One of them, certainly, is accessibility, and that's why, again, I support this – well, I wouldn't go so far as to say "symbolic" – move to rename these two institutions.

I also think that, in a more meaningful way, as far as increasing accessibility for people to our postsecondary education system, we need to look at the cost of attending university. We know that from 1990 to now the average tuition has gone up not quite fourfold, just slightly less than fourfold, slightly less than 400 per cent since 1990, such that what was once an amount of money that showed or demonstrated student commitment has now become a barrier for many students in terms of their making the decision to enter university. Where we used to have one of the lowest tuition rates, we now rank among one of the highest tuition rates in the country. I appreciate that a great deal of this is due to the 1990s decisions of the Jean Chrétien and Paul Martin federal governments to cut the transfer, but nonetheless we are now in a position where we have what I would suggest are the beginnings of an inaccessible education system.

We have students who come out of school with tremendous debt and not only have maxed out the amount of debt they get from Alberta student finance, but they also have private debt on top of that, and they need to get private debt on top of that because they cannot pay their tuition, pay their accommodation costs, feed themselves, and participate as students with the amount of money that they're given. Of course, we have, I think, a problem that we are going to see more extensively over the course of the next year, which is that those students who've relied on those private sources of credit are not going to be able to get them anymore. Apparently, it's roughly around $5,000 or $6,000 over the course of an undergraduate degree that a student may owe when they get out. Well, if they can't get that credit, that's about one year's tuition. So what's going to happen to our completion rates?

I really think that it's not just enough – I know this government has given itself a pat on the back for tying tuition rates to the consumer price index, but as far as I am concerned, if we're really serious about getting more young Albertans into our university system, what we need to do is significantly roll back our tuitions and make those rollbacks fully funded. If we want to invest in reigniting and maintaining economic growth, most research will show that investments in advanced education have a very effective impact in terms of job creation, actually more so than the oil and gas industry, just as an aside.

In any event, the other thing, of course, that these students were talking about is the issue of residence. Again, my colleague from Calgary-Varsity already raised that. I want to talk just a little bit about what's going on in Edmonton-Strathcona. As has been noted, 11 per cent of the U of A are able to live in residence, and the rest of them have to live off campus. Many, many of them live in Edmonton-Strathcona, which is a good thing because it means they're not driving big vehicles around; they're actually using our transit system and walking and all that good stuff.

As much as we're heard about some real estate prices coming down and rents coming down, be clear: it's the high-end real estate and the high-end rents that are coming down. When you're looking at the cost of a one- or two-bedroom apartment in a 40-year-old walk-up in the area around the university, those rents are not coming down. So these students are still paying $800, $900, $1,000, $1,100, $1,200 a month just for their accommodation. It doesn't include their food. It doesn't include, you know, any other things that they might need in order to effectively participate in their university education.

So we have a problem with respect to where these students are living. There have been projects brought forward to potentially build additional residential spaces on campus at U of A. I would urge this government to look seriously at that type of investment as an infrastructure investment because it's a form of affordable housing. It increases accessibility overall to our system of advanced education and through that mechanism helps the community and the economy as a whole.

I know that pretty much everyone we've consulted with does support the changes which are reflected in this piece of legislation, and it is for that reason that we will support the piece of legislation. At this point I'd like to move to adjourn debate.

Bill 6 Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and move second reading of Bill 6, the Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Amendment Act, 2009.

The Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Act, or PCHAD, is a specialized initiative designed to help a child under 18 years of age whose alcohol or drug use has caused or is likely to cause significant physical, psychological, or social harm to that child or physical harm to others. The program serves children who refuse voluntary treatment and currently operates out of five protective safe houses throughout the province. To access the program, the parent or guardian of the child must apply for a court order to have the child placed in a protective safe house for up to five days. The child is then assessed by Alberta Health Services staff and treated for detoxification. Further treatment programs can then be recommended.

PCHAD reflects a commitment to improve the safety, the security, and the well-being of children and families in Alberta. It speaks to the responsibility of families, communities, and this Assembly to help children overcome problems with alcohol and drug abuse. This initiative has been well received from its commencement. From July 1, 2006, to the end of 2008 more than 1,500 children were admitted to the program. As we have gained experience with the program, areas in which the program can be strengthened were identified. The proposed amendments address these areas, and I'd like to briefly outline the improvements recommended.

Extending the program time frame. Currently children can be placed in a protective safe house for up to five days. The amendments will change this time period from five days to a maximum of 10 days. Feedback from the program counsellors, parents, guardians, and even the children indicates that an extended time period will be more effective for providing treatment for detoxification and for stabilizing the child. Detoxification and stabilization are two critical components of the recovery process. Voluntary treatment programs also use a 10-day time period, so PCHAD will be consistent with these programs.

Currently a PCHAD court order cannot be extended. However, experience with the program indicates that the period of time required to assess, detoxify, or stabilize a child varies depending on the child's circumstances. The amendments recognize this and allow an application for a five-day extension. This extension will be granted only if the court is satisfied that an additional period of confinement is required to assess or stabilize the child.

Early discharge. Given these initiatives to extend the time period of the program, a provision is included that authorizes the program co-ordinator to discharge a child earlier. This may occur if the co-ordinator has assessed the child and believes it is in the child's interest and if the child, parent or guardian, and director of the protective safe house agree it is appropriate. For example, this might happen if the child indicates he or she is willing to transfer to a voluntary program. This provision is important because the detention of a child is an extraordinary step. Care must be taken not to unnecessarily detain a child. It is especially important given the proposed extension of the confinement period to 10 or 15 days. Together these time frame amendments will better assist children on the path to recovery.

Enhancing the involvement of parents and guardians. The involvement of parents and guardians is an important feature of this program. There are a number of proposed amendments that provide better support to parents and some that clarify their responsibilities.

Application process. A new provision is proposed that requires a parent or guardian to attend an information session about PCHAD before applying for a court order. The information session will provide guardians with detailed information about PCHAD and outline the guardians' obligations. The information session will also provide parents and guardians with information about other addiction and rehabilitative programs. It will make families aware of other options, options that they may wish to access on their own.

Treatment program information. The amendments also enable the program co-ordinator to provide the child's guardian with recommendations for the child's treatment. Parents and guardians have told us they need more information to better support their child outside of the PCHAD program. This change responds to their feedback.

Discharge. In addition, the amendments establish the parents' obligation to pick up their child when the child is discharged from the program. Good discharge planning and co-ordination with parents and guardians is an important part of the child's continued stabilization.

Police support. Currently a PCHAD court order may direct police to apprehend and convey a child to a protective safe house. Experience with the program indicates that this provision is widely used. Yet police departments report that their involvement is not required in most cases, and using police to transport children puts a strain on their resources. While the provision for police transportation remains, an additional provision enables the court to direct police to assist the family with transportation. This assistance may include using police to discuss transportation with the family and child or being present when the family is taking the child to the protective safe house. Regulation-making authority is included to further define what is required of police when they are ordered to assist.

This amendment is modelled after the Edmonton Police Service approach. Edmonton police help families plan for the child's transfer to a protective safe house, even booking a specific date for the child's admission. Planning for the child's admission into the program helps ease the transition, reduces unnecessary use of police services, and supports families.

Review of the court order. Currently only a child can apply for a review of the court order, and the court must hear the review application within one day of the application being filed. As a result of the review, the judge may confirm, vary, or terminate the court order. There are practical challenges with this tight time frame. Parents or guardians may not be aware of the review hearing and in some cases may be unable to pick up the child if the application is successful.

To address these challenges, the amendments provide for the following. A child can continue to request a court review of the PCHAD order, and the review must be held within two days of the application being filed or within a shorter or longer period ordered by the court. A parent or guardian may also request a review. In a few cases parents have had second thoughts about putting their children in PCHAD. The PCHAD program co-ordinator may request a review as well. In some cases a child may not be suited for PCHAD. In these situations the program co-ordinator should have the ability to apply for termination of the order. As well, the amendments allow the court to hear evidence by telephone, audiovisually, or by other means. These amendments will better provide for the review process while ensuring that review hearings occur on a timely basis.

Expiry of PCHAD orders. Presently a PCHAD order has no expiry date. The amendments specify that a PCHAD order that has not been acted on will expire in 50 days. The 50-day time period provides sufficient time for a bed to be booked for the child and arrangements made for the child to enter the program. It is not advisable for court orders to be outstanding for an uncertain period of time. Circumstances change. If for some reason an order expires before it can be acted on, a parent or guardian can make a new application to the court.

PCHAD is an important program for many Alberta families and will continue to be with the amendments proposed in this bill. I ask all members to support this bill and to move it to the next stage.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. While I support the intent of this bill to provide treatment for adolescents who are addicted, I don't believe this bill has the tools to accomplish its intent.

To begin with, I'd like to take us back to 2005. I want to talk about the abnormal circumstances that surrounded the fast dealing with the crystal meth bill. The hon. Member for Red Deer-North proposed a bill that would be a major arsenal in the fight against drug addiction. Her bill focused primarily on crystal meth, which is an extremely damaging, highly addictive drug. We recognized the importance of the intent of the bill. We debated it. We put it through its paces very quickly. From second reading it went into committee. This was a negotiated agreement between all parties because we saw the importance of treatment for children as being absolutely essential, and we had many wonderful speeches delivered about saving our young people, treating them for addictions, preventative measures.

It's very important to note that both the members of the Liberal caucus and the members of the NDP caucus – I'm pretty sure that my information is correct – were supportive, especially at the second reading level, of the notion of 90-day compulsory treatment. However, when it came to Committee of the Whole and eventually to the last stages of the bill and the various amendments that the government members put forward, that 90-day treatment was reduced to five days.

Now, I very much appreciate what the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek is proposing. She's trying to go back in time, as it were, and correct the mistakes made by not dealing with the full treatment that was suggested in the crystal meth bill of 2005. Unfortunately, the five-day to 10-day – and I understand from the explanation that this is just designed to be an entry period, at which time that would be your first step. You'd walk in the door, and you'd be able to access services. Then there could be a potential transfer to the services you need.

Well, if this is just a holding facility as opposed to a swift movement into treatment, then what we have is the equivalent of a one-star marijuana motel or a five-star heroin hotel. What happens: you walk in, you are asked by the clerk to leave your drugs at the desk, and check-out time is 10 days. I do not believe that in 10 days sufficient professional help and parental counselling can occur that will turn around the individual, the adolescent, who is addicted.

I do believe that you have to have a much stronger backup than what we currently have in this province. We do not have sufficient treatment beds under the direct authority of AADAC, so the idea that after 10 days we would be able to transfer the individuals into treatment does not really realistically exist at this time. While it's a good entry concept, the follow-up and the transfer and the PCHADs and the types of treatment, we don't have the beds in secure, accredited institutions. We don't have the treatment beds available in secured areas of hospitals right now. We recognize the tremendous problems that addiction poses, but we do not have the infrastructure at this point. We do not have the number of accredited, trained professionals – psychologists, doctors, nurses, social workers, counsellors, degreed individuals – to make sure that this treatment takes place. Now, what we do have are unaccredited institutions competing for grants from the province to provide degrees of treatment.

I have brought up in this House the concerns I have for organizations like the Alberta Adolescent Recovery Centre. I also pointed out the good intentions this program had, but the reality is that it lacks the professional accreditation. It basically has a business licence to operate as opposed to a medical recognition. It is not a residential treatment centre. It does not have the status that is required to have professionals on a day-to-day basis providing the one-to-one treatment that is at times necessary in the stages of overcoming addiction.

What it does have is a requirement on parents to at some point keep in their custody in a barred-window bedroom someone else's child, and it is the responsibility of their child, who has gone months further into the program, to be the guardian for the child. The new person who has recently been introduced to treatment is referred to as the newcomer, and the other student, who could be maybe 14, with four months more of experience through the program, is referred to as the old-comer. The old-comer holds the keys and becomes the jailer for the other member.

Now, in that this program has gone on for over 20 years in the city of Calgary, the number of barred bedrooms – illegally barred bedrooms, I would add – is probably in the area of 200-plus. This is not an accredited type of treatment program. Therefore, if there is a suggestion within Bill 6 that there would be a referral to a program, a nonaccredited, nonresidential treatment centre program such as this, then I would have great difficulty. It is putting undue emphasis, undue liability on a child to be a counsellor for another child and for a parent to act as a warden and at the same time be a prisoner to their own institutional responsibility. While the other child is in their care, they can't go anywhere because they have to be the supervisors. Now, these are untrained parents. These are not psychiatrists. These are not psychologists. These are not, in general, doctors although some of those professions may come into it by coincidence. There's nothing to say that because you're a professional, your child isn't going to become addicted to drugs.

The point I'm making is that if this program is going to work, it's got to be longer than 10 days. It has to be more than just an entry. There has to be an exit, and that exit has to involve treatment by accredited professionals in facilities that, if not currently under construction, have to be a priority. If Bill 6 increases the speed at which suitable clinical facilities are provided to treat these young individuals and support their families, then I can be supportive of that portion of the bill, but right now, unfortunately, it is all about good intention and not about the funding that is sustainable, that is needed to build the infrastructure, to pay the wages of the psychologists, the psychiatrists, the professionally trained clinicians, the social workers involved in the follow-up. That is not apparent to me in Bill 6.

I cannot emphasize how important it is for Alberta, partly due to its, you know, fast lifestyle – yes, the recession has slowed it somewhat – that the children have the proper treatment. When I say proper, I'm talking about government regulated. AADAC falls under the superministry of health, and I am concerned about some of the authority and the integrity and the capability of AADAC to run as an independent organization. It has done some wonderful work, which I have experienced directly by having had my grade 9 students attend sessions on addictions, particularly on driving while drunk and some of the terrible circumstances. They've had individuals within the AADAC program, who themselves have been severely injured, talking one-on-one with students, warning them against the possibility of addiction. That is a strong program, and I am not convinced that Bill 6 will provide the funding or the stand-alone support for tried-and-true programs such as AADAC.

Again, I appreciate the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek having brought this forth. She has a heart that is very concerned about children and youth. She is a former Minister of Children and Youth Services. She cares. There's no doubt about the fact that she cares. The Member for Red Deer-North cares. But to take care and love and concern and turn that into action takes a commitment beyond 10 days. Unfortunately, I do not see that commitment.

Therefore, at this point, until amendments are potentially brought forward to secure the funding both for clinical, continuous support and infrastructure, I will not be able to support this bill.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise to speak to Bill 6. You know, it's an interesting bill because it deals with an issue that, obviously, everyone is very concerned about. The idea of children being addicted to drugs and there not being the capacity for those around them or for themselves to access service and treatment is very troubling. Certainly, I have no question in my mind that this is what this act is intended to try and address. I'm not, however, for many reasons already identified, convinced that this is the route to get there.

First of all, just to sort of clarify a little bit of the position of the NDP caucus with respect to this bill in the past. In fact, when the bill first came forward with the 90-day mandatory security element in it, our caucus actually raised a concern about whether that would in fact potentially attract legal challenge and what that meant for the rights of the child. It was ultimately taken out, as was noted, and then our caucus did support it, at the time noting that it could only work if that piece of legislation was accompanied with a commitment to creating the beds that were necessary to provide the treatment which is contemplated within this act, both while the act is in place as well as after the act's impact is complete. What I mean is that after the mandatory confinement period, where does the child go? What's the point of all this if there is no place for the child to go once the mandatory confinement period is completed? I note that that, you know, has been raised before and was raised at the time, and it seems, unfortunately, as though it really has not been effectively addressed.

The Crime Reduction and Safe Communities Task Force, which made the recommendation that forms the foundation of this act to extend the maximum length of detention orders, also identified the very urgent need for more treatment beds for youth abusing drugs. The task force itself had heard that there was a tremendous lack of treatment options for youth with addictions. That was associated as well with the fact that we have a tremendous shortage of options or treatment for children with mental illness. This doesn't surprise me at all. I have absolutely no difficulty saying that the province is failing children when it comes to the issue of providing comprehensive, substantial mental health services and support.

We had the bill that was here before, and now we have to look at what's happened since that bill was introduced. Well, when it was introduced, it looked as though AADAC had brought its total number of youth beds up to 68 when the protection of children abusing drugs program started. As of June 2008 it's my understanding that they had added four stabilization and detoxification beds for youth with addictions, and that brought their total number of beds up to 61. So we now seem to have a net decrease in beds. Over that same time period we appear through AADAC to have a net decrease of eight beds for youth seeking voluntary treatment in that it went from 48 to 40. At the same time we actually have seen a drop in the number of beds that treat children with addiction problems.

Now, another was that AADAC in September of 2007 surveyed the effectiveness of the PCHAD program, and one of the findings they made was that about half of the youth who actually sought voluntary treatment after going through the protection of children abusing drugs program couldn't find beds. There were basically no voluntary beds available for them. Again, this raises a question. I mean, we can make all the grand statements we want, but if we are not putting our money where our mouth is and actually providing the service that is necessary, then this really just creates a very costly and frustrating circle for the families that are caught up in it.

The AADAC survey notes that there were a significant number of parents and guardians who came through the protection of children abusing drugs program who were not satisfied with the support that they or their children were able to receive in the community. Again, this is absolutely no surprise to me. So do we carry on adding the number of days without doing part two, which, I would say, is the far, far, far more important part of this process?

I also want to raise, you know, an additional concern, that was also raised by my colleague from Calgary-Varsity, with respect to the reliance of—well, I don't know if it's the government; we don't know yet—some people on the ARC program, the Alberta Adolescent Recovery Centre, in Calgary. Now, I've been invited to go down and visit that centre, and I will be doing that. But I will say at the outset that I have some significant concerns. Those concerns are very similar to those that have already been raised. They are concerns about the level of qualification and the level of oversight and the level of skill that is brought to bear in that setting and the degree to which it has any similarity to best practices that are identified through peer-review processes by professionals who work in the field. I suspect, unfortunately, that there appears to be quite a bit of divergence from what is considered best practice on one hand and what happens at ARC on the other. Then, of course, we also have numerous allegations which at this point nobody wants to acknowledge or actually investigate, which is deeply concerning to us.

All of that aside, what I do see in that program is a number of very well intentioned and often almost desperate parents who are supportive of that program because they need a place for their children to be. What concerns me is that they have to turn to a program that may be fairly flawed. Frankly, we provide nothing through our ministry of health—and I think that's where it should be provided—in a way that is or can be effective or accessible. We just don't have the proper number of beds or the level of expertise.

On top of that, what we're now hearing is that there is a plan to lower the certification standards for child and youth care counsellors. We know that for child and youth care counsellors in forensic settings a good portion of their job deals with the issue of addictions management. What we're actually doing as a government is reducing the level of qualification and training that people working in that area need to have. Again, what's the likely outcome? A reduction in the quality of support and assistance that we can provide to children in crisis.

Then you add this to the global issue, which we tend to raise quite often, about the unjustifiable disparity in income in the overall social services sector. People that work in nonprofit counselling, community-support venues working with kids are being paid, you know, $12, $13, $14 an hour, and we wonder why there's such a drastic shortage of people in that field and why we have such a drastic inability to provide the support and service that children need. Well, it's not a big surprise to me. We don't care enough. There's not enough money being put to this, and there's not enough political will behind solving this problem.

Instead, what we have is an act here, which is great, but I have some concerns about the act at this point, the actual element of the act. I'm unsure whether we'll support it or not. I look forward to hearing more about it. But at the end of the day whether we support it or do not support it is irrelevant if it is not accompanied by meaningful financial investment in providing the kind of care and beds and support that these children need. At this point we're not seeing any of that within either the health or the children and youth services system. It just does not appear as though those resources are there.

Anyway, that's our concern at this point. As I say, we look forward to listening to the debate over the course of this bill's journey through the Legislature. We will then make our determination on whether or not we can support it.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for questions or comments.

Seeing none, I'd like to call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays to debate on the bill.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and speak to Bill 6, the Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Amendment Act, 2009. The Protection of Children Abusing Drugs Act, or PCHAD, was originally passed to help parents and their children effectively deal with the challenges of drug abuse. PCHAD allows parents to apply for a court order to have their child placed in a protective safe house for detoxification. This gives parents the powers they need to successfully intervene on behalf of their children and to treat substance abuse. Since its inception this act has successfully helped over 1,500 children. To be clear, Mr. Speaker, Bill 6 is not about improving a system that is broken. Instead, it is aimed at improving an already effective piece of legislation. Bill 6 clearly highlights how this government is actively working to continually improve all levels of service delivery.

In light of this, Bill 6 proposes several important amendments that I believe will improve the operational practices and the effectiveness of this valuable program. These amendments include increasing the duration of the confinement period to allow for more effective stabilization services, improving the review hearing process, introducing an expiration date for unexecuted orders, and addressing the circumstances of children who are abandoned by their guardians.

While these amendments will clearly offer substantial benefits to Alberta's children, what I think is most commendable about Bill 6 is the direction it gives regarding police transportation services. Currently PCHAD allows the court order to stipulate whether or not a police officer is required to apprehend and transport a child to the detoxification centre. This section was created to help parents who are not physically able to transport their children due to extreme behavioural issues. Police transportation can also be ordered in cases where a child might be living in a drug house, outside of the care of a parent or guardian.

Mr. Speaker, these are all valid reasons for having this policy in place, and I believe that we need to be clear that Bill 6 is not proposing to remove police intervention. Rather, Bill 6 is proposing to allow police to assist parents in transporting their children, which may include the creation of criteria to help determine if police intervention is warranted. Therefore, this amendment would primarily eliminate cases where police transportation and intervention are simply not needed. This minimizes the strain put on police resources in situations where their services are not required, like when parents are more than capable of escorting their child to a protective safe house for stabilization. In this case, it would make little sense to call in the services of a police officer.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to providing criteria regulating police intervention, Bill 6 also proposes to allow for standardizing procedures in cases where children are in fact transported by a police officer. Over the past two and a half years it has been determined that the transportation of children is most effective when there is an established co-ordinated effort made by parents, the police, and the program co-ordinator. Delivering a child into a detox program is a stressful and draining ordeal. It is in the interests of both children and guardians to have this take place as smoothly as possible. Bill 6 simply proposes amendments to help ease this difficult transition.

However, entering a protective safe house is not the only time when children need to be transported. After the allotted detoxification time has passed, children are returned to the custody of their parents or guardians. Before this amendment was proposed, it was unclear as to who was responsible for picking up and returning children to their homes. Bill 6 would require parents to promptly pick up children who had successfully completed the detoxification process. In addition, parental pickup is required in cases where a child is released early to be transported to a voluntary residential treatment program or as a result of a court order.

This amendment is intended to address a very sad reality that occasionally affects these children's lives: abandonment. Approximately 5 per cent of children introduced into the PCHAD program are not picked up by their parent or guardian. The amendments proposed by Bill 6 offer guidance to the program's operators, requiring them to call Children and Youth Services, who will then take the child into protective care. This is a sad reality in many children's lives, but I feel comfort in knowing that we live in a province committed to helping those who are most vulnerable.

Protecting our children is the ultimate goal behind PCHAD, and I believe that the amendments proposed by Bill 6 help us work towards this goal. Creating a standardized police transportation process will dramatically help ease the transition into the program, and I believe that standardizing this transaction will ultimately assist children undergoing a stressful and challenging time. Furthermore, requiring children to be picked up from the program by their parent or guardian helps to clarify a previously undefined responsibility. This clarity will in turn help address child abandonment and further highlights the province's commitment to protect the children in its care.

I commend the government for introducing this valuable and well-thought-out piece of legislation, and I applaud the commitment to improving upon an already successful program. It is for these reasons that I will be standing in support of Bill 6 and urge all members to do the same.

5:20

The Deputy Speaker: We have five minutes for comments and questions.

Seeing none, the hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that we adjourn debate on Bill 6.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 9

Government Organization Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move second reading of Bill 9, the Government Organization Amendment Act, 2009.

Albertans have received exceptional registry services for the last 15 years through the registry agent network. A recent customer survey indicated that 86 per cent of Albertans are satisfied with the quality of registry services they receive through the registry agent network. Since the inception of the network 15 years ago, there have been a number of advancements in technology and a growing awareness over the protection of personal information. As a result, Service Alberta felt it was time for a major review of the registry agent network.

These amendments both formalize policies and practices that have been developed over time and include new provisions created in response to stakeholder feedback. The amendments will enhance support for registry agent operations and increase the accountability of registry agents.

Specifically, the proposed amendments will provide the Minister of Service Alberta additional control over the services that a registry agent can provide and the location where those services can be provided. They will also allow the Minister of Service Alberta to approve the sale or change of ownership of a registry agent and impose any necessary conditions, recover costs incurred by the government on behalf of the registry agent and recover any government fees not submitted by a registry agent, and allow the Minister of Service Alberta or her designate to enter a registry agent's premises to conduct an audit or inspection to ensure compliance with the legislation, the registry agent agreement, and government policies or to recover government property after a registry agent agreement is terminated.

The bill would enhance the offence section to stipulate that any contravention of the act or regulations is an offence. It would establish the period of time Alberta Justice has to charge someone with an offence under the act; this period of time will be nine months from the date the offence is discovered or six years from the date the offence occurred, whichever is less. It would change the maximum fines and penalties from $2,000 or imprisonment for up to six months to $10,000 or imprisonment for up to one year.

The bill will ensure that it's clearly understood that each registry database and all of the records and information in the registry's database are the property of the government.

Lastly, the bill will provide ministerial regulation-making authority regarding the requirements to become a registry agent; the background checks required on the applicant for a registry agency and on their spouse or adult interdependent partner; the ongoing duties of registry agents; that consideration be taken into account by the Minister of Service Alberta when approving the location in which a registry agent will provide services; the access, manner of access, and use of the information accessed from a registry database; audits and inspections of registry agents, their staff, and other authorized registry service providers in providing the necessary powers to complete these tasks; an appeal process for decisions made under the act and regulations, contravention of the regulation when it constitutes an offence, which contravention of the act or regulations must be reported to the Minister of Service Alberta by a registry agent; the temporary restrictions of access for noncompliance with the legislation; the cost and government fees that may be required from registry agents; the exemption of a registry agent from a rule set out in the regulations if the registry agent has a valid reason when they need the exemption; access to registry services for Albertans when their local registry service is discontinued; and any administrative matters necessary to carry out the intent of this act.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do rise to speak on Bill 9, sponsored by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead. I know that the intent of the bill, according to the sponsor, is to enhance the governance of the registry agent network and to increase accountability and service delivery. This will also accomplish clarifying accountability and consequences for registry agents, formalize a process for auditors' inspections, and provide regulation-making authority for further regulations to be developed. It is also true that the changes make the government's ability to control registry agents much stronger with much greater powers for monitoring. The impact of the bill is clearly that it will deal with the registries and registry agents and the requirements placed upon them in their relationship with the government.

The system was privatized in 1993 and, you know, as of now nearly 12 million transactions are conducted through Alberta Registries each year, including issuing and renewing drivers' licences, registration of births, marriages, and deaths, land title searches and transfers, registration of corporations, vehicles, and liens. The majority of these services are available at registry agencies located in communities throughout the province. Also, there's an increasing number of services available online. Albertans now mostly renew their passenger vehicles through the Internet, and there are many other regular services provided online through the Internet as well.

All of the registries hold very sensitive, private data. It is a necessity for the government to have strong control over registries so that the data does not get into the wrong hands. This bill empowers the government to do this; nevertheless, the fact that such significant powers are seen as a necessity calls into question the existing security system. That's my concern about the existing security system, you know, what kind of security system we have in place. I'm concerned about all the sensitive and private data the system has, although the government is putting these controls in place. You know, were there serious problems?

We also have to know what will be the impact of these additional regulatory administrative burdens on the public service that registries provide. How much time will it take to make all those changes? Will there be any financial impact on the registry agents? How much will it cost them to buy the new equipment, to get the new technology? Will there be any financial impact on the government, on the ministry, and on the taxpayers? Will the users of services, Albertans, see an impact on their hip pockets? Will the service be slower? Will they have reduced options? These are the questions that have to be answered.

Those are the concerns I have. Although I'll support the bill, these concerns have to be answered during the debate. I want to have some satisfactory answers for those concerns I raised.

With those concerns, I adjourn my debate on the bill, sir. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak in support of Bill 9 this afternoon. I'm basically in support of any bill that would improve customer confidence in the registry agent network that we have, and I believe that Bill 9 will do that.

5:30

In the last number of years there has been growing public concern over the security and integrity of the private information system. In a survey commissioned by the Information and Privacy Commissioner, it was found that privacy protection is a serious issue with Albertans. Most Albertans support the importance of protecting the privacy of their personal information, and many are already taking steps to do so themselves. This survey indicates that 74 per cent of Albertans felt it was very important that the private information they provide to government registries be protected.

The proposed changes to the act indicate that the government takes the privacy of Albertans' personal information very seriously, and therefore increased accountability measures for registry agents are being implemented in order for Albertans' personal information to continue to remain safe. I feel these amendments are necessary in order to continue to increase public confidence in the registry agent network, and therefore I support this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak on it this afternoon.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that we adjourn debate on Bill 9.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 10

Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and move second reading of Bill 10, the Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act, on behalf of the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

It's my pleasure to speak to Bill 10, the Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act, and to support this important piece of legislation through second reading and the remainder of the legislative process. Bill 10 is a good piece of legislation, that is needed in Alberta. It is needed to help ensure a minimum level of accommodation and accommodation services in the province's supportive living facilities, to place additional emphasis on areas that impact residents' security and safety.

The new act clearly defines supportive living, which is a new and evolving concept that provides support to individuals, allowing them to live as independently as possible while they continue to receive the services they need. The act provides direct authority for Seniors and Community Supports to carry out the full range of activities associated with licensing supportive living facilities, which includes monitoring, compliance management, and investigating complaints of noncompliance with the legislation.

The new legislation moves forward, builds on and improves existing legislation that requires updating to address the licensing needs of today, to reflect the changing needs of residents in supportive living facilities, and to promote and help ensure the safety and security of residents in these facilities. The legislation is also a critical step to promote the aging in the right place concept. This approach helps seniors to stay in the communities they helped build and develop, close to their friends and family, their very important support system.

This legislation is about being responsive to the needs of today while we continue to prepare for the future. It's about having modern legislation that recognizes that changing times require innovative solutions, solutions that help meet the needs of an aging and diverse population in an industry that continues to grow. This legislation reflects the priorities of our government to increase the quality of life in our communities and assist our most vulnerable citizens. This new legislation supports the mandate of the Seniors and Community Supports ministry: specifically, to improve the quality, supply, and client choices in the continuing care system.

I strongly recommend that all members support the passing of Bill 10, the Supportive Living Accommodation Licensing Act. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly a delight to be able to stand up and speak to this very necessary bill. It's particularly of personal interest to me because of my background in geriatrics and also because I sat on the MLA task force and have worked fairly closely with the minister as this bill has gone forward. I certainly thank her for including me in some of the discussions as this came forward because I do believe that there's a good piece of work here. There are a couple of things that I have concerns about and will bring them forward at this time.

Certainly, as my colleague previously has stated, the important thing is that people can age in place, that they're in the proper place at the proper time. I always like to add a little adjunct to that to say that I not only want them to age in place but that they could live out their lives in that place with respect and dignity and, certainly, safety. This is what this bill is accommodating. It isn't accommodating on the care side. This is strictly about the accommodations that they live in and how they are treated and how they are protected in these accommodations.

It gives the ability to license – in fact, these places will have to be licensed – but it also gives monitoring ability so that the government can go in and will be allowed to go in unannounced. I think that's very important because I think we've all worked at different jobs where, when we found out the inspectors were coming, the place was spic and span by the time the inspectors got there. So I think that that's a very important part of this bill. There's certainly an accommodation in here where people can come forward with complaints. As I've mentioned, it really is a huge step forward to be able to have inspections, investigations, and complaints all under one piece of legislation.

One of my problems is that I believe there's too much leeway left to the regulation regarding what is exempt from the application of the act. There are issues around how a complaints officer may dismiss a complaint. It's section 10(3). I believe it's just too subjective that one person, the complaints officer, can actually stop the complaint going forward to an investigator based on just that one person's assessment of what the situation is. I understand, of course, that there will be criteria. It was mainly put in to be able to sidetrack or be able to stop vexatious or frivolous complaints, and I can understand that. But I still think that the power that is given the complaints officer under section 10(3) is too subjective.

The other concern that I would have is that in section 17 they are using the words "peace officer." When this complaint should go forward, they have the ability, it says, for "any peace officer to assist the director." I would like that to say police officer, not peace officer. I believe that some of these things could well end up being criminal, and I think that if it was given to a police officer, it doesn't move through the system quickly enough. Unfortunately, when we deal with this segment of the population, they often pass on, and the problem, of course, is now dead, so to speak, and it never goes forward. There are many complaints that I think are not heard because of that reason. I think that by giving it to a police officer, it elongates the period when these complaints would be handled. That would be my concern there.

Under 24, regulations, some of these can be made exempt, and I believe that it should be in the legislation. This power of exemption should not be in regulations alone.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will take my place, but those are my concerns at this point in time. The general point to be made is that the shift from legislation to regulation lacks the public oversight that I believe some of these complaints should come under.

I would like to reiterate that I think it's a bill that's certainly important, certainly has been a long time coming. As I've said, I think the minister has done a very good job of working on this. The information had, of course, been taken out of some of the work that we had done on the MLA task force.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will adjourn Bill 10.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 11

Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise before this Assembly and move Bill 11, the Fisheries (Alberta) Amendment Act, 2009.

Fish are an important sustainable natural resource, and they belong to all of us. Fish and fishing provide us with many social, recreational, and economic benefits, like I've explained to the minister of parks and tourism many times. Consequently, there's a great demand for this limited resource. Alberta has only about 1,500 fish-bearing streams and 1,100 lakes. As a result, very careful management is required to balance the use by the estimated 300,000 anglers, 160 commercial fisheries – that's a lot – and 2,000 domestic or food fishers, as some may call them, competing for fish in provincial waters.

Fishery stakeholder groups and the public have let us know that they expect tougher penalties to deal with those who break our fisheries management laws. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is about providing stronger protection for our fish resources and more effective deterrents against actions that damage our fisheries. At present the act limits the court's ability to impose penalties other than fines and short licence suspensions. Fines from convictions, which are directly directed to the general revenue fund, are not adequate to cover the cost of restoring lost fisheries, and all the cost is currently being borne by the government and the fishery stakeholder groups.

Mr. Speaker, the amendments would add creative sentencing provisions to strengthen our compliance program. For many years the courts have been successfully using creative sentencing under the Wildlife Act and the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act to deal with serious offenders. For example, through creative sentencing offenders have been ordered to report their subsequent hunting activities or make payments to the minister's programs for wildlife conservation.

The amendments to the Fisheries (Alberta) Act will follow existing creative sentencing models. Creative sentencing options will include issuing orders to stop new offences, suspending or cancelling licences, and ordering restoration actions. Through creative sentencing offenders could also be ordered to make additional monetary payments to fisheries management or habitat enhancement programs. Mr. Speaker, not only will this creative sentencing allow the courts to better match the punishment for an offence; it will also allow government to direct payments for repairing damages to fish and their habitat.

For example, ongoing court proceedings involve numerous serious Fisheries (Alberta) Act violations resulting from a successful undercover operation in the Lac La Biche and Athabasca areas. Some trials have resulted in convictions. There have been 10 accused persons convicted as a result of this investigation, who have been fined a total of $140,000, Mr. Speaker. If creative sentencing were available, a portion of that amount or an additional amount could be assessed in the form of an order for payment to support fisheries management programs. In addition, orders could be issued to the convicted persons requiring that they report future fishing activities.

Mr. Speaker, creative sentencing will also help deter the illegal stocking of fish. Estimates to restore trout fisheries affected by illegal stocking of perch have ranged from $100,000 to $500,000 depending on the size and complexity of the water body. As I stated earlier, fines from convictions which are directed to the general revenue fund are not adequate to cover the cost of restoring lost fisheries. All of the cost is currently being borne by the government and the fishery stakeholder groups. For example, the costs for the last proposed rehab project in southern Alberta were estimated at more than $75,000 for purchasing chemicals and treatment for cleaning up the resulting fish kill. This was for a small trout fishery that had been illegally stocked with perch.

We would be mistaken to think that this is a small problem, Mr. Speaker. As of 2008 there were 28 stocked trout lakes that were victims of unwanted perch introductions. Creative sentencing would introduce an option to order an offender to pay the full cost to re-create the stocked fishery as it was prior to the illegal fish introduction.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the amendments will also provide for automatic forfeiture of seized items. An example would be if a person who was unfamiliar with the regulations was found fishing in a stream that was closed to all fishing during the spawning season. The officer could seize the fish that were caught illegally, issue the warning, and then dispose of the fish to a needy person. Disposal of the fish would ultimately be reported to a justice, but a justice order for their forfeiture and disposal would not be required in advance. As another example of automatic forfeiture, illegal fish or equipment could automatically be forfeited when an officer issues a specified penalty ticket and the accused person pleads guilty by paying the specified fine without appearing before a justice. Again, forfeiture is carried out without it having to be brought before a justice.

These amendments would ensure that our fisheries legislation meets with public expectations and better equips the courts to protect our fishery resources. Most importantly, through these amendments Albertans will continue to see high-quality fishing opportunities. I urge my colleagues to support this bill, and I thank the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development for taking the initiative to allow me to move this bill.

Thank you, sir.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a great pleasure to rise in support of this bill, that will have more punitive penalties for fisheries violations and will equip the courts to include penalties that can fine offenders to return fisheries back to a healthy state, which are both good things. I applaud both the minister and the mover for their excellent work in bringing this bill.

It was also highlighted earlier that probably the need for this bill stems from the fact that Alberta's fish stocks have been declining steadily since 2000, probably a lot earlier than that but let's just say since 2000. The main reason for this has been overfishing and the loss of fish habitat due to the rapid development that has taken place in the last nine years. This bill hopes to address the issues of overfishing by introducing these punitive measures to discourage overfishing. In the event that an angler is charged under the Fisheries Act, strict penalties are introduced. Essentially, this serves as a deterrent. We all know that sometimes a deterrent or getting a slap on the wrist or the whole thing keeps people in line.

If you look at this, there are severe pressures in Alberta that affect the fish population. Alberta has only about 1,500 fish-bearing streams and 1,100 lakes, as was mentioned earlier by the mover of the bill. So careful management is one of those necessary steps that has to happen with Alberta. As also indicated in some of the recent literature coming out of sustainable resources, we're also entering a bit of a tipping point where we possibly are reaching Alberta's capacity to carry both our population as well as our wildlife. We really have to manage that going forward, recognizing that there's only so much land for us to live on and that that's for us and our animals and our fish and all the populations of Alberta.

This is a much-needed step. Probably we'll need to have it monitored whether these penalties are doing a good job in keeping people away from overfishing and destroying our fish stock.

Let's also look at some other factors that are contributing to the declining fish stocks. Besides overfishing, there are other factors that can contribute to fish mortality. For instance, runoff from septic tanks and overfertilization can lead to what is referred to as summer kill. Basically, this is where contamination causes algae blooms in a lake, and where algae die, micro-organisms break down the algae in a process that requires oxygen. If enough dissolved oxygen is removed from the water, an oxygen deficit occurs, causing aquatic organisms to suffocate.

Now, that was a long definition, but nonetheless, I think it brings home a point that it's not just overfishing; it's our entire use of our industrial land mass that is causing some of the decline in fish stocks. Again, it's our recognition here in Alberta that we probably have reached a tipping point and that more stewardship is going to be needed to protect both fish and wildlife from, I guess, man's incursion into their typical regions.

Damaging land-use practices can also cause destruction of habitat, such as altering shorelines and creating sand beaches, and that can reduce the amount and quality of fish spawning and rearing habitat. Again, this has been due to the rapid development in Alberta. This, too, will need to be managed going forward. We see some of that happening in the land-use management, which I note does have some timelines and, hopefully, some teeth to it when it does fully get implemented. It could really serve Albertans well.

Without going too much further into this, I can say that I am pleased to speak in favour of this bill. It goes a long way to trying to keep our rivers, streams, and definitely our fish . . .

Ms Blakeman: Healthy and strong.

Mr. Hehr: Healthy and strong, yes. There we go.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With that, I would adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I'd move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:53 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Welcome.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all my colleagues a wonderful group of students, their parents, and a teacher from the Morrin school, which is situated in the west side of my constituency, just north of Drumheller, a proud, proud community. Over the years I have been able to attend some graduations there, and it's an amazing school and some amazing students. They're very proud of their school, proud of their heritage. They have a sod house, actually, in the town of Morrin that celebrates the pioneer spirit from the area. There are 22 grade six students who are led by their teacher today, Mr. Harvey Saltys, and their parents – there's one grandparent in this list, and I defy you to pick her out – Kandice Adams, Kendra Kiemele, Melanie Nelson, Lisa Wolf, Jolynn Kopjar, Leanne Framingham, Jo'Ann Telford, and Tami Lawrence. I invite you and all members of the Assembly to greet these people as they rise.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, you have two introductions to do?

Ms Blakeman: Indeed I do, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted that I have two introductions today. The first introduction I'd like to make to you and through you to all members of the Assembly are two people who are very special to one of our pages, Kelsy Edgerton. The first person is Janet Edgerton, who is one of those moms that you see driving back and forth in their minivan taking their wonderful children to many different activities. Well, I want to note that Janet is also literally a lifesaver. She has now passed the 150 mark in the number of times she has donated blood. [some applause] Thank you for that. With her is her youngest daughter, Amber. Amber is a student at Windsor Park school and is also a really good downhill racer. She should be because she has been doing it since she was four. Both Janet and Amber are seated in the Speaker's gallery, and I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second introduction is to a wonderful group of seniors, but a pretty active bunch of inquiring minds is a better way to describe this group who are joining me from Minerva studies, which is housed in the Grant MacEwan Community College in my fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. We have 13 visitors who are with the Minerva group, which is essentially a study group, and they're seated in the public gallery. I would ask them all to please rise and accept a rousing good welcome from the Alberta Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of 19 hard-working members of the Alberta Health and Wellness staff, who are here as part of a public service orientation tour. I don't think that we get the opportunity often enough to thank those who work for us on a daily basis. I would ask members if they would please welcome our 19 guests in the members' gallery today. I'd ask them to stand.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past year staff from Housing and Urban Affairs have worked very hard to administer our homeless and affordable housing programs, and they've made a real difference in the lives of some of our most vulnerable people. I can tell you that they've done a fantastic job, and I'm just very proud of what they've accomplished. This is the first anniversary of our Premier's creation of the Housing and Urban Affairs department. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly Marcia Nelson, deputy minister; Mike Leathwood, assistant deputy minister; Line Porfon, executive director of policy and urban affairs; and Faye Rault, executive director of corporate services. Barb Korol is here as well, our director of communications. I would ask that you please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very proud to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly some very special Albertans: two Albertans with disabilities and their service dogs, trainers, and a dog in training. Someone once said that dogs are not our whole life, but they can make our lives whole, and I'm sure that the people in the gallery that I'm introducing to you today would agree with that statement. The Alberta government is continually trying to improve the lives of the most vulnerable Albertans, and the new Service Dogs Act is just one of the ways that we are doing this. I would like to introduce to you Larry Pempeit and his dog, Charly; Greg Carrier and his dog, Chase; John Wheelwright, executive director for Dogs with Wings; Elisa Irlam, director of training at Dogs with Wings; and Everest, a service dog in training. Our guests are in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise or give a wave and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly nine University of Calgary students and their instructor. They're on a field trip to the Legislature today as part of their political science course in electoral behaviour. Their names are Shadi Abuid, Danon Danesh, Leah Fawcett, Tierney Fitzgerald, Dustin Franks, Daniel Greig, Kathryn Kitchen, Nicolas Krause, and Tessa LaBastide. They're here with a good friend of mine and their instructor, Keith Archer. Dr. Archer and I worked together for 20 years at the University of Calgary. Somehow he ended up teaching at the Banff school, and I ended up in Edmonton. Please rise and receive this Assembly's traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a unique group of individuals who are visiting the Legislature today. The Palliser Triangle management group is made up of young farmers who meet regularly to share ideas and discuss things that impact all of them. Discussions regarding marketing, new varieties, commodities, and best practices are routinely brought up. They're on a three-day tour of this area, and this morning in particular they toured the Leduc incubator. Following that they came to this Legislature Building to meet with individuals from the department of agriculture. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise and stay standing as I call their names: Gerard Oosterhuis, John Van Tryp, John Hopkins, George Poole, Ard Oldenzijl, David Geldreich, Koos Wysbeek, and Cory Nelson. I would ask the Assembly to greet them with the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today as part of Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie I have the privilege of introducing to you and through you to this House a group of leaders of Alberta francophone multicultural groups. Alberta's Francophonie has grown significantly in the past 10 years, and although French-speaking Albertans share one common language, they represent more than 30 different cultures. Francophones contribute to our province's ability to be welcoming and inclusive communities through francophone settlement and integration agencies, youth centres, and a variety of integration projects aimed at raising awareness and fostering greater intercultural dialogue.

I would like to ask our guests to stand as I introduce them: members of the French-Canadian association of Alberta's strategic committee on immigration, including Mr. Gérard Bissonnette, president; Mrs. Marie Rose Bukuba; and Mrs. Ida Kamariza. Accompanying them are Mr. Lundja Okuka, director of the francophone multicultural association of Alberta; Mr. Georges Bahaya, director of Edmonton's francophone settlement agency; and Mr. Luketa M'Pindou, co-ordinator with the society of French-speaking immigrant youth and families. I would ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have guests that I would like to introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of the Legislative Assembly this afternoon. These guests have come to visit the Assembly this afternoon to observe the proceedings and express their concern about the Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act. These individuals are Bill Pelech, Mary Pelech, Irene Stein, David Doull, Darrell Clarkson, May Opstad, Albert Opstad, Louis Adria, Ruth Maria Adria, Pauline Bizuk, John Bizuk, and Terry Hufnagel. They're all in the public gallery, and I would now ask them to please rise and receive the warm, traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Statement by the Speaker

Eighth Anniversary of Elected Members

The Speaker: Hon. members, eight years ago today, on March 12, 2001, a provincial election was held in the province of Alberta. At that time 11 members who are currently members today were elected to this Assembly for the first time. Would you join me in congratulating the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake and our Minister of Transportation, the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul and our Minister of Municipal Affairs, the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster and the President of the Treasury Board, the hon. Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace and our Minister of Employment and Immigration, the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert and our Minister of Advanced Education and Technology, the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky and our Minister of Energy, the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, who also serves as the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, and the distinguished members for Calgary-Bow, Edmonton-Castle Downs, Whitecourt-St. Anne, and Edmonton-Riverview. Happy anniversary; it's eight years. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview has been around the circuit twice.

Members' Statements

Vancouver 2010 Paralympic Winter Games

Mr. Allred: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to recognize that today represents the one-year countdown to the Vancouver 2010 Paralympic Winter Games. Next year from March 12 to 21 approximately 1,350 of the world's best Paralympic winter athletes from 40 countries will compete in five events.

We all know about the stories of Olympic heroes like Alberta's Beckie Scott, and we often refer to athletes like Wayne Gretzky and Tiger Woods as people we look up to. I would like to add a few more names to the list of athletes we admire, Paralympic athletes with inspiring stories of courage, hope, and accomplishment, people like Edmonton's Matt Cook, a sledge hockey player who lost both legs to cancer and had surgery to remove a cancerous spot in his lungs, or 60-year-old Bruno Yizek from Cardston, a paraplegic who is one of the top wheelchair curlers in the country, and Calgary's Brian McKeever, a world-ranked blind cross-country skier who is seeking to compete in both the Paralympic and the Olympic Winter Games. These athletes are among the eight Albertans seeking to represent Canada at the Vancouver 2010 Paralympic Winter Games.

Mr. Speaker, I commend these athletes and others for their quest to be Paralympians and for showing Albertans the possibility of achieving one's goal in any situation. I ask the members of this Assembly to join me in saluting all of our Alberta-based Paralympic athletes, who train so hard to achieve their dreams and to make us proud.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Legislation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Seniors from across the province have expressed their concerns regarding the Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act. The intent of the act is to ensure that seniors can enjoy their golden years, for which they've worked so hard.

Recently, a group of seniors met at the Old Timers' Cabin to discuss the act and reveal serious flaws in it. They claim that section 103, for example, gives courts the ability to compel seniors to undergo capacity assessment, whether they agree to such an assessment or not. This is an assault on the human dignity of seniors. I hope that when I'm 70 or 80 years old and I tell a government psychologist to get off my lawn because I don't feel like being analyzed, he or she will respect that demand. This act could rob seniors of that fundamental right.

Under the act seniors can be assessed in their absence. Imagine the idea of a stranger determining whether or not you're competent to take care of yourself without any kind of assessment at all, determining your fate at a distance without your consent.

They also revealed that any interested person can apply for the guardianship of any senior. Imagine a disenchanted relative taking guardianship in bad faith. Imagine the consequences for the senior. Why should the state have the power to place one citizen at the mercy of another without proper checks and balances? Perhaps worst of all, there is no ironclad guarantee of right to counsel.

This act must be re-examined by this House. There are seniors who can no longer take care of themselves, and we do need a process that puts legal guardians in place for those newly dependent adults. As the legislation stands, the potential exists to strip away the human rights of seniors who retain or regain their mental capacity.

I urge this government to please reconsider this legislation in order to return dignity and human rights to the men and women who have spent their lives building the province. They deserve no less.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Doug Spurgeon

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For some Friday the 13th is a day of caution, reluctance, anxiety, and sometimes fear. However, in my constituency of Lesser Slave Lake this Friday the 13th is a day of excitement, celebration, and tribute because one of our local heroes, a radio show host, is celebrating four years since his arrival in High Prairie at The Fox radio station. That's Doug Spurgeon.

Radio hosts have always come and gone in most areas; in our town, gone usually in a short time, three months, six months, never staying longer. Not our Doug. In fact, rumour has it that he wants to stay in High Prairie forever, and we want him to stay. We want him to stay not only because he has one of the greatest and sexiest voices on air, but he spends his personal time volunteering with the RCMP, Métis settlements, various towns, First Nations, and nonprofit organizations. In fact, last year when he found out that the food bank was in trouble, he and his good friend Brian Holmberg brought in 6,000 pounds of food and $8,000 in cash in four days. They worked day and night. There was no sleep for dear old Doug.

This sweet, sweet man takes every opportunity he can to showcase and promote the people and organizations that form the fabric of the High Prairie region. As you can see, Doug recognizes the importance of community involvement and takes his position with The Fox as an opportunity, an opportunity to connect all people of the High Prairie region to each other as they build on strengthening the foundation of our communities.

Doug, as our friend, thank you for all the work that you have done in our communities. We want you to stay longer and to continue to make a difference in our world.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Today, March 12, is the anniversary of his arrival in this world, so join me in congratulating the hon. MLA for Stony Plain, the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. Happy birthday.

Congratulations, too, to two of our members who were also elected in 2001 but haven't gone that eight years yet: the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview and the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner. Congratulations to both of you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Disclosure of Information on Environmental Charges

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier's office is clearly involved in information suppression concerning the 90 charges laid against Suncor. The Public Affairs Bureau, which reports to the Premier, chose to enforce a policy to not inform the public at the time that these charges were laid, thereby avoiding an election campaign controversy and leaving the public uninformed. My questions are to the Premier. Will the Premier accept responsibility for the actions of the staff and admit the obvious, that there was political meddling in the public's right to know?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Environment will answer this question.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I just had a discussion with the media outside. As I indicated to them yesterday, I was under the impression that there was, in fact, a process for advising the public and the media any time charges were laid as a result of an investigation. I subsequently found out that there is a long-standing policy in Alberta Environment, that was put there by a minister previous to me, that is to the contrary, that disclosure does not come until after the court case has been decided. I also just advised the media that I made a decision yesterday afternoon and have advised my staff to the same, that that policy shall be revised immediately, and in the future there will be disclosure and transparency.

Ms Blakeman: Well, Mr. Speaker, when the Public Affairs Bureau wants the public to know something, it tells the world. Witness the hoopla over the charges that were laid over the 500 ducks. But when the government wants to keep it a secret, its lips are sealed, even from its own MLAs. Again to the Premier: who in the Premier's office enforced that policy to not let people know what was happening in their own community? Who was responsible for burying this issue?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as the minister explained, nobody was responsible for holding back any information. There was a policy in place. In fact, quite frankly, when the issue with Syncrude came up, we probably broke the policy that the Department of Environment had. I wasn't aware of the policy, and the minister wasn't aware, but now in keeping with openness and transparency, we'll change the policy. When any issues like that come up, they'll be made public as soon as we can, as soon as possible.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Going back to the Premier again: given that the Crown has to be pretty certain of its success before it is encouraged to lay any kind of charges, why would the government choose a policy to not disclose, to hide information in other words, especially information that was available around an election campaign? Why would you choose a policy to not disclose on water contamination until the conclusion of a court case? That runs contrary to why you send a Crown prosecutor out there.

Mr. Stelmach: The member is going in circles. Actually, they keep going to the election and saying that this was for some reason suppressed. Documents are public. Any time there is a charge laid, those documents are public.

The fact is that during a campaign there is a firewall between the government and the people operating the government during that period of time, and that's the way to do it. They followed the policy that was in Environment. You know, this is I don't know how many days now that the opposition is pointing to factors other than their very own issue of not being able to win the trust and confidence of Albertans, and that's why they're in the position they're in. They lost a whole bunch of members, both of those parties, because they didn't gain the trust and confidence.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Environmental Monitoring and Self-reporting

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, Albertans expect a government to be open and transparent, and Albertans expect answers, especially in cases of water contamination. Albertans are not getting that here in this Assembly, and the public's right to vital information about their water has been violated. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. People living downstream from the oil sands have been subjected to oil and grease spills, to tailings ponds leaks, and inadequately treated sewage. Can the minister explain how any of these fit into his oft-repeated mantra: "That's okay; this is a naturally occurring process"?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the incident that led to this question is the matter of a case before the courts, so I cannot talk about the details specific to this.

Let me be very, very clear to this member and to all members of this House. There are two separate issues that need to be dealt with. One is to advise and be sure that anyone possibly influenced by downstream is informed when an incident takes place. Whether or not charges are laid subsequent to that is something entirely different. And they were informed when the incident took place.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Well, to the same minister. Yesterday the minister stated that water contamination near Calling Lake was not groundwater but, rather, surface contamination, but his department's own press release states: high levels of chlorine in the groundwater as a result of the contamination. So which is it, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, this instance has to do with contamination within an industrial site. There are wells that have been ordered as part of the compliance order to determine whether there is any need for further containment and also to delineate where the contamination took place. The fact is that this is leaching from the surface. We have concern that it could perhaps get into the groundwater, but at this point there's nothing to indicate that anything has left the property itself.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah, right, because water doesn't flow anywhere.

Back to the same minister: given that the government's wholehearted support of industry self-reporting is clearly resulting in significant delays in the public getting information on spills, leaks, and releases in their water sources, will the minister move immediately to a system of government monitoring and enforcement?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, it would be nice if there were sufficient resources and people to have a policeman on every corner. We don't have that luxury, and in some cases, frankly, I'm not so sure that it would be a better world if we did. The fact of the matter is that we rely upon individuals being honest in order to maintain society. You gave the example the other day that we rely on individuals to be honest on their tax returns. We audit them from time to time, and when we find that they're not, we come down very hard on them. When we find that people are not reporting appropriately, we come down very hard on them as well.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Effects of Economic Downturn

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we talk about the economic downturn in here, we talk a lot about dollars and percentages and statistics and projections, but the downturn is really about people and how their government plans to help them get through what RBC is forecasting will be the sharpest contraction of all the provincial economies this year. To the Premier: within the context of the dollars he has to work with – I'm not asking for additional funding; I'm asking for some reallocation – what is the Premier prepared to do to protect our seniors, many of whom have seen a good chunk of their retirement savings evaporate?

Mr. Stelmach: The member raises a good point, and that is that many of our seniors that have been retired for a while or just recently retired within a few months or maybe just looking at retirement this year have seen a good portion of their investments diminish considerably, whether they be RSPs or other investments. As mentioned in this House before, our budget will be working to reflect the most vulnerable in terms of programs and do what we can to support those that have seen a considerable reduction in their investments over the last number of months.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, given that you have to anticipate that students will have a harder time finding well-paying jobs this summer and that knowledge is the key to our long-term prosperity, what is the Premier prepared to do about the cost of postsecondary education so our students don't have to go deep into debt to get one?

Mr. Stelmach: As I said, part of our plan is to support both secondary and postsecondary education. There will be details in the budget coming forward on April 7 which will deal with all of these matters.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that some of the first people to lose their jobs are the lower skilled working poor, who were some of the last people hired during the boom, what is the Premier prepared to do to help them cope? Or is it back to shelters and food banks for them?

2:00

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, this is the conundrum that the member is going to have. When you have a limited amount of revenue, you try to look at all of the needs within the province and decide which part is the most vulnerable, requires the most help. I'm sure that as the budget is delivered on April 7, he will be able to participate in that debate and impart some of his wisdom on where some of these dollars should go.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Auditor General Office Funding

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Auditor General needs a mere $2 million to carry out planned audits that could save taxpayers many millions more. Just last October he identified $25 million in oil and gas royalties that were not collected. This $2 million that he needs is the best investment government can make, and by denying the Auditor General proper funding, the Premier is creating a false economy. My question is to the Premier. Why won't you make the smart choice and give the Auditor General the $2 million additional that he needs to do his job?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the office of the Auditor General is, obviously, an office of the Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Assembly receives a budget. The committee that's been put together, of course, through a motion of this House will make the decisions on how the money that is coming to the Legislative Assembly will be divvied up amongst the many legislative offices.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, it's evident to anyone who watches closely that a government policy with respect to budget guidelines for these offices is being implemented. The Auditor General will be unable to complete his audit plan. In his 2003 report he identified up to $4 million given to contractors who didn't provide the services they promised to people with disabilities. My question is to the Premier. Since giving the Auditor General the $2 million he needs to complete his full audit program could save taxpayers many more millions, why doesn't the government . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, on March 4 as part of supplementary supply the office received an additional $750,000, so there was an increase in the budget. It's incorrect to say that he has not received any additional in-year revenue going to his department. That's incorrect on behalf of that member.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I didn't say that. He needs $2 million more than the government is prepared to give him. The following audits will be deferred or cancelled: water quality, food safety, infection control, child care, persons with developmental disabilities, and 22 others. How can this Premier claim to be a smart spender when he sanctions the waste of millions of tax dollars by refusing to properly fund the Auditor General?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, according to Leg. Offices the Auditor General has the money in place to do the audits that had been specified but, you know, a $750,000 increase mid-year. I believe this House decided to support the third party. We are supporting them in office budget based on a membership of four. There are only two. I don't know how much money that is. I thought it was around $350,000. I may be wrong. Maybe he wants to take that money out of his budget and give it to the Auditor General.

Speaker's Ruling

Questions about a Legislative Committee

The Speaker: Hon. members, this is question period. This has to do with government policy, and I as the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta need to make a clarification for anybody out there who may be listening. This Assembly creates a number of all-party committees called legislative committees. There is such a committee called Legislative Offices. It's chaired by a member of this Assembly. It has representation from all parties in this Assembly. That committee determines the budget of all the legislative officers, which includes the Auditor General, the Chief Electoral Officer, the Ethics Commissioner, the right-to-privacy commissioner, and the Ombudsman.

Should it come to pass that the government is influencing any member of that committee as to what they have to do, then that would offer that particular member an opportunity to stand in this Assembly and raise a very distinguished and serious point about interference. To my knowledge this has never happened since I have been the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, and I as the chair of the Members' Services Committee know this has certainly never happened to the chairman of that committee.

To suggest that it's the government that's setting the budgets for the Legislative Offices Committee begets the importance of the Legislative Assembly and denigrates the Legislative Assembly. As the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta I cannot allow that to happen. So I want everybody to be very, very cautious about this line of questioning, which leads to nothing but innuendo. Innuendo is not what we're about; truth is what we're about.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect . . .

The Speaker: No. There's no point of order or anything else. The Speaker made a statement.

The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Service Dogs

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are for the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. I was very happy to see the proclamation of the Service Dogs Act January 1 of this year. It's, I think, a great example of proactive steps that our government has been taking to help Albertans with service dogs. I actually have a number of constituents who had been waiting for this legislation. Now, of course, they're looking for more information. I'm wondering if the minister might just describe some of the benefits that this act provides to Albertans with service dogs.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta government is committed to assisting Albertans with disabilities. The Service Dogs Act ensures that Albertans with disabilities who use a qualified service dog are guaranteed access to all places open to the public. This includes buses, taxis, restaurants, and even the Alberta Legislature. These are the same rights awarded to individuals with visual impairments who use guide dogs.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the same minister. There are always, of course, detailed questions that come up. For example, in my constituency I have a constituent who has a service dog, but it's not certified. I'm getting some questions: how do we know when a dog is properly trained for the safety of the person who needs it? On the other hand, how do we know when there's no issue of public safety? Are there minimum standards, and what's the process for certification?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, there is a comprehensive training process to certify service dogs, which takes approximately six months. During this time they're trained daily and receive between 120 and 360 hours of training from an accredited school. For service dogs that have not been formally trained by an assistance dogs internationally accredited school, the province is establishing a pilot project to assess and determine if service dogs trained by other schools or their owners can be certified. With the training and pilot project as well as an application process for service dog owners to obtain ID cards . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, time is short. This is a good act, which has lots of good elements to it, so in the interest of just educating our members and members of the public, I'd like to offer the minister the opportunity to just expand a little bit on what benefits this provides.

Mrs. Jablonski: With the training and pilot project as well as an application process for service dog owners to obtain ID cards, Albertans can be assured that these dogs are properly trained to both assist their owners and not pose a risk to the public.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to point out that these service dogs are especially trained to assist individuals with disabilities in everyday activities. For example, Charly is here with Larry, two guests that I introduced earlier today. Charly helps Larry by picking things up for him and retrieving things. Greg is here with his dog, Chase. Chase helps Greg by giving him balance and stability. So this is a great act.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Long-term Care for Rural Seniors

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister of health dodged my questions regarding the future of long-term care for seniors in rural Alberta. The minister says: wait for the budget. However, hundreds of seniors are at home or in acute-care beds waiting to get into long-term care placement. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: again, what commitment is the minister willing to make to rural seniors so that when they need long-term care, they will not be moved from their family and community?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there hasn't been any dodge in anything. I've been very clear in this House that what we need to do is a better job of ensuring that our senior patients have the kind and quality of care that best meets their needs. I think that in the budget we will be bringing forward you will see some initiatives so that, hopefully, we can provide care and not necessarily just provide facilities that we have to have seniors move out of their community to reside in.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The goal of the continuing care strategy is to "encourage non-profit and private investment in the development and operation of long-term care facilities." Will the minister include a provision so that a percentage of those encouraged facilities will be in rural Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: One of the options that we're looking at, Mr. Speaker, is working with the nonprofit and private sectors to say: how can we together have the facilities, whether they're long-term care, whether they're assisted living, daily assisted living, or designated assisted living, where it meets the need? I would suggest that there's really no differentiation between rural, urban, Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge. We need to have the facilities where the need is.

Ms Pastoor: Well, Mr. Minister, there really is a huge need in the rural area.

My next question would be to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Helping seniors, especially rural seniors, stay in their communities is an integral part of the continuing care strategy. In the 2007-2008 annual report rural affordable supportive living was unspent by $3.7 million. Could the minister explain why?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I certainly agree with the member across the way that having assisted living facilities in our rural areas is very important, and we are trying to focus on that. All the money has been appointed. There have been delays in construction, and this is because of delays in receiving permits. The availability of construction personnel delayed the start of construction on some of the projects. It's necessary to understand that at the beginning of a project we only give out half of the money, and we don't give the rest of the money until halfway through and at the end of the project.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Foster Care

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There has been much discussion recently in this House and in the media about the supports and services that the government provides to foster parents and foster children. Foster parents are a critical part of any successful foster care system because they care for some of our most vulnerable children and youth. I was privileged to recently attend the Crossroads Family Services celebration, where many foster parents from my constituency and other areas were recognized for many years of dedicated fostering. I believe it is critical that we support these dedicated men and women.

The Speaker: I'd sure like to know what the question is.

Mr. Rogers: I'm getting to that, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Well, you're running out of time.

Mr. Rogers: Okay. My question is to the minister of children's services. Can the minister advise the House what types of supports are provided to foster parents in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can tell you it's a priority of ours to give foster parents the appropriate supports, and while provinces report differently, I understand that we do rank among one of the highest in Canada. Our financial reports can be found on our website. They vary depending on the age of the child, skill level of the parent. I think the average is just over $1,400 per month per child as well as some recreation and vacation allowances. In addition, we know that every child and every foster family is unique and that they have different needs and different resources and capacities. We also have available assistance with child care costs, equipment, in-home assistance, mentorship, and training.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I understand that level 1 foster parents can have up to two children in their home, level 2 foster parents can care for up to four, and that in the first year new foster parents can only care for no more than two. Can the minister explain how often and under what circumstances there could be more than four children in a foster home?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today we have around 2,300 foster homes in Alberta, and our average is two foster children per home. Of the 2,300 foster homes about 120 of them are licensed to have more than four children. In order to be licensed, certain criteria have to be met. Obviously, there has to be a desire on behalf of the parents to want additional children. As well, we have minimum standards in terms of skills and training and capacity. They have to have an appropriate home environment and proper supports in place. I can say that larger home placements work really well in a number of situations, including accommodating siblings.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: Madam Minister, what kind of success are you seeing with your ongoing foster parent and aboriginal caregiver recruitment program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we're seeing great success. Since the launch of the recruitment campaign in October we have approved 234 foster homes and kinship care homes. I think a lot of this success has been due to some really innovative approaches taken by staff in our communities as well as others, like the Member for Calgary-Montrose, who just this past weekend hosted an information session in Calgary with over a hundred attendees, which is wonderful. We're going to continue with this campaign. We all know that the more foster parents we have, the better able we'll be able to match children.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Postsecondary Education Affordability

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Postsecondary students in Alberta pay the fourth-highest tuition fees in the country despite a promise by this government four years ago that Alberta's tuition would be the most affordable. At the University of Calgary tuition will be increasing by another 4 per cent this year. To the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology: having failed to keep the promise to Alberta's postsecondary students, what does the minister have to say to those students who have to take on additional work, reduce their course load, drop out, or who can't afford to attend in the first place?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, we have one of the most beneficial student finance and student assistance programs in the country. I think the member has obviously been chatting with the CAUS students who were making the rounds of MLA offices this week, and I encourage them to do so. In fact, I met with them earlier this week. We had a very open and frank discussion about the world economy and what was happening with some reports generated out of eastern Canada touting a possible 25 per cent increase in tuition. I gave them the commitment that our policy of capping tuition at CPI was not changing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The best investment we could possibly make, whether in a recession or during a boom, is in postsecondary education. One of the biggest costs for students is housing. With low vacancy rates and high rents many students cannot afford accommodation. The very limited residences at Alberta's universities and colleges are full, forcing 90 per cent of students to look for accommodation elsewhere. When will the minister be building new resident spaces which will provide students with affordable and safe places to live?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm curious whether the hon. member has been away the past few weeks because in the city which he represents, they've recently announced some 600 new spaces by the University of Calgary. We are the backstop for those residences. The government of Alberta does actually backstop the borrowing for those residences.

The other thing, Mr. Speaker, is that I agree with the hon. member. Investment in postsecondary is the best investment that either the government or the student can make.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The new residences of which the minister speaks will not increase the ability to house only 7.4 per cent of University of Calgary students on campus. Eastern campuses on average are able to accommodate 21 per cent of their students. We can do better; we have to. For many students who rely on student loans to finance their studies, the expected parental contribution reduces their ability to access support. This is magnified in this economic downturn, with many families not able to afford the expense. When will the minister make changes to the student loan system to reduce the requirements for parental contributions, making it easier for students to access student loans?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, again, I'm curious about where the hon. member has been. We actually dealt with this question in this House a couple of days ago, and I would encourage the hon. member to review Hansard for his answer regarding parental contributions. I would also like to advise the hon. member, if he wasn't aware – and I recognize he's not the critic for the department – that the student finance system is a national system: 60 per cent federal government, 40 per cent provincial government. In order for us to make drastic changes – granted, Alberta has stepped out on its own in a number of areas, but it is a national system – we'd have to have federal government support.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Changes to Building and Fire Codes

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Edmonton's devastating MacEwan fire in 2007 highlighted the importance of fire safety. In 2008 this government committed to take action to help protect Albertans from high-intensity fires. Today it was announced that the province is updating its building and fire safety codes. Can the Minister of Municipal Affairs please explain what the new building codes changes are and when they are coming into effect?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The updated building codes will make Albertans safer from fire. Also, the building codes come into effect on May 3 of this year. They are going to include fire-resistant requirements for buildings that are built close to each other or close to property lines. Also, there will be new sprinkler systems for multifamily units and fire-resistant requirements for homes with attached garages.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Xiao: Yes. My second question is for the same minister. Exactly how will these updated codes reduce the occurrence and severity of these fires?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, these changes buy time for people to get out of their home and also for firefighters to respond. These new codes prevent the spread of fire. I want to say that when you prevent the spread of fire, it gives, as I said before, time for firefighters to be able to come to the fire scenes and be able to respond to smaller fires.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Xiao: Yeah. My final question to the same minister: although these changes are important, they will certainly impact Albertans by adding to the cost of building a new home. Can the minister please explain who was consulted before these new codes were introduced?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, what we did was an extensive study with stakeholders. The stakeholders did include, of course, the fire departments, the fire chiefs, also the builders in the province. We also included the Safety Codes Council. We included municipalities. This was a gathering of all the interest groups for the building of residences and because the high-intensity fire is a concern to all residents. It is critical that we bring that direction forward, as we have.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Labour Protection for Paid Farm Workers

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question will be to the minister of agriculture. This government continues to ignore calls to include paid farm workers under the province's labour laws. Almost three years ago we asked the then minister of human resources to take action. He said that he was, quote, working closely with the minister of agriculture on the issue. Today we still see consultation and still no action. To the minister of agriculture: why has this government stalled this process for so long?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Of course, if the hon. member had been listening for the last three days this week – the Premier talked about it, and I talked about it – the Employment and Immigration ministry and myself have been coming up with a plan that we're working on. But we have to involve the agriculture industry. We're not going to move ahead without doing that. That's going to take some time. Let me be very clear: I've never gotten a request from the agriculture industry to do that.

Dr. Taft: You know, Mr. Speaker, that's exactly the kind of answer we've been getting for years. People are dying. People are getting seriously injured. We know the stalling to protect paid farm workers is not because of financial constraints, that it's not because of a lack of resources, and it's surely not because of a lack of calls for action on the issue, so we're left to assume that it's because this government is protecting someone's interests though certainly not those of farm workers. To the minister: just who is opposed to stronger safety standards for farm workers?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not protecting anyone at all and the big secrecy of the whole thing. I would like the member to sit down with me and look at the last – he's talking about the farm. I think he brought up a figure of 220 the other day. I'd love to sit down with the hon. member, go through them, and have him show me where legislation would prevent these accidents. He just has to stop looking at the headlines, and he has to start getting to the facts.

Dr. Taft: It's shocking. You look at B.C. You look at Saskatchewan. You look at every other province that has legislative standards, and they have better safety records than this province. I cannot believe this minister.

A Provincial Court judge recently recommended in a public fatality report that "paid employees on farms should be covered [under] Occupational Health and Safety . . . with the same exemption for family members and other non-paid workers that apply to non-farm employers." A judge of Alberta is saying that in a fatality inquiry. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: when will he be introducing legislation to amend the act as recommended and at last – at last – protect the health and safety of paid farm workers?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development indicated that we are working together to look at the input from the agricultural community. The member opposite alluded to the fact that the judge made some recommendations, but evidence at that particular inquiry found that this particular fatality in question would not have been prevented by regulations. So we need to balance all of these as we move forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Meat Packer Owned Cattle

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Family farms who sell livestock are at the mercy of the big packers. If the packers want to pay less for cows from the family farm, they can just drive the price down by flooding the market with their own supply because this government lets packers keep captive stock. The question is to the minister of agriculture. Why won't you stand up for Alberta's family farms and implement a ban on packer-owned cattle?

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, I find that a little tough to take, that I don't stand up for family farms. The hon. member would like to check the statistics of the slaughter capacity in western Canada and find how many people are involved. Then he wants me to go after those people, perhaps try and take them out of business if I possibly can, and we would be down to one slaughter plant. What if that slaughter plant goes on strike? Think about it, hon. member. Just think about it before you just spout off what you hear out in the hinterland.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I wonder if the minister can guess who said this: "When meatpackers own livestock they can manipulate prices and discriminate against independent farmers." The answer is that it's a direct quote from U.S. President Barack Obama, who wants a ban on packer-owned cattle. This government will not do it because they support the monopoly of Cargill and XL Foods and not the family farm. To the minister of agriculture: once again, why won't you protect the family farm and ban packer-owned cattle?

Mr. Groeneveld: Mr. Speaker, this is something that was brought up south of the border a few years ago and many times. Some of the states have tried to pass this type of legislation. If the hon. member would think very shallowly, he would find how easily that could be circumvented – how easily that could be circumvented – and it was.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Food safety, quality, and the food supply would all be better off if the livestock market was more competitive, not to mention the price of beef in grocery stores. This government has given two Alberta companies a stranglehold on the entire Canadian beef market. They put nearly 3,400 family farms out of business between 2001 and 2006. To the minister: why don't you support a competitive market that will benefit both farmers and consumers and put a stop to packer manipulation of prices?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to see the statistics that show that the packers put 3,400 farmers out of business. If he would share that material with me that has some basis, I'd gladly look at it. I would refute that. It's pretty easy to pick numbers out of the air, but I've watched this gentleman before, and he's excellent at it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Agricultural Research and Development

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the last several months several of my constituents have voiced their concerns over the need for agricultural research into improved varieties of grains and increased oilseed yields. Last year this government made a decision to discontinue malt barley variety testing and, instead, focused on feed barley varieties. I fully understand the quality component of Canadian grains for the export markets, but we've fallen behind with varieties of many grains and oilseeds where we should be trying, instead, to increase quality and production. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Will your department support our agricultural farm industry by providing tools for more research and development?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Absolutely we will do that. Agriculture and Rural Development is involved in many projects as a funder and research provider. We certainly will continue to support research and development. Some of the examples I might like to bring up are the barley genetic improvement and variety development research that we're doing at the Field Crop Development Centre and development of the new crop-based foods and beverages at the Food Processing Development Centre in Leduc. Some of the people were there today.

Thank you.

Mr. Mitzel: To the same minister, Mr. Speaker. I know Alberta agriculture continues to test pulses and grains and oilseeds in many areas of the province. Given that every area of the province is better suited to specific types of crops, will the minister inform this House how he plans to use these results gained to assist our agricultural producers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, Agriculture and Rural Development's role is to co-ordinate the regional variety testing program, or RVT, as we like to call it. Our support ensures that research continues without any interruptions. It's so important to keep that research going on a continuing basis. The results of the regional variety testing are made available to producers through a number of channels, including hub offices that we have out there. They certainly are on our website as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: how, then, does your department plan to continue to support future research and development in such areas as dryland beans, for example, to help ensure sustainability through better diversity opportunities for our farming industry?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, it certainly is a good question because research money becomes harder and harder to find as we move along. But we'll continue partnering with other groups that are out there to ensure that the research continues and that the results are accessible to our producers. We're also working with the U of A and the minister of advanced education and the Alberta Research Council on developing water use efficient and drought-tolerant crops and ways to improve nitrogen efficiency in barley, all potential impacts that could move our fertilizers along and keep these projects on a valuable footing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Freedom of Information Fees

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A former manager of the freedom of information and protection of privacy unit of Alberta Infrastructure has stated that it was the general policy of the former Minister of Infrastructure that there would be no FOIP fee waivers. To the Minister of Service Alberta, responsible for the FOIP Act: why are ministers of this government allowed to set policies that block legislative rights of Albertans to have FOIP fees waived? Why was there political interference in the public's access to information?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the freedom of information act it's a very important act to protect Albertans' information. It's there to balance the right to information and the right to protection of information. With respect to the fees, there are fees charged for that, but the act is there for a very important reason, and we ministers all abide by that act.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know you don't abide by the act. I have documents showing this, which I will be tabling today. Thank you.

To the Minister of Infrastructure: why did the ministry have a policy to block fee waiver requests? Why was the minister making it financially impossible for Albertans to use the FOIP Act?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, I have no idea what the member is referring to in this instance. If he'd like to send me a copy of what he's referring to, I'd be glad to look into it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be tabling the document showing that.

To the Minister of Service Alberta: which other ministries have policies to block FOIP fee waivers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to fee waivers, if individuals apply and want some information, there are many situations where we will waive the fees for access to information. There are definite fees in place for that. But, as I stated before, if an individual has a particular situation where we have to waive the fees – we look at every situation and take everything into account.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The recently announced updated building codes will help slow the spread of fire among new homes, but I understand that many fires happen during the construction phase of the home. My questions are all for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Can the minister please explain what measures have been taken to protect Albertans from fires that start on construction sites?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Individuals in the construction industry will have to do things just a little bit differently, but that will help make a lot of individuals a lot safer. Those construction companies will have to ensure that vulnerable properties next to their sites are safe, to ensure access for emergency personnel. Also, the hot materials that are used on roofs: some of the regulations around there need to be changed.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say one thing. These updated . . .

The Speaker: Well, I'm sure you do, but we do have a time policy. The hon. member.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Investigations have indicated that the high-intensity residential fire that started on the MacEwan Green construction site was caused by arson. Can the Minister of Municipal Affairs please explain how the updated fire code will enhance security on construction sites?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, the new code will have tougher security, and it will protect work sites better. Safety is the responsibility of everyone. I encourage Albertans to visit our website to learn more about fire safety and what our regulations are bringing forward.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, my final question: can the minister please explain how the public will be educated about these same code changes?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, I do want to say that these code changes are two years ahead of the national safety council code. We are going to use radio and print ads to inform the construction industry on the role they play – I believe that education is the key to keeping Albertans safe – and, as I said before, our website, Mr. Speaker. Safety is paramount for this government, and we are very committed to Albertans' safety.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Grizzly Bear Management

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like the Rhinestone Cowboy, Glen Campbell himself, my office has been receiving cards and letters from people I don't even know regarding the grizzly bear and particularly its fate. To the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development: are you going to extend the moratorium on the spring hunt of the grizzly bear, or will you allow this animal to be hunted for sport?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the Rhinestone Cowboy I won't comment, but with respect to the grizzly bear, as I have explained numerous times to this Assembly, we're completing the final phase of the DNA study. We'll wait for those results before we make any final decision. We did extend the suspension of the hunt for another year. This is an important decision. We'll take our time and make it when we have all the information.

Mr. Hehr: The government's own scientists indicate that grizzly numbers are far below what is considered minimum for a healthy population. Can the minister tell us whose evidence he relies on: the scientists' or that of sport hunters reporting bear sightings? Which does the ministry consider more accurate?

Dr. Morton: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the Rhinestone Cowboy is referring to a very interesting report that was put together by the Willmore Wilderness Foundation. These aren't just a bunch of yahoos. They're outfitters, backcountry people that spend a lot of time in the woods, and they reported a variety of sightings, 350 different sightings. They've put it both into a great film, which I'd recommend—I even appear in that film—but also a database. We're going to compare that database with the DNA database. We've got them working together, and we're going to get good results.

Mr. Hehr: There is no disputing that grizzly numbers in Alberta are low, well under 500, yet there is still no plan in place despite the recommendation of the government's own scientists. When will this minister put in place the recovery plan recommended by its own grizzly bear team?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, that's simply not accurate at all. We spent the entire last year doing a fairly detailed mapping of both primary and secondary grizzly bear habitat. We have the BearSmart program and a variety of programs, and the grizzly bear habitat will fit into the regional plans under the land-use framework. Things are moving ahead on plan, as they should be.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Statistics from other provinces related to farm death have been presented to this House. However, I understand that the way Alberta collects its data is very different from other provinces. My first question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Is it accurate to compare stats from other provinces like B.C., Saskatchewan, Manitoba to ours?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've heard innuendoes from the other side of the House about this before. The short answer is no, it's not possible. The numbers that have been presented are WCB statistics. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and B.C. WCB collects data on paid workers only. Alberta data includes paid workers and everyone else: paid, unpaid workers, deaths that result from activities not work related. It's impossible to accurately compare jurisdictions and irresponsible to suggest that you can.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, my next questions are both to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. I've been hearing a lot about our farmers being left unprotected in the workplace. At one time I was self-employed, and I was able to voluntarily buy compensation coverage. I understand that all self-employed people in Alberta have that opportunity. To the minister: is this true for our farmers and ag producers? Can they buy coverage?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, any business may apply for voluntary workers' compensation for both owners and workers. This coverage provides income replacement and any necessary medical and rehabilitation services for injured workers. This no-fault insurance coverage is the only kind that offers protection from lawsuits for employers, workers, and other parties covered by the Workers' Compensation Board.

Mr. VanderBurg: To the same minister. Again, when I was self-employed, I paid a rate of so many dollars per thousand of my payroll that I took myself. What would the coverage be for my agricultural producers, Mr. Minister?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Individual rates would depend on the type of operation and the producer's safety performance. The average premium rate for agricultural producers in 2009 is $3.31 per $100 of insurable earnings at present.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 96 questions and responses today. In a few seconds from now we'll call upon the first of three other members to participate in Members' Statements.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Alberta Emergency Management Agency

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today and talk about the exceptional work of the Alberta Emergency Management Agency. Earlier this week my colleagues and I were fortunate to participate in a tour of the government's agency response readiness centre, or ARRC, and the emergency operations centre, the GEOC, located in west Edmonton. We saw the inner workings of how the government's emergency system works to keep us safe and secure.

Through the ARRC, staff are there 24 hours a day, seven days a week, ready to respond. When an emergency occurs, be it a flood, a fire, a chemical spill, or a severe storm, the ARRC staff are there to collect and share critical and timely information with emergency agencies, police, municipalities, MLAs, and Members of Parliament. The ARRC serves as the single point of contact providing everyone with the information they need to co-ordinate the emergency response. If the emergency escalates, the GEOC is activated. GEOC provides a critical service by co-ordinating a government-wide response to the incident when municipalities or industry require assistance.

During the tour I was impressed with the expertise and dedication of agency staff in providing support to Albertans in municipalities during a crisis. The importance of timely and decisive response to potential emergency situations cannot be overstated, early and effective intervention to mitigate potential disaster situations. By working in partnership with other provincial departments and local emergency response teams, we are truly creating a government-wide response to emergencies. Thanks to the agency's focus our province is seen as a leader in emergency response management across the country.

I want to acknowledge the staff of the agency and the proactive decisions of several years ago that resulted in the establishment of the agency to mitigate potential disaster situations for Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Long-term Care

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today there is a crisis in our province's hospitals. Emergency rooms are overcrowded, sometimes dangerously so. With no long-term care beds available over a thousand patients wait in hallways, supply closets, and expensive acute care beds. Worse, seniors are being moved from long-term care beds to private supportive living facilities that they cannot afford and are inappropriate for their needs. This government promised to invest $300 million to create 600 new long-term care beds to help these patients, and this government broke that promise.

Not only are few spaces available, but our Auditor General has found that their staff are underpaid and overworked. As a result vulnerable seniors have again and again been left unfed, untoileted, and unbathed because there are simply too few health care workers to handle everyone. Front-line personnel report that because of the short-staffing they fear for the safety of residents. Hiring and training staff in this critical sector would raise standards to an acceptable level and create good jobs in a time of rising unemployment.

The government charges its critics in this issue with wanting to institutionalize people. This is false. We want sufficient long-term care beds available but only for those who require them. This government has so far failed to provide these. Mr. Speaker, unless this government lives up to its commitment to our seniors, long-term care facilities will still be bursting at the seams while hospital emergency rooms remain packed and in crisis. Meanwhile, our seniors wait on long lists for basic health services they need while this government continues along its path of broken promises.

Once again everyday Albertans are raising their voices and waiting for the government to solve the problem, but the government is not listening.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Foster Care

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past Saturday I was pleased to host a foster parents information session at the Monterey Park Community Association. This event was very well attended by families interested in becoming foster parents, members of the cultural media, and community leaders from a multitude of different backgrounds, including the Chinese, Vietnamese, Filipino, Somali, Pakistani, Lebanese, and Indian communities.

My desire to raise awareness about the foster parent program is simple and stretches back many years. I want to help recruit foster parents, and I want to raise awareness about the program amongst different ethnic communities in an effort to help add diversity to our foster parent system. Being separated from parents can be a difficult process for all children. For a young child three or four years old from a cultural background, who has only been exposed to one type of food, one culture, one language, this process can pose additional challenges. My hope is that through my efforts we can help add diversity in our foster parent system and make a difficult situation just a little bit better for young children.

I would like to thank everybody involved, including the Calgary and area child and family services and the Alberta Foster Parents Association for their involvement. Mr. Speaker, I will continue to encourage Albertans from all corners of the province and all different backgrounds to consider becoming foster parents and ask all members to do the same.

Thank you.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm here today to table not a Twitter or Facebook page but, rather, a petition regarding the recognition of marriage and family therapists under the Health Professions Act. The petition reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to urge the Government to introduce amendments to the Health Professions Act that would recognize marriage and family therapists as a regulated profession under that Act.

Mr. Speaker, there are 31 signatures, and they are primarily from Calgary but also from southwestern Alberta.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Relating to my earlier questions, I would like to table five copies of statements given to the RCMP by Frances Cruden, former manager of FOIP.

The Speaker: I think, hon. member, we're into petitions right now. We'll come back to you a little later.

Mr. Kang: Oh, sorry.

The Speaker: Not a problem.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) to advise the House that on Monday, March 16, the government will accept written questions 4 and 15. Additional written questions shall stand and retain their places on the Order Paper.

I'd also like to give notice that on Monday, March 16, 2009, Motion for a Return 16 will be dealt with that day, and additional motions for returns will stand and retain their places.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Bill Pr. 1

Beverly Anne Cormier Adoption Termination Act

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill Pr. 1, the Beverly Anne Cormier Adoption Termination Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 1 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder I request leave to introduce Bill Pr. 2, the Caritas Health Group Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 2 read a first time]

Bill Pr. 3

Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce Bill Pr. 3, Les Filles de la Sagesse Act Repeal Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 3 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm tabling the requisite number of copies of a schedule proposed for the 2009 main estimates. Pursuant to Standing Order 59.01(2) the schedule is to be prepared by the Government House Leader in consultation with the opposition. With your leave I'd just like to advise that while we haven't got full agreement on everything, we have had consultation.

We've attempted to make sure and, I think, made sure — there's extra information on the schedule to show that we've met with the request from opposition relative to making sure that, first of all, estimates are scheduled in committee rooms A and B. There had been an indication that estimates for larger departments might be scheduled on the floor of the House in the committee, but opposition requests were that we have them in adjacent rooms for ease of members moving back and forth, so all committees are scheduled for committee rooms A and B. We've also made sure that opposition critics are not scheduled for two committees at the same time, which obviously makes sense.

I would note that under Standing Order 59.01(2)(d) the estimates for Executive Council will be heard in Committee of Supply in the Assembly Chamber on April 15 and that pursuant to Standing Order 59.03 the votes on the estimates are scheduled for May 7.

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, in addition to tabling that document, will you be circulating one for all members this afternoon as well?

Mr. Hancock: We'll arrange to have that done.

The Speaker: Okay. Thank you.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on tablings?

Dr. Taft: Tablings, yes. First of all, I want to begin this comment just in response to what we just heard. The opposition takes great, great concern with the schedule that's being tabled right now.

I do rise on behalf of two of my colleagues with two other tablings. On behalf of the Member for Calgary-McCall this is a document that was referred to in the question raised by the Member for Calgary-McCall. It's five copies of a statement given to the RCMP by a former manager of a FOIP unit at Alberta Infrastructure. It says, "The general policy from the Minister Ty Lund's office was that there would be no fee waivers." That's what the member was referring to in his concerns about political meddling in FOIP.

My second tabling is on behalf of the Member for Lethbridge-East. It is the continuing care strategy put out by the Alberta government. There are five copies here. It's the document that she referred to in her question.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We don't mention members' names in the House.

Dr. Taft: I was quoting from a document.

The Speaker: Well, you can quote the document all you want, but we still don't mention names.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a document from Statistics Canada dealing with the family farm in Alberta. The document indicates that between the 2001 and the 2006 census of agriculture the total number of family farms declined from 48,590 to 45,195, a drop of 3,395 farms, or 7 per cent of the total in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise under Standing Order 7(6) requesting, please, from the Government House Leader the projected government business for the week commencing Monday, the 16th of March.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just in general it's our anticipation that on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week the primary orders of business will be the appropriation acts, Bill 21 and Bill 22, and the bill that I would refer to as the TILMA Act, Bill 18.

On Tuesday, March 17, under Government Bills and Orders in Committee of the Whole Bill 18, Bill 21, and Bill 22, as I just referenced, and for third reading Bill 18; second reading of Bill 7, Public Health Amendment Act; Bill 12, Surface Rights Amendment Act; Bill 13, Justice of the Peace Amendment Act; Bill 16, Peace Officer Amendment Act; Bill 17, Securities Amendment Act; Bill 19, Land Assembly Project Area Act; and Bill 20, Civil Enforcement Amendment Act. Other than Bill 7, which we anticipate being debated, those others for second reading are primarily to move them at second reading.

On Wednesday, March 18, in the afternoon under Government Bills and Orders for third reading bills 18, 21, and 22; second reading of Bill 24, the Animal Health Amendment Act; Bill 25, Teachers' Pension Plans Amendment Act; and Bill 26, Wildlife Amendment Act. In Committee of the Whole Bill 1, Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act; Bill 2, Lobbyists Amendment Act; Bill 3, Credit Union Amendment Act; Bill 5, Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act; Bill 8, Feeder Associations Guarantee Act; and Bill 15, Dunvegan Hydro Development Act.

On Thursday, March 19, under Government Bills and Orders for second reading bills 17, 19, 20, 24, 25, and 26, as previously referenced; in Committee of the Whole bills 7, 8, 12, 13, and 15, as previously referenced; for third reading bills 1, 2, 3, and 5, as previously referenced; and as per the Order Paper.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Second Reading

Bill 21

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to move second reading of Bill 21, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009.

On March 2 the government of Alberta tabled supplementary supply estimates for just over $128 million for three departments and the office of the Auditor General. The estimates, when approved by the Legislature, will provide spending authority to departments only in order to deal with the issues arising from that fiscal year. They are consistent with the third-quarter fiscal update, which updates the 2008-09 fiscal plan for all government entities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. I think, Mr. Speaker, that it's very important to repeat on the record our concerns about a budgeting process that needs at this point now two supplementary supply bills, this one running, as the President of the Treasury Board said, well over $120 million.

We spent some time on this in earlier debate, so I don't need to prolong this, but I need to register as a member of this Assembly my very, very deep concerns about the budgeting processes of a government that seems unable to stay within its budget. We have seen over the years huge budget overruns, and there are as a result much more serious constraints on a capacity to deal with this foreseeable downturn in the economy.

There has been a singling out of the Auditor General's expenditures in the comments from the President of the Treasury Board, and I think it's worth noting that those expenditures are not going to allow the Auditor General to proceed with the audits that could very easily end up saving the taxpayer a lot of money. I think there's a real risk in that particular decision that we are being penny-wise and pound-foolish.

I am increasingly uneasy, as I now enter my eighth year as an MLA, with a budget process that every single year is hundreds of millions and sometimes billions of dollars off the target on the spending side. I wanted to drive that home. I'm sure the President of the Treasury Board is paying close attention. I'm sure he's not thrilled with going over budget, but I sure as heck wish that this government would get its budgeting process in order so that we don't have so many supplementary supply bills.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. Certainly, I listened to the comments from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview. When we look at the supplementary supply here and we quickly go through it, we see Agriculture and Rural Development, we see Employment and Immigration, we see the modest amount for Transportation, and we see a three-quarters of a million dollar allocation for the office of the Auditor General.

I think of this supplementary supply, Mr. Speaker, and I go back to what was discussed in question period this afternoon regarding the Auditor General and the budget. I believe it was the question from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, in that order. It's not Norwood-Highlands; it's Highlands-Norwood. Correct? When we look at the past budgets of the Auditor General, we see where in any given year the Auditor General has been very prudent in his budgeting. In fact, in the last number of years there has been a significant amount returned to the legislative office, the LAO, in some cases up to $400,000 and in some cases I believe – and I could stand corrected – $500,000. So the office of the Auditor General is a very prudent office.

I sit on the Legislative Offices Committee, and I had no idea that we would be asking for this appropriation. Maybe I wasn't paying attention, but I certainly was paying attention when government members of that committee suggested that they had instructions, in this case from the President of the Treasury Board, to limit and restrict further increases to the Auditor General.

Now, I heard the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood speak at Public Accounts yesterday regarding an additional sum of $2 million that will be needed for the Auditor to ably carry on his necessary work. So when I look at the three-quarters of a million dollar amount, it's alarming to me in the first place that the Auditor would have to ask us for this money, but it's obvious that it's going to happen.

Mr. Speaker, we all recognize in this Assembly the good work that the Auditor needs to do. I know the government initiated this CIA. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview can correct me, but I believe CIA in this case stands for the chief internal auditor or perhaps the committee of internal auditing. It's not affectionately called on this side of the House the CIA.

There is an internal audit function that was expanded about four or five years ago, and perhaps the hon. Deputy Premier can refresh all members of the House if my information is inaccurate on this. There was an expansion of this CIA function, and how the committee of internal auditors works remained a bit of a mystery. I at one point had been referred by a cabinet minister, if I had any questions, to seek out this committee and see what auditing they had done or had not done. I don't have the confidence in that internal audit function that I have in the office of the Auditor General. I have a great deal of confidence in the office of the Auditor General.

As I said before, this amount that we are looking at here will certainly be used wisely to ensure that we are receiving value for the taxpayers' dollars in the delivery of programs. It would also identify waste. What the Auditor is going to do with that money, I don't know, but I do know what is on the Auditor's wish list that needs to be done and cannot be done. These are deferred or cancelled projects. I was startled as Public Accounts chair to receive this information that had been requested by the committee, which as we know is an all-party committee, and the committee voted. I believe it was unanimous. I'm not sure, but the committee did vote to receive this information from the Auditor.

We can just go through the departments alphabetically. We can start with advanced education. A follow-up audit on Mount Royal has been deferred to October of this year. Postsecondary institute facility capacity and utilization project: the Auditor had something in mind there. That was cancelled. Postsecondary institute program planning: that audit has been cancelled. As was discussed in question period earlier today, in Agriculture and Rural Development a food safety follow-up has been deferred to October 2009. I can't believe that that would occur with the issues that we have around food safety. Children and Youth Services: financial support for children with disabilities system. This project has been deferred until 2010. Monitoring daycare and day home services: this is a knowledge of business audit project, and it has been deferred and no date given.

Culture and Community Spirit, Horse Racing Alberta: deferred and – I was talking about this earlier – the report date to be announced later. The $50 million that we grant to the horse racing industry: I fully expect that the President of the Treasury Board is finally going to put his foot down and say that enough is enough. I will be very surprised if that's a line item in the budget on April 7. In fact, I'm willing to bet that it won't be. Those days are gone. I think the Premier sort of suggested that yesterday.

Education: improving school performance. That was to be a knowledge of business audit project. That has been deferred, no date given. Employment and Immigration: in here we are looking for an additional $50 million. We discussed that at second reading on this bill. We had quite a discussion on that. The homeless eviction prevention fund: because of a shortage of resources that audit project is being deferred to October 2009. I believe, from the Minister of Employment and Immigration – and industry has been removed from that department. I'm not going to go there, Mr. Speaker.

The homeless eviction prevention fund: we're going to have a look at that. Of course, workplace health and safety. We've seen a recent report in the newspapers where 166 workers in this province, unfortunately, as a result of their jobs lost their lives in the last year, but the Auditor doesn't have money to have a look at that program. Now, speaking of money, in the Energy department: ensuring the collection of royalties. This has been deferred, and it's to be at a later date. I know the hon. President of the Treasury Board is worried about the resource royalty stream that we're going to have. I can't imagine why we would not allow the Auditor to have a very good look and a follow-up to his excellent work that he did in the fall of 2007.

In Environment there are some issues around water quality. Executive Council: again the Public Affairs Bureau comes up. That doesn't surprise me. With Executive Council the Public Affairs Bureau always seem to be coming up, and this is in regard to some contracts with Highwood Communications. Finance and Enterprise, measuring the effectiveness of the fiscal regime: this is a knowledge of business audit project, and it's deferred until 2011, Mr. Speaker, 2011. I can't believe it.

Health and Wellness is a department that gets more money all the time, doesn't know how to handle it. In fact, we're $1.3 billion additional dollars in the red in that department this year. Now, in Health and Wellness the Auditor doesn't have the resources to deal with academic medicine governance and accountability, and the follow-up is not going to occur again until this time next year. Food safety, a very important issue. Infection control: I talked about that a little earlier in debate.

Seniors and Community Supports, persons with developmental disabilities persons in care: this knowledge of business audit has been cancelled. I think we should have a look at this.

I would urge all hon. members to consider the resources that we're providing to the office of the Auditor General, and I would say that we should change our minds because if there's any money left, and I'm confident with the office of the Auditor General that there will be from the additional allocation that is desired, it'll be returned to the taxpayers through the LAO.

Service Alberta: the network security review is deferred. Now, we know what the Auditor had to say about some of the security systems that we have or that could work better. This is a key recommendation from the Auditor on Service Alberta. The Auditor points out:

We recommend that the Ministry of Service Alberta consider providing internal control assurance to its client ministries on its centralized processing of transactions." How are taxpayers to have confidence in the department if something as necessary and as basic as network security reviews are not being done?

The Auditor also has other projects, interestingly enough, Mr. Speaker, going on in Service Alberta that I'm glad to see are being done: protecting information assets, the registry agencies, Service Alberta contract management, Service Alberta performance measurement systems, and TILMA implementation and compliance.

Dr. Taft: TILMA. Now, does that cover farm workers?

Mr. MacDonald: TILMA I don't think would cover farm workers. Certainly, if the minister of agriculture and food and the Minister of Employment and Immigration can't get together, maybe there will be some good come out of TILMA. It could be a regulatory method to make farm workers in this province have the same level playing field as far as workplace health and safety and labour laws as they do in B.C. and in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. But we're only talking about B.C. here, Mr. Speaker; I realize that. Saskatchewan and Manitoba are a little bit cautious and nervous about TILMA, and I think they have every right to be nervous.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I don't want the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood to be distracting me in my discussion and my participation in this debate, but certainly whenever we look at these supplementary estimates and we look at where the money is to be provided, it's a modest amount when you compare this request to previous supplementary estimates. It certainly is a modest amount when you review the list that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview talked about earlier. It certainly is, however, a concern that this government never can stick to a budget that it introduced.

When you look at past budgets – and I know that the President of the Treasury Board wasn't involved in this. I'm confident that if the hon. minister had been involved, this wouldn't have happened. It's only two or three years ago when . . .

The Speaker: I'm sorry, hon. member, but the time has now elapsed. Standing Order 29(2)(a), however, is available. The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member in his opening statements and through his whole thing spoke to a bunch of the audits that were not done, and he spoke to them under the assumption that these weren't done because of the lack of money. The hon. member might want to comment on whether the Auditor General perhaps decided that he didn't want to do them at this time or that there weren't enough other contractors, other auditors and other consulting firms, available to be able to do these. Also, as the hon. member knows and might have put on the record, the Auditor General returned $408,000. If he really wanted to do any of those, perhaps a few of these audits that he mentioned – he went through the whole list of, I think, 23 out of the 80. Perhaps some of these audits could've been handled with this $408,000.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much. I appreciate those questions. Certainly, the hon. member is right that the Auditor General returned I think it was $403,000 in the last budget that I had information from. In previous years he has returned equal amounts, if not greater. That's what I said earlier in my comments, that the office of the Auditor General is very prudent and wise and manages money very well.

I would also like to point out to the hon. member that with the change in economic conditions, regardless of whether it's a construction worker or an auditor, there are a lot more of both available now. I'm not putting words in the office of the Auditor General on the floor of this House, but from what I understand from the discourse we've had with the Auditor General, it's much easier now to hire and retain outside audit staff for the office. There are certainly peaks in the auditing season, which the Auditor General has explained to us very well, and these resources are available. But it was clear in Public Accounts yesterday that an additional $2 million is needed for this vital work.

Now, the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, of course, is the chair of the Legislative Offices Committee, and he was present when other hon. members – one from Rocky Mountain House, one from Calgary-Montrose – clearly discussed on the record that there was a government direction from the hon. member regarding the budget of the Auditor General and what was to be expected. I believe it was a 3 per cent increase. That's all on the record, Mr. Speaker. It's for every member to review.

Certainly, when we look at the good work and the work that can be done by the Auditor, I would just like to again put on the record that the $750,000 that has been requested here is different than the amount – and maybe the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood can also clarify this. Yesterday in order to fulfill this work, we needed an additional $2 million. None of this money, if it was to be provided to the office of the Auditor General, would be wasted.

We have a large government budget here. In fact, Mr. Speaker and hon. member, since I was elected – I didn't know this, 12 years ago, and thank you for informing me of that, Mr. Speaker; the years go by really fast – the provincial budget has expanded from $14 billion to over $40 billion. Now, that's a lot of cash. That is a lot of cash. This is a Conservative government who acts like a New Democratic government on steroids. The budget is just going up and up and up, you know. [interjections] I'm sorry.

Mr. Speaker, we look at all the money that this government is spending, and we have to make sure that we're getting value for that money and the programs and policies that that money is financing . . .

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, the Q and A session is finished. You're participating on the debate?

Mr. Hancock: Yes. I'd like to move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 22

Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to move second reading of Bill 22, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009.

On March 2, 2009, the interim supply estimates were tabled in the Legislative Assembly. These estimates are to provide funding authorization until the new budget is approved. I would, Mr. Speaker, like to apologize if I miss some comments. I have an ear infection, and I have a very difficult time hearing. Although I do have to admit that with that certain malaise that I'm suffering, it does make some of the speeches far more presentable.

The Speaker: We've moved the bill, have we?

Mr. Snelgrove: I did, yes.

The Speaker: Others?

Dr. Taft: Well, I'm sorry if the President of the Treasury Board won't hear every single word that we say over here.

Again, my main comments on this particular bill, interim supply, are about process, Mr. Speaker. There was a commitment from this government under the current Premier to try to move the budget cycle earlier. I thought that that was a great idea. It's something I had supported for a long time. I think we have to be very clear, and I want all government members to understand this because what their process is doing is causing real problems for other organizations.

The fiscal year begins April 1. All kinds of organizations depend on provincial funding for them to make plans for their fiscal year.

Some organizations have fiscal years that begin in September, like many school boards. Regardless, all of those organizations depending on provincial funding have to plan. If they, as many of them do, begin their fiscal year April 1 and they do not know how much provincial funding they're going to get, they cannot properly plan. So we are building inefficiency and difficulty into our public financing system because of this process.

I was very pleased when the Premier announced – I think it was two years ago – that one of his priorities was to move the provincial budget process earlier in the year. It's an easy way to make the public sector across the board in Alberta more efficient. It's just basic good sense. Unfortunately, we have not achieved that. In fact, we haven't even come close.

I would like to have seen a budget brought in, you know, by no later than the middle of February, and if possible, even earlier. I know that the world is in uncertain times economically, but that hasn't stopped other governments in other jurisdictions from bringing forward budgets, and I don't know why it should have slowed this government down. As a result, instead of voting on a full budget, we're voting on interim supply. We are being asked as members of this Assembly to approve a very substantial sum, many billions of dollars here in spending, more or less on trust. We don't know how this fits into a larger agenda. We don't know what goals are hoped to be achieved because of this. This is sort of asking us to just give a blank cheque for many, many billions of numbers to the government. I am uneasy, I am unhappy about that.

I think this government could do better. I look at the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, for example, who at one time chaired a regional health authority. I don't want to speak for him, but I can well imagine that setting the budgets for that regional health authority would have been easier if the regional health authority had known before they were well into their fiscal year what the provincial funding would actually be. Maybe that's one of the reasons that they're still waiting for hospital renovations in Medicine Hat after some two decades or more. I don't know. In any case, this is an easy way to make the public sector more efficient. I don't know why this government can't get its act together on this.

I'm not happy about having to debate this bill. I look forward to maybe next year not having an interim supply bill because by this point we'll have actually dealt with a budget. In the meantime we're stuck with this bill. I don't like it, and I've explained why.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's always interesting when members want to debate interim supply by saying that we'd really like to debate the budget. The budget is coming. They will have the opportunity to debate it.

The interesting piece in it, of course, is that in almost every year you will have interim supply if you have a lengthy budget debate as we provide for in this Assembly. We now provide, for this year, I think it's 75 hours of debate in committee on the estimates. That's up from many hours of debate. I think last year it was 60, and previous to that it was shorter. So certainly an improved budget debate, lots of opportunity to look at the numbers.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I move that we adjourn debate.

The Speaker: Well, I will certainly move to the adjourn debate thing, but we have this interesting little quirk called Standing Order 29(2)(a). On the previous bill the hon. Government House Leader got up and simply adjourned the debate. In this one he proceeded to be involved in debate, so we have now five minutes of questions and responses if anybody would like to direct a question to the hon. Government House Leader. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Well, thank you. I think the Government House Leader missed the point. My point was that the date for bringing the budget to this Assembly should be moved up ideally into January, in my mind, certainly no later than the middle of February.

As to his comments concerning the hours of debate, I think it's important to get on the record that, in fact, the process for budget debate that we're looking at this year in my view is reprehensible. It pulls the rug out of what little bit was left of accountability over this budget. The opposition is looking at a situation where we will have a responsibility for debating upwards of 30 bills, maybe by then 40 bills, in addition to handling two government department budget debates in the evening. We begin the very day after the budget is tabled, so there's no time to prepare. If you compare the 75 hours that's allocated for budget debate in Alberta to what's allocated in many other provinces, it amounts to next to nothing.

So I want it to be on the record, and the Government House Leader is welcome to reply, that as an opposition we think the proposed budget process is a complete and utter failure and a betrayal – a betrayal – of good public accountability.

The Speaker: Additional questions or comments, or shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 18 Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Deputy Premier and Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Mr. Stevens: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I thought that I would start out with a bit of overview, then introduce some amendments, and then provide some answers with respect to points that were raised in second reading. So that's going to be generally where I will be going with this.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister, are you moving an amendment?

Mr. Stevens: I will be.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Thank you.

Mr. Stevens: I was doing one of those, you know, speech tricks, where you tell people what you're going to tell them and then you tell them and then you tell them what you told them. I'm still in the telling them what I'm going to tell them, in a very introductory way, phase. So with your permission, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to move into that.

Mr. Chairman, I'm very pleased that we're just a few weeks away from fully implementing Canada's most comprehensive interprovincial trade agreement. As I'm sure most members in this House now know, by April 1 more than a hundred regulated occupations will have full labour mobility between Alberta and British Columbia. All skilled tradespersons such as plumbers or welders or highly trained professionals like teachers or nurses certified in Alberta or B.C. will be able to move between provinces and keep working without having to go through extensive recertification or retraining.

Businesses will have one set of requirements for registering and reporting in Alberta or B.C. or in both. Alberta and B.C. companies will have increased opportunities to bid on government contracts in both provinces, particularly in engineering, architecture, and related services, which will be in greater demand as infrastructure construction projects get under way. Unnecessary differences between regulations in the two provinces will be eliminated. This means that Alberta businesses face less red tape and can be more efficient and productive.

Full implementation of TILMA comes at an important time for Alberta and British Columbia. As all provinces in Canada work to combat the effects of the global recession, TILMA will improve our competitiveness both domestically and abroad. Investors, businesses, and workers will look to Alberta and B.C. because we have reduced government red tape. In short, TILMA will do great things for Alberta.

Now, Mr. Chairman, Bill 18 amends existing statutes and ensures that provincial legislation and the TILMA align. As I've indicated previously, Bill 18 really is a nuts-and-bolts, technical piece of legislation. In total 11 acts will be amended. Indeed, we're going to provide some additional amendments at this time to this otherwise technical legislation, which is the way these things sometimes go.

Mr. Chairman, at this point in time if the amendments could be handed out. I'll make my comments with respect to the amendments after everybody has them before them. In the interim, with your permission, I'll just carry on and answer some questions that were raised in second.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Fine.

Mr. Stevens: Okay. While the amendments are being handed out, I'll address some of the points that have been raised. I actually addressed some of those in second reading in my closing remarks, so these really are supplementary to those answers I provided at that time.

One or more of the hon. members raised concerns over the misconception that there was no debate over the TILMA. The fact of the matter is that every step toward reaching the TILMA has been made public in one way or another. There were website postings, news releases, consultations with affected groups. In fact, Mr. Chairman, there was consultation with over 200 representatives from the MASH sector.

Mr. Chairman, I'd like to also note that we issued a press release out of my ministry last year – I believe it was on June 25 – where we dealt with the municipalities. In that we clearly indicated that the AUMA president on behalf of his organization, the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association, was satisfied that municipal concerns that his association raised on behalf of its members had been addressed through the negotiation process regarding the MASH provisions. Indeed, in that very same press release the president of the AAMD and C on behalf of his organization also indicated that the consultation process on TILMA gave them the opportunity to bring the concerns of the membership of that organization forward and that, as a result, revisions arising out of that collaborative process would better meet the needs of local government. They were very pleased with the consultation process.

In essence, Mr. Chairman, the TILMA process has been transparent. It has been open. While the agreement itself is not the subject of debate in this Assembly, for the reasons I stated the other day, the process itself has been open and transparent. Many people that wanted to be involved have been involved. We did very much the same thing with previous bills 38 and 1, that relate to the TILMA, and now Bill 18.

Another concern yesterday, Mr. Chairman, was raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity. The hon. member wondered if the TILMA could somehow be used to circumvent Calgary's wage policies. The answer to that is no. A B.C. company that's looking to operate in Alberta still must follow Alberta laws just as Alberta companies must follow B.C. laws. The simple example I'd like to use is speed limits. The B.C. speed limit is 90 kilometres on the highways. In Alberta it's 100. If an Albertan who is in B.C. on business is caught speeding, they will not be able to say that B.C.'s lower speed limit is an impediment to trade or investment and use the TILMA as a defence, and vice versa should that arise.

Mr. Chairman, during the debate it was suggested that the TILMA will lower labour standards. The answer to that is: not true. In fact, both Alberta and B.C. have specifically committed to promoting high labour standards. We've worked together with more than 60 regulatory bodies that represent the hundred professional and skilled trade occupations covered under the TILMA. These regulatory bodies are directly involved in these negotiations, which is why we are very confident that high standards will continue. In most cases we are finding that mutual recognition is the option most regulatory bodies are going with.

I believe that everybody now has the amendments, so I'll just deal with that at this time, Mr. Chairman. I would like to move these four proposed amendments for the consideration of the Assembly. They will make Bill 18 a better bill.

The first one is to the Legal Profession Act. The proposed amendment is to allow this specific portion of Bill 18 to be proclaimed at an appropriate time. This flexibility will provide the necessary time for the Law Society to update its own rules as well as its professional oath of office. The Law Society is unable to make these changes until the next convocation of its benchers, or in other words, the next meeting of its benchers, which will occur in mid-April.

The second and third amendments apply to the Business Corporations Act, Cooperatives Act, and Partnership Act. In principle this amendment is required to ensure there is full authority for Alberta to make the regulatory changes necessary to implement an integrated system of seamless corporate registration for businesses in Alberta and B.C. Currently the act permits regulation regarding collecting information and documents from corporations, co-operatives, and partnerships. The amendment would allow regulations to be developed that would cover documents provided by the other registry. We also need to improve the wording of these acts to set regulations that are consistent with the requirements of an integrated business registration system in Alberta and British Columbia. The wording in our existing acts was never originally developed with these requirements in mind.

The last proposed amendment is intended to modify the definition of "extra-provincial limited liability partnership" contained in the Partnership Act.

Those, Mr. Chairman, are my comments with respect to the amendments. I'll just go back to answer some of the points raised by hon. members during the debate in second reading.

It is important to point out that all provinces have followed Alberta's and B.C.'s lead, agreeing to full labour mobility under the AIT. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in her remarks indicated that she was a bit concerned we would give loans "to people, farms, businesses outside of the province." I can tell you this: the only way access to money will be had is if your shovel is in the ground in Alberta. Your business address may be in B.C., but the work you do must be in Alberta.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona also reraised a common misconception that TILMA will negatively affect the public interest, especially in municipalities. Mr. Chairman, I can tell you that the TILMA does not affect a municipality's ability to make laws such as zoning bylaws, height restrictions, signage rules, and land-use decisions that they believe are in the best interests of their citizens. It also does not interfere with social housing programs or assisting the less fortunate. I referred to the press release of June 2008 earlier in my remarks, where the representatives of the two municipal umbrella organizations here in Alberta clearly indicated that they were satisfied with the consultation process and that their concerns had been addressed.

TILMA preserves each government's right to establish regulations relating to public policy objectives such as public safety and security, environmental and consumer protection, and protection of the health, safety, and well-being of workers, such as workplace safety standards.

Mr. Chairman, after our extensive consultation with the MASH sector we reached agreement on new procurement thresholds under the TILMA. The thresholds are now $75,000 for goods and services and $200,000 for construction. Under the AIT, agreement on internal trade, thresholds were $100,000 for goods and services and $250,000 for construction projects.

Mr. Chairman, finally, I'd like to refer to the changes to the Government Organization Act. I made remarks to this effect also in my comments in second reading. I want to clearly outline how this change will work and why we need it. Changing the Government Organization Act will empower the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations to temporarily amend noncompliant legislation. Temporary means for only a maximum of three years. Ideally, we would be able to bring legislation forward much sooner than that. Examples of when we would need this anticipatory ability might occur when prompt change is required to implement a TILMA panel ruling or for Alberta to avoid a challenge from B.C. under the TILMA when the Legislature is not in session. Mr. Chairman, I must point out that there is precedence for this to the Government Organization Act and that it is not inconsistent with past parliamentary practices. There are, for example, similar provisions in the Municipal Government Act and the Animal Health Act. Let's be clear about this: we will continue to make changes under the existing legislative process. This change to the Government Organization Act is anticipatory and will only be used as a last resort.

Mr. Chairman, those are some comments I have with respect to the bill generally, the points that were raised by the hon. members in earlier debate on this matter, and with respect to the amendments I'm putting forward for consideration. TILMA will in fact create Canada's second-largest market, of almost 8 million people, and a combined GDP of more than $400 billion. It will eliminate duplicate and overlapping government red tape between the provinces, making the flow of goods, services, and people much easier. In the end TILMA is designed to help Albertans. With that, I would ask for the hon. members to give favourable consideration to the amendments and Bill 18, ultimately, as amended.

At this time, Mr. Chairman, I would ask that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Chair: Shall progress on Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be reported when the committee rises? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee rise and report progress on Bill 18.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 18. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders

Bill 12

Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is committed to listening to Albertans and making legislation more effective. With that commitment in mind, it is my pleasure to rise today to move second reading of Bill 12, the Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, these changes address administration and dispute resolution processes to improve the efficiency of the Surface Rights Board and make it more responsive, flexible, and cost-effective. The Surface Rights Board is a quasi-judicial board. It currently conducts hearings when operators and landowners or occupants can't agree on entry or compensation related to resource activity on privately owned or occupied public land.

The Surface Rights Act has a number of outdated provisions that prevent the board from operating as responsibly as it could. The current act defines the roles of a number of the board positions. The amendments remove these restrictions and allow the board to be more responsive in how it uses its human resources. For example, the duties of a secretary can be determined by the needs of the board rather than defined by statute.

Mr. Speaker, board hearings can be lengthy and costly for both parties involved and for the board. With the amendments formal hearings will not be compulsory. Instead, the board will have the flexibility to assist parties to resolve disputes outside of a formal hearing process. Clients will have the option to use more informal and flexible forms of dispute resolution that will save time and money. These changes will pave the way to a higher level of satisfaction for all parties and make for more efficient use of board resources.

The amendment will allow for a process that responds to the needs of Albertans. Alternate dispute resolution is being used in other jurisdictions across Canada. For example, the Manitoba Surface Rights Board, the Yukon Surface Rights Board, the B.C. Mediation and Arbitration Board, and the National Energy Board use similar processes. Closer to home, alternate dispute resolution is used by the Alberta Utilities Commission, the Energy Resources Conservation Board, the Environmental Appeals Board, the Alberta Labour Relations Board, and the Métis Settlements Appeal Tribunal.

The Energy Resources Conservation Board has a variety of options available to concerned parties to manage disputes. These include direct negotiation between affected parties, ERCB staff facilitation, third-party mediation, arbitration, and an ERCB public hearing. The ERCB has been very successful with its appropriate dispute resolution program. In 2007 it had a success rate of 92 per cent using dispute resolution options that involved staff facilitation or third-party facilitation. Moving to alternative dispute resolution will bring more efficiency to the Surface Rights Board, which will in turn provide a better service to Alberta landowners and all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I emphasize that alternative dispute resolution is entirely voluntary, not mandatory. The landowner or the operator may still choose to have and hold a formal hearing. Also, the proposed amendments are entirely procedural, and they do not address other matters such as compensation. The power to issue compensation orders will be preserved. The amendments simply enable the board to use processes other than a hearing to determine compensation.

As a government we are committed to ensuring Albertans receive fair and timely processes from tribunals. These amendments will help us reach that goal for the Surface Rights Board and will bring it into line with other legislation governing tribunals in Canada. Having an efficient Surface Rights Board is extremely valuable. I ask you to support the Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 12, the Surface Rights Amendment Act, 2009. I appreciate the work that the MLA sponsor has done on this bill. He was very prompt with providing me an overview of the bill, and I really appreciated him doing that. Nevertheless, at this time I'm still somewhat hesitant to offer full support, but I'm sure that with some questions asked and talking to a few more stakeholders, this could be a bill that we could support.

As was indicated by the mover, this bill has some good intentions to it. If we look at attempting to deal with the administration procedures and to in effect streamline them in order to expeditiously resolve surface rights disputes, clearly, this is an admirable goal.

The amendments to the act are on the procedural side generally and are aimed at making the process of the board more efficient.

Again, these are very laudable goals that should no doubt be pursued in any regulatory model that we here in Alberta pursue. That being said, it needs to also ensure fairness and a chance for people to be heard and all of those good things that we consider that a regulatory body should have to ensure that procedures of natural justice are recognized.

Here's a little background. As indicated, the Surface Rights Board is a quasi-judicial board authorized under the Surface Rights Act to determine compensation related to energy activities. Parties are encouraged to use mediation as the primary way to resolve disputes that come before the Board. Unlike a formal hearing, the parties have control over the outcome and are more likely to be satisfied with mediated results than with decisions imposed by the Board.

Those, again, are tremendous goals. If we can have people solve problems for themselves, well, it's a much better way to go.

That being said, let's face it. Surface rights is often a balance of competing interests, much like this House sometimes. The landowner wants to get as much money as he can from the ratepayer, utility provider, energy company, whoever you may have, and that energy company, whoever it is, wants to pay the least amount that they can. That's just the simple nature of the way these businesses or individuals operate. The Surface Rights Board is there to try and manage these types of situations.

You know, if we look at what we're talking about here, too, it also extends primarily to the right of entry that may be granted by the board on both private and Crown land for the following activities that are happening all over our province: mining, roads connecting to mines, construction and operation and removal of pipelines, construction of tanks and other structures related to mining and the oil and gas industry, exploration on public lands, drilling or operation of a well, and enabling reclamation in limited circumstances. You see, this bill affects the way that Albertans both do business now and into the future.

Obviously, some people are not always happy when an energy company says: I want to drill on your north 40. Sometimes they don't even want the well there despite the fact that it may offer them some financial reward. Nevertheless, that's why we have the system in place, to try and deal with these tensions.

Surface rights boards are very busy places. If we look at even just last year, the Surface Rights Board had 898 scheduled hearings: 403 of those were heard, 293 settled, 193 rescheduled – so I assume that they're going to be heard sometime in the future – six withdrawn, and three adjourned. As we can see from these statistics, the caseload for the Surface Rights Board is increasing every year, and only around half the cases are actually heard. The result of this has been the drawn-out process. This causes expenses for both the drilling companies as well as the farmer or landowner, as the case may be.

Let's look at the sectional analysis. In section 2 the current change in the new act repeals sections 3(3) to (7). The section deals with the composition of the members of the board. The major change here is the substance of the new section, and this allows the chair of the SRB to select a member or a panel of members to deal with any matter or class or group of matters. It also gives the member or the panel all the powers and jurisdictions of the board in many matters.

Well, that opens up the case of: what is the panel? If you look at the way this act is now put together, a panel can be one person.

This may in certain cases, sometimes, be a good thing, but also I think it can be fraught with difficulty. There seems to be too much authority vested in one individual member, and I'm cautious about delegating all the powers of a surface rights board hearing to one member. I'm not sure if industry supports this or if landowners support this. I'd like to actually hear if that has come forward, that they feel comfortable that one person can decide these cases, generally. If that's the case, well, that's the case. Nevertheless, it gives me some cause for concern.

There's another. If we look also at section 3, what basically this does is repeal the appointment of "a secretary, an assistant secretary, inspectors, land examiners and any other employees required to carry on the business of the Board." Now, what I'm primarily worried about is, you know, the elimination of the secretary. We've all been in many board meetings. We never really think that the secretary is doing much until we get to the next board meeting, when we try to figure out what we did at the board meeting before. Then we read the secretary's notes, and it becomes clear: "Well, yeah, I guess we did do something. Now let's follow up: did we do any of these things we said we were going to do in between the meetings?" Having some record, some care and control of the documents, what decisions have been made: maybe you can just enlighten us as to how that's now going to occur as I'm sure that somehow the decisions are going to be carried forward. It's probably a very simple answer but, nonetheless, a question I ask.

Section 5. In the old act one of the things was that the board was allowed to make decisions based on both written and oral hearings instead of just written submissions. Now the change has occurred where we only go to written submissions. We all know that all individuals aren't the best at writing down concerns, but most of us can bring our concerns in a verbal fashion much more easily and clearly. It's much more forceful when we're given an opportunity to meet with an adjudicator or meet with the other side face to face and to actually have our 15 minutes in the sun or however long the board would allow. I think this has the great potential, of course, of speeding things up, but it also has a serious potential for impeding a landholder's or a company's right to be heard and right to speak up and right to present their case. To be honest, I'm more worried about the individual landowner in this case than I am about the companies. The companies will find a way to hire a wordsmith to write a very eloquent reason as to why they're right. Sometimes that may be lost if we take away the oral arguments section.

Those are my primary concerns with the bill. Like I said, we are reserving our judgment right there. We'll see what some of these answers to the questions are. There are some things in here that are good, that seem like they're going to streamline the process.

Here's one more thing I'd like to mention on the record here before I close. It's section 12. It amends certain parts of section 28 on the termination of the right of entry. This section allows an owner to apply for the termination of right of entry if the operator has not commenced operations within two months. If we look at this amendment, the only problem that could be inferred is that if the board decided not to grant the termination order, there is no mandatory hearing for the owner of the land to present their arguments. This could potentially have the impact of depriving a landowner of their right to a hearing. You can see that in section 12 if you could take a look at that. Maybe that's another concern that we have.

Other than that, we're waiting to hear from a couple more stakeholders, like I said. This is a very important bill as it relates to compensation for landowners who have resource activity on their land. Any changes to it must carefully consider and must achieve the best balance possible between the rights of the owners of the land and the rights of the operators and the owners of the minerals or otherwise on the land. There's no doubt that streamlining this process, if it can be done to expedite matters but still allow individuals to be heard, would be appreciated. Like I said, we'll see what answers come back. We'll hopefully hear from a couple more stakeholders, and then we'll give our opinion from there as to whether we can fully support this bill or not.

Thank you very much for allowing me to get those concerns on the record. At this time I will adjourn debate on this bill.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 13

Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General to move second reading of Bill 13, the Justice of the Peace Amendment Act, 2009.

Currently the Justice of the Peace Act authorizes justices of the peace to be appointed for a 10-year term. However, the act contains a provision for mandatory retirement at age 70. This bill will permit a sitting or presiding justice of the peace to sit past age 70 up to a maximum of age 75 or until his or her original 10-year appointment expires, whichever occurs first. The bill will ensure that highly experienced justices of the peace who are willing and capable of serving in a part-time or full-time capacity for their full 10-year term are not prevented from doing so simply because they've reached the age of 70. This bill ensures consistency with the similar provisions in the Provincial Court Act applicable to judges and the provisions of the Court of Queen's Bench Act applicable to masters in chambers.

Mr. Speaker, the Department of Justice and the Attorney General strive to make Alberta's civil and criminal justice system more effective, efficient, and accessible. The Justice of the Peace Amendment Act will help to further that goal by retaining the knowledge and experience of justices of the peace with many years of service for their full year term. I would ask members of the House to support Bill 13.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour for me to rise and speak to this bill and, in fact, support this bill as I believe it will allow justices of the peace to serve up to their 10 years, even past, say, turning 70 if they're competent and able and willing to do the job. It will allow them to sit up to a maximum of age 75 or the end of their 10-year term, whatever comes first. This proposed amendment would be consistent with other provisions in the Provincial Court Act applicable to judges and to provisions in the Court of Queen's Bench Act on the masters in chambers. Again, I believe that this is a good bill. It harmonizes much of the legislation that is out there. Like I mentioned, we will be voting in favour of this.

However, there are a few additional comments I'd like to get on the record here that show that possibly our justice system could be working a little more harmoniously with some more foresight and thought into the process of what is actually going on.

Just some background here. In addition to conducting bail hearings and presiding over traffic court, justices of the peace provide other front-line judicial services. These JPs work around the clock to grant search warrants, approve the apprehension of children in danger, and authorize emergency protection orders that keep abusive family members out of the home.

At the end of January – that's this most recent January – the number of experienced justices working in Edmonton fell from 17 to three because their 10-year appointments had expired on January 31. Clearly, this really can't be excused other than the fact of a lack of planning or a lack of planning around the appointments of most of these people and not realizing that a staggering would be necessary to keep some of these justices of the peace working beyond this drop-dead date that is apparent in the legislation. In the Edmonton Journal last month Brian Hurley, the president of Alberta's Criminal Trial Lawyers Association, noted that the poor planning on the part of the Justice officials was "horrendously irresponsible."

Sources within Justice note that their biggest concern is the backup of bail hearings. Because an accused has the right to a bail hearing within 24 hours of their arrest, delays may allow criminal defence lawyers to launch Charter applications to have their clients' charges stayed due to delays. Clearly, that is something we don't want happening here in Alberta.

Part of the issue for those who may consider hearing applications as a JP is that unlike outgoing justices, new appointees can't work as defence lawyers while they serve in the positions. Assistant Chief Judge Allan Lefever said that provincial court judges are expecting an influx of hearings in their court but concerns about Charter violations arising from backlogged bail hearings are unfounded.

Anyways, we are hoping that this addition and changes to the court system will allow for our justice system to run more smoothly. Nevertheless, I think something has to be done towards the planning of when these terms end so that we don't have 14 of our 10-year terms ending at the same date and leaving us with a void of experienced prosecutors to deal with the day-to-day goings-on in Alberta's court system. So we support this as it will be a measure to ensure the smooth operation of the courts. It does boggle the mind how it took the government quite a while to get moving on this even after what has just happened.

Anyway, those are my comments. I will adjourn debate on Bill 13.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 16

Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move second reading of Bill 16, the Peace Officer Amendment Act, on behalf of the hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

This bill is important for the many police services which benefit from the work of auxiliary constables. There are currently about 360 of these auxiliary constables in Alberta. They volunteer their time and work with the RCMP throughout rural Alberta and with police services in Taber, Medicine Hat, Lacombe, and the Blood tribe reserve.

Auxiliary constables are not fully sworn police members. They have limited authority granted to them under the Peace Officer Act. They help provide community policing at safety events, become involved with schools, businesses in the local community, and help engage the community in crime prevention awareness. Their services play a vital role in helping police throughout Alberta.

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009

Bill 22
Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, but in accordance with Standing Order 64(3) the chair is required to put the question to the House on every appropriation bill standing on the Order Paper for second reading.

[Motion carried; bills 21 and 22 read a second time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development to continue.

Bill 16

Dr. Morton: Thank you. Continuing. When section 25(3) of the Peace Officer Act comes into effect on May 1, 2009, it will restrict the terms and symbols that can be used to identify these auxiliary constables. This section was included in the act to prevent anyone except fully sworn police officers from calling themselves constable or special constable. The intent was to establish clear, distinct identities for sworn officers and auxiliary constables and to keep the term “constable” exclusively for sworn officers.

However, complying with section 25(3) would require police services with auxiliary programs to change their auxiliary constables’ uniforms and insignia, creating extra costs for those services. Mr. Speaker, this was never the intent of the Peace Officer Act, and these extra costs would be especially burdensome in these uncertain economic times. For example, it would require the RCMP auxiliary program to purchase new uniforms or uniform markings for their 335 auxiliary officers, similarly for the 26 auxiliary constables in other police services.

This proposed amendment would allow police services to ask the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security for an exemption to this section of the act. They could then use similar uniforms and titles, both sworn and auxiliary constables who attend scenes together. Passing this amendment now, before section 25(3) comes into effect on May 1, will ensure police services with auxiliary police programs do not have to use limited budget dollars to make changes to their uniforms and insignia. There are no costs related to this amendment to the government.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of Bill 16, the Peace Officer Amendment Act, will allow Albertans who dedicate their personal time to supporting their local police services to continue to do so without incurring any extra costs.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much. It again gives me great pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 16, the Peace Officer Amendment Act, 2009. At this time I’m somewhat hesitant to offer our full support as it appears that under this, although it seems to be a relatively straightforward procedure, just simply allowing for a change to what you call yourself on a uniform, there may be, in fact, more at play. Now we are going to a level of bureaucracy. In fact, our sheriffs and constables and whatever, the public security peace officer program, all that stuff we’re raising here is creating, at least to my mind, a little bit of confusion and delay. I stole that from Thomas the train, if anyone was interested there. Yes. Yes. Confusion and delay. Yes.

But, anyways, on that note, we’re still unsure. Let me just give you a little bit of a reasoning here. The original Peace Officer Act in 2006 replaced the term “special constable” with “peace officer.” The act established new levels of authority for peace officers. These levels were the Alberta peace officer levels 1 and 2 and community peace officer levels 1 and 2. Now it appears that they will once again be utilizing the term “special constable.” I remind people that this was changed back in the original act.

The question, for me anyway, is: why is this being done? It’s not an overly burdensome change, but if the intent of the original bill was to change the name of the special constable program to public security peace officer program to raise the profile of this aspect of law enforcement, establishing various levels of authority based on the peace officers’ roles and responsibilities and ensuring effective communication between peace officers and other law enforcement agencies, then why reintroduce the phased-out terminology?

Where we just changed the bill back in 2006, we’re implementing the same language that we phased out at that point in time. Really, maybe this is much ado about nothing, but it’s a concern for what in fact appears to be happening out there in that we’ve got 47 different levels of police officers out there, or quasi-police officers or sheriffs or peace partners. We haven’t included the Guardian Angels yet under this amendment, but it seems that someday that, too, may be coming. It just gives me some concern as to where in fact we’re going and what is in fact happening out there.

If we look, we’ve had a tremendous expansion of our sheriffs program, and many people, including myself, would say that they’re doing a very good job out there. Nevertheless, was the continued growth of this sheriffs program really what the people in our cities and in our small towns needed? When you look around, our policing numbers in Calgary and Edmonton are significantly lower per capita than when we look at other major cities. You look at places like Toronto, Vancouver, and places like that, that have higher numbers of police officers, boots on the streets, like people like to say. I’m just wondering at this time, with the expenditure of dollars, value for money, why we went down this path when maybe the support was more needed with our local police officers and with the troubles our local communities were having.

That’s nothing to take away from what our sheriffs are doing. What it is representing is maybe a choice of what our government expenditures and priorities should be. I leave that out there for us probably to continue discussing at some other time in this honourable House. Let’s face it; at least on its face most police agencies are at least saying that they’re enjoying the use of the sheriffs, and I take them at face value. Let’s hope that this decision continues to ensure the safety of Alberta’s citizens. I’m hopeful it will, but I’m just cognizant that maybe the timing of these real expenditures was maybe not made on enough of a priority basis. They should have been made to our civic policing unit.

Nevertheless, those are my comments, and on that note I adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 17
Securities Amendment Act, 2009

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to rise today to move second reading of Bill 17, the Securities Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 17 furthers the work that Alberta has done in modernizing, streamlining, and harmonizing securities legislation over the last five years, work necessary to support the passport system for securities regulation. Before I outline the proposed amendments, I'd like to address the federal budget proposal to establish a single federal securities regulator and federal securities legislation.

I understand that the federal government has invited all provinces and territories to participate in this federal initiative. Alberta is strongly opposed to the federal move to a single regulator. Securities regulation is a provincial responsibility, and this federal initiative would be an intrusion into an area of provincial jurisdiction. We continue to believe that the passport system is a practical model that provinces and territories can implement to create a national regulatory system that is flexible, responsive, and which respects provincial jurisdiction. As such, it is important that we continue our work to develop the passport system, which includes making the necessary changes to our legislation to keep it strong. The move to a single regulator could take years, Mr. Speaker, and we're ready to move with the passport system now. This is not the time to consider the significant structural changes required to move to a single regulator, given today's turbulent economic climate, which could further unsettle capital markets.

Alberta has taken a leadership role in reforming Canada's securities regulatory system and will continue to do so. For this reason Alberta is prepared to consider these aspects of the Hockin report designed to improve Canada's regulatory system, provided they respect provincial constitutional authority over securities regulation. We have identified eight Hockin report recommendations that merit further consideration and 16 recommendations that are already implemented or on which work is well under way.

Returning now to Bill 17, Mr. Speaker. The proposed amendments will further harmonize enforcement sanctions, improve disclosure to consumers, and restore rescission rights to mutual fund investors until harmonized rules for those are adopted. The amendments will support a joint project of securities and insurance regulators known as the point-of-sale project. The point-of-sale project will improve disclosure to consumers by requiring that they receive short, simple, and clear documents called fund facts.

Other amendments to this legislation will expand the commission's power to reprimand registrants to include others and to extend the power to revoke or vary orders to include the executive director. This means that the commission will be able to reprimand any market participant, not just the registrant. It also clarifies that the executive director may revoke or vary any decision the executive director has made.

Lastly, the amendments will restore on an interim basis, Mr. Speaker, rescission rights available to investors purchasing mutual funds. Rescission rights mean that an investor has the right to cancel their purchase without penalty. These rescission rights were inadvertently repealed in 2008 as part of the larger process of removing nonharmonized prospectus provisions from the Securities Act. The harmonized prospectus rules implemented in 2008 did not contain harmonized rescission rights, but the Alberta Securities Commission advises that the harmonized rule requirement will be adopted within the next two to three years. So this step is just an interim measure.

I urge all members of this Assembly to give their support to Bill 17, and I move to adjourn debate. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I'd move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. on Monday.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:29 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 2nd Session (2009)

Activity to March 12, 2009

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we rededicate ourselves to the valued traditions of parliamentary democracy as a means of serving our province and our country. Amen.

Hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, would you please remain standing now, and we'll participate in the singing of our national anthem. We'll be led today by Mr. Paul Lorieau. Please join in in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly Her Excellency Gintė Damušis, ambassador of the Republic of Lithuania. I was honoured to host a special luncheon today in honour of Her Excellency's first visit to Alberta. Alberta and Lithuania have a solid trading relationship, and the Lithuanian community has strong roots in our province. We value the Lithuanian culture as one of the many cultures that greatly contribute towards our quality of life and help bring stronger communities and a stronger Alberta. I'm proud to say that the Alberta government is committed to creating a society where all people feel welcome and are included in all aspects of the life of the province. We are going to be richer because of our friendship and our historic trading relationship, and we hope to enhance that. I know that Her Excellency has had several meetings and will have others with many of my colleagues today. I would like to ask that Her Excellency please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, at the Clerk's table today is the Hon. Peter Milliken, Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons. Mr. Milliken is currently serving in his seventh consecutive term as the Member for Kingston and the Islands, a federal riding in the province of Ontario. He was elected for the first time on November 21, 1988. On January 29, 2001, he was elected as the 34th Speaker in the history of the Canadian House of Commons, and on October 12, 2009, he will become the longest serving Speaker in the history of that body, the Canadian House of Commons. A fuller biography of Mr. Milliken is located at each member's desk. Mr. Milliken has agreed to meet with any Member of this Legislative Assembly that wishes to attend a special seminar. It will be put on tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock for one hour in the Carillon Room.

Mr. Speaker, would you kindly rise and receive the warm welcome.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature 45 very special guests from Fort Saskatchewan elementary school, 29 visitors in the members' gallery and 16 in the public gallery. They're here visiting the Legislature, and I'm looking forward to our visit to Fort Saskatchewan elementary in the early part of April. The students are accompanied today by teachers Mrs. Beth Budd, Mrs. Shirley Cockburn, teacher assistant Mrs. Joanne Brown, and parent helpers Mrs. Amanda Peck and Mrs. Gail Davies. I would ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have at least 14 more introductions.

The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, it's a pleasure for me to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature 39 visitors from the Greystone Centennial middle school out of Spruce Grove. They're a very keen group. They're here for the week at the Legislature, a great program put on by your office. They're very keen. They responded to my questions in the House in unison. They're accompanied by teachers Mrs. Katy Rogal and Ms Amanda Brouwer and parent helper Ms Michelle Westendorf. I believe they're in both of our galleries. I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My students are from Sifton elementary school. There will be 28 of them. They will be accompanied by their teacher, Tracy Bradley, and teacher's aide Nancy Brown. However, they won't be in here until about 2 o'clock, but I'd still like to extend them a warm welcome today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you to this Assembly a very special group of 48 grade 6 students that are here today visiting from the Wye school in Strathcona. I can say without a doubt that this class is one of the brightest in our constituency, and this has nothing to do with the fact that my son Jack is one of the students. They're accompanied by their teachers, Mrs. Tanya Jordan, Mrs. Corey Kropp, and Ms Lisa Schlegel, teachers' helper Mrs. Daniela Eskow, and parent helpers Mrs. Star, Mrs. Veeneman, Mrs. Flathers, Mrs. Johnston, and my lovely wife, Fiona Beland. They're seated in the public gallery as well, and I'd ask that they all rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a friend of mine from Vermilion. Lorne Maier is the local ATA representative there. Like many teachers, he's very active in the community. He's a Rotarian, he's coached football, and he's always made his classroom open for us to go in and speak to him. Lorne is here today with an interest in Motion 503. I'd like him to rise and please accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour today to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly four friends, supporters, and constituents of Edmonton-Whitemud. First, Mr. Balbir Sharma and his wife, Rama, are very proud Albertans and have been so since 1981. Balbir worked as a draftsman for many years. He now volunteers as treasurer for the Council of India Societies of Edmonton, an umbrella organization of over 15 organizations. I might say that our own colleague from Edmonton-Ellerslie was an executive member and past president of that organization. Rama also volunteered for nonprofit organizations in Edmonton. Their son, Dr. Sanjay Sharma, is a cardiologist here in Edmonton based out of two hospitals, including the University of Alberta hospital, where he was trained. His wife, Suvidha, has recently been appointed as a Crown prosecutor for the province of Alberta. Balbir, Rama, Sanjay, and Suvidha came down to the Legislature today to visit with the member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, and I had an opportunity to meet with them in my office. I want to thank them for their contributions to the volunteer sector in Edmonton and in Alberta. I'd ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all the members of this Assembly Tracey Bowes from the Highwood constituency. Tracey is in the House today for the debate on Motion 503. It certainly is excellent that Tracey is so interested and has taken the time to come to Edmonton. Tracey is seated in the public gallery, and I would ask her now to rise and receive the usual warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly the executive director of Homeward Trust. Susan McGee is here with us. I want you to know that Susan is also the newest member of the secretariat, and we're looking forward to her wisdom, her passion, her energy, and just her involvement with the secretariat, as well. Susan, would you please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is part of Rendez-vous. I have the privilege of introducing to you and through you representatives from the francophone economic development council of Alberta. Since 2003 my department and Travel Alberta have been working with the council to develop a successful marketing strategy to attract visitors and tour operators from francophone regions, such as Quebec and France. The council has also worked with the province's private sector to develop a francophone Alberta tourism corridor. Here today are members of the council. I'd ask our guests to stand as I introduce them: Mr. Randy Boissonnault, president; Mr.

Frank Saulnier, CEO; Mr. Patrice Gauthier, development agent; and Mr. Roch Labelle, development agent. I'd ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Chair of Committees.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a constituent of mine who is visiting the Legislature today. Mr. Chris Coleman is a special education teacher from the Irvine school in beautiful southeast Alberta and president of the Prairie Rose local of the ATA. He's joining us today as we discuss Motion 503. He has previously taught in Texas, where he saw first-hand the problems with high-stakes testing and the failures of the No Child Left Behind policy of the United States. He's here today to show his support for this motion, and I appreciate his dedication. Mr. Coleman is seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask him to rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two Saskatchewan boys who, to Alberta's great benefit, decided years ago to move here and make Alberta their home. They are Dr. Roger Epp, dean of the Augustana faculty of the University of Alberta in Camrose; and Mr. Brian Hesje, chairman of the board of Fountain Tire and member of the board of directors of ATB Financial.

Dr. Epp has been a professor and an administrator at Augustana for some 19 years, and he's a distinguished political scientist with a special interest in rural Alberta and the rural west. Mr. Hesje, as I mentioned, is chair of the board of Fountain Tire, but he also has a very important connection to Augustana in that he is its most recently designated distinguished alumnus. I'll have more to say about him in a few moments in a member's statement.

Both Dr. Epp and Mr. Hesje are here in the public gallery, and I'd ask that they stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour today to introduce an intrepid group of young Albertans, the Carrington-Morris family. Eleven-year-old Mahala is a great singer and future superstar, and nine-year-old Jonah is a long-distance running champion and a superb orator. They both enjoy playing hockey and are both home-schooled by their parents. That's why they're here today, to learn a little bit more about how our Legislature works. They've enjoyed a great tour of the Legislature, and a couple of unexpected highlights, including meeting our fine Premier and the Speaker of our federal House.

Dr. Natalie Carrington and Dr. Greg Morris are their fabulous parents. They are accomplished athletes, and they are great servants of their community. Together they run the Diamond Valley chiropractic, acupuncture, and optimum health clinic in the foothills of the Rockies. They keep our hard-working Alberta ranchers and oil workers healthy, happy, and on the job.

One final note. Dr. Natalie Carrington was of invaluable assistance for every minute of my wife, Jennifer's, long labour, which resulted in the birth of our first-born son, Dawson, last April.

I would ask our fine friends, the Carrington-Morris family, to please stand now and accept the warm wishes of this Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the members of this House a group of Edmonton Lithuanian members who are here honouring the visit of Her Excellency Gintė Damušis, who is visiting Edmonton, as you've learned earlier today. With us today are Erwin Kilotat, Andrea Smidtas, Al Smidtas, Marty Wilson, Adriana Podberskis, Gloria Bartkus, Rimas Siulys, Paul Stanaitis, and Nejolla Korris, who is currently being considered by the Lithuanian government to be appointed as honorary consul of the Republic of Lithuania to Alberta and perhaps western Canada. I would ask them to rise and accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege today to rise and introduce four constituents, that are also very close friends of mine from St. Albert, who are seated in the public gallery. These gentlemen have been close associates for over 30 years in quite a variety of activities. Perhaps the most memorable of them is our wine group called the Weinguts. Those of German tongue will recognize that to mean good wine. I would ask my guests Les Johnston, Joe Sombach, Lawrence Hermanutz, and Larry Wyatt to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Brier Curling Championship

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek and all members here to recognize the world's best men's curling team, Alberta's own Kevin Martin rink. Last night the Kevin Martin team defeated Team Manitoba and established a new record of 26 consecutive Brier game victories. The atmosphere in Calgary's Saddledome was electric as Alberta's all-star team of Kevin Martin and Ben Hebert from Edmonton and John Morris and Marc Kennedy from Calgary clinched the 2009 Brier.

On behalf of all of my MLA government colleagues I also want to salute and thank the Calgary hosts and organizers, who carried off an incredibly successful Brier. For nine straight days curling fans in Calgary and from across Alberta and the entire nation were treated to an amazing display of skill and sportsmanship as portrayed by all the Brier teams. Breathtaking shotmaking, perfect brushing and strategizing resulted in a legacy of great memories and excitement.

Mr. Speaker, we all watched proudly as Alberta rose to the top once again and as 700 local volunteers extended a warm western welcome to Calgary's Pengrowth Saddledome. Viewers from around the world also tuned in on their televisions to watch history being made right here in Alberta. This year's Tim Hortons Brier attendance topped 140,000 spectators, an amazing tribute to the sponsors and organizers and, of course, to the curling fans. Now we can all look forward to the next great week of curling excellence, the Roar of the Rings Olympic qualifying tournament in Edmonton this December.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Alberta Job Losses

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last month Alberta lost another 24,000 jobs, bringing the losses for 2009 to 30,000. Just a month ago the government projected 15,000 job losses for the entire year, averaging 50 per day. The reality is that 500 jobs per day were lost in January and February, 10 times what the government projected. To the Premier: how can Albertans be confident this government is prepared to deal with the economic downturn when it so grossly misjudged the severity of this economic recession?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, even if it's a hundred people out of work in this province, it's of great concern to this government. As I said before, what we're going to be doing is ensuring, when we deliver the budget, that there'll be supports to ensure that the people programs are in place and also invest significantly in infrastructure so that we keep the people working in this province.

Dr. Swann: The Bank of Canada has adjusted its policy to deal with the prospect of a longer economic downturn, yet this government persists in its rosy projections of job losses. Again to the Premier: what exactly is this government basing its job loss projections on?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't think these are rosy job loss projections. I don't know why we would use the word "rosy." I'm sure all Albertans want to contribute positively to the province. Year over year we've actually created more jobs in the province February to February, but we know that we are going to have some difficulty over the next year or so as the economy rebounds in our biggest market, and that's down south in the United States.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, thousands of Albertans are out of work, and on average only 1 in 4 is qualifying for employment insurance benefits, 1 in 4. It's clear that there are changes needed to the EI system. To the Premier: will he be calling on the federal government to make the changes to ensure that those who are unemployed are getting the support for which they've paid billions of dollars each year?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I already delivered that position at the Premiers' meeting, at which the Prime Minister was present. I said that Alberta has been through good fortune, through a good, robust economy contributing to Ottawa a net contribution of $18.3 billion just last year alone. That is one – that is one – interregional transfer and a difference in policy. The other one is, of course, the EI benefits. We have to work more hours in Alberta to earn, actually, less benefit than those in other provinces. We're not discounting the fact that, you know, we are going to be seeing some difficulties, but the message I delivered to the Prime Minister is that unemployed families, whether they're in the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario, or Alberta, are equally unemployed.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Support for the Oil and Gas Sector

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently the government provided incentives for the energy sector to keep Alberta working. However, this covers one industry, leaving thousands of workers in other sectors without support from this government. To the Premier: why is the Premier choosing to support one industry when there are thousands of Albertans in other sectors losing their jobs? Are you picking winners and losers?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're meeting with all industrial sectors. I'll tell you that the oil and gas sector is one that has probably seen the greatest drop in the commodity prices. Forestry has been having significant issues, and we're meeting, actually, with the forestry sector this afternoon. For agriculture my hopes are up. Fertilizer prices are dropping, fuel prices are dropping, canola is still hanging around that $9 to $9.50 a bushel, so there is some hope. Beef prices are stabilizing a bit although they're not anywhere near where they were two years ago. There are some bright areas in the upcoming economy, but certainly oil and gas and forestry will be going through some difficult times.

Dr. Swann: The construction industry has posted significant job losses in recent months. Unemployment in this sector has already exceeded 9 per cent in January, and half of February's additional job losses are in construction. To the Premier: will you be providing specific support to the construction industry as you have to the oil and gas sector?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, what we will be doing is continuing on a very robust capital construction plan in this province. As we entered this fiscal period, we spent about two to three times more per capita on infrastructure than any other province, and we'll continue to do that into next year so that we employ as many Albertans as possible.

Dr. Swann: Investment in green jobs provides short-term and long-term benefit to Albertans and per dollar creates more growth than investment in other sectors, including the oil and gas sector. To the Premier: why is this government not investing more in green projects, which will not only create more jobs but improve our international reputation and improve our environment?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there's at least $2 billion in carbon capture and storage, which is going to provide a number of green jobs, especially related to the construction of the pipeline. There's another I believe $239 million in a program that's assisting ethanol and biodiesel production in the province, which has a double benefit: it would not only employ people, but it will clean our air. So there are a number of dollars going in. We do produce the most wind power in the province of Alberta compared to other jurisdictions. I also might say that all of that wind power that we're producing is unsubsidized compared to other jurisdictions that are actually using taxpayer dollars to support wind power.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Bitumen Exports

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. In the leadership race for the Tory party the Premier said, and I quote: shipping raw bitumen is like scraping off the topsoil, selling it, and then passing the farm on to the next generation. Yet the portion of raw bitumen shipped to the U.S.A. for upgrading is rising, and thousands of jobs are going south of the border in the process. My question is to the Premier. Why is Alberta's upgrading construction stalled while in the U.S.A. it's booming?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I didn't know that that was such a good speech. That's the second member that has actually referenced it here in the House.

As I said before when comments were made about jobs going south, if you look at the unemployment rate in the United States, they're having similar difficulties to what we are experiencing in Canada. With respect to adding value to bitumen, we are looking at different processes. In terms of adding value, we know we have to add value to bitumen. We changed the policy significantly in terms of bitumen in kind; that's bitumen that all Albertans own that we can sell to a merchant upgrader. There are a few more details to work out, but we do want to increase the amount of bitumen upgraded from 60-some per cent to closer to 70.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Independent industry analysts are coming to the opposite conclusion. While Alberta is hemorrhaging hundreds of jobs a day, there's a boom in upgrader construction south of the border. For example, BP and Husky have created thousands of jobs in Ohio by building an upgrader there to process raw bitumen from Alberta. Once these upgraders have gone to the U.S.A., they're gone forever. Again to the Premier: does the Premier agree with a recent analysis by CAPP that the proportion of bitumen upgraded here is going to substantially decline?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're, I believe, shipping about 1.3 million barrels of oil a day. If everything goes well over the next few years and our production increases to closer to 3 million barrels, that is a substantial increase in production but also a substantial task in adding upgrading to the increased production. That is what we're looking at. We're not anywhere close to 3 million barrels a day. I think the plan is 3 million by 2015, and we're working very carefully through policies that will ensure that we increase the amount of upgrading in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Eight hundred Albertans a day in February were losing their jobs, yet Conoco and EnCana created thousands of jobs in Borger, Texas, by building yet another upgrader to process raw bitumen from Alberta. As with the plant in Ohio, once those upgrader jobs have gone to the U.S.A., they're gone forever. To the Premier: when will this government be taking real action to get Albertans back to work building upgraders here? What are the timelines?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said, we're working on a policy to ensure that we increase the value of upgrading. There is, of course, the issue of ensuring that we do it in a very environmentally sound manner, find a balance. We also need a number of additional transmission lines to the areas where upgraders are going to be built. There are transportation corridors to be dealt with. But, you know, now, when the oil sands expansion has slowed down, all of a sudden attention is paid to the job loss. Unfortunately, that same attention wasn't paid to the job losses in the oil sands when the party opposite to me wanted to shut the whole thing down.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, point of order, please.

The Speaker: The point of order will be recognized later.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Provincial Economic Strategy

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's a stretch to say that the Liberal opposition has cost anybody their job. You can't say the same thing about this crew, though. Last month alone nearly 24,000 Albertans lost their jobs. The government remains paralyzed by denial and still says only 15,000 Albertans will lose their jobs. Either the government is misleading Albertans about what our economic future holds, or it's dangerously misinformed. Which is it, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: As I said before, whatever the statistics are, whatever the projections are, it is of serious concern to the government. As in a previous question, we're going to do whatever we can to provide the dollars to support not only people programs but also investments in infrastructure so that we can keep people working.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, there were two other politicians who claimed that everything was just fine and that people should stop worrying. One was George W. Bush, and the other was Stephen Harper in the middle of the last election campaign. You'll remember that both of them were forced later to admit reality. Everyday Albertans need more than rosy, pie in the sky economic predictions to see them through this difficult time. My question is to the Premier. When will you offer some comfort to worried Albertans by unveiling a stimulus package that will keep Albertans working through this deep recession?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, our capital plan alone is $22.2 billion over the next three years. I would say that that is quite a substantial stimulus package for Albertans.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, that's the same capital plan they had when things were good, and they've cut $2 billion out of public transit.

Regular Albertans facing unemployment, sometimes for the first time in their lives, need more than empty promises from this government. What they need are good jobs so that they can care for their families. Again to the Premier: when will you admit the seriousness of the problem and give everyday Albertans what they need, a humane economic policy that allows breadwinners to keep a roof over their families' heads and put food on the table?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're going to maintain the resources in our capital plan. One comment that I would like to make is that given today's economic climate – the fact that concrete is down considerably in price, steel is down, we're getting many more bids per tender call – I think we're going to get tremendous value for the dollars that we're going to invest in infrastructure. It will give us an opportunity to catch up with some of the new infrastructure, catch up with some of the maintenance that we have delayed over the last couple of years, so I think this is the opportunity to do the things that we need to do. I'm just looking forward to co-operation as we deliver the budget on April 7 and have the opportunity for the opposition to debate the dollars going in.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Heat Detectors for Garages

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The province has recently updated its building and fire codes to keep Albertans safe from the effects of fire. From my own past experience in the home building industry I know of three incidents when fires have started from an attached garage. Initially it was agreed that the new code would include requirements for a heat detector in the garage. My questions are for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Can the minister please indicate why this was not included in the new code change?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The answer is that there is no heat detector on the market that works in extreme cold conditions. The change has been deferred until technology catches up. I need to also say that the new codes very much do include fire-resistant requirements for homes with attached garages.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is for the same minister. How soon can we expect industry to design the heat detectors?

The Speaker: Hon. minister, if you're that wise.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the heat detectors need to comply with the national standards, and they need to be effective. Currently there is no national standard. We are working with the national body to ensure that the testing does take place because we believe that this is very important for safety. We will continue to work with the national council. When the standards are developed, this province will be adopting the heat detectors for garages.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. The minister said that there are fire-resistant requirements for the garages. Can the minister please tell us what they are and their benefits?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, we know that slowing down the speed of fires in garages is very critical. We have enhanced fire protection that we have put into the codes, one of them, of course, being to ensure that gypsum is put into those garages on all surfaces. These changes will make homes safer. Also, these changes buy time for individuals to get out of their homes and for firefighters to respond.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Temporary Foreign Workers

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last month another 24,000 Albertans unfortunately lost their jobs along with many temporary foreign workers who were working here. Although some temporary foreign workers are eligible to apply for EI benefits if they meet the requirements, like many Albertans they are not receiving them. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: what are these workers supposed to do if they cannot draw EI benefits when they are unfortunately laid off?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The member opposite is asking a question that a lot of people are also asking. We continue to work with our temporary foreign workers. We identify additional positions that may be available to them, and we will work with them to see if they can move into other jobs. But I think we need to recognize that the word “temporary” is exactly what it says, and if it’s impossible for them to move into other occupations, then there’s an expectation that they should go home.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. The minister has recently admitted that the province cannot track the 57,000 temporary foreign workers in the province. Why, then, is the hon. minister continuing to promote the flawed temporary foreign workers program when you don’t even know where any of those workers are or what they’re doing?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we know that there are some issues with a few of our temporary foreign workers. I need to indicate to the rest of our members here in the Assembly that for the 57,000 that are in the province, the majority are here doing the work that they’re meant to do, and they’re providing a tremendous service to the province of Alberta. We do know where the majority are. We are still expecting some areas where we have labour shortages where temporary foreign workers are providing a very, very useful benefit to our province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There’s certainly no shortage from that side of the House, but other people say that there is.

Again to the minister: since the minister has no idea where many of the temporary foreign workers in this province are located, how can he possibly continue to recruit workers through the program when there are already thousands of unemployed people in this province ready, willing, and able to go to work?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the member indicates that, you know, there are people willing and ready to go to work, and I don’t deny that. But there are still some occupations out there where we do have some definite shortages. One of them specifically – and I met with that particular group this weekend – is beekeepers. Before our people have the ability to hire temporary foreign workers, they must advertise right across Alberta as well as Canada. There’s no doubt that in the agricultural sector there are some huge concerns that we might close down the temporary foreign workers and they would not be able to operate their facilities over the next summer.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Bail System Reform

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The release of individuals charged with serious crimes has raised concerns about the bail system. My questions are for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. What is Alberta doing to ensure that potentially dangerous criminals aren’t being released on bail?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the hon. member may know, the issue of bail reform and the role of bail in our justice system has been a very important piece of what the Premier has talked about with respect to justice reform in the past year. As part of our Safe Communities Secretariat we’ve developed a number of projects in the cities of Edmonton and Calgary where we have partnered prosecutors with police so that they’re working in tandem to ensure that we have the most effective bail packages available for the court to hear considerations with respect to bail.

Mr. Doerksen: A follow-up question, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: how can Albertans be assured that, in fact, our bail system is as effective as it can be?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past year we’ve increased the number of prosecutors in the justice system. We’ve also increased the number of prosecutors that are arguing bail applications. In the past we have had police officers argue many of those cases, and we’ve made a decision in conjunction with the police that we think we can make more effective applications for bail to be withheld when we have Crown prosecutors making those applications. We’ve also introduced a system where bail applications can now be heard 24 hours a day in the cities of Edmonton and Calgary. We believe that that will ensure a fair hearing but also a very sound hearing and arguments that are being argued by prosecutors.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you. My final question to the same minister: how is the Minister of Justice working with other jurisdictions, particularly the federal government, to make the Alberta bail system more effective?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the end of the day it will be a judge’s decision as to whether or not to release someone on bail. But what we have been saying and the discussions that I’ve had with my federal counterpart are that we believe that the bail tests need to be changed. We think the Criminal Code needs to be amended so that there are more opportunities for reverse onus so that people who have demonstrated at one time that they are not prepared to honour a court order are not given the benefit of the doubt the second time and they’re not released on bail.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Public Education Exemptions

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the weekend the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit spoke publicly about proposed amendments to the human rights act. The amendments would give parents the right to dictate what is taught in public schools. The minister speaks of tolerance, but this amendment seems like an appalling step backwards. To the Minister of Education: does the minister support amending the human rights act to make it a fundamental human right for parents to exempt their children from science education and other teachings that may be contrary to their beliefs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Education is under the fundamental belief that we're all born with a full basket of rights and that everything the government does in terms of enacting laws in the interests of the community diminishes those rights, hopefully for justifiable purposes. What I'd say to the hon. member is that we have rules in place in this province, both in the School Act with respect to religion and with mandated policy with respect to education with respect to sexuality, that a parent can choose to have their child exempted from such education if they don't believe it's in the best interest of their child from their personal value system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The minister anticipated my next question. As a teacher for 34 years I know that parents already have the right to excuse their child from classes that are contrary to their beliefs, such as sexual education. Given that there is no need, therefore, for such legislation, will the minister commit to not supporting any amendment that would enshrine a parent's right to ignore curriculum?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not going to commit to anything of the sort. If the government brings forward legislation and I'm a member of the government and House Leader, I think it's my duty to bring forward legislation to support what the government does. What I have to say in terms of the formation of that legislation would be counsel that I would hold to myself.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. The last time I checked my calendar, Mr. Minister, this was 2009 Alberta, not 1929 Tennessee.

Given that parents already have the right to home-school their children or to place their children in private schools, what is the point of a public curriculum that is developed to provide a full breadth of education if this government makes key sections of it optional? Create your own curriculum?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, what's not optional in this province is that parents have the right to raise their children. They not only have a right; they have a duty and an obligation to those children to bring to those children moral values. It's not in the government's hands to dictate moral values to parents. What the government does is make sure that there's a good, strong public education system with a good, strong curriculum, and then parents can have the choice on certain areas, certain areas only, relative to religion and sexuality and whether their children should participate in those specific sections of the curriculum or not.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Mountain Pine Beetle Control

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The forest industry continues to face many challenges, both economically and naturally. Alberta recently experienced severe cold winter temperatures across most of our forests. My question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Will this cold weather affect mountain pine beetles in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm sure the Member for West Yellowhead will agree with me when I say: thank God for global cooling. Cold temperatures have helped against the beetle, but precisely how much we won't know until this spring. We have computer models that predict, but I'd rather rely upon the field surveys of the dead beetles that we do in the spring. When those surveys are done, that'll be the basis for the next stage of our pine beetle strategy. I'll be happy to report the results of those surveys when they're in.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. How significantly is overwinter mortality affecting Alberta's fight against mountain pine beetles considering the work that is being done at other times of the year, such as increased logging and burning?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. The long-term health of Alberta's forests demands a long-term strategy. That's exactly what we have. Regardless of the impact of the cold winters, we will continue our healthy pine strategy. The goal there is to simulate a natural, age-balanced forest with younger, medium, and older aged trees. An age-balanced forest is much more resistant to insects and to wildfire. That's our long-term strategy, and we're sticking with it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the same minister. How many more cold winters do we need to end this threat to our forests, or is there an end in sight?

Dr. Morton: How many more cold winters do we need, Mr. Speaker? I say the more the better. Bring 'em on. Bring on the global cooling. The facts of this matter are quite simple: wood is good, cold is bold, and beetles are bad. I'd ask all hon. members to join me in wishing for another couple of weeks of minus 30 until we get to Easter.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I want more cold weather, too.

Ambulance Services

Ms Pastoor: Last Wednesday the minister was anything but clear with his answers regarding the ground ambulance transition happening on April 1. There are three levels of emergency medical personnel, each with different levels of education. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: can the minister provide an exact answer? Will EMRs, EMTs, and EMPs all be given the authority to triage patients in the field?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the exact answer I'm going to give to the member is the fact that on April 1 we will make a significant move in this province to ally our EMS system with our health system. Everything that has happened to date has been a smooth transition. I would suggest that the member is trying to find something wrong with what's happening on April 1 and is not having a lot of luck.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Minister. If I don't have the information, I have no idea if it's wrong or right.

Does the minister not see a problem with having a doctor tied up on the phone with ambulance crews when Alberta is already facing a shortage of doctors?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, where I see a problem is with ambulance emergency medical personnel being tied up in emergency rooms for hours on end. That is our problem. That's what we are trying to fix.

Ms Pastoor: In response to a question regarding the types of facilities that nonemergency room patients would be diverted to, the answer was neither clear, open, nor what I felt to be transparent. Where will these people who require care but not emergency care go at 3 o'clock in the morning? What is the answer?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have an outstanding health system in this province such that Albertans will receive health care when and where they need it. What we don't have is good alignment in the system. This is one initiative that this government is taking to align the system within health care. I would suggest to the hon. member that she should be patient, a little more positive with what's going on in this move on April 1. I believe that she will be pleasantly surprised and that all her worries will be put to rest after April 1.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Homelessness Initiatives

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Homelessness has been a major problem in Alberta for years, and this government has failed to address the primary causes. Indeed, in many cases it was their primary source. Today the minister of housing held a photo op to introduce a plan to end homelessness in Alberta, but it has no targets, no timelines, and most important, no money by which anyone can hold the government accountable. To that minister: without your government committing the funds necessary to do the job, how can you possibly claim that you'll end homelessness any time soon?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The member is correct. We did release a plan for Alberta ending homelessness in 10 years this morning in Calgary. I was pleased to have the secretariat, who prepared the plan, there at the release. I can tell you that we as a government strongly endorse the plan. We are adopting it in its entirety. The intent of the plan is to have a province-wide direction but also to work with the very good community organizations that have developed 10-year plans of their own. As I said, too, we have Susan McGee here – she's still here – who was very instrumental in developing the 10-year plan for Edmonton ending homelessness and who is on the secretariat.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, at least two of the cities, Edmonton and Calgary, have asked for, I believe, almost $4 billion, and we've yet to hear anything on that.

Now, last month, as we've heard, 24,000 Albertans lost their jobs due to the recession, and according to anyone with any credibility, the recession is going to get worse before it gets better. Today the photo op touted a plan that includes no reference to the recession, that should have been right in front of the minister of housing at that time. To the minister: will the minister admit that her plan fails to contemplate or make any provisions for the tens of thousands of Albertans who are wondering how they are going to pay their mortgages or rent on April 1?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, this is a very, very good-news plan. Actually, it is. Hon. member, I can tell you this: if you had been at the second national homeless conference that was held at the University of Calgary, you would have very much heard about the principles that are in the plan. There are five principles. They are: better information systems; aggressive assistance to people that are homeless; co-ordinated systems, where all levels of governments work together to address the needs of the homeless; as well as more housing options, which we are accomplishing; and effective policies that will bring down barriers for homeless people.

Ms Notley: Well, of the 27,000 Albertans who lost their jobs this year, only one-third are eligible for EI, leaving the rest to rely on government income support of $583 per month. Clearly, these are the people who are on the verge of a new wave of homelessness that the minister's plan completely misses. To the minister: will she commit today that these Albertans will not be told they have to sell off their retirement savings at record low levels or their automobiles or anything else before they can get help with rent? If not, why not?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, we have an excellent rent supplement program, Mr. Speaker, which is over a hundred million dollars helping 65,000 Albertans. Hon. member, you know about the affordable housing because we made an announcement in your area on Friday of $1.9 million for affordable housing. That includes students, families, and individuals, and you know that that will help people.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Inspiring Education Public Consultation

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the last couple of weeks the Minister of Education has rolled out his plan for Inspiring Education: A Dialogue with Albertans. It was just a couple of weeks ago that the minister had the steering committee panel here and introduced them to the Legislature, and it was quite the impressive compilation of distinguished Albertans. I was wondering if the minister could share his methodology in selecting the members of that panel.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's important, when you put together a steering committee of this nature for this type of project, that you not go to representatives of organizations who bring, by the very nature of that term, representation but that you bring Albertans together who bring perspectives. So we looked across the province to get a dynamic of people coming from across the province from a geographic perspective and from a variety of areas within the province so that they could bring their expertise, their knowledge, and their passion to the task.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that inspiring answer from the Minister of Education. However, I'm deeply concerned that this panel has left out two very obvious participant groups as part of this discussion, one being members of our current youth here in Alberta, who are the ones being educated and the ones that are relying on this education. Can the minister comment on why that specific group was left off this panel?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, we have a parallel process happening called Speak Out Alberta. We had sessions in schools right across the province back in the October-November time frame and again in the February-March time frame. That will culminate in a conference in early May here in Edmonton. We'll be setting up, as I was mandated by the Premier to do, an advisory council for youth that will have an ongoing participation in discussion with the ministry and with the minister directly on issues pertaining to youth in the process. All of that input will go into the Inspiring Education process as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that answer as well, as the chair of the Youth Secretariat for the province. However, there is an additional group that I believe has been left out of this advisory panel, and that is business and industry, who very much rely on our education system to provide people with the skills and education that they require to be competitive on a global level. Can the minister explain how this issue is going to be addressed through this process?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wouldn't agree that business has been left out. I think one of the co-chairs, our own colleague from Athabasca-Redwater, brings a background and perspective in small business from his previous life. We also have Mark Anielski, who is a professor at the University of Alberta in business and advises businesses across North America, actually, and provides strategic counsel to business. John Masters is president and CEO of Calgary Technologies Inc., which helps entrepreneurs grow small- and medium-sized businesses. However, I have at the request of the co-chairs begun to look to see whether we might add additional business perspective to the council.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Emergency Room Wait Times

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The lack of progress on emergency wait times is more than regrettable. There's additional risk of complications and even preventable deaths, as physicians have been saying for months in Alberta. To the Minister of Health and Wellness. The minister through his annual report has targets and reports on issues such as the percentage of Albertans who consume at least five servings of fruits and vegetables each day. When will the minister commit to setting a suitable benchmark for average wait times for emergency room patients and report annually?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I think it's very important that those who are involved on a day-to-day basis with the emergency departments are working with Alberta Health Services to see exactly what can be done to ensure a smoother transition through our emergencies in our various health facilities. We have in the Department of Health and Wellness initiated the conference that the hon. member referenced about a week ago in this House. By the admission of some of the participants good progress is being made, but it is clearly something that needs to be improved.

Dr. Swann: It's about reporting, Mr. Minister.

In the interest of being open and transparent, will the minister commit to posting wait times for all emergency facilities on the Alberta wait-list registry?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess one of the concerns that I have about this whole wait time issue is that somehow there is an acceptable wait time. Wouldn't we be trying to get to a point where there wasn't a necessity to post wait times, where Albertans were accessing the system in a multitude of ways, not just in emergency rooms? There's this falsehood that somehow if you put an artificial wait time up there, that's the best we have to do. We can do better than that.

Dr. Swann: We're talking about reporting on progress, Mr. Minister.

One way to relieve the bottleneck in ERs is to ensure that there are enough beds outside of the ER to transfer patients. Why are we so short of necessary infrastructure in our health care system?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, we may or may not be short of infrastructure. What we have is a system that, quite frankly – and I've said this on many occasions in the House – is not as efficient as it should be. Some of the beds that are being taken in our acute-care facilities don't necessarily need new infrastructure; they may need some provision of care. I could go through the same answer I've given several times to both the Leader of the Opposition and the Member for Lethbridge-East. It's all part of our action plan that is unfolding. This is not going to be fixed quickly, but we're going to fix it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Farm Recovery Plan Payouts

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under the Alberta livestock and meat strategy program $300 million was made available to livestock producers through the Alberta farm recovery plan 2. Producers received their first instalment in June of '08, and they were informed at that time that the second instalment would be mailed out to qualifying producers in January of this year. My question to the minister of agriculture: what is the status and timing of these payments being made under the second instalment?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The second benefit is on the way to the producers as we speak. As many of you know, the first instalment was provided to producers with no strings attached, but in order to be eligible for the second benefit, there were conditions that needed to be met: premise identification for cattle and for cattle producers and age verification. As well, we also require cattle move-in information by feedlots who feed more than 5,000 animals a year.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, I'm hearing a number of concerns from constituents, not all from the cattle industry, that their second benefit may be a little less than the first. Can you explain, Mr. Minister, if this is the case and how this is happening?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, livestock producers told us they needed assistance as soon as possible. In order to do that, to get the cheques in their hands quickly, we estimated how many producers would be eligible. So we were able to provide immediate transitional funding for an additional 5,000 producers. If we'd waited to receive all applications first, producers' first instalments would have been smaller; instead, the second instalment is prorated. A total of $300 million was approved, and $300 million will be paid out.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I understand that 5,000 got a payment, but how many producers complied with the requirements and will be getting the second instalment?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, I'm certainly pleased to say that the AFRP 2 was a huge success, that we had an overwhelming majority of Alberta's livestock producers recognize the importance and the requirements, and they complied. More than 83 per cent of the 2008 calf crop has been age verified. It was an incredible accomplishment. But better yet, Mr. Speaker, in all 97 per cent of eligible producers complied with all the requirements and are now receiving their second instalments.

Plastic Bag Ban

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, this week Sean Graham, a grade 11 student, and Councillor John Vyboh of Fort McMurray proved that they were willing to take the lead on environmental issues. Now I'm hoping the hon. Minister of Environment will follow. The council for the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo moved a motion to draft bylaws for a bag ban. Will the minister commit to giving the rest of the nation something to be envious of by following suit?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we've had discussions in this House on a number of occasions with respect to plastic bag bans. I've indicated before and I'll indicate again that municipalities are taking the lead on this and that we are certainly reviewing opportunities to implement on a province-wide basis, but at this point in time we are not proposing to do so.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister. Recently this government stood by and watched virtually every city, town, and hamlet in the province make legislation banning smoking in public places. Are we expecting the same thing to happen now on plastic bags?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I have indicated that when you talk about reducing the waste stream, plastic bags are just one of thousands of opportunities. We've been encouraging Albertans and have a very successful program in place of Too Good to Waste and encouraging people to reuse their waste, to recycle, and I would encourage them to do the same thing with respect to plastic bags as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Yes. I've been encouraged to reduce, reuse, and recycle since grade 3 as well, but do you think we can get to banning plastic bags sometime in the near future here in Alberta? Let's take some leadership on that issue. Don't you think that would be better?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think I just answered the same question. Restated one more time, the answer is that we have that matter under consideration. At this point in time we do not have any plans to move forward with banning plastic bags.

Tripvincial High-security Remand Centre

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, almost daily we hear of gang-related violence and murders in communities across Canada. Here in Alberta we are not immune to the bloodshed. I was pleased to see that gang violence was one of the items discussed at the trilateral cabinet meeting in Vancouver last week involving B.C., Alberta, and Saskatchewan. My questions are for the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. Mr. Minister, you attended the trilateral cabinet meeting in Vancouver, and I note with particular interest that a regional remand centre for gang members is being explored. Why would we explore such an option when we're building a new 2,000-bed remand centre here in Edmonton?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to start off by saying that we're always looking at ways to ensure that we can protect the citizens of this province, so we have agreed to look at the feasibility of a shared high-security remand centre for high-risk adult gang members. I want to say that gangs do most of their recruiting within remand centres across our country, and if we can keep them isolated in an area where they would be away from the general population and not allowed to do that recruiting, that would be a good thing. We also recognize that these gangs do not respect our provincial boundaries and travel interprovincially, so again it makes sense to take a look at an interprovincial remand centre.

Mr. Dallas: Well, again to the same minister: when might we expect to see movement on such a project as well as any other initiatives to tackle gang crime?

Mr. Lindsay: Well, Mr. Speaker, last week's trilateral cabinet meeting was a first step in that process. Further discussion on building such a facility will take place at this week's western Attorneys General and Solicitors General conference, which we're going to be holding in Calgary. The regional remand centre concept is only one area that we'll be looking at. We also want to see greater collaboration on intelligence sharing for example, also more co-operation between law-enforcement agencies. We're also going to start work on a memorandum of understanding so that we can effectively fight crime between our provinces.

Mr. Dallas: My final question. Again to the same minister: what assurances can this minister give Albertans that this government is still taking action to stop and prevent gang violence?

Mr. Lindsay: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to commend the excellent job that our policing agencies do across our province targeting and arresting gang members in our communities. I can also assure the hon. member and all Albertans that this government is taking action on gang crime. A number of initiatives are under way to reduce and prevent gang crime in our communities, including the development of a gang crime suppression initiative. We're also moving forward on the establishment of four integrated gang enforcement teams announced by our Premier last fall.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Intrabasin Water Transfers

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In June of 2008 the Minister of Environment received recommendations on intrabasin transfers from the Alberta Water Council. They recommended that a new policy was needed. On November 8 the minister admitted that he had received the recommendations, that he was still considering them, and an answer was coming sometime in the new year. So to the Minister of Environment: can the minister tell us what the holdup is in his response to the Alberta Water Council's recommendations and when we can expect an answer? We're now three months into the new year.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the issue with respect to intrabasin transfers of water is that there are already numerous instances where such transfers are taking place and they have historically for a long period of time. It is very difficult to implement a simple solution to this very complex problem. As this member should be aware, we are engaging into a broad consultation with respect to allocation of water. Intrabasin and interbasin transfers obviously are important parts of that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. The Water Act defines "basin" very broadly, with only seven basins covering an area of almost 700,000 square kilometres in Alberta. My question to the Minister of Environment is: will he change the definition of a major river basin to redesignate the three subbasins in the South Saskatchewan River basin?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the member is absolutely correct. Our policy is abundantly clear: we do not allow for interbasin transfers of water. As the member knows, any such contemplation requires an act of this Legislature. Once you get into subbasins, it gets very, very difficult to distinguish between subbasin rivers and subbasin creeks. The definition required to actually determine what is and is not intrabasin becomes much more complicated, so I can't give that commitment to this member.

Ms Blakeman: All right, then, to the same minister. He mentioned public consultation that he is already holding on this issue. Would he add to that public consultation the assignment to decide whether or not the three subbasins in the South Saskatchewan River basin should be reclassified into major river basins? This would solve a problem like we have with Balzac.

Thank you.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I'm not prone to making policy decisions on the fly in the Legislature. I'll take that under consideration, and we'll be announcing appropriate legislation in due course.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 102 questions and responses today. Our question period is 50 minutes. Out of interest, the length of question period in the Canadian House of Commons is 45 minutes.

In 30 seconds from now I'll call upon the first of five remaining members to participate in Members' Statements.

Provincial Plan to End Homelessness

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This morning Alberta became the first Canadian province to develop and approve a 10-year provincial homeless strategy. This 10-year plan, called A Plan for Alberta: Ending Homelessness in 10 Years, was released earlier this morning in Calgary by Alberta's Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs and Steve Snyder, chair of the Alberta Secretariat for Action on Homelessness. It was only a little over a year ago that the Premier established the secretariat and gave them the mandate to deliver a provincial plan to end homelessness in 10 years. This plan, I'm pleased to say, represents the collective wisdom, experience, and determination to get the job done, and its public release and endorsement by the government is an important step forward in our goal to end homelessness and make our communities safer, stronger, and more sustainable.

Albertans care about our families, friends, neighbours, and those in need. Alberta's 10-year homeless plan is rooted in a set of principles that we all share. I will highlight just a few here: addressing root causes of homelessness is essential to ending homelessness; everyone has access to safe, affordable, permanent housing; and preventing and ending homelessness is a shared responsibility. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend our Premier and the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs for their leadership in developing this 10-year plan and moving it through government.

I had the opportunity to spend three days attending the national homeless conference held in Calgary a few weeks ago and to listen to people who are currently homeless. What I heard and what I learned is that homelessness is not simply a matter about housing; it's essentially about belonging. Our commitment to ending homelessness in Alberta is also about defining the character of our province.

Today is a great day, and I do believe that this plan will chart the way on our journey to end homelessness in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Brian Hesje

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Augustana faculty of the University of Alberta, originally Camrose Lutheran College, is an institution that's played a significant role in the lives of many thousands of Albertans and others around the world. In the coming year it will be celebrating its centennial. Over the last century the typical profile of an Augustana student has been that of a kid from the farm or a small prairie town. It started out as a high school for children of Norwegian Lutheran immigrant farmers and has evolved into a world-class liberal arts and science faculty of the University of Alberta known for its excellence in teaching and its small, intimate classes set in a beautiful, small city.

For many of those small-town kids Augustana was their springboard to greater accomplishments. I can think of no better example of that than Brian Hesje, who was introduced earlier today. He's Augustana's most recent recipient of its distinguished alumnus award. Brian Hesje grew up on a farm in Saskatchewan, and after a bit of a false start at a large university he decided to try Augustana, or at that time Camrose Lutheran College. He has described his time there as a life-changing event. The rural community spirit and overall intimacy and culture of the school made him believe in his ability to make a difference. In other words, Augustana gave Brian Hesje confidence.

His accomplishments are too numerous to mention. I'll just say that he has a bachelor of education and a master of business administration from the U of A. He's a chartered accountant. He's currently chair of the board of Fountain Tire, which is recognized as one of Canada's 50 best managed companies. He's also a member of the ATB Financial board, the STARS board, and is past vice-chair of the NAIT board. His business philosophy reflects Augustana's belief that the spirit of co-operation so crucial to rural life invigorates human endeavour. What a wonderful role for us all and, in particular, those students who might be wondering if they can make a difference in their lives.

Congratulations and thanks to both Augustana and Brian Hesje.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Robin and Brian McKeever

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is blessed with truly inspirational citizens, including Robin and Brian McKeever. Robin was a member of Canada's 1988 Olympic cross-country ski team, and following in his ski tracks, literally, is his younger brother Brian. When Brian looks straight ahead, he sees nothing. He has Star-gardt's disease and is legally blind, but that's not stopped him from winning four gold, two silver, and two bronze medals in previous Paralympic Games. He also won two gold medals last month at the International Paralympic World Cup, and that sets him up well for his bid to compete in the 2010 Vancouver-Whistler Olympics.

You heard right, Mr. Speaker. Brian McKeever could well become the first person in history to compete in both the Winter Paralympics and the Winter Olympics for able-bodied athletes. In the Paralympics Robin skis in front of Brian, but in the Olympics Brian would be on his own, honing in on other skiers, at least until he blasts past them at the finish line. Brian made history at the regular cross-country ski world championships in 2007. Not only did he finish the 15-kilometre race; he did so as the top Canadian, an impressive 24th.

The McKeever story strikes close to home for me, Mr. Speaker. Both of my grandfathers were blind. Many of my relatives live with many visual maladies, and each has gone on to do great things. Some of you may know that a climbing mate of mine, Eric Weihenmeyer, is the only blind person in history to successfully scale the summit of Mount Everest. He's ever gracious in crediting his teammates for his success, and similarly Brian McKeever has enjoyed great support from his brother Robin. But now Brian is trying to prove that blind and alone or not, indeed the sky is the limit.

I invite all hon. members to join me now in expressing appreciation to the McKeever brothers for their inspiration and in wishing them continued success.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Emergency Medical Services

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a nurse I cannot count the number of times I've seen overwhelming gratitude and respect for our dedicated emergency medical personnel. I was in a serious car accident, and the time waiting for their arrival was terrifying. I can't describe that feeling of complete trust, that I let go of the fear and stress, and that I was safe when they arrived.

Now there will be an additional burden on these professionals. They'll be expected to perform triage in the field. These professionals will rise to the occasion, but we must examine the government's proposal very carefully before moving forward. Albertans need to know exactly who will be responsible for which decisions made by the emergency medical services.

In emergencies there's very little room for error. First, Albertans must know if all levels of EMS staff will be given the authority to triage patients. Emergency medical responders take a 160-hour course. Emergency medical technicians take 300 hours of EMT theory, a 40-hour hospital practicum, six hours of classroom instruction, and an eight- to 16-week ambulance practicum. Emergency medical technicians, paramedics, have all of this training plus the two-year program. Will triage authority be given only to those with the highest level of training? Rural areas have volunteer services. Will they be retrained?

My constituents ask where they may end up: doctors' offices, medicentres, or primary care centres. Clearly, the government is hoping to reduce ER wait times by decreasing the numbers presenting to ER. The government hasn't produced any evidence to show that wait times at ERs will change. In fact, the government finds it hard to admit that the problem even exists. ERs are clogged because patients are waiting for beds in hospitals. Seniors in those acute beds should be in long-term care.

Mr. Speaker, health care demands extreme attention to detail. Quick fixes may not help. Additional beds in and out of hospitals would be a good start.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Support for Victims of Sexual Assault

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today I attended a press conference for the Sexual Assault Centre of Edmonton. The centre is launching a campaign called March into the Light. This campaign seeks to increase the support and awareness for victims of sexual assault.

Today I learned that in Canada 39 per cent of women over the age of 16 experience a sexual assault at some point in their lives and that only 8 per cent of all sexual assaults are reported to police. These are just two of the many appalling statistics regarding sexual assault. Help is needed to improve and expand the services the centre is able to offer to children and adult survivors of sexual violence. The Sexual Assault Centre is inviting us all to light a candle, actual or virtual, and to make a donation to help improve and expand the support services for victims in need.

You can also support this cause by participating in their annual Take Back the Night March, where everyone will carry candles of hope. The march will meet at 7 p.m. at the Alberta Avenue Community Centre on – I don't have a date. Together we will reach out to victims and help to reduce the impact of sexual assaults on Albertans. Light a candle in the darkness. Dare to be aware.

Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Bill 23Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 23, the Municipal Government Amendment Act, 2009.

This bill introduces changes that are necessary to improve Alberta's assessment complaints and appeals process. These changes are a result of a comprehensive consultation with stakeholders and will result in a more understandable, effective, and accessible system for everyone involved.

[Motion carried; Bill 23 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I apologize. I guess I haven't had my morning coffee yet. I'm rising with respect to Standing Order 70(a).

Some Hon. Members: Bill 29.

Mr. Denis: Yeah, Bill 29, the Family Law Amendment Act. I'm rising with respect to Standing Order 70(a) . . .

The Speaker: I think we'll move on, then, to the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Bill 30Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 30, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2009.

This bill will amend the Traffic Safety Act. The proposed changes include the following. A wording change related to the maintenance enforcement program replaces "cancellation" of an operator's licence regarding the maintenance enforcement program and defaults to "suspension" to address administrative processes resulting from the different definitions of terms. This change eliminates confusion and appropriately identifies those who fail to make support payments as suspended drivers.

The second one is investigator class. This creates a new class of investigators for the carrier and vehicle safety programs and driver training programs. These investigating officers will be dedicated to carrying out specialized technical functions under the Traffic Safety Act and its regulations.

The third one, peace officer definition change. This amendment amends the definition of peace officer in the Traffic Safety Act and clarifies the definition of peace officer to include the new classification as well as police officers created under the Police Act, including First Nations police officers. Mr. Speaker, this gives police officers who were inadvertently not included in the peace officer definition under the Traffic Safety Act the authority to enforce the act.

The fourth change is conduct of driver examiners, driving instructors, and the operation of driver training schools. This clarifies the authority to make regulations about the conduct of driver examiners, driving instructors, and the operators of driver training schools.

The fifth change is that administrative penalties may be levied in the case of driver examiners, driver instructors, and the operators of driver training schools. Mr. Speaker, this adds the driver examiners, driving instructors, and operators of driver training schools to the definition of regulated persons and thereby provides the further compliance tools.

These two amendments I just mentioned, related to driver training and the operation of driver training schools, stem from a 2008 court case and legal advice from Alberta Justice.

The sixth change is the definition of intersection safety device. It clarifies the definition of intersection safety device introduced in the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2007. It is necessary to specify that these devices are capable of gathering evidence for traffic signal red-light infractions or speeding infractions or both. Without the amendment Justice believes that the definition may be interpreted that an intersection safety device may be able to gather evidence for a traffic signal red-light infraction and a speeding infraction.

The last amendment, Mr. Speaker, is the capping of vicarious liability of vehicle rental companies. Finally, this amendment adds vehicle rental companies to the list of businesses whose vicarious liability will be capped under the proclamation of the 2007 Traffic Safety Amendment Act.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Well, that was a rather exhaustive first reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 30 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 30 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: Back to the hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont for introduction.

Bill 29Family Law Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I won't state the standing order this time. I request leave to introduce Bill 29, the Family Law Amendment Act, 2009.

This bill relates to the child support recalculation program, which will improve access to justice by offering a simple and low-cost way for parents to have their child support orders recalculated annually based on changes in the parents' income without returning to court. The proposed amendments respond to feedback received by this government in recent consultations and will improve the incentive for parents to provide their income information to the new program. This bill will better encourage parties to be open with the recalculation program and ensure that if they are not, Alberta's children will still receive the support that they deserve.

I, therefore, move first reading of this bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 29 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move that Bill 29 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: Well, hon. members, we now come up against Standing Order 7(7). It's now 3 o'clock. If we want to proceed with the remainder of the Routine, we'll need unanimous consent. I will ask if all hon. members will permit the Assembly to continue the Routine. If you are opposed, simply say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Okay. The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Bill 31

Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise again today to request leave to introduce Bill 31, the Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

Mr. Speaker, the Rules of Court, which govern practice and procedure in the Court of Appeal and the Court of Queen's Bench in this province, are going through major revisions, and this bill will consolidate the authority for the Rules of Court in one statute, the Judicature Act. Most provisions relating to the enforcement of money judgments will be relocated from the Rules of Court to the Civil Enforcement Act and regulation. This bill will also make housekeeping and other consequential amendments to various statutes related to the new rules. If I ever decide to practise law again, I will have to learn these new rules as well.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 31 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 31 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to table five copies of the Alberta Secretariat for Action on Homelessness report. A Plan for Alberta represents a dramatic shift in focus from finding homeless people a place to sleep each night to providing homeless people with a place to live. This plan adopts a Housing First approach. This approach provides immediate housing along with the support services needed to break the cycle of homelessness.

Mr. Speaker, I do applaud our Premier for his personal leadership and for his commitment to end homelessness, and I thank the members of the secretariat for this wonderful plan. It's good news. I encourage all members in this Assembly to review the report.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a document to table today to the Legislative Assembly. It's the Alberta heritage savings trust fund business plan 2009-12. It's a draft from the heritage savings trust fund meeting that occurred earlier this morning in the Legislature Annex.

I don't have another tabling, but to the hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands: I would remind him that the Speaker of our Assembly has been elected in nine consecutive elections while you are still working on that. You should be proud of your record of seven. I guess Speakers very often get elected for a long period of time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of 10 reports from long-term care workers indicating a variety of specific problems on different shifts that were short staffed. These indicate that some residents did not receive their morning care until mid-afternoon, and once again scheduled baths were missed.

The Speaker: Okay. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on a purported point of order.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise under a number of sections of the standing orders, the usual suspects of 23(h) and (i), but I would also like to add to that (j) and (l). Section 23(h) reads, "makes allegations against another Member"; (i) reads, "imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member"; (j) refers to using "abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder"; and (l) says, "introduces any matter in debate that offends the practices and precedents of the Assembly."

I'm referring, Mr. Speaker, to the comments made by the Premier. You will have the advantage of the Blues, but they were to the effect of alleging that the position of the opposition has been or perhaps still is to shut down the oil sands altogether. I want to argue on two different lines, Mr. Speaker. One is a matter of truth, and the other is a matter of respect.

First, on the issue of truth I'm just going to cite a couple of examples that completely contradict the Premier. This, first of all, is from the election platform of the Alberta Liberals in the last election, page 16. I'll just keep this quote very brief. "Unleash 'the Western Tiger' by encouraging the building of bitumen upgraders in Alberta." I repeat that: "encouraging the building of bitumen upgraders in Alberta." Okay? It's a matter of clear print in the platform.

I will also refer briefly to the text of a speech that I delivered many times in the fall of September 2007 that was widely reported. The Premier has actually referred to it a number of times. I just want to make sure it's on the record. It's an outstanding speech, I think, Mr. Speaker, but I'll just quote from it very briefly.

In fact, there are at least three other upgraders of Alberta bitumen planned for the U.S. They're being built there for various reasons, things like lower costs and readily-available labour. I don't blame the companies. Everyone knows our economy – Alberta's economy – is overheated. Labour is scarce. Construction costs are skyrocketing. But it got me to thinking: Is this the best we can do? Or are we letting a tremendous opportunity pass us by? Is there a better way to build Alberta's future? I think there is.

That's one quote.

I will quote again, and this was in a very favourable context. I said that at an oil sands conference just last winter former premier Peter Lougheed said, "I just find it completely unacceptable that our resource involves shipping jobs down the pipeline with bitumen to the United States." In this speech I was agreeing with that position.

I will finish with a last quote here from that speech, which was known to the Premier.

Earlier this year, in discussing the potential flow of bitumen south to the US, the Canada West Foundation reminded all of us of a well-repeated insult. They said that shipping bitumen to the US for upgrading "would solidify Canada's embarrassing label as a hewer of wood and drawer of water."

We can do so much better. We can have a sustainable and secure economic future. We can solidify Alberta's place in Canada. Rather than just shrugging our shoulders and letting things go, we can think strategically. We can imagine the future we want. We can plan for that future. Corporations flourish by reaching out . . . by working together. Business gets it. So can government. Imagine what we can do with the resources we have here. Here in Alberta . . . I'd rather this prosperity benefit Albertans.

Those are two clear documentations of the fact that this caucus has stood strongly for developing the oil sands and that the Premier has known that because he has referred to this speech. Mr. Speaker, on that basis I would argue – and it's clear in black and white – that the Premier in his comments has taken a position of falseness against us. [interjections] I would ask for order, Mr. Speaker. I'm getting a lot of heckling from the minister of health, and I'd ask for some order in this point of order.

The Speaker: Hon. members, would everybody listen attentively.

Dr. Taft: Thank you.

Secondly comes the matter of respect. Now, I raise this issue, Mr. Speaker, because the Premier made exactly the same or substantially the same allegation on November 3, 2008, and at that time it was also a point of order. That's where I bring in 23(j) and (l) from the standing orders, because this is important. I believe that if you as Speaker do not come down clearly on this issue and enforce it, we are allowing a continual repeating of these points of order, continuing abuse.

I will say to you, Mr. Speaker – and I want to quote from your comments and from the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, page 433, which says, among various things: "The Speaker has ruled that the matter is a disagreement among Members over the facts surrounding the issue." Well, there is no disagreement over the facts surrounding the issue. The facts are in black and white. I put it to you that by repeatedly raising this issue, the Premier is in fact undermining your authority and is using language of a nature likely to create disorder. If he repeatedly brings forward the same matter, the same deceit, the same lies, the same misrepresentation, and if he's allowed to get away with it time and time again, then we will get disorder.

Mr. Speaker, I would also say that the Premier's behaviour and comments offend the practices and precedents of this Assembly. This point of order has been raised repeatedly in the past. This Premier has repeatedly made the same false allegations, and I would challenge you as Speaker to come forward with a forceful ruling to make it clear – to make it clear – to the Premier that continuing to make blatantly false comments and imputing false motives and allegations to us is unacceptable. I would say further that if you do not make that ruling, we are inviting complete disorder in this Assembly.

Thank you.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, the only thing I can think of is that the hon. member is trying to get himself unshackled from the dictums of his own leader, saying that there should be order in the House, because he wants to unleash disorder by exhorting you to make a ruling on an issue for which there is no good reason to do so.

First of all, I guess probably the only thing I would need to say is that his point of order is about making an allegation against another member, and in his first line he indicated that if there was any such allegation, it was against a whole caucus, not against a member. You've ruled on that so many times, Mr. Speaker. No member was singled out by the Premier. He basically pointed out something that I think has been apparent to every member of this House and many members of the public, and that is that the Liberal opposition time after time for the last three years have exhorted a viewpoint that, taken to its natural conclusion, would have had the oil sands shut down, and there would have been no bitumen for upgraders.

The bottom line, Mr. Speaker, is that the hon. member in his questions this afternoon was talking about upgraders, and all of us in this House, I believe, and Albertans want the upgraders to proceed. They want to have the opportunity for bitumen taken from the oil sands to be upgraded here at home and the value added here at home, and that's, I think, very fair.

But it's interesting that in the questions raised today really about the building of upgraders, the Premier made a very valid point. There's no point in having upgraders if you don't have bitumen, and you won't have bitumen if you put a significant constraint against, if you participate in the maligning of the resource that we have. That, I think, was the point that the Premier was making. It has nothing to do with an allegation against another member. No member was mentioned. In fact, I think the reference was to the position taken by the opposition caucus. There was no imputed or false or unavowed motive to another member. Indeed, the Premier was referring to positions taken by the opposition caucus over the past number of years.

You know, the hon. member talks about truth and respect and quotes himself from his various speeches to show that he has been talking about bitumen. Fair enough. I'm glad to hear because I hadn't heard it before and I guess neither had most Albertans heard before the views that he was expressing, that he was so positive about the oil sands of Alberta and the value of those oil sands to the future of Alberta and the need to upgrade the bitumen here at home and create jobs and value for Albertans.

It appears we're all on the same page, and we'll work together going forward to create that kind of opportunity for Alberta, Mr. Speaker, but no one has had their integrity or their motives called into question here. It's really a question of really, truly understanding the position of the Liberal opposition when on one day they attack vociferously the oil sands, which underpin the economy of this province, and the next day attack the government for not having upgraders in place to upgrade the bitumen that they wouldn't want us to extract.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on this point of order.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. In addition to the speeches the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview quoted, we have pages and pages and pages of Hansard supporting the fact that we believe in the oil sands. Where the disagreement occurs, Mr. Speaker, is on the pace of development and the style of development. We've talked about environmentally sustainable development. You'll not have heard – and you can search Hansard – a Liberal having talked about a moratorium. You will find examples where we talked about putting on the brakes as opposed to full speed. We've talked about economic, sensible development as opposed to the rate, but you will never find any suggestion that the Alberta Liberals are opposed to the sustainable environmental and economic development of the tar sands. That is the basis of this point of order. The Premier has impugned motive. The Premier has suggested that we are opposed to the development of the oil sands.

It's a good opportunity that we have today for those members who have not heard this repeated to actually plug in the term "Liberal" as it connects with oil sands and do their research and their homework. You will see that we believe that this is sustainable if the proper environmental precautionary moves are taken. We have brought up concerns such as the 500 ducks dying in the tailings ponds. We have brought up concerns about leaching.

The Speaker: Try and zero it in very, very specifically to the point of order, okay?

Mr. Chase: Thank you.

The Alberta Liberals are on record as supporting the oil sands sustainably, economically, environmentally.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River.

Mr. Oberle: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'd just like to point out – and I'm sure you're aware – that the subject of the original point of order was not what the Liberal policy on the oil sands was. Clearly, there's some confusion around that, and I suggest we might not be able to clean it up today. The original point of order referred to 23(h), (i), and (j) and whether an allegation was made against a specific member. The member in his comments admitted himself that a sweep of the arm indicated a party across the House. I see three parties across the House. I suspect the Premier was indicating one of two of them. Whether the language was intended to or did in fact cause disorder in the House: I suggest that the tone of the question period, which was perhaps one of the quietest we've had in months, answers that question directly.

I submit that the ensuing debate, while useful, might help to clear up in some regard the Liberal position. It does nothing to speak to a point of order, which is frivolous, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Well, that was 16 or 17 minutes. Hon. members, our standing orders are very, very specific. We have Standing Order 23(h), which was alluded to by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, which says, "makes allegations against another Member," and (i) says, "imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member," and member is capitalized. There's nothing in 23 which refers to a party or a caucus or anything else. That order is raised when it deals with a member.

Now, in the question period, which was a very calm, quiet, soothing question period today, the Premier, in responding to a question that came from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, said the following: "Unfortunately that same attention wasn't paid to the job losses in the oil sands when the party opposite to me wanted to shut the whole thing down." We certainly had an opportunity to clarify positions of various parties in the House this afternoon. The chair cannot see any allegation against any member that was raised.

I'd just like to refer one more time to Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules & Forms. If you go to order 409, basically dealing with oral questions, which really is the cause of most of the responses, unfortunately, if they get too long, the following should apply:

- (1) It must be a question, not an expression of an opinion, representation, argumentation, nor debate.
- (2) The question must be brief . . .
- (3) The question ought to seek information and, therefore, cannot be based upon a hypothesis, cannot seek an opinion, either legal or otherwise, and must not suggest its own answer, be argumentative or make representations.
- (4) It ought to be on an important matter, and not be frivolous.
- (5) [There] ought to be . . . some urgency.

The only reason the chair raises those again is because invariably they lead to the kind of responses you get. So, you know, if I'm going to start ruling on some of these responses, then I'm going to start ruling on a whole series of questions, and I suspect that nobody wants that to happen. There's got to be some flexibility in here.

The chair is concerned, though. The chair is very, very concerned that an hon. member would stand up on a point of order and say: if you, the Speaker, do not agree with what I'm saying, then there's going to be chaos in the House. Whoa. If that isn't threatening, if that isn't intimidating, if that isn't exhorting, if that isn't pushing, I'm not sure what it is. The chair will not be pushed by any member of this House. If there are arguments to be made with respect to a point of order, they must be intelligent arguments, they must be factual arguments, they must be comprehensive arguments, and they must deal with the point.

This is not a point of order. There was no allegation made against another member in this House.

Before we move on, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly a constituent, Mark Ramsankar, the president of the Edmonton public teachers local 37, who is visiting the Legislature today. Mr. Ramsankar has lived in Sherwood Park for the past 10 years, during which he has worked tirelessly to ensure that Alberta's educational system remains one of the best systems in the world. He is here today to observe debate on Motion 503 later this afternoon. He's seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask him to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House two friends, neighbours, and constituents of mine who are visiting the House today and have been up in the public gallery for a good part of the afternoon. George and Jan Armstrong from Bassano are a third-generation ranch family who've raised their three children in the Bassano area and have been strong supporters of the community for many years. Jan, a sonographer who works in Medicine Hat as an ultrasound technologist, and George, a rancher and a member of the Alberta Institute of Agrologists, have been strong community supporters, involved in hockey and a whole range of community supports that make our community very rich. I'd like to ask George and Jan to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Orders of the Day

Written Questions

[The Clerk read the following written questions, which had been accepted]

Service Alberta Request Wait Times

- Q4. Mr. Mason:
For the fiscal years 2005-2006 to 2007-2008 what was the average wait time each year for Service Alberta to process a person's request for a service or for information?

Government Environmental Inspectors

- Q15. Ms Notley:
In January, May, and September of the years 2002, 2005, 2006, 2007, and 2008 how many full-time environmental inspectors permanently employed by the government were permanently assigned to the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo?

Motions for Returns

The Clerk: Pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) motions for returns are deemed to stand and retain their places with the exception of Motion for a Return 16.

Environmental Inspectors in Wood Buffalo

M16. Ms Notley moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all correspondence between environmental inspectors in the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo, their managers, and the government regarding the inspectors' workloads and ability to complete assigned tasks for the time period between January 1, 2006, and February 10, 2009.

Ms Notley: I'm seeking guidance. Is this my opportunity to outline the rationale for same?

The Speaker: Absolutely.

Ms Notley: Okay. Thank you. The reason we are pursuing this information is because we are of course trying to find out whether there are a sufficient number of environmental inspectors in the Fort McMurray area. As we've already discussed at some length in this House in the course of discussing the most recent point of order debate, this is an issue that's very important to Albertans and about which and around which there's a great deal of debate. On one hand, we have what many people see as the sole economic engine of the province, and whether that is or isn't the case, it's certainly an important component to Alberta's economic structure and success. On the other hand, we have some very, very serious concerns about the toll that that activity takes on our environment. So as Albertans we are looking to see with great detail whether or not the government is successfully balancing between the economic interests and the environmental, the need to protect the environment.

One of the issues that was raised in this House very recently was, of course, the issue of some charges that were laid against companies working in the area identified by this motion, and one of the allegations – granted, it's only an allegation at this point – was that in some cases the company in question was able to engage in environmental breaches for two or three years before the government was able to stop them. The key element to that, of course, and the reason why that was happening comes down to whether or not there really is any kind of comprehensive system of spot-checking or proactive monitoring going on in that area.

Now, we are concerned that, in fact, what's actually happening is that the staff working for the Ministry of Environment up there are actually way behind even their ability to respond to industry notification of incidents, which they're required to make under the act. In that case, they're not even keeping up with that work, and they have virtually no capacity to do any kind of proactive monitoring or safeguarding. This is a matter of extreme public concern and extreme public interest.

In response to estimates debate last spring I had previously received – and I thank the Minister of Environment for this – some information with respect to the number of inspectors up there in that area. I think that at one point there was a bit of confusion. There was talk about four inspectors and one investigator, and then there was talk about increasing that to eight, depending on whether or not they're operating under the oil sands group, but that group actually does a different job and doesn't actually monitor. Anyway, there was a bit of confusion, but in any event there is a great deal of public concern about whether there are enough people up there.

What this motion does is ask for disclosure of discussion between these inspectors and their managers and their managers' managers on the degree to which they are able to meet their obligations under the acts which they are required to enforce, acts that arise from decisions made in this Legislature: the environmental enhancement act and the water protection act. We are concerned that they are not able to meet those needs and that the acts are not being properly implemented, and as Members of this Legislative Assembly we should be very gravely concerned about that fact. It is with this concern in mind that we ask to have more information about the degree to which the inspectors employed by the Ministry of Environment in the Fort McMurray area are able to meet the obligations of their job.

Thank you.

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as you may have deduced by now since this motion for a return was not listed as one that the government is prepared to accept, I am going to be recommending to members that the motion before us be rejected. There are a number of very logical reasons for making that recommendation. I was struck by the member's presentation, in which she indicated that she speculates on what is actually happening and wants this motion to perhaps formulate in her own mind whether or not her speculation is real or imagined. I would suggest that I, too, speculate that the reason why we have this motion before us is because this member wishes to engage in a bit of a fishing expedition. For that reason among others, I would suggest that this is a motion that we should not and cannot accept.

I also want to point out that the motion itself is worded in a rather nebulous form. It's extremely broad and talks about environmental inspectors, and environmental inspectors include a broad spectrum of individuals. It could include employees of Alberta Environment, but it also could include the ERCB, the local health board, inspectors for the regional municipality, and other public bodies such as fish and wildlife.

Records that may form part of any kind of disclosure that this motion requests may include records that relate to open investigations and planning or details of prepared or announced or unannounced inspections. As I've often said in this House, this department engages in audits. Those audits can take the form of announced or in many cases unannounced inspections, so it would compromise the ability for us to do the important work that we do. It also could relate to an open investigation that could harm the effectiveness of the investigative techniques and procedures currently used or likely to be used in law enforcement, or it could reveal information relating to or used in the exercise of prosecutorial discretion.

In summary, the request is far too broad. It would involve other public bodies and likely encompass certain types of information which must be protected as identified in various legislation under environmental legislation, the Water Act, and the Oil and Gas Conservation Act.

As a result, Mr. Speaker, I recommend that the members reject this motion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I have a contrary viewpoint that this request is extremely specific both in time and the information it's looking for, what it's questioning regarding the inspectors' workloads and abilities to complete assigned tasks. It's a very defined time period, January 1, 2006, to February 10, 2009. It seems to me that it would be in the government's best interests to indicate that they have sufficient personnel on hand up north, where a fifth of our land is subject to either in situ or mining of our extremely important oil sands, if the government were to refute charges of dirty oil. It's very hard to refute dead ducks when there are 500 of them floating or sinking below the surface. The member here is saying that if the government is true to its claims of transparency and accountability, then we should be able to find out if the inspectors, in their own words, are able to carry out their assignment.

I also have a degree of sympathy for the Ministry of Environment because my understanding, unless the Environment ministry has received an increase of funding, is that their ministry operates on less than 4 per cent of the entire budget assigned to the various ministries. If the inspectors' workload is such that they can't do their job and if they can't protect the Athabasca River and if they can't carry out Lorne Taylor's hope for the water for life strategy, then this whole oil sands development is at risk not only from external attacks and accusations of dirty oil but from internal stewardship.

Therefore, very specifically, the time period January 1, 2006, to February 10, 2009, workloads and the ability to complete assigned tasks. If the report comes back in the full transparent disclosure and indicates from the inspectors, those who are on the job, basically expected on a 24/7 basis, that they're saying to us, "Help; we cannot perform our job; we cannot provide environmental security," then we need to be listening to those pleas. Unfortunately, if this request is denied, so is transparency and accountability.

The Speaker: Are there others who would like to participate, or should I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to conclude the debate?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess, you know, the hon. minister has suggested that we're on a fishing expedition, and I would like to say that were I to go fishing, I think the last place that I would go fishing would be in water around the oil sands at this point. Notwithstanding that, we're not speculating. We had discussion in this House very recently about allegations levied by this minister's own staff, very clearly, that illegal activity was going on for two years, not caught by the so-called adequate monitoring. So it's quite reasonable for us to assume that that the monitoring is not going on as it should be.

With respect to what was characterized as the nebulous wording, I would just like to say that were the wording that much of a problem, we, of course, would be quite open to discussing ways to amend it in order to meet the public interests as well as the objectives of this Assembly, yet unfortunately that invitation has not been forthcoming.

Finally, as I say, I mean, we'd be also very happy if there were memos indicating that the workload was just okay-dokey and there was no need for additional assistance, but again we can't know that because it appears as though we won't be provided with this information.

I just want to renew my point that this is a matter of grave public concern and grave public issue. It is something that is discussed every week in this Legislature over and over and over again and also within the public. I think there is a significant obligation on the government to be a great deal more forthcoming in terms of the exact details around the efforts that are being made or can be made to protect the environment in the oil sands area.

I urge all members to consider supporting my motion. Thank you.

Bill 202 Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009

[Debate adjourned March 9]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, did you have additional comments to make with respect to this matter?

Then I'll call on the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week, when this bill was presented, I had a number of concerns about it, but I still sort of was on the fence in terms of the aye or nay. However, as I sat here and listened to some of the words that were said by my fellow members of this House, it became quite clear to me that I would be against it. The reason that that would be . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, you've already participated in this debate. You did it earlier. You're ineligible. You can't do it. Please sit down.

Well, we'll go to the next speaker, the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, on a rotation basis.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour today to rise and speak to Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, as proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays. Bill 202 proposes to create an office of municipal auditor general which would assist municipalities in conducting performance audits. As I understand this bill as introduced by the hon. member, it will allow the municipal auditor general to work with municipalities and financial auditors to conduct performance audits that could make recommendations for municipalities on how to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of municipal operations. Bill 202 would require publicly accessible follow-up reports outlining actions taken on recommendations for improving business practices. The objective body of a municipal auditor general would assist municipalities to improve efficiency in their operations and create more openness and transparency for all Albertans.

Currently the MGA, or Municipal Government Act, defines parameters in which municipalities operate. Given that municipalities must fulfill numerous requirements set out by the act in regard to financial reporting and auditing, among these requirements is that Alberta municipalities must submit a financial information return as well as audited financial statements. The financial information return provides details on the overall fiscal position of a municipality within a given year as well as any transactions within that year. Mr. Speaker, further to this, the municipal financial information returns include information that is separated into operating, capital, and reserve fund categories. It also provides details of the municipal property taxes that are levied in that municipality. Furthermore, it outlines a municipality's debt, including current debt levels, total debt service charges, and total debt service limit.

Also required by the MGA, Mr. Speaker, is an annual submission of the municipality's audited financial statements. These financial statements must be in accordance with the generally accepted accounting principles as recommended by the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. The audited financial statements must include any modifications established by the minister through regulations. These financial statements reflect the assets, liabilities, revenues, expenditures, changes in fund balances, and the change in financial position of the municipality. The purpose of both the municipal financial information return and the financial statement is to ensure the transparency of the fiscal position of the municipality.

Beyond the Municipal Government Act the 10-year MSI commitment by this government has provided Alberta municipalities with predictable and sustainable funding that helps municipalities to meet growth pressures. Keeping this in mind, I can see why the hon. member would like to strengthen the provincial and municipal partnership in the interests of citizens and taxpayers. However, sometimes in this House we try to create a policy solution that goes looking for an issue. Now, this might not be the case in this instance. However, I'm not convinced that we have appropriately defined the problem here, Mr. Speaker, and without clearly defining the problem, I cannot be convinced that this bill is the best solution.

Mr. Speaker, I can't help but think, being a member from the city of Calgary, that some of why this bill has come forward has to do with an issue of $25 million footbridges. In speaking with a number of constituents as well as city councillors in the city of Calgary, we need to be very careful that we're not looking for a solution that is not going to address the issue of just making purely bad political choices. I don't think that that is the role of an Auditor General. I think we need to be very careful that we're not looking for a solution to a problem that, quite frankly, doesn't exist or where the solution is actually, rather, something different than what is being proposed.

I also have some concern about whether this actually deals with different sizes of municipalities in a different way. In fact, I think we have some school jurisdictions that have greater operating budgets than a lot of municipalities in this province. Would this be a requirement that we would want to put on school boards as well?

Additionally, since becoming a member of this House, I've become keenly aware of unintended consequences of policy decisions. We need to be careful that like our current provincial Auditor General – and I think we've seen this proliferation of the role of Auditors General, particularly some of the heroic work done by Sheila Fraser, the national Auditor General, and some of the stuff that she has been able to bring to light. We've also seen the expanding creep of the mandate of the Auditor General sometimes going beyond that of just performance auditing and getting into policy setting. I think we need to be very careful of that, Mr. Speaker. I don't want that to be an unintended consequence.

Beyond the last few comments that I've just made, it is a red flag that the AUMA does not support this bill. However, I'm sure that they and the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays and myself support the idea of increasing efficiency, effectiveness, and transparency of the allocation of taxpayers' money. Mr. Speaker, I believe that there is an opportunity to further define and accurately define the challenge that we are trying to address here and explore all policy options available for this issue.

With that being said, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to move that the motion for second reading of Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, be amended by deleting all of the words after "that" and substituting the following: Bill 202, the Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a second time but that the subject matter of the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Community Services under temporary Standing Order 74.2.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, this amendment is being circulated. I do not believe there's such a thing as temporary Standing Order 74.2. There is certainly Standing Order 74.2. This Assembly codified these rules.

Okay. We have an amendment before the House. I'll wait a few seconds as it gets circulated to all the members, and those who would like to participate on the amendment, I'll recognize you. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the amendment.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We're on the amendment. It's very specific.

Mr. Chase: Yes. I was just going to say, Mr. Speaker, that I'll do my utmost to speak to the amendment.

The Speaker: Well, you can be assured. The amendment says: referred to a committee. That's the only thing we're talking about.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. To read the amendment, as you so noted:

Bill 202, Municipal Government (Municipal Auditor General) Amendment Act, 2009, be not now read a second time but the subject matter of the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Community Services in accordance with Standing Order 74.2.

I support the amendment, Mr. Speaker, because I do believe greater discussion is required. This particular municipal government bill, 202, is proposing basically a provincial regionalization power grab, the undermining of local autonomy, undermining local authorities . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm going to make it very clear. This is referral to a committee. That's what we're talking about. We're not debating the bill now.

Mr. Chase: I understand that.

The Speaker: Okay, then. It's committees. It's the only thing you've got to talk about. Nothing else.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. That is why the sober second thought, the extra input that a committee provides is warranted. Therefore, I thank the Member for Calgary-North Hill for bringing forth this amendment.

Thank you Mr. Speaker, for allowing me the opportunity to discuss.

The Speaker: Now, two hon. members – Peace River rose first and the hon. Deputy Government House Leader – both have their Standing Orders in front of them. The Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I just want to get some clarification from the chair with respect to the standing order. As I understand, this is a referral motion under Standing Order 74.1.

74.1(3) Any motion made pursuant to this Standing Order shall be decided without debate or amendment, and if the motion is decided in the negative the Bill shall be ordered for second reading.

So I'm not so sure that we should be engaging in debate at this point.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the amendment was moved during second reading. It is debatable. If it was moved after second reading, it would not have been debatable. It's moved during second reading, and that's why we're debating it.

Hon. Member for Peace River, if you want to continue the debate on the amendment, please proceed.

Mr. Oberle: I guess I have the same confusion, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: No. There's no confusion. The clarification has been given by the chair. Please proceed on the amendment.

Mr. Oberle: In 74.1(3) it says "if the motion is decided in the negative . . . shall be ordered for second reading." How could we do that if we'd already had second reading?

The Speaker: Hon. members, I've already explained the process of how we deal with this. During second reading if there is an amendment, it's debatable. If after second reading a vote has been taken and an amendment comes in, in essence in committee, it's not debatable. We're in the process according to the rules that the members wrote. We're dealing with this. It's a very simple question. You have a question to refer it to a committee or not. It's debatable. It's an amendment.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East on the amendment.

Ms Pastoor: On the amendment, Mr. Speaker, indeed. I certainly would support this amendment. I'll be very brief. I believe that in my remarks when I spoke to this before, I had suggested that very procedure should happen, so I thank my hon. colleague for Calgary-North Hill for bringing that forward.

The Speaker: Others on the referral amendment?

Okay. I take it the hon. member from Calgary is happy with the procedure. We'll call the question on the amendment.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: This matter is now referred to the Standing Committee on Community Services.

This is quite an unusual procedure. Hon. members, if such an amendment was done during a debate when there hadn't even been a vote on it, in essence you've got an ultimate guillotine that I'm not sure any members here in this Assembly have ever suggested they should have. Every bill would in essence come up for an ending of it without any debate.

Bill 203

Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and begin second reading debate on Bill 203, the Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009.

The intent of Bill 203 is to define province-wide standards around financial contributions in municipal elections and to ensure comprehensive and timely disclosure of those campaign financial records. Amendments to the Local Authorities Election Act would see rules for the municipal level mirror legislation that already exists to guide provincial election campaign finances and federal election campaign finances. This will achieve consistent accountability and transparency and increase confidence in fair election financing at all levels in the province. To be fair, some municipal campaign rules already exist in the province today, but they are only implemented with local bylaws, they are inconsistent, and they are few. Only a handful of our approximately 360 municipalities have them.

Mr. Speaker, I would point out that other jurisdictions – Ontario, British Columbia, and Quebec – have already created legislation around municipal election campaign finance, and theirs are more restrictive and farther reaching than Bill 203. That being said, Bill 203's provisions would set fair and reasonable province-wide standards that I believe would be relevant for all Alberta communities.

I also believe that the fundamentals of this bill are strong, that it will be effective to protect the voter, the contributor, and the candidate. For example, the voter will be protected in several ways, including allowing them to be informed by giving them the ability to access full disclosure of who's contributing to any campaign and at what level, by limiting the size of donations, which will ensure that undue influence will not be gained by a small number of supporters making large financial contributions, by helping to encourage a wide slate of candidates, ensuring any citizen has a fair opportunity to run regardless of their economic status or the level of influence they have with potential contributors or by incumbency, and by prohibiting donor organizations in potential conflict or those owned or financially supported by taxpayers from using any part of their resources to contribute to political campaigns. It will also protect the voter by only allowing entities that have legitimate interests in Alberta to invest in political campaigns here and to influence our democratic process and, finally, by helping to ensure that elections will be run and won on broad-based support.

It will protect the contributor by ensuring that their donations will only be used for the purpose for which they were proposed to be used, the candidate's municipal election campaign, by giving them assurance that their input and support counts and that their investment can be just as valuable as the person next door's, and by protecting them from pressures or expectations to make donations that are more than reasonable.

Lastly, this transparency will also protect the candidate by minimizing or eliminating their exposure to unsubstantiated insinuations or allegations of undue influence benefiting perceived large contributors or unknown contributors, by ensuring that they will indeed not be exposed to indebtedness to large contributors, and by ensuring that they have a legitimate shot at winning an election. With a level playing field every Albertan has an equal opportunity to make a difference. They can be successful regardless of their wealth, incumbency, or their ability to network with wealthy or influential Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, to achieve this, Bill 203 has a few key elements: limit individual contributions to a total of $5,000 within any campaign period, define organizations that would not be eligible to make municipal campaign contributions, define the campaign period for reporting purposes, specify the duties of a candidate, require that a candidate file a campaign disclosure statement within a specific period and automatically disqualify any candidate from elected office if they fail to file a disclosure statement within the prescribed time period, and require that any surplus exceeding $500 be paid to the municipality and held in trust in an interest-bearing account.

Mr. Speaker, it is not the intent of Bill 203 to impose retroactivity of these provisions of contribution caps, full disclosure, or prohibited corporations on existing campaign funds. I think we all realize that those existing campaign funds have been built up in good faith and over many years and that it would be unfair and impractical to try and impose these provisions on those existing funds. Therefore, Bill 203 has a one-time transition provision that will allow candidates or potential candidates to declare and transition their existing campaign funds. Once declared and put into trust, those existing funds would be eligible for future campaigns without full compliance to the provisions of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, that outlines the intent and the key elements of Bill 203. It is also important to emphasize what Bill 203 is and what it is not. Bill 203 is not an indictment of municipal elections in Alberta today or of municipalities or of municipal candidates. However, it is an affirmation that the legislation governing federal and provincial elections has proven very valuable and that they are working and working well. It is a recognition that a gap exists today, a gap in how we handle election campaign finance in Alberta. It is also a recognition that by filling in this gap, we can and should do for municipal elections what B.C., Ontario, and Quebec have already done, which is just what has been done through the strict provincial and federal campaign finance guidelines; that is, to strengthen the integrity of our democratic system and, more importantly, the confidence of voters in their hard-working elected officials.

Ultimately, Bill 203 will also increase the opportunity for all Albertans to get better informed, more engaged, and potentially run in the elections in their communities. To that end, Mr. Speaker, I'm looking for support from the Assembly for Bill 203. I look forward to the very important debate on this private member's bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to have the opportunity to be part of debate on Bill 203 today. First, I want to thank the member for the work that he has done to bring this bill forward.

Mr. Speaker, we know that strong municipalities are the key ingredient to strong communities. The Premier and myself have reiterated that numerous times. I know that all strong municipalities also believe in accountability. Accountability and transparency are things Albertans expect for all municipalities regardless of size and all levels of government. Accountability is a priority for my ministry and for this province. Bill 203 is consistent with this priority. That is why I'm happy to support it.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has a sound election process in place. In 2005 the Local Authorities Election Act was strengthened after a major review. Another comprehensive review is anticipated following the 2010 municipal elections. In the meantime these changes suggested by my hon. colleague are welcomed and worthy of consideration.

The Local Authorities Election Act does contain rules about campaign finances. These rules also give local authorities the ability to pass bylaws on campaign expenses. Bill 203 strengthens and brings consistency to these rules. Disclosure and what happens to surplus campaign funds are specifically looked at. I look at the fact that it would also make these rules consistent across the province, improving accountability for all Alberta municipalities. I support these changes.

However, as this bill moves forward, there's one point that I would like to see further discussion on, and that is the issue of school board trustees. The Local Authorities Election Act applies to both municipal councillors and school board trustees. I would be interested in hearing from this member if this was something he considered when drafting the bill.

As I conclude my remarks today, Mr. Speaker, I would once again like to thank the member for bringing forward this bill. It brings attention to the importance of accountability and transparency, something we know Albertans expect from all levels of government.

Thank you again, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am speaking primarily in support of Bill 203, Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009. I have a reservation, which I will get to a little bit later.

What I am in favour of in terms of the transparency and accountability the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs brought forward, I would like to echo. I would like to see the type of control for elections throughout the province have a uniform set of rules, and this is what Bill 203 attempts to accomplish, to put requirements on municipal elected officials, whether they be school board trustees or councillors at the local level, aldermen, alderwomen, and so on. I would like to see the same types of rules that are being suggested in Bill 203 also be required of leadership races.

We've had an example in this province where the successful candidate failed to disclose where $163,000 of donations came from. We did not get a strong sense of where that $163,000 of donations went. Another leadership candidate refused to disclose any of the donations, never mind the amount received. We had no sense of what their total donations were. That is far from being transparent and accountable. What this does: the intent is to bring local municipalities into closer accountability such as we as elected Members of this Legislative Assembly experience in terms of the donations, the reporting. It also puts restrictions on how these donations can be kept, collected, and potentially accessed, utilized should that individual wish to run again.

Now, the difference for us provincially, at least, I would think, for a number of us, is that when we have been successfully elected – I know that in my particular case and that of members of my Liberal opposition our monies, whatever monies are left over after an election, go back into our constituency associations for their use and their distribution. The reality is that if we have saved a sufficient amount of money, that money can then be transferred during the next provincial election. Obviously, it's to our potential advantage, but also it provides a starting point for the next individual running in that particular constituency because the money is very carefully accounted for through the Elections Alberta process. Applying that kind of transparency and accountability to the municipal level would create a much more even playing field and give individuals who didn't have large corporate sponsorship an opportunity to compete on a more equal basis.

The fact that the money is held in trust for specifically the municipal election means that that individual couldn't potentially use the money they'd collected for representing their ward and then walk off with that pot should they decide to retire or should they, say, decide to run provincially, have several thousands of dollars collected on their behalf, which would then not translate back to necessarily good work for their entire ward but just for that part of the constituency that they might be provincially elected to represent.

I very much support the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater in terms of trying to after a fashion universalize the rules that are expected of elected members, whether it be as leader of the government, as leader of the opposition, or provincial MLAs, in this case municipal representatives.

The one area that I have a degree of difficulty with has to do with disenfranchising certain organizations, in particular members of a union. It seems to single out individuals who belong to a particular union from contributing to a candidate whom they believe will bring up issues such as a living wage. Reducing that degree of influence causes me a degree of concern.

I also would like to point out that when Prime Minister Jean

Chrétien was in power, he dramatically reduced the contributions that either individuals, unions, or corporations could provide. He basically set the federal bar in terms of disclosure, transparency, and accountability, and that is not a partisan circumstance. It's trying for transparency and accountability and taking away undue influence based on the size of your wallet.

Bringing accountability to local officials such as Bill 203 proposes I think brings them into line with already established provincial standards, and therefore I am very supportive of Bill 203.

Thank you for the opportunity to discuss.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise this afternoon to speak on Bill 203, the Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009, sponsored by the person to my left, the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater. In my past life I handled many matters of an electoral nature, and I often thought that laws like this should come in.

Just before I begin, I did have a constituent contact me about this, and he mentioned to me: "You know, today is St. Finian's Day. How particular that this would come out on March 16. His motto was to live as others did." This is quite consistent with that mantra, Mr. Speaker. I want to commend the Member for Athabasca-Redwater for bringing this legislation forward because it's really a long time coming.

Now, as my hon. colleague mentioned, this legislation brings us in line with rules governing federal elections in Canada as well as our own provincial elections in this province. Mr. Speaker, this bill will enhance the integrity of our democratic process for our municipal elections in four key areas: one, limiting the size of campaign contributions; two, dealing with surplus campaign funds; three, improving public disclosure; and four, prohibiting certain types of contributions.

First, I want to speak about the proposed limits on the size of the campaign contributions that this bill proposes. This proposed bill will cap the size of individual contributions at $5,000. If you look at a comparison to other jurisdictions in this country, it makes sense to put a limit on these contributions. There may be some argument as to exactly where this limit should go, but I think this bill sets an adequate compromise between the two paradigms.

There already are limits in Ontario and Manitoba, specifically in Winnipeg. However, their limits are much more restrictive. The limits in Ontario, Mr. Speaker, are $750, the same for Winnipeg except that that limit is doubled to $1,500 for their mayoral candidates. Now, there's also a limit in place in Quebec, $1,000, and the same thousand-dollar limit applies for our federal elections, roughly. I think it's about $1,150.

Alberta's provincial elections limit contributions to $1,500 to a party; to a thousand dollars to a constituency association, or $5,000 as aggregate, as the Member for Athabasca-Redwater has corrected me on; and to $2,000 to a candidate, or $10,000 aggregately. As you can see, this brings us in line for municipal elections in this province, Mr. Speaker, with other jurisdictions in Canada but sets less restrictive limits, a trait that Albertans value.

Mr. Speaker, another main goal of this bill is how to deal with surplus campaign contributions. One thing that I've often thought of is that in a civic election we don't have parties in this province. I'd argue that there's nothing in the Municipal Government Act or our Election Act that prohibits parties from getting involved in municipal elections, but it doesn't happen here. It does happen in B.C. and Quebec; it doesn't happen here. As such, there's no constituency organization. For example, if I were to retire after the next election and there's money left over in the Calgary-Egmont association's account, it would typically go on to the next candidate for the purposes of electing a candidate of a particular party in that association. But when you're running for alderman or mayor, there are no political parties, and that's why this bill is important.

The bill proposes that surplus campaign funds exceeding $500 are to be paid to the municipality and held in trust in an interest-bearing account. If a candidate doesn't run in the following election, the money is donated to a registered charity, or it becomes property of the municipality.

Again, the proposition also brings us up to speed with several other jurisdictions in Canada. Ontario and B.C. have laws that are nearly identical to this proposition with the same threshold, $500, Mr. Speaker. Manitoba also designates that excess funds are held in trust but does not allow a $500 threshold to be deemed part of the candidate's personal expenses. In none of those jurisdictions are any candidates allowed to donate excess funds to a charity if re-election is not sought. Instead, the money in those jurisdictions is always deemed to be a donation to the municipality.

I find this to be rather absurd. Again, this bill deals with this. When people donate to a particular candidate or party, they don't want it to necessarily go to the government. That essentially becomes a tax. I'd argue it's an abuse of their own donations. The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater in his legislation has given an option to have a leg up on other provinces who have gone down this route, allowing people to have their money donated to a charity if they do retire.

Now, Mr. Speaker, for our provincial elections we have several different options for how we deal with surplus funds. As I mentioned earlier, you can have these funds held in trust until the next elections, or if a candidate is not seeking re-election, as I mentioned, they can be transferred to the party, transferred to the constituency association, or transferred to the Crown. I somehow don't think the last option is taken advantage of that often. Obviously, our municipal elections do not have parties, as I mentioned. Once again, though, we're falling in line with strong legislation on provincial election financing with respect to these surplus funds.

Mr. Speaker, the next main component of this bill deals with public disclosure. The proposed bill will mandate that a campaign account must be opened at a financial institution. The campaign would then be responsible for filing a campaign disclosure statement with the total amount contributed from all contributors, the contributor's name and address when total contributions are over $100 for the campaign period, and, of course, a list of campaign expenses, similar to what any member of this House would have to have done within our campaign last year.

If we look at other jurisdictions, we can also again see that this change will bring us in line with Ontario, Quebec, and B.C. Manitoba, again, has similar legislation, but their threshold for providing the name and address of a contributor is $250 as opposed to $100, kind of a de minimis rule, wherever you want to draw the line.

Mr. Speaker, in our provincial elections we have that same provision, but the threshold is much more stringent at $50 as a total contribution before the name and address of the contributor need to be disclosed. Federal elections have even further restrictions, with a threshold of $20. That cannot be cash and necessitates that a receipt be issued. Also, any gifts over $500 must be included. Once again, I believe this bill will bring our municipal election laws in line with other jurisdictions in Canada and increase the transparency of our whole election process.

Now, the fourth main component of Bill 203 is prohibiting certain types of entities from contributing towards candidates. The bill seeks to propose those entities who receive municipal funding in nonprofit organizations. This goes a step further than other jurisdictions in Canada such as Ontario, B.C., or Manitoba, who only have restrictions disallowing contributions from anonymous contributors. As well, Quebec only mandates eligible voters who are able to contribute in municipal elections.

However, our provincial elections already have strong legislation. No prohibited corporation or person normally resident outside Alberta or trade union or employee or organization other than as defined in the act can make any contributions to a party, association, or candidate. This proposed change is a proactive step, setting reasonable and province-wide standards for all of Alberta's communities. Mr. Speaker, this bill is an attempt to bring our municipalities up to speed with our provincial and federal finance laws and follows several other jurisdictions, as I have mentioned.

I do want to mention a couple of other things. It was referenced earlier that this is not retroactive. Legislation is typically not retroactive; it applies from one point forward. We're not doing this to try to punish anyone but, rather, to have a set point forward. A further note that I have here is that within the three months following Bill 203 coming into force, persons who intend to be candidates in the 2010 municipal general election must declare existing campaign funds, so it's not intended to be a punishment to anyone who is currently in office.

I mentioned earlier the positive duties of a candidate that it also defines. Also, interestingly enough, this piece of legislation, Mr. Speaker, talks about a campaign period. It defines what a campaign period really is. That can be somewhat nebulous in a municipal election campaign because it's usually held in October every three years. For the purpose of this legislation for a candidate in a general election the period of time from January 1 immediately following the general election to December 31 immediately following the next election is deemed to be a campaign period, and for a by-election, which, of course, has happened before, the period from January 1 immediately following the general election to 60 days immediately following the by-election.

One of the last items I want to deal with, Mr. Speaker, is the issue of voter turnout. Many members of all three parties in this House have talked about low voter turnout. I know that in my maiden speech it was something that bothered me. Well, the turnout in municipal elections is much worse than in provincial or federal elections. For example, in 2007 voter turnout was 27 per cent in Edmonton, 33 per cent in Calgary. In 2004 voter turnout was registered at 27 per cent in Red Deer, decreasing further again in 2007. I think that by setting better rules and by allowing more contributors and encouraging candidates to have more individual contributors, you're going to get more people involved in the process. When more people donate, obviously, I think more people are going to get involved. More people are going to vote.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the Member for Calgary-Varsity brought up that the federal Chrétien government had brought in some finance reforms. A lot of these reforms, though, were brought in just in the 11th hour, as the former Prime Minister was leaving. It was interesting that he did not bring them up before. He had 10 years to do so, and he didn't. Rather, this member is doing this on a go-forward basis without any ulterior motives and without... [Mr. Denis's speaking time expired] Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, you indicated to me that you wish to speak on this bill. Please, go ahead.

Ms Notley: Thank you. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 203, the Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act. I have to start by sort of noting with some amusement the irony of this piece of legislation being introduced, particularly as it's being framed so repeatedly already in relation to our provincial election laws.

I think that in general it's a good piece of legislation. What it attempts to achieve is good, and it's something that we should all support. But it is deeply – deeply – ironic in that it is being introduced in a Legislature and in a province where it will stand alongside our provincial election financing rules, which are not actually like what you see in other provinces. In fact, our provincial election financing rules are quite a Wild West sort of scenario, where there are nowhere near the numbers of rules and limitations and prohibitions that you would see in other provinces. Put another way, there is nowhere near the protection in our provincial election laws against, shall I say, the possibility for undue influence.

Of course, we've just gone through a very open process of certain members of the Assembly who happen to all be associated with a certain caucus within the Assembly having voted on committee to get rid of the Chief Electoral Officer after he made a range of recommendations about what needed to be changed in our provincial legislation, a good deal of those recommendations, of course, linking specifically to the problems with our election financing provincially. It's within that context, then, that I find this very good piece of legislation designed to put in place a very excellent set of rules for our municipal politicians coming here into this Assembly, but at the same time it's just deeply ironic that we're prepared to legislate for municipal politicians a set of rules that we are apparently not prepared to play by ourselves.

There are a couple of elements within this bill that I have some concerns with, having said that, generally speaking, it's good and the objectives it seeks to achieve are also good. Just a couple of points. You know, it would be nice to see or hear whether there was room for those to be amended.

The first point relates to the issue of how trade unions versus corporations are being treated under this legislation. Now, I appreciate that the language defining trade unions in this piece of legislation is very similar to the language used in the provincial act. The difference, of course, is that under the provincial act there is a lot more money that can be given. There's a much, much higher threshold before bodies which are donating money to political parties or to political candidates run up against the prohibitions.

This act attempts to significantly limit the financial contributions that can be made to candidates. I think that that's a good thing. But the difficulty is that it treats trade unions and corporations differently in that all sort of subsidiary parts of a trade union are for the purposes of this legislation being told that they have to be treated as one, yet the same thing does not happen with respect to subsidiary corporate entities.

My view of how it ought to work is that the trade unions ought to be defined in the same way they are defined under the Labour Relations Code. If there is a local that is certified at a certain employer through which there is a certain collective agreement, where that particular group of workers have come together collectively to negotiate a particular set of circumstances, and then that particular local as a group has decided that they want to make a donation to a particular candidate or campaign or party or whichever, then so be it. That's what they are. But to suggest that that local is part of the same local with a completely different employer in a completely different part of the province, where they've never talked to those members, they've never discussed the merits of that particular candidate, they can't co-ordinate among themselves whether it's more important to give $5,000 to candidate A in Calgary versus candidate B in Edmonton, that is, I think, an onerous position to put these locals into.

That's fine if we are doing it for everybody, but the same rules don't apply to corporate subsidiaries. They can make donations all over the place, depending on how they are organized and depending on how their subsidiaries are organized. To me, that's not a level playing field because what you're doing is putting in place a substantial rule which, I think, has merit – i.e., keeping the limit to $5,000 over the course of the whole three years – but then you're applying it differently to two different potential donors. Ironically, one of those groups of potential donors happens to be more likely to donate to the governing caucus than the other group of potential donors, which is more likely to not donate to the governing caucus. That is on the face of it an inequality and inequity which, I think, needs to be corrected. I'm perfectly happy for it to be corrected by closing the loopholes for corporate donations so that everybody truly is limited to the $5,000. But it's got to be one or the other. So that's $5,000.

Again, it's interesting. You compare it to the provincial legislation. As an MLA for the riding of Edmonton-Strathcona I represent about a third of the number of people as the two councillors that represent my ward. It's interesting that my limitation that just as an individual MLA I can receive, I believe, is about $30,000 to $40,000 – I don't know the exact amount, but it's about that much – in total between the two elections, yet a candidate for alderperson could only receive a maximum of $5,000 in that same period of time. That is, again, an interesting irony, that we've got those two different sets of rules in place.

The other concern that I have is that there was mention already about the expansion of prohibited bodies that can contribute, and there was a discussion about the issue of ensuring that nonprofit organizations who had received grants of some type from a municipality were banned from contributing to that municipality. Well, again, a perfectly reasonable approach to take. Absolutely reasonable. Lots of good reasons to put that prohibition in there.

But then I say: why just nonprofits? Why not for-profits? The fact of the matter is that there are circumstances under which for-profit organizations/corporations will receive money, grants, enter into business relationships in a variety of different ways – of course, the opportunity for that is expanding every day through this government's insistence on pursuing a P3 agenda – so there are lots of opportunities where those corporations do have a vested economic interest, a relationship with the government specifically, a direct relationship, are receiving direct funding. So why are we prohibiting a nonprofit group from donating, but we are not prohibiting a for-profit corporation, and we're not prohibiting that for-profit corporation from donating through a variety of subsidiaries in order to maximize their donations?

Now, I appreciate that you've put the $5,000 limit in place, so it does bring it into a more reasonable conversation because the maximum sort of inequity is $5,000. Well, it's more, depending on how many subsidiaries there are, but, you know, we're not looking at hundreds of thousands of dollars, as it is, for instance, under the provincial Election Act, but it is still a concern.

That is the kind of thing that I would like to see corrected as this bill is considered. Again, I would like to be able to say to municipal politicians who raise concerns about this that we're not in a position of, you know, one set of rules for us and another set of rules for them. I think that if we want to have some legitimacy in terms of talking to municipal politicians about how they should run their elections, we need to very clearly say that we're looking at the same rules for ourselves.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my sincere pleasure to rise and join the debate on Bill 203, the Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009, sponsored by my colleague from Athabasca-Redwater. I would like to commend the hon. member for bringing forward this very important piece of legislation.

I would like to know what election rules the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona is looking at or is abiding by. The maximum allowable donation to an individual constituency or individual candidate is actually $2,000 in an election year, $1,000 in a nonelection year, so it is not $25,000 or $30,000.

Ms Notley: It's $10,000. Check the act.

Mr. Anderson: Well, to an individual candidate it is definitely $1,000 in a nonelection, $2,000 in an election.

Ms Notley: To a party it's $100,000; to a candidate it's $10,000.

Mr. Anderson: Luckily, as we know, we do not have parties in municipal elections, so it would be the individual candidates that are important here. I just wanted to remind the hon. member of that.

I believe that this legislation is long overdue and will strengthen our democracy and the democratic processes we have here in Alberta. Ultimately, the objective of Bill 203 is to bring municipal election standards in line with much of what currently guides our provincial elections in Alberta and allows for greater fairness in municipal election campaigning. This would include regulating the size of campaign contributions, creating clearer standards for dealing with surplus campaign funds, and requiring full public disclosure of all finances related to a campaign. As well, Bill 203 would prohibit entities who receive municipal funding and nonprofit organizations from contributing to municipal campaigns.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the Assembly's attention to the manner in which this bill would regulate the size of financial contributions made to municipal campaigns. Fundamentally, I believe that this measure is essential and that it would help create a more level playing field for both candidates and the electorate during municipal elections. Regardless of financial means, campaign donations from individuals and groups would be limited to a maximum total of $5,000 during a campaign period. I would suggest that this is a key component to fairness in free elections as it reduces the ability of large financial contributions to influence candidates and, perhaps, the outcome of a municipal election.

Further to this, individuals or groups who may not have the means to donate significant financial amounts may find that, in fact, smaller donations would have a greater impact in support of their preferred candidate being elected. In short, by regulating campaign donation size, donation amounts, Bill 203 would effectively provide a more equal opportunity for individuals or groups to make meaningful financial contributions to a campaign. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that this may actually enhance the ability of candidates to raise the funds necessary to run a successful campaign.

At the end of the day Albertans are less inclined to become involved in municipal elections if they feel their contributions, financial or otherwise, will have a limited impact when compared to massive contributions made by the community's more powerful and influential donors. Indeed, over and over when individuals who do not vote are asked why they fail to do so or what prevents them from becoming more involved in politics, the most common answer they give is that they believe that their vote or their contribution won't count towards changing the final outcome. In this way a limit on contribution size in municipal elections I believe demonstrates a commitment to ensuring that the voices of all Albertans have a more equal opportunity to be heard. Ultimately, citizens are more motivated to donate when they believe that their contribution to a campaign is truly needed and valued.

Further, Mr. Speaker, size restrictions on financial contributions would not only level the playing field for the electorate during a municipal election but would also do so for those actually seeking to run for municipal office. Given that individuals or groups would be limited to the $5,000 donation maximum during a campaign period, the financial advantage of candidates who rely on a smaller number of significant donations to fund their campaigns is greatly reduced. In order to stay competitive, all candidates would then have to turn their attention to raising funds beyond a small existing base. I would submit that this could lead or should lead to more development and discussion of policies that benefit the majority of a constituency in a municipality rather than a select few. In short, candidates would need to broaden their horizons and their fundraising activities.

Ultimately, this is certainly a more attractive prospect for Albertans who may be considering the idea of running in a municipal race. Mr. Speaker, because of the level playing field that Bill 203 creates with respect to contribution size, such would allow for a greater range or number of new entrants into public office on the municipal level, broadening the scope of ideas and providing Albertans with more choice when deciding on political leadership. Indeed, it helps ensure that the system is free and fair for all candidates and voters alike.

Even more, regulating the size of campaign contributions would help protect candidates and elected officials from allegations of undue influence. Indeed, it can sometimes be simply the appearance of wrongdoing that gives voters pause even where nothing untoward exists. By reducing this real or perceived influence, candidates and elected officials are less likely to find themselves in a situation where their decisions are weighed against who donated significant funds to their campaign. As a result, we are likely to see greater confidence in our municipal governments and locally elected officials, allowing them to focus on important local issues. Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, the strength of regulating the size of campaign contributions is that it presents a win-win situation, benefiting both candidates and electorate.

The amendments contained in this bill only seek to raise municipal standards to the same level of transparency and fairness already experienced at the provincial level. That is to say, Mr. Speaker, this bill is not imposing unique or far-reaching regulations for municipal elections but simply extending a standard already followed provincially.

It is for these reasons that I will be supporting Bill 203, and I encourage all members of this House to do so as well. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall indicated that he wished to speak.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great honour and pleasure to speak in support of Bill 203, brought in by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater, and I would like to congratulate the hon. member for bringing the bill, which is long overdue. Currently municipalities have the power to create their own bylaws regulating whether the candidate running for any office discloses an account for their campaign contributions. In Calgary the reporting for many members was $101; Edmonton, $300; Red Deer, $100; and Lethbridge, $300. There are no maximum limits for contributions in any of the cities, and most cities don't include provisions about what to do with the contribution surpluses. In large municipalities like Calgary the surpluses are huge, and candidates, you know, can do whatever they want with the surpluses. They can pocket it; they can walk away with it.

The penalty in Calgary is no more than $1,000; in Edmonton it's $750 or $100 per offence, depending on the type of offences; in Red Deer it's $500 or $100 each, depending on the offences; and in Lethbridge it's at least $500 and no more than $1,000. This bill, you know, will ensure that there is a level playing field across the province by requiring that all municipalities must abide by the same standard as everywhere else. People have been calling for this bill for a long time. It was not clear if the financial statements are checked for accuracy. It was very vague.

There was great concern about campaign contributions. We need to regulate what happens with the surplus contributions. In some communities the surplus goes to the municipalities. In Edmonton it goes to nonprofit organizations. In Calgary the aldermen get to keep their surpluses. You know, some aldermen have surpluses over $50,000. I think this is important. Perusals should be standardized right across the province so that there is, you know, the same level playing field for all the contributions.

Another argument goes that these contributions or surpluses are private funds; they are not public monies. I think that making these donations tax deductible would stop that argument right in its tracks as well. In Calgary, for instance, campaign contributions are collected during the tenure of a councillor, and that can be pocketed by the person if he chooses not to run in the next election. He or she is able to raise funds under false pretenses. You know, those funds, clearly, should be spent on the elections. If they are not, then it becomes clearly unethical. Those funds should be formally regulated.

As it stands now, the current fines in some cities are not severe enough to disclose the contributions or for misfiling the financial statements. This bill will help, I think, to address some of those concerns as the bill will regulate maximum donations by individuals, corporations, or trade unions to $5,000. The minimum disclosure limit will be $100, and that will be right across the province. It will also address the issue of campaign surplus funds. The funds should be held with the municipality until the next election. A candidate may decide to use the funds for the campaign, or if they decide to not run again, the funds can go to some nonprofit organization.

Also, the audit that will occur with the spending of over $10,000 is a step in the right direction as well. It says that the maximum fine that candidates will pay to the municipality for late filing of financial information is $500. I think that the fine should be a little bit higher. You know, I think that it should be more than $500. I think the rest of the fines are appropriate.

I think that these contributions should be tax deductible. By making the contributions tax deductible, I think it will make it more accountable, more transparent for everybody, and it will create the same level playing field for all the candidates who are running for office.

This bill goes some way to making municipal elections more transparent and candidates more accountable. I think I'm going to support this bill. It's going to strengthen democracy as well. My main concern, you know, is making the financial contributions tax deductible. We need to ensure that all the funds given to the candidates running as municipal candidates are used for municipal elections only, that they are not used for federal or provincial elections. Those are some of the amendments we should have in there. If we address those, I think I'll support Bill 203.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in this Assembly to speak in favour of Bill 203, Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009, brought forward by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater. The objective of Bill 203 is to define minimum standards for financial contributions during municipal elections. This would include ensuring comprehensive and timely disclosure of campaign financial records and creating a clear set of rules regarding surplus campaign funds. Much of this not only brings municipalities in line with what candidates are required to do at the provincial level but also in other jurisdictions across the country. In short, Bill 203 introduces consistent accountability and transparency standards that would improve our democratic process during municipal elections. Bill 203 is just one more way to ensure that our electoral process continues to work for Albertans.

The Merriam-Webster online dictionary defines democracy as "a government in which the supreme power is vested in the people and exercised by them directly or indirectly through a system of representation usually involving periodically held free elections," in short, a government of the people, by the people, for the people.

Mr. Speaker, Canadians and Albertans cherish and value democracy, which forms the foundation of our governmental institutions, and all democracies support the core values of equality of opportunity, accountability, and fairness in our political systems. I think it's safe to say that Canadians can identify themselves by their shared belief in support of democratic governments, procedures, and institutions. A number of municipalities across Alberta have in fact passed bylaws that ensure campaign finance disclosure and that surplus contribution funds are handled properly. The examples set by these municipalities are excellent examples of the way in which greater transparency has benefited both the candidates and the public.

However, to ensure the same level of transparency in all municipal elections across the province, we need to have legislation that guarantees adherence to consistent procedures. One key way to establish this consistency is by clarifying the roles and responsibilities of candidates and contributors. I believe this allows the public to have greater confidence in the democratic process as this increased knowledge allows the public to make better and more educated decisions.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 would also regulate the size of campaign contributions and ensure full public disclosure of all financial accounting in campaigns. This would go a long way to increasing the opportunity for more candidates to run in municipal campaigns by lessening the likelihood that a particular candidate may raise a large donation from a single supporter. Other candidates may not be able to compete in an election if they cannot do the same and/or raise campaign funds to the same degree. In this way regulatory limits on campaign contributions do not limit the amount a candidate can raise or spend in total. It just allows contributors to have a more equal role in the campaign process.

In short, Mr. Speaker, I believe this means that each contributor would be valued to a greater extent. In part this is because a candidate's success would be based more on their ability to earn the support of and raise funding from a greater number of voters. This would better support our democratic system by ensuring that a few large contributors would not be able to fund a candidate's entire campaign. Indeed, when a single person or organization is the main contributor, there's a risk that a candidate may later feel indebted to these individuals. If the candidate is elected, the interests of these individuals could then later take future precedence over the good of the majority.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 addresses this by limiting campaign contributions by any person, corporation, trade union, or employee organization to $5,000 within a campaign period. Ultimately, this element of Bill 203 would help ensure a more democratic electoral process, allowing the majority to play a greater and more direct role in the campaign process. In my experience in municipal politics perhaps fundraising was not an issue because in many rural municipality elections the vote is based on the individual, not how much campaign money he or she could raise. At the same time, the legislation in Bill 203 would require that candidates disclose their financial contributions to voters no matter what the amount is, helping to provide Albertans with greater transparency when it comes to candidates.

Furthermore, I believe that this bill would create a clear directive for dealing with surplus campaign funds, requiring these funds to be declared and held in trust until the next election or donated to the municipality or a registered charity. Here, too, we would see a more enhanced democratic process as this directive ensures accountability and allows Albertans to be assured that their donations are being used for election purposes.

Mr. Speaker, improving and enhancing democracy is always a good thing, and Bill 203 sets a standard for accountability and transparency that will enhance our electoral system at the municipal level. It is vital that we do everything possible to make sure that elections and campaigns in Alberta remain open, fair, and democratic so that voters are not only informed about the candidates they support but have faith in the system. Because of this, I support Bill 203.

I look forward to the remainder of the debate. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and continue debate on Bill 203, the Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009, as sponsored by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater. If passed, this legislation would amend the Local Authorities Election Act to provide minimum campaign finance standards in municipal elections. These would include regulating the size of campaign contributions, creating standardized guidelines for dealing with any surplus campaign funds, and ensuring full public disclosure of all financial accounting in a campaign. Proper campaign finance disclosure is essential to ensuring transparency and accountability. It allows voters to infer what contributors may influence a successful candidate's decision-making in future years.

Mr. Speaker, as outlined in the Canadian Constitution, provincial governments are responsible for providing legislation and structures that direct our municipal governments. Though several municipalities have passed legislation regarding campaign finances, Bill 203 would provide enhanced standards that apply to all Alberta municipalities. This would ensure accountability that stretches to all reaches of our province.

Several other provincial governments have already implemented province-wide municipal campaign finance legislation similar to what Bill 203 seeks to accomplish here in Alberta. These include Ontario, Quebec, and British Columbia. Ontario's Municipal Elections Act provides rigorous minimum campaign finance standards that apply to municipalities province-wide, with some exceptions for the city of Toronto. Many of these standards are similar to the measures proposed in Bill 203, including contribution limits, full and complete disclosure statements, and the handling of surplus funds following an election. For example, contributions to candidates are permitted from individuals, corporations, and trade unions but must not exceed $750. The exception is Toronto, where mayoral candidates may accept contributions up to $2,500.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Like Bill 203, however, in Ontario anonymous contributions to local candidates are prohibited and must be turned over to the clerk to become part of general funds in the municipality. In terms of disclosure all candidates, including those who withdraw their nomination for office, are required to file a complete and accurate financial statement with the clerk to report all contributions and expenses. These forms must include the names and addresses of all those who contribute more than $100 to a campaign. In addition, an auditor is required to review campaigns that record expenses or contributions that exceed $10,000.

Ontario's municipal election law also carefully regulates the handling of surplus campaign funds. Campaigns with a surplus in excess of $500 must pay the surplus in its entirety to the clerk responsible for conducting the election. Following an election, any surplus amount with a value lower than $500 is deemed the candidate's own funds. Surplus dollars are in turn held by the municipality in the event that the candidate runs in the following election. If the candidate doesn't seek re-election, the surplus becomes the property of the municipality. Mr. Speaker, Ontario's comprehensive yet targeted legislation can serve as a useful template as we examine the concerns Bill 203 is designed to address, from the handling of surplus funds to ensuring full and accurate disclosure statements.

Quebec also carefully regulates municipal election finance through An Act Respecting Elections and Referendums in Municipalities. This act also reflects the unique nature of Quebec municipal politics as political parties are prominent actors at the municipal level. However, unlike Ontario only individuals who reside in the municipality are permitted to contribute to the campaign. Corporations and trade unions are excluded. Individuals may contribute a maximum of $1,000 per fiscal year to a municipal political party or independent candidate. Disclosure statements must be filed annually no later than April 1, in an election year no later than 90 days following polling day. All contributions must be recorded, including the number and total amounts of contributions $100 or less and the names and addresses of those who contribute more than $100. Moreover, political parties and independent candidates must appoint an auditor. Mr. Speaker, Bill 203 recognizes these measures already in place in Quebec and incorporates many of its goals, such as the contribution limits and full disclosure.

In British Columbia both the Local Government Act and the Vancouver Charter provide standardized municipal campaign finance regulations for all municipalities. All campaigns must complete and submit a comprehensive disclosure statement and must record the total value and number of contributions less than $100. For contributions greater than $100 the name, type of contributor, and contribution dates must be provided. If the contributor is a business organization, the address of the contributor and the names of two directors or principal officers must be disclosed.

Moreover, the handling of surplus campaign funds is similar to that of Ontario, plus funds of $500 or more that remain in a candidate's account following an election must be donated to the local government. These funds are held in trust in the event the candidate chooses to run in a by-election or subsequent general election. If the candidate chooses not to run, the funds are considered a donation to the revenue of the local government. In fact, all handling of surplus funds must be clearly indicated on a candidate's disclosure statement. This includes how the surplus was dealt with, the total amount of the surplus or deficit after payment of expenses, and any surplus funds used from a prior campaign. British Columbia also sets serious penalties for those who fail to comply with campaign finance laws. Punishments can include disqualification from holding elected office for up to five years and a $5,000 fine.

Mr. Speaker, in recent years there has been a renewed effort amongst all levels of government to implement stronger elections finance legislation. Legislation such as the Federal Accountability Act and, here in Alberta, the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act helps to ensure confidence, trust, and accountability in our electoral system. As we see in other provinces such as Ontario, Quebec, and British Columbia, comprehensive yet targeted legislation can ensure that our citizens enjoy the same level of confidence in our municipal elections as we do in our provincial elections. This is why I support Bill 203 and encourage my colleagues on both sides of this House to vote in favour as well.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I realize that I just have a few minutes, but there are a couple of things that I wanted to say. I think this is a very good bill. Certainly, we have to be able to have more accountability at this level. Unions feel that the maximum contribution is too restrictive at $5,000. My question would be that if a person is a member of a union that has already made that contribution, does that exclude them from making their own personal contributions? I'm not sure that was clear in my mind.

The surplus funds certainly have to be accounted for. The concern that I would have with this is if somebody would be collecting money at one level of government with the idea that they would run again at that level but, in fact, then use the money that they had collected, let's say, on a municipal level for a run at a provincial level seat. I'm not clear on how that would be sorted out. I think that would be very wrong. I think that once the money is collected at one level, it should be used at that level or else forfeited, and then they have to start again if they've moved up to the next level.

The other thing is, I think, an important controversy that I believe should be addressed and discussed – and I apologize for not being here for the whole debate – that it would help if municipal donations were made tax deductible as are the other two levels of government because, really, the municipal level is a legitimate form of government, so it would fit under that provision.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the remaining few minutes I'm pleased to rise and join the debate on Bill 203, the Local Authorities Election (Finance and Contribution Disclosure) Amendment Act, 2009. I'd like to join my colleagues in congratulating and thanking the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater for bringing forward this bill.

As members are aware, this bill would include regulating the size of campaign contributions, the handling of surplus campaign funds, and ensuring full public disclosure of campaign contributions and expenditures. These measures would help to ensure, as others have pointed out, public confidence in all candidates who choose to run for political office in municipal elections. It would also help to protect candidates from accusations of conflict of interest or other charges by providing strict limitations on contributions.

Bill 203 also gives us the opportunity to examine and discuss Alberta's comprehensive campaign finance legislation, which governs provincial elections. In respect to the comments from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona I think it would also accommodate a discussion on some of the issues that she has raised, which are unrelated to this bill but which, nevertheless, deserve discussion. In doing so, we can see what aspects of provincial legislation may be useful and which may not if translated to the municipal level.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans can take pride in the fact that our provincial elections are conducted with the highest degree of accountability and transparency. This is accomplished through adherence to the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act. A careful look at the act reveals that our provincial legislation addresses many of the concerns of Bill 203.

The Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, but the time allocated for consideration of this item of business this afternoon has now concluded.

5:00 Motions Other than Government Motions

The Speaker: Hon. members, the chair has a long list of members who wish to participate this afternoon, so please govern your comments according to that. This is a remarkable turnout late on a Monday afternoon.

The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Provincial Achievement Tests

503. Mrs. Leskiw moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to eliminate provincial achievement tests for grade 3 students and consider alternative assessments for learning.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great honour and a privilege to stand today and open debate on Motion 503, urging the Alberta government to eliminate the provincial achievement test for grade 3 students and consider an alternative assessment for learning.

Mr. Speaker, for me kids always come first. That is why I have dedicated many years of my life to Alberta's classrooms, providing our children with the foundation necessary to help them succeed and build Alberta's future. Now as an elected representative it is my responsibility to work with my constituents and assess measures that will improve Alberta's world-class education system. That is why I have introduced this discussion on whether provincial achievement tests, PATs, for grade 3 students are the best mechanisms for learning assessment. Part of the effectiveness of our world-class education system is based on the willingness to continuously improve to better meet the needs of our children, and I believe that reviewing and enhancing our method of assessment would further strengthen our education system.

Mr. Speaker, I have observed how the grade 3 PATs have placed a burden on grade 3 students, teachers, and parents. For teachers a great deal of time is spent preparing each of their students to write the achievement exams. This is time that could be spent on teaching the curriculum rather than teaching for a test. The achievement test interferes with the responsibility of teachers to determine curriculum emphasis, design learning activities, and develop and administer their own evaluation procedures.

Teachers are ultimately responsible for evaluating and reporting students' progress. Further to this, the PAT does not provide an individual assessment of students' academic achievements or progress. Rather, it only tests information that can be assessed through pencil-and-paper examination. Factors such as that a child is well nourished or had a good night's rest can strongly influence test performance. Teaching methods need to be tailored directly to the students' needs, particularly in the earlier grades, where students from all walks of life have different challenges and may require modified teaching methods to advance their academic achievements. Mr. Speaker, a one-size-fits-all teaching method may not educate students in a way that corresponds to their individual needs.

Timing is another drawback of this exam. Provincial achievement tests are currently written near the end of the school year, but the results are not handed back until the fall, after most students in the grade have moved on to the next grade. This does not provide teachers the ability to offer additional support to individual students, nor does it give students the ability to improve. It's just a snapshot of how a particular student and/or school performed on a certain day.

I believe along with many other teachers across this great province that the funding spent on administering these tests could be better spent on curriculum enhancement and on developing more effective methods of evaluation. In 2001 the Alberta Teachers' Association surveyed teachers about the provincial achievement testing program and found that only 6 per cent of teachers believe that grade 3 achievement testing should continue as it is. Alternatively, 33 per cent of teachers wanted the tests replaced with diagnostic tests, and 44 per cent of teachers believed that the tests should be abandoned altogether.

Accountability is very important within the education system and helps to ensure that the curriculum standards are met. However, the PATs for grade 3 may not be an effective method of accountability. Statistically, similar tests could be collected through sampling procedures which would be less expensive and disruptive.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to emphasize that in my experience as a teacher we are not doing our students a favour by the continuation of this exam but, rather, a disservice to both our students and teachers. I also want to emphasize that we have one of the best education systems in the world, and this is clearly demonstrated by both my teaching colleagues and our students. In this province we know that our students have the ability to compete with any students from anywhere in the world. Education is the foundation of our province's success. I look forward to exploring the possibilities of how we can continue to improve our exceptional education system, in doing so enabling us all to act and realize the unmatched potential that exists in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, once a teacher, always a teacher. Students have always come first for me, and I will always promote what is best for our kids. I'm encouraging both Albertans and this Assembly to consider alternative methods for assessing our students in grade 3, and I ask that you stand in support of Motion 503.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in this Assembly to speak in favour of Motion 503, the elimination of grade 3 provincial achievement tests. I'd like to express my appreciation to the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake for bringing forward this very important motion.

Mr. Speaker, we need to acknowledge the positive direction of Motion 503 and what it means to our youth. Since the introduction of grade 3 standardized provincial achievement tests in 1992 our society has changed a great deal, and in the past 17 years school curriculum has been amended to reflect not only these changes but the standards and expectations placed on our students.

Currently achievement tests are designed to determine if students are learning the information that they will need to succeed in the future. However, at the age of 7 or 8 years these young people are all learning at their own pace, and it's imperative that our children have the ability to experience their own individual strengths and weaknesses and grow into well-rounded citizens. I believe that it's very important that students in grade 3 are assessed. However, it needs to be on an individual basis.

Currently teachers are working closely with interested parents regarding the personal assessment of their students. For example, on a daily basis there are quizzes, essays, projects, and the observation of students by teachers that can help to judge the personal progress of students. Assessments of a child's progress cannot be focused on their test-taking abilities. This is true particularly in the third grade, where the test-taking experience has not yet been fully developed. Teachers in schools have recognized the need to have students learn at their own pace. If this is what they want, then why would we try to judge this on a standardized scale?

Over the past few weeks, Mr. Speaker, I've had the opportunity to visit 15 schools in my constituency as part of their grade 6 curriculum to learn about government. During this time I took the opportunity to discuss the issue proposed by Motion 503 with teachers directly, and most have said the same thing: testing of students is important to ensure there is progress and that schools offer a standardized level of instruction; however, there needs to be an alternative test.

Instead, I'd like to see students being tested at the beginning of the year and again at the end to judge their progress. This diagnostic type of test is very different from the standardized tests currently in place. Diagnostic testing is generally accepted to be an in-depth evaluation of a relatively narrow scope of analysis aimed to identify specific conditions or problems. In this way diagnostic testing can be the best answer for assessing students learning at different paces. In my opinion, this is the best type of testing for our students. It not only evaluates their abilities, but I believe that we can take the results from these tests to ensure that Alberta teaching standards are being upheld. With this common-sense approach I believe the emphasis will be then on the students versus on the test. After all, it should be the student that is evaluated, not the school.

It is for these reasons that I support Motion 503. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am extremely pleased that the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake introduced Motion 503. I'm not only pleased, but I'm relieved and I'm celebratory that the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat stood up and so eloquently supported this motion. I really appreciate the fact that even though he doesn't have a teaching experiential background, he does his homework. He, as he pointed out, visited 15 schools, and he talked to stakeholders. I'm sure that in his dealings with children he's got a sense of what their best interests are.

Now, it's extremely important that this motion doesn't say: let's toss tests and forget about testing. What it says is: let's consider alternative assessments for learning. The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake gave examples of a variety of instruments that have considerably greater validity than a student's ability to fill in a very narrow space with an HB pencil, because that is one of the chief skills that is required on a multiple-guess test.

Well, beginning at the grade 3 level is a very interesting place to start because that test is particularly torturous on young individuals, but where it is most repulsive is at the grade 12 level for the various reasons the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake pointed out. Why, on the basis of a two-hour multiple guess, is this given the same evaluation credibility as an entire year's work of very diverse assignments? What this standardized achievement test does very effectively is test a student's family's wealth. It also tests reasonably effectively the students based on their advantage and the length of time they've had in an economic well-being circumstance with English as their first language. It also, because of its heavy language basis, will test wealth and language.

What it fails to test are the creative areas. What it assumes – and maybe that assumption can be applied to math – for language arts, social studies, and science is that there is a single right answer, that by picking B, then A, C, and D have no value. Now, having taught elementary math, I gave students more marks for how they got to the right answer than for the right answer itself. That's, unfortunately, the thing that standardized achievement tests do not do. They test a very basic level of understanding, the assumption that there's only one way that it can be done.

What happens is that students who are intellectually diverse will overthink a particular answer, believing that what they have come up with as their first thought can't possibly be right. The way you're supposed to pick an answer on these multiple-guess tests is that your first impression is usually your best one. They will overthink it and as a result fail because they work so hard at coming up with: "How could this possibly be the answer? I must be wrong. I must look for other possibilities." When you've got little introductions of about 12 words leading up to the question from which you're supposed to choose the A, B, C, or D, then it doesn't test their ability. What it does test is a person's ability to read the length of a stem. Any of us who have taken statistics or sampling at some point in university know how to do well on these particular tests, and it's of large concern that such value is given to these tests.

What is even more disconcerting is the way in which these tests are administered. It was pointed out by both the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat and the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, who is introducing Motion 503, that these are end of the year tests. They are tested when a child is leaving grade 3, leaving division 1, going into division 2. They occur at the end of grade 6, when a child has not only left the division but in most cases has left the school. How is that end result going to help them when they transfer into junior high school? It's again tested at the grade 9 level, where up to a quarter to a fifth of a student's mark is based on this two-hour one-shot wonder, and then of course by the time it hits grade 12, they're gone. What good is this test that they have no longer any opportunity to improve upon unless, of course, they fail it, in which case they'll be doing summer school and trying again to be a better guesser in the exam they write over the summer?

If the government is truly concerned about the level of learning, then they've got to give some credit to the teachers, who have spent a minimum of four years getting their education or in the case of a master's of education have spent six years and in their practicums have gone through a whole variety and coursework on different methods of assessment, including students' own self-assessment, which is extremely important that students learn to evaluate themselves on a base of understood criteria.

I am hoping that government members are going to be supportive of this motion as a first step. It's not saying that evaluation isn't important, but it's saying: let's put the emphasis, as the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat put it, on the learning end of things as opposed to the testing end. You know, the old axiom of the tail wagging the dog is what standardized achievement tests are all about. Hopefully the motion passes.

The next step is that the results are used internally, that they're not used as a hammer externally to beat down children. That is what standardized achievement tests do in schools with multi-ethnic populations. That is what happens in schools where the poverty levels run high. That is why First Nations schools are exempted. They are a definable group.

If the results are important, then let's work within the schools to improve those results, find the schools that fit in the bottom 200 of the testing results and provide the funding and the support, the reduced class size, the one-on-one type of teaching that will bring them up to the level that can be achieved primarily at the private school, where they have the option to select what children are allowed to enrol. They have the funding to provide reduced class sizes.

Motion 503 is just the beginning, and I hope the story will continue. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and join the debate on Motion 503. Since the last election I've had the pleasure of sitting beside the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake in this Assembly. This means that we are often able to share ideas on debates that are taking place. It doesn't, however, mean that we always agree. We sometimes find ourselves supporting the same goal but differing on how to get there, or we just don't agree, period, but we respect each other's opinion.

Mr. Speaker, I do agree with my colleague on Motion 503, and I want to thank her for representing the interests of eight- and nine-year-olds. As a former teacher she brings a great deal of perspective and expertise to this issue, and I greatly respect her opinion.

Recently, Mr. Speaker, I got a letter from a constituent of mine who is also a teacher. The writer argues that the tests place a lot of stress on an eight- or nine-year-old child. She has seen children lose sleep worrying about their performance and being unable to perform to the best of their abilities. At such a young age even good students can be derailed by their anxiety surrounding these tests. I hear stories from my constituents about their own children. One constituent told me that her child said: "When my teacher told me to take out my pencil, I started to sweat. I got cramps in my tummy, and I thought I was going to throw up." I have to ask myself: what's the point of this test? Is it going to make our children smarter? When I'm old, is my doctor going to be better qualified to care for me because they took an achievement test when they were eight or nine years old?

I'm all for accountability in our education system, Mr. Speaker, but I think that our resources might be better spent developing new diagnostic tools. An achievement test is a snapshot of how that student is doing on a given day. It may have some value, but is it worth the expense both financially and in terms of stress on our students? Maybe we should do away with the expense of snapshot and continue working to create a scrapbook, one that takes into account a wide variety of factors and allows students to develop over a period of time, an approach that recognizes that children have different learning styles and they have different skills. Some children have skills that measure up well on an achievement test, and others have different skills. This type of tool would really allow us to evaluate how our education system is doing and establish a way to improve it.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake for bringing this motion forward and lending her considerable expertise to this Assembly. I also want to urge my colleagues to support Motion 503.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I currently have 13 members on the list. We have 35 minutes.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief based on some of the very excellent comments that have been made by members from all sides of the House this afternoon.

I want to compliment the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, and I applaud her. I say that also as a former teacher. I want to say that at the end of the day the outcome that we are looking for is, quite simply, for students to reach their full potential. I'm proud to say that I have an almost two-year-old, and some day when he is eight or nine years old and in grade 3, I'm looking forward to being a teacher's greatest advocate and not a teacher's worst nightmare.

I'm very pleased to say that I have spoken to many grade 3 teachers in my community of Fort McMurray, where we have 23 schools. I value their opinion. At the end of the day Motion 503 says, "Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to eliminate provincial achievement tests for grade 3 students and consider alternative assessments for learning." I believe in diagnostic teaching, which has been talked about, as well as: how do we spend our energy? I believe we can spend our energy in a more efficient manner for our teachers and for parents and for students in helping them reach their full potential.

I want to say that alternative assessment is really a dialogue with teachers, with others that are involved in this, shall I say, important venture. This is about a dialogue. Last week you heard the Prime Minister and the President of the United States talk about a dialogue on clean energy. I think it is healthy in enhancing our system by not saying that we just simply eliminate, but we're looking at enhancing an already excellent system in our province.

With that and from what I have heard from grade 3 teachers, I fully support Motion 503. In my former life as a teacher and without any fear of contradiction I encourage all members from all sides of the House to support this important motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the Minister of Education.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, will try to be briefer than usual in light of the number of people that want to speak.

I want to of course start by commending the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake for her use of her opportunity to bring a motion before the Legislature with respect to one that has generated so much interest. I can definitely say that we will be voting in favour of her motion because I think it is a very wise initiative and one that demonstrates a great deal of common sense. In my own constituency, I can report to my colleagues, I have received a phenomenal amount of feedback from people even with just the recent amount of press attention that this issue has gotten. The response has been very solidly on one side of the issue, basically, also supporting this initiative that's being brought forward by the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

There are a number of really good, important points that have already been made by many speakers. I can say, you know, that I have a son who took the grade 3 test last year, and I have a daughter who will take it next year. One of the things that is most important to me is that I worry about the degree of stress that this process can in some cases impose upon kids and also upon the school. I also worry about the impact that this test can have on the quality of education that's actually provided in the classroom. I do know that time is taken out from other educational activities in order to prepare the students for this test. I think that we ultimately experience a loss in terms of the overall education that goes on in the class because of the need for the children to be prepared properly for these tests. Also, I have several different schools that provide immersion in my riding, in my area, and of course the children in those programs have to take the test twice, so there's additional stress and anxiety there.

I think what's really important is that children in the classroom do get assessed and that their progress is clearly identified. I do want to make that very clear. I think that assessing is very, very important. I think the incredibly patient teachers at my own school would on a good day call me a high-needs parent when it comes to wanting to know how well my kids are doing. I have nothing against proper assessment, but I do think that that assessment should be done in a way that allows for the natural variance from day to day that children will experience and also allows for it to be used in a functional way so that if there is assessment done and then there are deficits identified, the teachers have the ability to respond in a reasonably timely fashion to change what's happening. I think, particularly when kids are at this age, you know, seven, eight, nine years old, that so much changes between the time they write the test and the time they get the results back that the opportunity has long since been lost for teachers to do what they do best, which is to help our kids learn as much and as well as they possibly can when they're in school.

As I said, there have been a number of very, very good points already made in favour of this motion, so I won't go on any longer. I do urge my colleagues here to join our caucus in voting in favour of the motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Minister of Education, followed by the hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to speak in favour of Motion 503, the elimination of grade 3 provincial achievement tests, or PATs. Motion 503 urges the government to consider alternative assessments for learning for Alberta's grade 3 students.

As the father of three daughters I know the dedication, hard work, and enthusiasm that students in Alberta put into their education. I was always there to help each one of them finish their homework, complete a project, or study for a big test, and I saw the anxiety that they went through each time they had to prepare for a major test like a PAT, not that a little anxiety is always a bad thing, Mr. Speaker.

Overall, the PAT is used to determine if the students are learning what they are expected to learn. There's a lot of pressure put on a student as a result of the exams. Concerns with disappointing results and even failure can lead a student to doing not as well as they could or can lead a student to doing much better.

Mr. Speaker, I think that testing in schools is extremely important. I absolutely believe that you cannot manage what you cannot measure. However, I am not convinced that PATs in grade 3 are the best way to measure eight- and nine-year-olds. Perhaps it would be beneficial for all parties – students, teachers, and parents – to take another look at the standardized testing in Alberta. I wholly support that we need to catch them by this age so that they don't fall behind. This motion is providing an opportunity for alternative methods of evaluation to be considered, methods that focus more on the individual needs of the student, methods that will inevitably contribute more to a student's long-term academic success.

Our province has always been a major advocate of education. It is important for us to develop a testing mechanism that best meets the needs of Alberta's students and one that will continue to meet those needs. In an era where it is so important for our children to continually further their education, it becomes essential for us to start with the basics and make sure that our children learn what they need to. Taking another look at the grade 3 PATs in this province could help us understand and help us improve our already world-class education system.

Mr. Speaker, our children are so vital to the success and vitality of this province that we must do everything we can to ensure that they learn and grow into Alberta's future leaders. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education, followed by the hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise and speak to the motion brought forward by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake. I want to start by thanking the hon. member for raising what I believe to be an exceedingly important issue, not just the issue of the provincial achievement tests at grade 3 but the issue of education and its importance to our students and to our community as a whole.

As you'll know, Mr. Speaker, and all members of the House will know, we're engaged in a very strong discussion about education over the course of the next year, talking about where we need to be as we educate our students in this province so that they can be ready for a global economy and a global community and so that they can be ready to participate locally as citizens in their local community and in their local economies. As we talk about the 21st century learner, we talk about the knowledge, skills, and attributes that our learner needs to have to be successful.

We also need to determine how we know when we've achieved those essential elements of learning. I would start by agreeing and by putting forward the concept that teachers are in the best position to assess the learning and the progress of the students in their classrooms. Teachers are professionals. They're trained as teachers, and they are in the classroom with the students on a day-to-day basis, both promoting learning of concepts and assessing how that learning is going. Assessment for learning happens, I would submit, Mr. Speaker, on a daily basis in the classroom. It has to. Teachers have to know whether the concepts that they're putting forward and the methodology that they're using to instruct the students in their classrooms, who come from diverse backgrounds and who come with diverse abilities – whether they're grasping the concepts, whether they're learning, and whether they're moving forward.

There should be no argument at all, in my view, about whether assessment for learning is important – absolutely it is – and whether assessment for learning is best done in the hands of teachers, who are the professionals. Absolutely, it must be.

There are also, though, two other assessment processes: assessment as learning and assessment of learning. I'll not speak about assessment as learning at the moment because that might just confuse the issue, and I have a short period of time, and you have a long list. But assessment of learning is also important. In my view, it's not discrete from or distinct from assessment for learning. All assessment has to be used for learning in some manner or form. But assessment of learning so that we can report to the community that our school system is working, that the investment that we're making in our children is a valuable investment, and that we are moving forward as part of the larger community is very important.

At lot of the discussion around provincial achievement tests has been around the concept of high-stakes testing. I want to just speak for a moment about that because I think it's very important that we not allow provincial achievement tests to become high-stakes testing. They're not a measure of the teachers. The PAT 3s, PAT 6s, PAT 9s are not a way of determining whether our teachers are doing a good job.

All you need to do is be in any classroom in any community in our province to know that each classroom is made up of a different group of students, that bring different talents and abilities, different abilities and disabilities, different backgrounds and perspectives, even different languages to the classroom. They bring their social problems both from home and from their community to the classroom. So it cannot be used as a measure of teachers, nor can it be used as a measure to rank schools, as some purport to try and do. That's not the purpose, and that's not a useful result for provincial achievement tests.

However, there is a value to achievement tests in terms of understanding across the spectrum of our learning system how well we are doing and to be able to report back to school jurisdictions for their use within their schools on trends within the teaching and learning that's happening and in other ways in which the curricular leaders in the schools, the principals and other curricular leaders, can work within their school community to determine if there are things that need to be changed within the system, if there are ways that we can do things better.

There's a role and function for provincial achievement tests. There's an appropriate way to use the results of those provincial achievement tests. I would argue that there are even ways to use them effectively for student learning. We have some 13 years of experience with PAT 3 tests, and one of the things which I've learned from looking at the results is that they're entirely predictive of outcomes for those students in later years. Mr. Speaker, what that tells me is that the tests are reliable, but it also tells me that we're not using them appropriately because if they are predictive of the result, we're not changing the result as a result of the tests.

That's sort of a convoluted way of saying it, but I would say this: should we be looking for improvement in our assessment processes? Absolutely. I've committed to work with the ATA and others in the education community to find better ways to do assessment. There's a new project being headed up by Dr. Barry McGaw of the University of Melbourne to look at how we assess 21st century skills to be able to assess them in an appropriate way. I think we should be engaged in that project because we need to move our assessment practices and we need to make sure that our assessment practices are useful practices for the student, for the school, for the system, and to be able to report back to our public.

Mr. Speaker, while I understand the sentiment behind the motion that the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake has brought forward and I understand the concerns that are being raised about people teaching to the test and about the stress of the grade 3 students, I think those are issues that can be overcome. I do think we need to make sure that we have ways of recognizing the testing standards and assessment standards and outcomes across the spectrum of our system. We have to appreciate that our system is held up as being one of the best in the world because of its strong curriculum, because of its strong teaching standards, because of its strong teachers, and because of our accountability pillar in our assessment processes.

Before we change what we're doing, we ought to know what we're going to. That would be my comment to the hon. member. Should we look at the PAT 3 tests and, presumably, in the future the PAT 6 and PAT 9? Perhaps we should. But let's know and understand what assessment we need to make sure that we're effective not only for the students, which is most important, but for the system, know that we're doing the right thing and investing in our system across the province so that our students can be ready for the 21st century – we're into the 21st century now, so I'd better say for the latter half of the 21st century – so that they can participate in a knowledge economy, a global economy, and be good both global and local citizens.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to rise and add to the debate on Motion 503, which urges the government “to eliminate provincial achievement tests for grade 3 students and consider alternative assessments for learning.”

Mr. Speaker, we're very fortunate to live in this province. We have an exceptional education system, that allows our children to succeed. I have a child that's in that system, and he and his classmates are all very successful. In addition, we've got exceptional teachers, and they should all be commended for the exemplary role they play and how they perform in building Alberta's future by educating our youth.

However, it's necessary to review our system to ensure that it continues to reflect the needs of our students, our teachers, and all Albertans. This provincial testing program, as mentioned earlier, was introduced in 1992. The first objective is to determine if students are learning what they are expected to learn at a particular grade level. Fair enough. The second is to provide Albertans with a report as to how well students have achieved provincial standards at these specific points of schooling, and the third is to assist schools, authorities, and the province in monitoring and improving student learning. These objectives are very important; however, there have been some concerns about the effectiveness of this testing model. The hon. Minister of Education has already explained the difference between assessments of learning and assessments for learning, so I won't go into that.

In discussions with teachers in my own constituency they've admitted that, often, in grades where provincial achievement tests are administered, they end up teaching to the test. By focusing primarily on teaching to the test, valuable time is spent just preparing students for the test rather than simply covering the curriculum. Further, teachers are less able to tailor their teaching methods to meet the needs of individual students. Mr. Speaker, I believe we must ask ourselves if the current model of testing is the most beneficial way to determine if students are learning what they're expected to learn. I also feel it's important to consistently revise our assessment program and put greater emphasis on alternative methods for learning testing, such as diagnostic testing, which enables teaching methods to be tailored directly to those students' needs, which is vital for their long-term academic success.

It's important that we continually examine our education system to make sure that it's operating effectively for our children and all Albertans. That, Mr. Speaker, is why I stand before this House wholeheartedly in support of Motion 503.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a privilege to speak in favour of Motion 503, eliminating provincial assessment testing for grade 3. It's also an honour for me to speak today because my grade 9 teacher and, actually, the head of the Alberta Teachers' Association, Frank Bruseker, is here this afternoon to witness that a recalcitrant and lackadaisical student in his grade 9 class has been able to participate in a debate of this stature in Alberta at this time. So I thank Mr. Bruseker for his work with me back then and his current work on behalf of the Alberta people.

If we get into the merits of the debate, my father served as a teacher in the Calgary public system for 25 years. My mother served in the Calgary public teaching association for another 30 years. So my experience with provincial exam testing is mostly anecdotal. When it came to things that came up in the classroom, I would tend to believe things my mother said a little more than my father not because my father wasn't a great teacher – he probably was – but my mother was one of those hard-working schoolteachers who paid attention to students, who really did everything by the book and looked at what worked best with students. I think my dad sort of cut corners the odd time. But I'm telling tales out of school and probably shouldn't be doing that.

I'd get back home after a day of school, whenever it was, or from university, and I'd see my mom the odd time – you know, rarely did I see her like this; it was usually toward the end of the year – and she'd come home; she was all stressed out and was all upset. I'd say, "Mom, what's the matter?" and she said, "We had those exams again." What "those exams" was referring to were the exams that her students would have to take in grade 3. My mother was an educator, a principal primarily in the K through 6 grades for the majority of her last 15 years of teaching.

I'd explore with her. I'd say, "Well, what's so bad about them, Mom?" and she'd say, "It distracts my teachers' and my children's time and my student learners for the last month of preparations before the exam." She found this a loathsome experience not only for the students and the staff, but it didn't lead to learning in a productive manner that added anything to the kids' self-esteem, self-worth, or ability to learn anything that was remotely, to my mother's thinking, valuable to them for the course of their lives.

You know, what happens afterwards with those things is what I think is even more reprehensible. I understand that this is not the government's fault, but when these test results get FOIPed by the Fraser Institute for their publishing results, what occurs in our communities is that people cross-compare and analyze what their kids' scores were in one section of town vis-à-vis another. Then assumptions are made that teachers are better over at this district than that district. This is the type of combativeness and divisiveness that I don't believe defines Alberta and shouldn't continue, at least at the grade 3 level.

Given that many people would wish to speak on this issue, those are my reasons primarily for supporting this motion. God bless the teachers of Alberta.

The Speaker: Hon. member, just so I understand. Mr. Bruseker, a former member of this Assembly who is in the gallery, is your former teacher?

Mr. Hehr: Yes.

The Speaker: And you are now in the Assembly.

Mr. Hehr: Yes.

The Speaker: I now understand.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise to speak in support of Motion 503, sponsored by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake. First, I'd like to state that I believe in regular testing, whether it is the assessment of learning or assessment for learning. I believe that they both are important parts of education. While I believe in the value of regular testing, I believe there are strong merits in re-examining how assessment tests for grade 3 students are conducted as well as the communication of such tests with the students' parents, education systems, and the public.

The grade 3 provincial achievement test is currently structured in such a public and formal manner that teachers are teaching to the test, spending disproportionate amounts of time on the PAT. Eight-year-old children are put through unnecessary substantial and emotional stress in preparation for as well as responding to the test and the outcomes, and the bigger context of the student population is not integrated into the overall interpretation of the test results.

Mr. Speaker, while I have received input from constituents and stakeholders, with a high majority of them in support of the motion, I myself as a parent believe in the need to develop our children's ability to handle stressful, demanding situations and have put my own children in music programs as additional discipline to experience structural learning, competition, and examinations. Arriving at the decision to support this motion was not the easiest one for me. It took some back and forth.

As a first-generation Canadian, having come from a highly conformative and competitive educational system in Asia, I have seen many times over the psychological scar from intensive examinations linger on many people for years. People have recurring nightmares about examinations. Remembering the view of my grandfather, the first of three generations of educators in my family, about Canada to immigrants, that this country is purgatory for the middle-aged but that it is heaven for the young, I believe that efforts to alleviate unnecessary and sometimes unfair stress on our young students are worthy considerations and act in keeping our children's childhood experience as heavenly as possible.

I'm pleased to support Motion 503 today. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege for me to speak this afternoon as well in support of Motion 503. I certainly thank the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake for her work on Motion

503. Our excellent education system, the importance of teachers, the great opportunity that students have in Alberta to learn, I think, is evidenced by the keen interest in the matter that Motion 503 draws our attention to. The Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake makes a compelling argument for an alternative approach to assessment for learning. I think that certainly her experience and the interest that she has generated in this issue speak well and make a compelling argument for our reconsideration of the way we do these tests.

I would not support this motion if it were only seeking to eliminate all assessment measures. This motion does not do that. I have some concern about the wording regarding the elimination of achievement tests. That's been mentioned by other speakers. However, I think that this being a motion urging the government to consider this provides opportunity to deal with this in a reasonable manner. I have no problem with testing. However, the fact that students learn in different ways says to me that alternative assessment measures are warranted.

I speak from experience both as a student and as a parent that not all students convey their grasp of a subject matter based on a point-in-time test. There must be better ways of considering this. I believe there can be a more effective and better assessment for learning done, and on that basis I support this motion. The motion urges the government to eliminate the PATs and to consider alternative assessments for learning, and on that basis I support this motion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief because I know that there are others and that we're going to run out of time. I just would actually make sure that I'm on record as supporting this and thanking the Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake for bringing this forward. Clearly – clearly – by the support we have in the gallery and the number of phone calls that I've been receiving, this is a motion that really must be passed.

I just would like to share one personal story. When I was in high school, your whole year was based on a two-hour exam. I didn't really do all that well on those exams, so I came away with the idea that I was stupid. I came away with the idea that I was stupid, and I quit after high school. I ran into a prof that I was having coffee with after I'd had my children and gotten married, and she said to me: "Bridget, you're intelligent. What you aren't is educated."

I went back to school when I was 45, and I took that attitude with me. I said to the teacher that had to get me through grade 12 chem that they made me repeat and that I couldn't understand that. Just because they hadn't split the atom when I went to school didn't mean I had to repeat chemistry. However, what I had said to this fellow was: "I don't give a damn if I learn anything. Just get me through this exam." That's the attitude that I think sometimes testing brings. I'm not saying that we shouldn't have some kind of an evaluation, but I truly believe that we can damage little eight-year-old psyches that will follow them for the rest of their lives. Those test results follow them with every single teacher that they will get from grade 3 to grade 12, so please, please, let's pass this motion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, then Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise and speak to Motion 503, the elimination of grade 3 provincial achievement testing as sponsored by my colleague the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake. I want to thank and compliment the hon. member on doing so, on bringing this motion forward. She's a passionate teacher, and she's passionate about our kids and about our students.

I think that there are good things and bad things – I'll keep this short – about standardized testing. I think the benefits are that you have an opportunity to assess the system, how it's working, if information is getting to students. It makes the system somewhat accountable, and I think that's good. It's also good to have some information for parents out there. However, I have to say that I've always thought that timed standardized testing is just a real silly way of assessing student achievement. I mean, all it really does is test the ability of a child to regurgitate points of information as quickly as possible. I just don't see how on earth that can show that somebody is learning a subject. I've felt that way for a long time, so I'm going to support this motion.

I would like to suggest, before the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity gets too excited that I'm agreeing with him on something, that I still do very much . . . [interjection] This is harder for me than it is for you.

I would like to very much say that I do think there should be some sort of standards in the testing. It's just that this timed testing just does not make sense, doesn't cut it. So I will be supporting Motion 503.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a great pleasure to rise in support of the motion to eliminate the provincial achievement tests for grade 3 and to consider alternative assessments for learning.

I think a lot has been said about, you know, putting eight-year-olds through the tests. It's very stressful not only for them; I believe it's stressful for the teachers as well. You know, I think the teachers can pass on the stress to the kids, too, and the poor kids have to live with that for the rest of their lives. Even the teachers, with the time taken away for the tests, end up teaching the kids only eight and a half months instead of 10 months. There's a cost involved in this. The money going towards the tests could be spent elsewhere.

The teachers do their assessments throughout the year, and I think that they are the best judges to test the students. There are a lot more other reasons, you know, to support Motion 503, but since there is not much time, I will be supporting it. I want to congratulate the member for bringing forward Motion 503.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Well, hon. members, according to our rules at 5:55 it's my pleasure to call on the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake to conclude the debate.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank my hon. colleagues who spoke to this motion. I would like to again emphasize that part of the effectiveness of our world-class education system is based on our willingness to continually improve it to better meet the needs of our children. That is why I have introduced this motion on whether provincial achievement tests for grade 3 students are the best mechanism for learning assessment. This past hour we have discussed the many challenges with this assessment test: its timing, its effectiveness, and the impact it has on our children.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that other assessment methods would better meet the needs of our children, teachers, and the educational system as a whole. Therefore, I thank my colleagues for their consideration of this motion and ask all members from all parties to support my Motion 503.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. Give to each member of this Legislature a strong and abiding sense of the great responsibility laid upon us. Give us a deep and thorough understanding of the needs of the people we serve. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Merci, M. le Président. Aujourd'hui j'ai le privilège de présenter en votre nom, à vous et à l'Assemblée, deux parlementaires élus par les expatriés français qui représentent les Français vivant au Canada. La France et l'Alberta sont membres de l'Assemblée parlementaire de la Francophonie, une association de parlementaires francophones qui représentent plus de 64 pays et régions.

Nos invités sont de passage à Edmonton aujourd'hui pour la signature d'une très importante entente de collaboration avec Edmonton public schools et qui, comme le test d'anglais international, TOEFL, permettra aux étudiants de recevoir une accréditation reconnue sur le plan international pour leur compétence en français. Cet après-midi j'aurai l'occasion de discuter avec eux plus sur les opportunités qui existent pour rehausser davantage les relations culturelles et économiques avec la France.

Je demanderais à nos invités de se lever pour que je les présente: l'Hon. Christian Cointat, Sénateur de la France représentant les Français à l'étranger vivant au Canada, et M. Jacques Janson, membre élu de l'Assemblée des Français de l'étranger, une assemblée parlementaire qui représente plus de 2 million d'expatriés français à travers le monde.

Je vous invite à vous joindre à moi pour leur souhaiter une bienvenue chaleureuse.

[Translation] Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have the privilege of introducing to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly two parliamentarians elected by French expatriates to represent French citizens living in Canada. Both France and Alberta are members of the Assemblée parlementaire de la Francophonie, an association of French-speaking parliamentarians representing more than 64 countries and regions.

Our guests are in Edmonton today for the signing of a very important collaboration agreement with Edmonton public schools, which, like the Test of English as a Foreign Language, or TOEFL, will allow students to receive an internationally recognized accreditation for their French-language proficiency. This afternoon I will also have an opportunity to meet with them and discuss opportunities to further strengthen cultural and economic ties with France.

I would ask our guests to stand as I introduce them: the Hon. Christian Cointat, Senator of France representing French expatriates in Canada, and Mr. Jacques Janson, an elected member of the Assemblée des Français de l'étranger, which is a parliamentary assembly representing more than 2 million French expatriates around the world.

I would ask all members of the Assembly to give these guests a very warm welcome to our Legislature. [As submitted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 66 very special guests from Our Lady of the Angels school in Fort Saskatchewan. They've had a tour of the building and are now seated in both galleries. They're accompanied today by teachers Miss Erin Gillies, Mr. Greg Marenick, and Mrs. Abbey Farhat; Miss Holly Tollefson, a teacher assistant; parent helpers Mrs. Annalise Yuzda, Mr. Justin Boehm, Ms Christine Davis, and Mrs. Rhonda Hold. I would ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of this Legislative Assembly 17 students from the Rockyview Christian school in Pincher Creek along with their teacher, Miss Paula Schultz, and some parent helpers. This is my first class to visit the Legislature. I'm very proud of that. They've taken a tour of the building this afternoon, asked some good questions at lunch. I want the Assembly to give them a warm welcome. Would they please rise.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My guests are not currently in the gallery, but I'd like to make the introduction. They're 21 students joining us from NorQuest College. These are ESL students and, of course, always a really inquisitive bunch and very interested in how democracy works. They are new citizens and new Canadians. They will be accompanied by their instructor, whose name, I'm afraid, I don't have at the moment. The instructors are always very hard-working and are very good about bringing their students down to the Assembly to watch us at work. They'll be in the gallery between 2 and 2:30. I would ask you all to give them a rousing welcome now that will last until 2 o'clock.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to be able to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 14 hard-working members of our public service. They are joining us today as part of the public service orientation tour. These individuals work in my ministry in the supportive living and long-term care branch. Their important work assists the ministry in establishing accommodation standards as well as monitoring and licensing supportive living and long-term care facilities. I will ask them to please rise as I introduce them: Marjory Sutherland, our executive director, and her staff Danielle Laporte, Allison Ruud, Arden Casault, Carmen Grabusic, Catherine Douglas, Debbie Whitehead, Erica Olson, Erin McKinley, Jessica Krechuniak, Judy Erickson, Marlo Fieseler, Pamela Marcoux, and Patricia Guzman. They are in the members' gallery. I would ask that we give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today as part of Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature representatives from the francophone Parent Link Centre and the francophone provincial health network. The network is one of the Parent Link Centres we support across the province. This centre connects parents to more than 30 francophone preschools, daycares, and early childhood resource centres across the province and is an excellent example of several partners working together to meet the needs of francophone Albertans. With us today are members of the centre and the network. I would ask our guests to stand as I introduce them. From the centre they are Ms Corinne Arabeyre, executive director; Mrs. Marie-Chantal Daval-Bérillon, assistant director; Mr. Arsene Muamba, co-ordinator of the French resource centre; and from the network Mr. Luc Therrien, executive director. I would ask all members to give these guests a very warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly four members of the board of directors of the Clean Air Strategic Alliance, or CASA. The alliance is celebrating its 15th anniversary this month, and I must say that they've had an extremely successful 15 years bringing together stakeholders to protect Alberta's air quality. On behalf of my colleagues in the Legislature and my staff within the ministry I wish all of them the very best for another 15 years of success. Joining us in the public gallery today are Kerra Chomlak, CASA's executive director; Myles Kitagawa from Toxic Watch Society; John Squarek, representing the Small Explorers and Producers Association of Canada; and Mr. Peter Watson, who is the Deputy Minister of Energy but was instrumental in this organization in his role as Deputy Minister of Environment in years past. I would ask all of them to rise and receive the warm welcome of all members of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour today to rise and introduce to you and through you two hard-working Albertans. The first is Kim Budd, an Edmontonian who is also a hard-working public servant with our Department of Education. The second is Mr. Aaron Miller, a financial analyst with Enerplus. In his spare time he does many philanthropic endeavours, such as being a leader with the United Way leaders committee and organizing a Stampede committee for a youth speech contest, and he's on the board of directors for the Canadian Paraplegic Association. I can also advise that about every second Saturday he helps me poll Calgary-Buffalo and various locations in and around that constituency. I'd like my two friends to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this August Assembly.

Clean Air Strategic Alliance 15th Anniversary

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, it's celebration time. The Clean Air Strategic Alliance, or CASA, had its 15th anniversary on Saturday, March 14. CASA was created by the government of Alberta as an advisory committee for clean air issues in 1994. CASA is a successful partnership between government, industry, and nongovernment organizations. This partnership works by consensus and develops innovative solutions for air quality issues in Alberta.

CASA's award-winning approach has been replicated by several multistakeholder organizations. In fact, the Water Council has been modelled after CASA. CASA developed the Alberta approach to reducing solution gas flaring. CASA and its membership have successfully addressed many air quality issues of concern to Albertans. In fact, CASA is currently working on recommendations to help the government of Alberta review the provincial clean air strategy to ensure that the air quality remains good for all Albertans. Oil patch flaring and venting, acid rain, power plant emissions, smog and pollution prevention: these are the issues tackled by CASA.

Congratulations to CASA on its 15th anniversary. I wish this very fine, very dedicated organization continued success and thank everyone involved for all their hard work.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Poverty Talks!

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to take this opportunity to acknowledge the work of an excellent organization operating in Calgary, an organization I've had the privilege of working with for some time. Poverty Talks! encourages political and democratic participation for all Calgarians but, in particular, those experiencing poverty.

Under the leadership of Lisa Hari Poverty Talks! is working to increase the presence of poverty issues on the political agenda, whether it's local, municipal, provincial, or federal. They have increased awareness about the electoral process and how government works. They have encouraged people to vote and participate in our democratic process. This is so important given how many Albertans seemingly feel disconnected from the voting process.

I know that Poverty Talks! has been at the forefront demanding living wage policies in our governments and communities. They have been strong advocates for those living on social assistance and AISH, and they have articulated so many of these challenges that beset these populations. Further, I know they watched with interest yesterday's announcement regarding the province's 10-year plan to end homelessness. They are hoping that the province continues to follow through with this commitment to see that more individuals have homes.

In Calgary Poverty Talks! is a voice for the voiceless. Tireless volunteers like Grant Neufeld, Denise Young, Derek Cook, Colleen Houston, and John Donovan and a coalition of really great organizations like the Calgary and District Labour Council, the Alberta College of Social Workers, Calgary Democracy, Calgary Low Income Coalition, Calgary Scope Society, the Centre for Newcomers, Vibrant Communities Calgary, the Disability Action Hall, and the Calgary Women's Centre have made Poverty Talks! the organization it is today. They have put poverty on the radar for many policy-makers, and I congratulate and commend them on the good work that they do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Market Access for Cattle

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to express support for and recognition of the importance of market access for our livestock and meat industry. Though there may be some opportunities to grow domestically, they're not significant enough so that we can only count on that for our industry to survive and be profitable. The global markets hold endless opportunities, however. Alberta's industry must continue a collaborative approach throughout Canada.

I also rise, however, Mr. Speaker, to express some concerns. The National Farmers Union of Canada, or NFU for short, is an organization claiming to have the best interest of Canada's farm families in mind, and it appears to be cozying up to R-CALF, an organization that has repeatedly – repeatedly – tried to destroy our cattle industry. The National Farmers Union representatives were recently quoted as saying: "I can totally understand and defend R-CALF in public now. We need to be allies with R-CALF."

R-CALF has repeatedly tried to close the U.S. border to Canadian cattle. It's troubling that the National Farmers Union would support R-CALF. What is even more concerning is the suggestion in this House from members across the way that we take advice from the National Farmers Union on how to save Alberta's industry. It does not make sense to take advice from an organization that supports another organization that seeks to close our borders to our industry.

The Alberta livestock and meat strategy was designed to return the industry to profitability, Mr. Speaker. It has the support of the federal government, and we are already seeing some results. More market access means more demand, and that will result in money in producers' pockets. I encourage all members to continue to support the strategy and recognize the beneficial impact it is already having on our industry in local markets and markets abroad.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Evelyn Gutierrez

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to recognize an outstanding citizen in my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods who passed away on February 5 of this year, Mrs. Evelyn Gutierrez. On behalf of the members of my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods I would like to recognize the positive contributions Evelyn Gutierrez has made to this great province.

Evelyn had been a nurse at the Grey Nuns hospital since it opened in 1988 and is remembered for her organizational abilities and her kind and loving ways with patients. She had cared for many members of my constituency during her service at the hospital and helped to train and mentor many aspiring nurses that continue to provide care to many Albertans.

She is survived by her husband, Ruben, her daughter, Ruby Lyn, as well as her mother and six sisters. Family was very important to Evelyn as she spent most weekends with her family and made every day spent with them special.

Even after her passing Evelyn will continue to bring joy to many. Mr. Speaker, she had her organs donated, with three individuals being given a new lease on life thanks to her selfless act. Mother Teresa once said that kindness is a language we all understand; the deaf can hear it, and the blind can see it. Evelyn understood this universal language, and her kindness will resonate well into the future.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

National Metropolis Conference

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over a century ago immigrants to the prairies realized their dream of making a home in a great frontier. There are now new frontiers to explore and new challenges to overcome. Migrants are arriving from nontraditional source countries representing a vast range of linguistic, ethnic, and religious diversity. Smaller communities, including rural and francophone minority communities, are now experiencing unprecedented growth through immigration. These are part of the backdrop for the 11th National Metropolis Conference, Frontiers of Canadian Migration, to be held March 19 to 22 this year in Calgary, a city poised to become one of Canada's major immigrant-receiving cities.

Mr. Speaker, the Metropolis conference is part of an international and Canadian national initiative involving a network of policy officials and researchers from more than 20 countries. The Prairie Metropolis Centre, established in 1996 in Edmonton, is one of five university-based centres of excellence in Canada. This consortium represents the universities of Alberta, Calgary, Manitoba, Regina, Saskatchewan, and Winnipeg. The Prairie Metropolis Centre coordinates the multidisciplinary research team of over 116 affiliated researchers who study the complex issues of immigration and integration. These researchers also work in collaboration with community groups in applied research.

Mr. Speaker, the upcoming conference will bring together researchers, policy-makers, and community practitioners to explore research and practices in six policy priority areas: citizenship and social, cultural, and civic integration; economic and labour market integration; family, children, and youth; housing and neighbourhoods; justice, policing, and security; and welcoming communities, the role of the host communities in attracting, integrating, and retaining newcomers and minorities.

The Metropolis initiative and the Metropolis conference offer excellent opportunities to enhance our understanding of immigration diversity in the prairies and facilitate our national aspiration of becoming equitable, diverse, and innovative.

The Speaker: Well, to all hon. members of Irish descent, happy St. Patrick's Day. To those who are not of Irish descent, you all know how you can become an Irishman for one day, but tonight, okay?

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

McKinsey & Company Consulting Firm

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In a time when health spending is out of control, Albertans are demanding more spending accountability. McKinsey & Company, a U.S. health consultancy firm, has been paid 2 and a half million dollars from the Department of Health and Wellness up to September '08. This is over and above $620,000 they were paid in the fiscal year ending March 31, '08. Like the health system restructuring, the bill taxpayers are given keeps getting larger with no end in sight. To the Premier. McKinsey & Company have been given a total of $3.1 million so far. Can the Premier tell us if McKinsey is still providing services and how much the final bill will be?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the minister will know the exact amount. But to put it into perspective, currently the taxpayer is funding health care in this province to the tune of $36 million a day.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In six months McKinsey & Company were paid 2 and half million taxpayer dollars in consultancy costs. To the minister of health: what are they providing for this?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I think it was a few weeks ago that this particular member stood up in this House and said something to the effect that before you take action, you should have a diagnosis. That's exactly why we've hired this internationally recognized consulting firm, to take a look at our system in this province and give us a diagnosis.

Dr. Swann: Well, again to the minister: will the minister tell us what they are still providing and how much the final bill will be?

Mr. Liepert: I can't give that information, Mr. Speaker, but the member is well aware that all government expenditures are accounted for in a public way, and we'll be doing that.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Lottery Grants

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In a FOIP regarding lottery grants it is clear that government members, especially or specifically cabinet members, not only get to choose the recipient, specify the amount of the grant, but they also have control over the timing of the announcement. An e-mail sent on January 25, '08, states that the ministers of SRD and children's services wanted to delay their announcement of a $3 million grant for a rec centre in Cochrane to the following week "for obvious reasons." The announcement of that grant was made on February 1, '08, just four days before the election was called. My question is to the Premier. Why are government members allowed to manipulate the lottery grant system to their advantage?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, this question came up before from a member that was the former leader of the opposition and made some allegations. All lottery grants go through a very, very strict approval process. They're made based on the merit of the application. There are, of course, when the announcements are made – take, for instance, the one we did in Calgary the other day, where one of the members opposite gave a very impassioned member's statement on the value of that grant to his community. He is a member of the opposition. He was invited to attend, and I believe that we even have a picture to prove it.

Ms Blakeman: A totally new issue. It has not been raised before. Check the background.

To the Premier: given that at this very same time opposition members were told that any inquiry had to be directed to the minister of gaming's office, why was the constituency staff of these cabinet ministers regularly included in the e-mails between lottery and gaming staff on the specifics of this grant?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the process for approving grants is done independently through the ministry staff that are assigned to follow the guidelines very carefully. In terms of the announcements, we try and work out announcements, I would think, with the group that's receiving the grant, also looking at how we can have all members of the Legislature and those constituencies that have received the grant be there for the presentation. Sometimes, in fact, the groups receiving the grant request representation from their MLA, and it doesn't matter if the MLA is in government or the opposition.

Ms Blakeman: In this FOIP that group wasn't even consulted about when the announcement was.

Again back to the Premier: given that this FOIP gives the appearance if not actually the advantage to government members, who are able to manipulate lottery grants prior to an election to set themselves up for re-election, will the Premier scrap this partisan process and return to the community lottery board style of grant allocation?

Mr. Stelmach: No, we're not. In fact, I hope the member would look through Hansard and see that this question was raised before in terms of whether we go back to the system of community lottery boards. We're not going back to that system. This is a system that's very fair. We put additional millions of dollars into a large project grant that has been shared across constituencies, communities right across Alberta. All Albertans are benefiting from it, and we'll continue to follow the same policy.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Promotion and Disease Control

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the minister of health created one provincial health board, one of the reasons he gave was that it would allow innovative ideas and policies from one health region to spread to others. He knows that money put into health promotion and disease prevention reduces costs to the health care system. Regrettably, the minister has not shown much interest in prevention and health promotion since taking office. Why did the minister reject the innovative policy of banning trans fats in Calgary restaurants when Alberta Health Services took authority? Has he learned nothing from the tobacco reduction strategy?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, nobody banned anything. There was a policy that was put in place by the former Calgary health region but had not been in place elsewhere across the province. As the member correctly points out, we now have one health board in Alberta. But more important than that is the fact that we believe strongly that these types of policies should be national in scope, so I have taken the initiative to write to the federal minister and ask her when there would be federal initiatives coming forward and strongly encouraging that. I'd be happy at the end of question period to table that letter.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the minister had an opportunity to lead the country by expanding the policy to the rest of Alberta, and he did not take it. Why did the minister not direct Alberta Health Services to follow the lead of Calgary?

Mr. Liepert: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, this government happens to believe that if there's voluntary compliance, it's much preferable to the route that the opposition would take, which is having a cop on every corner. What we have found is that there has been significant voluntary compliance with this initiative, and that, coupled with encouraging the federal government to lead this initiative nationally, I would say, is taking a lead role.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, it's very clear this minister has no commitment to prevention or to managing health costs through those processes. How can the minister justify spending less than 2 per cent of the health budget on health protection and disease prevention last year?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that that's a good question to ask during our budget estimates, that will be coming up in this House shortly. We can debate what are the appropriate dollars and cents. But, you know, this is a member who was just talking yesterday about savings; now he's talking about spending. This particular opposition can't figure out whether they're conservatives or socialists or whether they're black or white. I'd suggest, in fact, there's a shade of grey over there. I know that there are some members over there looking for a new name for the party. I'd suggest that the Grey Party is a pretty good one. Doom and gloom.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Alberta Job Losses

Mr. Mason: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The finance minister's rosy optimism in the face of the worst world recession in half a century has made her the Jim Cramer of the Alberta economy. Last month the minister told Albertans that only 15,000 jobs would be lost, thus justifying the economic inactivity of this government. With job losses in the first two months running double that figure already, will the minister admit that her don't worry, be happy job-loss prediction is already hopelessly obsolete?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, with what we know at this time, our job prediction is right on. It was always quoted as an average one year over another. On average – we take the number of jobs in 2008; we take the number of jobs expected in 2009 – the difference is 15,600. That's what we said at the start. We were not commenting about it as being desirable. Any job loss is of material concern. I'd just point out that in terms of how we're facilitating the economy, the infrastructure development in this province is two to three times what it is in any other part of the country. That will retain jobs.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's already 30,000 in just two months. Like Jim Cramer of CNBC, the finance minister is making predictions that many people will believe. Unfortunately, they may face big losses if they do. Given that the minister's predictions will influence the decisions of Alberta businesses and families, will the minister reconsider her misleading advice and provide Albertans with a realistic economic update?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, in January Alberta added 3,300 jobs overall; Canada lost 129,000. The people in the opposition that would like to claim that statistically we're off base should reflect on our oil price last year, which was budgeted at $78 per barrel and will come in very close to that, a shade more. I had a lot of criticism on numbers last year from that same opposition. Maybe at the end of this year they'll be proven correct, but chances are we'll be proven correct.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much. Thirty thousand people, not 30,000 statistics, Mr. Speaker.

Referring to hopelessly wrong economic predictions by Jim Cramer and others, The Daily Show's Jon Stewart said, "If only I'd followed CNBC's advice, I'd have a million dollars, provided I'd started with a hundred million dollars." If Albertans follow this minister's advice, how many jobs will they need to start with in order to end up with just one?

Ms Evans: You know, Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member says over there crashes on the rocks of common sense. Let's look at what economists are saying. BMO is forecasting 1.5 per cent growth next year; CIBC, 2.3 per cent; Conference Board of Canada, 4 per cent. RBC, Scotiabank, TD, Global Insight, and the Centre for Spatial Economics all have publicly stated similar forecast growth for Alberta. We're not in the dire circumstances you claim. You're wrong, dead wrong.

Trilateral Premiers' Meeting

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I don't have any pearls of wisdom to share from Jon Stewart, but I'll do my best.

One of the clear lessons from past world recessions and booms is that economic and trade isolationism exacerbates economic decline while free trade and labour mobility spur investment and economic recovery. I and many of my constituents therefore believe it is key for Alberta to be a leader in spearheading the interprovincial co-operation necessary to help our country and province emerge from the current economic downturn. Now, I know that Alberta recently participated in the first trilateral . . .

The Speaker: I'm afraid we're moving on.

Mr. Stevens: I think I get the drift of where the hon. member was going, Mr. Speaker. I'll see if I can address it. He's quite right that last week we had the first trilateral meeting between the Premiers of B.C., Alberta, and Saskatchewan, and there were some very good initiatives that came out of it. It only makes sense that the three provinces which have been leading this country's economy should do this. One of the very good initiatives was something called the western economic partnership. The view there is to increase employment to increase opportunities for all Canadians.

Mr. Anderson: It's amazing to see his ability to read my mind like that.

Now that these initiatives have been discussed, what is the next step in the process? In other words, how long before we see some of these initiatives come to fruition given that they are needed to overcome our current economic climate?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First of all, with respect to the western economic partnership, I anticipate that the ministers from these three provinces will be working hard over the next few months having a discussion as to what that would look like. I think by the fall or thereabouts we should be finished that discussion and perhaps be able to move on to the next step. There will be discussions with respect to opportunities in leveraging the various trade offices that we have. B.C. has trade offices; Alberta has trade offices; Saskatchewan would like to participate in that. We're all natural resource provinces, and we think that there's a lot that we can do marketing to the Asia Pacific.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental question is to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. I understand that a regional pension plan was also discussed at this meeting. Can the minister provide more detail about the proposed pension plan and how Albertans would benefit from that?

Ms Evans: Currently, Mr. Speaker, very few workers retire with the security of a pension plan. We know that statistically a lot of people aren't putting sufficient dollars away for their retirement. B.C. and Alberta have been working on such a plan. With the addition of Saskatchewan, who already have a supplemental pension plan, we'll be having more discussions around some of the elements, but we've done a consultation thus far. We've got some very positive reactions from a number of people, both employers and employees, who see the opportunities. For stay-at-home housewives there's even a tax-free savings component. If we can work with the federal government on some changes in the law, we're on our way.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Bitumen Exports

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Between the Alberta Clipper and the Keystone pipelines over a million barrels per day of capacity will be coming on stream shortly to carry unprocessed Alberta bitumen to the U.S.A. No wonder there's a boom in upgrader construction in the States. To the Minister of Energy: with these pipelines opening their taps and upgrader construction in Alberta at a standstill, how is there any chance that the proportion of bitumen upgraded in Alberta will increase?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you. Mr. Speaker, first of all, let's remember something: the pipelines that are being constructed today that connect Alberta to a major market are not constructed specifically for one product. SCO can go down the same pipeline as bitumen, and by the way no bitumen leaves Alberta all by itself in a pipeline. There would be 20 per cent diluent or 20 per cent synthetic crude mixed with that bitumen in the first place. There's plenty of opportunity for us to expand.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. The pipeline may be able to carry various products, but the contracts the companies are signing are for bitumen. In fact, oil sands companies are signing long-term contracts right as we speak to supply bitumen to pipeline companies feeding these upgraders in the States. Back to the Minister of Energy: at a time when thousands of Albertans are being laid off, how is this government going to reverse the trend of more and more upgrading jobs being piped south of the border?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, what we have in place, a cross-ministry initiative with Finance and Enterprise and the Department of Energy, is a very aggressive value-added project and projects for the province of Alberta. We'll continue with the plan that we have in place. Sure, it may take a few years to get these things back on stream. I can tell you that at the end of the day Albertans will be very well served by the plan we have, and value adding and maximization of value for the commodity that Albertans own will in fact be true.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks. I think, first of all, we all want the same thing, Mr. Minister, but I would say that your aggressive value-added strategy is in the ditch. I don't see it working out. This government's oil sands document has no details, it has no timelines, and without those, Albertans have no ability to check the performance of this government. To the minister: when will the first bitumen in kind project be operational?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, what I do have to say is that something has become very clear to me in that last question, and that is that the hon. member opposite is obviously in the ditch looking for something.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Municipal Taxes on Student Residences

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week I was privileged to visit with representatives from the U of C and the U of A who told me that Alberta's postsecondary institutions are expanding their on-campus residence accommodations to meet student demand. On the surface that sounds like a great idea, but I know there is more to the story. My questions are for the Minister of Municipal Affairs with respect to property taxes. Do these affordable housing projects at postsecondary institutions qualify for municipal property tax exemptions?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, local municipalities make local taxation decisions. Under the provincial legislation, the Municipal Government Act, the dorms are exempt from both municipal taxation and education taxes. That said, municipal councils can by way of a bylaw make dorms taxable for municipal taxes only. It is up to the municipalities to decide what their local priorities are.

Mr. Rodney: My only supplemental, then, is to the same minister. It's very beneficial that the province exempts all dorms from paying education taxes, but if councils can choose to levy municipal taxes, I just have to wonder – and my student representatives would, too – how many are taking advantage of the opportunity. Can the minister please clarify for everyone across the province how many student dorms in Alberta are actually exempt, then, from paying these municipal property taxes?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, I say that it's a local decision. But with that I want to say that 16 out of 17 municipalities do charge their educational institutions. The only one that does not charge education taxes is the town of Olds.* Through this taxation municipalities do collect in the neighbourhood of $2.5 million of taxation.

Appointment of a Special Prosecutor

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, in an effort to ensure fairness and maintain public confidence, Manitoba and British Columbia have developed clear policy guidelines for the appointment of a special prosecutor when government conflicts exist. Albertans deserve the same. Given the shenanigans at the former Alberta Infrastructure and Transportation my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. Will you commit to writing the conditions and policies for the appointment of a special prosecutor here in Alberta?

*See page 436, left column, paragraph 10

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure what the hon. member is referring to with respect to shenanigans. What I do know is that we have a prosecution service in this province that serves the public well, and we'll continue to rely on it.

Mr. Hehr: An interjurisdictional comparison done in 2007 for the province of Manitoba reveals Alberta's lack of policy planning for the appointment of a special prosecutor and highlights the role of the assistant deputy minister in appointing prosecutors even when a government department is accused of inappropriate conduct. That's like leaving the fox to care for the hens. Accordingly, will the Justice minister guarantee the public confidence by taking decision-making out of the hands of the ADM?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I certainly hope that the gist of that question is not to bring into question the independence of the assistant deputy minister of prosecutions in my department. I believe he is a man of great character. I believe he undertakes his responsibility seriously. He understands what his legal obligations are, he understands what his job is as the chief prosecutor in the department, and I think he does a very good job.

Mr. Hehr: I'm certain he does a good job as well. That does not diminish the need to have a developed set of policies regarding when a special prosecutor will be put in place. On that note, why don't we get one in order that we can maybe get a special prosecutor to look after the 19 election violations that were forwarded by the Chief Electoral Officer just to ensure that the public have, really, no need to worry about this situation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It struck me over the last couple of months that whenever the opposition sees something that they don't like, they decide that it's somehow the fault of some part of a government department. What I know is that the government departments in this province and particularly the one that I am minister of take the responsibilities very seriously. They are not involved in making decisions that are in any way other than in the best interest of the public. That is what I have said on a number of occasions. I believe that the prosecutors take those positions seriously, and I stand fully behind them in the decisions that they make.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Homelessness Initiatives

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's hard to hear you over the heckling.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs released a very good report aimed at ending homelessness in the province of Alberta. The city of Edmonton and the city of Calgary have already released their own individual reports aimed at ending homelessness. To the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs: why is it that Alberta is releasing a third report now that we have the Calgary and Edmonton ones released prior?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is correct that Edmonton and Calgary have released plans. But most other municipalities have not. Communities have been asking for this plan, that was developed by the secretariat, for some time. This 10-year plan does provide communities with greater certainty and clarity for the future. It has five major strategies – along with the principles there are another 17 major strategies – and it will enable communities across the province to be moving in the same direction.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In this report as well there is a definite shift from the shelter model to the Housing First model. My question to the same minister: what will then happen to the current shelters that we have in existence?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, people always need to have a safe place to stay during emergency situations. We have 34 shelters that are providing that now, and in the future our shelters will be providing short-term stays for people. The 10-year plan calls for rapidly rehousing people from shelters within seven to 21 days and, along with that, to provide support services that are needed by people.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. My last supplemental to the same minister. There are very, very definitive and very ambitious targets and timelines in that report. How can the minister assure Albertans that the money and the resources that will be spent on implementing this plan will be money well spent and that value will be delivered?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, shelter operators and related agencies across Alberta have been very responsible with the funding that they receive. Under this new initiative we will be establishing outcome measures and related information systems to track those measures and will also be reporting on our progress through the secretariat every year. So you can see and I can assure you that we will be using our funding in a cost-effective manner.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Public Education Exemptions

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday in this Assembly the Minister of Education provided Albertans a glimpse into the proposed enshrining of parental rights within provincial human rights legislation. While parents can ignore standardized curriculum, their children, according to the minister, are still required to write provincial standardized achievement tests. What continues to be missing from this government's agenda is the protection of children's rights. To the Minister of Children and Youth Services: will the minister tell Albertans if or when the province signed the United Nations convention on the rights of the child?

Ms Tarchuk: Yes, we did, Mr. Speaker. I would have to get back with the exact date of that.

Mr. Chase: Actually, Mr. Speaker, this province is the only province in Canada to not have signed the agreement. The former Premier sent a vague letter in support of the idea, but it was never signed.

Again to the minister: do parental rights as proposed in this new human rights act supersede children's rights?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, there is no new act at this time. I would suggest that we have this kind of conversation when an act has been introduced.

Mr. Chase: My hope is that that act will never be introduced.

My third question to the Minister of Children and Youth Services: does this questionably regressive legislation enshrine parents' rights to discipline their child through the use of corporal punishment lest sparing the rod should spoil the child? How far back in time does this legislation propose to take Albertans?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, I think I would say the same thing. We're talking about something that is coming up in the future. It's hypothetical, and I'd leave that discussion until that time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose.

Child and Youth Advocate

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the children's advocate rewrites his annual reports to remove statements critical of the government, he's acting to protect the minister and not vulnerable children. For example, draft reports found this statement removed from the advocate's '06-07 report, quote: our commitment to outcome measures has been more lip service than concrete endeavour. To the minister: why won't you admit that the advocate is working to cover up your failings, make the review of his office public, and make him an independent officer of this Legislature?

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think I've been very consistent when I have said that I have agreed to and have undertaken the exercise of taking a look at how the advocates from provinces across the country do report to the public. I have said that I would like it to be very timely information, very meaningful information. We do have a committee with internal and external experts that have done that work. Just in the last couple of days I received a copy of that report. My intention is to take a look at it. I've asked the department to also come up with some responses to recommendations. I do plan on sharing that information publicly.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the advocate so far has been clearly censoring himself to protect this government instead of children. From his '07 report he deleted this, quote: for reasons unknown to the OCYA, there are more families leaving fostering than there are families signing up to foster; and this one: all of this results in decreased placement resources for children and youth in an environment with increased needs. To the minister: why won't you admit that the effectiveness of this office has been fatally compromised and act now to make the advocate independent?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Tarchuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I've been very clear that I have wanted more timely, more meaningful information in that reporting. We did have a situation last year where we had one report on time, one report a year late, one report two years late. We brought them all up to date and have a commitment on behalf of the advocate that that'll never happen again. As well, I will make sure, through the review that we're doing and the response to the review, that that does not ever happen again.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, last fall the minister told the Legislature she'd only received the advocate's report in October; however, in response to FOIP requests from the NDP caucus, the advocate was later forced to release documents showing that the reports had actually been sent to the minister in May. He then threw himself on his sword, claiming that his reports had somehow been waylaid by the deputy minister. The advocate seems more concerned about protecting the minister than the children under his watch. To the minister: why won't she commit today to making the advocate an independent officer of the Legislature?

Ms Tarchuk: Mr. Speaker, there are actually a couple of things I want to address there. When I said in the fall that I had received that report the week before, that in fact is the truth, so I'd like to say that again. Again I'll go back to the review. We have had people take a look at what occurs across this country in terms of advocacy generally as well as reporting to the public. Really good work has been done. I do plan on taking a look at the recommendations, and we'll come forward and make those recommendations public in the next several weeks.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Wetaskiwin-Camrose, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Health Workforce Strategy

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we all know, over the past decade we've had a lot of rapid population growth here in Alberta, and it has led to increased health service needs. A question I have for the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology – and it's one that's being asked of me by my constituents – is: how are things going? How are we doing in terms of ensuring that Alberta is generating the health care professionals needed to meet our needs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, in light of the current global economic conditions I think it's a very good question to be asking at this time. Since 1999 we as a government have made a commitment to increase new spaces. We've increased by approximately 8,000 new student spaces in the health programs. As part of the Premier's mandate my department has been working with public postsecondary institutions. We're on target for registered nurse programs to increase to 2,000 graduates. We're on target with licensed practical nurse programs up to, I believe, 1,000. The doctor of medicine programs have been increased dramatically, and in fact we're a little beyond the target for those.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Olson: Thank you. I have a second, more specific question for the same minister which relates to the health workforce action plan. I'm wondering if the minister can advise how the ministry is supporting the plans to increase health care graduates with the workforce.

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, this truly is a good-news story when you get three departments working together in a collaborative way. Alberta Health and Wellness, the Employment and Immigration department, and the Department of Advanced Education and Technology are working collaboratively with the health care professionals, with the people on the front lines, to determine the needs. Certainly, as the economic challenges that we face hit the ground floor of our health services system, we need to be able to respond to that. In addition to the new spaces for nurses and doctors, which I've already mentioned, we're also working in other health related fields, like the bachelor of sciences and MRI techs, all of the fields.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Olson: Thank you. My third question is to the same minister. I'm wondering about any time targets that you might have. Are we able to act fast enough to bring these people onboard when we need them?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, it takes a certain amount of time, obviously, for students to move through their various programs. To give you an example of what can happen in a very short period of time, I believe it was April of last year when the province sat down with NorQuest College and talked about an expansion for them. We provided I believe it was $4.9 million. Within five months they were opening the doors on a brand new Health Education Centre, which is just to the north of us here in this building. That was in the span of five months. When we work collaboratively together, we can make things happen rather quickly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Freedom of Information Fees

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A former manager of the freedom of information and protection of privacy unit of Alberta Infrastructure has stated that it was a general policy of the former Minister of Infrastructure that there would be no FOIP fee waivers. Last week I tabled documents showing this to the Minister of Service Alberta responsible for the FOIP Act. Why are ministers of this government allowed to set policies that block a legislated right of Albertans to have FOIP fees waived?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, I was able to review the document that was tabled last week by the hon. member. I want to say that this document appears to be related to an ongoing court case, and it's one page out of many documents. I'm not going to comment on those specific details; however, I will comment in general on the issue of FOIP fees. Departments should not have a blanket policy about waiving fees. Each request should be considered on a case-by-case basis. As Minister of Service Alberta that's what I certainly do encourage with respect to FOIP requests.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was a clear case of political interference on behalf of the minister in the document.

To the Minister of Infrastructure: why did this ministry have a policy that made it financially impossible for Albertans to use the FOIP Act?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta Infrastructure does not have a policy on waiving of fees. There are situations that present themselves. They're covered in the act. If they meet that requirement, then, of course, the fees would be waived.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Service Alberta again: will there be a full review of FOIP procedures to discover how many ministers are blocking FOIP fee waiver requests?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I meet on a regular basis with respect to FOIP with the commissioner. Again, fees are waived in certain circumstances: if the applicant cannot afford payment; if there's another reason to look at it, as I mentioned before; and if the record relates to a matter of public interest, including the environment, public health, or safety. As minister I am prepared to monitor this issue and to encourage that we look at every situation and respect what every Albertan brings to the table.

Speaker's Ruling Tabling Documents

The Speaker: Hon. member, the gist of that last question had to do with a document that was tabled in this Assembly on Thursday last. The chair has had an opportunity to review that document and has considerable concerns about the authenticity and the source of it and tomorrow in the House would like to comment with respect to tablings and returns in the future.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Multilingualism

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We live in an increasingly globalized world. Within Alberta there are many diverse language communities: our First Nations and Métis language communities, our established heritage language communities, and emerging language communities of new Albertans. Our children need to become global citizens and be able to compete with others around the world for jobs and business opportunities. Within our own borders we need to expand our children's understanding of the different cultures and communities. Essentially, it is obvious that we should have international language education as a staple of our education system. My questions are for the Minister of Education. Can the minister advise us as to what strategies are currently in place to ensure that Alberta students have the opportunity to access additional language . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We do support K to 12 second-language programming throughout the development of programs of study and supporting resources. Alberta provides the widest range of language programming choice in all of Canada, and our school authorities can choose not only from the provincial programming, but they can also choose to do locally developed language programming in appropriate circumstances. In addition to French language programming, we have provincial programs in Blackfoot, Cree, Chinese, German, Italian, Japanese, Latin, Punjabi, Spanish, and Ukrainian. It's important to note that it's not just the language but the cultural understanding and appreciation for diversity that's particularly critical. I'd end by saying that I met with the commissioner from Greece last week, and he's interested in promoting the Greek language in Calgary.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what value does the minister see in second-language learning?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of answers to that question. The first is that studies would show that learning a second language has a positive benefit for students, a positive impact on their scholastic achievement. Language students tend to have higher test scores in reading, language, and mathematics. Each additional year of second-language learning increases a student's capacity for success, and students with second-language skills also, as I said, develop greater cultural sensitivity.

There's also a benefit for Alberta. We have friends and relatives from all over the world that make up our population here. We trade out into the world, and as anyone knows, trading in the language of the people that you're trying to trade with is a very big benefit.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. I've heard from school boards that the biggest obstacle they face is hiring second-language teachers. Can the minister tell us what additional supports are in place to increase the supply and expertise of language teachers in Alberta schools?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, that is always an issue, trying to find teachers that are specially trained in a particular language and able to teach that language. We are monitoring school jurisdictions to determine their capacity to teach second languages. We're providing teacher resources, print and digital, and support for professional development. Through international agreements we host language advisers from China, Germany, Japan, Spain, and the Ukraine. As I just mentioned, we're also looking at the possibility of a relationship with Greece.

The other thing we should talk about is technology.

The Speaker: I'm sure we can, hon. minister, but we're going to move on now, okay?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Water Transfers

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. If there's one thing we should've learned from the Balzac horse-racing track fiasco, it is this: the current system for managing water in the South Saskatchewan River basin is broken. Piping water from a municipality in one subbasin to service a horse-racing track and a mall in another subbasin is not sound water management. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Will government policy be established to expand a water market in the South Saskatchewan River basin? In other words, is the government's policy direction going to be to allow irrigation districts to sell water to whomever they choose?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let's be clear. Water is not the property of any individual or company to sell. The water in this province is owned by the Crown. We do allocate water through various forms of water allocation mechanisms, and there are water rights that are traded. The member knows perfectly well that there already is an opportunity for a limited amount of trading to take place. So the answer to her question is no, water won't be sold, and yes, water rights are being sold.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Back to the same minister. Well, contrary to the commitments that were made in water for life, the government has only committed to consultations with the Water Council. Before committing Alberta in any new system of water allocation, will the minister conduct full public consultations with Albertans, not just the Water Council?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I made a very public presentation last week – and it was covered quite broadly by the media – at which I indicated that we are entering a process now to explore opportunities for dealing with water allocation. The process is going through the Water Council and through a number of other opportunities to seek advice which will then culminate in the development of an overall policy which we will then broadly circulate and invite public comment on later on this fall.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Back to the same minister: in areas where water is scarce and to help prioritize water allocations, will the government consider setting up regional public utilities commissions integrated with regional planning boards under the land-use strategy?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the issue that we have here in Alberta is not unique in the world. There are a number of other jurisdictions throughout the world that have already dealt, some more successfully than others, with some of the challenges that we face here in Alberta. The short answer to the member's question is that we'll consider everything. We're looking at anything and everything. At the end of the day we want to have a solution that will serve Albertans the best.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Economic Benefits of Tourism

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last weekend Alberta's Kevin Martin claimed his second consecutive Brier championship in front of an enthusiastic audience in Calgary. By all accounts the Brier championship was deemed to be a great success by the organizers, the teams, and the fans. My first question to the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation: now that the 2009 Brier is in the history books, can the minister tell us what kind of economic impact the event had for the city of Calgary?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. She's right. The 2009 Brier was a huge success both on and off the ice. First of all, there was the tremendous win by Kevin Martin's rink, which we are all very proud of in this province. Tourism Calgary estimates that it brought in some $25 million to the city of Calgary. These are hotels, restaurants, bars that all enjoyed this economic activity. Just like the Brier that was held in Edmonton in 2005, Calgary had a very successful Brier, and it brought a lot of economic interest to the city.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: how do these types of major events benefit Albertans?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, when you look at our partner to the south of us that is having a hard economic time and is one of our biggest trading partners with tourism, these kinds of major events have a huge benefit. Whether it is the Brier or the Roar of the Rings next year or the two Grey Cups or the nine World Cup events, it brings the eyes of the world to this province and really helps us in tourism. But more important, it also brings us a volunteer legacy. It took over 800 volunteers to lift this event, and two weeks ago in Lethbridge about that many volunteers to do the 55-plus games. These volunteers help us so much, and we want to thank them.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: when Alberta hosts national curling championships like the Brier or the Scotties, how does this benefit the sport?

Mrs. Ady: Well, that's a great question, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: But I don't understand what this has to do with government policy.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Provincial Economic Strategy

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You intervened just in time, just as question period was going on the rocks.

We're not blaming the government on this side of the House for the global financial meltdown, although we might blame them for that last set of questions, but we are blaming the government for not taking preventive actions to protect Albertans when they still had the chance to do so. The government refused to listen to what everybody was saying. Now we're going to pay the price. Back-of-the-envelope calculations with the government's own numbers on price sensitivities on oil, gas, and exchange rates show that revenues will decline in fiscal 2009-2010 by something in the neighbourhood of seven and a half billion dollars. To the finance minister: how is the minister going to deal with the $7.5 billion decline in revenue next year?

Ms Evans: April 7, budget day: stay tuned, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, one should always live in hope that something – something – will be revealed.

Given that almost one-third of revenue for this province comes from oil and gas, what plans does the minister have, if any, to reduce our dependence on the revenue stream so that Albertans don't have to continue to be at the mercy of the fluctuating price of oil and gas?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, we can talk a lot about that in the budget, but I will not be provoked into giving a snappy retort to the kind of cryptic messages that are coming across the aisle in the hopes that we're going to reveal our budget and our fiscal plan for next year. Let's wait until the budget is tabled.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I protest. I wouldn't try to provoke the minister.

Given that the Bank of Canada is now lowering its projections of a quick recovery from this economic recession, will the minister be showing the same prudence by limiting spending increases in the upcoming budget, or is that a big secret, too?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, our Premier has been very clear on this. There are four points that are being developed around our budget for 2009: number one, to respond to the reductions anticipated in revenue by reducing our spending; number two, by spending from our emergency savings to supplement the dollars that we expect to get in revenue; number three, to continue to build on the infrastructure and ensure that as much as possible we protect jobs; and number four, a key platform, developing our economy and exposing our strengths to the rest of the global market.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Identity Theft

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently one of my constituents was the victim of identity theft, and she has suffered greatly as a result. It seems that the criminals are getting smarter with the ever-increasing use of technology, and they always seem to be one step ahead of the authorities. My questions today are for the Minister of Service Alberta. Given that your ministry is responsible for consumer protection, why aren't you doing more to educate Albertans about the dangers of identity theft and how to prevent it?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Identity theft is indeed one of the fastest growing types of fraud today. Service Alberta works with the Solicitor General, local police, and law enforcement agencies and other groups to help prevent identity theft, investigate, and prosecute cases. We have a number of resources in place that educate Albertans about how to identify theft; for example, the award-winning DVD and information kit called Changing Faces, which teaches Albertans how to protect themselves from identity theft. There is also a wealth of information on the Service Alberta website. But the hon. member is, indeed, correct. We always have to stay one step ahead.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplementary is to the same minister. Madam Minister, documents such as drivers' licences and birth certificates contain information needed for someone to steal someone else's identity. I know that Alberta has improved the security of these documents, but given that identity thieves adapt so quickly, what is your ministry doing to ensure that these documents are as current and as secure as possible?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's drivers' licences, identification cards, and birth certificates are among the most secure documents of their type in North America. In 2008 we introduced a secure, state-of-the-art birth certificate and a secure driver's licence five years ago. Some of the latest security features were just added to the driver's licence last month. In essence, the technology used by counterfeiters is always improving, so we're always reviewing and trying to make sure we're staying ahead of them.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final supplementary to the minister: how do the security features of Alberta's information documents compare to other jurisdictions in Canada and North America, for that matter?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We were one of the first to introduce a completely redesigned driver's licence five years ago, and we introduced further improvements to it in February this year. We've been well ahead in many other areas that I've mentioned. As well, we have worked with jurisdictions across Canada to introduce a state-of-the-art birth certificate, so we're well ahead of the game, and we're ensuring that Alberta stays in front of the line. It's important that as we move forward, we keep looking at new ways to protect Albertans' information.

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, do you wish to supplement an answer? If so, that will allow the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed to raise a supplementary question.

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, I've been waiting for the Blues, and they're not here. Can I do it tomorrow?

The Speaker: Tomorrow?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, it was just brought to my attention that I might have inadvertently substituted "education taxes" for "municipal taxes" in one of my answers.* I just wanted to have the clarity of the Blues, and I haven't got them yet. If it was the case, then I am apologizing for inadvertently substituting those two.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, do you have a supplementary?

Mr. Rodney: I do not. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Well, hon. minister, you and I have a little communication problem there because you asked me if you could do it tomorrow, and I said "tomorrow." Then you got up and gave the response, so as far as I'm concerned, this is tout fini.

One hundred and five questions and answers here today. In 30 seconds we'll proceed with the remainder of the Routine.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Immigrants of Distinction Awards

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to draw attention to the 2009 immigrants of distinction awards gala held in Calgary last Thursday, March 12. This annual event was hosted by Immigrant Services Calgary. It recognized exceptional new Albertans for their impressive contributions to our society. Also, youth scholarships were presented to recognize contributions made by new Canadian youth. It was a privilege for me to attend this event along with the hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration and a number of my colleagues: the members for Calgary-Montrose and Calgary-Mackay. This government is proud to support the efforts of Immigrant Services Calgary to create welcoming communities for new Canadians to adapt to a new society and new way of life. The spirit of diversity in our experiences, cultures, languages, and beliefs makes us richer.

On behalf of the Assembly I congratulate the following award recipients for their achievements: Ms Lyn Pflueger for the arts and culture award, Mr. Raymond T. Chan for the business award, Mr. Cesar Cala for the community service award, Dr. Tadeusz Dabrowski for the distinguished professional award, Mr. Peter Wong for the Hadassah Ksienski distinguished service award, and Bow Valley College for the organizational diversity award. Our congratulations also go to the youth scholarship recipients: Ms Valez Lumi, Ms Bani Turkmani, Ms Fariha Ahmed, Mr. Di Mo, and Ms Angela Lopez Quiroz.

I congratulate the new Canadians for making a difference in their workplace and in our society as well as for contributing to the success of our outstanding province of Alberta, our great country of Canada.

Thank you.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Bill 52

Health Information Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill 52, the Health Information Amendment Act, 2009.

[Motion carried; Bill 52 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 52 be moved onto the Order Paper to be listed under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table five sets of documents that I referred to variously during my question to the Premier earlier today. This is information mostly received through a FOIP application and also includes various other factual documentation to back up what I was asking for but concentrates on e-mail correspondence between the staff of the then gaming ministry, the then culture ministry, and constituency staff from Foothills-Rocky View and Banff-Cochrane around a joint allocation of $1.5 million from Rocky and $1.5 million from Banff-Cochrane towards a recreation centre in Cochrane and the various arrangements about timing of the announcement of that, et cetera.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table copies of a letter that I referred to in the answer to the hon. leader's question to the minister of health.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have a couple of tablings. I'd like to first table the appropriate number of copies of 10 reports from long-term care workers indicating specific instances of shifts that were short-staffed. These indicate numerous examples of residents being served meals late and not receiving necessary personal care.

The second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the appropriate number of copies of two documents from the Child and Youth Advocate which my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona referred to today in her questions.

Orders of the Day Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

2:50 Health Information Amendment Act, 2009

10. Mr. Renner moved on behalf of Mr. Hancock:
Be it resolved that Bill 52, Health Information Amendment Act, 2009, the contents of this bill being the same as Bill 52, Health Information Amendment Act, 2008, be reinstated to the same stage that Bill 52 had reached at the time of prorogation of the previous session; namely, the bill standing referred to the Standing Committee on Health following second reading.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a relatively new feature in our standing orders that allows the good work of the Assembly and committees that's done on legislation to be carried forward into future Legislatures. I think that members are to be congratulated for getting the bill this far, and it's helpful that we don't have to start all over again in bringing legislation forward. We look forward to the committee coming back with the recommendations, and we can proceed from there.

The Speaker: This is not a debatable motion. Hon. members, the chair has had the opportunity to review the contents of this bill and confirms for the Assembly that the bill is in the same form as Bill 52 was at the time of prorogation of the last session of this Legislature.

[Government Motion 10 carried]

The Speaker: As has already been mentioned, this is the first time that this procedure has been used in this Assembly since the provision to reinstate bills from a previous session was added to the standing orders in 2001.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 7 Public Health Amendment Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to move second reading of Bill 7, the Public Health Amendment Act, 2009.

The proposed amendments address five aspects of the Public Health Act, and I'll try and go through each one of them. The first is clarifying the role of the chief medical officer of health. The amendments clarify the authority of the chief medical officer of health. This position is central to efforts to improve the health status of Albertans. The chief medical officer of health is responsible for monitoring the health of Albertans and for making recommendations to the minister and Alberta Health Services on measures that protect and promote the health of the public and that prevent disease and injury. The chief medical officer of health also acts a liaison between the government and Alberta Health Services, medical officers of health, and executive officers in the administration of the Public Health Act. The provisions in Bill 7 clarify that the chief medical officer of health has all the power and authority conferred on a medical officer of health or an executive officer under the Public Health Act. This clarification is important because the scope of the chief medical officer's authority needs to be fully understood.

Number two, disclosure of information by the chief medical officer of health. A second provision authorizes the chief medical officer of health to disclose information to public health officers in other governments or agencies for the purposes of addressing public health matters, patient safety, quality of care, or the general public interest. This amendment allows public health officers from different jurisdictions to work together to address pandemics and other public health matters. This is important because a transmittable disease may affect residents across jurisdictional boundaries. This amendment will operate under the current provisions of the Public Health Act, which requires the information to be treated as private and confidential at all times.

Thirdly, public health programs for students. This third area of amendment addresses the provision of some student and parent contact information to medical officers of health. Currently under the School Act a medical officer of health can require public and separate school boards to provide some student information and parent or guardian contact information. This information enables the medical officer of health to tell parents and guardians about immunization, hearing, vision, speech, and dental health programs available to their children. It also assists in communicable disease control to address or manage an outbreak of transmittable disease. The amendments are modelled on existing provisions in School Act regulations and extend the application of these provisions to the operators of early childhood services and to private schools.

With this amendment the same requirements will apply to public, separate, and private schools as well as early childhood programs. The purpose of the amendment is to ensure that the parents and guardians of children in private schools and early childhood programs have the same information about public health services as other parents of school-age children. It also provides greater transparency to include these provisions in the Public Health Act, where the provisions have a direct relationship to the purpose that they serve.

Fourth, publication of health inspection reports and orders. A new amendment enables Alberta Health Services or the minister to publish public health inspection reports or orders. The public expects that inspection reports affecting public health and safety will be made available, and public health inspectors view the publication of these reports and orders as a way to improve compliance with public health regulations. Under those regulations, Mr. Speaker, the act also provides a legislative framework for the application and enforcement of public health standards, guidelines, and rules in a variety of contexts.

Currently regulation-making authority under the Public Health Act rests with cabinet. The amendments will move some regulation-making authority to the minister for those regulations that are technical in nature. These are matters such as water quality, food standards, and safety standards. They become more complex and specialized, and the regulations become more technical and are based on expert advice. For example, the regulation of swimming pools is focused on maintaining safe water quality and pool safety. The regulations address such things as the pH levels of water, water turnover rates, and safety factors such as anti-entrapment devices.

These regulations need to be revised occasionally in response to changing technology and safety standards, and by addressing technical matters through ministerial regulation, the minister can respond to emerging issues in a more timely way. This amendment also makes it easier to incorporate a number of standards and guidelines into the regulations, where they are more easily accessed and which improve the transparency of the regulatory system.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, there is one housekeeping matter which concerns the Public Health Amendment Act, 1996. This act was passed in 1996 to address the transition from public health units to regional health authorities. The legislation was never proclaimed and is now outdated, so we propose to repeal that particular act.

Mr. Speaker, the Public Health Amendment Act, 2009, contains a number of important amendments that will strengthen public health in this province. I'm sure the hon. Leader of the Opposition would agree that this is an important piece of legislation. I look forward to his comments and so would move that we adjourn debate on this bill.

Bill 19

Land Assembly Project Area Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move second reading of Bill 19, the Land Assembly Project Area Act.

There's been a lot of discussion around this bill and, frankly, a number of misconceptions. I as a farmer and a resident of rural Alberta understand what it means to be a landowner. It's a special connection that Albertans have with their land, with its beauty, its abundance, the valuable role, of course, that it plays in supporting our way of life and our economy. Bill 19 respects this connection, Mr. Speaker. The purpose of the proposed legislation is to ensure that landowners are well informed and treated fairly and, at the same time, to allow government to plan for the future and the developments that are going to be required in this province and to acquire the land that is needed for those major long-term infrastructure projects.

Transportation and utility corridors around Edmonton and Calgary are prime examples of where large-scale land assembly can be very beneficial. The ring roads would not be under construction today if the government had not started buying land for these projects more than 30 years ago.

Our proposed legislation does not grant government a list of new land acquisition powers, Mr. Speaker. It improves the process that we've used in the past for major projects. The emphasis is on transparency, accountability, and fairness when dealing with landowners over the long term. Advanced consultation will be mandatory before final decisions are made, and landowners will have the same protection that they have under existing legislation to ensure that they are fairly compensated for the acquisition of their lands.

The legislation will be applied to major infrastructure projects similar in scale to the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads. Projects are going to share some common characteristics. It'll be projects that are 10 or more years out before these projects are needed and constructed. Of course, this is going to require a significant amount of land, and it's going to involve multiple landowners.

Our ultimate goal is to benefit Albertans within a region or across the province. This could include water management projects like reservoirs and, of course, the future multi-use corridors. It will not replace the existing process to establish routes for highways and transmission lines by themselves, and I think it's important for people to know that.

Under the terms of the legislation the government is going to have the ability to apply a project area designation to the land that's going to be required for these large-scale projects. It'll also allow us to regulate future development within that project area with the understanding that the government will ultimately purchase the land. The same authority was available under the restricted development area legislation, and existing land uses within a designated project area will be allowed to continue. As an example, of course, in the case of farmers they will be able to continue farming until the land is eventually required for the project.

New developments will require approval to ensure that they are compatible with the intended infrastructure of your project, and approval will depend on factors such as location and the size of structures in some cases. It doesn't make sense to allow major industrial development in the path of future transportation utility corridors.

Regulations on the development are not a new practice. All landowners already have some form of development restrictions on their property through zoning and municipal bylaws. It's important to note that the province does not take this responsibility lightly, and the responsibility of consultation is first and foremost. There are provisions for accountability and transparency which will help ensure that government uses its authority wisely. Government cannot consider approving the designation of land as a project area until the project plan has been prepared and made public and until all registered landowners within the proposed area have been notified and have had the opportunity to provide input. In other words, advance consultation is mandatory.

This provision did not exist when we assembled land for the ring roads, but this legislation will make it the law. This ensures that there are no surprises for landowners. All of the information is on the table, and people will know what type of project is being considered, where it may be located, and who, in fact, will be affected. Landowners and the public will be well informed and can plan accordingly. They will have ample opportunity to review the plans and to provide input before any final decisions are made. The government can only consider approval of a project area after there has been thorough discussion. Of course, a final decision is going to take into account all of these factors, including, of course, the anticipated long-term benefits of the proposed project and, obviously, the input from Albertans and property owners who will be directly impacted.

Compensation, of course, is a subject that comes up. If a project area is approved, landowners will be fairly compensated. Our policy is to pay fair market value for the land, and that can be established through independent appraisals and negotiations. Priority will be given to people who want to sell their land as soon as possible. Many landowners may choose not to sell their land right away. They can continue using the land in the manner that they always have until it's eventually needed for construction and purchased by the government. Let us be clear: Bill 19 does not remove any protection landowners currently have to receive fair compensation for their land. If a negotiated purchase is not possible and the project is imminent, expropriation is used only as a last resort. All of the provisions in the Expropriation Act will apply, including the right of a landowner to have the purchase price determined by an independent third party.

There has been conversation on penalties, and there have been concerns raised about the enforcement provisions in the proposed legislation. The penalties and enforcement orders outlined in the act were already in existence when we set aside the land for the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads. Our experience with the ring roads has been very clear, and that was that enforcement orders are extremely rare. In fact, Mr. Speaker, over the last 30 years only one order was issued in response to unauthorized placement of materials within a transportation utility corridor by an adjacent landowner. The order was withdrawn after the two sides came to a mutual agreement. The penalties in Bill 19 are a last resort to deter unauthorized development within a project area. Maximum penalties, of course, would be reserved for any wilful gross violations. However, property owners will not be without recourse. An appeal process will be established for landowners who are subject to an enforcement order.

As I noted earlier, there have been a lot of public discussions regarding Bill 19 along with a lot of fearmongering. As a farmer I understand that landowners are concerned that they are treated fairly and that their rights are respected. I want to thank my colleagues from across the province who have also been listening to those concerns and collecting input. We are listening, we all want to be certain that we get this legislation right, and we will make the necessary adjustments to clarify the bill and to reassure landowners that they will be treated in a fair manner and in an open and transparent manner. This legislation must strike the right balance. Not only must landowners be respected and consulted, but it must recognize that there are occasions when large parcels of land are required for large infrastructure projects that benefit all Albertans.

Essentially, the part of long-term planning and land-use and infrastructure planning is so important to us. Our province will continue to grow, and we need to plan ahead to meet those needs for the Alberta public. I urge all members to support second reading of Bill 19, the Land Assembly Project Area Act, 2009.

That concludes my comments, and I'd like at this time to move adjournment of second reading. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Bill 7
Public Health Amendment Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate March 17: Mr. Liepert]

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 7, the Public Health Amendment Act, 2009, my first opportunity to do so. This bill amends the former Public Health Amendment Act, 1996, strengthening the role of the chief medical officer, expanding the reporting of public health matters to the minister, and transferring some of the regulations that were formerly under the Lieutenant Governor in Council to the minister.

On the face of it it appears to be a constructive set of changes to the Public Health Act, providing more efficiency, I think, focusing attention where it needs to to ensure that we have jurisdictional responsibility where it should be, in the hands of medical professionals. The medical officer, the chief medical officer in this case, oversees the monitoring of health, the reporting on health status, the management of infectious disease, the involvement with environmental health risks, food inspections, the handling of dead bodies, a number of vital issues to Albertans, including the food regulations, the housing regulations, and institutional regulations as well as swimming pool matters, work camps regulations, wherever people are congregating and potentially have the risk to be exposed to disease or to transmit disease and need to be regulated.

This is an important piece of legislation and in the main, as I say, I think moves things forward in terms of public protection. That's really what this is all about, protecting the public.

The transfer of regulatory power from the Lieutenant Governor in Council to the minister raises some concerns because the Lieutenant Governor in Council is not a political decision-maker, and the move to the minister raises the question, I guess, of whether the chief medical officer will be truly independent, whether he or she can act completely in the interests of public health and safety. That's one concern we had. I mean, it's a move up from reporting to the deputy minister or assistant deputy minister, in the case of the medical officer now, to the minister. That's a step in the right direction.

Our preference would be that the chief medical officer would actually report to the Legislature, where there would be no opportunity for political interference on issues that might be politically charged and difficult and reflect badly on the government of the day yet need direct, prompt action from the health authority. An example would be the syphilis outbreak, where if the independence of the medical officer was assured, we might have heard much sooner than three years into a syphilis outbreak that we were not managing it well, that we are dealing with a very preventable illness that got out of control, and that for whatever reasons we didn't have the intervention that we needed.

On the issue of liaising between government and Alberta Health Services, the medical officer clearly has an important role. There is a need to communicate between the ministry and the Health Services Board some of the key elements on the prevention agenda. I guess one of the questions I've raised repeatedly in this House is the lack of commitment to prevention. The ministry of occupational health and community health back in the '80s was a separate ministry. We have now merged this into Health and Wellness, and we've lost the focus on prevention. As a result we've gone from what I recall back in the '80s being about 5 per cent of our budget invested in prevention. Now according to the annual report of last year less than 2 per cent of our health budget is going into health protection, health promotion, and disease prevention. That's a serious concern, especially at a time when our health system is struggling under the load of demands and unprecedented concerns about access and quality and cost-effectiveness. Clearly, prevention, promotion, protection are areas where we could be spending more and potentially relieving some of the load on our system.

I hope the minister will not take this as an endorsement entirely of words contained in this amendment because they're certainly not. I don't believe this government has made a serious commitment to prevention, and we need to see that. I think Albertans want to see that. We have focused so much attention on high-tech, specialized medicine that we have lost the focus on prevention, primary care, and early intervention, and we are paying a dear price for it.

There's a real opportunity in discussions around this bill to move this ministry and the Alberta Health Services Board away from what appears to be a diminution in support for prevention and a need for real, substantive support for this new chief medical officer, whom we have not had in place for over a year and who will be acting pretty much alone in the ministry, having lost four public health officers in the last year. We have created a situation where I think we are not only jeopardizing the health of Albertans by the lack of commitment here, but we are also creating some liabilities for those who are remaining in the field and must deal with the issues as they arise, whether they be a pandemic or issues around infection control in institutions or whether they be an immunization program that develops problems with it, either problems with a vaccine or problems with the results of the vaccine. All of these have to be overseen in a very scientific and rigorous way, or they open themselves up to serious risk, not only health risk but litigation risk.

I will be supporting the bill, and I hope most colleagues will. I am concerned, however, that we are papering over in some ways the progressive erosion of preventive and public health services in this province and that we are the losers in this case.

With that, I'll adjourn debate, Mr. Speaker, and take my seat. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: I would like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 21 Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 21, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009, in Committee of the Whole. I have already spoken to this bill in Committee of Supply, as have a number of my colleagues, and I know that there may be some others who want to speak to this bill as well, so we'll get down to it.

Of course, there's not a whole lot in this bill on the surface of it, on the face of it, to speak to. It simply brings a request before this House for an additional $127,727,000 from the general revenue fund to pay for additional expenses incurred by the Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development, the Ministry of Employment and Immigration, and the Ministry of Transportation from the general revenue fund; $750,000 to the office of the Auditor General is in there as well.

We have discussed in Committee of Supply to some extent what those expenses are for and what the justification for those extra expenses is. I think there is some justification there, although, you know, justification is in the eye of the beholder, I guess, and some of us may feel that those requests are more or less justified than others do. Nevertheless, those justifications are in the public record now, so I won't go over them again.

However, this gives me one more opportunity to state what is very obvious to me, anyway, what I think is more obvious with every passing day, probably, to the people of this province as the economy struggles along, that this is a government with a spending addiction. This is a government that saw its spending in fiscal 2008-2009, which is almost over – we have two weeks to go in the fiscal year – increase by 13 per cent. This is a government that has brought in budgets that have been increasingly bigger year after year. In the time that I have been in the House – and I've pointed this out before,

Mr. Chair, in this debate and others, in debate on supplementary supply, in debate on other issues – we have gone in fiscal 2005-06 from debating a budget of about $25 billion to this past year debating a budget of $37 billion.

Of course, in about three weeks' time the Minister of Finance and Enterprise will stand in this House and deliver the budget for fiscal '09-10, and we'll see if the spending addiction is still there, if they've been able to rein in their spending habits at all. But the plain, inescapable fact of the matter is that with the budgets brought in, those budgets over the course of, really, three fiscal years, I guess, four different budgets, put up spending by nearly 50 per cent.

Then, of course, Mr. Chair, on top of that, at least once a year in good years and twice a year in, I don't know, really good years – I don't know, really, how they think about this – we find ourselves back here on the floor of the Legislature debating requests for supplementary supply, for supplementary spending, for additional spending for: well, you know, we asked for the sun and the moon when we brought in the budget, and now we've discovered that we need a couple of stars to go along with that.

This particular supplementary supply request in Bill 21 on the face of it is modest: $127,727,000 as against a total budget of $37 billion for this fiscal year. I mean, I think any reasonable person, if this was a one-off, could look at this and go: that's well within, you know, an acceptable margin of error. People can be off by that amount. There can be emergency expenses that weren't foreseen at the beginning of the fiscal year. There can be unforeseen developments that require this kind of supplementary expenditure. You know, if this was all there was, I wouldn't have a problem with it, I don't think. Oh, I might quibble with some of the details, but I wouldn't have a problem with the overall philosophy of it.

In fact, Mr. Chairman, this is in addition to another billion dollars worth of supplementary supply that we debated, that the government came to this House and asked for and, of course, got – with 72 government members in the House government usually gets what it asks for – back in November of last year, which was part of this fiscal year. When you go back over the last 10 years, the various supplementary supply requests – and it's an annual event and sometimes a semiannual event; it's kind of like a sale in retail – have totalled $13,843,000,000 in supplementary supply requests, $13,843,000,000 in addition to what this government predicted over the last 10 years that it was actually planning to spend. It went over top of it by this much.

Mr. Chairman, I will say much the same thing that I have said in supplementary supply debates in fiscal '07-08, fiscal '06-07, fiscal '05-06, which the pessimist in me or perhaps the realist feels that I will be saying again in fiscal 2009-2010, that I hope this government begins to see that this is not sustainable spending, begins to live the words of the President of the Treasury Board, when we were debating, I believe, interim supply a few days ago, that the nice-to-haves and the nice-to-dos may have to be cut out this year, begins to actually live that philosophy.

Mr. Chairman, I think that there's probably within the context of the total budget of the province of Alberta a great deal of wasteful spending, unnecessary spending, spending that is not on projects or programs that need to be absolutely the top priority in difficult times. I'm looking to see if the Minister of Finance and Enterprise delivers on this on April 7. When I look at the government's finance figures, there looks to me to be a great deal of room to reallocate spending, to take it away from projects and programs that aren't particularly doing the people in the province of Alberta a whole lot of good and put them towards projects and programs that work and that keep Albertans working and that keep the economy going and keep the economy working and keep it moving forward and evolving to a stronger economy when we come out of this recession.

I think that there's room to do a great deal of that within the context of the money that this government is spending already. Probably, Mr. Chair, if we really wanted to be hard-nosed about it, we could find $127,720,000, at least we could have if the government hadn't already spent it, that we could have reallocated from existing budget allocations and existing government ministries to cover this supplementary supply request.

There may be the necessity for spending cuts, for budget cuts. I don't know. We'll see what the Minister of Finance and Enterprise brings forward on April 7. There may be the need to go into deficit. There may be the need to engage in some real stimulus spending in hopes that that gets our economy going again. And there is the need to develop the savings habit. Mr. Chairman, no matter how many times the President of the Treasury Board or the minister of finance or anybody else on that side of the House says it, I don't believe this government has developed the savings habit because relative to the tremendous flow of nonrenewable resource revenues through the provincial government's coffers over the last 15 years, the last 10 years, there just isn't that much that has been set aside. We've been the provincial equivalent of a family that makes $250,000 a year and saves 25 bucks a week in a savings account at the bank. It's not good enough.

Mr. Chairman, this government needs to get a handle on its spending, its spending habits, its spending addiction, its spending priorities. I know this government knows because I've sat here on this side of the House, and I've looked at the fear in the eyes of the occupants of the front benches when they've been talking about economic projections and the economic meltdown that we've been going through. There is a need for this government to develop some priorities and start sticking to them, which they haven't done in the entire time that I've been in this House, they haven't done, I don't think, in the last 10 years, they haven't done since they declared that they had defeated the debt and balanced the budget because they've never had till this point an act 2. What they've had is a cushy circumstance where when a problem cropped up, they could throw enough money at it to make the critics and the people who were complaining go away for a while, and that kind of crisis management, if I can even dignify it with that much of a description, ain't going to cut it in fiscal 2009-2010.

Mr. Chairman, I know full well that Bill 21 is going to pass in committee today. I know full well that it's going to pass third reading. I know full well that the ministries of Agriculture and Rural Development, Employment and Immigration, and Transportation are going to get the extra $127 million that they need. Nevertheless, it needs to be said and it needs to be put on the record that this is a government that has not spent sustainably, has not planned wisely, and doesn't budget worth a tinker's damn.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to rise this afternoon and talk about Bill 21, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009. Certainly, I listened with interest to the comments from other hon. members of the Assembly. We look at what is requested here, whether it's in Agriculture or Employment and Immigration or Transportation, and these certainly look like modest sums. One would think that in light of the tight economic times that we're in, this is a supplementary supply bill that has restraint all over it. Whenever you look at previous supplementary supply bills or you look at the interim supply bill, we would come to the conclusion after looking at these amounts of $70 million and $50 million and $8 million, respectively, that this is modest, but certainly there is nothing modest about the budget of this government. It has grown in leaps and bounds in the last number of years. How this money is allocated and what processes are in place to ensure that it's spent wisely and prudently: well, that's another matter.

Today, Mr. Chairman, I had the honour to attend a meeting out in the west end of the city before question period. It was a group of seniors who were meeting to discuss the pharmaceutical strategy that was implemented in the middle of December by this government. The seniors, down to each and every individual that attended, were very concerned that these changes would mean so much to them on a monthly basis because they would have less to live on after they paid for their prescription drugs. In fact, these changes, if initiated, would save the province, I believe, $30 million.

When we look at the budget and the budget process and we look at some of the places where the government is spending money, I was interested to note that last week in Public Accounts there was a question from an hon. member to municipal affairs and housing, who were in attendance, regarding achievement bonuses. That department in that year had, Mr. Chairman, $1.3 million in achievement bonuses. It was sort of buried in the financial footnotes, if I could speak in that way. The $1.3 million was buried in the financial footnotes of I think it was schedule 5 or schedule 6 of the annual report.

It was interesting to learn from that meeting that there are quite a criteria regarding these achievement bonuses. There are different levels of achievement bonuses. These are achievement bonuses that are for managers and opted-out and excluded staff. From what I can understand, my research would indicate that there are 3,000 plus individuals that would be eligible for these kind of bonuses in the government. The majority of the money goes to deputy ministers and officials that are appointed at a senior level by the government party.

Now, if you could, take the time, which I did, to go through the entire series of annual reports for 2007-08 and look up what each department granted in achievement bonuses to senior managers. I was astonished when I finished 10 departments, and the bill was over $15 million. When I finished each and every respective department and had the researchers put them in alphabetical order, the bill from the taxpayers for this bonus system was $38 million plus. That's for the fiscal year 2007-08. That's, ironically, just a little bit less than what we're asking for in the Employment and Immigration program here this afternoon in the debate on Bill 21.

Now, in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development we couldn't find the achievement bonus listed in the fine print, nor could we find it in Executive Council. If we took the averages from the two previous years for those respective departments and added them to the total, Mr. Chairman, I'm surprised: it's $41 million. If we go back to 2006-07 and we go back to 2005-06, the total for this program, this million dollar mystery program, is in excess of $110 million. That's an enormous sum when we're asking seniors to do with less, when we're asking other individuals to expect less.

I did some more research on this whole bonus system. I know that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre brought it up in the Assembly eight years ago, asking detailed, pointed questions when the bonus system was much smaller than what it is, and there were no answers from across the way. There were motions for returns. There were written questions. There was budget debate. The hon.

member was earnest in her efforts to get to the bottom of this bonus system, and she was given the political brush-off.

Now, this is a program, as I understand it, that started close to 10 years ago, and there was a policy change in this program in July 2005. What are the guidelines around this achievement bonus? This is what I have been provided, what I found on the Internet. In order for achievement bonuses to be granted, the government must meet its debt reduction target before any money is released for the achievement bonus. It goes on to say that each ministry is required to report on its business plan achievements. Its annual achievement fund allotment will be determined by the Deputy Minister of Executive Council in consultation with an outside panel of private-sector representatives.

Well, Mr. Chairman, who are the people on the panel of private-sector representatives? Does this panel still exist that determines the achievement fund?

Now, it goes on to say here that the ministry is given a lump sum in recognition of its contribution to the success of overall government business goals. In recognition that it is a team of managers that lead to success, at least half the achievement bonus allotment is distributed as an equal amount to all managers who have performed at a satisfactory level over the past year. The remaining funds will be used as variable achievement payments to managers based on the criteria set out by the ministry.

Well, before we vote on Bill 21, the government should explain exactly what these criteria are, Mr. Chairman. How does all this work? I understand this document to indicate that half is given to the managers as an equal amount. Now that we are debt free, at least for the moment, how would the government explain to the taxpayers that this was a bonus system that was set up to meet debt reduction targets? And after the debt was paid in full, why did this not only continue but expand? We could certainly use $110 million. It's not like the high-end individuals that are receiving these bonuses are getting by on a very modest salary because they're not. Hopefully we're going to get an opportunity to go into detail on that.

When you look, for instance, at the Department of Justice, in the last three years there was close to $15 million given out in these senior management bonuses. Did the Department of Justice have a good three years? Well, if you talk to the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, he would have exceptions to that, and I would agree with the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

We look at Alberta Finance and Enterprise, over 3 and a half million dollars in bonuses given out in the last two fiscal years and a little less than that in 2005-2006, $200,000 less.

We have to look at Health. I don't know whether the hon. Member for Calgary-West put his foot down when he became the minister or not, but certainly the department of health is not one of the leaders in this race to provide bonuses. I would have to agree that the last three years in the ministry of health have not been very good years.

We look at Education: again, there's a $3 million bonus this year.

Employment, immigration, and industry: the very department that's looking for $49 million here gave out over $3 million in senior management bonuses.

Children and Youth Services gave out a few dollars as well, 1 and a half million dollars.

When you go through this, it's a significant amount of money. I must confess that when we look at the deputy ministers and their salaries and where all this is going, I didn't think it was necessary that we would provide a bonus. When we have the members of Executive Council determining what these bonuses are and when they're paid – for the record they're usually paid out in June. I assume that's at the end of the fiscal year.

We look at some of the salaries that are provided to these individuals. I don't want to pick on Executive Council, but I will. For instance, the base salary for the Deputy Minister of Executive Council in 2008 was $288,000. The base salary two years previous to that was, actually, $250,000. When we look at the total compensation package, the Deputy Minister of Executive Council in this fiscal year that just ended received $460,000 in total pay, and that doesn't include the car. For the same office the year before the total pay package was $401,000. In 2005 it was $100,000 less, at $301,000. That is just an example. Tory times aren't tough times for these senior managers; that is for sure.

Ms Blakeman: That's P.E.I. humour, right?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, you could say that, hon. member.

When we look, Mr. Chairman, at the orders in council that set this all up, whether it was 1998, 2004, or the current one, July 30, 2008, we look at the list here and the salary rates. We look at the salary rate for deputy ministers. It's set at $253,000. Then we look at the different ranges for representatives: salary range D, salary range C, salary range B, and salary range A. Salary range A is a maximum of $133,000, and that's members of the Land Compensation Board. Salary range B, where the maximum is $150,000, would include the deputy chief of staff, office of the Premier; director of communications, office of the Premier. The next salary range, C, where it goes up to $192,000, would be the chair of the Labour Relations Board; the deputy secretary to cabinet; the director, office of the Premier, southern Alberta; the managing director of the Public Affairs Bureau; the controller; the deputy chief, policy co-ordination. Then salary range D, which is, again, a maximum of $253,000, is the Alberta representative in Washington, DC; the chief of staff, office of the Premier; the chief executive officer of the Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission.

Ms Pastoor: How much?

Mr. MacDonald: The maximum salary, hon. member, would be $253,000. The minimum would be $188,000. That's salary range D.

All of these individuals are eligible to participate in this bonus system. Again, it's a mystery because there are rating levels. You don't get a bonus; you need improvement. You get a bonus if you meet a standard. You get a bigger bonus if you have superior performance. Then you have exceptional performance, and you could get, I guess, the maximum bonus. I don't know whether there is a discretionary amount in there. I would like to know specifically, Mr. Chairman, before I vote on Bill 21, an explanation from the hon. members across the way if there is ministerial discretion to this program. If so, how does it work?

I would also like to know, please, considering that there have been modest increases over the years for these senior staff, given the economic times we're in, if it is necessary to continue this program, if there have been discussions in cabinet, because it's cabinet that calls the shots here, if this program is to be eliminated or reduced in some form or fashion.

I'm mindful, Mr. Chairman, of the time, but I listened with a great deal of interest, as did the Member for Lethbridge-East, to the seniors this afternoon. How could the government find $30 million to change the Alberta pharmaceutical strategy so that seniors could on their income at this time, with their costs as high as they are and their investment income reduced – is there not some way the government could find the money to fund their prescription drug costs? Well, I think that this is one thing that we should do.

I think that over the years we have developed some very lavish habits here. This is a lavish perk that surely cannot continue. At least, if it's going to continue, the government owes the taxpayers of this province an explanation as to how these achievement bonuses, quietly buried in the financial footnotes of each individual annual report, work and why we can't have full disclosure, why we can't have in the disclosure statements, in the total benefits and salary section of the annual reports exactly how much each individual receives in his achievement bonus and why.

It also, in my view, Mr. Chairman, raises the question about the independence of the high-ranking officials of the public service. How can they be truly independent when we've got this bonus system set up and these different levels of service? I would like some answers regarding these questions.

In conclusion, I would be quite willing to share with anyone who was interested any of the figures. I can certainly let you know what pages you can look at in each respective annual report, and you, too, can draw your own conclusions regarding this information. We look at the Department of Energy. We look at the department of health. We look at the department of children's services. They haven't had very good years, and it puzzles me why we would be giving out millions of dollars to senior management in these respective departments when we have issues around royalty collection. We have issues around protection of children in care. We've had issues around not only the delivery of health care but also controlling the budget.

Thank you.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Chair: Shall the progress on the bill be reported when the committee rises? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 22 Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was just pausing there briefly to see if anybody on the government side wanted to jump up and join in the debate on interim supply, but I guess not.

Now, this is Bill 22, Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009, Mr. Chairman, at the Committee of the Whole stage. This is somewhat bigger than the bill that we were just debating before the hon. minister of health moved adjournment of debate. I'm not really sure why he did, but anyway he did. That one was worth $127 million. This one is worth $10 billion – 10 billion, with a “b” – hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Is there any room in there for an achievement bonus?

Mr. Taylor: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was wondering if there's any room in there for an achievement bonus. Oh, I'm sure that there's room for a bonus or two.

So here we are again, two weeks to go till the end of this fiscal year and the beginning of the next, three weeks to go until the minister of finance and the Starship Enterprise, because sometimes it seems like a work of science fiction, this government's budgeting prowess, stands in this House to deliver the budget for fiscal 2009-2010.

I will point out again, as I did the last time that we had a kick at the interim supply can, that if this government had stuck to the temporary standing orders that it brought in a couple of years ago, which would have had us seeing the introduction of the budget – I believe it was two weeks, but it might have been 10 days; I'm not sure which – 10 days or two weeks after the throne speech. This year that would have been February 24. We would be just about through debate on the budget by now and certainly in a position to vote the budget and have the budget in place in time for fiscal '09-10, which starts on April 1. I'll resist the temptation to say anything about April Fool's Day.

Of course, if we had done it that way, then we wouldn't actually be sitting here or standing here debating interim supply because there would be no need to ask the House for $10 billion, you know, to get us through until payday. It's kind of like Wimpy on Popeye: I will gladly pay you Tuesday for a hamburger today. That's a hell of an expensive hamburger, Mr. Chairman, $10 billion. Even the Alberta meat and livestock strategy doesn't foresee the price of beef at that level.

As it is, we're debating – well, let's see – $29 million in support to the Legislative Assembly, $7 million for the Auditor General, $900,000 for the office of the Ombudsman, $1.8 million for the office of the Chief Electoral Officer. Do we have one of those currently, a Chief Electoral Officer?

Mr. MacDonald: No. We've got a deputy.

Mr. Taylor: Yeah. I guess we have some office expenses to pay there, but gosh we should be able to save a couple of weeks' pay there anyway for the actual officer.

For the office of the Ethics Commissioner, $300,000; $1.5 million for the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner; $14.1 million for the Ministry of Aboriginal Relations; $744 million and a little loose change in equipment and inventory purchases for advanced education and almost another $35 million in nonbudgetary disbursements there; $190 million for Agriculture and Rural Development; $284 million for Children and Youth Services; $97.2 million in expense, equipment, and inventory purchases and another $300,000 in nonbudgetary disbursements for the Ministry of Culture and Community Spirit; $1,142,900,000 to the Ministry of Education, and because it's $900,000, round it off to $1.143 billion.

For Employment and Immigration about $256 million; $133.8 million for Energy; $63 million for Environment; $9 million for Executive Council; $94 million in expense, equipment, and inventory purchases and $11 million in nonbudgetary disbursements for the ministry of finance; $3.238 billion in expense and equipment and inventory purchases and another $4.8 million for Health and Wellness; $133 million for Housing and Urban Affairs; $157 million for Infrastructure on the expense, equipment, and inventory side, $159 million for Infrastructure on the capital investment side; $10.7 million for International and Intergovernmental Relations; $135 million for Justice, but still no money for an independent prosecutor; $588 million for Municipal Affairs; just about $641 million for Seniors and Community Supports; $91 million in expense, equipment, and inventory purchases and $23 million in capital investment for Service Alberta. Does that include the licence plates we're not going to do now, or did that get pulled out of there?

For the Solicitor General and Public Security $128.5 million in expense, equipment, and inventory purchases, another $8.8 million in capital investment for the Solicitor General's ministry, and $409,400,000 in lottery fund payments; about $119 million, almost $120 million for Sustainable Resource Development; about $107 million for Tourism, Parks and Recreation; for Transportation quite a bit here, too, $590 million for expense, equipment, and inventory purchases, $370 million for capital investment and $1.7 million in mad money—I mean nonbudgetary disbursements; $16.9 million for Treasury Board.

It all adds up to just about $10 billion. Even though standing orders say that I'm not supposed to really read a whole lot of stuff into the record in debate, Mr. Chairman, I have, in essence, read almost the entirety of Bill 22 into the record in the last few minutes just going down that shopping list of dollar allocations because there is nothing in here.

I know that the President of Treasury Board in Committee of Supply seemed to take great umbrage to the fact that a number of us on this side of the House pointed out that there is nothing in this bill to justify any of that spending. It's like: well, you know, we have to have this money in order to get through the next several weeks until we get the budget passed and proclaimed, a budget that's not ready because we've been sitting around twiddling our thumbs hoping that our muse would strike us and part the clouds and show us what the economy of the province of Alberta is going to be like for the rest of the fiscal year. So we'll just wait and wait and wait and hope that the muse strikes.

Mr. Mason: A chorus of angels.

Mr. Taylor: The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood suggests we throw a chorus of angels in there, too. Or maybe they were waiting for a chorus of angels. Well, I don't know.

I mean, the plain and simple fact of the matter is that the budget is coming down on April 7, and on April 7 it will likely be no clearer where the economy is going for the next 12 months than it would have been had we started this on March 7 or February 24. But in the interim—and, funnily enough, this is interim supply—we're asked to just vote $10 billion and trust the government that this money won't be wasted.

Well, you know, we don't know whether it'll be wasted or not because we cannot tell from the absolute paucity of information that comes along with this bill whether this is $10 billion to support the same old same old spending habits or whether this is $10 billion to support a radically reformed approach to budgeting. We don't know, and we're told to stay tuned. We're told to wait until April 7 until the Minister of Finance and Enterprise puts her new shoes on, or not, and delivers the budget. I don't even know if she's going to wear new shoes. In times of restraint perhaps she shouldn't.

Mr. MacDonald: Maybe she's going to wear flip-flops.

Mr. Taylor: The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar just suggested that maybe the Minister of Finance and Enterprise is going to wear flip-flops on budget day. That certainly would be in keeping, hon. member, with this government's out-loud musings about what their economic management and financial management and budgeting style are going to be going forward from this point. So we await April 7, Mr. Chair, with hope but not much faith that we will actually see a changed attitude or a clear attitude one way or the other.

In the meantime we're asked not to debate too fully because, gosh, we wouldn't want to put a government minister in the position of actually having to answer a question that might reveal what's going to be in the budget that we should be debating now, but they couldn't get around to bringing it down in time. We're just supposed to go: "Okay. Ten billion? Yeah, that sounds reasonable. Okay. Let's go for that. Why not? Are you sure you wouldn't like $11 billion?"

I think I've made my point, Mr. Chairman. I'll let somebody else speak. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to speak to Bill 22, Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009, at Committee of the Whole. I just want to make a few general comments with respect to this. One of the things that I think is most important when we're looking at money and the expenditure of money is a clear definition of what it is you're trying to accomplish. As we anticipate the upcoming provincial budget, I think it's a good time to review this.

In my view, what you need to start with is an appreciation of the circumstances in the economy; that is to say, not the big statistical numbers and so on but the actual effect of the economy on the ordinary people of this province: the working families, the middle-class people. I think you'll find that while the overheated economy that we have been through in this province over the past number of years has benefited some of those people, it's been very uneven. As people have had secure employment, until recently, at the same time they've also had increasing bills for a number of things, you know, higher utility costs. I don't know what the latest figures are, but we have had in this province some of the highest inflation rates in the country. Rents, of course, have been a huge issue.

It's interesting that an overheated economy affects different people in different ways, and it doesn't always have a positive effect on people. For example, in a rapidly overheating economy you will often have, as we certainly have had in this province, a serious shortage of housing, and it means that rents go through the roof. That means, even though it seems to be contradictory, that in a period of very rapid growth and full employment you may actually have more people who don't have housing because there's just a real shortage of it. Some people actually go backwards; not everybody moves ahead. It's not a consistent process when you're in that sort of economy.

Now, it certainly seems to me that when we're in an economy of that kind and we have very high prices for oil and natural gas, there's a real opportunity which presents itself. That has to do, of course, with how you manage the economy in the good times. When you have, I guess, some of the very lowest royalty rates in the world and extremely high prices for oil and natural gas, then it means that the take, if you will, of the people who extract, refine, and distribute those resources is going to be much higher. In other words, the price goes up but the royalties not as much. The result is that the increased value is captured by the companies that extract the resources and those that distribute it and refine it. That means that it's more difficult for us to manage in the tough times, which we're now entering in this province, notwithstanding some people's view that Alberta is somehow exempt. This province is very, very dependent on its ability to find markets for its goods, particularly oil and, increasingly, bitumen as well as natural gas.

We're now in a difficult time, when we need to increase our spending in certain areas, not in all areas. I wouldn't argue with the government that in some areas we need to show additional restraint in some of the expenditures, but if we want to make sure that people keep working in this province, then in a very strategic way we need to be making sure that government expenditures make that happen. This is the approach that's been adopted in the United States by the Obama administration. It's interesting, Mr. Chairman, that, you know, you can spend untold billions of dollars, which they have done in the United States, but the real question is: where do you do that in order to maximize employment and maximize economic benefit?

Recently the NDP caucus organized a round-table on the economy and the budget – that was a couple of months ago now – and it was very useful. One of the things that we talked about there was the different places where a government can get involved in a stimulus. One of the things that, I think, one of the presenters made a very compelling case for is that certain expenditures produce a stronger economic benefit and create more jobs than other kinds. Resource extraction industries, being very capital intensive, do not provide a lot of employment per dollar spent compared to other things, including health care and education. Interestingly, expenditure on the arts had one of the highest impacts in terms of GDP growth and jobs created per dollar invested by government. I think it's interesting to take a look at some of that.

We've done some work as well around the green energy plan that we rolled out a couple of years ago in the province. I think the NDP were, really, pioneers here in Alberta in terms of talking about a green jobs strategy. What we proposed more recently was to fund a billion dollar green energy fund by transferring some of the money that the government had earmarked for carbon capture and storage.

Now, we don't want to just dismiss carbon capture and storage outright. If it has benefits and if you can capture the CO₂, then that's fine, but it's the polluters, the people that produce the CO₂, that should pay for it and not the general taxpayer. What we proposed instead was to divert that money to a revolving fund that would allow homeowners, businesses, farmers, as well as government buildings and facilities to do complete retrofits of their facilities with a view to reducing energy and to add additional components that would actually generate power – for example, solar power and geothermal power and that sort of thing – to dramatically reduce the amount of energy that we currently use in this province and to pass the savings from that on to the farmers and the small businesspeople and the homeowners as well as to the government for public buildings. We include in that libraries, school boards, universities, hospitals, seniors' facilities, court facilities, and so forth.

The savings to the taxpayers as well as to individuals would be very substantial, and the jobs that would be created from that investment exceed 10 times the number of jobs for an equivalent investment in carbon capture and storage. It creates more jobs, it reduces our energy footprint, it reduces our CO₂ output, and it saves money for both the government and the people of Alberta. That would be something that we think would be stimulative and would help transition the province towards a green energy economy and away from the hydrocarbon-based economy.

Now, we don't propose for a minute that Alberta should abandon the hydrocarbon-based economy, but we also think that we need to look down the road and see that there are real storm clouds on the horizon with respect to the government's economic development strategy. Their economic development strategy is very, very much focused on the tar sands and the development of the tar sands, but there are real threats to that. In the long run we run the risk of an obsolete type of economy because the rest of the world is moving past us. We have these tremendous riches in terms of hydrocarbons, but if we just focus on that and we don't realize that the world is changing, then we are going to strand a future generation of this province with an obsolete economy and a commodity that people will not use. I think the government has some responsibility in this. If you look at what's going on in the world today, increasingly Alberta oil is being seen as dirty oil, and there is increasing and organized pressure on governments to restrict the use of Alberta's oil.

I know that some members opposite get kind of excited when they see Greenpeace activists rappelling down at their fundraising dinners or off bridges and so on, but they would be making a mistake if they thought that those publicity stunts represented the majority of Greenpeace's activity. Greenpeace's activity is primarily focused in the United States and is primarily focused at convincing decision-makers that they should not buy Alberta oil, or oil from the tar sands.

If you look at the history of the seal hunt in Newfoundland, there were very high-profile stunts out on the ice that brought world attention to the seal hunt, including Brigitte Bardot and other famous people coming out on the floes and trying to interfere with the seal hunt. But that was just the visible piece of their activity. The vast majority of their activity was in Europe, attempting to undermine the primary market for seal pelts that existed at that time. They were so successful in doing that, they were able to stop the seal hunt entirely for a number of years.

I don't think the government understands how this is going down or that Greenpeace is not the only organization that has these concerns. For example, the U.S. Conference of Mayors has passed a resolution against tar sands oil. I think that we're going to see more of that. I put the responsibility for this on the government.

Mr. Chairman, we are not opposed to the tar sands or the economic activity that takes place there. However, we think that the government has given Alberta a black eye by disregarding environmental considerations in their headlong rush to develop the tar sands as quickly as possible. For example, what we would propose is that the government bring in a plan to clean up the tailings ponds over a relatively short period, 10 years to 20 years at the very most to clean up the existing tailings ponds, to insist that new projects use dry tailings technology, which is available and is already incorporated in some of the proposed developments, that there be some serious work done to clean up the Athabasca River and to prevent the downstream pollution that exists, and that the government insist that there be hard caps on CO₂ emissions related to tar sands development.

In other words, if the government would work seriously to clean up the tar sands environmentally, it would reduce our risk of having governments and other institutions and companies outside of Alberta refuse to buy Alberta oil in the future. I think the government has failed to do that, and as a result they have put their own basic, fundamental economic development strategy for this province at risk. We think that the first step is to clean up the tar sands and make sure that we have a very good environmental record in terms of the development of that.

Secondly, we need to invest in green energy and the development of green energy and technology, including the commercialization of that technology, so that Alberta uses its financial capacity as a result of its being blessed with hydrocarbons at this time to become something different, to change to a different type of economy. We see Alberta as retaining its position as the centre of energy in Canada, to be the energy leader but in a different kind of energy. That, in our view, not only helps safeguard the planet in terms of climate change but positions Alberta as the economic leader in these technologies in Canada.

As it now stands, we are falling farther and farther behind.

Europe is farther ahead by a long shot and has been for some time. Increasingly states in the United States are getting very far ahead of us as well, particularly California, which is leading the way. Alberta risks becoming a dinosaur, in fact, not just based on fossil fuel but having a fossilized economy, something that really leaves future generations with very little to count on in terms of some of the things that we've been able to enjoy as Albertans.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to conclude by suggesting that the government needs to get some of these things right. They need to recognize that, in fact, we are facing a deeper and longer recession than they're expecting and that there needs to be investment in things which will create jobs and sustain the employment that's necessary for Albertans as we go forward. Just simply expecting everybody else to do the right thing and that that will somehow drive up the price of oil and that everything will be right again is not, in our view, a responsible course of action from this government.

Secondly, we need to recognize the link between the environment and the economy and the tremendous opportunities that we have to develop our economy and to create good, high-quality jobs for future generations by taking the environment seriously and changing the kind of energy economy that we have. I think Albertans have tremendous expertise and knowledge when it comes to energy. I think we need to put that to new uses in order that as the world changes and develops, Alberta is well positioned as a sound environment, as a sound economy, and continues to have a great quality of life and a high standard of living. I think that if the government continues in the present direction, future generations will not enjoy that. They will not have the advantages that we have, and this government is to blame if that happens, clearly, Mr. Chairman.

With those comments, I'll wrap up my remarks for Bill 22, the interim supply appropriation act, and look forward to lots of other great debate on this issue. Of course, as all members, I am looking forward to the provincial budget coming down on the 7th of April. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that we adjourn debate on Bill 22.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Chair: Shall progress on the bill be reported when the committee rises? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 18

Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: We have amendment A1, so the debate is on A1. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Citing Beauchesne 688, I'd like to request that this amendment be severed into its various parts for the purpose of voting. There would be a vote for section A, section B, section C, section D, so four separate votes for each of the sections of this amendment. This is following with the precedents of this House.

Thank you.

The Chair: We now have amendment A1. The debate will be on the whole amendment as a package, but when we call for the vote, we'll call it by sections. Does the committee agree with that? I see no opposition, so go ahead.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Chair. There are some things in this amendment, but it mainly is, if I could use the word, housekeeping to keep some of it going forward. One of the important ones is to be able to accommodate the proposal where the legal profession needs time to delay the implementation, the proclamation, so that they can put it through their society that lawyers would then be able to be considered I believe it's fellow citizens. They change it so that they don't have to be a citizen or a permanent resident in order to be admitted to the Law Society of Alberta. I think that that's probably one of the main ones that they are looking for in this amendment. The rest of it, I think, was really, as I've said, just housekeeping.

There's one thing that I would question – and I will question it at this point – on the amendment. With the credit unions there still isn't a really clear process whereby B.C. credit unions can come in and set up insurance arms of their credit unions. They have them in B.C., but our credit unions on this side are not allowed to establish an insurance arm to go with their credit unions. I'm thinking that that's a very unlevel playing field. I don't think the government's job is to pick winners and losers, but I think their job is to create the rules of the game, so to speak, so that when everyone is on the playing field, it is level, the rules are very clear, and it's also very clear who would enforce those rules.

That's just one thing that I don't think is clear. It's not in these amendments, but I think it's something that has to be looked at. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to stand and speak to Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. The bill would amend 11 statutes, most of these by removing references to Alberta, where the law will now apply to individuals and corporations outside the province.

The Agriculture Financial Services Act is amended by removing the reference to Alberta in the definition of a commercial enterprise. That would be section 1, pages 1 and 2. The Agriculture Financial Services Corporation would not be limited to making loans to individuals or corporations for the purpose of developing or diversifying the Alberta economy. The Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations explained the amendment in the House this way.

Other changes include amending the Agriculture Financial Services Act. The act may currently leave the impression that commercial loans can only be made to Alberta firms. That's not the case. The change will make it clear that provided the operation is in Alberta, the security is in Alberta, and the direction is in Alberta, commercial loans can be made to a person from Alberta, B.C., Nova Scotia, or anywhere else in Canada.

Now, the Business Corporations Act is also amended in this section under extraprovincial registrations. This is to allow for an appeal when extraprovincial registrations are cancelled – that's in section 2(2) on page 2 – and to replace the word "requirements" with "matters." Now, "requirements" limits action to regulatory change while "matters" allows for broader ability to make amendments so that the rules for registration conform with TILMA.

The Charitable Fundraising Act is amended to allow trustees or charitable funds to deposit the money in any financial institution in Canada rather than only in Alberta. That's section 3 on page 4. Some charities offer donors the option of directing that their donation be spent within Alberta. In the bill briefing we were told that this does not infringe on a charity's right to make such an offer.

The amendments to the Cooperatives Act are the same as those to the Business Corporations Act.

Now, the Government Organization Act is amended to allow the government the power to temporarily for a maximum of three years amend noncompliant legislation. That's section 5, pages 6 to 8. The government argues that a similar provision exists under the Municipal Government Act. However, that provision only allows the government to temporarily increase a municipality's power to make bylaws.

The government also points to temporary law-making powers in the Animal Health Act, but that act only allows the government to make temporary regulations due to unforeseen circumstances not covered by the act and in consultation with the chief provincial veterinarian. The provisions in this bill allow the government to change any law temporarily so that it conforms to the business-first requirements of TILMA.

The Insurance Act allows fraternal societies from other provinces to provide insurance. That is section 6 on page 8. Some fraternal societies provide insurance for their members. Some societies outside of Alberta are allowed to provide insurance for their members in Alberta, but there are restrictions, and this lifts those restrictions. Now, Mr. Chairman, I just want to talk a little bit about that because I think that's a good idea. Fraternal societies' providing insurance is a long-standing practice, something that is, I think, to the social good. The restrictions that are in place may not be in the best interests of the society as a whole or the members of these societies, so I think that that's something that's probably not a bad thing.

Now, to move on a bit, the Legal Profession Act is amended to remove the requirements that to be recognized by the bar, a person must be a citizen or permanent resident of Canada. That's section 7, pages 8 and 9. Similar requirements in B.C. were struck down by the Supreme Court of Canada. That's interesting.

The Marriage Act is amended in the bill to allow any resident of Canada, rather than only Alberta, to be appointed as a temporary marriage commissioner. That's section 8, page 9. Now, Mr. Chairman, we asked during the bill briefing whether this will lift Alberta's restriction on who can be a temporary marriage commissioner. A few years ago the government changed the regulations so that only MLAs, MPs, judges, and a few others are eligible to be temporary commissioners. Now, the answer was that the rest of Alberta's eligibility requirements will not be affected. That's interesting.

You know, one of the things that I've very much enjoyed doing since becoming an MLA is marrying people. I was already married before I became an MLA, but in this case I actually have been able to perform the marriage ceremony, and that is one of the nicest things that I've been able to do since becoming an MLA. It really tends to, you know, lift your spirits and make you feel good about the world and feel like you've actually made a real contribution. I've enjoyed that.

Now, a few years ago they restricted the number of marriages that MLAs could perform, and they put some real limits on it. I gather that there was some concern on the part of permanent marriage commissioners, who do this sort of thing on a regular basis, that there was a little bit of competition. But I also understand that there had been some problems with some of the MLAs, maybe, – and this may include a former leader on the other side; I don't know – where some of the paperwork got kind of messed up, so people weren't actually married when they thought they were. I think that that's one of the things that I was very scrupulous about after I performed the ceremony and double-checked and made sure that, in fact, we had crossed the t's and dotted the i's and not the other way around.

Maybe that's a little bit of an aside, but it's certainly something that I think is one of the best parts of the job, as far as I'm concerned.

The Mobile Home Sites Tenancies Act is amended to allow landlords based outside the province to operate within Alberta. That is section 9, page 10. Now, in the bill briefing we were told that the provisions requiring an agent for service – that is, someone who is physically present to deal with tenants' issues – can still be enforced. We're interested in that.

Also, the Partnership Act is amended in the same ways as the Business Corporations Act and the Cooperatives Act. The Residential Tenancies Act is amended in the same way as the Mobile Home Sites Tenancies Act.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we understand that B.C. is passing similar legislation, but we do have some other concerns with respect to this. I just want to express my general view of TILMA. I would have to say that TILMA is a solution in search of a problem. The whole question of what it is exactly that we're solving through this act is a real question in my mind. I don't believe that there exist prior to TILMA significant barriers to trade, to investment, or to labour mobility between Alberta and British Columbia. I think the government's claim that the agreement will create billions of dollars in trade investment in Alberta and B.C. is without any factual basis. The real danger, in my view, of TILMA lies in its impact on local governments, public services, and procurement processes.

I think that it's kind of a wannabe thing. You know, I know that the Conservatives like free trade agreements, and they were very, very proud of, first, the Canada-U.S. free trade agreement and then the North American free trade agreement. I know that the conservatives in the United States with support of federal Conservatives in Canada really wanted to expand the North American free trade agreement to Latin America, interestingly enough, and there was some talk about Colombia. They wanted to extend this throughout South America.

But it was interesting that the South American countries themselves – and there was some leadership here in Latin American countries like, for example, President Chavez in Venezuela – wanted to make sure that this wasn't just simply opening up those countries' economies to more domination by American companies. They've set up an alternative there that is based on fair trade as opposed to free trade. Most countries in South America and Latin America have now joined that, and it has brought to a grinding halt the dreams of conservatives in Canada and the United States to extend free trade to the whole western hemisphere and, I think, with significant benefits to small producers in those countries, peasants, workers, all of whom were at risk of being put out of business as a result of this drive to create a hemispheric free trade arrangement.

That's actually who suffers most, Mr. Chairman. It's the small producer. It's the small farmer. It's the small businessperson. Local procurement rules are prohibited, and it severely damages the mom-and-pop operations, who lose out to the Wal-Marts of the world, and that is exactly where this gets us. It gets us to large corporate entities operating from the States or even from Canada or Mexico perhaps and putting local small businesses and local farmers out of business. It creates more unemployment, not less. It undermines labourers' rights and initiates a race to the bottom type of mentality.

Where the standards are different between one country and another or in this case between one province and another, generally it is the lower standard that tends to be adopted. What these agreements do is give unlimited freedom to capital to move wherever and whenever they want in order to maximize the return on capital but at the expense of the basic underlying community economy that exists, at the expense of the environment, and at the expense of people being gainfully employed.

In a general sense TILMA is an attempt to recreate these bigger free trade agreements on the provincial level, but the problem is that the fundamental barriers to trade and the free movement of capital exist at the national level, not at the provincial level. I know that the government really likes to play in the leagues with the big guys, but in this particular case, you know, a lot of this is just pretending that we're actually sweeping away barriers to trade and labour mobility, which have never existed in a very significant way between provinces, as opposed to those that exist sometimes between countries.

Mr. Chairman, I'm going to take my seat for the moment, but I want to indicate that this particular piece of legislation with or without the amendment is not, in our view, in the interest of the people of Alberta, however much it might be in the interest of some of the corporate friends of this government and their friends in B.C. and Saskatchewan. We don't think this is either desirable or even necessary and will not be supportive of this piece of legislation.

Thank you.

4:40

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on amendment A1.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the opportunity to speak in Committee of the Whole to amendment A1. I'm interested in what is included in the government's amendment but also what's not in the government's amendment. I'm particularly interested in the timing because this is Bill 18. I think we're up to something in the low 20s now for the introduction of government bills overall, so this is a fairly recent addition to the House, recently come out of the government's sort of bill production pipeline, if I may put it that way. It was introduced into the Assembly and had first and second reading within the last 10 days, I think. I don't even think we've debated them. Yeah, we did debate very briefly in second. We get into committee, and already there are amendments. You know there's a story there, and I'd love to know what the story was, Mr. Chairman. We've got a bill that is fairly recent to the House, and already there are three pages of amendments that have been brought forward by the government to amend this bill.

It is amending a number of the bills that are already being amended, so this is an omnibus bill, as I've mentioned. It's always a little confusing to track, and I wonder if that isn't deliberate on the part of the government. But, really, what we're amending in this act is the Agriculture Financial Services Act, Business Corporations Act, Cooperatives Act, Government Organization Act, Insurance Act, Legal Profession Act, Marriage Act, Mobile Home Sites Tenancies Act, Partnership Act, Residential Tenancies Act. So it's a fair number of bills that are being changed inside of one bill. Then we now have amendments that I'm looking at that are amending the section on the Business Corporations Act, amending the section on the Cooperatives Act, amending the section on the Government Organization Act, and some fairly numerous amendments to the Partnership Act.

I sometimes think that this is a deliberate strategy of government to just make it so difficult and complex for others to follow, going back and forth between what was in the bill and now what's in the amendments. I think it's sometimes deliberate obfuscation of what's going on. People just give up and walk away from it.

What I'm interested in is what I'm not seeing in these amendments that I did expect to see in these amendments. One is that I believe that this bill has what I will term a fatal flaw because it's constitutionally incorrect. It goes against our Constitution and our parliamentary process in what it's anticipating inside of this act. I spoke of this during second reading. I expected to see a fix for that in the amendments, and I'm not seeing it.

The second thing that I'm not seeing either in the original bill or in what's being proposed through these amendments is any attempt to offer harmonization for farm workers. It's my understanding that farm workers are protected in British Columbia. They're not protected in Alberta, very clearly. The Member for Edmonton-Riverview has raised the issue repeatedly in this House of the lack of benefits and protection for farm workers here. I was thinking that here's the opportunity to fix this, but the fix isn't here.

I think what we always want to be mindful of is consequences. When you reshape something as dramatically as we are doing with TILMA, it will have consequences. The trick for legislators is to try and figure out what those consequences might be and try to ameliorate any of the negative consequences. Then you go back to the drawing board, literally, in the way you do the legislation. Of course, you always start out to try and do good things when you bring in legislation. The amelioration is for when you have unintended consequences that will have a negative effect.

As I go looking through here, I agree with my colleague from Lethbridge-East that, essentially, we're looking at administrative or housekeeping amendments for the most part. I am still really questioning the timing. We don't see an issue with the amendment that is proposed in section A, which is around the Business Corporations Act. It looks like it's a fairly minor wording change, and it's also adding in a clause that provides that "a provision of this Act or a provision of a regulation made under another section of this Act does not apply in respect of extra-provincial corporations." So there is a protection being offered there.

In section B, which is affecting the Cooperatives Act, which appears on page 4 of the original bill in the paper copy, we are striking out "requirements referred to," and what we're doing is changing it from "requirements" to "matters," which has fair consequence, I must admit. I mean, you're going from something that is a requirement to just referring to it as a matter, so you're downgrading it. You're taking it from a requirement to simply referring to it as a matter. Does that have huge import in what we're doing here? Not that I'm personally aware of, but I don't come from a co-operatives background. We have not heard from anyone in our consultation loop that has expressed a particular concern around this. I've got to assume that we're going to be okay.

The next section that's being amended is section C, which is affecting the Government Organization Act. Essentially, this section appears to be coming in under the regulations section, which is very long for the regs that are being allowed. This, I think, is where the problem is happening in this act, by the way. This is where we've slipped over a constitutional problem. Essentially, what it's adding in is: "This section comes into force on Proclamation." So that's now setting it up that there could potentially be different enactment dates throughout this legislation, depending on whether it's coming through on proclamation of the act itself or whether there has been a designated proclamation put into the different sections.

The final section, D, that is being amended here is the Partnership Act, which for the most part, I think, is affecting our legal profession. That's who makes the most use of this. A number of changes where we're changing wording, going from what had already been "requirements referred to" in a certain subsection, and we're now substituting "matters." So, again, it's a downgrade. This is looking to add "from limited partnerships" into it, and also again adding in that "providing that a provision of this Act or a provision of a regulation made under another section of this Act does not apply in respect of extra-provincial limited partnerships." We've seen that used here before, and that appears in a number of sections. Obviously, there were a couple of mistakes that were consistently made throughout the original document that the government is attempting to correct.

What does strike me is that the government is in an all hellfire hurry about this. I think what has happened is that the government is behind on this. There is a guillotine date upcoming on the 1st of April. The government for whatever reason is behind on this, and now they're in a huge hurry to get this done, literally, by the end of the week because then we go into two constituency weeks in which we're not sitting in the House; we're back in our constituencies. So if the government is going to have this particular implementation act for TILMA done to meet that deadline of April 1, it has got to do it by Thursday. I think that, perhaps, in that rush to get the bill before the House, there have been some mistakes made that would have been caught if there had been a more studious, painstaking approach to it. That's what I've got to assume.

Once again the House is being pushed or rushed because the government has chosen to be slow on the uptake on a particular deadline. That's the history of this government. We see that regularly with the budget. I mean, everybody knows that we have a fiscal year. Now, who picked the fiscal year? Well, the government picked the fiscal year. They set it at the 1st of April. With that goes an expectation that there's a budget that we would operate under. So you'd expect that the government would have the House sit and would have the budget prepared and brought before the House long enough in advance that we could have the budget in place before we actually are into the fiscal year. You know, of the 13 budgets that I've been here for, I don't think the government has ever done that. Maybe once. I'll err on the side of caution and say: maybe once. But the rest of the time they haven't.

Then they're in a great hurry to get through the budget debates and get it passed. And you say: well, whose fault is this? If the government, who has all the decision-making power about when the House is called, how many people speak to the bill, how fast it's going to move through the House, even whether we're going to sit at night or not in order to be able to deal with legislation – the government holds all the cards in the decision-making there. They choose to organize that time badly so that we end up in a rush. I have very little patience with that, frankly.

Mr. Mason: Maybe they would do a better job if they had more opposition.

Ms Blakeman: Well, I suspect they would do a better job if they had more opposition, to be honest with you.

My colleague from Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood had raised the reference that, really, this is being a provincial version of a free trade agreement that exists already between countries. We have the free trade agreement between Canada and the U.S. and the North American one between Canada, the U.S., and Mexico. This is about a Wal-Mart economy. This is about local decision-making and how far we get away from local decision-making and who is controlling that decision-making and how far away they are from the effect that their decision has. I would argue that we need to be more cautious about this.

I am very supportive of lifting red tape problems and dealing with that. As someone that worked in the not-for-profit sector, I can tell you that I am very sympathetic with the small businesspeople because, oh, my Lord, everybody that has got a great idea, they want to have us do it three times and in three different versions: one for the municipality, one for the province, and one for the federal government. When you're running a small business or a small non-profit, you don't have very many administrative people, and to have different forms where this one wants, you know, your postage and your printing together in one category and the next one wants it split out, it's an unbelievable amount of time, which for a not-for-profit means that it's not going into producing what your service or your program actually is. For a small businessperson it means that it's costing them money, and that may well be somebody's paycheque or the question of whether there are two paycheques in that small business or one paycheque in that small business.

I'm sympathetic to anything that could be done to reduce red tape, but did we need to move to something like this? I'm not so sure. I think that there was a way to work away at this in a methodical and reasonable fashion without having to do this overlay of an agreement.

Just to go back one more time about how far away we get from control and give you a small example of this, I'm going to use food and food safety. What we're starting to understand is that although we can get food from all over the world, it's not necessarily the best thing for us physically or economically to get food from all over the world. By the time it travels that far to get to us, it may not be the best thing for us to eat, and it may not be the best thing for their economy to have had it shipped away from them. We end up with these sort of push-back campaigns like the 100-Mile Diet, where people are trying to practise finding their food within a hundred miles of where they live. That's a challenge because so many of our small artisan food producers have been forced out of business by ever-larger and ever-farther away producers of food. That is what we get into with TILMA. Granted, we're only talking about the next province. You know, it's not the other side of the world. But this is a trend towards that, and we lose control at a local level every time that happens.

To go back to the specifics of what has been proposed in the government amendments, aside from what is missing and the fact that the issue that I raised in second reading has not been dealt with – and I will talk about that outside of specifically addressing this amendment A1 – and the fact that we're missing a harmonization around protection of benefits for farm workers, I'm fine with what I know and understand of the amendments that have been brought forward. As I say, we haven't had a lot of time to do a feedback loop with the groups that would be affected by this, but I haven't heard anything back from them. So at this point we have to assume that either they didn't have time to respond or they have no problem with it. I'm going to assume that it's the latter, and move forward.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak to amendment A1, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. leader of the third party, on amendment A1.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I see the amendments that the government has brought forward. For example, in part A section 2(6) is amended in clause (a) by adding "from corporations" after "section 293.1(b)(ii)." It says that we would add "providing that a provision of this Act or a provision of a regulation made under another section of this Act does not apply in respect of extra-provincial corporations."

Well, you know, I think that these amendments really indicate that the government had not thought through this act when it brought it forward. It is beyond me. Mr. Chairman, looking through this long list of changes from the government to the government's own bill really says to me that they're not really on the ball here. They've had a long time to deal with this bill. This is their baby. They've created this particular piece of so-called trade agreement with British Columbia and have been behind this from the beginning. It never ceases to amaze me how ill prepared the government is when it's dealing with something that's exclusively under its own jurisdiction.

I know that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre was talking a bit earlier about this issue, and she talked about the budget. She talked about how it takes the government much longer to produce a budget than it did years ago under other Conservative governments. You have to wonder what's really kind of wrong over there. It's admittedly a complex area, but this is not a new thing. They've been talking about TILMA for years and years, and it really strikes me that amendments here ought to have been incorporated in the legislation in the first instance.

I want to just really follow up some of the comments that I made earlier as well. This is something the government has brought forward which doesn't really have a purpose. They've never really made the case, in my view, that there are enormous interprovincial barriers that exist. They've gone through, you know, in great detail all of the different aspects, but what this really says to me is that this is an attempt to prevent municipal governments in particular and other government agencies from implementing purchasing policies that support local businesses. I can't help but think that these kinds of restrictions don't benefit local communities. They're the kinds of policies that create ghost towns, that put whole sections of the economy out of business.

We've seen the limitations of these conservative ideas as we enter this tremendous economic crisis right now, Mr. Chairman. All of the pillars of conservative ideology that were almost unchallenged have come tumbling down. We could hardly stand in this House and contradict the prevailing wisdom of the neo-cons that dominate this government. You know, regulation is a bad thing; that was one of them. You have to deregulate everything. You've just got to get out of the way of the market because the free market is omniscient and omnipotent. It can decide all questions. All economic questions can be decided if you just leave the market alone. If you just get out of the way, get government out of the way and let the market go, you'll always get the best possible results and nothing can possibly go wrong. Well, we've seen that things can actually go terribly wrong. We've seen that.

I mentioned this a little bit in question period today. I was watching TV late on Thursday night, and I tuned in to one of my favourite shows, which is The Daily Show. The host, Jon Stewart, had an interview actually for the whole program, which was unusual, with Jim Cramer, who is on CNBC and who talks about all of the things that you should be investing in. He was encouraging people just days before Bear Stearns' collapse to get involved and get into Bear Stearns.

You know, what those ideologues opposite miss is that the market is not a perfect mechanism. It's made up of individuals, and some individuals have a lot more knowledge and ability to manipulate things in their own interests. We've seen that over and over again, where essentially corporations, boards of corporations and management teams of big corporations, especially in the United States, have essentially looted their shareholders. They've given themselves hundreds of millions of dollars worth of bonuses at the expense of the shareholders, whose interests they were sworn to uphold, and this is unchecked by regulators.

It's unchecked by government, which in its appropriate role should be overseeing these things and making sure that this doesn't happen, that the greedy and the powerful don't triumph over the weak who have been enticed by people like Jim Cramer and many others in the media and in politics and in business to invest their money, their retirement money, the stuff that they've worked so hard to build and to save. They've been enticed into a market where they were essentially blindfolded, gagged, tied up, and robbed by these people. These corporate thieves were operating in a system that was created by the conservative ideology that says that the market can solve all problems if government just gets out of the way.

It's pretty clear to me that in that particular case the ideology of deregulation has completely failed on a world scale. You know, I can't imagine anybody sitting in this House who's a real conservative that can't see what's happened and can't see that some of the fundamental ideological underpinnings of the conservative movement have completely collapsed. They just don't understand, I think, some of the fundamental realities faced by people, which is that in a free market system without appropriate oversight and without appropriate regulation, the big get bigger and the small get smaller; the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

What happened when they deregulated electricity in Alberta, for example? I've been around for this part. I've seen it with my own eyes. Well, one of the things that happened is that the price of electricity for people in this province almost doubled almost overnight because the appropriate role of government was removed, and the people that can make a killing made a killing because they can manipulate a market. So we've seen people paying way more for electricity than they should.

Another important principle of conservative ideology, Mr. Chairman, is, of course, privatization. It was a maxim that the private sector can always do it better. You know, government is inherently inefficient, and it just can't do anything. Government can't even tie its own shoes according to some of these conservative ideologues that we have in this place and around the world, so you should privatize everything because it'll be better off.

Now, Mr. Chairman, all we have to do is look at what happened with Air Canada. Boy, was that a success, was that a great success. You know, I can remember when you had good service. They still lost your luggage from time to time, but not as often as now. You've got the privatized Air Canada, which has worse service. If it wasn't for WestJet and a little bit of competition there, it would be even worse. But Air Canada is a clear example of how privatized service has made things worse, not better.

There are other examples. You've got privatization and the competition for telephones. Take, for example, telephones. Well, now do you get better service? You don't get better service. What you've got is people phoning you and bugging you to change your phone service every couple of days.

We switched our phone service at our house about a year ago to a different provider, and then the phone service went out. So I phoned, and I sat on hold for a couple of hours, and I finally got through to somebody, to an actual person in India who was going to try and help my phone service. They told me, in fact, that it would take four days before they could reconnect my telephone service. Now, keep in mind that this was their fault that the phone service went out, not our fault at our house. In actual fact, four days without telephone service is completely unacceptable. In the old days when you had Alberta Government Telephones, that never would have happened, Mr. Chairman. That never would have happened.

So the Conservatives have made things worse again, you know, over and over. I think there's a pattern here, Mr. Chairman. I think that there's a real pattern that's developing here as I'm going through some of these experiences, whether it's airlines or telephones or any number of other things.

I haven't even got to health care yet and the government's plans to privatize health care. Let's compare in a broad sense the health care we have in Canada, with all its many flaws, and the health care system they have in the United States, which is the most privatized health care system in the world. Now, you'd think that free enterprise in health care would help save costs. You know, we've heard that from the minister from time to time, that more private delivery might help us save costs. But in the United States, if you look at the per capita costs of health care under that most private system in the world, they are double per person, per capita, the health care costs in Canada, and there are 50 million Americans with no health care coverage whatsoever. If you compare a private delivery for health care, on the one hand, with one on the very same continent, right next door, where it's not entirely but mostly public, you'll see better outcomes, lower costs, and just generally a better health care system. So there's a third example of how the privatization ideology has come tumbling down.

We have other places to go, I think, Mr. Chairman. The government is continuing to try and push the envelope of privatization through such things as P3s and so on.

Ms Blakeman: Because they believe; they really believe.

Mr. Mason: Well, I don't know if they believe. This is the thing, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. I think some of them believe it in spite of the apparent facts that are there. But what I can't understand is – there is a connection here – who benefits from privatization, and who benefits from deregulation? Not me. Not ordinary families in this province. I don't think that they benefit; I think apparently they don't benefit. But some people do benefit.

Now, one of the questions I've always asked myself is that given that all the polling across Canada consistently shows that the public wants public health care – and that includes the public in Alberta. This is a fairly consistent finding in public opinion polls, that the majority of people in this country, including in Alberta, want to have, want to retain the public health care system. Yet governments around the country, not just this one but other governments across the country, including the current federal government and the previous Liberal federal government, have continually attempted to push the envelope with more and more privatization. You would think that that would be illogical. If the public wants public health care and public health care is better than private health care, then why wouldn't governments just do that?

The fact is that there are 100 or more big corporations that are insurance companies, drug companies, and private hospitals and health care delivery companies that take a look at the $10 billion a year that we spend on health care in Alberta and, you know, probably 10 times that nationally every year, and they just drool. Mr. Chairman, when they look at the amount of money that we spend on our health care system, they can't contain themselves; they just start to drool. They want that money to pass through their balance sheet and end up on their bottom line before any sick person gets helped. They see an enormous amount of money that they can make if we could increase privatization, so they relentlessly pressure governments around the country and lobby them and spend money on them and give them campaign donations to try and convince them to have more private health care delivery.

That's the only reason that I can see, Mr. Chairman. There's no reason to have private health care when you've got a public system that's cheaper and works better and the public wants to keep it. What politician in their right mind would want to bring in private health care? But that's why. It's more than ideology; it's the interests. It's the vested interests that keep continuously pushing for private health care in our country and in our province and, of course, the ideology of . . .

The Chair: Hon. member, I wish to remind you that we are talking about amendment A1.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was getting to that. Thank you for that.

I just want to indicate that the amendments to Bill 18 simply strengthen the bill, strengthen it from the point of view of the people proposing the bill, which represents one of the precepts or pillars of conservative ideology in our province, which is that, you know, you need to just let capital flow as freely as possible without any limits. These amendments, I think, simply serve to further that particular agenda, which I don't share and which, I believe, is historically bankrupt. I think the government is flying in the face, swimming upstream in the current of history. I don't think that they are going to be proven to be acting in the public interest on this particular approach. I don't believe that substantial impediments to trade actually exist, but this will have the effect of eliminating local procurement laws, which I think is a mistake.

Mr. Chairman, with that, I will conclude my comments on the amendments proposed by the government to this bill and take my seat. Thank you.

The Chair: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on amendment A1?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question on amendment A1. The chair shall put the question on the four parts of amendment A1.

[Motion on amendment A1A carried]

[Motion on amendment A1B carried]

[Motion on amendment A1C carried]

[Motion on amendment A1D carried]

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on Bill 18.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you very much. I just wanted an opportunity to raise my concern again about what I see as something that has been put into this bill that will make this bill very ripe for a constitutional challenge, and I cannot speak with enough urgency to try and convince this government to withdraw and amend this particular section of the bill because I think it is going to get us in a whole passel of trouble. Now, what I'm specifically referring to is the section in the Government Organization Act that I raised during second reading. I listened to see if there was a response coming back from the government explaining the choices that they had made, but there has been no response, which generally means that the government is not going to take any action.

Here is where the trouble is. Let me make sure that I've got the right section here; I can't be doing this wrong. It starts at the bottom of page 6 of the hard copy of the bill. It's in section 7(1); the heading there is Regulations. It's saying that the Lieutenant Governor in Council, which is cabinet, may make regulations in respect of matters relating to the implementation of the Agreement that the Minister considers are not provided for or are insufficiently provided for in this Schedule or any enactment.

It goes on in the next section:

(2) A regulation made under subsection (1)

which is the one that I just read,

(a) may suspend the application of or modify a provision of an Act or regulation or may substitute another provision in place of a provision.

That's where the problem is. It's the fact that it says that it essentially is delegating the power of this House to the cabinet. In the parliamentary tradition what is created by a Legislature or a Parliament must come back to that Legislature or Parliament to be amended or changed in any way. What we create only we can change.

You even see that with things like the private bills. I had a staff member come to me with one of the private bills that's before us right now, going: what is this? I said: well, this is what happens. The example I used was that it was an adult adoption act and that those at one point were always passed through the Legislature, so in order to undo an adult adoption act, it had to come back before the Legislative Assembly. At this point we don't see these very often anymore, but that was the example I was using. Then, lo and behold, we had one come up through private bills. So what we create we have to undo. What we create we have to modify.

The excuse the government uses so often about why they are not putting specifics in legislation anymore, why they're putting it in regulation is because they have to bring it back to the House to change it if they put it in legislation. If, for example, they put a timeline or an amount of money for a fine, let's say, in the legislation, in order to change the amount of that fine, it has to come back to the House, and it has to have an amending act to change that.

What this little tiny section, what that one little word does is say that the Government Organization Act, which is how these guys organize themselves, you know, which ministry is responsible for what piece of legislation, et cetera, et cetera – it basically all flows from that. The only thing more important in this Assembly is the Alberta Act, which is our Constitution. It's essentially saying under a regulation section that the cabinet can change an act without it being brought back to this House, which is wrong, wrong, wrong, wrong, wrong.

Further, there is one precedent to do this and, aside from that, generally a prohibition against doing it. I've already given you examples of how what we do has to come back to us to be changed. There is an example where this was not used. I talked about it last time. I was sort of guessing then, but I'm right. The only time it's been challenged and upheld in a court is in Re Gray, which essentially was around legislation that had been passed in 1914 in which the federal Parliament exempted farm workers from military service. They weren't required to serve. Then when the War Measures Act was implemented, the War Measures Act passed by the federal Parliament, it said: we are going to delegate our powers for the term of the war to the cabinet because we need those decisions made quickly, so we will agree to do that from this House. It was an entire House debate. They delegated it.

Under the cabinet that was operating under the auspices of the War Measures Act, they in 1917 went back to that same piece of legislation and deleted, removed, the exemption for farm workers. So then farm workers were subject to military draft. That exemption was challenged. Essentially, it was upheld because the Assembly had delegated that authority under the War Measures Act. But that's the only time. Essentially, what the ruling said was: we will tolerate this only because these are extraordinary circumstances and we are under the War Measures Act. That, my friends, is the leading authority on what we're talking about here.

There was a second example from the middle of the last century in which the Canadian Tax Foundation essentially challenged a change in the Income Tax Act because they'd had the very odd thing where tax avoidance is okay, but tax evasion is not okay. By regulation the federal cabinet changed a particular proviso from being tax avoidance to being tax evasion and caught a number of people out as a result.

So this is a constitutional problem. It's called abdication. In other words, the Assembly has abdicated, walked away from, given over its control to a lesser, minor, power. That's exactly what's being contemplated here. My argument is that this is unconstitutional because we are not involved in extraordinary circumstances, like a war. It feels like it some days in here, but it's not. There are no guns; there's no artillery. Nobody's declared war on anybody else. We are not in a war situation. There is no reason why the government would need to give itself the power to change an act without it being able to come back into this Assembly. I believe this is a very, very bad precedent of the government to start to move in this direction.

I know that the government doesn't have a lot of time for sitting in this Assembly. I know that even today there was great irritation expressed by government members because we had a number of members in the opposition that wanted to speak to an appropriation bill: "Well, you know, why are they doing this? They've already spoken once before. Why do they need to speak again?" Well, frankly, the rules that we have in this House and other parliamentary Houses say that if members want to speak, they can speak. It's not up to the government to say: well, we're going to allow you one or two speakers here. As long as a member who's in good standing rises to speak and indicates their wish to speak, they are recognized, outside of very specific timelines that are preset. We this afternoon will run into one of those timelines.

We have two appropriation bills in front of us. It says that those appropriation bills must be voted on 15 minutes prior to the normal time of adjournment, so at 5:45 those votes will indeed be called. That will interrupt the rest of the business and curtail other debate, if you will. What is being anticipated and proposed in this Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 – I cannot emphasize enough how wrong this is.

What is the reason that has been given by the sponsoring member for this? He said: oh, well, you know, I talked about it when I introduced the bill. Well, indeed, he did. On March 3, 2009, on page 212 of Alberta Hansard, the paper version, at approximately 5:30 in the afternoon his reasoning was to empower [the cabinet], the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations to temporarily amend noncompliant legislation. This will occur when prompt change is required to implement a TILMA panel ruling or for Alberta to avoid a challenge from B.C. under the TILMA when the Legislature is not in session.

Well, guess what? It's the government. They have 72 members. Whenever they want to call us into session, they can call us into session. That to me is not a good enough reason to say: oh, it's inconvenient for us to call the House into session; therefore, we should give ourselves the power to change an act of this Assembly by cabinet. Then he goes on and talks about regulations that would deal with unforeseen circumstances or regulatory deficiency which already exist in legislation. Well, it's a regulation; cabinet is empowered to do that already.

He said to me at the time: well, this was dealt with because there's a time limit. I do not see the time limit in this bill. What I do see is the government giving itself the power in the very next section, subsection (3), that "a regulation made under subsection (1) may be made retroactive to a date not earlier than April 1, 2007," and then a number of specifics around what happens if it is made retroactive.

I don't see this timeline that he's talking about until you get down to section (4), which, again, is specific to regulations but not to an act. Section (4) says, "A regulation made under subsection (1) is repealed on the earliest of the following" and then goes into, you know, "the coming into force of an amendment," the coming into force of a regulation that repeals it, or the expiration of three years from the day that the regulation, et cetera, et cetera. It does not include the act. It does not comment on changing an act. Once it's changed that act, it's changed, and there is no time limit that automatically expires on any change that cabinet might make to an act.

The minister's explanation. I have checked what he said, and in fact his expiration time limit does not apply to changes that cabinet would make to an act. Again, this is so wrong on so many levels. The government is in control of this. They control the timing of everything here, including their negotiations in the timing of the implementation of TILMA itself. If they couldn't get ready in time, then they should have negotiated better with B.C. around the implementation dates.

If they're worried that somehow we will be found lacking in some of our legislation and that a tribunal will then find us at fault and in need of changing something, then call the Legislature in and change it. Frankly, you're going to get enough of a lead time in the process that is set out for going to tribunal that you could hustle in and make those changes. But there is no reason to be circumventing the power of this Assembly in order to cover up your own problems with scheduling. It is unacceptable for the government to do that.

As part of my research I had looked at a couple of things around a bill and, you know, could you change or alter or delegate down a bill. With the help of the excellent staff from the Legislature Library I found two references. The first is appearing in Marleau and Montpetit on page 661, which is around the abandonment of a bill, that if a committee has presented a report to the House that a bill be withdrawn or informs the House that the committee has agreed that a bill will not be proceeded with, the committee has basically notified that it's decided not to proceed with the consideration of a bill without reporting it to the House.

Okay. There's a provision for it when you're talking about a bill, but we're not talking about a bill. In this amending act we are talking about the cabinet being able to change acts that we live by and, worse than that, that they can do it retroactively and forever. There is no time limit on this.

A number of really important tenets of our Westminster parliamentary system are being violated here. I start to think: "Okay. Why does nobody in the government seem too concerned about this?" It's not as though they hustled forward immediately with an amending act to change this. I think: "Well, it's going to work for them. It's going to be dang convenient because if they can get this through, they've now given themselves a tool where they can change any act of our Legislative Assembly without bringing it back here." Just imagine the consequences that that is going to have for this province.

Mr. Hancock: We won't need an opposition. You'll be out of work.

Ms Blakeman: Well, yeah, eventually it means that the House wouldn't sit because the government would not be required to bring changes forward to the Assembly to get the agreement of the Assembly to change it. The only reason it would need an Assembly would be to create new legislation, and at that point they may well be able to try and get around it by doing something with regulations. I'm assuming that's what they would try.

Now, I understand that the government, you know, has so many people that they're a bit bored sitting in here. They've already made decisions in their backrooms, and they've decided they want to get on with it, and they don't want to hear what the other people have to say. But you know what? This is still a democracy. As shabby and struggling as it is, this is still a democracy in Alberta. There are a number of people who did not vote for the ruling party, and their voice has as much right to be heard in this House as those who did support the party that formed the government.

I live in hope that even people who did support the government would recognize this for what it is. It is tyrannical. It is an enforcement of the majority upon a minority. It is legislating by stealth. It is doing through the back door what it is not allowed to do through the front door. I cannot emphasize enough how much this needs to be changed. It's also signalling to me that if the government does not bring forward an amending act or change this in some way, what is being signalled by this government for the rest of time is that it will have passed and given itself the ability to do something that's very wrong.

I know that for many of you in the backbenches of government, you think this is funny and amusing and kind of cute because the government has pulled a trick on all of us. But there may well be something that's very important to you or to your constituents that you want to be heard on, where you want to be able to raise the voices of your constituents in this House. If this passes, you will lose the opportunity to do that because they can decide to just slide it through as a cabinet OC, and you will never hear about it until it's published in the Gazette, if you happen to be someone who regularly reads the Gazette. How many people do that? Unfortunately, not as many as should, but that's not a fault of theirs. It's pretty obscure.

Thank you very much for the opportunity in Committee of the Whole to be very specific about what I have identified as an issue here. I have gone and gotten my legal references. For those of you who would like to follow along with it in Re Gray, it is referenced in Constitutional Law of Canada, written by Peter W. Hogg. I have here the 2004 edition. It's referenced in a couple of places. One is section 14(2), limitations imposed by a constitution, delegation of legislative power, which is appearing on page 334, and that goes through that particular example that is the exception to the rule. I mean, essentially, we cannot delegate our power. We are here to do this work, and we cannot delegate our power to a lesser authority unless there is an overriding reason like war, and we are not in a war position.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East on the bill.

Ms Pastoor: No, not on the bill.

Mr. Chair, thank you. I have a notice of amendment to Bill 18, that it be amended by striking out section 5. If that could be passed out, then we could discuss that, please.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East has an amendment to Bill 18. It shall now be known as A2.

Please continue, hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm asking that we strike out the whole section 5, which is found in the bill itself on page 6 and goes on to page 7. This amendment covers exactly what my colleague from Edmonton-Centre has been talking about for the last 20 minutes. This truly is, in my mind, something very scary if it goes through. After having listened to the Member for Edmonton-Centre and knowing full well that there were probably two people actually listening, I would venture to say that of the majority of the people in the . . . [interjections] Well, such a clever opposition we have because they can talk and listen at the same time.

However, I would suspect that there are many people in this House that don't realize or really understand the actual ramifications of being able to change an act in this House in the backrooms and not have it come back into this House. I believe that there will be consequences. Unfortunately, one of the things that I might hear coming from the opposite side is, to use a well-worn phrase: oh, well, that's collateral damage. Well, collateral damage may well go on for many, many years. I'm very passionate about the fact that everybody really, really understand what they're doing by not taking out section 5.

The regulations that I take particular interest in – and I'm going to try not to repeat everything that my colleague from Edmonton-Centre said only because she certainly had the quotes from the law books and also from the legislative books themselves to be able to back up what she was saying.

One of the things it says under 7(2) is:

A regulation made under subsection (1)

- (a) may suspend the application of or modify a provision of an Act or regulation or may substitute another provision in place of a provision, and
- (b) may specify the circumstances in which a suspension or modification of or substitution for a provision of an Act or regulation provided for under clause (a) is to operate.

I just really, really hesitate when I see that kind of language and that kind of an attempt to push this through a House that I'm not actually sure has really taken a look at this in depth to see what would happen in the end.

The reason for striking out the section, one that is a great concern to me, is the retroactivity of regulations. How can you change the rules of the game in the middle of the play? This is exactly what's happening here. How about all of those people that are going to be affected by thinking that they're playing by the rules? They've gone back two years and changed the rules. It's just incomprehensible why this would even come forward.

I really do believe that the ethics of the thinking behind this have to be questioned. Any consequences from this bill should go forward from the proclamation of the bill, not necessarily from the date of passing but from the proclamation. Then people can go forward. To go back two years and say, "Oh, sorry; we've changed the rules" is just, in my mind, ethically unacceptable.

To rely on a government to repeal a regulation or for the three-year period to expire with nothing but a smile and a promise is, again, very unwise. I believe that when somebody looks at this – and other people will look at this because, clearly, there will be consequences – they will see that there was, I think, a huge lack of respect for this House from the other side, which doesn't surprise me. I'm not sure that they have a great deal of respect for it when they make remarks like: it's really a waste of their time to be here.

I think that it'll show a great deal of lack of respect for the House and for the way that democracy truly should rule. Democracy should be based on trust. I don't believe that anything I see in this section 5 anywhere . . .

The Chair: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member, but pursuant to Standing Order 64(4) I must now put a single question proposing the approval of the appropriation bills referred to Committee of the Whole.

Before I do that, I would like to call on the hon. Deputy Government House Leader to move that when the committee rises and reports, progress be reported on Bill 18.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Chair. In fact, I would like to do exactly that. I would like to put a motion on the floor that when we rise, the committee report progress on Bill 18.

[Motion to report progress on Bill 18 carried]

Bill 21

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009

Bill 22

Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

The Chair: The chair shall now put the question on appropriation bills 21 and 22.

[Motion carried]

The Chair: Hon. members, pursuant to Standing Order 64(4) the committee shall now immediately rise and report.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 21, Bill 22. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 18. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Having heard the report by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, does the Assembly concur?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would move, given the hour, that we now call it 6 p.m. and adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:48 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. Grant that we the members of our province's Legislature fulfill our office with honesty and integrity. May our first concern be for the good of all of our citizens. Let us be guided by these principles in our deliberations this day. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly today a great diplomat and a friend, Mr. Tom Huffaker, consul general of the United States of America in Calgary. I was honoured to host a farewell lunch and pay tribute to Mr. Huffaker today. We've been very, very fortunate to have the consul general at his post strengthening Alberta-U.S. relations since the summer of 2006. We're grateful to him for helping to build knowledge and understanding of Alberta as a secure, reliable, environmentally responsible, and growing energy supplier to the United States. He has also helped improve border efficiency through the introduction of the NEXUS program at both the Edmonton and the Calgary airports. I can tell you that Mr. Huffaker's hard work and dedication have been appreciated and have gone a long way to illustrating that Alberta and the United States are more than just neighbours; we're business partners, and we're friends.

It was a pleasure to host Mr. Huffaker and his wife, Claire. They are seated in your gallery, Mr. Speaker, accompanied by Tim Marriott from protocol. I would ask that they rise and receive the very friendly and traditional warm welcome of this Legislative Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: We'll proceed with school groups. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you a very proud Albertan who lives in my constituency, Pastor Dan Dressler. Pastor Dressler moved to Alberta in the 1940s. He was married in 1947 right here in Edmonton. He spent the better part of the next 50-plus years in various communities in Alberta as a pastor and now resides comfortably in Edmonton-Ellerslie. As you know, Mr. Speaker, nine of those years were spent serving the community of Barrhead. Although he is officially retired, he remains spiritually active in the community. At this time I would like to thank Pastor Dressler for his service to this province and ask him to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

For my second introduction it is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you a school group from my constituency of Edmonton-Ellerslie. They are joining us today from Meadows Baptist Academy, which I had the privilege of visiting a couple of times to educate about the Legislature and to present scrolls for various academic and fine arts achievements. I want to thank the parents, teachers, and pastors who came down with the students today: Pastor Kevin Williams, Pastor Aaron Pollock, Kristi Taylor, Darren Esayenko, Deisy Campos, and principal Alex Antoniak. I would like them all to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. First, I'd like to introduce to you and through you to the rest of the Assembly my guests Madeline Rainey and her 16-year-old son, Connor, who are seated in the public gallery. Madeline and Connor presented a petition to the Edmonton public school board on January 13, 2009, seeking more immediate benefits for the district's special-needs students. Madeline is pleased to participate in the board's Setting the Direction for Special Education in Alberta consultations. I would now ask both Madeline and Connor to rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Secondly, I have a group of wonderful, bright students from St. Nicholas Catholic junior high school. There are 50 grade 9 students, Mr. Speaker, as well as their teacher and assistant principal, Norma Jani, teacher Severina Rossi, student teacher Kristen Mackie, and teachers assistants Lois Witteveen and Fresia Pilquil. I would ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 18 visitors from the Public Affairs Bureau. They are seated in both galleries, and I'm very proud of the work that they're doing for the government of Alberta and all Albertans. They are Miss Chelsea Gowing, Ms Stephanie Brown, Mr. Jac MacDonald, Ms Dawn Astbury, Ms Ellen Rowsell, Ms Jacqueline Gibson, Mrs. Tawnya Crerar, Mr. Steven Hodges, Ms Nikki Booth, Mr. Derek Cummings, Ms Meagan Badger, Mrs. Pam Sharpe, Mrs. Josephine Lamy, Mr. Clayton Filkohazy, Ms Julia Smail, Ms Amanda Costanza, Ms Carolyn Gregson, Mr. Paul Marck, and Ms Brenda Fiske. Sorry if I didn't pronounce all of the names properly, but I do want this Assembly to welcome our guests.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions. First, it's an honour to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly members of the Alberta College and Technical Institute Student Executive Council, or ACTISEC. This organization represents 120,000 postsecondary education students in our province. They're an excellent partner and stakeholder of the Ministry of Advanced Education and Technology.

This week eight students from across the province have been meeting fellow MLAs and department officials. They're seated in the members' gallery. I want to commend them for the good work they do. I would like to ask each to stand as I call their name and receive the warm welcome. First, Matt Koczur, the chair of ACTISEC; Maigan van der Giessen, president of the Students' Association of MacEwan; Heather MacBeath, vice-president academics of SAIT; Rory Tarant, president of the Grande Prairie

Regional College Students' Association; Geoff Tate, vice-president external and apprenticeship, Northern Alberta Institute of Technology; Stephen Griffith, director of policy of ACTISEC; Lisi Monro, vice-chair of ACTISEC; and Adam Boechler, executive director of ACTISEC. Mr. Speaker, these students do a yeoman's work for the students across our province. I would ask that the Assembly give them a warm welcome in our traditional way.

Mr. Speaker, I do have another introduction. I don't believe my guests are in the House just yet, but I would like to read their names into the Hansard and also have members give them a warm welcome. They are eight members from our postsecondary excellence division from the Ministry of Advanced Education and Technology. They're currently on tour of the building to get a better feel for what happens here. They'll be seated in the gallery shortly. They are Anne Ryton, Kevin Shufflebotham, Bradley Burroughs, Kelly O'Donnell, Meghann Eagle, Roya Damabi, Janet Tully, and Lisa Fox. They will be accompanying us shortly, and I would ask that members recognize their attendance here.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today is part of Les Rendez-vous de la Francophonie. I have the privilege of introducing to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly representatives from Alberta's three officially bilingual communities. Francophones have deep roots in Alberta's history, and the francophone community is a vibrant part of the economic, social, and cultural life of Albertans. Francophones have established schools, communities, and cultural centres and other services in more than 35 communities. Of these, three municipalities are officially bilingual: Beaumont, southeast of Edmonton; Legal, north of Edmonton; and Falher, in the Peace Country.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask our guests to stand as I introduce them: the mayors of these municipalities, His Worship Camille Bérubé, the mayor of Beaumont, accompanied by Mr. Marc Landry, the town administrator; His Worship Albert St. Jean, mayor of Legal, accompanied by Mr. Ken Baril, deputy mayor; Mrs. Donna Buchinski, deputy mayor of Falher, accompanied by Mr. Gerard Nicolet, the town administrator.

The town of Falher has provided a pin for each of the members, representing Falher as the honey capital of Canada. The town houses the world's largest honeybee, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask the members of this Assembly to give our guests a very warm welcome to our Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a few young friends of mine from Edmonton-Meadowlark. Their names are Ms Agnes Primrose, Mrs. Marjory Young, Mrs. Alice Fraser, Mrs. Bertha Goldberg, Ms Phyllis Johnson, and Ms Ethel Ward. They're accompanied by their group leaders, Ms Christine Okrusko, Miss Kristen Fulton, and Mr. Ted Mortimer. The Waterford of Summerlea retirement home specializes in excellent independent and assisted living services while providing an active and healthy environment. Andrew Carnegie said: "As I grow older, I pay less attention to what [people] say. I just watch what they do." That's why my guests are here today to view our House proceedings before touring the beautiful Leg. Building. I hope they're pleased with what they see. I look forward to joining them at 2 o'clock for a picture. They are seated in the members' gallery above, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly five veterans of the 418 City of Edmonton Squadron. Established in 1942 as an Intruder squadron, 418 became the highest scoring Mosquito squadron by the end of the Second World War, scoring being a polite way to say that they shot down more enemy fighters than any other RCAF squadron. Today, March 18, is the 65th anniversary of the squadron. I would like to recognize the veterans here today seated in the public gallery: Mr. Jim Gillespie, Mr. Art Maskell, Mr. Terry Champion, Mr. Bernie Sheppard, and Mr. Monte Stout. I will be discussing the 418 Squadron more in depth later this afternoon in a member's statement. I would ask all five men to rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure if my guests are here now or not, but I'd like to introduce them to you and through you to this Assembly. It's a very bright group of political science students from The King's University College who are visiting the Legislature today. They are learning about political systems and are eager to observe government in action. Later this afternoon I will have the honour of meeting with them and sharing with them my experience as an MLA. They are accompanied by their professor, Dr. John Hiemstra. They would be seated in both galleries, and I would like that they would rise if they're here and get the traditional warm reception of this Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a friend and constituent of mine, Billy Franklin. Billy lives in Brooks and among other business interests runs a very successful outfitting business called Silver Sage Outfitters. He's accompanied today by a fellow outfitter, Gord Burton. They're in Edmonton, drove up today to attend a meeting in the building later this afternoon. They're seated up in the public gallery, and I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Calgary-Montrose Scholarship Recipients

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Fostering a culture of innovation in our province requires us to support our young people so that they are the brightest, most innovative young minds in the world. I am proud to say that many young minds reside in my wonderful constituency. I am proud that 197 of my constituents have received the Alexander Rutherford scholarship for high school achievement, the Louise McKinney postsecondary scholarship, or the Jason Lang scholarship. That is a remarkable $286,000 in scholarship dollars distributed in Calgary-Montrose alone. They are some of the 41,000 students in the province that will receive $77 million in government scholarships this year. These are investments in the future of students that have worked hard to succeed.

I continually advocate the importance of education, and I'm pleased to see my constituents recognized for their academic achievements. My constituents never fail to fill me with pride, and these students are certainly an example of this. I hope I am able to encourage more young students to pursue postsecondary education, and I wish the recipients and all other students in my constituency success in their postsecondary studies.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Crossroads Business Association

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I rise to recognize and support some innovative work being done by the Crossroads Community Association. The Crossroads Community Association is situated just east of the Deerfoot in northeast Calgary and is at the very eastern part of my constituency. It is comprised of the communities of Vista Heights, Mayland Heights, and Belfast. I share this community with my hon. colleague from Calgary-East, who represents the Mayland Heights portion.

Mr. Speaker, this is a relatively small community, but what most people don't realize is that this community encompasses a large number of local businesses. As a result the Crossroads Community Association has endeavoured to form a business association for its community. On February 25 I attended the inaugural meeting of the Crossroads Business Association, and I was very impressed with the turnout for the first meeting. The community association leaders who are organizing this endeavour – president Tony Wooster, membership director Jamie Johnson, and Larry Leach – need to be commended for recognizing the important link business and entrepreneurship have to the health and vibrancy of communities.

At a time when businesses are facing extraordinary challenges, becoming an active and involved partner in the community will enhance productivity and competitiveness. Additionally, the Crossroads Business Association will be able to be used as a vehicle to identify important issues in the community that impact business operations and competitiveness as well as to develop collaborative strategies to address these issues.

Mr. Speaker, quite often, even in this House, businesses are criticized and maligned for being profit driven above all else. If there is one thing that most business owners and operators know, it is that a successful business has close ties to its local community and vice versa. I see business and industry as an agent of change with strong community values, and I'm glad that the Crossroads Community Association does as well. I am looking forward to seeing how this association grows over the years as it has the potential to develop and cultivate innovative and collaborative solutions in the Crossroads community.

Thank you.

Statement by the Speaker

Tabling Documents

The Speaker: Hon. members, on several occasions the chair has risen in this House to discuss the issue of tablings. On Thursday, March 12, 2009, an hon. member tabled a document on behalf of one of his hon. colleagues, and this document has been brought to the chair's attention for several reasons. The issues are as follows. It is not clear what the document is about. There's no cover page, no title, and no heading. The document is not dated nor signed, nor is there an author identified. While the document appears to be an excerpt from a document that is part of legal proceedings, there is no indication of what the document is an excerpt from.

Hon. members, it is important to note that all documents tabled in the House become official records of the Assembly. They are available to the public through the Legislature Library. The description of sessional papers in the Votes and Proceedings is an actual description of the document and is not based on the comments of the member tabling the document. If there is no way of identifying the document, it is difficult for those producing the official records of the Assembly to be accurate in their description of the document. Staff should not be expected to waste time trying to decipher these documents.

There is a need to set additional guidelines, and the chair would ask all hon. members to follow them. One, copies should be of good quality and legible: five copies collated, stapled, or clipped together. Two, letters should be signed, and the name of the sender should be legible. Three, website articles should clearly indicate the name of the website so that we can properly quote from that website. Four, responses to written questions and motions for returns must indicate that they are such. Please do not table only a set of documents. It should be clear to all of us that the documents are provided as responses. Five, reports, charts, and similar items must have a title or heading on the document. Six, the general rule is that members should table documents under Tabling Returns and Reports.

The chair will be advised when tablings do not meet these guidelines, and those purported tablings will be returned to members and forever be forgotten by this Assembly.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Achievement Bonuses

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has in the past three years given out over $110 million in achievement bonuses to selected senior officials. The vast majority of civil servants don't even qualify for this pool of money. To the Premier: why is a select group of senior staff getting tens of millions of dollars of bonuses from this government?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the achievement bonus system is put in place to reward achievement. That means bringing budgets into line and helping government deliver the programs that it wants to be delivered. The number of people that participate in the bonus are those that we would call out of scope. These would be people working for the public sector who are no longer a member of a union. The number of people eligible for achievement bonuses is 6,100. The average bonus for the year prior was about $5,300 each.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While this government hands out these millions to very generously paid government officials, Alberta's seniors are told by the same government to pay for basic drug costs. Why is the Premier asking seniors to sacrifice when he's not asking the same of richly paid senior government officials?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe that the hon. leader is referring to this fiscal year that's ending here in a couple of weeks. We made a commitment as a government that we will honour the remuneration obligations that this government has made to this fiscal year-end, which is March 31. Starting April 1, there is a new budget. There will be changes. As I said earlier, we'll monitor the revenue stream very carefully, but we may be coming and asking both out of scope and in scope and even members here at the Legislative Assembly to contribute equally to balancing the budget.

Dr. Swann: Again to the Premier: will the Premier today commit to suspending this bonus pool?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, for next year the bonus pool is suspended. I will say that the reason that we had the achievement bonus in place is that I believe it dates back to 1999, when our public sector, especially the management ranks, were much lower paid than other equal positions in other provinces. So we asked a private-sector committee to review how we could look at a bonus system and narrow the margin. We did incorporate many years ago the suggestions and, actually, recommendations of the committee.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Deputy ministers, the most senior government officials, have particularly high pay levels. Cabinet, a political body, signs off on the bonuses of this group. Again to the Premier: does the Premier not see that a political body signing off on the bonuses of senior staff jeopardizes the independence of the civil service?

Mr. Stelmach: I'm not quite sure where the member is coming from, but it doesn't really matter if the recommendations come from a private-sector committee or from negotiations. At the end of the day cabinet signs off on all salary-negotiated supplements. It is the responsibility of government.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, the bonuses themselves are more than the average Albertan makes in a year. To the Premier: how are these bonuses determined?

Mr. Stelmach: They're determined on achievement. To give an example, this year, as our revenue was dropping dramatically towards the latter part of the year, I instructed my deputy to meet with the deputies and other management to ensure that we do balance the budget this year, and the budget will be balanced. For next year we will be, as I said before, suspending, and we will be looking at other public-sector salaries. But, like I said, we're going to do it very fairly. We're going to meet with them. We're going to gauge our revenue stream and our expenses, and we may have to approach everyone to contribute to balancing the budget.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last July cabinet approved significant pay increases for this April to deputy ministers to a basic rate of $265,000 per year. That's before bonuses. This salary was set in the midst of a boom, when the government was expecting huge surpluses. Now we're facing a deficit. Again to the Premier: will these pay hikes be continuing?

Mr. Stelmach: Well, I can tell you that for the next year there won't be any pay hikes, not for elected officials and not for any of the senior officials. But, again, there's the discussion: then what do we do with other public-sector people? I've said that we want to keep our nurses, doctors, teachers working. We do have an agreement with teachers, and we're going to live up to that agreement. It's based on average weekly earnings. We just signed it last year, so we're committed to that. We'll hold discussions with union leaders, if necessary, to see how we can bring our budget into line. Can we balance the budget based on the backs of the public sector for next year? No, we can't. It's impossible because the revenue drop is substantial. But we'll look over the next couple of years. If the economy does recover, then we won't have to go through the pain, but if it doesn't, we will have to sit down and have discussions with our public sector.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Transparency was one of the Premier's priorities when he signed off on the 2007-08 annual report of Executive Council. My first question is for the Premier. Why in this report did the Premier fail to disclose the bonuses paid to senior officials within the Ministry of Executive Council?

Mr. Stelmach: Well, I would ask the chair of the Public Accounts Committee as to how that was missed. You know, it's obvious that today he recognized it, but when it did occur, he didn't notice it. But we did immediately post on the website a little, tiny omission. It's a little line in terms of the accumulated bonuses for the year. But the bonuses are not something that just came up this past fiscal year. The bonuses have been in place since I believe 1999, when, again, the private-sector committee came forward and gave recommendations to government to close the gap.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Given that the former Premier, Mr. Klein, as President of Executive Council always made sure that there was full disclosure of the bonuses, I expect better from the Premier next year.

Now, again, given that the Deputy Minister of Executive Council calls the shots on the annual achievement bonus fund allotment, what is set aside now for the fiscal year that's going to end March 31 for achievement bonuses? Is it $40 million? Is it $45 million? What is the amount?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there is a pool set aside for achievement bonuses. One incorrect statement. What happens is the Deputy Minister of Executive Council does meet with the deputies. There is a pool for deputies, and then there is a separate pool for other management staff. He also meets with ministers. But we also consult with the committee to ensure that the bonus that we have, the pool that we have set aside, is consistent with their recommendations. The deputy minister will decide in consultation with ministers to see if the objectives of the business plan were met.

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Taxpayers of this province have the right to know. Again to the Premier: what amount has been set aside by cabinet for achievement bonuses for the fiscal year that's going to end on March 31? Is it $40 million? Is it $45 million? Why won't you tell us?

Mr. Stelmach: The problem in informing the House – he's part of the Public Accounts Committee; he should know that. The pool for this year, for '08-09 . . . [interjection] I'm sorry. He asked the question, and I guess he doesn't want to hear the answer.

The pool for this year, for '08-09 – the budget year '08-09 is ending on March 31, which is in a couple of weeks – is $40 million and, again, shared by 6,100 people.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, this government tells hardworking Albertans to tighten their belts, but it's handing out $40 million in bonuses to bureaucrats this year. [interjection] It deserves more than one question.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood does have the floor.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Maybe I'll get an answer. Witness the outrage of U.S. politicians about unjustified bonuses paid to AIG executives and contrast it with this government's justification of handouts to their top bureaucrats. When will the government show some respect to hard-pressed taxpayers and cancel these extravagant bonuses?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, it looks like the leader of the opposition knew of the pool, and the chair of Public Accounts didn't, but that wasn't part of this question.

As I said before, for next year, in keeping with the belt-tightening, the bonuses will be suspended, number one. Number two, we will look at other settlements. We want to be fair. We don't want to do something overnight, and that's why we're committed for all public-sector staff to keep our commitments to March 31 of '09. As we proceed, it may be a different story. I don't know what that'll be as we'll have to watch the revenue and expenditure sides very carefully.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Most provincial employees don't get big fat bonuses.

More than 300 lumber workers were fired last month at the Tolko, Millar Western, and Weyerhaeuser plants. Meanwhile, Sustainable Resource bureaucrats made $2 million in bonuses. To the Premier: how can you look in the eyes of Albertans who've just lost their jobs when you're handing over these extravagant bonuses to top bureaucrats?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there is one omission on behalf of the member. Most public-sector employees are covered by union agreements, and we're not breaking them. This is another commitment we made, not a union agreement but a commitment we made to Albertans. They work for the public sector. They're not in a union; they're out of unions. There are approximately, as I said, 6,100 people that share in the bonus package.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, ConocoPhillips and other oil and gas companies let 200 people go just last month. In the meantime, Energy bureaucrats are making $1.5 million in bonuses. Again to the Premier: how can you look in the eyes of these Albertans who have just lost their jobs and tell them that you've forked over 1 and a half million dollars in bonuses to Energy bureaucrats?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, we're suspending the bonuses for next year.

You know, looking in the eyes? Have that member look in the eyes of all the people that lost their job and still stand in this House and tell me why he wants $330,000 more for office expenditures for two members – $330,000 more. We treated that party very fairly because this Assembly – this Assembly – the committee, gave him expenditures for four members, not to reflect the two members he has now but for four members, plus he wants even more money.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Provincial Economic Strategy

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta's economic situation has been significantly affected by the current downturn, particularly as it relates to low energy prices. As a result, we know that government revenues this year will be significantly lower than they were last year. Can the Minister of Finance and Enterprise assure Albertans that the government will do all it can to keep Albertans working?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, we're aware that our infrastructure expenditure in Alberta is two to three times what it is anywhere else. For every billion dollars that we spend in infrastructure, it supports 11,600 jobs. We have identified that the infrastructure spending is part of our four-point platform this year that will help us retain jobs and keep Albertans working.

Mr. Quest: Mr. Speaker, my first supplementary to the same minister. That's well and good, but we see other governments raising taxes to pay for new infrastructure. Can the minister assure Albertans that they won't lose their tax advantage as a result of this massive investment in public infrastructure?

Ms Evans: Well, Mr. Speaker, we intend to keep the lowest public taxes of any regime in Canada. Just today New Brunswick, for example, announced that they were going to make moves on taxation, still with their intent to 2012. It is not as much advantage as Albertans have. Albertans pay between $3,000 and $5,000 less than any other Canadian in taxes, and this year they got the added advantage of $1 billion returned to their pockets from the health premiums.

Mr. Quest: Mr. Speaker, if we're in such a good position, why would we consider borrowing to pay for this infrastructure if we have the money available?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, we're looking at borrowing as another way to lever from our triple-A credit rating to look at smart expenditures for capital, to look at ways of investing in Albertans. Today the Young Presidents' Organization talked about this being an ideal time to use our leverage as a triple-A credit rating to find projects that would be worthy of borrowing, with payback not only to Albertans in infrastructure but, particularly on the short-term borrowing that we have been looking at, to take advantage of opportunities to build Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Water Management

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The public needs to trust the government to protect our most precious natural resource, water. However, the Balzac fiasco has brought one thing into the light: that trust was violated. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. The 2006-07 supplementary estimates allocated $8.3 million to support waste-water elements for the entire Balzac project. They specifically mentioned the horse-racing track and the equine centre. Now that only the mall is being built, where is the money?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the allocation of funding to various water and waste-water projects throughout this province is not dependent upon what develops in the area but, rather, on the participation of the municipality. So the project is facilitated through a cost-sharing agreement with the municipality, and the development that comes forward is at various paces. I'm sure that this particular development will be fully built over a reasonable period of time.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. My next question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Given that this money for a horse track and an equine centre came from a program restricted to a confirmed agricultural processing investment, meaning food and beverage processing, and there is no longer any connection to this at all – there's only a mall left – why have Albertans paid for water treatment for a privately owned mall?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, the agriculture component of this doesn't relate at all to what the hon. member is talking about. It was the transfer of water to Balzac, which met the criteria at that particular time from the municipality.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the Minister of Environment. Giving a water allocation to a horse-racing track and a megamall through a completely unrelated agricultural food processing program is subverting sound water management principles and betraying the public trust. To the minister: how can Albertans trust that you will make proper decisions about our water, based on this past history?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I made a commitment at the beginning of this session that I would not allow myself to be baited by inflammatory preambles, and I hold firm to that, but this member is coming very, very close.

The fact of the matter is that the water allocation is to the municipality. The municipality of Rocky View is the one that holds the licence. It has nothing whatsoever to do with racetracks or malls. She should ask the municipality of Rocky View what they intend to do with the water that they have on their licence.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Farm Equipment Hauling

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I received numerous calls and complaints from some of the farmers in my constituency regarding a new farm equipment policy. In fact, in today's local paper there was an editorial that it must be pick on farmer week. My question is to the Minister of Transportation. Is the minister seriously considering bringing in regulations that will increase the cost farmers have to pay to operate their own equipment?

Mr. Ouellette: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. Our government knows how important farmers are to this province and how challenging it is for them to operate today. We're actually doing everything we can to help farmers to make sure that they're able to transport their equipment safely and efficiently on our highways, but at the same time we have to make sure that all Albertans and the travelling public are safe. That's why we have always had safety standards on hauling farm equipment from one piece of property to another.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. I'm being told that the farmers are now being required to have a permit to operate their equipment. Some farmers have a dozen pieces of equipment on their land. Do you honestly expect them to get a permit for each piece of equipment?

Mr. Ouellette: No, Mr. Speaker, we certainly do not expect them to have to do that. We have made it very easy for farmers. They're only ever going to have to go out and get one permit. They're just going to have to have a permit that shows that they're a farmer, and they're not going to have to list all that equipment. We just want to make sure that they do it safely. All they're going to have to do is make one phone call. There's no charge for the permit, but we do require that large equipment is properly marked and that other drivers use the road safely.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the same minister. Is it true that as we speak, your law enforcement officers are out ticketing farmers who don't obey these new rules?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, one thing is for sure: my department is not trying to make life difficult for farmers. In fact, I haven't heard of one ticket being handed out to a farmer for moving farm equipment. But I've got to tell you something. There are people out there trying to masquerade as farmers, and they're doing commercial operations. We can't have that. [interjections] It is not fair to other commercial operators. We can't have commercial equipment running with purple fuel and on farm plates. Commercial operators will be ticketed. [interjections]

The Speaker: And we have passed the full-moon phase.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, I'm not the only witness to the daylight robbery being perpetrated by Alberta Justice on Alberta taxpayers. This government claims to represent all our interests. Obviously, you need a reminder that Robin Hood gave the loot to the poor, not to appointed senior civil servants. Those same people who decided that it wasn't in the public interest to prosecute 19 electoral violations are likely getting a $5.8 million windfall. My question is for the Minister of Justice. Can she explain exactly what types of department savings merited such largesse in bonus payouts?

Ms Redford: I'd like the hon. member to repeat the last part of his question. I want to make sure I understood exactly what he said, please, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: That counts as a question and an answer. We'll go on to the second question.

Mr. Hehr: Okay. Mr. Speaker, Biggie Smalls would rap about this heist if he were still with us. To the Minister of Justice again: what input do you have around the cabinet table into how this $5.8 million is disbursed and to whom these bonuses are paid?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I didn't get all of the first question, but I got enough of it to know that the hon. member is treating something which I take very seriously in a humorous way. I have said in this House over and over again that the prosecutors in the Department of Justice prosecute in the public interest. I believe that, this government believes that, I believe that the people of Alberta believe that, and I do not believe that it is appropriate to make political hay with something that is so serious.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much for that response, but I'd still like an answer to my second question. As the Minister of Justice how do you decide who gets the bonus payments, and on what is this based?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I have answered this question. Our prosecutors have integrity. Our prosecutors, as far as I understand my job, are compensated according to an agreement that allows them to be compensated sufficiently for the important and independent work that they do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are in the midst of a global economic recession, and Alberta is being affected along with most other jurisdictions around the world. My question to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise: during these difficult times what is the government's plan for preserving prosperity and quality of life for Albertans?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, again I reference our four-point plan. The first part of the plan is to reduce our spending. I think you've heard our Premier relate to that, that we're going to tighten our belts. We're going to make sure that infrastructure, health care, education are priorities for Albertans, that we provide those services as much as possible. That emphasis will be reflected in this budget. Again, with the comments that I made previously about infrastructure, keeping Alberta moving, keeping Alberta's goods going to market will be a good part of our expenditure targets this year.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: that takes care of the present, but what about the future?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, it's been very interesting today to hear somebody talk to us about the alphabet to determine whether Alberta is going to go into a deep V and come right back up or whether we're going to go down and spend a little while in the bottom of the trough. I believe Alberta's record is that when we hit a recession period, as we have, we look very carefully at what pays our way, and that's the commodity prices, essentially oil and gas. Regardless of what industry you are in, oil and gas is what has distinguished Alberta and given us a superior track record on revenues. It's not affordable to imagine that people are going to get away with paying less for those commodities in the future. Fossil fuels are here to stay. I expect our deep V will change very soon, and as we come out of this recession, Albertans will see once again a very buoyant economy.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister, my last question: is there any indication how long this downturn or this recession might last?

Ms Evans: Frankly, no, Mr. Speaker. We'd all like to think that it would be a shorter period. Many of the financial agencies predict that Alberta will be better off. The International Monetary Fund predicts that it'll be a recovery period through 2010 for Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Seniors' Pharmaceutical Plan

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday there was a meeting of seniors who are members of CARP, the Canadian Association of Retired Persons, and they expressed their outrage that the minister of health is proposing changes to their pharmaceutical coverage. Today they'll be even more outraged to learn that Health and Wellness is paying their senior management $1.8 million in bonuses. To the Minister of Health and Wellness. This plan creates have and have-not seniors. Canada's health care is based on the principle of universality. Can the minister explain how this plan upholds that very cherished and envied principle?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, that kind of question just exactly shows you how uninformed that particular group is. They know full well that drug prescriptions have nothing to do with the Canada Health Act, have nothing to do with universality. It just absolutely amazes me here in this House that we have this group over here: one day they're attacking paramedics and their ability to perform their role, the next day they're attacking our civil servants, the next day they're attacking our prosecutors, and then they wonder why nobody elects them in four years when they've attacked every group in the province.

Ms Pastoor: The theatrics are getting better.

Will the minister admit that any change to seniors' pharmaceutical costs that creates a deductible based on income is just another form of taxation on the people that have the greatest need for those medications?

2:20

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I've said on many occasions that what we are attempting to do in health care is to make this system sustainable into the future so that when all of us are in the age category where we have to rely on a government benefit supplemental program, it's going to be there for us. We have introduced a new model that we propose to move forward with in 2010. Now, I have said that the world has changed since we brought that forward, and we are taking a second look at whether all of the numbers in the model are still correct. We've heard seniors. When we finish that assessment, we will bring back to this Assembly what we believe is the appropriate program in this environment.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you for that. I do realize you have said that you would look at it, which is sort of going into my third question. If you would commit to a full review of the whole program, when could we expect a timeline where this would be reported back to the House?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, unlike members of the opposition, who just sort of fly off and say things and do things and don't seem to have a co-ordinated effort, when the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, who chairs Public Accounts, doesn't inform his leader as to what he knows and what he doesn't know and back and forth, we do things in a way that we work it through the process. That's exactly what we're doing, and we will have something for this particular House to consider this year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Nuclear Power

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Bruce Power has launched an advertising campaign in support of their bid to bring nuclear reactors and radioactive waste with a shelf life of thousands of years to Alberta. The Minister of Energy commissioned a report from a nuclear panel almost a year ago, and our documents show that that panel was dissolved in December. To the minister: why are you sitting on the public release of this report if not because nuclear power in Alberta is a ridiculous waste of taxpayers' dollars?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, of course, all Albertans are entitled to their opinion. However, relative to the report I think that it's an extremely valuable document for Albertans. We are going through it and assessing the information therein, and in due course we will deal with it publicly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's a year late at this point.

A nuclear plant creates 2,000 tonnes of radioactive waste per year that nobody can clean up. We've already got an environmental disaster on our hands in the form of tailings ponds that nobody can clean up. Now this government wants to repeat that mistake, this time with an undisposible pool of radioactive waste that nobody can clean up. To the minister: why are you sitting on your panel's report if not because you know it's a recipe for yet another environmental disaster?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, you know, it really is unfortunate that individuals cannot get beyond 1950s and '40s and '30s technology. The nuclear industry that works globally today, as a matter of fact one of the sources of electrical energy that is the most benign relative to greenhouse gas emissions, is a much, much different group of facilities than were in place at the times when we've had rather major accidents, nothing similar to what's happening.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, 1950, 2050, there is no answer for disposing of nuclear waste. Hate to break it to you, but there's nothing.

Now, the experts also agree on one other thing, that nuclear power leaves taxpayers on the hook for billions and billions of dollars. Meanwhile the 30,000 Albertans losing their jobs so far this year believe that that money can be spent on sustainable job creation, not a boondoggle. When will you stop hiding your nuclear report and acknowledge the truth, that nuclear power is expensive, too dangerous, and too short sighted to play a role in our economic future?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, the truth of the matter is that in the province of Alberta now – and in the province of Alberta as we see it going forward – the taxpayers of Alberta are not on the hook for any of the generation that we consume in the province now. We don't see that the taxpayers of Alberta will be in any different position whatever type of alternate and new energy sources are brought to play in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Country of Origin Labelling

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. For some time our agricultural industry has been concerned about the potential impact of mandatory country of origin labelling being introduced in the United States. Monday, March 16, was the day that COOL, as it is called, came into effect, and as I understand it, we have yet to resolve this important trade issue. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: could the minister provide some detail on the status of this regulation, which essentially segregates Canadian product and imposes extra costs?

Mr. Groeneveld: Yes, I can, Mr. Speaker. In January the USDA introduced some flexibility into COOL, addressing some of our concerns on the labelling requirements for Canadian beef products, but the USDA is now requesting that the industry voluntarily implement stricter labelling, effectively reducing flexibility. The Canadian industry will be faced with extra costs in order to adhere to these labelling requirements. In addition, as the U.S. looks to buy more domestic products, COOL certainly has the ability to push our products out of their market.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. To the same minister. My ag constituents meet with me often, and they want to know what action is being taken to address this ongoing issue because, in their words, they don't think it's cool.

Mr. Groeneveld: Although the Canadian government has jurisdiction, Mr. Speaker, over these trading matters, Alberta continues to raise the issue with our U.S. trade partners and our federal counterparts in Ottawa. ALMA, or the Livestock and Meat Agency, is also addressing the issue through incremental market access. ALMA played a key role in bringing many organizations who had similar concerns and views to the table to ensure a single industry voice on the issue. This resulted in a unified position within Alberta and Canada on incremental market access and stronger advocating on the national level. We've already seen the results of some of that with the incremental market access into Hong Kong.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. Finally, to the same minister: what else can this government or Alberta's beef industry do to remain competitive when faced with such a trade barrier as COOL?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have two options, as I see it, for addressing this issue. We can hope that COOL does not proceed in its current form, and then we return to the status quo, and any cattleman will tell you that the status quo has not been very profitable. Or we can take charge of our own future and focus on accessing markets that will be profitable for our producers. The Alberta livestock and meat strategy does just this. It is positioning our industry as a desirable trade partner in Canadian international markets such as Korea, China, and Japan as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year Service Alberta handed out $3.9 million in achievement bonuses to its senior staff. That is the second-highest amount paid out by all ministries, beaten only by the Department of Justice. To the Minister of Service Alberta: how does the minister justify $3.9 million in bonuses?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's really important to bring some clarity to this issue. Just to make it very clear, Service Alberta's bonuses were $2.7 million. The other portions were when Service Alberta was with the former ministry, under the ministry of the Treasury Board, where air transportation, regulatory review, and corporate human resources were.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What are the criteria used to give out these bonuses?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Mr. Speaker, with respect to these bonuses this policy is handled through corporate human resources and is based on achievement, as was mentioned previously, and based on the hard work of the civil service. I think it's really important to validate the hard work that these civil servants do to support all of us in the work that we're doing for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Who gives the final sign-off on these achievement bonuses for senior staff members?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe the Premier answered that question very well. I will add that with respect to this whole area, again, it's validating the hard work that civil servants do for Albertans and making sure that their interests are protected and that they are accountable as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Gang-related Crime

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Gangs and gang violence seem to be taking root in communities right across Alberta. My questions are to the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. How is the minister addressing these very serious concerns about crime and safety?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Through the work that we've done through crime and safe communities, the Solicitor General and I have worked in partnership with police commissions across this province to talk about the issues that they are facing. Apart from the work that we've already done in introducing Bill 50, which has gone a long way to help police officers do their job better and to disrupt crime, I had the opportunity to speak last night to the Calgary Police Commission, where it was very clear that there is a very strong synergy between the work that the provincial government is doing around education, prevention, awareness as well as enforcement and prosecution and the work that police services across this province are doing.

Mr. Speaker, we will also be hosting in June a summit on gang activity, that the Premier will be chairing, and at that summit we are going to be able to look at what we have all been doing up until now with respect to gangs and what the long-term strategy should be.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The next question to the same minister. The lure of the gang lifestyle can be very attractive for some young people. What is being done to reduce recruitment into gangs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a very important part of what we have to talk about for safe communities. It's very clear that all of the work that is done through Health and Wellness, Children and Youth Services, Education, Culture and Community Spirit, and the work that policing agencies are doing across this province has to speak to young people about the risks of criminal activity and a gang lifestyle.

It's very clear, Mr. Speaker, that we also have to make sure that we're addressing the root causes of crime, that we're dealing with vulnerable people who may very well end up in situations where they develop addictions that could lead to lives of crime. We're going to stop that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: what is being done long term to curb the rise of organized crime in this province?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I have said in this House before and as we as a government have said in the past year, we believe that the entire long-term gang prevention strategy and crime prevention strategy in this province must deal with a number of pillars. We have to deal with awareness, education. We have to help vulnerable people, and we have to effectively enforce the laws and prosecute people that are committing crimes. This summit will allow us to develop that full long-term strategy in partnership with people in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Rural School Bus Travel Time

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Rural schools close because school boards face the impossible job of funding schools with insufficient resources. Increased busing costs coupled with decreased funding, a backlog of aging infrastructure, and a loss of teachers have made many schools unsustainable. Rural schools need better funding to sustainably meet these challenges. To the Minister of Education: does the minister acknowledge that requiring some children to spend upwards of three to four hours a day on school buses is unacceptable?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I know that it was a difficult thing to do when I did it, and it's not the most attractive way to ensure that our children get a good education. In fact, I think most school boards try to keep bus rides to less than an hour one way. But we do have challenges with respect to the provision of education services in rural areas where people choose to live. The wonders of technology, however, and the SuperNet, that the province of Alberta has put in place, are making it a lot easier to make sure that children in all parts of this province have access to a very high-quality public education. That's why people come from all around the world to look at what we're doing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister commit to setting limits to the amount of time a child can spend on a school bus each day and work with school boards to help solve their transportation issues, actions that could help stave off the epidemic of rural school closures?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This hon. member would be one of the first to yell and scream if we dissolved all the school boards in the province and made one superboard so that we could run it from here. That's not what we're doing. We have elected school boards across the province. They determine what their local issues are and how best to provide the services in their areas, and I would not substitute my judgment for their judgment of their local communities.

Mr. Chase: They say that the road to hell is paved with good intentions. The only way school boards can collect the money is through what the province provides. Considering that the closure of the Manyberries school as well as numerous grades within the Golden Hills school division will result in students spending an additional hour on the bus each day, will the minister review the rules surrounding rural school closures?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'll have to take his word for the issue about the road to hell because I've never been on it.

I would have to say, again, that issues of schools in local communities is a very, very important one, a very close issue for people. I grew up in a rural area. I know how important a school is to the community as a centre of the community. Those aren't decisions that anybody takes lightly when you close schools. Obviously, transportation of children is a very, very important aspect. It requires someone in the local area who has knowledge of the local circumstances to be able to sit down with parents in their communities and make those very tough decisions, and that's what school boards do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

TILMA Effects on Municipalities

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In July 2008 officials from Alberta and British Columbia reached an agreement that outlines the municipal obligations under the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement, the acronym TILMA. My question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. How will Alberta's municipalities benefit from the amendments once they come into place on April 1?

Speaker's Ruling Anticipation

The Speaker: You know, I'm concerned about this question because my understanding is that this bill is in committee and up for review this afternoon. In committee we deal with amendments, so the time to really debate this is at that time, not in the question period.

Does the hon. member have a policy question?

Mr. Jacobs: The question also relates to TILMA, Mr. Speaker, so I would withdraw the question.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Homelessness Initiatives

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are to the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, and they are about the province's 10-year plan to end homelessness, which, the minister well knows, I am delighted to finally see. It's been a long time in development. It's been a long time in negotiation. It's been a long time coming. I think it is a good plan. Of course, as I have said, the devil is in the details and the funding, and we don't know if any funding is there for it yet. So although I'm happy to see that the plan is finally released, I'm wondering why the minister released the plan three weeks before the budget, three weeks before any funding could be committed.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I did make a commitment to release the plan when the processes had been completed. The plan, hon. member, had gone through the process of cabinet policy committees, of caucus, various processes: meetings with municipalities, you know, discussions with the local agencies and community boards. I did make that commitment, and that's why it was released at this time. That process was completed. I am pleased, hon. member, that you support the plan. Thank you for that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that 40 per cent of homeless people suffer from mental illness, what supports have been committed to by the minister of health that you're aware of that will specifically address this root cause of homelessness?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, those supports for people that do have issues that relate to mental health are through good programs like Pathways to Housing, which, as you know, is a program for people that have gone from emergency shelters to emergency for assistance. A very special mental health support team meets them at emergency and places them into Housing First. We've found that that is working. That's just one of the many good programs offered by the communities as a whole.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: considering that the plan doesn't mention First Nations people even though they comprise something in excess of 30 per cent of the homeless population in this province, how much of the funding – and it seems certainly limited until April 7 and maybe after that; we'll find out on April 7 – will go to programs geared to the aboriginal community?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's a very important question. I can tell you that we did not take any group of people based on their culture and identify that particular group in the plan. That does relate to the aboriginal people. That's because every program in this plan is going to assist all Albertans that are homeless, and that does include our aboriginal peoples.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

2:40 Cataract Surgery Wait Times

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Contracting out medical services such as cataract surgery to private clinics has been a very efficient and successful innovation of our health system. However, since December my constituency office has been contacted on six separate occasions by constituents expressing frustration with long wait times for cataract surgery. Some of my constituents fear that they will lose their independence as a result of these extended wait times of in some cases up to 18 months. I've been informed that much of the delay is a result of a lack of funding. All of my questions are for the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness. What is the government doing to ensure that the wait times for cataract surgery are reduced?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have to be clear what the terminology is for lack of funding. What does take place is that, previously through the regions and now through Alberta Health Services Board, there is an allocation of funding for procedures, whether it's cataracts, whether it's hips and knees. What has occurred in this particular budget year is that the allocation of funding has been exhausted. In the past several health regions have actually gone beyond the level of funding, and that won't be happening this year.

Dr. Brown: Can the minister advise how the new Alberta Health Services Board is going to help to resolve this waiting-list problem?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I guess one way is that they will stick to budget, and that is exactly what they have done. But I think it's important to point out, Mr. Speaker, that in 2004 some 15,000 cataract surgeries were performed in Alberta. Only 1,500 or so of those were through private facilities. In 2007 that number increased to 21,000 cataract surgeries, with only just under 3,000 in private facilities. We have been attempting to keep up the funding with the increase in demand, but again, like many things in health care, demand is exceeding what we're able to fund.

Dr. Brown: Will the minister ensure that cataract surgeries are adequately funded and prioritized for those people who are in danger of losing their independence such as their driver's licence because of the fact that they have cataracts?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, a couple of things. First of all, it is not the minister who determines whether a patient requires cataract surgery. It's the ophthalmologist. If an ophthalmologist determines that it's an emergency or urgent, that goes beyond that envelope of funding, and they will be treated on an emergent or urgent basis. Unfortunately, there are others that will be looked after as the funding becomes available in the new budget.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 104 questions and responses. In 30 seconds from now we'll continue the Routine.

2009 Bantam B Female Hockey Provincials

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Friday, March 13, I attended the opening ceremony of the 2009 bantam B female hockey provincials at the Bonnyville Centennial Centre. This weekend marked the end of a 17-year wait to host the provincial hockey tournament in my hometown of Bonnyville. Hosting this tournament was such a great opportunity to bring together and to cheer on the 150 girls who participated.

Female hockey has been developing in Bonnyville for the past three years and is still very new. The tournament was able to give exposure to this growing sport and also to the local team from my constituency, the Lakeland Jaguars, girls from both Bonnyville and Cold Lake. It is my hope that this exposure will encourage more girls to get involved in hockey at a competitive level.

Hon. members, girls from many of your constituencies competed in this tournament. The 10 teams who participated came from High Prairie, Lloydminster, Spruce Grove, Innisfail, Lethbridge, Cochrane, Viking, Edmonton, Calgary, and, of course, the Lakeland. I would like to congratulate all of the teams, coaches, volunteers, and parents who made this tournament a complete success, especially the Innisfail Flyers, who beat Lethbridge 6 to 4 in the final to take first place in the tournament.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Protection of Children in Care

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Most foster parents do an admirable job of raising the children they selflessly bring into their homes. With the noblest intentions they make sure that some of our most troubled and vulnerable children enjoy a loving, nourishing environment in which to learn and grow.

Unfortunately, as hard as it is to come to grips with this reality, there are some foster homes in which children have suffered neglect and abuse. Mr. Speaker, consider the case of a disabled child placed in foster care because the natural parents could not afford to meet its needs. The medical care the child needed would have had to be paid out of pocket because at that time the level of care wasn't provided by the government.

Foster care seemed the only solution, which raises an important set of questions. Is this government doing enough to keep families together? Are children put into foster care too soon without giving due respect to the needs of the biological family? What efforts are made to support birth parents within their home prior to making the drastic decision to apprehend their children? Furthermore, the case in question turned into a horror story for this family. How do parents forced to give up their children know with any certainty that the special needs of their child will be met?

Mr. Speaker, when the children are given up or removed from the care of their natural parents, it happens because people are concerned about the welfare and safety of the child. Yet it seems as though once custody changes, the government's duty of supervisory care of the child's safety and welfare is diminished or taken for granted.

The tragic facts reveal that we should not, must not take the child's safety in foster care for granted. As much as we may admire foster parents, some do a better job than others. The government cannot simply hand off children in need to foster parents and consider its job done. These children in care deserve and demand more than that. Regular monitoring of foster care and enforcement of standards is needed to ensure that the safety and well-being of Alberta's most vulnerable children is protected.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

65th Anniversary of 418 City of Edmonton Squadron

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again it is my privilege to rise and highlight another group of people from Edmonton-Calder. Under the command of Edmontonian Russ Bannock 418 Squadron aircraft and crews flew their Mosquito aircraft over the heart of occupied Europe in order to achieve their mission of damaging the Nazi war machine.

To give you some background, the Mosquito was a light bomber, twin-engine 4,000 horsepower wooden airplane. It was equipped with eight 30-calibre machine guns. It was fast and deadly. The 418 was responsible for the interception of the Nazi V-1 flying bombers that rained down over Europe. The V-1 was the first cruise missile, and its job was to kill and terrify civilians. The 418 was key in the defence against this weapon, and the tactic was search and destroy in flight. The squadron was extremely successful in this defence.

After World War II 418 became a resident in the hangar of what is now the Alberta Aviation Museum, and it has continued its service to the country as a reserve squadron, defending both Edmonton and the north during the Cold War. The 418 defended the Arctic Circle north in search and rescue liaison roles, and in 1992 it officially stood down.

The squadron will remain in the Aviation Museum until such time as the country needs the services of this group once more. The 418 City of Edmonton Squadron is truly a proud part of Edmonton's history and future, and I would like to congratulate this historic group and the veterans celebrating here today on their 65th anniversary.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Eco Village of Hope

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about a unique Alberta-initiated international development project, the Eco Village of Hope. The Eco Village of Hope is one of the very few international development initiatives between Alberta and China.

The project founder, Renay Eng-Fisher, a second-generation born-and-raised Albertan, inherited a house in her father's ancestral village when he passed away a few years ago. During her very first trip to China she connected the idea of making constructive use of her ancestral house with the need of the local orphaned children like her father was.

In the process a group of Albertans of diverse ethnic and professional backgrounds created a comprehensive humanitarian initiative that includes caring for the abandoned children and children with disabilities and building the capacity of their caregivers by providing them with training and sharing ecological development expertise with those who live and work in those communities. Hence, the Eco Village of Hope was born.

Mr. Speaker, in the two years since the formation of the Eco Village of Hope Society over 30 Albertan volunteers have travelled to this region to provide training and support to the project. The society has received requests from officials from a nearby region to assist them with training local volunteers and staff associated with their 600-children orphanage as well as setting up programs for those children, and the Eco Village of Hope Society is in the process of establishing their third orphanage.

Mr. Speaker, the Eco Village of Hope project is a wonderful example of that famous belief in the power of a small group of determined, dedicated people to make transformative changes to people's lives. It's also a great example of the power of human connections, connection between generations, the bond between parent and child, the drive derived from an emotional connection to a totally strange land, and the subsequent treasured connections and goodwill created between those who are so willing to give and those who benefit from their generosity.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Bill 27

Alberta Research and Innovation Act

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce Bill 27, the Alberta Research and Innovation Act, 2009. This being a money bill, Her Honour the Administrator, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

The intent of this bill is to enable a more integrated and aligned approach to research and innovation to support continued economic prosperity and a high quality of life in Alberta. Through the development of a new roles and mandates framework for Alberta's provincially funded research and innovation systems it will further strengthen and align the research and innovation system to help researchers and entrepreneurs in realizing their potential as creators of world-class discoveries and products. It will also enhance the focus on the government of Alberta's strategic research and innovation priorities.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 27 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Bill 28

Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 28, the Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

This is an omnibus bill that will provide tools to help the province achieve goals set out in the provincial energy strategy while eliminating inefficiencies found in the current energy legislation. In all, the Energy Statutes Amendment Act will amend 10 and repeal two acts previously passed by the Alberta Legislature. The passage of this act will promote sustainable energy development and increase regulatory efficiencies, including amendments to existing legislation that will facilitate taking bitumen as royalty in kind to optimize benefits of oil sands production for Albertans and expanding the industry-funded orphan well fund, Mr. Speaker, to include large facilities, including large in situ oil sands processing facilities, sulphur recovery gas plants, and stand-alone straddle plants.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 28 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 28 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Bill 32

Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I respectfully request leave to move first reading of Bill 32, the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act.

This bill provides the legislative framework that will help improve transparency and accountability and promote excellence in governance of the province's agencies, boards, and commissions. About 50 per cent of the government's annual operating expenditures are administered by these provincial agencies, of which there are almost 250.

Mr. Speaker, this bill builds upon the work done by a provincial task force struck by our Premier in 2007. In all, the task force made 15 recommendations to ensure that the right policies and best practices are in place for our agencies, boards, and commissions to deliver on their mandates. The task force's first recommendation was the introduction of legislation to provide to agency governance frameworks and standards reflecting the importance of Alberta's agencies.

In February 2008 this government released its public agencies governance framework, elaborating on the recommendations of the task force. Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to say that implementation of the public agencies governance framework is under way in all government departments. With that, I would ask that all members join me in support of this important bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 32 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 32 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday during question period the Member for Calgary-Varsity asked questions regarding the UN convention on the rights of the child. The member suggested that our province did not sign or support the convention. In fact, our province formally supported the convention in a letter from former Premier Ralph Klein to former Prime Minister Jean Chrétien dated January 13, 1999. Neither our province nor any other province signed the convention since signing international agreements is the constitutional responsibility of the federal government. I'm pleased to table the appropriate number of copies of the letter of support as well as the convention itself.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table a document from two constituents, Claude and Eugenie Dube. These are constituents that are very upset over the government's plan to triple the Blue Cross nongroup premiums. They're very frustrated that the government is increasing the money it gives to the oil and gas sector but increasing the burden on Albertans, and they note especially older Albertans. They feel the government had no mandate to make these changes and should not make changes without extensive public consultation. I have the required five copies.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling the five copies of a Ducks Unlimited brochure: A Single Purpose; A Profound Effect. Ducks Unlimited works in consultation and collaboration with a number of Alberta fish and game associations for protecting and restoring habitat. It may seem paradoxical to the uninformed, but hunters and fishermen are among Alberta's most dedicated conservationists.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of tablings with the appropriate number of copies of each. The first is a document from the Manitoba Department of Justice, and it's regarding the appointment of independent counsel. It's a policy document.

Secondly, there's a document from the B.C. government, the Crown counsel policy manual. It, again, outlines the appointment a special prosecutor in cases where there is significant potential for real or perceived improper influence in prosecutorial decision-making.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a petition "to establish a Special Needs taskforce to address the failure of current policies, procedures and practices to adequately serve the exceptional and individual educational needs of all students in the District." This petition was originally presented to the Edmonton public school board.

The Speaker: Hon. members, according to Standing Order 7(7) I must now notify you that it's 3 o'clock. The Routine terminates. We're into Orders of the Day.

3:00 Orders of the Day

The Speaker: Before I recognize the hon. member, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I was remiss earlier in introducing my guests earlier than they should have been, and they weren't there. Now they're here, and I'd like to introduce to you and through you to the rest of the House my guests, Madeline Rainey and her 16-year-old son, Connor, who are seated in the public gallery. Madeline and Connor presented a petition to the Edmonton public school board on January 13 seeking more immediate benefits for the district's special-needs students. Madeline participates in the board's consultation, Setting the Direction for Special Education. I would now ask both Madeline and Connor to rise in their places and receive the warm, traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 21 Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to introduce third reading of Bill 21, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege to rise and enter into third reading debate on Bill 21, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2009. This is a supplementary supply act that seeks to get $127 million and change in extra spending primarily for the ministries of Agriculture and Rural Development, Employment and Immigration, and Transportation as well as some $750,000 for the office of the Auditor General. This is extra money – we've made the point before – in and of itself not a dramatic amount of money above and beyond the budget. But this is the second time that this government has been before the House in this fiscal year seeking supplementary funds. We think the government should do a better job of budgeting. We have made this point on a number of occasions before this, and we suspect that we will be continuing to make that point on into the next fiscal year.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This issue has been bandied about a lot. It's a similar discussion that's been raised over a number of years. I think, however, we need to also raise a different concern in light of news over the last day or two.

This is supplementary supply; in other words, this is money that in many cases is there to look after budget overruns. One of my concerns is that we have a government that overruns its budget year after year after year. We also have a budget that pays multi multimillion-dollar bonuses to its senior management, apparently for achievement. I suppose that if the achievement is to blow your budget, then the bonuses may be in order. I think it's important for this government to establish an achievement factor for its senior management to stay on budget. I can't imagine – and I'm saying this very genuinely – except in the most extraordinary circumstances why a senior official who allows a budget to go past its mark, allows a government department to spend more than is budgeted by this Assembly would then be justified in getting a bonus. The two just don't add up.

Mr. Speaker, you know, with this fine history in this Assembly we'll remember the days 20 years ago or more, when budgets were taken extremely seriously and it was, as I've said before, a career move for a public servant to blow through a budget. Now it seems that we're in a situation where senior public servants get a bonus even if the budget is blown.

I think we are entering an era of a new attitude towards public responsibility for sticking to budgets, and I hope this is the beginning of that. I would hope that to help create an atmosphere where we don't need to come back for repeated supplementary supply bills every year, this government establishes as an achievement criteria for senior managers staying on budget. Frankly, they should be well aware that if they go through the budget, unless there are extraordinary circumstances, there is no bonus. It should be pretty much as simple as that.

Those are the constraints that many, many people in Alberta have to live by in their own domestic households. Those are the constraints that many, many businesses in Alberta have to live by. Frankly, those are the constraints that the caucus has to live by. We have a budget, and we have absolutely no opportunity nor any desire to go through the budget. We have the budget, and we live within that budget.

I think it's very important to get the message through to the members of this Assembly that paying bonuses to senior managers who allow their budgets to be broken should be unacceptable. There should be no bonuses in those circumstances. I think, maybe, the fact that this government has been paying bonuses regardless of whether budgets were met or not has contributed to this kind of bill that we have right now coming forward, which is at least a second supplementary supply bill.

I want to get that on the record, Mr. Speaker. I'm not particularly pleased that we have this bill here. I wasn't very pleased that we had a supplementary supply bill just a few months ago. I think that now we are beginning to uncover some of the organizational dynamics that lead to this occurring repeatedly, which is that, apparently, senior management bonuses are not tied to living within budgets. My view, my message today is that from here on in they should be.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for the question-and-response portion. The hon. Government House Leader on this point.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm wondering if the hon. member had an opportunity to look at the third-quarter results and, if he did so, whether he is aware of or whether he just wilfully ignored the fact that the operating budget of the government is pretty much on track for what it was budgeted at. The difference that might be anticipated in terms of if there was a deficit at the end of this year was clearly generated by a loss of revenue in the investment portfolio of the heritage trust fund and not a problem created by any of our dedicated civil service, who work long hours on behalf of the people of Alberta, going into deficit.

Now, he may be referring as well, and I think he did refer as well, to the fact that, of course, coming back for supplementary supply means that you're asking for more revenue. He indicated that businesses and households set budgets and then live within them and that government should be expected to. I'm not sure where he's been living, but in the world that I live in, people take a look at their resources on an ongoing basis and determine whether or not, given the nature of the resources that they have on an ongoing basis, those resources can be applied to the needs that arise on an ongoing basis or not. I know of no business nor of any household which sets a rigid parameter once a year and then tries to live in it. Is he living in the same world that I'm in?

Dr. Taft: Well, that's a unique sort of question. I'm not sure what planet the minister is living on. I know I live right here in Edmonton, and I live right here in Alberta, and I don't have the benefits of the tremendous resources that this minister has. I also know that people like the large number of seniors in my constituency who are on fixed incomes are stuck. They can't vote themselves a higher income in December and then vote themselves another higher income in February or March.

There's no question that the great majority of Alberta's public servants are dedicated and they're hard working, but there's also no question that this government has consistently, year after year for any number of years now, turned out to have spent considerably more at the end of the year than it said it was going to at the beginning of the year. That's a problem, and it's a problem that we need to address. I look to the President of the Treasury Board from here on in to help address it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood first, then the hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Thank you very much. I wanted to ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview whether or not he thinks bonuses, in fact, make any sense at all even in, perhaps, better times and what uses they might accomplish.

3:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that's a great question and probably an issue that needs a lot more debate here. I think we need to question the whole issue of bonuses for performance. Public officials are paid to do a job, and they're expected to do that job well. If they do the job well, then maybe there's an incremental raise or something, but to import the whole notion of bonuses into the public service needs some very serious thinking. I think it opens up all kinds of questions about what motivations are and what bonuses are given for. If one particular assistant deputy minister gets a bonus, do they all get the bonus? How is that managed?

This was an innovation, if you want to call it that, that was brought in, you know, several years ago. I think it's time that we as an Assembly and, I hope, the government caucus as a caucus asked itself the whole question: do we want a bonus system within the public service? Is it a good idea even in principle? Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I was not terribly pleased when I saw this brought forward for the public service. I think – and I say this in part as a former public servant – public servants are paid to be professionals, to do a good job. If they do that job, they get paid. They don't need a bonus, in my view. This was, I think, a dubious policy to begin with, and I think that it's one that should be debated fully in this Assembly.

Thank you.

Mr. Snelgrove: I'm wondering if the hon. member is going to remain firm and rigid in his stance on overruns with the office of the Auditor General.

Dr. Taft: Well, I don't have the figures in front of me. There is – what? – something like $700,000 in the budget overrun.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, we're dealing with Bill 21.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I also would like to deal with the question of the supplementary estimates and, in particular, some of the revelations that we've seen when it comes to bonuses. You know, we addressed this question in our caucus. The Premier has been talking about the great financial resources that our caucus receives, encouraging us to give some of our money to the Auditor General to help him out and so on. I think, frankly, it's just a little bit silly.

One of the things that we did was to really ask ourselves hard questions about: what are you actually trying to accomplish with the use of bonuses? We have a very hard-working, dedicated, and capable staff, and they are very committed to the goals of our caucus. We want to make sure to the extent of our capacity that they're compensated for that.

If you take it in the question of the government, if you want to look at the government, you need to ask what it is you're going to get from a bonus. If you want the public employees, the senior management in given departments to save money, I think that's the kind of instruction you want to give them, but if you give them financial incentives to do that, I think that you run a risk.

If, in fact, saving money is the objective that's set for the deputy minister or the ADMs, then what kind of behaviour are they going to enter into when their job is to deliver the services in the best possible way, make sure the public gets value for money, and make sure that their programs are run as efficiently and as effectively as possible. You distort that when you try to incent a particular behaviour in the government service. You might find, for example, that programs were cut or spending was cut when it wasn't what was intended, when the service that the public might receive might be impacted, or people weren't hired and, as a result, there were longer waiting lists. I can see all kinds of reasons why bonuses based on savings in the department could create distortions in the carrying out of the government's policy and the programs that people depend on, but more to the point is that I don't think the people of this province get it.

When the government is starting to talk to them about tightening their belts, and the hon. President of the Treasury Board, you know, who has made a number of comments off message, from what I can tell, with what the Premier and the Provincial Treasurer have been saying, about how we're going to be into cutting as we go forward into this period, my fear is that his faction in the Tory caucus is going to find a way to force the government to return to the bad old days of Premier Ralph Klein, when these enormous cuts took place from which we still haven't recovered. And this is an inappropriate response to the current situation.

If we're in fact going to be cutting, then I presume that some people might actually lose their jobs. I don't know if that's the government's intent or if the provincial finance minister's budget will call for that, but clearly the government is sending among its various mixed messages a message that we all have to tighten our belts and that there'll be reductions in spending and, presumably, reductions in programs. It's too early to tell whether there are going to be actual layoffs in the public service, but I think those employees who are just next to the door as we enter into this recession are going to be looking at their bosses and wondering why in Justice, for example, there are bonuses worth $5.8 million being paid; in Service Alberta $3.9 million; in Finance $3.6 million. It goes on and on, millions and millions of dollars, $40 million in bonuses for which the government has given no clear objectives on which they expect to be paid.

I think that when you look at what's going on in the United States, you see a real difference. You see a difference between how the politicians of both the Republican and Democratic parties respond to the public outrage there about bonuses and how this government deals with it. You know, in the United States there's genuine anger, and the politicians are holding people accountable for taking money and spending it on bonuses. Here it's business as usual. This government doesn't seem to get that the rules have changed and public expectations have changed. The economy has changed. There has been a real change in almost everything to do with business, jobs, government, public programs. It has all been affected, and there's a profoundly different way of looking at things and doing things. This government is living in the past and has not adjusted.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to indicate that I think that other employees, the unions, and ordinary Albertans are looking at what this government is doing. By insisting on going ahead with these bonuses, in fact, I think the government is sending a different message. It's trying to reduce expectations, but it is in fact raising expectations, and I think that there are going to be political consequences from that.

Mr. Speaker, I want to indicate that I think we should change the way we look at things. I want to, you know, just indicate that there were some relevant comments that were made just today in the Globe and Mail. Mr. David Dodge, a former governor of the Bank of Canada, said that those that expect that we're going to have a recovery in this year are dreaming in technicolour. So I hope that the members opposite are enjoying their dream, but I think that it's pretty clear to me that they are off base on where they see this economy going. I think that the supplementary estimates, I think the upcoming budget are all going to send us off the track unless the government gets a little bit more realistic about where the economy is and what public expectations are today.

I think the public expects that there will be a stimulus approach but that governments have a responsibility to make sure that public money is spent where it can help the ordinary folks of this province or wherever the jurisdiction is and not spent on people who are already very well off. Again, I think the government is out of touch with the public on this and, frankly, I think that there is going to be some public anger about the government's failure to listen.

Mr. Speaker, I think that with that, I will take my seat. Another person might want to contribute.

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board under Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, I would like the hon. member to maybe clarify for me and for the 6,100 civil servants eligible for some type of bonuses in what way he's able to equate a civil service that by any stretch of the imagination has achieved virtually all the goals they've set out to do in difficult times, working under existing contract conditions that they were hired under for the year that they've just completed, how the hon. member is able to make the leap that somehow this equates to bonuses some corporate executive from a financial-sector company in the States that has mismanaged hundreds and hundreds of billions of dollars, truly a part of a global meltdown that was perpetrated on grounds that have nothing to do with the civil servants that perform every day for the people of Alberta on our behalf. How could he possibly in the same statement put these Albertans, these people that live here and work for the people of Alberta, in the same category as executives of a private company going to the taxpayers of the United States for compensation and a bailout?

I mean, Mr. Speaker, in your opening words this morning, in your prayer, you asked for integrity and honesty. I guess some of us missed that part of your opening prayer. I would sure like the hon. member to make it perfectly clear to these people how he made that connection.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, it's this government that entered into those agreements. It's this government that decided that well-paid civil servants, highly paid at a high senior level, deserved very, very wealthy bonuses. It's this government that is continuing to go in that direction. Now, I want to say that this government has a responsibility to adjust itself to the changing times, and paying out bonuses when there also are people losing their jobs just doesn't fit with what ordinary Albertans think. That's what I think.

I don't know what he's holding up there, Mr. Speaker, but I do want to say that ordinary Albertans in this day who are losing their jobs are looking at this government paying $40 million in bonuses, and they're wondering why the government is so out of touch with their lives, with their priorities. Those are the kinds of things that I think this government needs to take into account.

I believe that the people who are losing their jobs – and there are thousands of them; there are 30,000 in just two months – are wanting to know what the government is doing, whether the government gets it. I don't think the government does get it, Mr. Speaker. I think the government is out of touch with those people.

Their agreement to enter into these agreements for these bonuses at the same time as they're not bringing forward long-term care beds, for example, which is causing backups in our health care system, their failure to deal with the whole question of overcrowding in foster homes and the very poor compensation that foster parents get in this province, their failure to deal with environmental questions – the terrible conditions that continue to exist in our long-term care facilities are really a tragedy. People like that, people like senior citizens who are being asked to pay more for their drugs, are looking at the money that is being spent on these bonuses because the government entered into what I consider to be an ill-advised agreement.

If we take a look at the question of the Auditor General and his budget, there are some very important audits that the Auditor General is going to have to defer or cancel, things like water safety, things like food safety, things like children in care. He needs a couple of million dollars to do that.

The Speaker: Alas, hon. member, the time has expired.
The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'd move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 22 Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it is indeed my pleasure to rise and introduce third reading of Bill 22, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009, so that we can probably spend, oh, I'd guess another hour on subjects completely unrelated to the content and intent of the bill. However, if that's the wish of the opposition, we're more than happy to oblige.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and join debate at third reading on Bill 22, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009. I think I would be remiss if I didn't start out by saying that, of course, if the government wishes to shorten the time involved in debate on this bill or the previous bill or any other, all they have to do is not avail themselves of 29(2)(a). You don't have to ask the question. You won't stretch it out by another five minutes per speech per speaker.

Mr. Snelgrove: It just gets better.

Mr. Taylor: It does, doesn't it?
The Minister of Transportation is having a whale of a time.

Mr. Ouellette: That's because I like asking you questions.

Mr. Taylor: But on to the matter at hand, which is worth considerably more money than the last bill that we debated. This one's worth about $10 billion, and as the Premier himself pointed out in question period a few times I think this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, we're just a couple of weeks away from the end of the 2008-2009 fiscal year. The government clearly needs the money, or at least some of the money, a good chunk of the money, that it is asking for in Bill 22 to keep the lights on, the furnace humming until such time as it's time to turn on the air conditioning, and the bonuses rolling while we debate the budget and pass it so that it can come into effect.

3:30

I will point out once again, Mr. Speaker – and I've mentioned this a couple of times – that there really is no excuse for the fact that we have not yet even heard the budget, begun debate on the budget, that we won't hear the budget until April 7. We came back into this House on Tuesday, February 10. If I'm wrong about this, I'd be interested to hear the minister of finance's defence about this. We could have and should have had that budget in front of us by Tuesday, February 24, two weeks later. There was a time when we had a set of temporary standing orders – of course, they have, as you know, since lapsed – that actually specified the start date for the spring session and the fact that a budget would be brought in by the government a set period of time after that. I believe the period of time was 10 days or two weeks.

Had we followed those rules, which are not the rules currently, I'll grant you that, we would have had the budget in front of us on February 24. Here it is March 18, and we would be well into, in fact we would be very, very nearly finished Committee of Supply debate of the budget. We'd be ready to move the budget through its final stages. We'd be ready to pass and proclaim the budget, all of that in time for the beginning of the new fiscal year. We wouldn't need to be doing Bill 22.

But they chose to operate a different way, an inefficient way, a sort of: "Oh, you know, let's just go along here, see how things go. We'll get around to this eventually. We don't really know what the price of oil is going to be. We don't really know what the price of natural gas is going to be, don't really have a good handle on the exchange rate for the fiscal year going forward." I don't know why we think we'll have a better handle on all that on April 7 than we would've on February 24. Nevertheless, it gives us an excuse not to get down to business quite so quickly.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that later on this afternoon – and I believe that if the government had its way, it would be earlier on this afternoon – we will resume Committee of the Whole debate of Bill 18, which they are in an all-fired rush to get through this House in time for April 1, when TILMA comes into effect, so that they don't caught with their knickers down, if that's not unparliamentary. I didn't intend it in that way.

The Speaker: Carry on. It's not unparliamentary.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you.

I'm reminded again that, you know, they've had plenty of time to get to work on this thing. I don't know what they do in the off-season. Maybe they work on their golf game down in Arizona. I don't know what it is because they sure as heck don't get any more efficient.

Mr. Hancock: Who's living in the past now?

Mr. Taylor: I hear the Minister of Education over there chirping away like a songbird, but I'm not in the mood for birdwatching this afternoon, so I'll just ignore him.

That brings us back to Bill 22. Bill 22 asks for $10 billion in approved spending to get us through the next few weeks. Yes, I understand, Mr. Speaker, that some of that has to be front-loaded because it's more expensive to run a government at the beginning of the fiscal year than it is towards the end of the fiscal year. At least, that's what they tell us at the beginning of the fiscal year. Then they come back once or twice partway through the fiscal year and ask for more money in sup supply because I guess they underestimated their ability to spend. But I digress.

This is $10 billion that we're being asked to approve, $10 billion with no explanation other than: "Well, you know what? This is the way we always do it. We can't explain it to you now because you're going to have to wait for the budget." It gives me the willies.

Mr. Hehr: The willies?

Mr. Taylor: Yes, the willies. The willies.

It gives me the willies to consider approving this request when I look at the history of inefficiency and dawdling and goofing around involved with this government. They can't seem to bring anything to the table in a timely fashion. It's always at the last minute, and, gosh, we've got to ram this through. They either can't organize a two-car funeral, or they're perfectly capable of organizing a two-car funeral. They just want to make sure that that two-car funeral is able to run a bunch of red lights without anybody having the authority or the time to work out a way to stop them.

So $10 billion up for grabs, ladies and gentlemen. Have at 'er. I'm done for now. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional participants? Actually, we have 29(2)(a) first. Anybody want to participate? Oh, no. That's right. We just started this one. Sorry about that. I was so befuddled there by his expressive language: knickers, willies, dawdling, and two-car funerals. There was a speech around all of that, too.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, please.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and enter debate on interim supply briefing. As my colleague from Calgary-Currie surmised, this is coming at a time when we should already have a full budget prepared and have things going along in some fashion, where we'd have, then, school boards, cities, all of us here on the opposition benches, and everyone on the government side aware of what our plans are in this province. Then everyone could go forward and build their year accordingly and go off and do the best they can in what are, no doubt, some harder economic times. We've seen many governments around Canada, including the federal government, seemingly be able to get there a little bit quicker than we have here in Alberta.

You know, it even begs the question. Not really to get to whether this is going to be a stimulus budget or whether it's going to be a status quo budget or whether it's going to be a cutting budget: regardless of that, you know, you seem to be limiting the effect of whatever your budget is going to be, bringing it in so late. For instance, if you were going to stimulate, well, the longer you waited, the worse off it apparently is going to get. If you were going to cut, well, I guess that time is still available, so I guess you won't be in as much of a quandary.

Nevertheless, all I'm saying is that it does limit the effectiveness of what, in fact, it's going to be doing and what, in fact, our many boards, organizations, charities, cities are going to do that depends on budgets being brought in in a reasonable amount of time to be able to develop their plans accordingly. In this province it's generally the provincial government that has the gold, and a lot of times our other people are reliant on at least getting some information to them on what they can anticipate to run services to help support Albertans.

I guess another point of it is the fact that this is a rather large number, $10 billion. Again, if we look at the spending that this government has done – I don't think I'm speaking out of turn; the numbers could be higher, could be a little lower – it spends approximately 24 or 23 per cent more than Ontario, some 30 points higher than British Columbia and others. There's no doubt there is a lot of spending going on here in Alberta. There are arguments for that. I concede some of that. Yet there seems to be a lot of stuff that when you look around and compare Alberta's situation, the state of some of our infrastructure, the state of some of our schools, the state of our hospital wait times, for instance – you know, given the fact that we've had more money, spent more money, and all of this stuff, the results on what comes back should be better.

In fact, I think there's an argument to say that it's not better. Any of the results we get back on national standards on wait times, for instance, say that we're in the middle of the pack. You see that whether we're getting the value for dollar out of our spending. That is, I guess, an argument to be made.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me to put my oar in the water, at least give some tentative comments on Bill 22, and I thank you for allowing me that time.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available should there be questions.

There being none – two members have risen at the same time. The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair will now call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 18 Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: We will continue on amendment A2. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I do want to get a few more remarks on the record from my conversation of yesterday. My amendment, I believe, is very important. I think it is an amendment that will protect democracy and the way this House operates. I'm asking that the entire section 5 be amended by striking out that whole section in Bill 18. My reasons for that are that I think that in the end this bill is ripe for a constitutional challenge.

We need to withdraw the whole section 5. It's on page 6 of the hard copy of the bill, and it's section 7(1). The heading is Regulations. It says that the Lieutenant Governor in Council, which is cabinet, "may make regulations in respect of matters relating to the implementation of the Agreement that the Minister considers are not provided for or are insufficiently provided for in this Schedule or any enactment." It goes on in the next section, which is the one that I feel gives the most problem, that a regulation made under subsection (1) "may suspend the application of or modify a provision of an Act or regulation or may substitute another provision in place of a provision."

It's the act that is the problem. How can something that has taken place in this House, which is a legislated act, be changed in the backrooms by cabinet? It boggles my mind to think of what else could be changed under the same rules if this one goes forward. It delegates the power, as I've said, of the House to the cabinet. Parliamentary tradition is that what's created by the Legislature must come back to the Legislature to be changed. We create and we can change. One of the ways that is done is through the legislated act. Yes, regulations are done by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, which then, of course, is cabinet. Actually, I'm seeing more and more things being given over to the power of regulations which, I believe, really should have been in legislation.

In amending this, we're talking about the retroactivity of regulations. I'm not sure that I know of any organization or, to use a sport analogy, any sport where you actually change the rules in the middle of the game. You can't try to stop that forward halfway over the blue line and say: "Oh, whoops. We've just changed. Go back and start over again." It doesn't work like that. We cannot, in my mind, in all good conscience go back. How do you change the rules? How do you go back to someone and say, "Everything you've been doing is wrong, and whether you like it or not, this is the way it's going to be"?

I can hear some of the responses being that part of this is collateral damage. Collateral damage is a pretty powerful statement. It's, to me, a statement of disrespect. It's a statement of: too bad. So when I hear those kinds of things or when I suspect that that might be part of the thinking, I question, perhaps, the ethics that are behind that kind of a consequence. The consequences should really only go forward, and in this bill, in my mind, they should go forward from proclamation even, not from the date of the passing of the bill.

There is a rush in the House, as we know, to get this bill through by April 1 because that's the deadline for TILMA. It has to be signed, sealed, and delivered by that date. There have been two years to get this work done. Why is there never, it would appear, any time for outside eyes to look at these deals? That's why in the end often amendments are necessary and, I believe, especially this amendment of mine is necessary. Had these types of things been discussed over the last two years or even within the last six months, it would have given a much greater opportunity for other eyes to look at it. By other eyes, I guess, at this point I mean mine because I'm bringing the amendment forward.

I hope that I'm wrong, but I think that there are people in the House that haven't really looked at this carefully enough to realize the actual ramifications of being able to change an act in this House in the backrooms and not have it come back to the table, where it belongs. As I've mentioned, the ethics behind this, I think, are questionable.

One of the last things I'd like to comment on is that I really believe this leaves itself open to a court challenge. I think that there will be one further down the road. What a waste of time that would be. If we had done it right in the first place, if perhaps we had started this process earlier in the two-year window that was given the government when they signed this with B.C. two years ago, perhaps this conversation would never have had to take place. Should there be a court challenge further on, what a waste of time it would have been, all because we have to get this signed within the next two weeks. Of course, we all know that the House will be in constituency weeks for the next two, so it has to be signed before we return.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I rise in support of the amendment that has been brought forward by the Member for Lethbridge-East. It's almost exactly the amendment that I was hoping to see. I think I might have been a little less firm than her and might have left in the ability for the cabinet to change the regulations. I had spoken in second and earlier in committee of my great fear and objection to the clause in the bill under the government organization section that would allow for the cabinet to make changes to existing pieces of legislation.

I've taken the opportunity from yesterday to today to do a bit more work in looking at this. I really take issue with this bill proposing that the Legislature would abdicate to cabinet the power to change an act and, further, to change an act retroactively by two years. I have always objected to the preponderance, the choices this government makes to put shell bills in place and to depend upon the power to make regulations for the government to carry on business. Frankly, to me it's increasingly signalling that the government is not as good a manager as it likes to think itself in that it has to give itself so many outs and so much flexibility to get around when it makes mistakes.

That's what this is about. They're trying to cover their posterior extensions to make sure that . . . [interjections] Think about it; it'll come to you. If and when TILMA comes into play, if they've forgotten something or if Alberta gets called on one of the clauses in TILMA, they have the ability to go back and change our legislation so that we don't get called on it again. Of course, what this government has signed on to with the TILMA agreement is a number of very vague clauses, so we really don't know how this is going to play out.

They've also signed on to something that says that if they're found lacking or in default by one of the tribunals, the offending party, which in this case may well be the government, can be fined for each and every instance that it has been found in default. If we're talking about something that's happened under an act, they could possibly be fined multiple times for, essentially, the same egregious error. If it's happened more than once, for example, they would pay the fine for every single time it's happened under the auspices of an act.

One, what does that raise for us? The need to have cover-your-butt legislation because they're anticipating that there are going to be problems with it. I guess I should congratulate them on having a plan and anticipating that things might go wrong, seeing as I've held them to account and found fault with them for not doing that in the past on things like the budget. But, truly, did we need to cast such a wide net here?

I think this is a very dangerous precedent. This government likes to try stuff, and then they just settle right into it like an old armchair. They just pull that afghan around their shoulders. They just settle right in and put their feet up on the settee, pour themselves a drink, and get the clicker. They just settle in and love that new way of doing things, and they're very hard to move out of that armchair of comfort that they have created for themselves with legislation.

As has been mentioned, I believe this is unconstitutional. I'm just going to talk a little bit about that. One of the ways that you can sort of get a sense of if this is wrong is by looking at different levels, and you do expect a consistency. I sort of briefly referred to one of the areas yesterday although I think I might have given a reference in error. But let's look at a similar situation, which would be the Committee of the Whole taking on responsibility that is a power that is reserved for the Legislature. Here I'll quote Bourinot, page 527. It says that the committee "have no power to extinguish a bill, that power [being] retained by the house itself." So even when we're talking about a situation like we're in today where we're in Committee of the Whole, this committee has limited powers. Those are in fact outlined and set out. It's noted how this is different in our standing orders and then further on in all of our other parliamentary books. We don't have the power in this committee to do everything that the full Legislature can, nor should we. There is a place for it.

What's being attempted here is a move by government to try and get the Legislature to abdicate its power back to the cabinet to be able to change this legislation. That's essentially what's happening here. I am certain that there will be a constitutional challenge on this. I already quoted you yesterday the examples of where that abdication has been upheld. Really, that has only been upheld by the courts in a situation of extremity. That extremity was war, and we are nowhere close to war here. There is no civil strife. There is no War Measures Act in place here. There has been no mobilizing of military force on behalf of the government. There's been no legislation brought into place to give it other extraordinary powers to act in a time of civil unrest and strife.

So to make a claim that somehow we are in a situation of dire straits and that the cabinet would need to have that power for some reason is unsupportable. I have heard no compelling arguments from the government that would persuade me that we are in such dire straits in this province, that things are in such extremes that we would need to be acting as though we were under an extraordinary measure like the War Measures Act.

What we're talking about is a trade agreement. Let's get some common sense here. We are talking about a trade agreement. We're not talking about war. We're not talking about civil insurrection.

We're talking about the implementation of a trade agreement that's supposed to be a good thing. It's supposed to enhance the ability of people to work in different provinces, the ability of businesses to make money and reduce red tape. That is the hopeful view of that.

Now, in fact, there have been a number of things go very wrong with TILMA. For starters, we were not able to debate it in this House, unlike in B.C. When we do get a chance to look at it, it's so vague in some cases that you actually cannot anticipate what might flow from some of those sections. I know that some of my colleagues are better versed on that and will likely speak to it in more detail, but here we already are seeing acts that are projecting the government's unease with its position and that it has done everything that it should be doing in order to progress to a smooth transition to TILMA on the 1st of April.

Yesterday I had said that there was no time limit and that the minister had stated that there was, and I had looked in the legislation and I disagreed with him. It's a wonder of this House having the live audiostreaming because, of course, by the time I got back to my office, there was an e-mail saying: you were wrong. Okay. Fair enough. What has been said to me – and this may well be true – is in section 7(4) of the Government Organization Act, appearing midway down page 7 of the hard copy of the act, a regulation made under subsection (1), which is that the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations in respect of matters that the minister considers are not provided for. Then it goes on in subsection (2) to talk about regulations that are made under the previous section may suspend the application of or modify a provision of an act.

I think it could be argued and I'll entertain the argument that, in fact, an act is covered under this provision, subsection (4). Really, it's saying that that's the time limit, that "a regulation made under subsection (1) is repealed on the earliest of the following." Then it lists some three conditions:

- (a) the coming into force of an amendment to a statute that provides for the matter [that's being] dealt with in the regulation;
- (b) the coming into force of a regulation that repeals the regulation made under subsection (1);
- (c) the expiration of 3 years from the day that the regulation
 - (i) comes into force, if the regulation is not retroactive, or
 - (ii) is filed with the Registrar of Regulations.

Now, I'll tell you why I'm still uneasy. We're still talking about regulations. We have not admitted that we're actually talking about changing an act, and that's where part of my unease is, but it may well be that that wording does indeed cover subsection 2(a), which is talking about modifying an act.

But we are still talking about giving cabinet the power to modify any act for a period of up to three years and retroactively two years, back to April 1, 2007, so we're actually talking about a five-year window for which cabinet gets to play around with changing legislation, and, one, I don't think cabinet should be allowed to change legislation. It perverts the whole sense of what this Chamber is about and the fact that there are a variety of representatives here, that there are people here that are not from the governing party, that it does bring an alternative voice, an alternative eye, and, I hope, a critical eye to the proceedings. That's the point of this Chamber. That's why it is supposed to come back here. To leave it in the hands of a group who have a shared interest in something that is not necessarily the shared interest of the whole Chamber is what is so offensive to this scheme.

I will put that argument on one side, that it does allow for a three-year time limit. But as I say, I still don't accept that. I don't think it's acceptable under any conditions to be able to do this. We're talking about a trade agreement. Why does the government need to be able to subvert this Assembly, subvert the number of people that voted for those of us in here in order to facilitate a trade agreement that is primarily to the advantage of the private sector? That's the trail that really starts to cause me concern. We're here as a democratically elected institution, and what we're seeing is legislation to make us all bend over backwards to facilitate a bunch of people doing business. I don't find that an acceptable reason to diminish the importance of this Assembly. It's not a good enough reason, nor have I heard a compelling argument from anybody on the government side as to why this should be acceptable.

I was reminded as I was musing aloud about this – well, no, I'll have to be honest; I was probably raging aloud about it – of the former Premier Peter Lougheed speaking at the 100th anniversary banquet for the Legislative Assembly of Alberta and reminding us all very clearly that the penultimate body was the Legislature, not the government, and that the government is responsible to the Legislature. I am reminded of that very much today and yesterday as we look at what is contemplated in this act.

I know I don't have much hope of swaying the votes of this government caucus. Clearly, this has been decided as usual behind your closed doors. You are determined to proceed with this. But I think it shows such disdain for this House, and it's another example of how low the government's regard is for this very Chamber that it would, you know, organize its caucus to stand behind something that diminished the very Assembly that gives that government any kind of authority at all.

The other part of that argument is that – and the government's very proud of itself that it has 72 members elected here out of the 83. But you know what? Happily, we have an Electoral Boundaries Commission coming up because we had an awful lot of people in Alberta who did not vote for the government, and their votes are not reflected in the distribution of seats in this House. I think some people argue that it's 30 per cent or 40 per cent of the people in total that voted that did not vote for this government, and their votes are not being reflected in the seat distribution here and certainly not in the actions the government is bent on taking.

I think that this action, if followed through with, signals to me that there are much more insidious things to come. If the government can do this to this Assembly based on upholding a trade agreement, then I suspect that there is much more to come. How badly did the government negotiate this trade agreement if it's in that position of being fearful of what the consequences of the agreement are? From my reading, such as it is, around what's in this agreement, I can't say that I think the government did a real bang-up job negotiating on our behalf. I hope that this will be to the benefit of Albertans, all Albertans, but I'm not convinced of that. I continue to be concerned with how vague that agreement is and how much authority has been shifted away from the people that are in fact elected to wield that authority and to debate those kinds of bills.

I realize that my time is almost up, Mr. Chairman. I certainly appreciate the opportunity that my colleagues have given me to get in on this particular debate. I would urge my colleagues in the Legislative Assembly to support this amendment A2, as brought forward by my colleague from Lethbridge-East, and not allow this Legislature to essentially abdicate its responsibility by delegating the authority that this bill contemplates to an inferior body. That's not to say that I see cabinet as being inferior in any way, but it is an inferior body when we look at the ranking of the legislative authorities. I think that this has serious and far-reaching implications for all of us and for this institution, and I urge my colleague to vote for this amendment, which would remove the clause from the bill that I find so offensive.

Thank you for that opportunity, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Thank you. Before I recognize the next member, may we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's an honour and a privilege to introduce two guests here from West Fraser Timber. They're here meeting some folks in the Legislature. It's great to talk about this industry, and I'm very proud of the facilities that they own throughout the province. The West Fraser folks own facilities in Hinton, Sundre, Rocky Mountain House, Slave Lake, Edmonton, and of course in Whitecourt. They employ hundreds of people in those mills and hundreds of contractors throughout this province. It gives me great pleasure to introduce Mr. Hank Ketchum and Wayne Clogg. I'd ask them both to stand up and receive the warm greeting of this Assembly. I think they're also here to get their citizenship papers from Alberta.

Thank you.

Bill 18

Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (continued)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It is an honour and privilege to get up and speak in support of this amendment. The difficult thing is that I'm going after the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, who always does such a good job describing and saying many of the things that want to come out of my mouth but rarely do. Nevertheless, I will try and follow her.

What I'd like to point out and continue on with is the fact that what we find, I guess, so odious about the bill is that we are in fact diminishing what we are supposed to do in this Legislature, which is to give us an opportunity to debate, to hear or flesh out the ideas of the day, to contact our constituents, to have our constituents contact us. For better or for worse or even if the opposition is totally out to lunch or even on the rare occasion, maybe, that the government is out to lunch, we at least have that opportunity to come here and discuss this in a fair and reasonable fashion in the light of day, so to speak, so that members of the press gallery can then report on this, and it's an honest and open government. Transparency would be paramount.

When we have a bill like this, that reverts decisions so that decisions can be made in regulations and that regulations can then be changed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council or cabinet, and then they can make any change to whatever bill or legislation, in this case TILMA, that is going forward and make that change up to two years back and three years forward – five years: that's a pretty large window of opportunity for the Alberta public, people who voted for us to come here, not to hear about what is actually happening to the bill.

On that front, simply put, I think that's unacceptable. We see this happening time and time again on more and more bills, and it essentially diminishes the role of what we, in fact, do here. Maybe that has some sort of tie-off. By no means am I going to blame this government entirely for the lack of voter turnout that happened last time. You know, let's face it. It's happening all around Canada, in Alberta more so than other parts. We can quibble around the edges as to why this is in fact happening.

If we ever want to take democracy to that next level, to be seen to be engaging our population, to be really respecting what they say and really see what we do up here in the Legislature, I don't think we're serving that goal by moving decisions to the Lieutenant Governor in Council. It just simply is counterintuitive to my thinking, that this will foster a spirit of democracy throughout Alberta, that it will really engage grade 3 students around the province into saying: jeepers, the Legislature is something I want to pay attention to. Guess what? Why pay attention to the Legislature when all the big decisions are made behind closed doors, behind the veil of secrecy that is beginning to cloak this government?

If that is maybe, you know, one of the reasons why we want to support this amendment, I think it's a good reason to support it. Let's take a look. I hear in Members' Statements from both members on this side of the House and members on that side that, you know, we're worried about democracy; we want to re-engage the public; we want to get people out to vote. That's all fine and dandy. But when we do actions like this, that actually diminish our role as legislators, I don't think that's backing up what, in fact, we're doing here. It's disingenuous to sort of do one thing and say another. We might as well start acting in a way that's in accordance with what we're saying, that we want democracy to be revitalized and the spirit of debate to continue.

On that note, those are my comments as to why I support this amendment, why I believe it is an important amendment that will help strengthen Alberta's democracy and one that I hope all members of this House will support.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

Mr. Chase: No one knows what goes on behind closed doors. That should be our Alberta theme song. Last week we spent a great deal of time talking about the mushroom as an emblem for Alberta, and that's how the government is treating its people: putting them behind closed doors under a layer of we all know what: fertilizer, for the sake of the ears that may be tuned into the program today.

This government doesn't live up to its title of Progressive Conservative. The government doesn't seem to know whether it's progressive or regressive. We talked about three steps forward, two steps back, five steps in total. If the government had any kind of confidence in its own legislation, it wouldn't have to hop into its H.G. Wells updated version of the time machine and go back in time with a giant bottle of whiteout to erase its trace. It's a great concern.

This government over the last number of years, under which I've had the pleasure to serve, has moved more and more legislation into regulation. What's particularly offensive about this piece of legislation, such as totalitarian regimes are prone to do, is the Orwellian concept that in controlling the past, you could therefore control the future. If the thing is done right, then it should be transparent, it should be accountable, and it should be open to discussion and debate, not hidden behind cabinet doors under the auspices of the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

It worries me when I see a continuing trend with this government, a type of nostalgic desire to go back in time: the human rights act, that we discussed on Monday and Tuesday, going back in time, recognizing the authority of parents, which has never actually been lost, this desire to go back to potentially a time when women and children were considered a chattel. How far back do we go?

This is supposed to be a progressive piece of legislation which is going to bring economic harmony and labour mobility between the two provinces, yet there seems to be sufficient fear, uncharacteristic fear from this government that they need to have a delete clause. This government that is so keen, you know: don't apply the brakes when it comes to oil sands development; full speed; ride that roller coaster right to the end. To use the western analogy, ride the horse into the ground.

This desire to go forward, on one hand, and then with a bungee cord be pulled back into reality and need to go back behind closed doors to correct the original mistakes, this whiplashing effect that I've talked about before in this House, is very disconcerting for Albertans who are trying to figure out whether this government has a road map, whether it has a direction, whether there's a plan. And, of course, when the plan, if there is one, is locked in a cabinet door somewhere in regulation which at the whim of the cabinet can be changed, then it's pretty hard, as the Member for Lethbridge-East pointed out, to know what the rules are when they're made up as the player goes along.

[Dr. Brown in the chair]

As we've debated, the TILMA bill has potential. But not being able to have the opportunity as a House, as elected representatives of the people to make whatever adjustments or corrections but to leave it solely to the wisdom of the cabinet, that sometimes seems like an oxymoron. We have some very capable cabinet ministers, ones that, you know, in good times might deserve bonuses or merit pay. But the idea of Albertans surrendering their democratic rights to the collective, selective wisdom of 23 cabinet ministers is a little bit frightening. The idea of, you know, in cabinet we trust – maybe we should establish our own Alberta currency to reflect these concerns.

Retroactivity is a concern. The idea that this government can basically go back in the snow and sweep the traces of where it was intending to go, wake up the next morning and there's no footprints and there's no path and Albertans haven't, as I say, a clue as to the direction the government is taking, is extremely disconcerting.

Individuals like I believe it's Duff Conacher of Democracy Watch must lose sleep over every successive attempt this government makes to take things out of legislation and hide them in regulation. That's a type of arrogance that, again, is only found in, you know, the divine right of kings or the divine rule of kings, this notion that we know best. I mean, I used to enjoy the show Father Knows Best back in the '50s, but I don't want to go back to the '50s. I want to be part of a progressive province that looks ahead rather than just driving along in the rearview mirror.

This government has to get with the program. It has to decide where it's going. It has to develop a map that other Albertans can follow. It has to have a set of tenets that are written down whereby we know where we're going. This business of "Trust us," given the recessionary times we find ourselves in, just doesn't cut it. For this bill to go forward, we must at least take out section 5, as the amendment recommends, or we as a democracy surrender all of our authority to the government. I'm not prepared to do that, nor are my constituents.

Thank you.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise in support of this amendment to delete section 5. I believe that this bill and particularly section 5 is an actual all-out assault on the powers of this Legislature and it is an attempt to usurp the powers vested in a democratically elected body. It is an assault on hundreds of years of constitutional tradition, and it ought to be defeated. By passing this amendment, which is identical to one that the NDP opposition had prepared, we can take out this particularly irksome assault on our democratic traditions. I just want to say with respect to this amendment and this particular section of Bill 18 that section 5 gives legislative powers to the cabinet of Alberta. It is a very dangerous precedent, and it's not one that this Legislature ought to permit.

There have been attempts to do this and examples of this in Canadian parliamentary history in the past. I would like to read some quotes from the Ontario Supreme Court in a case entitled Ontario Public School Boards' Association versus Attorney General of Ontario in 1997. It is interesting. The court characterizes such a provision as we were discussing today as reversing the usual rule that "legislative power is vested in the democratically elected Legislative Assembly to make laws after full public debate," not in the executive of a particular political administration. It went on to characterize such a power in the following way:

This breathtaking power, to amend by regulation the very statute which authorizes the regulation, is known to legal historians as a "King Henry VIII" clause because that monarch gave himself power to legislate by proclamation, a power associated since the 16th century with executive autocracy

It describes such powers as constitutionally suspect because it confers upon the government the unprotected authority to pull itself up by its own legal bootstraps and override arbitrarily, with no further advice from the Legislative Assembly, and no right to be heard by those who may be adversely affected by the change, the very legislative instrument from which the government derives its original authority.

Mr. Chairman, this goes on to say:

It is one thing to confer this extraordinary power if it is actually needed for some urgent and immediate action to protect an explicitly identified public interest. It is quite another thing to hand it out with the daily rations of government power, unlimited as to any explicit legal purpose for which it may be exercised.

I want to be very, very clear that there is no outstanding reason, urgency which compels the government to act without the Legislature to amend pieces of legislation which may come into conflict with the terms of TILMA. In fact, to put an agreement, a negotiated contract as it were, between provinces above the Legislature and above legislation itself is something that I think flies in the face of our democratic traditions.

Mr. Chairman, I want to read some quotes from a book, and I want to start by saying that I am in no way attempting to associate this government and what it's doing with the regime in Hitler's Germany in 1930. This I want to emphasize and underline. I don't want members opposite to be coming to the conclusion that I'm attempting to equate what the government is doing or this government in general with that. But this is a cautionary tale. This is the tale of how Hitler came to power in Germany. He came to power legally. He came to power through a mechanism which is somewhat similar – well, I would go further; I would say it is similar to the proposal that we have before us.

This is obviously an extreme example. I'm not suggesting that this is where this government wants to take us. But the principle, I think, needs to be illustrated, so I'm going to read some sections from William Shirer's book The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, which I just got from the library downstairs. It says:

The plan was deceptively simple and had the advantage of cloaking the seizure of absolute power in legality. The Reichstag which was the German parliament, would be asked to pass an "enabling act" conferring on Hitler's cabinet exclusive legislative powers for four years. Put even more simply, the German Parliament would be requested to turn over its constitutional functions to Hitler and take a long vacation.

The question was:

"How could they fail . . .

This is the Reichstag.

. . . to dismiss the apprehension with which they had begun to view the excesses and abuses of his party? Could they now hesitate to grant him their entire confidence, to meet all his requests, to concede the full powers he claimed?"

The answer was given two days later, on March 23, in the Kroll Opera House in Berlin, where the Reichstag convened. Before the house was the so-called Enabling Act – the "Law for Removing the Distress of People and Reich . . ." as it was officially called. Its five brief paragraphs took the power of legislation, including control of the Reich budget, approval of treaties with foreign states and the initiating of constitutional amendments, away from Parliament and handed it over to the Reich cabinet for a period of four years. Moreover, the act stipulated that the laws enacted by the cabinet were to be drafted by the Chancellor and "might deviate from the constitution." No laws were to "affect the position of the Reichstag" – surely the cruelest joke of all – and the powers of the President remained "undisturbed."

Hitler reiterated these last two points in a speech of unexpected restraint to the deputies assembled in the ornate opera house, which had long specialized in the lighter operatic works and whose aisles were now lined with brown-shirted storm troopers, whose scarred bully faces indicated that no nonsense would be tolerated from the representatives of the people.

The government [Hitler promised] will make use of these powers only in so far as they are essential for carrying out vitally necessary measures. Neither the existence of the Reichstag nor that of the Reichsrat is menaced. The position and rights of the President remain unaltered . . . The separate existence of the federal states will not be done away with. The rights of the churches will not be diminished and their relationship to the State will not be modified. The number of cases in which an internal necessity exists for having recourse to such a law is in itself a limited one.

The fiery Nazi leader sounded quite moderate and almost modest; it was too early in the life of the Third Reich for even the opposition members to know full well the value of Hitler's promises. Yet one of them, Otto Wells, leader of the Social Democrats, a dozen of whose deputies had been "detained" by the police, rose – amid the roar of the storm troopers outside yelling, "Full powers, or else!" – to defy the would-be dictator. Speaking quietly and with great dignity, Wells declared that the government might strip the Socialists of their power but it could never strip them of their honour.

We German Social Democrats pledge ourselves solemnly in this historic hour to the principles of humanity and justice, of freedom and socialism. No enabling act can give you the power to destroy ideas which are eternal and indestructible.

Furious, Hitler jumped to his feet, and now the assembly received a real taste of the man.

You come late, but yet you come! [he shouted] . . . You are no longer needed . . . The star of Germany will rise and yours will sink. Your death knell has sounded . . . I do not want your votes. Germany will be free, but not through you! [Stormy applause.]

The Social Democrats, who bore a heavy responsibility for the weakening of the Republic, would at least stick to their principles and go down – this one time – defiantly. But not the Center Party, which once had successfully defied the Iron Chancellor in the Kulturkampf. Monsignor Kaas, the party leader, had demanded a written promise from Hitler that he would respect the President's power of veto. But though promised before the voting, it was never given. Nevertheless the Center leader rose to announce that his party would vote for the bill. Bruening remained silent. The vote was soon taken: 441 for, and 84 (all Social Democrats) against. The Nazi deputies sprang to their feet shouting and stamping deliriously and then, joined by the storm troopers, burst into the Horst Wessel song, which soon would take its place alongside "Deutschland ueber Alles" as one of the two national anthems:

Raise high the flags! Stand on rank together.

Storm troopers march with steady, quiet tread . . .

Thus was parliamentary democracy finally interred in Germany.

Mr. Chairman, again, I don't think that that's what's happening here, but it is the mechanism that was used to take away parliamentary power. Democratically elected people lost their authority, lost their ability to make laws by delegating that power themselves to the cabinet in that case. The results, I think, I don't have to talk about here. I don't think, quite apart from TILMA or any other policy of the government, that this Legislature should be engaged in the process of delegating its legislative authority to the cabinet. I don't care what the issue is; it is wrong. It is wrong for the government to ask us to do that, and we need to send a very clear message to them that we will not permit this abrogation of democratic principles that the people of Alberta have supported for over 100 years.

Mr. Chairman, I urge all members from all parties to look at this issue not as a question of TILMA or of any policy of the government but a question of the rights of the Assembly versus the rights of the government and urge you to support this amendment. Thank you.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. On the amendment, Mr. Chairman, I've been listening to the debate. I've thought that a number of good points have been made. I think it's important just for me for the record to repeat the intent of the amendment, which is to strike out section 5 of this bill.

The biggest reason there's so much concern around section 5 is that it gives cabinet, the Lieutenant Governor in Council, two extraordinary powers at least. One is to go back in time and change things retroactively. Section 7(3) says:

A regulation made under subsection (1) may be made retroactive to a date not earlier than April 1, 2007, and if made retroactive

- (a) is deemed to have come into force on the date specified in the regulation, and
- (b) is retroactive to the extent necessary to give it force and effect on the date specified in the regulation.

So the first concern I have is that somehow this is allowing cabinet to go back in time and change the rules from up to two years ago. That's wrong. It's illogical. It's devious. It's dishonest. It's constitutionally dubious as well.

The other main concern I have with this bill and the reason I'm supporting this amendment is that this continues the process that is so well under way here of the cabinet quietly overthrowing this Legislature. I think the reaction to the debate here confirms that that overthrow has largely happened, because while we are here debating a significant piece of legislation which could very well end up in the Supreme Court of Canada, barely a single government member of this Assembly is paying any attention.

The reason for that is that this Legislature is no more than a rubber stamp. The members of this Assembly, presumably, are coached to ignore the debate or are urged not to participate even though they are going to stand here and vote on a bill that is very possibly going to be challenged in the Supreme Court and overthrown. I think that we have developed a culture of casual disregard for the activities of this Legislature, and there are no greater offenders of that than the members sitting on the government side. Certainly, I can see that right now.

Those are the two key things, Mr. Chairman: a cabinet giving itself the ability to go back and rewrite history and to go in and change the law as passed by this Assembly. That's why I think this amendment is needed so badly.

I think we have to approach this from a couple of angles at least. One is precedent, and a number of colleagues in the opposition caucuses have spoken to this. This is a dangerous precedent, and it's a precedent that's completely unjustified, as the Member for Edmonton-Centre has said repeatedly. This is a trade bill. This is a largely administrative bill. Why do we have to give such draconian authority, such remarkable and potentially arbitrary power, to the cabinet for some bill like this? How is this justified?

Clearly, we're not going to get an answer to that from any of the government members because they've allowed themselves to be reduced to a rubber stamp. But not one of them seems concerned, Mr. Chairman, that this bill is going to get pushed through. I would like to hear somebody from the government benches give some justification for why we need these extraordinary powers for TILMA. Sad to say, I don't expect to get one.

We need to ask ourselves: where could this lead as a precedent? What are the dangers of this precedent? What happens if this gets accepted and in the future it's cited as an example for another bill that allows a different cabinet under different circumstances to go back in time and change the rules or to elevate itself above the Assembly? The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood – I don't always get that in the right order – you know, drew an example from history. It's a dramatic example, but we need to remember those kinds of lessons. What seemed like an innocent or an acceptable compromise at the time, some 79 years ago in Berlin, turned out to be an important stepping stone towards a global catastrophe.

As the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood indicated, nobody's forecasting a global catastrophe here, but these precedents are important, and I don't think it takes any great imagination to imagine a cabinet in the future wanting to go back in time and amend health legislation as if the rules had been different two years before their meeting or a cabinet in the future wanting to simply rewrite a piece of legislation that's inconvenient for some reason and citing this particular bill as a precedent. "Well, they did it under TILMA, so we can do it now to rewrite something else," or "We can do it now to go back and try to change history." I think those are very, very dangerous precedents. There are any number of possibilities for that.

I just wish I could hear some explanation from the government of why this is necessary. We have seen this government from time to time proceed with legislation that was unconstitutional. We've seen that with the insurance industry. Ultimately the Supreme Court ruled against the government, and the government has so far tended to ignore the Supreme Court. We've also seen that in the issue of farm worker safety, where the Alberta government, this government, explicitly forbids paid farm workers from organizing into labour unions. They explicitly single out one particular segment of society and impair their right of association. That issue has gone to the Supreme Court of Canada, and it has been ruled unconstitutional, yet this government continues to ignore that. Those things will come back to haunt them.

This government damages its own credibility, it damages the rule of law, it damages the authority of the courts by routinely doing this sort of thing, and I think they're going to do it again here, Mr. Chairman. This is a bill, as has been said, that is constitutionally suspect.

Mr. Chairman, I would ask maybe the President of the Treasury Board or one of the sponsors of the bill, one of the cabinet ministers here today: can you give us some justification for this? Will you engage in this debate, or are every single one of you silenced by some pressure from somewhere? Are every one of you going to stay silent while we pass a piece of legislation that goes back in time and gives your cabinet the authority to rewrite history? I'm looking for a gesture from one of you. Justify the bill, engage in the debate, stand up. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, stand up and justify why this bill is necessary.

Mr. Marz: You wouldn't want my gesture.

Dr. Taft: He says that I wouldn't want his gesture. I'd like some gesture here. Anybody.

Okay. Well, let it be noted for the record that of the many government members here not a single one attempted to justify this provision. I think that's shameful, but I think it exactly confirms the reason that we're opposed to this. We are steadily watching this Assembly be overthrown by cabinet, and the behaviour of the members opposite confirms that that process is already well under way.

With those comments, Mr. Chairman, I'll take my seat. Perhaps one of the members over in the corner, the Member for Rocky Mountain House or the Member for Livingstone-Macleod, wants to engage in this discussion. Justify it.

Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I think the silence speaks volumes.

The Acting Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I didn't exactly intend to get up now and follow my hon. colleague the Member for Edmonton-Riverview although I didn't want things to grind to a complete halt here. When I saw no members from the government side of the House jumping up to engage the member in debate, I thought I would get up and keep the debate going.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, they are not on the government side getting up to talk to you to justify their stand on this bill, to justify section 5, to justify why they undoubtedly are going to vote against the amendment put forward by the Member for Lethbridge-East because they don't feel that they have to justify themselves to you. A government that would feel that it had to justify itself to you on a point such as this would not be bringing forward a point such as this. A government that felt that it was accountable to the people, a government that felt that it was a responsible government in the definition of the words "responsible government" would be on its feet, but it would be on its feet to argue something entirely different than this because the legislation that we see in front of us right now, hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview and all other hon. members assembled in this House right now, would not contain a section like section 5.

Now, this sort of thing, this sort of section, this sort of attempt to get the trains to run on time if we had any trains in this province, this attempt to bring in administrative convenience – I can hardly use the word "efficiency" given my comments about the lack of efficiency of this government in its budgeting process a little earlier this afternoon – this attempt to bring in this administrative convenience, to put that ahead of the public interest or the rule of law can only be done and is only ever done by a government so full of itself, so consumed by its own arrogance that it's not a matter of caring about what the public thinks or what's in the public interest or ceasing to care about what's in the public interest; it's not even on their radar.

You know, I've been sitting here this afternoon, as I was, I guess, yesterday, when we first started committee debate on Bill 18, listening to the exchange back and forth between members of the second party and members of the third party, largely, and in preparation for this debate reviewing this afternoon the Hansard from yesterday as we were debating Bill 18, and I can't help but think back to my school days, my fairly young school days in Ontario.

Mr. Mason: You remember that far back?

Mr. Taylor: I do remember that far back because it helps to remember history to keep from repeating the mistakes of history.

I remember I would think it would be in around grade 5 or grade 6, if I remember the Ontario school curriculum back then, that we learned about the government and governance of Upper Canada and the Family Compact and the brave, initially failed rebellions of William Lyon Mackenzie and Louis-Joseph Papineau in Lower Canada at the same time, a couple of backwater, bush-league, Canadian-style rebellions, hardly on the scale and scope of the way the Americans would have done it up, you know, the way they did do it up in 1776. It was a kinder, gentler, more polite and, as it seemed at the time, less effective rebellion, in fact, without which we wouldn't even have this country that we call Canada today, nor would we be sitting here, pointlessly it seems sometimes, nor would we be sitting here in this Legislature today, nor would our counterparts in the Ontario Legislature or the Quebec Assembly or the Parliament of Canada because that rebellion gave rise to a royal commission of inquiry, the Durham report, which began the process that ultimately, 30 years later, culminated in Confederation and in the process brought the people of Canada – the people of Canada then and the people yet to come, all of us – responsible government, representation by population, one person, one vote. It hasn't always worked as effectively in practice as it does on paper. It hasn't always been perfect, but it's been better than any alternative.

The reason why that rebellion happened, Mr. Chair, in the first place was because there was not responsible government in Upper Canada at the time, and there was not any interest by the ruling classes in responsible government in Upper Canada. In fact, there was interest only in a whole bunch of mutual back-scratching and featherbedding. The aristocracy, the British colonial governor, and the executive made sure that they looked after themselves and that they looked after one another, and the people of Upper Canada and the people of Lower Canada could go hang, for all they cared.

We can go farther back than that. I mean, the whole history, Mr. Chairman, of parliamentary democracy is a history ripe with examples of the people struggling for equality, struggling to have their say, struggling against royals and monarchical despots and corrupt nobles and evil robber barons who wanted to keep the peasants down because you can't be rich if there aren't poor people; you can't be upper-class if there aren't lower-class people; you can't lord it over your equals. Those in the underclasses spent – what's it been now? – almost 900 years fighting back and wresting, piece by piece, little bits of power away from the ruling classes so that the people could rule themselves.

Our shining example of that in Canada was William Lyon Mackenzie and the rebellion of 1837. It didn't go anywhere. Mackenzie got his sorry butt jammed in jail for a while. Somebody got hanged if I remember correctly. But, you know, it started what was then an unstoppable force here in Canada, and it gave us our country, it gave us our rule of law, it gave us our government, it gave us our freedom, and it gave us our rights as individuals to rule. Maybe we as people have gotten a little soft, a little complacent, a little used to having it so good. I don't know. Or maybe there are just evil people who seek to take our rights and our powers from us.

This is an evil piece of legislation. This is an evil, evil section. This is an absolutely unnecessary, unrequired, unjustifiable section in this bill. There is no justification even if you are prepared to accept that this or any other government was so grossly incompetent that they could not enter into a free trade and labour mobility agreement with the next-door province and keep themselves from being fined repeatedly for the same offence. You know, there's just no justification for this kind of naked power grab. I don't condone it. I personally don't understand it.

I don't know that there are any individuals in the government or any individuals propping them up in the backbenches, doing their trained seal approach and putting their hands up and saying "aye" when the government whip tells them to – I don't know that there are any people over there who are inherently evil or inherently corrupt or inherently bad people. But, you know, persons can be pretty spectacular, and people together can sometimes be pretty dastardly. It seems to me that when you get this bunch of persons together in a group, they lose sight of what they're supposed to be there for, which is not for the people of Alberta to serve them. It's the other way around. The job of every elected representative in this House – Liberal, New Democrat, Conservative; yes, even Conservative – is to serve the people of Alberta.

This legislation cannot, does not, will not serve the people of Alberta so long as section 5 remains in there, and that's why I will be supporting amendment A2.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chair: Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, do you wish to speak on this amendment?

Mr. Chase: I've spoken. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

5:00

The Acting Chair: Are there any further speakers on the amendment?

Call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment A2 lost]

The Chair: We are now back on Bill 18. The hon. leader of the third party on Bill 18.

Mr. Mason: Yes, Mr. Chairman, on Bill 18. I just want to indicate to the House that I have an amendment, which I will distribute to the table and to the other hon. members of the Assembly. If you'll just let me know when you're ready, I will read it into the record.

The Chair: This amendment is now known as A3. The hon. leader of the third party on A3.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to move an amendment to Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. On behalf of my colleague the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona I will move that Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, be amended in section 2 by striking out subsection (7) and substituting the following: "(7) Section 293.4 is repealed."

The Chair: Hon. member, please go ahead.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. This amendment removes a section of the respective act that was added by the government's 2008 TILMA implementation bill. These clauses apply to the portions of the bill that deal with extraprovincial bodies. I just want to indicate that this amendment is, in my view, a necessary one.

We've talked for some time about Bill 18 and its general clauses. We've had the debate on section 5. But I just want to indicate that the current bill states under (7) that section 293.4 is repealed and the following is substituted:

Regulation prevails

293.4 Where there is a conflict or inconsistency between a provision of a regulation made under section 293.3 and a provision of this Act or a provision of a regulation made under another section of this Act, the provision of the regulation made under section 293.3 prevails to the extent of the conflict or inconsistency.

Mr. Chairman, here we have again the same sort of question that we just debated under section 5, and it says – and I just want to go over this again – that where there is a conflict or inconsistency between a provision made under section 293.3, then the provision of the regulation “prevails to the extent of the conflict or inconsistency.” I just want to indicate that in lots of ways we're on dangerous ground. I think that we ought to keep in mind that these very broad powers of what applies and what doesn't apply can lead to unintended consequences and something that I think we ought to be very careful about.

Mr. Chairman, the concern that we have is that TILMA as it stands and with these various parts overriding other bills is dangerous. I know that the whole question of TILMA has been a contentious one from the beginning. I think the assumption on the part of the government is that there are very many aspects of restrictions and constraints on interprovincial trade that are holding back our economy, holding back the economy of British Columbia as well, and perhaps holding back Saskatchewan because the new right-wing government of Saskatchewan, the Saskatchewan Party, formed by some right-wing elements of the former Saskatchewan Liberal Party and the Conservatives in Saskatchewan that managed to stay out of jail, has now taken the government there.

I just wanted to indicate that I don't think that there is a huge problem with limitations and constraints on interprovincial trade. I hate to say it, but the government through its use of power of regulation overriding legislation and giving primacy to this bill over other bills is using a sledgehammer to swat a fly. You know, it's one of the things that I have kind of puzzled about. Why would they go to the extent of eroding the legislative power of this Assembly, giving legislative authority to the cabinet, which can meet behind closed doors and make political decisions without any public discussion, in order to make TILMA work? I don't think that TILMA accomplishes anything like what the government thinks it does.

As I was saying in the House the other day, I think that the government looks at Ronald Reagan with stars in their eyes. I see some hon. members, you know, nodding and grinning; Ronald Reagan is their hero. He and Brian Mulroney – oh, I don't see as many people nodding and smiling. Nevertheless, they created the free trade agreement between Canada and the United States, an appalling loss of sovereignty for our country. The Conservatives here look on that as a great accomplishment, sweeping away trade barriers and all of those great things that they believe in. Of course, then it was extended to Mexico and became the North American free trade agreement.

I think that there's a bunch of wannabes here, Conservatives that look up to Ronald Reagan. Maybe they're a little embarrassed about Brian Mulroney. Even so . . .

An Hon. Member: George W. Bush.

Mr. Mason: George W. Bush? Maybe. I don't know.

They want to emulate them. They want to have their own free trade agreement. Even though it doesn't make very much difference, they as good Conservatives want to do that because that's the kind of thing that good Conservatives do. They pass these laws that are extraterritorial, that supercede the powers of Legislatures and Congresses, and they open up the world for their idea of economic progress.

I just think that, on balance, Mr. Chairman, we ought to pass this amendment. If we're going to pass this bill and we're going to continue down the road of TILMA, then I think this amendment makes a great deal of sense. I know that TILMA is very important to the government, and they like to point to it as an accomplishment, but TILMA is going to go up and down. We're going to add Saskatchewan because a conservative party was elected in Saskatchewan, so now they want to join in. But at the next election coming up very soon in British Columbia, there's a very good chance that the NDP may be elected at the expense of the Liberal government, which is really a conservative government. If that's the case, then TILMA's going to shrink again. It'll just be pushed a little bit to the east. It'll be Alberta and Saskatchewan. [interjection]

You know there's always the possibility that the Conservatives could come to power in Manitoba, although I don't think that's too likely given that Premier Doer is the most popular Premier in all of Canada and runs a very balanced and effective government. So that's not likely to happen. I can tell you one thing, Mr. Chairman. It's inevitable that the NDP will get back into power at some point in Saskatchewan, and then TILMA is going to shrink again.

You know, is it really worth it, you guys on the other side? Is it really worth it to push so hard and be so excited about this trade bill? It's just going to go up and down like a yo-yo. One province will be in for a while, and then they're going to be out again. In lots of ways I just think that it's a bit futile. Ultimately, the main effect that this has is to prohibit local purchasing requirements by local authorities: school boards or hospital boards or municipalities. I don't think that's in the best interests of the people because it means that small business gets run out of business by big business. That's why Conservatives like things like TILMA, and that's why New Democrats don't. It's as simple as that.

All I can say is that this agreement has no real future in Canada because it's just simply going to be opposed by New Democratic governments. One would hope that from time to time, if there was a progressive Liberal government, they would oppose it as well. So it's going to go swinging back and forth like a pendulum and not make much difference.

I would just urge my colleagues to support the amendment because I think it takes out some of the more irritating portions of the bill. Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Yes. Mr. Chairman, I'd move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report progress on Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 18. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Bill 22
Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2009

[Adjourned debate March 18: Mr. Hancock]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I've learned by the speed at which Bill 21 went through into third that I need to be jumping up a whole lot faster.

Comparing Bill 22 to 21 is somewhat difficult in that 21 is absolutely offensive. For years this government has gone over budget between $1 billion and $2 billion, but I wasn't fast enough on my feet, so I'll talk about the interim bill, Bill 22.

Bill 22 doesn't have nearly the negatives associated with it although, as numerous members have pointed out, had the government released its yearly budget in a timely manner, Bill 22 basically would have been unnecessary. But seeing as the government dragged its feet hoping for some type of global recessionary miracle that would shine its light on Alberta and magically the price of oil and gas would return to $147 a barrel and a gigajoule of gas would be back in the area of $14 – that didn't happen.

I have a degree of sympathy, actually, with regard to Bill 22 in that we have to have some kind of obvious carry-over while we anxiously anticipate the passing or at least the discussion of the budget. It's certainly far from a cakewalk passing.

I do appreciate the fact that as the government, forces external have had an effect on Alberta's economy, and I am aware that a small portion of the $10 billion is going to keep democracy working. In fact, it's paying our Legislative Assembly Office bills; it's paying our constituency office bills.

I'm sure a number of members in this House, particularly urban members, have gotten caught in a circumstance where even though the economy is going down and eventually real estate prices and lease agreements will probably follow suit, we basically, a large number of us, had to sign documents for lease agreements. I doubt very much that anyone in an urban setting found themselves in a situation where the landlord was saying: please stay, and I'll reduce your monthly lease. Likewise, the cost of supplies has to carry over from month to month. I understand the need for, as individuals have said before, keeping the lights on and the fans running, the photocopyers operating.

But I would like to think that given what control we do have within the province, we would get to the point where the interim financing would be less and less necessary, and part of the solution for reducing our dependency on temporary measures such as interim financing is having a more stable economic base.

We've been for far too many years dependent on oil and gas, whether we've moved from conventional to new types of opportunities within the oil sands or another form that is, well, in my mind, equally controversial, coal-bed methane. The reality is that we're still resource dependent. We haven't got past the point where finished products bring in more money than the raw product. Within the interim budget in that short period of time how many million dollars' worth of bitumen are being shipped elsewhere? When we come to our next interim budget, how many more barrels of bitumen will have been processed when new pipelines have been operated?

In order to get our interim budget correct or to eliminate our interim budgets, we need to be diversifying our economy. Within that $10 million I would have been very pleased to see, for example, residences, infrastructure for postsecondary campuses taking place. The minister of advanced education rightly pointed out that the University of Calgary is the recent lottery winner in terms of 600 new spaces, but as I pointed out, that only accounts for accommodating 7.4 per cent of University of Calgary students.

One of the circumstances that I would have liked to have seen flagged in the interim budget was the government's indication, at least, that they were going to work together with their federal counterparts and that maybe they had in the funding of the interim financing struck a committee, at least, that was going to work with the federal counterpart to either eliminate the parental portion of the tuition fee, that compromises students, or potentially increase the amount students could borrow without that amount being affected by their parents' combined incomes, which a number of students have no access to anyway as they've left the house. In the interim financing I would have liked to have seen, even if it was only a temporary commitment, some type of direction indicating that school infrastructure was going to be acknowledged as in bad need of repair.

I realize that the interim budget is just a carry-over, but whether it's the supplementary supply budget or whether it's the interim budget, I would have really appreciated having some kind of a hint as to the direction we'll be going on April 7. Words like, you know, "wait and see" or "we're monitoring the situation," unfortunately, do not give myself or a number of Albertans comfort. Within the interim budget there is no possible way that we could have eliminated the recessionary trends. We couldn't have magically by some stimulus package within this interim budget restored the opportunities for the 30,000 Albertans that have lost their jobs over the last two months, but within the interim budget we could have struck committees. We could have financed committees to look at how it is that we're going to get those jobs back for the 30,000 Albertans; how we're through diversifying our economy going to create greater stability; how potentially, while these 30,000 people are out of work, we could have set up retraining courses at our numerous colleges and institutes to redirect people in areas where they would have sustainable jobs.

A number of people, the first ones to lose their jobs, that aren't accounted for in the interim budget are the drillers. Some people have been fortunate enough to find some drilling possibilities in B.C. Others have found some possibilities in Saskatchewan. But in speaking with a driller this past weekend in Calgary, they're very concerned about the lack of ongoing direction and the whole fact that we can't approach it just within this interim budget.

We've got to realize that our conventional oil and gas supplies are limited. With luck, when we get into carbon sequestration, we may be able to pump out those last few barrels of conventional oil and gas, but we don't see within this interim budget, again, any kind of direction from this government as to how they're going to turn the possibility of sequestration into an economic driver. Within the interim budget – and, again, I realize it's limited – some type of flagging would have been nice with regard to reclamation. You know, we get frustrated, and we get after the government for monitoring and for: let's establish a committee. But at least when a committee is designated, there is some hope that that committee is going to provide recommendations.

I had an opportunity this past Friday in Calgary to talk to the new head of ISEEE, the Institute for Sustainable Energy, Environment and Economy, and he made some very interesting comments about new technology that the U of C is currently working on that could potentially store energy: solar energy, heat energy. He talked about the possibility with wind turbines, some type of turning that power into a compressed air circumstance and then using that compressed air, as they further develop the technology, to drive the turbines to produce the energy, the thought that we're potentially on the edge of being able to store renewable energy in the form of solar or wind or different types of cogeneration. For example, at that same meeting of the University of Calgary senate there was talk about the new heating plant and the cogeneration possibilities and the fact that there would be less emissions both in terms of CO₂ and in terms of noise and how that was going to save millions and millions of dollars. Even though it's an interim, I'm looking for any kind of glimmer of potential indication from this government that they're going to get behind innovation and technology funding as a way of diversifying our economy.

Also, in terms of university, we need to be looking at a well-rounded population. Yes, we need engineers. Yes, we need geologists. Yes, we need more doctors. Yes, we need more scientists. But it would be nice to see more emphasis, more stimulation provided to the arts and to the humanities and to social sciences.

You know, we're talking $10 million in a budget that will be reduced, I'm sure, on April 7. This flagging of dealing with approaching a different type of economic driver in this province would have provided a tremendous amount of, well, hope, for lack of a better word. People are getting more and more glum as we get further into this recession, and they're looking to this government to demonstrate some initiative.

The Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, but in accordance with Standing Order 64(5) at this time the chair is required to put the question to the House on every appropriation bill standing on the Order Paper for third reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a third time]

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair shall now call the committee to order.

Bill 18 Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009 (continued)

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. You can fool me once but not twice. I'm standing and ready to debate and support this particular amendment. As we have noted before, this amendment is trying to remove the notion that somehow regulation trumps legislation. It's trying to remove the tyranny of the majority. It's trying to deal with the philosophy that might is right.

It was an interesting historical glimpse back in time that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood provided with his references to the power takeover in Germany. He made it very clear that he was not suggesting, nor am I, that this government is using tactics of a storm trooper nature. But this is one more bill in a long list of bills where democratic rights are eroded.

All members of the opposition supported Lorne Gibson, the Alberta Chief Electoral Officer, who was eventually fired for pointing out this government's failure to enshrine democratic rights. Lorne Gibson first made I think it was 186 recommendations. Unfortunately, this government decided that not one of them was sufficiently worth pursuing. I think that by the time Lorne was finally tossed out, he had come up with about 250 recommendations. Now, of the key recommendations a very minimal recommendation was the notion of a fixed election – a fixed election date, that is. It's very important that I have my terminology correct.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffer has brought up numerous times in this House his concern about the government's failure to allow prosecution of 19 irregularities that occurred during the last election. For a government that talks about transparency and accountability, this is extremely disconcerting.

Now, I don't expect that any time soon under the Conservative government I'm going to have somebody kick in my front door. I don't expect that within the realm of this Conservative government we're going to have an equivalent of a Kristallnacht. I don't expect that because I have voted Liberal, I am going to have to wear a red L on my jacket. Those were the extremes that people were subjected to during the Second World War. It's fairly safe to say that I don't expect that first they'll eliminate the intellectuals, as other governments have done. I would be sort of in the middle of the list of that. I would not have been one of the first to go, and I freely admit that. But during the Second World War there was a theme that came out.

Mr. Denis: That wasn't 1929.

Mr. Chase: No. It was actually 1939, you know. Yes, we've moved from Tennessee, and we're now finding ourselves in 1939 in Germany. We've hopped on the TILMA, trade, investment, and labour mobility, time machine.

I don't know to what extent this Legislature has the ability in terms of translation. I know that there is a preference to provide the translation. But a theme that was very significant, a theme song, a rallying cry, which I will spare you the singing of, during the rise of totalitarianism in Germany was this. [Remarks in German] I apologize for not being able to provide you an instant translation. It talked about freedom. It talked about standing up for democratic rights. It talked about not allowing, even in your darkest hour, your rights to be violated.

Maybe it seems that TILMA, you know, is not the Alberta trade measures act, but we are taking away democratic principles. This amendment from my colleague for Lethbridge-East is pointing this out, that when we rely on regulation by an individual or a small group of individuals at the expense of the democratic right of discussion and debate in the Legislature, then we have taken away the rights of individuals to be heard.

I have talked before about omnipotence, omniscience, but my firm belief – and I do consider myself a religious individual – is that that type of power is very much extraterrestrial, and giving that kind of power to either an individual in the form of a cabinet minister or to the cabinet themselves is a surrender of the right of freedom of speech, the right to put forward an idea that may be contrary.

I'm hoping that in debating this amendment, we will receive some type of response from the government in terms of the justification

The Chair: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt you again. It's 5:55, so the committee will rise and report progress on Bill 18.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports progress on the following bill: Bill 18. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Having heard the report, does the Assembly concur?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

May I have a moment? We have very special guests of another hon. member here. I would like to call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay for the introduction.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, and thank you for the indulgence. This is a surprise visit. I would like to introduce to you and through you to members of this House two constituents from Calgary-Mackay who are related to me by blood. We have Miss Jadine Paw, who was born and raised in Calgary-Mackay and who is now attending the University of Calgary medical school, and Mr. Jason Paw, my son, who is currently living in Edmonton, working at the University hospital. Please stand and receive the warm welcome of the House.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As is customary on Wednesdays, a lot of good progress made. That having been said and looking at the hour, I would move that we call it 6 p.m. and adjourn until tomorrow at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:57 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon and welcome.

Let us pray. We confidently ask for strength and encouragement in our service to others. We ask for wisdom to guide us in making good laws and good decisions for the present and future of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

Statement by the Speaker

20th Anniversary of Members of the Legislative Assembly

The Speaker: Hon. members, someone once said that a week in political life might be like a lifetime. On March 20, 1989, two Members of the Alberta Legislative Assembly were elected for the first time and were subsequently re-elected in 1993, 1997, 2001, 2004, and 2008. They have survived six elections and have successfully completed 20 years of lifetimes in this Assembly working on behalf of their constituents and the people of Alberta.

Seven hundred and ninety-one men and women have been elected to serve in Alberta. Twenty were elected to serve six terms, three of whom are currently in this Assembly today. The hon. Member for Little Bow has been elected six times and will reach 20 years of service but not until 2012.

Today we recognize 20 years of service for the MLA for Lesser Slave Lake and the MLA for Rocky Mountain House. I would ask that both please approach the podium, and I would ask that the Premier approach as well.

The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake has averaged, believe it or not, a phenomenal 61.15 per cent popular support in her six elections, an incredible number. The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House has averaged 59.9 per cent electoral support over six elections and is one of several MLAs in the history of Alberta to have received an increasing number of votes in four successive elections. Both have also served very, very well on Executive Council, and both represent incredibly large and diverse constituencies.

The area of Prince Edward Island is 5,640 square kilometres. The riding of Lesser Slave Lake is 70,790 square kilometres, 12.5 times as large. The riding of Rocky Mountain House is 23,188 square kilometres, four times the size of Prince Edward Island. Prince Edward Island has 27 MLAs. Hon. members, just one other interesting point about this: both of these members have averaged 80,000-plus kilometres per year in travel for the last 20 years. If the circumference of the earth is just above 41,000 kilometres, that means that each year for the last 20 years both of them have gone around the world twice. That's 40 times around the world. If you'd been able to average 100 kilometres per hour in your car, which is impossible, that meant that they've spent at least 800 hours per year in their vehicles coming back and forth to Edmonton and then finding their constituents because both represent extremely diverse, sparsely settled constituencies, and then when they find them, they have to work. That's a minimum of 800-plus hours. If they've each worked 50 hours per week, that's 16 weeks. That's four months per year just to and fro, Edmonton to their constituencies and within their constituencies. That is an enormous amount of time that's been devoted in that period.

We have designed a very special 20-year Mace pin to commemorate their 20th anniversary, and I would ask the leader of the government caucus, their leader, the Premier, to present the special pin to these two long-serving caucus members. Premier, you have a choice: you may pin it or present it. It's entirely up to you.

Please join me in thanking these two outstanding Members of the Legislative Assembly. [Standing ovation]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On your behalf I'd like to introduce to you and through you 25 grades 5/6 students from the Covenant Canadian Reformed school, which is located in Neerlandia, in your constituency. They are accompanied this afternoon by their teachers and parent helpers. They are seated in the public and members' galleries this afternoon. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me today to rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 12 visitors from Glenwood, Alberta, eight of whom are students of the grade 9 class in that school. They are accompanied by two teachers and two leaders. These students have travelled on a bus that took six hours plus to get here. They've worked really hard since grade 6 to raise money to make this trip, and they're here to have a good time and learn about the Legislature. They're accompanied today by their principal, Mr. Kelly Thomas, and a teacher, Mrs. Crystal Hegedus, and their spouses, Mrs. Kathy Thomas and Mr. Michael Hegedus. I would invite them to rise, please, and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to this Assembly a group of 87 students that are visiting today from the Strathcona Christian Academy in my constituency. They're here to learn more about our political system and earlier participated in a mock Legislature. They are accompanied by their teachers Alan Foster, Jaime Peters, and Allison Amos, and parent helpers Mr. Neufeld, Mrs. Haas, Mrs. Gill, Mr. Ilkiw, Mr. Koop, Mrs. Williams, Mr. Whiston, Mrs. Kirchner, and Mrs. Stein. They're seated in both galleries, I assume, because there are so many of them, and I would ask if they would all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me enormous pleasure to rise and introduce six very special guests who are seated in your gallery. They are current and/or former members of the now world-famous Ukrainian Shumka Dancers. Tonight they formally begin their 50th anniversary celebration. I see that they have generously provided a copy of their souvenir program on your desks there, so you're getting a sneak peek at what's going to be handed out tonight.

I'll ask each guest to please rise and remain standing as I call out their names: the current president and an active dancing member, Marco Eugenio; another executive committee member and an active dancing member, Katrina Baziuk; two former dancers who were members of the original Ukrainian Shumka Dancers group in 1959 – and I had the pleasure of dancing with them, Mr. Speaker, in 1963 – Leo and Mary Zalucky; another member of the original group, who was Shumka's first president and my first Ukrainian dance teacher, Orest Yusypchuk; and, finally, a man who actually used to work in this building, but now he is the man who is acknowledged as the founder, the founding artistic director, the man who brought it all together, co-ordinated it, and got it all started in 1959 and was also another of my Ukrainian dance teachers, and we're very proud of him, Mr. Chester Kuc.

Please welcome these wonderful individuals from Shumka. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it's my pleasure and my privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some honoured guests who participated in our great announcement earlier today of more funding for affordable supportive living spaces in Alberta. I'd like to ask that my guests rise as I introduce them. Mr. John Pray is the president of Shepherd's Care Foundation in Edmonton, a facility providing Christian care for low-to moderate-income seniors within an aging-in-place environment; Mr. Bill Bartel, vice-chair of Shepherd's Care Foundation; Ms Sharon Read, the president and CEO of Excel Society of Edmonton, a not-for-profit organization that provides both support and advocacy for people with mental, physical, and developmental disabilities in Edmonton and Calgary; and Mrs. Jeannette Vatter, the chair of the Brazeau Seniors Foundation in Drayton Valley, providing supportive housing options that maintain the well-being of seniors in the community. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend each of my guests today and all those they represent in their tireless commitment to affordable supportive living options for Albertans.

As well, from my department I would like to introduce Mr. Dave Arseneault, assistant deputy minister of community support programs and strategic planning division, and Ms Marjory Sutherland, executive director of the supportive living and long-term care branch. Mr. Speaker, as you can see, they're in the members' gallery.

I'd ask that they receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure today for me to rise and introduce two friends and constituents from the Linden community, Rod and Judy Wiebe. I first met Rod many, many years ago when I was a municipal councillor and Rod was a volunteer with the Kneehill Ambulance Service, where he spent over 20 years volunteering as an ambulance operator for his community. It's a pleasure for me to have them here today. They are seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Merci, M. le Président. Aujourd'hui, en cette occasion des Rendez-vous de la Francophonie, j'ai le plaisir et le privilège de présenter en votre nom, à vous et à l'Assemblée, quelques jeunes leaders de la communauté francophone de l'Alberta. Ils sont assis dans la galerie des députés. Les jeunes francophones se mobilisent d'adresser des enjeux clés comme le leadership et la participation citoyenne. Je demande à nos invités de se lever pendant que je les présente: Mme Sophie Nolette, présidente de la Francophonie jeunesse de l'Alberta; M. Rhéal Poirier, directeur général; M. Stéphane Doucette-Préville, participant des dialogues jeunesse albertaine avec le Ministre de l'Emploi et de l'Immigration; et Mme Cindy Garneau, directrice générale de la Fédération du sport francophone de l'Alberta. Je vous invite à vous joindre à moi pour leur souhaiter une bienvenue chaleureuse.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a very special guest. Ms Nancy Beasley Hosker is manager of communications, humanitarian issues, and volunteer resources for the Canadian Red Cross in central and northern Alberta. A former Legislature reporter with the Edmonton Sun, Nancy started at the Canadian Red Cross as a volunteer just after the tsunami in southeast Asia in 2004. Like so many people who are drawn to the Red Cross because of its work internationally, she discovered that the organization was very busy right here in Alberta communities doing humanitarian work of great importance. Nancy is seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask her to now stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly two members of my constituency, Céleste and John Zurbrigg. They will be retiring soon after a combined total of 68 years of public service to the government of Alberta and to the people of Alberta in the area of information technology support. Their careers have spanned from the era of mainframe computers that filled a room to the latest technological advances in digital communication.

The Zurbriggs feel fortunate to have worked with so many skilled Albertans. They are grateful for the lasting friendships they have forged, especially because it was through their employment with this province that they met and eventually married. They along with the government of Alberta strongly encourage young Albertans to pursue careers in technology-based fields. Céleste and John are seated in the members' gallery above, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of my friends in the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am pleased to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly today a family from the Picture Butte area, the Oudshoorn family. John and Deborah are here today with their children. It's the first time that they've been in the building. I don't think they could have picked a nicer day to come here to Edmonton to see some of the neat things that do happen. I would ask that the Oudshoorn family, Kelsey, Danielle, Megan, and Caleb, along with their mom and dad, John and Deborah, rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 13 constituents of mine who are here today to discuss seniors' issues and particularly the pharmaceutical plan for seniors. I can't see up there, but I hope they're in the public gallery. I'd ask them to rise when I call their names: Dena Greanya, lodge manager; Deanna Teskey, Lynda and Ron Jonson, Brent Simmonds, Bill Carby, Rose Dutkiwich, Roger and Betty Schneider, Vernon and Elaine Koch, and Eunice Semeniuk from Hinton; and from Jasper Janet Barker. I'd ask everybody to rise and receive the warm welcome.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two members of my constituency although I'm not sure they're here. If they are, I'd like to read into the record Grant and Patti Geldart from Devon. Grant is a councillor for the town of Devon. If they're here, I would ask that they rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've invited some guests to join us here today to mark World Water Day. My guests are sitting in the public gallery. Would you rise as I call your name. Joining us from the Council of Canadians we have Kevin Force and Keely Kidner. Lanna Perrin is the communications director of the Sierra Club Canada. Dietlind Bork is a fieldworker for Amnesty International. Mike Mercredi and Peter Cyprien are residents of Fort Chipewyan. Joel French is here from Friends of the Lubicon, and from the University of Alberta Greenpeace chapter Logan McIntosh and Mark Mielke. Would you please join me in welcoming my guests to the Assembly.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Achievement Bonuses

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Twenty three thousand public civil servants, or 80 per cent of the entire civil service, are not eligible for the $40 million pool of achievement bonus money. It's simply unfair and insulting to Albertans in a time of recession and thousands of job losses that this government gives tens of thousands of dollars to top senior management, who already get a quarter of a million dollar salary or more, a generous pension, and a free car. To the Premier: why won't the Premier cancel this $40 million in bonuses scheduled for this fiscal year now?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I explained yesterday, the $40 million bonus amount is shared amongst 6,100 people. I can tell you that they do not all have cars provided by the government. The median is about $5,300. I believe what the member is referring to is the deputy ministers. We have 23 deputy ministers in government that receive part of the bonus structure. This is to bonus those that are outside of the union agreement. Union agreement is one separate entity, and these are people that are out of scope.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are both reporting surpluses this year despite the recession, yet here in Alberta this government has spent Alberta right back into another deficit. Why did the Premier and cabinet give bonuses of tens of thousands of dollars to senior government officials to "reward achievement"? What was the achievement, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would hope that Manitoba does balance its budget. It receives about $2 billion annually from the contribution of Alberta to Ottawa, the net contribution. Secondly, all of the tax regimes of both provinces that were quoted by the leader have sales taxes. They also have a much higher tax load, considerably higher, than the province of Alberta. They've got a huge amount of accumulated debt. By the way, they also have Crown corporations that have a lot of debt that doesn't appear on their balance sheet either.

Dr. Swann: If these bonuses were actually based on achievement instead of being standardized rewards for loyal senior officials, why is the Premier so quick to cancel them?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I said a few weeks ago that there will be belt-tightening. As for our employees that work for the government that are presently covered by a union contract, we said that we're not going to go and arbitrarily reduce whatever is in the contract in terms of their salary settlements. We will sit down and negotiate if this recession continues this year into next year. On the other hand, we have a group of people that are out of scope that have said: look, things are going to tighten up next year; we will not receive the achievement bonuses. I think that's very laudable of the 6,100 employees.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year the Deputy Minister of Executive Council received a total pay package of $460,000, including a generous bonus. The Deputy Minister of Executive Council determines the size of the bonus pool for the government, and yesterday the Premier said that the pool will be $40 million, to be paid out in June, before summer vacations. To the Premier: how much of an achievement bonus did cabinet allocate the Deputy Minister of Executive Council last year?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, all of the bonuses are a matter of record. What had happened back in 1999: there was quite a disparity between senior officials in government and management and some of the other provinces. The previous president of the Executive Council had asked a committee, a small committee – I believe it was chaired by Mr. Eric Newell, and it had Mr. Charlie Fischer on it, and I can't remember the third party member – to review public-sector management salaries, compare them to the private sector, and try to find some balance, and that's what we did.

Dr. Swann: Again to the Premier: did the cabinet grade his performance as a quality performance, a superior performance, or an outstanding performance, the last of which would qualify the deputy minister for $86,000?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, given what this government has accomplished over the last couple of years – we have moved more off the back burner; we've dealt with the teacher pension issue; we've dealt with a lot of the issues in Fort McMurray; we've involved cabinet and caucus in so many new policy directions – I think it was a tremendous achievement on behalf of government, and it's also reflected in the deputy ministers and other managers that help deliver the decisions that we make in this Assembly.

Dr. Swann: Again to the Premier: does the Premier consider it a conflict of interest for the deputy minister who is setting the $40 million bonus pool on behalf of the cabinet to also be eligible for the bonus?

Mr. Stelmach: No.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The independence and impartiality of senior government officials and the quasi-judicial boards in Alberta is paramount in an open and democratic society, yet senior government officials and members of these quasi-judicial boards are eligible for significant bonuses which, according to the Premier's statements yesterday, are all signed off by cabinet. To the Premier: how can senior members of the civil service be independent and impartial if they are eligible for significant bonuses that are signed off by the cabinet?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what they're talking about on independence. There's a pool that was established through debate.

Mr. MacDonald: You obviously don't know.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, if you know, then why are you interrupting my answer? Sorry, but that's the kind of behaviour we have in the House.

During budget deliberations a pool is set aside. There is a process for deciding how bonuses are awarded, again, achievement meaning that we've got to balance the budget. You also have to deliver on the mandates that the Premier, the President of Executive Council, dictates to every ministry. At the end of the day there are also issues that may come up in terms of the performance of the deputies and other managers. That's how the bonuses are decided.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: how can the Labour Relations Board be independent and impartial if they are eligible for bonuses of up to 15 per cent on a top salary of over $200,000 per year if the cabinet is calling the shots on how much of a bonus they get on an annual basis?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the pool is set by the Assembly through budget deliberations, not by cabinet. They'll have an opportunity to debate the issue as the budget is delivered April 7.

Mr. MacDonald: That pool has never been debated in this Legislative Assembly, and the Premier knows it.

Again, how can the Appeals Commission for the Workers' Compensation Board be independent and impartial if they, too, are eligible for bonuses of up to 15 per cent of their annual salary when that bonus is being set by your cabinet? How is that independent from the government, and how is that impartial?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, the pool is established by the Assembly, and there's a process that we establish in terms of how the bonuses are awarded. It's a system that has worked very well. As I said before, all management, those that were eligible for bonuses, voluntarily said: look, I know we're heading into a very difficult economic year. They've collectively come and said: we will not be accepting any bonuses; we'll suspend that and try to find as many dollars as we can to balance the needs of Albertans in the next budget.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. This weekend the Energy minister fabulously declared that the nuclear renaissance is here. Well, the minister has shown himself to be quite the Renaissance man, indeed. He appears to be very enlightened, such that he knows something that no one else does. The question is to the minister. Will the minister please tell the House how we can safely dispose of radioactive nuclear waste when even Nobel Prize winners can't figure it out?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, I certainly did indicate that there is a nuclear renaissance, and it is global. I didn't talk about a renaissance in Alberta, but I did say that there is a nuclear renaissance, and it's global. It's here; whether we like it or whether we don't is not the issue. There are a number of jurisdictions around the world that are currently increasing their capacity for nuclear energy. Relative to the treatment of spent fuel, recycling of spent fuel is a technology that's well applied in certain places in the world and certainly is way beyond, obviously, what the member opposite understands.

The Speaker: I need to know how this applies to Alberta.
The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My next question will illustrate that.

Stockpiling nuclear waste in the hope that future generations will clean up the mess is not the action of a Renaissance man; indeed, it's right out of the Dark Ages. It is irresponsible and short-sighted. This minister is refusing to release a report that will open up the public debate on this issue. My question is to the minister. Will the minister act like a real Renaissance man and enlighten Albertans with his nuclear report today, before his spin doctors nuke it out of all proportion?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, the preamble, of course, is completely irrelevant to the situation in Alberta. There is no nuclear waste in Alberta, not that I'm aware of, in any event. Relative to what we're doing, I have said on a number of occasions and certainly publicly that we have a task force that has delivered us factual information relative to the proposed application of nuclear generation as it may or may not apply to Alberta. We're continuing with that work.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's obvious that this Renaissance man is living in the Dark Ages. Nuclear power is an idea whose half-life has long since expired. Two months ago the Pembina Institute released a report that shows that Alberta can meet its energy needs without nuclear power, but this minister shows no signs of having read it. To the minister: when will you step out of the Dark Ages and admit that nuclear power is too expensive, too dangerous, and too short-sighted to meet Alberta's energy needs?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, you know, a lot of kind of innuendo there that would indicate that somehow or another I have said that nuclear energy is absolutely necessary for the province of Alberta. I've never made any such statement at any point in time. The fact of the matter – it's true – is that we could burn coal in Alberta for the next 200 years and produce all the electrical generation we require. Is that what the member opposite would have us do?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Natural Gas Rebates

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's close to the end of the March and, we sincerely hope, near the end of a very cold winter. Traditionally the end of March also means the end of natural gas rebates. Of course, this year that is notable because the program is scheduled to expire this year. I know many of my constituents are wondering if the program is going to be renewed. My first question is to the Minister of Energy. Can he tell the Assembly if the natural gas rebate program will be renewed?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, as the member is certainly aware, there hasn't been a rebate in two months running because natural gas prices have been so low. That's good for consumers; however, it's tough on the province's bottom line. Given our commitment to encouraging energy efficiency and conservation, we have decided that the natural gas rebate program won't be renewed for the upcoming fiscal year. In the future we will take a look at the program or an alternate form of the program if natural gas prices significantly recover.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Can the minister advise what programs are available to assist those seniors and people with disabilities who may have difficulties paying their heating bills next winter?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I recognize that seniors and persons with disabilities, especially those with low incomes, may be affected by high energy prices. While our programs don't specifically address utility costs, they provide financial assistance for low-income seniors and persons with disabilities who are in need. These programs are among the best in the country. For seniors this includes a monthly cash benefit through the Alberta seniors' benefit program, and for persons with disability it includes financial and health-related assistance through the AISH program.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question goes back to the Minister of Energy. Has the minister considered the impact that not renewing the natural gas rebate program will have on Alberta's agricultural consumers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The province certainly does recognize the impact the change will have on agricultural consumers such as greenhouses, irrigation, and grain drying. These consumers account for something less than 10 per cent of the total rebates that were provided since 2003. We want to ensure that agricultural consumers are aware that the program will not be renewed so that they have time to make appropriate decisions based on their consumption. Agricultural consumers who can select their six-month rebate outside of the winter heating season will have until June 30 to make application for their '08-09 filings.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Black's Law Dictionary explains that quasi-judicial actions are valid if there's no abuse of discretion and that they often determine the fundamental rights of citizens. Alberta's quasi-judicial boards work for Albertans, but this independence from government influence is compromised by our bonus schemes. Can the Minister of SRD tell us whether or not the appointees of the Surface Rights Board, the Natural Resources Conservation Board, or the Land Compensation Board are beneficiaries of bonus packages?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I don't know the answer to that question, so I'll have to check and get back.

Mr. Hehr: Well, they are eligible for bonuses.

Given that the chair of the NRCB received $28,000 in other cash benefits in 2008, which is a bonus, can the minister explain how the chair can be impartial in his decisions when his bonus is tied directly to the minister's approval?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I think we've heard and seen this movie before, where they impugn the integrity of people working on these arm's-length commissions with absolutely no evidence whatsoever to suggest it. It's, frankly, very irresponsible for a party that said they want to act more responsibly and have a higher tone of debate in this House to make allegations based on purely circumstantial evidence.

Mr. Hehr: There are no allegations. We're questioning a bonus structure. Similar bonus structures are in place for other boards under the minister's department. Can the minister explain how the Surface Rights Board can be objective and fair to landowners when they are eligible for achievement bonuses?

Dr. Morton: Can the hon. member opposite give one single example of a decision where they weren't objective and fair? The answer is no. He can't.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Affordable Supportive Living Initiative

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has an aging population, one that is going to require varied and specialized services and accommodations to meet the changing needs of seniors. I know that today's announcement of capital funding is related to Alberta's aging demographic. My first question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Can you please advise the House how this funding will address the need for more affordable supportive living units in Alberta?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, improving quality, supply, and choice in the continuing care system is a top priority for this government. Proof of this is the over $119 million in grant funding announced today through the affordable supportive living initiative and the lodge modernization and improvement program. In total this funding will help to build and update more than 3,000 supportive living and lodge units, with 1,153 units through ASLI and 1,992 units through the lodge modernization program.

Mr. Doerksen: My second question is for the same minister. That's significant funding, but how does this funding, as large as it is, even make a dent in the demand for this type of housing in Alberta?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, just talk to any person who will move into one of these new, modernized units and ask if their unit will make a difference in their life. The numbers speak for themselves. With this year's funding Alberta has invested $365 million to develop and update almost 8,000 supportive living and lodge units.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. This is significant funding. Clearly, my constituents and Albertans across the province realize that the need is immediate with regard to this capacity. In reality how soon can they begin construction, and what are some anticipated completion dates for Albertans to move into this new capacity?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, we've got a plan of action that is already under way. With the funding announced today, construction of the projects is expected to begin within nine months. Grant recipients are also expected to complete their projects within two years of receiving the initial payment.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Water Transfers

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. March 22 is World Water Day, and this year's theme is transboundary freshwater management, focusing on water that crosses over the border to our neighbours in other provinces and territories. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. Since the Water Act does not make it clear that human needs must be the priority in all water allocations, will the government look at amending the act to make it explicit that the needs of people and communities should always come first?

2:10

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order in the gallery! You're not part of these proceedings.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the issue that the member brings forward is very much part of the discussion that we are about to engage Albertans in with respect to water allocation. I would suggest that if it were so simple to simply say that human needs come first, it could have been done by now. But the fact is: how do you define what are human needs? How do you determine whether human needs include the water that's used for agricultural purposes to feed humans or whether human needs include the water that's used for industrial purposes to employ humans and pay the bills so that humans can exist? I would suggest to the member that that's a very simplistic way of looking at it.

Ms Blakeman: I disagree.

To the same minister. The system of – wait for it – first in time, first in right is an archaic throwback and bad management practice. When is this government going to bring their 19th century system into the 21st century and base water allocations on a system of priority needs, not just who got there first?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think I answered that question last week when the member asked me about our water allocation process. I indicated to her that we are in the midst, as we speak, of exploring a number of different alternatives, that everything is on the table, and that we will be bringing forward a draft policy for Albertans to comment on later this summer or early in the fall.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. To the same minister. This year's World Water Day is highlighting transboundary water management, but in the oil sands we've had two years of untreated human waste dumped into the river, tailings ponds leaking into groundwater, and oil and grease spills. Given all of this what is the minister doing to ensure that we live up to our transboundary commitments to preserve water quality as it moves across the border?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, standards that are established nationally and in some cases internationally are something that we are involved in developing and ensuring that we adhere to those standards. I can assure the hon. member that Alberta lives up to its commitments that we have both interprovincially and internationally.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Helping seniors, including those that live in rural areas, to stay in their communities is part of the government's continuing care strategy. I appreciate that the government has announced the projects that will be receiving more than $119 million in total to ensure that Albertans have increased quality, supply, and choice in the continuing care system. My questions are all to the minister of seniors. You've addressed a lot of the need for affordable living units in urban areas, but what about us rurals?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, our plans include seniors and Albertans with disabilities who live in rural areas. In today's announcement there is significant funding for rural facilities. Under the affordable supportive living initiative, known as ASLI, over $35 million is going to rural areas. More than $35 million is also going to rural areas from the lodge modernization and improvement program.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, this is great news. There's a real need in rural Alberta for affordable supportive living. Will this funding actually translate into a meaningful amount of spaces in rural Alberta?

Mrs. Jablonski: Yes. Mr. Speaker, this funding will make a real difference in areas outside of our big cities and towns. In rural communities 489 new and upgraded spaces are being funded through ASLI, and there is funding for 1,284 spaces under the lodge modernization program. For example, in the member's own constituency the Lac Ste. Anne Foundation will receive more than $4.5 million in lodge modernization and improvement funding for 60 units at the Pleasant View Lodge in Mayerthorpe.

Mr. VanderBurg: Wow. All I can say, Mr. Speaker, is wow. That's a great announcement. You know, I guess I'll ask the minister one final question. What was the criteria used by her department when deciding which projects would be funded? Was it just the MLA?

Mrs. Jablonski: No, Mr. Speaker, the MLA was not part of the criteria that we chose to select projects with. The funding was approved on a project-specific basis. Projects were selected based on an assessment of how the proposal complied with the program criteria. This way we ensured that funding went to the project proposals that addressed the greatest needs, and by so doing, we're getting a big bang for our buck in assisting thousands of Alberta seniors and persons with disabilities.

Centralized Cytology Lab Service

Ms Pastoor: Mr. Speaker, there is a concern in Lethbridge today. In fact, almost as we speak, there is a rally being held. People are concerned about the possibility of the community losing the cytology lab at the Lethbridge regional hospital, one more result of the minister's rushed restructuring of Alberta's health care system. To the minister of health my question is: in this time of high job losses how many staff who currently work in the Lethbridge lab or, in fact, all of those around the province are at risk for loss of employment?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, you know, this member hears a rumour somewhere, and then I'm supposed to confirm the rumour, and then I'm supposed to say how many employees are potentially affected by this rumour if it ever became true. Well, I don't know about any such rumour. I don't know about any such closing of any labs. So I would suggest the answer is zero.

Ms Pastoor: Okay. Well, hypothetically – and I know that's not allowed, but we do know that this conversation is on the table – can the minister ensure that these centralized cytology lab services will not further privatize our health care system, and are they looking outside of Canada for these services under the RFPs that are going out?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I can answer similarly to how I just did, Mr. Speaker. She started off by saying that it was hypothetical, so I would suggest that we don't answer hypothetical questions in this Assembly.

Ms Pastoor: However, I said I couldn't do that, but we know that the discussion is on the table. That was the part you missed.

We know those RFPs are out there, so clearly something is happening. How can this minister ensure that there will not be an increased risk of errors in the testing because of the high volumes that will be going into centralized labs?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, this member either is continuing to ask hypothetical questions or she knows something that I don't know, because I have no knowledge of centralized labs, so I can't answer the question.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Emergency Wait Times

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In November sick people had to wait an average of 8.1 hours at the U of A emergency room before they got treatment. Those who needed to be admitted had to wait another 14.5 hours. The story is even worse at the Royal Alex, Grey Nuns, and the Misericordia, where the waits were almost 30 hours. To the minister of health: when will you admit that a day is far too long for a patient to spend in a waiting room or on a stretcher?

Mr. Liepert: This member hasn't been paying attention because I've been saying ever since I took this portfolio, Mr. Speaker, that we have an outstanding health care system once you get into it. We have an access problem, and we're working at that.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, two weeks ago Dr. Matthew Cooke, credited with solving the ER crisis in the U.K., told Alberta's ER docs that the wait times have been reduced to four hours in the U.K. He also said that there was only one road to that result: building long-term care beds. He described political commitment that involved weekly meetings with the Prime Minister that oversaw the creation of 5,000 new long-term care beds. To the minister: why do you refuse to acknowledge the problem and dedicate a similar level of political skill and commitment to solving the crisis?

Mr. Liepert: Well, in her preambles to questions this member rarely gets the facts correct, so I'm not going to assume that what she says is correct in her preamble. What I have said on many occasions, Mr. Speaker, is that there are a number of ways that we need to correct our access problem. One of them is more long-term care facilities. Another way is to provide health care to our seniors in a number of areas. Finally, the third one is to move our EMS, which we're doing in a couple of weeks, to the health care system so we don't have people in emergency waiting so long.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have 16 people that are here with us today to say that replacing long-term care with assisted living doesn't work. To the same minister: what explanation do you have for these people, who are telling us that your decision to replace long-term care beds with assisted living in Hinton has created nothing but severe hardship for their parents and their families?

2:20

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is incorrect. There are so many facilities around this province that I could send her on a little mission in the break that we've got coming up for the next two weeks. We could identify for her a whole number of facilities, everywhere from Pincher Creek in the south to the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster's constituency in the east. So I'll sit down after question period with the member. We'll draw out a map where she can spend the next two weeks travelling the province to see that it does work.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Royalty Revenues

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this week on the radio a popular talk-show host proclaimed that this government keeps changing the royalty framework; four times, he said. Many of my constituents work in the oil and gas industry and are looking for some clarification. My first question is to the Minister of Energy. Is this government continually changing the royalty framework, and was the framework changed with the most recent announcements?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we've made it very clear that the announcement that we made earlier this month is Alberta's response to global economic conditions that are outside of our control. What we've tried to do is use the tools that we have available and introduce measures to encourage new investment by the oil and gas sector that will create jobs for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On the same radio show the host echoed a criticism by some industry players. They blame the royalty regime for investment leaving the province. My question is to the same minister. Is the new royalty framework responsible for the current slowdown in Alberta's oil patch?

Mr. Knight: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. This downturn in drilling activity is not isolated to Alberta. The Petroleum Services Association of Canada has forecast a 21 per cent decrease in drilling across Canada in 2009. There are many reasons for this, chief among them a very depressed price for oil and natural gas and a very tight credit market. Alberta is responding to these very unusual circumstances with timely, targeted, and temporary stimulus.

Mr. Johnson: On that point, Mr. Speaker, I have concerned constituents who point out that in Saskatchewan and British Columbia, where those provinces have to contend with the same price of oil and gas that we do, they claim there's no shortage of investment or drilling there. My last question is to the same minister. Can he clarify for my constituents: is it fair to say that these other provinces are active and we are not because of our royalty framework?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, no. You have to remember that there was increased drilling activity in Saskatchewan and B.C. long before there were any changes to Alberta's royalty regime. Both of these have some nice resource plays that are emerging there, and people are lining up to get in the game. Cumulatively speaking, these provinces still don't have the same level of drilling activity or energy activity that we have in the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The generous bonuses that cabinet gives to deputy ministers are not their only perks. Cabinet also gives their senior officials a car at taxpayers' expense. The government has failed to require these cars to be environmentally friendly. To the Minister of Transportation: does the minister think it's good Transportation policy to be subsidizing wasteful, polluting vehicles at taxpayers' expense?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I have to first say that in the Department of Transportation we have a number of professionals that all have degrees to do with engineering. I also have to say that we've just gone through some of the toughest times to draw professional people in because there are all kinds of bonuses out there in private enterprise. We make sure that we have staff that can look after the jobs for Albertans; therefore, sometimes you have to have bonuses for that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What's that got to do with the cars, by the way?

To the Minister of Service Alberta: given that the government scrapped senior officials' bonuses for next year, will the minister be scrapping the car allowances as well?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With regard to the car allowance for ministers, that's something that is certainly up for discussion. Many individuals do not take advantage of that. Many of them use their own vehicles. It's always a balance and what meets the individual member's requirements as a minister.

Mr. Kang: To the minister again: is this going to be a permanent change or just for the next year?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, whether on purpose or not, dodging around the fact that corporate human resources is responsible for the bonus and its application – I'm just surprised that they wouldn't know that.

The other thing that they seem to want to infer is that somehow this bonus program is a new thing. Well, I've got news for them and Albertans. It's been on the website for years. It describes all of the categories, all of the percentages, and even the criteria we use to reward bonuses to our civil servants that are working on our behalf. It's really sad that they have taken a bad management bonus scheme in the States and tried somehow to connect that with a good management tool we use as a government.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Bargaining Unit for Paramedics

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are all well aware that Alberta's nine regional health authorities will be consolidated to become Alberta Health Services on April 1. Yesterday the province confirmed it will maintain the existing four health care bargaining units. My question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Given the number of e-mails I have received from my paramedics and at least one union calling for the creation of a fifth bargaining unit, how was it determined that four is the magic number?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this year we initiated some consultation, and we requested some written submissions and met with a number of groups in person. After a lot of discussion and careful review a decision was made to integrate EMS services into one of the four existing health care bargaining units.

I know this is not the decision that some were advocating for, but ultimately we made this decision because it better aligns with government direction to bring EMS services into the health care system and because we've seen it work successfully in two other health regions.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question to the same minister: how do you respond to claims from some that say their views were not considered?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, all positions both for and against were well thought out and conveyed. I really appreciated the professionalism as unions advocated for their members and for keeping the discussion around the key issues in this decision. To be clear, some unions like the direction we're heading and some don't. Regardless, I thank all of them for their work that helped us reach this particular decision. Rest assured, Alberta paramedics are world class, and I know all of my colleagues and all Albertans hold them in very high regard.

Mrs. McQueen: Finally, to the same minister: how will these changes affect Albertans who might require the assistance of paramedics?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The bottom line is that Albertans won't notice any differences at all. What we're talking about today is bargaining, union representation, and a lot of behind-the-scenes kind of work. When it comes to front-line services and how Albertans can expect to be treated, I'm very confident that ambulance workers will remain the skilled, professional people that they are. If Albertans call 911, an ambulance will come, and a paramedic will help them, just as they always have in the past.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Bitumen Exports

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. On Monday the Premier told the Assembly that having 70 per cent of bitumen upgraded in Alberta was still the government's goal, but with upgrader construction stalled in Alberta but booming in the U.S., this goal just doesn't seem very realistic. My question is to the Minister of Energy. Can the minister explain how this government hopes to have 70 per cent of upgrading done in Alberta by the year 2015?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, the timeline, of course, is something that, you know, may require some adjustment, and I don't know that it's ever been stated that this would be done by 2015. But what I will say is that certainly as we look forward here – and it's not going to take all that long, I don't believe – we're going to see some changes in the philosophy of some of the major players relative to things like upgrading in the province of Alberta. I think that recently in some of the news media there's been indication that some of the major players that are here now are beginning to take another look at their investments in Alberta.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. The Premier on Monday did indicate 2015, and speed is crucial with this issue, or we're going to lose this opportunity to the U.S. forever. The whole upgrading industry is being built to shift its centre of gravity away from Alberta towards the United States. To the Minister of Energy. To reach the government's target, a further 800,000 barrels a day of upgrading capacity needs to be built in Alberta in the next six years. It's a breakneck pace of construction. How is it going to happen?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, indeed, I think that the capacity for upgrading in the province of Alberta and the numbers that the hon. member is using may very well be on a course that is going to take longer to achieve, perhaps, than some of the estimates that we've given earlier. However, I do maintain that there is the opportunity here for Albertans to maximize the value, and upgrading is going to certainly be one of the options as we move forward.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. The minister mentions a change in philosophy. Well, credible senior people in the upgrading industry have quietly told me that the government should use its regulatory muscle to require companies that extract bitumen from Alberta to upgrade it in Alberta. This could be made a condition of approval. To the Minister of Energy: given the surging unemployment in Alberta, will the government consider requiring local upgrading?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, you know, on the situation that we do have here, relative to what we're doing on the regulatory side of this issue, of course, part of the answer to that is in the bitumen royalty in kind that this government has established, and it will move into play in the next couple of years. We're working now with industry players to make sure that the BRIK volumes, the bitumen royalty in kind volumes, that accrue to the province of Alberta will be dealt with and handled here in the province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Banff Gate Wildlife Corridor

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Leased public land has recently been sold for a resort in the Canmore area at Banff Gate. Some of my constituents have concerns about the impact on wildlife of this sale. My question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. What policies is his department using to allow the sale of such land and change the land use in an important wildlife area?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This particular resort, Banff Gate, is a collection of about 18 small cabins and a central dining area. It's been on this lease in the Wind Valley since the 1960s. We now have an offer; they've made an offer to purchase it. We have a comprehensive review process for the sale of public lands of this sort. The review was done, and it was determined that the 24 acres that the buildings are already sitting on had no important, significant environmental benefit. The remaining 60 acres, the rest of the lease, is not being sold and will remain part of public lands and managed for purposes of the wildlife corridor.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question to the same minister: is the sale expected to have any impact upon the Bow Valley wildlife corridor?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We actually think it will enhance the purpose of the wildlife corridor because, as I've just explained, the footprint of the existing recreational lease there is being reduced by almost two-thirds. The 24 acres that the buildings are already on will be still managed for recreational purposes. The other 60 acres now revert and are part of the wildlife corridor.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The final question to the same minister: what protection of grizzly bear populations is being made around this site?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is an important area for grizzly bear habitat. It's right adjacent to Banff national park. An important part of the province's grizzly bear recovery program is the BearSmart program. The town of Canmore is one of the most active participants, as it should be, in the BearSmart program. Also, the community of Banff Gate has had a long history of teaching all the visitors and residents there to introduce them to the BearSmart information. People who are there have gone through the course. As I repeat, the 60 acres that are adjacent to the cabin area will continue to be managed for a wildlife corridor, including, of course, grizzlies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In tough economic times governments must make prudent fiscal decisions. However, in the Ministry of Tourism, Parks and Recreation the minister appears to have not received the memo. It was business as usual, with lucrative bonuses going to top park-survey-ignoring officials. To the minister: given that in the past year you have already handed out $225,000 in bonuses to top officials, can the minister explain the reasoning behind these perks rather than hiring much-needed conservation officers to properly patrol our parks?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This line of questioning has been going on all day. I've heard the answer given several times. If the hon. member is asking me if I think that my department is doing a good job, yes, they are.
Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thanks. That's not the question nor the answer.

Does the minister not think that instead of spending all this money on bonuses, it could have been better spent on repairing aging park infrastructure?

Mr. Snelgrove: The hon. members had roughly 70 hours last spring to debate the budget. Now, I'm not trying to suggest that they spent very much of it constructively, but not once do I recall them asking about the bonus structure that has been in place last year, the year before, and for about 10 years. If they have issues on last year's budget, maybe they ought to have thought about that while they were debating the budget, or maybe they ought to think about it going into this year's budget as opposed to waiting because they are still showing the uncanny ability to predict the past.

Mr. Chase: Well, the minister opposite is an expert on the past because that's where he's been living for some time. Questions were asked in Hansard; answers were not given. Read your Hansard, Mr. Minister.

Given that the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation recently spent thousands of additional taxpayer dollars on a survey of Albertans' park priorities, many of which your most highly remunerated officials appear to have ignored, will the minister explain to Albertans why their money was spent on this PR survey in the first place?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is right: we do consult with Albertans all the time. We are looking at a new park plan as the Premier has given me that responsibility. I would say: stay tuned to when the park plan comes out, and he can see the result of those surveys.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

SuperNet

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Rural Albertans are still patiently waiting for access to the SuperNet. I understand that this is now possible using the existing copper lines that are already in place. My question is to the Minister of Service Alberta. If the existing telephone lines can deliver this service, what is the holdup? Why are Albertans still waiting?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, SuperNet was built to connect schools, hospitals, colleges, libraries, and other public institutions to high-speed Internet access, video conferencing, and other services. Now that it has been built, we're looking at ways to expand the service to all Albertans across Alberta. It's important to remember that the SuperNet is like a highway, and the Internet service providers are the roads that connect the individuals. Some Internet service providers are using existent telephone lines to provide dial-up Internet services. As well, copper lines can have limitations.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: is there anything the government can do to accelerate this process?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The SuperNet has made high-speed Internet access available to more communities than ever, and our goal is to go beyond these communities, most definitely. We are working with our private-sector partners, Bell and Axia, as well as municipalities, the SuperNet service provider council, gas co-ops, community leaders, and other partners to develop a detailed plan that will achieve our goal. We are exploring ideas every day that will expand the SuperNet in a way that it needs to get out to all Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: how does the level of service through copper lines compare to that of fibre optics?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

2:40

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that copper, fibre, and wireless technology can all be used to connect rural Albertans to high-speed Internet. We are continuing to work with all of our partners. It's about leveraging the SuperNet and using it with all the technologies that are out there. In the meantime the SuperNet is doing amazing things for public institutions in the province, and we're committed to making sure it moves ahead, so please stay tuned.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the question period for today. That was 108 questions and responses.

We are going to revert now to the Routine. Please remember that we were in the section of the Routine called Introduction of Guests, and our Standing Order 7(1.1) says that "at 1:50 p.m., the Assembly shall proceed to Oral Question Period with the balance of the daily routine to follow." So that's where we're at. In about 19 minutes from now, though, I'm going to have to rise and ask for unanimous consent to get back to this agenda because we're going to come up against Standing Order 7(7), which says, "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly." There's no way we are going to get through this Routine by 3 o'clock.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to the hon. members of this Assembly a good friend of mine and an important constituent, Mr. Max Gibb. He's a partner in my constituency's important CrossIron mall development in Balzac, and he's here today with regard to the Balzac mall. Max is a real entrepreneur as well as a water conservation pioneer. The fact is that the new agreement with Rocky View on the water . . .

Ms Blakeman: Is this an introduction or a private member's statement?

The Speaker: We're having his introduction.

Mr. Anderson: Oh, yeah. I just want to say that he has crafted a bill where this new water agreement will actually see a net gain in the water in . . .

The Speaker: Yes, but that's not what we do here. Max, stand up. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I apologize. I had forgotten about the time of question period, and my guests have departed. I will introduce them the next time they're here.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Okay.

Hon. members, in a few seconds from now we'll proceed with a ministerial statement.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, thank you. It's always a pleasure to be able to stand in this Legislature even though it's to commemorate an event I'd rather not have to discuss. On Saturday, March 21, we commemorate the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, something I've had to deal with personally before. Growing up in another province, I had a high school teacher tell me that I'd never make it to university, had a university professor telling me that I couldn't have possibly got the mark that I had because of the colour of my skin, that that just wasn't possible.

As a province in a country with a culturally diverse population, inclusiveness and acceptance are pillars of a healthy and vibrant society. The reality is that even in this day and age racial discrimination, unfortunately, exists. While we may not be able to completely rid the world of racism and discrimination, we can recognize this special day and every other day of the year as a celebration of diversity over supremacy, acceptance over rejection.

Communities across our province will be holding different forums, events, and activities to commemorate this auspicious day. One of those meetings, being held in Calgary today, is the Coalition of Municipalities against Racism and Discrimination. The coalition's initiatives call on municipalities from across Canada to be part of a larger international organization, UNESCO, in a coalition of cities to combat racism. I'm proud to say that I was at an event last night with our chief commissioner of the Human Rights Commission. There are 30 municipalities involved in the coalition. Alberta is one of the two provinces with the most municipal members. Those eight Alberta municipalities are Brooks, Calgary, Drayton Valley, Edmonton, Grande Prairie, Lethbridge, the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo, and St. Albert.

Our government's Human Rights and Citizenship Commission is in place to ensure that everyone has the opportunity to participate in all aspects of our society. I'm especially excited with the appointment of our new chief commissioner, the hon. Blair Mason, as he leads the important work as the chief commissioner of the Human Rights Commission as a whole. I'm certain that all my government colleagues echo the sentiment as well.

Through the Alberta human rights, citizenship, and multiculturalism education fund and other partnership programs we're helping to support community organizations and public institutions for education initiatives that foster equality and combat racism and discrimination. Our world has no place for discrimination. What our world does have room for are inclusive open-mindedness, acceptance, and friendship. Mother Teresa summed it up best by saying, "If you judge people, you have no time to love them."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise in response to the minister's statement and to join him in celebrating the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. The minister is right to note that Alberta's communities are already hard at work preparing to celebrate the day and our multicultural heritage. I've already been to a few events in Edmonton on this very theme, including the Harmony Brunch, which is organized by the Canadian Multicultural Education Foundation, and the celebrations organized by Changing Together, my very favourite, which is the centre for helping immigrant women participate fully in Canadian society.

Other Edmonton events celebrating this day include Speaking Truth to Power, a series of workshops, films, and art exhibits presented by the Edmonton Immigrant Services Association, and cultural crossroads workplace training and antiracism workshops for adults, both organized by the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations.

In Calgary public libraries will host the Living Library for citizens to engage in conversations with each other, learning about each other's experiences in dealing with racial discrimination, and the bilingual Maple Sugar Festival will promote a multicultural family atmosphere where Albertans will be able to enjoy traditional food and meet people from a wide range of cultures and backgrounds.

That just scratches the surface, Mr. Speaker. Suffice it to say that Albertans understand the importance of eliminating racism. We are, however slowly, learning how to love and respect one another. We are learning that our external differences are meaningless. We are learning, to paraphrase Dr. King, that the colour of our skin is far less important than the content of our character.

This Saturday, March 21, I hope that all Albertans will take some time to reflect on our own prejudices – we all have them – and to rededicate ourselves to the cause of racial harmony. As wonderful a place as Alberta is, I don't think we'll achieve the full measure of our greatness until men, women, and children of all races and sexual orientations enjoy total acceptance from their fellow citizens.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, I suspect that you are requesting unanimous consent to allow your colleague to participate?

Mr. Mason: I am indeed, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Well, then, we need unanimous consent. Is anyone in the Assembly opposed to allowing the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to participate in this ministerial statement discussion? If so, say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to my colleagues in the Assembly. It's a pleasure to rise to speak about the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on March 21. It's important that we pause on this day in particular to remember what circumstances surrounded this declaration. On March 21, 1960, in what is now referred to as the Sharpeville massacre, more than 200 African anti-apartheid protestors were shot during a peaceful protest. Sixty-seven of those protestors, who did not carry arms and did not threaten public safety, died because of their injuries. They died because the state saw their peaceful act of civil disobedience as a threat to their control and unparalleled power. We must learn from this tragedy.

The fight for equality is, unfortunately, an ongoing one, as it must be. Political decisions are made every day, sometimes intentionally, very often inadvertently, that give advantages to certain racial groups over others, giving privilege and power to some while taking it away from others. This is a failure in our society, and we must continue to work to fix it.

We urge this government to make the legislative and administrative changes that are necessary to eradicate racism and ensure human rights for all. The authority, the remedial options, and the resources of our Human Rights Commission must be significantly increased. I call on all members of this House to join me in renewing our collective commitment to work with groups such as the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations and Alberta Civil Liberties in working to eliminate racial discrimination in our province.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

50th Anniversary of Ukrainian Shumka Dancers

Mr. Elniski: Thank you. It's truly a rare privilege to rise and speak to this Assembly in tribute to Edmonton's world-renowned Ukrainian Shumka Dancers. I am very proud that Shumka is a fixture in my constituency and that I've had the opportunity and privilege to watch both their rehearsals and performances. I was so pleased when some of their current and former dancers were in your gallery, Mr. Speaker, along with their founder and founding artistic director, Mr. Chester Kuc, and that they were introduced earlier. I should add that the hon. Member from Edmonton-Mill Creek is a former Shumka dancer and for 25 years was their composer, conductor, and music director.

Mr. Speaker, Shumka's legacy of accomplishments spans four continents, three generations, and 50 years of dedication and commitment to preserving Ukrainian culture in Canada. Shumka is a household name synonymous with energy, excitement, and artistic excellence. Tonight and tomorrow night Shumka presents their golden jubilee concert at the Jubilee Auditorium, and I will be there along with our Premier, our Minister of Culture and Community Spirit, and several other MLAs to help them celebrate in style.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask that all members join me in recognizing the 50th anniversary of the world-renowned Shumka Dancers of Edmonton, Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I suspect that if we were to ask for unanimous consent to receive a demonstration of dancing by the hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations, it would be granted. But I'm not going to do that because of the time today, okay?

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Water Management

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. March 22 is World Water Day. Alberta is blessed with an abundance of fresh water, and that very abundance has perhaps allowed us to take it for granted. The rapid growth of our population and industries has placed serious strains on the supply and cleanliness of Alberta's most precious resource. If we don't figure out how to properly manage our water supply and quickly, Alberta's prosperity and quality of life could be put at risk.

In the recent past we've seen how water from communities such as Red Deer was very nearly diverted to feed the proposed megamall and horse-racing track at Balzac. We've seen how the government's policy of allowing industry to self-report and self-monitor its emissions has led to contamination of the Athabasca River basin. We've seen toxic tailings ponds and dead birds blackening Alberta's image. There's a moratorium on new allocations from the South Saskatchewan River basin, one of the largest in the province, because of past mismanagement. We've seen the failure of the water for life strategy, which is a good strategy but useless without the funding to make it work. We all need to remember that someone lives downstream. Watch what you dump because water moves, and it carries contaminants right along with it right into the mouths of Albertans.

We have a lot of work to do. We need to map our surface and groundwater resources. We can't make good decisions until we know where all of our water is located and how much of it there is. If we want to protect our water for our future generations, if we want to ensure that our children and grandchildren have access to clean water, then we had better start getting serious about how we manage it. We cannot survive without water. Communities cannot thrive without it. Crops cannot be grown without it. Industry cannot prosper without it.

This administration, this steward of our water supply, must start to make better management decisions, ones that preserve and protect our water supply for all citizens.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Earth Hour

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Next Saturday – not this Saturday but next Saturday – marks the second global celebration of Earth Hour. For those not familiar with this annual event, Earth Hour was started by the World Wildlife Fund and began in Sydney, Australia, in 2007. Last year it was observed in 30 countries, including Canada, with over 10 million Canadians in 150 cities participating. Taking part is simple. People are encouraged to turn off their lights for one hour in support of action against climate change.

This year over 1,500 cities and towns in 80 countries have already committed to show their support for this initiative by turning off the lights between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. on March 28. Although the energy savings from this action will be significant, the real value of Earth Hour is the awareness it raises. By turning off the lights, people take a moment to consider how they can lessen their impact on the environment both in their homes and their businesses.

I intend to take part, and so does the government of Alberta. All nonessential lights in the Legislature Building and the McDougall Centre will be shut off during the Earth Hour as a symbol of the government of Alberta's commitment to action on climate change and doing our part. Beyond symbolism the government of Alberta has been taking action to green its daily business practices for several years. Since 2005 over 90 per cent of the electricity used by Alberta government buildings has come from green power sources, such as wind and biomass. This has resulted in a reduction of over 200,000 tons of greenhouse gas emissions annually and is the equivalent of taking 42,550 vehicles off the road for one year or replacing 118,000 vehicles with hybrids.

The Alberta government's actions aren't limited to electricity. We continue to see progress as we implement Alberta's 2008 climate change strategy, which includes the largest identified and published greenhouse gas reduction commitment in Canada. We have pledged to reduce emissions by 200 megatonnes by 2050.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Canadian Red Cross Society Centennial

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1864 Henry Dunant, a Swiss citizen, asked the following question: "Would it not be possible, in time of peace and quiet, to form relief societies for the purpose of having care given to the wounded in wartime by zealous, devoted and thoroughly qualified volunteers?" This idea led to the founding of the National Red Cross, and I rise today to honour Red Cross Month and the Canadian Red Cross Society, now celebrating its centennial year.

In 1909 Parliament passed the Canadian Red Cross Society Act, which legally established the Red Cross as the corporate body responsible for providing volunteer aid in accordance with the Geneva conventions. The Red Cross was established as a not-for-profit, humanitarian organization dedicated to improving the circumstances of the most vulnerable in Canada and throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, a disaster can happen to anyone at any time. Here in Alberta a team of 113 volunteers are ready day and night to attend to families and individuals to provide their basic needs after a disaster. These services, including food, clothing, and shelter, are provided for 72 hours after the disaster at no cost. Many Edmontonians, Mr. Speaker, will remember how these same exceptional Albertans responded to 145 disaster calls last year, helping over 500 people, including dozens of families affected by residential fires in the communities of MacEwan in southwest Edmonton and Britannia Gardens in the northwest part of our city.

Every year in western Canada the Red Cross provides short-term loans of clean, safe medical equipment to more than 46,000 people who are recovering from injury, illness, or surgery, and 24 years ago, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Red Cross implemented RespectED, a world-renowned violence and abuse-prevention program.

On behalf of this House, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate and thank the Canadian Red Cross and especially its Alberta volunteers and staff for over 100 years of dedicated service to this province and our country.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-West.

Lethbridge Accomplishments

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's always a pleasure to rise and talk about some of the good things happening in Lethbridge, where it's 17 degrees today. Earlier this month the city of Lethbridge teamed up with Lethbridge College to help build a new student residence at the college. The goal is to provide much-needed on-campus housing for students while, at the same time, freeing up housing in Lethbridge for lower income renters. The partnership will help ease the affordable housing crunch in southern Alberta, and I applaud their efforts.

Speaking of Lethbridge College, I'd also like to congratulate the members of the Kodiak women's basketball team, who, as we speak, are competing at the Canadian Colleges Athletic Association national championships in Ste-Foy, Quebec. The Kodiaks led the province during the season with a record of 17 to 1 and were the top-ranked CCAA team in the country. They took the ACAC provincial title on March 7 with a hard-fought match with the Grant MacEwan Griffins. I have every confidence that these young women will do themselves proud and represent our province as true champions. They've shown that hard work, determination, and the right attitude can take you as far as you want to go.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also very happy to report that the first competitive cheerleading team ever to come out of Lethbridge has racked up an impressive first season of their own. The G.S. Lakie middle school cheer squad was formed just this past September, and these girls have already moved to the top of their class in a few short months. After winning two divisional invitational tournaments in February, the girls went on to win the Alberta Cheerleading Association ProCheer Championships in Edmonton this past weekend. The ACA tournament is considered the country's largest cheerleading competition, featuring teams from all over western Canada and beyond.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to take this opportunity to congratulate both these wonderful Lethbridge teams on their remarkable accomplishments.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 7(7) says: "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly." In order to continue to the conclusion of the Routine, we will need the unanimous consent of the Assembly. If an individual is opposed to providing unanimous consent, please say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: Then we'll continue. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Water Management

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In 1993 the United Nations declared March 22 World Water Day to draw attention to the global crisis in water use. Millions of people die needlessly from water-borne diseases. Millions of children do not receive proper education because they must carry water for their families. Droughts and floods, storms and tsunamis take countless lives every year while over a billion people live without proper access to safe water. An additional 1.5 billion people do not have basic sanitation. Even here in Canada many communities, particularly aboriginal ones, have had to boil their water for months at a time. The numbers are staggering.

While so many are in desperate need of clean water, every year Alberta's tar sands projects contaminate billions of litres of fresh water so badly that they cannot be returned to the water cycle. This polluted water is instead held in massive toxic tailings ponds, some of which are perilously close to the Athabasca River. Even worse, studies have shown that an incredible 11 million litres of toxic water leak out of these ponds every day into Alberta's groundwater.

Our water supply is shrinking, our population is growing, and climate change threatens to forever end our luxury of taking water for granted. We can do things differently. We can build dry tailings technology and protect Alberta's wetlands. We can develop a comprehensive and effective strategy to help farms, businesses, and families alike conserve water. We can commit to keeping water in public hands and not selling off our lakes, rivers, and aquifers to the highest bidder.

Albertans are speaking out more and more against irresponsible uses of this precious resource, and if we act now, we can ensure that safe drinking water remains the right of every Albertan.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Standing Order 15(2) earlier today I provided written notice to your office of my intention to raise a matter of privilege, which I hope I will have the opportunity to present later today.

The Speaker: Yes.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader with respect to written questions and motions for returns.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) to advise the House that on Monday, April 6, 2009, we will be accepting written questions 1, 3, 5, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, and 17, and we will also be dealing with written questions 2, 7, 9, 11, 13, 18, 19, and 20. There being no additional written questions appearing on the Order Paper, there are none to stand and retain their places.

I also wish to give notice that on Monday, April 6, 2009, motions for returns 1, 5, 7, 8, 9, and 20 will be accepted and that 2, 3, 4, 6, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, and 19 will be dealt with on that day. Other motions for returns shall stand and retain their places on the Order Paper.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Bill 204

Provincial-Municipal Tax Sharing Act

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill, being Bill 204, the Provincial-Municipal Tax Sharing Act.

This is a bill which I am proposing because municipalities require a stable and predictable level of funding from the government to effectively plan and deliver programs and services, and they have been experiencing, with property tax revenues, fluctuations in municipal funding, which causes uncertainty in the establishment and operation of those same programs and services. The bill is calling for the creation of an account to be established to receive 2.5 per cent of provincial income tax revenue, which would then be distributed to municipalities to make up that funding gap for operating expenses.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 204 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to table five copies of a number of draft amendments with explanatory notes I am considering bringing forward for Bill 19, the Land Assembly Project Area Act. In addition, with your concurrence I am providing copies of the same document for distribution to all members of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: That will be concurred with, so the pages will circulate those this afternoon.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of two recent articles from the Edmonton Journal which talk about the dangerously long wait times in Edmonton hospital emergency rooms and also mentioning that people waiting for long-term care beds are filling acute-care hospital beds that are needed for patients in the emergency room.

I'd also like to table the appropriate number of copies of 10 reports from long-term care workers indicating specific instances of shifts that were short-staffed. These provide examples of residents being left in bed for entire day shifts, missing baths, and receiving meals late.

Thank you.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Renner, Minister of Environment, response to Written Question 15, asked for by Ms Notley on March 16, 2009.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 7(6) I would ask the Government House Leader to please rise and share with us the projected government business for the week commencing April 6.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During the week commencing April 6, of course on Tuesday, April 7, in the afternoon we would, as has been indicated to this House previously, understand that there would be a presentation of a budget by the hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise. Thus, we would anticipate the normal routine of adjournment after Orders of the Day are called so that the Assembly could be appropriately prepared for the presentation of the budget later that afternoon.

On Wednesday, April 8, we would anticipate response to the Budget Address under the motions that would be on the Order Paper relative to the budget. Normally, that would of course mean the Leader of the Official Opposition and the leader of the third party would have an opportunity to respond to the Budget Address. Time permitting, then, we would look to Committee of the Whole on bills 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 15, and 18 or such of them as remain in Committee of the Whole at that time or second reading for bills 4, 6, 7, 9, 10 and as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, April 9, 2009, for third reading bills 1, 2, 3, 5, and 18 and Committee of the Whole on bills 4, 6, 7, 8, and 15 and as per the Order Paper.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona had delivered to my office this morning prior to 11:30 notification of her desire to rise on a point of privilege. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Privilege Rights of the Assembly

Ms Notley: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise because, as you note, pursuant to Standing Order 15(2) this morning I provided written notice to your office of my intention to raise a matter of the privilege of this Assembly today. In so doing, I refer primarily to 15(1) of Standing Orders, which says simply that a breach of the rights of the Assembly may constitute a question of privilege. It is on the rights of the Assembly that I will be focusing my comments today.

It is my view that the government is attempting to prevent members of this Assembly from fulfilling their responsibility to review legislation or proposed legislation. Through Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, the government seeks to provide to itself the power to rewrite existing or future legislation, a duty which belongs under our constitution to this Assembly. As the bill aims to prevent members of the Assembly from fulfilling their duties as legislators, it is, in my view, thereby a matter of privilege.

I also believe that this is the earliest opportunity for me to make a motion of privilege on this matter. Yesterday the Committee of the Whole defeated amendments to the bill which would have removed that section of the bill, section 5, that provides the executive branch of government with powers which rightly belong to this Assembly.

This is a matter of privilege involving the collective rights and powers of the House. To quote from Marleau and Montpetit at page 51, "the House has the authority to invoke privilege where its ability has been obstructed in the execution of its functions." Maingot on page 12 defines privilege as "the right, power, and authority of each House of Parliament and of each legislative assembly to perform their constitutional functions."

Bill 18 shows that it is a matter of government policy that the power to amend legislation, which ought to be the exclusive power of the Assembly, will now also be exercised by the executive without reference to the Assembly. I further believe that this breach of the Assembly's privilege is a matter of contempt. Erskine May on page 75 defines contempt as "actions which, while not breaches of any specific privilege, obstruct or impede it," meaning the House, "in the performance of its functions, or are offences against its authority or dignity." Marleau and Montpetit concur on page 67: "The House also claims the right to punish, as a contempt, any action which, though not a breach of a specific privilege, tends to obstruct or impede the House in the performance of its functions."

For further information on the subject of regulation-making power and subordinate regulations I consulted the Principles of Administrative Law, the 4th edition, by David Jones and Anne de Villars, which states on pages 94 and 95 that while provincial legislatures may delegate certain of their lawmaking powers, quote, the legislative branch cannot delegate such broad powers that effectively it effaces itself.

By providing the government with the power to rewrite any piece of legislation, I believe the scope of regulation-making power in Bill 18 oversteps the boundaries of legality and interferes with the ability of members to fulfill their duties. Indeed, all the hours that we have spent this year debating bills or even since the last election could be for naught were this bill to come into effect. It would essentially allow the executive to render ineffective or moot the legislation which, indeed, we propose to debate even this afternoon, once this particular matter is completed. It calls into question, I would suggest, what or why we are here in the Assembly this afternoon and all other afternoons.

I understand that it is without question a matter of past practice that the executive retains to itself the authority to make regulations, which often define the legislation under which the regulations arise. But section 5 of the proposed Bill 18 would allow that regulatory power to reach back to legislation which we in this House have addressed ourselves and passed. It would also allow the executive branch to reach forward and to undo legislation which we might be discussing today, tomorrow, or in future assemblies of this House.

I think our fundamental ability to do our job as representatives elected by our constituents in the province of Alberta, to come into this House and to debate and review legislation, is fundamentally and deeply, deeply threatened by this act because of the uncertainty and the scope of the authority that the executive branch attempts to bring upon itself through this piece of legislation. It is for that reason that I rise and ask that you find that this is a breach of privilege of not only my rights as a member of the Assembly but of all members in the Assembly. All their rights are being significantly impinged by this proposed legislation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm certainly prepared to hear arguments today and will reserve judgment as to whether or not there's even an opportunity later to hear further arguments, but there will be no judgment provided by the chair today.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would submit that there is absolutely no question of privilege being brought by the hon. member, and she has not made any prima facie case for a question of privilege and, in fact, is premature in even addressing the issue.

First of all, Bill 18, which is the act which she alleges to offend her privileges as a member, is still before the House. It's not an enactment of the House. It hasn't been passed. Although one might assume that, being a government bill and having the support of government members, it might pass the House, it certainly hasn't passed the House. So it's not an enactment, and therefore at this stage if there was any question of whether it did breach privilege, it certainly doesn't.

Dealing with the merits of the argument, the hon. member refers to section 5 of the act, which purports to add regulations, section 7. It allows

- (1) the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations in respect of matters relating to the implementation of the Agreement, that being the TILMA agreement, that the Minister considers are not provided for or are insufficiently provided for in this Schedule or any enactment.

- (2) A regulation made under subsection (1)
 - (a) may suspend the application of or modify a provision of an Act or regulation or may substitute another provision in place of a provision.

A regulation made under the act is repealed on the earliest of either being brought into force by a statute or the expiration of three years. In subsection (4) a regulation made under subsection (1) is repealed on the earliest of the coming into force of an amendment to a statute that provides for the matter, the coming into force of a regulation that repeals the regulation, or the expiration of three years from the day that the regulation comes into force or is filed. I've précised, obviously, a little bit of the writing there.

What we're talking about is a proposed amendment which would bring into effect an ability under order in council, as we would normally call them, a regulation by the Lieutenant Governor in Council which has been the subject of a previous act of the Legislature, to be able to make that provision for the purposes of implementing the agreement if there are matters which are not provided for or insufficiently provided for in a schedule or an enactment and, in doing so, to make that provision modify a provision of an act or regulation. That's the crux of this whole question.

The question is: does the Legislature have the authority to delegate its legislative authority in certain circumstances? Mr. Speaker, clearly, it does. First of all, I would say that it has that ability because it has done that in the past. Under the Municipal Government Act, for example, which is chapter M-26 of our Revised Statutes of Alberta 2000, you'll find in section 603 of that act a provision that is not identical but very, very close in wording to this particular section. That section, in my experience, has been in that act since the early '90s at least and may even go back further than that. The provision in the Municipal Government Act allows the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations "for any matter that the Minister considers is not provided for or is insufficiently provided for in this Act."

Actually, we can go to Erskine May, chapter 23 on page 574, in the first paragraph, the last sentence, where it says, "Consequently, legislative power is often conferred upon the executive by statute, and various arrangements are made for parliamentary scrutiny of its exercise." I'll speak to the parliamentary scrutiny in a moment.

Further down the page, in the last half of the second paragraph:

The justification and advantages of delegated legislation arise from its speed, flexibility and adaptability. Once Parliament has by statute laid down (often in some detail) the principles of a new law, the executive may by means of delegated legislation work out the application of the law in greater detail within these principles, adapting it to fit changing circumstances. Power may even be conferred, by what is known as a "Henry VIII Clause", to amend the statute itself by delegated legislation or to amend other statutes. A principle enacted in a statute may be extended by delegated legislation in a cognate direction.

So Erskine May clearly delineates that in certain circumstances for certain purposes – and, obviously, it's not something that one does routinely. But there are certain circumstances even in our own Alberta legislation where this is the case, where the legislative authority has been delegated to the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make a law or change a law for certain purposes limited in scope. That's, in fact, what Bill 18 and the section that the hon. member feels is offensive refers to.

There is an agreement called the TILMA agreement, the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement, and there was a trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement implementation statute that was passed by this House. I think this is the second amending act, if I'm not incorrect, where basically, as they go through and find the places where there is an inconsistency between what we've agreed to do in the agreement and what the House has now approved, we need to bring our laws into concert, where amendments need to be made. This Bill 18, in fact, is one of those bills which purports to amend the statute to bring our acts into concert with British Columbia, as we've agreed to under the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement, as has been approved by the House.

For the limited purpose of making sure our statutes are in alignment, as we've agreed to do and as this House has conferred intention to do in a previous statute, we provide under the proposed section 7 a limited authority for the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make changes, to add to the law, or to change a law for the limited purpose of bringing it into line with the agreement, which is approved in principle by another law of the House. In other words, we may have two conflicting laws of the House, and we have a method for resolving that conflict on an interim basis by allowing the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make an amendment, to make a regulation, which would have the effect of amending the law.

The next piece that's very important to that question then is: for a limited period of time. That's not absolutely necessary. Nothing in Erskine May or other places suggests that it has to be for a limited purpose and time. But I think we would all agree that for any regulation which purports to change a law, the law itself ought to be changed in due course if for no other reason than for clarity so that it's clear on the face of it what the law of Alberta is for anybody who's reading it. Thus, Bill 18 in its wording provides, as I think I read, that a regulation made under subsection (1) is repealed on the earliest of the coming into force of the amendment, the coming into force of a regulation that repeals the regulation, or the expiration of three years. It goes on. Again, I've précised that. So it's a time delimited amendment.

Clearly, the Legislature often delegates its legislative authority. Any regulation that's made under an act pursuant to a section of the act which allows the Lieutenant Governor or even sometimes a minister to make a regulation is delegating a legislative authority. Those regulations become law just as if they'd been passed by this House. I would suggest also, because we've done it in the past in this Legislature and because it's acknowledged in Erskine May and, in fact, it even has a title which was used in this House previously, a Henry VIII clause, that we're entitled to as a Legislature delegate the authority of the Legislature even to overwrite earlier laws of the Legislature. As a parliamentarian I would say that should be done carefully, that it should be done prudently, that it should be done only in certain circumstances, and there should be a process for limiting that. But it's clearly allowed.

This section in Bill 18 is careful. It's about delegation of the law-making authority within an area of principle already approved by the Legislature; i.e., an agreement to the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement implementation statute. That's an agreement which we've approved in principle in this House. We've debated it in the past, and we've amended many laws already to create that consistency. This regulation is simply a regulation which will allow a cleanup, if you will, or a correction of something that has been overlooked to date so that we can comply with the April 1 implementation of the agreement, as we agreed to with British Columbia. It does have a review provision in that it has to come back to this House within three years or it expires unless the regulation is otherwise removed.

Clearly, the delegation authority is there. Clearly, in a circumstance where you're delegating an authority to change an act of the House, the authority to do that is there. The limitation on that is there in terms of it having to come back to the House for approval within a period of time. We've had a number of circumstances – a two-year time in the Municipal Government Act, a three-year time in the Animal Health Act, other lengths of time in other acts but a limited period of time – in which that kind of a regulation can exist. Mr. Speaker, I would say then that the other piece that one would want to have – oh, section 610 of the Insurance Act also has a similar provision, if anyone wants to look, and there are a number of other references I could give.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would refer you and members of the House to Standing Order 52.03. Standing Order 52.03 reads that a policy field committee, a committee of this Legislature, “may on its own initiative, or at the request of a Minister, review any regulation, amendment to a regulation or prospective regulation within its mandate.” So if any regulation was made under the proposed amendment to Bill 18 that any member of this House wished to have reviewed by a committee of this Legislature and reported back to this Legislature and if they felt that the process of that review was not happening on a timely basis, it would be within their purview to bring it to the appropriate policy field committee to ask for a review of that regulation.

Mr. Speaker, clearly, first of all, there has been no delegation of the authority yet under Bill 18 because Bill 18 hasn't been passed. Secondly, it's entirely within the purview of the Legislature to delegate its authority. Thirdly, there's a limitation proposed in this section, as is consistent with other sections of its sort in other acts of the Alberta Legislature, to provide a timed elimination before such a regulation that's made under that section needs to either be enacted by the House or it dies. Fourthly, there's a process for review provided for in our standing orders of any regulation that any member of the House wishes to have reviewed by the House. So I would say that there's no breach of any member's privilege. In fact, the House is doing what the House does, which is enact laws and make provision for those things which cannot be foreseen or which have not yet been discovered to be enacted on a timely basis and then reviewed appropriately by the House at an appropriate time.

The Speaker: The Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you for the opportunity to bring comment to the motion of privilege brought forward by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. A few observations and arguments I'd like to put forward, starting with the argument that this is a bill that is before us and the Chamber can change its mind. I think I agree with the timing in bringing forward the privilege motion now in that an attempt to remove the offending section yesterday clearly was not supported by members of the government caucus, and that was shown in a standing vote. So any attempt to correct that legislation has been blocked by members of the government caucus, and there has been an indication shown by that blocking that government would support it. In fact, it's a government bill, so it's expected the government caucus would support it and pass it, at which point, I would argue, it's too late for us.

I'd like to address a few of the other arguments that have been made. I think that on the Government House Leader's response regarding the Municipal Government Act, the regulatory authority to amend that act is different than what we are speaking about here. There's also a required principle of law that is fleshed out, and there is no principle that is set out in this bill that explains why this would be needed, and the principle clearly is needed. Bill 18 refers to a need to adjust legislation to account for panel decisions under TILMA, but, Mr. Speaker, there is already a wide body of discussion available on various interpretations of TILMA. That to me signals that the government may have a very wide latitude, wider than it should, in being able to amend a very wide section of legislation to fall into conformation with TILMA. That whole agreement is so vague right now that I think it opens the door far too wide.

I continue to be concerned about the time. There's no reason given for why the government needs to give itself this extraordinary power at this time. I think that it is an extraordinary power. It's done in a very limited fashion. In the other examples that we were able to find where government gave itself such a wide latitude to change legislation, it was very clear to any citizen why it needed to have the Legislature or the Parliament abdicate that responsibility to cabinet; for example, the War Measures Act. We have no explanation beyond a commercial agreement that is what is particularly driving this need for government to be able to change. I would argue that that is not a clear enough reason to be allowing the government to change potentially so many pieces of legislation.

My second great concern is the very wide amount of time that the government is considering here. It is wanting to give itself the authority to go two years back and three years forward – that's a five-year time span, Mr. Speaker – to change every single piece of legislation that exists, because this motion is brought forward under the Government Organization Act, under which all pieces of legislation are organized by the government.

In other places where there has been some sort of time limit given, it has been very specific to the pieces of legislation that may be altered. It gave itself a two-year time limit – that reference is from British Columbia – but here we have no references to specific pieces of legislation. It is wide open. They can change any piece of legislation that exists, and I would argue that that is too wide a latitude. We have no compelling reason given, we have a very wide time period, and it's unspecific on which acts this would be limited to.

It has already been noted that the House does have the authority to abdicate its responsibility to create laws – we're not talking about regulations; we're talking about laws, acts, statutes – but, I would argue, under very extraordinary circumstances. A commercial agreement would not meet that test, nor would I think that a reasonable person on the street would take it to meet that test.

Finally, the Government House Leader brings up the argument of the policy field committee and that if a member was unhappy with a regulation or wanted additional review for a regulation, they could take that to a policy field committee. But, Mr. Speaker, as I argued many times in negotiations with that very same member, that actually is not an operable suggestion in that every reference to a policy field committee requires a majority vote to either accept by the policy field committee that it would undertake certain work or that the Legislature itself would delegate to the policy field committee to do certain work on its behalf.

All of those require a majority vote. Therefore, it is in the hands of the government given the particular number of seats that are held here; that is, effectively, no member in this House currently that is not a member of government could get a regulation reviewed by a policy field committee without the agreement of government. To say that any member could go and bring this forward and get it reviewed by a policy field committee is simply a specious argument. It is impractical and could not be implemented, which I felt was ultimately the fatal flaw in that whole set-up. But that's an ongoing and different argument.

I am quite disturbed by what has been proposed by the government here, and I believe that it is obstructing both the ability of individual members, particularly those members who are sitting in the opposition, to be able to execute its functions. For a period of possibly five years this member will not be able to be engaged in representing the people that put me here and debating those acts that the government would choose to change. That impinges upon my personal privileges in this House and what I was sent here to do in representing those people. I would also argue that it does that collectively in that the House should not delegate this under these circumstances.

Thank you for the opportunity to raise those comments. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional members? The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill on this point of privilege.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Education has very eloquently outlined most of the points which I would wish to make, but I wish to make a couple of additional points with respect to the nature of this measure which is being complained of in section 5 of the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act.

Clearly, the purpose of section 5 is very limited. It's limited to the purpose of facilitating the implementation of a piece of legislation which is in and of itself a very complex piece of legislation. There is no attempt to usurp the general powers of the Assembly. The power, if it were abused and it went beyond what it states in the piece of legislation, may well be cause for complaint. However, the regulation-making power that's being asked for in this particular amendment speaks of: "The Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations in respect of matters relating to the implementation of the Agreement." This agreement is an attempt to bring about free trade between two provinces. It requires certain obligations on the part of each of those sister provinces to comply in order to allow that free trade to happen. As such, it involves literally hundreds of regulations and statutes.

I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that it is clearly impractical to expect that the minister could anticipate all of the particular problems that might arise from time to time in respect of ensuring that there is compliance and free trade with all of those hundreds of statutes and regulations that are present in both of those two provinces. Clearly, it's a temporary measure. It's a measure which will be determined either by bringing forth a remedial measure in the form of a regulation or a statute, which will come before this House again, or it will be taken care of by the passage of the limitation which is provided for in the proposed amendment.

I would therefore argue that there is no usurpation of the powers of this Assembly and that there is no point of privilege.

The Speaker: Additional? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity here. I've been listening carefully, and I was listening carefully as a participant in the debate yesterday afternoon. I'm speaking here not as a lawyer but as a parliamentarian. There is a handful of points I would like you to consider in making your judgment and ruling on this privilege.

There are the obvious ones that were made yesterday, which have been addressed and I won't repeat at any great length today: the concern about granting cabinet an authority to overrule legislation, which as a legislator I have great concern with; also the point that it grants cabinet the authority to do that retroactively. So we have two issues there, one going back in time, which really, really is a concerning precedent or a concerning issue for me, and one giving cabinet the authority to overrule legislation.

I have listened to the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill and to the Government House Leader. They were referring to something that I noticed yesterday, which is that this bill spells out that it's proposing to limit – it gives an impression of a limited scope because the changes that can be made have to be limited to the implementation of TILMA, but when you read the TILMA agreement, the scope is absolutely immense, Mr. Speaker. It could touch on all kinds of legislation that we may never have contemplated in here. Just as an example, reading from TILMA, it addresses sustainable development – well, what about water issues, for example? – consumer and environmental protection, and health, safety, and labour standards. And it goes on and on. If you read the agreement, it's actually very, very wide ranging, so I would disagree with the points made by the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill and the Government House Leader that this is somehow limited.

TILMA could affect everything from laws on transportation to laws on the environment to labour standards to – who knows? There's no meaningful limit provided here. I think that's very, very important to consider. In fact, the points made by the Government House Leader and the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill are specious, I would say. They just don't stand up to examination.

The other concern I would like you to consider, Mr. Speaker, is one of sovereignty. I stand here and we all stand here as citizens of Alberta in the Legislative Assembly of Alberta responsible to the people of Alberta. This is an agreement with another province. I believe that if we enact it the way it is now, there is a significant risk that we will actually have our sovereignty as a Legislative Assembly subsumed to decisions that may be made in another province. I think that's a very serious precedent.

It would work like this. The government of B.C. through their Legislature comes forward with a bill, a legislation, or a decision that ripples through TILMA to Alberta. Then the government of Alberta through the Lieutenant Governor in Council and without consultation in this Assembly changes a law in Alberta. Who is, then, in charge? Have we not at that point, Mr. Speaker, transferred the sovereignty of this Assembly into the hands of a government of another jurisdiction? I believe that's a significant consideration and, again, a dangerous precedent. It seems entirely plausible to me that that could happen. It could happen on energy. It could happen on transportation. It could happen on all kinds of issues here.

I am concerned with the fact that this reaches back and tries to rewrite history. I'm concerned that this gives cabinet the authority to overwrite the laws of this Assembly. This Assembly routinely delegates to cabinet, but it doesn't give cabinet the right to rewrite laws that, when they were passed, were never considered subject to that risk. It transfers our sovereignty to a Legislature in another jurisdiction. It is for practical purposes with almost unlimited scope because there's hardly an issue that couldn't come under TILMA unless it's explicitly excluded in the appendix.

This is an inclusive agreement – this is not a limiting one – broadly encompassing free trade, so, Mr. Speaker, I think we are dealing with something that's considerably more serious than the House leader or the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill has indicated. I have heard no justification – yesterday there was complete silence from the government on this issue – for this Legislature to take such a drastic step on what is, after all, simply a commercial piece of legislation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there additional members?

Well, hon. members, the point of privilege that has been raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has to do with the privilege of members of this Assembly. This is a very serious matter. We'll be taking it very seriously as well. Today is Thursday, March 19. The House will be going on a little break for a few days. If members would like to add something further to their arguments, provide them to my office by noon of Thursday, March 26 – that's one week from now – in written form. Evaluation will be done and take into care all of this. The chair will be consulting with his Parliamentary Counsel and table officers and will return to this Assembly on Monday, April 6, with a decision.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair shall now call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 1 Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: Are there any comments or questions? The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. A good proportion of our reservists are students, and I was a reservist myself at one time, so

I wanted to get some comments on the record for Bill 1, the Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, which was formally and eloquently introduced in this House by the Premier.

As a proud member of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment Association and the Royal Canadian Legion I and many fellow Albertans recognize the value and the important sacrifices that members of the military and their families make on a daily basis. These heroes protect and defend our freedom while spreading the strong Canadian ideals of honour, duty, service, and democracy throughout the world. In addition to Canada's full-time personnel all branches of the service are enhanced by the work and dedication of reserves. Of the more than 100 military personnel that have made the ultimate sacrifice during the Afghanistan conflict, more than 10 per cent were Canada's reservists.

When reservists answer the call of duty to serve our great country on active duty, not only do they leave their loving families; they must put careers, postsecondary education, and apprenticeships on hold. I, like many of my fellow members of this Assembly, sincerely hope that this legislation is another key facet in a growing culture of support for reservists and their selfless acts and dedication that is being developed coast-to-coast and in our province.

Mr. Chairman, I met our very own Sergeant-at-Arms some 20 years ago when I started my very short reserve career. His is much longer. He has served more than 35 years as both a reservist and a regular forces member, and he outranked me at that time.

An Hon. Member: Still does.

Mr. Horner: Still does.

According to statistics, Mr. Chairman, from Alberta Employment and Immigration, approximately 40 per cent of Canadian reservists are also students in our postsecondary system. This act is an impetus. It will create a greater awareness and will encourage more flexibility among our institutions and our employers. While some may not have practices in place now, I expect we will see more institutions and businesses in Alberta taking the lead and looking at ways that they can accommodate and support these transitions.

In the area of postsecondary studies this act provides an opportunity for us to get the discussions with our institutions going on whether they want to look forward to a standard policy or, certainly, consistent practices among the institutions. Under Campus Alberta most postsecondary institutions do have policies that enable all students, not just reservists, to re-enter their studies. However, we may have to have an open door to establishing some synergies throughout the system.

While we look at working with our institutions, we already have in place some strong supports in Alberta for Alberta reservists who are also working to realize their dreams of a postsecondary education. In terms of the financial commitments of reservist students last June significant changes were made to student finance programs to protect reservists who interrupt their full-time studies to serve. Student finance will defer student loans and the interest on those payments to ensure that while their student careers are on hold, they are removed from making those payments. Reservists may also have their interest-free deferral and payment deferral extended. We encourage reservists to discuss these options with counsellors at their respective institutions to learn more about their policies and if any special circumstances are required.

For apprentices many of the same policies are now in place. The department will not cancel the registration of the apprentice during the normal cancellation process, 18 months of inactivity. The department will keep the file active and note the situation on the apprentice's file. We encourage apprentices to contact Alberta Advanced Education and Technology if they're being called into active duty so that their placement is waiting for them when they return. If for some reason the department has not been advised in advance, the department will reinstate the registration when the apprentice returns to work.

As demonstrated in Campus Alberta, our province already places strong value on the work and sacrifices of these brave men and women. As they protect our freedom, they should be protected here at home. Those reservists pursuing degrees and diplomas can take comfort in knowing that Campus Alberta will also be there for them with options to choose from a range of programs and learning opportunities. I know from experience as a reservist with the Loyal Edmonton Regiment that it is a great part-time job while you're going to postsecondary. It's also a huge amount of pride in wearing the Canadian uniform while you attend postsecondary.

When you talk to the presidents of the institutions, I've noted from my discussions with those institutions, they note that reservists make great students. Employers, Mr. Chairman, are finding that they make great employees as well. Major Chris Chodan was introduced in this House by the minister not too long ago. I met Major Chodan as well when I was in the Loyal Edmonton Regiment. He was also above me in rank, I might add.

It was mentioned by the hon. members for Edmonton-Gold Bar and, I believe, Edmonton-Strathcona that some employers may be hesitant to hire a reservist. I recall many years ago that I spoke with some of my friends in the regiment about bringing in a bill similar to this. At the time there was a fairly strong concern that a bill such as this might limit a reservist's ability to go out and get employment. I think that the time is now, Mr. Chairman, that the employers have realized that the training in leadership, the training in discipline that one receives as a reservist make them a very valued employee and one that every employer would want to have.

Bill 1, the Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009, further strengthens Alberta's commitment to Canada's reservists and certainly recognizes their invaluable contribution to the way of life that we hold so dear and so close. Today, Mr. Chairman, I stand very much in support of this bill as it proceeds to third reading, and I encourage all of my colleagues to do the same.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm also very pleased to speak in Committee of the Whole to Bill 1, the Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009. This bill, if passed, will provide unpaid job-protected leave for military reservists under the Employment Standards Code. At last count there were about 2,500 Albertans enrolled in the reserves. Some are deployed in active missions overseas and can be away for a number of months. Most of them serve on a part-time basis. In fact, about 45 per cent of Canadian reservists maintain either a full-time or part-time civilian job, and another 40 per cent are students, as the hon. member just indicated.

These proposed amendments entitle a reservist to an unpaid job-protected leave while they're deployed to an operation outside of Canada like our current missions in Afghanistan and in Sudan. It would also apply to emergencies within the country such as an ice storm in Quebec or an earthquake in B.C. The proposed legislation also provides the reservist with additional leave to take part in annual training. While this is limited to 20 days each calendar year, leave for overseas operations or domestic emergencies may last as long as necessary.

Currently Alberta is the only province that does not have reservist leave in its legislation. Mr. Chair, this provided us with an opportunity to study the other provinces, determine what works and what doesn't in their jurisdictions, and develop a policy that takes into account the rights and responsibilities of both the employer and the employee.

During second reading a member opposite, while speaking in support of the bill, thought it would be a good idea for government to publicly thank employers, particularly small business owners, for dealing with any disruptions that might come from the proposed reservist's leave, and I think, Mr. Chair, this is a great suggestion. I for one encourage all Members of this Legislative Assembly to make a point of doing just that when they head home to their individual constituencies.

We've done our homework, Mr. Chair. We've taken a close look at similar legislation and worked with the Canadian military. These proposed amendments strike a balance that we believe is fair for both the employer and the reservist. Members of our military, whether they're with the regular forces or the reserves, have long been willing to make tremendous sacrifices. These sacrifices over many decades provide us with the freedom of democracy, the very freedom that we exercise in this House each and every day. These proposed amendments are a small way of extending our gratitude along with the gratitude of all Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to stand once again to reiterate our support on this side of the House for this piece of legislation. As we've heard, it is long overdue. It's an important gesture. I myself can think of a handful of friends and neighbours I know who have served in the reserves and have gone to places like Bosnia and Afghanistan at very great risk to their lives, and they've done it for the public good. This is a way for the public to recognize their sacrifice and to make sure that that sacrifice is rewarded and not penalized.

So I would urge all members of this Assembly to support this legislation. I think it's a good idea, and let's get on with it. Thank you.

The Chair: Any other hon. member wish to speak on this?
Seeing none, the chair shall call the question.

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

Bill 15

Dunvegan Hydro Development Act

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This is a piece of legislation that will facilitate the development of a run-of-river hydro generation facility on the Peace River near Dunvegan. I myself have never seen such a facility in person. You know, I've seen hydro dams, and I've seen coal-fired plants and nuclear plants and all kinds of ways of generating electricity, but I've never seen this particular run-of-the-river hydro facility. I have read about it somewhat over the years, and I think it's a project that is worth pursuing. We need to look at alternative ways in this province of generating our electricity, ways that have minimal environmental impact. I certainly much prefer this over nuclear power. I think it's interesting that both of these come from the Peace River area. I think there's probably much more to support the wisdom of this kind of technology than of a large nuclear power plant being constructed somewhere in the Peace River area.

I think it's a good idea. I would like to make the point here though, Mr. Chairman, that before we proceed with all kinds of new electrical generating projects like this one, we take a much more systematic, disciplined, and strategic view of energy conservation and, in this case, particularly electricity energy conservation. There are huge gains to be made here. Other jurisdictions have led the way before us on this, and while this project is far enough along that it probably will go ahead regardless of how much electrical energy is conserved, down the road a much more aggressive electrical energy conservation program could pre-empt the need for things like nuclear power up in the Peace Country.

I would very much like to see a bill like this be linked to a broader strategy from this government that addressed electrical generation and consumption as an entirety and addressed issues not only of supply, which this bill is doing, but also of demand. We've seen very, very little of that from this government. I want to register that that's a real shortcoming of the broader electrical strategy of this government that I would like to see addressed and is not difficult to address.

Actually, it's interesting. The Peace River originates in British Columbia, and we just finished debating a trade agreement with British Columbia. I've often compared British Columbia's farm safety standards to Alberta's. British Columbia also leads the way on demand-side management; in other words, on programs to reduce the demand side of the equation for electrical energy. Maybe we should be looking to B.C. for that as well.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, this bill, I think, needs to go ahead. I'm not going to propose any amendments. I will note one thing if I can find it in my background notes. Yes, I can. This bill is prepared under the auspices of the Hydro and Electric Energy Act, which requires Executive Council to cause a bill, this particular one, "to be prepared for the authorization of an order of the Alberta Utilities Commission for construction of the hydro development." Under that set of legislation and regulations a panel needs to be struck.

I did note in the background to this that the panel members in this case were Vern Hartwell, Doug Larder, and George Kupfer, and they were appointed jointly by the federal government, by Canada's Environment minister, and by the government of Alberta. I did have questions about the technical knowledge of these panelists on run-of-the-river hydro projects. I would have thought that that was crucial. I know that Vern Hartwell and George Kupfer are both known for their knowledge of municipal government and of organization and that sort of thing, but I wasn't aware that they had any particular knowledge of run-of-the-river hydro projects or of the detailed environmental or other issues that might arise from this project. Now, maybe the third panelist, Mr. Doug Larder, does have that particular expertise. I think it's worth noting for the record that I had some questions around the background and qualifications of these panelists specific to this particular project. If in the course of later debate the detailed qualifications of those members of the panel were tabled, that would be of interest to me.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, I fully expect this bill to sail through the Assembly, and I genuinely hope that this is a project that generates vast amounts of clean, low-cost, minimally environmentally invasive electricity for this province on a renewable basis so that it will be in place for lifetimes to come.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It's also my pleasure to speak to Bill 15, the Dunvegan Hydro Development Act. This project is to be located in my constituency a few kilometres west of the historic Dunvegan site and the Dunvegan bridge, that a lot of people are very familiar with.

Mr. Chair, electricity is a facilitator of prosperity. It plays a very essential role in the living standards of Albertans and is an essential input for all of our industry to function and prosper in our province. Our provincial energy strategy is a plan that includes real actions to ensure we achieve clean energy production, positioning Alberta as a leader in energy for decades to come.

Mr. Chair, renewable energy sources are increasingly important pieces of Alberta's energy portfolio and our goal of clean energy production. We support renewable energy development and promote a market for its consumption. Enhancing the capacity of Alberta's electricity system is a key action as we work towards cleaner energy production. Expanding the use of hydroelectric resources creates these opportunities for clean energy production and the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions.

Over the past many years we've shown leadership in renewable energy development through the provincial energy strategy, and I will continue to support projects like hydro facilities. More than 7 per cent of Alberta's electricity generating capacity is hydro. Now, Mr. Chair, Glacier Power's proposed Dunvegan hydroelectric project would add a hundred megawatts to our hydro generating capacity. A hundred megawatts, I'm led to believe, is about the amount of power that's required to supply the city of Grande Prairie, as an example.

This project, as I understand it – and I've seen the plans – is a run-of-the-river facility designed to minimize environmental impacts. Low-impact hydro technology like run of the river gets energy from water flowing naturally downstream without changing or disturbing the downstream water supply, and I think that's an important point to emphasize. Bill 15 will provide the Alberta Utilities Commission the authority to issue a construction and operation order for Glacier Power's proposed hydro facility. A joint provincial-federal regulatory panel did determine that the proposed project is in the public interest, and the passage of Bill 15 would complete the next step in the provincial approval process.

Prior to its December decision the joint panel reviewed extensive evidence submitted by the applicant and intervenors. They called on expert witnesses to testify. The studies that Glacier Power Ltd. conducted were considered by all intervenors and the expert witnesses to be thorough and to have employed the best available modelling and science. Mitigation plans committed to by the applicant along with recommendations from the panel will address the identified impacts. Mr. Chair, I know that the proponents have spent a considerable amount of years studying this particular project, and they did spend a lot of time to make sure that they were using the best models and the best of science that was available to them to make sure that any issues were addressed.

Mr. Chair, aside from my particular support for this Dunvegan hydro project, this project is also supported by all of our local governments, and Glacier Power Ltd. has basically satisfied the immediately adjacent landowners who originally had concerns about the project. There are still a few downstream concerns from landowners that need to be fully resolved, and those are from residents north of the Tangent area who use the Shaftesbury crossing. They are concerned about the ice formations in the winter, but I'm very confident that the ongoing discussions that are happening as we speak will resolve all of these particular issues.

To wrap up, Mr. Chair, the proposed project will be an economic benefit to the region. By providing local power generation, it will provide employment and revenue and, in my opinion, has certainly no significant adverse effect. I'm confident that this proposal will produce clean, environmentally friendly power for well over a hundred years into the future.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's a pleasure to be able to rise and speak to this bill. I did speak to it briefly in second reading and at that point had said that I was unsure about where our support would be, but I have made some effort now to consult with as many people as I can up in that area. It does seem as though it is a proposal which warrants the support of our caucus, and I just want to review that briefly.

It is an area, of course, that's very dear to my heart. I grew up about two miles away from where the proposed dam will be. I went boating on the river, had my first tailgate party on the shores of the river right about there, worked at Dunvegan, the whole thing. You know, I want to make sure that it's all done just so. However, I wish I'd had the chance to go up there to consult with people. I didn't, but I did ask research in our office to call as many people as I could give them names of to inquire about it, and as I say, it does appear as though it enjoys a great deal of consensus in terms of moving forward with it.

Obviously, separate and apart from the community issues, I do want to join with my colleagues in speaking to the very important benefits that come from pursuing environmentally responsible hydroelectric production. We know that those provinces that have a developed hydroelectric system of electricity production are very well placed to address issues with respect to greenhouse gas emissions, and run-of-the-river projects do appear to provide some potential to negate the negative environmental consequences often associated with hydroelectric. There's no question that it's a clean, renewable, ongoing source of energy, so to the degree that we can safely pursue that source, we can't do anything but support it. I do understand that this is based on the notion that the downstream flow will remain unchanged and that to the extent there are ongoing concerns around fish in the river, those would be not impacted.

I understand that the people of Fairview are quite excited about the prospect of new jobs in the area as a result of the construction. I had just basically wanted to raise the one issue that the Member for Dunvegan did mention, which is the issue of the concerns expressed by citizens living close to the Shaftesbury crossing. My understanding is that they are concerned that with the dam going in there, the ability of an ice bridge to be formed during the winter will be compromised. My understanding is that there has been discussion with Glacier Power on funding for an enhanced-capacity ferry that will be able to function effectively during the winter to address ice blocks, as it were, that form on the river so that as a result they are able to cross the river at the Shaftesbury crossing throughout the year. It is certainly my hope, then – and our support, of course, is premised on the notion – that that commitment will be met and that the concerns of those citizens will be fully addressed. I understand as well that the Duncan's First Nation is also in support of the project in that they see it, again, as an environmentally friendly run-of-the-river renewable energy project.

With that being the case and having assured ourselves that there really appears to be no downside to this – and I certainly hope that I'm correct in that assumption – we will be giving our support to this bill and to the development of this project.

Thank you.

The Chair: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

Bill 5 Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009

The Chair: Does any hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It's my pleasure to rise today in Committee of the Whole to present Bill 5, the Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009. The proposed amendments are a result of a review of existing legislation and extensive industry consultation that included 20 agricultural boards and commissions, a survey of producers who are not actively engaged in industry organizations, and extensive meetings with other agricultural organizations across Alberta and Canada. The review also included an examination of what changes other jurisdictions, including Australia, the United Kingdom, New Zealand, and the Netherlands, have made to their agricultural industry governance.

The support received at second reading of this bill by the opposition is greatly appreciated, Mr. Chairman. There were some questions that I would like to address, particularly, that were raised by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood under the subject of moving reviews and appeals into regulation. The intent of condensing and moving part 5, the reviews and appeals section, of MAP into regulation is twofold. First, the intent is to make the review and appeal process more responsive to the needs of the parties involved. Moving the review and appeal processes into regulation will allow future improvements such as including alternate dispute resolution mechanisms to be made in a timely manner.

Secondly, currently part 5 of the existing act is somewhat confusing as reviews and appeals are included in the same section, and these are two distinct processes. This can cause some difficulties for those people who administer the reviews and appeals process, so the new regulation will separate it into two processes. Agricultural boards and commissions will be consulted on the drafting of the reviews and appeals regulation. Other than clarification, Mr. Chairman, it's anticipated that there will be very little, if any, change from the reviews and appeals process as it stands now.

Regarding the subject of changing the composition of the appeal tribunal, the intent is to move the current process for appointment of the appeal tribunal members from the act to the new regulation. Care is always taken, Mr. Chairman, by the minister and the marketing council alike to respect the independence of the appeal tribunal. There is no plan to have marketing council members serve as appeal tribunal members, and that will be made clear in the regulation. There has actually never ever been any interest from anyone in involving marketing council members in serving two roles.

In regard to the question about involving the Canadian Wheat Board in consultations, many Alberta producer organizations were directly consulted as part of the industry governance review examining this legislation. This legislation is similar to other federal and provincial legislation. There are some early discussions that went on with governments and national producer organizations. Alberta producers representing all commodity groups, including wheat and barley, which are under the Canadian Wheat Board, participated in the industry governance review. For example, the Alberta Soft Wheat Producers Commission were consulted. The Alberta Winter Wheat Producers Commission and the Alberta Barley Commission and their members were just some of the organizations which participated, Mr. Chairman. They all interact with the Canadian Wheat Board, but they're more closely representative of the producers themselves on the ground. All producers that participated in the industry governance review were encouraged to bring forward improvement ideas from all sources.

Lastly, Bill 5 continues to be legislation for establishing and operating producer commodity organizations. You have to be a producer, whether it's big or small, to vote in the elections of boards and commissions, you have to be a producer in order to get elected, and you have to be a producer to contribute service charges to that organization. During the industry governance review consultation participants asked about the ability to include nonproducers in their organizations. They saw the value in improving collaboration across the value chain and working together to achieve common goals. They saw the value of pulling outside expertise into their organizations. The subject of having nonproducers involved in producer commodity organizations will continue to be a topic of discussion; however, it is not currently in Bill 5. It doesn't include any changes in this area.

There were a couple of points, if I have some time, that I wanted to raise. The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood had pointed out how five out of the six members of the Wheat Board supported single-desk selling and actually said in Hansard that that meant that this government had no understanding whatsoever of what producers in this province wanted. I'd like to point out, Mr. Chairman, that the opposition party, the member over there, doesn't have a single representative from rural Alberta representing any farmers, so perhaps they are the ones that don't have any understanding of agriculture and what can best represent them.

Mr. Chairman, Bill 5, the Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009, ensures that Alberta producers, regardless of where they're from or what size their farm is, continue to have the ability to govern, to lead, and to support their own industry. Proposed amendments reflect the input of over 1,000 individual farmers and their respective commodity organizations. These amendments ensure that Alberta producers continue to have the ability to promote and market their products. It supports research in their industry and leads in the development of on-farm safety and animal care practices. These amendments will allow the current act to better serve the needs of our agricultural marketing boards and commissions, which in turn will help farms big or small.

I encourage all members of this House to give their full support to Bill 5. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Are there any other hon. members who wish to speak on the bill?

[The clauses of Bill 5 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I would like to move that we now rise and report Bill 1, the Employment Standards (Reservist Leave) Amendment Act, 2009; Bill 5, the Marketing of Agricultural Products Amendment Act, 2009; and Bill 15, the Dunvegan Hydro Development Act.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 1, Bill 15, and Bill 5.

The Deputy Speaker: Does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On that note, I would like to wish everybody a well-deserved break, working back in the constituencies even more than we have been over the past three weeks, perhaps, just to get caught up.

I would move that in view of the hour we call it 4:30 and, in fact, adjourn until Monday, April 6, at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:26 p.m. to Monday, April 6, at 1:30 p.m.]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 2nd Session (2009)

Activity to March 19, 2009

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. At the beginning of this week we ask for renewed strength in the awareness of our duty and privilege as members of the Legislature. We ask for the protection of this Assembly and also the province we are elected to serve. Amen.

Hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, we will now be led in the singing of our national anthem by Mr. Paul Lorieau. I'd invite all of you to participate in the language of your choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Thank you again, Mr. Lorieau. I sincerely hope that as the week closes, you will not be unemployed in your evening job. Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly, seated in your gallery, two outstanding Canadians, the Rt. Hon. Don Mazankowski and Mr. Paul Desmarais.

Of course, Mr. Don Mazankowski, officer of the Order of Canada, Alberta Order of Excellence, first elected MP for Vegreville in 1968, served in so many different capacities in the House of Commons but last and most importantly as the Deputy Prime Minister of Canada, also as Minister of Finance at some very crucial times for the country of Canada, and a patriot of the Alberta Heart Institute. He's accompanied today by Mr. Paul Desmarais, a chairman of Power Corp of Canada, of course, executive of numerous corporations around the world, member of Privy Council, companion of the Order of Canada. Mr. Paul Desmarais is here today to visit the Mazankowski Heart Institute.

I would ask them both to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly His Excellency Yerlan Abildayev, the ambassador of the Republic of Kazakhstan. Accompanying His Excellency is Adilzhan Ruziev, the second secretary at the embassy in Ottawa. I was honoured to host a special luncheon today in honour of His Excellency's first visit to Alberta. Alberta and Kazakhstan share many similarities. We are both geographically and ethnically diverse areas with vast natural resources. Our common interests have created a solid trading relationship, which we look forward to increasing in the future. We value our relationship with our friends in Kazakhstan and the opportunities our partnership creates.

I would ask that His Excellency and the second secretary rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the secretary of planning for the Mexican state of Jalisco, Dr. Victor Manuel González Romero, and his wife, Dr. Maria Morfin Otero.

This year we are celebrating the 10th anniversary of the twinning relationship between Jalisco and Alberta. This twinning relationship has allowed us to explore common areas of interest in agriculture, education, forestry, science, technology, and the environment. I might add, although it may be in self-interest, that they also produce copious quantities of tequila. By pursuing our common areas of interest, Mexico has become one of Alberta's fastest growing export markets, ranked fourth as our largest trading partner.

Dr. González is in Alberta to speak at a conference hosted by Athabasca University, and I understand that he will be touring the Legislature Building later and meeting with our Minister of Finance and Enterprise. Mr. Speaker, Dr. González and Dr. Morfin are seated in your gallery. I would ask that they rise and please accept the warm applause of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Jalisco is also the home of the rodeo and the mariachi in addition to tequila.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed my pleasure through you to members of the Assembly to introduce Anzac school in the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo. There are 26 visitors today, including teachers and parent helpers. I'd ask this energetic group from Anzac school to stand and receive the very warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all hon. members of the Assembly a visiting group from Suzuki charter school in the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar. There are 17 students with us today. I understand that earlier they had a model parliament before their lunch break. They are led today by their teacher, Miss Eva Bauernhuber. I would now ask them to please rise and receive the warm and traditional welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I along with my colleagues from Edmonton-Manning, Edmonton-Meadowlark, and Edmonton-Ellerslie had the distinct honour today of hosting some folks from India. These folks all belong to the Indian film and music industry and are, indeed, international superstars in their own right.

I'd first like to introduce Mr. Jazzy Bains, who is a singer. If you could rise. Mr. Bains has sold albums in the millions and is actually a native of Vancouver.

Next, comedian Gurpreet Ghuggi, who is, indeed, an advocate for the rule of law and has a very interesting way of communicating that to the Indian public.

Next, Miss Kulraj Randhawa, who was host of a popular Indian TV show, Kareena Kareena, and is currently in Canada to launch her second movie, Tera Mera Ki Rishta. Mr. Speaker, I won't try to translate that as I'm not known as being one for love movies, but needless to say, I encourage all members to watch this movie on April 10.

Last, Mr. Sukhwinder Chohla, who is a journalist from the Ajit newspaper in Jalandhar, and locally Mr. Gurbhalinder Sandhu, who is the editor of the Des Pardes Times newspaper and the co-ordinator for the event.

I ask all members to show our western hospitality to these individuals.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. First, I'm honoured as a former hockey player and coach myself to introduce to you and through you a sports legend in India, Mr. Pargat Singh, seated in the members' gallery. Mr. Singh is the king of field hockey, the captain of India's field hockey team in two consecutive Olympics along with numerous international competitions. In fact, he was awarded Padma Shri and Arjuna awards for his achievements, the highest awards you can receive in India. Mr. Singh has done much for the sport in India and around the world. I would ask Pargat Singh to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

My second introduction. It is also my honour to rise today and introduce to you and through you a good friend and a prominent member of the community, Mr. Joe Sunner, seated in the members' gallery. Mr. Sunner is the proud owner of Durabuilt Windows & Doors, with his head office in the beautiful constituency of Edmonton-Calder. Mr. Sunner has proven himself to be a good, generous man. Among his many contributions to the province one that stands out is his donation of $100,000 to the Guru Nanak Dev Healing Garden at the Mazankowski Alberta Heart Institute. At this time I would ask Mr. Sunner to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly representatives and staff from the Capital Region Board. Last Thursday the board presented the Minister of Municipal Affairs with its long-term growth plan. The members have shown excellent collaboration and co-operation so far, and I applaud them for their efforts.

Board members with us today are Mayor Kirk Popik, town of Calmar; Mayor Stephen Mandel, city of Edmonton; Reeve Wayne Woldanski, Lamont county; Mayor Greg Krischke, city of Leduc; Mayor Lloyd Bertschi, town of Morinville; Mayor Mel Smith, town of Redwater; Mayor Nolan Crouse, city of St. Albert; Mayor Stuart Houston, city of Spruce Grove; Mayor Cathy Olesen, Strathcona county; Mayor Camille Berube, town of Beaumont; Mayor Don Rigney, Sturgeon county; Mayor Allan Gee, village of Thorsby. Board alternates with us today also include Councillor Ed Gibbons, city of Edmonton; Councillor Ben Van De Walle, town of Morinville; Councillor Art Erickson, village of Wabamun. Capital Region Board staff joining us today are Chief Officer Kathleen LeClair, Andy Haden, Brandy Moorhead, Lisa Sederski, Sharon Shuya, and Peter Tarnawsky. Also, from Strathcona county are Yolande Shaw and David Turner. Our guests are seated in the members' gallery today, and I would ask that they all rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Ms Evans: It's a thrill today to introduce some women who have made huge contributions to community service throughout the capital region, most specifically to young ladies. Members of the 3rd Trefoil Guild, representing the Guides: Mary Gerritsen, Margaret Campbell, Edna Dach, Carmel Fenniak, Kathy Morris, Ruth Strandberg, and Mae Hadley. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask them to please rise as we show appreciation for their attendance here today.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you to the Members of the Legislative Assembly government employees from Employment and Immigration. These dedicated professionals work in the following areas of our department: immigration policy and programs, international qualifications assessment, Alberta immigrant nominee program, strategic marketing, and labour attraction. Their collective work ensures that newcomers are always welcome to our province, that they have the means to settle and make a successful life in Alberta. It is also their efforts that keep Alberta on the national and international radar as a destination of choice for immigrants. I'm honoured to welcome them here today and ask that all members of the Assembly give our guests a very warm welcome to the Legislature.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly Chief Ron Morin, Mr. John Park, and Mr. Paul Bercier. Chief Ron Morin has lived on the Enoch reserve his entire life and was the youngest chief elected to the Enoch Cree Nation, in 1993. The chief, as a man of great vision, has been instrumental in developing a number of innovative community-based projects. To name only a few, he was a key player in the successful development of the River Cree Resort and Casino, representing a $180 million investment. He oversaw the Millennium Housing Project and is currently pursuing the development of environmentally friendly refining right here in Alberta. I wish him luck in this ambitious project and admire his interest in investing in the future of our province through alternative, environmentally friendly energy resources.

Also with us this afternoon is Mr. John Park, the founding and current president of RCI bank of Canada. Out of Vancouver Mr. Park oversees the operations of Renaissance Capital Inc. and RCIC. He has been involved with Canada's immigrant program for the last 11 years, and prior to leading RCI, he successfully managed the Alberta-based royal Canadian immigrant fund.

Mr. Bercier is also with us today, a constituent of mine and exemplary Albertan and Canadian. He has served in our Canadian armed forces for over 16 years and, as such, has been awarded the Canadian Forces decoration/medal and United Nations service medal in commemoration of his first-rate service to our country. Now a consultant with Willow Industries Mr. Bercier brings to that company many years of environmental-related experience through his service on a number of national and provincial committees. A few of those include clean water/life and the national Métis committee on economic development, natural resources, and the environment.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that our accomplished guests please rise and receive the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. We have with us today Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop of the farm workers union of Alberta. The Farmworkers Union of Alberta was recognized as a legitimate voice of Alberta farm workers by none less than Judge Peter Barley when he granted the union legal standing at the inquiry into Kevan Chandler's fatality. They're here to remind the Premier and the ministers that the Farmworkers Union of Alberta stands ready for immediate consultations on implementing Judge Barley's recommendations to include paid farm workers under occupational health and safety legislation. They'll even meet you today if you wish, folks. Please give them a warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this House some constituents from the constituency of Mackay. I would like to ask these gentlemen to stand as I call their name: Mr. Appy Bhullar, brother of the Member for Calgary-Montrose, Mr. Balraj Randhawa, and Mr. Sam Sidhu. I would like the members to give them the warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we are now going to be up against a standing order, and I think it's prudent that we now proceed to Oral Question Period.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Government Hosting Expenses

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government has many wasteful and lavish spending habits. Hosting expenses on amounts over $600, as publicly issued in the Alberta Gazette, have soared in the last five years, yet the government admitted last week that there is no official hospitality budget. You can't control costs without a budget. To the Premier: given that over $1.3 million was spent on hosting expenses last year, why is there no official budget for hospitality expenses in the government?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member that asked the question is chair of the Public Accounts Committee and is fully aware of the budgeting process we use in this House, fully transparent in terms of all of the expenses that are put forward tied to any hosting done by a minister, by any MLA, or any member of the staff of any of the executive offices or any of the MLA offices.

1:50

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. The budget process as we know it is certainly flawed.

Again to the Premier. Of all the government departments the Ministry of International and Intergovernmental Relations spent the most on hosting expenses, over $155,000, in 2008. [interjections]

It's not a laughing matter. Where did the department find the money for all the dinners and drinks when there is no official hospitality budget?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the records will show that the minister responsible for International and Intergovernmental Relations has lived within the budget that was set by this Assembly last year.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Ministry of Environment beat out the ministry of advanced education for second place in the hospitality sweepstakes, spending $131,000 in 2008. Again to the Premier: where did the department find the money for all the dinners and drinks when there is no official hospitality budget?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, the ministers are assigned budgets, and their responsibility is to live within those budgets. I'm proud to say as we have ended this fiscal year, March 31, 2009, that all of our ministry budgets ended up being balanced.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Achievement Bonuses

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In only five years bonuses given to the child and family services authorities have increased by 92 per cent, from $548,000 in 2003 to over $1 million last year. In that same five-year period we have children being put into hotels, inadequate compensation and support for foster parents, and a Child and Youth Advocate that can't produce reports on time. It is inexcusable that your minister of children's services is allowing this situation to continue. To the Premier: how can you justify a 92 per cent increase in bonuses to senior officials given the recent track record of the children's services ministry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'm proud of the work that our minister of children's services has done. At a time where the economy is either increasing very rapidly and we have more children at risk, that are now in the hands of this government in terms of care, or the economy is slowing down and we're heading into a recession, we may have more families that require help. With respect to the bonuses this is a decision that I had made, that bonuses will be paid as of the end of this fiscal year, March 31, 2009, and no bonuses for next year. That's in keeping with the agreement we had with all our staff, both unionized and non-unionized.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I'm assuming the buck stops with the Premier, and $40 million worth of bucks will be flowing out in June. They should have stopped sooner.

Why was the Premier allowing some of the child and family services authorities to submit budgets up to eight months behind schedule last year yet still rewarding them with achievement bonuses? What exactly did they achieve if they can't even submit their budgets on time?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't know where the hon. member is coming from in terms of budgets. Budgets were delivered here to the House. The budget for the ministry was debated, and the motion was passed to approve the budget. From what I gather, it was done in a timely fashion and gave the minister the power to expend the dollars that were given to her by the power of the vote of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. To clarify, the money that was approved in April 2008 by this House was not approved locally by Calgary until late November.

Why did compensation for foster parents and other supports for children in care only increase by a tiny fraction of the amount that bonuses did? An extra million dollars would certainly go a long way to help the children in the care of our province.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, this is an agreement we had with about 6,100 management people across the province of Alberta. We lived up to that agreement. I would say that all of the management personnel, through their responsible deputy ministers, came forward and said that for next year, given the fact that our revenue stream is diminished considerably and we'll have more to do with less, let's work together. We won't go through the management bonuses. We'll save money going into next year so that we can look after the most vulnerable in the province.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Labour Protection for Paid Farm Workers

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Alberta trails the entire country when it comes to safety and rights for paid farm workers. This government clings to outdated policies while dozens of farm workers unnecessarily die and hundreds are unnecessarily injured. My question is to the Premier. Can the Premier explain why under this government's policy the truck driver with the hauling company that carries the cattle has the right to join a union, but the worker who loads the cattle at the feedlot does not? Why the discrepancy?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I think now the hon. member is talking about whether a farm worker has the right to join a union. I'm not up on all of the labour laws, but I suspect that in any operation if the people that work want to gather and vote on the right to join a union, they have that option. If I'm wrong, then the minister responsible for labour can correct me on that point.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. Actually, I'll correct the Premier. Despite a Supreme Court of Canada ruling, farm workers in Alberta are explicitly forbidden from organizing unions. My question is to the Premier. Since he delivered that answer in a spirit of goodwill, will he and his government live up to the ruling of the Supreme Court of Canada and grant paid farm workers in Alberta the right they deserve, which is the right to unionize?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, one of the things we do have to determine first is what size of operation the hon. member is talking about. Are they talking about a feedlot operation with three people working? Are they talking about one that's 30, 40, 50? Are they talking about seasonal workers that may operate on a vegetable farm or those that work seasonally during the time of harvest? These are all the kind of questions that we're asking agriculture, those that are in the business, to give us suggestions so that we can develop a good policy position.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're actually talking about all paid farm workers, whether it's three paid workers at a small feedlot or 50 at a big feedlot. They're all paid. They all, under the ruling of the Supreme Court of Canada, ought to have the right to organize unions. Again in the spirit of openness that the Premier is providing here: is the Premier prepared to move this issue forward and help Alberta's paid farm workers get the right they deserve, which would be the right to unionize? Can we move this issue forward, please?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, we're now in the middle of consultations. The minister of labour and also the minister of agriculture are holding consultations. We'll bring forward the evidence, what we hear from the agricultural community, bring it forward to the House, and the policy will be debated. This is where it's appropriately debated, I would think.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Carbon Capture and Storage

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government's carbon capture scheme is a $2 billion boondoggle in the making. Big oil players have yanked their applications because the only thing CCS has proven to be so far is a big waste of money, yet this government seems committed to rolling the dice in tomorrow's budget so long as the public purse pays the debts when they come due. To the Premier: why won't you scrap the CCS program from tomorrow's budget and use that money instead to create real, long-term jobs in the renewable energy sector?

Mr. Stelmach: I guess she already knows what's in the budget.

In all honesty, I know that the hon. member is following up on a bit of a stunt that Greenpeace did today. To those that are watching, somebody said that they hid $600 someplace on the Leg. Grounds. I don't know. Mr. Speaker, it's your grounds. Maybe we can ask people to find the 600 bucks.

You know, in all honesty, Mr. Speaker, the largest carbon footprint in the province is generated by coal-fired electricity plants. Those are the ones that had actually applied to the CCS fund. That is where we should start first. If we don't, the cost of electricity is going to skyrocket. It will further diminish our global competitiveness, and we will see more job loss.

They will not tell you that their goal is to significantly increase – increase – the cost of electricity. They feel that if they increase the cost of electricity, then they'll be able to bring down the carbon footprint because you and I would not be able to afford to turn our lights on in our house. That's what they want.

Ms Notley: The largest greenhouse gas emission will be the oil sands if you carry on the way you want to, and electricity will come down when you start creating renewable energy.

Your own figures show that dollars invested in infrastructure create nearly four times the jobs of a dollar in oil and gas, and meanwhile the Construction Owners Association of Alberta expects the sharpest rise in job losses to occur late this year or early next year. To the Premier: why won't you landfill your carbon capture idea, admit that it's just a PR tool, and prevent further job losses by investing this money where it creates the most jobs, in infrastructure?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, actually, the $2 billion that we set aside in carbon capture has been recognized as a very important policy. It has been recognized internationally: London, The Hague, throughout Europe. Even the President of the United States himself recognized that carbon capture is the way to go. Out of a 50-year span it's the first 30 years, more than likely, before there's new technology. Let's use carbon capture to bring down the level of carbon on our continent. This is a very, very good way of doing it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, tar sands executives don't seem to agree. They say that it's too expensive, too uncertain, and it's not likely to work. Now, meanwhile Alberta has lost more than 30,000 jobs this year, and more people are being put out of work every day. Thousands of qualified construction workers are looking to this government for help, and the answer in tomorrow's budget will be to bury their 2 billion tax dollars down a hole for PR and nothing else. Why won't you admit that using public policy to subsidize carbon capture is a fool's pursuit in tough times and invest this money in stimulus green jobs instead?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, it's a bit of irony, I guess. National Geographic did this article on Alberta. The actual text by National Geographic was fair and balanced, but the pictures that they used – unfortunately, they put in the picture of the open pit but not the picture of the reclaimed area of the oil sands. But, you know, so be it. Those are the issues that we have to face. At the same time the irony is that National Geographic is part of the Aspen Institute, which last week recognized Alberta – Alberta – of all the countries and the jurisdictions in the world, as taking a leadership role in carbon capture and storage.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Municipal Sustainability Initiative

Mr. Prins: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We all know that Alberta's municipalities receive significant support from this government through the municipal sustainability initiative. This unprecedented program assists municipalities to manage growth-related challenges and enhance their long-term planning. I know that the municipalities in my constituency have accessed this funding for their communities. My question, therefore, is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. How is MSI helping Alberta's communities today?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. MSI is having a real impact. Municipalities decide what their local priorities should be. Municipalities and communities are seeing new roads. We're seeing recreation centres. We're seeing fire halls. We're seeing libraries. MSI is making a difference today.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is also for the same minister. I would ask him: how is the government ensuring that MSI is used effectively in today's challenging economic times?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, municipalities are committed to building strong communities, and so is this government. This support is unmatched throughout this country. This government has also added extra flexibility. Interest can now be used by municipalities to offset projects that they are bringing forward. So they can use the interest from MSI. This is moving forward with infrastructure programs. This is allowing municipalities to do what they feel is best.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. My final question is again to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. How will this change benefit Albertans today?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think that there's a very simple answer: it will keep Albertans working. It will accelerate projects by having lower construction costs, and it will continue to build vital infrastructure. It's important. This government will continue to partner with municipalities such as you see here today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Waterfowl Deaths in Oil Sands Tailings Pond

Ms. Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In July last year Syncrude officials reported to Sustainable Resource Development the final count of the ducks drowned in the tailings ponds. These officials were then instructed to withhold releasing the numbers to the public. Eight months later the Minister of Environment didn't know the final count. My first question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Was it department staff or the minister who ordered that the information be kept from the public and from his colleague?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, it's a good thing for the member opposite that she's not in a court of law. That would be called a leading question. There were no orders given to anybody. We got the same numbers that she got, that everybody got last fall. Over the course of the fall and winter I heard that the numbers were higher, but this was in the course of an investigation. I didn't hear any specific numbers till they were made public last week.

Ms. Blakeman: Well, the Syncrude officials were very clear on who they reported to, and it was your department.

An additional question to the same minister: is it policy for departmental staff to decide that a member of cabinet would not receive vital information?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member across the way has her facts wrong. Syncrude worked with government staff in dealing with the ducks. If she has read the report, as I'm sure she has, subsequent to the initial count ducks were floating to the surface. This took time. As I said, there was no attempt made to suppress any information. It was confined in the context of the potential litigation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms. Blakeman: Thank you. This question is to the Minister of Environment. While the final number of dead ducks may not matter for the purposes of a judicial investigation and the laying of charges, does the minister not require final numbers for the purposes of assigning monitoring staff and other department-related actions?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess herein lies the difference between being the opposition critic and being the government minister. The minister is responsible for getting the job done. The critic is responsible for a degree of political grandstanding, and I think that's what we have on our hands here.

The actual number of ducks is part of the investigation that led to charges being laid. I think it's appropriate that we let the courts deal with that number in an appropriate manner. As for her question as to whether the number of duck mortality should affect the degree to which we have compliance with our legislation, of course not, Mr. Speaker. We enforce our legislation rigidly every day.

2:10 Postsecondary Application System

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I've heard from a few students and parents in my constituency that applying to postsecondary institutions can be both a frustrating and time-consuming process. My first question is for the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. With your new focus on a province-wide planning system will the application process get any better?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, I have heard those same comments, that it can be a frustrating process. In fact, being a parent of postsecondary students, I've found that out myself.

Alberta has been developing a new system. It's called ApplyAlberta. It's an important step forward for students to be able to apply to any one of our institutions in the province from one portal. We're testing the system out currently. Students will be able to create one profile on the system. All of their transcripts and all of their information will be uploaded into that one profile. They can apply with that one profile to a number of institutions across Campus Alberta.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, my second question is also for the same minister. That sounds great, but when will ApplyAlberta be up and running so that students can actually use it?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, it's important that we get the system up and running as quickly as possible because another benefit to it will be for us to be able to track student demand and the demand in certain areas. By the fall of this year, 2009, all 21 of the public postsecondary institutions are expected to be using ApplyAlberta. The funding is already in place. In fact, we've already been doing some trials at the University of Lethbridge. We've conducted a test of the system with students and with parents, and by all indications it's a big hit.

Mr. Dallas: My final question to the same minister: will students have to pay more to use this multi-application system?

Mr. Horner: There's not going to be any additional cost, Mr. Speaker. Students will not have to pay for the transcripts either. Most of Alberta's public postsecondary institutions do charge an application fee, and the students will be required to pay those application fees to those institutions that they choose to apply to. But in terms of the new system there'll be no new additional charges.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Alberta Adolescent Recovery Centre

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While externally fixed bars are considered an illegal fire hazard for secondary suites, they are currently legally acceptable for owner-occupied homes. For the past 20 years fixed external bars together with junior jailer-controlled locked bedroom doors have been key components of the nonaccredited Alberta Adolescent Recovery Centre, which poses as a government-regulated residential treatment program. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: if externally fixed bars are considered a danger for rental tenants, why aren't they considered a threat for home-owning family members or for the vulnerable youth prisoners of forced AARC confinement?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, first of all, Alberta has very strong building and fire codes to help individuals keep safe in secondary suites. Municipalities choose whether to permit secondary suites. Standards for new suites have been in force since December of 2006. We are working with municipalities to ensure that the right standards are in place.

Mr. Chase: You completely missed the question. Secondary suites are enforced. Homeowners can bar their homes without any kind of result from your department. The rules need to be changed.

To the Minister of Justice: given the broad range of legal exemptions under the assumption that a person's home is not only their castle but can serve as a jail, what type of mandatory correctional training should homeowner wardens or their junior jailers have to ensure the safety of our prisoners?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not even quite sure of the point of that question or what the answer to that might be, but I don't think it's within the purview of my department.

Mr. Chase: The point is that no one in this government is looking out for the well-being of children imprisoned in homes.

To the Minister of Health and Wellness: how can your ministry account for the physical safety or psychological well-being of either vulnerable adolescent prisoners or the families of at-risk youths who are required as participants in the AARC program to become jailers in your government's unregulated home prisons?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, what this government is concerned about is that if we have a youth that is in need of help, we help these youth. Sometimes in this Legislature you do something that you have a fair bit of pride in. During the break I happened to receive this from the families of AARC, from the students who've gone through the program. I'm going to table this so that that member can stand up and talk to these hundreds of students who've gone through this program, and he can read whether or not the program is working.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Capital Region Municipal Planning

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A year ago the Minister of Municipal Affairs established the Capital Region Board, and I'm pleased that there are a fair number of them in the audience today. He gave them the mandate to come up with a land-use plan and transportation plan by the end of March 2009. These plans have now been developed into one comprehensive plan, the capital region growth plan, which was unveiled last week. My question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Can the minister please tell this House how this growth plan will affect municipalities in the capital region?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier created the Capital Region Board because he saw a tremendous opportunity for the region. Regional co-operation is a priority for this government for the success of the region and also for this province. It is absolutely critical that what has taken place with the regional board be accented: communication, collaboration, co-operation. This approach will support strong and viable communities in this region.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I agree that this has been a very significant accomplishment for this region's municipalities. In reference to these plans, will these plans control development within all municipalities in the capital region?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, no. This is not about controlling development. This is a regional look at planning, and this is an integrated and strategic approach to regional planning. It is imperative that we look in the long term in regard to development and infrastructure and conservation. This process ultimately supports, as I said before, a very strong capital region.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. I understand that a similar plan is being prepared for the Calgary region. When will that plan be completed?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Calgary Regional Partnership is up on a website for comments not only from adjoining municipalities but from individuals. They have said that they hope to have their plan in place by June. As with the capital region plan, I'm very much looking forward to the Calgary plan as well as other co-operative efforts that are taking place in this province to help develop communities.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Centralized Cytology Lab Service

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is now clear that there was a request for proposals sent to lab service providers and that there are plans to only have two provincial labs providing cytology services. On March 19 in question period the Minister of Health and Wellness suggested that my questions were based on rumours and appeared not to know anything about the proposed changes. My questions to the Minister of Health and Wellness would be: whose decision was it to centralize the cytology lab service? Was it the minister's or the Health Services Board's?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the member is correct relative to the earlier question, and I make no apologies for saying that I was not familiar with the question but subsequent to that did ask for an answer. The answer I have is that these lab services are being centralized to Calgary and Edmonton, and there are a number of good reasons for it. The decision, by the way, was made by Alberta Health Services.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. I'm wondering: what is the time frame for the decision and the timeline for implementation? I'm sure the minister must know.

2:20

Mr. Liepert: I don't have the exact timeline, but the decision has been made, and I presume that it will be implemented soon.

Ms Pastoor: The decision has been made. Thank you for that. I guess we'll all just sit and wait and see what that decision was.

You've indicated that there was a good reason for it. Would you table evidence and results that could show that a cost-benefit analysis of centralizing cytology lab services was performed?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I didn't indicate that the reason it was being centralized was because of cost. What I did say was that there are good reasons for it, and I'd be happy to supply the member with a written answer.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government covered up the truth that over 1,600 ducks were killed in a Syncrude tar pond. On February 9 this year the Environment minister – and I'll use his word – grandstanded, boasting about the charges against Syncrude in a press conference, but conveniently forgot to mention that the death toll of the ducks was more than three times that which people had been previously led to believe. To the minister: how long will your campaign of cover-ups continue before Albertans get the transparency that they deserve?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I've indicated publicly that I became aware that the initial estimate of 500 ducks was going to be exceeded fairly early on in the process, but by that point we had an investigation under way. That investigation subsequently led to charges being laid. Those charges are now before the courts. The number of ducks that were involved in this is very much material evidence in that case. I think that it would be inappropriate and perhaps even an affront to the courts if I was to disclose publicly information that will be part of an ongoing court case.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, the minister previously said that the number of ducks would have no impact on the penalty sought, so I don't see what the relevance actually could possibly be. Now, the minister was reported as saying that he never knew how many ducks died on the pond until Syncrude went public. Then when we found out that his underlings in the ministry knew well before that, the minister said that the truth was irrelevant. Then he said what we've heard again, that it would hurt the case against Syncrude, which is ridiculous because Syncrude is who made it public. To the minister. You're either embroiled in another cover-up, or members of your ministry aren't doing their jobs. Which is it?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, there was an investigation. In the course of that investigation there was a determination on the mortality of ducks in this circumstance. The numbers that have been brought forward by Syncrude are a requirement under their operating to report bird mortality. The investigation will present the evidence in court, and that evidence is part of the court proceeding. I can't comment on whether or not Syncrude's numbers are the same as the investigators' numbers.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, this cover-up has swollen Alberta's international black eye even more. It has been reported in National Geographic, in Forbes magazine, in the Washington Times, in the Denver Post, on CBS, and it's all over the Internet. This cover-up was over dead ducks. Last month we learned that charges of pollution in the Athabasca River were kept quiet on the eve of an election. To the minister: how many cover-ups need to be exposed before you learn that honesty is the best policy?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, every member in this House – well, with the exception perhaps of that one – knows that I have a reputation of being a straight shooter. The point of the matter is that there sometimes is a balance that must be maintained between transparency and being successful in prosecution. I would suggest that this hon. member would be far more critical of this minister if as a result of disclosure of inappropriate information, this company was able to get off on a technicality. That's the reason why we're very careful.

Health Services Board Remuneration

Mr. McFarland: Mr. Speaker, during our break a small southern city daily newspaper made a report about a 25 per cent increase in rates of remuneration to the new Alberta health board. The subsequent calls to my constituency office came up with the consensus that per diems are quite fine but that these $50,000 honoraria are obscene. My question to the Minister of Health and Wellness: can you explain just what component of this salary remuneration package has a 25 per cent increase and how it came about?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there was no increase. What the situation is is that when we created the one health board last spring, we appointed an interim board and put in place a temporary honorarium. As we moved towards appointing a full-time board last December, I did two things. First of all, I asked the chair to give me an indication of the amount of work that they had taken on, but secondly, I also did a comparative factor of boards of similar size and responsibility. The ministerial order was signed – I think it was last November – designating the honorarium for the permanent board of Alberta Health Services.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister please explain to me what the governance savings are for this government when you compare the honoraria, the per diem, and the travel expenses of these 15 board members with the 15 other regional so-called voluntary board members that were in place?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I can't do that because we need to allow the board to have at least one year of operation under the permanent structure before we have some actual data. I do need to ensure that I correct something that the member said in his question, and that is that the previous regional health authority boards also received honoraria. It was in varying degrees, but they were not strictly volunteer board members.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you. Finally, to the same minister: would the minister please outline if possible the salary range – this is coming from constituents who want to know what the salary range is – of the new senior executive, the CAO, CEO, COO, or whatever they're referred to as?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, when the new CEO of Alberta Health Services was hired, there was a news release issued. It's on the website. My recollection is that the salary of the new CEO is some $575,000 annually, which is certainly commensurate with other salaries for running an organization of that size. I don't have in front of me the other executives' salaries, but I can tell you that they're less than that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Grizzly Bear Protection

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has shown a continued neglect for the protection of the grizzly bear in Alberta. Current numbers show that the population is more at risk than ever. The Minister of Sustainable Resource Development has said that the anecdotal stories from hunters will be compared to detailed DNA data when determining whether to allow the hunting of Alberta grizzlies. Why does the minister place as much weight on anecdotes as on scientific evidence?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I've said before, I don't say that the two are equal at all. What I'm saying is that the very people that have done the scientific evidence are interested in looking at the anecdotal evidence as another way of looking at the same phenomena. This sort of triangulation of data is a healthy way to go about it and will produce better results. The two different groups are collaborating, and the result will be better data for us to make our decision on.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, the minister's own Endangered Species Conservation Committee report from 2002 states that "the biological status of species should be determined by independent scientists using the best science available in an open and transparent process." Why, then, is the minister giving hunting groups an equal say in determining the status of the grizzly bear?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, we are using the best available scientific evidence. We're using exactly the same methodology that was used in the Yellowstone park area to do a successful grizzly bear status assessment down there. It's nonsense to say that we're giving different groups a say. This isn't a question about giving different groups a say. It's a question of taking different types of data gathered in different ways and actually, in cross-referencing them, getting a better result.

Mr. Hehr: Well, then explain to me this, Mr. Minister: how is it that a biological status by an independent group of scientists couldn't be done by them alone? Why are we relying on two separate groups to do this?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, every sampling strategy has its strengths and weaknesses. The weaknesses of the DNA are that you're baiting specific sites and expecting or predicting that bears pass through and leave some DNA. It is considered one of the best sampling techniques available, as I said, used in the Yellowstone park study, but it has its weakness: you put the sampling sites in areas where bears are available. The complementarity of the two data sets, I repeat, is the combination of the two studies, not a weakness.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

First Nations Development Fund Grants

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently I attended a meeting with representatives of Treaty 6 along with several MLA colleagues and the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. The First Nations development fund was discussed, and some First Nations said that there are delays in processing the requests. My questions are for the Minister of Aboriginal Relations. What can be done to speed up the application process for this grant program?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think the application process is already very streamlined. In fact, last year we reviewed 200-plus applications, and that bodes well for the staff involved. But as part of our due diligence sometimes we do require additional information or additional budget items to be addressed, and in every case we require a band resolution to accompany the grant request. Those kinds of things can sometimes precipitate understandable delays, but we are working with First Nations more closely than ever right now to help with the process and help ensure that the applications that do come in are completed properly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: can the grant payout timelines be amended so that First Nations might receive their grants sooner than once every three months?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, that issue actually goes back to the original agreement that was negotiated by the First Nations and the government of Alberta in 2001. I'm happy to say, though, that under that particular policy we've never had any late payments, at least none that were precipitated by us. If we were to contemplate a change in the due process of that particular issue, we would have to consult with all 47 First Nations again and, of course, with the gaming and liquor control people, and that would precipitate delays. Finally, if we were to look at additional payments, that would require additional administration and additional costs as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. Finally, to the same minister: given that the FNDF program is achieving good success in First Nation communities, will you consider expanding the program's criteria and project eligibility so that more projects can be funded?

Mr. Zwozdesky: In fact, Mr. Speaker, all projects that are eligible right now include infrastructure projects, economic development projects, social development projects, and community development projects, but we are wanting to be clear that projects that are not eligible would include such things as gaming activities or per capita distributions or payments against loans or payments against debts. Those are clearly outside the purview and not eligible. I'm happy to tell the hon. member that we have not had to decline any applications under the First Nations development fund program using the current criteria, which, in my view, are therefore working quite effectively.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Oil and Gas Industry Fracturing Chemicals

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In Pennsylvania natural gas companies are allowed to keep their fracking formulas proprietary, but the ingredients are public record. In Alberta companies can keep the chemical compounds in their fracturing fluid secret, and therefore scientists do not know what to test for. This puts Alberta's groundwater at risk. My questions are to the Minister of Environment. What reason does the government have for allowing companies to keep secret the chemicals used in their fracking formulas?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, that question would more appropriately be addressed to the Minister of Energy, responsible for ERCB.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, that is the case in Alberta and British Columbia. I don't know about Saskatchewan and other provinces. In fact, the majority of the frac fluid used in the province of Alberta currently, particularly in unconventional gas – and I believe it's the area that the member opposite would be suggesting is taking place in the eastern United States – is water. Secondly, the areas that are fracked in the province of Alberta are not anywhere near potable or surface water contaminant possibilities.

Ms Blakeman: Well, then, to the same minister: how does the government expect to get a true result from the testing of Albertans' well water that is close to well sites if the scientists do not know what to test for?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, what I would suggest is that if there is any indication of the types of surfactants or release agents that actually provide lubricant to push frac fluids and frac solids into fractures in production facilities underground, if there was any contamination, cross-contamination, it would not be difficult for the ERCB to be able to determine what those contaminants and chemicals were.

Ms Blakeman: Secrets, secrets.

Back to the same minister: given that diesel is commonly used in other centres as a fracking agent, how can Albertans be sure that diesel is not being used here and is not contaminating our groundwater?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, that again is an entirely different process that the member is talking about. Most certainly, we do have areas in certain circumstances in the province where the geology is sensitive to water and water contamination of the geology causes decrease in production capability, but it's a completely different issue and used for different processes in the industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The assured income for the severely handicapped program, known as AISH, is a very good and unique program in Alberta. The rising cost of living has put great pressure on Alberta AISH recipients, who are already counting on every dollar they receive. To the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports: what is the government doing to support AISH recipients through this difficult economic downturn time?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the AISH program will continue to provide financial assistance and a wide range of health and supplemental benefits to eligible Albertans with disabilities. Front-line staff work closely with AISH clients to advise them of the benefits available to them. Staff with the AISH program are also working with other ministries to ensure that when an AISH client is referred, they are referred to a program that will meet their unique needs.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you. To the same minister. My constituent, who is an AISH recipient, met with me a few weeks ago. She has a dependent child, so she receives an additional $100 a month on top of her AISH income. My question to the minister is: what happens to this additional amount when she turns 18 and is still dependent on her parent?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the AISH program will continue to provide the $100 child benefit to clients for a dependent child who is between the ages of 18 and 20 and who is also attending high school. The dependent child is also eligible for health and supplemental health benefits during this time. When dependent children become adults, it's our hope that with the education that they are receiving, they will be able to pursue the opportunities available to them in our province. They could also apply for government programs such as student loans or income support specific to their own personal situation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you. To the same minister. The AISH recipient who has dependent children can earn up to $975 before the benefits are reduced. When the child turns 18, this limit amount is reduced to $400. Can the minister look into this to make it fair when the child is still dependent on the AISH recipient?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the AISH client would not have their employment income exemption rate reduced if the dependent adult continues to attend high school and is between the ages of 18 and 20 years. As I mentioned in my previous answer, the AISH client would also continue to receive the $100 child benefit. AISH also provides a children's education benefit to assist clients with the costs of dependent children attending preschool through high school.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the question period. There were 96 questions and responses today.

We'll now return to the Routine. The Routine was at the subject matter of ministerial statements. I will introduce the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs and will ask him to convey to his delightful wife, Lorraine, our grateful thank you's for putting up with the hon. minister for 35 years in happy marital bliss. She certainly made him a better man.

Ministerial Statements

Capital Region Municipal Planning

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There are 25 municipalities in the capital region, large and small, rural and urban. Each has a distinct history and a distinct identity, but they also have a shared interest as we look to the future, an interest in coordinated growth, efficient services, and a high quality of life for all residents in the area. Our government has the same interest. That is why one year ago our Premier brought these municipalities together to plan for future development of the region.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to inform this House that the Capital Region Board has met the key element of its mandate. Last week the board officially presented me with the capital region growth plan. This is an outstanding accomplishment. It is a testament to the leadership of our Premier and to the leadership of the elected officials from all the capital region municipalities, many of whom, as you see, are with us in the Assembly today.

These municipal leaders are able to work together, plan together, and focus on the best interests of the region as a whole. I know it wasn't easy. They worked hard and made the difficult decisions, and I commend them for their tremendous dedication. In the course of over 80 meetings they compromised when they had to, and most importantly they communicated, they collaborated, and they co-operated. As a result, they were able to develop a blueprint that will help shape the future of this region. The capital region growth plan provides an integrated and strategic approach to that future. It identifies overall development patterns and future infrastructure needs. It will be the mechanism to ensure that decisions are co-ordinated, that duplication is avoided, and that economic growth is promoted.

The plan includes four major elements. First, there is the land-use plan, that is based on the following six principles: protect the environment and the resources, minimize the regional footprint, strengthen communities, increase transportation choice, ensure efficient provision of services, and support regional economic development. Second, Mr. Speaker, there is a plan for a regional intermunicipal transit network. It includes a governance model, service policy, and potential route plans. Third, there is a plan for a region-wide integrated geographic information system. This system will provide the detailed mapping and the electronic data that will be the foundation of more co-ordinated decision-making in years to come. Finally, the capital region growth plan includes a regional strategy for affordable housing. It will enable the region to better accommodate changing demographics and prepare for expected growth.

The government will now review the plan to ensure that it meets the criteria and objectives set out in the Capital Region Board regulation. We will make sure that it aligns with the provincial policy and protects the interests of all residents. We will also continue to support the co-operative efforts of the board as it moves on to the next phase of its work – that work is vital to the future of this region and our province and the government of Alberta – and it will continue to fulfill its role in promoting prosperity and building strong communities in the capital region.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the members of the Capital Region Board for their accomplishments so far. Their successful collaboration is attracting notice from across the country and is a prime example of what can be achieved when we work together. I applaud the board members for their hard work, and I wish them all the best as they continue to work hard and work together for the future of our communities.

Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: On behalf of the Official Opposition the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The capital region has needed a plan for growth and sustainable development for a long time. I am pleased that the long-awaited capital region growth plan is based on sound principles and new intermunicipal relationships.

I join the hon. minister in congratulating the Premier and the hard-working municipal leaders who hammered out a plan for the long-term benefit of so many citizens. There's no doubt that this would not have happened without the involvement of the Premier, and I think that as time progresses, the entire region will recognize that this is a step in the right direction.

We are glad to see that the plan focuses on sustainable land-use development, affordable housing, and an intermunicipal transit system. These are undoubtedly necessary goals for the continued economic success of Edmonton and the region. We in the Alberta Liberal caucus want to see communities that are environmentally sustainable, well connected, and provide all citizens with a very high quality of life. This plan has the potential to meet those goals.

As with any plan its success will depend on the full support of this government, not just verbal support but ongoing financial and planning support. All too often we've seen this government bring forward excellent plans only to have those plans collect dust on a shelf somewhere, unfunded and unimplemented. The stakes here are too high to allow this to happen again. The capital region has the opportunity for a bright future, but realizing that opportunity will require leadership and action.

A growth plan is a good first step. We are glad that it has been taken and that the region's municipalities have come together, and they have come together, again, through the leadership of the Premier and his hon. minister. But this is only the beginning of a very long journey, one that will require good faith, effort, and hard work from local and provincial leaders alike. I hope that this government follows through with the promise on this plan because it's certainly needed.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has caught my eye. I anticipate that the hon. member will want to request unanimous consent to address the Assembly on this matter. I will do it on her behalf and ask one question: if any hon. member is opposed, please say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and to all members of this House for allowing me the opportunity to respond on behalf of the NDP opposition.

Firstly, I do want to commend both the minister and the Capital Region Board for the hard work that they've put into preparing their report. They have made many positive recommendations, and we hope that the government will follow through on many of them.

However, it is important that we reflect on the past and current situations in order to understand the purpose and importance of the capital plan. The Klein cuts of the '90s included axing the regional planning commissions. This government changed legislation to disband the 10 commissions and repealed their plans, leaving community planning the functions of individual municipalities. Since that action the capital region has faced a number of serious issues, including the impacts of urban sprawl, the transit deficit, duplication of services, problems with economic regional planning, and the need for community-based schools in both new and established neighbourhoods. Municipal planners from outside of Alberta have repeatedly identified a number of deficits in Edmonton with respect to its planning. In short, many of the challenges that we are now very genuinely congratulating the Capital Region Board for starting to address were caused in large part by decisions of this government over 10 years ago.

Now, the Capital Region Board has been asked to look at a number of issues relating to urban and suburban living in our capital region. Among these issues members have been asked to consider a land-use plan, a housing plan, and an intermunicipal transit network. Unfortunately, the government has changed the rules in the time between asking municipal officials to undertake this large task and today. They released a land-use framework that requires substantial legislative changes before any real accomplishments can be reached, and this government, unfortunately, has not yet followed through. They announced a plan to eliminate homelessness without, unfortunately, any monetary commitments, so it has not yet been followed through on. They yanked nearly $2 billion from the promised Green TRIP, a public transit fund announced a year ago, that this government has not followed through on.

I commend the Capital Region Board for meeting their mandate and living up to their promises. However, until this government is committed to implementing its recommendations, I am concerned that this report, as identified by others, may just collect dust on the bookshelf. It's obvious that a lot of work has gone into this group and its plan. They've lived up to their side of the bargain, and now it is up to the government to follow through on theirs.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, in 30 seconds from now I'll call upon the first of a number of members to participate.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Excellence in Teaching Award Semifinalists

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every school day teachers across this province encourage students to embrace and enjoy learning and make valuable and meaningful contributions to students' lives. Our students consistently rank amongst the best in the world, and this is a direct reflection on the tremendous amount of work being done by teachers in Alberta classrooms.

Through the excellence in teaching awards program teachers and principals are recognized for their individual and invaluable commitment to our students and to the future of this province. The nominees for the excellence in teaching awards are teachers and principals who use creativity and innovation to motivate students to succeed. They show leadership and work with their teaching colleagues to create a positive school climate. They are champions for their schools and for their students.

This year, Mr. Speaker, out of 365 eligible nominations 134 teachers and principals were selected as semifinalists. They will be honoured at two special celebration dinners later this month and will have access to $1,500 for professional development. From this group of semifinalists 23 final award recipients will be selected and formally honoured at a dinner and awards ceremony with the Education minister in Edmonton on May 30. Of the 23 award recipients 20 will receive the provincial excellence in teaching award and will have access to $4,000 for professional development to further develop their teaching skills. Three out of the 23 award recipients will receive a Smarter Kids Foundation innovative use of technology award, which includes a comprehensive technology package.

Mr. Speaker, the excellence in teaching awards have been celebrated since 1989, with more than 8,200 teachers nominated and more than 400 who have received awards. I am pleased to rise today to recognize all of the outstanding teachers and principals across this province and give special congratulations to the 2009 excellence in teaching awards semifinalists.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Prescription Drug Coverage

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Official Opposition made many good suggestions recently to extend prescription drug coverage in Alberta to all citizens. We need a more extensive public pharmacare program based on models in other Canadian provinces to help reduce rapidly rising pharmaceutical costs and to ensure proper access to medications. The government has failed to listen to the Official Opposition. The government has failed to listen to Alberta seniors. These seniors are outraged at the latest government proposal, which downloads even more costs onto their already stretched household budgets.

I would urge all hon. members of this Assembly to please read a research paper written recently by Aidan Hollis, an associate professor in the department of economics at the University of Calgary. It is titled Generic Drug Pricing and Procurement: A Policy for Alberta, by, again, Professor Hollis. Professor Hollis proposes a new approach for Alberta designed to obtain low prices for consumers and fair treatment for pharmacies and manufacturers. Some of the proposals include a descending maximum price with inflation indexing, a cap on rebates or other considerations granted directly or indirectly to pharmacies by manufacturers, an open formulary, a royalty paid to the first generic entrant that successfully challenges a patent. There are ways other than gouging seniors to control prescription costs. Seniors in this province should not have to endure a means test at their local pharmacy before they receive their medication.

Now, in conclusion, I would remind hon. members of what Professor Hollis has stated and noted: "In 2007, the Government of Alberta spent approximately $887 million on prescription drugs through community pharmacies, while private expenditures . . . totalled $980 million." About one-quarter of the spending was for drugs that were not patented. There was a $15 million savings here if we had followed a different model.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

South Fish Creek Recreation Complex

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two good-news announcements to share from the southwest quadrant of Calgary. The first involves the South Fish Creek recreation centre, which was originally designed to include four ice surfaces, but to this point only two could be built. Although the centre is not in my constituency, many of my constituents use it and helped to build it. Arenas provide an invaluable opportunity for Albertans of all ages to be active and develop valuable life skills. The members of the SFCRA are to be commended for their time and commitment in acquiring the necessary funds to construct the final two arenas.

The MLA for Calgary-Shaw, our Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, and I were on hand as our Minister of Culture and Community Spirit delivered a $3.2 million cheque in matching funds, I might say, from our government's major community facilities program to aid in the completion of this fine project. The expansion will serve more than 400,000 annual users from Calgary, Okotoks, High River, and many other rural areas.

Our Minister of Culture and Community Spirit was also on hand to deliver 750,000 MCFP dollars to Hull Child and Family Services, and these funds were matched by Hull. They'll be invaluable in the development of a new mental health treatment facility to assist at-risk youth who live with addictions, abuse, and behavioural issues.

Since 1962 Hull has served troubled young people and struggling families and developmentally challenged adults, over 3,000 people every day. They are to be commended for working miracles on a daily basis. Mr. Speaker, there is great news all over Alberta, and with this government's partnerships we don't have to look very far to find them.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Pete Eager Fire Hall Wind Energy Project

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to congratulate the city of Grande Prairie and Golden Sheep Power Inc. on a partnership that has led to the development of the Pete Eager Fire Hall wind generation project. This exciting initiative has the potential to take the wind and turn it into clean power and profits for residential, agricultural, and commercial use. By utilizing compact wind turbines to harness wind, property owners could potentially produce their own electricity and sell any extra electricity generated back into the grid at market value. At the same time, if you're tied into the electrical grid and should you use more energy than you produce, you can draw from the grid. The Pete Eager Fire Hall project will not only study the noise-to-wind ratio but would also determine if local residents support wind energy production in their community.

I am pleased that this project may help determine how a bylaw can be developed to best accommodate small wind turbines for residential purposes. As we all know, Mr. Speaker, Albertans live in one of the most beautiful and healthy natural environments in the world, which is why we are committed to sustaining it. This project is impressive because it's one step closer to reducing our environmental footprint and is another example of this province's entrepreneurial spirit. In this way the project supports this government's commitment to ensuring clean energy production. I always encourage the development of renewable energy, and I look forward to the success of this project.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, momentarily I'm going to have to rise – and I have done it now – on Standing Order 7(7), which states, "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly." We still have a portion of our Routine to go through. I will anticipate that perhaps members might want to continue the Routine. We need unanimous consent to continue, so I ask the question: is any member here opposed to continuing the Routine? Any member who is, say no. Okay. We're going forward.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Building Leadership for Action in Schools Today

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last month I was honoured to have the BLAST team in my hometown of Drayton Valley make an excellent presentation in my constituency office. BLAST, or building leadership for action in schools today, was formed out of a partnership between the Lung Association and the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission in 2002. The BLAST program educates youth throughout the province about the dangers of smoking and the use of smokeless tobacco. Of course, I am very supportive of their efforts.

The Drayton Valley team is coached by Chris Schoepp and consists of four grade 7 and one grade 8 student: Nick Jodouin, Jessica Gustafson, Tristan Seely, Elyas Patey-Taylor, and Alicia Potter. At BLAST conferences the students learn about current issues about tobacco and work on team-building and leadership skills in order to develop a youth action plan for their community. Following these conferences, the students are responsible for implementing these plans. This BLAST team is presenting to their elected officials and their peers and have also run ads in the local papers.

It is wonderful to see the students involved with the BLAST program getting involved in their community and promoting healthy lifestyle choices throughout the province. Great job to all of them. I look forward to seeing the results of their work and leadership. Our future is certainly in great hands with this young group of team leaders and the youth. Congratulations to them.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

783 Air Force Wing

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to acknowledge the 783 Air Force Wing, of which I am proud to have been named an honorary member. I was recently invited by a couple of my constituents, Al and Bev Spielman, to attend the 783 Air Force Wing anniversary banquet on March 21, 2009. Based out of Calgary, the 783 branch has positioned itself as an important part of the broader Air Force Association of Canada.

Established in 1948, the Air Force Association of Canada is identifiable through its support, sponsorship, and encouragement of all aspects of aviation, aerospace, and aeronautics. This directive means that the group has been very active within Calgary, Alberta, and Canada through a variety of projects, including honouring the past traditions of the Canadian Air Force and providing a common bond for all aviation personnel; encouraging improved aviation legislation; actively promoting the future of Canadian military and civil aviation by lobbying for the procurement of improved military aviation equipment; participating in community programs designed towards development of Canadian youth, particularly the air cadet activities; undertaking local community charitable projects; honouring the achievements and efforts of deserving groups, organizations, or individuals associated with Canadian military and civil aviation; fostering and encouraging a spirit of fellowship among those involved in aviation endeavours; and, of course, working for Canadian unity and encouraging responsible citizenship among all Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, the 783 Air Force Wing is a prime example of an organization in our province that is working hard to make a difference in our country. I would like to take the time to thank the 783 Wing for their contributions to this province and wish them all the best in the future.

Thank you.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. One is a program from the East Coulee Spring Festival, that occurred this past Saturday in East Coulee, just east of Drumheller. It was a very successful event, designed to raise funds for the local museum. A number of local merchants participated. A number of hotels and bed and breakfast individuals gave away free lodging for the artists, who dedicated their time free of charge for this wonderful fundraising event. Among the various performers was a young, upcoming Alberta musician, Tim Hus, who represented Alberta in our centennial year at the Smithsonian Institute.

My second tabling recognizes the wonderful, talented efforts of the Alberta Ballet company, that has been operating for 40 years in this province. It was an opportunity and a tremendous treat for myself and my grandson to attend the performance this past Thursday in Calgary. The ballet performed Alice in Wonderland in Calgary from April 2 to 4 and in Edmonton from March 27 to 28, a wonderful experience for all.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings today. The first is an outline of hosting expenses over $600 by ministry for the government of Alberta as publicly disclosed in the Alberta Gazette 2004 through to 2008, which I referred to in question period earlier today.

The second tabling I have is a letter that was written by our constituency office on May 27, 2008, to the Chief Electoral Officer over on Kingsway Avenue. It's regarding the conduct of poll 75 in Edmonton-Gold Bar on the March 3, 2008, provincial election date.

My third tabling is an initial response that I received from Elections Alberta, from the Chief Electoral Officer, dated June 2, 2008, in response to my original letter.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the chair wishes to table copies of the written submissions provided by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in support of her purported question of privilege raised on March 19, 2009, and written submissions by the hon. Government House Leader on the same purported question of privilege. As members will recall, on March 19 I indicated to both and any other members that should they wish to provide written submissions to me, they should be received in my office by March 26, 2009. They were, so I am now prepared to deal with the subject matter that was raised at that time. But, first of all, we're going to deal with the Clerk.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Horner, the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology, Advanced Education and Technology public postsecondary institutions audited financial statements, universities and Banff Centre for continuing education for the year ended March 31, 2008, and public colleges and technical institutes for the year ended June 30, 2008.

Privilege

Rights of the Assembly

The Speaker: Hon. members, those of you who have ever watched the television series The Tudors may find this ruling of interest. On the last day before the spring break the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona raised a purported question of privilege concerning the regulation-making authority found in Bill 18, the Trade, Investment and Labour Mobility Agreement Implementation Statutes Amendment Act, 2009. This bill is currently at committee stage. The member's purported question of privilege is based on section 5 of the bill, which would amend schedule 6.1 of the Government Organization Act by making a subsection 7(2), which would allow the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations that "may suspend the application of or modify a provision of an Act or regulation or may substitute another provision in place of a provision."

Both the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and the Government House Leader submitted written materials on March 26, 2009, that restate and supplement their arguments made in the Assembly on March 19. The chair has tabled these submissions. The full exchange on this purported question of privilege is found at pages 499 to 503 of Alberta Hansard for that day.

With respect to the technical aspects of Standing Order 15, the Speaker's office received written notice from the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on March 19, 2009, at 11:19 a.m. of her intention to raise the purported question of privilege and a brief description of the issue. Accordingly, the two-hour notice requirement of Standing Order 15(2) was met. For the reasons that will follow, the chair will not comment further on whether this matter was raised at the earliest opportunity.

Essentially the member's argument is that the provision in the bill would allow the government to amend legislation that is passed by the Legislature without returning to the Assembly. The member argues that this provision constitutes a breach of the Assembly's privileges, or, alternatively, a contempt of the Assembly.

The type of provision found in Bill 18 that is the subject of this purported question of privilege is often referred to as a Henry VIII clause and, as the chair has discovered, has been the subject of much discussion not only in Canada but across the Commonwealth. The United Kingdom Parliament website indicates that the House of Lords Select Committee on the Scrutiny of Delegated Powers in its first report of 1992-93 defined a Henry VIII clause as: a provision in a Bill which enables primary legislation to be amended or repealed by subordinate legislation, with or without further Parliamentary scrutiny. . . . The clauses were so named from the Statute of Proclamations 1539, which gave King Henry VIII power to legislate by proclamation.

Erskine May, 23rd edition, at page 664 states: "power may . . . be conferred, by what is known as a 'Henry VIII clause,' to amend the statute itself by delegated legislation or to amend other statutes."

In conducting research – and we were busy – we discovered that a written question in the British House of Commons asked, "How many Henry VIII clauses were contained in primary legislation enacted in Session 2007-08?" The answer contained in the British House of Commons Hansard for March 2, 2009, was that "the Government do not routinely collect or hold information about the number of Henry VIII provisions."

In the arguments raised by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, there is no reference to any instances where such clauses have been ruled a prima facie breach of privilege. Clearly, the references from the United Kingdom and the court decisions in Canada do not indicate that there is any breach of privilege involved when these clauses have been enacted although they may be perceived as objectionable.

Members should be aware that apart from decisions on money bills it is not the role of the chair to rule on the legality or constitutionality of bills. That is the role given to the courts. As noted in the Government House Leader's brief, this principle is cited in Beauchesne's sixth edition at paragraph 31(9), where it is stated that "the failure of the Government to comply with the law is not a matter for the Speaker, but should be decided by the courts." This is also clearly stated at page 21 of Parliamentary Practice in B.C., fourth edition. There have also been rulings in this Assembly on this issue, the most recent being from the chair on March 3, 2005, as noted at page 26 of Hansard.

The ability of Parliament or a Legislature to delegate authority to amend statutory provisions was set out as long ago as 1917 in a decision by the British House of Lords.

Accordingly, the chair rules that there is no prima facie question of privilege, and this matter is now concluded with the following addendum. The chair should not be seen as endorsing the use of these types of clauses. There is no doubt that they detract from the role of the Assembly; however, the question as to whether a Henry VIII clause ought to be used is different from the question as to whether it may be used.

Orders of the Day

Written Questions

[The Clerk read the following written questions, which had been accepted]

Long-term Care Costs

- Q1. Mr. Mason:
For the fiscal years 2003-2004 to 2007-2008 what was the average cost per resident per month at a designated long-term care facility?

Contracted Psychiatric Services

- Q3. Mr. Mason:
For each of the fiscal years 2006-2007 and 2007-2008 what was the total value of psychiatric services contracted by regional health authorities, RHA, broken down by RHA, and what was the total value of psychiatric services contracted by the Alberta Mental Health Board?

Physicians in Alberta Towns

- Q5. Mr. Mason:
What was the number of physicians working in Alberta towns for each of the fiscal years 2005-2006 to 2007-2008?

Placements for Children in Government Care

- Q8. Ms Notley:
For each of the fiscal years 2005-2006 to 2007-2008 what was the average amount of time taken by Children and Youth Services to find permanent placements for children in permanent government care?

Long-term Care Facility Costs

- Q10. Mr. Mason:
What were the total government subsidies provided to long-term care facilities and the total operating expenditures for those same facilities for the fiscal years 2003-2004 to 2007-2008?

Long-term Care Facilities

- Q12. Mr. Mason:
How many long-term care facilities, with their respective bed complement, were operating in Alberta on March 31 for the years 2007 and 2008, broken down by regional health authority and whether the facility and service providers are/were owned/operated publicly, privately, or on a voluntary basis?

Alberta's Brand Campaign Costs

- Q14. Mr. Mason:
How much money has been spent on Alberta's brand campaign in the United States in the fiscal year 2007-2008 and from April 1, 2008, to February 10, 2009?

Legal Aid Services

- Q16. Ms Notley:
For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 on how many occasions were approved legal aid services not provided due to unavailability of counsel?

Legal Aid Services

- Q17. Ms Notley:
For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 what was the average income of people accessing legal aid?

The Clerk: Pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) written questions are deemed to stand and retain their places with the exception of Written Question 2, Mr. Mason.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Designated Assisted Living Costs

- Q2. Ms Notley asked on behalf of Mr. Mason that the following question be accepted.
For the fiscal years 2003-2004 to 2007-2008 what was the average cost per resident per month at a designated assisted living facility?

Ms Notley: I'd like to note that the former MLA for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview asked this question of the government in the spring of 2006, and at that time the minister of health rejected the question on the grounds that the ministry doesn't keep track of that information. However, the minister said at the time that she would be doing some follow-up work on this to see whether or not we can do what is most important; that is, to be accountable to Albertans for the dollars that are spent in these situations and to see whether there is a value in attaching a valuation to those kinds of care facilities for that particular cost.

It's been three years since the then minister of health agreed to do that work, and the question now is just as pertinent as ever. I would suggest it's a great deal more pertinent given the government's announcement with respect to their continuing care strategy made in December of 2008, a strategy which would see no increase in the number of net long-term care beds in Alberta and, rather, a move to increase supportive living beds, or designated assisted living beds, with the supposed rationale that those beds are the most effective way to care for seniors as they age.

This government, it would appear, is attempting to shift people who would have previously been in long-term facilities to designated assisted living. We would suggest that above and beyond the issues that we do raise quite regularly about the level of care that we would suggest is not provided in those alternative facilities, there's also an issue with respect to cost, we suspect, and the public deserves to know what the costs of these assisted living facilities are on a per-resident basis per month. We know absolutely that the residents themselves will see higher costs with every additional little service, that they have to pay extra for bathing, that they might have to even pay extra for medication preparation, depending on the circumstances, and certain other personal care efforts that are made on their behalf.

Given that this was something that the previous health minister had suggested might be worthy of providing information to Albertans on and given the increased reliance on this type of care being provided to seniors in lieu of long-term care being the policy of this government, we think that sort of having this information provided to us is even more pertinent than it was when the question was first asked three years ago. We would like to see where the minister has gotten, with that reference back again to the comments made by the previous minister of health in the spring of 2006. I believe it was on April 3, 2006, that the minister of health responded for future reference. So it's on that basis that we are seeking that information.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, do you have a position on this?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I would recommend that the Legislative Assembly reject this question. The rationale for rejecting this question is that Alberta Health and Wellness does not directly fund designated assisted living. Block funding is provided to Alberta Health Services to finance publicly funded health services provided in designated assisted living sites. Therefore, the information requested is not available.

If the member would like to find further details, she's welcome to go to the RHA audited financial statements. In addition to that is the opportunity to ask questions regarding these expenditures both in the budget estimates that are coming up and if our department appears before Public Accounts.

Again, I would just conclude by saying that the information is not available in the form that is being asked for; therefore, I would ask that the House simply reject this question.

Thank you.

3:20

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, do you want to participate?

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, in supporting this written question I would like to note for the members of this Assembly and pass along our condolences to the hon. member of the third party, who recently lost his father and is very much involved in the grieving process at this moment.

With regard to the information I am hoping that the minister of health, as he has suggested, will be able to provide the information, the intent, which this question has raised. From 2003 through 2008 the government has moved more individuals towards assisted living, which is considerably more expensive than long-term care because the individual is expected to pick up a large portion of the costs in these facilities. Therefore, getting the cost to the individuals, residents, whether it's a private facility or a publicly owned facility, is extremely important. The costs both of long-term care and of assisted living care have risen dramatically.

The Auditor General in the 2004-2005 year reported on the deficiencies he found within a sampling of long-term care programs, and it would be interesting if the Auditor General were given the opportunity to pursue an equal investigation into designated assisted living facilities.

Any information the hon. minister of health can provide in providing a cost average for residents on a monthly basis in designated assisted living would be much appreciated. If this question lacks the focus the minister is looking for, then I hope he will find it in his heart and in his ability to research the information. This information is important for all Albertans. We're all going to eventually end up in either assisted living or long-term care, and those prices, short of dying on the spot, are going to be extremely important to us.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief. I'd just like to add that I think that this information would be very important when we balance it against the fact that presently in the province people are not aging in the right place, and they are not receiving the care that they really need. Designated assisted living is not the answer. Some of them really should be in long-term care. This information would be interesting to balance the cost against the fact that they are simply not receiving the care that they require.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to conclude the debate.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd just like to make a couple of points. The minister suggested that this was not information that was collected or that they had available, but I do note that the ministry has agreed to respond to our Written Question 1, which is the same kind of question except that in that case it's dealing with long-term care facilities.

I have to say that I'm a bit surprised to discover that that kind of information can be researched and collated and compared for long-term care facilities but not for designated assisted living facilities. That seems to me to be rather odd, particularly given that there was a primary decision made by the government to shift their policy towards choosing designated assisted living over long-term care because of the so-called institutional element of long-term care. It would seem to me that there would have to have been some type of cost-benefit analysis and, thus, a comparison of costs between the two. It's clear that that information is there with respect to long-term care facilities. As well, the minister suggested that we could get that through the estimates process, but again, if we could get it through the estimate process, presumably it's available.

You know, a lot of times these questions come to the Legislative Assembly because we ask the Legislature itself to put its full authority behind our request for that information, so it's on that basis that we ask all members to consider approving our request for this information as it is of great interest to all Albertans and to two seniors in particular.

Thank you.

[Written Question 2 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Student Loan Debt

Q7. Ms Notley asked that the following question be accepted. For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 for Alberta students with student loans what was the average size of their student loan debt at the time they left their respective postsecondary institution?

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The reason we are seeking this information is because we know that Alberta's average tuition is the fourth highest in Canada, that 50 per cent of university students will graduate with an average of $20,000 in debt across the country. We know that postsecondary tuition rates have tripled, and we have been made aware of some research stating that postsecondary students who acquire annual debt of $10,000 or more have only a 20 per cent chance of graduating. We also know, of course, that Alberta has Canada's lowest postsecondary participation rate and that high costs are a significant barrier to young people accessing our postsecondary institutions.

We think that for a number of different reasons the public should know how much debt students in Alberta are graduating with. Parents and children need information like this to plan for the future. We also think that making this information public would make this debate clearer and end speculation based on loan amounts. We also believe that this is public money that is being spent and that the public should know how much is being loaned on average. And we'd like to know ultimately how to assess what the government is providing for university costs and how much we're putting on the shoulders of students.

So it is with those questions in mind that I am seeking support. I believe I'm aware of a suggestion that might be coming from the minister on this to change the wording slightly, and as far as I can tell, that does appear to be a reasonable proposal.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and move an amendment to Written Question 7. I do believe that all members have been provided with copies, and the amendment has been provided to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

The amendment seeks to clarify terminology used by the Alberta student financial assistance program as well as policies for student loan repayment. The amendment also reflects data that is readily available from the Alberta student financial assistance program. The amendment strikes out "student loan debt at the time they left their respective postsecondary institution" and substitutes "net student loan debt at the time of consolidation, which is six months after they cease being enrolled as full-time students."

The question as originally worded requests information on student loan debts when students leave their postsecondary institution. However, leaving a postsecondary institution is not the key criteria upon which repayment policies are based. Some students leave one postsecondary institution and then enter another either because they're changing their program of study or because they're pursuing another credential. As long as these students continue full-time in a program designated for student financial assistance, they are not required to begin repaying their government student loans. Student aid recipients must begin repaying their government student loan six months after they cease being enrolled as a full-time student.

In addition, my amendment seeks to clarify that the provincial student loan debt to be repaid is net of any loan remission that may be applied. Alberta has in place the loan relief program, that reduces provincial student loans for eligible students. After any loan remission the amount to repay is considered net student debt.

Thus, Mr. Speaker, the motion will read:

For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 for Alberta students with student loans what was the average size of their net student loan debt at the time of consolidation, which is six months after they cease being enrolled as full-time students?

I believe that with the acceptance of these amendments we'll be able to provide clear and accurate information to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

3:30

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, because it is your motion that is being amended, I'll recognize you first. We're talking about the amendment now.

Ms Notley: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I did allude to in my initial comments, I think that the amendments being proposed make sense in terms of being able to track the information. Ultimately we're being provided the information we are seeking, so I'm quite prepared to support that motion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the amendment.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you very much. I very much appreciate the minister of advanced education reframing the request. My only concern – and I would put this to the minister for his advisement – is the cost for part-time students. I know that at the University of Calgary a number of students cannot afford to attend on a full-time basis because they have to have so many jobs to pay for their tuition. So if part-time students' debt could be included as well as full-time – a debt is a debt – that information would be appreciated.

The Speaker: Others to participate?
Then I'll call the question.

[Motion on amendment carried]

[Written Question 7 as amended carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Protection of Sexually Exploited Children

Q9. Ms Notley asked that the following question be accepted.
How many people have been charged under the Protection of Sexually Exploited Children Act since its implementation?

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have been provided with a proposed amendment to Written Question 9. Unfortunately, it didn't get to our offices. I'm only seeing it now, so I won't speak to that. I'll just speak in general to the question that I'm seeking to have answered here.

The Speaker: That would be good because we have not had an amendment moved yet.

Ms Notley: Sorry. That's good.

The Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act was initially introduced in '98, and in 2007, as we know, it was amended and renamed the Protection of Sexually Exploited Children Act. Among other amendments the age of the child was raised from 18 to 22, and the children's advocate was named as the primary contact for children. As you may know, the NDP opposition caucus spoke in support of both the 1998 and the 2007 legislation. So what we are now seeking is to get some information with respect to how effectively this legislation has been working. For instance, has it significantly increased the work required of police officers?

When the act was amended in 2007, one MLA in support of it noted that since the implementation of the act in 1998 over 770 children had been helped to leave the street behind. We would also like to know what that number is now. Essentially, the public has a right to know how effective a legislation is at stopping the perpetrators of that exploitation. If the act is not meeting the goals that it was supposed to – i.e., protecting the children – then the public needs to re-engage in the debate about how to best protect sexually exploited children and whether there are other strategies that should perhaps be prioritized.

It's with that background that I'm seeking that information today. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to move an amendment to the motion on the floor today with respect to Written Question 9 and then move that that be accepted with amendments. The amendments will seek to delete the phrase "people have been charged" and substitute it with "charges have been commenced" and adding "and the Protection of Sexually Exploited Children Act, PSECA." The question will now read: "How many charges have been commenced under the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act and the Protection of Sexually Exploited Children Act, PSECA, since its implementation?"

The Justice online information network, with the acronym JOIN, does not collect statistics on the number of people that have been charged but on the number of charges that have been commenced. Though the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act was implemented in 1999, JOIN statistics only date back to February 1, 2001. In November of 2007 the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act was replaced with the Protection of Sexually Exploited Children Act, so I would suggest that this rephrasing of the question will achieve the hon. member's objective and give clear information to the House with respect to the intent of the question as opposed to the original form of the question.

I trust that the hon. member will appreciate the context of the proposed amendments. Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, would you like to comment?

Ms Notley: As I mentioned before, I've not had a chance to consider these amendments because they were not provided to my office in time for me to consider them before coming to the House today. It does appear on the surface, with respect to the points made by the hon. Attorney General, that these amendments ought to still provide us with the kind of information that we are seeking.

I guess I'm a touch concerned that if we can't track the number of people who have been charged, if there's not a consistency between the number of charges that are laid each time someone is subjected to the authority of this act, then we wouldn't necessarily get a sense of the scope of its coverage vis-à-vis the number of people that it's actually stopping or attempting to stop or whatever. That is a bit of a concern, that we're unable to track the number of people who are subject to the authority of the act. There's no question that the number of charges generally would also provide some measure of the effectiveness.

As a starting point we'll certainly consider this information. If we have further questions, we'll send them on over. So I will support, then, this proposed amendment to my motion.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I want to thank the hon. Attorney General for providing the information in the form of the amendments that she has provided. Children are obviously extremely vulnerable to abuse. The government recognized and has recognized the need to protect children. Just today, for example, the Minister of Children and Youth Services indicated that the government will now be working with hotel and motel managers to attempt to provide them with greater information to protect children who might be abused in those private facilities. It is extremely important, and the amendment recognizes the need for the protection of sexually exploited children.

What is not necessarily clear within this amendment but will hopefully become clearer as we discuss the bill on lengthening the time of stay in protective custody for children involved in acts of prostitution is the rights of the child. The government is wishing to move towards enshrining parental rights in the human rights amendment, and I would ask that the Attorney General work with the member responsible for Children and Youth Services to enshrine at least on an equal basis the rights of children.

I will look forward to receiving, as well, a copy of the information that has been requested by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Is there anyone else who would like to participate? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to thank the Minister of Justice and Attorney General for bringing this forward. When they talk just about prostitution, we think about it as a physical act perhaps on a street or in a hotel room. Children are being sexually exploited, yes, in those places, but it's huge on the Internet. I think that this will be able to protect the children that are being exploited through the Internet and on YouTube and all of those other places that aren't obvious to the average person on the street that could then, perhaps, report it. The ones that find it on the Internet are often the ones that are the perverted users.

Thank you.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: Would the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona like to close the debate on the question as amended, or should I call the question?

Ms Notley: Call the question.

[Written Question 9 as amended carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

3:40 Assisted Living Facility Costs

Q11. Ms Notley asked on behalf of Mr. Mason that the following question be accepted.

What were the total government subsidies provided to assisted living facilities and the total operating expenditures for those same facilities for the fiscal years 2003-2004 to 2007-2008?

Ms Notley: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. The rationale for seeking this information is not completely disconnected from the rationale which I articulated with respect to our seeking information under Written Question 2. The province's new continuing care model talks about additional supportive living spaces, and assisted living falls into that category.

Given that the government is relying so heavily on assisted living as a big part of its new continuing care strategy, it is important to know how much the government is spending to support these facilities. Assisted living already costs more for seniors, as I've noted before, than being in long-term care and offers a lower level of support. The government seems interested in putting people into assisted living who have previously gone into long-term care. We know that seniors pay more for less, and now we need to know what the government is paying for that same service.

I would also like to point out that Written Question 10 was accepted, and that was the same question but in relation to long-term care facilities. So, again, my hope is that given that these are all part of a continuum of care that is to be provided to our seniors, the government would have at its disposal the same information that it has for long-term care facilities – subsidies, costs, all that kind of thing – as it also has for the broad range of facilities that provide services to seniors under the supportive living space model.

That is the basic rationale for our request. Again, it is information that we require in order to critically analyze the costs and the benefits to Alberta taxpayers as the government moves forward on its continuing care strategy, and it allows us to engage in a more informed debate of the rationale and the motivation, the merits and the demerits, if you will, of this process.

I think that there are, without question – and I suspect that members on the opposite side of the House would agree with me – a number of seniors in the province who are very, very concerned about this issue and about the strategy. I'm sure that many members from all sides of the House have heard a great deal from seniors over the past few months. The more information that we can put out there to these seniors, the better for all of us, I believe.

It's with that spirit in mind that I'm requesting that this information be provided. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I stand to address Written Question 11, received from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. I move that Written Question 11 be amended to read: "What were the total government operating grants provided to provincial lodges, and what were the total operating expenditures for those same facilities for the years 2003 to 2007?" These amendments allow us to respond by focusing on seniors' lodges as these are the only type of supportive living facilities that receive operating grants directly from government. Lodges report accommodation and related operating expenses for room and board to government through annual audits.

I'm also recommending amendments to the time frame requested to align with the most recent audit, received in 2007.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We have an amendment. I'll again recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona because she moved the motion.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I do appreciate the time taken to respond to my motion by the minister. However, I can't support these particular amendments for a couple of different reasons. First of all, assisted living and provincial lodges are two different things, and we're not wanting to limit the request for information to simply provincial lodges. As well, we're not simply seeking information about operating grants. On the contrary, we are looking for information with respect to any nature of government funding.

The continuing care strategy lists the different kinds of continuing care available in the province. Lodge living is listed as level 2 on the supportive living spectrum. Assisted living is listed as level 3 on the spectrum. Enhanced living, which includes designated assisted living, is listed as level 4. There are obviously very different kinds of care.

As well, the amendment to change “subsidies” to “operating grants” is not something that we can accept because it would then not include capital grants, which we are also interested in receiving information on as that, of course, impacts quite significantly on costs to the taxpayer as well as the overall efficacy of this particular strategy. For that reason we are looking for the broader amount of information that we were first requesting in our Written Question 11.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. One of the reasons I am having trouble with the amended motion begins with the word “subsidies.” For example, a member of the Health Resource Group, who owns three seniors’ homes down in Red Deer that are privatized, is receiving not only operating grants, but he’s receiving subsidies not only as the owner but as the consultant to the government on the running of these facilities. By taking out “subsidies” and saying “operating grants,” his consulting fees I don’t believe would be captured under the term “operating grants.” It’s important to note that the Health Resource Group got a very good deal on what was formerly the Grace hospital in Calgary.

Now, with regard to the second portion of the amendment, striking out “assisted living facilities” and substituting “provincial lodges,” I don’t believe that “provincial lodges” completely captures the designation that is being looked for in terms of funding assisted living facilities. As was previously noted, those operating costs are borne to a large extent by the seniors and their families because every single piece of toilet paper, any toothpaste, and any toiletry items are accounted for and billed to the residents or to their families, and therefore there are considerable costs involved. I’m not sure that by limiting it to just provincial lodges, that will be covered.

I do appreciate the hon. Seniors and Community Supports minister for talking about her inability to provide 2008 statistics at this time. Obviously, that’s not something that is available, but I would hope, even if the amendments are for some reason voted down, that the minister will follow through and provide the information requested for the 2008 year and table that as soon as it becomes available. I’m assuming that that will happen.

As it stands now, more information has been requested, and I believe more information is required to satisfy the original intent of Written Question 11. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

3:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, will not be supporting this amendment because I don’t believe that it’s getting at what the question really is. I think it’s sidetracking it a little bit.

The other thing is that the original question was asking for assisted living facilities, and this one is asking for lodges, and these are totally different. According to what I’m hoping we all understand as definitions throughout this province, which I’ve been asking for for a long time so that we all are speaking the same language and that our definitions are province-wide, these are two different entities.

I think that by having these amendments, it’s not getting at the actual question. We all have to remember that regardless of how the money is put in, whether it’s grants or however it gets put in, a public dollar is a public dollar. Even if it’s one public cent, it should be accountable, and we should be able to have that information whenever we ask for it.

The Speaker: Are there additional participants, or should I call the question?

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: Is there additional debate, then, on the motion as amended, or shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

Contracted Psychiatric Clinical Services

Q13. Ms Notley asked on behalf of Mr. Mason that the following question be accepted.

For each of the fiscal years 2006-2007 and 2007-2008 what was the total number of psychiatrists contracted to provide clinical services for regional health authorities, RHA, broken down by RHA, and what was the total number contracted to provide clinical services by the Alberta Mental Health Board?

Ms Notley: Thank you, again, Mr. Speaker. The rationale for this request is as follows. In his 2005-2006 annual report the Auditor General stated that “the basis for allocating the mental health funding to the [regional health authorities] is inconsistent with the population-based methodology.” We need to make sure that mental health treatment is accessible in all parts of Alberta, and a big part of that is having enough psychiatrists in all regions of the province.

Now, in the Auditor General’s October 2008 report he recommended that Alberta Health Services should eliminate the gaps in mental health service across the province. By gaps in service, we mean a program that either does not exist or has a long wait time. Poorly coordinated care also signifies a gap in services, resulting in clients not getting the care they need or even “falling through the cracks.”

By receiving this information we have something with which to compare the current and future numbers of psychiatrists providing mental health services across the province. This way we can see if the switch from regional health boards to the superboard has had a positive or, conversely, a detrimental effect on staffing of mental health care.

We’ve had the Auditor General identify at least twice that there is a concern with respect to the accessibility of mental health care on a regional basis within the province. We have also had a number of people express more recently that there is actually a concern about the provision of mental health services all across the province, not just on a regional basis but on an absolute basis. I personally am of the view that it’s basically the next crisis in our health care system or one that is in play right now that we are not even fully apprised of yet.

It’s for this reason that we think this information needs to be provided so that, again, as members of the Assembly we can keep the government accountable and track the way in which this matter progresses forward and also because, of course, there are a number of people within our population who would be interested in finding out this information because they are themselves fully engaged in advocating for improvements to the system under which we provide mental health services to Albertans in need of them. So it is for this reason that we are seeking to have this information provided to us.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Minister of Health and Wellness I would like to propose an amendment to this motion. The members, I believe, have a copy of the amendment in front of them. The amendment reads that Written Question 13 be amended as follows: (a) by striking out “number of psychiatrists contracted to provide clinical services for regional health authorities . . . broken down by [regional health authority]” and substituting “number of in-province physicians submitting claims under the specialty of psychiatry, broken down by regional health authority”; and (b) by striking out “, and what was the total number contracted to provide clinical services by the Alberta Mental Health Board.”

The amended question would read then:

For each of the fiscal years 2006-2007 and 2007-2008 what was the total number of in-province physicians submitting claims under the specialty of psychiatry, broken down by regional health authority?

Mr. Speaker, the data that Alberta Health and Wellness collects does not include psychiatrists contracted directly by the regional health authority or by the Alberta Mental Health Board. That information would have to be collected directly from those respective organizations. By amending the question, we're able to provide the data that Alberta Health and Wellness has regarding psychiatry. The Health and Wellness data that we provide is based on fee-for-service claims and services provided under the alternative relationship program.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am concerned about this amendment to this request for a variety of reasons. Again, it is always concerning when we hear that the government does not have access to this information and that, instead, some not really so arm's-length organization would have that information. Particularly, given that we've just gone through this whole process of consolidating these not so arm's-length organizations into one body that, presumably, has a much more accountable relationship to members of the executive across the way, I am a little concerned that that so-called distinction in the relationship is being used as a means of ensuring that we don't get the full information that we require.

There's no question that the amended motion would still provide us with some important information in terms of giving us the number of in-province physicians submitting claims under the specialty of psychiatry. However, I am not clear on whether that would allow for general practitioners who provide certain medical services to actually be covered under that so that you've got your GP, for instance, prescribing some type of psychiatric medication. If that's the case, then we don't get to the heart of the issue that this question is trying to address, which is the equitable distribution of mental health services across the province on a regional basis.

I suspect that there are more than a few physicians out there, particularly in rural areas, who in great frustration and in attempting to do the best they can for their patients will prescribe to them and treat them for psychiatric ailments while, at the same time, being very frustrated at the inability to access the psychiatric specialty. I would actually be quite interested to hear whether this amendment would cover that situation or whether the amendment still would provide simply for an amount that is paid out to a psychiatrist even if we're not breaking it down by the number of psychiatrists but, rather, are breaking it down by the number of dollars. If I could know that what we're talking about are psychiatrists, then I would be okay with the amendment, but if what we are talking about are GPs doing psychiatric work, then that is a problem for us.

The second issue relates to the Alberta Mental Health Board. The reason we included the Alberta Mental Health Board in our original question is because, frankly, the history of the Alberta Mental Health Board and the degree to which it has successfully integrated with different regional health boards across the province is varied and inconsistent. So there is no question that there are some regions within which the Alberta Mental Health Board actually was providing the majority of services and where the integration between the services of the Alberta Mental Health Board and the services provided by the regional health authority was done differently from region to region. We are concerned, then, about withdrawing that amendment from this question because, again, we cannot be getting the full story without including the Alberta Mental Health Board.

We understand, of course, that now the Alberta Mental Health Board is part of Alberta Health Services, so it would seem to me that it would be quite possible for Alberta Health Services to get that information from the Alberta Mental Health Board. That's what I meant, that the Alberta Mental Health Board is part of the large board and that all of that information could be made available to Alberta Health Services.

So with those concerns identified, because the regional distribution of mental health services within our health care system is a critical piece of information that we need to have before us because it impacts directly on how well the government is doing in providing one of the most important types of care that it provides and because the amendment may well negate our ability to distinguish between the psychiatric provision of mental health services and general practitioner provision of mental health services, we cannot accept that amendment.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have a variety of concerns with regard to the amendment as well. Mental illness strikes 1 in 5 Albertans. Of those who are struck by mental illness, it occurs to over 50 per cent of the individuals prior to age 14. As a person who is responsible for both Education and Children and Youth Services I am concerned about the accurate reporting not only of the information but, obviously, the treatment that is being reported on.

There was a degree of authority and autonomy given to local regional health authorities. They delivered, obviously, the services locally and were accountable for those services. What is now happening is that regional health authorities are being replaced by a superboard, and the superboard has not only taken over the responsibilities for cancer and AADAC, but the Mental Health Board falls under the auspices now of the superboard. I'm not sure that the new superboard will be able to do a better job in ensuring the equivalency of treatment that local authorities were able to provide, whether through the Mental Health Board or through their regional health authority.

An example – and I don't know if it fits into the category of mental illness, but it is certainly an illness of the mind – is autism. I have been working with a mother who was formerly in Medicine Hat who had been requesting service dog support for her severely afflicted child. Unfortunately, she was not able to get those services. However, the hours of respite care and specific treatment that were provided in Medicine Hat were longer than those in Red Deer. So the need to know the specifics of where we've been in order to evaluate where we're going is extremely important.

Also, in terms of the second part, the striking out portion of the amendment, the Auditor General pointed out concerns in his 2007-2008 report with regard to the superboard assuming these services but not having clearly defined goals, so he wasn't able to judge as to whether the superboard taking over control of mental health would be able to arrive at goals that weren't clearly defined. Therefore, I'm not convinced that amendments (a) and (b) to Written Question 13 are going to provide the necessary information.

I believe that the number of children alone that were seen under the auspices of care for mental illness was somewhere in the neighbourhood of 58,000, so just for children alone their treatment and the supervision of their treatment is extremely important. If I have calls to my office with regard to mental treatment to the extent I've received on a whole variety of other health issues unable to be answered anymore at the local level – if we add mental illness to this lack of accountability, then I fear for the future of treatment.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of my concerns about this has been brought up by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, where in fact GPs are acting as quasi-psychiatrists. Certainly, some of the smaller mental treatments can be handled, but I think that it's very important that we know the number of psychiatrists. I want to know not only the number of psychiatrists but also what their specialties are.

I don't believe that we have enough child psychiatrists in this province, nor do I believe that we have enough geriatric psychiatrists. A psychiatrist is a psychiatrist, but in fact that's not true. Each one of these has their own specialty. Often seniors particularly could well end up going to a GP and being told, "Well, it's just getting old," when in fact it really is a psychosis that, if properly diagnosed by a geriatric psychiatrist, could be treated, and we could save a great deal of despair and particularly depression in our seniors. So I think it's very important that we get the number of the psychiatrists and also what their specialties are.

The Speaker: Others to participate, or should I call the question on the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: Now, is there further discussion with respect to this matter, or does the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona wish to close the debate?

Ms Notley: Yes, I will close debate.

The Speaker: Okay. Proceed.

Ms Notley: Okay. I just wanted to close debate with one brief excerpt from the 2008 Auditor General's report. After spending several pages identifying gaps in the provision of mental health care across the province and shortages with respect to the quality and the scope of mental health care in different areas, he makes a number of recommendations to improve the system and ends finally with this one:

Last, there should be greater accountability for the mental health service delivery system. We view accountability in terms of a cycle, beginning with planning an activity, delivering it, monitoring operations, and regularly assessing the success of operations with a view to enhancing the service.

It is with that in mind that I believe this information is a critical piece in ensuring that this type of process can start to occur and we can start to improve the services which have been previously identified as needing some intervention.

Thank you.

4:10 Student Loan Repayment

Q18. Ms Notley asked that the following question be accepted. For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 how long did the average person with Alberta student loans take to pay the loans off, and how much interest did they pay on the loans?

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I stated before, we have the fourth-highest tuition rate in Canada. Fifty per cent of university students graduate with an average of $20,000 in debt. Approximately 28 per cent of university graduates and 34 per cent of college graduates who borrowed reported difficulties in repaying their student debt. Since 1990 postsecondary tuition rates have tripled. Again, with the growing level of debt, the completion rate of postsecondary students is declining.

The public needs to know what a burden student loan debt is to those coming out of postsecondary as it does also ultimately limit their ability to do such things as buy a house, travel, or start a family. It's with this issue and background in mind that we are requesting to have this information provided to us.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and move an amendment to Written Question 18. I believe that all members have been provided with copies of the amendment, and they have been provided to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

The amendment to Written Question 18 reflects available data by striking out "and how much interest did they pay on the loans." Alberta's student financial assistance program has data readily available to answer the first part of the question. Information can be provided for the fiscal years requested on students who finished repaying their student loans and how long it took them to repay. However, the interest portion of repaid loans is not included in the data set. Other data is available on the aggregated interest paid by students annually, but it is not linked to individual student loans and the repayment period. Alberta's student financial assistance program would only be able to provide estimates of interest paid on individual loans based on assumptions about amortization periods and interest rates, which, of course, fluctuate over time.

It's also an important consideration that students are not required to pay any interest while they are in full-time studies. Government covers all interest costs during this period, providing significant cost savings to students. As the opposition members are probably aware,

Alberta lowered interest rates on student loans in 2007. Along with Newfoundland Alberta now has the lowest student loan interest rate in Canada, down to the prime lending rate on floating loans, which I'm sure everyone is quite aware is quite low at this time.

Thus the motion will read, if amended: "For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 how long did the average person with Alberta student loans take to pay the loans off?" By accepting these amendments, accurate information can be provided in a timely fashion to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, if you wish to respond.

Ms Notley: Yes. Thank you. I appreciate the minister's response and, you know, commitment to providing some of that information as reflected in the amendment, so that is good. I'm taking him at his word that it's not possible to provide the information that we requested as it was worded. I would however have been interested in getting the information on the aggregate amount of interest paid if that was possible. He did mention in his comments that that was possible, so that would provide us more information than we were previously seeking. Perhaps if there was some other source where that information is already available, that would be great. If there is not, then I would prefer to see that reflected in the amendment as written.

Those are my comments.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I, too, appreciate what the minister of advanced education is willing to provide to this House in terms of answering Written Question 18. The amendment knocks off one-half of what is being asked for. The amendment deals only with time, and it doesn't deal with the money aspects. It's the money aspects that are most relevant, particularly to students who are taking a long time to pay off a considerable amount of money. The minister did mention some of the difficulties associated with it, but even if he amortizes the expenses and provides a ballpark figure, it will provide recognition to both opposition parties and, more importantly, to students that the costs associated with getting a postsecondary education in Alberta are on the rise.

I also appreciated the fact that Alberta, as the minister noted, as recently as 2007 has the lowest lending rate for the government. But the advantage of that reduced loan rate has been impacted, if not lost, by increased tuition costs. If we go back to 2004, Premier Klein boasted that Alberta would have the lowest tuition rate, and if there were any additional costs, the students were to bring them to the Premier and he would cover the difference. Well, unfortunately, that notion went out the window when the Premier left office.

Therefore, in the amendments only half of the question is being answered, and that's: how long does it take an average person with Alberta student loans to pay those loans off? What is as important is how much money was finally required, including amortized interest over the time periods of 2004-2005 through 2007-2008, so we can get a comparison and validate postsecondary students' concerns that getting an education in this province is becoming exceedingly more difficult based on tuitions that rose this year, for example, at the University of Calgary by 4 per cent and similarly at other colleges and universities.

Both the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and members from the loyal opposition met with representatives of CAUS and the college version, ACTISEC, to talk about the problems and, of course, the cost of tuition, the availability of loans, and the fact, for example – and this was brought up in question period – that parents are considered part of the formula. What a parent makes is taken into account before a student is eligible for a loan.

Time and money are both equally important. I would appreciate the minister doing his best, as he somewhat suggested, to provide at least a ballpark amortized figure to assist with the answering of this very important question.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Others?

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: Further debate, then, on the question as amended or shall I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to close the debate or shall I just go to the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Written Question 18 as amended carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Contracted Legal Services

Q19. Ms Notley asked that the following question be accepted.
For each of the fiscal years 2004-2005 to 2007-2008 what was the average hourly rate paid by the government when it contracted out to the legal community for government legal services, excluding legal aid services?

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The issue that we are pursuing information about here relates to the question of the cost of legal services, not only to the government but to all Albertans. In essence, we are looking for a comparison between what the government pays through its legal aid program and what is paid when it's the government's issues that are being represented. I don't know exactly what that number is, but I do suspect that it is a great deal more than the $84 an hour that is currently being paid out as a legal aid rate. In my view, we need to look at there being some equity there.

People who require legal aid most often require legal aid because they are within a court setting coming up against an arm of government. It is most likely the case that people who have low income are in fact having conflict with government in its role as an administrator. It is, in my view, quite ironic that we might have cases where people are seeking legal support at the rate of $84 an hour while at the same time having to confront agents of government who may well be paid two or sometimes three times that. I don't know what the going rate is that the government pays to its lawyers when it contracts out for anything other than legal aid services, but I suspect it's probably in and around the $200 per hour range, probably more. I suspect it's safe to say that it's probably three times the rate of legal aid.

Of course, what that says is that legal aid for all intents and purposes is in a failed state. It does not work, and it does not for any true purposes exist effectively in this province. What has happened is that when we pay legal aid out at one-third of what the going rate is, then the only people that accept legal aid cases are those who are doing it for one reason and one reason only, and that is charity. As far as I'm concerned, access to our justice system is a fundamental right which we should all work very, very hard to maintain. When the only way one can get access to their justice system is through the charity of – wait for it, everybody – a lawyer, then, you know, I think we have some problems.

While I have tremendous respect for those lawyers who do do legal aid work, whether because they've made a choice to significantly sacrifice their own income or whether because they allocate a certain number of hours per month to do legal aid work at that significantly reduced rate – in both cases I have tremendous respect and appreciation for those lawyers – the reality is that there are not enough of them. There are simply not enough of them. You need only go to the former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada to know that, in fact, we have a tremendous crisis in this country and that we no longer have equal access to justice in any part of the country and certainly not in Alberta.

In order to generate more debate around this issue – although it seems really arcane and all legalistic, those of us who went to law school actually think that the justice system has a fundamentally important role to play in our society. As a result, you can't really hang your hat on that particular hanger if what you're going to then do is admit that those people with a low income effectively have no access to that system.

All of this, then, turns to the question of: what does the government perceive as a reasonable amount of money to pay to lawyers when the government itself hires lawyers for its own work? As much as we have fabulous staff within the ministry of the Attorney General who do a great deal of legal work for the government and who work on staff at rates which probably make it much more affordable for the government, the reality is that they do still on occasion contract out to private lawyers. I believe it is in our best interest to have an understanding of the rate at which those other lawyers are paid.

We often have cases, for instance, in the child protection scenario where the government may well contract out to a lawyer who may earn $200, $250 – [interjection] or more, I'm told; okay, it's been a long time since I've been working in the private sector – $300, $350 an hour; who knows? The family who is trying to secure for themselves a fair hearing about whether or not their child should stay with them or move into foster care is required to secure that fair hearing through a lawyer who will only be paid $84 an hour. What that says to me is that we have set up an inherently imbalanced and unfair system, as much as we all say that justice should be equal.

There's a big picture that I am getting at by asking this question, but I think it's a fundamentally important question that needs to be addressed. It's through that background that I think one way to start the discussion is by finding out not the specific amounts paid to specific firms – we already know through the blue book what firms get paid by this government – but the question is: on average what is the hourly rate being paid? Not what the policy is but just what on average is paid: I think that's a reasonable piece of information for us to receive in this Assembly so that we can proceed, hopefully, to have discussions about how we might make a meaningful change to our system of legal aid in the province of Alberta.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General I think should have a position on this.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the discussion the hon. member has raised with respect to legal aid. I would respectfully suggest that that is a different discussion. I'd be very happy to have that discussion, and perhaps we can continue that once the budget is introduced tomorrow and as we carry on with those discussions.

I would say at this point that I would ask the members of this House to consider rejecting this question. While there are instances where legal counsel is required, Alberta Justice does not track the average hourly rate paid by the government of Alberta for legal services. There are different lawyers that are hired for different purposes, for different levels of expertise and different training. In seeking the services of outside counsel, Alberta Justice's goal is primarily to ensure that quality advice is received at a reasonable cost.

I certainly take the hon. member's point with respect to legal aid. There are a number of discussions that are taking place right now between the government and the Law Society with respect to making that a more constructive system, and some of the issues that you've raised are certainly issues that both the government and the profession have identified and will be addressing. But I would respectfully say that I don't think this gets to the heart of the matter.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I was flipping through my papers, Mr. Speaker, trying to find an amended approach, but clearly from the hon. Attorney General this is an all-or-nothing circumstance.

It's extremely important that I not be portrayed as seeking further employment for my extremely intelligent, hard-working son-in-law Vivek Warriar, who has recently become a partner of Bennett Jones in Calgary. Nor am I seeking further legal employment for my brother, who is a member of the firm of Miles Davison, also operating in Calgary. But I am concerned about accountability in terms of tracking the funding. I believe the government should be responsible for tracking the funding. If the discussion is going to occur on another day and the information will be provided as to why people on legal aid services receive – and the lawyers working in legal aid are so underpaid that it requires only the most altruistic of individuals to take on these cases. As it was indicated, justice should be blind, and it should be available to all individuals on an equal basis.

In November of 2007 I put forward Motion 511, calling for a unified family court. The motion was brought forward to make it a unified family court process, and the intention was to not only increase the efficiency and speed with which custody cases were heard but also to decrease the expenses in the convoluted system that is currently in place, where the Court of Queen's Bench has the responsibility for divorce and our provincial court basically deals with every other aspect of children and youths' legal well-being.

I have grave concerns about not only the expense that is paid out in the name of the taxpayer for the prosecution of a case which removes a child and places them into the permanent custody of the state, into a foster home potentially to be adopted. I have seen and experienced in court the 43rd time when a set of grandparents entered the court, having paid over $265,000 of what should be their grandchildren's inheritance in order to have custody of those children. It's an emotional injustice as well as a fiscal injustice that we do not have sufficient judges and sufficient lawyers who are paid at a fee that recognizes their talents, so that individuals who are forced because they lack the resources to rely on the services of legal aid should be shortchanged not by the intent of the lawyer but by the caseload of the lawyer who is willing to undertake a portion of their practice in serving the needs of legal aid.

I would ask the Attorney General that if she is not prepared to track the amount of money that is going from taxpayers and flowing through the legal system, she could at least at some point later account for the total costs of legal aid provisions as separated from the costs of paying for the prosecution and of judges. It's an extremely large amount, and I'm hoping that at some point the unified family court motion, Motion 511, will actually be legislated as opposed to just simply recognizing its intent.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, shall I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, then, to close the debate? Proceed.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I just would like to rise and say that I am a little disappointed that the hon. Attorney General is not prepared to provide us with this information. I am terribly, deeply disappointed. I do believe that it is actually quite relevant to the issue at hand. I think that if the government is going to try and suggest that the legal aid system is anywhere close to being effective, then a reasonable measurement would be what the government itself has found through its own experience that it must pay in order to secure, as the minister herself acknowledged, the most specialized or skilled services in a particular area. I'm sure that people who are compelled to access legal aid would also like to be able to seek out the most specialized and skilled lawyer in the particular area in which they need legal services.

I know that, in fact, in the blue books there is a complete listing of the private firm expenditures of this government, so I'm quite surprised, frankly, that it would be anything other than a simple amount of a few hours to find out the average hourly rate, even a range for the average hourly rate, paid to lawyers who work on behalf of government. No one is suggesting that the government doesn't in certain cases or at certain times need to pay what the market demands and doesn't at certain times need to pay, you know, amounts that the average person might think are a bit ridiculous, but I do think that you cannot have a discussion about provision of legal aid without acknowledging what the current going rate is that the government has to pay for its own services.

I am disappointed that that information has not been provided. I suspect it wouldn't take a great deal for it to be made available, and I certainly hope that the minister will give some thought to how that might be made available between now and the time at which her ministry comes up for discussion in estimates so that we can perhaps review the ability to have that information provided to the public at that time.

Thank you.

[Written Question 19 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Supportive Living Facilities

Q20. Ms Notley asked that the following question be accepted. How many supportive living facilities, including assisted living facilities, lodges, enhanced lodges, seniors' complexes, and group homes, and related number of beds were operating in Alberta for each of the fiscal years 2006-2007 and 2007-2008, broken down by regional health authority and by whether the facility is/was owned/operated publicly, privately, or on a nonprofit basis?

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The rationale for seeking this information, again, is not entirely dissimilar from other questions that were focusing on trying to get more global information about the state of supportive living costs and resources across the province.

The province's new continuing care model talks about additional supportive living spaces, and assisted living falls into that category. Meanwhile the government plans to create no new long-term care beds in the province but, rather, to simply maintain and upgrade the 14,500 that currently exist, and of course this is in the face of there being roughly 1,500 people on wait-lists now and having every demographic expert in the province clearly stating that without question that number will go up over the course of the next few years. Indeed, I believe we have heard recently from Alberta Health Services that that number went up quite dramatically just in Calgary, so we know that there is a very significant problem. The Premier had, of course, during the last election campaigned on the notion of opening 600 new long-term care beds. Unfortunately, that particular plan has gone nowhere.

Meanwhile private operators have a lot to gain from the expansion of supportive living facilities, and we as taxpayers want that information so that we can see what share of the supportive living market they have had compared to the nonprofit and publicly operated shares and whether the number of privately operated facilities is increasing, again a legitimate question for Albertans to want answers to.

That is the basic rationale behind why it is we are seeking information in response to Written Question 20.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to respond on behalf of the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. The government is proposing an amendment to this question. The amendment has been circulated. I won't waste the House's time by reading it in detail, but the effect of the amendment is that Written Question 20 would now read:

How many licensed supportive living facilities and seniors' lodges were operating in Alberta for the fiscal year 2007-2008, and what was their respective capacity (number of residents), broken down by regional health authority and by whether the facility received public funding or not?

Mr. Speaker, in April 2007 we began licensing supportive living facilities for compliance with accommodation standards. Licences are based on the number of residents in a supportive living facility, not on the number of units or beds in the facility. The recommended amendment allows us to respond accordingly.

Prior to April 1, 2007, information on supportive living facilities was collected on a voluntary basis, and there was not legislative authority to collect such information. As the data from April 2007 onwards is more accurate, we are requesting amendments to the dates contained in the original question. The government does not collect information about whether an operator is private or nonprofit. The recommended amendments allow us to answer the question by focusing on whether a facility receives public funding or not. I therefore move the amendment as presented.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, I'll give you first opportunity.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I do appreciate the efforts made by the minister, and I do believe that certainly amendments (a) through (c) simply improve it and are better written, so that's great. I'm a little concerned that we wouldn't be getting as much information as we had been seeking through what I guess is, well, (d) – in my amendment it appears as (c) twice, but what I think is (d) – the striking out of fiscal year 2006-2007. But I will take you at your word. If that information is simply not available, then I guess it's not available.

I am concerned about striking out the distinction between whether the facility is publicly or privately operated or functioning as a nonprofit. I think that we know that the private facilities will receive public funding. We know that the nonprofits will receive public funding, and of course we know that the publicly owned will receive public funding. So the question of public funding will not specifically identify the breakdown within our province between the nonprofit, private-sector, and public-sector facilities.

I think these are completely legitimate questions to be asking, and I am a bit shocked that the government wouldn't actually know what the breakdown is between private-sector facilities, public-sector facilities, and nonprofit facilities. Certainly, I know that when I worked in that industry as a staff member for a union, I could tell you which facilities were private sector, which were nonprofit, and which were public sector, so I find it really a little bit of a stretch to believe that the staff within the minister's area are unable to also identify the difference between a public, private, and nonprofit facility. I am concerned about that. I suppose that if we get the list, we can probably do it ourselves, but the idea was that I was pretty sure the government already had that information.

For that reason I am not in support of the amendment, primarily because of the last amendment which is being made, that does not give us that breakdown between public, private, and nonprofit. I do, however, appreciate that the remainder of the motion will be presumably accepted by the minister.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the hon. member's request for information she included group homes, and I know that there are a variety of different types of group homes, some for individuals with physical or mental disabilities, some for seniors. Where I get directly involved is with group homes for children and youth who have run into difficulties and have been basically put into a custodial circumstance by the province.

But the area that I want to refer specifically to in the amendment has to do with the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports' section (a), where she would like to add "licensed" before "supportive living facilities." The fact that some facilities are allowed to operate without being licensed is of major concern to me, and although I have received less than collegial support in my concerns over the Alberta Adolescent Recovery Centre, that isn't the crux of the matter. The AARC facility has a business licence as opposed to having a professionally accredited licence that would recognize it as a legitimate treatment facility for children suffering addictions or extended to those suffering behavioural problems. Not all children at the AARC facility are there because of addictions.

Now, because this organization receives $300,000 in yearly grants from the government, I would think that there would be greater concern about the types of treatment that were offered, the fact that it is not a residential treatment centre, the fact that it is not subject to external inspection because of the overnight monitoring of children in externally locked, barred bedrooms, where their door monitor is another junior in a vulnerable position. It's the fact that the facility isn't licensed. I have never claimed in debate that the intentions of the Alberta Adolescent Recovery Centre weren't good intentions. The fact that the minister is planning on tabling, if not already having done so, testimonials from grateful students who have graduated from the program or the . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm really sorry to interrupt, but you've got to find the relevancy here in what you're talking about and what this motion is about. Okay? You've simply got to find it.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Okay. I will. The relevancy, Mr. Speaker, which you're searching for is under the term "licensed." I'll briefly summarize my original argument that all facilities that deal with the treatment of youth or seniors or individuals with disabilities should be licensed, supervised, and overseen by this government.

If taxpayer money goes into the facilities and Albertans are being treated within them, there has to be a much greater level of accountability, and that is part of what Written Question 20 is about. I don't believe that the various amendments that have been provided, whether they be (a), (b), (c), or (d), address the concerns. Albertans deserve transparency and accountability, particularly those who are placed into the care of facilities. Their well-being and their care should be of utmost importance to all Albertans and especially to this government, that is responsible for the individuals' well-being.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to make a few comments on the record on amendment (b). They want to take out the words "assisted living facilities, lodges, enhanced lodges," et cetera, and substitute "seniors' lodges." Again, it's an argument that I have spoken to before. I think this is far too narrow. Even if they'd used the words "continuing care," what we understand to be under continuing care would include all of the assisted living, et cetera. But to just say seniors' lodges is far too narrow a scope, and I don't think that it will get at the answers which the question was meant to address.

The Speaker: Additional people who would like to participate, or should I call the question with respect to the amendment?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, would you like to conclude the debate, or should I call the question?

Ms Notley: Question.

[Written Question 20 as amended lost]

Motions for Returns

[The Clerk read the following motions for returns, which had been accepted]

Mazankowski Alberta Heart Institute

- M1. Mr. Mason:
A return showing a copy of all 2007-2009 utilization plans for the Mazankowski Heart Institute and any records of how many wards and beds are currently vacant in the institute.

4:50 Ministerial Foreign Travel Plans

- M5. Mr. Mason:
A return showing copies of all current protocols surrounding the proposal and selection process for approving ministers' foreign travel plans.

Assisted Living Facilities

- M7. Mr. Mason:
A return showing a list of facilities in Alberta whose designation changed from long-term care facility to assisted living facility between April 1, 2001, and December 31, 2008.

Coalbed Methane/Natural Gas in Coal Multi-Stakeholder Advisory Committee

- M8. Mr. Mason:
A return showing a copy of the final report and recommendation of the Coalbed Methane/Natural Gas in Coal Multi-Stakeholder Advisory Committee.

Agreement on Internal Trade

- M9. Mr. Mason:
A return showing a copy of the agreement signed by the Premier on January 16, 2009, at the first ministers' meeting regarding amendments to the agreement on internal trade.

Midwifery Services

- M20. Mr. Mason:
A return showing copies of all government plans to increase the number of midwives practising in Alberta between February 1, 2008, and February 10, 2009.

The Clerk: Pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) motions for returns are deemed to stand and retain their places with the exception of motions for returns 2, 3, 4, 6, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 17, 18, and 19.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Assisted Living Facilities

- M2. Ms Notley moved on behalf of Mr. Mason that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all reports or plans prepared between January 1, 2007, and February 10, 2009, regarding the future creation or expansion of assisted living facilities.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The reason for that has been somewhat canvassed already in my previous remarks with respect to our concerns around the government's continuing care strategy and their purported plans to rely on assisted living facilities as an alternative to providing the number of new long-term care beds that were either promised in the election or, more importantly, are required by the roughly 1,500 people who are in hospital beds at this point, waiting for those beds.

As a result, we are now interested in assessing what the extent and breadth is of plans to create new assisted living facilities as well as to determine whether those plans would involve an expansion into and by the public sector, whether they would involve an expansion into or by the nonprofit sector, or whether or not the intention is that this all be done through particular members of the private sector.

There has been a great deal of talk about the expansion of these services and the expansion of the assisted living facilities, but we have not yet been given a global picture of what the plans are and where those facilities would be and the state of the government's current plans with respect to this issue.

As I've already stated, it's a matter that is of very high public concern not only within our seniors' communities but, frankly, within the homes and families of many, many Albertans, all of whom are concerned about the health and the future of their parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, not only of just themselves but of those who they care deeply for.

This continuing care strategy represents a very significant shift in gears by the government with respect to plans for caring for our seniors, and it is for this reason that we are pursuing as much information as we can possibly get on how far along the plans are and what they look like at this point and whether or not there is good reason to believe that they will actually have the capacity to solve the problems which we have discussed and identified repeatedly within this House to the government on behalf of those people.

It's for those reasons that we are seeking this information, and I urge my colleagues to support our motion in this regard.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to respond on behalf of the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. The minister recommends that the House reject this motion. I think the member actually answered a great deal of the rationale in her discussion of the motion itself when she indicated that much of the assisted living capacity is the purview of the private sector. So the plans and reports that the member is seeking would simply not exist, and that kind of information would not be available to provide to the member.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I appreciate the hon. Deputy Government House Leader providing a response, but it amazes me that private facilities don't have to file their plans with the government, especially if they're receiving either operational grants or some form of subsidy or consultation fees, that this information would not be forthcoming.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, our seniors' advocate, has frequently raised the issue of aging in place and recognizing the dignity of seniors and respecting family wishes of their mothers, fathers, aunts, uncles, grandfathers, and so on, having the opportunity to continue to be well cared for in a facility within their locale. Having the details that have been requested in Motion for a Return 2 would provide a degree of planning potential for families whose senior loved ones are at the point of requiring some extra support either in the more expensive version of assisted living or in long-term care.

The government seems very willing to report on a whole variety of information, including individual schools' standard achievement test scores. I would suggest that reporting this valuable information to the public for future decisions with regard to aging in place and dignity would be able to be provided, so I'm disappointed that this motion for a return has been rejected.

The Speaker: Others?

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you want to conclude the debate?

Ms Notley: Yeah, I do.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Yes. Very briefly, I guess, my final point is that I, too, am a little concerned by the rationale provided by the Deputy Government House Leader with respect to why this motion for a return could not be followed through on. It may well be that assisted living ultimately is the primary purview of the private sector, but the service it provides is in the primary purview of the public interest. It also forms the foundation of a much ballyhooed continuing care strategy which was announced last December as this government's answer to the crisis in aged care and the crisis with respect to caring for our seniors. So I am quite concerned that we would now say: "Well, we can't provide you information on what we planned because even though it's the foundation of our whole way to deal with this crisis, it's going to be done by the private sector. So how could you ever expect us to have any insight into what's been planned?"

Now, this, of course, is the typical NDP argument for why it ought not to be done.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'm sorry to interrupt, but I must now draw the attention of all hon. members to Standing Order 8(1). We're now dealing with motions other than government motions.

Motions Other than Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Underground Transmission Lines

504. Mr. Quest moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to immediately investigate the feasibility of constructing underground transmission lines to determine if they are a safe and viable option for transmitting high-voltage power.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and privilege to stand and open debate on Motion 504. The objective of this study is to provide information on the pros and cons of constructing and operating underground transmission lines. The study would also investigate the feasibility of constructing short-distance underground lines in residential and school zone areas.

Requiring portions of transmission lines to be placed underground is not without precedent, Mr. Speaker. In 2008 Maine passed An Act to Require Transmission Lines To Be Placed Underground near Certain Facilities. This act states that any portion of a transmission line capable of operating at 115 kV or more that is constructed, rebuilt, or relocated on or after October 1, 2009, must be placed underground if it's located adjacent to a residential area, a public playground, a private or public school, a child care facility, or a recreational camp.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Five hundred kV lines are a new technology to Alberta, and as with any new and large technical undertaking there needs to be consultation with Albertans. In order to consult effectively, all of the options and information need to be on the table. Doing a study on underground transmission is a necessary step to informing and consulting with Albertans. Some issues that need to be investigated are the technical characteristics of underground cable, including reliability; operation and maintenance factors; environmental impact; possible health issues; impact on communities; and cost.

I'd like to talk about cost as one of the most important reasons to do a feasibility study. Costs associated with construction of underground transmission lines are reportedly four to 20 times that of overhead lines. Mr. Speaker, there must be a better estimate of the cost of constructing underground transmission lines. I understand that many factors exist in determining the cost of any major project, and these factors fluctuate with markets in the economy, factors such as the current prices of material, construction, labour, and the development of better and more efficient technology. Determining the real costs in our current market would help verify if, indeed, underground transmission lines are feasible in specific circumstances. These circumstances include close proximity to residential areas and schools.

The estimation of four to 20 times the cost of an above ground line is just not realistic for determining whether underground lines are an option in any circumstance. Let me also clarify that conducting a feasibility study on underground transmission lines does not mean looking at burying a line from border to border. It's to better understand the possibilities of underground transmission lines through variable distances and finding a cost comparison for short distances.

The Alberta Electric System Operator, AESO, published a report, Alberta's Industrial Heartland: Bulk Transmission Development, on May 30, 2008. It states that underground lines have the lowest agricultural, environmental, and visual impacts. Mr. Speaker, we need to know the details around these impacts as well as the costs to determine the viability of using underground transmission lines in the future. The Ministry of Energy released Launching Alberta's Energy Future: Provincial Energy Strategy at the end of 2008. It states: "Improvements will be sized to accommodate long-term growth and will use, where possible, technology such as high-voltage direct current to maximize efficiency of rights of way and minimize impacts."

A feasibility study will provide clarity on the advantages and disadvantages of using AC or HVDC transmission. For instance, we know that an advantage of HVDC transmission lines is that these lines are more efficient for transmitting energy over long distances, but very little is known about underground HVDC. A disadvantage of HVDC is the limited flexibility of the HVDC system. An HVDC transmission line cannot be segmented or tapped without construction of additional converter stations. Again, how is the cost impacted if more converter stations are required for certain distances of an underground line? The environmental impact of underground line transmission also needs to be determined. This would include the effects of additional converter stations.

Currently only two 500 kV lines are in operation in Alberta. One is in the south, connecting Calgary to British Columbia. The other is part of the south kV loop west of Edmonton. The need for more transmission capability has been established, and I think Albertans know that in order to continue to have the luxury of operating our homes and businesses with uninterrupted and reliable power, this province must move forward on plans to provide the means to supply much-needed power. But before we move ahead, exploring the options and possible opportunities of underground transmission is necessary, especially if underground transmission lines could be a viable alternative where the line affects residences or schools.

Therefore, I ask all hon. members here today to vote in favour of 504, and I look forward to listening to more of the debate. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've been watching this motion, Motion 504, with interest. I've been watching it on the Order Paper. I've certainly been following the issue of transmission lines, whether they're overhead or whether they're underground, and adjacent to the hon. Member for Strathcona's constituency is a significant local debate on how to proceed, where to proceed, and when to proceed with additional transmission lines. At some point in the near future these matters will be resolved, and we will have that route developed for the need, which will be the bitumen upgraders which hopefully will be located in the neighbourhood of the hon. Member for Strathcona.

I think this is a very important issue. How this will work is to be determined. It's certainly an issue that we should study. Other jurisdictions have attempted underground transmission lines. It obviously already happens in neighbourhoods on a limited basis, but on volume and voltage I'm not sure how this would work. Certainly, underground transmission lines have several advantages. Obviously, there is the beautification of the neighbourhood, to bury the transmission lines rather than have them strung out on poles. A buried line certainly has less vulnerability to elements like ice and wind. In some areas like downtown it's much more practical than overhead lines, but underground lines, I'm told, cost more to install and maintain and result in increased electricity rates.

Now, I can be confident that the Minister of Energy doesn't want electricity rates in this province to go any higher. I know he's concerned about the folly that was electricity deregulation. Whether it's the price of power or the lack of generating capacity or the bottlenecks in the transmission system, we can go right back to electricity deregulation as the cause for these prices and shortages and a transmission system that is certainly not as reliable as it used to be.

We can also contemplate the bill that's eventually going to have to be paid by the consumers for the enhanced transmission system, or the improved transmission system. What that bill is is hard to say. I'm sure the minister knows, and I'm sure the minister knows how much that will be for a residential consumer on their monthly power bill, how much more they will have to pay. I'm sure he has all those answers.

I know that whenever transmission costs, Mr. Speaker, were shifted conveniently by a former Minister of Energy, with the approval of this cabinet, of course, to the bills of consumers, it was thought at that time that, well, maybe it'll be a $2 billion additional bill for consumers to pay for the transmission debottlenecking that was needed. That bill went up to 3 and a half billion dollars. It went up to $4 billion. It went up to $5 billion. I would love to know what it is now, in April of 2009. If we were to upgrade our transmission system, bring it totally up to snuff, what would it cost, and how long would it take the consumers on a monthly basis to pay off those costs?

Certainly, we look at this idea of examining putting some of this transmission underground. I think it's noteworthy and it's worth while. We should at least check it out. I'm told that studies have shown that installing lines underground is expensive for consumers and taxpayers. I could be wrong, but I'm told it could cost as much as 10 times more than overhead distribution of transmission lines. I would certainly like clarification on this in the course of discussion on this Motion 504.

Underground lines are also much more difficult and expensive to work on when problems arise. Of course, we've got to dig them up, so there's earthmoving equipment and specialized technicians. We know that installing underground transmission lines is best done in an area as it's being developed. This is less expensive, of course, than converting later from overhead to underground. Overhead systems are easier, thus less expensive, to upgrade whenever a community grows or the industrial load for electricity grows and we require additional electricity capacity. So there are a number of issues that would certainly drive up the cost.

I thought at one point that the transportation and utility corridor adjacent to highway 216 would have been an appropriate place to install transmission lines as they're needed to power our industry. I don't know what will happen with that, but we'll see. I don't know if there's a stretch of property or an area where the hon. member has an idea where there could be a test facility set up to see how long it would take to install an underground transmission line, how much it would cost, how it would work.

Typically, I'm told, underground lines experience fewer outages, but again whenever an outage happens, I would think it would last longer because the repairpersons will have a lot more difficult time locating the problem and then repairing it.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I certainly would urge the House to consider this motion. We need to have a look at this to see how underground transmission lines can work and if they will work and at what cost. We know that many communities, not only Sherwood Park but certainly through central Alberta, have reservations. They're very cautious about overhead transmission lines. I think this is an issue that the government has brought on itself by tolerating the use of spies on innocent citizens when they were exercising their democratic rights at a regulatory hearing regarding transmission lines and transmission systems.

With those comments, Mr. Speaker, I would certainly urge all hon. members of this Assembly to give this motion some thought and some consideration. There's no problem in investigating the feasibility of constructing underground transmission lines. I think it's a matter of cost. It's not a matter of safety. It's not a matter of whether it will or will not work but of exactly what this would cost us. Certainly, regardless of where we live in this province and what we do to provide an income to ourselves and our families, we rely on electricity, and we have to recognize that we need a sound transmission system.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I thought for a moment there that it must be a different phase of the moon or something because for a split second I thought that the hon. member opposite and myself were going to completely agree on something. But I'm happy to report that, in fact, we're close.

I want to thank the MLA for Strathcona, Mr. Speaker, for bringing forward Motion 504 in the first place. I've said a number of times publicly around the province in the last couple of years that, you know, in my opinion, from the point of view of the Energy department, transmission is job one. We really feel that the transmission system requires upgrades. We know, in fact, that it requires upgrades.

There's a situation in the province where constraint is leading to inefficiency. Most certainly, a lot of line loss and heat losses in the system are costing Alberta consumers every day, so we know that we are going to move forward some additions and fortification to this system and, again, new power generation that's coming on in the province as we speak in a number of different areas across the province. Certainly, new generation, even some of our older, more conventional opportunities here with coal-fired generation, that sort of thing, have to have the highway opened up for them to get into the system and allow for Albertans to have the economical electrical utility that they require.

Just a couple of points, Mr. Speaker, with respect to what we're doing on the generating side before I touch on the thing about underground transmission. In southern Alberta there's a fairly major expansion of wind generation. I think, actually, that that will probably take place all up the eastern slopes in Alberta all the way into the northwestern corner of the province. In fact, there are opportunities all the way along that particular region.

The biomass industry: again, good opportunities for generating alternate electricity and green power.

Again, opportunities in the northwestern part of the province in the wood fibre business to diversify their industries a bit, good opportunities, we think, requiring some upgrades with respect to the transmission system.

Cogeneration in the Fort McMurray area: well understood.

Again, as I said, coal in central Alberta.

Most certainly, Mr. Speaker, major opportunities for hydro development across the province and run of the river. Different opportunities, I think, for some pumped hydro with storage.

Certainly, again, a major development in northern Alberta at Slave River relative to the issue of alternate and green power.

There are concerns around transmission, and we all understand that. We have had some opportunity to experience first-hand these concerns. We have as a government, I think, been responsive to landowners. We feel that landowners are the ones that are primarily impacted by grid development anyplace where you find this kind of development that's necessary in the white area or in areas where agriculture and landowners are in fact affected. They ask a lot of good questions, Mr. Speaker, relative to the ways that the government, industry, and themselves can lessen the impact of this particular fortification that we're going to require.

Most certainly, I would suggest that one of the things that comes to mind when you talk to landowners is the idea of underground lines: why can we not use more underground transmission? You know, you hear a number of stories about areas where they're using it where it does work. And it works. There isn't any doubt about it. I mean, we have one here from, I believe, kind of the west side of Edmonton into the core area of the city that was constructed last year, an AC underground system. HVDC light handles a lot more power, and it is in fact doable. I believe there are a couple of fairly major operations in Europe and one that we were made aware of and followed a bit that goes into Manhattan, in fact, underground and underwater and is working very well.

There are some issues. I actually agree with the member that I think, Mr. Speaker, generally, it's time that we investigate the issues of underground transmission. Of course, it has been mentioned already, but certainly cost is one. The access to an area to do it is another one, the safety relative to underground transmission. We need to understand that when you start into doing things like this, it needs to fit into the overall grid system that we have in the province. Not to suggest for a minute that it can't fit, but I think what we would find from this is how we make it fit.

You know, the idea of doing something like this is not to go out and see if we can't find people to tell us how we can't do it. I think the idea would be to go out again and do some research, do some work, and find out how we can do it. I think it's timely. I think that the debate is timely. I would have to tell you that, Mr. Speaker, I'm going to encourage all members of the Legislature here to support this particular motion that the member has brought forward.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am thrilled today that our colleague from Strathcona has brought forward this motion. It's not only timely, but it's appropriate, as the Minister of Energy has noted, relative to getting the right kind of information. I think what prompted the MLA, the representative for Strathcona, was a significant amount of reaction from people that would be in proximity to that utility corridor.

For a number of years people have seen it as rather pristine landscape, but I want to remind this Assembly of something that occurred when the tornado came through, during a period when because of its very nature as a wide, green space it attracted one of the most traumatic events. During that period power lines were down, and an entire tank from the tank farm at the refineries was relocated overtop of a rail line. There was significant disruption along with that and, most tragically, 30 deaths of people in a trailer park.

Now, the peculiarity of this type of weather system moving through that area in itself was not something that you wouldn't expect to find where you have a wide open space, but what makes this area particularly unique is that there are literally millions of barrels of product that flow underground through that utility corridor to places as far away as Texas and New Jersey. This utility corridor, I would suggest, has a higher and better use as a continued area for utility right-of-way for the pipes underground, so it would be contiguous in the costing of this to look at whether or not an overground power line would in any way disrupt the capacity of that utility corridor to serve the underground pipelines that it currently serves. It proudly hosts the beginning of the longest pipeline in the world, so when we look at this, it's not only for the reasonableness of locating power underground. It's not just any corridor; it is the most important and significant corridor for Alberta in the conveyance of what is underground with the pipelines, several pipelines, several millions of barrels a day.

I think that there are a couple of ways to look at this. I'm not suggesting that here on the floor of the Legislative Assembly we write the terms of reference of such a costing but that we take a look at whether or not the placement of a power line overtop or adjacent to this pipeline could in any way serve or render less useful the corridor for future pipeline expansion because of the kinds of things that ultimately might happen because of the development of the Industrial Heartland and some of the other options in the future.

Very recently people have come into my office to ask about the capacity for making cuts into our roads, into highway 14 for example, to go in following the pigging of one of the pipelines, do a direct cut to look at whether or not there's any corrosive action in the pipeline.

All of these things are issues that happen in this particular corridor, made wider around the city of Edmonton because of the utility right-of-way that it naturally has. So, as I say, I'm thrilled with the motion coming forward, the support of the Energy minister, because I can see a number of complexities here. If we located underground the power in the right-of-way, we would be less likely in the future to expose or leave vulnerable any of the kinds of things that could be left vulnerable if we continue to just assume that an overground power line is the most convenient and best way.

One final point, Mr. Speaker. At the time of that tornado Sherwood Park, a hamlet at the time, and the entire Strathcona county were rendered completely separated from the emergency facilities within the city of Edmonton, the health care facilities, the acute-care facilities, and it took some period of time to replace the power lines, roughly an hour in some parts of it. Although it was expedient, there was a period of time where life and limb might have been severely compromised because of the reduction of access because of the very nature of the transportation routings through that corridor.

It's an incredibly important corridor, and I think this costing must be done. I applaud the intent of the motion, and I urge all members to support it.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I would like to very briefly echo the support for Motion 504 as introduced by the hon. Member of the Legislative Assembly for Strathcona. Because I can't believe that anyone in this House would be opposed to exploring options and considering cumulative costs of putting power underground, I will not take up a tremendous amount of time. I am extremely pleased that the government understands the importance.

A number of us here sat through the debate over Bill 46, and anyone who represents a rural area is well aware of the spy scandal that was brought up earlier by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. In the debate over Bill 46 and the whole question of surface rights the government introduced 24 amendments to finally get the legislation to the point where a spoonful of sugar wasn't required to put the bad medicine down. Eventually, while it was universally rejected by members of the opposition, it did go forward. I would think that the hon. mover of Bill 19, who is himself a rural resident and has been a very active member of the AAMD and C, has personally experienced recently the type of anger and angst with regard to Bill 19, and he's seen the need to attempt to get it right and to produce amendments that deal with surface rights.

When we sort of do a cost analysis, what we have to take into account are court costs, costs of litigation, costs associated with land expropriation. We have to take into account the public good. I would like to think that part of the analysis of putting lines underground would be the consideration of public good in the form of reregulating electricity. Maybe that would be considered dreaming in technicolour in this House, but I think it would be a good time to re-examine the whole deregulation process and repair the damage that's been done.

In terms of the physics of converting AC to DC and back to AC again, it's done in Europe. There are precedents. In talking with representatives of ISEEE, the Institute for Sustainable Energy, Environment and Economy, sometimes substituted for experiential learning, they have pointed out that in terms of the costs it is, in fact, more expensive than your traditional overhead lines. But as the hon. Minister of Energy pointed out, you have less line loss, so the conduction is of a more efficient nature, and as the hon. minister of finance pointed out, when power is lost, not only are lives potentially lost, but the quality of life is certainly compromised during emergency circumstances.

We have a beautiful province. We have very few parts of this province that don't have some type of human footprint crossing them. The idea of burying the transmission lines using the most current technology available, working with landowners as opposed to against them, to me would be a very successful strategy.

Other individuals have talked about the importance of green energy. Probably one of the largest unelected but vociferous supporters of green energy is Mr. Joe Anglin, who is the chair of the Green Party. [interjections] Yes. Now, it's interesting that there is such opposition to even the mentioning of that name, but it is interesting that the Green Party shares in terms of popular support about the same number as the Wildrose Alliance Party, which is, I would assume, in greater favour with representatives of this government.

Regardless, the idea of exploration of not only the cost but the efficiency of putting lines underground is worthy of all our support. I thank again the MLA for Strathcona for bringing it to our attention. It is progressive, and that is what theoretically the Progressive Conservative government is all about.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you. I want to thank the MLA for Strathcona for presenting this at this time. I think it's a very timely motion. You know, one of the issues that we deal with right now, especially in higher populated areas, is of course: not in my backyard. But maybe we can answer the issues of underground safety, aesthetics, maybe health issues, the EMF issue, electromagnetic fields – that is always raised when lines are being put in – reliability, security, environmental, public opposition, et cetera. I mean, it's probably timely to have that debate.

I presently sit on a think tank of the Canadian Energy Research Institute that does a lot of independent work sometimes for government, sometimes for the oil patch. A group like this could probably easily do this type of work. At one time I chaired the transmission commission for the province, and I know that in some areas there are underground lines in North America. When I chaired the committee, it was probably back in 2003, 2004, and the ratio at that time was said to be about 9 to 1 underground versus overhead. Well, here we are in 2009, and they're talking about 4 to 1. Let's not kid ourselves. You know, no matter what we spend on transmission, we all pay as consumers. The consumers pay. But in some cases it may be more favourable to put in underground lines. I would say: not a chance that you could start putting high-voltage underground lines from one end of the province to the other, but there's no doubt for maybe some river crossings, some lake crossings. I know that from Vancouver to Vancouver Island there's not a power pole all the way across there, and on the surface of the ocean bottom floor there are power lines.

There's no doubt that it's time to have this discussion. With technology and maybe as a pilot project, maybe in an area where the MLA for Strathcona lives, that might be a good way to tell how this works. There are groups, like I talked about with the Canadian Energy Research Institute, that could take on this work. There's a lot of discussion out there within the power companies and the transmission companies themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I think it would be worthy of pursuing, and I would wholeheartedly support this motion. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, am pleased to rise today and join debate on Motion 504. This motion, brought forward by the hon. Member for Strathcona, proposes to urge the government to conduct a study on the feasibility of underground transmission lines.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta has and will continue to experience large periods of growth, and as this province expands, our need for energy generation and distribution will grow accordingly. Transmission lines are the arteries of our power system, connecting power plants to the communities they serve. Therefore, I believe it is pertinent for any government to conduct studies exploring all possible avenues for power transmission, including underground transmission lines and AC/DC comparisons.

Currently, Mr. Speaker, the bulk of power transmissions in this province are delivered by large overhead transmission lines that utilize AC transmission. Traditionally AC has been the preferred method for power transmission as it leaks less energy than DC, specifically over long distances. This technology has proven to be safe and reliable, but there are drawbacks. Most notably, overhead transmission lines are large and perceived to be unattractive by some. In turn, it is said that these unappealing structures could lower property values and pose a negative impact to our environment.

Mr. Speaker, because of these issues being raised, I feel that it is important to explore all power transmission systems, specifically short-distance underground lines, so as to answer the questions being raised by Albertans. Underground transmission lines would alleviate several of the concerns presented by overhead transmission.

There may be, however, other issues to consider. For example, the cost associated with installing underground lines may be excessive, and we need to know what the costs may be. To date, to my knowledge, there has been no comprehensive study on the cost of underground line installation and maintenance, and I feel that a cost-benefit analysis is warranted. That is why I am very supportive of Motion 504. It seeks information on a topic that warrants further investigation. The future of power transmission in this province will require the utilization of several transmission technologies, and the first step towards implementing any technology is to study the benefits and drawbacks associated with it.

I would like once again to thank the hon. Member for Strathcona for bringing this forward, a very timely idea and a very timely issue. I, too, ask everyone to support Motion 504.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, would like to congratulate and compliment the minister for – sorry. The Member for Strathcona. You never know. One day maybe.

There have been a couple of references, both from the Minister of Energy and, I think, the Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, talking about under water. Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that actually there have been underwater cables to Europe probably long before some of the members in this House were born, and they've been very successful, with great abilities to be able to maintain them. So there's nothing wrong with assuming that with the proper technical development this sort of thing could happen.

We have legislation coming forward for utility corridors, and I think it's very important that we spend some time. Up to this point I recall that the two and a half year if not longer process to get the Lethbridge-Montana tie-line through has cost that company a great deal of money in time and effort and certainly bad will amongst the people who were involved with this. If it had gone underground, I'm sure that it would have gone through quicker. The corridors are for that very reason, to have all of these trunks of either pipelines or electricity, gas, telephone, whatever, all in one place. They are easily accessible.

Back to the Montana tie-line. The company always said that it was too expensive, but I don't recall them ever actually having done these studies to say or to prove that, in fact, it was too expensive. Perhaps they should have been encouraged to stretch out their profit timeline because somewhere in there we also have to put in the cost of the public good.

I believe that this is one motion that also incorporates the chance to have perhaps that profit laid out but also the chance to really address the public good so that we all will benefit. There's no reason that companies that might be forced to use underground would be able to be unhappy when they really, really cost it out in terms of what it's going to cost them in bad will in the community.

Again, like everyone else who has spoken, I would encourage members in the House to support that. I really believe that we look today at what our grid systems look like and what we need in terms of electricity, but I don't think that we can even envision 10 years from now what it's really going to look like. Technology is moving at such a rapid rate, and attitudes are changing in terms of: we need the corridors, we need the electricity, so how can we all work together?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and speak in favour of Motion 504. This motion, brought forward by the hon. Member for Strathcona, urges the government to conduct a feasibility study on the construction of underground power lines, specifically within short distances. I'd like to also comment that Motion 504 fits in very well with my forthcoming Motion 505 for the licensing of low-speed electric vehicles in urban areas.

The information gained through this study would help the government evaluate future electrical transmission projects across the province. Currently the majority of Alberta's high-voltage power lines are above ground, and this electrical transportation method has been used pretty much since the beginning of electricity in the province of Alberta. However, throughout the world underground power transmission lines are increasingly being used as the method of electrical transmission.

Indeed, on the family farm in Abbey, Saskatchewan, we've enjoyed underground electrical service for some 35 years now. [interjection] Yes, that would be in the province immediately to the east, hon. member. If you're moving a big auger around the yard or you're unloading a truck with a 20-foot grain box, you certainly appreciate the underground power line.

I think the concept of the underwater cables can best be highlighted by those of you who are movie buffs and the importance that they played in, of course, the movie Jaws 2. Alberta is unique in that we do not have any great white sharks; however, with our diverse landscape, what works in one part of the world may not in fact work here. This is why a study would be valuable. It would help to give us a better understanding of the possibilities of short-distance underground transmission lines in Alberta.

As we look at the past advancements in electrical transmission, we can see how important information has been in developing proper electrical transmission systems. The transformation from the DC, or the Edison current, to the alternating, or Tesla, current in power distribution in the late 19th century provides an example of how important it is to have studied the available power options. Indeed, this is a bit of a tribute that we owe to the unknown inventor and brilliant mind Nikola Tesla.

In technical terms the difference between DC and AC is in relation to the flow and the activity of the electrons as they flow through a current. In DC the electrons flow steadily in a single direction, where it's a continuous movement of electrons from an area of a negative charge to an area of a positive charge. DC is the power that is created and stored within batteries and in DC generators, with currents that go from a positive end to a negative end.

In the 19th century DC was the primary source of electrical distribution; however, the greatest challenge with the direct current method of electrical distribution in those days – and I'd emphasize “in those days” – was that the power plants could only send DC electrical currents about a mile before line losses became very significant. As a result Nikola Tesla created the alternating electrical current, which could carry electrical currents for hundreds of miles with very little loss of power. AC eventually became the dominant form of electrical distribution that we know today.

In an alternating current electrons repeatedly switch directions, which are called cycles, which makes it more suitable for long-distance transmission. In addition, the strength of the alternating electrical current can be increased or decreased quite simply through a mechanism called a transformer, converting it into what we refer to and what is affectionately known as 60 cycle, AC 220 volt electrical service, which you have coming into your house. This allows for high transmission voltages yet lower voltages to be sent into a house to adequately provide your power requirements. Another advantage of AC is that it can be converted to DC through a very simple adapter similar to the ones, for example, that are powering our laptop computers today.

The evolution of electrical distribution has led to more efficient and effective distribution of power across North America and much of the world. Constructing underground short-distance power lines may continue this evolutionary process and improve the distribution of power within this province. To this end, studying the feasibility of underground power transmission would help identify the benefits and drawbacks of underground electrical transmission lines. Along with an increasing population and industrial base and as an increasing energy provider, it is essential that Albertans understand the best decision that they can make to address their energy needs.

I would like to thank the hon. member for introducing this motion, and I encourage all hon. members on both sides of this House to vote in favour of Motion 504. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure as well to rise today and speak in favour of Motion 504. This motion was brought forward by the hon. Member for Strathcona, and it is to urge the government to conduct a feasibility study on the construction of underground power transmission lines. I strongly support this motion because of the potential benefits that underground transmission has for local communities.

Overhead transmission lines are large, sometimes unsightly, and have the potential to reduce property values. In addition to potentially reducing property values, overhead transmission lines may generate concerns about safety, especially if they come down in populated areas. For example, I'll just mention a couple here. In 1998 Quebec suffered from severe ice storms that damaged or destroyed over 1,300 overhead transmission lines and caused over 1 million households to lose power, some for longer than a month. Mr. Speaker, the negative economic impact of that storm was estimated at over a billion dollars, and in order to deal with this state of emergency, over 16,000 members of the Canadian Forces were called in to assist the people.

Even in Alberta severe weather or natural disasters may damage overhead lines and pose a risk to local residents, especially in high-density residential areas. Community members have recognized these concerns and have brought them forward during the consultation processes for this motion. Through consultation with residents we feel as though underground transmission might be a way to effectively address the needs of some communities while continuing to provide the power transfer infrastructure that Alberta needs to continue to prosper. After all, underground transmission has proven to be an effective technology in other areas of the world; however, little is known specifically about short-distance underground transmission in Alberta.

One example of the successful use of underground transmission can be found in Australia, specifically near the city of Perth. In 1994 Perth was hit with severe windstorms that damaged or destroyed many of their transmission facilities. Since that time over 32 major underground power transmission projects have been undertaken, and several more are slated for completion between now and next year.

Another example highlighting the viability of underground transmission would be the Tokyo long-distance line. The Shin-Toyosu line is the longest underground transmission line in the world and connects central Tokyo with its outlying transmission grid. In addition, this line operates at 500 kilovolts, is 39.8 kilometres long, and has been in operation since 2000.

Mr. Speaker, these two examples demonstrate that underground transmission is a viable technology. Furthermore, through co-operation with these jurisdictions Alberta could gain significant information and technical knowledge on how best to utilize underground transmission in this province.

Mr. Speaker, on my own farm I have installed a lot of underground power lines, although they're low voltage, 220 volts. I put in all underground throughout the yards for various reasons. The costs have been increased, but I'm willing to pay these increased costs because I believe that the advantages outweigh the costs. It's for safety and reliability.

Essentially, Mr. Speaker, what Motion 504 aims to determine is whether or not underground transmission is a viable technology for Alberta. Alberta has a unique environment and climate conditions that need to be understood in the context of underground transmission. Furthermore, a study needs to be conducted on the environmental impact of underground lines as well as the costs associated with installing and maintaining underground infrastructure.

I feel as though underground technology could address the concerns voiced to us by our local communities and that it is our responsibility as members of this House to explore the feasibility of this emerging technology. I would like to thank the hon. member for his well-thought-out and timely idea, and I would encourage all members to join with me in support of Motion 504.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to take this opportunity to participate in the discussion on Motion 504 brought forward by the hon. Member for Strathcona, which urges the Alberta government to closely examine the feasibility of constructing underground transmission lines. We do need to take a good look at the costs, benefits, and technical feasibility of underground transmission lines. While there may be hurdles to overcome, we know for a fact that underground transmission lines are operating in other parts of the world: Tokyo, Australia, and the U.S., for example. It's clear, then, that there's a potential for underground transmission. In order to assess the overall feasibility of underground transmission, we need an accurate assessment of the fully burdened costs, not just the capital costs but any differences in operating and maintenance costs as well.

Currently Alberta faces several challenges with respect to transmission, and underground transmission lines could be a viable solution to some of these issues. Mr. Speaker, it's clear that we need to expand our province's transmission system; however, it's been a lengthy, costly, drawn-out process in great part because of NIMBY, not in my backyard, Albertans not wanting the overhead lines in their neighbourhoods. Fair enough. Additionally, there are concerns regarding overhead transmission lines and their impact on the health of people living nearby, effect on property values, and aesthetics. Underground transmission lines have the potential to eliminate most of these concerns.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, for 30 years we've set aside lands for transportation utility corridors, yet now we find ourselves disagreeing on if that dedicated land will actually be used for the purpose it was dedicated for. We hear about cost concerns, how it may be four times, seven and a half times, 10 times more expensive to build transmission lines underground than above ground. I wonder if this considers the fact that, one, we've already paid for our transmission utility corridor, some of which is not being used. What is the cost of just sitting on that land or forcing Albertans to pay for additional land to site lines? The delays, missed opportunities, and cost escalations that current opposition to line siting causes Albertans: what does that cost? The cost to regular Albertans: how do overhead lines affect property values and aesthetics?

The Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member. Standing Order 8(3) provides up to five minutes for the sponsor of the motion to close the debate. I would like to call on the hon. Member for Strathcona to close the debate.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. No, I won't need the whole five minutes. I'd just like to thank all of the hon. members for their comments and their support. I'd ask that all members present here today support Motion 504.

Thank you.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 504 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the hour I'd move that we say it's 6 o'clock and adjourn until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:56 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, April 7, 2009

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, and welcome. I would ask that members remain standing after the prayer so that we may pay tribute to two former colleagues who have recently passed away.

Renew us with Your strength. Focus us in our deliberations. Challenge us in our service to the people of this great province. Amen.

Mr. Duco Van Binsbergen December 17, 1936, to April 4, 2009

The Speaker: It is with sadness today that I advise the House that on Saturday, April 4, 2009, Mr. Duco Van Binsbergen, former Member of the Legislative Assembly, passed away in Nova Scotia at the age of 72. Mr. Van Binsbergen was first elected in the election held June 15, 1993, and served until March 11, 1997. During his years of service he represented the constituency of West Yellowhead for the Liberal Party. He was MLA 671. During his term of office Duco Van Binsbergen served on several committees: the Standing Committee on Public Affairs; Private Bills; Members' Services; and Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing. Mr. Duco Van Binsbergen experienced the liberation in Holland, Victory in Europe, VE Day, May 8, 1945.

Mrs. Catherine Chichak October 7, 1934, to April 6, 2009

The Speaker: On Monday, April 6, 2009, Mrs. Catherine Chichak, former Member of the Legislative Assembly, passed away at the age of 74. Mrs. Chichak was first elected in the election held August 30, 1971, and served until November 1, 1982. During her years of service she represented the constituency of Edmonton-Norwood for the Progressive Conservative Party. She was MLA 447. Mrs. Chichak was the first female Ukrainian Member of the Legislative Assembly. During her term of office Catherine Chichak served on several committees: Standing Committee on Public Affairs; Public Affairs, Agriculture and Education; Public Accounts; Law, Law Amendments and Regulations; Law and Regulations; Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing; Private Bills; and Legislative Offices. She also served on the Special Committee on the Chief Electoral Officer and chaired Professions and Occupations.

With our admiration and respect there is gratitude to members of their families who shared the burdens of public office. Our prayers are with them. In a moment of silent and private prayer I ask you to remember hon. members Mr. Duco Van Binsbergen and Mrs. Catherine Chichak as you may have known them. Rest eternal grant unto them, O Lord, and let light perpetual shine upon them. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a number of very special kids and their families. They are here as part of the Kids with Cancer dream experience. Their dream is to become one of Alberta's top politicians, and they are here to experience what it might be like. Their journey today included lunch with the Speaker, a special tour of the Legislature, and participation in a mock Legislature debate. It was my honour this morning to visit with the group in my office. I was very impressed by our very special guests. These remarkable kids are bright, they're compassionate, and would serve Alberta well as one of our top politicians.

Our guests, seated in your gallery, are Britni Allen, who is accompanied by her father, Rob Allen; Landon Haigh, who is accompanied by his father, Dale; Justin Bickford, who is accompanied by his uncle Jason Smith; and Nathan Spasiuk, who is accompanied by his mother, Connie Spasiuk. They are joined by the generous sponsors of this dream package, George and Theresa Cantalini and their children Matthew and Serena. Also accompanying the group today are Kids with Cancer representatives Joan Forge and Val Figliuzzi; also someone that's well known to the Speaker, his spouse, Kristina Kowalski; and my wife, Marie. I would ask that all of these very, very special Albertans stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure today to welcome an outstanding group of students from Evergreen school in Drayton Valley. This is the first group of students that I have had the pleasure to introduce in the Legislature, so they are indeed very special to me. These 45 bright grade 6 students along with parent helpers, bus driver, and teachers Mrs. Cloke, Mrs. Haskell, and Mrs. Bullock have toured our Legislature and learned a great deal about our building and provincial government. It gives me great pleasure to ask them to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 62 students from Mary Hanley elementary school of the constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. The group is led by their teachers, Mr. Steve Bain, Miss Rebecca Lamac, Ms. Philomena Bruch, and parent helpers Mrs. Shannon Buchart and Mrs. Michelle Hingley. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I would like to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly two very special young men from my constituency. The first gentleman that I would like to introduce is Shawn Pickett. Shawn is a young father of two teenage boys. He is on my Red Deer-North PC board, and he was by my side for the entire campaign trail, so I'm very grateful for Shawn. This is his first visit to the Assembly. With Shawn is my constituency assistant, also by my side most of the time, Darin Doel. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly eight members of Les Chapeaux Rouges, the Red Hat ladies: Mrs. Carol Firmaniuk, Mrs. Elaine Hewens, Mrs. Lavina Sarnecki, Ms Catherine Garvey, Ms Claudette Binette, Mrs Madeleine Leipnitz, Mrs. Angele Boucher, Mrs. Therese Yakiwchuk. The Red Hat Society welcomes women from all walks of life to discover that real fun begins after 50. They prove that laughter, camaraderie, and active lifestyles are the best prescription for happiness and well-being. My guests are seated in the members' gallery above, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a privilege for me to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly four very distinguished gentlemen that have played a very important role in my political life, and they were also very instrumental in getting me elected. They are sitting in the visitors' gallery. I would like them to stand as I introduce them: His Worship Johnnie Doonanco, mayor of Glendon, perogy capital of the world; His Worship Craig Copeland, mayor of Cold Lake; Mr. Ed Rondeau, reeve of the MD of Bonnyville; and last but not least His Worship Ernie Isley, mayor of Bonnyville and former MLA for Bonnyville. Please give these four gentlemen the warm welcome of the House.

1:40

The Speaker: Is the hon. member saying that it took four good men to get her here?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce two supporters and friends of mine, Ms Ann Logue as well as Ms Eleanor Art. Both have been long-time residents of the great constituency of Calgary-Egmont. I'm proud to call them friends and very great campaign workers. They're sitting in the gallery right behind me.

Thank you kindly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Mr. Stephen Snyder, seated in the members' gallery. Mr. Snyder is at the helm of the successful Snyder & Associates LLP here in our province's capital city of Edmonton. Stephen Snyder made a contribution to the public sector, having served during the time of the former Premier the hon. Harry Strom. He was instrumental in developing what is known today as the International and Intergovernmental Relations department. Stephen was a strong supporter of me and is regarded by me as a true friend. I'd ask Stephen to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly two of my constituents up from Calgary visiting us, also very good friends, Mr. Gary Vegelis and Mr. Reg Nepinak. Would you please rise to receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to the House one of my part-time constituent staff members, who's up here from Lethbridge to see exactly what's going to be proposed in the budget. I am exceedingly fortunate to have someone of her experience and knowledge. Adele Downs has served the people of this province for many, many years. She has worked with two government ministers, the late Dick Johnston and the hon. Clint Dunford, in addition to hundreds of volunteer hours, in particular as the results co-ordinator for the annual Kiwanis festival and competitive Scottish dancing. It only took one good woman, not four good men: Adele got me elected twice. I'm sure you'll all agree that that wasn't a small feat. I would like to ask her to rise now and join with me as we welcome her to this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour for me to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly three of my guests: first of all, Father Mircea, who's in charge of the Northern Lights library system; Ken Kwiatkowski, who is a councillor in the town of St. Paul; and the mayor of the county of Lac La Biche, Peter Kirylchuk. If I could ask them to stand up and receive the applause of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Provincial High School Basketball Championships

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the excellence of our high school athletic programs as demonstrated in the 2009 Alberta provincial basketball championships. For the town of Raymond, population 3,363, located just 34 kilometres south of Lethbridge, whose origins can be traced back to its first industry, its sugar beet factory, the results of the provincials were particularly sweet.

The Raymond Comets boys brought home the 4A 2009 Alberta provincial basketball championship. A source of pride in southern Alberta, the Raymond Comets now have the distinction of having won eight provincial championships, the most boys' championships ever won in our province. Raymond had even more reason to celebrate this year because the Raymond Comets girls won their provincial championship also. This is only the third time in the entire history of the Alberta Schools' Athletic Association that both 4A titles have gone to the same school, a tremendous feat. I would be remiss to not mention that last year the Raymond Comets boys football team won the 2008 provincial football championship, making it five times they have won that since 1996.

The celebrations continued, like their typical warm chinooks, to the town of Cardston, population 3,578, nestled about 77 kilometres southwest of Lethbridge, as the Cardston Cougars became the 2009 4A boys silver medalists in basketball.

Mr. Speaker, I invite all members of this House to join me in congratulating these terrific teams from Raymond high school and Cardston high school on their tremendous achievements.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Budget Soliloquy

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Is this a deficit which I see before me,
 Its resolution a sleight of hand?
 Come, let me confront thee.
 I wish thee not, and yet I see thee still.
 Art thou not, fiscal revision, sensible
 To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
 A deficit of the mind, a false creation,
 Proceeding from the economic-recessed brain?
 I see thee yet, in form as palpable
 As this deficit which now I draw.
 Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
 And such a blunt instrument I was to use.
 Albertans made fools of the lost dollars and cents,
 Having wasted all the rest; I long for thee still,
 And on thy blank cheque and budget gout of blood,
 Which was not so before. There's no such thing:
 It is the bloody business which informs
 Thus to mine irises. Now o'er the one halfworld Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
 The curtain'd sleep; Tory witchcraft celebrates
 Pale Hector's offerings, and wither'd murder,
 Alarum'd by his sentinel, the Danyluk,
 Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace.
 With Tarchuk's ravishing strides, towards his design
 Moves like a ghost. Thou unsure and shifting earth,
 Hear not my missteps, which way they stumble, for fear
 Thy very stones prate of my roundabout,
 And take the present horror from the time,
 Which now suits with it. Whiles I regret, the deficit lives:
 Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

Ring

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
 Hear it not, Albertan; for it is a knell
 That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

Albertans, this tragedy could and should have been averted. To have your say, visit our website at www.budget2009.ca or contact the Alberta Liberal caucus by calling our toll free line: 1.888.886.BUDG.

The Speaker: The hon. member will receive an absolute failing grade for that statement. He violated a basic standing order rule of this Assembly. He violated it twice during his speech, and that is a no-no. He should know better if he stands in this Assembly and claims to be a former educator of some repute.

Introduction of Bills

Bill 33

Fiscal Responsibility Act

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I request leave to introduce a bill being the Fiscal Responsibility Act.

[Motion carried; Bill 33 read a first time]

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Fiscal Responsibility

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A former Provincial Treasurer was quoted today as saying that Alberta is missing a culture of saving. Unfortunately, this province is also missing a culture of fiscal discipline and responsibility. As the finance minister prepares to announce the first deficit budget in 15 years, we can only hope for the sake of all Albertans that the government has finally learned the meaning of fiscal discipline. To the Premier: will the Premier develop a culture of saving in Alberta and commit to a long-term saving plan?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we're the only jurisdiction in Canada to have net savings. Just for some, perhaps, comparisons: some provinces have as much as $18,000 per capita debt; some have $11,000 per capita debt; in Alberta we have net savings of $11,000 per capita.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, how can this Premier claim to be fiscally responsible on the same day this government is forced to change the fiscal accountability act because of its own failure to be prudent?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we have a choice – we have a choice – to deal with a situation that has been totally unprecedented in terms of the world economic recession. No one knows how long it's going to last. The choice is simple: we either dip into our emergency savings or, on the other hand, lay off thousands of public servants, whether it be nurses, teachers, doctors, anybody that provides services to Albertans and at the same time also looks after the most vulnerable. We're not going to do that. We're going to dip into our emergency savings and make sure that we keep the momentum of this economy going.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, we spend 23 per cent more per person in this province than any other jurisdiction in Canada, and this government talks about responsibility. Last Thursday the Premier indicated that there was a comparison to be made with a family budget. Will the Premier admit that responsible parents don't pay down the mortgage without saving for future generations?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, actually, this government did both. Since 2005 we've set aside over $20 billion in the heritage savings trust fund and other endowments. At the same time – I think this is important for all Canadians to know – in the last decade Albertans contributed a net contribution to Ottawa of over $113 billion. That's how significant the economic growth in this province was to the whole country of Canada.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Alberta Office in Washington

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The recent recruitment of two high-priced lobbyists for Alberta's trade office in Washington, DC, raises a question of the value of that office, which costs Albertans $1.4 million a year. That office failed last year to ensure that the government of Alberta received timely information on the U.S. energy policy when the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 was passed in Congress. This question is to the Premier. Does the Premier not think that this indicates that the Washington office is not providing effective service to Alberta taxpayers?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, on the contrary, our representative in the Washington office is extremely busy. I'm glad that the hon. member asked the question. To give Albertans an idea of how huge the lobbying effort is in Washington, there are approximately 8,000 to 10,000 bills introduced every year in Washington. That compares to about 40 bills introduced in the Alberta Legislature. On top of that the one person is responsible for 50 state Legislatures. That's to ensure that it follows every bill, the hundreds of bills that are introduced each year across the United States. That is a phenomenal task for one individual in our embassy office.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is what I would consider to be his job. However, I think that there is something falling through the cracks.

If two lobbyists are needed to be paid a further $40,000 a month to get this province's opinions made to U.S. lawmakers, which is different than getting their bills, why are Albertans paying over $300,000 a year to the representative in Washington?

Mr. Stelmach: Just to note a correction to the hon. member, the $40,000 for the two firms: that's with all the research staff, all of the expenses included for the two lobbyist firms. Again, a former governor, James Blanchard, former ambassador to Canada, good connections with the Obama administration, and Mr. Paul Fraser, who was also minister of public affairs and was also in our Washington embassy for a period of time: these people are going to assist our representative in Washington to meet with all of the organizations. Again, it's not going to the person; it's going to the two firms, $40,000 a month.

Ms Pastoor: Albertans are losing their jobs, and this administration is asking them to do more with less. Why, then, isn't the administration shutting down the taxpayer-funded office and really using these lobbyists that have the experience that you just spoke about?

Mr. Stelmach: It would be a very foolish idea. We have a revenue stream of approximately $40 billion at stake, and we're going to have to put a full-court press on the United States, including all the governors, all of the public administration that we're dealing with, to make sure that we get the timely information.

Just to give you an example in terms of what our representative has accomplished: with respect to the state of Maryland, he worked very diligently with the Legislature there to remove its anti oil sands bill. Also, in the state of Minnesota he testified on the state's low carbon fuel standard and was able to garner support for the oil sands. That's just those two states.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Payday Loans

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last fall this House voted in support of a motion to cap interest rates on payday loans. The need to ensure that young families who turn to these loans are protected is more important now than ever. With mounting job losses and economic uncertainty, action must be taken before more people are forced into unmanageable debt. To the Minister of Service Alberta: when will there be legislation capping the interest rates charged by payday loan companies?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This question is very timely. Currently Service Alberta is finishing up a consultation with a number of the stakeholders with respect to the issue of payday loans. A number of issues are on the table – the rollover rates, the interest rates that are charged – and it is indeed a huge issue of concern. As minister I've been very concerned about the proliferation of these businesses, and we are at the point where we'll be bringing something forward very soon.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again: what supports are in place now to help these individuals who have already been trapped into the outrageous interest rates charged by the payday loan companies?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's incumbent upon the consumer, when they do choose to go to those businesses, to do their research. The unfortunate part is that some of those individuals may have a bad credit rating, and that's perhaps why they go. Perhaps going to a credit union or a bank that's under Alberta's jurisdiction would be a good idea. I think that it's incumbent upon the consumer to be careful where they go when they choose to use those services.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the minister's been concerned for a long time. Last fall the minister used the industry line that a wide range of people use these payday loans, yet federal agencies report that young, low-income families are those most likely to get one of these loans. To the Minister of Service Alberta again: why does the minister continue to take the side of industry in this debate?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As was mentioned previously in this House, a lot of consumers, individuals with incomes over $70,000, are using payday loan companies to support them. Moving forward, in the consultation that we have done, we've actually been able to interact with people who are using these services so we can determine why they need these services and what kinds of challenges they're facing. We want to make sure that this is done the right way so that we do what's best for Albertans.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before I call on the next questioner, I'd like to extend to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood on behalf of all members of the House our deepest condolences on the passing of his father.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Alberta Job Losses

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that very much.

Mr. Speaker, 4,000 new Albertans were forced to go on welfare in December alone. Albertans want a jobs budget, not a welfare budget. The fact is that this government has had its head in the sand, and it's costing Albertans jobs. My question is to the Premier.

Given that the Premier's failure to deal with economic reality has already cost over 30,000 Alberta jobs, will the Premier do the right thing and bring forward a jobs budget instead of a welfare budget?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, on behalf of our caucus we extend to the hon. member our prayers and thoughts as he deals with the death of his family member.

I'm sure that at 3 o'clock, when our minister delivers the budget, the hon. member will be very pleased because it will be one that's going to grow jobs in the province of Alberta and also support the most vulnerable.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the Premier.

This government does not understand that jobs stimulate the economy better than welfare. They've let welfare cases skyrocket, they've let oil patch welfare run rampant, they've refused stimulus spending, and they've drafted a budget which I can only assume is based on the wrong predictions they've been using so far. My question is to the Premier. How many more Albertans will you put on welfare before you do the right thing and start protecting Albertans' jobs?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the budget is going to do a number of things. One, of course, be prudent in the overall spending. We're also going to ensure that we protect the most vulnerable, protect the programs that are so important to Albertans: education, health, and, of course, children's services. The other is that we will have to dip into the emergency savings to keep the momentum going and, at the same time, aggressively pursue other markets around the world so that we can keep our economy going.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last December's increase in welfare caseloads saw numbers skyrocket by 15 per cent, up to 30,000, yet the government refuses to do anything about it. Albertans want a jobs budget and you're going to give them, I'm sure, a welfare budget. My question is to the Premier. Why won't you admit that your government is on the wrong track, leading to a dramatic increase in the number of welfare cases and unemployed in this province?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I know that the hon. member has certainly the best intentions of keeping all Albertans working. We've been very fortunate in the province because in the last number of years our unemployment rate was around 3.8 to 3.9 per cent, the lowest in the country, and really that rate is almost zero per cent unemployment. It is projected to go up to about 5, 5 and a half per cent. It could even reach 6 – who knows? – looking in the crystal ball for the year ahead of us. We're going to do whatever we can to invest in those programs to keep Albertans working. You know, in about an hour or so I'm sure that he will be very pleased when he hears the minister deliver the budget.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Carbon Capture and Storage

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before the Legislature break I was pleased to see the Minister of Energy accept an award on behalf of the province from the Aspen Institute for our carbon capture and storage initiative. Despite some international recognition I know that there are still some who have concerns about this technology and our financial support of it. My questions today are for the Minister of Energy. How does the minister respond to criticism suggesting that this technology is unproven?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you. Quite simply, Mr. Speaker, the technology itself is proven and internationally recognized as a very usable and practical technology. CCS is safe; it's been tested. It's fully supported by the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the International Energy Agency, and the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. The U.S. administration has also expressed support for CCS. We want to be the jurisdiction where CCS is perfected. We have the geology, the industrial activity, and we're committed with the funding to make this happen.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. A number of oil sands players chose not to submit a project proposal to potentially access some of the province's funding. Does this concern the minister or put the success of this program in doubt?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, no, not at all. What I'd like to point out is that there are actually three oil sands-related proposals on the table. Let's remember a couple of things. First of all, the oil sands are not the largest source of CO₂ in the province of Alberta; coal-fired electricity generation is. The $2 billion CCS plan will support three to five projects in total. We're very pleased that we have 11 proposals that we've received that we're now evaluating. The challenge will be in assessing those proposals and beginning our work. It's only the beginning of CCS for the province of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: can the minister explain to my constituents why government support for these initiatives is necessary? Isn't this something that industry should be funding on its own?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, if Alberta wants to be the leader in environmental protection and clean energy development, then we need to step forward. That's exactly what we did with this funding. We believe that CCS holds a very important key for us to significantly contribute to the climate change solution while also protecting our economy and thousands of jobs for Albertans. While others are more concerned about rhetoric and stunts, we're moving with our investment to the science of solutions, technological solutions that we can share with the rest of the world.

Homeless and Eviction Prevention Fund

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, instead of implementing rent controls as recommended by the Affordable Housing Task Force, this government introduced the brainwave known as the homeless and eviction prevention fund, that has cost taxpayers approximately $110 million. As of April 1 people who are facing eviction must either apply to the rent supplement program or for support from EI. To the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs. The HEP fund was sold to Albertans as a way to keep people off the streets and in their homes. As this has come to an end, what will help people in my community from finding themselves in the Calgary drop-in centre?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to clarify, the HEP fund is not coming to an end. There have been some administrative changes that we discussed in the Assembly in the last session. Those, of course, followed a review of the program. As you indicated, hon. member, Employment and Immigration and this department are working together to administer the fund in the best way possible so that people are successful in staying in their homes through the rent supplement program.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister guarantee that people who need emergency funding will receive the funding they need and not be placed on a waiting list?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, we did announce this a week ago. I'm going to ask the Minister of Employment and Immigration to comment on the emergent funding available for the first month's rent and for a damage deposit.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, basically, Albertans who need help to pay their rent shortfall must contact our local housing authority, but in between we do provide some emergency assistance to them so that they're prevented from being placed outside.

Mr. Hehr: Well, to be honest, that really didn't sound overly reassuring to me.

Anyway, that fund was billed as an essential part of the province's solution of the housing crisis. Will the minister acknowledge that implementing even a temporary rent cap would have saved taxpayers approximately $77 million last year alone and thousands of struggling Albertans their dignity?

Mrs. Fritz: The answer is no, Mr. Speaker. I wouldn't agree with that. In fact, the HEP fund has been very successful in assisting Albertans with staying housed when they're most in need. It's an emergent fund. It remains in place through our rent supplement program. That's where the rent shortfall program is; it's just simply changed administratively. But the fund is in place.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Peace River, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Assembly of Land for Large Infrastructure Projects

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During the last couple of weeks in travels through my constituency a number of my constituents raised questions regarding the government's policy on large-scale land assembly and its relationship to the establishment of routes for transmission lines. My questions are for the Minister of Infrastructure. Is the ministry considering any policy changes that would result in government acquiring land on behalf of power companies for the siting of transmission lines?

Mr. Hayden: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. This province already has a process in place through the Alberta Utilities Commission for the siting of new power line routes, and the process includes public consultation. My ministry's interest in acquisition of properties is for transportation utility corridors, like the Calgary and Edmonton ring roads.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A supplemental to the same minister: is the minister considering any policy changes that would result in government acquiring land on behalf of private pipeline companies that would impact the applicability of the Surface Rights Act?

Mr. Hayden: Again, Mr. Speaker, absolutely not. Our province has a process in place for the routing of private company pipelines also, and that's done through the Energy Resources Conservation Board. They establish the routes for provincial pipelines. The National Energy Board establishes routes for interprovincial lines. The Surface Rights Act applies to all privately held land.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A final supplemental to the same minister: is the minister considering any policy change that would enable government to acquire land on behalf of a power company, for example, for a nuclear facility?

Mr. Hayden: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. As stated earlier, my ministry acquires land for large-scale public projects, such as transportation utility corridors, not on behalf of any private companies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

All-terrain Vehicle Safety

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On May 1 in New Brunswick rules will come into force restricting children's ATV use for safety purposes. These restrictions include limiting the engine size that those younger than 16 may use and a restriction to closed courses for those younger than 14. To the Minister of Transportation: will the minister be considering similar restrictions in Alberta?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're always reviewing safety features of all types of things in Alberta, especially when we're using any type of motor vehicle. Off-highway vehicles are used for a number of things, and we have laws in place right now that if they're under 14 years old, they have to be supervised by an adult. At this point in time they haven't come forward, but we're looking at some helmet legislation and a few other things. I don't know exactly what we're going to be doing towards what another province has done.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the minister should stop looking at helmets. He should bring in a law.

A recent report to the government of Manitoba stated that ATVs should be banned from some public lands. This government, however, is exploring increasing the amount of access ATV users get. To the Minister of Transportation again: at a time when other jurisdictions are considering restrictions on ATV use, why is this government moving completely in the opposite direction?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I absolutely disagree with what he says about moving in a completely different direction. Right now on our public lands most of those areas are set up for proper trail use. They're also set up where we change areas. That actually falls under the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. But I've been involved with some of the constituency associations that have approached us, and they're working under very good stewardship and land management.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Another concern highlighted in the Manitoba report was the role of ATVs' exhaust systems in causing forest fires. To the Minister of Transportation: given the threat of forest fires to human and animal life as well as property and the high cost of fighting those fires, why is the government considering increasing the amount of land these vehicles can use?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, Alberta Transportation doesn't look after that side of it. But I will tell you that there are certain restrictions that people have to use. They use spark arresters on a lot of these vehicles. We always have to live with common sense, that I sometimes realize the other side has a problem with, but common sense is the answer here, and if it's dry, we should live by that and manage ourselves properly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Elniski: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last Saturday I attended and spoke at the very interesting Go Green Eco Expo at the University of Alberta Butterdome. Many of the displays dealt with conservation, recycling, and, in particular, innovation. To the Minister of Environment: what programs or initiatives has the government implemented to encourage Albertans to conserve more and reduce waste?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a timely question because as all members are aware, we have initiated a program of Too Good to Waste, and this program is really leading the nation when it comes to some of the success that we've had with respect to beverage containers and tires, in particular. As everyone knows, as of July 1 we'll be the first jurisdiction in Canada to include milk containers in our recycling. We've also had very successful programs for electronics, paint, and used oil, and we'll be moving into packaging and waste paper in the near future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Green builders focus on waste reduction at the source. What is being done to encourage all builders to conserve and recycle?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, construction and demolition waste is about a third of all of the waste that ends up in our landfills in Alberta. Clearly, this is unacceptable. There are ways that we can work to dramatically reduce that. At present approximately 20 per cent of construction and demolition waste is recycled, and 80 per cent goes into landfills. We'd like to reverse those numbers. We've got an MOU in place with the construction industry to begin that process immediately.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental is to the same minister. Smaller municipalities are having a tough time developing the critical mass necessary to make conservation programs sustainable. What is the government doing to help these municipalities?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, to some degree I think we're the victims of our own success. We've done such a good job of encouraging people to bring their recyclables back to depots that now, particularly with the economic reality that we find ourselves in, the cost of dealing with that recycled material, the value of that material has diminished to the point where it is getting difficult for some of the smaller programs to be successful. I've been working with the Recycling Council and encouraging them. I know they're working extremely hard to find new and alternative ways of using some of this material that comes in through recycling depots.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Achievement Tests for Students

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Motion 503, which calls for replacing provincial achievement tests with diagnostic tests, passed with a resounding majority three weeks ago. According to the Education minister's comments during the debate, it seems that the main hurdle to getting rid of these tests is to figure out what we should replace them with. Let me save the minister some time. We need to replace them with diagnostic tests. Considering that it seems to be merely a lack of knowledge that is delaying getting rid of these achievements tests, has the minister begun to look at diagnostic testing methods, and if so when can we expect a report?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member should know that the department has been looking at and working on diagnostic testing for some time. There are projects in place to look at diagnostic testing, particularly, I believe, starting with math at the grade 3 level. This is not a replacement for PAT 3s. Diagnostic testing is a testing process which will assist with the learning process for grade 3 students and for all students that those resources are applied to, a very useful tool but not an accountability tool. That's one of the learning tools.

The PAT 3 tests serve a different function. They also should be used as part of the learning process. They are also an accountability process, which is very necessary to be able to report to Albertans that the significant investment that they make in education is worth while.

Mr. Chase: Most importantly, Albertans that need to be reported to are the parents of those children who are suffering through the grade 3 SAT tests.

Although the minister has stated that the primary goal of these tests should be to benefit students, the minister also acknowledges that these tests do not help students succeed long term. Why has the minister not already taken action to replace these tests with tests that would benefit students, such as early diagnostic testing?

Mr. Hancock: The hon. member confuses the purpose of the two tests. Diagnostic testing is a very appropriate tool to be used to assist teachers in determining what areas of concern they have with respect to student learning. The achievement tests that are administered at grades 3, 6, and 9 and the departmental test at grade 12 are to help determine whether the system is working and to be able to report to the public that we have a strong educational system. People come from all over the world, 25 countries in the last two to three years, to look at our system in Alberta. One of the pillars, one of the strengths of the system is the accountability testing that we have in place.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Diagnostic tests allow improvement from the students whereas end of the line SAT tests do not improve education. They're simply a tool for the government to justify its purposes.

When can members of this Assembly and all Albertans expect the minister to get rid of the costly and ineffective grade 3 provincial achievement tests?

Mr. Hancock: As I indicated to the House and at all times in the whole discussion around provincial achievement tests, we are looking at our assessment processes. We are always prepared to review what we're doing. We've been talking with education stakeholders about the assessment processes. I was just in London in January and met with a group that's looking at assessment of 21st century skills. It's always prudent to update the way you assess both learning and the system, and we'll continue to do that. I see no immediate change in our process, but we're looking at what we're doing, and we're always willing to improve.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

2:20 Long-term Care Funding

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government is bent on bringing more private U.S.-style health care to Alberta. That's why they've refused to create the 600 new long-term care beds that they promised last election, and that's why we have dangerous and growing hospital backlogs. In Strathmore they broke a promise to create 100 new beds and are leaving seniors there without proper care. To the minister of health: why won't you admit that new long-term care beds are the solution to hospital backlogs and make sure they're funded in this budget?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, clearly, as I've said in this House on many occasions, new long-term care facilities are part of the answer, not the answer. We currently have in this province a number of facilities that are either well under construction or nearing completion of construction. Some of them are fully funded by Alberta Health. Some are joint projects with the nonprofit or private sector. That's the model that we will continue to follow.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the health minister's neglect has caused a 50 per cent increase in Calgarians waiting for long-term care beds in the last year. His failure to create new beds has caused 23 per cent more people to sleep in hallways, surgery wait-lists to grow 18 per cent, and ER wait times to grow to nearly 17 hours. Why won't you make sure that this budget solves this crisis and properly fund the 600 long-term care beds that were promised in the last election?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the two members of the NDP opposition – I don't know if they were in the budget lock-up or what – seem to have some advance knowledge; at least, they seem to think they do. I'd be quite prepared to wait and see what the finance minister actually does deliver this afternoon before I go running off making a whole bunch of wild and crazy comments like I just heard.

Ms Notley: Well, all I can do is wait and see.

We were promised 600 new beds a year ago, and we still don't have them. All we need to do to whittle down these wait times in the ER is to keep that promise for the new beds. Alberta seniors desperately need these new beds, but instead the minister is intent on privatizing them. Why won't you tell us now whether you're going to fund each of those 600 new long-term care beds you promised?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, as in my earlier answer I think we've got some 600 long-term care beds currently under construction. I know this particular party has some difficulty understanding that it doesn't happen overnight. If you make a decision to construct long-term care beds, there's a period of time that you have to hammer nails and put together bricks before it actually becomes a long-term care facility. I think that if the hon. member will just hold her fire, she'll see, I hope, that we've got some initiatives in the budget that are going to address some of the issues she raised.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Old-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Access to Alberta TrailNet Land

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At a recent meeting of the Cosway Adjacent Landowners group it was alleged that the Alberta government was responsible for the loss of certain rights and privileges that adjacent landowners had prior to abandoned rail lines being turned over to Trans Canada Trail and then subsequently to Alberta TrailNet. This was stated because the Alberta government allegedly did not uphold caveats that were in place prior to this land transfer. Could the minister of tourism please tell me who is actually responsible for the loss of these landowner rights such as access and fencing prior to this land transfer?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member's question is actually quite rooted in history. The railway owned this land from somewhere around the early 1800s. When they abandoned the railway rights, they gave these lands to the Trans Canada Trail Foundation, who, in turn, gave those lands to different provincial and territorial groups, in this case Alberta TrailNet. The government of Alberta had no role or involvement in this land transfer. That being said, I understand that Alberta TrailNet has offered to sign an agreement with the landowners so that they can continue to move livestock and equipment across the trail.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the minister for that answer. Regardless of who is responsible, to the same minister: is the Alberta government doing anything to help restore those rights and privileges that were lost?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, the transfer of the railway lands to the Trans Canada Trail group was under federal jurisdiction. The Alberta government did not have a role in the land transaction which the hon. member refers to. As I mentioned earlier, I understand that there is an access agreement with Alberta TrailNet that they sign with landowners, and it allows landowners to get to their land on either side of the trail whenever they want.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thanks. Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that the Alberta government has gifted Alberta TrailNet $1.2 million as well as provided an annual grant of $61,104, will the government also set up a similar parallel fund with equal annual payments to compensate landowners for their losses and their legal expenses?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government does support the development of recreation trails throughout the province because we want Albertans to be more active. The number one activity in this province today is walking. These are walking trails, and some regions with these trails often find them to be interesting and to enhance their tourism. The issue that the member has raised has to be worked out between two private landowners and Alberta TrailNet. I am prepared to ask my department officials to arrange mediation between the landowners and Alberta TrailNet if the member and those groups think that this could be helpful.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Fiscal Responsibility Legislation

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government's wasteful spending habits have now forced it to plan to repeal the Fiscal Responsibility Act. Included in that plan is a proposal to discontinue the $7.4 billion capital account. My first question is to the minister of finance. What will happen to the $7.4 billion that's in that fund now?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, we have tabled the new Fiscal Responsibility Act. We will be discussing it more fully this afternoon, when I come forward with the budget, and getting into a more detailed discussion in this House, no doubt. Essentially, the purpose of providing that piece of legislation is to accommodate today's realities. We've been dealing with surplus budgets under the previous Fiscal Responsibility Act. Now we're dealing with a new situation with a deficit.

You know, I'm glad that the hon. member asked me a question because today I've heard criticism about what this government is doing with the budget. Not once in this House has anybody ever suggested a program we should cut for Albertans, not once.

Mr. MacDonald: Your food and drink for one. That's a program that could be cut and should be cut.

Now, again, to the minister of finance: why are there seven exclusions in the calculation of the government's accumulated debt in this proposed plan?

Mr. Horner: He's debating the bill in question period.

Ms Evans: Well, yes. Mr. Speaker, this is not a place for debate of the bill. I would suggest we can do that through the questions that would properly come when we're debating the bill. In this particular period of time I think it would be very useful to have the preamble, the speech first. Out of courtesy today to the hon. members opposite I gave a very succinct introduction of the bill, and I'd be pleased to amplify on it later.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can understand why the minister of finance is reluctant to have this bill discussed in public because it certainly is a poor reflection on the budget of this government. You've spent far too much money wastefully.

Again, what is the government's accumulated debt projection going to be under this plan?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, I would like to defer my comments to a later time. Then I would provide a more full amplification.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Agricultural Support Overpayments

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We all know that Alberta livestock producers today are facing difficult times. Recently this government distributed $300 million to eligible producers through the AFRP 2 program. Most producers received their second instalment this spring. While the majority of producers appreciate the support provided by this government – it's more than any other jurisdiction in Canada – some producers subsequently received a notice of overpayment advising them that they had to repay some of these funds. Many of these producers are my constituents and are concerned. So my question to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: why did these overpayments occur, and what is being done to help these producers with repayment?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We certainly understand that this is a frustrating situation for a small number of producers. AFSC prioritized the processing of the 2007 AgriStability payments for hog producers. Due to an administrative error, unfortunately, some of the first claims did not count for AFRP 2 as eligible income. In addition, in some cases inaccurate information was provided to AFSC by the producers themselves, which resulted in payments certainly being higher than they should have been.

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question to the same minister is: what is being done to help these producers to deal with these repayment issues?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, AFSC staff have been working with the individual producers involved and the producer groups to identify the best way to deal with the overpayments. In fact, just last week AFSC representatives met with Alberta Pork, and the repayment options that we offered them certainly exceeded their expectations. This includes an interest-free period until December 31, 2010. Producers also have the option of transferring any remaining overpayment amount to a low-interest loan and using future AgriStability payments to offset the overpayment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you. My final question to the same minister: how many of the affected producers have been contacted, and are they being contacted individually?

Mr. Groeneveld: Certainly, Mr. Speaker, all of the producers at this time who had overpayments received a letter from AFSC earlier this month explaining the situation. In addition, AFSC staff have spoken personally to the majority of the producers and walked them through the individual cases and options that they have. AFSC is committed to working with individual producers and producer groups to sort out the issue. I would certainly encourage any affected producers with questions to contact AFSC to work through their individual cases.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Labour Protection for Paid Farm Workers

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dunmore versus Ontario, a Supreme Court of Canada decision in 2001, explicitly stated that a law blocking farm workers' rights to unionize violates section 2(d) of the Charter. The Supreme Court specifically also noted that the only province other than Ontario to have such a provision is Alberta. Ontario has now, I believe, changed that. My first question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Is it this government's policy to follow Supreme Court rulings or not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Although there are some rulings there, it's my understanding that some of the provinces are appealing that particular ruling and are moving through that particular process. In Alberta currently farm and ranch employers and employees are excluded from all coverage under the Labour Relations Code.

Dr. Taft: I didn't get much confidence from that. It's probably news to the minister, but you can't appeal a ruling of the Supreme Court of Canada.

My next question will be to the Minister of Justice. Does the Minister of Justice consider it appropriate that the government of Alberta is ignoring the clear ruling of the highest court in Canada on the right of farm workers to unionize?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will not in this House speak to that question and whether or not something may or may not be appropriate. What I will say is that this government takes the responsibility that we have with respect to labour rights very seriously. We have heard in this House on a daily basis exactly what the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Employment and Immigration have said with respect to farm workers' rights, and we'll continue to follow that strategy.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier yesterday said that he suspected that "in any operation if the people that work want to gather and vote on the right to join a union, they have that option." But as the Minister of Employment and Immigration knows or, at least, ought to know, Alberta's Labour Relations Code explicitly blocks paid farm workers from that right. So back to that minister. The Premier stated yesterday the intuitive position that paid farm workers should be able to unionize. Will the minister therefore amend the law to bring it into line with the Supreme Court ruling and with what the Premier himself thought was already the case? Just do the right thing.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I know that some groups support extending legislative protection to farms and ranches or their employees. There are no current plans to amend the code at this particular time. As I have indicated in the past, any changes to the legislation would require a lot of significant consultation with the farm and ranch community itself.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Seniors' Pharmaceutical Plan

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During the past few weeks a number of seniors have been approaching me regarding the proposed changes to the seniors' drug plan. I know that the Minister of Health and Wellness has said that elements of the plan are under review. Can the minister indicate what the timeline is for proposing modifications to the plan?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member is correct, as are a number of other members, that we have had representations by a number of seniors in Alberta relative to the program. We are looking at a number of modifications that I hope within a very short period of time we can take to caucus. We then would want to ensure that we have a discussion with Albertans around those modifications. I can't put an exact time frame on when we would look at publicly announcing anything but certainly before this session is concluded.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Many of my constituents have expressed concern that due to economic changes world-wide their savings have been impacted, and therefore they find it difficult to pay the proposed deductibles. How does the current global economic situation impact the proposal for the seniors' drug plan?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think that one of the really critical issues that has evolved over the past six months is that the world has changed. However, there have been a number of other suggestions relative to taxable income versus total income. There have also been suggestions that we should look at a July implementation date so that we can use more current year tax returns. Those are the kinds of things that we're going to be looking at, Mr. Speaker, to ensure that those in need that can't afford the drug programs are looked after but that there is an ability to pay as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. Finally, to the same minister: would moving towards a universal pharmaceutical program for all Albertans, not just seniors, be something that the minister would consider?

Mr. Liepert: Well, we have a form of universal through a Blue Cross plan that we offer through government. However, I did notice that yesterday in the House the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was asking about a universal pharmacare program for Albertans. You know, as has become kind of typical, one day it's that we should be saving and not spending; the next day it's that we should be spending. I should note, Mr. Speaker, that the universal pharmacare program as proposed by the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar would cost about a billion dollars annually.

Mr. MacDonald: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order? Okay.
The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Elk Antler Velvet

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Chronic wasting disease is a fatal, contagious illness of deer and elk. What is known is that it is spread from gamed, ranched deer and elk into wild populations. It has also been shown recently that chronic wasting disease can be found in elk antler velvet, which is used as a nutritional supplement in Alberta and around the world. My questions are to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Does the minister agree with the World Health Organization recommendation that all products, including velvet, from animals known to be infected with any prion disease should be excluded from the human food chain?

Mr. Liepert: It isn't something that has come to the top of my pile of the to-do list, Mr. Speaker.

Ms Blakeman: Again to the same minister: if the current mode of transmission for chronic wasting disease from animal to animal is not known, does the minister not agree that every precaution should be taken to avoid human contact with potentially infected elk and deer?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I must admit that this is something that I have heard discussed at caucus through the minister of sustainable resources. I think the Member for Lacombe-Ponoka is an elk rancher, and there are a number of rural members here, but I have to confess that it isn't something that I can actually make a reasonable answer to in this House.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. My last question, then, is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Is the department prepared to compensate game ranchers to help them phase out of this industry?

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, Mr. Speaker, certainly not. I would like to inform the member that Alberta has mandatory testing and import protocols in place to address CWD concerns for farmed elk and deer. It's interesting to note that Alberta's only case of CWD in farmed elk was in March of 2002, and we've tested over 50,000 captive cervids for CWD since 1996.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that was 102 questions and responses today.

2:40 Tabling Returns and Reports

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to table five copies of a return that I referred to yesterday, which is some dozens of comments from parents and students through the AARC program, that I would encourage the Member for Calgary-Varsity to read.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter dated June 10, 2008. It's a letter that I received from Elections Alberta regarding the conduct of the March 8 election in the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar.

The second letter is a letter that is dated June 25, 2008. It's from myself, from Edmonton-Gold Bar, to Lorne R. Gibson, Chief Electoral Officer, Elections Alberta. Again, it is more questions regarding the general election in Edmonton-Gold Bar in March 2008.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, do we have a point of order?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, we do.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise under our standing orders 23(h) and (i). I would like to bring attention to the House and particularly the minister of health – hopefully, he's had an opportunity to read the prescription drug coverage private member's statement that I gave yesterday. It's on page 520 of Alberta Hansard, for those who are interested. It's clear that what he originally said here in question period is untrue. It is not reflected in the comments from the private member's statement. Nowhere did I say any of the things that the hon. minister has suggested in question period. This what I did say:

The Official Opposition [has] made many good suggestions recently to extend prescription drug coverage in Alberta to all citizens. We need a more extensive public pharmacare program based on models in other Canadian provinces to help reduce rapidly rising pharmaceutical costs and to ensure proper access to medications.

I could go on further, but I will not in light of the time.

I did suggest that all hon. members of the Assembly read a report, again, by an associate professor of economics from the University of Calgary, Professor Hollis. This report is titled Generic Drug Pricing and Procurement: A Policy for Alberta. In that policy there is noted that "the Government of Alberta spent approximately $887 million on prescription drugs through community pharmacies while private expenditures . . . totalled $980 million."

The figures that the minister quoted were not from this hon. member or from any of my colleagues, and I would ask that the hon. minister please retract those statements that he made earlier in question period.

Thank you.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is no point of order here. I'd have to check the Blues, but what I did say is that the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was proposing an extensive public pharmacare program based on other models in Canadian provinces. I said that we ran the numbers, and it's going to cost about a billion dollars, so I would suggest that there's no point of order.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I draw your attention to Beauchesne's 494, where I read under Acceptance of the Word of a Member.

It has been formally ruled by Speakers that statements by Members respecting themselves and particularly within their own knowledge must be accepted. It is not unparliamentary temperately to criticize statements made by Members as being contrary to the facts; but no imputation of intentional falsehood is permissible. On rare occasions this may result in the House having to accept two contradictory accounts of the same incident.

Such appears to be the case.

The House will now go into recess until 2:59 p.m.

[The Assembly adjourned from 2:44 p.m. to 3 p.m.]

3:00

Orders of the DayTransmittal of Estimates

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have received certain messages from Her Honour the Administrator, which I now transmit to you.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! Please rise in the gallery.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Administrator transmits estimates of certain sums required by the offices of the Legislative Assembly for the service of the province for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2010, and recommends the same to the Legislative Assembly.

As well, the Administrator transmits estimates of certain sums required by the government for the service of the province for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2010, and recommends the same to the Legislative Assembly.

Please be seated.

Government Motions

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, prior to moving Government Motion 12, I wish to table the 2009-10 offices of the Legislative Assembly estimates as well as the 2009-10 government estimates. Also being tabled for the information of the Legislative Assembly are business plans for each ministry, which must be made public under section 13 of the Government Accountability Act. In addition, the Government Accountability Act requires that the government at the same time table the government's business plan and consolidated fiscal and capital plans. The hon. Premier will table the government's strategic business plan, and the hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise will table the consolidated fiscal and capital plans.

12. Mr. Snelgrove moved:

Be it resolved that the message from Her Honour the Honourable the Administrator, the 2009-10 offices of the Legislative Assembly estimates, and all matters connected therewith be referred to Committee of Supply and that the message from Her Honour the Administrator, the 2009-10 government estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund, and all matters connected therewith be referred to Committee of Supply following consideration by the policy field committees.

[Government Motion 12 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to table the government of Alberta strategic business plan as required under section 7 of the Government Accountability Act. The strategic business plan sets out the government's vision and long-term strategic plan. It also includes the government's three-year business plan, which outlines the government's goals, strategies, and measures necessary to track results over the next three years.

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, prior to moving Government Motion 13, I wish to table the government's consolidated fiscal and capital plans for Budget 2009. The consolidated fiscal plan is required under section 4 of the Government Accountability Act, and the consolidated capital plan is required under section 7.1 of the same act.

Budget Address

13. Ms Evans moved:

Be it resolved that the Assembly approve in general the business plans and fiscal policies of the government.

Ms Evans: Alberta has long been a land of promise, a land of opportunity. To achieve that promise and to realize those opportunities, our ancestors had to overcome obstacles that are unthinkable to most of us today. They met challenges head-on and survived and emerged stronger than before. Today Albertans are facing new challenges, complex problems, many imposed from beyond our borders.

We have watched with trepidation as markets, credit, and commodity prices have fallen, and the world's economy has plunged into a recession. We have seen major international financial institutions fail. Moreover, we have learned of the impact on far too many people: their mortgages, their homes, and their livelihoods lost. Here in Alberta we have been affected – it's true – but far less than the others. We are facing the current global recession well positioned to come out of this economic storm stronger and with greater potential for both our people and for our economy.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta is strong because our government has invested in the core services which maintain our quality of life. Alberta is strong because we introduced measures to ensure the orderly development of our province, with plans for climate change, energy development, and homelessness to name just a few. Alberta is strong because our government has been investing in infrastructure, some 26 billion dollars over the past five years to build schools, hospitals, seniors' housing, and roads. Alberta is strong because we have been saving money. We have paid off an accumulated debt of some 23 billion dollars, and we have added about $25 billion to our savings, including nearly $17 billion set aside to help us cope with unexpected drops in government revenue. Alberta is strong because Alberta's fiscal plan has helped us maintain the lowest taxes in the country. Alberta is strong, and the job of this government and the people of Alberta is to build on our strengths.

This budget, our road map, is about creating a province where people are confident about the future for their children, for their businesses, and for themselves. We believe it balances the necessary social investments and fiscal responsibility to ensure that Alberta remains a place with a vibrant and competitive economy. Our plan reflects the holistic view of the principled leadership and entrepreneurship of the people of Alberta.

Allow me to explain. Our government faces the same issues that many Albertans and their families are facing. Our income is lower and our long-term savings have lost value due to falling markets. To improve our opportunities, we look at how a family manages when a steady stream of income is not there. Like most families we plan our budgets based on what we earn, what we need to save, and how much we need to spend. As you know, our families face many challenges and changes as they grow, and they accommodate those challenges and changes. We set short-term goals for saving, putting aside cash in a savings account for emergencies, and we set it aside for home renovations. We set long-term goals, and we save for our retirement. When money is short, we watch our dollars closely and focus our spending on the highest priority areas. When there are difficult times, just as a family would, we access our short-term savings to make ends meet. We will not spend our long-term savings to get us through these tough times.

Mr. Speaker, our government is realistic about the current financial and fiscal situation. Alberta's economy is forecast to contract by 2 per cent in 2009. We know that commodity prices will be much lower than they were a year ago, resulting in lower energy and tax revenues to meet government obligations. In 2009-10 our revenues will decline by almost $4 billion.

We also know that Alberta grew by 91,000 people in 2008. This growth resulted in increased demands: demands for more teachers, more health care professionals, more police officers, more social workers, more schools, more hospitals, and more roads. We know that all of this impacts Alberta's bottom line. In Budget 2009 operating spending will be limited to a 3.7 per cent increase, roughly the equivalent of population growth plus inflation.

We also know that government must maintain its support for the economy. Albertans could experience even more turmoil if we fail to do so. To that end, we will be investing $23.2 billion on infrastructure over the next three years, $7.2 billion for 2009-10 alone. That is about $2,200 per person and more than double the per capita average anywhere else in Canada.

After balancing the need for more programs and services with the reality of our fiscal situation, we must supplement our revenues with $4.7 billion from our sustainability fund. Fortunately, several years ago our government created short-term savings accounts and set aside funds to protect programs and services for Albertans in the event of severe economic hardship. Now, Mr. Speaker, that time is here. Now our government must be able to act and respond to these changing times. We will and we are.

The current fiscal framework met our needs when we had surplus budgets, but it lacks the flexibility we need today, so we've introduced a new framework that increases our ability to meet current budget pressures with rules to ensure that there is responsible spending. For example, deficits will be permitted only if there are sufficient savings in the sustainability fund to offset them. Borrowing will be allowed for capital purposes but not for operating purposes. Operating expense increases during the year are limited to 1 per cent of the total ministry operating budgets.

Mr. Speaker, it's important for Albertans to know that these changes in the fiscal framework do not affect our heritage savings trust fund. We will not compromise the hard work and investment of Albertans, nor will we sacrifice the dollars we have saved for the future of our children. We will, however, curb our costs.

Our fiscal austerity starts at the very top. Pay hikes have been suspended for MLAs and political staff this year, and the Alberta government will suspend bonuses for senior government staff in 2009-10. A further $215 million will be found this year through a value review of government operations. Unless our fiscal situation improves beyond our forecast, we will take further corrective action of $2 billion by 2010. When the economy turns around and our revenues improve, we will put surplus dollars back into the sustainability fund with a goal of restoring it to the approximation of 25 to 30 per cent of our operating budget.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans work hard, they pay their taxes, and they volunteer in their communities. Many Albertans are facing the dual task of raising children and looking after elderly parents. These economic times increase the pressure on families. Budget 2009 will not add to that burden. We will maintain and enhance the services Albertans need. We will keep taxes low, and we will make investments to keep Albertans working. We will also ensure that we continue to provide for the needs of our most vulnerable. Our operating increase this year is focused on the highest priorities for families, with more than three-quarters of it directed to children, to education, to health care for seniors and for persons with disabilities.

Budget 2009 provides a 4.2 per cent increase for Children and Youth Services, including funding to increase the number of foster homes and to support programs for children with disabilities. We will follow through on our commitment to create 14,000 child care spaces by 2011.

Our budget provides a 5.8 per cent increase for persons with developmental disabilities and a 10.2 per cent increase for the AISH program. That includes a hundred dollars in the maximum monthly benefit to AISH recipients to assist them in meeting their expenses. With an 11.9 per cent increase for seniors' programs we will raise the maximum monthly Alberta seniors' benefit by $40 for singles and $60 for couples.

Claire Michaud from St. Paul is with us today, one of 138,000 seniors in the province who rely on the Alberta seniors' benefit. She receives monthly payments that complement what she receives from the federal government, and she has access to optical and dental programs. The 17 per cent increase that she will see in her monthly benefits will help her to relieve her mind from worrying about expenses, and then she'll have time to focus on the things that really matter, her grandchildren and the many activities that she enjoys. Thank you for coming from St. Paul, Claire.

Mr. Speaker, housing costs remain a significant burden for many Albertans, and Budget 2009 will help. We will build additional affordable supportive living units, 1,200 of them, for our seniors across the province over the next three years. We will provide $468 million over three years as part of our commitment to complete 11,000 affordable housing units – well done – and we will provide $400 million over three years to develop 2,700 housing units for the homeless and a further $41 million to create 3,600 spaces for emergency shelters, a very good-news story.

Our government recognizes that education is the cornerstone of individual and community success. For 2009 operating support for K to 12 education will be $5.4 billion, an increase of 3.2 per cent. Most of these funds will go directly to school boards to address growth, reduce class sizes, and operate and maintain our schools. We'll provide $3.1 billion to our postsecondary education system this year. This includes a promised 6 per cent increase in base operating funds to support colleges, universities, and technical schools.

The Alberta government is committed to maintaining a strong public health care system, one that is accessible, sustainable, and offers high-quality care. In Budget 2009 the government will spend $12.6 billion to operate the health care system, an increase of $558 million. That alone represents more than 40 per cent of this government's total operating increase that we are spending this year, and we will be doing this even as we receive fewer dollars on a per capita basis from the federal government than any other place in Canada. The demands of our health system are placing increasing pressure on other essential programs. We will engage Albertans in building a more sustainable system to ensure that health care will be there when we need it in the future.

Mr. Speaker, the impact of the global recession on our economy has extracted a very human toll. Our unemployment rate is forecast to average 5.8 per cent this year and could average 6.5 per cent in 2010. We will spend $164 million to enhance career and employment training. These programs help Albertans who lose their jobs to upgrade their skills and get them working again.

Budget 2009 also strengthens our commitment to protect our communities. Our safe communities strategy will be bolstered by 200 more law enforcement officers over the next two years and, along with that, more Crown prosecutors. Mr. Speaker, we will enhance addiction prevention and treatment as well.

Albertans lead the country when it comes to looking out for others through their charitable giving. That has never been more important than it is right now. To encourage Albertans to continue, we are giving them an opportunity through $20 million in the community spirit program. That successful program is continuing. This program provides grants to charities and nonprofit organizations based on the amount of dollars donated by Albertans. This complements the $80 million that government provides in the form of the charitable donation tax credit, which allows Albertans a tax credit of 50 cents on every dollar that they donate over $200.

Mr. Speaker, the issues of energy security, environmental protection, and economic recovery are interrelated. Our Premier has provided leadership so that we have addressed these vital issues in a collaborative manner.

Alberta is a resource province, and our sustained economic prosperity, indeed our country's sustained economic prosperity relies on our ability to achieve clean energy production and wise energy use. Our clean energy commitment is demonstrated through the $2 billion we have committed to support research and development of carbon capture and storage. We will provide the first $100 million this year for that particular issue and $700 million over the two subsequent years to keep our commitment to CCS storage.

We will reduce greenhouse gases from vehicles by spending $520 million through to 2011-12, increasing use of public transit through Green TRIP initiatives. A further $40 million over the next two years will help us complete other conservation and energy initiatives. This includes funding for a consumer rebate program that will encourage Albertans to spend on greener and more energy efficient products and services. Our land-use framework will receive $15 million to support the first two of seven regional plans, engaging people with common interests in responsible management of our land and natural resources.

Our government recognizes that building schools, hospitals, roads, and other public infrastructure is not only necessary to meet the needs of Albertans; it is also an effective way to support the economy and create jobs. Indeed, every $1 billion spent on public infrastructure supports 11,600 jobs which directly benefit Albertans and Alberta communities.

Mr. Speaker, our $7.2 billion infrastructure investment this year will support more than 80,000 jobs. These jobs run right across the economy, from construction to manufacturing, finance to retail, accommodation to food services. This investment in infrastructure is a win-win for Albertans both as workers and as owners of our fiscal resource. We can take advantage of lower concrete and steel prices as well as increased availability of labour to keep Albertans working and producing more results.

I mentioned already that we will be spending $23.2 billion in capital over the next three years, and here is how: $2.9 billion of our capital is devoted to building, expanding, and maintaining health care facilities in communities across Alberta; $1.7 billion for 54 new and replacement schools to accommodate and benefit 31,000 students; $1.2 billion for postsecondary facilities to provide spaces for more than 16,000 adult learners.

We will provide municipalities with $5.6 billion for their own capital expenses. This includes $3.2 billion provided through the municipal sustainability initiative and the Alberta municipal infrastructure program. Another $715 million has been identified for waste-water infrastructure, water infrastructure, and irrigation rehabilitation.

Safe and efficient highways are needed to support our crucial industries of agriculture, energy, and forestry as they produce the goods and services that Alberta sells to the world. Mr. Speaker, $5.8 billion will be spent over the next three years, including these highways: construction of Calgary and Edmonton ring roads, further twinning of highway 63 to Fort McMurray, replacing the highway 22 bridge across the North Saskatchewan River [some applause] and 1,200 kilometres of paving and rehabilitation across Alberta. There's strong enthusiasm for that.

Budget 2009 also includes stimulus initiatives to encourage the oil and gas industry to invest in drilling new wells. We believe this is a wise investment because in Alberta each new oil or gas well drilled supports 120 jobs. These are not just statistics, Mr. Speaker. These are people, real people like Darcy McCoy. Darcy is a rig manager for Stoneham Drilling. He works for a small drilling contractor out of Calgary, and currently that contractor has 11 out of 19 rigs drilling in Alberta. That's good news.

Despite the economic slowdown and low energy prices energy companies continue to invest in exploration in Alberta, and they're hiring companies like Stoneham to do the drilling. For Darcy and his co-workers that means continued employment and, in his words, "food on the table" for their families. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, Stoneham's activity in this province alone will result in food on the table for hundreds of Alberta families.

Alberta's economy also relies heavily on agriculture, which must compete globally. This year livestock producers will benefit from a $55 million investment in the Alberta Livestock and Meat Agency, which will develop markets, initiate and increase innovation, and improve management of the supply chain.

Mr. Speaker, hundreds of thousands of people come to Alberta to celebrate our arts, to enjoy our natural environment, our festivals, our multiculturalism, and our hospitality. We will support our tourism industry with the creation of the Travel Alberta corporation, which will market Alberta to the world with a budget of $57 million.

So what will Albertans pay? There will be increases in liquor markups and tobacco tax. However, Mr. Speaker, our government understands the need to keep the dollars in the pockets of Alberta families. Albertans can rest assured they will continue to pay the lowest taxes in Canada by far. We aim to keep it that way.

Indexing personal, spousal, and other tax credits will save Albertans $115 million this year. Recipients of the Alberta family employment tax credit will receive an increase to offset inflation. In 2009-10 Albertans and Alberta businesses will no longer pay and will have the benefit of no health premiums, saving at least a billion dollars each year. We will raise the small-business threshold to $500,000 for small-business owners in order that they may be motivated to grow their business still further.

Earlier, Mr. Speaker, I noted our overall revenue would decline nearly $4 billion in 2009-10. We believe, as most private-sector forecasters do, that we're in a period of short-term decline. As energy prices and global demand for natural resources increase, we expect our revenues to grow and to begin again early next year, but it will take time for them to fully recover, so we're forecasting deficits over the following two years as well. We do expect a return to surplus budgets in 2012-13.

Our government has had a strong understanding of business principles and a passion for maintaining and improving our position on the world stage. We believe that now is the time to promote Alberta. We're proud of what we have, and we want global partners to come here and research, develop, and refine new technologies, new industries, new opportunities, and new economies.

3:30

Budget 2009 reflects our belief in all Albertans, our belief in our province, and our belief in the future. With our Premier's leadership we will seize the opportunity to manage the issues of today. We can, and we will. This budget describes our mission to manage our spending, use our savings wisely, build on our capacity, and market Alberta to the world. It keeps Albertans working and provides prudent tax measures.

Alberta will continue to be a place for people of courage and determination to dream big, to embrace diversity, and to be strong. We will keep moving forward with wisdom from the past and confidence for our future. We have hope. We are building on a solid foundation, and we plan to build on strength for Alberta and make an even stronger Alberta tomorrow for your families and for mine.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Thank you to the minister for this very optimistic budget. We look forward to vigorous debate in this House. At this point I move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with tradition I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 3:32 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, and welcome.

Let us pray. Guide us in all of our deliberations and debate that we may determine courses of action which will be to the enduring benefit of our province of Alberta. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some great guests joining us today from Sainte Marguerite Bourgeoys Catholic school in Innisfail. We have 22 grade 6 students, and accompanying them are two teachers, Miss Jessica Major and Miss Kelsi da Costa, and two parent-teacher helpers, Mrs. Sue Haddow and Mrs. Phyllis Towle. I'm pleased that they could make their way up to Edmonton today and view the proceedings. I had a picture taken with them a little earlier. They were very, very good at answering questions, and I'm sure they'll be great leaders some day. I would like them to rise – I don't see them in the members' gallery – and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning. The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Oh, I'm sorry. Edmonton-Manning first, please.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to welcome students from the York academic elementary school from my riding of Edmonton-Manning. These 55 bright and young grade 6 students along with parent helpers and their teachers, Miss Stradin and Mrs. Schenk, have toured our Legislature and learned a lot about our building and the provincial government. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Sorry about that, hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning. I was momentarily mesmerized by the comment from the Minister of Transportation about the ability to answer questions.

The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you to the Members of this Legislative Assembly government employees from the Employment and Immigration division. This dedicated team works to make sound immigration policies and programs to attract people with the right skills at the right time. Their work also helps to assess educational qualifications so that newcomers have the best options to make a successful start to their careers. Well-settled and well-integrated newcomers form a solid foundation to a strong and enriched Alberta. It is my privilege to welcome this brilliant team of professionals, who work to make our province the best place to live and raise a family. I would ask my guests to rise so that we can give them a very warm welcome to our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly a couple of gentlemen that I had lunch with today. Mr. Randy Kerr and – I can't see him – Mr. Ken Lueers, senior vice-president of western Conoco-Phillips, had a chance to meet the Minister of Advanced Education and our President of the Treasury Board today. They were there to explain some of the goings-on in our riding and across the province of their operations in southern Alberta and other points. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to present to you and through you to all members of this Assembly directors of the Parkinson Society of Southern Alberta. They should all be in the members' gallery. Directors, again, of the Parkinson Society, please stand: Myles Rusak, Ernie Yaskowich, Doug Darling, Bruce Strachan, and Bob Head. We are also joined by clients and supporters of the Parkinson Society of Southern Alberta: Dave and Diane Scott, David Morris, Laurine Fillo, Beverly Head, Sarah Rusak. Dr. Wayne Martin and Marguerite Wieler are here from the movement disorders clinic in Calgary. We are also joined by Ray Williams, the CEO of The Parkinson's Society of Alberta, who is accompanied by director Sandy Brodie and client Ken Rows. I would like you to give them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure for me today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very good, long-time friend and business acquaintance of mine, Mr. Salim Shajani. Salim and I have had an acquaintance and friendship getting on for three decades, just a very productive family for the province of Alberta and, certainly, Canada as well. Salim is in the members' gallery. I would ask him to rise, please, and ask my colleagues here to give him the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you today to members of this Assembly four people from CAANA, the Commuter Air Access Network of Alberta. I'd like to introduce Mr. Paul Gervais, Mr. John Szumlas, Ms Mary Anne Stanway, and Mr. Ralph Henderson. It may be of interest to you to note that Mr. Henderson was one of the key people in my decision to run for the Conservatives in the Edmonton-Calder constituency.

CAANA believes in an open-skies policy for Alberta and seeks to link all aspects of air travel in Alberta together. I will be discussing more about this organization in my member's statement later on this afternoon. I would ask all four members to rise to please receive the traditional warm greeting of this Assembly.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Edmonton City Centre Airport

Mr. Elniski: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. CAANA, the Commuter Air Access Network, the group that I introduced earlier, is an association of communities, businesses, and people committed to improving air access among all regions of Alberta. By way of the Edmonton City Centre Airport CAANA seeks to improve air access to our capital city and create an open-skies policy for Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, Edmonton-Calder is a major hub for infrastructure in Alberta, and the City Centre Airport is a major part of this. It is not just a major factor for Edmonton but for the province as a whole. By focusing on the needs of the users and providers of air service, CAANA seeks to promote the development and operation of scheduled commuter air passenger service. This could help to strengthen the connections between businesses, agencies, government, and Albertans.

CAANA is one of the many organizations in my constituency that have a vested interest in the airport debate. Airco is one of these organizations affected as well as they operate out of the City Centre Airport. Over the next few weeks I will be introducing many groups, like CAANA, Airco, and the Kingsway Business Association, from Edmonton-Calder who raise issues regarding the status of the airport in particular and air travel in general.

I have seen a lot of noise generated over this debate over the last year, Mr. Speaker, and Albertans have been debating this particular issue for the last 52 years. While I cannot propose a solution to this lengthy debate, we need to keep ourselves informed about issues like this because they affect all Albertans.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Parkinson's Awareness Month

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to thank the Parkinson Society of Southern Alberta for giving tulips to the hon. members of this Assembly. As Parkinson's official flower, the tulip reminds us of the importance of research. Much has been accomplished in this field, but a cure has yet to be found.

Mr. Speaker, April is Parkinson's Awareness Month, and I urge all Albertans to do what they can to help raise awareness about this disease and to make much-needed donations. Parkinson's is the second most common neurodegenerative disorder after Alzheimer's disease. The loss of dopamine in the brain affects both motor and nonmotor functioning. While Parkinson's has tremendous effects on the body, it leaves the mind perfectly untouched. Approximately 100,000 Canadians live with this debilitating disease. They are affected by tremors, slowness, balance issues, and muscle rigidity. The average age of diagnosis with Parkinson's is 60 years, but it can affect people as young as 30 or 40.

In closing, I would like to acknowledge the work of the Parkinson's societies of southern and northern Alberta and what they do for individuals and families who live with Parkinson's. Supported by volunteers, donations, and dedicated staff, they provide counselling, support groups for people with Parkinson's and their caregivers, learning resources, referrals, peer programs, in-service community awareness programs, and speech therapy. Parkinson's is not easy to live with, but nonprofit organizations make a world of difference for many affected Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Families Learning Together

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to inform the House of the good work being done by Families Learning Together, a project designed by the Taber and District Community Adult Learning Association. The 17-week, full-time program is funded through Employment and Immigration, Advanced Education, and an anonymous donor, and has provided English as a second language, literacy, and workplace preparation skills to low-income, non-English speaking families since 1999. Whenever possible, the program is held in schools within the Horizon school division.

Although the program is open to all immigrants, the learners are predominantly low German-speaking Mennonites from Mexico with Canadian citizenship. As a rule, they have no formal education past the age of 12 and no literacy skills in their first language. Mr. Speaker, FLT is unique because it involves both parents and their preschool children to strengthen and build basic skills of the parents while supporting parental involvement in their children's learning.

Being that the participants work in agriculture and are seasonally employed, the program was designed to accommodate this and is offered from November to March each year. On March 26, 2009, I attended a celebration of learning event with the parliamentary assistant of Advanced Education and Technology in Taber, where we had the privilege of listening to eight adult learners talk about the value of the program for them and their families. One student has been accepted into an upgrading program at Lethbridge College and plans to be an accountant. Another student, a mother of six, is now getting her class 1 driver's licence to assist during harvest. Another spoke of how his improved English now enables him to do his own banking, attend medical appointments, read to his child, and be a better employee. One might well say that Families Learning Together embodies Alberta's new slogan: Freedom to Create, Spirit to Achieve.

Mr. Speaker, I invite all members to join with me in congratulating these people in Taber for the good work they do.

Calgary Peace Prize

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, on March 30 I attended the third annual Calgary peace prize gala dinner in Calgary. The Calgary peace prize is an award established by the Consortium for Peace Studies at the University of Calgary to highlight Calgary's contribution to world peace. The prize recognizes outstanding individuals from the global community for their work toward peace, social justice, and human security.

Some of the past recipients include His Royal Highness Prince El Hassan Bin Talal of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan and Mayor Tadatashi Akiba of Hiroshima, who was the founder of Mayors for Peace.

I was delighted that the 2009 peace prize recipient was Ms Louise Arbour, the former United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights between 2004 and 2008. Her past work includes being appointed to the Supreme Court and Ontario Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court of Canada, as well as by the Security Council of the United Nations as chief prosecutor for the international criminal tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and for Rwanda. It is wonderful to see the Consortium for Peace Studies recognize individuals whose work has made the world a safer and less violent place.

Also taking part in this great event was Dr. Bill Phipps, a former moderator of the United Church of Canada; Mr. Blair Mason, chief commissioner of the Alberta Human Rights Commission; the Leader of the Official Opposition of Alberta; and Janet Keeping, president of the Sheldon Chumir Foundation for Ethics in Leadership.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank Mr. George Melnyk and Maureen Wilson, the co-chairs for the Consortium for Peace Studies, and their amazing group for putting on a great event for a good cause.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

World Health Day

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm pleased to rise to acknowledge World Health Day, which was yesterday, April 7. This year the World Health Organization's World Health Day focused on hospital safety and patient care during times of crisis.

As you know, no region in the world is immune to the threat of disaster, and Alberta is no exception, whether through tornado, flood, or pandemic influenza. I am proud to say that our exceptional health facilities and centres and our professional staff and workers are the cornerstones of a health care system that is one of the strongest in the country.

But it takes more than a strong building to ensure the safety of care during a catastrophe. Investments in health care infrastructure and fortifying the effectiveness of existing facilities are vital in positioning health care services where and when they are urgently needed. But keep in mind that capital investment has to be done wisely. Take Vision 2020 and the continuing care strategy, for example, which highlight this government's commitment to initiatives such as providing more health care in community settings and freeing up hospital beds for those in dire need. It also aims to further increase Alberta's health workforce to meet the growing demand for services.

I encourage all Albertans to thank those who are dedicated to patient care when disaster strikes. They are like angels among us when we need them the most.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

National Wildlife Week

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about Canada's National Wildlife Week. This week is celebrated every year beginning on April 10 in honour of the late Jack Miner and his pioneer work in wildlife conservation. This year's campaign, Our Home and Native Plants, encourages Canadians to conserve and protect our natural habitats.

The National Wildlife Week celebrations across the country are showcasing native vegetation and the value of native plants. Mr. Speaker, from the fescue grass in southern Alberta to the lodgepole pine in our boreal forest, plants are an essential component of our biodiversity. Native plants and trees provide homes for many species of Alberta wildlife, keeping them safe as they nest, sleep, and feed.

The western blue flag iris has been adopted by the Alberta Native Plant Council as a symbol of Alberta's rare and native plants. This flower can only reproduce in the most favourable conditions, and it needs the help of pollinators such as bees to do so.

Recently this Assembly debated the adoption of the red cap mushroom as the official fungi emblem of Alberta. Mushrooms serve an important role in our ecosystems by decomposing organic matter. They also provide many benefits to plants that grow around them that, in turn, provide sustenance for all wildlife. During National Wildlife Week we should also remember Alberta's fungi.

Mr. Speaker, with the snow disappearing and our province turning green, many Albertans will be enjoying the outdoors this long weekend. I'd like to remind all Albertans to take the time to learn more about the trees, shrubs, and other plants native to our province and the essential role they play in maintaining Alberta's wildlife and biodiversity. Plenty of information is available on the websites of Sustainable Resource Development and Tourism, Parks and Recreation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Statement by the Speaker

Anniversary of 2002 By-election

The Speaker: Hon. members, on April 8, 2002, there was a by-election held in the province of Alberta, and a new member arrived in this Assembly. Congratulations to the hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright. When he arrived here seven years ago, he had peach fuzz on his face. Now he is a mid-range, grizzled veteran on his seventh anniversary.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Fiscal Responsibility

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This budget gives all the proof needed of years of fiscal mismanagement and that this administration fundamentally must change, yet nothing, absolutely nothing in this budget shows Albertans that this administration has learned what it needs to and will stick to a budget, a plan, and discipline itself in its spending. Instead this budget anticipates prompt return to the bounty of the past 12 years and a plan on a wish and a prayer to get back to business as usual. To the Premier: with consistent large budget increases year over year and overspending will your government take action now to put Alberta on a course for fiscal discipline?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the money that we invested in people programs over the past number of years reflected the growing population. It also reflected the tremendous need to keep up with our infrastructure because as people moved to Alberta, they didn't bring their schools or hospitals nor did they bring the nurses and the doctors with them. So we had to encourage more people and spend more money on those services. When we held consultations across this province across a very wide group of sectors, people said: try to build your budget based on the rate of inflation plus population growth. That's what we did. It's around 3.7 per cent.

Dr. Swann: A glaring example of this government's inability to change is its continued support for the faltering racehorse industry as well as millions of dollars to the highest paid deputy ministers and senior officials in this province. In a time of record-breaking deficits, Mr. Premier: why?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the one item that the hon. leader said, in terms of highest paid deputies: that simply is not true. We're in the middle range of other provinces, but we do not have the highest paid deputies.

Yes, we've got a lot of work to do. There's another confusion by the members across that we have to find $2 billion this year. The $2 billion that we're talking about is the next year out. Again, the most comprehensive three-year business plan of any jurisdiction in Canada: we actually roll out the three-year business plan with our budget. We're going to work with all Albertans this year to find the savings for next year's budget.

Dr. Swann: On behalf of all Albertans will the Premier establish an independent value-for-money audit and restore the trust of Albertans in their wealth management and that they're getting the best value for their tax dollars?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we have a number of organizations that see that as the government we give them value for their dollar. One of them is the Auditor General. The other is the business sector out there. Various business schools give us advice quite regularly, in fact. I believe we have the trust. In fact, I would say that given the kind of responses we've received over the last number of hours after the budget was delivered yesterday, we are on the right track. Albertans support the balance between supporting those most vulnerable yet not having to bring about any drastic tax increases or at the same time not looking at any drastic cuts to programs.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Budget

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While transparency in public finance is fundamental to public trust, instead of being transparent about the true deficit our province is facing, this government has chosen not to report on the true state of our staggering deficit. To the Premier: given the massive deficit predicted in the health transition, why were the health regions' deficits not reported in this budget?

Mr. Stelmach: First of all, the minister can answer as to when the services board will be delivering their report to him. But here's another thing. You know, I was watching some of the coverage, and some of the reporters kept referring to the deficit, that the deficit we're going to be incurring, the $4.7 billion, is like the deficit in 1986. Well, quite frankly, the budget in 1986 was $13.6 billion with a deficit of over $4 billion. That was close to 30 per cent of the total expenses. If we were going to go year to year in terms of inflation, with a $4 billion deficit in 1986 the kind of deficit budget we delivered would actually be $2.1 billion in 1986.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. To the health minister, then: what is the total deficit for the health regions?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'd be happy to supply that information when we receive the audited financial statements of the Alberta Health Services Board by the 30th of June.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the deficits are there, how does the government plan to address the deficits? Where will the money come from?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the member is incorrect. For the last actual deficit that was incurred in the health regions, we passed a special order of Treasury Board to clear those deficits off. I think it was last summer. As is required by law, the Alberta Health Services Board will file an audited financial statement for the year ending March 31, 2009.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Employment Supports

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In this year's budget we unfortunately do not see any significant additional support going to laid-off workers. With tens of thousands of Albertans losing their jobs in recent months, this should be a key priority for the government, but it isn't. While the government claims it's spending millions of dollars on employment and training programs, the reality is that there is only a 2.2 per cent increase from last year. To the Premier: at a time when Alberta's unemployment rate is spiking, how can this government claim to be supporting Albertans who have lost their jobs when it is basically running the same programs as it did last year with no significant increase in funding to support laid-off workers?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, our budget is based on growing jobs, not taking jobs away. That's the big difference in the philosophy, I guess, of those sitting across the way. For every billion dollars invested in public infrastructure, it's 11,600 jobs. So for the $7.2 billion that we're investing in infrastructure, that's over 80,000 jobs created just on infrastructure alone.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, this government's bitumen upgrading policy has cost thousands of good jobs in this province, and the Premier knows that. In the budget we see $7 million budgeted for labour attraction, the same as last year. How can the Premier justify a policy that spends taxpayers' dollars to recruit additional temporary foreign workers when tens of thousands of Albertans here in this province have been laid off in the first two months of the year?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, you also find out from employers that we are short in a number of skill sets. There are employers that still have signs saying, you know: we need people in these various skill sets. We're open to bringing people in from other jurisdictions to fill those job vacancies. To those Albertans that are currently unemployed, we also have money in the budget to retrain them for those jobs that are vacant there and to give them those skills so that they can fill those vacancies.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, to the Premier. Thirty thousand Albertans lost their jobs in January and February alone, with March's numbers still to come, and the government is now projecting 6.5 per cent unemployment for the coming year, yet the government is cutting support for career development services and basic skills and academic upgrading. How can the Premier explain this policy to Albertans who are trying to get back to work? You're not supporting them. You don't care.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, other than just the rhetoric coming from the opposition and looking at little bits and pieces, the overall Budget 2009 clearly addresses the priorities of Albertans. We're hearing that from Albertans very clearly. As I said, we're looking after the most vulnerable. Seniors: an 11 per cent increase. We've seen an increase in AISH, a substantial increase. We're seeing an increase to child care. We're seeing an increase in Health at a time when it's difficult to find all the dollars. At the same time all those in need are going to be taken care of in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Provincial Budget

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the finance minister tabled a budget that was not only late; it was incomplete. The unspecified cuts of a quarter billion dollars this year and $2 billion next year in this half-baked budget will create fear and uncertainty among Albertans. The government has left the sword of unemployment hanging over the heads of thousands and left Albertans to fear the reduction or elimination of programs they and their families depend on. My question is to the Premier. Why didn't you finish your budget so that Albertans would at least know where they stand?

Mr. Stelmach: Albertans know where they stand. This government cares about every Albertan: those that are working, those that might have lost their job, those that are sick, those that are seeking help. You know, even the families that are caught in difficult situations: we have programs even in these difficult economic times to look after them. With respect to the $2 billion at least the hon. member knows that, yes, we're going to have a very serious discussion about next year, not this coming year '09-10 but '10-11, in terms of finding a further $2 billion. But I know where we can start. We can start by asking the federal government to treat us equally, equal to every other person in this country, and reimburse us at least $700 million for the cuts to health transfer to Alberta.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, this budget is so lame that if it was a horse, they'd have to take it out and shoot it. Not only are there no new jobs; there are cuts to municipal infrastructure and to the environment, and another 2 and a quarter billion dollars worth of cuts to come. Will the Premier stand in this House and tell Albertans exactly what cuts he has in mind, and if he can't do that, will he explain to the people who elected him the reason why not?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, watching the mayor from the city of Edmonton yesterday, he made a very wise observation. He says that, yes, we do have about $20 million less coming to the city overall. But on the other hand, he also said that given these times we will save more than the $20 million in the infrastructure we have to do; these are tough economic times. That to me shows that the mayor is a good businessperson. We're good business people. We're going to work through this together.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, there is no excuse for an incomplete budget. None. When my son, a university student, struggles to meet a deadline for a term paper, he knows what he has to do.

The question is to the Premier. When you realized that the budget wasn't finished, why didn't you and your finance minister down a couple of Red Bulls, pull an all-nighter, and get 'er done?

Mr. Stelmach: Did he say "pull a red bull" or "down a Red Bull"? Okay. Sorry. He has got me baffled as to what he's talking about. [interjection] It's a good thing the microphone never picked that up.

The issue here is – and it is a serious issue – that we're going to work with all Albertans over the next number of months. As I said before, $700 million on the table. I'm sure there'll be other questions coming forward during this question period. Our President of the Treasury Board also has other ideas that he's going to share with Albertans because we're going to reach out to Albertans. As Albertans, as a government we're working together. That's the strength that got us into this good financial position, and we're going to continue to work with those same Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Seniors' Benefits

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. I've heard from many of my seniors who are worried about making ends meet. In these tough economic times how is the government helping those who are most in need and, in particular, those seniors on fixed incomes who really need a helping hand?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I am very proud of the fact that this government is committed to assisting low-income seniors who are most in need, and yesterday's budget was proof of that. I hope the leader of the third party is listening because Alberta's low-income seniors who are most in need will now receive even more assistance. I'm very happy to tell you that the maximum monthly benefits for low-income seniors is increasing by $40 per month to $280 per month, and for senior couples it's increasing by $60 a month to $420 per month.

Mr. McQueen: Thank you for that. That's wonderful news that the benefits are increasing, but that is just one half of the equation. The other half is eligibility for the benefits, especially the income thresholds that decide if a senior will qualify for assistance. Has the government made any progress on income eligibility?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to add that those benefits that have increased will start as of April 1 of this year, so seniors will see that on their April cheque.

Mr. Speaker, we've also increased the maximum benefit and the qualifying thresholds for low-income seniors most in need. Beginning in July, which is the beginning of our benefit year, we'll have increased thresholds. For single seniors the threshold will increase by $1,300 to $24,000. For senior couples it increases by $2,100 to $39,000. As a result of these threshold increases we'll have another 6,000 seniors who will qualify for Alberta's seniors' benefit, for a total of 144,000 seniors that receive these benefits.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. My final question also to the same minister. Many seniors also need access to affordable, supportive housing. Will this need be addressed, especially as Alberta's population continues to age, and will it be addressed in both the urban and the rural areas of Alberta?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago I announced $119 million for the affordable supportive living initiative that was both for rural and urban areas and lodge modernization, and this budget gives us another $50 million for more supportive living initiatives. This will help the supply of affordable housing for our seniors, with 450 new units coming on with that $50 million. With this funding the province has now invested $415 million in capital funding grants since 1999 to support the development and modernization of 8,000 affordable supportive living units for seniors.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Environmental Monitoring and Evaluation

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite failing to catch oil and grease leaking into the Athabasca River and for almost five years failing to catch a major oil sands company's negligence in installing air pollution scrubbers, among other examples, the Department of Environment has now cut its monitoring budget by 23 per cent. My question is to the Minister of Environment. Giving the growing evidence that this department has failed in the past to enforce its own regulations, why did this government slash its monitoring and evaluation budget by 23 per cent?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, let's deal with the preamble first. The fact of the matter is that the government did not miss dealing with these issues. The only reason this member can refer to them is because we laid charges and the guilty parties pled in court.

Mr. Speaker, we'll go into great detail in committee when we get into the budget. The short answer for this member is that there was no cut in the budget as it relates to compliance. There was some one-time funding that was in last year's budget that was invested in research. That was known as being a one-time investment. The core funding remains entirely intact, and I look forward to discussing it in committee.

Ms Blakeman: No. Vote 2.0.1 has been reduced.

Again to the same minister: considering that the largest percentage increase, 70 per cent, in this department was to the communications budget, can the minister explain why the government keeps opting for a communications strategy over action on environmental protection?

Mr. Renner: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, these are the kinds of detailed questions that are very difficult to deal with in question period. With respect to the line item in the communications budget, again, it is a realignment of staff within the department that have been brought from a number of different areas. For example, we've brought our internal communications people that were separated throughout the department together in one office. Again, there is no increase in this budget. It's a realignment and a consolidation of existing resources.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. To the same minister: given the amount of lip service that this minister pays to fighting global warming, it's curious that the Department of Environment only spent a tiny fraction of the money that it set aside last year for climate change, so can the minister please explain which programs were not implemented in '08-09?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the main program is the one that we'll be having much discussion on tomorrow, and that is the consumer rebate program that was mentioned in the budget speech yesterday. We've issued a media advisory that we'll be discussing it in much more detail tomorrow.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Wild Rose Foundation

Mr. Allred: Thank you Mr. Speaker. In the budget yesterday it was revealed that funding for grants through the Wild Rose Foundation was not part of this year's budget. My questions are for the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. Why did you make these changes to this very important program?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, over the last year we've reviewed many different aspects in our department, and one of those was our community investment programs. What we want to ensure is that we're giving the best possible level of service to our 19,000 not-for-profit sector members throughout the province. We decided that we would streamline the community initiatives program and the Wild Rose program because they have similar criteria, similar groups, and we want to be more efficient. We are going to maintain the excellent parts of the Wild Rose such as the board development program. We're going to maintain Vitalize. We're going to keep those employees in our department. We are going to use some of those people on our Wild Rose board to help us with the Alberta not-for-profits voluntary sector initiative, which is housed in our department.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is again to the same minister. What consultations did you have before making this decision?

Mr. Blackett: Well, other than the 35 years of experience I've had in various capacities in not-for-profit sectors, I've been in over 50 communities in the province. I've talked to CCVO, Volunteer Alberta, and ECVO. Even though I didn't specifically talk about Wild Rose funding, they did come back and say that there's too much duplication; there's too much red tape, too much paperwork. We're going to streamline that process. We want to do as the Leader of the Opposition said: get disciplined in our spending and provide better value for our taxpayers' dollars.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly rewarding to hear that we're cutting red tape.

My last question is again to the same minister. Why would you make these funding cuts to the nonprofit sector in these troubling economic times when people rely on these services?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, we're realigning our budget, making our programs effective, efficient, and transparent. We have $164.2 million out of my department alone that goes to the not-for-profit sector. That's not including the $80 million that comes out of the community spirit tax credit. As I said earlier, we need to make investment programs more effective; we need to make them more efficient. This sector is of a tremendous value to all Albertans, and I would encourage everyone to give to them, to encourage them, and to tell the story about the great things they do on behalf of three and a half million Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Royalty Revenues

Dr. Taft: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. One of the mysteries of this budget is found on the bottom of page 102 of the ministry business plans. For the past several years the government has had a target of obtaining 20 to 25 per cent of the value of Alberta's petroleum production through royalties. It was a modest target that the government seldom met, but it was a target. This year the target has been dropped. There is no target for royalty collection. My question is to the Minister of Energy: why this enormous step backwards in accountability and management?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The fact of the matter is, I believe, that for a number of years members across the way have criticized the government and criticized our department relative to the projections that we make on resource revenue. There aren't any people in this Assembly that I know of, none that I know of in the investment community, and very, very, few, if you could find any, in the industry that would have properly predicted oil to be at $147 and $38 in the same nine-month period.

Dr. Taft: Missed the point completely. I draw the minister's attention to page 102 of his ministry business plan, the bottom lines. The bottom line is that this government used to have a target of collecting 20 to 25 per cent of petroleum production through the royalty system. They had that target for years. The target is gone. There simply isn't one. In this first year of the new royalty framework it's vital that Albertans know if that royalty framework is working. So again to the minister: how will the government, industry, this Legislature, or the people of Alberta know if the new royalty framework is working when there is neither a goal nor a measure by which to judge it?

Mr. Knight: Again, Mr. Speaker, there certainly are goals, and there are targets. I can tell you that it's a fool's errand for us to go out and try to predict what may or may not happen in the next fiscal framework that we're dealing with here. We realize that we're going to be in a situation where the low commodity prices that we're seeing today very obviously will change. It's, again, interesting that over the last three or four months the price of natural gas was anywhere in kind of the $6 range; today I think it's trading for about $3.30. What kind of a target would people like us to set relative to that?

Dr. Taft: Okay. We're not communicating here. We've got a problem in our communication. Page 102 of the business plans: check it out. The target we're talking about, Mr. Speaker, is collecting a percentage, whether oil prices are a hundred dollars or $40. What per cent are we hoping to collect as a target through the royalty system? Has the minister given up on any measure, any target at all on a percentage for the royalty framework to collect? If so, how will we ever know if it works?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, again, I would suggest that if you wanted to look at the numbers and how the new royalty framework might compare with a royalty framework that was, you know, in the province previously, maybe in 1938 or '42 or '60 or '90, whatever period you want to choose, you could say, "If we look back, we collected 20 per cent at this point and 40 per cent at this point, then some other percentage," but it's redundant information. What we will do is manage these resources in the best interests of Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Education Property Tax

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm hoping that my question isn't as catastrophic as my member's statement. My question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. As announced in yesterday's budget, the province's education property tax requisition is increasing. I would like the Minister of Municipal Affairs to explain what those increases are.

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, education is an investment in our future. The province provides the majority of funding for education. In fact, we invest over $6.3 billion into education, and we collect $1.7 billion through the education tax. This year the increase is $85 million, which represents 5.2 per cent. I need to emphasize that that is real growth in the province. We are committed to providing a quality, accessible – and I need to stress accessible – education system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a former school board trustee more funding for education is certainly very welcome.

My second question is for the same minister. Can the minister explain how these taxes will impact the citizens of Calgary?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, all of the taxes that are collected are invested back into the education system to help educate our students to become doctors and policemen and teachers. When we talk about Calgary, $580 million will be collected through taxation, but we invest $1.24 billion back into Calgary. The increase will represent approximately $3.50 per household per month. We are going to continue to support a world-class system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last supplemental is to the same minister. Is the government planning to phase out the education portion of the property taxes?

2:20

Mr. Danyluk: No. No, Mr. Speaker, we are not. We believe that the current system finds a balance. It provides a stable source of revenue and ensures equitable funding for students no matter where they live. This government provides the majority, as I said before, of our basic education funding. It is a good system. We need to be proud that it is one of the best in the world.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Long-term Care Funding

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What Alberta's seniors need are long-term care beds now, not replacement beds by 2015. It's well known that it costs taxpayers far more money to keep seniors in acute-care beds, where, I must admit, the care isn't quite as good because the staff are not trained in the same way, while they wait for placement in long-term care when compared to the cost of the long-term care bed. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: why are additional long-term care beds not the priority in this year's budget?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the opposition can try as hard as they want to find what's not in the budget, but I want to talk about what is in the Health budget. What we have in the Health budget is some 7.7 per cent increase to Alberta Health Services to deliver services across the province. We have an additional $42 million in this budget to deliver home care for those most vulnerable in our society, especially seniors. We've also increased, as an example, our cancer drugs by some 20 per cent. We've put in extra money for safe communities. We've got to talk about this budget being a good news Health budget in tough economic times.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, there were some very good things in the budget, and I would thank the seniors minister for a lot of that.

Has the minister done a value-for-money audit on how much it costs to keep seniors waiting in acute care for long-term care placements as opposed to building or expanding our long-term care facilities?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's sort of an implication here that we are not building any long-term care facilities. That's absolutely incorrect. I can take the member, if she would like, on a little trip around the province. We've got facilities that are under way that I know of in the Minister of Justice's community, some 200 long-term care beds at Garrison Green in Calgary. I know that there's a facility in I think it's Stony Plain. There are several facilities that are under way in Edmonton that are joint ventures with a nonprofit society. There's lots of long-term care facility construction under way in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Gosh, you know, I haven't had a chance to go on that kind of a little sojourn for a long time. I may take you up on it.

To the Minister of Health and Wellness. If long-term care beds were included in existing or new supportive living facilities which are getting the additional 400 units this year, that would certainly help to reduce the backlog in the hospitals and create the continuum of care within the facilities themselves. Has there been any consideration within the ministry to take action in that direction? In other words, within one building it would go from one end of the continuum to the other and also include long-term care beds, which probably should include palliative care.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the member is exactly right on the point that I've been trying to stress. I think I'll use the Strathmore example. We have invested significant dollars in Strathmore into assisted living through our seniors' housing program. Now what we have to do, working with the MLA for Strathmore-Brooks and the community, is ensure that the money that is committed to that facility is done in a way that we meet the needs of the community. But those needs are not just long-term care. That's why we're so happy with the extra dollars that were in yesterday's budget to deliver home care as a total package.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Homelessness Initiatives

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday's half-baked budget proved this government has no intention of following through on their plan to end homelessness. It only put a hundred million dollars toward the $3.2 billion that was promised, and even there it robbed that money from the affordable housing program. Only the most cynical of governments would cut from one homeless initiative to pay for another and then publicly congratulate itself in the process.

Why does the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs think that she can end the homeless epidemic by simply shuffling money around?

Mrs. Fritz: Oh, Mr. Speaker, I'm so glad this question has been asked today. As you know, our 10-year plan to end homelessness for Alberta was released about two weeks ago. In that plan we said that we would increase housing options for the homeless. This budget for the very first time has money for homeless initiatives, for housing for the homeless. I am so pleased. In this budget the base funding has remained the same, but I can tell you that $400 million over three years for housing units for the homeless is very welcome news to the community and the people that we serve.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, that money was already there in the last budget. It was just called something else. All you did was change the name.

Now, at her March 16 photo shoot the minister made a big hullabaloo about her commitment to end homelessness, but this budget has exposed that there is not one new cent this year or any year to take Albertans out of the cold. That money was there before. How can the minister claim to endorse a plan to end homelessness when she's actually cut a hundred million from her affordable housing program this year?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, I would love to meet with this member to explain the difference between housing for the homeless and affordable housing. There is $400 million over three years for our homeless housing units. As well, there is $468 million for affordable housing. That's $868 million over three years to assist our most vulnerable people.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, they have simply changed the name. The money hasn't changed a bit. Meanwhile, the minister has cut half the funding from her affordable housing plan, as I've said. You've cut the homeless and eviction prevention fund by 50 per cent, and you've axed $15 million from rent supplements. To the minister: when will you offer Alberta's homeless real help instead of just PR stunts and more smoke and mirrors?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, along with the capital housing dollars that I've explained to you are available for our homeless, which is $400 million over three years, we also have funding of $32 million for operating funding for the homeless. Along with that $32 million we have the homeless and eviction prevention fund of $34 million, which, as you know, was $7 million two years ago. We also have the rent supplement funding, which is $56 million dollars. You can see that there's over $100 million in operating for our homeless initiatives as well as capital. It's good news.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. It's very important to ensure that vulnerable Albertans are supported during these challenging times. What are the implications of the budget on vulnerable Albertans, like persons with disabilities?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, this budget is proof of this government's commitment to assisting Albertans with disabilities who are most in need. Here's the proof: the maximum AISH benefit has increased by $100 per month effective April 1 of this year. This raises the maximum monthly benefit for AISH clients to $1,188 per month.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is real help for those that need it.

My second question to the same minister: can AISH clients look forward to receiving more increases in the future?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt about our commitment to the AISH program. This is the fifth increase in five years, and this is the third increase under this Premier. My ministry is committed to reviewing the AISH financial assistance program every two years to ensure that we are providing the right supports. In total about 38,000 AISH clients have a better quality of life because of the AISH benefits that they receive.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. There are, however, AISH clients who need more support than the $1,188. What about them?

2:30

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, this is another example of our support for vulnerable Albertans. On top of the monthly income benefit, the AISH program offers supplementary assistance for medical needs, needs such as travel to medical appointments and special diets. An emergency benefit is also available to provide assistance in situations that present a serious health or safety risk.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Major Community Facilities Program

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. After two years, coincidentally surrounding an election, of gigantic photo-op cheques being strategically handed out by Tories, the major community facilities program has come to an end. This program worked well for government members, including the members for Banff-Cochrane and Foothills-Rocky View and Airdrie-Chestermere, so it seems as though the government got its money's worth. My question is to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. What happens to those organizations who had grants in the pipeline for this program awaiting confirmation but not finalized as of year-end?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, those groups will be notified by my department that the program has been discontinued. For those that qualify under the community facility enhancement program, we'd ask to have their application transferred to that. The program was a two-year program. There was $240 million that we put in there, $480 million of ask, and $2 billion worth of projects. I think we did a great job for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, aside from the excellent photo ops and the helpful timing this grant program gave government members, did the program complete the inventory of needed repairs of major facilities in this province?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, the question is absolutely ridiculous. We've had 350,000 new people to this province in the last four and a half years, and we will always have new needs for major construction and major facilities all across the province, whether in rural or urban Alberta. That's the way it is.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again to the same minister. I note that a number of major facilities are still in dire need of maintenance and upgrading – not new facilities, just maintenance and upgrading – like, for example, the Varscona Theatre in Edmonton or Catalyst Theatre. Is this the end of government assistance with a higher level of funding for community facilities, or is another fund available to groups like the Varscona? The CFEP and CIP are lower amounts of money. There's a cap on them. Is the higher funding gone completely?

Mr. Blackett: Your Leader of the Opposition asked for us to have discipline in spending. You wanted better value for the taxpayers' dollars, and now you want us to spend more. We had a two-year program. We've done it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Some cities are saying that they need to keep education property taxes, that they collect on behalf of the province, for their budgetary needs. Can the minister explain why the province does not allow municipalities to keep these taxes?
