What else did he do? He started closing down long-term care beds. The relevance is that the system was brought to the edge of a potentially catastrophic collapse, according to Dr. Paul Parks. He brought in the code of conduct. The minister of the Crown needs to be brought before a court of law to answer questions of why, when legitimate issues were brought forward, he brought silence to Albertans.

Then, yes, the e-mail was leaked that on October 8 another e-mail was sent to the Premier and the subsequent minister, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek. They got the e-mail with the same 322 cases. What did the government move to do? Delay, delay, delay. On the day that the Dr. Ciaran McNamee story broke about the cancer deaths – on that day – they finally relented and called a review. On that day, within the hour. Coincidence? I think not. This is why, Mr. Chairman, the people who need to be put on a public stand are the ministers over there. They cannot be given the authority and the ability to decide where and when they're going to call this inquiry.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

Mr. Denis: I'm rising just on a point of order under 23(h), (i), and (j). This member is making strong allegations against a member of this government. I think he needs to tone it down a little bit.

The Chair: Hon. member, we are talking about amendment A4 of the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act.

4:30

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Chairperson. This is why it's so important that these members . . .

Mr. Anderson: Sir, I stood up on a point of order. I wasn't recognized.

The Chair: I'm sorry. I didn't see you. You have a point of order?

Point of Order Decorum

Mr. Anderson: Also under 23(h), (i), and (j) from the standing orders, Mr. Chair. I'm having a hard time listening to this member talk while the Member for Calgary-West continually, over and over again, consistently interrupts. I can't hear anything that's being said. What this member has shown is just a complete inability to shut his mouth. It's really tough to understand. They've already shut off debate with less than one hour, and now this member won't shut his mouth. Maybe he could show a little bit of humility for once in his life – maybe he can – and just be quiet so that this member can actually speak for the short time that this wonderful government has graced us with in opposition.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Hon. members, the Leader of the Official Opposition has the floor. The chair would like to listen to him.

Debate Continued

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Chairperson, thank you. This is why these meetings cannot happen in camera. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, the current minister of health, the previous minister of health from Edmonton-Mill Creek, the minister of health previous to him from Calgary-West, and the previous, previous, previous minister of health from Edmonton-Whitemud need to be put on a stand to answer questions. They were given warnings from front-line staff on issues pertaining to public safety. They chose to ignore them. Instead, they started closing beds and firing staff, and they caused a potential catastrophic crisis.

Mr. Chairperson, my father died waiting for care. He died in an emergency department waiting for care, from lack of decisions. If my father died waiting for care, I know many other Albertans suffered unnecessarily and died waiting for care.

That minister wants to pass their code of conduct. He centralized health care in one board, so health care staff that speak up get railroaded out of this province because of these people and their phone calls to managers, the same managers whom they appointed, who helped them restructure the cabinet.

Secondly, the other issue pertaining to the cancer deaths. Evidence and fact: Dr. Ciaran McNamee presented to caucus years ago, begging for resources. Many of those members of caucus are still here on that side. He begged for resources so that cancer patients could get surgeries. He begged. They cut surgeries by more than 25 per cent. Many of those members that he begged to are now in cabinet.

Guess what? They tried to railroad Dr. Ciaran McNamee. He sued. It's on the public record. But guess what? He's at Harvard in the top thoracic team on the planet. He sued because allegations were made about his ability to practise medicine. When he sued, there was a settlement. Mr. Chairperson, we all know that when you sue, you either quit and give up, or you go to court because nobody gives up, or there's a settlement.

There is something wrong and something that stank on the other side, where they acknowledged, "We have guilt," but they signed a nondisclosure agreement. They signed a nondisclosure agreement, which means that nobody can talk.

Guess what? I met a member of the Alberta Health Services Board in Grande Prairie. There was another doctor that got railroaded, Dr. Tim Winton. That member of the board says that he's seeing how much Dr. Tim Winton is getting paid for his contractual arrangement, that we don't have the answers to from this government. If the member of the board knows it, common reason would assume that the chairman of the board of AHS would know what the payment is to Dr. Tim Winton to buy his silence, to force him out of his medical career.

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Dr. Sherman: The relevance is that that same chairperson of Alberta Health Services took a week off and helped this current Premier with her cabinet picking. That's why we need this open, on camera, on the public record. The file for Dr. Ciaran McNamee is sealed in a law firm. It's sealed. It's sitting in a law firm. Why was it settled? What was said during discovery? It is sitting in a law firm. There is a lawyer who just happens to help the Premier with her cabinet arrangements and transition cabinet. It happens to be her ex-spouse, who happens to be running the law firm.

Dr. Ciaran McNamee's file is sealed. This is why first the Premier said: we'll call a public inquiry. We want to know: does cabinet know the details of the deals with the Dr. McNamee case and the Dr. Winton case? Mr. Chair, it stinks. The chairperson of Alberta Health Services was so close to this government. He took a week off his job to help them redesign their cabinet, as did a certain lawyer who's extraordinarily close to the leader of the government who helped to redesign the government. The question is: did the Premier see what's in that secret file and that's why she's flip-flopping and that's why she's delaying? That's a question. We need the answers, and we need the answers in a court of law on a public stand.

Did somebody in the government see what's rotten in the state of – well, it's actually not Denmark – Alberta, the province of Alberta?

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I had a hard time sitting still listening to the hon. Leader of the Opposition talking about the allegations he made last November and the case against Dr. McNamee. All of the tablings that he made last November: I took the liberty of pulling them out, and I reviewed some of those cases.

Mr. Chairman, I must say that I was disgusted in reading those cases and comparing them with the allegations. Those cases really were about a bunch of doctors calling each other names. It was absolutely disgusting. This member used those as allegations to say that there were firings, et cetera. Well, there may have been firings – I don't know – but those cases that he referred to were nothing but disputes between doctors calling each other names.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Well, how much time do we have left before the hour is over?

The Chair: You have a couple of minutes.

Mr. Anderson: Two minutes? Well, two minutes is the time I have to wrap up something on this issue in Committee of the Whole. I've just got to say how absolutely disgusted I am with the arrogance and the inability of the leadership on that side – I don't want to tar everybody with the same brush – the leadership of the PC caucus on that side, who have repeatedly, over and over and over again, sat here in this House and restricted our ability to debate this issue, have closed debate on this issue, have shown again and again a willingness to deceive the public on this issue by saying that they're going to call a public inquiry and then going through this ridiculous process that we've gone through on this Bill 24, which isn't going to result in a public inquiry being called before the next election.

This is just a shameful display, and now they're going to lengths – some of them are even starting to blame doctors for using this public inquiry as a way to get at each other. What an absolute joke. It just amazes me. If you've got nothing to hide, call the public inquiry. If you've got nothing to hide, call it. Call it. There are enough allegations out there from Dr. Maybaum, that there are government officials that want his head on a platter. He has the letter. We can go through Dr. Magliocco saying: you'll regret this if you complain about this anymore.

If it's just doctors, fine. Then call the public inquiry, and let's figure that out if that's the case. Or maybe it's not. Maybe there are things like what happened with the now minister of health a year ago, when he came out and, clearly, in the middle of the night called the head of the AMA about the mental state of the Official Opposition Leader.

The Chair: Hon. member, the time allocated has terminated.

The chair shall now call the question on amendment A4.

[Motion on amendment A4 lost]

The Chair: The chair shall now call the question on the bill itself, Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act.

[The clauses of Bill 24 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed?

[The voice vote indicated that the request to report Bill 24 carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 4:41 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

The Chair: Are there any comments or questions? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Certainly, we had an opportunity to discuss Bill 26 when the closure motion was debated earlier this afternoon. There's a lot to be said about this legislation. I'm still getting feedback. I'm still getting letters. I'm getting phone calls from citizens regarding this legislation and e-mails from drivers and from people who work in the hospitality industry.

It's worth noting that the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills has also expressed concern about this bill. The hon. member, I think, is correct. On Monday evening, I believe, if we have a look at Hansard, we can see the hon. member's comments. As I understand it, he certainly will be questioning this bill further.

Now, Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011: we do know the powers that it provides if it goes through. I think we need to have another look at this. The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall has suggested to me that we refer this to a standing committee. There are a lot of questions here that need to be addressed.

We can certainly provide caution to this Assembly after what happened with a court decision in British Columbia last week, even though just a portion of that legislation, which is very similar, if not identical, to what we're discussing here this afternoon, was questioned in the courts. For that reason, it would be a good idea to let an all-party committee of this Legislative Assembly have a look at this before the next provincial election is called.

We could also examine at that committee our laws around liquor advertising. Maybe we should change them as well. Maybe we could look at changing the drinking age. Maybe it should go up one year. Maybe it should go up two years. Perhaps we could also have a look at the number of liquor stores in this province and where they're located and their hours of operation.

I saw in the newspaper today a story regarding Bill 26. Then on the back of that section, I believe, was at least a full-page ad advertising wines and spirits. I'm certainly not opposed to that form of advertising, but perhaps it's time, if we're sincere in making our streets and roads safer, that we have a look at these issues.

We do know that Alberta has the second-lowest number of police officers per capita. If we look at it on a 100,000 population, we have the second-lowest number of police officers in the country. Perhaps we could hire more police officers, and perhaps we could have more checkpoints. I have no problem with more checkpoints. If we're going to enforce the law, let's put the boots on the street and put them to work.

One more thing. I know there are a lot of hon. members who in this short period of time have comments on this legislation, but there is one more thing, Mr. Chairman, that I think we should study, and that is the education programs that we're providing to high school students as they learn to operate motor vehicles and are licensed to operate that motor vehicle. What sort of drunk-driving programs are we providing to those people? I know the AMA has an excellent program for young drivers, but could we do more? Could we put the fear of life-and-death situations into those young drivers? Perhaps we should look at that.

There is not an individual in this province who wants to get a knock on their door or have their doorbell rung late at night by a police officer standing there with very, very bad news regarding a traffic fatality. I think we can make our roads and our streets safe.

We can do a lot to reduce even further the number of cases of drunk driving. We've got to go after the chronic, repeat offenders. While what's suggested in this bill is notable, I think there are different ways and better ways of dealing with it.

I'm going to cede the floor to another hon. colleague, but I would certainly ask members to please have a look at the comments on Monday from the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills and give this bill perhaps a good, close look. Let's have a committee of this Assembly scrutinize it and have public consultations with everyone, including the hospitality industry and Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Everyone. Hear them out, and then make the decision on this bill.

Thank you.

The Chair: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm glad to stand and speak and maybe answer some questions. First of all, I want to say that impaired driving is preventable, and Alberta will pursue co-ordinated actions that are proven to change behaviors when taken together. This legislation has sparked some important conversations around the province, and I encourage everyone to keep talking: keep talking to your friends, keep talking in the community, keep talking to your family.

Mr. Chairman, Alberta's new comprehensive impaired driving legislation aims to keep drivers who drink from getting behind the wheel by changing behaviors through enforcement balanced with education – and I'll talk about that a little bit later – prevention, and monitoring. In the coming months the government will work with partners to run a public education and awareness campaign to help Albertans prepare for the new law.

I did meet with businesses today, this morning, in fact – I have met with businesses and associations previously – and I would say that the discussion that we had was very fruitful as far as the future of this legislation. I say to you that the discussion very much revolved around education, making sure that people are very aware of what the consequences of drinking and driving are. I can also say, Mr. Chairman, that what did happen is that the businesses, restaurants, and local establishments very much agreed that drinking and driving should not take place. It's important that people understand what the legislation is going to bring forward. I want to maybe make a couple of comments. You know, the new legislation focuses on creating safer communities and roads. An estimated 22 per cent – and I stress that again, 22 per cent – of all fatal collisions in Alberta last year involved drivers who had consumed some alcohol. Alcohol-related collisions resulted in 569 fatalities and 8,535 injuries over the last five years in Alberta.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to make possibly a couple comments because there's been a lot of discussion about .05 to .08. First of all, I need to be very clear. The clearness that I need to talk about is that .05 to .08 is an impairment. It is an impairment with a penalty of a 24-hour suspension. This is not new. This has been in place for 12 years. I hear members of the opposition talk about how this is something new that people need to get used to. Well, are the penalties new? Yes, but . . . [interjection] You know, the hon. member, maybe the interim leader of the WRA, talks about having some decorum in the House, and I just want to say to you: would you give the government some of the same, please?

I say to you, if I can, that the .05 to .08 is impairment, and the penalty, as I said a couple of seconds ago, is a 24-hour suspension.

The .08 and above is a criminal offence, and a criminal offence is addressed by a court of law.

Now, if I talk about the .05 – and maybe we need to clarify again that the .05 has been in place for 12 years. I need to bring forward to you the information about blood-alcohol content levels which affect individuals. It was gathered from a variety of sources, including the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, the American Medical Association, and the National Commission against Drunk Driving. Mr. Chairman, first of all, what I want to bring forward is that according to them if you had a blood-alcohol concentration of .02, you'd have some loss in judgment, you'd have some relaxation, you'd have a slight body warmth, you'd have an altered mood, and the effects on driving would be a decline in visible functions, rapid tracking of a moving target, and a decline in the ability to perform two tasks at the same time. I'm just saying that it's the divided attention.

When we look at .05, there's exaggerated behaviour, you may have loss of small muscle control – for example, focusing of the eyes – impaired judgment, usually a good feeling, lowered alertness, a release of inhibitions, reduced co-ordination, reduced ability to track moving objects, and also difficulty in steering, and a reduced response to emergency driving situations. Now, Mr. Chairman, I'm going through this very clearly because the opposition suggests that there is no impairment or that that impairment should not be used.

Let's go to .08 and above. Muscle co-ordination becomes poor, balance, speech, vision, reaction time, hearing; it's harder to detect danger; judgment, self-control, reasoning, and memory are impaired; concentration, short memory loss, speed control, reduced information processing capacity; for example, signal detection, visual search, impaired perception. Mr. Chairman, I can go on to .1 and above, but I would suggest to you that this is common knowledge and is being used as impairment.

Mr. Chairman, I want to stress to everyone in this room that this is a serious issue. There are people's lives that are at stake. There are families that are at risk. I know that there are some members opposite that continually or consistently persist in offering information that isn't correct, really at the expense of the citizens of this province.

I would also say to you that I think it's important to note that we're not changing legislation and looking at legislation for the sake of having legislation. We're looking at three areas. The first area, the area that we believe is critically important to start with, is the repeat offenders, the .08 and above. I can suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, in five years of impaired driving convictions: 4,100 and 466 convicted.

As we go on to talk about .05, I mean, I'll be the first to admit that we need to change the culture. We need to change the deterrent of driving impaired, and I will refer to .05 to .08 as impairment. Mr. Chairman, the statistic that we have for the immediate 24-hour suspensions is 42,762. That is a concern. That is a concern of impairment.

One of the statistics that really brings some concern to me is the number of zero alcohol tolerance suspensions initiated in Alberta, and that's 1,665 last year. We have the stats, and they are increasing. Mr. Chairman, I guess I can say that they're increasing because maybe our population is getting larger. I don't have those statistics as to where that's coming from. But I can say that we believe what has to happen is that we have to look at the three aspects. We have to look at graduated licences – that's part of regulation, and we will deal with that; that's part of this number here – we have to deal with the zero to .05, and we also have to deal with the .08.

I want to have some discussion that there's significant evidence that shows that drinking with a blood-alcohol level of .05 dramatically increases the risk of being involved in an accident. As a matter of fact, you're 7.2 times more likely to get in a fatal car accident at the level of .05 than if you had a zero content.

Mr. Chairman, we don't believe that fines are the solution. Our legislation does not include fines or demerit points. Driver education and enforcement are central to Alberta's approach. Impaired driving is very much connected to social behaviour. The focus of Alberta's impaired driving legislation is really about traffic safety. Police officers have long been able to issue fines and penalties on the roadside, such as speeding tickets or licence suspensions. I also want to mention that every Canadian jurisdiction other than Quebec already gives 24-hour roadside suspensions to drivers suspected of being impaired.

I know there was some discussion about the B.C. legislation and how we needed to look at what B.C. was doing. I want to say to you that the B.C. legislation, in fact, supported what we're doing because when all of these areas were appealed, really, the only one that was overturned was the above .08 not being a Criminal Code infraction. I mean, that's simplistic for me to say that, but in essence that's what it was, and that really was one aspect that was challenged. I say to you that we have not changed that; .08 is still going to be maintained as a criminal code.

If I can just go through, you know, some of the focuses and directions that we're doing. Maybe I should first of all, Mr. Chairman, talk a little bit about the questions that were asked by the hon. member from the opposition. His questions, of course, talked about the drinking age. There's no doubt that drinking age is not part of this legislation. It has been talked about. It has been talked about as to how it works and if it would make a difference, but I say that it's just not in our proposal right now.

The study of the education programs to provide high school programs. Well, ladies and gentlemen, I want to say to you that when we had discussions with the businesses this morning, we very much talked – and we have talked previously – about communication and working together to make sure that the education programs we do have and are going to bring forward are going to be in conjunction with each other. I mean, our purpose and their purpose are the same, and that's to have fewer people drinking and driving. That's what it is at the end of the day.

Also, in the discussion that was brought forward by the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, he talked a lot about the ability to get transit or the ability to get a taxi. I want to say that that is an issue, and it's something that we do need to deal with. Now, how do we do it? It's not so hard to do it during the festive season, when we have the Red Nose program and we have, I believe, the candy cane program, where everybody is looking at that as a major focus, but we need to talk about what happens for the 11 other months of the year and how we can deal with the transportation.

The hon. member talked about the AMA having a good program and good progress on a program. You're absolutely right. We met with the AMA. They have a couple of different programs. We even talked about the availability of programs and what programs they could develop.

I found it a little bit interesting when the hon. member talked about putting the fear of life and death into individuals with graduated licences. I don't want to say that I want to put the fear of life and death. In actuality, we need to put the fear of reality into people who are driving, especially people who are driving impaired.

The comment that we need to address chronic abusers is very much part of where I believe this legislation needs to go. You asked me: where is this legislation going, and how are we going to deal with the individuals that are chronic repeaters, that are individuals that have .08 and above? Well, I'll say to you right now that if you blew today, what would happen is that you would blow. You'd lose your licence for a day or so. Then you get seven days to put your house in order. Then you have a 90-day suspension, and then you get your licence back, and you're able to deal with your charge in the courts.

The change that we are proposing to make is that that would not happen. If you lost your licence, we have enough faith in the breathalyzers, which have been upheld in courts, that what would take place is that you would lose your licence until the courts dealt with your charges. The second part is that on a first offence you would lose your vehicle. There would be a vehicle seizure for three days, on the second offence for seven days, on the third offence for seven days.

Ladies and gentlemen, let me be very clear that when we're looking at impaired driving at .08, I do not apologize for seizing vehicles. I think it's critically important to change, if I can call it, the minds of individuals. We're also looking at a mandatory ignition interlock. If you get charged on the first charge, you will have to use an ignition interlock for one year. [Mr. Danyluk's speaking time expired]

The Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. We have 15 minutes or 20? What is it?

The Chair: Twenty.

Mr. Anderson: It's 20 minutes. That's what I thought. Holy smoke. It's amazing how many great ideas the members in the government have when they've limited debate to one hour. Then all of a sudden they all want to stand up and take their full 20 minutes. It's just inspiring, just absolutely inspiring.

You know, when the Transportation minister was talking earlier – we had a little bit of a debate in a previous session – he talked about, you know, if my four children are in the back of my van or my truck and they were distracting me from driving, maybe I should think about doing something about it like maybe putting them in a cage and so forth. I'm assuming that was in jest. I sure hope it was.

The problem is that this member doesn't realize: what line are you going to draw? Where's the line that you're going to draw going forward for people who are distracted or driving impaired? What? Is it going to be pretty soon that we're not going to let senior citizens drive – is that the next plan? – because their hearing has decreased and their sight has decreased a little bit and they don't have the same reaction time that they did, that clearly it's reduced? Is that the next step? We're going to tell senior citizens they can't drive as soon as they show that their reaction time comes down a little bit?

Where do we draw the line here? Do we not allow 18-year-olds, 21-year-olds, et cetera, because they have a record of crashing their cars more often than the rest of us do, so we're going to raise the age of driving to 22 or 24 or 26? Where does the line stop for you with regard to public safety?

I'll tell you that what it does for me is this. If we're interested in making sure there are zero deaths ever in this world, well, I guess there are ways to do that. We'd better get rid of cars. We'd better get rid of airplanes. We'd better get rid of any kind of greasy food. We'd better find a way to get rid of bad weather. There are about a hundred different things. I mean, what are we going to do? As a government and as a society we have to pick the things that we are going to do, the steps that we're going to take that are going to make the most impact in saving lives and are going to be things that are reasonable balances, reasonable restrictions on society for the better public good and to keep people safe.

If our goal is to make sure that the only people on the road are people that have the co-ordination of an Olympian or of a male in his prime or a female in their prime and that for everyone else, if they have any problems, if they have any disability, or if they have any problem whatsoever and their reaction time is decreased, we're not going to let them drive, well, then, let's start making a list.

Let's just tell the seniors right now: "Sorry. Once you're 50 or 55, the reaction time goes down. You're out." Okay? Is that where we're going? The reason we make laws is to make sure that we have a good, solid balance of making sure that when we do pass a law, it is truly going to make a difference for a large number of people with regard to public safety.

That is why the studies that have been done have concentrated on this issue of: who is causing the accidents in society? Who is causing the problem? Who is killing people on our streets? The evidence is absolutely clear. There is no equivocation. It is the folks on our roads who are over the .08 legal limit. That is why the legal limit is .08. The statistics clearly show that if you take a look at all of the accidents on our roads, only 2 per cent of folks blow between .05 and .08. Two per cent. Meanwhile 15 times that many people – 15 times – blow over .08.

Yet this government comes in with this bill, rams it through the Legislature with almost no discussion on it, with almost no ability for the public to even comprehend what's going on, before they even have an opinion on it. Just get it through. I mean, literally, a week of discussion. What have we had? Maybe a few days in the Legislature to talk about this. Maybe. This bill gets rammed through, and at what cost? Is it going to save lives? No, it's not going to save lives. What's going to save lives are increased checkpoints.

If you want to make sure that people who are dangerous to our society are taken off the street, then what you do, clearly, is make sure to enforce the existing laws to ensure that the people that are statistically actually causing the vast majority of deaths, which are those over the .08 limit, are taken off the street as much as possible, so that people change their behaviour to know that if you get caught at .08 and above, you're going to get hammered, that you're going to get absolutely taken to the cleaners with regard to various administrative penalties and criminal penalties. If that's what you want to do, if you put that in place, then you would actually cut down on the deaths caused by drunk driving.

This bill does nothing for that. In fact, it has the opposite effect, and that's the problem. What's going to happen here is that hundreds of thousands of dollars in police resources are going to be targeted at people in the .05 to .08 zone. That's what's going to happen. They're going to be targeting those folks. Meanwhile while those folks are stopped at the side of the road and getting processed and all things are happening, the .08 guys are going to drive by scot-free. That's going to happen.

If you want to cut down on drunk driving, increase enforcement. Increase checkpoints. Honestly, you've got a better chance of seeing a sasquatch in the province of Alberta than you do a blinking checkpoint if it's not December. There are sightings every so often. "Oh, look; a checkpoint." I have lived in Airdrie for 20 years. I have not gone through a checkpoint once in those 20 years.

That's ridiculous. If you want to help cut down the deaths from drunk driving, get your checkpoints up. Stop blowing our money on things like $2 billion for carbon capture and storage, stop blowing $350 million on new MLA offices, and start spending your money on things that matter: increased enforcement, policing, schools, increased checkpoints, things like that.

There have been members over there who said that somehow we're dissing the cops because we're saying that you've got a better chance of seeing a sasquatch here than you do a checkpoint. It has nothing to do with the police. It has to do with the lack of resources that they have. If this government was interested in actually doing something about deaths on the roads, they would increase enforcement, which means giving more money to our police forces to increase checkpoints. That would be one way to do it. But then to pass this and target exactly the wrong group of people, people who go on a date with their spouse and have a drink with dinner or those people who have a couple of beers after work with their buddies before they go home from a tough week at work – we're going to target those folks because they're a danger? They're not a danger. If they were a danger, the raw data would show that they were a danger compared to these other groups. We're going to pass a bill that does nothing to improve public safety. It just is another erosion of individual rights and liberties.

Look, I'm not concerned. I don't drink. As you well know, I don't drink, so this isn't about me. But there are people out there, the vast majority, I would say, of Albertans, that enjoy a little bit of a beverage over a meal or after work with a buddy or what have you. Why are we swooping in and targeting that group of people instead of targeting the dim-wits that are getting absolutely hammered and then going home? They know they're not going to get stopped because there are no blinking checkpoints unless it's December, and then there are a few. It's just absolutely incredible.

Mr. Chair, the other thing I don't understand about what has happened here is the idea that we are going to pass such a profoundly important piece of legislation, that will make a lot of changes in Alberta with regard to its effect on, say, the hospitality industry, on what we do for socialization and how we do it. You're going to pass this. It's going to change how we use our police forces and our law enforcement activities and so forth, their resources.

We're going to change this big law, and what does this government do? This PC bunch comes into this Legislature two weeks ago with a new bill, that no one has ever even heard of, after a meeting that the new Premier had with her Liberal counterpart in B.C., Christy Clark. They come walking in here with a new piece of legislation, that no one has even talked about, throw it on the table, and then they give us roughly about five or six days for debate on this and seven other bills – it's not like we were just debating this – with no time to bring in stakeholders to hear their testimony, the testimony of folks like MADD and the police service.

Obviously, we would want to hear from the police service and MADD and all those folks, from the hospitality industry, from civil rights groups, from different constitutional experts, and from just regular Albertans so that we could have time in our constituencies to go back and listen. Maybe if you would go back into your constituency and listen, you would find out what the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills or the Member for Little Bow have been getting. You all know it. I'm assuming their ridings and Airdrie-Chestermere and Calgary-Fish Creek and, I know, Calgary-Glenmore and Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo – I can't speak for the others – have been getting, clearly, that the vast majority of people responding to this bill are not in favour of it.

But in typical Tory fashion: “We know best. We know best. Just take it. We know what we're talking about. You guys are just a little behind the curve, you regular Albertans. The PCs know best. We know what's best for you, Alberta. Here you go.” Now we have a piece of legislation that we have absolutely – there has been virtually no public consultation on this, no consultation with experts. This bill is a piece of garbage. It's not worth the paper that it's printed on, and it's not going to do anything to save lives.

What's so frustrating about it is that the intentions of the bill are fine. The intentions of the bill are good. The intentions of the bill, the objectives of the bill, are the same for all of us. We all want the same thing, decreased deaths and injuries, et cetera, from impaired drivers. That's the goal. You know what? Everyone in this House wants that, and there's no doubt about it.

It's just like the federal gun registry; that's what this is. The same silliness that went into the federal gun registry is going into this bill right now. The federal gun registry was a response to what happened in Montreal, a terrible shooting in the late 80s, in '89 I think it was, in the École Polytechnique school in Montreal, a terrible, terrible situation, awful, a mass shooting. Many, many, many, many women, I think over a dozen women, were killed in that shooting, so of course people were mad, and they should have been mad. It was awful.

What did the federal Liberals do at the time under Jean Chrétien? Well, they imposed this federal gun registry. This was going to change everything. This was going to save lives. It was going to increase public safety. We were going to get the bad guys and everything with this gun registry. About 20 years later what has that gun registry gotten us? Nothing. We spent billions of dollars, certainly over $2 billion, probably more, on it. We didn't protect anybody's life. It was a complete waste of time. It's trampled on the rights of law-abiding gun owners, particularly in rural Alberta, particularly, I would say, disproportionately in Alberta, where we certainly have a different culture and we appreciate things like hunting and things like that. Our citizens, a lot of us, anyway, are very much into the outdoors and hunting and using our long guns to hunt and so forth. The point is that it trampled on those people's rights.

It was like talking to a brick wall with regard to the federal Liberals to try to explain to them that criminals don't register their guns. In other words, this registry is not going to help. It's not even going to help you solve crimes, let alone prevent them, because people who shoot people don't register their guns and say: look, I'm going to use this gun that I've registered to shoot someone. That's not how it works. That's why the federal gun registry was a joke, and everyone knows it. Finally, it's getting repealed by the federal government right now after all that wasted time and effort and money.

That's what this is. This is a waste, an absolute waste. The federal gun registry was to improve public safety, to cut down the number of deaths. The goal of Bill 26: improve public safety, cut down the number of deaths caused by impaired drivers. If that's the goal, then you would think that the bill would want to actually do something that will accomplish that goal. This bill doesn't do anything at all.

What will do something with regard to saving lives is putting more checkstops in place, maybe diverting resources that may be going to our men and women in law enforcement – our chiefs of police and so forth – going to them and saying: “You know what we really need? This is a scourge on our society. We really need to up the enforcement here. What can we do to help? Is it a matter of more resources? Can we divert traffic enforcement officers?

Maybe we can have the sheriffs do a little bit more, do some checkstops themselves instead of just checking for speeding and so forth?” Maybe that's what we want to do. I don't know. But shouldn't we have that conversation with them? I would think so.

If we wanted to save lives, that's what we would do. It doesn't matter if you lower the limit to .05 or .01 or leave it at .08 or nothing or what you do. If you don't enforce the law on your books, then who cares about passing it? So this is the problem with this bill. This is really our version of the federal gun registry, a do-nothing amendment.

Then the unintended consequences. Just like the federal gun registry, the unintended consequences were massive amounts of taxpayer money wasted and trampling on the rights of law-abiding gun owners. This is our very own gun registry. It has unintended consequences, too. The unintended consequences here are that not only do we not get the public safety that we want, but we divert precious resources that the police could be using to apprehend those who are over the .08 limit, and they start enforcing it on the .05 to .08ers, who aren't killing people. That's one unintended consequence. So it could actually have the opposite effect to what was intended, which was to save lives.

Another unintended consequence is that it's going to change the way that Albertans socialize. There are a lot of people that aren't going to take a chance now, when they go out and drink or when they go out to the restaurant, to have a drink of wine or two over dinner, where it's right on the edge there, .03, .04, you know. Clearly, I've driven in many cars with somebody who has had a drink or two, and they're perfectly lucid, perfectly able to operate the vehicle. They're not drunk in any way, shape, or form, but they have had a glass of wine or two over their dinner, over the period of a couple of hours. What will happen is that they'll be scared of losing their car without any kind of way to appeal it, with no practical way of appealing it, anyway. They won't want to do that anymore, so they just won't even bother going and doing it.

It will change that. It will cause those folks who actually want to go out and have a drink of wine over dinner or a couple of beers with their buddies after a long week of work – that will have to end. Of course, the unintended consequence there is on the hospitality industry, so there are jobs. People have jobs in the hospitality industry. We've seen in B.C. that that industry was severely hurt by the similar law that they had in B.C. A lot of folks are going to be out of work because of this. There will be a lot fewer incomes going into their businesses and so forth, and there we go.

There's another unintended consequence. Those police resources we could be using on enforcing .05 to .08; we could be using them on things like education programs. We could be talking right now about things like talking to the cities about increasing the amount of C-Trains and public transit in the evening after happy hour, after last call, and so forth.

That is why this bill is wrong. It has got to be voted down.

The Chair: Does the Minister of Transportation wish to speak?

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much. I'm just going to make a couple of brief comments. Of course, there's one thing that I find very interesting. When time is so precious, how come so much time is spent on the long gun/rifle law?

I want to make sure that I correct some of the direction that has been brought forward by the member from the third party. He continually talks about the 2 per cent, and I would very much like him to look at the statistics that he is using. The 2 per cent is basically 50 per cent of the individuals that were driving and tested.

Mr. Chairman, the other point that I would like to say is that that 2 per cent were drivers that were impaired and lost their life. It does not take into account the people that were in the vehicle. It does not take into account the people that were injured. It does not take into account the people that were killed that were in other cars that this individual hit.

The other point that I want to say is that I do not apologize for taking care of even that 2 per cent. All of us can stand around as legislators and say: "Well, you know what? Only 2 per cent of the homicides are because of stabbing. Let's not worry about the 2 per cent of the homicides because that 2 per cent of the homicides were done by stabbing, so that's inconsequential to what matters." Mr. Chairman, I will say to you that everyone's life is important and especially to the families of those individuals.

Mr. Chairman, the other point. I know the member occasionally talks about my comment about cages. I would suggest to you – and you can check Hansard – that that individual talked about being distracted. We have laws, and those laws prohibit individuals from driving when they are distracted. I would suggest again, if I could, that if the individual is distracted in the vehicle, he or she should look at ways to try to curtail that. It was suggested that he needed a little help, and I was willing to offer it.

I also just want to finish because I will not rise again in Committee of the Whole. I just need to say that, you know, when we talk about balance and who's causing accidents, I very much believe that we need to look at all that are causing the accidents and try to look at changing that culture and try to look at changing what is happening to families and to individuals. I will also say that when the hon. member talked about "Take a chance," Mr. Chairman, we are dealing with families. We are dealing with individuals. First of all, we are working with the associations and with individual and groups, businesses, to try to do the best education that we possibly can because the businesses and this government have the same goal, and that is ensuring that if someone leaves their home, they come back to their home without being killed or injured.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. I appreciate the time, and I know it's short. I would like to ask the Minister of Transportation – he's talked over and over again about the 42,762 roadside suspensions that they've had over the last five years – what has the government done to address those 42,762 roadside suspensions? How have they targeted those drivers, and what have they done to help?

I ask the minister, and I've asked him at least three times: of those 42,762 roadside suspensions – and I know that he has these numbers at his fingers because when I was Solicitor General, I knew what they were – what percentage of those suspensions were in, say, for example, Calgary or Edmonton? What percentage of those suspensions were in rural Alberta? Under the Safe Communities Secretariat it was very clear in the recommendations to target hot spots. You should know under those roadside suspensions if there was a higher percentage in Calgary, for example. How have you targeted those? How have you increased the checkpoints, and how many checkpoints do you currently have up and running in Calgary? Are you going to be giving the police forces more money to have more checkpoints?

We've mentioned that 20 per cent of the repeat chronic offenders are causing 80 per cent of the problems, so I'd like to know what you're doing about that. You encourage people to keep talking about the seriousness of this. Minister, if you want to encourage people to keep talking, why are you so adamant about having this bill pass and putting closure forward? I think one of the things that's important if you want people to talk – and I can tell you that they're certainly talking about this particular piece of legislation – is to put the bill into committee. Let's have a full discussion.

That's what the Premier continues to talk about, and we've got her on record about how she's going to consult with Albertans. In fact, she says, "We need to change how we make decisions. We must make time and processes available for consulting with Albertans before we pass laws." What consultation was done before we're passing this law? Then she goes on to say, "[This] doesn't mean every Albertan will agree with every decision, but there will be time to learn about the issue and weigh in."

You know what, Minister? Albertans haven't had the time to weigh in on this decision. They get a piece of legislation handed to them and have had absolutely no time. She talks about: "We need to change how the Legislature and the MLAs operate. More free votes so MLAs can reflect constituents' views" – and that goes back to the bill – and "more time between proposing and voting on legislation."

You know, we need to have some frank discussion. We need to be able to have the opportunity for Albertans to weigh in, and that's exactly what the Premier has said. I want to find out from the Minister of Transportation or the Minister of Justice or the Solicitor General or even, you know, the health minister about the consistent research that has been done under the safe communities. What research has been done on the .05 legislation? What is the government doing to develop and implement a targeted social marketing campaign to counter excessive drinking and, for that matter, the use of drugs? You didn't really mention education. I'd like to know: when you stopped these 42,762 roadside suspensions, what education component did you provide to these individuals?

More or less, I'm going to talk briefly. I don't know how much time I have, Chair.

You've talked about the 12 years that the .05-.08 legislation has been around. I really need to emphasize the facts, so what have you done to address it? What have you done, in the 12 years that we have had these 24-hour roadside suspensions, to target it, and what are you going to be doing in regard to the chronic abusers, and how are you going to address that? I think what we really need to do when you have chronic, repeat offenders – are you going to be specifically adding more police in the province? I mentioned last night that we have the second-lowest police population in the country. How do you expect, when you have such a low percentage of police, that you're going to address targeting the .05 to .08 legislation?

The minister has talked about and we've mentioned that the police need more tools in the tool box. There is no question about that. I think when you talk about more tools in the tool box, that means you need to have more police officers on the road. You need to have stronger criminal charges. You need to talk about the repeat, chronic offenders. It was mentioned briefly in regard to: how are we going to transport these people home? I got an e-mail from a rural constituent that said that they can't even get – I'm not sure what it's called in rural Alberta – Operation Red Nose or something. They haven't even been able to get any of that to get a ride home. We've heard about the transportation and the long cab rides. You even alluded to the fact that we know that Christmas is a busy season.

I guess, for us, what we want to do is have on the record that we believe that impaired driving is a serious offence. There's no question about all of the lives that have been lost. I think what we need to do is address how you are going to deal with that. Have you brought that forward to your federal-provincial-territorial meetings? I know when I was Solicitor General, the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud and I, when we went to these federal-provincial-territorial meetings, always had a plan of attack on what we were going to bring forward at FPTs. He was very passionate about raising the age of consent when he was the Minister of Justice, so maybe on record we could see what the previous Minister of Transportation brought forward to his FPTs or, for that matter, the Solicitor General and the Justice minister, because usually they put out a communication package where they talk about what they're bringing forward and what they're addressing.

I know that we have gone back for the last four years, and I can tell you that over the last four years it was never on the federal-provincial-territorial communication package that either the previous Solicitor General or the previous Justice minister or the previous Transportation minister was actually bringing forward any of that to their federal-provincial-territorial partners to see how to address . . . [Mrs. Forsyth's speaking time expired]

The Chair: Hon. member, the time allocated for the debate in committee has ended. The chair will now call the question.

[The clauses of Bill 26 as amended agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

[The voice vote indicated that the request to report Bill 26 carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:56 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the committee divided]

The Chair: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd move that the committee rise and report bills 24 and 26.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The Committee reports the following bills with some amendments: Bill 24 and Bill 26. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Deputy Speaker: Having heard the report, those in favour, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed, please say no. Carried.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'd move that we adjourn until 7:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 6:09 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, December 6, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 25 Child and Youth Advocate Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is truly a privilege and an honour to move Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, for third reading.

It's a real honour for me to bring forward the first bill under the Ministry of Human Services and to have that first bill be the implementation of our Premier's promise, our Premier's guidance to make the Child and Youth Advocate an independent officer of the Legislature to give Albertans the assurance that there will be someone who's there to advocate specifically on behalf of children with no other obligation other than, of course, to report to the Legislature.

I think the Premier's direction is a sound one. I know that many people in this House have advocated in the past for this move to happen, and I really am pleased to have the privilege of bringing forward the bill that creates that opportunity and establishes the office of the Child and Youth Advocate as an office of this Legislature. It's a very important step forward for Alberta and Albertans.

I think we do well in terms of the protection of children in this province and the emphasis that we put on ensuring that every child has the opportunity to succeed, but we also need to be able to have clear, open, and frank discussion about what's not working well and what needs to be improved, and we need to have that independent oversight, I believe, to give assurance that we're looking at every aspect. So I'm very, very pleased to be able to bring forward a bill which establishes that office of the Child and Youth Advocate as an office of the Legislature.

The bill does have several other very important points, which I want to quickly dwell on as well. The council for quality assurance has been established as a committee and is now being established by act with a mandate set up which is very clear. It's role is

- (a) to identify effective practices and make recommendations for the improvement of intervention services, at the direction of the Minister and in co-operation with the Department;
- (b) to appoint an expert review panel to review incidents giving rise to serious injuries or deaths of children as reported by a director . . .

The quality council has the ability to set up expert panels, to move quickly in any area of this nature to do investigations, and to be able to very clearly establish if change needs to be made.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that we have very, very many people in this province working for this department and working for agencies who work hard to support children to make sure that they're cared for, that they're protected when they're in danger or at risk. Most of the time that work is done very well. People make difficult decisions at difficult times. They sometimes have to operate based on the information that they have. I would really like to do a shout-out, a thank you to those people who are at the front end of the system who are working very hard on a day-to-day basis for the protection of our children.

This quality council should not be seen as looking over their shoulders all of the time in order to criticize or find what's wrong or find liability or blame. It really is about continuing quality assurance, making sure that we're constantly looking at what we're doing to find out how we can do things better, what areas we're missing. What areas do we need more skill sets in? What do we need to do better in terms of information sharing? What are all of those areas?

The combination of having a children's advocate who's unfettered by any responsibility to report to a department and has a clear line of report to the Legislature, a clear obligation to act on behalf of children, and a quality assurance council who does work with the ministry to look at every aspect of serious incidents or deaths and any other area that they might be asked to look at to constantly ensure that Alberta has leading-edge child care and child protection: those two pieces are the key parts of the act.

There are several other pieces to the act, again all directed at the protection of children or the assurance to Albertans. The first is the publication ban piece, and that's really a piece that's set out to clear up when information about a seized child can be published. There has been some lack of clarity around that, so we wanted to clarify the section of the act which made clear what could be published and when and when someone could go to court and ask for publication. It's important that it not be a blanket statement of publication, or a blanket permission to publish, because of course there are others whose private information perhaps should be protected. That could be a judgment call, and that judgment call should be, as it is set out here, in the hands of the court. Clarity around that is important, and we believe that this bill brings clarity on that topic.

The other piece that's important for the proper protection of children, the proper establishment of a structure which will ensure that every child has the opportunity to grow and succeed, is the piece which makes it clear that notwithstanding the fact that we have a clear concern about the protection of personal privacy, it's absolutely essential for members of government, government agencies, school boards, and others who are dealing with the health, education, and safety of a child to work together collaboratively, to share information appropriately.

I know there are concerns around what's appropriate and what's inappropriate. But I'll tell you, Mr. Speaker, when it really is inappropriate is when people keep a child's information to themselves when they need to share it with others who are working together collaboratively in the best interests of the education, safety, health, and protection of that child. I've seen situations. I've had personal information brought to me about situations where not only the child involved but other children are put at risk when information is not appropriately shared.

We want to make it clear. This is not something that's new. This is information sharing which for the most part is allowed under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. There seems to be a tendency to keep information rather than to share it, when you know that if you don't share it, you can't get into trouble, and if you do share it inappropriately, you could get into trouble. We want to make it perfectly clear. If you're working collaboratively with government, government agencies, and others for the health, education, and safety of a child, it is appropriate to share information.

The fifth piece in the act is an amendment to the Protection Against Family Violence Act, which essentially puts in place the ability for police to use an arrest warrant where there have been reasonable and probable grounds to believe that there's been a breach of a protection order. This is something which just further enhances the safety of not just victims but also children in the home if they're not the victims or if they're indirectly the victims. Where there has been a purported breach of a protection order, the police arrive, and if the perpetrator has left the scene, they can follow and arrest on reasonable and probable grounds.

This is something, in my view, which we should have done when we brought the amendments in earlier, but it was believed that going to get a warrant was the appropriate process. In discussion with police before this was proclaimed on November 1, it became clear that it would be even better protection for victims and for children if police had that arrest procedure. There is still the provision of the courts to settle any disputes with respect to the situation, but protection of children and protection of victims is of paramount concern, and therefore the amendment is recommended.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I'm absolutely pleased and proud to be able to bring forward Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, on behalf of our Premier and this government to show Albertans how important it is to us that not only do we have an appropriate child care protection process in this province so that children can be protected, the most vulnerable among our society can be protected when they need it, but Albertans can know that they are being protected and know that when something goes wrong, it will be appropriately investigated, appropriately learned from, and our system will get even better.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to third reading of Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act. I want to commend the government. I think they have done some good things here, especially with respect to the Child and Youth Advocate reporting to the Legislature. We applaud that. We think that's an important change that has been pressed for on a number of fronts for a number of years, and it is the right thing to do. If child protection and independence of the advocate is forefront in this and speaking independently on behalf of the child is important, then it has to be reporting to the Legislature, not to the minister.

We had suggested a number of amendments we felt would make the bill stronger. They were rejected, but in balance the benefits to the child, the benefits to the system I hope – and I'm thinking specifically of First Nations and the tremendous extra demands that they have on the child and family service unit – will be better addressed as a result of some of these changes. We'll be watching very closely. I think many Albertans, many Canadians are looking for ways to ensure that the disadvantages and vulnerability of First Nations children are addressed more conscientiously, more compassionately, more consistently, and some of the changes that we see in this bill are encouraging in that respect.

I look forward to working with the minister, and we will be supporting this bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Additional speakers? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to take this opportunity to build on the comments that the minister made, which I think reflected a constructive exchange we had at an earlier stage of the bill, and that was around the importance of the staff, the value of the staff, particularly the child welfare staff, but all of the staff.

Many years ago – I'm reluctant to say how many, but it's 30 years or so ago – I actually worked for a while doing policy and evaluation research in the Edmonton region of social services and worked very closely with child welfare workers and managers, income support workers, various facilities, the Youth Development Centre, and so on. I had no idea, Mr. Speaker, how awful the lives of some children are in Alberta and around the world and the kind of torment and abuse – indeed, in some cases I think the word “torture” wouldn't be too much to say to describe the way that some children in Alberta are treated by their family, by others in their circle. These can be as young as infants.

We have as a society taken a stance and a position that that's wrong, as we rightly should, and that we will protect those children. Just as we ask people to sign up and go off and protect our freedoms and our lives by going to Afghanistan or Libya or wherever and make a terrific sacrifice, we also ask social workers and others to go into sometimes dangerous and ugly and frightening domestic situations, often accompanied by police officers, and then to work with those families and to work and rescue those children. It is often thankless, painful, dreadful work that we ask of these people.

I wanted to just remind all those who are assembled here tonight that while we're in here, you know, having this debate, there are people out there working on behalf of this government and on behalf of the people of Alberta as we speak right now, stepping into households across this province to try to save the deeply damaged lives of innocent children. Undoubtedly there are any number of children right now in crisis put up in temporary shelters in hotels or in emergency foster care or other facilities. As we sit here comfortable and engaged at this very high level of debate, that kind of intimate, front-line action is being carried out. Those duties and compassion are being fulfilled at our behest by people we should not forget.

I think the role of the children's advocate has always been a good one but will be considerably better because of the bill we're going to pass tonight. I just hope that the kinds of issues that we all want to see resolved are actually somehow addressed and improved a little bit by what we're saying here and what we're doing here tonight because they have been intransigent problems.

Mr. Speaker, a name that comes to my mind is Richard Cardinal, a famous case from 25 years ago or more, a Métis boy who hanged himself out of desperation. The tremendous controversies that flared up when a man named Bob Bogle was minister of children's services: those reflected not so much on Mr. Bogle but on the terrible conditions that too many of our citizens live in. Those problems are still out there today. I would hope and dream that what we're doing here tonight moves us a little bit toward improving and resolving some of those problems.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, do you want to participate in the debate or question?

Mr. Hehr: The debate, please.

The Speaker: Please proceed, then.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As always, it's a privilege to rise to discuss this bill. I'll be brief because it's awfully difficult to follow the comments made by the hon. member who just spoke. His words are always very wise and very poignant as to what we often advocate, what are our better angels, how we should look at some of the situations here in Alberta. It's not always easy for a lot of people out there, and I think his words resonated very profoundly and deeply with me and, I hope, with many members of this House.

In speaking directly to the bill, I think it's a good bill. I hope it moves the chains forward a small measure in providing some solace from the storm, shall we say, that many of our youth find themselves in, some desperately trying situations. To have the guidance of the children's advocate can go some way in improving their lives, allowing them to sort through a mess of problems largely out of their control.

In that way I'm glad that the government has brought this bill forward, and I hope it serves the people of Alberta well, a realization by us here that we need to ensure that Alberta is a place not only for the wealthy but for its most poor and that opportunities are going to exist for people in trying circumstances.

On that note, I support the government in this measure, and I applaud them for their efforts in this regard. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Additional speakers? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the debate?

The Speaker: Proceed.

Ms Notley: I will be brief. This is a bill which is a long time coming, probably – I don't know – 15, 20 years at least, and certainly pursuing an objective which our caucus has made a fairly major priority over the last several years, believing that it's important to inject as much transparency and accountability as possible into the job of protecting the interests of Alberta's most vulnerable children and families in the province.

I will admit that, originally, when the bill came forward, I was somewhat conflicted about it because as I've indicated before, it does, in my view, fall short of immediately implementing the process of a true officer of the Legislature in that, typically, that title is associated with somebody who has been selected by members of this Assembly through whatever process the Assembly has deemed appropriate. Obviously, that's not the case here. We will be elevating to the position of officer of the Legislature somebody who has been selected by the minister in a very closed-door process without us really having any idea who applied for the position, what the alternatives were, what their qualifications were.

As well, the person that was hired to be the children's advocate – i.e., someone who reported through the minister and to the minister and was very much accountable to the minister for a limited scope of responsibilities – even though that person might have been who the minister deemed to be the most competent for the position at the time for that particular position, wouldn't necessarily have the same skills and qualifications necessary to fulfill the broader mandate and authority provided through this legislation and to bring the same level of independence that is anticipated by this legislation. In essence, we're in a situation where for a period of time we will have someone in this role who will not have been through the same process as every other officer of the Legislature.

It's a bit of a delayed introduction, shall we say, of the public policy objectives that our caucus has been seeking over many years, but there's no question that eventually this officer, the children's advocate, will ultimately be selected through the same process as other officers of the Legislature. So when that happens, we will at that point have achieved the true objectives that our caucus has been seeking. Short of the government undoing that in subsequent legislation, this legislation promises that we will at some point in the hopefully not-too-far future have gone the full distance to ensure fully independent and transparent accountability by this government in their very important job of taking care of the best interests of Alberta's most vulnerable children and families.

With those notes in mind, I do appreciate that we have finally gotten there. It's been a lot of work. I think that we can all look forward to an improved sense of oversight over the course of the next few years, and probably members on both sides of the House will appreciate that improvement as we collectively try to ensure that we do the best job possible for this particular group of Albertans.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo under Standing order 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question to the hon. member. I want to say that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona clearly has been, without question, a leader on this file, and I'm very proud to say to her: very important and good work for those of us who have young children. As you know, the law that was passed in British Columbia – of course, there were some issues raised pertaining to what is secretive within cabinet, the issue being that the child advocate should be able to get information from cabinet ministers such as the minister of children's services. That is something that the government pushed back on. Having that type information being open and transparent to Albertans: how important is that?

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you wish to respond?

Ms Notley: Well, I do. I thank the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo for raising that point. I think that probably the children's advocate in B.C. had the right idea when she was pursuing that level of transparency in order to even further enhance the accountability of government to the citizens of British Columbia for the progress they make in the job that they've taken on in protecting children and families in that province. I suspect that that children's advocate was making a very good and compelling case.

Certainly, this legislation as it is does not match the existing legislation in B.C. in terms of some of the components that we would have liked to have seen. Without question, it doesn't include the children's advocate's ability to access information that would otherwise be privy to the cabinet. That is unfortunate. On the flip side, it certainly does represent quite a major step forward from where we are today, which was, you know, being in the position of being the only province in the country that didn't have an independent children's advocate.

So we're moving forward with this legislation. We have places we can probably go further as well, but it's a partial step forward, and it's one that will make a difference, I think, in the lives of Alberta's children and their families. So for that reason we will be supporting the bill.

The Speaker: Are there additional questions?

Are there additional speakers? The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo on the debate.

Mr. Boutilier: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's certainly a privilege to stand in the House and talk about something, this government bill, that I do believe is a positive step forward. I do believe that it is a move in the correct direction, and I commend the minister from Edmonton-Whitemud for bringing this forward. I think it is important, and I think it is a step in the right direction. I'm also encouraged, I can say. Anyone with young children – my wife and I, our four-year-old son – and I'm sure everyone in this House supports the intention of this bill to help young people at risk in our province. The Child and Youth Advocate has an important role: to protect our most vulnerable, those without a voice, who are, truly, our children.

That said, Mr. Speaker, obviously, over the past year or two it has been rather unfortunate, the number of situations that have occurred in Alberta. Of course, these are disturbing to all Albertans in terms of the number of deaths and injuries that have happened to children in government care. Obviously, I'm sure all of my colleagues from all sides of the House would agree that one death is too many when losing the life of a child. With that in mind, I find it helpful, though, that we finally have a piece of legislation that will help the government in an area where Albertans are wondering, you know, if the government is up to the job, but we have to remain confident and hopeful that our children will be protected.

You also know, Mr. Speaker, that this is something that my colleagues in the Wildrose caucus have been asking the government to do for quite some time. Of course, the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek was a member on the opposite side as a minister of children's services and did an absolutely excellent job during her time. Even then as a minister I know that she talked about wanting to bring forward this type of legislation. I know she is equally pleased as a colleague in the Wildrose caucus about this coming forward.

Mr. Speaker, I do believe that in order for us to achieve important legislative changes, we in the Wildrose caucus think that the government listening to Albertans is a key, grassroots approach that is so important.

Now, the Wildrose caucus has been very consistent, though, I might add, in the fact that we always believed that this was an important initiative. We've been consistent in calling for Alberta to catch up to other provinces and to make the Child and Youth Advocate independent of the government. Finally, here in third reading this may soon become law, and the Wildrose caucus believes that this is very important.

You might also remember that we have long called for the government to do other things that are included in the bill such as calling for better sharing of information between public bodies and a clarification of confidentiality in regard to these cases. This is something that, again, the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has been pushing for since the safe communities task force. The previous Justice minister wasn't able to get this done, but I'm glad that the government finally decided to follow our lead and include this in the legislation as well.

With that said, Mr. Speaker, there is real promise here that we will see one of the government's biggest shortcomings being addressed, and we're pleased for that change. We're pleased that the government actually listened to the Wildrose caucus. For too long it has been entirely up to the minister to decide if something gets looked at or not. Often the same minister has something to lose by an investigation. This really has been the fundamental problem with our health care system, and we'll all see over the next few weeks if these problems are adequately addressed in Bill 24. I know I do have my doubts, but I will always remain hopeful.

One of the things that we need assurance of in debating this bill is whether it's adequately addressed in the bill.

On the one hand, we would feel confident about this because there is an independent advocate, but then it gets muddled because there is also a child and family services council for quality assurance. The scope of other child advocates is much greater than that being proposed by this government, so it looks like there may be a muddling of mandates here. Of course, we would like to see that streamlined, and maybe this council appointed by the minister will somehow reduce the powers of the advocate. We'll see how the government presents its case in the future before we will render a decision and a verdict on his progress.

It seems to me, though, that it's a positive step in the right direction that this council will not only be activated when summoned by the minister, but instead the functions and powers of the council will be embedded in the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act. That, I believe, is so important because any minister then will be guided by what is in the act as opposed to having that independent decision-making on their own. It means that this Alberta Legislature will be directing the minister on what should or should not be done. I think that is a strength of the act.

Perhaps this person also may be a bureaucrat with no experience in dealing with children or a political appointment. Of course, that's concerning to us. You know, there are some deputy ministers and bureaucrats that do a very good job and are well trained, but what we've seen over the last period of time is that you had to be a friend of the chief of staff to become a deputy minister. As I look at the deputy ministers today, we can see that some have very limited experience while others have a vast amount of experience. We all can determine the ones that were appointed by Ron Glen and those who were not. But this act puts the authority to the Legislative Offices Committee to appoint as it pleases.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that the bill is missing something, but maybe the government can explain how this council and advocate are up to the job. I remain optimistic that they will be up to the job because the Premier made a promise in light of the particular tragedy that took place just over a year ago, and we know that the Premier will never break a promise or flip-flop on anything. Why do we wait until something goes horribly wrong before we act? We want to see this government being proactive rather than reactive on, certainly, the plight of children being at risk.

The Premier said during the summer in her leadership campaign that we need a children's serious incident review team. This would be modelled on the Alberta serious incident review team that has the tools to look into police shootings and other delicate things that require independence. That is so important. But that is not explained explicitly here, and I look forward to the minister explaining how this bill is even better. What we don't have yet is another promise that may not be lived up to. Hopefully, that's not the case.

As we go forward, let me say, Mr. Speaker, that I do think that the bill is a good step forward. There are a few other concerns that we have, but I do believe that it is a step in the right direction. For that, I say to the minister responsible, the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, that I think that, like the Wildrose caucus, he is listening to Albertans and Alberta families, and that is so important for him to do. When you do that, you actually get good legislation, which we are prepared to support in third reading tonight. We will not be supporting some of the rushed and rammed-through legislation that really requires a lot more work. We want to get it right the first time rather than the second or third or fourth or fifth, which has been the track record of this government on many bills that have really not served Albertans well.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I'll take my seat. Thank you.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Additional speakers? The hon. minister to conclude the debate.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to reiterate that we have hundreds if not thousands of people in this province who work every day to protect our children, and for that I say thank you.

We have now a mechanism through an independent Child and Youth Advocate to make the system even stronger by constantly advocating for children, beholden to no one but the children, and a quality assurance council that can help us continue to make the system better.

[Motion carried; Bill 25 read a third time]

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to move Bill 26 on behalf of the hon. Minister of Transportation. There has been a considerable amount of debate in this House with respect to Bill 26 over the last few weeks, but I think there are several things that are irrefutable. The first is that drinking and driving do not mix. There should be a singular message to Albertans, the same message that we as Albertans have given our children over the years, and that is: if you're going to drink, don't drive. That's a very important message. It shouldn't be a mixed message. This bill helps to enhance that message to Albertans and helps to enhance the safety of our families not just on the roads but near the roads, anywhere where they could be affected by someone whose ability to drive has been impaired by alcohol.

There's been lots of discussion, Mr. Speaker, about the fact that it's criminal to drink and drive if you're over .08. But it's also against the law to drive while you're impaired. It's very clear that impairment starts a lot earlier than .08, and that has been the law in this province and in all the other provinces for a long time. Some have used the term of 12 years.

Over .05 the medical evidence as presented by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View is clear. Those skills that you need, those senses that you need to be able to drive are impaired as early as .05, and some would suggest even earlier.

But for me, Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple matter. If you drink, don't drive. That's what we've told our children. They get it. The people who haven't been getting it are we adults, those of us who have had a social drink and who still consider that we can make an appropriate judgment call after our ability to make that judgment call has been impaired.

There have been a lot of suggestions that there aren't very many accidents caused by people over .05. What that denies, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that a lot of people who are driving don't think they are impaired, and if we can bring that judgment call down to an earlier level so that people make that judgment call much earlier in the evening, we can save lives. We can save accidents. We can save people from hurt and pain and suffering, from losing a child, losing a loved one. That's important for Albertans. That's what this legislation will do.

It's important legislation. The concept that we shouldn't be passing this legislation, Mr. Speaker, because it will be bad for people's business: that one really gets to me. The fact of the matter is that people should not be building a business on selling excess alcohol to individuals who will then put others in danger. Good practitioners and good businesses already have and for years have had designated driver programs. Good businesses have always promoted not drinking and driving, and I would suggest that good businesses will continue to do business with people like myself and others who do enjoy going out for a social evening and understand that when they go out for a social evening, drinking and driving do not mix.

There's been a lot of discussion in this House, Mr. Speaker, about using resources appropriately. Well, I'd suggest to you that that really begs the argument because our police are out on the roads. Now, you can't have a policeman standing beside every impaired person or every person that's coming out of a bar. But our police are out on the roads. They're doing the checkpoints. They're testing people for impairment. It's not going to take significantly more resources for them, when they're running the checkpoints already, when they're testing people for impairment already to say to them, "Well, you're not criminally impaired, but we still believe you're impaired." They used to be able to give a 24-hour suspension. They'll still be able to do that, but they can also use the tougher penalties, which the evidence shows we need because people are not getting the message.

It's a very straightforward bill, Mr. Speaker, a bill which will make Albertans safer, which will help with what we want to accomplish, and that is every Albertan having the opportunity to go home safely to their families at the end of the day. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would move third reading.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills. You're the first up.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wasn't going to speak on this bill again. I hadn't anticipated it, but I was prompted by the last remarks in committee by the hon. Minister of Transportation and again now by the Government House Leader. When the Minister of Transportation last spoke, he offered answers. The more answers he offered, the more confused I became. He talked about public awareness to start with – I'll kind of go through it in the order that he talked about it – for a couple of months that would be allowed so Albertans could get in tune with this and educated about it. But it seems that there's no time for public consultation, and part of public consultation is that it would be a great tool for educating people, and it would also be a great tool for educating us more on what we are doing for people instead of to people.

I kind of resent the defence that – there's always an inference that if you don't support this bill the way it's written, you must support drunk driving. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I'm glad that the minister met with businesses today. I've been meeting with businesses since I first heard about this, and I've given them the government websites and told them to consult with their association and keep in touch and talk to any other business owners they know so they could get educated about this bill and give me some feedback. They've been doing that. You know, we've had four years, apparently, that this has been studied without a consultation offered in that time, but we want to rush this through.

Twenty-two per cent of fatal accidents involved alcohol was what the minister said, but he didn't offer a breakdown of how much of that 22 per cent was in the .01 to .049 and the .05 to .08 and those categories over that. I would be interested to know what those answers are because I think that's important to the case. Also, that tells me 78 per cent didn't consume alcohol at all, and if we've got penalties that are being offered to prevent the 22 per cent here, it would probably also work in the 78 per cent that don't drink but have other infractions. Perhaps taking their vehicle away for three days would get their attention, and they'd stop speeding and driving without due care and attention and a whole bunch of other things.

Now, it's been said in the defence of the bill that .05 to .08 is scientifically proven, and there were some references offered to studies. I'm not sure if they were tabled in the House. I haven't seen any yet. I haven't had a chance to go through those studies.

It's also been said that this .05 to .08 has been in place for 12 years, and the hon. Government House Leader just offered that it's been the law for the last 12 years. Well, I've been looking for the last couple of weeks for this law.

Mr. Hancock: You don't listen too closely, Richard.

Mr. Marz: You did say it was the law, I believe. [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills has the floor.

Mr. Marz: The highway traffic act doesn't contain it that I can find, but if the ministers could provide me with where it's found in regulation, I would appreciate that. Even if it's not in regulation, is it in an internal police policy? If it's a law – and it's been said that we've been doing this for 12 years, .05 to .08. It's the law for 12 years. That was what was said. It's got to be written somewhere. Is it a memo from the Solicitor General? Is it an internal police document? Are police making policy for Albertans now in these categories? That would concern me.

The minister also stated that information that's been offered on this debate by others is not correct. I would like to know if the minister feels that the information contained in Alcohol-Crash Problem in Canada, 2008, prepared for the Canadian Council of Motor Transport Administrators Standing Committee on Road Safety Research and Policies and for Transport Canada, is incorrect. That's information I offered, and I haven't seen a lot of uptake on that particular report.

My constituents are concerned about why there seems to be such a rush in pushing this through. I know it's been asserted that, you know, if we don't get this done right away, it's going to cost a life. That's an assumption I haven't accepted, that this bill is actually going to prevent something in the next few days if we get it passed here today. I think a little bit of public consultation would maybe have a chance of improving the bill, helping Albertans understand it. Perhaps we should go to .01 or zero. Maybe it should be zero tolerance. Maybe Albertans will tell us that. I agree that if you drive, you shouldn't drink. Maybe we're falling short here because it's been said by the defenders of the bill that you shouldn't drink and drive at all.

When I met with a member of MADD in my office a number of weeks ago, I asked the questions: "What is the absolute solution for your organization? Is .05 to .08 and confiscating a vehicle for three days going to be the measure of success for your lobbying group? What happens if it is? Are you going to continue to operate and continue to raise funds, and if so, what are you going to do with those funds?" Or are we going to be back here a year from now or three years from now or four years from now saying: well, maybe .03 is the new standard, and there's a study out that shows that impairment starts at .03. I'd just as soon get it all done right rather than go through this time and time again and create a lot of disruption in the hospitality industry in the process of doing it. Let's be up front with it and perhaps go ahead with it now.

I also asked: if we do get down to zero and maybe confiscate your vehicle altogether and you never get it back, would that be the measure of success? I never got an answer. I think these are legitimate questions for a lobby group that lobbies government on a regular basis and for any lobby group. We should ask: what is the standard you want us to go to, and let's talk about that in the public with the public in a consultative process to see if the public would accept such a thing.

I haven't been convinced by any of the statements on the defence of this bill that have been made since I last spoke. With that, Mr. Speaker, because the time is short, I will allow for others to stand and speak.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Is it 29(2)(a)?

The Speaker: No.

Mr. Anderson: On Bill 26. Alberta's drunk-driving rate is higher, clearly, than in most provinces, and this is unacceptable, and everyone in this Chamber knows that. Clearly, with this bill the government recognized that it needs to do a better job of cutting drunk-driving rates. Albertans all need to know that drinking and driving is not acceptable and will be punished if someone is impaired, and this government, in response to knowing they need to put this message through, has passed this bill.

It is true that the government has not done enough to this point to curb drunk driving, but Bill 26 is not the answer. The Wildrose has said repeatedly, over and over again, and will continue to say that more checkpoints are the answer, that better enforcement and education are the answer. This draconian piece of legislation is not the answer. More police, more checkpoints, more education: that is what Albertans are telling not just the Wildrose but are telling their PC MLAs, are clearly telling other MLAs in this Assembly who have spoken. The way that this is being approached is not the answer.

The Wildrose would also note that Alberta is 11th out of 12 provinces and territories for police officers per capita. That sounds like a more probable cause for our drinking and driving rates being higher than other provinces than people having a glass of wine or two with their dinner. We would again say that if you want to stop drinking and driving, put more checkpoints out on the road, give us more police, and give our people more police in their communities. That is what will not only lead to safer streets and safer communities, one of the major parts of it, but also will help put an end to drunk driving.

This bill proposes to suspend the licence of people who blow over .08 for as long as it takes for their trial to be resolved. As many people know, trials take at least six to nine months in most of the provinces. For someone who ends up being proven not guilty, that's not fair. It's not appropriate. Then for people in places with backed-up courts, places like Fort McMurray for example, or for those whose trials are delayed for reasons out of their control, the suspension can last a lot longer. Sometimes, as the Minister of Transportation himself has admitted, that can take longer than two years.

That's why we had an amendment to limit the suspension to three months if the trial took longer. This reflects the current practice. The difference was that we would insist on an interlocktype alcohol sensing device in order to get your car back during that suspension time. While everyone has sympathy for those falsely accused, most Albertans do not have much sympathy for those who drive when they are over .08. It's wrong. We need to crack down on those folks, and we've made it clear on how we would do so.

I would like to note some of the reasons why we think this bill is flawed. First of all, Bill 26 will result in scarce police resources being expended targeting the wrong group of individuals, the people that are not causing the drunk-driving deaths in our province. That's not appropriate.

Secondly, there is no due process. The policeman on the side of the road takes your car and licence for three days or 15 or 30, depending on what the situation is, with no trial. All he uses is a hand-held breathalyzer, often proven to be faulty, and that evidence is not admissible in court. Currently breathalyzers don't say what you blow if it's over .05. It's just yellow for .05 to .1, and this leaves no discretion for the officers.

Like the federal gun registry, as I said, this targets the wrong group. People with blood-alcohol content that is double the legal limit are usually the ones that cause the fatalities. The numbers of fatalities from .05 to .08 are quite low. I find it incredible that the Human Services minister seems to imply that in the Wildrose and from some of the opposition comments, because there are some deaths that are caused by .05 to .08 people and because we're saying that we shouldn't target that group, therefore we're in favour of more deaths on the road. Clearly, that's not the case.

In a perfect world we might have all the resources at our disposal and all the police that we need and all the education programs that are needed and so forth. Maybe we would be able to get rid of 100 per cent of drunk-driving deaths. But we don't live in that ideal world, Mr. Speaker. We live in a world where 98 per cent of folks – or let's put it this way – where 15 times as many people are killed by those over the .08 limit than by those in the .05 to .08 group. Why would we not concentrate on that group? You have to be able to expend the scarce resources that you have on the biggest part of the problem.

If we learned anything from the gun registry, that was it. The federal Chrétien Liberal government went after the wrong group of people. It did not get results. It did not prevent any deaths. It had very few results of actually apprehending people after the fact that wouldn't have otherwise been apprehended. It was a complete waste of money and time and effort and so forth, and it diverted resources and cash and things away from higher priorities.

Why is this law going to be any different? It won't be any different. [interjection] Well, it may not divert the cash of government. There was a comment over there that this isn't going to cost anything. Well, guess what it is going to cost? It's going to cost the jobs of people in the hospitality industry. It's going to cost the ability of Albertans to go out for an hour and have a glass or two of wine over a steak dinner. He's shaking his head over there. That's coming from a full adult male that, obviously, is not going to blow over the .05 limit with two glasses of wine over a steak dinner, but that doesn't apply to every single person. There are, of course, people that have less body weight and so forth and other factors who won't be able to. You're restricting that group of people from going out and enjoying themselves, and you're doing it for what reason? To save lives? No, you're not saving lives. That's the problem. There are unintended consequences, and it's wrong.

We'll go over the stats once more. Of all the groups on the road, 60 per cent of those responsible for deaths have no alcohol in their blood at all. That's speeding, unsafe driving, all those sorts of things. If that's the case, why don't we just put the speed limit to – what? – 30? We can treat all of our highways like a playground zone, and then in that way we could reduce even more deaths because most of the deaths are coming from that group, clearly. But, of course, that would be ridiculous, wouldn't it? We don't do that. Why? I guess, according to the logic that I've heard from the members opposite, we should be doing that. All of our highways should be at 30 kilometres an hour, right? But we don't do that because it's silly. It doesn't make any common sense. The cost to life in Alberta, the cost to people being able to drive and commute and so forth, the economic costs, the societal costs, the recreational costs, et cetera, would be so great that we don't do that, yet we're doing it here. I think that's hypocritical.

Sixty per cent of folks, no alcohol at all; over .16 blood-alcohol limit, 22 per cent; from .08 to .16, 10 per cent; from .01 to .05, so less than .05 to .08, 4 per cent; .05 to .08, 2 per cent. For some reason we are deciding to spend time and resources – police resources, effort, education, et cetera – all this money, on educating about this new law, on targeting the group that is, clearly, nowhere close to being the group that is causing the most deaths on our highways and our roads. It does not make any sense, Mr. Speaker.

I would say, too – and I hearken back to this – that this law unfairly penalizes rural Albertans. I was amazed that a member, the Transportation minister, who's from rural Alberta, got up and said, "You can't stigmatize rural Albertans because, you know, they're under the same laws," blah, blah, blah. That's not the point. The point is that in rural Alberta, if you try to get a taxi, try to get public transit in many of the places, you're not going to get them. What happens is that folks won't even go out. They won't go to their local restaurant to have some wine over dinner and so forth. They just won't bother doing it because it's too dangerous for them to do it. I guess that if that's what you're after, if that's what you're all about, then great.

I want to note this. The Human Services minister earlier said: well, we want the message to get through that there's going to be no drinking and driving. Okay. That's very great. So no one is going to go out for dinner anymore and have even a single drink and drive, whatever that's supposed to mean. Well, just yesterday in the Calgary Herald, in the Don Braid article about an MP who was pulled over for a DUI and so forth, the Education minister said right to Don Braid that he had a drink and that then he went home half an hour later. Of course, that wouldn't legally intoxicate him, clearly, but that's what he said. So the message isn't even getting through to your Education minister, apparently.

8:30

Of course, your Education minister was acting responsibly. He had a drink. Who knows what his blood alcohol was? Maybe it was .03, .04. I don't know. He had one drink, and he went home. He was able to drive. He was perfectly capable. He went home safely. But the people the people that got pulled over by that checkstop that was there outside that event, which is good as it is the Christmas season – there are more, as we said. They pulled over a lot of folks and kept our roads safer that night because of that checkstop.

That whole story argues for what the Wildrose is saying, that checkstops are the way to go, more enforcement is the way to go, not doing this silly law that isn't even getting the message across to the Education minister, apparently. And why? Because the message is silly. It's a silly message.

The message should be what it's been for a long time now. If you're over the legal limit of .08, you shouldn't be driving. I would say that people in society now have a very, very good knowledge of what .08 looks like and feels like and so forth. They've been conditioning themselves for years now on what that means to them and their body type and so forth. They do it. The ones that don't follow it are the ones out there killing people, the ones over .08. So why are we not focusing on that group? Clearly, we should be.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would just say this. This bill was not on anybody's radar up until just recently, up until the last few weeks, and it has been rammed through without any respect for democracy, without any respect for the people of Alberta, to give them a say, to let them have true input into this over an extended period of time even if it was just two or three months, for crying out loud. Let the people of Alberta give their feedback to their MLAs. Let's bring in the chiefs of police, MADD, the hospitality industry, just regular, common-sense Albertans, severely normal Albertans, have them in, talk to them in our communities and see what they have to say and get the feedback so that we can all come back here and act like responsible representatives of the people that actually elected us and vote in their best interests.

After we get that input back, if they want this law, if they think this law is just the cat's meow and is going to solve all our problems or a lot of our problems or whatever on this issue, well then, yeah. Then we can hold our heads up high, and we can come in here and vote on it knowing that we've at least respected the opinions of Alberta, respected them enough not to ram this through in late-night sittings over a couple weeks' period. It's just such an absurd way to run a democracy. It's just incredible. It's very disrespectful to the people of Alberta, who deserve better than this type of hodgepodge, reactionary, legislate-on-the-fly group of individuals that they have in government right now.

Mr. Speaker, I would say that this is going to have a negative effect on this province. Unfortunately, the unintended consequence not only is economic, but it's also going to hurt regular Albertans.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

Mr. Denis: I just wanted to rise and thank the member for his passionate comments. While we do have a difference of opinion, I know that he is doing what he believes is best, as am I. I do have a question for him, though. Standing Order 23(g) prohibits a reference "to any matter pending in a court or before a judge for judicial determination." I'm wondering why this member has referred to the matter dealing with a certain Member of Parliament who has now been charged with failing to blow.

Mr. Anderson: I certainly did not. I would ask the member to refer to the Hansard where I referred to anything before a court. I said that what was reported in the paper is that a Member of Parliament was pulled over by a police officer for a DUI and that, as per that same article, the Education minister said that he had had an alcoholic beverage, one, and had driven home. And that was fine. That's not before the courts. So I haven't said anything that would fit that criteria, and I'm not really sure what this member is getting at.

I will say, in maybe expanding a little bit upon that question, that it is important that we as members of the Assembly set an example. It is important that we do that. That's why I alluded earlier to the Education minister. I'm getting confusing messages, and Albertans are getting confusing messages from this government. The Human Services minister is saying, as is the Transportation minister – I heard him in his press conference the other day – that if you drink even just one drink, don't drive. That's the message from the government. Then a couple of days later the Education minister is in there taking a drink and driving home. Was he impaired? I would say: almost a hundred per cent certainly not. Completely legal, doing what he's allowed to do under the law. No problem. But the point is that the Education minister clearly isn't getting the message.

Speaker's Ruling

Referring to an Absent Member

The Speaker: Excuse me, hon. member, please. The Minister of Education is not here. It makes me feel very uncomfortable when one member says that some other member said something, and the other member is not here to challenge it at all. It's very difficult. You can go down a very slippery slope and get in a lot of trouble. So deal with policy. That would be much better.

Mr. Anderson: Fair enough. Fair enough. So I won't do the Education minister. I will do the Solicitor General since he's here.

Debate Continued

Mr. Anderson: It's important, as I said, to follow the example. As I said earlier in question period a few days ago, that's why I didn't understand. The Solicitor General is constantly talking about the need for this law and the important message that's being sent.

Mrs. Forsyth: Is he going to increase his policing?

Mr. Anderson: That's right. The question I would have for the minister is: first of all, why on earth aren't there more police officers and checkpoints on our streets?

Mr. Boutilier: Which falls under his ministry.

Mr. Anderson: Which falls under his ministry.

Why are we second to last in Canada in the ratio of police officers per capita? Why is it easier to see a sasquatch in Alberta than it is to see a checkpoint at any time outside of December?

I'm really having trouble understanding why the Solicitor General is so impassioned about Bill 26 when, clearly, what he should be doing is being passionate about putting more officers on our streets, increasing the numbers of checkpoints . . .

Mrs. Forsyth: Increasing the scope of practice of sheriffs.

Mr. Anderson: . . . increasing the scope of practice and training for sheriffs . . .

Mr. Boutilier: Which we support.

Mr. Anderson: . . . which the Wildrose completely supports, so that they can do more checkpoints and so forth.

I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that these are the things that I think will very much improve traffic safety and are some things that I hope, I truly hope, the Solicitor General will take into his heart and say that Bill 26, which he thinks is a decent bill – I think it's not worth the paper it's printed on. At the very least if this will turn his attention to actually increasing the number of officers, increasing the number of checkpoints, then you know what? Maybe this is a good thing because maybe he'll want to prove so badly that Bill 26 works that he'll actually increase checkpoints in order to prove his point even though, of course, that would mean it would be more enforcement that clearly was cutting down on civilian deaths.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, you caught my eye, but I think the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill caught it before you.

Before we do that, might we revert briefly to the introduction of visitors?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: I would ask the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake on behalf of the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake to proceed.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a very distinguished gentleman from my constituency of Bonnyville-Cold Lake, my predecessor and good friend Denis Ducharme, who was our MLA for 11 years. He must really miss this place and these evening sessions, so he came to join us to show his support. I would ask him to rise and would ask you to please join me in giving him the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: How many others have caught my attention with respect to this? Okay. I've got the Deputy Premier and the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Proceed, please, hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This has been a very interesting debate. I have to admit that part of what I'm going to speak about today actually exhibits democracy at its finest despite what members of the opposition have to say.

The fact is that this is a very personal issue. I know that every time I see or hear on the news about a person that has lost their life because of a traffic accident, particularly those later at night – you know, I once had somebody tell me that nothing good happens after midnight, and that typically tends to be true – I hold my breath hoping that, you know, it's not somebody that I know. Fortunately for me, I've never been in that situation. I always breathe a sigh of relief when I do find out that it's no one that I know. I say that with some care and attention, knowing that there are some people out there that do have family and loved ones that have lost people. These are some of the most inexcusable deaths we have in our society. There's no doubt about that.

I want to thank the hon. Solicitor General for his reference earlier to keep me in line with the standing orders, but I do want to admit that the recent, I guess, what I would consider bizarre confluence of events that have happened over the last couple of days have really shone a light on this issue and have actually forced me to have a change of opinion on this piece of legislation. Many of my caucus members will probably remember that I was very much against this when we discussed this in caucus, probably for many of the same reasons that many of the opposition members have outlined.

[Mr. Zwozdesky in the chair]

For some reason when I was driving up to Edmonton today after spending the evening in Calgary at a community event last night and thinking about everything that's happened, you know, I reflected on what is happening out there. We as individual members of society sometimes put ourselves in some very bad positions without even knowing it, and we allow ourselves to be blinded to the facts of reality. The facts of reality are this, and this is what the bill does: the science is clear – it's not debatable; it's clear – that at .05 every individual faces some sort of impairment in their abilities. If that's the case, if we're all standing up here and saying that we don't think people should drive impaired, then what's the problem with this piece of legislation? To me that's what this is about.

What is very confusing in this whole debate is also the fact that right now it has become very obvious – and I will be the first to admit that I didn't even know before this debate started coming online that you could actually get your licence suspended for 24 hours for blowing over .05. This is nothing new. We shouldn't be talking about how new this is. We should be talking about how maybe there has been a bit of a failure in communicating that that has been the case for the last 12 years. But now it is explicitly the case. It's being explicitly put in this legislation for those purposes, and that's where we're at now.

As I mentioned before, the science is quite, quite clear on this. If the hon. members don't believe that putting this reference to .05 into this act is the right thing to do, then they really don't have an issue with the government; they have an issue with the scientists, and I would believe that they should maybe take that up with the science community. I know the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere kept referencing that this was the PC government telling Albertans what to do. Well, I would suggest that he might want to go and have a conversation with the scientists. They might know just a little bit more about the actual science behind impairment than he does.

One of the things that I do take issue with in some of the speeches of the members on this side – and this has been part of the problem that I've seen throughout this whole debate. In a lot of the conversations that I've had with my constituents, the feedback that I've gotten is that they're opposed to this because they're saying, "You're making me a criminal or a bad guy because I can't go out and have a glass of wine with my dinner," or "I can't have a beer with my burger or a beer at the hockey game and drive home." The fact is that that's not true. As much as I appreciate the Minister of Human Services' stance, you know, of "Let's be clear; we don't want any mixed messages; you do not have a drink and drive," if that was the case, if you wanted to make that very clear, it wouldn't be .05. It would be zero. Period.

My point is that I do know that I can go out and have two drinks over dinner and probably drive home and be fine. In fact, I want to share a personal experience with the members of this Assembly that I did have about two years ago when I went and visited my father, who was working in Arizona. He and I and a couple of other family members went out for dinner to a nice Mexican restaurant. I had two margaritas with my dinner. We were coming home. I pulled out of the parking lot. Of course, I didn't know my way around the town. I'm driving. I go to turn left at the lights, and my father says, "No, no; it's the next set of lights," so I get back into the straight-ahead lane, and of course there's a state trooper behind me. He pulls me over, asks if I've been drinking. I said I had two drinks. Of course, I go through the rigmarole. The fact is that when it came down to it, I didn't even register on their blower thing or whatever. But it was certainly a lesson. [interjections] I know that's probably not the technical term. Okay. The breathalyzer.

The point is that it's become very clear to me, and this is something that I've sort of adopted in my life as what it is: two drinks, and I'm okay. Anything more than that – it's not one more; it's two drinks for me. People have to go and ask themselves some tough questions and do some research about whether that might be appropriate for their body type or the activity that they're doing during that day. But for me, generally I'm okay.

What happens is that we have a culture – and I know the ministers have talked about changing the culture – where at two drinks we feel fine, so we say: aw, one more. I know everybody around here has done that, right? Then one more turns into one more, and before you know it, you've actually only thought you had one more, and you think it's okay to drive home. That's when we put ourselves in those very difficult situations, right? We know. The science has said that at .05 you are impaired. The bottom line is that when it comes to the safety of our children on our streets, if that's what it is, that should be the law.

The final thing that I just want to address. I know that some of the conversation that I've gotten in my office around this is that this bill makes the police the judge, jury, and executioner on this. Well, I think this bill has a very clever clause in it that allows the person that's pulled over to be able to go and be tested on another device, taken to a detachment or a police station to blow into one of the more reliable devices that are used and are admissible in court. I would have to say that if we don't trust those, what's the point of even addressing this issue, whether it's at .05 or .08? If we don't trust the science behind those, what's the point? The point is that we are giving every citizen that is found in this situation the opportunity to be able, I would say, to be found guilty or not guilty on a scientific piece of machinery that is much better than anything any judge, jury, or executioner can provide. So I think that there is some protection in there for people.

Just to conclude this evening, I started off by saying that I think this has been a good exercise in democracy. For me, listening to the debate that's happened in this Legislature, listening to the debate that's happened outside of this Legislature, the information that's come to my constituency office on behalf of constituents has actually forced me to change my original position on this because I've gotten more information and done some self-reflection about what this really means today in our society. To say that we haven't had enough time or there hasn't been enough debate or there isn't enough information out there, frankly, means that I think you're being lazy – okay? – and that you're not listening.

I can respect that some might have a certain disposition on this. I certainly do. I've always said to my constituents that I will probably come toward issues with a certain disposition, and it might take a considerable amount to talk me out of that, but at least as your representative I need to be open to compelling reasons, and strong rationale has to convince me that my original position is not the right one. In this case, Mr. Speaker, that has happened for me. I could tell you and my wife will tell you that that usually doesn't happen. You can't usually talk me out of very much.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I just want to say one thing. I did make this point in caucus during our discussions, and I want to make it in the Legislature. I think that it brings in a number of pieces that a number of members of this Legislature have brought up, that this is one piece of the pie in dealing with this issue of impaired driving that we have in our province. The other pieces, obviously, are increased enforcement. Yes, I would like to see, like the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, us put more emphasis and more resources into checkpoints. I think that would be a positive. I think this Premier is very open to that. I would like to see us embark on an educational campaign that really engages people in what the whole science around this is and what it means to be impaired and how you should reflect personally on what your limitations are.

Finally, obviously, the alternative transportation methods are a challenge. I've always had a big issue with the lack of availability of cabs in the city of Calgary. It's a huge issue. I know that's not our issue, but I think that as a society collectively this is something we need to do. If we piece this piece of legislation with the three other things that I've just mentioned, I think we as a society will come to a greater understanding of what we need to do to deal with this issue, and we might actually see progress.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. I have the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to add a couple of things. I know that was a very good speech from the Member for Calgary-North Hill. It reminds me of having several drinks with him many times over the years but not driving.

He did mention the current penalties for .05. I just wanted to point out where those come from. If you refer to section 89 of the Traffic Safety Act, subsection (1) says:

If a peace officer . . .

I said peace officer, not police officer.

. . . reasonably suspects that the driver of a motor vehicle has consumed alcohol or otherwise introduced into the driver's body any alcohol, drug or other substance in such a quantity so as to affect the driver's physical or mental ability, the peace officer may require the driver to surrender the driver's operator's licence to the peace officer.

Subsection (4) then talks about the 24 hours.

Mr. Speaker, to me the text of this indicates that a peace officer can actually force someone to surrender their licence for 24 hours with any alcohol in their system. Well, I thought it was rather interesting, so I went and called the Calgary police, I called the Edmonton police, and I called the RCMP division here, and every one of them told me that they do not enforce that below .05. It is not a memorandum from my department. It is, rather, their own policy below .05.

I think it's a matter of good public policy that we actually want to set an objective standard as to where the science is, as my friend the Attorney General has mentioned, and that, Mr. Speaker, is at .05.

I mentioned earlier the Robert Remington article, which references a study from the University of Western Ontario indicating that 20 per cent of traffic fatalities and injuries happen between .05 and .08. That's 300 fatalities from 1998 to present. Mr. Speaker, someone has got to stand up for this amount. It may only be 20 per cent, but that's a significant amount. Guess what? Everyone else, any one of us, is the other guy. We can't presume that this is just going to happen to the other guy. It may happen to anybody, including ourselves.

I'll say, in conclusion, the one thing that really has educated me here. I have just been shocked with the amount of people in my social circle, in my family who have talked about their experiences with drunk drivers as someone who has been hit or even in my case as someone who has witnessed an accident. It's much more widespread than we think. Let's clamp down on it, Mr. Speaker. We're not going to increase the blood-alcohol level, but we are going to increase the penalties as that is what's warranted.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Fawcett: I want to thank the hon. Solicitor General for that information about that particular piece. As I mentioned, I did not know that. I don't think many Albertans knew that. I think that because of this debate they now do, and I think our roads are going to be a lot safer because of that, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Anderson: On 29(2)(a). I appreciate the comments from the hon. member, and I believe they are heartfelt although, of course, I disagree with them, but that's the nature of democracy.

You just said, hon. member, that you changed your mind recently, and you went through the change of mind that you had. Now, obviously, you're someone who's elected. It's your job to be informed and to do research and to figure these things out and to have an informed opinion when you vote. Most Albertans haven't had anywhere near the time to even assess this new law. So I would say that if you just barely changed your mind and here we are voting on it tonight, don't you think that it would be more democratic to get your message out there to Albertans in an election campaign, for example, explain your reasoning, inundate them with all the studies in the world that you think prove your point, and then let them decide in an election whether they agree with you on this?

This wasn't run on in any campaign previously. It wasn't run on by the new Premier in her recent leadership campaign. She just decided that this is going to be the way we go, and Albertans are kind of like: "Okay. Why weren't we informed that this is what we were voting for or that this is what we were electing?" and so forth. Why don't we give Albertans the same amount of time that you've had to make a decision about changing your mind? Then at the end of the day maybe you'll be able to convince Albertans to be on your side. Why not give them the time?

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

I have Calgary-Bow next, but you have 30 seconds left.

Mr. Fawcett: Yeah. I just wanted to respond to the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere and say that I think maybe one of the reasons I changed my mind is because, I mean, this debate is coming to a conclusion, and I was forced to reflect on what my position truly meant and, moving forward, whether I was able to live with that decision. You know, in all honesty, the fact is that I could easily have seen myself in the position that other people were in.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

I have the Deputy Premier, followed by Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the Solicitor General, followed by Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by Calgary-Bow, followed by Calgary-Buffalo, followed by Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. Horner: Okay. Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief because I must compliment the hon. Member for Calgary . . . [interjection] I'm sorry. Mr. Speaker, do I have the floor?

The Acting Speaker: Yes, you have the floor. I've been given a list by the previous Speaker, and I'm just following it. If we need to make adjustments, we will, but at the moment, Deputy Premier, you have the floor.

Mr. Horner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I was going to say that I was very, very impressed with . . .

Mrs. Forsyth: Point of order.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Point of Order Speaking Order

Mrs. Forsyth: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Just a clarification. The Speaker maybe can clarify this. I understand that when we're debating, you have a government member and then a member of the opposition and then a government member and then a member of the opposition. So we just had a government member speak, and now you're going to yet another government member. Maybe you could clarify. The last time I checked, the Member for Calgary-North Hill was a member of the government. We're going on to another member of the government, and we're in third reading.

The Acting Speaker: Yes. Hon. member, just to be clear, I've inherited a list, and I'm following it, but that is normally the procedure. I don't believe anybody had indicated they had wanted to speak immediately after Calgary-North Hill other than the Deputy Premier, so he's been recognized. Then we'll go to Calgary-Mountain View, which is an opposition member. Then we'll go to the Solicitor General, who is a government member. Then we'll come to you, hon. member, as a member of the opposition. Then we'll go to the government member from Calgary-Bow. Then we'll go to Calgary-Buffalo, who's a member of the opposition. Then we'll go to the third party, which is Edmonton-Strathcona, and that's as far as my list goes for now. [interjections] Excuse me. Hon. member, please take a seat.

That is the order, and that is how we will proceed. The Deputy Premier has the floor. He has indicated he'll be brief, and then we'll get back on with things. I'll add the other members to the list as they arise.

The Deputy Premier.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the clarity of that ruling. It is your prerogative.

Debate Continued

Mr. Horner: I did want to say that my speech is going to be brief. I want to commend the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill for a very eloquent and well-thought-out speech on this issue. The only thing that I wanted to bring, to ensure that it was on the record for my constituents, Mr. Speaker, was the fact that I did have an opportunity to consult with Albertans on this, and it was called a leadership race.

Now, the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere says: oh, this just came out of the blue at some point in time. Mr. Speaker, he's wrong. During the time that I was on the leadership campaign trail, if you will, as well as our Premier as well as a number of other members of our caucus and outside, we had numerous occasions to talk to people about what we should do to make our streets safer, what we should do to make our families safer, what we should do to encourage people and, in fact, strengthen the rules around impairment, impaired driving on our roads. We talked about increasing the fines for speeding. We talked about . . .

Mrs. Forsyth: I'm sure you'll bring them forward, too.

Mr. Horner: There may be other items, hon. member, that I will bring forward from the leadership campaign. You'll just have to wait and see. The longer you chitter and chatter, the longer I'm going to stand here, hon. member, and the longer it'll be for you. [interjections]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, please take your chairs. We are doing very well. Progress is being made. The Deputy Premier has the floor.

Mr. Horner: I apologize, Mr. Speaker, for being drawn down to their level, and I will not do it again.

Mr. Speaker, part of the thing that I heard during those consultations and during those discussions was that there were a number of young people in Alberta that told me that we needed to catch up, that we needed to get with the rest of the crowd. They understand what it means to have a designated driver. They understand what it means to drink responsibly before you get behind the wheel.

I think that doing what we are doing today is nothing more than that. We are encouraging Albertans to be responsible about their drinking if they are going to be behind the wheel, just as we would around speed limits and other traffic violations that we have.

Some young people that I'm acquainted with – actually, one of them lost their licence not that long ago, but it wasn't for impaired driving; it was for speeding. We took his licence away. Why is it that speeding is a lesser infraction, evidently, to the hon. members than being impaired behind the wheel? I disagree, Mr. Speaker. I believe that being impaired behind the wheel is a serious infraction, and it should have a penalty, and it should be something that people would remember.

I also took the opportunity, as I'm sure all the hon. members in this House have done, of talking to constituents, going to their board meetings, and having a chat with them and asking them what they think. Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that at a meeting of constituents of mine, who, yes, are a part of my association, they unanimously said that this was the right thing to do. I didn't have one person tell me that it was the wrong thing to do. That's listening to your constituents, and that's why I stand fully in favour of the legislation that we have before this House.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that this is about giving our officers on the street another tool in their tool box, and we should support this as it's the right thing to do. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Are there any speakers?

Mr. Anderson: I would just ask the Deputy Premier: is there anything that you could give me – it would be just fantastic to know if there's any literature or anything, any campaign platform that you used during your leadership or, more appropriately, that the Premier used during her leadership that you could show us where you promised that you would bring this legislation in. Then we could verify the righteousness of your statement there.

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I did not say that this was part of my platform. I said that through the summertime and the spring in the consultations that I was in, talking to Albertans across this province, I did hear about this. We did talk about this. It's unfortunate that the hon. member didn't attend some of the forums that we were at where some of the questions came up. Perhaps he would have learned something about what Albertans are truly looking for. It isn't their platform.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available.

Seeing none, we'll move on to the main discussion. I'm pleased to recognize the Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise in third to speak to this important bill, Bill 26, Traffic Safety Amendment Act. I must say that I was impressed with the presentation early on in this session and the importance of safety and saving lives and the good intentions of this government. The Minister of Transportation argued passionately for getting a cultural shift in Alberta and reducing the alcohol and driving connection.

The evidence is pretty strong that over .08 there are significant deaths and injuries associated. The evidence below .08 is less stringent. In fact, without significant changes over the last 20 years, we've seen the number of drunk driving deaths drop by half. It's not clear how much of that is a cultural change, how much of it is due to penalties, how much of it is due to more public awareness, and how much of it is due to the fact that .08 was criminalized many years ago. What we do see is the importance of raising in the minds of young people, especially young drivers, the connection and the importance of not drinking and driving.

My experience of this discussion has been very helpful. It's raised my level of awareness about the .05 to .08 contentions. What we haven't heard much about is what this means in terms of – we heard some expressions of the experience in B.C., where for the last 11 months they have had this new law in place, and they've seen a drop in deaths. What isn't clear, again, is how much of that reduction in deaths is due to greater awareness, better public education, more police on the streets, and more checkpoints. We need to know more about what it is that's contributing to the reduction in deaths on highways and to what extent the new law and the actions, the administrative penalties between .05 and .08, are in fact responsible, since we know that a small percentage of those deaths on the highway are associated with .05 to .08.

There are some concerns about this. The pace at which we've had to deal with this along with some of the other bills has meant that we simply haven't seen the world research. We simply haven't heard from experts. We haven't even heard from Albertans to a wide extent on the extent to which this is going to impact their lives both positively and negatively, increase the burden on the courts, increase the number of police engaged in aspects of their work that is going to take them away from other perhaps more urgent, more important work in reducing injury and death and crime on our streets.

Mr. Speaker, I don't want to prolong the discussion here tonight. But I feel a very strong sense of a rush to legislate here. There's no question that we all understand the seriousness of drinking and driving. We all want to see a reduction in injuries and deaths. We all want to recognize the importance of our lawmakers and that penalties do have a role to play in this. The research from our own Alberta Centre for Injury Control & Research says: "Several reviews of the evaluation literature look at the effectiveness of lowering [blood-alcohol concentration] limits as a means of curbing drinking and driving and . . . reducing alcohol-related crashes, injuries and deaths. The conclusions reached range from showing substantial benefit to no benefit at all." The Traffic Injury Research Foundation has also reviewed major studies and did not find compelling evidence of a consistent and strong impact from these particular administrative penalties.

I'm not saying that it's a bad bill, Mr. Speaker, but I am saying that we need to refer this to a committee. We need to have a more timely, thoughtful discussion. We need to hear from police. We need to hear from researchers. We need to hear from the public. We want to see what the world literature suggests is the right way. Should we, in fact, forget about this particular area and instead of administrative penalties criminalize over .05? Let's do it once and for all.

An Hon. Member: We don't have the option to criminalize it.

Dr. Swann: Well, let's look at the evidence. Let's hear from the experts. Let's understand what the impact is going to be on our police force. Are we actually going to be spending more time in courts, more time with police dealing with all the paperwork and the people and the frustration and the people who are now losing their jobs or losing significant income because of this and not having their transportation?

I don't think we have had enough time, honestly, to really reflect on the costs as well as the benefits of this. I have an impression in my mind – and I think our caucus do – that this would reduce injuries and deaths, but it's only an impression. The literature that I've just quoted isn't conclusive that increasing administrative penalties for .05 to .08 has actually had that impact. We're not quite sure whether it's more police, whether it's a cultural shift, whether it's more education. What is it that's actually making this reduction that we see in B.C.?

I and some of my colleagues, at least, are believing very strongly that because of the haste and because of the lack of opportunity for real wide debate, including input from our police forces themselves, we need to refer this to committee and have a good, thorough discussion and bring this forward again with a new sense of certainty and confidence and evidence that we need to make this kind of a change.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Yes? Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: I know you have a list, but I'm wondering: I believe I have the agreement of House leaders to request unanimous consent of the House in the event of bells being required for votes this evening, that we revert to a one-minute bell. I'd ask for unanimous consent of the House for that.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Acting Speaker: So be it. That is how we shall proceed. Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing no speakers to that, I will go on to the next speaker. It was to be the Solicitor General. He has ceded his spot. I will therefore call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure how I feel about rising on third reading on Bill 26, the Alberta Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, but I have listened very, very intently over the last, I think, 12 days since we started this particular debate on this particular piece of legislation. I'm not sure if you were here when we first started the debate on Bill 26, but I'm just going to go back a little bit and reflect on the fact that I think it's important to get the message out that I had struggled to begin with on this particular piece of legislation.

I brought that up in the Legislature because of the fact that I had brought forward on March 1, 2000, a private member's bill called the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2000. What the bill was about was encouraging the government to do something about the .05 blood-alcohol content and two key things: to make people aware of the blood-alcohol content and to educate the public about the importance of not drinking and driving, the huge effect that impaired driving has in this province, and what happens when you drink and drive.

You know, when you hear the government say that the Wildrose is not supporting this particular bill and doesn't care about people who are drinking and driving, that's the furthest thing from the truth. I would ask anybody to go back into Hansard and read what was discussed then and what we were trying to accomplish at that particular time. Mr. Speaker, guess what it was? It was a 24-hour suspension.

Look where we are now. We're in the year 2011, and we've heard over and over again the Minister of Transportation telling us that over the last five years – so that goes back to 2005 – they've had 42,762 roadside suspensions. The Minister of Transportation also talked about this not being new; it's been around for 12 years. Well, guess what? It came from the bill that I brought forward in this Legislature in 2000 trying to get the public aware of the effects of drinking and driving and the 24-hour suspension.

More importantly, Mr. Speaker, when I was speaking in the Legislature, albeit I was on the government side, I talked about the importance of education. How do we educate the public? Keep repeating it. In regard to the safe communities task force, which I had the opportunity to chair when I was in government, again we talked about the effects of drinking and driving in this province; we talked about the fact that it was important to have public awareness education for the public.

Well, guess what, Mr. Speaker? If you wanted to rate the government from the good old days when we had the report card, guess where they would be? It would be a big F because they haven't done any of the education component that, yet again, is contained in Bill 26. We've repeatedly asked the Transportation minister a couple of things since the debate of this bill. One was: what education programs do you have currently in place? That's all we want to know. What education programs, Minister of Transportation, do you have currently in place that are going to educate the public and the 42,762 people that over the last five years you have had roadside suspensions for? You have not answered that question, Minister, so I'm accepting the fact that you've done nothing. Silence is sometimes golden. You haven't gotten up and spoken whereas you've gotten up repeatedly to throw these figures at us, these numbers, but you still have not answered the education component. What were you doing, and what happened to the 42,762 roadside suspensions? What education did you give them?

Another question, Mr. Speaker. We've asked for the data on where these roadside suspensions occurred. Did we have a huge percentage of roadside suspensions in Calgary? Did we have a whole bunch of roadside suspensions in Olds or Didsbury? Maybe we had them in Rocky Mountain House, or maybe we had them in Medicine Hat. We've asked for those particular data because, reflecting back on the safe community task force, the recommendation was for the Safe Communities Secretariat to spend the time and deal with the hot spots in this province. If we have a huge increase of roadside suspensions in Calgary, then we know that we have a serious problem with the issue of drinking and driving between .05 and .08 in the city of Calgary, and we'd better damned well do something about it.

You know, it's important for us to reiterate, and we have reiterated it over and over and over again, that Alberta has the second-lowest police ratio in the country. We've asked the Solicitor General over and over again if he is going to increase the police ratio in this province. You tell the police or there is all this general discussion that we're going to start, you know, looking at pulling people over who blow somewhere between .05 and .08, and – guess what? – they're going to do it. Guess what those officers are going to be doing? They're going to be called away from somewhere else where maybe they should be looking after child pornography or they should be going after the pedophiles. How about organized crime? Huge, huge problem in the city of Edmonton. So we're going to take police officers off the road and off the street doing their job, and we want them to focus on .05 to .08.

Let's just for a minute talk about the sheriffs. They do a wonderful job in this province. It was probably one of the most creative things that came out of the government side. I can't take any credit. It was the former Solicitor General from Calgary-Buffalo that came up with the very, very innovative idea of adding the sheriff component to the policing to be able to help some of the police.

I mean, I've spoken in this Legislature about my encounter with the police in this province on a quick drive one time from Edmonton to Calgary and the embarrassment of being pulled over and handed a ticket for speeding, which, quite frankly, is breaking the law. But they do a wonderful job, and we see them all the time on highway 2. Are we going to extend their mandate and provide them with the ability to provide the breathalyzer test themselves to a driver that they suspect is impaired? I don't know if you know, Mr. Speaker, but they have to call an RCMP officer to administer that. Did you know that?

We've talked about: how are we going to target the chronic, repeat offenders in this province, 20 per cent of the population causing 80 per cent of the problems in this province. I talked about that in the safe communities task force when I brought that forward, talked about the need for consistent research. The Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert talks about that while he was running for the leadership, he heard this during a debate, things like that. He may have; I don't want to argue with him. He also talked about the fact that he heard about higher fines for speeders, those who are breaking the law. Well, I'm looking forward to him bringing that legislation forward also because, you know, people will converse and talk at any sort of debate.

I mean, I've been in many debates in my political history. Just because one or two people, 1 per cent of the population, bring it up, it doesn't mean that it has to be immediate law. The Member for Calgary-Mountain View talked about the fact – you know what? If this bill is so right and it's so important, there are lots of questions that need to be answered, quite frankly, in this bill. So let's put it into a committee and let them discuss with Albertans. Let them, as the Member for Calgary-North Hill brought up, bring the scientists to the table.

Let's really talk about the breathalyzers and the problems with the calibration when you're trying to give these tests. It's just been brought up that in B.C. – and I don't have any of that data in front of us – there are 2,100 tests that are in question right now. It's been interesting for me all the research that I've had to do in regard to the breathalyzers and how they use the instruments and how they have to make sure that their calibration is right, et cetera, things like that.

I guess, Mr. Speaker, change is good, but let's make sure that the changes are the right changes. I don't think there's anyone in this province that doesn't believe that impaired driving is a serious offence and has to be taken seriously in this province. We talked about the tools that law enforcement needs. They definitely need more checkstops, alluded to in regard to somebody that was stopped recently. Well, you know what, Mr. Speaker? We always, always, always see more checkstops during Christmas. There was an advertisement on TV just probably, I don't know, maybe a week ago, talking about the checkstop program that goes. I know they do that. I am the former Solicitor General. We also do more checkstops one week every year in about October, I think it is, when we have Crime Prevention Week. I've been on those checkstops as the former Solicitor General when we launched crime prevention and know that they have more checkstops out.

If we're really seriously, seriously serious about the issue of drinking and driving, let's get more police in the field, more boots, as they say, on the highway. Let's talk about the expansion of the sheriffs and their mandate and allowing them to provide the breathalyzers, do the breathalyzers. I mean, they're great guys; they do great work. We see them around the Legislature, and we always feel safe with them here, having them around us. I know I've talked to tons of sheriffs and really appreciate all the work that they're doing.

Let's develop and implement a targeted social marketing campaign to counter excess drinking, not only drinking but drugs. Nowhere in this legislation does it talk about the impairment of somebody smoking a joint. Nowhere do we talk about that. And you want to talk about reaction if you've been smoking a couple of joints, what it does to you. Dropping cocaine, taking meth, shooting heroin: all of that kind of stuff needs to be addressed. It's the whole issue of drinking and driving and drugs.

I guess, as they say, this is the last kick at the cat. We want Albertans to know that we're serious about drinking and driving. We want Albertans to know that we believe we've got to target the 20 per cent of the offenders that are causing 80 per cent of the problems. We want people to know that impaired driving is preventable. We want to encourage the government to tell us about their education program. We want to encourage the government to give us the numbers on their roadside suspensions. I guess, lastly, Mr. Speaker, we want to encourage the government to do it right. I can guarantee you, dollars to doughnuts, that we'll be back next session with an amendment on this legislation because something wasn't right in it.

So on behalf of Albertans who have called us – and we've had tons and tons of calls on this – we're putting your issues forward, as you've asked us to do, and I hope the government takes a sober second thought on this.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd definitely like to at least attempt to answer a couple questions that the member opposite has. First of all, I need to say that since she has been the minister, there has been a substantive number of police added to Alberta. That has been supported by this government. Also, I need to tell you that there have been initiatives like the safe communities initiative that works with communities, works with the government, works with different ministries, especially Justice, that addresses and looks at the concerns of the safety in communities. Part of that is the alcohol aspect.

Mr. Speaker, also I want to say that when this government looks at the challenges of drinking and driving, or impaired driving, we very much look at all aspects, all aspects of course being, you know, photoradar, drivers being distracted. We look at all different avenues that we could try to add safety for Albertans as they travel our highways, as they are in their communities. The hon. Minister of Justice has done so much work in ensuring that our communities through different initiatives are safe.

I would also tell the member opposite that in regard to advertisement, Mr. Speaker, we do advertise at any type of different event, weekends, whether it be the November long weekend, whether it be the May long weekend, whether it be the festive season, whether it be the first day of the summer holidays. We do that on a regular basis. We isolate the directions and avenues to try to encourage people to not drink and drive. This has been going on for many years and continues to go on.

As well, Mr. Speaker, I do want to mention that the member opposite suggested we have not talked about the education program that we have in place. We have a continual education program. As well, if you looked at the documentation for the .05 to .07, on the second offence it is compulsory to take a course that's called Planning Ahead. The second course for the third offence is an Impact course. That's an educational course that affects the individuals that have been driving impaired. Hopefully, those courses will encourage those individuals not to drive impaired.

Mr. Speaker, it's very clear also that, as I talked this afternoon about working with the hosting industry and the restaurant industry as well as the hotel industry, we need to do the education together as a government and as those associations to be the most effective. We all have the same goals, we all have the same wishes as far as drinking and driving.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to say that the member opposite has asked for research numbers in regard to the 24-hour suspension. I can say to you and say to her that throughout the time that this has been documented, for the last seven years . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you. Hon. minister, I hesitate to interrupt, but the time is up.

I now go to Calgary-Bow on third reading of Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I did just want to say a few words. There seems to be very little problem in terms of the opposition in terms of the added penalties on the over .08. All of the concern seems to be around the .05 to .08 area.

You know, what we've been talking about is a cultural shift. I think "cultural shift" is a little bit vague. As there are some people here who actually don't even drink, I thought that maybe we could talk a little bit more about how one actually ends up in a car at over .08. To be able to get in a car at .08, you have to go through a period of being .05 to .08.

Now, we've also been talking a little bit about how, you know, you're impaired between .05 and .08. Well, when I was growing up, one of the things that my mum always talked about was good judgment. Good judgment. Well, not only do you become impaired between .05 and .08; your good judgment isn't usually what could in any way be called good judgment. There are many people who go out for drinks after work or with a group, and their idea is: well, I'm just going to have a couple of drinks and then drive home. A great plan – a great plan – until you start getting up around that .05 area, where you no longer have good judgment. You're thinking: well, I can get all the way up to .08 and still drive home. But if you are just thinking in terms of "Well, I'm just going to up to .05 and then drive home," you're not going to be going through that period of lack of good judgment.

Even though you guys have been looking at the statistics and the statistics show that between .05 and .08 there are not that many deaths, just please think about what drinking is all about, what it's actually like to have a few drinks, okay? What happens is that you get up into that area, and you've had your couple of drinks. Then you just go to that one more, and you're into the three drinks. Then you think: "I can have another drink and drive home. That's no problem. I'm fine. Why not have another one?"

Yeah. Okay. Fine. I'm going to drive home. No problem." I mean, that is the real reality. That's what we're really dealing with here.

It is not the number of accidents in the .05 to .08. It's that when you're aiming for .08, you're going to go right over. If you aim for .05, you're still in an area where you've got mostly good judgment left, and you've got a chance that you're going to quit at that point and not drive drunk. But if you are aiming for .08, you're going to go over, and that's where the problem is. That's why you end up with so many fewer deaths. It's not because people, you know, when they're .05 to .08, don't have so many accidents; it's because you don't end up with so many people driving at .08. That's what actually happens.

I ask you to look at this again. Those statistics are totally misleading because what we're looking at is the number of people that are over .08, and your judgment between .05 and .08 is not good enough to stop you from going on into the .08.

I ask you to please look at this again and to please support this bill.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no speakers under 29(2)(a), we'll go on to the next speaker at main, and that is Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is, as always, a privilege to rise and discuss this bill. I will say at the outset that I have enjoyed the level of debate that has happened around this issue. It has brought some thoughts to my mind, some more clarity to my mind, and has moved me a long way to see the government's side of this issue. I think that if you look back to my comments at first reading, I was thinking that this was not necessarily the best piece of legislation, and I saw that from a point of not looking at a lot of the materials. I have learned a great deal in this debate.

That said, there is a sense, like my hon. colleague from Calgary-Mountain View has presented, that this has been somewhat rushed. There hasn't been a full discussion with the Alberta people, a full discussion in this House because of the rushed nature of our sittings, and that to me is somewhat disappointing because I was enjoying the level of debate and the learning that I was undertaking in looking at this issue.

I must comment. We do have to bring up the fact that the .08 level is right now the criminal legal limit in this country. If we look at the statistics on who is in fact causing the problems on the road, it is largely the people over .08. In my view, the strongest way to send a message to this group of people would be to have a step-up in our checkstop program. It has been brought up in this House and in this debate that we are currently the 11th out of 12 provinces in terms of police officers on the streets. Clearly, this number indicates that we are not doing our best in terms of being able to actually police and crack down on those individuals who are driving at .08. Common sense tells us that, that we simply cannot do as good a job as other provinces are on this matter.

I was looking at the Calgary police website. Did you know that they only have a part-time unit devoted to checkstops? That's right, Mr. Speaker, a part-time unit devoted to checkstops. What does it say if we're only supplying our police officers with those types of resources such that they can provide a part-time checkstop program?

To me, that speaks volumes about this government's commitment to policing over the last number of years and I think has maybe led to us not having the proper numbers for enforcement and to us not having as safe streets as we could. I think that's an issue that not only this government but future governments have to seriously take a look at and work towards improving because the statistics are clear. The vast majority of people causing problems on our street are the people over .08.

I also appreciate the information that's been brought forward on the .05 to .08. This information, at least the evidence from, I believe, the medical practitioners, has indicated that your driving becomes impaired at this level. I have no reason to disagree with this evidence as presented. It's scientific. It shows that reaction time is slowed, and obviously this doesn't help your driving capabilities.

That said, as the hon. Solicitor General pointed out, we do currently have laws on the books that deal with that. I believe the regulation allows for us to give a 24-hour suspension to those individuals whom a police officer deems to be under alcohol or drugs or the like. In some cases this law is a little bit just enforcing that principle that our police officers have been doing in the main for the last 12 years. It is providing them with some remedies that are reflective of other provinces, reflective of other jurisdictions, and that may or may not be constitutional.

I know that during this debate we've seen the B.C. Legislature administrative penalties dealing with those over .08 come into question. Although the Justice minister assures me that this will not be the case in Alberta, there's a saying that methinks the Justice minister protests too much. I don't think he can fully guarantee me that this is not going to be challenged and struck down in court.

Now, I agree with him that that's no reason to disagree that a government cannot move on these types of issues. I'm fully aware that governments could and should move when they believe it's in the best interests of their people. In this situation I also recognize that there is a sense out there – I note that the Criminal Trial Lawyers vociferously disagree with what the minister is saying.

Only time will tell. There will be a court challenge to this, and then we'll see whether we'll have to amend this law, whether we have to go through the rankle and the angst and the back-to-the-drawing-board approach that that looks at.

Noting the limited time of debate – or maybe it's because we've had late sittings and then some afternoon sittings and the like – I was getting to some of my questions that didn't quite get on the record. I know that our laws here are significantly changed in the .05 to .08 range in the fact that the first time you get caught blowing in this range, you lose your car for three days. I believe the second time it's 15 days, and the third time it's 30 days.

I haven't looked at all of the other provinces, at whether their legislation is similar to this, but I made comments in second reading that we have a balance in this country, where governments are allowed to make laws as long as they're reasonable, they're proportional, and actually have some reason for interfering with your freedom of rights under the Charter of freedoms.

I do have some concerns – I know other provinces are doing these laws – about whether our law significantly differs from those. I have not had an opportunity to see the research done on this and a cross-comparative analysis of what other jurisdictions are doing. I know the B.C. court case indicated only things over .08. I haven't been assured that our laws are being properly tailored to meet the legislative agenda of this government on the .05 to .08.

There are some questions out there that remain for me. I believe that this is being rushed through to meet a political end. I believe the Premier saw this as an opportunity to look forceful, to move an agenda item and something she could pass through the House that, hopefully, resonated with Albertans. I'm certain they've done the polling on this. They think it's a political winner. You know, that's not always the right reason to ram something through in a big hurry.

We have a good process for this stuff, and I think that showed pretty well with the distracted driving legislation, where it went to an all-party committee, and they came up with what I thought was a pretty darn good bill. I think in the main that would be a position that I could live with, for I am compelled, like I said earlier, by some of the evidence presented to me by the government, especially that people are impaired after .05. This concerns me. If this is truly in the best interests of Alberta, if we're balancing all things out, looking at all sides and whether it will send a message and, you know, eliminate some drunk driving on the roads, it may well be a good thing.

For all those reasons, I remain firmly still being challenged, okay? I was getting there. I really was getting there, to be able to support the government on this issue, but I still needed some more help learning and understanding it and talking it through. I think rushing it through in this session has been a bit of disservice to this House as well as to Albertans in general, yet I hope that someday we may revisit it. If not, I hope it does do what the government says it's going to do and protects Alberta citizens.

Yeah. That's it. I'm sort of on the fence here, but thank you for allowing me to make those comments. We'll go from there, but those are my comments tonight.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no speakers for that stage, I will then call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to finally get a chance to get up and speak to this issue. I want to start by thanking all the members who've engaged in this debate up to this point in terms of the many, many good points that they've put forward. I mean that with respect to members on both sides of the House because I really do believe that there have been some very compelling arguments made by people on both sides of the House.

I have to say that almost all of what the Member for Calgary-Buffalo just said replicates my own feelings on this matter. Indeed, our caucus has gone back and forth at some length on the issue of how we would respond to this piece of legislation and how we would ultimately vote. I agree quite a bit, actually, with one of the comments made by the Member for Calgary-Buffalo in that he said that, you know, it's interesting to sort of look at the context or the impetus for this piece of legislation. It is clearly a political piece of legislation. It is absolutely something that I think the government polled on, and it's all about sort of reaching out to their apparent new universe of voters that they've decided they're going to shift to as they get ready for the next election. I think it is a very political decision.

It's interesting because earlier today we had a conversation in the Legislature about the issue of ensuring that farm workers were treated safely and the unacceptable level of deaths that occur every year to farm workers who are not covered by any safety legislation: whether that should be addressed. That is a genuine question of public safety, yet because of the politics around that one this government remains stuck in a position which, frankly, is untenable, I think, for those on the other side who, you know, give the matter any consideration. It definitely runs contrary to issues of public safety, but from a political point of view it's convenient to maintain that current position. So it's important for everyone to understand that there's a bit of that going on here.

Having said that, we have in our caucus gone through quite a bit of backing and forthing around some of the issues on both sides of this debate. There have been some really, really good points made by those who are opposed to this legislation moving forward. There have been some very articulate arguments by those in the legal community as well as members in this House that speak to the concerns around the due process that is absent with the introduction of a new form of administrative penalty for those who are in the .05 range and above and the effect of that. Those are very compelling arguments.

There is also, of course, the concern that with the act being restructured the way this act is going to be, police may ultimately choose to simply enforce the administrative part of it and that they will not necessarily, because of the practice, be as rigorous in enforcing the Criminal Code element of bad behaviour as it relates to driving when one is over .08. So we actually get into a situation where we may be penalizing the serious offenders, as a result of practice issues, less aggressively than we would have otherwise. I think that's a really important issue to be concerned about.

The other concern that I think many people have articulated which is also really important is the fact that in Alberta we do have the second lowest number of police officers per capita of any jurisdiction in Canada. What we're looking to do here is significantly increase their enforcement obligations, and we're doing that without ever having followed up on previous promises to significantly increase the number of police officers in this province. I think a lot of people have talked about the decreasing incidence of checkpoints across the province. So it's a concern. It's a concern that this is being used as a way to look as though they're dealing with law and order issues without actually having to spend the money to hire the extra police officers that, frankly, they should be hiring.

There's also a concern about whether the enforcement of this new legislation will actually divert very limited resources away from enforcement of those more serious offenders, regardless of whether we're talking simply about drinking and driving or whether we're talking about other offences, and over to enforcing particularly the .05 to .08.

Those are, without question, very, very significant concerns, and I appreciate and respect those members of this Assembly who have raised those issues because they are important ones.

There have also been issues raised with respect to the potential impact on the hospitality industry if this law comes into place. I am less convinced by those particular arguments primarily because of what we observed through the debate around smoking in bars and restaurants. There was a time when we were told that banning smoking in those environments would be the death of the hospitality industry. There's no question that there was a period of time when there was revenue loss, but that recovered eventually. Actually, it recovered more quickly than people had anticipated. What I think it showed was that, you know, people like to go out, and people like to get together in rooms with other people and buy alcohol together, whether food is involved or not, and they'll make the changes necessary in order to do that. That's certainly what we found out with the impact of smoking on the financial success of the hospitality industry. So I'm slightly less convinced by that issue.

Having said that, though, I will say that I will do everything I can to support their call for support from the Ministry of Transportation and any other relevant areas of government to support increases in public transit where possible or more funding or support for Operation Red Nose and those kinds of things. I think that a lot of representatives of the hospitality industry have made that case to the government. We certainly will support the case that they're making in that regard, particularly as we go forward with the implementation of this piece of legislation.

Ultimately, there were also some very compelling arguments made with respect to supporting this piece of legislation. I talked to a lot of people in my riding about this issue, and I was getting to the point where I was almost annoying them by asking them their opinion. We'd be doing something altogether different, and I'd say: "Well, what are your thoughts about this idea? What do you think?" Although many people said: "Yeah. I get your point about the fact that we don't have enough enforcement, and there aren't enough police officers out there and all that kind of stuff. But wouldn't it be the case that with the introduction of the .05 blood-alcohol limit people would self-police more effectively if that was the new limit? Is it the case, really, that the two solutions to this problem that we all agree exist are mutually exclusive? So, yes, the government needs to invest in more police officers, but by changing this law, are the two mutually exclusive? Does this law not also bring about a change in behaviour that may well improve public safety?"

So that was a good point that people made to me on more than one occasion when I was looking for their opinion within my constituency. I think that there has also been a lot of research from other jurisdictions that also supports the move to the .05 blood-alcohol limit. We've talked a lot about: "Well, gee. We've seen some preliminary results from B.C., and that's not really clear yet, so we need to have more time to consider it." But I think the fact of the matter is that we've actually seen results in most other jurisdictions, and we simply don't need to wait for B.C.'s results because, of course, Alberta is only one of two remaining provinces in the country that aren't already dealing with this .05 blood-alcohol limit.

The research shows, not only here in Canada but in other jurisdictions, that dropping the allowable blood-alcohol limit not only has an impact on people in that .05 to .08 range but that in fact it does have an impact on the behaviour of those who would have otherwise been at the .08 or above level. That's important to know. There is a positive effect on public safety from this particular piece of legislation, and that's what the research tends to support.

We've also seen research that suggests that driving performance is in fact affected when people are at the .05 to .08 level. A lot of that research has been completed since people initially established the .08 level. That's because the ability to measure has improved and all that kind of stuff. The scientific foundation upon which the .08 level was first established has moved since then, so that's why you see jurisdictions across the world moving to .05.

There is research suggesting that safe driving skills are themselves most vulnerable to impairment. It takes just a small amount of impairment to impact on safe driving skills, again showing the potential positive effect on public safety of this piece of legislation.

10:00

Finally, the other point that I would indicate is that we've seen recommendations coming from the federal standing committee on this issue that talked about the use of administrative penalties in comparison to the Criminal Code. I think that although there was a lack of consensus about what the impact would be on the criminal justice system were you to drop to the .05 in our Criminal Code – I believe there was a lack of consensus, so the committee didn't recommend that – there appeared to be strong consensus that across the board we should be looking at administrative penalties for that area between .05 and .08.

All of this balancing back and forth ultimately leads us to several conclusions. This is not a piece of legislation that is either completely good or completely bad. There are problems within this legislation. It is being rammed through very quickly. The use of time allocation has made that go even faster than it should have. There has not been adequate consultation with Albertans.

Having said that, this government is so cautious usually on moving forward with major issues that impact public safety and public health that we have sort of, kind of reached the conclusion that we are concerned about throwing the baby out with the bath water. Because we see this as being a somewhat politically linked initiative on the part of this government, if it doesn't happen now, we're a little concerned that it will die. If it gets referred to a committee, the whole thing will just fade away in political machinations.

We don't want to be responsible for answering to people who are the relatives or friends or family of those two or three people in Alberta that the statistics show us die every year as a result of alcohol impairment below the .08 level.

Mr. Denis: More than two or three.

Ms Notley: It's my rough calculation that there were 91 or 96 or something last year, and I believe it was about 6 per cent under .08.

Either way, the point that I'm making is that those lives, although not as many as 90, are as important to their friends and their family as the full 90. We need to do whatever we can to protect those lives as well, and I think there's clearly enough research to suggest that this piece of legislation will do that.

After much deliberation and much debate we have concluded that, with all of the various flaws notwithstanding, our caucus will in fact be voting in favour of this piece of legislation. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Anyone under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing no one for 29(2)(a), we'll move on to the next speaker, and I'll call on the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise tonight to speak in third reading in terms of this Bill 26, the impaired driving bill. I would like to acknowledge first and foremost the comments made earlier by the Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, who, of course, indicated that he thought this law was not ready at this time and that there were still more questions to be answered. In his wisdom he indicated that it should be referred, in my recollection of his comments according to Hansard, back to answer the questions to get the bill right the first time.

I will say that under the former Minister of Transportation, the Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, clearly this type of legislation, that is ill thought out, is something that never ever took place under his watch even though it is taking place under this now new Transportation minister. I will say that he was wise enough never to allow such an unprepared bill, a bill that was still incomplete, a bill that was not completed with the proper due diligence that a bill that comes to the people of Alberta should ever see. What I am pleased about is that he had the wisdom to know not to bring such a bill to this House. I wish the same could be said for the existing Transportation minister.

What's really interesting is that it's so important to listen to what Albertans are saying, and what Albertans are saying is: "We do not support drunk driving. What we want is to go after where 98 per cent of the deaths are caused, by people who drink over the .08 limit and are sometimes double over the limit of .08. That's who we should be going after." I'm quite certain the former Minister of Transportation was going after them, but this Transportation minister is going after soccer moms and hockey moms and dads or a couple that are going out to have a glass of wine and are well below .08. Why would we not be going after not the 2 per cent but the 98 per cent so that we can have an even greater change in the culture in terms of getting drunk drivers off the highway?

Mr. Speaker, in my humble opinion, based on what citizens have said to me, they are saying that the new Transportation minister is wrong-headed in where he's pointing his direction. He should be pointing it towards the 98 per cent that are killing people on highways, that are well over the .08, as opposed to the 2 per cent that are well under .08 and are driving our highways and not causing the accidents that the 98 per cent are causing. Let's go after them. Really, in my view, this is not thought out.

What's even more concerning, as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona mentioned, is the rush and the progress of just ramming it through. [Music was heard in the Chamber] In light of the fact that I'm hearing messages coming out, those messages are: do not – do not – pass in third reading this bill. Let's make it even stronger. Let's make it even safer.

Mr. Anderson: It was very ominous music, wasn't it?

Mr. Boutilier: If I could avoid the other commentary, especially from the member.

Let's get the bill right. I have a four-year-old son. Many of the families here, all of us, want our loved ones to be safe. But let's point our direction at the 98 per cent who are drunk drivers over .08, who are drunk and killing people, as opposed to the 2 per cent who are below .05 and .08. Let's take the right approach and get this bill right. I will be the first to stand and support the bill if the Minister of Transportation were to introduce a bill that made sense as opposed to going after something that, in fact, is going after the wrong people and ignoring the true killers on our highways, which is the 98 per cent of drunk drivers well over the .08.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your time and members for listening to both my words and the music tonight.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no speakers wishing to take up 29(2)(a), I'll call on the next hon. member, Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I'll keep my comments brief. I think there are just too many unknowns with this bill for me to support it. I think the intent is good, but we have heard far too many doubts and questions and concerns to rush it through in two weeks. I think all the issues have been well aired in the debate. I just want to have it on the record that I would like this bill to come back in the spring after referral to a committee. I can't support it in its current form.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Are there any people wishing to speak under 29(2)(a)?

If not, are there any other speakers in general to third reading?

Seeing no speakers, I would ask the hon. Minister of Transportation if he wishes to rise and thereby close debate. The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This has been a good debate, not only a good debate in this House but a good debate with Albertans. I say to you that weeks ago, when I first met with the different associations to talk about the focus and the direction that this bill was taking, we had good discussion about what we wanted to see. As late as this morning we had those discussions again.

Mr. Speaker, this bill really looks at two areas. The first area, of course, is the .08 and above. The .08 and above is in the Criminal Code. All that this bill does – I shouldn't say that because it does have, I hope, a major impact – is address more administrative penalties. Also, the aspect of the .05, which is really the same as it has been, addresses a situation where we look at penalties that are increased.

Mr. Speaker, I'm going to make it very short. You've heard it all before. This is about saving lives, this is about the safety of Albertans when they travel on our roads and highways, and this is about the security of someone travelling on our roads and not being injured or killed on our highways by impaired drivers.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for the time and opportunity.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. minister and hon. members.

We have now concluded third reading on the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, Bill 26, following some, by my calculation, 12 or 13 hours of important discussion and debate. I would now assume that the House is ready for the question.

Hon. Members: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for third reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 10:12 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[Mr. Zwozdesky in the chair]

Bill 24

Health Quality Council of Alberta Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise this evening to move third reading of Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act.

Mr. Speaker, I'm very pleased that we are able to move promptly on this legislation. I recognize that the debate was a rigorous debate and it was a heated debate, but I am pleased that we are able to move forward on the legislation because the bill provides action on two important priorities of this government.

I am proud that we are enabling the Health Quality Council of Alberta to take the next step in its growth as an organization serving Albertans. The council has made a significant contribution to quality improvements in Alberta's health care system and is renowned nationally for its work. By repositioning the Health Quality Council of Alberta from a regulation under the Regional Health Authorities Act to a stand-alone statute, I am confident that we are enabling the council to continue playing a predominant role in our health system.

The Health Quality Council will report on its work directly to the Legislative Assembly. This puts the council in a stronger position to advance efforts in the health system toward the continuous improvement of patient safety and health service quality. Bill 24 assures Albertans that this government is committed to putting patients first and providing them with the care that they need and that they deserve.

Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased that Bill 24 lives up to the government's commitment to have an effective public inquiry into health system matters. Our commitment to a public inquiry has been unwavering, and I regret that Albertans have been subject to suggestions to the contrary throughout the debate. Bill 24 adheres strictly to the court protocol that I tabled to enable the appointment of a judge or judges to lead a public inquiry. The health system inquiry provided for by Bill 24 will be a full-fledged public inquiry in every respect. The inquiry panel will have the authority to compel witnesses to attend and answer questions, to require the production of documents, and to hear evidence about matters such as nondisclosure statements, which have been the subject of debate in this House.

While a public inquiry is a powerful tool and a blunt instrument to get to the heart of a matter, Bill 24 provides that the health system inquiry will also be fair. The inquiry panel will have the discretion to protect a patient's private health information from unnecessary disclosure. There are reasonable protections for third parties who are not of concern to the inquiry. I have to emphasize, Mr. Speaker, that these protections operate in accordance with the principles of fairness and the interests of justice.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans are a fair-minded people, and they want a public inquiry that is equally fair-minded. Bill 24 provides for a public inquiry that they can have confidence in. This government believes that the inquiry is going to serve an important purpose in our health system now and in the future and is an important aspect of public accountability with respect to our health care system.

Mr. Speaker, just in closing, I would say that while there has been heated debate, particularly in Committee of the Whole, over this bill, I want to thank all members of the House who have taken the time to participate in the debate. Whether you are concerned with advancing an inquiry further to allegations that have been made over the last year with respect to our health care system or whether you are concerned with the possibility of the need for a similar exercise in the future to answer important questions about our health care system, I believe that the provisions in this bill will deliver to Albertans a fair and open airing of the issues that may be of concern to them.

I would like to thank hon. members for their support of this bill, and I look forward to hearing the balance of the debate in third reading. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister.

The Official Opposition critic has asked the Member for Edmonton-Riverview to speak in his stead, so I'll recognize him next, followed by Calgary-Fish Creek.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I won't prolong this. Obviously, we will have to agree to disagree. I actually find this bill quite disappointing. I think it's all politics. It's an unnecessary and expensive delaying tactic. The Premier made a promise to call a public inquiry. This is an elegant manoeuvre to avoid that promise until after the next election, and I think that's disappointing.

Governments are frightened of public inquiries. We don't have to look very far. Look at the federal Liberal consequences from the Gomery inquiry. Look at the consequences for the government here in this party under Premier Getty back in the late 1980s in the Code inquiry. Public inquiries are frightening, and it's because they do lay bare the operations of government in controversial areas. So it's the most natural thing in the world for a government to try to avoid one, and that's what we're watching here.

I'm obviously going to oppose this, Mr. Speaker. I expected more. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, thank you. As the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, an MLA, and the health critic I feel it's my democratic duty to stand up and speak on third reading of Bill 24. I think it's a privilege and an honour to speak in this House and debate future laws of the land. We as members of this Legislature are entrusted with a sacred obligation to the people of Alberta. Quite frankly, I'm disappointed with what I've seen from the government members. I can tell you that what I've heard from the government members on this bill is, quite frankly, nothing.

Aside from the minister introducing his bill and amendments, we heard from I think it was one government member, the Member for Calgary-Cross. The rest of the government has been silent. There are 68 government members, and the opposition, actually, has been doing all of the debating, bringing forward the amendments and bringing the voice for the health care professionals, who are the glue in keeping a broken health care system together. In all honesty, Mr. Speaker, I find this insulting – and I have to repeat that: insulting – to the people of Alberta. Why haven't the government members found the time to speak about the number one priority of Albertans? The number one priority of Albertans is health care.

There are a few possible answers to that one for me, Mr. Speaker. The first one would be that they are maybe under a gag order or a don't talk, don't debate order to not say anything. How ironic that while the Health Quality Council investigates political intimidation of health professionals, political professionals are intimidated into saying nothing about health care. Isn't it interesting how it appears that a Premier who ran on a platform of openness and accountability has maybe silenced her caucus colleagues on such a vital issue? Maybe the members just don't care. Maybe they think it doesn't matter what happens in this House and in the health care system.

Is this legislation perfect just the way it is, like a unique snowflake? Hardly, Mr. Speaker. As soon as this bill entered Committee of the Whole, the minister tabled an amendment. I'm going to move on from here. Maybe the government members will join in on doing their job. Who knows? Stranger things have happened.

I find this bill to be a Band-Aid solution to a fatal problem. Our health system is in serious trouble. Doctors are being intimidated. Pathology test after pathology test is being reviewed. In the midst of all of this, Alberta Health Services just closed the cancer lab at the Tom Baker cancer centre. World-renowned experts are being fired, let go, or their contracts aren't being renewed. It's unbelievable.

When I questioned the minister on intimidation in the system, something that the Health Quality Council is currently investigating, he lashed out, calling the testimonies of doctors innuendo. What is the word that pops into my mind? Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, it's disgusting. I've shown proof of e-mails to Dr. Tony Magliocco being told by Alberta Health Service officials that he would regret it. I was absolutely stunned by the minister's response. He has managed to insult every physician that has been brave enough to come forward.

For this reason, I think the Health Quality Council is not up to the job of conducting an inquiry into queue jumping and political intimidation in the health care system. We need a full, public, independent, judge-led inquiry. Mr. Speaker, you know who else agrees with me on that? The Member for Calgary-Elbow, the Premier. You know who doesn't agree with me? The Premier. Funny enough, they're the same person. What has changed? The Member for Calgary-Elbow actually won her leadership contest and is now in the Premier's office. The saying goes that power can go to your head. I'm not going to attribute this to any particular member of this House, but quite frankly someone got lost on the way.

The whole debate is ironic in another way for me because we're debating the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act when we should be reading – we should be reading – the final report from the Health Quality Council. The final report has been delayed until sometime in the new year. We could have started and finished a general election by then.

Now, Mr. Speaker, my caucus will tell you that I'm a forgiving person on most days. I've consulted in the past with those with addiction problems, and I know how important it is to relieve the guilt of past mistakes. It's an important step to a better life. But to be forgiven, you must admit that you've made a mistake. Time and again mistakes get made by this government, and – you know what? – there's no recognition. There's just this collective amnesia, just living in the present, not worrying and remembering the past, even when confronted. I'd like to see a little humility.

When asked in the media about the Premier's promise, her chief of staff was adamant that the inquiry would be led by a judge. There are no prescriptions here that ensure a judge will lead an inquiry into the health system. What we are left with is the government's word. To be honest, you can't take that to the bank. Flip-flop after flip-flop has flown since the new Premier took office. "Trust me," quite frankly, doesn't inspire confidence in Albertans right now, Mr. Speaker.

What will inspire confidence? What will return the sense of trust that people have in the health system? A public inquiry. The doctor's prescription: a dose of truth with, maybe, a pinch of honesty. Mr. Speaker, at the end of the day Albertans want to believe in this province again. Health professionals want to believe again in their government and the health care system that they use and they take and pay for.

Now, back on the topic of trust, Mr. Speaker, the government won't call a public inquiry because they think the Health Quality Council is capable of appointing the panel to investigate this issue. The government seems to be saying that they trust the council to do a good job and make good recommendations.

Earlier this year the Health Quality Council at the previous Premier's direction investigated the closure of the Edmonton city airport. It seemed like a matter of putting something off to a committee so the government didn't have to deal with it. Well, the council did come back with recommendations, nearly a couple of dozen. The consequences of closure were made clear, and the government had to take action to mitigate the impact of critical air flights. I haven't seen any action by this government on any of the council's recommendations on that issue.

I wonder to myself, Mr. Speaker: what's the point of asking a council to investigate something only, quite frankly, to ignore their findings? This is my real concern with the health council investigating intimidation and other health issues. How do you know if the results will be taken seriously? Will they be acted on? How can we trust this government to fulfill its promises?

At the end of the day, Mr. Speaker, all we can rely on in this world is our own sense of hope. I hope for the best. I hope this government gets this legislation right, and ultimately I hope this government heals the health system that we so dearly care for.

The minister mentioned in his debate their unwavering commitment to this legislation. He talked about the fact that Albertans are fair people. There's no question about that. There are no better people in this country than Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans want a public inquiry, so I'm going to challenge the minister. Under his legislation, Bill 24, that we know by the end of the day will pass, under 17(1)(a) it clearly sets out: "set out the nature and scope of the inquiry, including," Minister, "the date by which the report and recommendations, if any, of the Panel must be submitted under section 22."

Minister, if you want to be fair and you want to be open and you want to be transparent and you want to commit to Albertans like you have said in this Legislature, then our challenge to you as far as the Wildrose and, for that matter, from Albertans is to have that report submitted before the next election.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no speakers for 29(2)(a), I will call on the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the Government House Leader, followed by Calgary-Mountain View, followed by Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by Calgary-Buffalo. That's it for now.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I'll be brief on this. I think we've talked about it at some length previously. The bottom line is that the Premier, when she ran to be leader of the Conservative Party, promised a full, public, judicially led inquiry. Instead of doing that, this legislation was introduced. This legislation does not provide for what the Premier promised.

This legislation sets up a situation where a group of people who will themselves have been tasked with, in many cases, investigating the very issues that would subsequently be sort of inquired into will be the group that decides whether their very work will be reviewed by a judge or not and will decide whether the people that review their very work will be independent or not. That whole process is remarkably open to unfortunate bad judgment and decisions that will bring into disrepute the true independence of the panel.

As well, the panel, as we talked about earlier, will have countless opportunities to go in camera, not just for the intensely private, embarrassing public health care issues that speakers opposite have suggested were the necessary protections for individual Albertans but for anything where the panel thinks the public interest might possibly be jeopardized should they not go in camera. There are broad-ranging criteria that the panel, which is appointed through a less than perfect process, can use to go in camera.

This is not what the Premier promised. This is not what Albertans said they care about. This is not a guarantee of a proper public inquiry. It is, as the Member for Edmonton-Riverview put it, actually an elegant strategic move to avoid subjecting the Premier or this government to a true public inquiry or the true results of her promise being kept. For that reason, we will be voting against this bill, as we have at all other stages.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing no speakers for 29(2)(a), I will go to the Minister of Human Services and Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be very brief. I just wanted to respond to some of the comments that were made in third reading by the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. That member, of any member of the opposition, ought to know, having participated both as a member of Executive Council and as a member of government caucus, the number of opportunities that members have to participate in developing both policy and legislation. For her to have the temerity to indicate to this House what the duty of members of this House are in terms of speaking in this House is really above and beyond the call.

The fact of the matter is that any member is free to speak in this House, but if every member spoke in this House on every bill, you would never ever finish any bill. If every member of the more than 304 members of the House of Commons spoke on every bill, no bills would ever pass.

The fact of the matter is that in any decent caucus there is an assignment of responsibilities. Some people carry a bill. It may be a minister. It may be a government member. They speak to those bills, and others may participate as they are moved to do so. But there is not a necessity for a member to participate in order to do their job because, by my count, they may have as many as seven different opportunities as a member of caucus to participate in the development of policy and in the development of a bill.

Once a caucus decision has been made, then it is expected that members of Executive Council will support a bill and that members of government caucus, of course, could choose to support the bill if they wish to do so. But if they wish to retain their voice in any discussions, obviously, you have to respect the decision of caucus. The hon. member knows that. So for her to suggest that government members do not care about a bill because they're not speaking in the House when the House, as she well knows, is the opportunity primarily for members of the opposition, who have not had that opportunity to participate in the development of a bill, to bring an external view, if you will, another view to a bill – sometimes we've actually seen in this House times when opposition has come forward with a good amendment to a bill that has been accepted by the House.

Most often the amendments are really ones of philosophy or differences of viewpoint and are not accepted, but it is an opportunity in this House to have that final say, and bringing it to this House is the apex of the system, which requires all the rest of the work to be done. To suggest that no work is being done because you can't see it being done here is absolutely false.

Now, with respect to the Premier's promises this bill is public inquiry plus. What this bill does is not only have the Health Quality Council file an annual report with the Legislature, which then can be dealt with by a Legislature committee and, therefore, has an openness and a transparency to the Health Quality Council and its reports, but it also provides for the empanelling of a commissioner with all of the powers under a public inquiry. In fact, in section 17(5): "In conducting an inquiry . . . the Panel has all the powers, privileges and immunities of a commissioner under the Public Inquiries Act." So it's a process with full public inquiry power.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, please. The hon. minister has the floor. If you'd like to be added to the speakers list, I'd be more than happy to put you down.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah, please do.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.
Hon. minister, please continue.

Mr. Hancock: The pieces that make it a public inquiry plus are in subsection (7)(a), which adds a provision that says that no person who is required to furnish information or to produce documents, et cetera, et cetera, can refuse to do so on a ground relevant to the inquiry that requires the person to maintain secrecy or not to disclose any matter. In other words, there's an additional clarification of the powers of a public inquiry officer or commissioner under the act.

Hearings have to be public unless they meet the requirements to go in camera. This is again a plus, not a minus. It's a plus. What it does is encourage everybody who has relevant information to come forward and participate in an inquiry. They know that they can ask the inquiry, if it deals with their personal information or any of the items disclosed in 19(1)(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), or (g) – the panel, not the individual, can make a decision to go in camera on request if there is information as set out in that, which is very important for full disclosure. It's very important to encourage people, particularly in the health system, to come forward but letting them know that under appropriate circumstances information that would be harmful to them or to others can be heard by the commission but held in private.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that this not only fulfills the Premier's promise of having the opportunity for a full public inquiry – it can be a judge-led inquiry if so desired but with all the authorities of an inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act with additional protections built in to ensure a full and complete review.

Mr. Speaker, I would commend this bill to the Legislature and ask for its support.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.
Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Mr. Anderson: A very vigorous debate from the House leader. There was obviously a massive nerve hit there.

I guess my question to the member. He talks about, you know, how caucus was widely consulted and so forth on this matter and all the opportunities that members of the House have to debate on this. You know, there was a story just came over the line about the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster. He felt that he wasn't consulted at all and felt that his caucus had no real consultation, anyway, with regard to the previous bill that we talked about, the drunk-driving bill. I know that in the time that I did spend over on that side, I felt that the way we developed legislation, at that time anyway, did not allow private members . . .

Mr. Boutilier: Or ministers.

Mr. Anderson: I don't know about ministers. I can't speak for that.

. . . certainly private MLAs, to have virtually any real say in the development process of any bills. I could point to a hundred examples, which I won't do because we're not talking about that.

I guess I would wonder. If the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster is saying that he wasn't properly consulted on a previous bill and Albertans clearly are saying that they haven't been consulted on many of these bills, including this one, who exactly are you consulting with if you're not consulting with your caucus? Is it just in cabinet? Where is the information coming from? Your own members are saying that they're not being consulted. Are they lying? Is that hon. member lying about the lack of consultation? Just maybe clarify for me.

Mr. Hancock: Well, I hesitate to suggest who might be lying in this circumstance, Mr. Speaker. I think that members of the House on our side would understand who might fit that designation.

What the hon. member talks about is not having any input on bills, but I can remember a vigorous debate that he participated in in caucus on one bill. He and I were on opposite sides of it. His side happened to be successful, and that bill went forward. I would suggest that he was a major part of that particular piece of that particular legislation being successful. Then he turned around and said: I have no input into bills in this caucus and will leave. So I'll let members of the public and members of the Legislature make their view as to who has the veracity in this.

I wasn't participating because a nerve was touched; I was participating because there were some inaccurate, in my view, statements put on the record about how bills come forward and what the expectations of members are and what the bill actually does. I thought it was appropriate in third reading to take a very small moment of time and correct those inaccuracies.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo next. Just before you go, hon. member, let's be very careful about referring to members who are not able to speak out perhaps right at this particular time and who may not be here.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I appreciate the comment.

Speaking about the nerve that the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek hit with the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, I have to ask him – there have been rumours relative to the fact that the Premier's transition team person, who, in fact, was the head of the superboard, said that we can't have a public inquiry because all of the skeletons will come out of the closet. Is that true?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, it's not our job in this House to deal in rumour and innuendo. I know the hon. member opposite and his friends like to deal with rumour and innuendo. In fact, I think half the time they make up the rumour and innuendo. But that's what it is: rumour and innuendo. And it doesn't really bear any further comment.

Mrs. Forsyth: You know what, Mr. Speaker? I have a really simple question, actually. The government talks about consulting, so my question is to the health minister. I would like him to tell us who they consulted with on bill 24, and I would like to know specifically what physicians they consulted with. Did they talk to the AMA? I can quite frankly tell you that all of the people that I have spoken to have told me that they haven't been consulted. [interjection] Yes, you have to answer. It even goes to the mental health of . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View is next on the list, followed by Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by Calgary-Buffalo, followed by Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question around this bill – I think we've been dancing around it for some time, Bill 24, Health Quality Council of Alberta Act – is really one of trust. The question is about restoring public trust in a health care system that has been profoundly undermined, disrupted, and in many cases, if not broken, is on the verge of catastrophic collapse, as a number of physicians in the province have indicated.

We've seen a history of the failure of management in some areas but also a clear attempt in the past to privatize the payer system in our health care system and, ultimately, in 2008 the creation of one health employer in the province with no transition plan, resulting in a huge disruption of the complex services from prevention programs through early intervention programs, mental health, addictions, children, pregnant women, seniors, long-term care. All of this without a transition plan – it has created such suffering – and without consultation with the very people that are trained and provide the front-line services, all of this on top of decisions made over a decade ago to blow up and sell off our hospitals, leaving us with much less in-patient capacity for all forms of in-patient needs than we've ever had in our history relative to patient population.

We're dealing with a profound loss of trust in a system that is designed to care for people in a trusting environment. We're dealing with a system in which if you don't please the managers, you leave the province. Whether you're an EMS worker, a pathologist, a nurse, a lab technician, a licensed practical nurse, if you don't please your boss, you look for another job in another province. You leave your home, your family, your extended family in some cases. You move to another province. That's the nature in which we are seeing such profound loss of morale, I would say the lowest morale in the history of our province in health care. I've heard it from EMS workers. I've heard it from physicians. I've heard it from a number of nurses, though not nearly from as many nurses as I have from others.

This bill is trying to address, I think, the question of loss of trust. We've pushed and pushed and pushed to get even the Health Quality Council to examine some of the key issues that the government has known about for years, at least since 2007: emergency room frustrations and a loss of quality of care and cancer care, wait-lists that have seen queue-jumping or bumping, or undue delays due to interference.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

We've seen prominent physicians, the only people in the system with any sense of power to challenge what's going on: even that profession has been cowed into silence, by and large. A few members, men and women, have been silenced and in some cases moved off and paid a severance package or something with a nondisclosure clause such that it's very clear to all the health workers in this province that it's unsafe to speak the truth to this power. It's unsafe professionally. It's unsafe socially. It's unsafe economically. Frankly, the terrible ethical dilemma that it puts people in hasn't fully been appreciated by this government. Nurses and doctors take oaths to act in the interests of their patients and only in the interests of their patients, and here they're forced into a situation where if they do so, they lose their job. If they don't do it, they lose their sense of who they are and their professional ethics.

This act is really designed to try to deal with the damage that has been done over this decade of mismanagement and privatization and the communication of that in various direct and indirect ways, both in directly proposing it, as former Premier Klein did, but in also denying it as in the current administration. There's confusion. There are mixed agendas, and there's incompetence and mismanagement.

This is an attempt, instead of going to a public inquiry, to create a new body called the Health Quality Council association of Alberta as a new, fresh, independent public inquiry. It raises serious questions, troubling questions of trust. Does that mean that our public inquiry system is broken in this province, that decades of public inquiries really haven't gotten at the heart of some of the issues that we think they need to? Does it mean that only under this new act are we getting to the heart of protecting confidentiality and keeping certain things in camera, that we couldn't otherwise do? I think not. I think that to say so is to say that we need other kinds of inquiries for different types of problems, whether it's environmental violations or infrastructure violations.

It's very difficult for us on this side of the House to believe that this is anything but an ill-advised attempt to delay, to deny justice. Certainly, I can tell you from the professionals I've talked to that there's no sense that this is an attempt to honour their concerns, to respect their fear, to understand the distrust and broken relationships that have occurred over the last decade, really. This is an attempt to avoid, to deny, and to create the image but not the reality of a serious commitment to understanding what the problems in the system are and to hold accountable those people that actually created the problems and have been promoted, not fired, in the very system that they have been abusing and those professionals that they've been abusing and silencing. That's the part that is so galling for many in the system.

Mr. Speaker, it goes without saying that we simply cannot support this attempt to send some kind of a reassuring message and restore trust and restore accountability to a system that has been so clearly mismanaged, in which those who have most mismanaged have been promoted, including the present Minister of Finance, who actually orchestrated the biggest blow-up and destruction of our health care system in the last 25 years. How can we believe in this government when they have done such a terrible job in managing our most sacred trust to Albertans?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, will be brief. I want to recognize and thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, a doctor, clearly someone who has had the misfortune of being a part, essentially, of that culture of intimidation that exists there. Yet he stands in this Legislature. He decided to leave his career, essentially, and take part in the democratic process. You know, obviously, we're in different parties and don't agree on everything, but I very much respect the fact that he's fighting for those doctors and those colleagues of his that, no doubt in my mind after talking with so many of them for the last two years, have been bullied, intimidated in every way, shape, and form from a variety of different levels of government. I really do appreciate that.

I hope that one day we can see this public inquiry go forward in a true fashion, a judge-led inquiry, presided over by a judge, not some panel, by a judge with full powers of subpoena and no get-out-of-testifying-free cards for any of those ministers, former ministers, public officials, deputy ministers, anybody involved. What has happened over this last decade and a half needs to be exposed. If there is nothing to hide, then surely the government shouldn't fear having the public inquiry before the next election.

The members for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo and Calgary-Fish Creek have brought this to my attention. I've read it before, but it's a good reminder. I'm going to quote something here from an article in the Calgary Herald.

We need to change how we make decisions. We must make time and processes available for consulting with Albertans before we pass laws. That doesn't mean every Albertan will agree with every decision, but there will be time to learn about the issue and weigh in.

We need to change how the Legislature and MLAs operate. More free votes so MLAs can reflect constituents' views. More time between proposing and voting on legislation. More collaboration among departments so that initiatives mesh in achieving goals.

And it goes on.

The author of this article is the new Premier. She wrote this article on August 22, 2011. Again:

We need to change how we make decisions. We must make time and processes available for consulting with Albertans before we pass laws. That doesn't mean every Albertan will agree with every decision, but there will be time to learn about the issue and weigh in.

We need to change how the Legislature and MLAs operate.

Absolute rubbish. If she meant one word of this, one word, we would not be doing what we are doing right now, which is ramming through a piece of completely unnecessary legislation without any consultation.

She promised a public inquiry into various things – the alleged queue-jumping, intimidation of health officials, and a variety of things – on the record. She promised it before the next election, that it would be conducted prior to the next election so Albertans would have answers. She promised more transparency, more consultation. What did we get? We got this joke. That's what this is. It's a joke. It's a disgusting joke. She should be ashamed, and anybody who supports this charade – that's what this is. This is a charade. Anybody who supports this charade should be ashamed.

We have a Public Inquiries Act. It is very clear. It is very easy to use. It's not something you use all the time, obviously, but it's very simple. There's legislation. It can be activated at any time by the Executive Council, led by the Premier. It's simple. It's straightforward. It gets the job done. Instead, we sit here with this bill that's a charade, that will not change a thing other than make it possible for this process to be delayed even further, until after the next election.

Well, at some point, I think, Albertans are going to say – and, granted, a lot of Albertans are busy, and they're not paying attention right now to what's going on in politics. It's the Christmas season coming up and so forth. But they will pay attention when the election is called, and these things will be reminded to them. At some point they're going to say: "You know what? I'm pretty much sick and tired of this. I'm sick and tired of these guys promising things and then going back on those promises. I'm sick of being lied to." That's what they're going to say. There's a gag reflex level that I think at some point has been breached, and as soon as it's all brought together for Albertans, they're going to say: "You know what? We can't trust a blinking thing that these guys say. They just simply can't be trusted."

They're going to go into an election – and I hope it's wrong. I hope that the Solicitor General or the Human Services minister or the Health minister is going to be able to stand up and say: "You know what, Member for Airdrie-Chestermere? You're wrong. This is what we're going to do. We're going to call this public inquiry. We're going to do it before the election. In fact, we're going to do it the minute this is passed. In less than an hour we're going to call this public inquiry. We're going to make sure it's done before the election, and then you're going to look like the fool." I hope they do that. Prove me wrong.

Or are you going to go into the election, and are we going to be able to say – and you really want to campaign on this. We're going to be able to hold this up and say: "You know that public inquiry that your Premier talked about before the next election? They didn't do it. They're going to do it after the next election. You can trust them. You know how they say they're going to balance the budget? We know we're in deficit right now. Guess what? After the election we'll balance that budget. We're not going to raise taxes. You can trust us. We haven't told the truth on anything so far, but you can trust us. But after the election, don't worry. We won't raise your taxes. Really, we won't. There's no need for more revenue. We'll get our house in order just by being smart with our budgetary decisions." Do you really think that Albertans are going to buy that? I sure hope not. I sure hope for the sake of this province that people will take a long look at this and say: this is unacceptable.

They've got many options other than that governing party. They have the Liberal option, they have, obviously, the New Democratic option, and they, of course, have the Wildrose option. That option will be put in front of them and promises will be made, and I guess at some point Albertans are going to have to decide who they trust.

This piece of legislation, Bill 24, is a farce. It's a disappointment. I'll tell you that there are doctors and more who are going to be coming forward. There is going to be one bomb after another for this government. It's going to get bad again for them. But they're going to find out as the weeks go by here that their treatment of the doctors in this matter, their treatment of the health workers, their treatment of these good folks in our province is going to be the end of their domination. If they had just treated them fairly, they were willing to forgive, and they were willing to forget. They were willing to just have this public inquiry, get it all out in the open and move forward.

Instead, it's been swept under the rug, and we are to the point where nothing is going to be found out before the next election. Nothing. What a disgraceful, distasteful thing to do, to insult the intelligence of Albertans so much, to think that Albertans are dumb enough to actually believe that they won't do anything before the next election. "Just trust us. Don't worry. After the next election, we'll take care of it all." Yeah, right. I don't think so.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will absolutely not support this bill, and I call on the Premier of this province to keep her promise, to keep her word. If she doesn't on this, if we don't have a full public inquiry conducted prior to the next election, she cannot be trusted on anything that she says prior to or during the election because she broke her word on this.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Is any hon. member wishing to take that option? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate very much the comments of the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. I hear the emphasis on professionals, physicians and nurses and others. I guess the bottom line is that patients are suffering as a result of this. That is what really needs to be kept at the centre of this discussion. If we don't restore trust, then we don't restore confidence in patients and professionals to work together to solve problems to get the system back on track. Everyone is just pulling away because they don't believe that it actually is going to change for the better and that trust is going to be restored. Does the member agree that the public themselves are the ones that are suffering as a result of this?

Mr. Anderson: Absolutely I do. I think that what people in Alberta will say at the end of the day – I mean, you have this government saying that this health inquiry is being used as a way for doctors to intimidate other doctors or intimidate their superiors and so forth. I'll tell you what. We've all had doctors. I sure as heck trust my doctor more than most of the politicians that I've met in this Assembly or anywhere else, for that matter. I think we all should. I think most people do. Certainly, most Albertans are going to take the word of doctors over the word of politicians who are not being honest with them.

I think that's important because doctors are all saying exactly what you said, hon. member, that this is about patient care. They are advocating for their patients, and that's what's at the heart of this is that doctors are advocating for their patients, and they're being stonewalled. They're being intimidated in some cases out of the province. They're being intimidated into silence in other cases. There is a culture of silence and intimidation. I mean, how many doctors have you spoken to, hon. member, and as a caucus have we spoken to that would love to come out with some of the most incredible stories and reports of intimidation that you could imagine, yet they can't. Why can't they? Because they're afraid of getting fired or getting blacklisted and so forth.

Mrs. Forsyth: And they have a health minister that says that it's a workplace issue.

Mr. Anderson: Right. They have a health minister that says that it's a workplace issue.

We have to allow doctors to advocate for their patients. I will tell you that this health minister over there can be as offended as he would like to be, but the fact of the matter is that if he would just spend one day listening to some of the doctors that have come to us and have talked with us, if he was able to be a fly on the wall, I think he would be amazed – I'm hopeful that he would be amazed with surprise – at the depth to which this culture of intimidation has sunk. And he would do something about it. I hope he would do something about it – that's my hope – because that would be in his heart. Maybe he's not getting the story; I don't know. But it is clear as day that it's happening.

We need to open up the files and open up the contracts and open up everything that is right now silencing these pieces of information from coming forward. The only way to do that is a full public inquiry. It will exonerate the folks on that side of the House and their staff and so forth that are not involved. It will exonerate those folks, but it will condemn, and rightfully condemn, those folks that are involved, and there are folks involved. Only a public inquiry is going to be able to legitimately come up with who those folks are, and those folks should be removed from the health system so that they're not in a position to hurt the health and safety of Albertans or intimidate doctors as we go forward.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member on 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo on the bill.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I'll be brief. The Premier promised a judge-led public inquiry. Anything else is crap. That's sort of all I have to say on the bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: That's it? All right. Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate all the comments from all sides tonight, especially the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere and the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, from the Wildrose caucus, on this issue.

I listened intently to what the minister of health said when he did his preamble on third reading, and I noticed that he had mentioned the word "judge" numerous times, yet nowhere in the legislation does it say that they will appoint a judge, which is very disheartening. As I look at that, it reminds me of a couple of weeks ago, when I indicated that the minister of health was like the fox in the henhouse. Not only was he the fox in the henhouse; he actually had feathers in his mouth when it came to some of the things that he was actually saying relative to the issue.

My point, though, and what is most important, is this. I believe tonight that the seriousness of this issue is like Watergate and that we still haven't found Deep Throat. But let me tell you: we will. And you know how we will? Because the doctors, all of them who are involved, are the deep throats. The minister of health may be laughing now. He wouldn't be laughing so because he might have heard of the Saturday night . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, speak through the chair.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah, through the chair. The minister of health might be laughing, through the chair, but it is not so funny. It is not so funny. Perhaps if he looks at the history of Watergate, when Deep Throat did come out, it was like the doctors who do want to speak out with the independence of being able to be free rather than being intimidated or bullied by the government. I can assure you that this will make Watergate look like something smaller than what it was because of what has taken place. I sincerely say that because there are deep throats among doctors and nurses who do want to speak out, and they will, as the Member for Calgary-Mountain View said, for the betterment of their patients and for citizens of Alberta, who deserve the best health care they can get.

I can only say that, obviously, through the chair, the minister of health could not, I guess, be able to say that there will be a judge appointed for this independent judicial inquiry because there is none. I guess he couldn't say it because there were, quite simply Mr. Speaker, too many feathers in his mouth.

That being the case, I will not be supporting this charade that is going on here tonight. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Seeing none, any other hon. member wishing to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall call on the Minister of Health and Wellness to close the debate.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to take the opportunity to respond to a number of points that were raised in third reading. I'll try to be as brief as possible. First of all, the remarks of the last hon. member with respect to the appointment of a judge. If the hon. member had taken the trouble to read the bill, he would see that there is an explicit provision that provides for cabinet to request the appointment of a judge or judges to serve as the panel to conduct a public inquiry. And when asked in Committee of the Whole as to why this provision was requested in the form of an amendment, I referred to a document entitled Protocol on the Appointment of Judges to Commissions of Inquiry. If the hon. member took the trouble to check the Public Inquiries Act, he would see that the appointment of judges to commissions of inquiry is done by cabinet in consultation with the court in accordance with this protocol.

Contrary to how the hon. members may wish the system to work, Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that cabinet, when it wishes to appoint a judge to perform a public duty such as serve on a commission of inquiry, is bound to consult with the court in the course of requesting that participation. This amendment made explicit reference to the process outlined in the protocol. It, in fact, strengthens the opportunity for the Health Quality Council to request cabinet to appoint a judge to conduct the inquiries. That is the sum total of the debate on that matter, Mr. Speaker.

With respect to the questions raised about consultation, I remind the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek that I, in fact, did consult with the Alberta Medical Association in the preparation of this legislation. They issued a President's Letter with respect to that discussion, which I believe the hon. member quoted in the course of debate during question period over the last couple of weeks. They expressed on numerous points agreement or support for provisions that are in this legislation. Consultation was held with many groups, Mr. Speaker, not the least of which was my own caucus, which I'm very pleased to stand here and say fully supports the bill and holds it forth as evidence of fulfillment of the Premier's commitment to conduct a full and independent inquiry into this matter.

One of the last things I'd say, Mr. Speaker, and it's a topic that has been very conveniently ignored by all members opposite as part of their insistence, is that there is a full review of this matter under way currently by the Health Quality Council of Alberta. We've heard through the interim reports from the council that dozens and dozens of physicians and other health professionals have taken the opportunity to be interviewed by the Health Quality Council. They have participated in good faith. I know that members of this House have been in touch with the Health Quality Council and presented information to them that concerned them.

I only hope that any hon. member who is standing here this evening voicing objection to this bill and who has claimed to have information and evidence to support some of these allegations has also taken the personal responsibility of contacting the Health Quality Council and presenting that information. I only hope that is the case, Mr. Speaker, and unfortunately that is something we will never know unless the member voluntarily discloses that information.

The last thing I'd say, Mr. Speaker. I'd refer to the remarks of the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View because I think he came closest of all to identifying the very important principle that high-performing health care systems are built around a culture, and that's a just and trusting culture, that's a culture where physicians and all health professionals feel free to fulfill their duty to advocate on behalf of their patients. Despite some of the personal attacks and other remarks that I've sat here and listened to over the last several weeks, I would like to believe that all hon.

members of this House share that commitment to create the culture that allows for physicians and health professionals to advocate on behalf of their patients.

The hon. member talked about the change in the organization of the delivery system that took place in the last few years. I certainly don't mind as minister saying that that was, in fact, a massive change, one of the largest reorganizations in any province in Canada, certainly, that I'm aware of. And while this government stands behind that decision and while we believe we are providing evidence to this House on a regular basis of the benefits of that decision in the form of better access and quality of health services to Albertans, I want to also acknowledge as minister that a change of that magnitude does not come without a cost, and it often can come at a cost to the people who deliver care.

I think if anything, in my tenure and the tenure of previous ministers, we have demonstrated consistently that we want the input, we want the advice, and we want the opportunity for health professionals to take responsibility and accountability in making decisions that directly affect their ability to deliver care to their patients.

This bill, in summary, Mr. Speaker, not only delivers on the Premier's commitment; it creates a reasonable process with the proper safeguards such as protecting confidential patient information to ensure that these matters that have been alleged here in this House and, heaven forbid, future matters that may be alleged by members opposite have the opportunity to be reviewed in a full and fair manner through the process stipulated under Bill 24.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I'd ask for the support of all members in the passage of this bill.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness has closed the debate.

The chair shall now call the question.

Bill 23

Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and move third reading of Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011.

Bill 23 delivers on our Premier's promise to ensure landowners in our province are consulted, fairly compensated, fully compensated, and have access to the courts if their land is needed for a major infrastructure project.

Mr. Speaker, governments of all levels have always had the ability to restrict development. This law does not give government any new powers. It's about giving Albertan landowners more certainty and, more importantly, more rights, protections, and options when they're working with the government when their land is required for the public good. That's our government's commitment to landowners.

Mr. Speaker, let's be clear about one thing. The suggestion that this law is not needed or should be repealed would in fact diminish landowner rights within Alberta. Under the previous process of restricted development area regulations, that have been used for the last 40 years to establish land for the ring roads and transportation/utility corridors, the government was not required to consult landowners or to be transparent with Albertans about their plans for the future. The government was not required to make decisions within a reasonable amount of time on what land is or is not going to be impacted. The government was the only one legally that could initiate the purchase of the land.

Our government thinks landowners deserve better. Under this law landowners will now have the right to be notified and consulted if their land is needed for a major infrastructure project. The government will be required to decide within two years if that land will be part of a project or not. Once land is designated as part of a project, rather than waiting on government timelines, landowners can initiate the sale either by negotiation or by using the powers that we have given them of reverse expropriation. If they choose to sell their land, landowners will have the first right to lease their land back from the government if they want to continue farming or living on it until the project begins and their land is required.

Mr. Speaker, since we've introduced these amendments, I've heard many positive comments from landowners across Alberta, from the legal community, from municipal leaders, and even from the opposition. Earlier today I tabled an article from the St. Albert Gazette in which the Wildrose critic for this legislation and my ministry, the Member for Calgary-Glenmore, was quoted as saying, "having access to the courts is a great move forward, being able to declare when they want to sell their land is another important one." During second reading debate that same member said: "We thank the government for bringing forward these amendments. They are good amendments. We will be in favour of and voting for these amendments." I do appreciate the support from the Wildrose Party on this.

During debate on Bill 23 one issue was raised with respect to the wording of the preamble, an amendment which was proposed but not passed in Committee of the Whole. Mr. Speaker, I want to make it clear that in the preamble and in the bill our intent has been clear. The legislation ensures that landowners will have full compensation. It clarifies that landowners also have the ability to access the courts or the Land Compensation Board if they do not agree with the compensation component, and it's now absolutely crystal clear that the courts and the Land Compensation Board can compensate landowners for any applicable losses under the heads of compensation for their specific losses in things like severance, disturbance, or business losses.

A second issue that was raised during committee that I need to respond to, Mr. Speaker, is the impact of this legislation on a landowner's standing with their bank or lending institution and how a notice on title could affect that. We take all concerns that Albertans bring forward to us very seriously and have given this fair consideration, but the fact of the matter is that the notice is just about transparency to all potential landowners, buyers, and sellers. This is not a new process. Actually, it's decades old. It was the existing process with the restricted development area regulations, so this legislation did not change that.

Mr. Speaker, during the entire history of the ring roads and the transportation/utility corridors dating back nearly four decades, 40 years, numerous landowners with a wide variety of circumstances received financing and were refinanced by their banks or credit unions or other institutions. I'm not aware of any cases where banks called loans on landowners within those transportation/utility corridors with respect to their land being designated as part of a restricted development area. If the opposition has examples of those, I'm very eager to learn of those, and we will take them under fair consideration.

We've also checked with various lending institutions who advise us that this is not a process that will negatively impact landowners or their ability to loan money to landowners. As a matter of fact, the Agriculture Financial Services Corporation reviewed the proposed legislation, and what they told us is that AFSC would not see notifications registered on title as an abnormal impediment in considering financing to an applicant, whether it's agriculture or business. The legislation provides mechanisms to ensure that property value is not negatively affected and, therefore, would not impair AFSC security in such land.

What's also important to understand, Mr. Speaker, is that this legislation will give a landowner a guaranteed purchase from the Crown, and the timing of that purchase will be solely in the hands of the landowner. I can tell you as a former businessman that that's a level of certainty and liquidity that adds security and should not be seen as a negative but a positive.

Mr. Speaker, we've addressed Albertans' concerns in these amendments. We will continue to listen to Albertans on legislation and this legislation in particular during the development of the regulations in the coming months.

I'd like to close, Mr. Speaker, by just reiterating that I'm a fourth-generation Albertan. I grew up in a rural community. Several of my extended family still farm. I continue to live and raise my family in a rural community. I operated a small business for many years with rural customers throughout the province. I know how important the land is to my family, my friends, my colleagues, my customers, and my constituents. I know how important the land is to all the members of this Assembly, many who own land, including myself, many who actively still farm their land, including the member sitting beside me.

Our government stands firmly beside landowners. This legislation clarifies what is a LAPAA project and the fact that utility projects, pipeline projects, and transmission line projects do not qualify. It takes significant steps to ensure full compensation, it guarantees access to the courts, and it removes the heavy-handed penalties that were in the legislation previously. It meets the promise that our Premier made to landowners in this province to have full compensation, full consultation, and guaranteed access to the courts.

I encourage all members of the Assembly to support this bill, Mr. Speaker. It's a good bill for Alberta.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak? The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to applaud this minister for his comments today. They were very informative. I very much appreciate that he took the time to look into the matter of the banking institution concern that was raised by several members in our caucus. There may still be work to do on that front, but I do appreciate that he took the time in that regard.

I also want to thank the minister for bringing this bill. It is a good bill. It certainly helps undo much of the damage, if not all of the damage, that the original Bill 19, the Land Assembly Project Area Act, did. He should be commended for bringing that forward. Many of the members over there have interests in land, and I do not doubt their love of the land or their love of rural Alberta and so forth. I was raised for most of my life on an acreage out in the Balzac area, and I have the same feelings about the importance of life in rural Alberta.

I think that some things do need to be said, though, tonight. I want to take a moment and thank Keith Wilson again for the incredible efforts that he made. I do give credit to the minister for bringing it forward, but make no mistake: this bill is the product of the efforts of a few individuals that stood up against the big blue machine. One of those guys was Keith Wilson. This is a huge victory – a huge victory – for him on behalf of Albertans.

I'd also like to congratulate and I think we should congratulate Danielle Smith, the leader of the Wildrose, who's been an outspoken property rights advocate for years before she even got into politics. She was one of the first ones on this. She's been a very outspoken advocate on this, just right from the get-go seized upon this issue as something that was wrong, Bill 19 being that issue.

Also, the Member for Calgary-Glenmore, as he did with the royalties and as he's done many times before, was one of the first elected people to rise and speak against these property rights bills that have come through.

I'm glad that the government is starting to listen. The Wildrose will certainly claim this as a victory for landowners and as a victory of why we have opposition in government, why it's important to have opposition. The government doesn't know all of the answers, and sometimes they do get it wrong. In fact, a lot of times they get it wrong. It's important that there's opposition here that, when they do get it wrong, can push back hard enough and is a legitimate threat to their hold on power that they listen.

In this case that has happened. There was a huge amount of sagging support in rural Alberta for this PC Party and PC government. They knew that it was a legitimate threat, so they listened a little bit more acutely than they otherwise would have. I think that's a good thing. That's what democracy is. It's not something to be ashamed of: the fact that you get something wrong the first go-round. It's better late than never. It's always good to get it right the first time and to do proper due diligence, which was not done in this case. But this has been undone before too much damage could have occurred under the original Bill 19.

I thank the governing party for listening in this respect on Bill 23. It just so happened that the right thing as well as the politically advantageous thing were the same thing this go-round. It was not the case for health care, not the case for fixed election dates, not the case for the other bills that we've been talking about tonight, where the political interest and doing the right thing are not in the same category.

With that, I will on behalf of the Wildrose say that Bill 23 is acceptable. We will vote in support of it.

But we do note and will hold to that Bill 24, Bill 50, and Bill 36 are still on the books, not the bills but the acts that they represent, and each one of those bills needs to be repealed. That is what rural Albertans are telling all of you, and they're telling us that as well. They need to be repealed. We need to start from scratch. Bill 24 is a joke. It should just be repealed and scrapped and never looked at again. But with Bill 50, with regard to transmission, and Bill 36: let's scrap those bills and start over again and actually consult with Albertans on what needs to happen going forward instead of leaving those bills on the books right now. If you do that, you will have repaired the damage that these very poor land bills have caused. Although Bill 50, in particular, will come with a huge price tag because a lot of money has already been spent, it's better to turn it around now than to waste billions more. It's better to lose a few hundred million than several billion, so let's scrap that one as well and start from the beginning.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. members wish to join the debate on Bill 23?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call on the minister to close the debate.

Mr. Johnson: Question.

The Deputy Speaker: All right. The chair shall now call the question on the bill.

[Motion carried; Bill 23 read a third time]

Bill 21

Election Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise this evening to move third reading of Bill 21, the Election Amendment Act, 2011.

Mr. Speaker, this important piece of legislation will create certainty for Albertans. We want Albertans to get involved in the democratic process as voters, as volunteers, and as candidates, and this legislation will provide them with both the certainty and the needed flexibility to do so. This act will provide for a fixed election time period for general elections to be held every four years. Starting in 2012, a general election would be held between March 1, 2012, and May 31, 2012. Afterwards, general elections would be held in this same three-month period in the fourth calendar year following polling day in the most recent general election.

The second amendment clarifies that the Lieutenant Governor's constitutional power to dissolve the Legislature stays intact. Removing this power of the Lieutenant Governor would be unconstitutional in our opinion. Our legislation is a made-in-Alberta solution. It does differ from other jurisdictions, but it's reasonable and common sense. We trust that Alberta's approach to this legislation will provide the additional flexibility that's needed to result in a greater public participation in our general elections.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage all hon. members to support this legislation. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you. I appreciated the comments from the Minister of Justice, but I'm sure he'll be dismayed to know that I can't support this bill.

Mr. Denis: No. I'm shocked.

Dr. Taft: You're shocked and appalled.

Mr. Denis: I just said shocked, not appalled.

Dr. Taft: Not appalled.

I'd like to get a few comments on the record as we wrap up here. There is no doubt, as the minister said, that this is a made-in-Alberta solution. I can't imagine anybody, any other government anywhere taking this approach of having an election season, as it's been called, rather than an election day. It isn't common sense in our view over here although it is over there. I think it's another disappointing position taken by this new Premier and by this government when a much more obvious and effective solution was right at hand.

Mr. Speaker, one of the rare pleasures I have in this Assembly is working with the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, who we all know has a one-of-a-kind sort of mind, and I say that in the full sense of the term. I've never met a guy like the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. He constantly sprinkles his wisdom and knowledge into the lives of the Alberta Liberal caucus and those of all of us.

Now, I'm holding a document here, Mr. Speaker, which is typical of documents that fill the office of the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. The remarkable gift he has is to go through countless thousands of pages of material and make notes and put stickies on them and so on, like he has with this document, and then months later, in a different conversation or a different context, be able to go exactly to that page and that document and say: well, lookit, this relates to that debate.

He has done that yet again this evening. In fact, he left me a note at the top of page 67 of the report on the March 3, 2008, provincial general election of the 27th Legislative Assembly, which is the report filed by the Chief Electoral Officer. It's a report I have for other purposes spent some time with, but I had completely forgotten about this page. Not the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. He's written on the top of page 67: good stuff for third reading on Bill 21. He's right, and I'm just going to take a moment here because what's written here by the Chief Electoral Officer gives a little insight into why I feel this bill falls short.

The title of this section of the Chief Electoral Officer's report is Establishment of a Fixed Election Date. The second paragraph – well, actually I'll start at the beginning. It goes:

The current practice of establishing an election date through Order in Council causes significant challenges to electors, election officers, political participants and other stakeholders.

Then he goes on to itemize some of those challenges. While those challenges will be, in all fairness, reduced by this legislation, they will not be eliminated, and they could be eliminated just like that.

Here's what the Chief Electoral Officer wrote:

From a management perspective, a fixed election date would be advantageous for administration of the event . . . With a known date for employment, a commitment of the approximately 15,000 staff required during the election could also be confirmed.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this is an interesting point.

An election called late in the week can incur costly overtime charges for weekend installation of telephone lines, and delivery of equipment, supplies and furniture for the 83 returning offices throughout the province.

We're all wanting to save money. Choosing one date for an election would save money. Why don't we do it?

Then he goes on further down. I won't read every word on the page because it is getting late.

Mr. Denis: Thank you.

Dr. Taft: You're welcome, Mr. Solicitor General.

It does say here, again quoting from page 67, that fixed provincial election dates would offer many benefits to voters and to Elections Alberta in preparing for and administering these events. Knowing the date in advance:

- would enable voters to better plan for their attendance at the polls to vote on election day or at an advance poll,
- would enable voters to better plan and prepare for absentee voting,
- would permit Elections Alberta to confirm the availability of Returning Officers and their key staff,
- would enable Returning Officers to commit to dates for office and polling place rental, allowing them to secure the locations well in advance,
- may enable Returning Officers to select better locations for their returning offices and polling places and to better negotiate lease rates for such space,
- may enable Returning Officers to better negotiate rental rates for returning office furniture and furnishings, and . . .

Mr. Speaker, you'll be glad to know that this is the last point I'm going to read.

- would enable Elections Alberta to reserve telephone, cellular and fax numbers in advance for more timely publication of this information for the benefit of the public and political participants.

The Chief Electoral Officer actually goes on for hundreds of more words, Mr. Speaker, but I will not subject everybody to those. The point I'm trying to make is that we should have had the guts in this Assembly to choose one date and pass that through the Legislature. Almost every other province in the country has now done that. Municipalities in Alberta have done that for decades. I don't know why we can't. I have not heard one reason – not one reason – why we can't.

I think this bill falls short on third reading, as in the earlier stages. I just can't support it.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to speak briefly to the bill because I want to commend the Premier for her leadership on this particular issue. I think it takes a lot of guts, courage, and determination to change what has been a practice in this province for a hundred years. From what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview just read out, you would wonder how elections even happened in this province for the last hundred years, but they did. You know, the world didn't come to an end, like many of the opposition parties would like to claim.

One of the things that I just wanted to focus on is what the intention of this bill is, in my opinion, and that has to do with being fair and transparent with citizens, being fair and transparent with those that are putting forward their name to run for public office, and being fair and transparent to political parties, that are a big part of our democratic institutions.

The reason why it's fair, Mr. Speaker – you know, I think we're splitting fine ends if you say: well, you need to pick a day over a three-month period. I think that with some of the biggest proponents of fixed election dates, their biggest concerns have been with manipulation of the political process as far as the timing of the election. For example, I think there were lots of complaints about a government that is three and a half years into its mandate. "Things are going quite well. The poll numbers are looking good. Why risk going another six months? We're going to call an election." You know, I think that, generally, reasonably, a lot of people would say: yes, that's probably unfair, a very unfair advantage to the governing party. This bill prevents that from happening.

I can think of millions of other scenarios. Look at the scenario right now. We have a Premier that has just come off a leadership victory. She's been very clear that she is committed in legislation, by law, to go to the polls within a three-month period. I think that's a very strong statement for a Premier that has just taken office. She could not do anything and maybe wait and see how the spring goes, maybe wait till the fall, maybe wait till next spring – that's what the law is right now – but this Premier has made a commitment to not do that because she believes in transparency and fairness to Albertans.

My last comment, Mr. Speaker, is the same thing. These are the types of things that this government has considered when bringing this in. I know that members over there will remember it. It was a former member of this House who left to pursue an opportunity in federal politics. He became leader of the Canadian Alliance party federally, and as soon as he became Leader of the Official Opposition, I think three and a half years into a mandate, the then Prime Minister, Jean Chrétien, called a snap election. That Leader of the Official Opposition could barely even get into his office, and he was into a campaign. That was unfair manipulation of the election process, that I think was unfair to all Canadians.

Again, this bill will not let that happen, Mr. Speaker. It's fair, it's honest, and the last point is that it provides flexibility. We don't know what's going to happen four years from now, okay? We don't know. Maybe we had a great opportunity for a royal visit. Maybe they scheduled that during an election, and they skip over coming to Alberta because they don't want to get involved in the political shenanigans that go on during an election.

Mr. Speaker, this provides the intent of what most proponents of fixed election dates want – that manipulation of the timing of election, going out to five years, cutting it short at three and a half years – with the flexibility to be able to use some common sense on a four-year planning cycle.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, then the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere on the bill.

Mr. Anderson: I have no idea how someone could honestly with integrity stand up in this House and defend a Premier who made a specific promise to call an election in March of 2012 and then every four years thereafter and to set fixed election legislation that is exactly the same as the other fixed election legislation in other provinces, modelled after that, and then goes and completely breaks her promise not more than a couple of weeks after her selection as leader. That you can stand up and somehow defend that kind of deceit is just unbelievable. I don't know. I would expect better from that member and from other members.

This isn't like, you know, a difference of opinion. This was a promise that was made and a promise that was completely broken. It was deliberate, it was blatant, and it was wrong. I think that Albertans are and should be completely disgusted with what happened here.

Mr. Liepert: We'll see.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah, we will see. We will see whether they are in the next election or not. Wisdom from the Member for Calgary-West. We will see in the next election whether Albertans will put up with these lies and deceit. That's what they are.

Mr. Speaker, here's the problem. There is not a single jurisdiction in North America that . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, you have a point of order?

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Hancock: Yes, under Standing Order 23(h), (i), (j). I know it's late. I know that we'd like to complete the day and go home to our families safely, but there are things that can't be permitted in this House and that is unparliamentary language. We have a duty to treat each other with dignity and respect if we want the institution of parliament to be treated with dignity and respect. We're talking about an electoral act. The purpose of bringing it forward is to encourage public participation in the electoral system, to encourage the public to have some respect for the concept of government. They don't have to like us. They don't have to agree with us. We can have respectful discourse, but we should not be using terms like "lies and deceit" in reference to any individual member of the House or, quite frankly, with respect to government or anyone else.

The hon. member has in this session stooped to new lows of both behaviour and attitude and respect for the institution. I don't ask that he respect me as an individual – people earn respect as individuals – but I do ask that he have respect for the institution and stop using unparliamentary language like "lies and deceit."

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere on this point of order.

Mr. Anderson: Well, my exact quote was that Albertans are going to get sick and tired of the lies and deceit. I think they will get tired of the lies and deceit. If, in the opinion of the leader, I have attached the words "lies and deceit" to our Premier, then I withdraw those and just say that it was deception. Or is that unparliamentary, too, or untrue, misleading, wrong, pathetic, whatever you'd like? I do withdraw the word "lie" if that suits you. But it was very deceptive. It was very wrong. It was disgusting.

You know, with regard to this hon. member opposite – we're still on the point of order, I assume? We're still on the point of order?

The Deputy Speaker: Please. The chair heard enough on the point of order, so can you please sit down when the chair stands up, by the rules of our parliament?

The chair heard both sides. I have enough information, and I heard enough, so the chair shall now ask the hon. member to withdraw those words.

Mr. Anderson: I just did.

The Deputy Speaker: I didn't ask you, but now I ask you, hon. member. Please withdraw.

Mr. Anderson: Done.

The Deputy Speaker: So you have withdrawn the words "lies and deceit" in the Assembly?

Mr. Anderson: Yes.

The Deputy Speaker: Then please stand up and continue your remarks.

Debate Continued

Mr. Anderson: And the charade continues with this democracy that you call. Everyone in this House should be ashamed of what's going on. [interjections] No, I don't have respect for you, but I do have respect for this House, very much so. The reason that I have respect for this House, hon. members, is because I believe very much in democracy. I believe very much that we are here in order to represent our constituents freely and openly and be able to speak the way that we want to speak for them, and then we're all held accountable by what we say or what we don't say. Some of us choose to actually represent our constituents; others choose to represent their party. That's fine. That's certainly a choice that many in this Assembly have made.

I have no reservations in saying that what the leader of the governing party, the Premier, has done was completely dishonest with what she said. She misled the public. That's wrong, and we all know that here. Some people choose to, you know, say that that's okay, and others don't.

The Wildrose absolutely will not be supporting this bill. We will make sure that one of the first orders of business after this government is replaced, whether that be in four months or four years or whenever it be, is that we will bring in a fixed election date, and we will do so regardless of what the situation is because it's the right thing to do. It should not be a situation where one party is given an opportunity or an advantage over another party in an election, and that's what has happened here. What is more egregious than the seasonal election date, what is far more egregious is the fact that there was a promise given by this Premier. It was a clear, concise promise that she made during her election campaign, and a week later she changed her position and went against exactly what she had said.

Now, apparently, we're not supposed to use the word "lie," so I won't use the word "lie," or "intentionally deceitful," so I won't use those words. I won't use any of, you know, the double-talk, double-speak and all the other things that could explain that. But whatever you want to call it, that's what was done to the people of Alberta when she specifically said something and then did the opposite to that. It is absolutely distasteful, and it's a disgrace to this Legislature. That is something that I think Albertans will feel very strongly about as well.

Mr. Speaker, with that I will sit down, and we can all, hopefully, go home. Is this the last bill? Hopefully, it is.

Mr. Anderson: There's still more? Jeppers.

The Deputy Speaker: We have Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do not support the bill. A fixed election date. We were all born on a day. The member from Calgary who put in the great outdoors day or whatever that was called: it's a day. The question, quite simply, if Albertans were watching and listening tonight to the Government House Leader and others would be: "What happens when a politician doesn't tell the truth? What happens?" You're not allowed to call it a lie. You're not allowed to do this or that, so what do you call it? I know out in the street Albertans call it a lie, but in here you're not allowed, so I accept that if that's the parliamentary language. Maybe we need to change the parliamentary language and start talking like Albertans. If someone is lying, then we should say that they're lying. Apparently, that word is not allowed in here, and I am not using it in here. What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that in the future let us begin to speak a language that Albertans are speaking.

Consequently, I do not support this bill. I was born in February on a day, not in a season. The season, I can say, was actually a leap year, believe it or not, if leap years are seasons. The bottom line is that this is wrong. Why don't we quite simply – I'm glad to see some members are listening on that side: the Member for Red Deer-North. That's good to see. I see the Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake nodding his head. I think I interpret that as an agreement. I said nice words about him earlier tonight, about the great job he had done as the Transportation minister, even though we didn't get the twinning of highway 63 as quickly as I would have liked. It still hasn't come yet, and I'm not going to hold my breath.

That being the case, I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I am not supporting this bill on a fixed election date. But it is an improvement on the former PC leader and Premier. This is an improvement over what the former PC leader did. But the bottom line is that it just didn't go far enough, and that's why I will not support it.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call on the hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for third reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 12:06 a.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise to move third reading of Bill 22, the Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011.

The changes in Bill 22 will increase clarity, fix a few errors, improve the functioning of Alberta's courts, and increase the effectiveness of our legislation.

I'd like to thank all hon. members for their support of this legislation. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Ms Woo-Paw: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a third time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In light of the good work that we've done today in dealing with six bills in third reading plus two in committee, three of which, by my recollection, have been passed by this House unanimously, I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 12:13 a.m. on Wednesday to 1:30 p.m.]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Guide us so that we may use the privilege given us as elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. Give us the strength to labour diligently, the courage to think and to speak with clarity and conviction and without prejudice or pride. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd like to recognize one of the members of the Legislative Assembly security staff who will be retiring at the end of this session. Mr. Wayne Konner is seated in the Speaker's gallery, and I'd ask him to rise. Prior to joining the security staff here at the Legislature in February of 2000, Mr. Konner served in the Edmonton Police Service for 32 years, retiring in 1997 with the rank of staff sergeant. Please receive the warm wishes of the Members of the Legislative Assembly. [Standing ovation]

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To you and through you to all members of the Assembly I would like to introduce nine members of the Spruce Avenue Community League. I'll read off their names and have them stand and receive the traditional greeting of the Assembly: Ken Johnston, Elke Siebels, Sue Buhler, Karen Gilson, Verna Stainthorp, Henry Stainthorp, Melanie Ustina, Gavin Curtis, and David Despina. I'll be talking about this group in a few moments in a member's statement. If they could receive the traditional greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some outstanding community builders seated in the members' gallery. First, Ms Karen Lynch. Many in the House know that she's the executive director of Volunteer Alberta and volunteers her time with Alberta Ballet, public libraries, the Edmonton Journal board, and the Lethbridge management advisory council.

Next, Mr. Punch Jackson, who retired from the government of Alberta after 30 years of distinguished service in the areas of community development, public libraries, and the Wild Rose Foundation. He's still involved as a bridge builder between the provincial government and the voluntary sector.

Also in the gallery today is Mr. Ross Tyson. I had the opportunity to meet him this afternoon for the first time. He served 31 years as a teacher and principal with Edmonton public schools. He is now assistant executive director of the recently amalgamated Boys & Girls Clubs and Big Brothers Big Sisters of Edmonton.

These generous folks share their insights and experience and great advice with me from time to time. I would like to ask that they all rise and receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour and a pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Legislature two constituents of mine. Both of these constituents work for a large forestry company in Grande Prairie called Weyerhaeuser. As they meet with me and other members and ministers today, it's interesting to note that as of today they are a net no-user of power, and they're one of the largest employers in our region. Within a year from now they will be putting a major amount of green power back into the grid. I would ask them to stand as I introduce their names: Wayne Roznowsky, manager with Weyerhaeuser, and Roger Loberg, manager with Weyerhaeuser's timberland. I'd ask this Assembly to give them the warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a strong advocate for Albertans with spinal cord injuries and other disabilities. Mr. Zachary Weeks is a community development communications co-ordinator for the Alberta branch of the Canadian Paraplegic Association. He's accompanied by his caregiver, Rodel. I met Zachary recently at the International Day of Persons with Disabilities. What really impressed me about him was his passion for fighting for a more inclusive environment for all. I'll tell you that what Albertans believe is that every Albertan, no matter their disability or circumstance or ability, must be treated with dignity and given a fair chance to fully participate in all aspects of society. Zachary and Rodel are fighting for the same thing, and I'm honoured that they could join us here today. I ask them to rise, and I ask every member of the Legislature to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly the vice-president of policy for the Wildrose Party, Mr. Rob Ladouceur. Rob is originally from Fort McMurray. He has done a great job in drafting our 132-page green book and making that come to fruition. We're very happy and thankful for his support. With that, I would like him to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to introduce my second group today. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a lovely lady and her husband. I met this woman last year at the Edmonton public school board staff recognition event, where she was receiving an award. Then last night I was there thinking: wow, she won another one. Actually, what she had done was that she had nominated the staff from Hardisty school for an award. I'd just like to recognize Mrs. Kelly Aulenbach and her husband, Jerry. If they could rise and receive the traditional greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce two people today. I'd like to introduce my executive assistant, Natalie Sigalet, who has done a great job for me over the last year – and I'd like to thank her for that – and a good friend of hers, Matthew Glass. Matthew is a passionate student, currently studying political science at the University of Alberta. He's heavily involved in the community, volunteering and serving on a number of boards. In the past Matthew has served two terms on the Alberta Council on Admissions and Transfer and as students' union VP at MacEwan University. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

Spruce Avenue Community League

Mr. Elniski: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. We have in Edmonton-Calder, like across the city, well-organized and fiscally prudent community leagues. Each of the leagues shares the goal of making their little corner of the world a safer, friendlier, happier place to live. Today I want to acknowledge a group who really took it to heart, the Spruce Avenue Community League.

Seldom, Mr. Speaker, will you meet a group of people who are more dedicated volunteers than the people from Spruce Avenue. Hemmed in by development pressures, LRT expansion, and the ever-growing desire for people to park on their streets during the workday, they could simply have allowed their neighbourhood to atrophy and succumb to inner-city deterioration, but they did not. For four years the Spruce Avenue Community League fund raised, filled out endless grant applications, and drew and redrew their plans until they achieved what they had set out to do.

Yesterday at their board meeting it was my pleasure to announce that they were successful in receiving a CFEP grant to begin construction of a new park, that will not only serve the children of their community but also the children of St. Basil school, Spruce Avenue school, and the Glenrose rehabilitation hospital. By working together as a united front, they have been able to find creative solutions to fund this project. The new park is a testament to the hard work put in by the park and playground redevelopment committee. As school kids and neighbourhood families enjoy the new park for years to come, they will know that they owe it all to the vision, dedication, and perseverance shown by the community partners and volunteers.

I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that they are as proud of their accomplishment as I am of them. I hope this group of volunteers never loses their passion and drive to improve their community because right now they are a role model for other groups in Edmonton facing the same situation. It's very difficult to maintain community momentum, but the goal has been to make the communities livable, and the best way for that to happen is for people to stand up for what they want.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Human Services Workers

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our human services workers are the unsung heroes of modern-day Alberta. At all times of the day and night these dedicated men and women are confronting the most painful human situations imaginable and, in most cases, supporting individuals and families back to stability and full function.

But this government has a serious and growing problem. It does not understand that people in the caring professions, from child and youth care workers at various levels, need clear responsibilities and lines of authority, a supportive work environment, and a career path. They cannot, in addition to extreme client demands, struggle daily with inconsistent expectations and ever-changing models of delivery. Management decisions without consulting the front lines, with troubling similarities in health care, mean a cycle of dispiriting change, reversals, and new forms and measures that reduce professional time with their increasingly desperate clients. Lack of a consistent, clear HR strategy and supportive environments means a vicious cycle of stress, leading to the massive staff turnover that we see there every year.

The minister's primary mandate should be to ensure that his organization honours consistent management principles and makes a healthy workforce a priority. To the minister: will he consult meaningfully with those at the front lines? Is he willing to hear and respond to the frustration reflected in their 2011 survey showing progressive loss in confidence, trust, and unity in their workplace? Does he understand what it means when less than 50 per cent of the staff believe their management is concerned with staff well-being or in creating conditions for innovation?

With the formation of a massive, new Ministry of Human Services it is both more challenging and more essential that the minister realize that people, not models and technology, help heal our most wounded citizens. It is critical that he focus now to reduce the stress and high turnover among these essential professionals.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Volunteer Sector

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the United Nations marks the 10th anniversary of the International Year of Volunteers this week and will soon be welcoming a new year, a new beginning, I would like to talk about the future of Alberta's voluntary sector today. First, we must recognize that the quality of life in any community depends on three sources of well-being: community, government, and business. It is time we recognized the community of the voluntary sector, the third leg of the stool that provides the much-needed stability to the social and economic well-being of our society.

Mr. Speaker, this recognition must be substantial and backed with meaningful actions. The voluntary sector, like the other two sectors, must position itself with appropriate human and organizational capacities in order to respond to emerging changes so that it can meet its missions and contribute to the common good to its fullest. Research identifies support for research and development as a critical factor to enable this sector to critically examine its current service models and structure, efficiency, and effectiveness as well as needed support and process for potential structural change like the one I mentioned earlier.

Mr. Speaker, another essential area for this sector is human resources. As identified in the study Strategic Drivers of Alberta's Nonprofit Sector, in order for the sector to prosper . . . it will be necessary for organizations to turn to different groups of the Canadian population as potential sources of volunteers. Four such groups include: youth volunteers, immigrant volunteers, older adult volunteers, and corporate volunteers.

Government needs to play a role to help prepare and enable this sector for this critical demographic shift that would hugely impact its future effectiveness.

Mr. Speaker, my key point today is that our government has to have in place the appropriate policies and structure to truly harness and maximize the potential of our voluntary sector for they are our partner on the ground, building our social capital, building strong communities, and enhancing quality of life for all Albertans.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Grey Nuns Community Hospital

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to recognize the Grey Nuns community hospital. Located in my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods, the Grey Nuns hospital was opened in 1988 by the Sisters of Charity, also known as the Grey Nuns. For 23 years now the Grey Nuns community hospital has allowed my constituents in Mill Woods to receive a full spectrum of health care services locally.

The hospital offers 24-hour emergency care, intensive care, general surgery, rehabilitation medicine, and mental health services among others. There are approximately 2,800 staff members and more than 350 beds. Mr. Speaker, one of the key services offered by the Grey Nuns community hospital is the 20-bed tertiary palliative care unit. The tertiary palliative care unit aims to provide comfort and support to patients who are living with a life-threatening illness. It is truly a great program.

Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that the positive impact that the Grey Nuns hospital has had in my community for the last 23 years has been amazing. I would like to commend all the staff and volunteers that make the Grey Nuns hospital the great health facility that it is today.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Fraser Mustard

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, what an honour today to rise and pay tribute to a remarkable Canadian, the world's leading expert in early child development, Dr. Fraser Mustard, who passed recently.

In his mid-80s he was renowned world-wide because he in the early years discovered that the early years were critically important. He abandoned his neurosurgery as a practice and engaged in 1999 with Senator Margaret McCain in defining what was really important about the early years.

As such, he went to the World Bank and said that if we invested in the early years, we wouldn't have to spend so much in the later years of life. Alberta listened. We established the child and family research facility, which has sought evidence-based opportunities for defining what programs really work for children.

He also, because of his relationship with Mary Gordon, helped her establish the roots of empathy program, which to date has provided programs for 64,000 Alberta children in many of the schools. Mr. Speaker, parent link, also established in Alberta through children's services, provides support for parents in 46 centres.

He truly has been honoured not only in Canada but recognized world-wide because of his contribution to early child development. He was a Canadian that we will remember when we think of the early child, the child's need to have proper parenting. And for us to recognize that establishing what the basic needs of the child are first and then proceeding with the proper care and treatment of the child will stand us in good stead as we advance the support for children, youth, and families.

He was a pioneer that many generations will benefit from because he knew what had to be done. He was bold in articulating that, and I'm so proud to be in a province that really listened to Dr. Fraser Mustard.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Impaired Driving Legislation

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As an ER doctor I know Albertans should not drink and drive, and as legislators we know that we shouldn't speed ill-conceived laws through the Legislature while sleep deprived. More accidents happen on our roads because major highways like highway 63 aren't twinned, cars don't have snow tires, and there aren't enough officers on the street to enforce the laws that we already have. Front-line health staff always listen to their patients, examine them properly, and make good decisions. Why have the Premier and government rushed, used closure to ram Bill 26 down the throats of Albertans without consulting them first?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, Bill 26 is a fantastic piece of legislation that reflects what we need to do in this province. What we need to do is ensure that we're having honest conversations about changing the culture around drinking and driving. Albertans from across the province have been in support of this legislation, and I'm really proud that this government introduced it and passed it this session.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I agree with changing the culture, that Albertans should not drink and drive. Absolutely, Madam Premier.

Given that even her own government members criticize Bill 26 for giving law enforcement officers too much power, how can the Premier, a human rights lawyer, defend laws that assume guilt and dole out punishments before due process is afforded to Albertans?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, what we know is that under legislation we have the opportunity to set standards, and under those standards, which are completely consistent with the laws of this land, we are able to say to people that if you take actions, there will be consequences. What we know, whether we're talking about this legislation or the earlier legislation this government passed with respect to civil forfeiture, is that the courts agree with us that those are the appropriate tests.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that police officers are skilled, very skilled in the art of policing, why are you asking police officers to be judge and jury at the side of the road?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this legislation is helpful to police in the same way that our civil forfeiture legislation was because it empowered the police to be able to deal with people that are breaking the rules and to have consequences as a result of that attached to those actions. I have full confidence in the ability of our police services across this province to do exactly what we will ask them to do under this legislation and to have those actions upheld by the court.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Services for Seniors

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In my tour of Alberta over the past year many seniors have told me that they feel like their government is failing them. The cutting of public home care and long-term care is causing emergency rooms to overflow and is forcing senior couples, who have been married 50 years, who can't afford private facilities, to face involuntary separation or abandonment in hospitals. The solution for the government is more privatization and to build more private buildings and, of course, nickel and dime our seniors to pay for it all. Will the Premier and the government listen to their own workforce, which is telling them to invest more in public home care and public long-term care and stop looking to private companies and corporations to solve Albertans' problems?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the solution to ensuring that seniors in Alberta can live a quality of life with dignity and respect is ensuring that we have enough appropriate spaces that are part of a publicly funded health care system to ensure that they can make life choices. That will mean – and we've been very clear about this – that there will be a variety of options open to Alberta seniors. Alberta's seniors are going to be well cared for, they're going to have access to public health care, and they're going to be able to make choices and continue to make choices that will enhance the quality of their lives, their marriages, and their families.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's exactly what the previous Premier said before we failed the seniors.

Given that some of my constituents and Albertans using the special-needs assistance program for seniors and the Alberta seniors' benefit program are worried about cuts and delays in funding, what is the Premier doing to ensure that when seniors are in need of help from their government, these programs are fully funded and quickly delivered?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, the first thing I'll say is that we're going to do exactly what we should do as the government and make sure that we call people that make unreasonable and unfounded statements to account. I think that's exactly what the hon. Leader of the Opposition has just done. There is no suggestion that there are going to be cuts to those programs, and the idea that he would concern or get seniors upset about the fact that this could happen is entirely inappropriate and unfair.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the only thing unfounded is this government's action.

My final question is to the Minister of Seniors. Given that I have a letter here from one of your constituents, who is a senior, who's asking why he has to wait 12 to 16 weeks to get a paltry $200 out of the Alberta seniors' benefit program, will you please look into this and look after the concern of your constituent before Christmas comes?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm glad that the member brought up this issue, but the one thing that I will refuse to do is bring up personal issues of the people that I represent. The people I represent, whether they be seniors or vulnerable Albertans, deserve some privacy, and I can assure this member that this issue is already taken care of.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That was quick. I just talked to him yesterday.

Alberta Health Services Budget

Dr. Sherman: The former president and CEO of AHS and HQCA and even front-line health care workers all agree that despite all of the massive spending in health care, an increase of $2 billion, we are still dangerously underperforming, missing even the low targets that we have set for ourselves. My questions are to the Premier. When AHS was formed, there was a $1.3 billion deficit that Dr. Duckett inherited, and the previous Premier and health minister could not explain it. Can you please tell us where it came from?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health Services was the consolidation of a number of operations across the province. Those were operations that had reflected a number of different business models that had taken place in different health regions across the province, and the consolidation of that brought together both assets and liabilities. I don't think it's a complicated answer. That's it.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, given that the budgets of all the health regions except the Calgary health region were balanced – we didn't hire any extra nurses or open any extra beds, and we dumped in hundreds of millions of dollars – and there was a $1.3 billion deficit and given that the current Finance minister was then the health minister and it would be inappropriate for him to investigate himself, will the Premier please call an independent forensic financial audit of AHS and the former Capital health region to find out where that $1.3 billion deficit came from?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there's nothing to investigate. We live in a sophisticated world. We're talking about budgets, but we're also talking about assets and liabilities. We're talking about major capital infrastructure. We're talking about pensions that were on the books. We're talking about a sophisticated business structure that merged. That's why we ended up with what we did. We continued to provide public health care to Albertans. We continued to operate a budget that provided services. There's no doubt that there was an issue there. It's been a completely public and transparent issue. It was dealt with in accordance with normal business practices and appropriate business practices. There is no issue.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, we do have sophisticated staff. The only thing that's not sophisticated is the government.

Given that last week the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo asked the Premier to help the Wambolt family, who are faced with a $240,000 bill for life-saving brain surgery that is not done anywhere in Canada and given that this young man is in danger of losing his home because of the enormous health bill, will the Premier please help this family before Christmas?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As with the response earlier by the hon. Minister of Seniors, I too am not prepared to get into an in-depth discussion in this House with respect to the very serious concerns of one individual. What I can tell you is that the individual named by the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition:

we have been in touch with him. He is aware of the appeal processes that are available for out-of-country health care services, and he has been encouraged to avail himself of that full process.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Omnibus Questions to the Premier

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today marks the end of probably one of the most disappointing legislative sessions I've ever been a part of. We have a new Premier, who was elected by promising many things to many people, and over the course of this short session she's broken just about every single one of them. Albertans had a lot of hope for this new Premier, who's promised to be different. Instead, what they've seen are broken promises everywhere. My questions are to the Premier about your promises. Now that your Health Quality Council legislation is passed, will you commit, as you have promised . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier. [interjection] The hon. the Premier, please. [interjection] The hon. the Premier, please.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we have said very clearly that we're pleased this legislation has passed. It's going to give the Health Quality Council the opportunity that we've asked them to take. The Health Quality Council, as I've said before, is undergoing the work that they need to do with respect to the inquiry that's in place right now. As we move ahead and see the results of that, that's going to allow us to determine what the terms of reference should be for the public inquiry, and we're looking forward to seeing what the results of that report are at the beginning of February.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Premier, you have the ability to call it before the next election.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given the millions upon millions of unbudgeted spending commitments you have made both during your leadership race and since you've become Premier and given that you're the only person in Alberta who knows when the next election is, will you commit to table the next budget before you call the election so Albertans can see the full extent of the budget before they cast their ballots?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we all know that there is going to be an election next year, and we also know the government will continue to do the business of government. We as a caucus, we as a cabinet, and Treasury Board are meeting and preparing that budget, and we'll continue to do that work.

Mrs. Forsyth: That's what I said: broken promises. She can't even answer the question.

The Speaker: Okay. We're going to get on with the question, please.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this government has known for a long time that the lack of long-term care beds in this province is triggering a crisis in the whole health system and given that just yesterday you said that your government has been heavily involved in addressing this for the last two months, can you assure Albertans and our seniors that before the next election you will commit to building at least 500 new long-term care beds, not continuing care beds but long-term care beds?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, as I think the hon. member knows because it's been repeated in this House many times, this government has a plan to deliver 5,300 additional continuing care spaces over five years. Last year we opened 1,300 spaces. This year we're on track to open a thousand more.

Legislative Workload

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, when the Premier was seeking the PC leadership, she wrote that we must make time for consulting with Albertans before we pass laws. She promised Albertans that there would be time to learn about the issues and to weigh in. She promised to change how the Legislature and MLAs operate. My question is to the Premier. How is a three-week session using late-night sittings and imposing closure on important pieces of legislation changing how the Legislature operates?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the session came back in October. We've been in session. As a caucus and as a government we've been introducing legislation. What I know is that the spirit of, ironically, some bipartisan co-operation has led to some pretty good legislation being passed this fall that reflects what we've heard Albertans are wanting to see. We have an independent Child and Youth Advocate. We have the ability to have a judicial inquiry with the Health Quality Council. We have strong enforcement of drunk-driving legislation. This is a good result, and it reflects what Albertans wanted to see.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Given that this Premier tried to cancel the fall session altogether, how can she now say that her legislation is so urgent that it requires late-night sittings and closure motions to get it approved?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, what we know is that in this Legislature we have to do the business that matters to Albertans. What I know is that this fall this government delivered on six pieces of legislation that Albertans have told us matter to them. That's what Legislatures should do. We've done it. I've appreciated the bipartisan co-operation and the good debate, but at the end of the day what we see is that Albertans can know that at the end of this session government and this Legislature did its business well this fall.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I've never seen a less bipartisan government in all my time here.

Given that this Premier has already broken or bent a number of promises, what explanation can she offer Albertans for her failure to keep her promise that she would consult and give time for Albertans to weigh in on legislation before it is voted on? If that isn't a broken promise, what is it?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Far from a broken promise, this Premier has engaged in a very active agenda this fall when she talked immediately after the leadership process about whether we should have a fall session or not. It was members opposite who along with others said: no; it's important to get on with the agenda that the Premier has promised. We met in the Legislature on October 24, as we needed to do, and then took the time to draft six pieces of important legislation that Albertans wanted and needed, then came to the Legislature and had a spirited debate on six pieces, that were not complicated but very important. It was a well done piece of . . .

Funding for Private Schools

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier and the Minister of Education have both spoken in favour of eliminating provincial achievement tests. Earlier this week the minister admitted that these tests do not recognize the number of ESL and special-needs students in a school and that organizations like the Fraser Institute use this information to scare parents into choosing other options for their children than our inclusive public education system. To the Premier: given your caucus's comments and that private schools traditionally score at the top of the achievement test rankings as a result of excluding ESL and special-needs students, why not along with eliminating . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier, please.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, it's been very clear over this year that there is incredible frustration with standardized tests. It's been reflected in my comments. It's been reflected in the comments of the Minister of Education. We are currently in the process, as the Minister of Education goes around the province consulting on the new Education Act, of ensuring that we're reflecting the fact that Albertans think that these don't actually allow us to measure the outcomes that we need to.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Again to the Premier: given that the Webber Academy has $33 million in cash and land assets and that they are clearly not interested in providing an inclusive education system, why is this government giving them another $4 million of taxpayers' money this year when you've bankrupted the public school systems by depleting board surpluses?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, whatever private schools may choose to do in terms of the decisions that they make with respect to their assets is one thing. What we know as a provincial government is that we're committed to a public education system. One of the things that we have talked about consistently as a party over the past 12 months, going through the leadership campaign that we did, is ensuring that we did not have a second-class public education system in this province, and we will not.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. My final question to the Premier: given that despite provincial funding some private schools charge parents extra tuition to accept special-needs children, how can the minister defend subsidizing this exclusive and elitist two-tier educational system?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, one of the great things about this province is that we offer Albertans choice. We ensure that Albertans can have choice with respect to how their children are educated. Our responsibility as a government, our responsibility as public trustees of government expenses and of revenue that's collected from Albertans is to ensure that we deliver a public education system that allows every child in Alberta to thrive, and we're going to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-North, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Keystone and Gateway Pipeline Projects

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's the time of year when many Albertans look forward to the new year. I know that my constituents in Red Deer-North, many of whom work in small businesses that service the oil and gas industry, are looking forward to a strong economy. Given that a strong economy in Alberta will depend on being able to deliver our products, can the Premier please provide Albertans with an update with respect to the status of the Keystone and Gateway pipelines?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, what we know is that both Keystone and Gateway matter an awful lot to Alberta. We're an economy that exports. We know that we want to be in Asia, and we know that we have trusted partners in the United States. At this point in time Keystone is proceeding through a process where we're starting to see slight variations with respect to the routing. That's going to trigger a regulatory process that will allow the State Department to continue to do their work. Based on my travels in the last two or three weeks to Washington I'm very optimistic that as we move ahead with this and look at the regulatory process, we're going to see a positive outcome next year.

With respect to Gateway . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the future of the Keystone pipeline is still being decided, what's the Premier doing now, and what are her plans to advocate on behalf of Albertans?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, right now we have a very fortunate position in the United States. We have a new envoy in Washington who is working very closely with the Canadian ambassador. I've had very good discussions with the Prime Minister and the Minister of Foreign Affairs about the fact that Alberta's interests and Canada's interests are completely aligned on this issue. What we saw when we were in Washington was an opportunity to talk about how jobs and energy security are going to matter in the United States. We're going to keep providing scientifically based evidence with respect to Keystone and environmental sustainability of the oil sands, and we're going to ensure that we take advantage of this hiatus in the regulatory process to advance Alberta's message.

Mrs. Jablonski: Well, given the strong opposition to both of these pipelines and concerns that Alberta bitumen can be landlocked by the end of the decade, what is the Premier doing to make sure that there's market access for our resources?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I've talked a lot about Keystone, so I won't speak about that just at the moment.

We know as we move forward in the next 18 months that in British Columbia there's a regulatory process going on where communities are concerned about what the impact of a pipeline could be on them. What we know is that we have to share information about what we're doing and what that impact could be. The other thing we have to do is to talk about why these infrastructure projects matter not only to Alberta but to Canada. I've been talking about a Canadian energy strategy with partners across the country where we as Canadians, not just Albertans, decide that infrastructure will matter for our future economic success, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Highwood.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Despite three years and millions of dollars for front-line emergency room changes the ER wait times are not reaching even minimal goals, in part because of the failure of this government to understand the need for systemic change in their long-term strategy, as an example. To the minister: why did he reduce by over 150 beds at Villa Caritas last year? What was the rationale?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, we did not reduce the number of beds. The introduction of Villa Caritas was, in fact, a new option in continuing care to respond to the needs of seniors with Alzheimer's and other forms of dementia. In many cases the residents at Villa Caritas are there on a temporary basis in order to have their condition stabilized and put them in a position where they can return to the community either in a supportive living option or, in some cases, independently with the support of family.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, much of the demand in emergency rooms is preventable, yet this government has reduced its spending on prevention to less than 4 per cent of the budget. Why has the minister reduced our investment in prevention?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, this government, in fact, has not reduced any investment in prevention. If the hon. member is referring to the wellness portion of the budget, I would certainly agree with him that I would like to see the resources that can be allocated to wellness increased. In fact, we're finding that through primary care networks and other community-based health care providers citizens are expressing an increasing interest in taking responsibility for their own health. They want to be supported in that, and they want to make sure that the health of future generations of Albertans is better than those of us today.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, I believe this minister understands the connection between mental health services and the emergency room wait times. How does he explain the lack of funding committed to the new mental health plan? How is that going to build confidence?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I believe it's been mentioned before in the House. The development of the mental health and addictions strategy – and it is an integrated strategy – was completed only recently, with the involvement of literally dozens of stakeholders in the health care system. We, in fact, are devoting resources to mental health, and I can tell you that in the city of Edmonton we have 21 psychiatrists who are doing clinic time in our primary care networks. Do we need to do more in mental health? Absolutely, we do. As we move forward, our government will present an implementation plan . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Highwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Landowner Private Property Rights

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Apparently, at the annual general meeting of the Alberta Beef Producers a number of resolutions related to the previous land-use legislation were raised. My first question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Can the minister please tell us about the resolutions and what the outcome was of these resolutions?

The Speaker: Does this have to do with government policy, or is this the result of a private meeting? Find the connection.

Mr. Berger: This has to do with land-use policy, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There were resolutions brought forward to the floor of the annual convention of the Alberta Beef Producers requesting the repealing of the acts for land use, being respectively bills 19, 24, 36, and 50. I'm pleased to say that those resolutions were soundly defeated. This is very significant. These acts and these resolutions were brought forward and voted on by cattle producers all across this great province.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Groeneveld: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is also to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. In spite of this good news were there any other resolutions out there that we would like to hear about?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Berger: Yes. Mr. Speaker, there was also another resolution calling for a review of those acts, including the Alberta Land Stewardship Amendment Act, 2011, referred to as Bill 10. That, too, was soundly defeated.

Also, I would like to congratulate the new board members, those being Doug Sawyer, Dave Solverson, and Greg Bowie. These folks represent grassroots cattle producers all across this great province, and I thank them for the job they do.

Mr. Groeneveld: In spite of the question, it's very important, Mr. Speaker, certainly. Obviously, this government is on the right track.

My final question is to the Premier. Can the Premier tell us in light of these resolutions what actions this government may be considering as we move forward?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, it was very interesting to see that resolution at ABP, and the reason is that we know these are pieces of legislation that property owners in Alberta are very concerned about right now. We've already announced a property rights task force as well as a review of transmission with respect to needs north-south. We know that in Alberta we need to grow economically. We know that one of the ways to do that is to ensure that we have an integrated land management system. We know that that has to respect property rights, and what we know is that the best way to ensure that we're doing that is to listen to the people that have those rights and then make subsequent amendments to the legislation.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Services for the Disadvantaged

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans with disabilities face barriers every day in areas that many of us take for granted: housing, transportation, employment, public services. Alberta lacks a comprehensive disability rights law such as the one that exists in Ontario and nationally in the United States. To the Minister of Seniors: is he prepared to champion an Albertans with disabilities act, and will he commit to working with the disabled-serving organizations and their clients to develop such legislation for Alberta?

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you for the question. Mr. Speaker, you know, in taking on this new ministry, one of the issues that I go to bed every night thinking about is how I can make the world better for people with disabilities in this province. It's an interesting file. I commit to you and to all of the Assembly and all of those with disabilities in this province that I'll do everything I can to make this a better province, to make sure that our programs are better than any other province in this country.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Then will the minister follow through on the Premier's commitment to raise the monthly income and index it to inflation, just like everyone in this House receives?

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you again for the question. I think we dealt with this earlier in the session. I heard the Premier very loudly and very clearly, and I had some pretty strong marching orders on how we're going to deal with payments to our vulnerable Albertans. Stay tuned, member; the next budget is coming.

Dr. Swann: That doesn't sound like a commitment to me, Mr. Speaker.

To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: given that the demand for special-needs housing in Alberta far exceeds what's currently being delivered through the housing capital initiatives program, can the minister explain how he plans to increase the province's stock of accessible low-cost housing beyond conventional means?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, the previous minister had committed to building over 10,000 affordable housing units in this province in a period of five years. We met the target and exceeded it, producing 11,600 homes, affordable housing, in this province in that short period of time. We're continuing with that objective. We just signed an agreement with the federal government for a three-year plan to continue doing it. Our commitment hasn't changed.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Builders' Liens

Mr. Elniski: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Under the Builders' Lien Act if I was a home builder and hired a subcontractor but that subcontractor did not pay his crew, those workers would be able to place a lien on my project. Rather than affecting the subcontractor who did not pay the wages, I the owner wind up being negatively affected. My question is to the Minister of Service Alberta. When will the act be revised to hold subcontractors accountable?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under that same piece of legislation a builder can use a mechanism known as a lien fund. Now, if they use that particular lien fund, they can hold back some of the money and, in cases such as that, pay the respective tradespeople.

Mr. Elniski: Again to the same minister: given that it's easy to say that these disputes can be settled with some of these mechanisms or in court, the financial and time burdens are nonetheless still on the home builder. Are there any ways to expedite the removal of third-party liens?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, hon. member. One way to expedite liens is to serve notice. In that case the claimant must initiate an action or lose the claim. It's quite an expedient way for somebody to expedite a lien.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you. To the same minister: given that an error in judgment in who you hire as a subcontractor can have a major implication for a project owner, will the minister commit today to changing the legislation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're committed to protecting consumers, homeowners, tradespeople. But what we really need is actual, tangible suggestions. If the hon. member or any other stakeholders like builders have specific tangible suggestions that will still ensure that we maintain balance and protection, I'd be happy to sit with them, meet with them to see how we can move forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Water Management

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Parkland Institute report that I tabled yesterday states that to date the Tories have only explored market options to water allocation and are intent on moving towards a deregulated provincial water market. Such a move would leave the allocation of water up to the highest bidder. My question is to the Deputy Premier. Given that this move would extend water rights to foreign ownership and other private interests and would pit them against ordinary Albertans in a bidding war that, at the very least, would result in higher water prices, will this government commit to legislation that declares water a public trust and protects Alberta consumers?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it's pretty obvious that Albertans value their greatest resource in this province, which is water. Right next to that the greatest resource is people, and when you put the two things together you can come up with some research and some planning that will protect our most valuable resource and build for the future of this province, and that's exactly what we intend to do.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that in the current water allocation system Alberta Environment is taking only 10 per cent of its holdback clause for environmental purposes only 60 per cent of the time and given that water markets are priced only on economic indicators, why won't this government commit to a water allocation strategy that makes environmental integrity a priority over the free market and guarantees environmental sustainability for Albertans now and in the future?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, environmental sustainability is extremely important to this province for a whole raft of reasons, not the least of which are our economic and our social reasons. In fact, that's why Alberta, I believe, was one of the first provinces to come out with a water for life strategy, which we are pursuing. That strategy is an overarching strategy that combines not only securing water for the future of Alberta's economic development but also environmental protection and agriculture.

Ms Notley: Given that Alberta's history of water allocation has failed to respect the long-standing relationship between aboriginal people and Alberta's water resources and given that the proposed water market would further negate aboriginal rights to water, will the Deputy Premier commit to meaningful consultation with Alberta's aboriginal communities about the establishment of a First Nations water council that would have meaningful say about future water allocation in Alberta?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're involved in our consultation process with our First Nations as we speak. We have a five-point aboriginal consultative process, of which we have two left to go. We're pursuing that aggressively, and we'll continue to do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Protection of Personal Health Information

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. For the second time this week we've heard of a health professional, driven by passion and revenge, grossly violating the privacy of innocent people's health records. In the most recent case a pharmacist unlawfully obtained the prescription medication information of eight people and posted it on Facebook. To the minister of health: has the government considered that personal health information illegally posted on the web will be widely available in cyberspace forever? Are these violations creating permanent victims?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, the case to which the hon. member refers is a very serious matter and is taken very seriously by this government. In fact, the individual in question was prosecuted and fined. I would leave it to others to determine. I think any time personal health information is inappropriately or illegally accessed by anyone, a health professional or anyone else, we have serious cause for concern in this House.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the victims in this case were a group of church ladies, who are probably not IT specialists, who have had their medical information posted on the Internet, will the government be providing any support to help these people fully erase their records from all web access?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, to my knowledge this government or my department has not been approached with such a request. Again, I agree with the hon. member about the serious nature of the crime and the impact that the electronic rebroadcasting, if you will, of this information has on individuals. But to this date we have not been contacted with such a request.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, given that cases like these threaten public confidence in electronic health records and maybe even discourage people from disclosing crucial information to health care providers because they're worried that it's going to get spread all over, what steps is the minister taking to better protect Albertans' most personal of personal information?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've taken a number of steps over the years to do everything we can to strengthen the protection of personal health information. Unfortunately, it is beyond our ability to legislate or to regulate the behaviour of individuals who would intentionally engage in such behaviour and cause serious damage to others. We will continue to monitor the security of personal health information. It is a subject of constant discussion between my department and Alberta Health Services, and I'm quite confident that wherever we can find an opportunity to strengthen that protection, we will take full advantage.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Municipal Franchise Fees

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. About a year and a half ago an all-party committee of this Legislature recommended to the Minister of Municipal Affairs that he work with municipalities to create a common formula for calculating franchise fees. My question to the minister: can you please provide an update on the progress that you've made with municipalities in this respect?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, fundamentally, at the heart of this issue it's about respect. It's respect for the municipalities to work out the agreements to meet their local needs on franchise fees. It's also about respecting consumers, who pay the bills, to make sure that they have transparency, knowing who is collecting the fee and how much they're collecting. We're trying to find a balance, and we're working towards that as we go forward.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that just recently the town of Okotoks had a levy struck down by the courts because of the reason that these fees are more than fees, that they're more like a tax, has the minister had any dialogue with municipalities about these fees, that actually amount to what is a tax? The courts have said so.

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, we've done a very extensive review, and those two situations are not the same at all. In fact, the franchise fees are paid by utility companies for exclusive access to right-of-ways for gas, water, electricity, and the like. The off-site levies are paid by developers to recoup the municipalities' cost of installing new infrastructure. They're two completely separate issues, and one won't impact the other.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that the minister and the government have decided that they will undertake a comprehensive review of the MGA, will the minister put municipalities on notice that as part of that review there will be much stronger language in the MGA that will prohibit municipalities from charging fees that amount to tax revenue?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I assume that there will be a lot of different issues that will come up in the long-term review of the MGA. The specific issue around franchise fees is actually a regulatory issue, and I anticipate that we may be able to address a lot of those while still respecting the autonomy of municipalities before we get done the review of the MGA and resolve this issue once and for all.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Political Contributions by Municipal Officials

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Merry Christmas.

According to the St. Paul Journal published today, the town of St. Paul replied to a request from Elections Alberta, disclosing that it had donated almost $4,000 in political donations and sponsorships to the transport minister's PCCA. Most of these funds came from the town of St. Paul's public relations account. Not only are donations and sponsorships of this kind illegal under the Election Act, but it also just smells bad to Albertans. Will the Minister of Transportation ask his CA to return the funds immediately to the taxpayers of St. Paul?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, if I may, the question is around the provincial political party donations. We all know in this Legislature that it's against the rules for the municipalities to do that. I'm also certain that that party donation, as all members would do, including as the Wildrose did in Whitecourt, I believe it was – they returned the money.

Mr. Anderson: So to that same minister, then: are you saying that the $4,000 in question here has been returned to the taxpayers of St. Paul?

Mr. Horner: My understanding is that the Chief Electoral Officer would look into it if it hasn't, but my understanding is that it has been, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Anderson: Well, according to the newspaper today, that's not the case.

The Speaker: And we all know that that's not considered authoritative.

Mr. Anderson: Given that answer will the transport minister or somebody on that side stand up and provide proof to this Legislature that that $4,000 has been returned to the taxpayers of St. Paul?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, as you very much know, that discussion had taken place a number of months ago. In fact, the individual that was in charge of the accounts of the constituency – I guess you can call it the constituency – had reassured me that all contributions that were made illegally were returned.

The Speaker: For the benefit of the question period this is not the place for it. This has nothing to do with government financing.

The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

2:30 Prequalification Processes for Bidders

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently a municipality in my constituency awarded a large contract under the agreement on internal trade using the electronic MERX system. Four bidders participated: three from southern Alberta and one from Ontario. The bidder from Ontario won. The end result was that they did not complete the work before declaring bankruptcy and disappearing. The municipality would now like to contract to the next lowest original tender and complete the project. My question is to the Minister of Service Alberta. Will this put the municipality in jeopardy with the cross-Canada agreement on internal trade if they do not readvertise?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is subject to trade agreements. These agreements allow Alberta businesses opportunity, and they allow Alberta municipalities and the nonprofit sector to capitalize on the lowest prices around. Now, I'm not aware of the specifics of this very situation, hon. member, but I would be very happy to work with the municipality in question to see how we can find a resolution to the matter.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: given that with many of these projects municipalities use their MSI as a large source of funding, with this previously mentioned process will this affect the present MSI funding approval that they have for the project?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, the shortest possible answer is that, no, it will not. The project has been approved. If the municipality needs to amend their project agreement, they're entitled to do so, as every other municipality is, in case they have some cost overruns that may go with this challenge they have.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Service Alberta: as there was a resolution which was passed at the AAMD and C convention with a large majority, what has been done in order to allow prequalification of contractors?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the member is referring to what is commonly known as standing offers, whereby contractors or suppliers of particular goods or services are prequalified. That is something that's available to municipalities. Again, we would be happy to advance this issue further with our municipalities.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Recovery of Tight Gas and Tight Oil

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the Minister of Energy. In recent years the price of natural gas collapsed and along with it royalties to the government because of technologies that release vast amounts of tight gas. Now, due to the same technologies there are suggestions the oil market could be flooded with so-called tight oil, driving oil prices into the same low, long-term plateau that hit natural gas and of course, along with them, royalties. To the minister: is this government paying attention to the emergence of tight oil supplies? If so, what's it finding?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to respond that we're closely monitoring that. In fact, I'd be happy to show the hon. member a map in my office – it actually just came in last night – that shows all the land sales in the province over the last three years. It's very clear that it's focusing on tight gas and tight oil. While the abundance of natural gas in North America and the world has driven the price down, so far the exploration of so-called tight oil has been a very positive influence on the Alberta market.

Dr. Taft: Well, that's good to hear. Let's just hope it continues because the concern is that it won't.

Does this government have forecasts for the expected impact of tight oil on the Alberta or Canadian or North American supplies and prices?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, our forecasts, of course, are based not only on internal estimates, but we also use a variety of well-recognized commercial sources, banks, and investment companies as well. All of those forecasts continue to show robust growth for demand even with growing supply and gradually rising prices.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks. Again to the same minister: what is the government doing to assess the potential impact on Alberta's royalty revenue from oil supplies and prices if there is a prolonged flow of tight oil onto the market?

Dr. Morton: Well, Mr. Speaker, of course, we pay close attention to royalties, both present and projected, but we do not anticipate, nor do any of the other financial institutions that do these projections, a collapse of oil prices. We actually think that one of the areas of growth for royalties will be in tight oil.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Municipal Funding

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government of Canada has recently announced that it is launching a new direction for planning and processing for infrastructure which will extend beyond 2014. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: given the new federal directions what is the province doing to ensure funding for all of Alberta's municipalities?

Mr. Griffiths: Well, Mr. Speaker, we're very excited about the federal government's commitment to working on funding for Alberta and all of Canada's municipalities. The provincial government itself is incredibly committed to supporting our municipalities because we know that we're partners and work hand in hand on all of the projects that Albertans hold so dear. That's why we have the municipal sustainability initiative, which is over $11 billion supplied to municipalities over a 10-year period, and we have GreenTRIP supplied to Alberta cities so that they can build mass transit.

Mr. Speaker, we're still working on going forward on I guess it would be the son of MSI and a three-year secure funding formula to ensure that our municipalities are properly funded.

Mrs. Sarich: Mr. Speaker, again to the same minister: given that large urban centres face challenges meeting infrastructure needs in their local communities, what support is your ministry providing to metro centres like Edmonton and Calgary to help them meet the local needs for their citizens?

Mr. Griffiths: Well, Mr. Speaker, we recognize that every single municipality in this province is a partner in building a better Alberta. We work with the large urban centres and we work with the small communities all the same. We provide a billion dollars in MSI funding almost every single year. We're continuing to ramp that up to help municipalities meet their needs. In total, through this government it's between $2 billion and $2.5 billion every year that goes to Alberta's municipalities, and the cities, the urban centres, get their share of that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is also to the same minister. Recognizing that big-city mayors always like to press the point that their unique needs for their metro centre need to be addressed appropriately, how do you intend to involve the local officials in the decision-making process for the large urban centres?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As per my mandate letter, we are discussing right now with the large cities what sort of challenges they have. Quite frankly, they represent close to two-thirds of the population of this province. But we also work hand in hand with the AUMA and the AAMD and C to address the needs of every single one of the communities in this province. Assisting or helping one or looking at their needs does not mean to the exclusion of others. We're working with all of them to build a better Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Courthouse Security

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The wheels of justice have slowed in some Edmonton courtrooms because this government has failed to provide the necessary security. Provincial sheriffs are responsible for security details. My first question is to the Solicitor General. How can this happen when over $33 million is budgeted for court security and prison transfer?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I would first refute this member's claim that this ministry has in any way failed to provide court security. There are four levels of court security. The final level of court security is only available in high-profile cases. Do you want a sheriff in every courtroom, for even a small-claims case? What about the taxpayers' interests?

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Again to the same minister: can the minister provide a breakdown of this $33 million budget? What is spent on court security, because court security is lax, and what is spent on prison transfer?

Mr. Denis: Once again, I refute this member's claim that court security is lax. There are four levels of security. That includes the perimeter security, the inside security, and the roaming security. On top of that, every courtroom has a panic button, where one of the roaming sheriffs can actually come in if there is an actual need. We do not need – there you go, Mr. Speaker. You have one yourself. I'll take my seat.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I think I have pushed the hon. member's panic button on this issue.

Now, given that last year the sheriff and security operations branch had a surplus – listen carefully – of $1.5 million in their budget and that this year that budget was increased by an additional $1.5 million, why are Alberta justices in Edmonton so concerned about their security and the security of the courtroom that they administer over? They're not wimps.

The Speaker: The hon. minister, please.

Mr. Denis: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I agree with this member that the justices are not wimps, but I again disagree that security is, in fact, lax. I've outlined exactly where security is in the courtroom.

If anybody in this House has hit their panic button, it's the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar because he's not running again.

Merry Christmas.

The Speaker: That concludes the question-and-answer period for today. Nineteen members were recognized; 114 questions and responses were provided. I know that some colleagues are having a jolly, jolly time, but we're going to just continue.

I'm going to ask the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs to supplement an answer.

Fire Permits

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I realized in reviewing the questions that in the response to the Member for Little Bow I may have given the indication that buying a fire permit completely exonerates anybody from any harm that may be caused by a fire. Although it's responsible to buy a fire permit, I'd still like to remind Albertans and clarify that if you aren't responsible, even with a fire permit you still could be liable for any damage caused by a fire that you allow to get out of control and deliberately mishandle.*

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Little Bow, an additional question?

Mr. McFarland: No. Thank you.

The Speaker: Okay. We're going to continue with the Routine.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Out-of-country Health Services

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Merry Christmas to everyone and their families.

Two weeks ago I had the honour of introducing to members of this Assembly a young man and his family and son who had brain surgery that basically saved his life. In actual fact, he went to his local doctor, and his doctor said that no one in Alberta or Canada could do this type of surgery and that there was only one place to obtain the rare brain surgery, and that was in Los Angeles. He was going blind. He had to stop his work at Suncor. Ultimately, he went last November, almost a year ago, and had the brain surgery. As you saw when I introduced him in the gallery, he's recovering quite nicely, with full sight back. He's going to live a full and happy life, and I know all of us can join in saying that we're so pleased by that.

In my question Shane Wambolt asked the out-of-country surgery committee to determine when he could get back the $240,000 that it cost him. It's been over a year. Of course, now that they've had such medical success, they're looking for the success of getting reimbursed by the policy of this government.

I'm very pleased that the Premier committed to resolve this issue, and we are optimistic that before Christmas she will resolve this.

The family asked me to thank everyone involved, specifically when they drove on highway 63 and rented a car and stayed at a hotel. I thank Global television and the Edmonton Journal because when they learned about this story the next day, the rental car company and the hotel said, "No charge" because in Alberta we want to help those who need help. I only hope and pray that this Premier and the minister of health will provide the same gift to this family after what they've endured, like any other Albertan who would experience the same thing.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings this afternoon. The first tabling is the 2010 annual report of the Health Quality Council of Alberta. The council collaborates with my ministry and other significant players in the Alberta health system to encourage continuous quality improvement in our health system. The council, led by its chair, Dr. Lorne Tyrrell, does excellent work for the users of the health system and supports health providers across the province.

Mr. Speaker, my second tabling is the 2010 annual report of the College of Licensed Practical Nurses of Alberta. The report outlines the accomplishments and initiatives of the college over the past year.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today for two tablings this afternoon on behalf of the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness. My first tabling is the 2010 annual report of the Alberta College of Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists.

My second tabling is the 2010 annual report of the College of Dietitians of Alberta.

Both annual reports outline the work of their respective college over the last year.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings today. The first one is from Canada's Health Newsweekly, HealthEdition.com, February 12, 2010. It's about government health spending jumping almost $2 billion in 2010-11, making up 41 per cent of all government expenditures.

The other tabling is an article entitled Minister Shows Appreciation of Local Healthcare Group, and it mentions the previous minister, from Edmonton-Mill Creek, where he said that when he became minister "AHS was facing a 1.3 billion dollar deficit."

The third tabling is an article by Jodie Sinnema from the Edmonton Journal: Plan To Cut Emergency Wait Times Too Slow, Doctors Say. That's where the minister is quoted, a quote that he denied in the Legislature. He said: although the province hasn't met its targets, the number of patients on emergency stretchers waiting for hospital beds – and therefore blocking access for those in the waiting room – is the lowest it's been in years.

The last tabling is from my guest today, Zachary Weeks, who represents an organization for those with disabilities, with regard to questions that he has for the Premier, that I'm hoping the Premier will answer and get back to him about.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling the five requisite copies of schedule 6 from Revenue Canada, detailed financial information, Webber Academy Foundation, that I referenced in today's questions.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of an article referred to by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood today in question period entitled Government by Exhaustion, which highlights the stark contradiction between the Premier's promise for more democracy this summer and the government's conduct over the last two and a half weeks in this Assembly.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Hancock, Minister of Human Services, pursuant to the Regulated Accounting Profession Act a Certified General Accountants' Association of Alberta annual report 2011; pursuant to the Government Organization Act the Alberta College and Association of Chiropractors radiation health administrative organization annual report for the year ended June 30, 2011; the Alberta Dental Association and College 2010 radiation health and safety program annual report January 1, 2010, to December 31, 2010, with attached financial statements dated December 31, 2010; the Alberta Veterinary Medical Association radiation protection program 2010 annual report with attached auditor's report on radiation protection program, schedule of funds received and disbursed and cash balance; the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta radiation health administrative organization annual report for the period January 1, 2010, to December 31, 2010; University of Alberta authorized radiation health administrative organization annual report 2010-2011; University of Calgary radiation health administration organization annual report for the period April 1, 2010, to March 31, 2011, with attached financial statements for the year ended March 31, 2011.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Lukaszuk, Minister of Education, return to order of the Assembly MR14, asked for by Mr. Hehr on May 9, 2011.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Horne, Minister of Health and Wellness, pursuant to the Health Disciplines Act the Health Disciplines Board annual report January 1 to December 31, 2010; pursuant to the Health Facilities Review Committee Act the Alberta Health Facilities Review Committee annual report 2010-2011.

On behalf of Dr. Sherman, hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, The Lancet website article dated January 8, 2011, entitled Cancer Survival in Australia, Canada, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and the UK, 1995-2007 (the International Cancer Benchmarking Partnership): an Analysis of Population-based Cancer Registry Data; and the FPinfomart reprint of an Edmonton Journal article dated April 22, 2011, entitled 'I am not in a position to testify': MD.

Statement by the Speaker

Sessional Statistics

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have some numbers that you may be interested in by way of a comparison between what this Assembly has done in the year 2011 as compared to the year 2010. The number of sitting days we had in the year 2011, including today, was 47. Last year it was 50. The number of evening sittings we had this year was 13 compared to 10 last year.

The total number of minutes in the Assembly this year was 14,029 – that's not including today – as compared to last year at 14,864. The total number of hours in the Assembly this year, not including the hour and a half today, would be 235 and a half hours. Last year it was 248.

The number of words spoken was essentially the same: nearly 2 million. The number of words spoken by members in standing committees this year was significantly lower than last year. This year it was 821,000. Last year it was 1,310,000.

The number of standing committee meetings this year was 58. Last year it was 83. The number of hours in standing committee meetings this year was 94. Last year it was 180.

On 14 occasions we had 18 sets of questions; that is, 18 members were recognized. Last year it was 17. This year on 20 occasions we had 19 members recognized. Last year it was 21. This year we had four occasions in which 20 members were recognized. Last year it was seven. We had one occasion on which 21 members were recognized; none last year. On October 25 of this year we had 22 members recognized, and that was a record number of members recognized at question period in the history of Alberta. The total number of questions and answers during question period this year was 4,954. Last year it was 5,284. The average number of questions and answers per day this year was 103. Last year it was 108.

Twenty-six government bills will receive royal assent in the year 2011. There were 28 in the year 2010. One government bill was left on the Order Paper both last year and this year. The number of private members' public bills that received royal assent this year was two. That's the same as occurred in 2010. The number of private members' public bills that received royal assent since we made these major modifications to our standing orders has now approached 50.

I would draw all members' attention as well to Standing Order 4(a) if one anticipates when one might return to this Assembly.

Orders of the Day

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to Government Motion 27 it is my privilege to advise the House that the government business for this fall session has now been completed, and we therefore stand adjourned.

[The Assembly adjourned at 2:52 p.m. pursuant to Government Motion 27]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 4th Session (2011)

Activity to December 07, 2011

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

2011 Alberta Hansard (27th Legislature, Fourth Session) Index

The table below is a list to date of Alberta Hansard issue numbers, dates, and page ranges, with links to the text document. The index itself starts following the table. Use the search capabilities of Adobe Acrobat to search the index and find the topic you are interested in; note the page number(s) associated with it. Then click on the page number range in the table below to open the issue.

NOTE: For the fiscal year 2011-12, main estimates for each department are dealt with either in policy field committees (PFCs) or in Committee of Supply. The indexes for the main estimates considered in PFCs are therefore no longer incorporated into the Hansard index but will be included with the separate proceedings for each policy field committee.
